From allelopathy to wind lofts, science students score big

OK. So who has ever heard the word "allelopathy" let alone knows what it means or how it is applied?

And what young student would not just throw paper airplanes, but would also take the time to measure the distance it flies, time aloft and test the lift and drag of different

Two Brownell Middle School students who entered science fair projects in the area-wide science fair held recently at Cobo Hall, that's Jessica Coosaia, a 12-year old Harper Woods seventh-grader, and Jon Clarke, a seventh-grade Grosse Pointe Woods resident, entered their science projects -- done totally on their own, not as part of a class project - and Coosaia walked away with a first-place ribbon; Clarke with an honorable mention.

They were done as part of their association with Brownell's Science Club, a two-year-old group of students dedicated to the study of science.

Coosaia has been studying the effects of allelopathic plants on seed germination since September. Allelopathic plants, like black walnut trees, poinsettia leaves and dandelions, secrete poisons which will not allow other plants to grow near them.

To perform the project, she ground allelopathic plants in a blender, and mixed the resulting pulp with water. She filtered one sample, left another as a pulp, and compared the effects those solutions had on the germination of radish seeds with a control sample.

The data was stored and compiled in a computer.

"I found that the solutions with the black walnut died, and the growth was stunted in the rest," she said.

"The application is that people get frustrated when they plant things and they don't grow," she said. "You've got to look at what you're planting and what's around it."

Clarke's paper airplane project tested the lift, drag and flight time of five different models of paper airplanes. He also built a wind tunnel to test his creations.

To test the length of flights and the flight time, Clarke realized he couldn't use the classroom, which was too cluttered, or the outdoors, because the wind would affect the results, so he used the largest draft-free place he could find — the school gym.

"I'm so proud of these kids," said Arlene Hicks, sponsor for the science club. "There's a lot of time and dedication they put into their projects. They did all of the work them-

Last year, eight science club members entered the Cobo Hall show and among them took one first place and seven honorable

"The main purpose of the science club is to give the child a chance to work (on scientific projects) safely under the direction of a teacher," Hicks added.

Not students to rest on their laurels, they are already planning next year's projects. Coosaia's is an extension of this year's project, and Clarke is building a working underwater gerbil colony.

Lock-in proms for North, South

By Peter A. Salinas Staff Writer

Plans for proms at Grosse Pointe's two public high schools are complete, and all that remains is getting a date, buying the dress, finding a tuxedo and renting the limo.

North is not holding a junior prom this year. The senior prom, scheduled for Friday, May 27, will be held at the Detroit Athletic Club. Tickets are $40 per person and $80 a couple.

South will have both a junior prom and a senior prom. The junior prom is scheduled for Friday, May 20, and the senior prom is scheduled for Saturday,

The South junior prom will be held at the Detroit Yacht Club. Tickets are $30 per person and $60 per couple. The South senior prom will be $35 per person and $70 per couple, and will be held at the Roostertail.

Though North has had "lockin" proms for several years, this is the first time South's senior torious times for students to prom will be held that way.

South Assistant Principal Ber prom ticket will include live en- LeMieux said. tertainment, hors d'oeuvres, dinner, party favors and a makeyour-own dessert bar.

A North prom ticket will pay for parking, live entertainment, hors d'oeuvres, a filet mignon or chicken dinner and dessert.

"We had a junior prom very similar to this last year," said Cecil Keith, a social studies teacher and senior class sponsor. "I would say the students are enthusiastic about this year's prom.'

Part of the problem with hosting a prom in which students can dine elsewhere, then come to the dance, is that students may show up at the dance, but leave early to go to a different party.

"This is the last formal activity that the students will be attending as a group," LeMieux said. "Locking the doors means that the kids will stay to the end. If we let them leave whenever they wanted, there wouldn't be anyone left — long before the end of the night."

School officials are concerned about substance abuse as well. Senior and junior proms are nodrink alcohol.

"At least on this one night we nard Lemieux said the senior will know where the kids are,"

The Sun Messengers, a wellknown and popular Detroit jazz band, will perform at the senior prom. LeMieux said the prom organizers have put together a good evening that will hold everyone's attention.

Keith said prom organizers at North have taken plans there one step further.

"We have been selling tickets for a raffle," she said. "The raffle drawing will be held at 12:30 a.m. (the prom ends at 1 a.m.) We have a television, luggage and a microwave oven among the prizes.'

That should keep ticket hold ers at the party until the end, especially since winners must be present to claim their prize.

North Principal John Kastran said the locked-in proms haven't been a problem, and that stu dents have enjoyed themselves.

"There will still be parties af ter the prom," Kastran said, "but we can't do anything about that. Those parties are up to the parents. This kind of prom keeps down the substance abuse too.

Kastran emphasized that the students should spend time with Downplaying the negative as- one another at the last formal

"Ever since I was little, I always liked art, so when I went to college, I very specifically wanted to do something with contemporary art," he said.

He has attained that goal, and today, lives and works with it.

As evidence of that, look at his credentials:

• While working toward his doctoral dissertation, he was designated a Chester Dale Fellow by the National Gallery of Art in Washington, D.C.;

• As a professor of art history, he has taught at the University of Michigan-Dearborn since

• He is a publishing scholar in the field of Modern European and American Art. One of his books, "The Prints of Frank Stella: A Catalogue Raisonne, 1967-1982" was cited "Outstanding Publication in the Arts" by Choice Magazine in 1983;

• He has served as guest curator for the University of Michigan Museum of Art, the American Federation of Arts in New York, and the Walker Art Center in Minneapolis;

 He has received research grants from the University of Michigan three times, from the National Endowment for the Humanities and from the Na-

Millage committee kicks off

Staff Writer

Grosse Pointers want to continue to use the three public libraries the way they have in the past, voters will have to approve a four-tenths mill increase at the annual school election June 13.

That was the word from school officials and members of the Library Millage Committee at a special media luncheon at the Country Club of Detroit May 5.

Millage committee co-chairperson Donald N. Sweeny III said the 33 percent increase in the library millage levy from 1.3 to 1.7 mills, was absolutely critical if the library is to maintain its current level of services.

Library Director Charles Hanson said the current request for four tenths of a mill was part of the millage increase and bond issue request voters turned down last fall. Hanson emphasized that this request has nothing to do with expansion plans for the

"This new tax increase was part of the prior request," Hanson told the small group of reporters and school officials. "We needed the four-tenths last year. It was not included as a separate

Because voters turned down the $8.6 million bond issue for expansion and the one mill increase to cover current and new operations that would be needed for the expansion, the library has already had to make budget cuts to maintain a fund equity.

"We can not operate on a deficit budget," Hanson said. "We had to make cuts to have money left over."

Based on a $100,000 home with an SEV of $50,000, a homeowner currently pays about $66 for library operations based on the 1.3-mill levy. If voters approve the four-tenths mill increase, the cost will be an addi-

According to figures provided by the school's business affairs There's no way around it. If office, the average selling price of a Grosse Pointe home is more than $100,000. With average selling prices ranging from a high of $275,000 in the Shores to $116,000 in the Woods, the impact of the four-tenths mill would be about $55 in the Shores and $23 in the Woods. Those in the Harper Woods portion of the Grosse Pointe school district, where the average selling price of a home is far less, around $58,000, the typical homeowner would pay about $11.50 as a result of the increase in millage.

Sweeny said residents must realize that while the average increase in SEV for the Grosse Pointes and Harper Woods is around 8.5 percent, it does not translate into an 8.5 percent increase in tax dollars for the li-

"The Headlee Amendment limits tax increases to the cost of living," Sweeny said. "The cost of books and periodicals, and other items such as salaries. health care benefits and insurance have risen much faster than the consumer price index."

The four-tenths of a mill would generate about $450,000 for the library. Tonks said the money is needed to continue to provide current services and also continue to expand the library's computer services.

If the proposal fails, said Hanson, the most immediate impact would be cutting back on the number of hours the library is open. Hanson said that while Sunday is the busiest day for the public libraries, it is also the most costly since full-time employees are paid time-and-a-half for the four hours the library is

Tonks said, whether it is Sunday or some other day of the week, library hours will have to

In its fact sheet, the Library Millage Committee points out that in the last 20 years, the library millage rate has not increased. While the SEV of the district has provided the library with more money, the library has voluntarily reduced its tax levy beyond the Headlee requirements in order to keep tax bills

Over the years, the library has added new services such as cassettes, videotapes and computer research services. Because of the constraints on space, the library's book collection was actually larger 20 years ago than it is today.

A separate Library Building Advisory Committee met last week. This committee is charged with examining the library's options for expansion and renovation of the three public libraries.

Hanson said subcommittees were selected earlier in the year, and the committee heard reports from those subcommittees last

Kay Baubie, co-chair of the Library Millage Committee, said that the earliest any question would be put on the ballot for expansion of the library would be March 1989. Baubie stressed that while expansion of the current library facilities is a critical issue, this current ballot proposal deals only with current operations — not with expansion.

Sweeny said he has met with 10 Parent Teacher Organizations in the district to discuss the library's needs.

The annual school election will be held Monday, June 13, from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m. To learn the location of your polling place, call 343-2016.

Sweeny said he is available to speak to any group who requests information on the subject. His office number is 358-1536 and his home number is 881-0881. Hanson's number is 343-2090.

Students sponsor carnival to honor slain classmate

By Ronald J. Bernas

Staff Writer

Sophomores at University Liggett School who were affected by the tragic shooting of classmate Ti Juan Kidd last July have planned a carnival in his honor.

The May 22 carnival is the brainchild of Michael Barnes, who played in three sports with Kidd. When he presented it to the class, they were supportive, he said, because nearly everybody knew Kidd.

"He was a special person," Barnes said. "Rarely have I met a person who was so determined to do so well. He never let his goals drop."

Sophomore Dean Sue Frederick said "People kind of gravitated to him. (His death) pulled the class together." "It really hit our class, and its given us something to work for, to honor his memory," Mimi Issa

Kidd, a star athlete, was shot in the head July 18 while he attempt by a group of people to mentary schools in the Pointes, crash the party he was attending in Detroit.

Getting the whole classes' input, a six-member steering committee made up of Barnes, Jenifer Schaupeter, Mimi Issa, John Ellis, Toria Martin and Mark Loeffler, planned the carnival, and took as its focus the youth of the school.

"We wanted something we could do as a class, and we wanted to have a spirited event," Barnes said.

So on Sunday, May 22, from 1 to 4 p.m. at the University Liggett School football field, there will be an old-fashioned carnival complete with pony rides, duck pond, ring toss, obstacle course, bean bag toss, fortune telling and a pie in the face booth. There will also be a lip synch booth and a performance booth for people to ham it up.

"It's focusing on the younger kids.'

All proceeds from the carnival will be put into the sophomore class treasury, and to finance the sophomore class-sponsored Ti Juan Kidd Prize. The prize will go to an incoming sophomore who best exemplifies Ti Juan's spirit of embracing life.

"This first year is the toughest," John Ellis said, "We're not sure how it's going to work."

The committee has high hopes, though, for the carnival and, although they haven't thought it through to next year, they said they would like to see it continue next year, and possibly after they graduate.

The work of the steering committee has been going on since February, Frederick said. "I'm really proud of these kids.'

Woods to hold hearing on budget

The Woods city council will hold a public hearing Monday, May 16, in regard to its proposed 1988-89 city budget. The new budget, at $7,921,412, is up $370,000 (or 9.5 percent) from the 1987-88 budget, which was $7,544,201.

There are three main reasons for the increase, according to Robert Novitke, chairman of the council's finance committee.

First and foremost is the 11.5 percent increase in insurance premiums by Blue Cross/Blue Shield. Originally a much larger increase was hinted at, but negotiations cut that down, he said.

A projected cost increase for the advanced emergency medical service was also built into the budget because a local licensing board has told the city it cannot ontinue to operate its advanced EMS at current staffing levels. According to regulations, advanced EMS must have two fully trained advanced emergency medical technicians per run. Currently the system has only one per run. The cost of addi-

Chase nets 3 suspects

The car sped off and officers gave chase. The vehicle stopped at the 2500 block of Ashland in Detroit and the three occupants fled on foot.

Two adults were arrested at the scene and one juvenile who ran into a nearby house was later taken into custody.

The suspects were turned over to Detroit police.

Another reason for the increase is because contracts are currently being negotiated for some city employees, he said.

Although the actual amount of millage levied is down .030, from 12.922 mills to 12.892 mills, the average homeowner will realize a slight increase in property

In 1987, the homeowner with an average home with an SEV of $50,000 paid $647.10. In 1988, the same homeowner will pay

The reason for the increase in taxes is because property assessments increased this year. In 1987, one mill brought in $348,000, where in 1988, one mill will bring in $383,000, Novitke said.

Some $3.3 million is dedicated to public safety: $1.03 for general government expenditures; $2.13 million for public works and $1.07 million for parks and recreation. Included in the budget is money for repaving Mack Avenue (of which Wayne County is paying two-thirds of the cost), installation of water and sewer mains to the Milk River and the concrete and additional work that goes with sewer work, he said.

The city has put off certain items, like the purchase of a new garbage truck and some equipment for city hall, Novitke said, to keep the budget down.

'We have a very responsive council, and city officials (like City Administrator Chester Petersen and Comptroller Cliff Maison), and we think its a good tight budget," he said.

Compromise on school aid recommended ompromise ought to be possible on the school financing reform issue but it is slow in developing in Lan-

It is true that the legislation that has been under study this year does try to achieve two contradictory goals: reduction of property taxes for both homeowners and business, and an increase in funding for poor school districts which have not been able to maintain acceptable standards.

So perhaps it is natural that the special interests that have been involved, aside from the political parties themselves, have sought to satisfy their own goals ahead of the broad general aim of improving public education in the state.

Thus we have the state's business organizations generally in favor of the Senatepassed Republican bill in large part because it provides more property tax relief for business than does Gov. James Blanchard's program. And one of the strongest lobbyists on the other side, the Michigan Education Association, has in general backed the governor's program not only because it provides better financing for education but also because it promises more money for teachers' salaries.

Yet it is difficult to believe that some compromise could not be made between the two approaches in view of the fact that both sides approve of a 2-cent increase in the state sales tax to offset the revenues lost by cutting property taxes.

It is true that the sales tax increase would have to be approved by a vote of the people and that the Republicans and the governor have different ideas of the timing of the referendum. The governor wants the school financing issue on the ballot at the August primary so that it won't get involved with the other issues to be voted on in November. Republicans favor a November vote because the turnout will be much larger and more representative of Michigan public opinion.

But here, too, it is difficult to believe that one side or the other could not give in order to allow the people to vote on the proposed sales tax increase. In this matter, the real issue is the tax increase, not the timing of the vote on it. As a result, we agree with the GOP on the timing of the referendum.

Robert G. Edgar

Perhaps behind the scenes in Lansing, and as yet unreported to the public, efforts at compromise are under way. Yet we've heard little about any such efforts and, in fact, House Speaker Gary Owens warned that Senate GOP leaders would have to negotiate directly with House Democrats to break the partisan deadlock. House GOP leader Paul Hillegonds in response proposed bipartisan discussions in the House. Such comments indicate little interest in genuine compromise.

In fact, the only compromise proposal we've seen has been laid out in a Detroit Free Press editorial which was interesting, even if it seems to have been ignored in Lansing. The Freep called for a compromise school funding figure of perhaps $350 million that would fall between the $620 million in additional revenue proposed by the governor and the $103 million to $204 million endorsed by the Republicans. It also proposed closing enough loopholes to raise perhaps half of the $100 million to $120 million in new taxes the governor had proposed on banks, insurance companies and certain classes of individuals.

The Freep also advised Lansing's business lobbies to quit "trying to extort" an unnecessarily large business tax cut in return for their support of a school ballot proposal. And it urged the governor to go along with the November vote recommended by the Republicans.

That compromise program doesn't sound so bad, even though the Freep used unnecessarily inflammatory language to criticize the business lobbyists and their agents. Both sides would have to make concessions in some areas, but that is the nature of politics and political action.

True, the Freep's compromise does not address the plight of the out-of-formula districts such as Grosse Pointe, which might lose some revenue or the ability to obtain more revenue in the future under both proposals. But surely there ought to be a way to help poorer districts without putting a cap on the revenues of districts like ours in Grosse Pointe.

We still think that capping revenues would also put a cap on excellence by limiting spending for innovative and exemplary programs that are initiated in districts like the Pointes and later prove to be of value in many other districts.

Surely Michigan still needs "lighthouse districts" more than it needs egalitarian policies that would tend to curtail educational opportunities as well as funds in the out-of-formula districts.

Library starts millage drive aving stumbled in the library expansion campaign last fall, supporters of the Grosse Pointe public library system are making sure it doesn't happen again by starting an early drive for approval of a four-tenths of a mill increase in the operating levy for the library on June 13. That is also the date of the annual school election.

Donald Sweeny III and Kay Baubie, who are heading up the Library Millage Committee, last week hosted a luncheon for the news media in order to disseminate information in support of the campaign and answer questions about the issues involved. They seemed to satisfy most of their audi-

The proposed increase, which is required to finance the maintenance of the library system's current level of services, would cost the owner of a home with an assessed valuation of $100,000 about $20 a year in addition to current taxes of $66 for library operations.

If approved, this would be the first millage increase for the library in 20 years. Revenues have increased as property assessments have risen over the years but the amount of the increases has been limited by the Headlee Amendment which prevents any windfall generated by increased property assessments. So costs have risen faster than revenues.

What would happen if the requested millage were denied?

At present, library officials believe they would have to end the Sunday service now offered from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. at the Central Library and the regular Saturday services at the branch libraries in the Park and the Woods.

What has happened is that over the years the library services have increased without a corresponding increase in the space available. While the library's book collection was larger 20 years ago than it is today, space for books has been sacrificed to accommodate the addition of computer research services, cassettes, videotapes and other services.

In addition, library usage has increased despite the Pointes' loss of population in recent years. Circulation has grown and so has the number of people holding library cards. Costs of both books and magazines also have risen faster than the Consumer Price Index, which under the Headlee Amendment sets the limit on tax increases generated by increased assessments.

The campaign leaders stress that the new millage increase has nothing to do with the library expansion voted down last November. Library officials say that a Library Building Advisory Committee studying the expansion problem hopes to report a recommendation later in the year.

For now, however, the millage committee and library officials are centering their attention on the proposed increase of fourtenths of a mill on June 13. On the basis of the information now available, we believe the additional $450,000 is needed and should be approved in order to maintain library services at their current levels.

LITTLE STAR..

Love those films

To the Editor:

We Grosse Pointers and East Siders should give a rousing hurrah to the Woods Theatre for starting to show many of the classic art movies which have been available to us only at the Maple Theatre in Birmingham. Since the month of March I've been delighted to be able to see some of these really marvelous movies which I have heretofore had to travel 30 miles to see.

Let's give the Woods Theatre our support so they will continue to show these excellent movies instead of some of the senseless trash that's being produced and foisted on the public.

Thank you, AMC Woods. Please, please, keep it up.

On using pets as targets

To the Editor:

This letter is to vent our outrage at the person or persons who think it is fun to shoot a BB gun at animals.

We live in the Mack-Huntington-Manchester area of Grosse Pointe Woods and on Thursday, April 21, someone shot at our 15-year-old cat, a cat who never leaves our yard and who only goes outside for her daily walk around the yard in the morning and late afternoon. Our cat was hit in the shoulder and suffered a week of pain before our vet discovered the wound, which had been partially healed over and abscessed and had to be lanced. We are asking parents in the area to talk to their children, and if they have such a gun, let them read this letter . . . perhaps it will give them insight on the damage they can do in less than one second and just maybe save someone else's pet from being used as a tar-

As for the person who shot at our cat, we can only feel sadness and pity, and prosecution would make us feel a whole lot better.

Tacky, tacky

To the Editor:

Today was the first occasion to visit the Central Library since the terrible vandalism occurred. If this is a prank by high school seniors, I believe that this time they have gone too far and deserve to be tracked down and made examples of. I must confess that I did hear some suggestion that the rape of the library had been perpetrated by library personnel. If there should be any truth to this monstrous charge, I can only assume that this despoliation of a facility which was not the acme of graciousness to start with represents some expression of vindictiveness aimed at those who voted a certain way in a recent election. In that case, I fear that it will turn out that some targets have been hit which were not intended.

If there was some public notice of intention to turn the building into the Temple of Tacky, and some opportunity for citizens, Friends, etc., to react and discuss, then I must admit my own lack of awareness and fail-

Do as the Canadians do

ome young Michiganians apparently never have heard of the adage,"When In Rome, do as the Romans do." Or perhaps they don't realize that saying should apply when they're in Windsor as well as when they are in any other foreign

We are referring to the reaction to the roadblocks Windsor police have set up on weekends to control the drunk driving and rowdyism of Detroit area young people who have been attracted to Windsor because Canada's minimum drinking age is 19 as contrasted with Michigan's 21.

When Windsor police set up the roadblocks for the first time two weeks ago, they nailed quite a few young Americans. The roadblocks were not restored a week ago, but police have pledged to set them up without warning on an intermittent basis. So young Grosse Pointers and other young Michiganians should be forewarned and act responsibly.

Kevin Trudell, a Windsor police official, told The Detroit News that instituting the roadblocks was a part of the program called Reduce Intoxicated Driving Everywhere (RIDE) which was started to control the situation when the bars close in Wind-

"There's a traffic jam in the tunnel and it's like a zoo," he was quoted as saying. "You get kids walking on the hoods of cars, urinating in public, honking their horns, driving like maniacs."

Windsor bar owners, the chief beneficiaries of the difference in the drinking age, have been critical of the police action and have labeled it anti-Americanism. The Detroit News reported that Windsor's bar business was down as much as 25 percent the first weekend the roadblock program

However, it isn't likely the complaints will be effective. Canada's Supreme Court has just upheld the legality of roadblocks and protesters didn't get much support at a public hearing last week. Furthermore, Canada has a tradition of law-and-order that is stronger than ours in the United

So the best advice to Michiganians of any age who are driving in Canada is: Do as the Canadians do and obey the law.

Living is dangerous

We took a long weekend last week and went to Chicago to celebrate our anniversary. For four days the temperature was in the 70s and we walked the city, both sides of the river. What a great town. Whenever I pulled out my map to get my bearings, a friendly native stopped and asked if we needed help.

We spent an entire morning at the Board of Trade, watching frenetic traders buying and selling commodities and T-notes. It was fascinating. Then when we went through the art museum, I thought I died and went to impressionist heaven.

We went to Holy Name Cathedral for Saturday mass, and a wedding ceremony, which had run overtime, was just concluding. As we stood in the back of the church waiting for the bride and groom to come down the aisle, I realized that it was also the day of our anniversary and I thought that was a good omen.

It was a perfect vacation. Almost. Besides some nice gifts for the kids that I spent a long time selecting, I came back with a gut-wrenching case of food poi-

That's not the story. The way I got it is.

Rich's co-worker, who goes to Chicago often, drew up a list of fine restaurants for us. At the top of the list was one she described as the best restaurant! in Chicago. Now this person is a gourmet cook who dreams about studying at the Cordon Bleu in

The only catch, she said, was we'd never get in, because the place is booked solid months in advance. So Rich tried three weeks ahead of time, two weeks, one week (figuring there might be a cancellation) and no luck. When we got into town, I tried and it was the same story

In the vicinity, however, there was another restaurant with a good reputation that didn't take reservations. We went there. It would be about two hours before we could be seated, we were told, so we decided to walk around.

On a whim, Rich suggested we just walk into the veddy exclusive elusive restaurant. He told the maitre d', an aristocratic gent who looked as though he had been born wearing a tuxedo, that we didn't have a reservation, but we hoped we could get in. The maitre d' hesitated, a table next to a lace-curtained window from which we had a view of the street and park.

looked us over and then led us to

We were speechless. We were giddy. We ordered a bottle of wine and nearly devoured the menu - everything sounded so good. Well, we ate and we completely enjoyed every over-priced item, because it was a special occasion and it seemed to be fate that we were there.

And that's where I ate contaminated food. I know this from what my favorite medicine man was able to ascertain after tests and the normal incubation period of this particular bad bug. It was five days before I was able to eat again and it'll probably be another week before my stomach is back to normal.

The whole incident strikes me as being so ludicrous. We were simply not meant to eat there. but we defied the stars. I should have checked with an astrologer

People have told me that I should write to the restaurant and I think I should, but I probably won't. I read a statistic recently that Americans are eating out more than ever -- an average of five times a week. We eat out a lot and I never had a problem, which is probably amazing, considering.

My youngest son worked as a cook part-time while going to school last year - at a national chain, a fast food place and a local family restaurant. Two of the three got bad grades for their kitchen practices and he's not a fastidious person. I remember working at a drive-in restaurant when I was in high school where the owner constantly dumped sour milk into the malt-making machine and nobody could tell. Everyone has a story like this.

We think we've come a long way from the practices described by Upton Sinclair in "The Jungle," but sometimes I wonder.

The New York Times reported that industry was responding to President Truman's call for price restraints. Leaders of the food industry asked their group for price reductions and stabilization to avoid a return of government controls. The Hygrade president called the food production and distribution industry a public utility. A Massachusetts plan called for voluntary reduction of all retail prices by 10 percent.

Meanwhile, Ohio Sen. Robert. A. Taft called for a reduction in the power of labor unions. Saving he had no desire to "wreak vengeance" on the unions, Taft said the pendulum had swung too far and small employers had no more power.

Former vice president Henry Wallace warned of a coming depression in the United States that could bring about a war. He also charged that American foreign policy was imperialistic.

Congress killed an appropriation for the Voice of America and a student exchange program.

In an "ultimatum without precedent," Actors Equity took aim at the Washington National Theatre's rule against blacks in the audience. Equity stated that unless the theater revised the Jim Crow rule within a year, the union would no longer allow actors to perform there. Theater management resisted, saying Equity's threat was a breach of contract.

The British government reiterated its determination not to enforce United Nations Palestinian policies it didn't approve of. "All the bitterness that Britons feel toward the Palestinian terrorists and toward American Zionists who are financing unauthorized immigration was poured out in indignation and distaste" in the House of Lords, the Times reported. I certainly do not recall, for example, that the recent request to renew my Friends membership contained any hint that private funds were being solicited to help create a dreary adjunct detention room for middle schoolers. Well, anyone can con me once, and it's his fault; but twice, it's my fault. I shall be reminded of this axiom at the next election and time of solicitation.

State condoning promiscuity

Those wishing to indulge can receive 24 free condoms at a time. Dispensing pharmacies will be reimbursed at 48 cents each condom. All the recipient need is to produce a valid current Medicaid card and they can "charge" their condoms with the bill paid by state of Michigan. Almost like going to Hudson's!

Shortly after the condom giveaway goes into effect, the "generous" state of Michigan will start paying for free syringes to be dispensed to drug addicts. These syringes will be paid for in similar fashion to the condoms described above.

Although we have a serious drug and AIDS epidemic in this state, we also have seniors who cannot qualify for food programs, indigents who are starving, farmers losing their land, homeless families sleeping on the sidewalk, and needy people doing without simple and necessary health care.

I am outraged that the state of Michigan will condone and also promote drug addiction and promiscuity while ignoring the most obvious prevalent needs confronting a huge number of our citizens.

Cheers for coach

To the Editor:

It's great that the seniors on Grosse Pointe South's track team were recognized in the Grosse Pointe News. They are all star athletes and great examples for the rest of the team. It's also nice to see seniors on a team sport, since by 12th grade, many have found jobs or other interests by then.

I do think though, that

Mr. Zaranek should have received more credit for his part. It's because of him that students come back. I have had the privilege of having Mr. Zaranek for a track coach in grade school (St. Clare) and two years in high school. He has winning records at both schools because of HIS attitude. He has large track teams at both schools again because of himself.

He treats us on a personal level. He is concerned and cares. He's human and out to better us. He is never demeaning or degrading. His philosophy is "beat your best time" - do better than the day before. As a result, each team member is competing against herself - always striving for more - always trying to be better. In the end, we have a winning attitude - a winning team.

Even if we do not win in a meet, we can still walk away with pride, because we know we've done our best. And Mr. Zaranek always recognizes our efforts.

Mr. Zaranek deserves to be canonized. He is liked and respected by 9th, 10th, 11th and 12th grade GIRLS. He has a winning team because he is a winner. He is an excellent example of what ALL coaches should be. (Mr. Novak and Mr. Lamberti, assistant coaches, also carry this same philosophy and are appreciated.)

Thank you, Mr. Zaranek, for helping us to reach our goals and feel great about it. A positive coach makes for a positive team. We all appreciate you!

From The Capitol Stop the slaughter of dolphins

• Electronic Siren

By William R. Bryant Jr. State Representative

The slaughter of dolphins must stop. I have been swimming with dolphins twice. When one does swim with them one comes to know, inescapably, that they are immensely intelligent, wise mammals, probably more intelligent and perhaps more "worthy" than humans. We can and need to learn from them, not kill them. Tens of thousands of dolphins are hunted, captured and killed as tuna fleets hunt the tuna which sometimes swims with the dolphins. This slaughter of our fellow high intelligence colleagues, the dolphins, cannot be allowed.

Federal law supposedly limits dolphin slaughter to "only" 20,500 dolphins per year, but this supposed limit is grossly exceeded, probably by killing more than 50,000 dolphins each year, and, anyway, such a 20,500 limit is criminally excessive.

There should be a fine equal to the value of at least 100 tuna for every dolphin killed or wounded. Failure to adopt practices to protect dolphins or continued willful or negligent, systematic killing or maining of dolphins should result in loss of fishing license for the owner and operator and should be a felony resulting in a prison sentence.

If anyone has ever looked into the eyes of a dolphin or played with them in the water, it is im-

From The Capitol Michigan passes hostile takeover legislation

we have witnessed again and again corporate mergers and takeovers. Often, the results of improved management. At other times, however, the takeover is tween raider, management and shareholders is bitter.

In 1984 I sponsored Senate Bill 541 which addressed the issue of corporate takeovers. This legislation required shareholder approval of hostile takeovers and equitable treatment of all shareholders in a tender offer.

Far too often, raider companies would make an attractive offer for enough shares of a company's stock to obtain a controlling interest and follow that with a much smaller offer for additional shares of the company. Minority shareholders were left with little or no means to protect their investments. By forcing the raider to treat all shareholders equitably, we could make hostile takeover attempts more expensive and so decrease their incidence in Michigan.

In the vent of a successful takeover, this bill minimized losses to shareholders owning stock in a company in a depressed market by allowing their participation in the takeover decision. This would prevent the raider from gaining advantage from adverse economic conditions, thin trading markets and other circumstances. In the past year, we found that further legislative action was necessary. Our new legislation will offer more protection for corporations and help us keep companies and jobs in the state.

Computerized trading allows stocks to be bought and sold with lightning quick speed. A hostile takeover can happen so quickly that a corporation may not have enough time to assemble defenses to prevent the action. By lengthening the time involved with additional steps, outlined in House Bill 4907, we will give shareholders more time to consider their decision.

House Bill 4907 would allow for an acquiring person statement to be delivered to the target corporation. Before acquired control shares could exercise vot Michigan has strengthened its ing power, a meeting of sharelegislation protecting sharehold-holders would be called to decide ers and companies against hose the voting rights of those control

This provision companies find themselves under gives shareholders the authority to limit the voting power of shares which, when acquired, not welcome and the battle begive the acquirer control in the election of directors

Under this bill, stockholders also will have the right to sell their shares to the corporation if voting rights are granted and constitute a majority of voting nower. Shareholders would have to be given "fair value," which is at least the highest price paid per share by the acquirer of control shares.

In addition, the corporation will also have the right to redeem control shares at "fair value" within 60 days after the last acquisition if an acquiring person statement has not been filed. If a statement has been filed, the shares would be subject to redemption if other shareholders deny the control shares voting rights.

A corporation will also be prohibited from protecting itself through purchasing shares of its own stock from anyone who held three percent or more of those shares. The exceptions to this would be if an offer of at least equal value is made to other shareholders, other shareholders vote authorization for the pur chase in advance, the purchase meets articles of incorporation requirements, or the purchase is authorized by the Business Corporation Act.

If we expect corporations to stay in business in Michigan, then we must offer this kind of protection. Under this legislation a corporation would be protected if the company has its principal office, place of business or substantial assets in Michigan; if a company has a minimum of 100 shareholders of record; and either Michigan residents own at least 10 percent of its shares, Michigan residents comprise at least 10 percent of its record shareholders, or more than 10,000 Michigan residents are record shareholders.

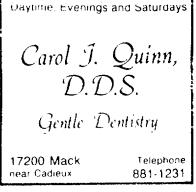

I believe that this legislation serves a very useful social pur

Asked for some indication of hope, she answered without hesitation: "Gorbechev. He's made extraordinary arms proposals, which - incidentally - have been mostly ignored by Reagan. Gorbechev has given us a glimpse of paradise.

'Higbie House not designed to last forever,' says grandson

By Margie Reins Smith

Staff Writer
The Higbie House is almost gone.

The three-story white stucco six-bedroom mini-mansion has been picked clean, like a turkey carcass, and tossed out.

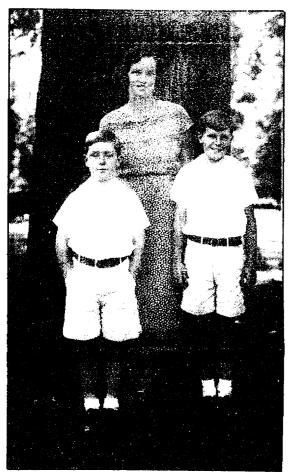

It stood for 61 years on eight-and-a-half acres facing Lake St. Clair, on the corner of Lakeshore and Moran.

It's fate was not unprecedented. About 30 Grosse Pointe mansions along Jefferson and Lakeshore between Cadieux and Vernier have been demolished during the last 30 years, according to Lisa Gandelot, Grosse Pointe Historical Society president.

Dorothy Scherer Higbie was 86 when she died last May. Her grandson, Mark Scherer Higbie, 31, said she wouldn't have brooded about her house's demise. "She was a realist," he said.

Dorothy Higbie grew up in the house next door, which was built by her parents, Hugo and Clara Scherer in 1898. "When the Scherer House was torn down, it affected her for a day or two and then she moved on with her life," Mark Higbie said. "She taught me a lesson. She helped me deal with the realities of what was to become of the Higbie House.

"What made Granny's house important and significant was that she lived there and that it was a happy home for a happy family. It was the family that was important — not the physical house."

Dorothy Scherer Higbie and sons Hugo, left, and Harley, are in front of the oak tree that still stands near the entrance of the courtyard of the Higbie House. The developer of the Higbie property. Chris Blake, plans to save as many of the large trees as he can

Clara Schere

Hugo Scherer

The Higbie House was built in 1927 at 201 Lakeshore for Dorothy Scherer Higbie and her husband, Harley Green Higbie. The house was designed as a temporary home and was to be moved later. The Higbies planned to build a large, permanent stone house in its place. The Depression changed their plans.

The Higbie House was built in 1927, he said, and was supposed to be a temporary residence for Dorothy Scherer Higbie and her husband Harley Green Higbie. The sixbedroom stucco house was designed by a local architect and hastily constructed.

"It was supposed to be moved," Mark Higbie said — "just picked up off its foundation and moved onto Moran or Merriweather, on property owned by the family.

"My grandparents planned to build a larger, more formal stone house in its place.

"But the Depression came. They realigned their priorities and it became inappropriate to build their dream house."

Mark Higbie said his grandmother, Dorothy, is remembered for her wonderful parties. "It was something she loved to do. She was also a sportswoman, a golfer. She won the Michigan state golf title in the '20s, '30s and '40s. She was a great athlete. She was also on the U.S. national golf team and had a huge case of trophies in the dining room of the Higbie House."

She once built huge wooden bleachers on the lakeshore in front of her house, he said. "At lunch, one day, probably in the late '30s, she heard about a boat race that would be held on Lake St. Clair that week. People used to park their cars along Lakeshore to watch the races. Granny told her houseman to build wooden bleachers, which he did, and the community came and watched the race."

Mark Higbie remembers the family Christmas Eve party that was a traditional black tie affair held by his grandmother. "She had a Christmas Eve open house. After dinner, family and friends dropped by for a drink, some Irish coffee. At 1 and 2 a.m. people were still rolling through the house. One time during the '60s, (a friend) drove his enormous black Rolls Royce right onto the front steps of the house. He said he was providing doorto-door service for his wife."

Hugo Scherer, Mark Higbie's great-grandfather, came to the United States from Germany and began his own business, H. Scherer & Co., manufacturers of carriage wheels. He later owned a company that manufactured engines for boats and he invested in real estate, according to Mark Higbie.

The Scherer House was built in 1898, as a summer residence for the Scherers. They lived on Jefferson Avenue closer to Detroit, but later moved to their Grosse Pointe home and lived there year-round.

Mark Higbie's father, Hugo, the son of Dorothy and Harley, grew up in the Higbie House. Hugo Higbie recently talked about his happy memories of the house, but he pointed out that it was not a historically significant structure.

Mark Higbie said the family made a genuine, extended effort to sell the house. It was on the market for about a year, he said. "If we could have sold the house, we would have."

The property was sold recently to The Blake Co., and Christopher Blake plans to build 16 colonial style homes on the eight-and-a-half acre parcel.

Mark Higbie is president of Higbie Visual Associates, a media consulting company in Philadelphia. He was in town recently to help with the sale of furnishings and architectural bits and pieces of his grandmother's house and he reminisced about the happy memories he has of his grandparents and great-grandparents. "I didn't think I really wanted to be here for the sale," he said. "But I'm glad I was.

"I felt two ways about the house being torn down. I was sad because I have so many happy memories of the house. But my attitude had to be to yield to the way my grandmother would look at it: We have to move on — look ahead — the house had its day."

He said 3,000 people attended the twoday sale. "They bought mantles, beams, paneling, appliances, clothing, dishes, furniture, and more.

"An older gentleman came through who said he was a chauffeur and lived in the servant's quarters for a while. He bought the medicine cabinet from his former bathroom. I asked him why and he said, 'I used to shave in that mirror every morning; I had more hair then."

Mark Higbie said, "The sale was incredible. I saw interest, love, curiosity. People started lining up at 1 a.m. The sale started at 10 a.m. There were 500 people waiting in the courtyard at 8 a.m., and the last four-and-a-half hours of the second day, people were lined up all the way around the huge pine tree. Some waited an hour-and-a-half."

Higbie recalled a young couple from Grosse Pointe Park who bought the ironwork from the terrace. "They were going to install it in their own backyard. That makes me happy.

"To see the medicine cabinet in the chauffeur's bathroom. That makes me happy."

He said the gardener's cottage, which sits farther back on the property and was also built in 1927, may be saved, restored and moved. To those who might criticize the destruction of one of Grosse Pointe's older, grand homes, Mark Higbie said,

"The historical society has a point. But we have to live in the real world. I wish people had been aware when (some of the more significant houses were being torn down) like the Chapin house, the Glancy house, the Dodge house, the Schlottman

"We're making the best of a given situation. Perhaps the cottage will survive in a new place."

Mark Higbie remembers a black cast iron dog that was on the steps of the house, near the rose garden. "I remember sitting on that dog, as a kid, when we went to Granny's for butter cookies and Vernor's ginger ale after church." He smiled. "The person who bought "" close friend of mine and has two young children." Mark Higbie likes thinking of those kids playing on the cast iron dog, like he did.

"To see people appreciate the house — even if it's in bits — that's the best solution."

And that is done in conjunction with his full-time occupation as an art consultant and advisory service for private and corporate collectors.

The art adviser/consultant field is fairly new and Axsom couldn't be happier to be in on the ground level of this new ser-

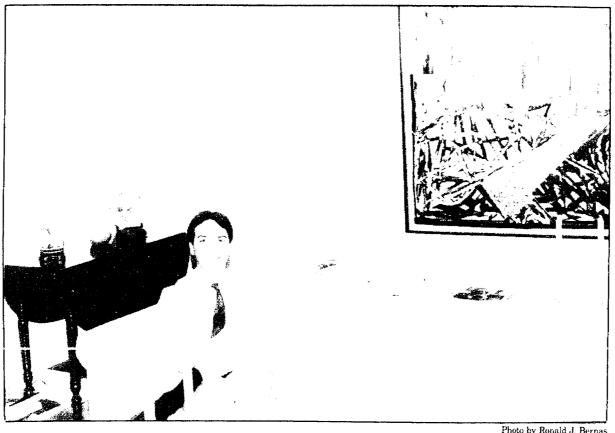

"An adviser is different from an art dealer," he said, "because a dealer has stock he sells. An adviser tells you how to acquire art, where to acquire it, or he can acquire it for you, at the best price.

"I can't think of anything better for me than working with art," he added. "It's very relaxing and rewarding work.'

The fun for Axsom comes in "pursuing the new," in the art world. "That is always fun." One of the most rewarding aspects of his role as adviser is his work with corporations as an acquirer of fine contemporary art. Corporate collectors are almost as new as art advisers and are extremely important in preserving our culture, Axsom says.

"It's very important that corporations do this," he said. "Big corporations have become one of Corporations, especially the very large ones, see many reasons for collecting modern art, he said. They see it as an investment, as good public relations efforts, as advertising (when certain pieces tour with a show) environment meant to stimulate the employees.

"I can't overstate how important the corporate collections are," he said. "Relatively speaking, contemporary art is far more expensive and corporations have the money where, many times, museums do not," he said. "Art humanizes an environment, the employees. It brings art to people who, many times, would not have the access to it.'

Good collections by major corporations will help educate and expose people to culture. He calls the education of people about art "a moral responsibility" that should be shared by all corporations, schools, museums and colleges. "It's in danger of being lost," he said.

As a major promoter and curator of modern art, he tells what he sees in modern pieces of work, which many people criticize for being so avant garde.

"Modern art is an authentic reflection of the period," he said. "It celebrates and criticizes contemporary American life."

There is still an element of distance as a whole between art and society, but with corporate collections and new college requirements (such as requiring art or humanities courses), the gap is slowly closing.

Some advice for potential collectors is to collect pieces of art you enjoy and to aspire to collect what is considered to be the very best. Watch out for print frauds, he adds. As the demand for art prints grows, so does the market for frauds.

"Most people don't collect for investment," he said. "But that incentive is always there."

If a collection is pursued with thoughtfulness, diligence and an eve for what is good, Axsom says, "the results are well worth

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING ON INCREASING PROPERTY TAXES

The Village Council of the Village of Grosse Pointe Shores will hold a public hearing at 8:30 A.M. on Tuesday, May 24, 1988 in the Council Chambers of the Village Hall, 795 Lake Shore Road, Grosse Pointe Shores, to receive comments and discuss a proposed additional 1988 Village operating millage rate.

In 1987 the Village levied 15.22 mills ($15.22 per $1,000 State Equalized Valuation) for Village operating purposes. Because of an estimated increase in State Equalized Valuation of existing property within the Village, State Law, Act 5 of 1982, provides that the base tax rate for 1988 Village operating taxes be reduced to 13.83 mills ($13.83 per $1,000 SEV). This is 1.39 mills ($1.39 per $1,000 SEV) lower than the 1987 operating rate.

In order to fund the Village's proposed 1988/89 budget and maintain essentia. services, and to make necessary repairs to its infrastructure system, roads and recreational facilities, the Village finds it necessary to increase its operating levy for fiscal year 1988/89 by 1.93 mills ($1.93 per $1,000 SEV) above the 1988 base tax rate (13.83). This will provide an estimated 13.96% increase in Village operating tax revenues and would result in a 1988 operating tax rate of 15.76 mills ($15.76 per $1,000 SEV). Under its Charter and State law, the Village has complete authority to establish the number of mills to be levied within its fully authorized millage rate.

Student Spotlight

Larry Marantette

Each week in this column, we will focus on the work of a student. It can be a poem, a drawing, a short story, a picture of a scientific experiment or a woodworking project, a book review.

Larry Marantette, a thirdgrader at St. Paul's School, wrote a story for Creative Writing about learning to skate. His parents are Lawrence and Carol Marantette of Grosse Pointe Park.

Rollerskating

I learned to rollerskate by watching other people go by. It looked like fun. I asked my mom to get me rollerskates. One day my mom bought me rollerskates. She tied them up and I got up and fell. I got up and went rolling with my feet on the ground.

My mom said, "Take little steps," and I was off! I would teach someone else by saying to put your weight straight down and take little steps. I would hold their hand. Then I would let go slowly so he could skate by himself.

Orzechowski Shaughan

Shaughan Orzechowski, 10, is a fifth-grader at Maire Elementary School. She's the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Orzechowski, of Grosse Pointe.

Sally's Birthday

About two weeks ago, it was my birthday, Jenny Williams. I invited Susan Warly, Stacey Mantha, Mary and Mary Sue Lenski (twins) and Sally Martin. Sally's my best friend, and also, the richest, smartest, prettiest, most popular girl in my sixthgrade class, but she's also kind and nice.

Anyway, I got a colorful shirt (from Susan), a coupon that says I can get my ears pierced for only $1 (from Stacey), dog and cat stuffed animals (from the twins), and a new 10-speed bike! (from Sally.)

I kept thanking her over and over again, and she kept saying, "No problem."

Now, two weeks later, Sally invited me to her party. I couldn't figure out what to give her. I keep thinking, "Get her something good, expensive." But what can I give her that she doesn't have? She's got two hamsters, two dogs, two birds, 20 fish, five bikes, a water bed and her own pool.

So I asked her in school the next day. She said, "Anything!" "Uh oh," I thought. "This is harder than I thought.' That night I asked my mother about it. She said if Sally really liked me, she would like anything I bought for her.

So. I bought her seeds. Vegetable, fruit and flower seeds. Sometimes she says she wishes she had a garden.

Now three weeks after my birthday, I'm standing on Sally's front steps, present in my hand. I rang the bell. When they answered, Sally said, "Hi, Jenny!

You're the first one here!" So Sally and I played till everyone arrived. When it was time to open presents she said. "I want to open Jenny's first!"

I turned bright red as she opened the present. Everyone giggled when they saw the seeds, but Sally stared at them. "Thank you," she whispered.

The rest of the party went fine and Sally asked me to help her plant the garden. We're truly best friends.

Cleaning up

Grosse Pointe Historical Society board members and friends, below, recently spent a morning at the Provencal-Weir House doing exterior spring clean-up chores. Board member Pat Martin, right, pulls weeds in the garden. The Provencal-Weir House, built around 1819, was moved to its present site in 1899 and was purchased by the group last year. The society hopes to use the house as its headquarters in the future. It's believed to be one of the oldest homes in Grosse Pointe.

Bids accepted; work to begin at Pier Park

By Ronald J. Bernas Staff Writer

The Farms council awarded the bids for the construction and improvement work at Pier Park May 2.

The process had taken longer than expected because the original bids had to be thrown out due to some discrepencies and because the amount bid was well over the $100,000 limit for the construction.

The bids for the work finally came in below budget, at $98,617, and work will begin as soon as possible, Ralph Mc-Elvenney, president of the Farms Foundation, said.

"We're hoping to get the spade in the soil right away, and we hope to get the work done by the Fourth of July," he said.

The following work will be done:

· Wrought iron fencing at or near the current chain link fence "to replace that old unattractive one," McElvenney said. The old fence will be sold to save some money, he added.

Depending on how the work goes, berms may be constructed to hide the access road into the park, but only if there is enough money, McElvenney said.

Plans for the improvements have been under way since late last year, McElvenney said, and he said he is happy to see the months of work and negotiations finally come to fruition.

Homes needed for musical visitors

Homes are needed to accommodate 75 young musicians from Belgium (50 boys and 25 girls; ages 12-18) during their stay in the Detroit metropolitan area.

Tentative arrangements are planned for the chorale group to be in the Detroit area for a period of three or four days, either near the end of July or beginning of August.

In addition to housing, the children would need to be transported to performance sites (one of which is Madonna College, Livonia.)

If your family is willing and available to share such accommodations, contact Fran Marable at 776-8078 or 776-8500.

U.S. Senate chaplain speaks at prayer breakfast

By Margie Reins Smith

The Rev. Dr. Richard C. Halverson, chaplain of the U.S. Senate, made an empassioned plea for public school prayer at the Mayor's Prayer Breakfast May 5 at the Grosse Pointe Yacht Club.

"Never in our history have we had more need for the people of God to pray," he said.

May 5 was National Day of Prayer. For the second year in a row, mayors of the five Grosse Pointes and Harper Woods have marked the day with a Mayors' Prayer Breakfast. Nearly 500 people attended the 7:45 a.m. event. The Christ Church Bovs' choir entertained.

"Secularization is pushing God out of all that is public," Halverson said. Many believe that greed is necessary for capitalism and that greed is good, he said. "Several years ago, in a commencement address at the University of California at Berkeley, Ivan Boesky declared that greed

Gerald N. Lanier, professor of Forest and Shade Tree Entomology at the State University of New York, said he favors the Grosse Pointe Shade Tree Council's recommendation for hiring a forester to be shared by the five Grosse Pointes.

He said, "The benefits (for the Park) are long term. Philosophically, I favor that approach.

"For the short term, however, for one or two years, the advantages (for Grosse Pointe Park) are not clear. Improvements are farther down the line."

Nancy Pilorget, chairman of the Park's Beautification Commission, did not recommend the Park's endorsement of the shared forester. She cited three reasons for the commission's lack of support:

• The proposal is not specific

• The proposal requires sacri-the whole. · No money has been budg-

The council expressed interest in keeping its options open for joining with the other Grosse Pointes and sharing a community forester in the future.

The council was, however, reluctant to approve the concept

Lanier has been a consultant to Grosse Pointe Park since 1986, and has directed its program to stop the spread of Dutch elm disease. The program has been successful, he said. The city removed 157 diseased trees in 1985; 110 in 1986; 59 in 1987. He said he expects the city will remove about 40 trees this year.

At Monday's meeting, Lanier said he intended to continue working on the Dutch elm disease management plan through October 1988, but recommended a full-time forester in the future. because a professional forester could devote more time to the problem.

By Margie Reins Smith Staff Writer

The Park council approved a $5.6 million budget Monday

Last year's millage rate was 17.38 mills or $17.38 per $1,000 of the SEV for city operating and debt service purposes.

On May 23, the council will vote to levy a total of 17.15 mills. This will represent a .23mill decrease in the rate from last year. The overall effect, however, will be a 6.9 percent increase in total property tax revenues, according to Comptroller Dale Krajniak. These would be generated from increased assessed values of residential property and from new construction.

"For example, a house assessed last year at $45,000, or 50 tions

Local retailers have mixed feelings about chain stores

By Peter A. Salinas Staff Writer

It's a two-way street — both sides lined with businesses.

The two-way street also refers to retailers and landlords. Landlords have a business decision to make when it comes to a national retailer wanting to move into an area, and independent retailers must decide if they can afford to pay the rent increases that often accompany competition from national chains.

Jim Bologna, owner of Magnetic Sights and Sounds, which was located in the Village shopping district since 1980, recently moved his business. A proposed 88 percent increase in his rent prompted a move into 131 Kercheval Center, a new building on the Hill in the Farms.

Bologna said that while rent will be about the same in the ouilding in which he is part owner, the move was predicated on economics.

He has set up a temporary location next door to where the business will be located.

Part of the reason rents have increased so much in the Village recently, and in general over the last 10 years, according to local business people, is that the business district is strong and healthy. Another part of the reason for rent hikes is that national chains, willing to renovate older buildings at their own cost, can and will pay more than some small retailers can afford. But while rents have climbed over the last decade, they are not as high as in some shopping

In the last two or three years, however, the Village has seen a large influx of national retail stores move in. "There's room for both the national and independent retailers," said Peter Bologna, one of the owners of 131 Kercheval Center, "-national, regional and local. I think the mistake is to try and rent to just one or just the other."

Bologna said there was a big push to get a national retailer into the huge new building, next to Cottage Hospital on the Hill's north end.

"We looked for national clients," he said. "We felt they would have the advertising budgets and would help the entire Hill. They would advertise their location and that would speak to the area. I still believe in that concept, but the perception was that the area would not support the kind of traffic large chains require.

On the other hand, Mark Schoenheider, store manager for the newest Brooks Brothers store, said it is doing very well.

"We are very pleased," Schoenheider said. "It is a light market right now, and we are still doing well. We have no regrets about moving here at all.

"Our Christmas sales were very strong. We beat all sorts of figures, and the community has welcomed us with open arms."

In talking with a number of independent store owners from the Village, one concept kept coming up - having a good mix of independent and national or regional retailers.

Gary Aita, owner of a Curtis Mathes franchise in the village since 1984, said he is not distressed by having national chain stores move into the Village.

"They bring in business and they nationally advertise," he said. "They draw people from all over. A good mix of stores would the Village Association, said that the interest of national chain stores in the Village points to the health and quality of the

She noted that chain stores will advertise and draw people to an area that might not otherwise come. She said that while someone may not have heard of a small independent store, they tional chains. "Rents have been on an up-years," Harris said. Harris said any landlord would have to think long and hard about refusing an offer from a national retailer to renovate a building at no cost to them, and then be willing to pay higher rents. 'If you were a businessman, would you turn it down?" she asked.

Harris said that the anchor store for the Village, Jacobson's, has been "incredibly supportive of the community" over the years. She said the store is always willing to help the community in a fundraising effort or some other project.

"Some national chains are going to get involved in the community and some aren't," she said. "You can't generalize."

Robert Edgar, one of two owners of the Punch and Judy Building, as well as the Grosse Pointe News and several smaller stores on the Hill, said that the Hill and the Village have always been different in the type of businesses that have located

"The Hill has a mix of servicerelated business, like doctors' offices, a newspaper, two banks, real estate and stock brokers, he said.

Edgar said the American retail landscape is changing, and the move is toward more national and multi-store chains on Main Street. He said that in most urban areas, the land necessary to build large malls is gone, and that there is a perception by some that malls are not safe.

"People are comfortable shopping at home," he said. "The na-

Local retailers have mixed feelings about national chain stores moving into the village. In the last several years, about eight national stores have moved into the area.

tional chains recognize this, and are locating smaller square foot stores in small communities."

Edgar said he feels this will force the small retailer to work harder to provide quality service at a reasonable price.

"There will be a pressure for the smaller retailer to improve his store, and compete on their level," he said.

He added that both national chains and local retailers face competition from another area home shopping and mail order catalogs.

"There were some companies that were catalog stores to begin with that have now branched out into retail outlets," Edgar said, "and some stores which have branched out into the mail order business.'

Edgar said that smaller retailers will have more pressure to make smarter wholesale purchases, hire trained sales people and tighten up their bookkeep-"Years ago the local stores had credit they provided themselves," he said, "now they all take Visa and MasterCard.'

Jim Bologna said smaller retailers still have an advantage in providing service.

'Sure a chain store may be able to get an out-of-stock item to the customer in a couple of days from another store," he said, "but there have been days when a customer wanted a specific television, and I got into my car and found him one, and had it in his house that afternoon. National chains can't do that."

Gwen Samuel, owner of the Grosse Pointe Book Village, prides her store on. Last year, Waldenbooks, a national chain, moved just across the street from her locally owned store.

"We know our merchandise," said Samuel, who added that she has a sales staff well-versed in the various literary genres. "A customer comes in and says that they want a good book, and we know what the bestsellers are. We have a person working here who is an authority on mysteries. If they want a specific cookbook, we just don't point them to the section, we take them into the area, and help them find what it is they are looking for."

Samuel said she felt that many of the locally owned businesses may fail in the future, but through no fault of their own. She said that while a Waldenbooks or other chain is able to afford to take a loss for three years, she couldn't survive doing

"I'm making a living here," she said. "If their rent is higher than ours and the store loses money for a while, they can handle that. I can't.'

Samuel adds that the local retailer, who is usually a member of the community, takes more of an interest. She noted that Jacobson's has always been willing to be a part of the community, join the business association and has always consid-

Service is something that ered itself part of the community.

> Roma Hess, owner of the TCBY in the Woods who will soon open up a second store at the site where the Campus Men's Shop was located, said she is very excited about moving into the Village.

> "I feel the Village is a good shopping area with constant traffic," she said. "The shop is very neighborhood-oriented and we already get a lot of our customers from that side of town at our Woods shop. There are a lot of rooftops over there.'

She said that while her rent is high, they made the decision to go ahead with the store.

"Anyone would like to have low rents," she said. "We feel a new business like TCBY will give the Village a shot in the arm. The Grosse Pointes are traditionally so conservative, but there are a lot of young people out there, and I think people are ready to try something new on the market.'

Jim Bologna said he feels that with a proper mix, both the small retailer and national chain stores can survive, but adds that he feels there is still an important difference between the two.

"The larger chains with all their marketing and research are saying, 'we know what you want,' while the little guy is saying 'what do you want?'

CPAs take a light-hearted look at unusual tax deductions

The Michigan Association of lowed a deduction for the value CPA's offers the following account of some of the bizarre, surprising and just plain silly but true tax deductions you may have missed.

Casualty losses or "I should have been more careful"

A woman placed her diamond ring in a water glass of ammonia to clean the stone. Her husband, who did not realize the ring was in the glass, emptied the glass into the garbage disposal and activated it. They were allowed to take a partial deduction for the destruction of the

That may never read the bottle's instructions which warned not to apply the solution to those areas you did not want to kill. According to a tax court ruling, he was entitled to a casualty-loss deduction.

And then there was the car the ice. The car's owner was alof the car.

Lucky for these taxpayers; they may have been negligent but, for income tax purposes, "casualty" refers to an unexpected, sudden, and unusual turn of events ending in disaster. (Taxpayers encouraged by these tales should note that, in general, casualty losses are allowed only the extent that they exceed 10 percent of an individual's adjusted gross income.)

Business deductions or "Now I think I've heard everything" were keeping the vacht in anticipation of using it for "that use when it should be permitted." The outcome? The cemetery reconsidered and decided to drop the case and pay the additional taxes due.

Medical deductions or cures for the common tax bill

A patient who was suffering from a coronary disease was advised by a physician to take two ounces of whiskey twice a day for relief of angina pain. The cost of the prescribed amount of whiskey was a deductible medical expense.

A child who had a severe malocclusion was treated by an orthodontist who recommended that the child take clarinet lessons to help his condition. His father deducted the cost of the clarinet and the lessons. The IRS balked. A revenue ruling determined that yes, the cost were deductible medical expenses. Wouldn't a tax deduction make the sound of your children's music sweeter?

A businessman who was paralyzed from the waist down and had suffered a heart attack installed a mobile telephone in his car so he could contact a doctor in case of another heart attack. The tax court ruled he could not take a medical tax deduction, sional before filing,

The reason? Because the man had the phone number listed in the public telephone directory, the tax court felt he had other non-medical reasons for having this phone installed. Something as simple as an unlisted number may have meant a tax deduction for this taxpayer.

Grosse Pointe Academy's popular fundraiser is Saturday

Action Auction wonders . . . from A to Z

By Peggy O'Connor Andrzejczyk Assistant Editor/Feature Editor

After months of planning, coordinating, acquiring, organizing, cataloging, photographing and — whew! —more organizing, Grosse Pointe Academy students, faculty, volunteers and parents are just about set for this Saturday's Action Auction '88.

It's the 21st annual auction and, like every auction before it, this year's edition is bigger, better and more fun than ever before, thanks to the volunteers who put it together and the generous folks who donated items for bid.

Auction organizers have put together a full-color, keepsake program book which lists the more than 600 items for bid, descriptions of each, values and donor names. And, while lots of folks took the opportunity to get a peek at some of the items at Wednesday night's Action Auction Preview Party, here's a primer of sorts for those who will be at the real thing May 14:

... is for automobile. Action Auction ≥'88 automobiles. They are red and racy.

They are a 1988 Cadillac Allante' and a 1965 vintage Mustang convertible. And a 1936 Jaguar replica. As the Academy kids would say: "Awesome!"

... is for Baccarat. And Baccarat means fine crystal. And in this case, B is for beautiful. High bidders will bring home a set of eight water goblets, eight wine glasses and a decanter.

. . is for carousel, the kind kids love to ride. C is for just a part of a carousel, a lovely, handpainted, full-sized carousel horse. The carousel horse is just for decoration, so in this case, C is for

"cute."

Turnbull says.

. is for "doing Denver." As in a Denver Bronco football weekend for four. Dining, dancing and Denver Bronco football makes a dynamite dream trip for football die-hards. Doesn't it?

"Why do I do this?" repeats Action Auction co-chairman Patty Turnbull. "The children. That's what it's all about. My kids and the other kids at the Academy. We do it for the kids."

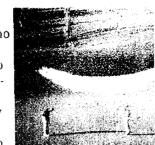

, is for evenings on the town. These include dinner prepared by Chef Keith Famie and Chef Ed Janos, dinner at DaEdoardo, a Mexican fiesta, a formal dinner by Chef Gabriel, an evening cruise on "The Scarlet Cloud" and "The Sunset", a rathskeller party, a night at the Strohaus. Then there's a cruise down the river, a Rivertown pub crawl, dinner for six by the Park Place Cafe, or an evening at the Van Dyke Place.

Actually, "E" is for eating.

.. is for tranchise. One of the auction's most talked about, writtenabout and drooled-over items is a Speedy Printing franchise in Southern California. Minimum bid on this fabulous franchise is $20,000. There's a seminar on owning a Speedy Printing franchise available to those interested in snapping up this oppor-

F is for a fund-filled, franchise in Fresno or some other California hot spot. In this case, "F" is for fortunate.

... is for golf. Grosse Pointers who know their golf (finding one who doesn't might be easier), know that two rounds of golf at any of the four PGA National Championship courses in Palm Beach, Fla., is worth its weight in golf balls. Gold golf balls. And Palm Beach alone isn't anything to sneeze at, either.

horse. A horse is a horse, of course, unless she's a three-year-old purebred Arabian mare called "Shalete." The mare is broken and can be used for either pleasure riding or showing. She's no Mr. Ed, but if Shalete could talk she'd probably say "Bid on me."

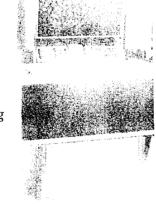

.. is for internship. For three weeks, a young person over 16 can participate in a congressional internship with U.S. Congressman Dennis Hertel of Michigan. All costs are the responsibility of the intern, but the value of the experience speaks for itself. I is for invaluable.

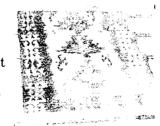

"The Academy's auction is special because of the total dedication of the parents, staff and volunteers. The staff and parents are equally dedicated to educating the children. And that makes it easy for us to work on this auction,"

. . is for juke box. Just bid on this puppy, take it home, punch up your favorite songs and jitterbug with your juicy little Ju-jubee.

. is for Kilim. Kilims are flat weaving that can be viewed from either side. Keyed up over having a Kilim of your very own?

The Kilim up for bid is a hand-woven, Turkish model done in Rectilinier Tribal design, which includes an ivory field with soft reds and blues.

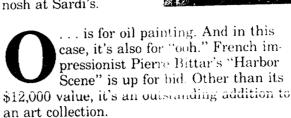

... is for lobster. Larry the Lobster won't like this much, but the high bidder will. Like a lakeside lobster dinner some lazy summer evening? Lap it up!

Model A. M is also for magnificent morning drives down Morningside or Mapleton in a 1931 Ford Model A Tudor sedan.

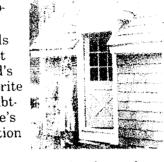

The car has been professionally restored and has been a trophy winner in three classic auto shows. Most importantly, it's painted a dark Academy blue.

New York, New York. Nothing to do for a weekend? How about a shopping trip to the Big Apple? Not to mention a noon nosh at Sardi's.

. . is for playhouse. Auction cochairman Patty Turnbull calls the 8-foot by 10-foot shake shingle child's playhouse her favorite item. It will undoubtedly be most people's favorite, come auction night.

The playhouse looks a lot like the real thing: built-in counters and shelves, a French country kitchen with a painted floor and fireplace. It's fully decorated and ready for some serious playing.

"I love the playhouse because the auction is for children and this one item, more than anything, will make some child very happy. The lucky kid," Turnbull says with a chuckle.

. is for QEII, as in the luxury ocean liner.

As in quenching your quest for quite a cruise . . . to London. To see the Queen, maybe?

Rolla-Hockey. Academy students, from left, Tim French and Brad Marx get in some practice on the Rolla-Hockey game, which needs no electricity, other than that generated by excited gamesters.

Section B

. . is for Space Camp. Even "Scotty" would want to take advantage of this fiveday mission to explore space, seek out shuttle information and go where many kids have gone before: the Space Camp in Huntsville, Ala. High bidder gets beamed up, too.

. is for TV. TV or not TV, that is the question. Bid on this 31-incher and find out.

. . is for unusual. Which describes a number of items donated to the Action Auction to benefit the Grosse Pointe Academy. Unusual as in: A Grosse Pointe Academy "Sock Hop - A Fif-

"Why should people come to the auction? It's a chance to help the Academy, which means so much to everyone in the community. And it's a night of honest-to-goodness fun," Turnbull says.

Ford House announces schedule

A fascinating show of "Classic Steins: The Stroh Brewery Company Collection," will open to the public on May 25 and run through July 10 at the Edsel & Eleanor Ford House in Grosse Pointe Shores.

Did you know that the venerable beer stein was created in response to the bubonic plague that swept through Europe in the mid 1300s, killing more than 25 million people.

Indeed, the hinged lid that distinguishes the stein from the beer mug was conceived as a sanitary measure to keep foreign substances, especially invading hoards of flies, from contaminating the brew. The "covered container" law was only one of a series of sanitary regulations passed in Germany after the plague. Another stipulated that while brewers in other parts of Europe were still using rotten bread, cabbages, eggs and anything else at hand.

The exhibit will showcase 60 examples of classic steins of German origin from the 16th to the 19th centuries. The collection includes steins made of stoneware, faience, porcelain, glass, wood, silver and ivory from different areas such as Thuringen, Nuremberg and Creussen pieces of the late 17th century in the exhibit are considered some of the finest examples of European sto neware in America. Of particular interest is a 1688 tankard showing the 12 apostles flanked by unicorns.

The exhibits may be viewed Wednesday through Sunday beer could be brewed only from from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Guided hops, cereals, yeast, and water, tours are available at 11:30 a.m. and 12:30 p.m. on the same days. The Pastor's Corner

The common good

By The Rev. Ronald Scheible St. Clare of Montefalco Church

As I read these words recently, I began wondering what our world would be like if we took them seriously. In each of us, there is the tendency to look out for ourself too much; that's selfishness. That tendency toward selfishness has brought, at least, regret and at most, untold misery into the lives of each of us and others around us.

One part of us feels that happiness and contentment and fulfillment lie in satisfying our own desires. Another part of us does want to rise above ourselves and to consider the needs of others. But, unfortunately, too many times we allow the selfish side of us to prevail.

Look at personal loneliness, weakened or broken families, unsafe neighborhoods, struggling cities and international strife in our world today. What can begin to bring us out of all of this? I think it would be good for us to dream what our personal lives, families, neighborhoods, cities, countries - our whole world - could be if every one of us would consider more seriously the common good, the needs of others as well as our own needs.

Perhaps, what we're really waiting for is that the other person, the other group, the other nation start first. If that's what we're waiting for, maybe no one will ever start and we and our world will be no better and perhaps worse, in future years. It's a lot easier to be concerned with only our own little world of self, but the results are less satisfying than if we include the needs and interests of others in our plans and actions.

Why then do we so often approach relationships selfishly and antagonistically, e.g., between individuals, between labor and management, between races, between nations? Could it be that we are so intent on safeguarding our own advantage or interests that we lose sight of the common good in all of us?

In selfishness, no one wins — in the long run. In concern for the common good, we may lose a little - in the short run. But how much we could all gain both in the short and

The quotation with which I began was written by St. Augustine about the year 397. The next sentence reads, "The degree to which you are concerned for the interests of the community rather than for your own is the criterion by which you can judge how much progress you have made."

Memorial book reviews

Meeky Connolly will review Harold Kushner's "When Bad Things Happen to Good People," for the Book Review Group of Grosse Pointe Memorial Church on Tuesday, May 17, at 1 p.m. in the church lounge. She will be introduced by group chairman Evelyn Brammer after Dorothea Bush has led devotions.

Guests are invited. Reservations for the lunch preceding the program should be made in the church office, 882-5330.

Connolly, a long-time Pointe resident, is a consultant for infants and young children with special needs. She holds bachelor's and master's degrees from Wayne State University and taught in the Detroit public schools and at Merrill-Palmer Institute.

The author of several inspirational books, Harold Kushner is rabbi of Temple Israel in Natick, Mass. His book, "When Bad Things Happen to Good People,' is a special book for these times. Norman Vincent Peale wrote, "This is a book all humanity needs. It will help one understand the painful vicissitudes of this life and stand up to them creatively."

Dance on the river

Friends of Most Holy Trinity Church will "Dance On The River" with the Guy Lombardo Royal Canadian Orchestra at 8 p.m. May 17 at the Roostertail Club, 100 Marquette at East Jefferson.

The event will celebrate the progress made toward the "Continuing The Legacy" restoration campaign. The 154-year-old church, located in the Corktown area of Detroit, was renovated last year at a cost of $600,000.

"We collected $300,000 and borrowed $300,000" said the Rev. Jay Samonie, Pastor. "Now we are raising monies to retire the debt. We currently have $90,000 toward our goal.'

Dance ticket donations are $30 per person or $50 per couple and may be purchased in advance by calling 965-6292.

CROP Walk '88

The eighth CROP Walk for the Hungry was another success for the Grosse Pointe/Harper Woods churches and schools. This year, the walk began and ended at St. Paul Lutheran Church in the Farms (above). Kickoff time was 2 p.m. Sunday, April 23. John Sieber of University Liggett School walked/ran the 10 kilometer route in 41:44. He was followed one second later by Matt Beal and Dan Strader of Grosse Pointe North High. Jerry Fairbanks of Grosse Pointe Farms was the first adult back.

This year's CROP Walk goal was $30,000; pledges reached $32,000. Of that, 75 percent will be used by Church World Services for hunger programs throughout the world; 25 percent will be returned to the local area. Calvary Senior Center. Crossroads East, People in Faith United and Coalition on Temporary Shelter will share equally 20 percent of the funds returned locally. Five percent will be evenly divided between the Cass Corridor Meals for Shut-Ins, sponsored by the Detroit Christian Communication Council and the Food Depots, sponsored by the Archdiocese of Detroit.

Prescriptions can cure or kill

Special Writer

Drugs can cure but drugs can also kill ... and we're not talking about illegal drugs. Prescription drugs can do much to cure illnesses but must be taken properly or they can lose their effectiveness - or even be a danger.

For example, a patient taking anti-convulsants who consumes alcohol lessens the ability of the drug to stop convulsions. Those on anti-coagulants who drink can increase the ability of these drugs to stop blood clotting. Anti-depressants mixed with alcohol can cause an additional reduction in one's nervous system functions.

A patient needs to know about the timing of dosages. "One tablet three times a day" is not enough. Does that mean morning, noon and night or some other time? Does "one tablet every six hours" mean you have to set the alarm and get up during the night to keep on schedule? Do you take medicines before meals or after eating? If it is before meals, how long before? Should you take medicine on an empty or full stomach? Should you avoid fruit juices? Many drugs interact with fruit juices.

When asking your doctor these questions, also find out what the their physicians. If you are tak-what ails you or is its purpose to ease pain or lower fever? Some drugs make you drowsy or interfere with your ability to drive.

Ask about other side effects. Almost all drugs have some. Usually the side effects are mild: a minor rash or slight headache. Sometimes, though, they are extreme, such as diarrhea, weakness, interference with sight or hearing. If you have a problem like this, call the doctor immediately.

Varying reactions to drugs makes a good argument against using a drug prescribed for someone else. The argument that they had the same symptoms as you and the drug worked for them is a bad one. A drug that works for one will not necessarily be effective for another.

This precaution is especially true for older patients because as they get older, they eliminate drugs from their bodies less effectively. Drugs accumulate in larger quantities and remain much longer than in younger patients. Also, older people are more sensitive to certain drugs. All medication should be taken on an individual basis.

Patients should be honest with medicine will do. Is it a cure for ing an over-the-counter drug, let the doctor know because it may be imcompatible with the prescription the doctor has given. A patient should give clear and concise reports on symptoms.

Some people play 20 questions with their doctors, answering questions but never volunteering information. Others hold back because they are not comfortable discussing certain problems. Doctors can help, but only if you provide the information they need to treat you.

If you are reluctant to ask the doctor a drug-related question, you have another option: ask your pharmacist. Good pharmacists keep medical profiles on their customers. NBD's new Bi-Weekly Mortgage · Cuts 9 years off a 30-year loan.

• Reduces interest costs 35%*

·Builds equity almost twice as fast.

What does Bi-Weekly mean, exactly? And how does this new mortgage work? Bi-Weekly simply means you make your house payment every other week. Instead of writing out one large check once a month, you pay half every two weeks. So, rather than making 12 big monthly payments a year, you make 26 small ones every two weeks. The two extra payments make the difference, cutting about 9 years off the life of your mortgage.

The last 9 years are free? Right. This mortgage gives you the low payments of a 30-year mortgage, and is fully paid off in just 21 years. In that sense, NBD's new Bi-Weekly combines the best features of 15- and 30-year fixed rate mortgages. Because NBD requires just 10% down, the Bi-Weekly Mortgage is perfect for first-time homeowners.

Suppose I sell my home 7 years from now...will I have more equity in it? Yes. With the NBD Bi-Weekly Mortgage, you build equity in your home almost twice as fast as a conventional 30-year mortgage. So when you sell your home...or if you want to use the equity in it for any purpose...the equity will be nearly double what it would have been otherwise.

And if I keep my home for the full 21 years...how much will I save? About 35%. For many home buyers in this area, that could mean sixty to seventy-five thousand dollars. To find out how much you would save, check the table below.

NBD's new Bi-Weekly Mortgage sounds interesting. But I need more details. Just call or visit one of the NBD Mortgage Company offices listed below. Our home mortgage specialists will get you the information to get started right away.

The misunderstood dandelion — friend or foe?

By Ellen Probert Special Writer

Now that the dandelion season is in full bloom perhaps we should attempt to reconcile two conflicting points of view about this prolific but beautiful weed.

There are those who consider the dandelion an ornament to the garden and respect it for the major place it has in pharmacy; and then there are the lawn experts who try untiringly to eliminate it. Sometimes this leads lawn experts to do inadvertant good deeds, such as the local resident who has taken to cutting his next-door neighbor's grass, not from friendliness, but to prevent any dandelions from crossing the driveway and infesting his lawn.

But the dandelion is not all bad. Its flowers are beautiful and its roots have value. More than a 100,000 pounds of dandelion roots are imported by the United States each year. They are used in the manufacture of medicines, particularly in remedies for liver diseases. Dandelions have a high vitamin value and both the flow-ioned beverage made annually by people all over the country.

Dandelion is only one of many names for this plant. It is also called Blow Ball, Lion's Tooth, Peasant's Cloak, Irish Daisy, Priest's Crown, Yellow Gowan and Monk's head. Dandelion refers to the lion's tooth name, and to the toothed edges of the leaves. If you use some imagination, they do perhaps resemble the fangs of this noble member of the cat family.

The botanical name is Taraxacum officianale and is of Persian origin. The word officianale refers to the medicinal properties of the plant.

In Victorian times a lady was pleased to receive a nosegay of dandelions from her beau, because, in the language of flowers this meant, "I am faithful to you," and the flower was the symbol of love and time.

Children love dandelions and many of us remember slitting the stems and putting them in water and watching the stems curl up into tight spirals, or with ers and the leaves are edible. a big needle and a length of car-

> All over Grosse Pointe we see the lovely, tulip-like flowers of the magnolia trees looking like giant bouquets and strewing pink and white petals on the grass when the wind blows. The magnolia was named for French horticulturalist, Dr. Pierre Magnol, who lived from 1638 to 1715. He was director of the botanical gardens at Montpellier, France, and his ideas were the basis of Linnaues' methods of nomenclature of plants. Before being christened magnolias, they were called Laurel-tulip trees, and they are native to the United States and to the Far East. The American ones have been grown in European gardens since the early 18th century, but the Oriental ones were found there much earlier. In China, incidentally, they were not prized for their flowers but for the supposed aphrodisiac quality of their powdered bark.

Magnolias have a wonderful fragrance but not many people are aware that the bark and the powdered wood are also used in laundered cotton dress on the attraction for visitors. Many the manufacture of perfumes line in her back yard, only to and have aromatic scents of their own.

It is amazing what city birds find to incorporate their nestbuilding. The traditional twigs and rootlets, mosses and feathers, are being supplemented with a surprising number of modern odds and ends, and a little birdwatching in your own neighborhood might reveal just how imaginative your own local birds really are.

Nests have been reported decorated with torn-up bus tickets, or sided with empty cigarette packages. One bird nesting near the refreshment stand in a park utilized discarded drinking straws. Bits of colored varn or ribbon are often used, and one starling added a one dollar bill creating financial as well as decorative security. Small nails, carried from a building project to a birdhouse, made a steel nest for a house wren, while a bird choosing a nearby tree built a nest entirely of insulating material.

One woman hung a freshly

There is always a flower show at Belle Isle. Right now the annual Mother's Day show, which will be a must-see all this month, is a colorful and fragrant shades of geraniums, giant pink, blue and white hydrangeas, snapdragons and other plants comprise the exhibit at the Anna Scripps Whitcomb Conservatory. This impressive building dates back to 1904 and over the years visitors from every state and many foreign countries have enjoyed the changing flower displays in the six major shows prosented here every year.

Curtain call

Recalling the first day you walked into high school, I imagine you were shy and reluctant to roam the halls. You were probably overwhelmed by the massive halls, the abundance of people, and by all means, intimidated by upperclassmen.

You thought you were a good enough athlete to play on the varsity, but like anything, you had to wait your turn. Now, your time has come. You have grown to maturity, played pranks on underclassmen and have thought about graduation and what follows. Your nerves are on end, your mind is concentrating on exams and your heart is beating faster than normal.

You try to concentrate on the 3-and-2 count or the last hurdle on the track, but it's difficult. But enjoy it. Soak it up. Love every minute of it because the day you don the cap and gown, the complexion changes faster than you realize.

Athletics have been a broadening experience for many people. Grosse Pointe students are very fortunate to have the diverse sports at their fingertips. They have taken advantage of expanding their horizons through athletics, and have expanded their athletics through academics. Dreams, lifetime memories and friendships have developed through mingling on baseball diamonds, football fields, tracks, courts and more. The rapport and relationships you have built are a gold mine that nobody can take away from you. It's like a diploma; once you've got it nobody can take

Sports taught me a great deal about life. It taught me the value of sportsmanship, friendship, the meaning of having teammates and gave me the strength to work with others. Teammates are friends and friends are teammates. Some teammates you confide in, others you work with only on the field. But, the camaraderie and experience carries over into "real-life situations." You'll be amazed, once you are able to test it, the way sports affects your life, or will affect it.

It's important to take notice of the opportunities you have been given. But, time is quickly evaporating and graduation day will mark commencement of your future, but it will also signify the conclusion of high school.

So why not enjoy it now. Remember, when rounding second, or getting ready to leap a hurdle, or hit a softball, it's your ast chance to stand in front of a high school audience. For some, the fortunes of collegiate sports await, but for most this is the last hurrah. This is it. It's the last time you'll touch the plate at North, or vault over the pole at South, or whirl a lacrosse stick at University Liggett School.

Four years ago you envied the upperclassmen and things they did. You mocked some of their moves and coined some of their terms. You ran hard like they did, you kicked the soccer ball as far as they did, but it didn't have the same flavor because you weren't a senior. For over a year now, you have been the elder statesmen. You have set some precedents but why not set more? Give yourself the pat on the back you deserve for completion of years of studying game plans, watching films, listening to coaches, eating re-heated dinners and sitting through cold temperatures and rain. South takes hardware in Fraser tourney

By Rob Fulton

Sports Editor In relatively easy fashion, discounting a slim 6-5 win over North, the South baseball team won the Fraser Invitational Baseball Tournament for the second straight year; and three of the last four.

It wasn't much of a tourney for the Blue Devils once they got past cross-town rival North. South, taking advantage of a miscue on a fly ball, tied the score at 3-3 in the sixth inning and needed the full 11 innings to narrowly defeat the Norsemen,

"We knew the North game was going to be tough," said South coach Dan Griesbaum. "I expected the Fraser game to be a bit tougher, but they got down early and it was tough for them to come back on us."

South went on to shell Fraser, 19-3 and Roseville, 13-2 to take the crown.

Russell Rice (2-4) went the distance for North and picked up the loss, but according to Griesbaum, Rice should have earned the victory.

"I felt very bad for Russell he said, "because he

Adam Franco, who pitched eight no-decision innings against North in the Fraser

baseball tourney, may get another starting call this weekend against the Norsemen

But, he didn't. With two outs and South's Mike Paull stranded at third base in the last of the sixth, Marty Van Almen's Texas leaguer fell between North's Marty Pochmara and Chuck Thomas; allowing the tying run to score.

"I heard a lot of 'I got it," said North coach Frank Sumbera, "but I never heard 'take it'. The ball should have been caught and we should have been out of it."

Instead, North picked up its fifth straight defeat and desperately needed a win.

"We lost five straight to that point and I don't think I've ever lost five straight in all my life," said a frustrated Sumbera. "But I was glad to see that the kids really bounced back well and hit the ball hard."

North picked up mercy rule wins against Roseville (11-0) and Fraser (15-3) to salvage some re-

Adam Franco, who pitched into the eighth for Griesbaum, was relieved by Rusty Knowles who earned the win. Before exiting, Franco gave up two runs and the Devils faced a two-run deficit in the bottom of that frame. But, another rally on two (two outs) forced the third extra inning.

With two down and North smelling victory for the second time in the game, Nick Saros took Rice's inside pitch downtown for a two-run homer tying the score at 5-5.

"It should have never come to that point," said Sumbera. "We had the winning run in scoring position in the ninth and we also threatened to score more in the eighth, but we just didn't.

"Against a team with their personnel, you can't afford to make mistakes," Sumbera

After two scoreless innings in the ninth and 10th, Knowles set the side down in order; giving the Devils some momentum.

'We knew we were fortunate to still be in the game, but we kept chipping away," said Griesbaum. "The kids got some new life and came through."

Jason Whelan's single brought home Van Almen, who singled to start the inning and was sacrificed to second, with the winning run. "I guess you could say they grabbed victory from the jaws of defeat, and we grabbed defeat from the jaws of victory," said Sumbera. "We were still smarting after that loss." For Griesbaum, it was a different smarting.

"It's always a big win when you beat North," he said. "We hit the ball well throughout the entire tournament. We had 38 hits over the three games and we got some consistent pitching that contributed heavily to our South's Marty Saad chipped in with three hits, including a triple. North's Dan Unger had two hits, Scott Schorer ripped a triple and Chuck Thomas and Pochmara each had hits.

North and South will face one another in a pre-district qualifying tournament on May 17 at North, but they will clash before that in a doubleheader May 14 at South starting at 11 a.m.

"You never know what can, or will happen," chuckled Gries-

Charting a course

Our miserable spring seems to have given way to more respectable weather for thinking about and working on our boats. Each year spring renews a promise to take a boating vacation somewhere on the lakes. To make that decision, the charts are dragged out of winter storage and inspected. This inspection may reveal that the charts are not current. Current charts are a must. The land doesn't move, but the various aids to navigation are constantly being improved, updated and changed; resulting in chart revisions.

Until very recently, there wasn't much choice about the purchase of charts. Only the National Ocean Service (NOS), a division of the National Ocean and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA), produced charts for the U.S. waters. The cost was subsidized by the government and they were inexpensive. The price has gone up considerably ($5.50 in 1986 to $12.25 in 1988) now that Congress demands 100 percent cost recovery. The new waterproof charts will be $13.25. Because of this jump in price, entrepreneurs find the chart market lucrative. Several companies now publish charts, but they are all virtually edited versions and reproductions of NOS charts. They come packaged differently and that may account for their appeal. Some are spiral bound, some are made of waterproof paper and some are

Douglas Sherigan, co-owner of the Jefferson Beach Marine Store, indicates that the Richardson Guide is the most popular alternative they carry to the NOS charts.

"The one that sells the best is the Lake Huron Richardson Guide," said Sherigan. "We just got the new 1988 edition in. These chart kits tell you everything you need to know, such as harbor facilities and have a loran overlay. They are easier to carry than the NOS charts because they come in a spiral book

Prices for the Richardson Guide range from $46 to almost

"We handle all the popular chart kits as well as the government charts," said Sherigan. "If we don't have it, we can get it within a very short time; for anywhere in the world you may be planning to go.'

The Lake Eric Richardson Guide covers our area of Lake St. Clair, as well as the Detroit River and the St. Clair River.

Another alternative to NOS charts is the Better Boating Association (BBA) Chart Kit. So far the BBA only produces a kit for Lake Michigan, but they offer kits for much of the East Coast, Carribean and Southern California. They are always improving their product and adding areas, and also offer other navigation accessories. Prices range from $59.95 to $99.95. These kits may have several photos and loran overlays as well.

Captain's Guide Chart Book's primary interest is the Great Lakes. The charts are not intended for navigation, though, being only eight and one-half inches, by six inches. There are currently books on Lake Michigan, Lake Huron and the North Channel. The guide does refer the user to the proper NOS

There are several other new entries in the chart market, but they do not merit discussion because they deal with the East and West Coast. These would be valuable if one contemplated a trip down the Intercoastal Waterway to Florida and beyond.

Guidebooks make interesting reading no matter what part of the world they talk about. They offer us the opportunity to

Next week I will cover various marine guidebooks and other useful publications. Just in case you are interested, U.S. Goverament charts from around the world are available and published by the Defense Mapping Agency.

Detroit Edison offers safe boating tips

let Detroit Edison navigate you

Accidents can happen both on land and in the water. For safety sake, Edison recommends taking a few precautions to help you and your mates avoid personal injury and property damage while enjoying the sport.

For safety on land . . .

• Most accidents involving overhead electrical wires occur on shore. So, on arrival at the launch site, look up above for overhead electrical wires.

• When moving a large boat hull into water, remove or lower the antenna or mast so they will not hit overhead wires. Stay clear of electrical wires while raising and lowering the mast on a small boat and transporting it in and out of the water. If you observe any dangerous conditions involving power lines, notify Edison's Service Planning Division. The company will help you correct or minimize such boating hazards.

• Use a ground fault interrupter when plugging into shore electrical shock that could result prepared for an accident.

Before you set sail this season, from using defective tools or appliances on the boat.

• When drying sails on the rigging at the dock, make sure sails or lines do not blow into overhead wires.

Water safety

• Determine the minimum clearance of power lines above an area to be sailed; make sure there is enough space between the mast and the power lines. Keep in mind that water levels may rise, making it unsafe to sail under a line you may have sailed under previously.

• If your sailboat comes in cotact with a power line while sailing, remain low in the boat and do not touch metal parts of the craft. Leave the boat only after arcing has stopped.

• If an electrical storm begins, leave the water as quickly as possible. Check with your boat manufacturer or the U.S. Coast Guard on how to ground the craft when you can't reach shore during a storm.

Above all, says John G. Keller, public safety coordinator power outlets to avoid serious for Detroit Edison, always be

Ideal body weight

It is becoming increasingly more apparent that obesity of any degree can be a major contributing factor to all sorts of health problems, including life-threatening physical ailments. According to research at the Aerobics Center in Dallas, here are a few of the latest available findings:

· Certain types of fat distribution, such as fat accumulated primarily above the waist, can be correlated with an increased risk of developing diabetes.

• The survival rate of women who have had a cancerous breast removed is higher for lighter than heavier patients.

• Women who are 40 percent or more above their ideal weight have an increased risk of cancer of the uterus, ovaries, gall bladder and breast.

• Men who are 40 percent or more above their ideal weight show an increase in cancer of the colon, rectum and prostate.

Obesity is included among the 11 major coronary risk factors listed by the American Heart Association.

• If a person has high blood pressure, either the upper (systolic) or lower (diastolic) figure will usually improve following weight loss.

• Studies have shown those who are the heatlthiest are those who, 1) eat the most food during three regular meals a day, but 2) maintain a proper weight with exercise.

With these facts in mind, the Aerobics Center has come up with a formula to enable the average person to calculate his or her ideal weight. The formula is this: Men: Take height in inches, multiply that figure by four, and then subtract 128.

Women should take their height in inches, multiply it by 3.5 and then subtract 108.

These calculations will give men of medium bone structure a weight with roughly 15 to 19 percent body fat, and women of average build a weight with body fat in the 18 to 22 percent range. According to Kenneth Cooper, M.D., in no case should a man's body fat exceed 19 percent or a woman's 22 percent to help prevent the problems we discussed earlier. He indicates that more body fat than these amounts will automatically increase the risk of coronary disease.

What if you are "truly" large boned? The formula can work for you if you add 10 percent to the figure you have determined as your ideal weight.

To determine if you are large boned, a man has large bones if his wrist is greater than seven inches; a woman has large bones if her wrist measures larger than 6 1/2 inches.

Try this formula. It works quite well for the majority. If you are a well-conditioned athlete, however, your muscle mass may be greater and you will weigh more as muscle is denser than fat.

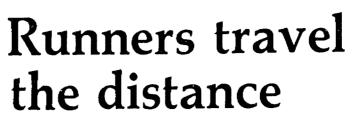

Surprised at the results? I thought so. It's time to get busy. Start moving today to reduce your risks.

Running, a sport where stamina, determination and good shoes play key roles, is becoming a very competitive sport.

Many Grosse Pointers have taken to the streets to take part in running marathons, 10K races or even 10K walks. Besides being a great form of exercise, running gives people the opportunity to enjoy the great outdoors and run with some of the finest athletes in the area.

Shown below are three Pointers who strive for the finish line every time out.

Creating a balanced life

For the past two weeks. this column has focused attention on the concept of personal wellness and recognizing those areas in our lives that could use some changes and improvement. In this last of the three part series, I will attempt to offer you a few techniques to help you truly make a new beginning.

For most of us, making changes in our lives is a welcome excitement; a tantalizing opportunity to improve what is no longer working for us. At least this is our initial reaction intellectually. Once we step into the early stages of this life change process, a very real fear must be overcome. Who will become, if we have a pattern from the past that has told us not only who we are now, but also who we will be in the future? How will those around us experience our new changes? Will they still approve of us? Will some invisible part of us get lost, perhaps never to be found again? Will we be happier with this new unknown part? Expressed simply, with change, we are pushed out of our comfort zone.

Take time to review last week's rating chart to determine an area in which you recognize you have more potential. Next, on a separate sheet of paper, list several specific reasons, (perhaps as many as seven or eight), why it would be personally profitable for you to improve in this area.

Journal keeping

While we are involved in this process, let us consider one of the most useful means of longterm self development; the systematic use of an on-going tool in the form of a diary, workbook or journal. This project can provide a tangible structure which will assist us in paying closer attention to our lives while developing a clear method of "self-

OK! I know what you are your favorite 10?) thinking; what a royal pain. It involves too much time and trouble. But before you decide to nix the whole thing, make a promise to yourself to try writing a journal for at least one week. I am confident you will begin to experience the benefits from this exercise within that week.

Journal keeping takes a step beyond merely thinking something, to actually writing it down. Even more importantly, because we can't write everything down, we must choose the most important thoughts. This aids by clarifying our feelings and observations, thereby empowering us with our own sense of values. We are less likely to deceive and confuse ourselves with others' belief patterns that we have previously felt compelled to accept as our own. Additionally, the writing process serves to document our path on the wellness continuum. As a side effect, it will help to free our minds from too much "clutter," and can be an excellent method for "letting off steam." To give you a push, the following is a topic list for you to consider while setting up your journal.

1) STEPPING STONES - the bridges from where we were to where we are, to where we want to be. List such things as roads not taken, and also the fond memories of yesterday, your hopes for tomorrow.

2) PEAK EXPERIENCES any high or deep feelings, (a real comfort to review when faced with the lows of self-doubt.)

3) DREAMS - best recorded soon after waking.

4) BRIGHT IDEAS - (No matter how far-fetched, remember, this journal is for your eyes only.)

5) QUOTATIONS - personally meaningful statements you have read or heard. Get them down on paper!

6) A FAVORITE PEOPLE LIST - List 10 of your most favorite people. (Are you among changes within myself.)

List on another journal pag some possible steps you might take if you were to decide on change. If you decide to accept the current situation, list what you would also have to accept. Expressed another way, what is the worst thing that can happen and can you live with the outcome? If you have made a decision for a change, write it down. Anticipate the roadblocks, the ways in which you might "cop out." What solutions can you offer yourself so that you can unlock the "handcuffs" of your past failures?

What we have been doing together, in a very practical way is formulating a payoff that is greater than the fear of change. Let us start by reversing a program that has not served us well and which is largely responsible for continually emphasizing failures in one's life: negative thoughts. Stop them, NOW! You, and you alone are responsible for the thoughts which create your personal environment. Your perception is all that limits you - no one else does it to you. Of course, this habit takes practice to control and replace with the thoughts you choose to think. One of the fastest ways to reprogram your "computer" is through the regular practice of a relaxation and visualization technique. Simply put, this is a method of returning to daydreaming. Remember as a kid, day dreaming about all of the different people we wanted to be when we grew up? This is the same thing, only now we can fashion that dream with more maturity. On the front flap of your journal, you might want to write out an affirmation of what you are seeking, as such: "I now assume loving responsibility for the events of my life, and I am exam able to make positive

At first you may experience discomfort and wrestle with self-accusations and doubts. There may be other people around you who are only too willing to support these internal fears. Try to understand their positions. Be willing to accept them where they are in a loving and non-judgemental way. The human being eating habits and enhancing indoes not like change and your dividual's lifestyles.

changing may bring out their fears in where they may be in your life as you evolve and grow.

Learn to love yourself. Recognize your need to be nourished. It is OK to rest from improvements. Get comfortable with your degrees of change. Otherwise you may risk swinging the pendulum too far in the other direction in which crisis becomes your comfort zone. Who needs stretch marks on their psyche?

Wellness implies compassion as well as wholeness. Here is an analogy, using a little play on Hole — that empty space we so often fill with inappropriate behavior.

Whole - where aspects of peace have been put into practice, thereby producing the process of personal transformation.

Holy - where our personal peace affects what is ultimately experienced as the inexplicable joy of planetary peace.

Shakti Gawain sums up our wellness-process in her book, "Living in the Light." "We will always be pushed to explore aspects of ourselves in new ways. If we ignore these inner impulcited with the realization that I ses, we will be forced by external life circumstances to explore our inner being anyway. One way or Making changes and building another, our higher self makes balanced life take real effort. sure that we get the message of what we have to do. We may have to go from one extreme to another until we come into balance . . the more light you allow within you, the brighter the world you live in will be."

Howard Buten as Buffo in the Attic Theatre's world premiere of "Learn to Fall." by James Burnstein, runs through May 22.

A little help will make 'Fall' stand on its feet While the script, by Detroiter

By Ronald J. Bernas

With a little propping up, the Attic Theatre's touching "Learn to Fall" can become a moving work of modern theater able to stand on its strong base.

"Learn to Fall" had its world premiere at the Attic Theatre on April 29, to a very enthusiastic audience, which overlooked many minor faults, but were touched by the lovely and deeply human story.

Based on the life of former Detroiter Howard Buten "Fall" explores the relationship between a young performer (Buten) whose comedy career is going nowhere, and a young, severely autistic boy. Buten's career as a clown, Buffo, brings him in contact with the boy, Adam, and Buten's life and career change as he helps the boy, and the boy helps him.

But there is more to the story of Buffo and Adam. There are a number of well-developed, almost cliched relationships that fill out Buten's world and make "Fall" such a humanistic play. There is who gave up her career to have a family; Buten's highly successful lawyer father who can't unstuck with the act even when he erful in the play. was told to "lose the clown;" and teresting to see the interaction and play between the supporting Buten in their own loving way. 'Casual Sex?' is about — what else?

By Michael Chapp Special Writer

"Casual Sex?"

There's a question mark in the title, as if there's any doubt about the theme of this film. That's absurd. "Casual Sex?" is 90 minutes of people thinking about sex, dreaming about sex, talking about sex, and ... yes, in a few spots, actually having

Not that this is one of those steamy, explicit pictures with it blows a lot of hot air, but it does so in a generally innocuous manner. Indeed, this is actually a modern-day fairy tale. Instead of addressing children however, are. this story is aimed at the sexual revolution's second generation.

You know, the paranoid.

"It was the early '80s, and sex was still a good way to meet people," says one of the picture's main characters in her opening remarks to the audience. But in the same breath she laments about how much more complicated things have gotten now; what with AIDS and all those nonstop heavy breathing. Sure, other nasty social diseases. So she and her friend head off to an exclusive vacation spa where they hope to meet men who are as carefully promiscuous as they

> Most of the monkeyshines at the spa are standard movie fare. Girls meet guys, girls fall for freshing and unexpected rested.

guys, girls sleep with guys, girls lose guys, girls get guys back. You know the routine. Meanwhile, there are plenty of lowclass jokes and stock movie characters to fill just enough frames so that people don't feel as though they've been gypped. That strategy almost doesn't work. What does salvage this piece is its tendency to allow the actors to step out and address little asides to the audience. People like that; it makes them feel more involved.

Second, and more important, director Genevieve Robert developes a fine relationship between the two girls at the film's center. For a picture which, on its commercial level, is about male-female relationships, this is a resurprise. Lea Thompson and Victoria Jackson handle these scenes with a believable intimacy and vulnerability. This is especially noteworthy for Jackson, who on TV's "Saturday Night Live" demonstrates the emotional range of a tomato.

Beyond that, there is little to recommend about "Casual Sex?" Still, when one of the characters reaches for a condom, viewers will breath a sigh of relief. It's not the most artistic picture you'll see this summer, to be sure. But at least it's socially responsible.

One more caveat: Be careful how you buy your tickets at the box office. Depending on your tone of voice, requesting "one for 'Casual Sex?" may get you ar-

Gospel, energy make for a religious, musical treat

By Ronald J. Bernas Staff Writer

It's sexy, it's fun, it's exciting and invigorating. It's also deeply religious, moving, thought-provoking and enlightening. "Don't Get God Started" which opened at the Fisher May 3 is as much a religious experience, as it is a theatrical experience, which makes it a rare and different treat.

'God' is a morality play for the '80s, and although it deals mainly with black middle class issues, those issues - drug abuse, infidelity, gratuitous sex, and self-respect — are universal.

Being a morality play, it tends to be a little simplistic, and its situations just slightly broadened to fit into the format, but that is the nature of this type of theater, and as a whole, the play doesn't suffer for it.

Great performances also help the simplicity of some of the scenes. Especially Chip Fields as a hairdresser who would do anything to keep the man who everyone knows is wrong for her. Fields plays the audience (which commented non-stop on the action) well, getting laughs with just a look or a hand gesture.

Another Fields, Chip's daughter Kim (who nearly everyone knows as Tootie from the longrunning television series "The Facts of Life") grows up appropriately and fills in her role as a sleazy social climber. She's on stage for quite a while before you realize that she's that little girl you watched grow up on tel-

Theater

Giancarlo Esposito, Marvin Wright-Bey and Carol Lynn Maillard all perform well in their multiple roles, each one bringing a different aspect of religion to each of their different characters.

Marilyn Coleman and Ernie Banks provide a lot of insight between the laughs when they comment on today's morality between the scenes.

But it is the wonderfully inspiring music, writen by Marvin Winans, and performed with such emotion by Be Be Winans (who filled in for Marvin in the May 5 performance) and Vanessa Bell Armstrong that is the star and the driving force of the musical. It comments on the actors' dilemmas, and helps them to express their beliefs.

Being a morality play, those who turn to God are loved and fulfilled in the end, and those who aren't come to a bad end. But that, too, is the nature of the beast.

Anyway, we could all use a good dose of morality.

"Don't Get God Started" runs at the Fisher until May 29.

'Sunset' is a comic Western murder- mystery

By Marian Trainor Special Writer

"Sunset" starts out with an interesting proposition. Tom Mix, hero of 500 silent Westerns, will become a star of still another film - a talkie. In it he will play the role of heroic lawman Wyatt Earp. To give the film credibility, the real-life Wyatt Earp will act as technical Sounds great. This should be a good-old-fashioned shoot-fromthe-hip cowboy movie.

The opening scenes bear out this supposition. A stage coach is being shot at. The driver is hit. The horses go wild. A comely young lady, a one in the coach, screams for help. Up on the hill, a cowboy sights the situations and gallops to the rescue. He grabs the horses and reins them into line.

Suddenly the action stops. It's not the real thing. The viewer is on a movie set watching a Western being shot. Except for a few scenes taken from an honest-togoodness Western "Tombstone," that's the last of that. The remainder of the film has nothing to do with cowboys roaming the western plains.

What we thought was to be a Western, or possibly a comedy about one hero playing another is a bitter satire on Hollywood in the late '20s.

Director-writer Blake Edwards misses the cue of the intrinsic comedy of two legendary heroes who tracked down bad guys on horses. Instead he involves them in a murder-mystery where creeps ride around in Dusenbergs.

The result is sort of a mishmash that is not quite comic, not quite murder-mystery and even misses being good satire.

The best thing about the film is James Garner as Wyatt Earp.

He is perfectly cast as the gracefully aging Wyatt Earp, coaching cowboy star Tom Mix (Bruce Willis) who is to play him in his younger days.

Willis has his moments as Willis but it's difficult to accept him as Tom Mix. He lacks the flamboyance of the real-life Mix and while he brings his wellknown distinctive brand of humor to his role, it doesn't match up with the character he plays. Nevertheless Garner and Willis make an affable team. Garner is tolerant and helpful and liberal with praise for his co-star. Willis is agreeable, full of fun, always ready to make a bad situation better with his humor.

Shooting the film becomes a secondary matter when Garner and Willis become involved in a nasty murder-mysterv.

Candy, the proprietress of a local house of ill-fame is brutally murdered. The suspect is the son of Christina Alperin (Patricia Hodge), wife of Alfie Alperin (Malcolm McDowell), sadistic head of the movie company. We have reason to believe that Christina was a close friend of Garner's in the past. When they parted he made her promise that if she ever needed anything to call him. She does. She begs him to find the real murderer of Candy.

This become a very complex situation involving Hollywood hookers, crooked cops, mobsters real Tombstone, he walks and ultimately, Alfie. Candy's daughter, Cheryl

of the film are the visuals. Edwards takes great care to recreate the era with costumes, settings and events true to the period. He even takes the audience to the first Academy Award function where Alfie is being honored for his achievements. That is an ironic scene. Cruel and sadistic Alfie, instead of giving a speech, appears as a clown performing acrobatics to amuse the spectators even as his wife lies dying from his beatings.

Other scenes accent the phoniness of the Tinsel Town. When Garner arrives fresh from the through a studio back lot with fake Tombstones, fake Manhattans, fake Egypts.

Although Garner and Willis have some close encounters before the murder is solved, they have some fun times. One of them takes place in a Mexican cafe where they have a rousing good time and Willis performs an outstanding tango.

While Garner is the steadying member of the duo, Willis provides some light touches. For instance, he is given tales of his exploits. When Garner looks him in the eye, he crumbles, prins and about "It's all true - give or ... two.'

This quote might well be applied to "Sunrise's" convoluted plot. This tale of Hollywood decadence could be true — give or take a lie or two.
