

Mother's Day is Sunday, May 8; first one was 80 years ago

By Margie Reins Smith
Staff Writer

An unscientific survey of local card shops found dozens of racks of Mother's Day cards. Flowery ones. Sentimental ones. Funny ones. Off-color ones. Cute ones.

And not only for mothers, mind you. Also for mommy; god-mother; grandmother; great-grandmother; dear sister; sister-in-law; daughter; daughter-in-law; wife; lovely wife; new mother; stepmother; aunt; and "a Dad who's doing a great job."

Mother's Day is May 8. It's always the second Sunday in May.

A flower-bedecked card. Inside: "Thank you Mom for helping me grow to be a better person."

As long ago as 250 B.C., spring festivals were dedicated to the Mother Goddesses. In England, from the 17th to 19th centuries, it was the custom for apprenticed young people to return home on a Sunday in the middle of Lent, called Mothering Sunday. They visited their mothers, brought small gifts or a "mothering cake" and celebrated the day with a feast (which Mother probably had to cook herself.)

"There's Levi, Jordache, Calvin, Guess, Polo, Lee, 501."

But I've got the best genes of all. Happy Mother's Day."

Mother's Day was first observed in 1908, when Anna Jarvis of Philadelphia asked her church to hold a service on the anniversary of her mother's death — and dedicate it to the memory of all mothers. Jarvis, who never married and never became a mother herself, was extremely attached to her own mother, Anna Reese Jarvis. After her mother's death, Jarvis went on a letter-writing campaign promoting her Mother's Day idea to congressmen, ministers and businessmen.

"Mother Love. I never leave home without it."

By 1911, just one year after its creation, Mother's Day was officially observed by all states and in Mexico, Canada, China, Japan, and in parts of Africa and South America.

A drawing of a motherly-looking woman, sitting up in bed, wearing a nightgown and a football helmet. "Happy Mother's Day to a great sport."

By 1914, President Woodrow Wilson declared that the second Sunday in May be dedicated to mothers. Both Houses issued a similar proclamation.

A fatherly-looking figure holding a handkerchief to a child's nose.

"Thanks for all the fatherly mothering."

One of the most famous portraits of a mother — Whistler's — is really titled "Arrangement in Grey and Black," and was on a 1934 Mother's Day commemorative stamp.

"Mom, remember all of the aggravation I used to cause you?"
"I'm almost done."

Toward the end of her life, Anna Jarvis became disillusioned with her creation. Mother's er's Day has degenerated into a commercial holiday, in her view. She had intended it as a religious observance and disapproved of the gifts, cards and flowers that had become associated with the day.

"I've got your nose, I've got your eyes. But dammit Mom, I've got your thighs. (I love you anyway.)"

Joke in a children's book about holidays: "What's the best way to remember Mother's Day?"
"Forget it, just once."

Constitutional celebration

Pierce Middle School students celebrated the bicentennial of the U.S. Constitution in a special way Friday, April 29. Organizers brought 17 speakers to speak to students. Above, Bill Day, editorial cartoonist for the Detroit Free Press, spoke to a group of students in the middle school library.

Board hires firm to perform district-wide asbestos study

By Peter A. Salinas
Staff Writer

The Grosse Pointe Board of Education Monday night voted to accept the low bid of $41,000 to have a firm conduct inspections and present asbestos management plans to the state.

Under the Asbestos Hazard Emergency Response Act of 1986 all school districts in the country are now required to conduct such studies throughout the system.

Twelve bids for the huge task were submitted to the board. One came in at $211,500; several were over $100,000. The only bid closest to that submitted by the Institute for Environmental Assessment was about $10,000 higher than its $41,000 bid.

Director of Support Services David King said the Minnesota-based firm has inspected 1,000 schools and will be able to inspect Grosse Pointe schools during May and June.

Asbestos management plans must be submitted to the Michigan Health Department by Oct. 12, or school districts could face fines of $5,000 for non-compliance.

King told the board that the Institute for Environmental Assessment does have a non-profit arm, but is a for-profit corporation.

One of the main reasons the firm was selected, King said, is that the Institute is a leader in determining health risks, and has a medical approach in assessing those risks.

"Medical risk is our main concern," King said. "They know that asbestos is a difficult topic. There is a lot of concern by staff and parents. They have a medical background, and if there are reports of cancer in a building, they know what types of cancer can be caused by asbestos."

King said part of the reason that the Institute was significantly less costly than the other bidders is that the firm has performed many such studies of schools. It has developed workbooks, which will be filled out by trained Grosse Pointe school system staffers. They will examine problem areas, and do a lot of the ground work examinations prior to the firm's arrival.

King said he will be one of the local people in charge of filling out the workbook information.

By the time the study begins, he will have had 40 hours of training.

"They have developed computer programs as well to help with the evaluation," King said.

School board member Carol Marr asked King whether the firm was accredited by the state of Michigan. King said that accreditation would be the responsibility of the Environmental Protection Agency.

He noted that until now, the Like countless other retired people, Dorothy Cook keeps busy.

The former social worker and teacher helps conduct a couple of support group meetings four times a month and she serves on the board of the Women's Association of the Grosse Pointe Symphony.

She began gardening again and the 80-foot English garden in her yard "and a little corner of wildflowers" keeps her busy. And when she and her husband

Louis aren't traveling around the world, they can be found sailing on their boat, Sweet Pea.

Unlike countless other retired people, however, Dorothy Cook can't see.

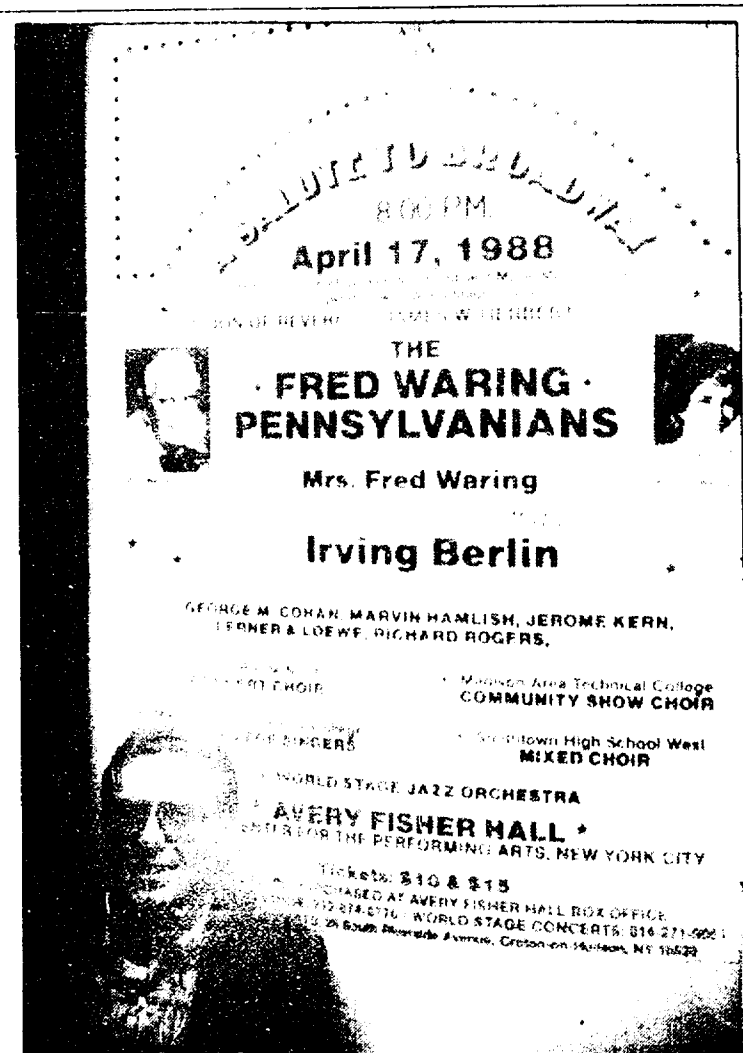

She began losing her sight in 1979 to macular degeneration, a progressive disease that is the leading cause of blindness in the United States. The diagnosis almost did her in, Cook said, and for a short period of time, she lost her confidence and her feeling of self-worth.

"Everything I loved had been taken away. I loved needlepoint. I loved to read. I couldn't watch TV. I lived alone and my biggest fear was what my children and my friends would think of me."

Coming from a medical family — her father and her brother were doctors — she said she was convinced something could be done. "I knew doctors made you better."

She went to Boston, to Florida, to Ann Arbor and "after three or four times of being told the same thing, I had to accept it."

Cook went through training provided by the Michigan Commission for the Blind, and before

Health fraud speakers urge consumer skepticism

By Margie Reins Smith
Staff Writer

The old-time quack medicine man — selling snake oil on the streetcorner — has been replaced by slick mail order businesses, according to Paul Tilton, a biologist with the Federal Food and Drug Administration.

Tilton spoke to about 125 people at the fourth annual Health Fraud Conference, an all-day seminar held at the Veterans Memorial Building in Detroit April 26.

This year's theme, "Beauty — The Great American Put-On," was co-sponsored by the Detroit Office of Consumer Affairs, the Michigan Council Against Health Fraud and the Food and Drug Administration.

"You have to be a well-informed consumer in order to protect yourself," Tilton said.

He pointed out some misbranded medical and cosmetic devices that consumers have not been warned about — and don't know what the risks are. "Electric muscle stimulators. These have a legitimate place in physical therapy. But they're not useful for weight control, spot reducing or muscle building.

firm has not done any studies in Michigan, although it was also low bidder for the entire Flint school system. King told the board the firm has also performed evaluations for school systems throughout Minnesota, Texas, Iowa and Nebraska.

King said the only negative about the firm is its location in Anoka, Minn., but that this drawback is far outweighed by its expertise and cost.

and permanently is with a needle by a licensed electrologist," he said.

Concerning silicone breast implants, which is the second most common aesthetic surgical procedure in the nation, Tilton said patients are often unaware of the risks involved.

"They don't know that implants are not for life; that they may rupture; that more surgeries may be necessary; that the gel-filled implants may harden or the gel may leak out and travel to the liver, spleen or kidneys; that patients may be sensitized to silicone; that the implants can hide breast tumors, delaying diagnosis and treatment.

"Doctors don't always share these warnings with their patients," Tilton said that the material used in breast implants would not pass FDA standards today, but it was grandfathered in, when new laws were passed.

The most common aesthetic surgical procedure, he said, is suction lipectomy, or removal of fat by a suction device. "The FDA regulates suction lipectomy equipment. But many patients don't know there can be difficulties such as blood loss, edema, bruising, pain, altered skin sensation; and that the surgery may also result in asymmetrical body parts, major contour irregularities, swelling, infection, and — in rare cases — embolism and death.

Linda Phillips, M.D., a specialist in plastic and reconstructive surgery, spoke to the group about the myriad choices patients have for aesthetic surgery: liposuction (fat removal), abdominoplasty (tummy tuck), breast augmentation, breast reduction, face lift, chin implant, eyelid lift, rhinoplasty, dermabrasion, chemical peel, arm lift, thigh lift, and more.

"Even very good surgeons have occasional complications," she said. "When you look for a surgeon, look for one who has reason, experience and knowledge; one who talks to his patients to find out why they want surgery; one who talks about post-operative cooperation. Ask your own trusted family physician for recommendations or talk to friends who've had the surgery done and who are happy with their doctors."

Tony Amann, of the Upjohn Company, spoke about the differences between cosmetics and drugs. "Cosmetics are products that cleanse or beautify or alter appearance without affecting the structure of function of the body. Drugs are products that affect body structure or function. The FDA regulates drugs."

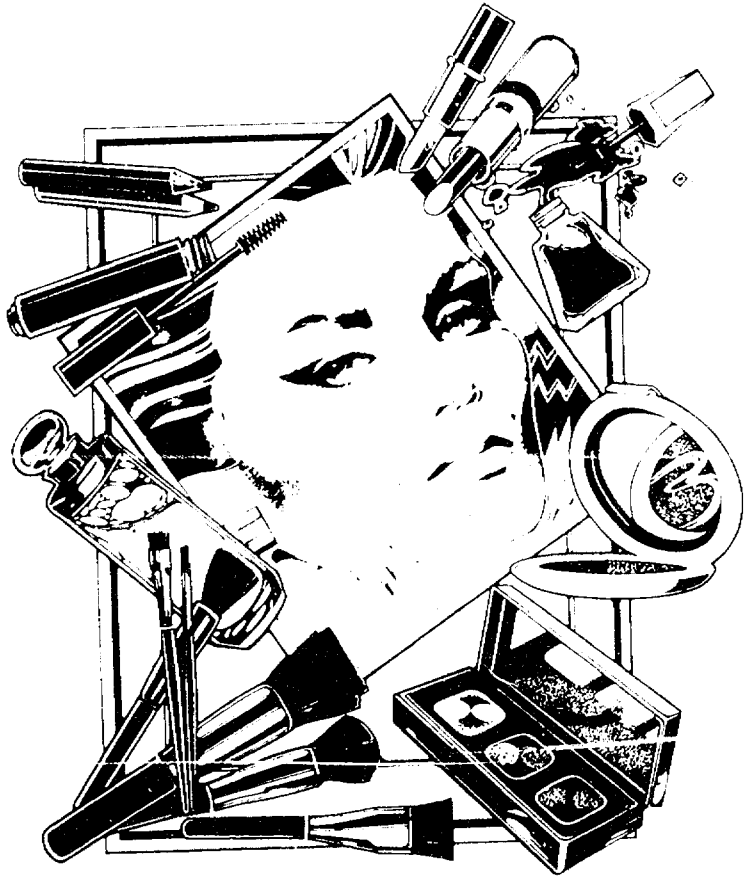

Amann said drugs must be proven safe and effective, must have pre-market approval, must follow labeling requirements and manufacturing regulations, must register and list ingredients, submit adverse reactions to the FDA and be sold in tamper-resistant packages. Cosmetics do not have to comply with these regulations.

Paul Azar, of Tresses Hair Studio in Grosse Pointe, demonstrated make-up application on a model. "For corporate wear," he said, "the most important cosmetic, for women, is lipstick. And it's the one cosmetic most women refuse to wear. Research shows that women who use cosmetics earn 10 percent more."

The mistake most women make concerning make-up, he said, is "they overbuy."

Tilton, in his discussion of consumer awareness and health frauds said, "If a product promise is too good to be true — it probably is."

Shores zoning change would redefine setbacks

By Margie Reins Smith
Staff Writer

The Shores Planning Commission will hold a public hearing May 10 concerning an amendment to the village's zoning ordinance.

The proposal is to reconsider lakeside setbacks for property north of Vernier on the east side of Lakeshore.

In addition, for property east of Lakeshore and north of Roslyn, the proposal is to determine building placement restrictions by using a formula based upon average lakeside setbacks.

Council expects to vote on the proposal in June, according to Village Manager Michael Kenyon.

Lakeside land between the Shores municipal park and Roslyn Road has increased over the years due to a gradual buildup of sand and silt along the shoreline, he said. The DNR allowed residents to fill in the low, swampy areas that resulted from this accretion. "The proposal is to redefine the lakeside property line and to regulate the use of accessory buildings or structures," Kenyon said.

Higbie cottage is focal point of Farms variance denial

By Ronald J. Bernas
Staff Writer

On April 18, the Farms Zoning Board of Appeals (which is the city council) denied a group of variances for a plot of land located on Mapleton Avenue. While the denial isn't unique, the processing of the request and the reactions of the people involved make for an interesting lesson in zoning law and representative government.

Mapleton Avenue is by everyone's account a charming street. It is filled with quaint houses of all types of architecture, placed closely together. There are 70 lots on the avenue, and 69 of them have houses on them. Lot 13 doesn't.

Lot 13 is owned by Joyce Greco, who has owned the land since 1971. It is a lot of no record, which means from an ordinance standpoint, it is one lot. Greco lives next door, on Lot 12.

The request to buy Lot 13 came from Brad Elvidge, owner of a number of local rental properties. He wanted to move the cottage from the Higbie Estate — which is scheduled for demolition as Scherbrook Subdivision is built — to the lot.

The style and quaintness of the house, according to Elvidge, will fit perfectly on the lot and on the street.

But in order to move the house to the lot, a number of zoning variances had to be granted.

Elvidge needed permission to split the lot, making Greco's lot and the new lot non-conforming with the city's R-1 zoning laws. A variance for front setback and side setback were needed, and a variance to allow the cottage, which is only 1,080 square feet, onto the lot which requires a house of 1,200 square feet was also required.

According to William Gilbride Jr., attorney for Elvidge, all lots on Mapleton are non-conforming to the current zoning ordinance, and most of the houses have insufficient front setbacks. Also, in splitting the lots, the new lot would be the same size, 45 x 71, as all the other lots on the street.

A number of Mapleton Avenue residents turned up at the meeting to voice their opposition to the request.

While not all Mapleton residents are opposed to the project, the most vocal, and indeed the group of residents who appeared at the meeting that night, were overwhelmingly against it.

A petition presented to the board was signed by 28 residents, all of whom requested denial of the variances.

"The ordinances are on the books for a purpose," said one resident to the board.

Elizabeth Carpenter, who spoke against the variance request, said while her views aren't reflective of all the residents, she believes those opposed are in agreement why.

They believe it would not be in the best interest of the community to develop the lot. "It's just plain too small to put a house on," one said at the meeting.

"We called upon the city council to enforce the city's existing zoning ordinance for R-1 district no differently than what has been done repeatedly for the past 40 years," she said, alluding to the fact that this property has been before the board of appeals before, but was denied at all times.

"I am opposed to having the lot in question developed because it does not meet the city's existing zoning standards (minimum 5,000 square feet). I feel a deviation from the city's standards is not in the best interest of our community," she added.

There is an emotional side to their arguments, because the street is itself a small community whose residents help each other out, like they do in small towns, but Carpenter would not discuss it due to possible litigation.

The vote was 6-1 against the proposal with the one dissenting vote made by councilman Bruce Rockwell who said he voted that way because he had made a motion to grant the request, just to get it on the table.

Councilman Emil Berg said the council turned down the petition for "a combination of all of the items." Of the residents' complaints, Berg said they were "a strong consideration, but was it a ruling consideration, I couldn't say."

Joyce Greco is upset. When she and her husband bought lots 12 and 13 on Mapleton Avenue in 1971, it was because they had young children and with the house on lot 12, it was convenient to have a vacant lot next door for their children to play on.

When they bought it, it was sold as two lots, Greco said. Lot 13 is termed a lot of no record, and therefore is not recognized, except for at assessment time, when Greco said she is assessed for two lots, one which is developed (where her house is) and one which is undeveloped.

Greco — who has lived on Mapleton for 40 years, though not all of them in the same house — said she would have used the money from selling the lot to do some repairs to the outside of her house.

"As it is now, my house isn't raising anyone's property values," she said, questioning residents' concerns that another house would bring their property values down.

Greco said her request is a one of a kind. It is the only lot in the Farms of that size, and the Higbie cottage is small enough, and has the right character to fit on the street. If the Higbie cottage can't go there, nothing can, she said.

"I understand zoning laws," Greco said. "The laws keep Grosse Pointe unique, and the property values up, but this is a one-time request. It wouldn't be precedent setting, it wouldn't be opening a Pandora's box where residents all over the city would be requesting lot splits."

"I'm amazed that the council turned it down," Brad Elvidge said. "It's kind of an exciting thing (being able to save the cottage)," he added.

He said he was a little surprised with the number of people who turned up to voice opposition, and that no one turned up to support it.

"But people that don't care, or think it's a neat thing aren't going to go to the council," he said.

Lisa Gandelot of the Grosse Pointe Historical Society said the society was asked by Gilbride and Elvidge to support moving the cottage for historical reasons. A number of letters were received from society members supporting the project.

"We felt it was a worthwhile endeavor for the community and the people involved," she said. "The cottage represents an era that existed in this area that should be preserved."

Gilbride was also surprised that the board did not grant the variances. He said no one who opposed it could show how granting the variances would harm them.

"We believe the board abused its discretion," he said. He also said the residents' concerns weighed too much on the council's decision and he said he and the Elvidges have a remedy.

"We're seriously considering an appeal to the Wayne County Circuit Court," he said. "The decision on that will come later, after study of the transcript of the meeting," he added.

Both sides said they have learned something through the whole petition process.

"This has been a real lesson in zoning law," Gilbride said.

Carpenter said, "This has been a lesson to us in representative government. I'm heartened and encouraged by the process. My admiration for the council has grown through this."

But if the cottage is destroyed, the whole point of the residents' complaints, the possible suit, the council's decision and Greco's and the Elvidge's petition becomes moot.

"We're all facing a deadline," Gilbride said.

Also, Village President Gerald Schroeder has been a resident of the Shores since 1949.

The name of former village clerk John Nicolson was also incorrect.

Officer surprises thief

While on surveillance of a Mack Avenue business around 3:30 a.m., Saturday, April 30, a Woods patrol officer arrested a 28-year-old East Detroit man who allegedly was trying to break into the car the officer was in.

The officer noticed the man acting suspiciously around his vehicle. He crouched when the man approached the car, and then ordered him to stop when the man peered inside the vehicle.

When the man was searched, a radar detector and several cassette tapes were discovered in his coat pockets.

Woods police learned there had been a theft from a car parked in the Farms earlier in the morning. Police were able to identify the items in the man's pockets with those stolen from the other vehicle.

The man was charged with larceny from an auto.

Hill parking situation is driving drivers, merchants crazy

By Ronald J. Bernas
Staff Writer

With the construction of the Cottage Hospital parking deck well under way, parking on the Hill is getting tougher. While many customers are finding it difficult to park, the business owners don't all agree on the toll the situation is taking on their business.

But they do agree there's little they can do other than tough it out.

Mary Busse of The Diet Center said her business hasn't really been hurt, but acknowledges that her business is different.

"When the people sign up for the program, they're committed and they do what they have to do to get here," she said. "They'll pretty much tough it out."

When they start the diet program, they must come to the center every day, but because of complaints, she has altered the program slightly to save members the hassles of parking.

"I wouldn't say I get a lot of complaints, but they do come in and say the parking is a zoo," she said.

It hasn't really hurt business at Kennedy and Co. Interiors, so says Julie Malone, but parking is bad, both for her and the customers.

"There's never any spots. The lot is always filled and it's crazy out front (on Kercheval) too," she said.

People do complain, she said, and say they had to drive around for a while before they find a spot.

"But there's not much to do," she concluded.

"I know it has hurt my business," said John Keller, owner of Hamlin's Market. "I've had customers tell me they won't come in anymore because they can never find a parking spot."

He said although his sales volume is down, he expects it will go down even more in the next three months, traditionally his busiest time.

Looking back, Keller believes the situation might have been alleviated by building the hospital's parking deck prior to the construction of 131 Kercheval, which could have been used for parking.

"I knew the situation was serious, I never really knew how serious though," he added.

Keller said he also gets a lot of complaints, at an average of half-a-dozen per day.

One bright spot for Hamlin's is the loyalty of many customers. Keller said they are keeping him going.

Rich Scherr said he believes the parking situation is hurting his business, Carl Scherr's, but he is not certain of how much.

"This is not a high-traffic store, but I think it's (business) down a bit," he said, "but I don't know directly."

As for a remedy for the situation, Scherr says "I really don't think there's anything we can do until the parking structure is built."

Keller believes the situation can be alleviated slightly when school is closed and the lot at Richard School can be used. "But only," he said, "if Hill employees park there."

New temporary changes have made the situation slightly more confusing. The addition of six new parking spaces and making the lot one-way all the way through with the only entrance off McMillan, and the only exit onto Muir Road.

The changes were made because construction is set to begin on the former Bronze Door and two-way traffic off Muir would have been impossible, according to police officials.

Photos by Peter A. Salinas

In his first act as new owner of the Bronze Door building, owner Stanley Day, with the champagne bottle, and general manager of the The Hill Restaurant Corporation, Dan Coe, on the ladder, together brought down the tattered awning and removed the lettering from the facade of the building. Day said the old building will come down, and that he plans to have a new 4,500-square-foot restaurant, complete with liquor license, in operation by fall.

Demolition has begun on the former Bronze Door, and with a new restaurant scheduled for completion this fall, the developer says 123 Kercheval will once again have a working restaurant.

In planning the new family-oriented restaurant, owner Stanley Day said the structure was so damaged and antiquated that developers said the best thing was to scrap the building and start over.

After demolition, a basement will be excavated, and then construction will begin on the new one-story business, Day said.

The format will be a family restaurant in the front two-thirds of the building, with a bar area and kitchen in the rear, off the alley. There will be access to the restaurant from both the alley and Kercheval, Day said.

The basement will house an auxiliary kitchen and bathrooms, he added.

The building will have plenty of daylight, from either skylights or windows.

"The project is still evolving, but it will be in keeping with the other buildings on the Hill," Day said.

Plans for the as-yet-unnamed restaurant call for it to be open six days for lunch and dinner, with limited carry-out, and its own baked goods. Bill Watson will be the chef, Day added.

Day is keeping the entire project Grosse Pointe oriented, and he is proud of that fact. The contractor is Peter Bologna, who built the building next door at 131 Kercheval, the design firm is Ford and Earl Assoc. who designed London East, which formerly occupied 123 Kercheval, and the architects are Newman and Smith, who were also involved in 131 Kercheval. Pointer Dan Coe will manage the establishment.

"We're designing it so we can all have fun in it," he said. "We're willing to give it a few years to make it work," Day added.

Day said that it's going to be a struggle to meet their October completion date, but added, "We're looking forward to it."

Dukakis uses the right stuff to defeat foes

Gov. Michael Dukakis of Massachusetts increasingly appears to have the right stuff to become the Democratic standard bearer in 1988. Even before his victory in Pennsylvania, most U.S. observers agreed with the British news weekly, The Economist, that Dukakis "is well on his way to securing the Democratic nomination."

The May 2 issue of Time magazine featured Dukakis in its cover story and then asked: "Can he unite the Democrats?" Time seemed to answer its own question by reporting a public opinion poll showing that Dukakis, with or without the Rev. Jesse Jackson on the ticket, would beat George Bush, who has the GOP nomination locked up.

In the Grosse Pointes, both of the expected nominees did well in the party caucuses that picked national convention delegates. Bush, who won Michigan's 1980 GOP presidential primary over Ronald Reagan and carried the Pointes on his way to that victory, won the 1988 Michigan caucuses even though the Rev. Pat Robertson challenged that triumph. In the Pointes, Bush apparently did no better than Rep. Jack Kemp. In the Democratic caucuses, Dukakis ran second to Jackson in the state but easily carried the Pointes.

The Economist gave Dukakis at least a chance of victory. After asking whether the Democrats are on their way to another drubbing, The Economist replied, "Probably but not certainly" to its own question. Then it added: "With no incumbent running and, at present, no intensively divisive economic or foreign policy issues, the popular vote in this presidential election could well be close." To support that view, The Economist said Bush could trip and Dukakis could "turn out to be a bigger vote-winner than his faltering progress through this year's primary campaign suggests."

Bush already has begun attacking Dukakis because of his lack of foreign policy experience. True, Dukakis is vulnerable on that issue but no more so than were Govs. Jimmy Carter and Ronald Reagan when they were elected president. In fact, Bush himself lost to Reagan in 1980 but has had more foreign policy experience in his eight years as vice president.

Dukakis has positioned himself on the liberal side of his party on foreign policy matters but not on the extreme left. He has favored a freeze on nuclear weapons, endorsed continued arms control negotiations with the USSR and has criticized U.S. intervention in Grenada, Libya and the Persian Gulf. He refused to permit the Massachusetts National Guard to train in Central America and has opposed President Reagan's strategic defense initiative, the so-called "Star Wars" program.

But he has emphasized the need to improve conventional weapons and has supported Georgia's Sen. Sam Nunn, chairman of the Armed Services Committee, in efforts in this direction. And he has advocated a "stable" defense budget rather than the wholesale cuts many Democrats have favored.

Do those positions make Dukakis "soft on communism," the traditional GOP rallying cry against any Democrat who disagrees with Republican foreign policy positions? Hardly, even though they do not make him a foreign policy expert.

On domestic affairs, Dukakis seems to have used more of the right stuff against his Democratic foes. As a governor, he claims not only expertise but also achievements in a number of domestic areas. He says Massachusetts under his leadership has provided more efficient government, especially in the collection of taxes; has reformed its welfare system, and has just adopted the first state universal health care program in the nation.

He stresses his management skills and while he no doubt has exaggerated his own role in Massachusetts' economic recovery, he did have the courage to cut social welfare programs when the economic outlook required such action.

As president, he says he would ask Congress to limit the influence of political action committees, would sponsor a series of regional economic development conferences and would seek to spur economic development nationally just as he has done in Massachusetts.

In one respect at least, Dukakis will be cautious and conservative. He was defeated for re-election in 1978 in part because he had been forced to renounce a campaign pledge not to raise taxes. That setback apparently taught him to be careful about making binding commitments after he returned to office in 1982. For a governor entering national politics for the first time, that is not bad policy.

This brief outline of Dukakis' views indicates he may not be the soft touch some Republicans think he will be. We tend to believe it will be a close contest and that Bush may have more difficulty than his supporters think in becoming the first incumbent vice president to be elected president since Martin Van Buren won in 1836.

The wave of the future?

There is increasing evidence that municipal governments in the Pointes are engaging in more and more cooperative enterprises. In our view, that is a good portent for the future.

In recent weeks, governments in the Pointes have responded favorably to the recommendation of the Grosse Pointe Shade Tree Council for the hiring of a full-time forester to assist in protecting the tree resources of the Pointes and to recommend reforestation when practical. And just last week several Pointe officials monitored a public hearing on future plans for the Detroit City Airport and expressed concern about specific proposals that might affect Pointe residents.

Over the years, the Pointes through their public safety departments have been cooperating in battling crime as well as fighting fires. The mayors of the five Pointes have been meeting informally on a regular basis for some time to discuss mutual problems and projects. So have the city managers and the city prosecutors.

As we've mentioned before, the Pointes usually cooperate very well, officially and unofficially, in coping with problems in the public schools. The schools constitute one public agency that covers all the Pointes, as well as a part of Harper Woods, but the schools obviously would not be able to achieve the excellence they usually reach without the support of a majority of Pointe citizens.

Now, perhaps, it is time to consider an even greater degree of cooperation. We refer specifically to the management of the services that the five municipal managers direct for their citizens. In talking with several people, we have discussed the question of whether the current vacancy in the office of city manager in the Park could offer an opportunity for some experimentation in additional cooperation.

Specifically, the question is whether it would be possible for one manager to direct the activities of more than one city. Could the manager in the City, for example, also undertake similar responsibilities for the Park, assuming he would retain the present staff to help him out? And could the Pointes eventually appoint just one manager for the five Pointes?

Over the years, the Grosse Pointe News has often supported the consolidation of all of the Pointes into a single government, but we now tend to believe the proposal is impractical, at least at the present time. Each of the Pointes has a separate identity and personality and most residents of each of the five communities appear to want to preserve that identity and personality.

But would the consolidation of the management of the public services interfere with the retention of the identity, personality and traditions of each of the Pointes? We doubt it. Instead, we see benefits in increased efficiency and better service to all the Pointes with a central management staff under the supervision of all five municipal governments.

The idea may be impractical but the success of the various kinds of cooperation that already exist prompts the discussion of possible further moves in this direction. At any rate we would be interested in the reaction, pro or con, by municipal officials as well as Pointe residents to this proposal.

State manufacturing in slump

A front-page map in the May 2 New York Times should give little cheer to Michigan's manufacturing industries or to the state's Democratic administration. It shows that among 12 Midwestern states, Michigan is the only one to have lost manufacturing jobs in the year ending in February 1988.

The Times attributed the Midwest boom in manufacturing jobs to the declining value of the dollar and the rise in exports that have made possible a swift transition from the blues to boom times in many Midwest communities.

Among the 12 Midwest states, Iowa had the best record of recovery in manufacturing jobs in the past year with a 7.3 percent gain, while Nebraska had the second-best record with a 7.1 percent rise. Michigan had the worst record with a 6 percent loss and Ohio had the second worst with a gain of only 0.4 percent. Nationally, a gain of 1.5 percent was reported.

Nationally and in the Midwest, the trend is toward service jobs but the greatest growth percentage for many Midwestern states is in their factories. That is good news because manufacturing tends to provide the better paying jobs for wage earners as well as the products needed to close the foreign trade gap.

It is no secret that Michigan still is heavily dependent on the auto industry. That means that during the auto industry's recent period of retrenchment and restructuring to reduce costs and become more competitive, the state has had to bear a heavy burden of unemployment, the loss of workers to other states, a decline in tax revenues in many communities and losses in business by retailers and wholesalers.

Fortunately, recent gains in Michigan in other jobs have cut the state's unemployment rate from 10.2 percent in January to 8.4 percent in February and to 8.3 percent in March. That latter figure still is the highest unemployment rate among the 11 largest states and far above the 5.6 percent rate for the nation.

Overall, the Times story should provide new incentives to Michigan's business and political leaders to try to reduce the state's reliance on the auto industry. The efforts have been under way for years but more diversification would protect the state and its people against the boom-and-bust cycles of the auto industry.

Safety and beauty

To the Editor:

My good friend and colleague, Dr. Ralph Slovenko (Grosse Pointe News April 21, 1988) erroneously claims that a barrier along the lakeshore would detract from enjoyment of the lake. If that were not enough, he makes the lethal mistake of assuming that such a barrier would only "prevent a rare suicide by driving into the lake."

In reality, people end up in the lake due to other reasons also, like inattention, mechanical failure or intoxication. It should not be assumed that a suicidal person will inevitably find another means to terminate life. Making household gas non-poisonous dramatically reduced the suicide rate in England.

A barrier by the road would create a safe walkway along the lakeshore. Such a barrier would enhance the safety of pedestrians as well as drivers without interfering with the view of the lake. We can have safety and beauty at the same time.

Thank you

To the Editor:

This year, Tuesday, May 3, has been designated "School Family Day," in order to recognize all those people whose job it is to help young people learn.

Here in Grosse Pointe those people number more than 1,000 — teachers, librarians, secretaries, cafeteria workers, lunchroom supervisors, custodians, administrators, aides, monitors and parking lot attendants. All play different and important roles in our school system, and all contribute to the fine education provided our students.

On behalf of the Board of Education, I would like to extend our warmest thanks to each and every member of the staff for a job well done. No one could ask for a more dedicated or caring school family than we have.

Bon Secours helps

To the Editor:

I am writing to you to tell you how helpful Bon Secours Hospital's Department of Nutrition was to us at St. Paul School.

On April 21 we had a nutrition fair for the entire fifth grade. We requested the aid of a nutritionist for our fair. Paula Gerow, a staff nutritionist, came to the fair and was very helpful to us. Her expertise added to the value of a very worthwhile program.

We commend Bon Secours Hospital for allowing Mrs. Gerow to be at our school program. Obviously, they recognize the importance of the involvement of their staff in teaching good nutrition habits to the youth of our community. Thanks, Bon Secours.

A moving experience

I've finally taken the big step. After months of deliberation and thinking, poring over my finances and my bills, I've made the jump.

I signed a lease for an apartment.

That wasn't the hard part, though. The hard part came when I had to pack up and move. But, really, that wasn't the hardest part. Unpacking was.

Sure, it was fun, at times, re-discovering the items that had been packed away, both in boxes and in the back of my mind. All the cards, the junk, the letters, the junk, the knick-knacks, and the junk. Come to think of it, most of it is junk.

But it's junk I can't bear to part with. It's my past, it made me what I am. Would you call me a "junkie?"

In opening the boxes that have been stored in my mother's basement since I moved home from Marshall, I found things — there's no other word for the stuff — that I wonder why I kept. Then on further consideration, I wondered why I kept them in the box all this time.

While I'm no Andy Warhol, I don't own anything of real value, I am a pack rat, just like he was. I've saved everything from magazines to newspapers, and birthday cards to theater programs. Why?

I kept the four special issues celebrating the 20th anniversary of Rolling Stone magazine. Maybe they will be worth something some day. Or maybe they will be good reference material for my children. Or maybe so much work went into them and they are so well done that I can't just add them to the landfill.

I Say

I have a stamp collection, complete with first-day issues from both the United States and England that I haven't looked at or thought about for years . . . until I started unpacking. Then I thought some of the first day lithographs from England might look nice framed. So moving has given the collection new life.

Maybe. Probably not.

I have books which I wrote and illustrated when I was in second grade. I remember how much time I spent developing a plot, planning illustrations, coming up with a great title, and sewing the pages together. All for seven — count 'em, seven — lines of copy, and not very good copy, either.

I saved newspapers from college, where I got my feet wet and from Marshall when I nearly drowned. (Actually Marshall wasn't bad, I just wanted to keep the metaphor going.) And other papers, like when the Iranian hostages were released, and when the Tigers won the World Series. More reference material, I guess.

I have cards from friends who just signed their first names and for the life of me I can't remember who the heck these people are. But I'm afraid I might run into them again and I would feel bad that I threw out their card. I even saved cards I received at my First Communion, along with the rosary — which is now missing a few beads — from the top of the cake I had that day. I also have cards I bought that I haven't sent yet. Like the one I have for my aunt's birthday which was April 16.

Books I swear are next on my list of things to read, buttons I promise to sew on, photographs I told friends I would send to them, order forms I vowed to fill out and send in. All of these fill my boxes, which in turn filled my closets.

I promised myself when I moved I would throw out all this "emotional chaff" (That's a good phrase. I stole it from someone, though). I swore all this extra garbage would not find a home in my new apartment. I vowed to go through everything and condense.

But what with the cleaning of the place, and trying to find new "things" to put into it and on the walls of it, and with all the work involved, everything is slowly, but surely, finding its way into the corners and the shelves and the closets.

And on top of that, I'm not quite sure where to put garbage in the apartment building anyway. So it looks like I'm stuck. Again.

The Grosse Pointe Theatre was finalizing plans and brushing up the dance steps to "Guys and Dolls" its next production.

The Grosse Pointe Woods-Shores Little League opening day will start with a parade of all 46 teams in all leagues. The parade would end at Ghesquiere Park where the official opening day ceremonies were to take place.

"Seven Days in May" starring Burt Lancaster, Kirk Douglas, Fredric March and Ava Gardner; and "Come Blow Your Horn" starring Frank Sinatra were playing at the Woods Theater.

Peace drama planned for Mother's Day

A peace drama sponsored by the Second Unit Ploveshaires Peace Center and Gallery is of local and alternative way for families to celebrate Mother's Day.

This novel event is appropriate, since one of the founders of Mother's Day observance, Julia Wood Howe, was a peace activist whose idea it was that the day be used in ways that work for peace.

"The Land of Everywhere," by Robert Williams and Josh White III is a production of the Attic

Theatre, and will be performed on the stage of the Central United Methodist Church, Wood ward at Grand Circus Park, Sunday, May 8, at 4:30 p.m. The one-act drama combines mime and vaudeville, and is for all ages.

There is a special family ticket package of $10 per family; single admissions are $5. For further information and advance tickets, call the church at 965-5422.

There is parking behind the church, with access for handicapped both from the lot and to the auditorium

Bassett named outstanding elementary school teacher

A Richard Elementary School third-grade teacher, Fran Bassett, has been named Wayne County's Outstanding Elementary School Teacher in the second annual Newsweek/WDIV-TV Teacher Recognition Program.

Bassett is one of 12 teachers in the Greater Detroit metropolitan area who will be honored at a reception and awards banquet sponsored by the Washington Post at the St. Regis Hotel May 5. Publisher Katherine Graham will present the awards.

The awards were established to recognize excellence in education and to encourage and support quality public education in the greater Detroit area.

Bassett holds degrees from Western Michigan University and the University of Michigan. She has been a teacher for 28 years, 22 of which have been with the Grosse Pointe Public School System. She has always taught elementary school, although she once served in an assistant administrative capacity at Mason School. She returned to the classroom because she missed dealing directly with children.

"I didn't feel the same satisfaction," she said. "I feel more unified teaching."

One of Bassett's strengths is her ability to form her class into a tightly knit family unit.

"I tell my students that good, positive things make us all successful," she explained. "We support each other. We try not to zone in on anything negative. And we deal with situations honestly."

Richard School principal Jack McMahon said the concept of class as family works.

"Every good teacher deals with kids who have problems," McMahon said. "But Fran goes beyond that and gets the students in the class to be supportive of each other. That's powerful."

Bassett describes herself as "strict, organized and business-like" in the classroom.

"It's important to establish patterns that the kids can follow," she said. "Don't assume anything." She adds that humor is equally important in teaching.

"It's good to laugh with kids."

She also makes sure her students receive lots of recognition both inside and outside the classroom. There are compliments and personal notes from Bassett to students whenever they succeed. In addition, she encourages students to enter contests and submits their work to be featured in local newspapers. This helps build their self-confidence and their belief that they can do anything they want to, she said.

Teaching has changed a great deal since Bassett first entered the profession. Children are expected to know much more now than they used to be.

"We study molecules and other things in third grade that I didn't learn as a child until eighth grade," she said.

In addition, today's students must cope with complicated issues, she noted.

"Years ago, there were no drugs, the majority of homes had two parents and things were either right or wrong," she said. "Now things are gray. I try to help kids make good decisions. And I tell them that single parents are OK, that a family is one person who loves you."

Though she has worked for 28 years, Bassett says it is easy for her to maintain her enthusiasm. Her love of nature and active outdoor life are part of the formula.

"You cannot be enthusiastic if you are one-sided," she said. "And, of course, I love seeing what kids can be. I never tire of watching them reach."

Bassett's parents made education a priority in the family. They moved to Grosse Pointe for the schools and dreamed of one of their four children becoming a teacher. Bassett and her sister fulfilled that dream.

Bassett's daughter Anne is also a teacher, and her husband Don, a retired Grosse Pointe school administrator.

Commenting on her teaching career, Bassett said, "All of my kids have been good kids."

Fran Bassett was recently named Wayne County's Outstanding teacher of the year. Some of her third grade Richard students posed with her.

The opening, in 1913, of the Michigan Central depot in Detroit, the tallest railroad terminal in the world at that time.

The beginning, in 1976, of a state subsidy program to preserve freight service on 1,000 miles of two bankrupt railroads.

The document was compiled by Don Riel, assistant administrator of MDOT's Railroad Safety & Tariffs Division, with the cooperation of Michigan railroad historical organizations and individuals.

Outdoor Rapport

By Peter A. Salinas

Morels — Michigan's truffles

Welcome! This is the first in a regular monthly column about the outdoors. Each month I will discuss a timely outdoor topic. Subjects will range from backyard birds to sailboarding or walleye fishing on Lake St. Clair — all with the Grosse Pointe outdoor enthusiast in mind. If you have outdoor questions or would like to read about a specific topic write: Peter A. Salinas, Outdoor Column, 96 Kercheval, Grosse Pointe Farms, Mich. 48236.

Morels are probably the most highly regarded of Michigan's wild mushrooms. They are difficult to find, but their subtle, almost nutty or meaty flavor, make them a prized find.

The best times to hunt them in the Lower Peninsula are from early May to early June and from mid-May to early June in the Upper Peninsula. The dark, or black morels, come out first, followed by the much larger, white morels later in the season.

For the novice, the most important thing is to properly identify the mushroom. Morels have a pitted head on a hollow stalk, and are easily confused with toxic species. So be careful.

Martie Cochran, secretary of the North American Mycological Association, does recommend several identification books. One of the best books for the Michigan picker, is Mushroom Hunters Field Guide by Alexander Smith and Nancy Smith Weber. She also recommends the Audubon Society Field Guide to North American Mushrooms and Orsen Miller's Mushrooms of North America. The black morel is usually found in hardwood forests. The best places to look are near ash trees and dead or dying elms. Because they blend in so well with the fallen leaves they are difficult to spot. I've seen lifelong hunters nearly step on them. White morels are almost always found in low-lying wet areas.

Walk through the woods at a good pace, keeping eyes open for leaves protruding from the ground and dark patches.

Once you find a morel, the best thing to do is to stop and look around carefully. Usually, there will be others in that area.

Carry a walking stick, or what Cochran calls her

"anti-snake device," for pushing aside leaves and poking around stumps.

If you've heard that an area is good for finding morels, the chances are a lot of other people have too. It's best to keep walking until you've gotten away from the easy-to-get-at spots. Check areas nearest the car on your way back.

Cochran says never put morels in a plastic bag or airtight container. Mushrooms sweat when they're picked, and will quickly get soft or moldy. It's best to put them in a basket or onion bag.

Take along a compass and know how to use it. It is easy to go from mushroom to mushroom and end up lost.

Jim Schmitt of the Woods has hunted morels for about 15 years. He usually goes to an Alpena farm to pick.

He wears only light clothes, because the brisk walking makes him warm. His favorite way to fix the morels is to soak them in brine for an hour, then blanch them in butter. He then freezes them, and when ready to eat, he finishes cooking them with a bit of salt and pepper. "They're great with scrambled eggs."

Christopher Malfroid, head chef at Sparky Herbert's said the morels are known as Michigan's truffles. He suggests rinsing them thoroughly in cold water. He will saute them with just a bit of butter, salt and pepper and sometimes adds a hint of garlic, a bit of brandy and reduces the mixture with some heavy cream. He does not over season morels, so as not to hide the delicate flavor. He makes a morel filling for ravioli and even a morel soup.

Some purists shudder at the thought of soaking morels. They cut them lengthwise and gently rinse with cold water. There may be a few tiny critters or bits of dirt in the pits and stem, and this removes them.

It has been a wet spring up north (it snowed last week). The first warm weather should make for great picking.

Several mushroom festivals are scheduled this spring including Mesic, May 6-8; Harrison, May 7; Boyne City, May 7-8; and Lewiston, May 14.

Cochran said closer to home, the Pinckney/Waterloo Recreation Area near Ann Arbor and the Lapeer and Ortonville areas are home to many mushrooms.

Whether you find a mushroom or not, it's great to get outdoors.

Wayburn house raided

Two Park men were taken into custody and charged with delivery of marijuana and firearms violations, following a raid of a house on the 1300 block of Wayburn, according to Park officials.

Shortly after 6 p.m. Thursday, April 28, Park police and the Michigan State Police Detroit Narcotics Team 1 broke down the front door of the home.

Park Capt. William Furtaw said this action was the result of months of investigation by Park officers and several weeks of intense surveillance by a joint investigation team.

Being held in lieu of a $50,000 cash bond for two counts of delivery of marijuana and one count of possession of a firearm during the commission of a felony is

Paul Prosky, 27, who was arraigned in Park Municipal Court April 29.

The other man, 24, who lived at the residence on a frequent basis, was turned over to Detroit police when it was learned he had an outstanding drug warrant in that city.

Seized during the raid were several pounds of suspected marijuana, which had been separated into individual packets.

Furtaw said it is believed these men sold marijuana to local teenagers.

Also confiscated during the raid were several rifles and shotguns and a handgun.

A pit bull dog had to be forcibly removed from the dwelling during the raid. The animal was taken to the local veterinarian.

North choir salutes Broadway — New Yorkers respond

Students ham it up in front of posters hanging inside Lincoln Center.

By Peter A. Salinas
Staff Writer

The 101 students and the adults who accompanied the Grosse Pointe North Concert Choir to New York last month describe the experience in superlatives.

Some 2,500 spectators gave the choir a standing ovation following their April 17 performance at the Avery Fisher Hall in the Lincoln Center. The choir was selected from hundreds of choirs nationwide last year to participate in the Fred Waring Pennsylvanians "A Salute to Broadway."

Choir Director Benjamin Walker said the students underwent long and intensive rehearsals in New York.

"I think the biggest thing for the kids was that it was so much hard work," he said. "I think they thought it would be a little more like a vacation, but it wasn't."

"But in the end, I think the hard work was what they liked most. When they got the standing ovation Sunday night, they all felt it was worth it."

The students left around 6 a.m. Thursday, April 14. Immediately after arriving in New York, the students were given a tour of the city. After they settled into their rooms, they had a three-hour rehearsal.

"I've never seen a 16-year-old beg to be allowed to go to bed," said Judy Preston, referring to some of the students at the end of the first night.

Preston, who helped to spearhead the drive to raise $75,000 to send the 101-choir members and 16 chaperones to New York, said she was very proud of the way the students behaved. There was not a single incident of trouble the entire trip.

Sherry Crysler, whose daughter Amy is a member of the choir, was one of the chaperones.

"It was an absolutely rewarding trip," Crysler said. "I had been a Brownie leader, and I never thought I would do things with older kids, but I would do this again in a minute."

"These students were very sophisticated travelers," Walker said. "Only 20 of the choir members had ever been to New York before, and we had lots of kids who had never flown."

Walker said he had mixed feelings about the choir's performance. When the students started rehearsing, the choir was under the direction of E. Jon De Revere and James W. Herbert.

"It was a strange feeling," Walker said. "It really hit me Thursday night. I had been so close to them, and then all of a sudden they were not mine. I felt like a father who had to give his daughter away. I wanted to avoid rehearsals. I was so proud — so thrilled, but I also felt cut off."

Walker said tears welled up during the Sunday night performance, and he shared the overwhelming feeling of exhilaration the choir members felt when they received their standing ovation.

The students rehearsed a total of 20 1/2 hours over the four days, including 9 1/2 hours on Friday.

"The students were treated as professionals and were expected to respond as such," Walker said.

Sharing numerous duties with Walker were Margaret Steele, who helped with choral duties and Robert Foster, the choir accompanist.

Julie Berger, a choir member, had a small accident.

"I was walking home down 42nd Street after 'A Chorus Line,' when I fell on a manhole cover," she said. "It was cold. I was tired and exhausted. My nylon had a humongous hole and I was bleeding from my left ankle. I had one shoe in my hand and as I limped, I kept saying 'it's all worth it.'"

Heather Eagle said she will always remember her choir experience.

"New York was the most thrilling experience of my life," she said. "I feel it was a lot of work, but to have that feeling that you were performing in a Broadway musical was something I will have with me for my entire life."

Walker said still publicity shots of the event were taken as well as a videotape of the performance. He is waiting for them to be delivered to North. He said Grosse Pointe Cable has agreed to show the performance, but no date has yet been set.

Students had some free time. About half of the choir saw a performance of "A Chorus Line," and the other half saw "Starlight Express." They dined at Astis, a Greenwich Village restaurant that has a opera theme complete with singing waiters.

"The kids just ate that up," Walker said.

Brigid Brooks after the first rehearsal in New York.

For their performance, the students donned tuxedos. Amy Crysler and John Farrell take time out to pose for the photographer.

Jim Clor, Jeff Witzke and John Farrell seem to like what they're looking at at the reception following the choir's performance.

The choir was awarded this plaque from World Stage Productions in honor of its performance at Lincoln Center. From left are Judy Preston, choir director Benjamin Walker and Sherry Crysler.

A group of choir members stand outside the Hard Rock Cafe. They had some free time, but for the most part they had to rehearse.

Disaster drill

A mock victim from the 127th Tactical Clinic at Selfridge ANG Base gets speedy attention at St. John Hospital during the National Disaster Medical System drill in April. Personnel from the base helped check the system's readiness to handle their part of a national level catastrophe. Under the make-believe scenario, 20,000 casualties were transported throughout the nation from Texas, where a stadium had been "hit" by a tornado. Helping a patient are Dr. Jorge Ravelo, Dr. Anthony Southall, chief of St. John's emergency medicine, and emergency room technician Timothy Foote.

Art classes begin

Beginning as well as advanced students are invited to enroll in Janice Trimpe's sculpting class offered Mondays, May 2-June 20, 7 to 10 p.m. at the War Memorial.

Students will work from a live model to learn to investigate all the forms of the body and will complete a one-third size sculpture of the model. Projects will be fired by the instructor, if desired, for a small fee.

Class fee is $65 for seven weeks plus a nominal fee payable to the instructor. Advance enrollment is suggested.

Beginning Tuesdays, May 10, is a six week class, "Exploring Painting With Mixed Media." This new War Memorial offering will meet from 6:30 to 9 p.m. Students of all levels, ages 13 through adult are invited to register.

Instructor Nancy Patek will offer individual attention to each student and introduce the class to artwork by contemporary artists. Class fee is $50 for six weeks. Pre-registration encouraged.

a year was up when she first got the diagnosis, she was on her way to independence again.

"I decided I would never, if I could prevent it, turn my back on anyone who had been told the sorry news," she said. "When I heard of Friends of Vision, I wanted to join. At that time the group was looking for a project and we came up with a support group."

She and social workers Kay Gee, who also has macular degeneration, and Jane Stone, began a local support group in conjunction with the Detroit Institute of Ophthalmology. The Friends of Vision now conducts four meetings a month, two at the DIO for about 25 people, and two at the Whittier for 40 people.

The DIO group meets the first and third Wednesday of the month at 10 a.m. and anyone who is visually impaired is welcome to attend along with a companion. Call Judy Dara at 824-4710 for more information.

Besides moral and emotional support, the Friends know what is available and where a person can go for help. The group sponsors low vision fairs that display the latest technology, mobility workshops and also hosts the annual "A Clear View," at the War Memorial.

Open to everyone with no charge for admission, A Clear View attempts to make sighted people more comfortable with the visually impaired.

"We are trying to project one fact — that the visually impaired are people first who happen to be blind," Cook said. "We haven't changed. We have to go the extra step to make people feel comfortable with us."

Besides information and entertainment, a highlight of the evening is the Caring Not Groping Groupies, who relate some of the funny things that have happened to them. The event is in its fourth year and has been highly successful.

Dorothy Cook

Cook, who has had to adjust to her impairment, hasn't slowed down much. She attributes her determination to her mother "who never gave up and brought us up with no such idea as 'can't'. She would say you can do anything."

Cook, who was born Dorothy Chick in New York City, went to Barnard School for Girls, and at 16, entered the College of William and Mary where she earned a bachelor of arts degree. She spent a summer working for Judge Anna Cross, a recorder's court judge in New York. "She was one of the first judges to realize that repeating offenders often had problems at home."

The experience convinced Cook to be a social worker. After graduation she got a job at the Westchester County Department of Child Welfare in the foster home division. Later, she went to work for the Children's Aid Society in Detroit when she married attorney James Longley. Children — a daughter and twin sons — kept her home for awhile.

"I had decided I wanted to do something more. I really wanted to go back to school," she said. In the '50s Cook graduated from Wayne State University with teaching credentials and then went on to earn a master's degree in education administration. She taught at Salinas School in Dearborn for 15 years.

"It was an absolute joy to me. I just loved teaching," Cook said, adding that most of her pupils were Arabic or from Appalachia. Cook, who had been divorced a couple of years, married David Sutter in 1973. It was through Sutter, who co-founded the Grosse Pointe Symphony with Tom Nester, that she began her involvement with the group.

It was an idyllic marriage Cook said, and they spent one year living on a boat in North Palm Beach. Sutter died suddenly of a heart attack while they were on vacation. "It was over the Fourth of July and we had to get him back here and I was distraught." It was two weeks later, she said, when "something was absolutely crazy with my vision and everything was distorted."

While she thinks she would have eventually been stricken with the disease, Cook believes the extreme stress and shock of her husband's death triggered its onset. Her vision now is almost gone.

"You never get over it. Every time there's a lessening of your sight, you go through this despair." Then she adds: "You can't really think too much about things in the past."

Three years ago, she and Louis Cook, a widower, married. The two couples had been friends. Louis Cook retired four years ago as an editorial writer for the Detroit Free Press where he worked for 36 years.

"We work very well together," Cook said. The couple travels extensively. Last year they went to Barcelona, Paris and the Brittany coast. They go to Mexico in the winter and plan to go back to Spain this fall.

"It's very hard for people to understand that most blind people have some vision," Cook said. "I can't see faces, but I can see people."

When she goes to the theater, she takes a monocular, which she describes as a dumb-looking telescope. With it she can scan the stage and pick up the scenery or focus on an actor.

To weed her garden, she pulls everything that isn't protected by a wire hoop which her husband Louis places around each plant.

Cook gets books on tape in "dozen lots" and said she has had a "marvelous time going back over old literature, things I read as a child and didn't enjoy as much as I am now."

Her impairment, Cook says, has changed her: "I feel I'm a stronger person and I feel I'm more tolerant. And I feel I have more worth, strange as it seems."

She said it's extremely hard for anyone who is faced with a tragedy to "climb the mountain. It's hard but the alternative is worse. The alternative is loneliness, isolation and fear."

Judge denies injunction for St. John helicopter

By Ronald J. Bernas
Staff Writer

A Wayne County Circuit Court judge has denied an injunction requested by the City of Grosse Pointe Woods which would have banned helicopter flights to and from St. John Hospital.

The city requested the injunction to stop the flights after some residents complained about the noise and expressed concern over the possibility of a crash.

According to Mike Kairis, director of corporate communications for the hospital, there are six to eight flights per year, and all are for critically ill patients who need special treatment.

The April 11 judgment by Judge James Rashid said, in part, "The Court is obviously concerned with the safety of the public and the possibility of an unfortunate and disastrous crash. However, in order to issue an injunction on the basis of a possible crash, the Court would be presuming someone's negligence in advance."

In order to issue the injunction, there had to be proof the flights were damaging to the public interest. Rashid's judgment said that although the "noise, dust and debris which occurs infrequently from the helicopter flights, although annoying and possibly disturbing to the residents, is not so unreasonable to justify the issuance of the injunction."

Woods City Manager Chester Petersen said "The city gave it a good try to try and protect their residents, but I guess it wasn't good enough."

City Attorney George Catlin told the council Monday that an appeal is possible but, in this case, would not be worthwhile.

"The hospital is pleased the judge recognized the flights as necessary," Kairis said. "We are glad we will be able to continue these services."

Camp Sun Deer for asthmatics needs volunteers

Enrich the life of an asthmatic child by volunteering to spend a week at Camp Sun Deer, the free camp for kids with severe asthma sponsored by the American Lung Association of Southeast Michigan.

Camp Sun Deer provides a traditional outdoor camp setting for asthmatic children, ages 9 through 12, who are normally restricted to a life indoors, in a controlled atmosphere. Campers participate in a variety of activities and are closely monitored by expert health care professionals from a variety of disciplines.

Volunteers who attend camp gain a wealth of personal and professional experiences, as this unique program offers hands-on training in most aspects of asthma management. For students and professionals interested in respiratory problems, allergies, pediatrics and recreational therapy, attending camp will provide opportunities to experience first-hand the problems that young asthma sufferers encounter daily.

Volunteers are needed for the period June 25-July 2. The camp is held at the Battle Creek Outdoor Education on Clear Lake near Hastings.

Brownell students join nation in balloon launch for weather study

Brownell students released 1,000 helium-filled balloons Monday, April 25, as part of a nationwide experiment designed to help the National Weather Service learn more about air currents and weather predicting. Brownell Science Department Chairman William Leleszi, said several of the balloons were found the same day. Three of the balloons were found in the Cleveland area. One of the balloons was found near Newton Falls, located about 50 miles southeast of Cleveland, just 4 1/2 hours after launch. Another balloon was found in Cleveland 1 1/2 hours after it was released.

Woods adopts new parking fines

The Woods council approved a recommendation from the Woods Parking Commission to change the fines for violating city parking meters to $3 and $20.

Those who violate parking meters will be fined $3 if paid by the court date, and $20 thereafter. The court date usually follows 30 days after the violation.

The current rates are $3 if paid within 24 hours, $5 if paid within 10 days and $10 if paid after 10 days. These rates have been unchanged since 1979. At the April 18 meeting, the city council referred a proposal to raise the fines to $5 if paid by the court date and $20 afterwards, to the parking commission for their recommendation.

The reason for the large jump in fines after the court date is two-fold; it will encourage people to pay prior to the date, and the $20 takes care of the court costs incurred, City Administrator Chester Petersen said.

The city will be saving money on clerical costs, Petersen said, because city employees will not have to keep so many records if violators pay on time.

When asked by a group of Mack Avenue business people how the council felt it would affect business there, the council replied it will be good for business.

"It is the opinion of this council that this will help the Mack Avenue business," Mayor George Freeman said.

Several hundred Brownell School science students released 1,000 multi-colored helium-filled balloons into a clear and breezy sky Monday morning, April 25, joining more than 500,000 students across the country in a nationwide science project.

This is the third year the Triangle Coalition's National Balloon Launch was a kickoff event of National Science and Technology Week. Attached to each balloon is a data card with the time and location the balloon was released. Information collected when the cards are returned will help the National Weather Service to better understand air currents and weather prediction.

The U.S. Geological Survey plans to produce a computer-generated balloon trajectory map. The map will provide a display of wind directions across the country as well as showing the spread of balloons as they drifted from launch sites.

Brownell Science Chairman William Leleszi said the students studied weather prior to the launch, and added the school brought in some special equipment to help the students understand the weather.

"We used a modem hook-up to the National Weather Service through Washington D.C.," Leleszi said. "We were able to get information about windspeeds from ground level to 60,000 feet, air masses and temperature."

Leleszi said all funds spent on the balloon project were raised when students sold candy at Easter.

"No school funds were used on this project," Leleszi said. "This is possibly the last opportunity for students to take part in this national experiment." He said that because of environmental concerns, especially on the west coast where the balloons land in the ocean and can kill sea turtles if consumed, the project may be halted.

The City Council of the City of Grosse Pointe Farms, Michigan will hold a public hearing at 7:30 p.m. on Monday, May 16, 1988 in the City Hall at 90 Kerby Road, on the proposed 1988 city tax levy and on the proposed 1988-1989 City budget. Tax Levy	$4,075,000.00
Total Financing	$6,829,600.00

PROPOSED TAX RATE - 12.10 per thousand - Based on Est. State Equalized Value of $336,744,280.

Last year (1987) the City levied 12.60 mills ($12.60 per $1,000 SEV) for City operating purposes. Because of an estimated increase in the State Equalized Value of existing property in the City, state law (Act 5 of 1982) provides that the base rate for 1988 City operating tax rate be decreased to 11.72 mills ($11.72 per $1,000 SEV). This is .88 mills ($.88 per $1,000 SEV) lower than the 1987 operating tax rate.

To fund the City's proposed 1988-1989 budget, provide for Debt Service and to maintain the present level of City services, the City finds it necessary to increase its operating tax levy. An additional millage rate levy of .38 mills (.38 cents per $1,000 SEV) is proposed above the 1988 base operating millage rate. This provides an estimated 3.2% increase in City operating tax revenues.

Public comments, oral or written, are welcome at the Public Hearing on the proposed City Budget.

Student Spotlight

Jessica Pluhar

Each week in this column, we will focus on the work of a student. It can be a poem, a drawing, a short story, a picture of a scientific experiment or a wood-working project, a book review.

The following was written by Jessica Pluhar, a 9-year-old student at Richard School. She is the daughter of Gabriele and Gene Pluhar of Grosse Pointe.

Danger

"Jessica," called my mom.
"Yes?" I asked.
"Amy is here."
"I'm coming," I yelled. I sprang down off my bed and jogged downstairs.

"Hi, Amy," I said in a cheery voice.
"Hi, Jessica," she said back.
"Girls," yelled my mom because she was in the den. "Will you please go to the store and get some bread for me?"
"Sure," we said.
When we were walking, there was a big bright sign that read DANGER and in back of it was a giant hole, so we had to walk around it. When we got the bread, we started to skip back home.
"Watch out!" shouted Amy, but it was too late.
I had fallen into the hole. I had completely forgotten about the hole.
"Help!" I cried.

"Here," yelled Amy as she set down the bread. "I'll go get help. I'll be right back, OK?"
"OK," I said with a tear in my eye.
When she got back, she had the police trailing behind her.
"Amy," I cried.
"Yes, it's me... and I brought the police," called Amy.
Then, there in front of me, a long thick rope appeared. I slowly climbed up it and there stood...
"Mom, Dad, Amy," I cried.
"Next time try to be more careful," said Amy.
"I will," I said with a smile, and we all walked home very happily.

Allison Van De Ginste

The following was written by Allison Van De Ginste, a sixth-grader at Parcels Middle School. The 12-year-old is the daughter of Michael and Nina Van De Ginste of Grosse Pointe Woods.

The Performance

Nervously, I wiped my sweaty palms on my soft, black poodle skirt. I watched with a queasy stomach as another group of girls clomped noisily out of the door into the long, narrow hallway. Rapidly and anxiously, they talked among themselves, about being ready to perform. My good friend Stacey placed her steady hand on my shoulder and said, "Relax, you know the steps. Why should tonight be any different?"
I turned around to face her. I gave her a weak smile and I shrugged my shoulders. I replayed the steps in my head and tried to calm myself down. Some time had passed and our dance teacher bounced in the overcrowded band room of the high school, and announced it was our turn to perform.

Grasping Stacey's arm, I quietly stood in line to leave, swallowing the huge lump in my throat. As I walked down the hall to the darkness of backstage, I once again tried to calm myself, by concentrating on the steps and ignoring my head, which felt lighter than a helium balloon. Making my way in the dark, I found my spot on the stage and attempted my opening position. Soon the lights came on and the curtain opened. I took a deep breath, my heart flapping like a bird's wing. I positioned my arm, plastered a smile on my face and moved my feet to the beat of the music.

This space is open to any student in the Grosse Pointe public or private school system from grades 1 through 12.
Send your entry along with a picture to Student Spotlight, Grosse Pointe News, 96 Kercheval, Grosse Pointe Farms 48236, or drop it off at the office. If you would like your photo returned, enclose a stamped and self-addressed envelope.

The cost per three-week session is $80 per child. For those children with special needs wishing to participate, staff from IMD's School of Performing Arts Special Education will be available for assistance.
"Summer Discovery" will be taught by early childhood experts from the Institute's performing arts faculty. An affiliate of the Center for Creative Studies, the Institute of Music and Dance lists many of the area's finest musicians and dancers on its faculty.

South High French students honored

Twenty-four Grosse Pointe South High School French students were recently honored by the American Association of Teachers of French.

Fifteen of the 24 students were declared winners in the National French Examination, while nine were given honorable mention status. The students competed at five different levels. Anyone placing in the top seven was declared a winner.

South's fifth year French students completely dominated Level 5, where they won first, second, fourth, fifth and seventh places and picked up honorable mentions by winning in the eighth and 10th place as well.

Mariella Cavallo placed first in Level 5. Dunrie Greiling, second; Reba Uthappa and Elizabeth Lazarowitz tied for fourth; Julie Arrigo, fifth; Danielle DeLuca, seventh; Laura Grego, eighth, and Chris Sherwood, 10th. There were 123 competitors in Level 5.

In Level 2 (second year French) South had five winners and six honorable mentions. Emily Vortruba placed fourth, Jennifer Schutzman and Catherine Johnston tied for fifth; Joyce Stuckey, sixth; Phil Orton, seventh and Martha Gove and Caroline de Fauw tied for eighth; Charles Glass, ninth, and Barb Forster, Sean Kelly and Laurie Thomas, tied for 10th. There were 945 competitors in Level 2 of Division A.

In Level 4 (fourth year French) South had three winners and one honorable mention. Kimberly Taylor placed fourth; Christy Greiling, sixth; Molly Maycock, seventh; and George Sparrow, eighth. There were 415 contestants competing in Level 4.

In Level 1 of Division A Susannah McAndrew placed third in a field of 882 contestants.

The students' teachers are Rita Richards and Francis Granger of South.

Poetry finalist

Dunrie Greiling, Grosse Pointe South High School senior, was recently named a finalist in the Albion College High School Poetry contest for 1988.

The finalists represent less than two percent of the young poets who entered the contest.

Wasinger, Tower honored for excellence

Tower, South High School's newspaper, keeps piling up the awards. This time editor Sara Wasinger was named as the outstanding student journalist in Michigan, and the paper won the Spartan Award for overall excellence at the Michigan Interscholastic Press Association (MIPA) convention in East Lansing.

Wasinger has been active on Tower for four years. She has served as exchange manager, back page editor, managing editor for news and editor-in-chief.

To qualify for the All MIPA award she submitted a portfolio of her work.

"I was surprised," said Wasinger, who just recently decided to attend Bowdoin College in Maine. "I'm still surprised about it. All of it is that Tower is such a good newspaper, and has been good for so many years. That probably had a lot to do with it. I'm glad I've been part of this."

Wasinger has received numerous awards during her scholastic journalism career. A survey on student substance abuse she did last year placed first in the state and third in news writing competition sponsored by the Michigan Press Women and the National Federation of Press Women.

The story was also central to a staff effort which was one of six entries honored by the Los Angeles Times for editorial achievement.

"She offers leadership by example, by suggestion and by support, never by direction from above," said Bob Button, Tower adviser.

Edward Shine, principal said, he admired her character, maturity and intelligence.

"She has caused us to be very proud of what we would like our young people to be," Shine said.

Wasinger is the fifth South student to win the All MIPA award in the 17 years the recognition has been given. Previous recipients from South are: Ted Sweeney, 1972; Teri Mergeau, 1974; Jackie Tien, 1978; and Sharon Ruwart, 1981.

Lisa Fromm, Tower managing editor for news, was South's representative in the all-state newspaper staff which produced a publication distributed at the close of the convention. Her story on the impact of the Supreme Court decision permitting censorship of the student press was the lead story.

The Tower staff walked away with the Spartan Award in Class A competition more than doubling the requirement for recognition. South students placed first in six divisions, second in three categories and third in four areas, in addition to an honorable mention. The staff earned a total of 42 points, and only 18 were required to receive the Spartan Award. Jackson High School finished second in Class A with 30 points.

First place awards were won by Wasinger for in-depth/informative features, Reba Uthappa for editorials, Bryan Jones for sports features, Kristen Havern for feature columns and by the staff for overall newspaper design and for feature magazine.

Winning second place were Fromm for news stories, Greg Fadell for news/feature photography and Eric Zihlman for portrait photography.

"Metro Detroit Candlelighters affiliated with St. John Hospital," a support group for parents and health professionals touched by childhood cancer, will meet at 7 p.m. May 5 and 19 in St. John Hospital's floor boardroom.

On May 5, Isabel Menendez of the Children's Leukemia Society will speak on "Patient Services." Mark Stout, Ph.D., research spe-

Video on substance abuse available

"How Can I Tell If I'm Hooked?" is a question more and more young people are asking themselves. It's also the title of a new video program that can be borrowed at no cost from Brighton Hospital, which specializes in preventing and treating alcohol and other drug abuse.

According to national surveys, one of every four students is affected personally by addiction.

They are either chemically dependent themselves or have a friend, parent or sibling who is abusing alcohol or other drugs.

"How Can I Tell If I'm Hooked?" is a two-part filmstrip on videocassette that helps young people recognize the signs of addiction and better understand how it can be treated. A guide for parents and teachers is included.

This program and 20 other videos and films on substance abuse are available for loan as a free community service of Brighton Hospital. For additional information and to schedule their use, call the Community Relations Department on weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. at 227-1211, ext. 276.

First Christian Reformed Church: ethnic beginning; trial by fire

By Margie Reins Smith
Staff Writer

This is the tenth in an occasional series about Grosse Pointe churches.

The large red textured brick building of the First Christian Reformed Church is solidly planted and companionably squeezed among the modest homes of the 1400 block of Maryland in Grosse Pointe Park.

Its roots are Dutch. It was founded by a small group of Dutch Reformed tradesmen who came to Detroit during World War I. Its branches have grown wide and high, however, and in the 1980s, the church branches out into the Grosse Pointe community and nearby Detroit and includes members of many ethnic backgrounds.

Harold Battjes, 71, has lived within two miles of the church all his life. As a child, he ice skated in an open field two doors away. He graduated from the private school, Grosse Pointe Christian Day School, which is located directly behind the church building. And he remembers the night the church burned.

"Some of the houses in the neighborhood were already here in 1924, when the church building was built," he said. "It was more of a blue-collar membership then — skilled tradesmen in the building trades. Today most parishioners are in the business world."

The first group of Christian Reformed church members met in a rented room in Detroit in 1914 and held their services in the Dutch language. The Grosse Pointe church wasn't built until 10 years later, but members consider the church's birth to have been at that meeting in 1914. Next year they'll celebrate their 75th anniversary.

Many of the original church members moved to Detroit from Grand Rapids, Kalamazoo, Holland and Muskegon during World War I, according to Sybrant Schaafsma, 63, a member for 40 years. He's originally from Grand Rapids.

The first group of Dutch Reformed church members rented rooms and borrowed chapels from other churches in the Detroit area for several years. In 1923, a group of eastside residents bought several lots on Maryland and Goethe for $8,400 and began plans for a church building of their own.

The building was completed in 1925. Sunday services were held in both Dutch and English for several years.

On the evening of Sunday, Jan. 31, 1932, while 15-year old Battjes was walking to church, he noticed a beautiful orange glow in the sky. He joined the crowd that had gathered outside of young families. That's unique in this community. Other churches have a nucleus of older people."

DeVries likes to use the tree metaphor for the church. First Christian Reformed is like the large, old, sturdy trees in Grosse Pointe Park, he said. "Our roots go deep. We're healthy and alive. We have new growth. We're firmly planted."

"We have boughs in Detroit and boughs in the Pointes. It's exciting to be planted on a border like this and to be involved in the family needs of both areas."

Schaafsma pointed out that the church has an ethnic background, but has grown with the community and evolved beyond its ethnic beginnings. "A church can live in isolation for only so long. We've come beyond (that) and have an integral part of the community today."

Speech therapy classes offered

Individual sessions, twice weekly for 30 minutes at a nominal fee, will be offered for any child requiring continued speech therapy during summer months, at Holy Cross Hospital, 4777 E. Outer Drive, 1/2 mile from Eight the Dutch church. "I remember the fire roaring — the melting stained glass — lots of weeping and wailing — our new organ and its pipes melted and fell. The Park fire department didn't have adequate equipment."

The inside of the church was totally gutted, he said. But the exterior walls and roof remained.

Battjes said church members still represented a large number of building trades at that time. They mustered their energies and skills, rebuilt the church themselves — and saved money in the process. "This was during the Depression when men were available and materials were cheap," he said.

According to church records, fire damage was estimated to be $55,000. Insurance covered $46,200. The church accepted $33,000 and the actual cost of rebuilding was $25,000.

"This church has been tested by fire," said the Rev. William DeVries, pastor of the church today. He smiled. DeVries has been with the church since last October, but was associate pastor in the early '70s, working with Wayne State University students.

He said the membership now consists of 64 families and draws about 225 to 250 each Sunday morning. "The largest membership ever was in 1953, when we had 160 families and drew about 450 on a Sunday morning," he said.

Membership has been dropping in the '60s and '70s, as it has in most other churches.

First Christian Reformed Church is rather unusual, he said, because its highest percentage of members come from the 30- to 40-year-old age group.

Battjes said, "We're a church

Getting fingerprinted

Grosse Pointe Woods Officer Sally Beghin, at the left, fingerprints Elaina Vennettilli as her father, Rick, of St. Clair Shores, learns the importance of child identification. Safety tips for cyclists

In 1987, 1,200 bicyclists were killed in collisions with motor vehicles, according to the National Safety Council. More than a half-million other cyclists suffered injuries from all types of accidents. Despite cyclists' best efforts to drive their bikes safely, many motorists fail to spot bicycles until it's too late.

Bicyclists should never assume the driver of a car, truck or other bicycle can see them clearly.

Being seen is one of the most important aspects of bicycle safety. In conjunction with American Bike Month in May, the National Safety Council recommends the following tips for cyclists to improve visibility:

- Never assume another driver can see you — even in daylight. Drive your bicycle defensively and expect the unexpected.
- Wear conspicuous clothing whenever you ride your bicycle. In the daytime wear bright or fluorescent colors, and at night wear retro-reflective material that outlines your body.
- Ride with traffic on the right side of the road, and don't weave or turn suddenly.
- Be especially careful at intersections. Use hand signals to indicate turns and stops.
- Obey all traffic regulations, signs and signals.
- Equip your bicycle with a headlight, tail light and reflectors for night driving.

Wayne State University honors Grano

Joseph Grano of Grosse Pointe Park, professor of law at Wayne State University, has been honored with one of the university's President's Award for Excellence in Teaching for 1988.

Described as a unique professor who "generates excitement in the classroom," Grano received his award during the university's 10th annual Recognition Day program at 3:30 p.m. Thursday, April 21, in the Community Arts Auditorium on campus.

Although using a variety of styles in his teaching technique, Grano is best known for his use of the "problem method" of instruction. He is the author of a book on the subject titled, "Problems in Criminal Procedures." In addition, he's published numerous articles and essays, as well as classroom texts and instructional materials.

From 1971 to 1975, Grano worked at the University of Detroit, where he was an assistant and associate professor. While there, he served a year as acting dean. NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING
ON INCREASING PROPERTY TAXES

The City Council of the City of Grosse Pointe Woods will hold a public hearing at 7:30 p.m. on Monday, May 16, 1988 in the Council Chambers of the Municipal Building, 20025 Mack Plaza to receive testimony and to discuss a proposed additional 1988 general fund operating millage rate for the City.

In 1987, the City of Grosse Pointe Woods levied a total of 12.922 mills ($12.922 per $1,000 SEV). This consisted of 10.960 mills for general operating fund purposes, .509 mills for swimming pool bonds, .953 mills for park redevelopment bonds and .500 mills for emergency medical services. In 1988, the City of Grosse Pointe Woods is proposing to levy a total of 12.892 mills ($12.892 per $1,000 SEV) for the City's general operating fund, debt service and EMS purposes. This represents a .030 mill decrease in the total City millage rate, however, such tax levy would provide for a 9.73% increase in total property tax revenues.

The City's 1987 general fund operating tax levy was 10.960 mills ($10.96 per $1,000 SEV). Under the State of Michigan "Truth in Taxation" Law, Public Act 5 of 1982, the City of Grosse Pointe Woods' base tax rate would have been required to be reduced to 9.969 mills ($9.969 per $1,000 SEV) for 1988 which in effect would have produced a tax revenue equal to the 1987 general fund operating tax levy.

Because of an increase in the city's State Equalized Valuation (SEV) and primary increases in the cost of hospitalization insurance and salary/wage increases for its employees; additional mandated increased costs in providing Advanced Life Support Ambulance Service to its residents; and to provide partial operating funds for the proposed new community center, the City finds it necessary to restore its millage levy reduction and to levy an additional millage rate of 1.22 mills ($1.22 per $1,000 SEV) above the 1988 Truth in Taxation general fund base operating rate. This millage increase will provide an estimated total tax dollar increase of $61.67 for the 1988 tax year for an average home in the City of Grosse Pointe Woods having a State Equalized Valuation (SEV) of $50,000.00 and will represent a 9.54% increase in property tax dollars.

In accordance with P.A. 5 of 1982, the City of Grosse Pointe Woods has complete authority to establish the number of mills to be levied within maximum millage rate as authorized by the electorate in the City Charter.

Police raid Woods drug house

A 28-year-old Woods man was bound over to Wayne County Circuit Court April 27 after his preliminary examination in Woods Municipal Court on one count of possession of cocaine and one count of intent to deliver the drug.

Woods police raided the home of Martin Pfeffer April 14, following a six-month investigation, according to Public Safety Director Jack Patterson.

When police went to the house, Pfeffer would not answer the door and officers had to break in.

Patterson said Pfeffer was located in a basement fruit cellar.

"The case was developed by information brought to the department by a uniformed officer," Patterson said. "He worked with the detectives on surveillance and helped to obtain and serve the warrants."

Patterson said a small quantity of cocaine and manufacturing equipment was confiscated in the raid.

"I don't believe that any community around a big metropolitan area is immune from this type of activity," Patterson said.

A patrol officer noticed that there was higher than normal traffic on the street and at the house.

"Surveillance supported his original observation," Patterson said.

He urged residents to call the department if they noticed heavy vehicular or pedestrian traffic around one home.

"People don't have to give their name if they don't want to," Patterson said. "They are our best eyes and ears."

G.P. mayors voice concern about airport expansion

By Margie Reins Smith
Staff Writer

Three Grosse Pointe mayors spoke out against Detroit City Airport expansion plans at a FAA public information meeting last Thursday. City Mayor Lorenzo Browning, Farms Mayor Joseph Fromm and Park Mayor Palmer Heenan attended the meeting and publically registered concern for the residents of the Grosse Pointes and surrounding communities if City Airport is expanded.

Also attending the public meeting were Park residents Tom Sullivan and Arthur Williams, members of a citizen's committee to monitor the expansion project, and former City Mayor John King.

Williams said the Grosse Pointes were incorporated prior to the establishment of Detroit City Airport and are in an excellent legal position for protesting expansion plans.

If the airport is to be greatly expanded for use as a major regional airline facility, he said, "then it must be done in such a way as to minimize safety hazards and control air pollution and excessive noise caused by low altitude flights (approaches and departures) over our communities."

Williams, who is a pilot, praised the councils of Grosse Pointe Park and Grosse Pointe Farms for responding quickly and passing resolutions which support the interests of the citizens of Grosse Pointe, as well as the citizens of Detroit and surrounding residential communities.

"City Airport expansion," Williams said, "will have a serious effect on property values, safety and quality of life."

The next step, he said, is "to wait, watch, monitor and protect our interests."

City of Grosse Pointe Michigan

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING OF INCREASING PROPERTY TAXES

The City Council of the City of Grosse Pointe, Michigan will hold a public hearing at 7:30 P.M. on Monday, May 16, 1988 in the Council Chambers at the Municipal Offices, 17147 Maumee, on the proposed 1988 City tax levy and on the proposed 1988-89 City budget. Copies of the proposed budget are available for public inspection during regular business hours in the office of the City Clerk beginning May 13, 1988.

In 1987, the City of Grosse Pointe levied 16.32 mills ($16.32 per $1,000 SEV) for both City operating and debt service purposes. This consisted of 15.93 mills for general operating purposes and .31 mills for debt service. In 1988, the City anticipates levying a total of 15.38 mills ($15.38 per $1,000 SEV) for both City operating and debt service purposes.

Due to an increase in the State Equalized Value of existing property in the City, the State "Truth in Taxation" law (P.A. 5 of 1982) provides that the base tax rate for 1988 City operating taxes be decreased to an estimated 14.42 mills.

To fund the City's proposed 1988-89 budget and to maintain the present level of City services, the City finds it necessary to restore a portion of its operating millage reduction. An additional millage rate levy of .71 mills (.71 cents per $1,000 SEV) is proposed above the estimated 1988 base operating tax rate. This provides an estimated 4.4% increase in City operating tax revenues.

In accordance with P.A. 5 of 1982, the City has complete authority to establish the number of mills to be levied within its authorized millage rate.

Public comments, oral or written, are welcome at the public hearing on the proposed additional millage rate and on the proposed City budget.

Forster's Interiors celebrates 50 years in family business

By Margie Reins Smith
Staff Writer

When Frank A. Forster Sr. started out in the furniture business in 1938, his store was strictly a two-man operation — the Forster Furniture Company, on Chalmers Avenue at Houston, on Detroit's eastside.

Forster and his partner, Hubert Bohle, did the buying, on-the-floor selling, bookkeeping, warehousing, advertising, cleaning and deliveries. Advertising consisted of an occasional door-to-door canvass of the neighborhood. "They'd knock on the door, introduce themselves, tell the homeowner about their furniture store and leave a business card," said Frank Forster Jr.

Frank Jr. and his brother, Ronald, are running the store today — as Forster's Interiors celebrates its 50th year as a family-owned business.

"Back in the '30s and '40s, deliveries were done after hours," he said. "Typically, the two partners would go home, have dinner, then come back to the store and load furniture on a small wooden trailer which was pulled behind one of their cars. The open trailer probably was big enough to hold a modest-sized three-piece bedroom set."

The senior Forster bought out his partner in the early '40s and it's been the Forster family business ever since. Business grew steadily and in 1948, they built a new 9,000 square-foot store on Gratiot and changed from a general, multi-line furniture store to a more specialized operation. In 1978, they moved into a 30,000-square-foot building near Lakeside Mall, and in 1981, they opened the 7,500-square-foot store in the Woods.

Today the total floor space of the two stores is more than 10 times the floor space of the original store. Sales personnel are 11 trained designers, and most have degrees. They assist customers with space planning and color coordination as well as furniture and accessory selection.

Forster said the stores have two warehouse employees, two delivery persons, two delivery trucks and three people in the bookkeeping department. Advertising and buying is a management function, he said, and most ads are placed with local newspapers and radio stations.

The quality level of the furniture has risen steadily also, according to Forster. "Now both stores are Drexel Heritage Showcase Stores, which means over 90 percent of the items are Drexel Heritage, an upper middle to upper quality level of furniture."

The family recently celebrated its 50th anniversary in a unique way.

"We thought 50 years in business was worth a party," said Forster.

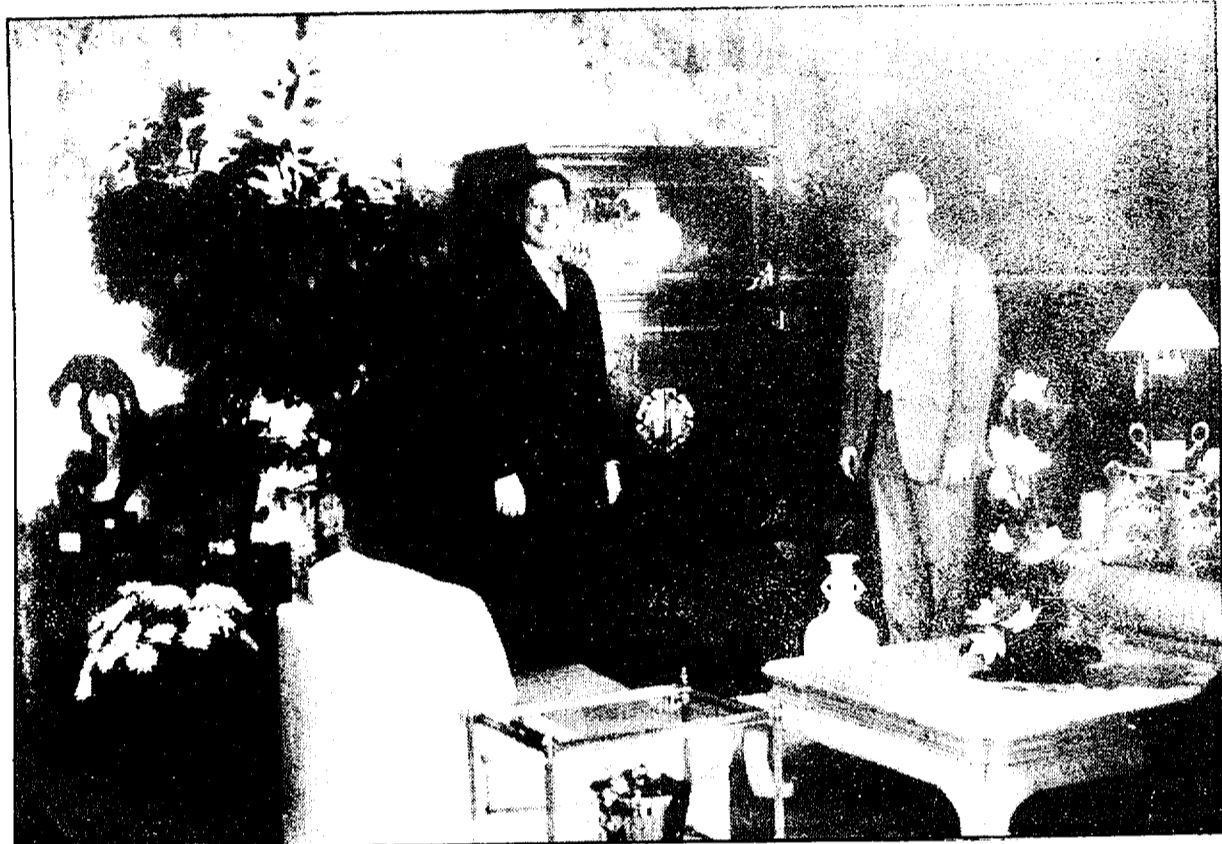

His wife, Sandy, and Ronald's wife, Kathy, recreated the 1930s era of the first store with a dis-

Businesses with tight budgets can perform research

Local businesses that have an interest in performing research, but don't have the funds, may have more than they know.

The Industrial Productivity and Products Research Institute at Wayne State University is especially designed to help small- and medium-sized businesses get involved in joint research ventures with university experts.

IPPRI grants, which can be awarded for amounts of up to $100,000, pave the way for a give-and-take relationship between industry and university researchers, according to Garrett T. Heberlein, WSU's vice president for research. The grants support projects that "address current or emerging industrial needs and have matching support from industrial research sponsors."

"The IPPRI program was initially established as a way of helping Michigan's economy," he said. Under the program, both the company and university (via state monies set aside for the purpose) put money toward the research. This way, "it makes it possible for faculty to work with smaller companies which may not have a substantial research and development budget."

Through the IPPRI program, WSU chemist Lawrence J. Mar-

nett is conducting a research project with Proteins International, "a fairly typical, small, young biotech company" in Rochester, Mich. "(The program) provides us with the ability to work with them," Marnett said. "We've been able to provide materials because of the money."

Last year, Wayne State's IPPRI budget was $330,000, Heberlein said. The university usually funds eight to 10 projects a year. Because of the limited budget, he said, the university ideally prefers two-for-one matches where the company provides two-thirds of the research cost and the university, one-third.

In the four-year history of the IPPRI program at Wayne State, dozens of faculty members and companies have taken part.

"Preference is given to research projects that involve small- to moderate-sized companies," Heberlein said. "And the program is particularly well-suited to faculty in business, engineering, chemistry, physics, where there is an opportunity for them to work on projects of a semi-applied nature."

Past program participants have included both small and large companies, such as Michigan Bell, Eaton Corp. Upjohn, Enzymes and America, Syntax and Advanced Cardiovascular Systems Inc.

Further information about the IPPRI program is available from Dr. Garrett T. Heberlein, Office of Research and Sponsored Programs Services, 1072 Mackenzie, Wayne State University, Detroit, Mich. 48202, 577-5600, or the Technology Transfer Network, Center for Urban Studies, 242 Mackenzie, Wayne State University, Detroit, Mich. 48202, 577-2788.

Benefit recital planned for WSU glee club, singers

The Wayne State University School for Fine and Performing Arts will present pianist Mischa Kottler and soprano Frances Brockington in a special benefit recital this Friday, May 6, at 8 p.m. in the Community Arts Auditorium on the Wayne State campus. Proceeds from the concert will help fund the W.S.U. Men's Glee Club and Chamber Singers European concert tour this summer.

Kottler has performed in Detroit since 1930. Born in Kiev, Russia, he performed 30 concerts at the age of 8. In New York at the age of 14, he performed for Rachmaninoff and accompanied violinist Leopold Auer. For 30 years, he was a member of the piano faculty of WSU. His pupils included Ruth Laredo, Cynthia Raim and Seymour Lipkin. For 20 years, he was the principal pianist for the Detroit Symphony Orchestra and served as music director for WWJ radio and television for 30 years.

Soprano Frances Brockington has performed throughout Canada and Europe in concert tours and operatic roles. She performed most recently in Chicago as soloist in Handel's "Messiah," and last fall, appeared with the touring arm of the Michigan Opera Theatre, served as cantor at the papal mass in Detroit and in concert appearances.

Patron tickets for the event are $50; patrons will have the opportunity to meet the artists at a reception following the recital. General admission is $10.

seeking out to collect. The nice thing about collections is that they bring so many interesting stories to mind," Brennan says.

She says that she'll miss being president of The Questers, despite the hectic pace and long hours of travel.

"Of course I'll miss it. But I know that two years ago I was on the phone to the past president a lot . . . and I'm sure that after this month, there'll be a direct line between Grosse Pointe and Newhall, Calif., (home of the incoming president)."

Brennan will continue her membership in the Fox Creek Questers, although since she and her husband Michael moved from their large home to a smaller residence Bren-nan's collections didn't come along. "A collection is defined as two of anything, so in that sense I have a number of collections. And really, I don't collect anything except people. I love to talk to people, find out what they like and what they collect. I've done that as president and I've made far too many friends to stop just because my term is over," she says.

The notion of collecting people is, in fact, part of her advice to The Questers' new president, who will take over at the national convention in Chicago May 12 through 15. "I'd tell her not to make it too much of a job. Enjoy the people.

"But I probably won't have to tell her that. That is what a Quester is, by nature: active, curious, involved and in love with people."

Get a sneak peek at neat treats at Action Auction's preview party

Everybody knows that the nation's largest school auction — the Grosse Pointe Academy's 21st annual Action Auction — is set for Saturday, May 14, on the Academy's grounds, 171 Lakeshore Road. What folks may not know is that they can get an early start on the exciting auction festivities at the Auction Preview Party on Wednesday, May 11, at 6 p.m.

Chaired by Mr. and Mrs. Emmet Tracy Jr., the champagne reception will allow guests the opportunity to view the more than 600 items up for bid. In addition, guests can submit silent bids on 200 items and have a chance to bid on an electronic pinball machine and a cocktail cruise on "Ragtime," in a live auction setting.

Party-goers will be welcomed by valet parking attendants and enjoy hors d'oeuvres, just as Action Auction participants will on May 14. "It's a whale of a party," says Dr. Sidney I. Dupont, Academy headmaster. "If you have to make a half-million dollars, this auction is a fun way to do it."

Another fun way is to get Academy parents and kids involved as they are right now, selling auction raffle tickets. Prizes include $5,000 in cash, a color TV, a VCR, a 10-speed bike, books and a hand-scooter. Tickets are available for $1 and may be purchased at the Academy. For more information about the Preview Party, raffle or the Action Auction, call the auction office at 886-1802.

The Pastor's Corner

Enjoyment or investment?

The Rev. Charles Watson
Harper Woods Baptist Church

A few years ago the Wall Street Journal contained this thought-provoking statement, "Money is an article which may be used as a universal passport to everywhere except Heaven, and as a universal provider of everything except happiness." How are we to view our material possessions? The Scriptures have a lot to say on the subject.

On the occasion, Jesus was called upon to settle a family argument concerning inheritance rights. As he often did, the Lord responded with a parable (Luke 12:13-21). There was once a rich man whose fields brought forth bounteous harvests. Faced with the dilemma of inadequate storage space, the decision was made to demolish the existing barns and to build new ones. Time had come, he thought, to take it easy and enjoy the fruits of his labor. However, that night the man met death, and his material possessions were passed on to others.

Warren Wiersbe, in his book "Windows on the Parables," points out that this passage contains "a spiritual inventory for examining our hearts." How do we respond when material blessing come our way? We should ask ourselves the following questions:

When we look at our possessions, do we see God or ourselves? The rich man of the parable had "I" trouble. He used at least 11 personal pronouns in his assessment of the situation. "My crops . . . my barn . . . my grain . . . my goods . . . my soul . . ." There is so much to mention of gratitude for God's gifts, only the fruitless plans of self-centeredness. Thankful hearts enjoy material blessings more because they are drawn closer to the One who provides them.

Do we think of enjoyment or investment? The egocentric person spends his money on himself: "Eat, drink and be merry." The unselfish person asks, "How can I benefit others and bring glory to God?" Jim Elliot, a missionary killed by South American Indians, put it this way, "He is no fool to give what he cannot keep to gain what he cannot lose." Investing in the lives of others can bring dividends of love, gratitude, satisfaction.

Do we experience anxiety of peace? Some people live life based on the strange notion that an abundance of things will supply peace and security. However, most persons who have handled some measure of wealth know the truth of Richard Armour's ditty, "That money talks I'll no deny, I heard it once; it said, 'Goodbye.'" Material possessions tend to produce anxiety because we fear loss of them or we strive endlessly for more.

Do not draw the wrong conclusion. It is not a sin to possess an abundance of things. However, it is a tragedy to allow ourselves to be possessed by those things. That is the reason Jesus said, "Lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven . . . for where your treasure is, there will your heart be also."

'Spiritual education' means really getting to know God

When Marjorie Matchette of Okemos speaks of a "spiritual education," it's clear that she means much more than simply giving children information about religion. She's talking about increasing "our understanding of God, Spirit, and of our relationship to Him and His infinite family." This, she believes, can "provide us with the spiritual ideas" that actually solve problems in our lives.

A Christian Science lecturer, Matchette will speak to the community Monday, May 9 at 8 p.m. on "Strengthening the Family Through Spiritual Education."

The lecture is being sponsored by the members of First Church of Christ, Scientist, Grosse Pointe Farms and will be held at the Fries Auditorium in the Grosse Pointe War Memorial.

"The teachings of Christ Jesus are the basis for our spiritual education," Matchette says. While we may begin learning these teachings in Sunday School, Matchette believes education should continue in various ways throughout our lives.

For instance, in stressing the importance of individual study of the Bible, the lecturer points out that it is our application of the Bible's principles in our lives that "educates" us the best. That is, the lecturer insists we can learn about God both through prayer and personal experience — that we ourselves must feel and experience God's love, as Christ Jesus expected of us.

Active in the Christian healing ministry as a full time public practitioner of Christian Science, Mrs. Matchette was formerly a high school teacher. She has two sons.

The public is invited to attend the hour-long lecture.

'Walden' dramatization to be presented at Unitarian Church

A musical dramatization of Henry David Thoreau's "Walden" will be presented at Grosse Pointe Unitarian Church on Sunday, May 8, at 11 a.m.

This musical adaptation of "Walden" was created by Darrell Eubank of Grosse Pointe Park from Thoreau's words and the music of Franz Schubert and was first performed at the church 15 years ago.

The musical "Walden," was subsequently published and has been performed widely in Unitarian churches across the country and by the Thoreau Society in Concord, Mass.

Bob Lewis, a leading performer in the church's annual "GPUC Gaeties," will take the part of Thoreau, the only speaking role. Lewis, of St. Clair Shores, is a Lake Shore High School English teacher. Lyric soprano Ann Speck will take the role of the singer. She has sung professionally in Boston, Cleveland and Detroit in recital, opera, oratorio and chamber performances. She has music degrees from the University of Michigan and Oakland University.

Speck teaches at Wayne State and Detroit's Center for Creative Studies and also teaches at Grosse Pointe South. She is a member of "Opus 3," a group of three Michigan artists who present programs for voice and piano covering a spectrum from art songs to Broadway musicals.

Speck will sing three of Schubert's lieder set to the words of Thoreau. Piano accompanists are Grosse Pointers Doris Eubank and Virginia Shover.

All are welcome to attend the event, which begins promptly at 11 a.m. May 8 and the church, 17150 Maumee Avenue. For more information, call 881-0420.

Memorial women will gather

On Tuesday, May 10, the Women's Association of Grosse Pointe Memorial Church will hear the Rev. Carol Gregg, speaking on "Women in Chaplaincy."

Beginning at 10 a.m. there will be a business meeting conducted by president Joyce Edwards in the lounge. Kathleen Kurap will lead the devotions. The speaker of the day will be introduced by Anne Bleich, program chair.

Rev. Gregg is a graduate of University Liggett School, Bucknell University and Princeton Theological Seminary. Besides serving as an associate pastor in Illinois, she has been a chaplain in a prison and in a hospital. She is currently the Interim Associate Pastor at First Presbyterian Church in Farmington.

A noon luncheon will be served in Fellowship Hall. Visitors are welcome to attend the program and the luncheon. Reservations for lunch may be made by calling the church office at 882-5330. Child care is available.

G.P. United women to meet

Members of the Women's Association of the Grosse Pointe United Church will venture to Greentown's Trapper's Alley on Tuesday, May 10, for a tour of shops at 11:30 a.m., followed by lunch at Pegasus at 12:30 p.m., then shopping and People Mover rides.

The groups will gather at 10:30 a.m. in the church parking lot and will travel downtown by private car. Reservations may be made by calling the church office at 884-3075 by noon Monday, May 9.

Bon Secours plans forum for women 55 and over

A discussion by a nationally-known gerontologist, a demonstration of exercise activities for the older woman and lectures on the emotional, social, physical and psychological adjustments facing women over 55 highlight the Bon Secours Hospital forum "Health Day for the 55-Plus Woman," planned for Thursday, May 12, at the Assumption Cultural Center, 21800 Marter Road in St. Clair Shores.

"We discovered, through our annual health day forum (this year's date is Sept. 15), that we were not addressing the needs of the older woman," said Patricia Sikora, A.C.S.W., director of the Women's Resource Center. "The older woman has specific concerns. Issues like chronic health conditions, depression and boredom, coping with losses, starting a fitness program and health concerns particular to this age group. So we set aside a day to specifically address those issues that affect women 55 and older." Nationally-known gerontologist Jane Porcino, Ph.D., is the featured speaker. A lecturer and author of "Growing Older, Getting Better," Porcino will address some of these issues.

Porcino is director of the National Action Forum for Mid-Life and Older Women. She has received "Woman of the Year in Media" recognition from the Village Times, a citation for her research from the New York State Council on Family Relations, the "Woman of the Year" award from the Women's Equal Rights Congress, Suffolk County Human Rights Commission, and was named "One of the 80 Women to Watch in the 80s," by Ms. Magazine. She is a fellow of the Gerontological Society of America.

Bon Secours' health day forum offers a choice of five workshops:

- "Cooking for One and Enjoying It" — Learn to make meals that are nutritious, low-fat and interesting. Presented by Vicki Tobis, R.D., Bon Secours Hospital dietician.

- "Health Issues and the 55-plus Woman" — Learn to maintain good health, deal with chronic conditions and communicate effectively with your physician. Presented by Laura Fox-Smith, M.D., Bon Secours Hospital.

- "Is There an Older Parent in Your Life?" — Helping the caregiver and the parent cope with emotional stresses. Presented by Jeanne Balesky, A.C.S.W., Bon Secours Hospital.

- "Learning to Speak Up" — Recognize the difference between assertive, aggressive and passive behavior and develop direct communication skills. Presented by Roberta "Jeff" Daley, Continuum Center, Oakland University.

- "Women Alone — Moving On" — Coping with losses and getting "unstuck" from depression and boredom. Presented by Sean Hogan-Downey, A.C.S.W.

- "Fitness is Ageless" — Improve physical and mental well-being through exercise. Presented by Linda K. Backus, Bon Secours Health and Fitness Center.

Registration fee for the forum is $20, which includes two workshops, a hot lunch, the featured speaker and resource materials. Registration and a welcome coffee hour runs from 9 to 10 a.m., followed by Workshop I from 10 to 11 a.m. After a refreshment break, Workshop II runs from 11:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m., followed by lunch, then the featured speaker's presentation from 1:30 to 2:30 p.m.

Registration deadline is Thursday, April 28. To register, call Bon Secours Women's Health Services at 343-1200, 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. weekdays.

Jane Porcino, Ph.D., gerontologist, lecturer and author of "Growing Older, Getting Better," will be the featured speaker at the Bon Secours Women's Resource Center forum for the 55-plus woman on Thursday, May 12, at Assumption Cultural Center.

Be an 'Angel'

"Be an Angel and Come" is the theme of the annual fundraising event for the senior citizens who live at Stapleton Center near Indian Village in Detroit. This year's luncheon and fashion show, presented by the Friends of Stapleton Center, is set for Thursday, May 19, in the Fries Auditorium of the Grosse Pointe War Memorial. The noon luncheon will be followed by a fashion show by Maria Dinon. Tickets are $20 per person; reservations may be made until May 13 by calling 882-5061.

'Lifeline' service available

"Lifeline: A Personal Emergency Response Service" is now available to residents of Wayne, Oakland and Macomb counties through the Southeastern Michigan Chapter of the American Red Cross.

The Lifeline service offers independent living and peace of mind for the elderly, disabled and handicapped, individuals with medical problems, latchkey children, and others who live alone.

Subscribers to the Red Cross Lifeline service carry or wear a small push-button device which, when pushed during an emergency, sends an electronic message to Red Cross where trained volunteers and paid staff are on duty around the clock. The Red Cross then calls to determine if the subscriber needs help and, if necessary, notifies an appropriate person — a neighbor, relative, or medical personnel — to respond to the emergency.

Lifeline is also equipped with a feature called "RSVP" which allows subscribers to answer their telephone without lifting the receiver. By pressing the help button, a subscriber can communicate over a speaker phone.

Another important feature of the Lifeline service alerts Red Cross when a subscriber has not answered the telephone or placed a call within a 24-hour period. Red Cross then calls the subscriber to make certain everything is all right.

"Lifeline is an ideal new Red Cross service," says Program Manager Sharon Bialic. "It meets the Red Cross goal of providing timely and high quality relief services in emergency situations and helping individuals avoid and prepare for emergencies."

What makes the Red Cross Lifeline program different from some other services, says Bialic, is that it doesn't automatically dispatch help through a computer. "When a Lifeline subscriber calls for help, they get a living, breathing human being on the other end of that call, calling them back. Communication with a real person eliminates unnecessary and expensive calls or emergency medical assistance."

While there is a subscription fee for Lifeline to cover Red Cross equipment costs, Red Cross believes the program can help hold the line on health care and nursing home costs by making it easier for people to live at home alone rather than being institutionalized.

Subscribers must pay an initial $25 installation fee, a $25 monthly fee and a refundable equipment deposit of $100. The equipment deposit will be waived during the pilot phase of the program which ends July 31.

Those wishing to subscribe or to learn more about the Lifeline: A Personal Emergency Response Service, should contact Sharon Bialic at 831-2482.

Knowing the feelings, fears of elderly

By Marian Trainor
Special Writer

You never know until you've been there. You can imagine what a situation is like, but you can't really know.

A child can imagine what it is like to be grown-up. Adults can guess about the pluses and minuses of being older. Older people can try and understand how it is to be elderly.

But the rugged path of experience is the only real road to knowledge, insight and true empathy with life's cycles.

Children look at their parents with respect, but also with disbelief. They question how mother and father can be so uninformed about what's really important. They wonder why they are so bound up with rules of conduct and why they can't be more trusting.

The years pass and these same children grow up and become parents themselves. They now have answers for those questions that filled their minds when they were young. They know why their parents keep a tight rein on the immaturity and they are grateful for the wisdom that protected them.

What they don't realize is that these same parents now have unanswered questions themselves. Particularly if they have elderly parents who need attention, patience and understanding.

There are no guidelines, no patterns that help to define what needs elderly persons have. What feelings need appeasing. What gives them pleasure or pain. Gerontologists, counselors and others who work with the elderly can advise, but even they can't really know what it means to be old and dependent.

Young adults know what it is like to be children and teenagers. They have been there. The middle-aged know how it is to be mature. They accept the responsibility of being a husband, a father, a wife, a mother and maintaining a position in the working world. They have lived through these experiences. Older people can relate to the freedom that comes with retirement, the relief of being able to do whatever they like whenever they like.

But who is there to relate in retrospect what it is like to live out the final stage of life when the body fails and the senses dim? The curtain is drawn on the final act in the drama of life. Each one is left to imagine how sure of insight into what elderly people must deal with as they grow older. Why? Moore explains the unconscious rejection of the elderly with, "Aging holds a mirror up in front of us. I think a fear of death gives all of us, young and old, a fear of aging."

are the same, but biology plays a trick on them. They are much more at risk in a society where it's the survival of the fittest."

Studies such as Moore's provide us with clues about what elderly people experience and feel. Hopefully such findings will make us more tolerant, more understanding and more willing to do everything we can do to make life better for them.

By doing so, by changing attitudes that being old is the end of the line, a waiting period with nothing to look forward to, we are not only helping to create a kinder, warmer, gentler atmosphere for the elderly, but we are in fact insuring a better, brighter, happier future for ourselves. For one day we too will be where they are today.

Prime Time

we will play out those last scenes.

Recently, along with the effort to add years to our life and life to our years, there has been an effort to learn more about the aging process. The field of gerontology is relatively new, but it is expanding rapidly because of the need to know how to provide for a population that is living longer.

Along with such concerns as better medical care, housing and diet, those in the field of aging are learning more about the feelings, fears and desires of the elderly. However, the questions remain. How anyone, without actually living those years, have an answer to what is needed to make "the end for which the first was made," a time to look forward to with some degree of certainty that they will be reasonably good years?

Simulation is one avenue of research where answers to those questions have been sought.

Pat Moore, an industrial designer took on an assignment to develop design criteria for products for the elderly. In pursuit of her research, Moore spent four hours a day in front of a mirror transforming herself into an older woman before setting out in various cities.

Her disguise worked very well. She was twice attacked by young gangs who robbed her. Several times she encountered clerks who responded to her request for assistance with flippant remarks.

As an experiment, Moore returned to one of the shops the next day as a young woman and was treated courteously. What she experienced provides a mea-

Artists Association's exhibition will be a golden one

Let's call it the Grosse Pointe Artists Association's "nifty fifty."

The GPAA will begin its 50th anniversary year with a Spring Exhibition opening this Sunday, May 8, at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial. The show is open to the public from 1 to 5 p.m. that day. Beginning Monday, May 9, and running through Friday, May 13, the show will be open from noon to 8 p.m. and on the last day, the public can participate in the show from noon to 4 p.m. Saturday, May 14.

Show juror is Professor William House, chairman of the Industrial Design Department at the Center for Creative Studies College of Art and Design.

House, who was educated at the Society of Arts and Crafts

Art School, has had paintings exhibited at the Cranbrook Academy of Art Museum, the Detroit Institute of Arts and the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts. He was guest speaker at the 1985 ICSID convention in Washington, D.C., at the 1984 World Congress of Automotive Design and at the 1986 annual meeting of the Detroit Colour Council hosted by the DIA.

In the oil and acrylic category of this weekend's show, Jeanne Bieri took first place and Nancy Proffit earned honorable mention. In watercolor, Michael Derbyshire's work earned first place, Bette Prudden took a second and Linda Aronson was third.

In drawing and collage, Joe Munro was first, Wilma Urban was second and Wanda Warezak was third.

Best of Show prize was donated by Creative World/Rainy Day and went to Jeanne Bieri. Best Traditional, donated by Donald and Joyce Haigh in memory of Marion Fitch, went to Michael Derbyshire. Best Design, donated by Corinne Dolega, went to Lori Zurvalec.

GPAA president William Lorenz is honorary chairman for the exhibit; Carol A. Sinclair is publicity chairman. Responsible for program design are Corinne Dolega, Isabelle Goosen and Edna Bakewicz. Terry Henson is social chairman. Julia Strabel is in charge of jurying and hanging, with assistance from M. Sterling Allardice and George Strachan.

Although the GPAA formally celebrates its 50th anniversary on May 10, its beginnings go back some nine years earlier to Jan. 22, 1929, and a meeting called by John L. Vogt to plan an "art exhibition by Grosse Pointe artists."

That information — and much more — has been "unearthed" by historian/writer Thomas W. Brunk, who is working on the GPAA's 50th anniversary book with local artist Corinne Dolega.

"There's such a wealth of information — and a great amount of it, too — so we're still putting the book together. Unfortunately, it won't be done in time for the spring exhibition. But when it is done, we hope that it really will be something," Dolega says.

John Vogt, then a pupil of Fred C. Nash at the University of Detroit Art School, worked with Grosse Pointe Neighborhood Club art chairman Mrs. Charles Hodges Jr., to organize the first exhibition, held April 8 through 13, 1929. That show consisted of oils, watercolors, pastels, drawings, etchings and woodblock prints. Judging was by members of Detroit's prestigious Scarab Club and four prizes were awarded. They went to Edgar L. Yeager, first prize for an oil landscape; Miss Jean Leach, second prize for two charcoal still life pictures; and third and fourth prizes to Minnie Kenkel and Mary Henry.

The Grosse Pointe shows grew in size and in 1938, Agnes C.

Lindemann suggested that the 10th annual exhibition be held at the Russel A. Alger House, then a department of the Detroit Institute of Arts. Some 38 artists were featured with 63 works in a show which ran from April 17 through May 1, 1938. According to historian Brunk, Mrs. Lindemann undoubtedly intended to raise the prestige and visibility of the annual exhibition by holding it in this museum setting.

Marion Fitch reported that "Mr. Clyde Burroughs remarked that except for the number of pictures shown, he thought that it (the annual exhibit) compared most favorably with the Michigan Artists Exhibition (held at the DIA) and later (he) remarked that he thought on a whole it was even better . . ."

Following the close of the 1938 show, the Grosse Pointe Artists

Association was formally organized.

Fifty years later, only a handful of the GPAA's charter members are still living. Dolega, who was a student at the time, said, "It's lucky that I was around, because I can remember a lot of what happened then."

Other charter members include Irving R. Bacon, Mrs. Arthur W. Bull, C. Edmund Delbos, Mrs. G. Leslie Field, Mrs. Haldeman Finnie, Mrs. Ferris Fitch, Mrs. Frank Fitt, Frederick W. Fuger, Mrs. David O. Hamilton, Mrs. William R. Hamilton, Mrs. William G. Hoag, Mrs. W.G. Johnstone, Mrs. Frank Lindemann, Mrs. Donald J. McLean, Mrs. Walter Meier, Mrs. John R. Pear, Mrs. Armin Riekle, Mrs. Owen R. Skelton, Mrs. Hugh Stalker and John Vogt.

All set for this weekend's golden anniversary spring exhibition by the Grosse Pointe Artists Association are, from left, Terry Henson, Isabelle Goosen, guest juror Professor William House, and co-chairman Julia Strabel and Nancy Proffit.

Pointe AAUW members will convene

Twelve members of the Grosse Pointe Branch, American Association of University Women, will attend a special celebration at the Michigan Division AAUW Convention in Ann Arbor this Saturday, May 7.

"Power, Pride, Vision: 100 Years of Fellowships," is the theme of the annual state meeting. For the past year, AAUW members have been in search of "fellows" to honor on this occasion. The Grosse Pointe AAUW has among its members Dr. Anne Zimmer, a 1965 fellowship recipient. She received her award in the field of Colonial American history at Wayne State University. A result of research done in this area led to her book, "Johnathan Boucher, Loyalist in Exile," published in 1978, Wayne State Press.

The AAUW American Fellowships Program is the oldest and largest private, non-university program funding graduate fellowships for women in the United States. It is the only such program for women that places no restriction on age, discipline or place of study. The first fellowship of $350 was awarded to Ida Street at the University of Michigan in 1888. Contributions from AAUW branches have made this program most successful. In 1921, $156,000 was collected to help Marie Curie purchase a gram of radium.

With a membership of only 27,000, AAUW voted to raise $1 million for fellowships in 1927. In 1986-87, over $320,000 was raised to establish a fellowship in honor of the late Judith Resnik, NASA astronaut, AAUW member and former American Fellow. Today, the AAUW Educational Foundation raises upwards of $2 million each year.

AAUW members attending the May 7 meeting are: Kay Kirby, president; Julie Demchak, incoming president; Karen Knudson, president-elect; Carla Teagan, program development vice president and her successor, Julia Read; Trudy Rhoades, membership vice president; Judy Livingston, incoming secretary; Ann Nicholson, division community AR; Frances Schonenberg, Elizabeth Schaefer, Kay McDonald and Anne Zimmer.

REALTOR

LET THERE BE LIGHT

Your telephone rings. It is your REALTOR saying that he is coming right over with a prospect. You hang up the phone. What's the next thing you do? Turn on every light in the house. Why? Because you want to give the prospect the best image you can of the comfort, beauty and livability you are offering. In other words, you want to sell a home, not a house. And full illumination is the best way to give your home that "lived-in" look. Furniture, rugs and fixtures take on a warm glow from the proper lighting. Here are a few "bright" ideas.

Turn on every lamp in the living room, bedrooms and family room. Be careful about turning on the overhead lights in these rooms for it could be harsh and make the room look uninviting. Turn on every light in a storage room or closet. Go all out in illuminating the kitchen - the cheerier the better. Brighten up the bathroom too - but carefully choose the right wattage for bulbs by the mirror, pick the most flattering one. Remember, it's just as important to have lights on in the afternoon as it is for a night-time showing.

If there is anything I can do to help you in the field of Real Estate, please phone or drop in at ADIHOCH & ASSOCIATES, REALTORS. We are located "In the Village" at 16845 Kercheval. Phone 882-5200. I'm here to help.

Spice up brown bag lunches with these sandwiches

Although the sandwich was named for an English nobleman, many countries have adopted the concept but created their own version.

These particular sandwich recipes were selected for diabetic vegetarians and for those desiring low cholesterol, nutritious fare. Tacos and pita bread make an interesting change offering versatility to the innovative sandwich maker creating an opportunity to make substitutions in accordance with the contents of the larder.

Serve with fresh fruit for dessert and enjoy a very tasty and nutrient rich lunch.

The following recipes come from the low-calorie, low-cholesterol, budgetwise kitchens of Thyra Grey Howard and Helena DeWitt Roth.

"He had a great knowledge for rowing," said Welchli. "He knew so much that it took the rest of the world, (so it seemed) 10 years to catch up with his coaching techniques. He was a man I had a lot of respect for."

In the summer of 1952, Welchli joined the crew. Rowing, a sport with many expenditures and not a lot of incoming monies, was being backed by some interested persons, and some friends of the boat club. A person with a keen interest in rowing donated a shell to the club and that gave Hoover incentive to say, "We're going to enter it in the Olympic time trials," according to Welchli.

Welchli, a rather tall man with long arms and large hands, was selected as one of four crew members to direct the shell.

"The first time I ever rode in a four-man, I said I was going to sit in the bow seat," he said, "because I wanted to steer."

When asked why he was chosen as a crew member, Welchli said, "I guess I just fit in with the other three guys."

In the time trials, the U.S.A. team performed poorly, but it was a humbling lesson.

"We weren't very successful, but we all knew if we did some things differently we would be able to compete better," said Welchli. "We had a taste of what it was like, but we were hungry for more."

Welchli and the others were not a very physical group. They averaged 6-foot, maybe an inch more, in height, but they didn't represent the "bulky, or very strong crew."

"I think that's why a lot of people didn't give us credit," Welchli said in reference to the way they were treated when competing. "Other teams didn't seem to pay us much attention."

The lack of attention was short-lived. After a two-year stint in the Korean War that separated the foursome, a reunion was in order.

"We all gathered back in 1956 at the boat club and we had designs that we'd row a four-man," said Welchli. "We had to coax the boat club into letting Hoover come back as coach because he left under some animosity."

The re-hiring, so to speak, of Hoover was something Welchli and the others deemed necessary.

"We felt we needed him to be successful," said Welchli.

Once Hoover arrived back at the docks, his own greed came out. Call it an ulterior motive if you wish.

"Hoover wanted an eight-man crew," said Welchli, "because he wanted to be the Olympic coach." The coach of the eight-man crew that won the time trials was automatically named the Olympic coach.

After some dickering, the four-man crew prevailed, but Hoover also got his way.

"He (Hoover) entered a full contingent of crews in every event at the time trials," said Welchli.

Hoover insisted that Welchli, McIntosh and the McKinlay twins row an eight-man shell with four others in the Olympic trials. Reluctantly, they joined forces and stepped aboard the shell.

"Neither of us had been on an eight-man before, but we knew we could handle it," said Welchli. "We led for about two-thirds of the race, but then we peetered out and lost. But, by doing that we gained some confidence that we could compete with the big guys."

With confidence, the crew set out for its first, four-man trial and blew it. They didn't race well, but in the semifinals bounced back to win a trial. Heading into the finals, the foursome gave some consideration to the competition, but was determined to pack their bags for Australia.

"For the finals, we decided we were going to hang tough," said Welchli. "We decided if the other boat got one seat ahead of us, we'd push to get the lead back."

Two-thousand meters and one official announcement later, the low-profile crew from the Detroit Boat Club was now the king of the hill.

"I thought we won, but we had to wait for a while until the announcement was made," Welchli said. "Winning the time trials and being able to go to the Olympics was a great feeling."

To this point, an injury and Hoover manipulated Welchli's life, but with a victory in the Olympic trials in Syracuse, the low-profile crew from the boat club was now a somebody.

"We were accepted as a credible force in rowing after we won the trials," said Welchli. "We won it by one-fifth of a second, but that short amount of time really changed our entire attitude."

After three weeks of training in California, where they rowed 20 miles per day, the crew flew to Australia. Stationed 60 miles from the main village, Welchli and company had an experience of a lifetime.

Boating

Getting started

Winter is releasing its stranglehold with reluctance. The last week in April brought threats of snow squalls and boats already in the water wait forlornly for spring to get the upper hand. The robins have returned, but the warm weather is still far behind.

So far it's a very typical Michigan spring. From one week to the next, we never really know what the weather will be. We listen to the morning weather report, then decide what to wear. We are used to doing this. It does make it hard for us to get any work done on the boat though. If fiberglass repair is required, 70-degree temperatures are necessary — and no rain. We need warm weather to paint. Let's face it, nobody likes to work outside, on the boat, when it's cold and miserable. This kind of a spring is like having your teeth cleaned; it just has to be endured. Warmer weather is coming.

One yearly job is painting the bottom of the boat with anti-fouling paint. A major change this year is the EPA ban on the use of tin in the bottom paint. All boat bottom paint containing tin has been pulled from dealer shelves and is no longer being sold. Alternative paints are available.

The EPA determined that the tin was a major contaminant to the fish and lake wildlife. Boaters always knew that paint containing the slowly released metal, kept the bottoms of the boats clear from marine growth, but didn't realize the problems for the marine environment. The alternative paints are touted as being just as effective as the tin-based paint was. Time will tell.

The Grosse Pointe Farms Boat Club has been hard at work organizing its annual Twilight Sailboat Race Series. This year the series will be on Thursday evenings in June and August. These races are open to anyone. Boats are divided into fleets based on the PHRF system. Competitors have a choice of jib and main fleets, or spinnaker fleets.

"All size sailboats are welcome," said Sonny Gorenflo, one of the race organizers. "These races are for novice racing sailors as well as the more experienced sailor. Our courses aren't too long and we all just have a good time."

Contact Sonny at 882-4417 for more details.

The boat club will also sponsor a Wednesday night sailing series just off the Grosse Pointe City Municipal Marina. This series includes 12 races scheduled from May 25 through June 29, and July 27 through August 31. Call Phil and Sherry Allar (886-7919) for more details.

The Grosse Pointe Power Squadron has been busy throughout the winter offering their basic boating course to the boating public. This course will be repeated this spring. Of particular interest to people age 12 to 16, is the necessity of obtaining a Student Safety Certificate. If the youngster intends to operate a powerboat.

The Power Squadron is offering a three-session course that will satisfy the requirements. The course will start on May 2. Students may attend the class from 3:45 to 5:45 p.m., or 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. Contact George Eisinger at 884-6293 for further information.

In spite of the weather, marinas are beginning to fill with boats. The Grosse Pointe Yacht Club and Crescent Sail Yacht Club are beginning to show signs of life with masts sprouting and people working. Everyone is ready to shed the winter garb for lighter-weight clothes, boating shoes and sunscreen.

If only the sun would shine...

Kaiser opens up national defense

Bob Kaiser, the US-1 offshore racing champion from the Shores, opened the defense of his 1987 national crown with a 16 second win at the Bud Light Marathon Challenge in Marathon, Fla. The season's first national race.

Kaiser, racing his 38-foot Cougar Catamaran Swiftsure Motor Yacht, opened up an early lead in a race he had trouble with before. In the last two years, Kaiser's boat spun out and he had to remove himself from the race. However, this time around Kaiser took the checkered flag in 1 hour, 49 minutes, 22 seconds; good for the overall win and 16 seconds better than the second-place finisher.

"It was a good way to start the year," said Kaiser, who dealt with smooth as well as rough water.

Kaiser covered the 149-mile course in mid-season form as he averaged 86.1 mph.

"The boat was in top form," he said. "It was flawless. We had to deal with some four to six footers (waves), and at other times we were in smooth waters.

"It was a good test for us," he added.

Lady Devils improve to 6-0

With a 94-34 pounding of L'Anse Creuse North, the South girls' track team moved to 6-0 on the season.

Laura DeMercurio improved her record 100-meter hurdle time to 16.8 to win that event. In addition, she won the 300 hurdles. South's 400-meter relay team of Denise Brown, Julie Burke, Reba Uthappa and Traci Lee, ran a season-best 52.6. Julie Burke and Jenny Barber added first place finishes in the 400 and 800 runs, respectively.

Field events were won by Vicki Groustra (high jump), and Dunrie Greiling (shot put and discus). Mary Srebernak, Karen Ehresman, Cristy Gulesarian and Kathleen Monaghan won the 800-meter relay.

At Macomb Community College, South tried to retain its DeLaSalle Relay crown, but they finished second out of 17 teams.

South's shuttle-hurdle relay team of Karen Ehresman, Wendy Berger, Sarah McCabe and Katie Taylor gave South a first place and set a meet record.

South travels to the Sterling Heights Invitational this May 7.

Baseball

After suffering through a three-game skid, the Blue Devils got back on track by sweeping a doubleheader from Mount Clemens, 7-1 and 13-0.

Before battering Mount Clemens, South lost to L'Anse

Creuse North, 4-3. "It was a unique set up," he said. "All the crews from all the nations were housed in the same facility. We weren't in the village with all the other athletes because of where we had to row."

A relatively laid back person, Welchli absorbed everything the Olympics entailed.

"I was in awe," he said. "I've never been in an environment with the world's elite athletes before and it was a great experience."

On day one of the Olympics the Detroit Boat Club won its heat, despite a mishap.

"Art, the No. 2 man in the boat, pushed his fanny off his seat and the boat had to slow down to let him get rearranged," said Welchli. "We had to make up quite a bit of ground."

They made up the ground and won going away, earning a place in the semifinals. In the semis, they faced Italy, Australia, Germany and four others.

"We knew Italy was going to start out fast, but we weren't going to let them get out on us," said Welchli. "We had a strong start and the Italians folded their tents."

Welchli and his teammates earned the right to row for the gold by beating the Italians, but after a day of rest, they didn't row all that well and lost the gold to the Canadian team.

"It wasn't one of our best races," said Welchli, "but it was a good feeling because the United States won three golds, two silvers and one bronze in the rowing and since then no team has done that well."

Welchli has a chunk of silver to his credit, by he also has a lucky star that he's followed all along.

"It's rowing," he said. "It gave so much to me and I wouldn't give up anything for it."

Welchli, who admits the silver was typically second best, has given a lot to rowing, but he's received many benefits out of it as well.

"To this day, I can go anywhere and be accepted," he said. "I get a lot of doors open that may have never happened if it wasn't for that one-fifth of a second (winning the time trials)."

Being accepted was very important to a man who earned every inch of respect he got on the paths of rowing.

"I guess you could say we got over the hump and let everyone know who we were," said Welchli. "That's very important to me."

The North girls' varsity softball team participated in the Sally Weyen Tournament and came away with a third-place tie. North recorded three wins and two losses, upping the team record to 8-9.

The Lady Norsemen opened up the tournament with an 8-4 victory over Sterling Heights. North took a 5-0 lead into the sixth and held on for the win.

Alicia Lynch and Melissa Champagne led North with three hits apiece, while teammates Kerri Kelly, Mary Lex and Lucy Berry all had two.

In game two, North wasn't able to fight back from a 5-0 deficit as they absorbed an 8-2 defeat. Lynch was the lone bright spot with two hits.

An early jump in game three gave North a 13-4 win over Anchor Bay, qualifying for the tournament finals. In the finale against Clarkston, North was unable to break free from some tough pitching and lost, 7-1. In the consolation match, North beat South, 12-7. Mary Lex tripled to push North's lead to four and Janet Dunlop hurled a good game from the slab.

Soccer

Things have been pretty good around the soccer field. After a win and a loss, North stands at 6-1-1.

The Lady Norsemen thumped Fraser, 2-0 on goals by Beth Stevenson and Christy Mack. Nancy Schulte earned the shut-out in net.

Utica Eisenhower handed the Norsemen their first defeat, 3-1. Paige Pelok booted North's goal.

The North sluggers traveled to the Alpena Tournament, a tourney they've been very successful at in the past, and came home with one victory in three tries.

North (8-4, 2-1 at press time), held a 2-0 lead over Bay City Handy through five innings, but yielded five runs in the bottom of the sixth to lose, 5-2. Russell Rice (2-3) took the loss after 5 2/3 innings.

Dino Vento went to the hill in game two against Cadillac, and picked up a 10-3 win. Vento was tagged for only four hits in five innings of work. Mike Rancilio earned a save.

Kevin McCarron crunched a three-run home and Steve Neiman whistled a solo shot.

In North's final game, tournament champion Alpena slipped past the Norsemen, 4-3.

Behind 3-1 in the bottom of the sixth, the Norsemen got one run back on Marty Pochmara's RBI single. Chuck Thomas' check-swing fielder's choice tied it in the bottom of the seventh, but Alpena pushed the winning run across in the top of the eighth. Rick Regalado took the loss and struck out 10 batters.

North plays in the Fraser tourney May 7 starting at 10 a.m.

Girls' track

It wasn't even close as North pounded Lakeview, 99-28. Outstanding performances were turned in by Amy Brennan, who ran to three first places. Liz Bolden, who had two first-place finishes, was a highlight, as was Shannon Andrewes.

Von Schwarz and Paul Wilson each tossed an inning.

Lucas continued to assault the Bathers' pitching with a three-run homer, one single and four RBI. Saad had three hits, Jones banded two hits, including a triple, and Wysocki doubled and singled. Montagne and Ian Thompson also had hits for the 10-4 Devils.

South is now 6-2 in the league after clobbering Roseville, 10-0 and 25-0 in Monday's doubleheader.

Adam Franco gave up two hits in the opener to earn the win and Rusty Knowles gained the win in the nightcap.

In the second game, Lucas hit two home runs (one grand slam) and had eight RBI. Thompson hit two homers, Marty Saad clouted one, and Marty Van Almen and Dale Wilson also hit the long ball.

Wilson and Bryan Jones led the Devils in game one with two hits each.

40 years... Creating the Competition!!

Fulton

I know that someone out there can act as my professor and add me to the guest list when they christen the boat. I'm not looking to be a tag-along on a family vacation, but I think I can rig the sails, swab the decks, navigate a course, unfurl a sail and anything else mon-captain orders. I can also sling some grub in the galley.

Now, I'm not saying I want to go solo and at the same token I'm not asking for it to be easy.

But why not learn to sail when all the resources are right here at the fingertips of many would-be-sailors. Not to mention the fantastic waterways that surround the state.

Learning to sail has been a struggle through books, but I have yet to yank the anchor off the bottom of a lake and move full steam ahead. I know how to swim, but I just hope that the first mate doesn't expect me to walk the plank when I'm told to raise the jib and I lift the spinaker and we head too far North.

I'm sure that sailing is a fantastic sport that allows people to get away and let their hair down. Yet, it can be a competitive sport that unleashes a greedy need to win a race — that's the attitude I'm looking for.

I just hope that my ship comes in soon.

G'day.

Anorexia nervosa

It's a strange looking phrase. Exactly what does it mean? The clinical definition of anorexia nervosa is self-imposed starvation.

Our lovely young daughters (and rarely sons) are starving themselves to death. There are many contributory factors leading to this condition. If your daughter has lost a great deal of weight recently, don't fool yourself into thinking it's a teenage phase. Look at her closely. Assess the situation.

Here are additional physical manifestations you might look for in addition to a weight loss of 25 percent of her total body weight: Loss of body weight, rapid weight fluctuation, cessation of menstruation, decreased metabolic rate, bradycardia (abnormally slow heart rate), hypotension (abnormally low blood pressure), leukopenia (decreased white blood cell count which fights infection), lunago hair (fine, downy hair which covers the face and arms), dry skin, endocrine disorder (abnormal hormone regulation), constipation, dehydration, swollen salivary glands, bloating, tooth decay (usually from Bulimia: episodic binge-eating followed by self-attempts to eliminate food from the body), recurrent sore throats.

If you have any suspicions at all, consider some of these contributory factors which may have come in to play to help create this problem: death of a loved one, moving, school pressure, peer pressure, weight gain, rejection by a boyfriend, societal attitudes toward fat women, sexual change, divorce, graduation, leaving home, surgery, family relationships, accident, dieting.

Finally, watch for these behavioral characteristics: refusal to eat, binge eating episodes, vomiting episodes, laxative or diuretic abuse, excessive exercise, development of rituals around food, stealing, lying, hoarding, gum chewing, secretiveness, hyperactivity, cooking and preparing meals for others, substance abuse, hand washing (ritual).

This is an extremely serious problem which can lead to death. Pay attention to your daughter and any bizarre behavioral traits. You may save her life.

Spring emergencies: Some tips on taking care

More people will spend time in fitness or recreational activities outdoors with the warmer spring weather upon us and with the summer, not far off. Several types of emergencies are more likely to occur during these times.

Anthony Southall, M.D. of the Farms, director of the St. John Hospital Emergency Center offers tips to consider about some seasonal emergencies.

Bee stings

According to Southall, getting stung by a bee usually does not bring about a major problem, unless, of course you're allergic to the bee.

"The chances of having an allergic reaction to a bee usually occurs in one in 300 people. If you are allergic, there is an anti-allergy kit available, which can be prescribed by a physician. The kit contains an injection which minimizes the effects of a sting, (an allergic person who is stung by a bee may suffer spasms of the lungs and larynx, causing him or her to go into shock or sometimes even die)," Southall said.

If an individual is allergic to bee stings, it's important to wear a medical alert badge. It is also possible to get desensitized so a sting won't produce an allergic reaction in the future.

Animal bites

The good news is that there haven't been any cases of human rabies in the metro Detroit area for many years (although a person who's been bitten by an animal should seek medical attention since he or she may still need to get anti-rabies shots). The bad news is that getting bit by an animal such as a dog or cat can produce an infection.

"Cat bites can actually be more harmful than dog bites because a cat punctures the skin, like a needle, where a dog usually tears the skin. With a puncture, there's a much bigger chance of getting an infection," said Southall.

If an individual has suffered an animal bite, it's best to simply rinse the wound and go to the hospital for further medical attention.

Lawn mower injuries

Many injuries have occurred with the use of lawn mowers according to Southall. "In particular, we see cases each year where an individual has lost a finger or received severe cuts due to inserting their hand in the chute of a lawn mower because it got clogged with grass," said Southall.

"It's important to know that even if the lawn mower is turned off, the blades will continue to rotate. The best preventive measure is to give the blades time to stop moving before trying to remove the grass from the lawn mower chute," he said.

Heat cramps, exhaustion and heat strokes

These problems tend to arise in the summer season because of hot and humid weather.

"When it's very hot, people usually know that they should drink liquids, but they tend to forget to replace the salt that is lost from perspiring. If the water and salt is replaced and the person goes to a cool place, the problem with heat cramps and exhaustion should usually be taken care of," Southall said.

With heat stroke, the problem tends to be more serious. "The person is not able to perspire, their skin is hot and dry, their body temperature is very high and they are usually disoriented. The best thing to do until the individual can go to the hospital is to put ice packs on the skin for the purpose of lowering the body temperature," he said.

Fractures

There are various types of fractures, ranging from closed (skin is not broken), open (skin is broken), and green stick (bone does not completely break).

"The person suffering a fracture should receive professional medical attention as soon as possible, but there are certain things that can be done until that time," Southall said.

"If the fracture is open, put a clean cloth around the area and don't move the bone. If it's closed, you can use two pieces of wood or a rolled up newspaper on each side of the affected area and secure it with strips of cloth or tape," he said.

Burns

During the summer, burns are very common due to sun exposure and other outdoor activities such as barbecuing or accidentally walking on hot coals.

Until the victim can get medical attention, it usually helps to put a cloth dipped in ice water on the affected area. Southall advises not to put any ointments or creams on the burn. "It won't do any good and in many cases it can do harm."

Lightning

When lightning strikes, the best thing to do is to stay away from tall objects. "People get struck either by a direct hit or more commonly by a 'splash' effect from a nearby tall object such as a tree which has been struck," said Southall.

"If you're in a car, remain inside. Stay away from doors and windows if you're in a building. Avoid swimming, since the electric current can travel through water. Finally, if you're outside and can't seek shelter, curl up in a ball and lie on the ground," he said.

Drowning

If someone's breathing and heart have stopped as a result of drowning, the first thing to do is to administer cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR) until medical help is available.

Usually, the colder the water is, the better chance the individual has of surviving.

"When your body temperature goes down, you're almost in a state of hibernation," said Southall. "There's less damage to your brain if the water is very cold. You may drown and become unconscious faster with cold water, but there's a far better chance of being resuscitated," he said.

Poisonous plants

Southall said there's a substantial number of cases where children have had to come into the emergency center because they've eaten some type of plant.

"It's wise to have syrup of ipecac available, which will induce vomiting, and to call poison control right away," he said. "Another suggestion is to bring the plant or whatever substance was swallowed to the hospital. This can help us find out the best treatment for the individual much faster than if we have to guess what was swallowed."

New beginnings (Part 2)

Rating your wellness

When it comes to your overall wellness, it is vital that you start with an honest evaluation. Only when you have recognized where you are presently, can you determine, and then make plans to make improvements. Until then, you can only remain stagnant.

This evaluation has been designed to pinpoint your present position in nine areas of wellness. You will be able to assess visually which areas need immediate concentration and which require less expediency in action. But the main objective is to make you aware.

This is not a test or contest to win or lose against family or friends. It is meant as a personal and private opportunity to take "stock" of where you are right now. Remember to be compassionate when determining your rating. Answer each statement with one of the following choices: almost always, two points, sometimes/maybe, one point, rarely, zero points.

Self-care principles

- 1) I take responsibility for my current level of health.
- 2) I honor the love inside of me so that I may share it with others.
- 3) I know that I am a special person with many talents unique to my life plan.
- 4) I recognize my need for rest and I am able to rest without feelings of guilt.

Stress perception

- 1) I am aware of at least five clues which signify stress in my body.
- 2) I regularly take 10 to 15 minutes each day for quiet time to practice a relaxation and visualization technique.
- 3) I recognize that while I cannot control the thoughts and actions of others, I am the only one who can change my perception in a given situation.
- 4) I realize the chronic, prolonged stress can set the scene for many degenerative diseases which can do irreparable damage and can actually shorten my life span.
- 5) I participate at least three times a week in some sort of formal exercise, or I take a daily brisk walk, bike ride, etc., because I enjoy using my body.

- 4) I eat sitting down to enjoy my meals, and avoid eating on the run with a sense of being rushed.
- 5) I am able to be compassionate with myself when I get into "junk food," and I am able to "get back on track" without experiencing feelings of self-hate and guilt afterwards.

5) I recognize that my thoughts create my personal environment.

6) I understand that words like "don't," "try," and "should" are messages which speak my true intentions or feelings.

Communication skills

1) I am aware when I play psychological games with others in order to get what I want from them.

2) I am able to express my needs or feelings with friends and family, without becoming a victim who feels resentful.

3) I listen actively to what others say, and do not interrupt them or finish sentences for them.

4) I enjoy and look forward to silent times, and make room for them in my life.

5) It is okay for me to make mistakes and I am able to admit them and to go on learning.

6) I am able to consider the feelings of others before I speak.

'Wheels For Life' are spinning

It's time to get the wheels in motion for the St. Jude Children's Research Hospital's "Wheels For Life" Bike-a-thon slated for May 14 at Windmill Pointe Drive in the Park.

Susan Renders, coordinator, said, "This ride is a vital part of the fight against childhood cancer at St. Jude. Riders are really needed. They make or break a Bike-a-thon."

Riders are asked to get sponsors to make a donation based on each mile completed. All riders turning in money will receive a certificate. Those who raise $25 receive a certificate and a St. Jude T-shirt. When $75 is raised, the rider will receive a sports bag, a T-shirt and a certificate.

Sponsor sheets are available at Jakes and Pavlats bike shops, or Vic Tanny's.

"Let's show we care," said Renders. "Your generous pledge encourages riders. After the event, help them get the money to us quickly."

The ride starts at Windmill Pointe Drive at 9 a.m. and ends at 3 p.m. If you haven't been asked to sponsor a rider but are interested, call 465-4624, or 882-6484.

Kirkland's super-charged performance makes 'Anna'

By Marian Trainor
Special Writer

In her first starring role on screen, veteran theatrical actress and teacher Sally Kirkland was nominated for Best Actress of the year for her role in "Anna."

It was an honor well merited. Her super-charged performance of what it means to have known the glory of stardom, to fall under the shadow of has-been and to struggle gallantly to reach the top again is brilliant.

As Anna, Kirkland portrays an older actress who knew fame and glory in Czechoslovakia in the 60s. When the Russians invaded she made the mistake of hitting a Russian soldier. For that she was thrown in jail where her baby daughter was born and died within a few days.

Film

Released after two years she is ordered to leave the country. She chooses to go to New York where she hopes to resume her career and reunite with her husband. It doesn't happen.

When we see her 20 years later, she is broke, a little worse for wear and still struggling for a chance to perform. Her husband, once a famous director has settled for the good life, directing commercials. He doesn't want anything to do with Anna, she reminds him too much of the horror he left behind. "Your presence disturbs me," he tells her.

In spite of her hard luck, Anna retains her fighting spirit and finally she is called in for an audition for a part in an off-off-Broadway production. It's theme is the "Seven Ages of Women," played by seven characters. Anna is to play understudy to all seven. At first she refuses because it is too humiliating for a former star to play an understudy but later agrees to do it.

After all, she has gone through a most demeaning audition where women were asked to improvise and act out their most intimate encounters, a performance that is even disturbing to watch. Anna refuses to be part of that but agrees to read "Humpty Dumpty" projecting anger and then switches to maternal lullaby rendition.

Anna's only diversion from her relentless struggle to revive her career is her lover, a would-be-author supported by his parents.

In contrast to Anna's futile struggle to survive is the success of a beautiful young Czech actress, Krystyna (Pauline Porizkova). She is a Czech immigrant who arrives on the scene dragging a battered suitcase and clutching a few photos of Anna as a young actress.

Under Anna's direction, Krystyna learns to speak perfect English and how to maneuver her way into getting a director's attention. She is completely disarming with a sort of innocent guile that convinces the audience that she is not trying to hurt her benefactor but only making the right moves towards stardom.

Porizkova is convincing as the unsure immigrant who blossoms into a self-confident beauty. She has a winning freshness and a warm, delightful manner, not at all like Anne Baxter's deliberate, cold-blooded campaign in "All About Eve," a similar film.

But this is Kirkland's film all the way. She is like quicksilver; a crazy, high-spirited actress, enthusiastic and hopeful; maternal and loving as she plots and guides her protegee's career; desperate and wild, finally losing control, unable to bear the brunt and bruises of reality.

"Anna" is more than just another film. It is an experience that is not easily forgotten.

Redford's Beanfield is intimate comedy

By Michael Chapp
Special Writer

"The Milagro Beanfield War" is one of the warmest, quietest, most intimate comedies to hit movie screens in a long time. Its careful characterizations and deliberate pacing put it in a category of filmmaking rarely seen in wide theatrical release. Indeed, its subject matter and presentation are more commonly associated with highbrow "arty" films.

Film

So it is lucky for viewers that this piece from director Robert Redford is being made available in theatres everywhere.

The plot itself is nothing unique. A rebel with a cause ignites his apathetic small town neighbors to fight against the big, bad capitalists who are trying to displace them from their homes. It's "Small Town, U.S.A." vs. "The System." And in a spunky little film like this, it's not too difficult to figure out who's going to win.

Still, it's "Milagro's" humanistic quality that makes it so inviting. The piece is a combination of sociological insight and comedy. The humor is genuine because it's real. Same goes for the insight.

The characters in this film are so sincere that we can't help but be drawn into their insignificant little struggle. In the early going, an impoverished farmer (Chick Vennera) kicks a water main and illegally waters his parched beanfield. This raises the ire of some developers who had been envisioning a heavy crop of golf balls in the middle of the proposed 13th fairway of a proposed new golf course, which is part of a proposed resort village.

And as much as the developers want the farmer to cease and desist, they're afraid that if they take any official action, the Hispanic townspeople will band together and cause a flurry of negative sentiment across the state of New Mexico. But the more they leave him alone, the more momentum his cause gains.

The farmer is helped in his struggle by a left-wing fireball with a chip on her shoulder (Sonia Braga), a retired lawyer-turned newspaper editor who's been bucking the establishment all his life (John Heard), and a graduate sociology student who's in town to write his thesis (Daniel Stern).

Perhaps most of all though, the farmer is helped by Amaranthe, the county sage (Carlos Riquelme), an old man with a lifetime of experiences and more than his share of superstitions. This character embodies the joy of "Milagro." On his face we see the pride of culture. We see the traditions and values that have been a part of Milagro for generations — the same traditions and values that are being threatened by the impending resort construction. Through Amaranthe's eyes, we understand the farmer's fight.

Most of the humor in the film either celebrates the indigenous residents of San Juan country or pokes fun at the political bigwigs vying for power via real estate transactions. Christopher Walken as a scheming governmental agent, for example, is little more than a scapegoat for the film's adopted cause.

But do not be fooled. "Milagro" is not trying to make a save-the-farm statement or launch some kind of liberal revolution. It is simply a down-home comedy with heart and soul. It's a "people" kind of movie. And that should appeal to just about everyone.
