Computers, laser disks bring technology to the classroom

By Peter A. Salinas
Staff Writer

Today's sophisticated student wouldn't be satisfied with reading about computers in a book — he'd rather program a computer to write one.

Through the efforts of Brownell Middle School's science teachers and science department head William Leleszi, students are getting first-hand experience with the most up-to-date computer hardware and exposure to other electronic teaching devices.

For the last two years, Brownell students have been holding fundraisers to buy computer equipment.

With proceeds from the sale of candy, students have purchased two Apple computers, a video camera and tape player and a large screen color monitor.

Leleszi and the other science teachers have incorporated the use of this equipment into their lessons.

"I enjoy it too," said Leleszi, a 23-year veteran of the Grosse Pointe school district. "It is just fascinating."

The funds have also purchased a LaserDisc system. Disks, similar to record albums, are inserted into a player. The information on the disk is read by laser. Because all the information is digitalized, the teacher can go to anyone specific place on the disk and play it for the students.

For instance a teacher giving a lesson on earth science, can tune into a specific section on plate tectonics and earthquakes.

"It is literally a window on the world," Leleszi said.

The laser disks contain dozens of hours of information similar to the quality one might get on a National Geographic documentary. The televised lessons are given in such a way that the teacher must take part in the process.

"It is a great way for slow learners to get remedial help," he said, "but can also be used by the student who excels and can move on to other subjects."

Last month Brownell science students took part in a national balloon launch sponsored by the National Science Association. Because the school had the computers, Leleszi was able to tie into the National Weather Service. Students were able to see four-color computer graphics of wind patterns and get the raw weather information that professional weather forecasters receive.

With this information, students were able to take a larger role in the weather study the National Science Association was conducting, and also learn more about weather at the same time.

With its latest purchase, the science department now has a video digitizer. This allows a video camera to transmit its signal to the computer, which digitizes the picture. With this information stored in the computer, students can take any part image on a screen, then enlarge or reduce it, take any part of it and then transfer the image on paper.

"With the purchase of heat-sensitive ribbon," Leleszi said, "we can even transfer these images to T-shirts."

Computer software packages have been bought to help with educating the students — all with fundraiser proceeds. Programs designed to teach about sound, heat, light, medicine, and even a program designed to act as a lie detector, are in use now.

Leleszi said that computer experiments can be performed, and the students' own pulse rates can be incorportated into a medical experiment.

"I kind of like to think of us as being at the frontier of get-

Park may close Goethe

The Grosse Pointe Park council, at its May 23 meeting, discussed the Planning Commission's recommendation for closing Goethe at the Detroit border.

The council directed the administration to proceed with plans to use the area for additional parking facilities.

The closing of the two-block long street has been discussed for several months. Twenty-five residents presented a petition Feb. 12 requesting the street be closed at the Detroit border, allowing access only from Wayburn and Maryland for parking purposes.

Approval is expected at the June 13 meeting, after the council reviews details of the plans for additional parking, according to Acting City Manager Dale Krajniak.

Schools seek millage increase for libraries

By Peter A. Salinas
Staff Writer

Voters will be asked to approve a four-tenths mill increase for the Grosse Pointe public libraries for six years Monday, June 13, at the annual school election.

The millage increase, which would result in about a $500,000 in revenue, is necessary for the library to maintain its present level of services, according to Director Charles Hanson.

He said the cost of salaries and benefits, books, periodicals and the upgrading of the library's computer system will cost more. Without the increase, he said, the library will face at least $350,000 in cuts, which would mean the laying off staff and cutting back on the number of hours the libraries are open.

Central Library serves more than 28,000 patrons each month, Hanson said. He added that counters have been installed in Central Library, but not at the two branches in the Woods and Park.

While the money from the millage would be used to maintain services, there could be some improvements that are sorely needed, Hanson said, such as upgrading the library's security system to prevent theft.

"People should also be aware that some of the money would be used for the fund equity," he said. "People should know that the library cannot operate at a deficit and needs money in reserve for emergencies and contingencies."

The libraries have about 136,000 volumes in its collection, and at any given time, 15 to 20 percent of those books are on loan.

Donald Sweeny, co-chair of the Library Millage Committee, said he continues to be optimistic that the proposal will be positively acted on by the electorate.

"We have seen no opposition to date," Sweeny said. "We were pleased that each school board candidate supports this millage increase. We feel it is the general perception in the community that this increase is necessary and a positive step for the community.

"We urge everyone to vote on June 13. We need all the votes we can get."

He said there has been a concerted effort on the part of the committee to get informational literature about the need for the increase in to the hands of voters. He said information will be sent to almost every household in the Pointes and the Harper Woods portion of the district the week before the election.

Doug Andrews, owner of Grosse Pointe Real Estate and a member of the Grosse Pointe Library Building Advisory Committee, said he is in favor of the millage.

"From a real estate standpoint, all services in a community — fire, police, schools and libraries — are a part of the value of a property," he said. "Libraries are one of the services people look at when they make a decision when looking at the value of a property."

A father of two children who use the library regularly, Andrews said he feels the libraries are safe, well-kept and a benefit to the community.

"It is an important part of their education," he concluded.

Pointer of Interest

Marieke Sellenraad Allen

By Peggy O'Connor Andrzejczyk
Assistant Editor/Feature Editor

One year ago this month, Marieke Allen embarked upon what would turn out to be the most exhilarating period of her artistic life. It was an experience she looks back upon with a mixture of awe, pride, relief and gratitude. And one which opened up a whole new phase for her.

Marieke Allen

Last June, the Farms' Allen and her brother, New York artist Johan Sellenraad, began the nitty-gritty work on the biggest project either artist had ever tackled. It was a monument commemorating the Flint sit-down strike of 1936-37 and the 50-year record of the United Auto Workers.

Sellenraad had earned the commission in February 1987, and by June, with the help of his sister, her family and Detroit's Pewabic Pottery, began the bulk of the work on the monument, which had a project completion date of Labor Day 1987.

The monument consisted of four mural panels commemorating the strike, a 1950s' assembly plant and a 1980s' assembly plant. The murals are a dramatic mix of architecture, painting, sculpture and prose.

The prose — and Pewabic Pottery — are where Allen comes in. Since 1978, the native of the Netherlands has pursued the study of ceramics, calligraphy and Sumi-e painting. And for almost as long, Allen has been involved with Pewabic Pottery, first as a student, then as a board member and finally as vice president of the board of directors of the Pewabic Society.

"I remember that Johan found out about the project on a Saturday, got fired up for it and began his research and called me on a Sunday because he knew of my association with Pewabic. I called the director, Mary Jane Hock, and although the timing was rough because they were working on finishing the tiles for the People Mover stations, Mary Jane felt it could be done," Allen recalls.

His proposal accepted, Johan Sellenraad set to work on a design which would tell the story of the labor movement and that famous sit-down strike. "The

New bank plans August opening

By Peter A. Salinas
Staff Writer

The proposed Grosse Pointe Bank and Trust, a new bank that will be locally owned and operated, received preliminary licensing approval from the Michigan Financial Institutions Bureau in March and from the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation in April.

A group of 10 local businessmen are involved in the venture. They are Lucius S. Beasley, Peter A. Dow, Robert G. Edgar, William C. Finkenstaedt, Harvey C. Fruehauf Jr., William K. Howenstein, Robert K. Hydon, Charles McCafferty, Richard H. Turner and Robert C. Valade.

Beasley, one of the principal organizers, said plans call for the bank to open Aug. 1. It will be located at Kerby and Mack.

Dow, president of Campbell Ewald Advertising, said prospectuses will be mailed out to investors who have already expressed an interest in the bank.

"The financial institutions have approved a capital structure of $5 million," Dow said.

Beasley added that an advertisement will be run locally informing interested people how they can become investors.

"We want to make sure that potential investors know how to get in contact with one of the organizers," Dow said.

Beasley has been busy with a search committee's efforts to find a chief executive officer for the bank, as well as other officers.

"We have had a tremendous number of candidates for the position of CEO," Beasley said. "They are all very well-qualified, and it is going to be difficult to make a decision."

Dow said Grosse Pointe Bank and Trust will be an F.D.I.C.-insured community bank.

Beasley said that there will be no drive-in service or tellers, although the bank will likely get an automatic teller machine in the near future.

"There will not be the normal amount of lobby traffic," he said. "If you wanted $10,000 in traveler's checks, you would go up to the receptionist who would take you to a comfortable area to wait while the transaction was made."

Beasley said the decor will be elegant and pleasant, with period furniture and other fine fixtures.

Beasley it a former president and chief executive officer of Mount Clemens Bank and a long-time banker with Manufacturer's National Bank.

He said there have been eight similar banks started in Michigan in the last 18 months, including those in Troy and West Bloomfield.

"I've thought in terms of opening a community bank for a number of years," he said. "I think the time is right to do it now. I think it will be warmly received. I've been hounded by people who want stock."

The organizers plan to make real estate loans of all kinds, personal loans, offer secured lines of credit and have an emphasis on dealing with entrepreneurial customers and professional corporations, Beasley said.

"Grosse Pointers will be able to own a piece of their bank," Dow said, "and be known and recognized when they do their banking."

Bargains galore

The seventh annual Grosse Pointe's Greatest Garage Sale held May 29 and 30 drew some 10,000 bargain hunters to the parking garage behind Jacobson's in the Village. They shopped from the more than 150 exhibitors which made them, the exhibitors, and the Grosse Pointe Village Association, very happy. All money generated from the sale goes to fund the Santa Claus Parade held in the Village the day after Thanksgiving. The sale was so successful, plans for next year include opening the entire parking garage for the event. The garage sale is sponsored by the Grosse Pointe Village Association.

Village merchants to offer summer music

A little night music will be offered to shoppers who visit the Village during Thursdays in June.

Beginning June 9, Music On The Plaza, a series of three musical events designed to make browsing in the Village shops a more pleasant experience, will begin.

"The Village has always been open on Thursday evenings," noted John Denomme, a merchant on the Music On The Plaza committee. "We have decided to make Thursdays in June even nicer."

The Plaza is located at the corner of Kercheval and St. Clair, in the heart of the Village.

"We had events here last season," said Beverly Leinweber, the Merchants Association's executive secretary, "including some great music. This year we are concentrating on those quiet, lazy, end-of-the-week evenings when you are out for a walk and an ice cream cone — or maybe yogurt. Thursdays are perfect."

The following is the schedule:

June 9: The series will begin with the Grosse Pointe North/South High School Jazz Band. The 35-member big band, under the direction of Ralph Miller, will perform jazz from Count Basie to Claude Bolling.

June 16: Detroit's premier piano stylist Bess Bonnier will perform.

June 23: Rockin' Gold will play the solid gold sounds of the '50s and '60s, complete with an Elvis show.

All the performances will run from 7 to 8:30 p.m. and they are sponsored by the Grosse Pointe Village Merchants Association. For more information, call Village Records and Tapes at 886-6039.

Correction

There was an error in last week's story about the Grosse Pointe Board of Education's budget.

A recommendation to include $25,000 in the budget for development of a soccer field was not made by the director of business affairs.

All of an additional $206,000 of unanticipated revenue will remain unspent and placed in the district's fund equity.

Scouts honored

The following progress awards were presented to members of Boy Scout Troop 479 of Parcells Middle School May 23:

Tenderfoot — Scott Wilcox, Todd Schorer

Second Class — Rob Dallaire, Delaney Boon, David Eisenbrey, Brian Parthum, Craig Tracy

First Class — Rob Dallaire, Rob DeLaurier, Matt Masek, Dan Meier, Steve Schnitzer, Craig Tracy

New unit at Bon Secours to aid disturbed youth

By Ronald J. Bernas
Staff Writer

Although the number of adolescents with emotional disturbances may not necessarily be larger today than it was a few years ago, their needs are being met today in ways which were rarely, if ever, used before.

One of the new ways is to create a treatment program that caters directly to the needs of adolescents, and to treat them as adolescents with problems, not as adults with problems.

Bon Secours Hospital is promoting this concept and has recently completed work on its Adolescent Mental Health Unit, the only hospital-based facility of its kind in the eastern Detroit metropolitan area, according to Director J.P. Leleszi, D.O.

The airy 12,000-square-foot unit is made up of semi-private patient rooms, several multi-purpose rooms, recreational and occupational therapy rooms, two classrooms, a consultation room and a day room. It occupies the entire third floor of the southwest wing of the hospital.

Leleszi has years of experience in adult and child psychology, which he drew on to design the program and the facilities. He was appointed chief of adolescent services at Lafayette Clinic in Detroit in 1977. He has also served as staff psychiatrist at Michigan Osteopathic Medical Center, Children's Hospital of Michigan and Harper Hospital, in addition to his private practice in Detroit.

He often speaks to groups on mental health issues and is an assistant professor of child psychiatry at Wayne State University School of Medicine and at Michigan State University College of Osteopathic Medicine.

"Safety was the main concern," he said, in designing the wing and great precautions have been taken to assure a totally safe, yet inviting, environment for the patients.

"The adolescents we will take are disturbed, they act out their aggressions, and we don't want them to have anything here they can hurt themselves with," he added.

All the heaters in the rooms are tamper-proof, the pictures on the walls are screwed on with tamper-proof screws ("Some patients have swallowed screws in a suicide attempt, or cut their wrists with them," he said), the chairs are of a soft, yet sturdy, plastic so if they are thrown they won't cause damage to other patients, there are no bars on the windows, because the glass on the windows is three-quarters of an inch thick and cannot be broken by anything. Leleszi said he's tried with hammers, 80-pound bags of rock salt, and a number of other hard objects.

Also the walls are double dry wall, and the ceilings are high and also dry wall, because through years of experience, he has known patients to hide contraband in lower drop ceilings. Curtains are snapped onto curtain rods, not hung securely, again, for safety's sake.

"If we have a child in here because he or she is suicidal, we don't want to give them what they need to kill themselves," he said.

The unit will cater to all types of problems associated with adolescents, mostly between the ages of 13 and 17, who have emotional and psychiatric problems such as acute anxiety, bulemia, schizophrenia, anorexia nervosa, severe depression and other mental disorders.

Having the unit located in a hospital is viewed as a plus by Leleszi, because it will allow close supervision of medical conditions and will allow the unit to accept patients who are in need of medical care, as well as emotional and psychological care. For instance, some patients may be emotionally disturbed as a result of their medical conditions, such as muscular dystrophy, or other diseases.

"We're an acute, short-term hospital care situation," Leleszi said. The average length of stay is expected to be 40 days.

"I don't like children in the hospital," he said, "But nor do I want to push them out too quickly, either."

Patients for the 21-bed unit will be referred to the hospital by any number of community agencies, schools, psychologists or psychiatrists, doctors, parents and possibly school counselors. Also, many adolescents will take it upon themselves to seek treatment.

Sharon Myers and J.P. Leleszi are shown in one of the rooms at Bon Secours' new adolescent mental health unit.

"There is this lay viewpoint that adolescents want to avoid psychiatry, but that just isn't true," he said.

Forms must be filled out and Leleszi and his staff will make an admission judgment based on the information on the forms and on the patient's individual needs.

"First of all, we need to make sure our program can fulfill all their needs," Leleszi said, about the acceptance procedure.

Payment is covered by most insurances, and those who aren't covered by an insurance can probably have their bills paid for by Medicaid. Leleszi said the hospital will provide assistance with applying for Medicaid funds.

The treatment is a combination of occupational therapy, recreational therapy, family therapy and one-on-one work with a social worker.

"We have a good, very consistent, young and energetic staff," he said.

Leleszi is the medical director of the unit and Sharon Myers is the administrative director. She has previously served as director of nursing at Aurora Hospital Osteopathic in Detroit, and also as a head and staff nurse during seven years with Aurora Hospital in Detroit. There are some 38 other professionals on staff for the unit ranging from psychologists to recreational and occupational therapists to teachers.

The unit includes two classrooms so patients can keep up with their classwork while getting help.

Leleszi said schooling has been a problem throughout the years with adolescent mental patients, because while hospitalized, they miss a good month of classes, and there is almost no way to catch up. Adults, on the other hand, who miss a month of work for hospitalization usually are covered by other employees.

Family therapy is a large part of the treatment at the new unit, Leleszi said, because when the patients are discharged, they will probably be back living with the family, and all need to learn how to deal with the problems.

The therapy is designed to restore a sense of self-respect and self-esteem, and to help them learn proper coping mechanisms, Leleszi said.

"It's not that we're coddling the children, it's just that children have different needs than adults and they need programs which deal with their specific needs," Leleszi said.

When Leleszi and the staff feel the patient is ready to re-enter the world, he or she is discharged, but along with the discharge papers, the patient will receive a list of support groups and agencies and must continue the treatment on an outpatient basis, which Leleszi feels is a very important part of the treatment.

For children who are less than 13 years old in need of help, Leleszi said the unit will help find proper programs, and those older than 17 will be directed to an adult program.

Although the unit will not be accepting patients until at least July, Leleszi said there have been a number of calls from all over the area asking for admission and he admits that "we will have difficulty filling the need in the community."

Muir Road to be widened

The city of Grosse Pointe Farms is advertising for bids to widen Muir Road from the alley behind 131 Kercheval to Kercheval.

The widening is part of the agreement with Cottage Hospital, and was part of the site plan approved by the city in conjunction with the parking deck being built, according to City Clerk Richard Solak.

"It was felt that with the traffic from the parking structure, the road there should be widened," Solak said.

The plans call for a right turn lane, a left turn lane and a lane for traffic the other way, he said. The expansion includes removal of pavement and sidewalks, three trees and repaving the alley behind 131 Kercheval to Kercheval.

The price tag is estimated at $78,000 and will be paid for with a combination of Cottage Hospital, Bologna Construction and city funds, Solak said.

The Farms city council has to approve the bids and Solak hopes the construction will begin sometime in June, to be completed by mid-July.

City adopts '88-'89 budget

The city of Grosse Pointe, at the May 23 council meeting, adopted a $3,682,260 budget for 1988-89.

Of that amount, $1,629,595 is earmarked for public safety and court activities, $909,645 for public works, $280,795 for administration and elections, $241,590 for accounting and auditing, $188,165 for public improvements, $184,955 for parks and recreation, $161,820 for highway fund contributions and $66,695 for sewage disposal.

In addition, the council set a tax rate of 15.38 mills (0.25 mills for debt and 15.13 mills for operating purposes.) This represents a reduction from the current rate of 16.32 mills.

Because of the approximately 8.8 percent increase in state equalized valuation, the decrease in the property tax rate will generate an estimated $113,145 additional revenues, according to City Manager Thomas Kressbach.

Casinos still face foes in city & state

Opinion

Even if Mayor Coleman Young's Casino Gaming Study Commission recommends approval of casino gambling, as it is expected to do at its final vote now scheduled for June 3, casino gambling still will face many obstacles before it can come to Detroit.

One of the major obstacles will be the advisory referendum in Detroit on Aug. 2. A great many Detroit churches have cooperated in a campaign of opposition to casinos and have high hopes of duplicating their feat of defeating casino gambling in two previous referendums in the city.

Another is the surprising opposition of the board of the Greater Detroit Chamber of Commerce which voted last week by what was called an "overwhelming" margin to oppose casino gambling despite appeals by the mayor's commission to delay taking a stand on the issue.

And a third obstacle is the state Legislature, which in recent years has shown little inclination to approve the necessary legislation to legalize casino gambling in Detroit or anywhere else in Michigan. Opposition among Republican leaders makes it appear that the GOP-controlled state Senate in particular will be difficult to sell on the virtues of casino gambling.

The Chamber's strong opposition was based on the recommendation of its advisory panel which had voted 20 to 3 against the proposal after studying it for more than two months. The panel came to the conclusion that the presence of casinos would hurt the city's image, discourage other businesses from expanding or locating in Detroit, worsen crime, hurt quality of life in the neighborhoods and not provide jobs for the hard-core unemployed.

Richard Van Dusen, the Chamber's chairman who is also a member of the mayor's commission, told the news media afterward that the Chamber "is interested in expanding job opportunities in Detroit and the board concluded that the introduction of casino gambling would have a negative impact" on that aim.

Residents of the suburbs in the Detroit metropolitan area have not been polled, so far as we know, but from letters to the editor and comments of many local people, we know there is substantial opposition in the Pointes. Most of the criticism stems from fear of the expansion of crime and corruption in the entire area if casino gambling is approved for Detroit.

Despite the extent of the opposition, some observers believe that Mayor Young will rally his political forces and achieve his goal of bringing casino gambling to Detroit. His major argument is that it will provide jobs and thus enhance the city's chances of economic recovery.

The opposition of the Chamber's board would appear to have undercut that argument to some extent since it, too, is concerned about employment in the Detroit area. It expressed its opposition to casino gambling on economic grounds as well as arguing that casino gambling would damage the quality of life in the metro region.

Media observers have generally agreed that while there are some foes of casino gambling on the mayor's commission, in addition to the Chamber's chairman, Van Dusen, the majority appears to be favorable or favorably disposed because of their political or business connections with the mayor.

Yet the outcome of the vote obviously will not be known until June 3 when, if the commission does favor casino gambling, it also will make known its recommendations about locations, the kinds of casinos it would favor and the controls it would advocate to prevent the spread of crime and corruption that has been characteristic of other cities that have introduced casino gambling.

Will new school plan fly?

Key leaders of both parties in the state House of Representatives were reported to have reached agreement late last week on a compromise plan to revise the way Michigan pays for its public schools, but it appeared unlikely that Senate Republicans would permit it to fly.

The new plan would ask Michigan voters to increase the state sales tax from 4 cents to 6 cents, lower property taxes about $1.9 billion and raise $500 million in new funding for local school districts. Under the plan, voters would have to approve a constitutional amendment at the Aug. 2 primary to put it into effect.

Republican senators, however, have two major objections to the compromise. One is that the proposed $500 million increase in state education funding is too large and the other is that the referendum on the plan ought to be on the ballot in November rather than in August.

The GOP senators contend that the much larger turnout at the general election would assure a much greater proportion of the state's citizens deciding the issue. We think the GOP point is well taken and that the argument by the Democrats that the school issue would get tangled up with other controversial matters on the November ballot is foolish.

Gov. James Blanchard contends, without offering any real evidence, that an August referendum would provide the greatest chance for success. But to get the issue before the people in August, the Legislature would have to approve it this week, which now seems unlikely. We think the November date is fairer to the people anyway.

The compromise agreed to by the House leaders of both parties covers several new proposals, including one that apparently would limit the Grosse Pointe district's ability to levy above a new cap of 42 mills. The current cap is 50 mills but the Grosse Pointe's levy falls well below that figure. Reducing the cap would affect the local district if property tax assessments are to be cut under the compromise. If so, we think this proposal ought to be adjusted to avoid penalizing districts such as our own in their efforts to maintain the quality of education their schools offer.

Further compromise also should be sought to give the people a chance to vote on the constitutional amendment in November. If the governor and the Democrats could be persuaded to give on the question of the date of the referendum, the Republicans might be persuaded to approve the higher funding figure sought by the Democrats.

We're often told that politics is art of compromise. Surely the two parties ought to be able to get together this year on the new school aid formula, especially since they already have agreed on the proposed increase in the sales tax to raise the additional revenues needed to offset the reductions in property taxes.

Election year acquaintances

One of the pleasures of an election year for news people is getting acquainted with new candidates for public office and reacquainted with incumbents running for re-election.

At the Grosse Pointe News, we've already interviewed the four candidates for the school board who will seek election June 13. Two of them have served on the board and two others are seeking office for the first time. So the interviews were a time to get acquainted and re-acquainted.

But the school election is only the first of three in which the Pointes will be involved this year. On Aug. 2 we'll take part in the state primary and on Nov. 8 we'll participate in the general election.

Not all of the challengers for Michigan positions have announced their candidacies, but incumbents who are expected to seek re-election already are letting their constituents know via newsletters or public statements how they stand on the issues and what they have accomplished.

For example, David P. Cavanagh, a Democrat who is the 1st District's county commissioner, has recently issued a report card listing his first-year accomplishments under four headings: eastside roads, communication, county finances and public safety.

In his report, he claimed credit for helping make a difference on such matters as grass cutting and road improvements on the east side, expansion of Metropolitan Airport and finding solutions to the county's fiscal crisis.

Democratic state Sen. John Kelly, whose term will not expire until Jan. 1, 1991, recently weighed in with what he called a "legislative update."

It covers such matters as the risks to the First Amendment if the Detroit newspapers obtain the joint operating agreement they have sought, the support he had given to legislation to ease Wayne County's grave financial crisis and endorsement of Gov. James Blanchard proposal for an $83.3 million program to help neighborhoods help themselves.

Congressman Dennis Hertel, 14th District Democrat, also has distributed a newsletter outlining his opposition to the expansion of the Detroit City Airport, asking the Department of Housing and Urban Development to remove "unnecessary barriers" for religious groups to obtain funds to shelter the homeless and supporting the omnibus trade bill just vetoed by President Reagan.

As can be seen by these excerpts, officials cannot afford to be modest when issuing their newsletters and legislative reports. In all fairness, however, it should be emphasized that they have to compete with literally thousands of other elected officials for media attention and they naturally find it most effective to blow their own political horns just before election.

Their actions are self-serving, of course, but officials can and do claim that they are just reporting to their constituents who would not have much basis for evaluating their work without the legislative reports. And that seems to be true.

Yet constituents, after all, still have the opportunity to accept or reject any candidate's claims or the news media's recommendations when election day rolls around. That is, of course, what democracy is all about.

Vote yes for library

To the Editor:

The Grosse Pointe Branch of the American Association of University Women strongly supports and endorses the 1.7 millage assessment for maintenance of Grosse Pointe public libraries.

It is critical that on June 13 residents of the Pointes and Harper Woods vote for this millage in order to avoid sharp curtailment of present library services.

The millage request includes a 0.4 mill raise in the library assessment the first library millage increase in the past 20 years. Library services during that time have increased substantially, as has the public's use of the libraries.

Throughout its 105 year history, AAUW has supported strong public library systems, and now, with the current explosion of communication technology, we feel it is doubly important that our libraries be adequately funded.

We urge a strong yes vote for the library on June 13.

Ban candy cigarettes

To the Editor:

I have recently seen candy cigarettes in local stores and at our park. As a smoker, I object to any idea that cigarette smoking should be mimicked by children with this candy.

I have never seen a child buy this product for the gum inside. They always take the candy and act as if it were real. With all we know about smoking's harmful effects on the body, we don't need any suggestion to our young that smoking is cool, adult or smart. I would like store owners to remove them from the shelves. If not, we of the Pointes should ban them.

Drivers need protection on Lakeshore

To the Editor:

We would like to commend Dr. Sargent for his letter concerning protective barriers on Lakeshore Road in Grosse Pointe Farms.

Suicides or no, drivers should have some protection or street lighting on the lake side. There have been too many incidents of cars going into Lake St. Clair for whatever reason.

Right now is the ideal time to construct a barrier, place reflective paint on curb or install street lighting on lake side — now before repaving begins.

Whittier residents disagree

To the Editor:

We, the undersigned, disagree with some facts stated in your article regarding the Whittier Retirement Residence (May 26 issue, "Few choices for alternative housing"). The prices you quote as being higher than other such homes is simply not true when you consider that the monthly rate includes two meals a day and bi weekly cleaning of the apartment. It also includes:

- Biweekly linen and towels
- Use of a beautiful swimming pool with a directed water exercise program three times a week

Artificial sweetie sours me

I got a telephone call last week from a Grosse Pointe businessman in his 50s. When we finished our conversation — a strictly business-type discussion about a news story — he said, "Thanks, sweetie."

He doesn't know me. He doesn't know if I'm a sweetie or not. He doesn't know my age — which is definitely beyond third grade, the maximum allowable sweetie age.

I was miffed. Or worse.

As I look forward to my (ahem) mumblemumbleth birthday, it seems appropriate to list the advantages of being an "older woman."

There are many. Outgrowing the sweetie designation is one of them.

Even though gravity has been doing its job — even though I often write obits for people my age or younger — even though it takes longer and costs more to get gussied up to appear in public — being older has more shoutable good news than bad.

As a woman of a certain age, midway between nubile and matronly, I have advantages that my younger counterparts lack.

Getting tan is not important anymore. If I could recapture all the time I spent broiling my limbs on beach towels, I could write a steamy stormy best-selling novel about Grosse Pointe; or earn a Ph.D. in aeronautical engineering; or discover a cure for AIDs; or invent a use for the fluff cycle on automatic dryers.

Nor is hair important anymore. Before curling irons were perfected, young women spent great chunks of time under the hoods of hot hair dryers with their long, wet hair wound around cylinders the size of Clorox bottles. We planned activities according to when our hair would look its best. We cancelled dates, cut classes, refused to be photographed, scheduled and rescheduled weddings, postponed giving birth, got divorces and called in sick because our hair wasn't clean, or dry, or properly curled.

I get fewer colds. According to doctors, by the time we hit 35 or so, we've already caught most of the icky viruses, flu bugs and garden-variety diseases and we've built up some industrial-strength immunities.

I look forward to a quiet evening at home.

I have my own magazine. Lear's — the magazine for the woman who wasn't born yesterday — runs features about women who've had the time and the gumption to do something besides maintain their body temperatures and grow long fingernails. People like Elizabeth Dole, Shana Alexander, Cory Aquino, Betty Friedan and Margaret Thatcher.

I've had some time and some experiences. I have a past. I've developed a perspective because I'm smack in the middle of a continuum that allows me to look backward AND forward. I use my failures to plot future successes.

I have developed, through experience, a healthy skepticism. I'm no longer sucked in by hawkers of mail-order diamonds, diet pills, magazine articles that promise to show me how to expand my wardrobe with scarves, entry-level jobs that pay $50,000 a year and allow me to work at home in my spare time, pet shop owners who assure me that both gerbils are males, "easy" or "quick" cookbooks, or ads for kittens: "free to a good home."

It seems, as the baby-booming bulge sails into its 40s, that grown-up accomplished women are finally getting some respect. Public opinion is upbeat and flattering for women who have survived their 30s with a sense of humor and vitality, and who have accumulated a bit of sophistication and a dash of style.

We're no longer relegated to rocking chairs and housedresses, sensible shoes, the kitchen, the coffee machine, advertisements for floor wax and bran flakes, or a place beside, and slightly behind, the spotlight that shines on successful silver-haired husbands.

We have character lines, not crowsfeet. We're ripe. Seasoned. Mellow.

Maturity is accompanied by a mood of serenity and stability, of survival and perspective. We have careers. We're sexy. We're alive and interested and interesting and funny and assertive. We are wearing well. We're getting older AND better. We're a hardy, blooming bunch of unsinkable survivors.

We can look forward to outlasting most of the men out age.

If one of those men calls me a gal, or dearie, or sweetie — I'm gonna break his leg. And say, "Sorry, Buster."

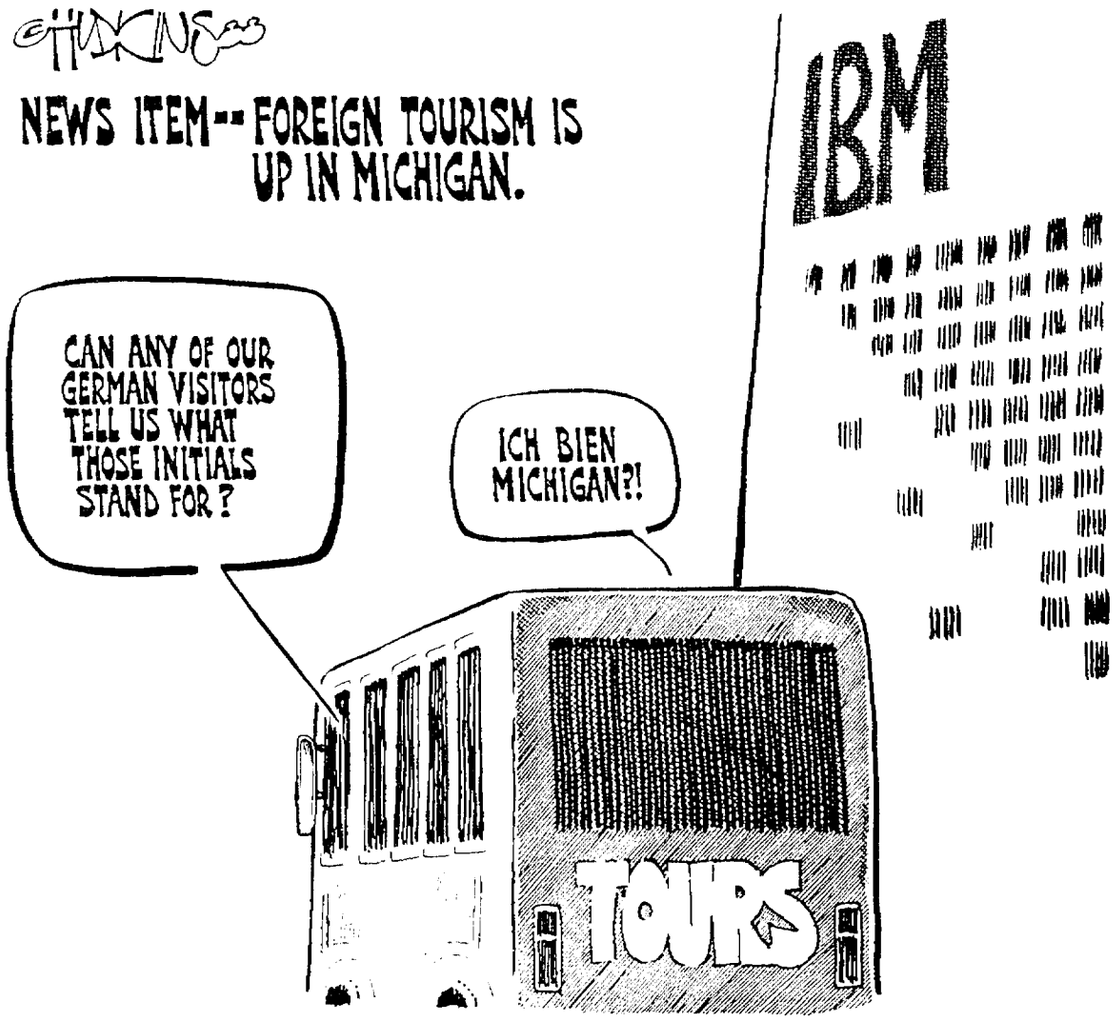

I Say

Back from the Breeze

No, it's not the original title from the famous movie with a similar name.

Letters have been arriving at the Grosse Pointe Academy as people are finding balloons sent aloft on March 18.

As part of an annual nationwide Weekly Reader Writing Pals Balloon Contest, Academy students participated in the launch.

The school with the farthest traveled air miles card, attached to the balloons, will receive $500.

One Academy second-grader Tim French, received a letter from Rome, N.Y. Lauren Klein's balloon also traveled to New York, where it was found in a trailer park in Red Creek.

Another balloon, sent by Gino D'Agostini, sailed across the river where it was found on Lake Erie in Ontario, Canada.

A great wager

For the second consecutive year, Congressman Dennis Hertel has challenged Congressman Joseph Kennedy of Boston on the outcome of the NBA Eastern Conference playoffs between the Detroit Pistons and the Boston Celtics.

Undaunted by his bet to Kennedy last year, he said, "The next time Paul Revere rises, he will be shouting 'the Pistons are coming, the Pistons are coming.' "

And here's the bet.

Hertel figures that if the Pistons win, Kennedy ought to fork over 10 pounds of East Coast lobster, and if the Pistons lose, he ships 10 pounds of Hamtramck kielbasa.

Not sure if that's what you call one of your "even-up" wagers, but last year Hertel dutifully delivered 10 pounds of sausage to Kennedy's Capitol Hill office.

Let's keep the kielbasa home. Go Pistons!

A good citizen

We at the Grosse Pointe News wish to thank the conscientious citizen who saw a hit-and-run accident occur on Kercheval last week.

Seems the woman saw the accident, wrote down the plate of the offending vehicle and placed it on the car of one of our employees.

It is the second time that this particular car has been struck while the employee was at work, but it is nice to know that there are people out there willing to take the time to help out.

Yesterday's Headlines

June 15, 1972—

The New York Times reported that an ex-intelligence aide said his unit, the 12th Reconnaissance Intelligence Technical Squadron, planned the 1970 bombing raids on North Vietnam that the Air Force claimed were "defensive reactions" several days before they took place. "We knew we weren't supposed to do it," he said, "but we were told there were orders from the Pentagon."

Henry Kissinger left Washington for his fourth visit to China. He was scheduled to discuss possible threats to Chinese national security caused by the war in Vietnam.

The spacecraft Mariner 9 was orbiting the planet Mars and sending back photographs of the planet surface. The data collected by Mariner 9 drastically changed scientific theories about Mars.

Federal Judge Stephen A. Roth ordered mass busing for Detroit and its suburbs. The plan he proposed involved the busing of more than 310,000 grade school and junior high students. The state of Michigan said it would appeal the decision.

William D. Ruckelshaus, administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, put a ban, effective Dec. 31, 1972, on all use of the pesticide DDT. Ruckelshaus made his decision after three years of legal proceeding and public hearings on the issue.

The safety of 40 percent of the fleet of B-52 bombers was found to be jeopardized by structural flaws that showed up under heavy use in the bombing of North Vietnam. The Defense Department refused to reveal the nature of the flaws.

Violence between the Communist Tupamaro faction and right-wing reactionaries in Uruguay threatened the long-lived peaceful democracy of that country. Uruguay had had a stable government since 1903.

In Grosse Pointe, police broke up a "sleep-in" at North High School. About 400 students had gathered in the school's parking lot and were drinking beer and shooting off firecrackers when neighbor's complaints brought police and school officials to the scene. The students were co-operative in cleaning up the area, and the crowd broke up by 1:30 a.m.

A 13-year-old girl reported that "black birds" were attacking passers-by on Marter Road between Hawthorne and Hollywood. Police said the birds were protecting a nest full of baby birds in some bushes in the area.

The 61st annual Grosse Pointe Horse Show was scheduled at the Hunt Club. More than 350 horses from the United States and Canada were scheduled to compete at the show.

Joan Hanpeter and Muir B. Snow won four-year terms on the Grosse Pointe Board of Education.

Grosse Pointe Park decided to lift a ban on liquor sales on election day. A state law requiring such a ban had recently been repealed, and the other Pointes had already lifted similar bans.

Mark Grimes, Duncan Campbell, Craig Cox and Jim Curto of Boy Scout Troop 156 were made Eagle Scouts.

A rash of bike thefts in the Shores and Woods worried police, who urged children to keep bikes locked and out of sight.

Historic day trip

The War Memorial is sponsoring a day trip Tuesday, June 14, that will appeal to anyone interested in historic preservation.

Participants will first visit Livonia where a guided tour of Greenmead is planned. The home, built in 1841, is listed on the National Register of historic places and has been restored to its original condition.

There will be a stop at the Botsford Inn for lunch, followed by a tour of the Governor Warner mansion. Built in 1867 for Michigan's first three-term governor, the home is a fine example of Victorian Italianate style of architecture.

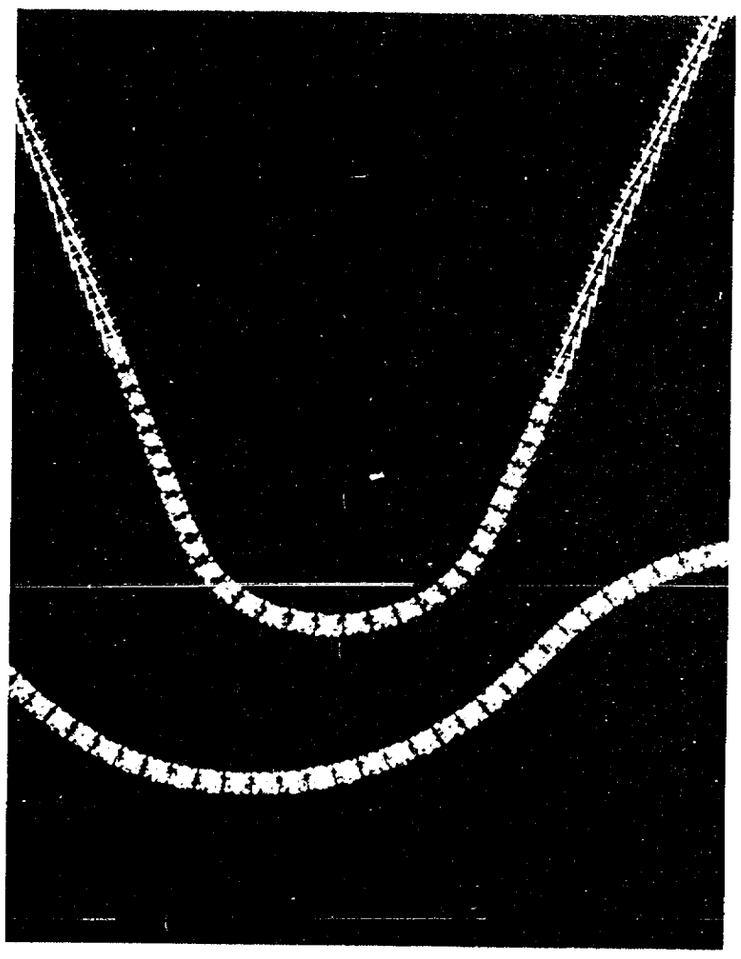

The trip leaves at 9 a.m. and returns at 4:30 p.m. Fee is $27 per person. For more information, call 881-7511.

The Unhappy Chimpanzee

"Oh, hum," Ralph the Chimpanzee murmured. "I have nothing, nothing to do." He popped another jellybean in his mouth. He was dozing. It was the morning.

Meanwhile in Central Square, the other animals of the rain forest were gathered for a meeting. "He's so unhappy," exclaimed Mrs. Alligator.

"Yes, I agree," seconded Mr. Anteater. They were gathered together because they wanted to cheer up Ralph. "How about a tea given in his name?" suggested Miss Monkey.

"Yes, what a good idea. Let's have one." So next Saturday Ralph came to the tea. There was coconut candy, tea (of course), bananas (Ralph's favorite) and an assortment of other things. Then the tea started. Miss Monkey started passing out tea in hollowed-out coconut cups. The best part Ralph thought was when the coconut candy came. He gobbled down three whole bars! Just about when the tea was over, Baby Mouse wandered down by the river. She was just about to wade in when Mrs. Mouse screamed, "Someone don't let her go in the water. . . she can't swim!"

Quick as a flash, Ralph ran down to the river and lunged for the baby mouse. He caught the mouse just before the current carried her away. There were shouts of joy. "Hurrah!" someone screamed, and Ralph actually smiled.

Coast Guard dedication

Grosse Pointe Park resident Capt. Theodore P. Brandsma, commanding officer of Coast Guard Group Detroit, at the left, presided at a ribbon- cutting ceremony for the dedication of a new Coast Guard Command Complex May 26. The new three-story building, east of the old headquarters on the Detroit River at the foot of Mount Elliott, will house facilities for several other Coast Guard commands in addition to Group Detroit — Marine Safety Office Detroit, Aids to Navigation Team Detroit, Reserve Unit Detroit and Reserve Unit Lake St. Clair.

Also present at the ceremony was former Grosse Pointer Capt. R.K. Peschel, former commanding officer of Coast Guard Group Detroit, at the right. Peschel is currently stationed in Yorktown, Va.

The new headquarters will replace a historic five-story building that was built in 1859, which is to become a museum. Part of the old Base Detroit will soon be converted into a park.

Tips on getting a summer job

Although summer vacation has already begun for many high school students, it's still not too late to find a summer job.

That's the advice two Michigan Employment Security Commission Job Service specialists offer on the cable television program "The Job Show" airing on Grosse Pointe Cable Channel 32 Monday-Sunday, 11:30 a.m. and 1 a.m., and Monday, Wednesday, Friday and Sunday at 6 p.m.

Hugh Day, a Job Service counselor, suggests that teens who want work should let friends know they are job hunting, since friends who are employed may hear about vacancies at their company.

Job seekers should show a potential employer they are familiar with the company, says Day. "If it's a fast food place, you could tell the person you have eaten there. If it's the barbershop, you might have had your hair cut there."

Teens could demonstrate their reliability by mentioning a good school attendance record, he suggests.

Darlene Reeser, Job Service supervisor at Detroit's Westside Job Service office, emphasizes the importance of filling out applications properly. An employer may even observe an applicant working on the application to see if he or she can follow directions, according to Reeser. She also reminds job-seekers to bring all the information they will need to fill out the forms, such as names and addresses of previous employers and the dates of employment.

"The Job Show" is provided as a public service and airs on 35 cable systems around the state, serving 700,000 subscribers.

From the Capitol

For grandparent's rights

By William R. Bryant Jr.
House Representative

The House Judiciary Committee has sent two bills to the House that would permit grandparents to petition the courts or visitation rights of their grandchildren.

House Bill 4466 allows grandparents to petition for visitation rights under certain circumstances. This can be done when parents are seeking, or have obtained, a divorce or separate maintenance, if a parent is deceased or if custody has been given to someone other than the natural parent. It also provides that a grandparent can petition the courts if a parent has withheld visitation in retaliation against the grandparent for reporting abuse or neglect or if one parent has lived apart from the other parent and grandchild for more than a year.

The second bill reported by the Judiciary Committee is House Bill 4401. This bill sets guidelines for a grandparent to obtain visitation rights when a child is adopted by a step-parent.

In addition, these bills remove restrictions on when grandparents may file for visitation rights. Presently, in order to file for visitation, the petition must be filed when the main proceeding, such as a divorce, is taking place. Under the new law, motions can be filed during or after the main proceeding has started.

This issue has been around for a long time. The main opponents of this legislation feel that the state should not legislate how a parent chooses to raise a child, that we don't license parents and they are allowed to make bad decisions. They say parents have a right to choose how they want their child to develop and by whom they should be influenced. But parents need grandparents, unless there is some particular reason why a grandparent should not be able to visit a grandchild. To be fair, in most cases, visitation rights of grandparents isn't a problem. But there are a growing number of grandparents who, for whatever reason, are being denied visitation rights of their own grand children. These bills provide a means whereby they can at least get a fair hearing on the issue. Michigan has a long history in adopting legislation which protects, and looks out for, the rights of children.

UAW retirees (who had commissioned the work) had to conceptualize what they wanted, but Johan would have to make it work his way. You cannot dictate to an artist. You must have continuous interplay.

"Fortunately, he had that with the retirees. They liked him and they loved his ideas."

By spring of 1987, Pewabic found that it could accommodate Sellenraad's project. People Mover work was still under way, but the pottery had leased an old firehouse bulding across the street and told Sellenraad to set up shop there.

"Oh, it was something. Johan couldn't find any place to work at first and when he looked upstairs in this old building, there was pigeon stuff all over," Allen explains with a chuckle.

Marieke Sellenraad Allen often works on the sun porch of her Grosse Pointe Farms home. Here she is with one of the tiles similar to those in the monument she helped create.

"But he is a carpenter and within three days, he had the old walls removed and recycled into work tables. In the meantime, I had gone to Ohio and had seen artists using a new type of slant board that would be just right for our needs. But they had to be sturdy enough to accommodate the heavy tiles. Johan went to work and soon he had those boards built, too."

Pewabic Pottery really got excited about Sellenraad's project at that point. Staff member Diane Kulisek, who had been working on the People Mover project, developed the special colors, or palate, Sellenraad needed.

"She was just fantastic about it. The problem with ceramics is that the unfired glaze always looks gray. You have to test it many times and even with extensive testing, oxidization and other factors can result in a copper color coming out looking green or red or brown," Allen explains.

"It drove Johan wild. He's a painter and used to knowing what color he wanted and just reaching for it. Now, he had to stop and wait to see how the test tiles matched up. You really have to be prepared for surprises with ceramics. Your whole sense of perfection has to be altered," Allen says.

The work began after the testing was completed in June. Allen enlisted the help of her daughter, Eleanor, and Sellenraad, the aid of his son and Pewabic staff. The group worked seven days a week under tremendous pressure to finish enough tiles for at least two panels to be erected in time for the Labor Day dedication.

There were many problems, Allen says. And an equal number of wonderful times.

"The calligraphy was painstaking. Instead of the one stroke it normally takes, I had to go over each letter three or four times after doing the layout in pencil. There were 88 tiles of text and then the headlines, timelines and donor names to finish. Then everything had to be fired.

"The tiles were so big, they cracked all the time during the firing. We found that we had to slow the firing because of the cracking, but that meant that production was slowed. Soon we began to have the technique down to where each firing would take five days."

It was a hectic summer. Allen and the others carried tiles back and forth across Jefferson from the workshop to the big kilns at Pewabic.

The new process the group had developed to safely fire the huge tiles called for them to be bisqued, fired with the color and again with the glaze and all at slower temperatures. It worked, but even then the tiles would shrink from their planned 11-1/4 inches.

"What you started with was not necessarily what you ended up with. Oh, it was an experience. We had to get everything done in such a short amount of time and we had nightmares that we wouldn't do it. But looking back on it, I have to laugh. It was so much fun."

There was the fun of working together, singing songs when the pressure built up. There was the team spirit. And for Allen, a student of many disciplines, there was what she had learned.

"To me, it gave a whole new view of the history of the labor movement in America. At that time in American history, I was in Holland and we had other things to think about, with the war. And it was exciting, too, to see what Pewabic could do."

Not that she wasn't already aware of the pottery's capabilities. In 1978, with her five children nearly grown, Allen began to study ceramics at Pewabic. It was a chance to further develop her lifetime interest in the art which she had employed for many years as a registered occupational therapist, mother and art teacher.

At the time, the pottery was under the aegis of Michigan State University. But state funding was drying up and the university was making noises about closing the pottery down.

"That was when the Pewabic Society formed. We felt that it should remain open and serve first as an educational facility, but also as a significant gallery, a consignment dealer and a museum.

"The board (Allen was by then a member) negotiated to keep the pottery open. Ownership was transferred to the Society. That first year was difficult. The pottery had been subsidized and now we had to get accustomed to not having the money right out there," Allen says.

That first year — 1980 — all the board members worked, including Allen, who was on the educational staff. Soon, the Pewabic won a grant and used it to hire a full time director, Hock, who is now director emeritus.

"She helped it grow tremendously, into a place that we can be proud of," Allen adds.

As proud as Sellenraad and Allen are of the finished monument in Flint.

"We had three panels up by Labor Day and put the fourth up later. The dedication was wonderful. There were bands and crowds and two hours of speeches. The whole family was there and my father, he was so proud of Johan," Allen recalls, smiling.

"Johan was finally introduced . . . and he had about 20 seconds to speak," she laughs. "What could he say? He told them, 'This work speaks for itself.'

"And it does. People we've met seem to really study it, to relate to it. And the UAW was so excited over it. They considered Johan a hero for having come through so well."

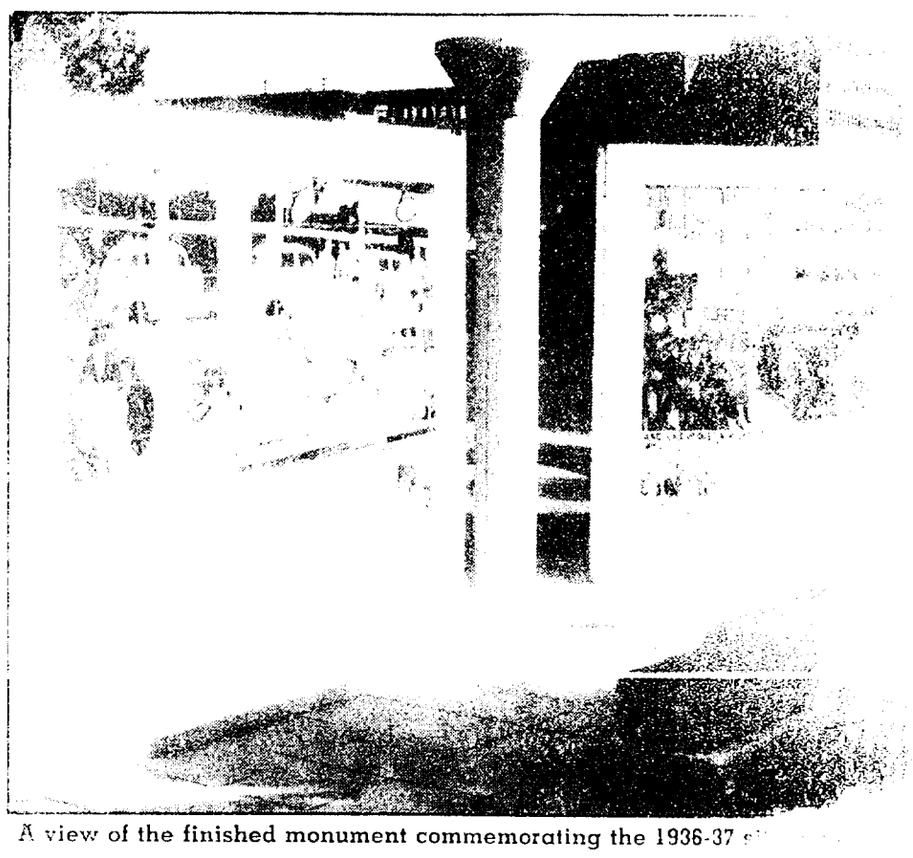

Allen shows a visitor the slides and the hundreds of photographs she took of the project from start to finish. There was the poignant shot of a laid-off autoworker studying the monument deep in thought. And there is a wonderfully warm photo she took of Johan Sellenraad and their father on the site of the monument. The son and father wear identical smiles mirroring a mixture of pride and love.

Allen talks about the monument with those same emotions. "It really is a wonderful piece. I think that first of all, the whole concept of having Michigan people work on it — the pottery, the tile installers, the people of Flint and especially the autoworkers — is a great one.

"You really have to see the monument to appreciate its power."

It is situated in Flint not far from the Fisher Body 1 plant, close to the city's Auto World museum. The monument is styled like an open book, capable of being read on both sides. The panels feature a view of the sit down strike from the inside looking out, one from the outside looking in and depictions of 1950s and 1980s era assembly plants.

Placed before three of the walls are replicas of 1936 Chevy front seats made of solid, reinforced grout and installed by skilled autoworkers. People who view the piece can sit in the seats and almost feel a part of the work. Set into the base of one wall are 15 bronze replicas of Chevy door hinges — the type

Incumbent, 3 challengers vie for 2 seats on school board

By Peter A. Salinas
Staff Writer

Three men and one woman are seeking election to two seats on the Grosse Pointe Board of Education at the annual school election set for Monday, June 13.

They are Fred W. Adams, Ernest Beuchler, Timothy H. Howlett and Gloria J. Konsler.

A variety of issues face the board in the months ahead, most importantly what will happen to the district's funding if state legislators decide on a school financing reform package.

Following the recent defeats of a library millage increase and an $8.6 million library expansion bond issue, the district will ask voters to approve a four-tenths mill increase June 13, so the library can maintain current levels of operation.

Following is information on each candidate:

Fred W. Adams

Fred W. Adams

A Grosse Pointe resident for 38 years, Fred W. Adams, 77, has been connected to education for most of that time.

He is married to Mary Grace and they have two children, both graduates of the Grosse Pointe School system.

He was advertising manager for Packard Motors for 15 years, before he moved to American Motors in the same capacity. He then worked in the Federal Consumer Affairs Department of the Housing and Urban Development agency under George Romney.

For years, Adams served on the board of trustees of Western Michigan University.

Now seeking his second term on the Grosse Pointe Board of Education, after having been elected the board's president during his first term, Adams is the only incumbent among the four candidates.

"It is a time-consuming position," he said, "but I have the time, and I find the job very interesting."

While not endorsing any other candidate, Adams said he is pleased with the field of candidates running for the board. He added that he is running on his experience and record of service.

"From the first, I have felt that trustees are there to set overall policies," Adams said. "I don't like to get into the nitty gritty operational things. That is what we have a superintendent for."

Adams said that the recent controversy between Superintendent John Whritner and Deputy Superintendent Joseph Spagnoli was unfortunate.

He did not elaborate, but said that the board was behind Whritner and that he was proud to have served on the committee that selected him.

Adams has a well-developed committee to re-elect, which includes current board member Dorothy Kennel, Joseph L. Hudson Jr., Lawrence Kennedy, Frank J. Sladen Jr. and others. He said he plans on running newspaper advertisments, passing out door-to-door handouts and mailing informational postcards.

Adams said the four-tenths millage increase for the library is "absolutely critical."

"Without that millage, library operations would have to be curtailed," Adams said.

Adams said expansion of the library is inevitable and said the district and the various committees supporting the expansion will have to do a better selling job to the public. He said the failure of the expansion bond issue was due to several concerns, including the stock market crash in October and concerns over taking away part of South's athletic field and parking.

Adams said the biggest issue facing the district in the months and years ahead is financing on both the local and state level. Adams said he has studied the various proposals now being suggested in the state Legislature on the state legislative committee of the Michigan Association of School Boards.

He said he has been to Lansing almost every month in the last three years, and he has listened to most of the proponents of various educational reform plans.

"Maintaining the financial integrity of this school system is the most important concern we face," he said. "We face bond issues, millage campaigns and building and infrastructure repairs. Grosse Pointe schools have set an example for being beautifully maintained, and we intend to uphold that tradition.

Ernest Buechler

With 25 years experience in education including serving on the Grosse Pointe Board of Education from 1980 to 1984, Ernest Buechler feels he has much to contribute if he is re-elected.

Buechler, 53, is principal at Wayne Elementary School in the Detroit Public School System. He has been a school administrator for 23 years and was an intern administrator under Sam Brownell.

An eastside Detroit native, Buechler has been a Woods resident for 12 years. He has one son who is a senior at North and two older sons who graduated from the district.

Buechler said he ran for reelection in 1984, but "got beat in the hassle over the closing of Barnes School."

A member of the search committee that selected current Superintendent John Whritner, Buechler said he would like a chance to work with him.

"I only had a chance to work with John Whritner for three months," said Buechler. "I would like to work with him as a member of the board. I have a great deal of respect for him and he has very good credentials."

Ernest Buechler

He said he feels good about the caliber of those running for election, and while not running with any other candidate, he said he supports Adams' bid for re-election.

He has circulated literature, sent out postcards and will meet with various groups to campaign for the board seat. He has held no other public office, other than his previous term on the school board. He said he has also regularly attended school board meetings.

Buechler said he does not know enough details to comment about the non-renewal of Deputy Superintendent Joseph Spagnoli's contract with the district.

"The board had to make a decision," he said, " and the problem has been resolved by the board. I don't know all the details and I feel it would be unfair for me to make a judgment. I do feel that personnel matters are handled better in closed session rather than at an open hearing. But Dr. Spagnoli requested the open session."

The four-tenths mill increase for the library is essential, Buechler said.

"I am supportive of this minimum increase and supportive of the libraries in general," he said.

He added that last year's library expansion bond issue which failed may have been "too big a chunk" for voters to approve at once. He said he is supportive of library expansion and that perhaps a modified scaled-back plan would meet with voter approval.

He sees the major issues facing the district as school financing reform and the district's own financial affairs. He said financing reform is needed at the state level, but does not support any plan that would cap the number of mills a local school district could levy.

"I do not support any plan with the Robin Hood concept," he said. "There is inequity in the country, the state, and that needs to be addressed, but people in Grosse Pointe ought to be able to provide the kind of educational program they determine they want to provide."

Buechler supports a strong vocational educational program that the district currently provides. He said that there are many students within the system who are not college-oriented, and that the vocational programs can be expanded without spending a lot of money. He sees room for improvement in the area of auto mechanics, commerical food service and airline reservation courses.

Timothy H. Howlett

Timothy H. Howlett

Coming from a family deeply involved in education, Timothy H. Howlett said he has always had an interest in public service.

Howlett, 40, has three children in the Grosse Pointe School System. A Park resident, he has practiced law with the firm of Dickinson, Wright, Moon, Van Dusen & Freeman for 13 years.

Over the past five years, he has devoted hundreds of hours to the Neighborhood Club's soccer teams as a coach.

This coming school year the Howletts will have a child at South, Pierce and Maire schools, which he said will give him the maximum day-to-day contact with the system.

Howlett's father was district superintendent at Stockbridge Schools, and he grew up in an educational atmosphere.

Actively involved in the administration of his law firm, his practice specialties are employment relations and litigation. He said he can bring his expertise in negotiations to the board.

"I can also bring my experience in dealing with factual issues and in looking at several sides of an issue to determine the facts," he said. "Eighty percent of the district's expenditures are in labor costs, and contract negotiations are an important part of running a school district."

He said he is not critical of the policies or actions of the current board, and that he is impressed with the way they work together.

Though not running with another candidate, Howlett feels the other candidates are a strong field.

"Each person has a legitimate interest in running for the board," he said.

Howlett said the on-site budget concept is an idea worth trying.

"Each building would be treated as a separate entity budget-wise," he said. "It is a chance for experimentation and something one school can try. If it works, then it is something that could be implemented system-wide."

He said that the most critical issue facing the board was the issue of state-wide funding.

"It would be wonderful to be an ostrich and hope nothing will happen," Howlett said, "but we can't. The board must work toward not having a mandated figure imposed on it. That would do nothing but legislate mediocrity. There should be no artificial limit imposed. A significant portion of people live here because of the school system. People need the local option to do what they want. They should be given that choice."

Howlett said another issue facing the district is the guidance and counseling situation.

"My own impressions at Pierce are that the counselors are overloaded," he said. "Counselors should not have noon hour duty, and that duty should be removed immediately."

He said the board has not done anything of which he is critical, and added that the strategic planning efforts the board has approved will benefit the district.

"This is a serious issue that must be addressed in terms of dollars," he said. "A cost-benefit analysis should be done to determine what priority the various plans shold get."

He said there is a political risk the board is taking in having studies, such as the guidance and counseling and strategic planning, performed and then not acting on them.

"You're asking a great deal of the volunteers and then not doing anything," he said. "You could lose them. These issues need a much more considered response."

Howlett is campaigning through the mail with informational postcards as well as running some newspaper ads.

He said he felt the board handled the personnel matter between John Whritner and Joseph Spagnoli well, and without knowing the details, had no complaints.

The four-tenths mill increase the school board is asking for to maintain library operations is necessary, Howlett said.

"We need to keep weekend hours," he said. "This is a time when pre-schoolers and senior citizens use the library. This is critical from a public relations standpoint to pass this millage. It is tough enough to justify the increase and explain why more money is needed to maintain current operations, and made even more difficult in a situation where a millage and bond issue have recently been defeated."

Howlett said he favors expansion of the libraries, and will work toward getting a future proposal passed.

Having followed the recent debates over financial reform at the state level, Howlett said he favors property tax relief, but wants to see more state dollars spent on education. He said he felt a compromise between the House and Senate plans could be achieved.

He said he feels the role of a trustee is to provide independent review of administration decisions, but not to get caught up in the decision making itself.

"The board is there to ask the difficult questions and its leadership role is critical," he said.

Gloria Konsler

At the encouragement of friends and acquaintances, longtime school activist Gloria J. Konsler tossed her hat into the race for a seat on the board of education.

Konsler, 43, is a bookkeeper with Georgian East Nursing Home, a job she recently took. While rearing her two children, a North sophomore and a Parcells seventh-grader, Konsler was extremely active in the school system.

She currently serves on the Parcells PTO board, is a member of the North High Parent Club Board and editor of its newsletter, and a member of the PTO Council executive board.

A resident of Grosse Pointe for 10 years, she has served on PTO boards for the past three years at Ferry, Parcells, and now North. She has held positions from room mother to being a member of the district's Strategic Planning Committee as an area chairperson.

"I have attended regular school board meetings since 1982," Konsler said.

She said ever since she became involved in school activities at Ferry, people have encouraged her to run for the school board. She said she is not linked with any other candidate or running on one particular issue.

The most important issues facing the school district, says Konsler, are school financing at the state level and getting the millage renewal passed locally in March 1989.

"It is going to be tough to have taxpayers realize that the millage has to be passed to continue on with our current programs," she said.

Gloria Konsler

She said that while there are no serious problems within the district, there is room for improvement in some areas. She said the athletic fields, especially for soccer, can be improved, and that the instructional television system should be a priority.

"The area of special education is always a priority," she said.

Her campaign committee has held some fundraisers, and Konsler plans to send out letters, attend coffees and do some newspaper advertising to win a seat on the board.

She said she felt that the board of education handled the controversey between Superintendent John Whritner and Deputy Superintendent Joseph Spagnoli well.

"I am on record at one of the meetings as supporting the board's decision and Dr. Whritner," she said. Adding that she didn't know all the details of the controversy, she felt those who made the decision were qualified to make it and were the only ones that had all the facts.

She said she feels that the four-tenths mill increase for the libraries is "absolutely necessary" for the libraries to maintain current levels of operation.

"Failure of that millage request would be a real loss for the community," she said. "The library system needs to be expanded, but the timing of the November bond issue was wrong."

She said she has been invited to participate on the Library Expansion Committee, but could not because of time constraints. She said that if it were up to her, she would not resubmit the same plan, but would scale back the proposal in places.

"I thought it was a wonderful plan," she noted, "but I think the general public felt it was too big a bite to take all at once."

She said that she has not studied the Michigan legislature's proposals to reform school financing, but in her opinion, local districts must retain control of the tax dollars they receive and be allowed to raise as much tax as voters will allow.

"I would not support any legislative plan that would reduce the quality of some schools to improve other schools," she said.

She said her goal is to serve as an intelligent and informed member of the school board.

"I want to be able to make intelligent decisions without being biased by special interests," she said.

She said school administrators should run the district.

"Board members are there to set the course," she said. "Board members also make sure their are no disasters. I'm not in this race for power and glory. I am someone who is a hard worker and this is something I want to do for the community."

ting a program together for the entire school system," Leleszi said.

This coming budget year will not see many improvements, but the one improvement which will be made is the purchase of new science text books at the middle school level.

Science teachers from throughout the district labored many months to come up with the best texts for students in Grosse Pointe.

The LaserDisc system currently in use at Brownell correlate to the new texts.

Each LaserDisc is the equivalent to 35,000 slides, says Leleszi, that can be used without having to darken a room, so that students may take notes throughout the lesson.

"By using a combination of this equipment," Leleszi said, "and applying technology to teaching in the real world, we can better educate children.

"More and more, we as teachers are dependent on technology.

Leleszi said that during Parent Nights, the kids step right up to the computers and show their parents what they can do.

"Most of the parents would be hard put to do this," he said. "They are amazed at what kids are able to do."

Next school year, Leleszi said, through the Apple Computer Clubs, students will be able to communicate with students as far away as California and possibly the Soviet Union via computer.

"We will be hooking up our modem with others between schools," he said. "We are setting up contacts now."

Leleszi said the kids, at all grade levels and learning capabilities, love using the computers.

Don Messing, principal at Brownell, said he is wholly supportive of the efforts of the science department in improving the school's technological capabilities.

"Because of the needs of the learner at the middle school level," Messing said, "one needs hands-on activities."

Messing has approved the purchase of computer programs with school budget funds to enhance the system.

"It is no longer a lecture environment," Messing said. "You have to have student involvement in the learning process."

"When you see students grasp figures and concepts with greater clarity," Leleszi said, "you know it's working."

Farms Prosecutor Matthew Rumora, 39, became the city's new municipal court judge Friday morning, May 27, when he was sworn in. His term officially began June 1. From left are Judge Frank Jeanette, Judge Peter O'Rourke, Rumora and State Sen. John Kelly.

Rumora takes oath of office

New Farms Municipal Court Judge Matthew Rumora was sworn in before about 60 peers, friends and family May 27.

Judge Peter E. O'Rourke, who resigned his four-year term two and one-half years after being elected, said that Rumora was an ideal candidate for the job and that the Farms council was [illegible] to select him.

Rumora has been a lawyer for [illegible] years and has experience in both criminal and civil cases. He was on the other side of the bench in the Farms court as the city prosecutor.

After being sworn in by Judge Frank Jeanette, former Macomb County Circuit Court judge, Rumora said he "never dreamed this situation would arise."

"I will do my best to see to it that justice is done," he told the audience, which included district, circuit and federal appellate court judges.

State Sen. John Kelly presented Rumora with a copy of a resolution which he had passed in the Senate honoring the new judge and praising the Farms for its selection.

Kelly read a number of Rumora's achievements and affiliations with various legal associations, and then Kelly added one of Rumora's lesser known duties:

"Even with all of this," Kelly quipped, "Matt still found time to peel potatoes in Gail Kaess' basement for my many Irish fundraisers."

Farms city administration officials as well as council members Kaess and John Crowley were on hand for the brief ceremony.

There was one surprise

O'Rourke, whom Rumora replaces, used the opportunity to give his opinion about the need of a district court system in the Pointes.

He said when he [illegible] municipal judge, he [illegible] convinced that a district court [illegible] needed, but said after [illegible] more than two years, he is now convinced one is needed. He urged the communities and their councils to study the court [illegible] tion.

"It is my feeling, and [illegible] ing of many other judges [illegible] district court is needed [illegible] Pointes for the purpose [illegible] tering of justice," he said. [illegible] meantime, I would [illegible] councils continue to [illegible] municipal court [illegible] ing needs [illegible] court offices."

Students turn Village shops into Disney gallery

The stores in the Village became an outdoor art gallery May 14 when 110 students from 17 schools participated in the Grosse Pointe Village Association's second Paint the Window Contest. The theme was the World of Walt Disney in honor of Mickey Mouse's 60th birthday.

There were plenty of Mickeys and Minnies as well as Donald Duck, Pluto, Jiminy Cricket, Davey Crockett, Bambi, the Magic Kingdom, Epcot and even Merlin Magic.

Each child received an Epcot pin and certificate of participation from Walt Disney World. A number of prizes were donated by Walt Disney World and Delta Airlines.

The school prize, a large framed poster of the Magic Kingdom, was awarded to Maire School which had 22 young painters decorating the windows.

Epcot watches for the theme winner of each grade were awarded to Michel Danel, kindergarten; Nathan Steiner, first grade; Danny Pierce, second grade; Beth Hackleman, third grade; Heather Hill, fourth grade; and Lindsey Difazio, fifth grade.

Posters were given for special merit to Mark Nicholas Lindeman, Bradley McKeen, Leo Nouhan and Erik Votruba.

Kelly Horrigan, 12, was awarded the grand prize for Best in Show — a framed honorary citizenship to Walt Disney World. She is the daughter of Rena and Bill Wilson of Grosse Pointe Park.

Lake St. Clair water forecast

Lake St. Clair's water level at the end of April was about 13 inches below what it was one year ago and about 1 inch above one month ago. The April monthly mean level was about 13 inches above the long-term average.

For mariners, the end of April level was 35 inches above chart datum.

The six-month forecast of levels for Lake St. Clair shows that the lake is expected to be above its long-term average level during the next six months. The forecast shows that at the end of May, Lake St. Clair will be about 2 inches above what it was at the end of April. The lake is expected to continue its seasonal rise into June.

Farms resident draws battle lines across dining room table

By Margie Reins Smith
Staff Writer

Dinner conversation has been lively at times over Drew and Karen Peslar's dining room table.

Drew Peslar became intrigued with the Civil War in the early 1960s, while he was studying political science at Michigan State University.

He was so intrigued — in fact — that 17 years ago he decided to build a model of the battle of Chancellorsville, a major conflict of the war, and, in Peslar's opinion, a turning point for the Union army. Peslar spent nearly a year on his project — always striving for historical accuracy.

Drew Peslar

Then the Peslars constructed a 10-foot x 4 1/2-foot representation of the battle of Chancellorsville and built a dining room table to display the model.

"We needed a dining room table anyway," he said.

The model includes the Rappahannock River, representations of important farmhouses, taverns and churches, more than 200 miniature soldiers with uniforms painted blue and gray, and an accurate representation of roads, pontoon bridges, trees and trenches. All historically accurate. The fiberglass model is set into a 5-inch deep base and covered with a 300-pound slab of 1/2 inch plate glass.

The whole project took more than nine months. After it was complete, Peslar said that when they had dinner parties, "I used to abuse people something awful. It didn't take much for me to whip off the tablecloth and talk about the battle. I even had a pointer. And a hat."

Peslar had never made a model before. He experimented with plaster of paris, but it was too heavy. He ended up using Styrofoam covered with papier mache, then fiberglass, then paint.

The trees are sponges, painted green. Roads were varnished, then sprinkled with sawdust. Each of the miniature soldiers had to be washed and painstakingly painted with four different colors to represent a Union or Confederate uniform.

He swiped houses for the model from old monopoly sets. "Only the older sets had wooden houses." They were painted to represent the farms, outbuildings, taverns and churches that existed during the time of the battle.

Even after 17 years, Peslar still gets enthusiastic when he explains the intricate strategies and maneuvers of the three-day battle that took place in May 1863.

General Robert E. Lee won the battle of Chancellorsville — even though Union General "Fighting Joe" Hooker had a better conceived battle plan, Peslar said.

"It's my personal opinion," he said, "that Chancellorsville was the turning point of the Civil War — not Gettysburg."

Peslar and his wife researched the battle of Chancellorsville for six months before they began experimenting with the building of the model. They went to Virginia, walked the battlefield, took photographs. "We got the feel for the topography. Some of the trenches are still there."

The battle at Chancellorsville is a significant one, he said, for several reasons:

• General Stonewall Jackson was fatally shot by his own troops. "On the second night of the battle, Jackson was surveying the front battle lines, when by error, he was shot in the left arm," Peslar said. "He lost a lot of blood and was evacuated to a farmhouse behind the lines. His arm had to be amputated. When General Lee heard this, he allegedly said, 'General Jackson has lost his left arm — but I have lost my right.' This was an accurate depiction of Lee's regard for Jackson. Jackson died 10 days later."

• The battle of Chancellorsville was the first really aggressive, intelligent military victory for the South. According to Peslar, General Hooker had a well-conceived strategic battle plan that should have ensured victory. Hooker should have won. "Lee was the better general. If Lee had been less of a general, the war would have ended (at Chancellorsville).

Lee's response to Hooker on three occasions during this battle, he said, "was to put his entire army at risk. Even though outnumbered, Lee divided his army several times in order to confuse the enemy. He turned what should have been defeat into an aggressive, courageous victory."

According to Hooker's plan, Lee was supposed to retreat to Richmond. That would have been logical. "Hooker was counting on that and had 10,000 cavalry waiting for him.

"Instead, Lee was willing to engage the enemy in an aggressive and imaginative way — which confused the enemy and turned the advantage for him."

• The Union used aerial balloons for surveillance. Peslar said he couldn't figure out a way to incorporate the balloons in his model.

• The Corps of Engineers created pontoon bridges to move troops across rivers. Peslar has represented these bridges at several points on his model of the Rappahannock.

"It's stricly my personal opinion," he said, "that after Lee won the battle (of Chancellorsville) "there was little jubilation. The South had the sense, for the first time, of winning a battle — but losing the war. This was the turning point of the war, not Gettysburg."

Peslar said that the Civil War is important because it still affects our political structure in a significant way. "Political parties are not based exclusively on philosophies," he said. "Historical experience and geography are critical. People don't realize this."

It's still interesting, he said, to note that when people from Michigan discuss the Civil War, they use the term 'we' to refer to the Union. "People in Georgia use 'we' to refer to the Confederate army. After 120 years, we're still distinctly regional."

Smoke detector tips

Having a smoke detector in your home could save your life. The National Safety Council has these suggestions for keeping your smoke detector working properly:

• Buy a detector that is listed by a recognized testing laboratory. Install it according to the manufacturer's instructions or call your fire department for assistance.

• You should have one detector for each level of your house. Install the detector on the ceiling or six to 12 inches below the ceiling on the wall. Don't place a detector in a corner, or near an air vent or the stove.

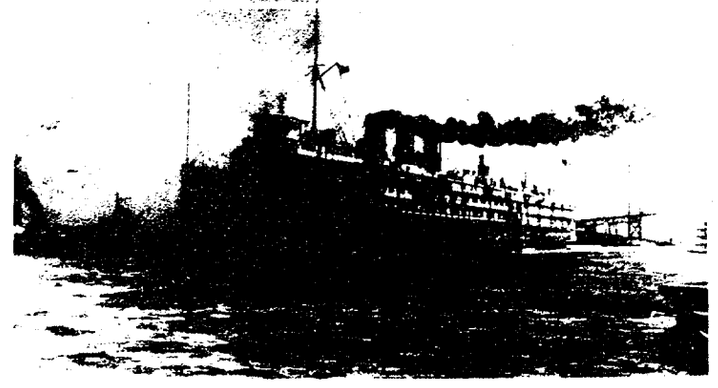

• Clean your smoke detector at least once a year, since dust can collect inside and impair its effectiveness.

• Test your smoke detector every month and change its batteries at least once a year. To help you remember, try cleaning your detector and changing its batteries on your birthday.

The village council of Grosse Pointe Shores adopted a 1988-89 budget of $3,244,530 May 24. In addition, the trustees set the 1988 millage tax rate at 15.40 mills.

"It's a good budget," said Village Manager Michael Kenyon. "It will allow repair of the village's infrastructure."

The largest expenditure — 144,740 — is for public safety. In addition, $494,830 has been set aside for the water department, $478,055 for public works, and $232,725 for sanitation.

The tax rate — 15.40 mills — represents a reduction from last year's rate of 16.35.

REALTOR PROFILE:

ANNA NIFOROS
CLOSING OFFICER

Anna Niforos is one of our most valued employees. She has been with our agency since 1977. Due to her numerous abilities and knowledge, she was promoted to Executive Level many years ago. In addition, she has had real estate license since 1978.

Anna is the backbone of our Real Estate Division in her capacity as our Closing Officer. She supervises the entire processing of all real estate transactions from the point of purchase through the final closing. She always has the answers and is our problem solver.

Since our real estate agents are busy, out of the office, selling and listing property, it is a tremendous advantage to our sellers and buyers to have someone always available whose main job is to follow up and co-ordinate their transaction. This leads to good communication and pleased clients, as opposed to buyers and sellers playing "phone tag" with their real estate agents.

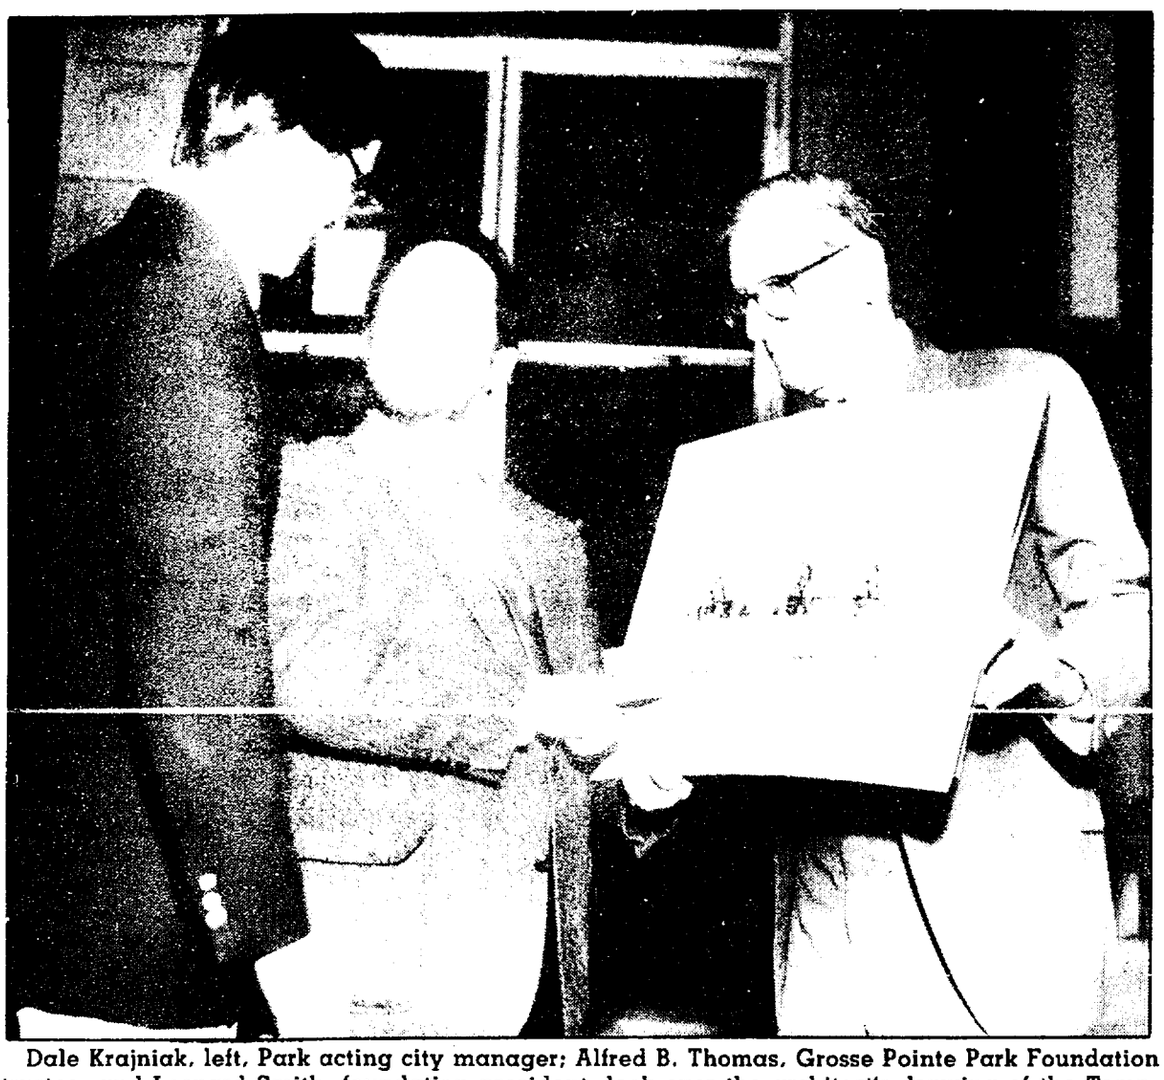

Married to Theodore C. Niforos, they have four grown children, Dean and Elaine, students at Michigan State University, Andrea, a recent graduate of Our Lady Star of the Sea High School, who will attend M.S.U. in the Fall, and Marilyn, a Junior at Star H.S.

In her spare time Anna has worked on the Board of Directors at Our Lady Star of the Sea High School as well as assisting her church, Assumption Greek Orthodox Church on Marter Road, by working on many committees and projects over the years.

It is a common comment from Banks, Title Company's, and other Brokers that Anna is . . . "THE BEST IN THE BUSINESS"! We think so too!

As a realtor, Anna works with Clients on a referral basis only.

Dale Krajniak, left, Park acting city manager; Alfred B. Thomas, Grosse Pointe Park Foundation trustee; and Leonard Smith, foundation president, look over the architect's drawing of the Tompkins Activity Center renovation. Construction will begin this month and should be completed by the end of the summer.

Groundbreaking set for activity center

The Grosse Pointe Park Foundation will break ground for the renovation of the Windmill Pointe Park community center on Wednesday, June 8, at 8 a.m.

The renovated building will be named Tompkins Community Center in honor of Charles S. (Tommy) and Jean Tompkins, who donated $50,000 to the project.

"We are very pleased to begin the project after nearly three years of raising funds toward the renovation of the Community Center," said Leonard Smith, president of the foundation.

The project is expected to be completed by the end of the summer.

In an effort to raise additional funds, a cocktail party will be held Thursday, June 16, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ted Gatzaros. Tickets are $25 each and may be obtained by calling 822-6200.

The Grosse Pointe Park Foundation recently elected new officers: Leonard W. Smith, president; John C. Prost, vice president; Shirley J. Kennedy, secretary; and Douglas G. Graham, treasurer.

In addition, several new trustees were added to the board. They are Walker L. Cisler, Alfred W. Cytacki, John H. Fildew, Arthur H. Getz, Vincent F. LoCicero and Patricia M. Young.

Continuing as trustees are Robert H. Davies Jr., Robert J. Hutton, Judith K. Keating, George A. Nicholson Jr., John L. Smucker, Alfred B. Thomas, Palmer T. Heenan, Roger F. McNeill, M.D., and Josephine Joy MacLaine. Acting resident agent is Dale M. Krajniak and attorney R. Craig Hupp.

Contractor chosen

The Park council awarded the contract for construction of the Tompkins Activity Center to Bologna Contracting Corp.

The bid for the basic project — renovation and additions to the activities center at Windmill Pointe Park — was for $255,311. Since all bids were lower than anticipated, council decided to include four building options for the project: an entrance canopy, stone surfacing, terrazzo floor refinishing and additional refinished interior work, raising the total to $272,736.

Bologna Contracting was the second-lowest bidder. The lowest bid ($215,000 for the basic project, without options) was not considered by the council, because the Ron-Sen Co., a Farmington Hills construction firm, said that they had inadvertently omitted several material items from their calculations, according to Acting City Manager Dale Krajniak.

R.J. Senkowski Jr., superintendent at Ron-Sen, said, "We feel an injustice has been done. We said we would stand by our bid. There was no error. We didn't forget anything."

Krajniak said, "The council was fearful that corners would be cut because of the unusually low bid. We concur with the architect's representative's strong recommendation that the award go to to the second-lowest bidder."

Krajniak added, "Would anyone buy a Caprice Classic at a Chevette price without questioning it?"

Ballet based on fairy tale

Motria Fedirko's School of Classical Ballet will present "The Princess Who Wouldn't Smile" Friday, June 10 at 7:30 p.m. in the St. Paul School gymnasium, 170 Grosse Pointe Blvd.

The three-act ballet is based on the delightful fairy tale about a beautiful princess who won't smile. Despite the best efforts of family and friends who attempt to please her with toys and treats, animals and magic, she remains unhappy and unsmiling.

Finally in the last act, a prince arrives and presents her with a rose, the symbol of love. At last she has something to smile about.

Fedirko's past productions have been family favorites, known for the colorful costumes as well as the imaginative choreography, music and scenery. This year's production will feature 151 of her students.

Tickets will be available at the door and are $3.50 for adults and $2 for children.

There will be a stop at the Botsford Inn for lunch, followed by a tour of the Governor Warner mansion. Built in 1867 for Michigan's first three-term governor, the home is a fine example of Victorian Italianate style of architecture.

The trip leaves at 9 a.m. and returns at 4:30 p.m. Fee is $27 per person. For more information, call 881-7511.

Farms sailor modifies plans for around-the-world journey

By Margie Reins Smith
Staff Writer

After spending a year aboard his 33-foot sailboat, including a glorious winter in the Bahamas, Dick Knoblauch has returned to Grosse Pointe with some new insights and a modified plan for sailing around the world.

"I would be going on (exactly as planned) except for one thing: the loneliness.

"I know now, for sure, that I'm not an introvert. I'm people-oriented. I knew that before, but I tried to ignore it," he said.

Knoblauch still intends to sail around the world. He's back in Grosse Pointe, briefly, after the first year of his five-year odyssey.

"It was a good year. I'm not crushed or destroyed because I haven't completed my original goal."

Knoblauch left Grosse Pointe Farms 12 months ago aboard Sea Dreamer, a 33-foot double-ended cutter he built himself. He was well-prepared for his long-dreamed-of around-the-world adventure. He's been sailing since he was 10 years old and has built two boats, taught sailing, logged thousands of nautical miles aboard a variety of sailing craft, and read everything he could get his hands on about single-handed sailing.

He retired from his job as a teacher of dentistry last year. He's 54 years old — a young retiree — and he said he expects to enjoy a long, interesting, active retirement. "So many people who retire can't live out what they'd like to do because of finances, physical limitations or the lack of an understanding partner," he said. "I'm lucky because I have many years to enjoy retirement with my family."

Knoblauch's plans were to explore the Caribbean, Europe, Scandanavia, the Netherlands, France, the Mediterranean and the Aegean. Then he was going to trace Columbus' western route across the Atlantic, travel through the Panama Canal, sail the South Pacific, the Indian Ocean, around the Cape of Good Hope and back to the Caribbean.

Gini Knoblauch was going to accompany her husband for selected portions of the adventure and two of their daughters were to join him for certain portions of the five-year trip.

Much of the dream trip, however, would have to be accomplished alone.

Knoblauch is back in Grosse Pointe for a few months' respite and to modify his itinerary. "I have many years to enjoy retirement with my family," he said. "not just with porpoises and whales and aborigines.

His odyssey began last May 21, when he headed down the Detroit River, through Lake Erie, into Lake Ontario to Toronto, through the St. Lawrence River to Quebec.

Although he didn't have a camera aboard for much of the trip, he kept a journal of voice tapes. He recalled some highlights:

"I was sailing at night through a town called Rimouski. I had been down below and was coming up the ladder when I thought (my boat) was on fire. The wake was aglow." He was witnessing a phenomenon called bioluminescence. Microscopic plankton, which glows when it's agitated, was producing enough light to read by, he said. "The whole wake was aglow for 150-200 feet behind me; the bow wave was peeling off with a brilliant blue-green light."

Knoblauch continued along the coast of New Brunswick to Prince Edward Island and through the Canso straits.

"Nova Scotia was beautiful," he said. "Beautiful people, beautiful scenery. It's just too cold in winter. I lucked out and found no fog while I was there. It's a clean, clear, beautiful country, with only biodegradable pollution."

The southeast coast of Nova Scotia, he said, is also interesting because of its aquatic life. "Porpoises follow the boat; play in its wake. Sea lions pop their heads up, check out your boat, then . . . on they go."

Gini Knoblauch joined her husband for sailing through the Bras d'or Lakes in the Cape Breton Islands.

Knoblauch then continued along the coast of Nova Scotia to Cape Sable, and down the coast of Maine. "That was one of the longest stretches I sailed alone — about 150 miles." He crossed to Mount Desert Isle and Bar Harbor. "This was where I had the worst visual problems of the year — a pea-soup fog. The Maine coast is beautiful," Knoblauch said.

Daughter Kathy met him in Scituate, Mass. to celebrate her 29th birthday and to sail to Cape Cod, Buzzard's Bay and Block Island.

"I left Block Island at 5 a.m. to catch a favorable tide," Knoblauch said. "I was under sail when I saw a huge wake off the shore of Long Island. The water arched up and suddenly there was a whale alongside my boat. He was about twice the length of the boat. He swam alongside for about 20 minutes. It was a black whale. A friendly whale, going his own way."

His family joined Knoblauch for a three week visit in Long Beach Island, N.J., where his parents live.

At the end of August, he headed for Chesapeake Bay, sailed up the Potomac River to Washington, D.C., then on to Norfolk, Va.

He reached Stuart, Fla. late in the year via the Intracoastal Waterway.

"Then Gini and I and some friends crossed to the Bahamas. We spent the winter in the Abacos, with Hopetown as our base. We cruised to different places during the winter.

"At the end of March, we reversed our route, crossed the gulf stream and returned to Stuart.

Knoblauch discovered that he had planned quite well for life aboard. The electronic equipment and provisions were more than adequate, he said, and everything worked fine. He experienced no terrible weather disasters. He wasn't sick. He found no visible evidence of drug trafficking in the Bahamas. And he discovered that Sea Dreamer is perfectly designed for cruising with two people — and for short periods of time, with four people.

"Only loneliness was a problem. I read voraciously. I played tapes. I kept a journal on tape."

Gini and Dick Knoblauch plan to sell their Grosse Pointe home and move to Stuart some time in the future. "Then I'll be close to the Bahamas and the Caribbean and the Gulf of Mexico. Also I can jump off to Bermuda and from Bermuda to Europe.

"There's three places I really want to go by boat: Europe, the Mediterranean and New Zealand.

"I would say to anybody who has a dream: Work toward it. Don't lose sight of something you've always wanted to do because of your daily routine. Keep it on the back burner. Work hard. Plan. Do it. Modify it, if you must. It can come true."

Dick Knoblauch, right, aboard Sea Dreamer, with daughter Kathy, left, his niece and her friend, near Scituate, Mass., en route to Cape Cod Bay. Knoblauch didn't have a camera aboard for most of his year-long voyage. He kept a journal on tape, and plans to write about his experiences for boating magazines.

New Michigan map available

The Michigan Department of Transportation's new official transportation map can be obtained from the Transportation Department at no charge. Some two million will be published for free distribution over the next year, including several hundred thousand by the Michigan Travel Bureau. It is the state's most popular piece of travel literature and is widely used by Michigan's travel industry.

About 400 changes were made in the 1987 map to bring the 1988-89 edition up to date. Additions this year include the recently signed circle routes of Lake Superior and Lake Michigan and the general locations of Michigan's elk and moose herds.

A photo of the Blue Water Bridge at the foot of Lake Huron marks the 50th anniversary this year of the bridge which links Port Huron with Sarnia, Ontario.

The map guides travelers along the 9,500-mile state highway system, on primary country roads and the major thoroughfares of the state's metropolitan areas.

It also shows locations of airports having lighted runways at least 3,000 feet in length, intercity bus terminals, both commercial and recreational harbors on the Great Lakes, ferry routes, freeway rest areas and roadside parks on the state highway system. Locations of rail passenger lines and stations and rail freight lines are included.

Hospitals offering 24-hour emergency service and MDOT's 11 highway welcome centers, located mostly at border points, also are shown.

There is information on Michigan historical markers, highway distances from city to city, locations and phone numbers for state police posts and district offices of MDOT and fares charged on such facilities as the Mackinac Bridge. The map identifies all state parks and lists their types of accommodations and provides an index to Michigan cities and villages. Various state symbols such as the state bird (robin) and tree (white pine) are shown.

The new map can be obtained, free of charge, at numerous locations, including all MDOT district offices and welcome centers. Other distribution points include state police posts, district offices of the Michigan Department of Natural Resources, local chambers of commerce, municipal government offices and convention/tourist associations.

The Department of Transportation will mail maps to individuals upon request. Requests should be made on a post card (not in a sealed envelope) providing the name, address and zip code of the requester. Post cards should be mailed to: MAPS, Michigan Department of Transportation, P.O. Box 30050, Lansing, Mich. 48909.

City of Grosse Pointe Farms, Michigan

NOTICE OF HEARING
ZONING BOARD OF APPEALS

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that the Zoning Board of Appeals will meet in City Hall at 90 Kerby Road, Grosse Pointe Farms, MI on:

MONDAY, JUNE 13, 1988

at 7:30 p.m. to hear the following:

1. The appeal of Mr. & Mrs. Peter Ronan, owners of the premises located at 36 Beacon Hill, from the denial of the Building Department to issue a Building Permit for the construction of an addition to the rear of their existing dwelling located at the foregoing address. Such permit issuance was denied for reason that:

a. The residence located on the foregoing premises is non-conforming for reason that it is in violation of the rear and side yard provisions of Article XIII, Section 1300 of the City's Zoning Ordinance, and in accordance with the provisoins of Article XV, Section 1502, Item 4-A of the City's Zoning Ordinance, no such structure may be enlarged or structurally altered unless a variance is granted.

b. The proposed addition on the rear would further infringe upon the minimum rear yard requirements of 40 feet leaving a rear yard of 28.5 feet thereby requiring a variance from the provisions of Article XIII, Section 1300, of the City's Zoning Ordinance.

2. The appeal of Mrs. & Mrs. Art Judson, owners of the premises located at 168 Merriweather, from the denial of the Building Department of issue a building permit for the construction of an addition to the rear of their existing dwelling located at the foregoing address. Such permit issuance was denied for reason that the residence located on the foregoing premises is non-conforming for reason that it is in violation of the side yard provisions of Article XIII, Section 1300 of the City's Zoning Ordinance, and in accordance with the provisions of Article XV, Section 1502, Item 4-A of the City' Zoning Ordinance, no such structure may be enlarged or structurally altered unless a variance is granted.

3. The appeal of Mr. Peter T. Kross, owner of the premises located at 248 Grosse Pointe Boulevard, from the denial of the Building Department to issue a permit for the conversion of an existing building on his property into a pool house with cooking facilities. Such permit issuance was denied for reason that the proposed structure contains full kitchen facilities which is considered a dwelling unit under Section 201, Item 14, Section 400, Item 1 provides that only one single family detached dwelling may be constructed or maintained on any lot, thereby requiring a variance from such provisions.

4. The appeal of Mr. Richard Mancini owner of a parcel of the property currently known as 269 Lake Shore, who has applied to the City of Grosse Pointe Farms for a lot split. Section 1516 of the Zoning Ordinance provides that a lot may not be divided unless the Director of Public Service finds that the remaining lot, as well as the parcel created meet applicable regulations of the Zoning Ordinance. The Director of Public Service has determined that the proposed lot split would create two non-conforming conditions with respect to the remaining lot owned by Dr. Aeneas Guiney, for which Mr. Mancini is seeking the following variances:

a. A variance from the 30 foot front setback requirement, as Dr. Guiney's residence on the remaining parcel is setback only 19 feet from the proposed front lot line; and

b. a variance from the requirement that parcels located in an R I-AAA District have frontage on a street equal at minimum to 120 feet in width, as the frontage on Lake Shore of the remaining lot owned by Dr. Guiney is only 30 feet in width.

Also, the following variances are required with respect to the residence proposed to be constructed on Mr. Mancini's parcel:

a. A variance from the side yard requirement of 15 feet, as the plot plan presented by Mr. Mancini shows his proposed house with side yards of 11 feet and 12.5 feet; and

b. A variance from the minimum lot width of 120 feet for the R I-AAA District, as the plot plan shows a lot width of 108.58 feet.

The Hearing will be public. Interested property owners or residents of the City are invited to attend.

Performer visits school for exceptional children

The Foundation for Exceptional Children operates quietly out of Grosse Pointe Memorial Church and has for 34 years.

Since its formation in 1954, it has served the special needs of more than 500 handicapped children, aged 1 to 9, in metropolitan Detroit — those children with cerebral palsy, Down's Syndrome, the blind, the brain-damaged, the hyperkinetic, and the developmentally disabled.

The special certified teachers and aides work with the children on self-help skills, like eating and dressing, and with fine motor skills - all of which is aimed at preparing the children for the future, when they are placed in other appropriate social and educational environments.

The family is involved in fundraising for the non-profit school, which in itself is a form of therapy.

Because of its reputation for its outstanding work with special children, Howard Buten recently visited the school and spent some time with the students.

Buten, a native Detroiter who now lives in Paris, is known throughout many parts of the world as Buffo, a clown. But performing isn't Buten's only interest. He is the author of several successful novels and has worked with autistic children for more than 14 years, trying to break through their wall of silence.

Buten's life was the inspiration for "Learn to Fall," a first-run play that just finished a run at the Attic Theatre in Detroit. It chronicled his relationship with a severely autistic boy named Adam.

His fascination with autism led to a doctorate in clinical psychology. In Paris, he works with severely disturbed adults in an asylum he says is "right out of the 19th century," as well as with autistic and special children.

"After working with these children for a while," he said, "you forget they aren't normal."

Mary Kennedy, director of the foundation, echoes Buten's sentiment.

"I get more from these children than I could ever give," she said.

At the beginning of June, the foundation will begin canvassing local merchants in an attempt to raise $10,000 for summer camp scholarships for the school's summer programs, Kennedy said.

Children at the foundation are schooled Monday through Friday, and go home at night. Tuition is minimal and the foundation is open to everyone.

Personal bankruptcy petitions are increasing in Michigan

By Margie Reins Smith
Staff Writer

Petitions for personal bankruptcy are at an all-time high.

"It appears that all bankruptcy filings are up 10 to 15 percent this year, compared to 1987," said David R. Sherwood, clerk of U.S. Bankruptcy Court for the Eastern District of Michigan, and a resident of Grosse Pointe Park. "Of these, the vast majority are personal bankruptcies; the rest are business."

Sherwood guessed 11,000 to 12,000 petitions will be filed through his office in 1988.

"The primary cause of individual bankruptcies is over-use of credit cards," said Park resident Basil Simon, a bankruptcy trustee for the eastern Michigan district. "Credit card companies are getting more aggressive about going after these people. This is a new trend because of recent revisions of the bankruptcy code."

All bankruptcy laws are federal laws, Sherwood said, because of one line in Article I, section 8 of the U.S. Constitution.

Sherwood pointed out that the court should not be faulted for the bank code that has been adopted by Congress.

"Congress decided what it should be. The bank code is public policy. If people disagree -- if people want to change policy -- change the law. Don't blame the court."

"Individuals considering bankruptcy have two alternatives," Simon said. Chapter 7 liquidates the individual's estate. Creditors may or may not get a percentage of their claims. The law permits some exemptions to liquidation -- so that the individual is not destitute. He's allowed to retain a residence, a vehicle, some household goods and the tools of his trade.

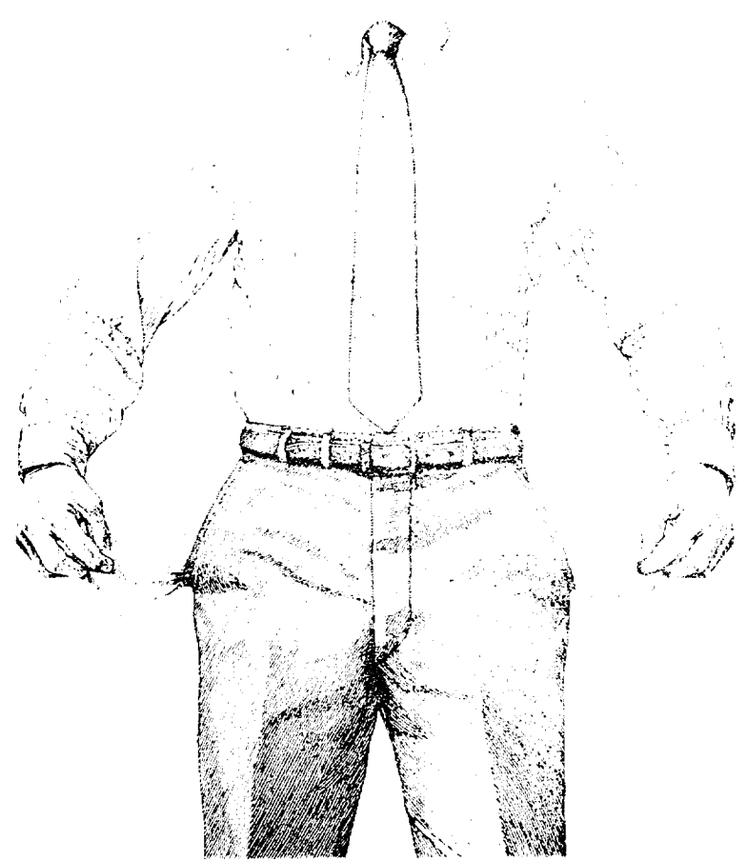

Chapter 13 allows the individual to repay debts out of future earnings. In a Chapter 13 filing, the court approves a plan for repaying debts, usually over a three-year period, Sherwood said.

"When an individual declares bankruptcy, he's wiping out non-secured creditors, not necessarily secured creditors," Simon said.

The advantage of declaring bankruptcy is the elimination of the pressure of being in debt and the harrassment of creditors. It allows a fresh start, Simon said.

The disadvantages, he said, is that the bankruptcy information probably stays on his credit record forever. However, Simon added, "The fact that someone declared bankruptcy becomes less significant as time goes on. It's fair to say it takes six to 10 years to re-establish credit."

The disadvantages of declaring personal bankruptcy are social as well as financial, Sherwood said. "It annoys people. We are a property-oriented society, culturally. The social costs are high. In addition, for 10 years this will be on (the individual's) record and anyone who makes an inquiry will learn that he declared bankruptcy. I don't know if private services, such as TRW, erase that information after 10 years. I know that the court records show a bankruptcy filing for 20 years -- probably forever."

Simon said filing for bankruptcy is not as horrendous as some people think. The hearing takes just a few minutes and it's a court proceeding without a judge. A trustee presides; an attorney represents the debtor; creditors ask questions, and credit card companies are usually represented by an attorney.

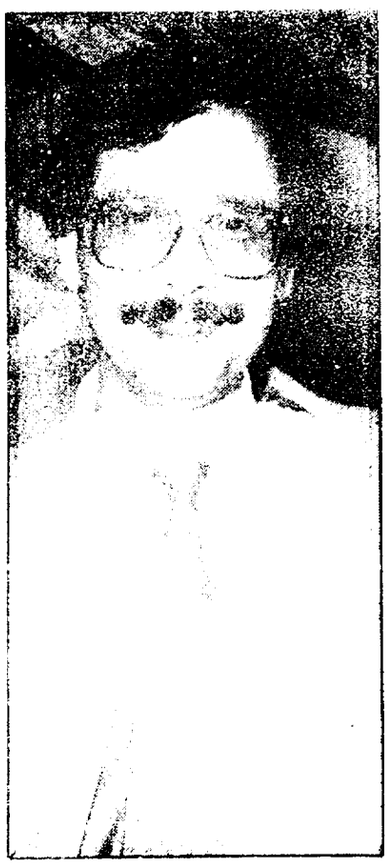

An alternative, he said, is an out of court settlement. "If an individual is making a decent income and he can discuss the situation with each creditor, some companies may discount the debt if it seems advantageous."

Simon said that being represented by an attorney adds credibility to the individual's case.

Sherwood said bankruptcy cases are filed in cycles. The number of cases goes up and down about every six or seven years. They're now on the increase -- "A substantial increase since '83," he said.

"People file for many reasons," Sherwood said. "Overextension of credit (with credit cards, home equity loans, mortgages or installment payments) is only one reason.

"Another reason, in my opinion, is attorney advertising. This is luring many people into filing bankruptcy.

Simon

"Another reason," Sherwood said, "if the opportunity for bankruptcy is there -- like any government program, people use it for their advantage. We've been taught to look to the government to get something for ourselves. Our culture is built around it."

Sherwood said there are alternatives to bankruptcy. "I'm told that many people file when they don't need to. Many creditors are willing to make adjustments if asked and if they're presented with reasonable alternatives. Hiring an attorney increases your chances.

"My advice would be to seek to resolve economic woes through negotiation -- before seeking to resolve through litigation.

"Bankruptcy should be a last resort," Sherwood said, "not first."

Fair weather

The skies aren't always sunny for summer's prolific art fair participants — here are their war stories

By Peggy O'Connor Andrzejczy
Assistant Editor/Feature Editor

Ah, June. Month of weddings, graduations and summer art fairs held on cloudless days under warm, sunny skies. Right?

Wellllll, maybe.

Take Art on the Pointe, the popular, juried art fair sponsored by the Assistance League to the Northeast Guidance Center. Art on the Pointe — knock wood — hasn't been bedeviled much by bad weather in its four previous years. Organizers have their fingers crossed for this year's event, set for June 11 and 12 at the Edsel & Eleanor Ford House in Grosse Pointe Shores.

A pair of Art on the Pointe regulars haven't had as much luck elsewhere, however.

"The most horrible time was at Meadow Brook two years ago. It rained until there was an absolute river. It didn't effect me as much, but the basketweaver's baskets were just floating away," says artist Bette Prudden of Grosse Pointe Woods. "I've got a little tent that offers some protection, but it holds water. Usually, I just try to psych out the sky. That day I guessed OK. But there have been some others . . ."

Bette Prudden surveys the scene around her display of oils and pastels.

Like last summer at an art fair in Lexington. Prudden guessed wrong, didn't put up the tent and had to cram her delicate pastels into a shop doorway when a storm hit the area. "The paintings were dry, but my husband and I were huddled outside the doorway, sopping wet. All we could do is look at one another and laugh," Prudden says.

The portrait artist will spend her 40th anniversary at Art on the Pointe, which Prudden says is one of the nicest art fairs around.

Another Art on the Pointe veteran who will return to next week's fair is Jerry Crowley of Grosse Pointe Farms, a specialist in marine art, landscapes and house portraits . . . and after last year, in running for cover in a rainstorm.

"It was a Sunday afternoon, the final day of the art show and I had customers lined up at my booth. All of a sudden, it got dark, the rain began to pour and the wind began to blow. Dotty got the van and I was ankle deep in water, passing the paintings from our shelter to the van.

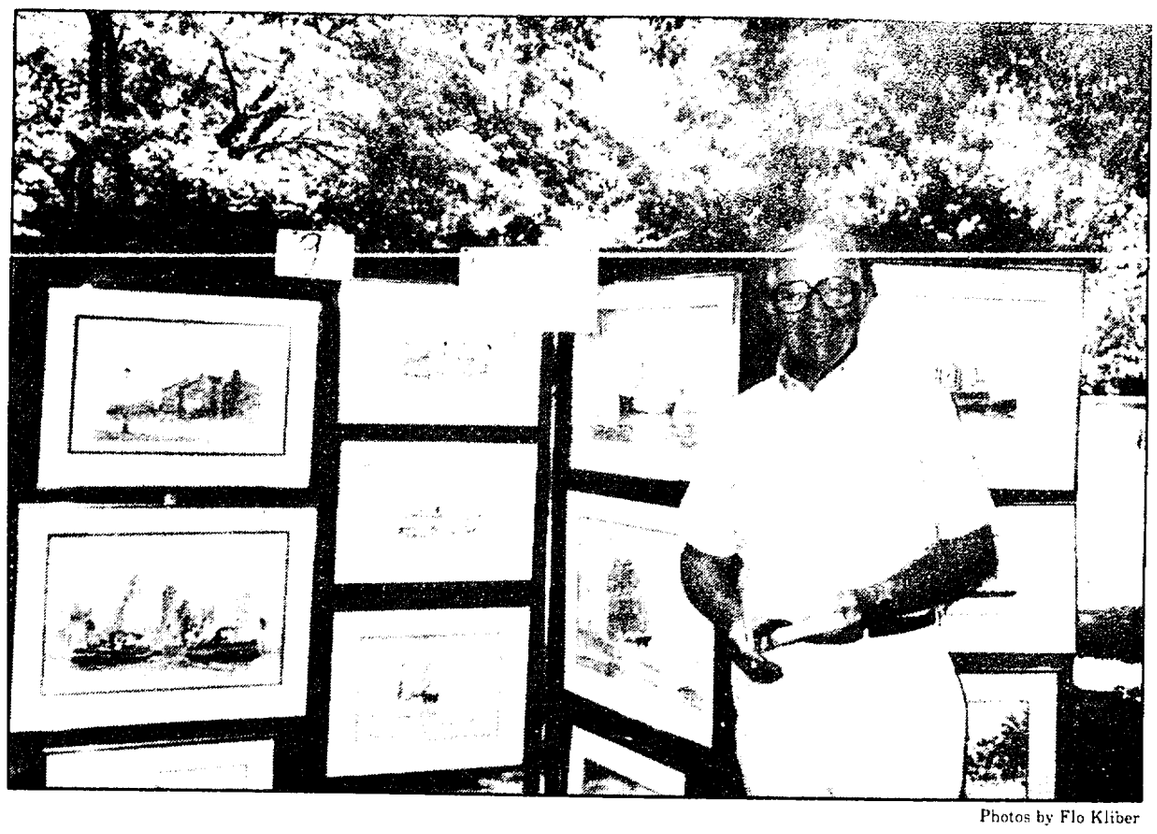

"All of a sudden, a big gust of wind collapsed the entire display. Amazingly enough, nothing got broken. Fifteen minutes later the weather cleared up and the skies were sunny," Crowley says.

"And everyone had gone home."

Another time at a show in Algonac, Crowley's wife Dotty had to head over to a first aid station for treatment for a bee sting. While she was there, Crowley went to pick up his brief case and closed his hand on a bee, sending a second Crowley to first aid.

Outdoor art fairs are obviously a challenge, but both Crowley and Prudden say they enjoy the atmosphere and the clientele the fairs draw.

"I remember sitting down in front of Jacobson's during the Village art show, chatting with our friends and watching the world go by," recalls Dotty Crowley. "I told Jerry, 'Where else could we do this except at an art show?' And Jerry told me: 'Nowhere, because they'd take us away,' she adds, chuckling.

Art on the Pointe veteran Jerry Crowley of Grosse Pointe Farms specializes in marine art, landscapes and house portraits.

Even when the weather is great, there's always something going on at an outdoor art fair, local artists say.

"Usually I can get even small children to sit still for a portrait," Prudden says. "But at an outdoor fair with everything going on, well, let's say it's a challenge."

Crowley, a full-time artist for the past eight years, has been equal to his outdoor art fair challenges. "At one show, a guy came by and started to set up to photograph my paintings. When I asked him what he wanted the photos for, he told me: 'I sell them.'

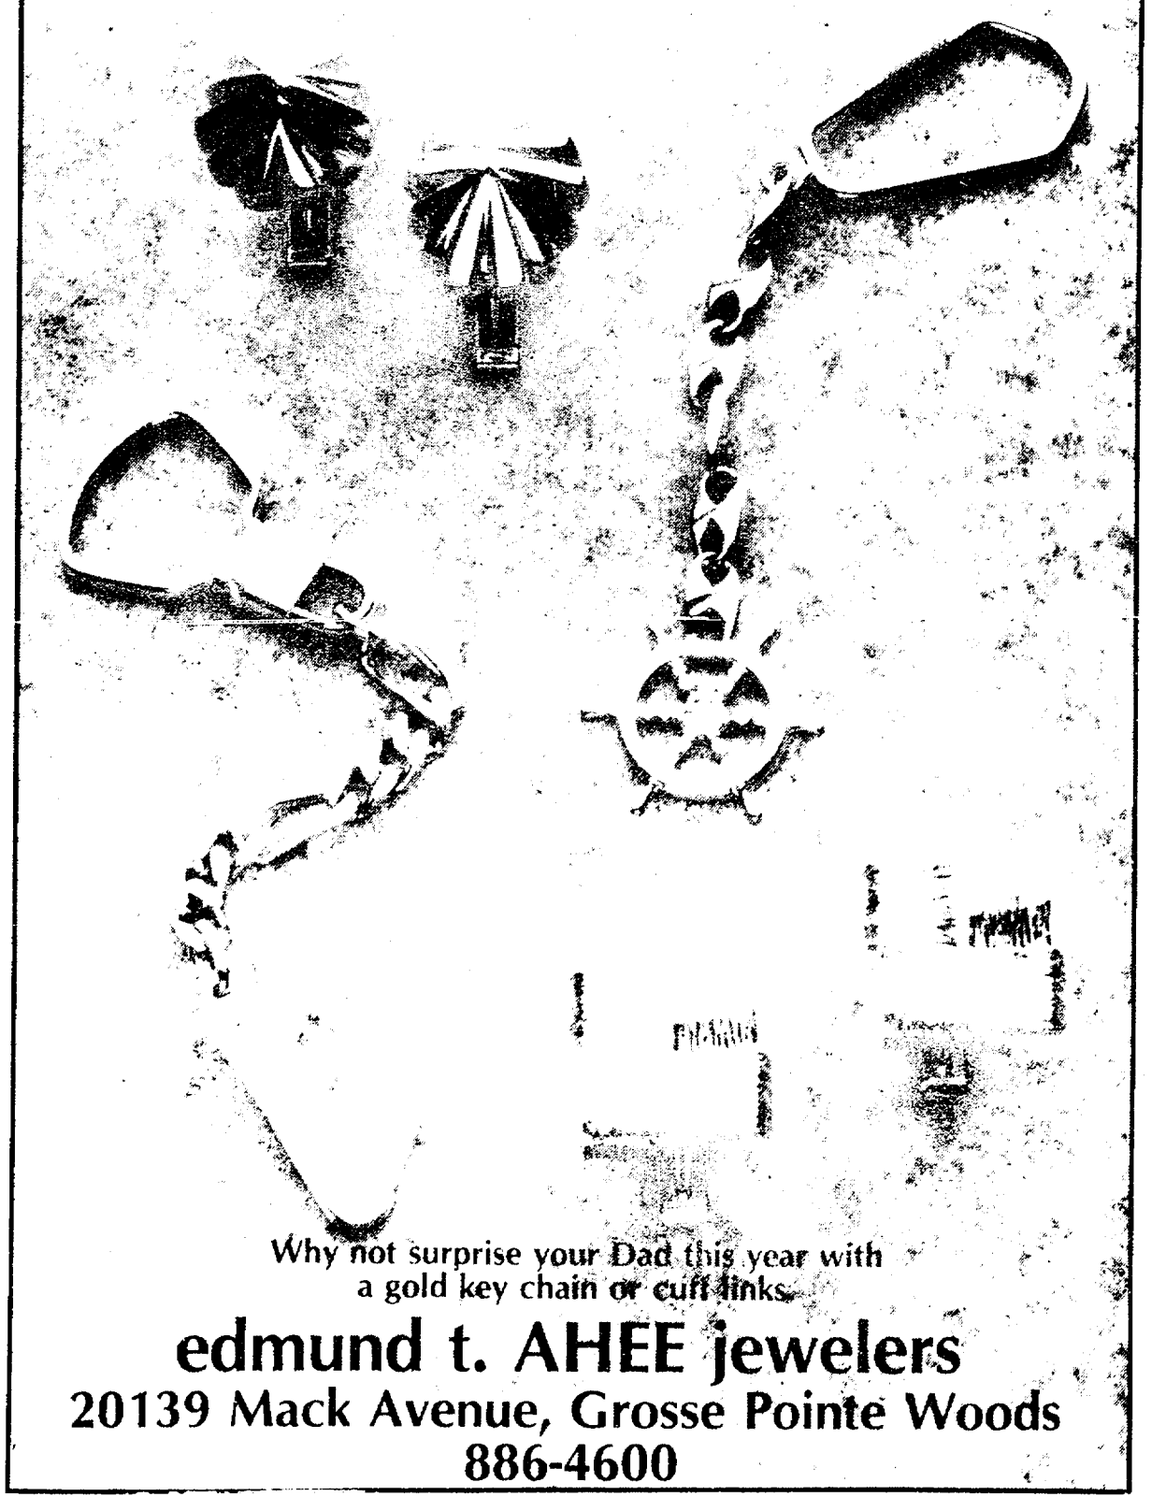

"Naturally, he didn't get a chance to photograph my work. But it was flattering."

CROWLEY AND PRUDDEN are looking forward to the Art on the Pointe event next weekend. Crowley, who has displayed his works from the Gryphon Gallery to Lake Orion and lots of places in between, says that the Art on the Pointe gets better all the time.

"It's in a beautiful setting and the layout is

The fifth annual Art on the Pointe will be held from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday and Sunday, June 11 and 12 — rain or shine — at the Edsel & Eleanor Ford House, 1100 Lakeshore Road, Grosse Pointe Shores. Sponsored by the Assistance League to the Northeast Guidance Center, Art on the Pointe is aiming to be the quality art show for the metro area.

Admission is $1 and that entitles visitors to a variety of entertainment attractions, food and refreshments and a chance to wander at leisure among booths displaying oils, watercolors, pottery, photographs, handmade jewelry, sculpture, etching, fiber arts and much more.

In addition to Grosse Pointe artists Bette Prudden and Jerry Crowley, local artists Michael Derbyshire and Cheri Dowdall will participate. Show jurors are Jim Gilbert, exhibition director of the Pontiac Art Center; I.B. Remsen, a self-employed potter who has taught at Pewabic, Ann Arbor Art Association amd Ann Arbor Potters Build; and Sharon Zimmerman, gallery manager at the Detroit Artists Market.

Parking for the show is available across from the Ford House. Shuttle vans are available for transportation to the "Apple Court" — a canopied cafe near the lake — and to the main house and lakeside. Concession stands will offer foods ranging from deli sandwiches, hot dogs and sausage to gourmet fare, snacks, ice cream and desserts. There will be a wine and beer tent.

Entertainment includes strolling musicians, barbershop quartet, magic, demonstrations, folk singers, clowns and balloons. After closing June 11, there will be a gala auction party with the theme, "Tiger Fever." Patrons are encouraged to don Tiger baseball regalia or come casual to enjoy popcorn, dancing, a buffet dinner and an auction which features a new Ford Fiesta. The party is by invitation; to receive one, call 824-8000.

General co-chairmen for this fundraiser for the Northeast Guidance Center — celebrating 25 years as a community mental health agency — are Ellen Cook and Toni Stewart. Beth Moran and Betty Loeher are artists chairmen. Publicity chairmen are Flo Kliber and Tina Mayk.

AAUW says: 'Let us take care of those old books'

Forget the calendar — around here it's summer when those familiar AAUW book barrels start showing up in local shopping areas. These harbingers of warm weather are already in place at five convenient spots where residents are asked to drop off books they no longer need or use.

For some kids, summer means "helping" mom collect books for the annual Grosse Pointe AAUW Book Sale, set this year for Sept. 27 through Oct. 2. From left are Lindsay Rodin, 4, Laura Rodin, Heidi Denler, Tommy Denler, 3, and Amber Rodin, 2.

This is the 26th consecutive year that the Grosse Pointe Branch of the American Association of University Women (AAUW) has held its Used Book Sale. All proceeds from the 1988 sale, scheduled for Sept. 27 through Oct. 2, will go for AAUW national and international fellowships for outstanding women scholars and for five local college scholarships for women returning to school.

Sale preparations have been under way since early January and AAUW members have already processed nearly 5,000, or one-tenth of the books they expect to gather this summer, according to Barbara Taylor, general chairman of the sale.

Among books AAUW welcomes are both hard covers and paperbacks in good condition: novels, mysteries, children's literature, non-fiction of all kinds, biographies, travel, history, cookbooks and how-to books. This year, AAUW will also handle collector-type magazines, good records and items of interest to stamp collectors.

Fontbonne Auxiliary donates $295,000 to St. John Hospital

The Fontbonne Auxiliary of St. John Hospital gave $295,000 — the auxiliary's largest donation ever — to St. Clair Health Corporation (SCHC) May 18. Corporation and hospital president and chief executive officer Glenn A. Wesselman of Grosse Pointe Shores accepted the check from Fontbonne president Pattie Klimchuk of St. Clair Shores during the auxiliary's annual meeting and brunch at the Lochmoor Club.

Another $7,000 was donated by the auxiliary to Fontbonne Manor, a residence for retired Sisters of St. Joseph in Nazareth, Mich. The Sisters of St. Joseph sponsor SCHC. Sr. Joyce DeShano, SSJ, a member of the order's leadership team, received the gift on the sisters' behalf.

"The donations are the culmination of various Fontbonne Auxiliary fundraising events, as well as its sales from the hospital gift shop and from its Renaissance Cuisine cookbook over the past year," Klimchuk said.

Over Fontbonne's 40-year history, it has donated more than $3,850,000 to the hospital — two-thirds of that in the last 15 years. Auxiliary membership currently exceeds 1,300.

The annual meeting and brunch was attended by 130 members and guests, and was preceded by mass in the hospital's St. Edward Chapel with The Rev. Lawrence DuCharme, the hospital's pastoral care director, as celebrant.

Meeting chairman Eleanor Pugliesi of Grosse Pointe Shores had the room decorated with spring flowers to set a bright tone for the event.

Some party:

The Grosse Pointe Academy's Action Auction '88 was the place to be May 14 as more than 1,000 folks helped the Academy set an auction fundraising record of over $600,000.

Co-chairmen Mr. and Mrs. Alfred J. Fisher III and Mr. and Mrs. Michael L. Turnbull welcomed the crowd, which saw auctioneers Lawrence and Ernest DuMouchelle auction items like a dazzling, 18-carat gold diamond bangle bracelet, a Tanuki fur coat and ear muffs and the ultimate in a 50s party.

Highlighting the auction was bidding on a weekend in New York ($12,000) and a high-bid competition for a custom-built Cadillac Allante.

Oh, happy day!

The parents of Farms resident Greg Oates, Jim and Ethel Oates of St. Clair Shores, had a busy Memorial Day weekend just like the rest of us.

The Oateses' Saturday, May 28, was probably a little more special than everyone else's, however. That's the day they celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary.

A garden party:

St. Clare of Montefalco parish held a garden reception on May 22 for Hank Burakowski, St. Clare School's new principal who will begin his duties this fall.

The Rev. John Lambert, O.S.A., St. Clare's pastor, introduced Burakowski to parents and students. Cookies, coffee and lemonade where served by the P.T.O. hospitality committee.

Burakowski replaces Sister Anne Rutledge, O.P., who will take a sabbatical to study in Boston, Mass. The parish plans a farewell picnic in Patterson Park for Sister Anne.

Local ties:

A group of Grosse Pointers were among those who helped put together a tribute to Detroit City Council President Erma Henderson on May 16 at the New Pegasus II Restaurant in the Fisher Building.

General co-chairpersons for the event were Maria Gatzaros and Vicki Papas. Honorary chairpersons included Gov. James Blanchard, Beverly Beltaire, James Clarkson, Aretha Franklin, Dr. Marie Jackson-Randolph, Dr. Arthur Jefferson, Walter J. McCarthy and Victoria Roberts.

Victorian party:

General chairman Liz DuMouchelle has accepted the invitation of Mr. and Mrs. Paul M. McKenney to hold the third annual Detroit Historical Society Victorian Garden Party at their Bloomfield Hills home on Sunday, June 5, from 3 to 6 p.m.

This is the first time the party has taken place "north" of the Pointe. Working with the chairman on the event are Grosse Pointe committee members John and Gwen Griffin, Marion Bartush, Doug and Diane Dossin, Alice Schultes, Marilyn Stocker, John Walker, Vicki Baks, and Rick and Sheila Ingwersen.

Advance reservations are required to attend the June 5 garden party; tickets are $50 for friends, $75 for benefactors.

For more information, call 833-7937 during business hours Monday through Friday.

Great Escape II:

What has Red Wing coach Jacques Demers, WDIV-TV anchors Mort Crim and Carmen Harlan, Detroit News columnist Tim Kiska, dinner, an auction and dancing all rolled into one?

"Great Escape II," a benefit for Travelers Aid Society of Detroit. It's set for Thursday, June 7, from 6 to 10 p.m. at Joe Louis Arena. The event features a celebrity packing contest, with the aforementioned personalities and others trying to pack the best suitcase. And in addition to cheering on one's favorite celebrity packer, ticket holders can win a grand prize drawing of a trip to London via British Airways.

Tickets are $45 each. For more information, call 962-6740. Travelers Aid Society is a United Foundation agency that serves travelers in transition.

JUNE BIRTHSTONE

PEARL

Ring illustrated: Handmade setting of 18kt. Gold, 8.0 Cultured Pearl, 10 Diamonds .66cts. total weight $2700.00

The traditional birthstone for the month of June is the pearl. Pearls are one of the oldest of all gemstones used by man. One reason for this is that pearls do not require any polishing to reveal their natural beauty. Pearls are considered an organic gem, meaning one that is primarily formed by plants or animals. Long ago it was thought that pearls were formed by an oyster catching a drop of dew. If it was caught on a sunny day the pearl was high quality, on a dreary day a low quality pearl was formed. Pearls are formed when an irritant gets inside the oyster. As the oyster coats the irritant to sooth it, a pearl is formed. The natural pearl market has virtually disappeared since most natural pearls come from the Persian Gulf. Today, 97% of all pearls purchased are cultured. The term cultured means that a mother of pearl bead is inserted into the mantle of a pearl bearing mollusk. The bead acts as an irritant and the mollusk coats the bead with nacre and conchiolin in layers. The nacre is on the outer layer giving an irridescent effect called "orient". After the bead is inserted into the oyster it will take aprox. three to four years for the cultured pearl to form. One oyster usually forms only one cultured pearl in it's lifetime. Most cultured pearls come from Japan where the culturing process began.

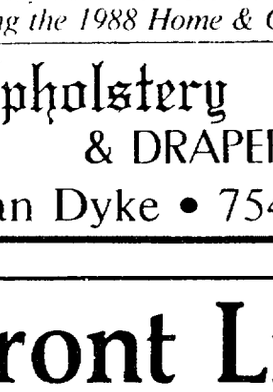

Pearls are very delicate and require special care. They are very vulnerable to heat, perfume, hair spray, skin oils, and rough surfaces. Because of this, they should be put on after all cosmetics and perfumes have been applied, and should be wiped with a soft cloth before they are put away. The cord should be checked regularly and the pearls should be restrung every year or two depending on how often they are worn.

Alexandrite is also a birthstone for June but because of it's rarity it is not usually purchased as the June birthstone.

GPUC youth put beliefs into action

A group of senior high school youths from Grosse Pointe Unitarian Church culminated a year of religious soul searching and working for others with a Recognition Ceremony at the church Sunday, May 22.

Kevin Kelly, Alexis Collins, Katie Buckingham, Johanna Hardin, Wendy Berger, Robbie Hardin and Jack Carrick presented the skit, Holy High, depicting the difficulties of dealing with religious differences in daily life. Afterwards they shared individual statements with the congregation. Sabrina Harle chose not to participate in the ceremony, but has been actively involved in the program.

All year, the teens studied the principles of Unitarian Universalism and a few other religions in order to form their own spiritual identity. They have observed and talked with the minister and adults of the congregation to see how they live their religion. In addition, each teen chose an adult mentor for a one-on-one exchange. The group also participated in community activities, serving as greeters, ushering, spending weekends at the Youth Adult Conference sponsored by the Unitarian Universalist Michigan district, working with younger children at the church or visiting senior citizens at the St. Joseph Home in Detroit. They also raised money to buy food baskets for the hungry and participated in the CROP walk.

The teens' advisor, Patricia Carrick, noted the gradual change in their attitude toward adults in the church. "They are no longer outsiders looking in but an integral part of the church," she said.

Grosse Pointe Unitarian Church members Sabrina Harle, Alexis Collins, Wendy Berger, Johanna Hardin, Katie Buckingham, advisor Pat Carrick, Robbie Hardin, Jack Carrick and advisor John Carrick, treat church youngsters to homemade cookies.

Motorcycles to be blessed

The Rev. Timothy Pelc, from St. Ambrose Catholic Church, will conduct a Blessing of the Motorcycles Sunday, June 12, at noon in front of the church. St. Ambrose is located on Hampton Street in Grosse Pointe Park.

First English choir to sing 'Messiah'

The Senior Choir of First English Lutheran Church will perform portions of Part II and III of Handel's "Messiah," at the 9:30 a.m. service Sunday, June 5. Jeanne Ludwig and David Jackson are guest soloists with Robert Foster as music coordinator.

Featured in the performance will be a chamber orchestra comprised of 21 musicians from the community under the direction of Nathan Judson. Members and friends are invited to attend this special service.

The Senior Choir will sing for the Sunday worship service during June. During July and August, various soloists and instrumentalists are invited to perform as part of each Sunday's worship. Members and friends of the church are welcome to audition for special summer music.

Those interested should contact Foster at the church office at 884-5040.

Memorial church events set

The Women's Association of Grosse Pointe Memorial Church will sponsor a dramatic presentation, "Daughters of Eve," by the Women of King's Company, on Tuesday, June 7, at 7:30 p.m. at the church. The stories, which portray queens and paupers, weak and strong women from the Old and New Testaments, will be told with dance, music and costume. Guests are invited.

Grosse Pointe Memorial Church Women's Association Circles will meet June 7 at 9:15 and 9:30 a.m. and 1 and 6:30 p.m., according to their time schedules. Serving as hostesses are Sue Buckler, Caryl Kerber and Helen Kipka of Grosse Pointe Park; Kay Felt of Grosse Pointe; Virginia Tompkins of Grosse Pointe Farms; and Lorine Forster of Grosse Pointe Woods.

Patriotic fest at G.P. Baptist

A family fun night will be held Friday, June 3, on the grounds of Grosse Pointe Baptist Church, 21336 Mack Avenue in the Woods. Events begin at 6 p.m. with food, refreshments, children's games and prizes and a concert by the Renaissance Brass.

The evening will end with a patriotic concert titled "America the Beautiful," performed by the church's 50-voice chancel choir under the direction of Lawanda Parker, accompanied by Bob Kiteley on the church organ.

The event is free. Call 881-3343 for more information.

Christ Church Antiques Show means collectibles, fun

This Chinese plate is representative of the variety of works offered by the antiques dealers at the fourth annual Christ Church Antiques Show this weekend.

Comedienne's book outlines ways to avoid 'Joys of Aging'

By Marian Trainor
Special Writer

It's better to be rich than poor and any honest older person will admit that it's better to be young than old. The first condition, being rich, is possible to achieve by hard work, good luck and the right timing. However, the only antidote to old age is not an attractive alternative.

So it's best to accept the aches and pains and problems that are part of the aging process. That doesn't mean being miserable. On the contrary, meeting each day with a light heart and a heavy dose of humor can make those added years happy and rewarding. Laugh and the world laughs with you, even when you laugh at yourself.

These observations are brought home in "The Joys of Aging and How to Avoid Them," by Phyllis Diller (Doubleday). Her ability to combine comedy and truth makes her book fun to read and offers insights into how it is possible to accept the toll the years take and still retain a zest for life.

In the foreword she writes that this book is a primer on how to look and stay young, but quickly admits that it's a little incongrous for her to write such a book, "somewhat like Don Rickels writing a book on common courtesy."

Diller says she has dedicated her life to staying young. She admits to having worked so hard at staying young that "It's beginning to age me." She promises to give inexpensive, practical ways to make old age work for your and says not to worry if you can't afford plastic surgery.

"You can always touch up the day of birth on your driver's license," Diller jokes.

She admits that there are "no magic formulas for getting younger." She also reiterates what many others have admitted: only hard work and the right psychological attitude will do it. You have to think young, talk young and act young. Get rid of anything that even suggests old.

Diller is both pro and con on the subject of face-lifts. She agrees that a face-lift can make you look years younger and can enhance a better self-image. However, she warns, not everyone needs a face-lift. "You only consider it if your face is sagging faster than the American dollar . . . or if you occasionally trip over your neck."

Rejuvenation is another subject Diller researches in her book. One method cited is to join the people of the Caucasus Mountains of the Ukraine where the natives live to the ripe old age of 140 through "diet, exercise, climate, mental outlook and never having to listen to Musak in elevators." Of course, she admits that living that long could have its problems, among them living in a place where the day camp is filled with 85-year-olds.

Clinics and spas come under Diller's scrutiny. She seems to favor a Berne, Switzerland spot where patrons pay $1,000 per day to receive injections of lamb placenta. Diller bases her conclusion on the theory that she has never seen a lamb that looked old.

Health is very important to a happy old age, although Phyllis places it third on her list; number one being gold and No. 2 jewelry.

There's not much on the subject of old age Diller doesn't cover in her book. For instance, she suggests making your will read like Mad Magazine with such bequests as "being of sound mind I leave all my crayons to . . ." On epitaphs, she offers among others: "See, I told you I was sick." As for reincarnation, Diller wants to come back to the most comfortable existance in the world: as a poodle in Beverly Hills.

"The Joys of Aging is typical Phyllis Diller. Humorous, sometimes raucous, but always pushing the truth under the guise of the ridiculous. Her point of accepting the reality of aging rather than clinging to the facade of youth is neatly made but in such a way that the reader doesn't mind accepting her premise and can even laugh at being hilariously lampooned.

Americans get better as they get older

We are getting older, but we're also getting better as citizens as we age, according to a study of voting habits done by a group of Wayne State University political scientists.

Professor Charles J. Parrish says that voting participation and civic competence increase with age. Parrish found that voting activity begins to decline slightly in our late 50s, but our civic competence, which he defines as knowledge relevant to politics, continues to climb into our 60s and remains level well into our 70s.

The study titled "Life Span Civic Development and Voting Participation," was supported by grants from the AARP-Andrus Foundation and Wayne State. Parrish worked with colleagues John Strate, Charles D. Elder and Coit Ford in studying the data from nine national elections from 1952 through 1984.

Political partisanship among young adults tends to be low, Parrish says. Factors such as church attendance, stronger community attachments, participation in organizations and growing family income all increase voting frequency.

Political partisanship also increases voter participation and the study notes that political party attachments grow stronger with time. As people become elderly, there is a drop in voting because of poor health, declining family income and increased physical disability.

The authors of the study have also concluded that "Life experience is a substitute for school. Many uneducated people, who have the fewest politically relevant skills when they become eligible to vote, become more accomplished in coping with bureaucratic hurdles and thinking about political material."

The researchers found that people lie about their voting. More people claim to vote than actually do vote, but since these people resemble voters more than non-voters, their false claims do not alter the study results.

Parrish says we should not be alarmed at figures which show a declining participation in the voting process. He points out that this happens when the electorate is expanded as it was when the voting age was lowered to 18. He says the same thing happened initially when women got the vote and again points to the traditionally-low participation of young voters.

She will also discuss the benefits of low-cost genetic drugs, how to travel with and store medications, and the dangers of sharing medications. She is a member of the Perry Speaker's Bureau, which makes about 200 presentations in three states every year.

Jobs for older workers

The toll-free referral number to call from anywhere within Michigan is 1-800-922-HIRE. Staffers answering the hotline exclusively for older workers will refer the callers to cooperating job placement and training projects in their area looking for older workers.

Project ABLE, the sponsor of the hotline, has assisted more than 2,000 older adults gain employment. East Pointe Chorus is third

The East Pointe chorus returned from the Region 2 Sweet Adeline Convention in London, Ontario wearing white ribbons and third place medals.

The East Pointe Chorus competed against 22 other choruses from southeast Michigan and western Ontario, taking first place honors in the sound judging category.

At Sweet Adelines competitions, choruses are judged on an A, B, C, D, scale. Earlier this year, the East Pointe Chorus set as its goal an overall B-plus rating.

That goal was realized on April 30 in London. East Pointe recently celebrated its 10th anniversary. During that time, the chorus, under the direction of Linda Liddicoatt, has won first place in regional competition three times and has represented region 2 at International Competitions in Detroit, Kansas City and Honolulu.

On Wednesday, June 15, East Pointe will begin its summer rehearsal schedule at First Bethany Lutheran Church on Harmon between I-94 and Harper in St. Clair Shores. Rehearsals begin at 7:30. Women 18 and older may get more information about membership by calling Marlene Babb, membership chairman, at 884-7116.

IMPROVEMENT CAN BE COSTLY

You can make a million mistakes trying to sell your own home. And one of them is making the wrong improvements. Many times, an expensive addition or repair can be the kind of thing that'll cost you far more than you get back.

True, the house should present a favorable appearance - mowed lawn, trimmed shrubs and no obvious indications of neglect, but it's rare when a large financial undertaking will bring more than it's cost in final selling price.

There is always the financial risk of miscalculation too. Home repair costs frequently end up a lot higher than originally anticipated. You may end up with faster sale and less inconvenience if you lower the selling price an equivilent amount.

Instead of guessing as to how much, if any, repair work, to undertake, see a Realtor. He can tell you what to do to make your home more salable. And what not to do so you won't lose money.

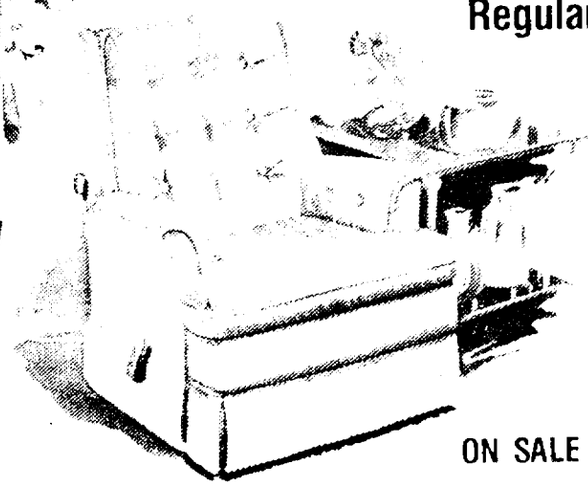

If there is anything I can do to help you in the field of Real Estate, please phone or drop in at ADLHOCH & ASSOCIATES, REALTORS. We are located "In the Village" at 16845 Kercheval. Phone 882-5200. I'm here to help.

THE JIM SAROS AGENCY

IS PROUD TO INTRODUCE

ANNA NIFOROS CLOSING OFFICER

Anna Niforos is one of our most valued employees. She has been with our agency since 1977. Due to her numerous abilities and knowledge, she was promoted to Executive Level many years ago. In addition, she has had real estate license since 1978.

Anna is the backbone of our Real Estate Division in her capacity as our Closing Officer. She supervises the entire processing of all real estate transactions from the point of purchase through the final closing. She always has the answers and is our problem solver.

Since our real estate agents are busy, out of the office, selling and listing property, it is a tremendous advantage to our sellers and buyers to have someone always available whose main job is to follow up and co-ordinate their transaction. This leads to good communication and pleased clients, as opposed to buyers and sellers playing "phone tag" with their real estate agents.

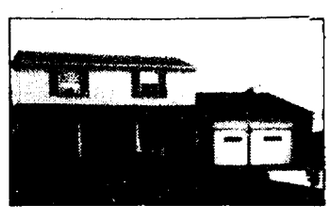

Married to Theodore C. Niforos, they have four grown children, Dean and Elaine, students at Michigan State University, Andrea, a recent graduate of Our Lady Star of the Sea High School, who will attend M.S.U. in the Fall, and Marilyn, a Junior at Star H.S.

In her spare time Anna has worked on the Board of Directors at Our Lady Star of the Sea High School as well as assisting her church, Assumption Greek Orthodox Church on Marter Road, by working on many committees and projects over the years.

It is a common comment from Banks, Title Company's, and other Brokers that Anna is . . . "THE BEST IN THE BUSINESS"! We think so too!

As a realtor, Anna works with Clients on a referral basis only.

A dead issue

Last week I was forewarned tha several people were going to file some type of grievance to the Michigan High School Athletic Association because of an injustice done to their favorite baseball team. After a week of thought, I truly believe this is an issue that should no longer fester and it should be killed; before the pettiness of it balloons.

South lost a baseball game 2-1 to North in a pre-district qualifying tournament contest. It wasn't one of the prettiest wins for the Norsemen, but what made it ugly was the officiating. I don't like to take pot shots at umpires or officials, because they are human beings as well, but in this case the umpires stepped onto the field without a full understanding of the rule book.

It's a poor excuse that they didn't know how to interpret a rule, but I think it's even poorer that a group of adults can ridicule the umpires enough to drag them through the mud, or in this case, court. Court. Where people are subpoenaed, put on the witness stand, their family tree is shaken, and they can't rest until the trial is over. This group has already put the officials on the witness stand and convicted them. OK, they were wrong? Weren't you ever in that situation?

Is the group that upset over a loss, or are they perturbed over the disservice of the umpires? I can understand that they want their children to learn by example; and the precedent the umpires set was not proper. But, why did the group keep this dead issue alive? Baseball, especially at the prep level, is a game to be decided on the field. Not by the courts or a group which feels cheated.

Granted, the umpires should have called interference on a South runner, and they should have known that even though a ball skips in front of the plate and then hits a batter, he is awarded first base. In both cases, the umpires were blatantly wrong, but what if the shoe was on the other foot?

Challenge '88 hopes for elusive top prize

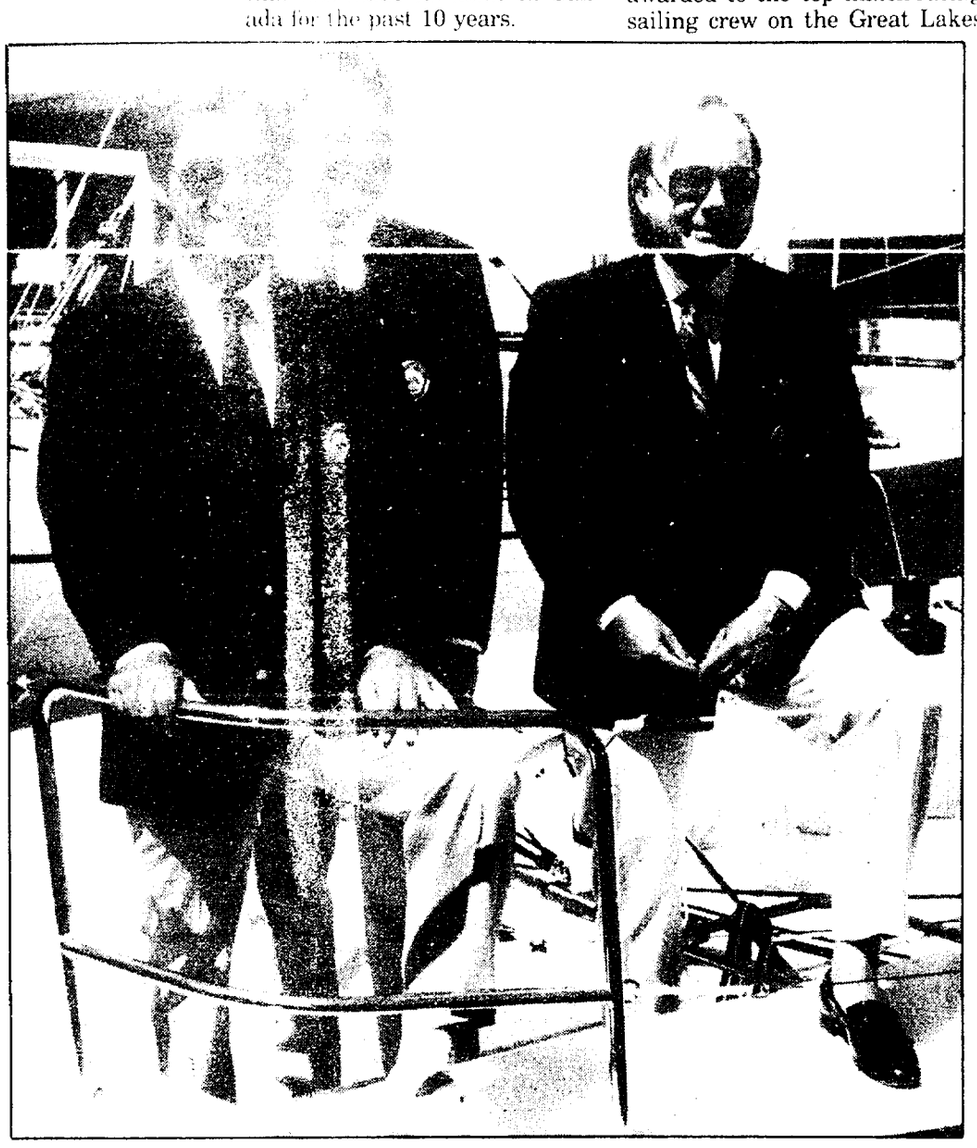

'We chose to go the all-out route . . . — John Uznis

By Rob Fulton
Sports Editor
and Cristina Staats
Special Writer

Among the illustrious sailing trophies in the showcase at Bayview Yacht Club, there lies a gaping hole that three men are determined to fill with a trophy that has made its home in Canada for the past 10 years.

Ken Meade, John Uznis and Kim McNamara, three Pointers behind the making of Challenge '88, a new Nelson/Marek One Ton Yacht, have spent an undisclosed amount of money to bring back the Canada's Cup to the United States.

The Canada's Cup, a trophy awarded to the top match-racing sailing crew on the Great Lakes after elimination and championship rounds, was the primary reason the threesome decided to have the yacht constructed.

Challenge '88 syndicate members, John Uznis, Kim McNamara and Ken Meade.

"There's an empty spot in Bayview Yacht Club where a trophy once used to sit," said Meade. "We want it back. That's the main reason we had this yacht built."

Instead of working with a used boat, or a boat that would take years to earn attention, Uznis, Meade and McNamara decided that a new yacht was the only way to go.

"We chose to go the all-out route and develop a yacht that is the state of the art," said Uznis.

Designed by Nelson/Marek, Challenge '88 is a high-tech yacht built specifically for the Great Lakes area. Kiwi Boats, Inc., based in Florida, used the most exotic materials known in the composite industry in the construction, and is said to be one of Kiwi's finest.

"We have invested a great amount of effort in One-Ton design development in the past two years," said Bruce Nelson, naval architect. "Our design portrays a balanced blend of speed-producing parameters optimized for the anticipated Canada's Cup match racing conditions."

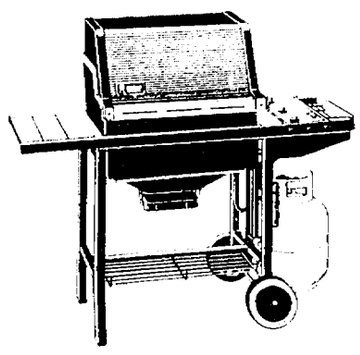

Although the Challenge '88 is a one-of-a-kind yacht, Fred Detwiler's boat "Trader," which he skippered to an overall win in the Chicago to Mackinac Race a year ago, is also a yacht to be reckoned with when the One Tons set sail. Trader, which has been updated and modified, and syndicated by the Little Club, would also like to make room on a shelf for some silver.

"This is the first time we've ever appealed to our sailing members," said John Ford, the honorary syndicate chairman. "This is a club effort to bring back the Canada's Cup trophy for the Little Club.

"Hopefully we'll win this thing," said Ford, "and be able to defend it the next time around."

The first time around will come on June 4-12 in the One Ton North American Championships. After that, the Canada's Cup challenge contenders will sail in the elimination series on Aug. 1-7 on the Great Lakes to see which boat challenges for the Cup against the Canadian defender on Aug. 20-28.

A bit of history

The Canada's Cup, like the America's Cup, was named after the first champion, the yacht "Canada," representing the Royal Canadian Yacht Club of Toronto in 1896. (The same thing happened with the naming of the America's Cup after the fishing schooner "America.")

Lincoln Park Yacht Club near Chicago issued a challenge to the Canadians for match racing somewhere on the Great Lakes hosted by a city that would provide a trophy and prize money. Toledo won the bid and held that first series of races in 1896.

From 1896 until 1907, the Cup was contested six times, with the Rochester, New York Yacht Club winning the Cup for the Americans in 1903 and successfully defending it. Serious controversy developed and the Cup was nof challenged for again until 1930.

The controversy revolved around the Rochester's choice of the sloop "Seneca," her previous Cup defender. After successfully defending the Cup, "Seneca" was moved to the East Coast where she was actively campaigned and made a new home in salt water. The Canadians felt that she should not be brought back and sailed in fresh water. Rochester felt they had a right to choose the defender they wanted and their choice was in keeping with the Deed of Gift. The Canadians withdrew their challenge. Other than that, the cup challenges and defenses have sparked little controversy.

The Americans lead the Canadians in wins; having nine victories over the Canadians' seven. However, the Canadians have won the last three contests, and the Americans are eager to win back the Cup. The last American win was Gerald Murphy's "Golden Dazy," in 1975.

The next meeting of the two countries will be in August of this year. But before the Americans reach Lake Ontario, they must decide on a challenger.

Bayview Yacht Club and the Grosse Pointe Club, better known as the Little Club, have syndicates formed and yachts ready to compete. The Bayview group is comprised of Kim McNamara, John Uznis, and Ken Meade. They entered the contest with a completely new one-ton yacht, "Challenge 88" developed by the Nelson-Marek design team specifically for this championship. The Little Club syndicate is made up of the club's sailing membership, headed by Fred Setwiler. Detwiler has chosen not to build a new boat, but to campaign the tested yacht "Trader." He has made, and continues to make, modifications to the boat in the hopes of doing well in the North American Championships and the Elimination Series that will be held later in the summer to decide the challenger in the Canada's Cup Challenge.

One of the Royal Canadian Yacht Club defense hopefuls was unveiled at the Audi Yachting Race Week in January. The Bruce Farr designed one-tonner "Steadfast III" is another new boat built for this challenge. Another Canadian hopeful, from the National Yacht Club, is a nighly modified boat named "Take Notice."

In any event all these yachts, and more, will compete in the North American One-Ton Championships, June 4 to 12, hosted by Bayview. Other possible Canadian defense hopefuls and American challenger prospects will be there as well. It will be a first look at all the players in the Great Lakes entry into world class sailing rivaling the America's Cup.

Two weeks after the Grosse Pointe South Blue Devils' baseball team lost to Grosse Pointe North in a pre-district qualifying game, several individuals have formed a group to turn back the hands of time.

Eugene B. Wysocki, whose son Marcus was the losing pitcher in that 2-1 loss which ended South's postseason play, is heading the drive to have "irreparable damage and injustice" corrected.

The problem occured when South's Marty Saad was batting in the top of the seventh and the Devils trailing 2-1. With one man on and nobody out, North's pitcher Rick Regalado threw a pitch that bounced in front of the plate and hit Saad. By rule book interpretation, Saad should have been awarded first base, but he wasn't. South coach Dan Griesbaum protested the call at that time and played the remainder of the game under protest. At the time, the umpire said the pitch was a wild one, but didn't award Saad the base. According to Griesbaum, the umpire then fabricated a story (approximately less than a day later) that stated the batter (Saad) didn't attempt to get out of the way of the ball. Therefore, based on an umpire's judgment, the batter is not awarded first base.

"We believe there was an injustice to the South kids by virtue of the umpire's inability to interpret the rule," said Wysocki. "We simply want to have a correction of the error that was made."

"The gentleman (umpire) caused irreparable damage," said Wysocki. "We want a correction of the interpretation and want to finish out the game from the standpoint of when the game was protested."

But it's not that simple.

"There is no recourse after a game is finished," said Bill Bupp, assistant director/supervisor of officials, of the Michigan High School Athletic Association. "There is no resolution beyond what was put in the books (scorebooks). There is no way to go back and change something that already has been determined. The team who lost would still be the losing team, and the team who won would still be the winning team."

North's Rick Regalado beat South, 2-1, but some South followers want to see if they can't change that.

Wysocki, admittedly is not out to take the win away from North, states that even if his son was not involved, his intentions would still be the same.

"There are some selfish interests, but if I were at a game and saw an umpire do what that one did, then yes, I feel I would follow through on it," he said. "It's not fair that the individuals were cheated out of the chance to win the game."

Wysocki is fighting for due process, but in this case it will not apply. According to the MHSAA handbook, which is issued to all the high schools, a protest of a contest is not allowed by the MHSAA when it's based on judgment of officials.

"It's ironic how the umpire turned it (his explanation) around to a judgment call that can't be appealed," said Wysocki.

Wysocki, among others, thought that the protest should have been handled immediately by a tournament manager. However, the MHSAA rules that a district manager does (in this case it would have been North Athletic Director Tom Gauerke) not have to be on hand for a pre-district qualifying game, or a pre-district game. The only time a district manager (in most cases it is the host school's athletic director) would have to rule on protests is in a district tournament.

"Each sport deals with protests in separate ways," said Bupp. "The protesting coach could have brought out the rule book and asked the umpire to reconsider the call based on the proper ruling, or the umpire could have done the same thing," said Bupp. "However, there's nothing that can be done now."

Or is there? "It's always been the American way to be able to deal with a grievance through due process," said Wysocki, "but it's rather denied in this case. We're not allowed the route for due process in this situation. You would like to teach the kids that it's a democratic society, but it seems that this is autocratic." Wysocki understands that no recourse is available in the way of protesting a judgment call. However, he simply wants the umpires to know the rules.

"I know we can't do anything about a judgment call," he said. "We just want the umpire to recognize the fact that he didn't know the rule and allow the kids to play it over."

While it remains to be seen what Wysocki's next move is, he does know that taking it to court will not be wise.

"If I had a snowball's chance in hell to go to court and win, I'd probably proceed with it," he said. "It's time we do something about this thing, but we don't want it (the situation) turned into a perception that South kids are poor losers.

"We're just looking for justice to be served by having the rule interpreted properly," Wysocki added.

Wysocki was trying to get the MHSAA to uphold the appeal he was fighting for before North played Lake Shore last Friday, but the time element was the key factor.

"We couldn't do anything in such a short period of time," he said, "but maybe what we are trying to do will help clear things up in the future."

Wysocki claims that the rule about district managers having to be in attendance is not clearly stated by the MHSAA. That in itself is something he is hoping to change as well.

"The provisions from the MHSAA are very unclear," he said. "They are unclear about whether or not a district manager has to be at the site. We would also like that cleared up for the future."

Wysocki, taking a firm stand in what he feels is right, doesn't want North to be affected by this at all.

"I don't want to hurt anyone in this community for doing what I think is right," he said. "I also don't want to take anything from North. If the game were to be played over from that point and South lost, then I'd say justice was served. The rule was incorrectly interpreted and all I want for the kids is a chance to play it over. I know it's not going to happen, but it's something I can't let die. The entire situation needs to be addressed still."

Would the group of South followers fight for justice if South won? Maybe, maybe not?

South coach Dan Griesbaum played the game under protest after the umpire failed to make the proper call. But, behind the backstop many hecklers bashed the umpire with verbal abuse and comments that were unwarranted. When an umpire steps on the field he is open to ridicule, but not maltreatment. The MHSAA clearly states that no protests will be accepted if the official's judgment is in question. The South followers understand that, but they also questioned why a district manager was not at the game. In this case North Athletic Director Tom Gauerke would have been that person, but in pre-district qualifying games, and pre-district games, the umpires should immediately rule on a protest.

So, the next step for the group was to pursue having the game played over from the point of the umpire's infraction. That in itself is impossible, beacause once a game is completed and recorded in the books, it's over. Done. Finito. Completed. Concluded. History.

Maybe those are adjectives the group should live by. Maybe they should relax, take the loss and don't have anybody else dragged through this ordeal with them. I'm an advocate of fighting for what I believe in, but not when the brick wall in front of me has no give. In this case, the South people behind the push to have the game played over and a clear statement from the MHSAA stating who should deal with protests in pre-district games, are heading for that wall. The only thing that may have some give is the rule definition. Not the game being replayed.

Understandably, the game took on a different complexion. Instead of having runners on first and second with nobody out, there was only a man on second. North's Rick Regaldo then proceeded to set the side down in order to win it.

At the time, the umpire said the ball skipped and hit the batter, but he didn't advance the hitter to first base. One day later, the umpire, according to Griesbaum, was stating the batter didn't make an attempt to get out of the way — a judgment call.

With all the legal jargon out of the way, in comes the politics. The politics of trying to play a game over. The push to render a proper decision and the emphasis to have recourse. However, there is no recourse. Eugene Wysocki, the father of Marcus Wysocki, who took the 2-1 loss on the mound, is also claiming irreparable damage was done to the South kids. What damage? Had they never lost before? Had they never been down and tried to get up, but couldn't? It seems that this issue is only an issue from one side of the fence. Despite several dead ends, the movement is still foreward for these people.

What will this do for South? The community? Or even North.

Wysocki claims he doesn't want to take anything away from North, and I believe that. However, how does he make the rest of the South backers look? He also states that he doesn't want to make South look like a bunch of sour grapes, but I don't know how else to describe it. It's a petty issue that is being masterminded by people who are fighting for justice. That I am all for. I'll back him on that, but why in the world will this issue not be resolved until more feelings are hurt, or another scar is applied to the area?

Fishing is fun for families

I have a friend whose husband is going fishing on Lake St. Clair with his father and brother this weekend, and boy is she mad. Not because he's going out and leaving her home, but because there isn't enough room on the boat for her.

I've fished for brown trout in the AuSable, for brookies in its tributaries and for walleye in Lake Huron at Oscoda, but had never fished Lake St. Clair — that is until I was the guest of both Gene Caldwell and Lloyd Simpson.

Simpson has been fishing Lake St. Clair since 1971. He has a 27-foot Sea Ray he usually takes out only on weekends.

Weekend fishermen don't have to be at a disadvantage over the daily worm-drowner if they have contacts on the lake they can reach by radio.

Radio chatter over the waves brings the latest information about where the fish are biting, how large they are and how many boats are in the area in a matter of a few seconds.

Simpson said this is the busiest year he's seen as far as boat and freighter traffic.

He likes to fish the Canadian side of the lake and Detroit River in mid- to late June, and does very well at the "Delphine," a canal dug into the lake bottom years ago to allow the yacht Delphine to dock next to the War Memorial.

Russell Knowles, 39, has been a Pointer since sixth grade, and said he likes to drift in his open boat and jig for walleyes. He uses only nightcrawlers for bait, always with a stinger hook.

"Most fish are caught on that rear hook," Knowles said. "I do most of my fishing on the Canadian side and around Sturgeon Hole."

He looks for a northeast wind so he can drift in the same direction as the current. He looks for deep water — 15 to 35 feet.

Both Simpson and Knowles say the best color of flashers to use is chartreuse, although depending on the conditions, they will try silver, copper, orange or black.

Everyone has his own techniques. Simpson's is trolling, Knowles is jigging and mine is trolling while changing the speed of the lure. I have caught more walleye when reeling into check the bait than I have at any other time. It somehow gets the fish to strike.

The best part of any fishing expedition is just being out on the water. Weather cooperating, getting skunked isn't even so bad. But landing an 8 pound 4 ounce walleye or 24 pound muskie can make the entire season, as it did for Simpson.

Caldwell likes to troll for walleye, too. He fishes both the Canadian and American sides of the lake and tries to make it out several times a week. He looks for a light wind, but likes to see a good chop in the water — says it makes the fish more active and more likely to bite.

Seems everyone is getting into the fishing act. You see dozens of boats with both men and women and dozens more with fathers and sons. Simpson said his father took him fishing and he's been taking his son out for two years. It truly is something the entire family can do, and thankfully, the Legislature is considering reinstating the Spouse License, so wives, who don't fish very often, can without having to pay a full license fee.

My two trips were feast and famine. We caught 20 on Simpson's boat, but only one on Caldwell's. Most fish were in the 14 to 16 inch range.

My personal biggest walleye, came out of the AuSable River several years ago on the first weekend of the season — during the third day of a three-day rainstorm with a strong east wind! I wasn't supposed to catch anything in conditions like that, but I have photos of the 28 inch, 6 pound 8 ounce eating machine.

Happy casting.

Baseball team ties for MIAC title

The University Liggett School boys' baseball team finished its regular season with three wins over Southfield Christian, Bethesda Christian and Huron Valley Lutheran; all teams which had beaten ULS the first time through the schedule.

The victories were enough to give the Knights an 11-3 record in the Michigan Independent Athletic Conference (MIAC), and a share of the league championship. However, in the first round of the district playoffs, Coach Glynn Conley's squad was eliminated by Harper Woods, 6-5. ULS finished 12-8 overall.

ULS' Malin Engstrom goes for goal No. 17.

Trailing by a run against Southfield Christian in the seventh, Tom Vallone drove in Kevin Crociata with the tying run, and catcher Chris Carroll drove in Vallone to give the Knights the win.

Under the lights at Bethesda Christian, Vallone picked up his second straight win as ULS rolled to an 8-5 win. Vallone's solid pitching was supported by a six-run third inning. Sanders Chae and center fielder Bill Lucken each had two RBI, and Crociata had three hits in four trips.

Junior pitcher Lex Smith beat Huron Valley Lutheran three days later, 2-1. Crociata, who was 2-for-2, scored the first run in the opening inning, and Vallone drove home the game-winner in the second.

ULS was knocked out of tournament play after Harper Woods' Dave Cataldo pitched well enough to edge the Knights.

Boys' lacrosse

The Knights finished the season 3-11 after losing to the University of Detroit High School, 4-3, in the state playoffs.

ULS, led by senior captains Charlie Roby, Steve Stoyka and Adam Levinson, almost upset DeLaSalle and L'Anse Creuse North. Their only wins came in a 2-1 decision over U of D High and South (2).

"The 9-0 win over South was a high point for us," said Stoyka.

An important factor in the Knights' success was the play of the defense, most notably goalie Levinson, Stoyka, Mike Coello, Rob Petz, James Dobrzechowski, Tip Quilter and John Ellis. The attack was led by juniors Armistead Burwell and Bob Scoville, sophomore Tom Reynolds and freshmen Christophe Schilling, Sam Khatib and Duncan McMillan.

"The young players really helped our offense this season," said Coach John Fowler. "Their improvement was significant. In our short season, the boys' growth in understanding and skill was nothing short of impressive."

Roby, John Gordon, James Kim and Jon Davis led the ULS midfield. Gordon was high scorer with 16 goals. Other important players for ULS were Eric Sensenbrenner, James Combs, John Southall, Parcival Lie and Gunther Lie.

Girls' soccer

With a 5-1 win over Warren Fitzgerald, the Lady Knights celebrated another district championship. ULS was victorious in its first two tournament games, beating Lakeview 5-0, and Bishop Gallagher, 4-0.

After 20 minutes of evenly played soccer against Lakeview, ULS' Malin Engstrom booted the first goal. Meghan Brady then laced two, Sylvia Ristic drilled one and Engstrom added her second of the day to lift ULS.

Two days later, ULS dropped Gallagher as Engstrom's 17th goal of the season started the scoring. Kim Owens, Brady and Lynne Connor teamed up for the hat trick. The defense, anchored by sweeperback Sarah Haggarty, shut down Gallagher's strong offense.

Against Fitzgerald, ULS pounded the Spartans 5-1 to advance to the regionals on June 4 at Country Day.

ULS will take on Bishop Foley for the second straight year; last year, ULS was eliminated 2-1.

Meghan Brady booted four goals and Sylvia Ristic added one to lift ULS to its second straight district title.

Fitzgerald scored first to take an early 1-0 lead, but Brady and Ristic erased that lead.

Norsemen take top spot on MAC track

By John Guibord
Special Writer

The North boys' track team accomplished one of its major goals in fine fashion last week by capturing first place in the Macomb Area Conference league meet.

By virtue of the win, the Norsemen became the overall dual-meet champions.

Dan MacDougall started things off for North by winning the 200-meter run (22.8) and the 400 run (51.4). Marc deManigold was first in the shot put (53-feet, 5 inches), and first in the discus (158-11). Matt Brady was number one in the high jump (6-feet), second in the long jump (18-7), and third in the 400 run (52.9). Bob Straske won the 1600 (2:03).

The 1600-relay team of Straske, Tom Justice, Brady and MacDougall took first in a time of 3:34.2. Jim DeYonker took second in the pole vault (12-feet), while Ted Stephens was third (11-6). Jason Channel took third in the shot put (40-4 1/4), and Karl Schultz claimed third in the discus (129). Derek Lawson collected a fourth in the high jump (5-9), and Hwan Hur took second in the high hurdles (16.20). Hur also took a fourth in the 3200.

Brian Maniere took third in the 100 dash (11.7). Bob Straske was fifth in the same event, and Frank Markey ran to third (4:44) in the 1600. Ken Ferguson was fifth in the 1600 (4:49.3).

Scott Collins was fourth in the 800 (2:07.7) and John Petz was fifth (2:12). Steve Clarke was third in the 3200 (10:25), and Frank Markey took a fifth (10:36.9). The 3200-relay team of Straske, Markey, Petz and Clarke took second (8:37), and MacDougall, Maniere, Lawson and DeYonker placed second (1:34) in the 800 relay. Maniere, Justice, Lawson and Hur combined for a second in the 400 relay (46.2) to round out North's total.

Softball

It was a sour ending to the regular season, as North lost 6-4 to Woods-Tower.

Kerri-Sue Kelly provided the offensive punch with two hits, including a solo home run. Tower, however, scored three times in the seventh to beat the Norsemen.

North finished at 4-4 in the White Division, good for third place.

Lady Devils win E.M.L.

By Rob Fulton

They only had three first-place finishers, but the South girls' track team placed in 15 of the 16 events to win the Eatern Michigan League championship track meet with 130 points.

The point total was the highest by any team since 1979. South, the regular dual-meet champions, finished 10-0 overall and 7-0 in the league.

All-League tracksters include, Dunrie Greiling (discus), Laura DeMercurio (100 hurdles), and the 3200-meter relay team of Jenny Barber, Wendy Berger, Elizabeth Kraft and Toni Tedesco.

Freshman Karen Ehresman was a spark for South as she finished second in the 100 hurdles and third in the 300 hurdles. Traci Lee, who will run in three events at the state meet on June 4, had four second places; 100, 200 dashes, and she anchored the 400 and 800 runs.

Barber also placed fourth in both the 800 and 1600 runs, and Vicki Groustra cleared the high jump bar at 5-feet.

"It was a great year for us," said Coach Steve Zaranek. "The girls really worked hard to win a third straight league championship (something that's never been done before.)"

Boys' track

High-jumper Pat Bruce, who qualified for the state meet, was an All-League trackster as the boys' team finished fifth in the E.M.L. championships.

Bruce won the high jump with a leap of 6-feet, 5-inches. Kyle Schomaker, also a state qualifier, finished second in the 110 hurdles (14.9). Mark Sonnenberg, another runner headed for the states, finished first in the 1600 run (4:43) and second in the 3200 run (10:36.3).

Anthony DeLuca ran a 2:09 to finish third in the 800, and Phil Orton took a third in the 3200 and a fifth in the 1600. The 1600-meter relay team of Durman Ransom, Michael Cure, Scott Schaupeter and Schomaker finished third (3:39.4). The team of Scott Austin, Schomaker, Schaupeter and Andy Cox took fifth in the 800 relay (1:39), and fourth in the 400 relay (46.9). In the 3200 relay, Dave Nicholson, Ransom, Cure and DeLuca took sixth, and South's final points came from Ransom in the 400 run (sixth-54.7).

Feeling Fit

By Deanna Hawthorne

A plea to inactive people

It seems some men are leery to get involved in aerobic classes. We've heard many of the excuses:

I don't have time, it's not for me, I'm too uncoordinated, no need.

Here are some reasons why you should contemplate about getting involved in aerobics:

1) You'd be accompanied by many others.

2) It would really improve your racquetball game.

3) Think of the power you'd get on your backhand from all the upper body work we do in aerobic exercise class.

4) Maybe even some muscles could improve.

OK everyone let's get movin'. How many of you are overweight? And how many of you are inactive? How many of you want to exercise?

As Hippocrates said in 400 B.C., "Whatever is in use develops and what is not in use degenerates." The consequences of a sedentary and inactive lifestyle will appear sooner or later.

When you do not use a muscle, it becomes weak. This applies to the heart as well. Joints become stiff. Pot bellies begin to have a mind of their own. Digestion and bowel troubles can often be related to lack of physical activity. Why cause possible trouble, and why face trouble when it can be avoided.

What you need is rhythmic large-muscle activity. Example: An activity that moves the body from one place to another. Get the message? You can move it or lose it!

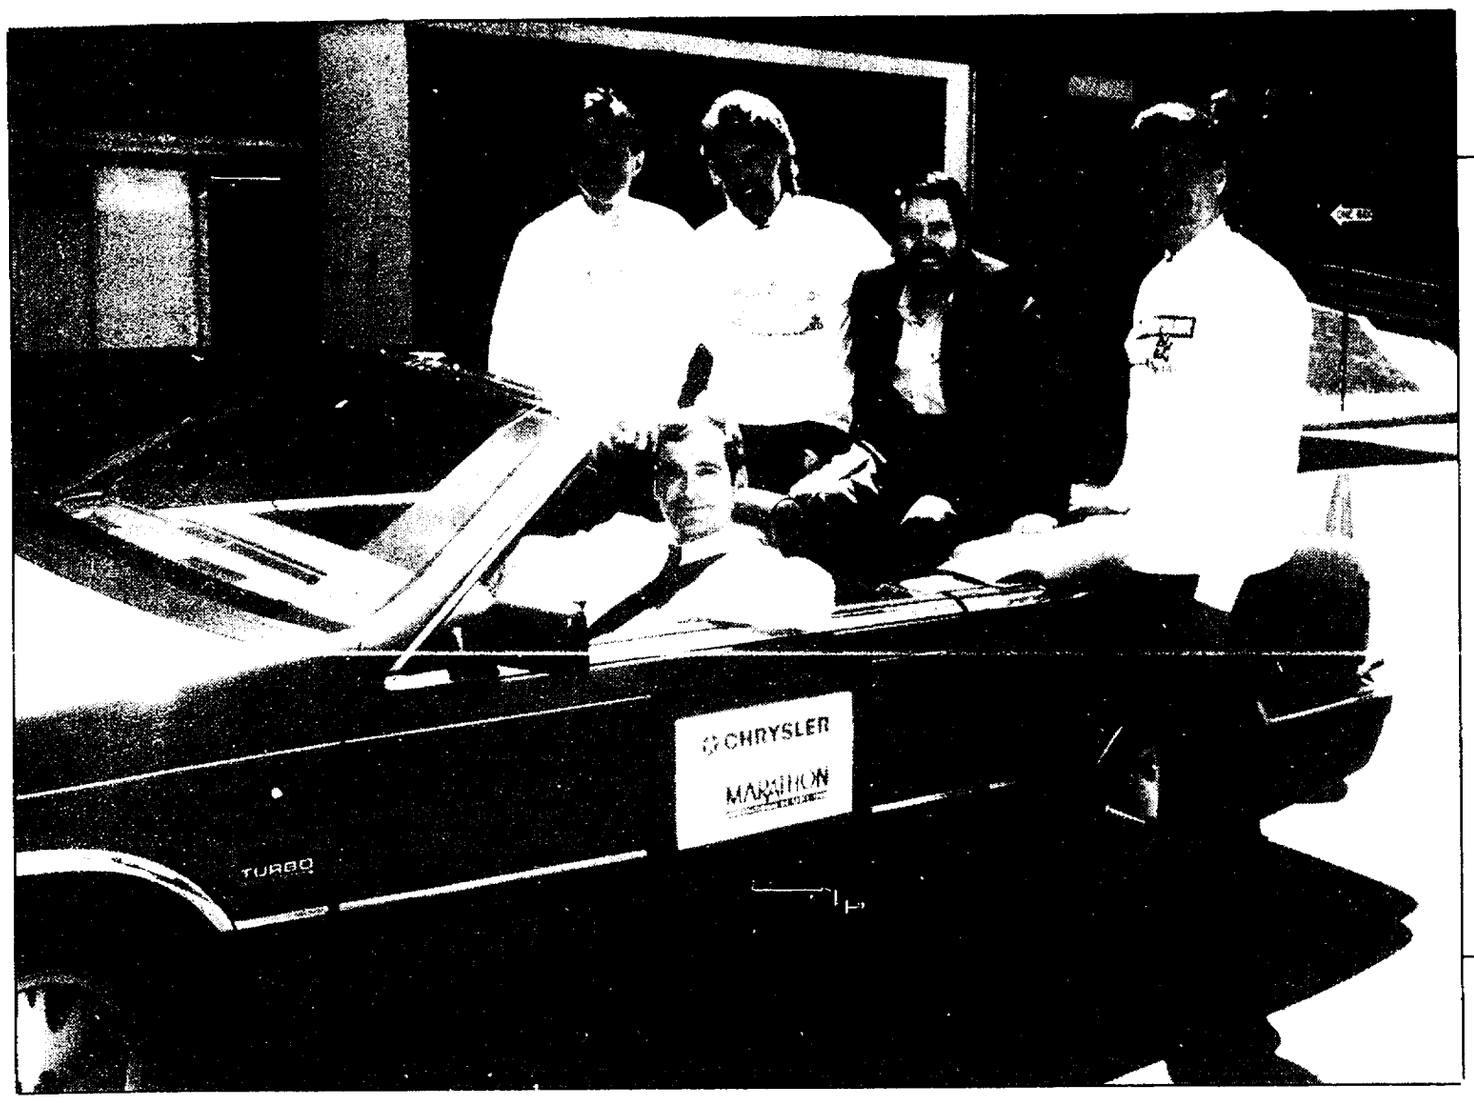

Your heart will become stronger, blood circulation will improve, lung function improves, you'll be fighting obesity and winning as your body uses it as a fuel source and you'll become more flexible of both body and mind as the will power can be trained effectively in connection with endurance exercises.

Training does influence an individual's behavior and habits. Good training habits will become self contained sources of motivation. There is an old Chinese saying:

Think a thought, harvest an action. Repeat an action, harvest a habit. Follow a habit, harvest a trait of character.

So, though you may suffer a bit when first joining an aerobic class you'll soon see and feel the beneits. Doesn't a little suffering also help to build character? See you in class!

Eat Smart

By Mary Busse

Your social life while dieting

So you have decided to begin your diet, or you may have chosen to cut down on all those fatty foods that were once part of your eating pattern.

As you contemplate the stricter routine you must now adopt, you may envision the terrible struggles you are always faced with when dealing with your group of friends and the fun times that always lead you to disaster. You may decide that in order to make this time different and successful, you have no other choice but to become a hermit, say no to all outside social activities, give up the dinners at restaurants; in other words, become a total recluse! It seems the only way you can stick to your goal to lose those unwanted pounds.

If this sounds like a bleak future during your weight loss, you are absolutely correct! But more than being a "drudge," you may unknowingly have chosen one of the most successful ways to lose weight. Studies have shown that the dieter who drastically curtails his/her social life while dieting never learns to modify eating behaviors, and will more than likely gain the weight back. Those who have dealt with an active social life and learned methods along the way to change their behaviors will sustain them throughout their lives.

At Diet Center, we strongly believe that "practice makes perfect." And yes, it is not an easy task to complete in a successful manner. But with some forethought and planning, you can enjoy an active social life and still lose weight in the process.

Here are some helpful hints that may make eating out a time of relaxation; while remaining true to your weight goals.

1) Choose restaurants that are likely to have the food you want. When two or more of you are discussing where to eat, don't be a wall-flower and acquiese to whatever anyone else says. If it doesn't make any difference where the rest of your friends eat, speak up and give your opinion. If your friends like a heavier fare, they can eat almost anywhere. Avoid fast food places, or exotic restaurants.

2) If you are unfamiliar with a restaurant, call ahead of time and get an idea of what they offer on their menu. Most places will be happy you inquired and will try hard to accomodate you.

3) Don't look at the menu. It was designed to tempt you. Decide ahead of time what you are going to have, and order first. When you wait for everyone else to order, you can easily begin to feel the "poor me" victim, and it often leads to the "heck with my diet tonight" syndrome.

4) Do not go out to dinner hungry. This may sound like a contradiction, but it is one of the soundest pieces of advice you can follow. By having an apple along with a tall glass of ice water you will cut the edge off your hunger, and be in control when you arrive at the restaurant. If you are eating later than usual, ask that your salad be brought to you when everyone else is eating their appetizers.

5) Focus your attention on the people you are with and enjoy the pleasure of having someone else prepare and serve your meal for you. By concentrating on the conversation, and taking part in it, you can relax and take the emphasis away from the food. After all, the company you are with takes precedence over what you are eating. This way, it really makes no difference whether you are eating a lovely broiled fish dinner or a plate of pasta. Your attitude can be anything you wish it to be.

6) Keep in mind that the restaurant is in business to serve you. To them, you should be one of the most important people in the world — because you are their valued customer. Remember, that what may seem like a "special order" to you, is being repeated a dozen times throughout the restaurant. Many people, for various reasons, are requesting that their food be prepared in specific ways. Some people may have certain health conditions or allergies that require the food be prepared in a special way. You are not the only person in the restaurant that is asking for this service. How else is a restaurant to learn that their customers appreciate broiled or baked fish if no one ever asks for it?

7) When asked to join friends or family in their homes, find out what type of an evening it is meant to be. It amazes me that we get enough information to know what attire is appropriate, but feel "funny" asking about the food for the event. Find out if this will be a sit-down dinner or a buffet. If the evening is being spent with true friends, they will want to make sure that you are happy. It shouldn't matter what you eat — again — you are all getting together to enjoy one another's company. This does not have to mean that your hostess must fix you a separate meal. You could eat a small amount of food before leaving home, then take small amounts of the foods that are offered. Or, you can agree with your friend ahead of time to bring some of your foods with you, and at dinner time, have your food placed in front of you.

8) A buffet meal is easy, if you make some plans ahead of time. You could eat all of your dinner at home, and simply walk and talk your way through the party. Or take a serving plate, place small amounts of some of the best choices and enjoy the evening. Most people are very unobservant — they are more concerned whether what they want to eat or drink is available.

Mary Busse is Director of Diet Center, Grosse Pointe, where the focus is on improving personal eating habits and enhancing individual's lifestyles.

Batts recognized for service

Cindi Batts, Saratoga Community Hospital's director of Occupational Therapy, was recently honored for distinguished service by the Detroit Occupational Therapy Association.

She was presented with a plaque by Senator John Kelly at the association's annual awards ceremony on May 16 at the Barnum Center at Beaumont Hospital.

In addition, Batts received a State of Michigan Senate Resolution No. 482 from Senators Kelly, Cropsey, Faxon, and Welborn honoring her for her achievements and extending their congratulations.

"It's a nice feeling to be recognized by your peers," Batts said. "I'm thankful to be chosen for this honor, and I was surprised to receive the Senate Resolution, too."

Batts, who grew up in Grosse Pointe, is a 1982 graduate in occupational therapy from Wayne State University. After graduation, she provided occupational therapy to geriatric patients at two nursing homes. She was hired by Saratoga in 1983 to create an Occupational Therapy Department. The department now has eight therapists and assistants.

Batts was also instrumental in getting April recognized as as Occupational Therapy Month, with proclamations from Senator Kelly and the Warren and Harper Woods mayors.

Park offers team tennis

Team tennis will be offered by the Grosse Pointe Park Recreation Department this year, for all residents. Team tennis will be held every Monday evening from June 20 to mid-August. Play begins about 7 p.m. and continues to about 10 p.m.

Teams should be composed of both male and female adults, with sufficient players to play the following events:

Womens: Singles and doubles; Mens, singles and doubles; Mixed, doubles.

Two teams will be matched on each court. Only one event is played at a time; continuing until one team wins a six-game set. After all events have been played, each team's total games won will determine the winner.

Team tennis is a recreational program designed to be an adult mixer; where players get to meet new people, cheer for their friends and play tennis.

Applications must be submitted by June 14 and entry is restricted to the first eight teams who apply. If you have further questions, call 822-2812.

Girls' track

Powerful and strong are two ways to separate the Lady Norsemen from the rest of the crowd.

North proved why they lost only once during the season as they swept the MAC championships with 115 points. As usual, North was led by Liz Bolden's four first-place finishes. Bolden won the long jump (15-7 1/2), the 100 dash (13.0), 200-dash (27.0), and the 400 run (59.7). Shannon Andrewes won the 800 run (2:28) and placed second in the high jump (4-8). She also led the 3200 and 1600-relays to victory.

Kristen Gast won the 300 low hurdles (48.0), and freshman Lisa Williams took second in the 1600 and 3200 runs.

The outstanding performances by Bolden, Andrewes, Gast, Williams, and Tina Strader propelled the team.

Soccer

One mistake ended the season for the Lady Norsemen.

In a distrcit game against South, North's Laura Ferguson tried to head a ball out of her own zone in the overtime contest, but put it past Norsemen goalie Nancy Schulte to lose, 1-0.

Gallagher schedules basketball camps

William Hayes, varsity basketball coach at Bishop Gallagher, has announced two summer basketball camps for boys and girls, ages 9 through 14.

The 11th annual Bishop Gallagher Basketball Camp for girls will take place from June 20-24 from 9 a.m. to noon at the high school gym.

The boys' camp is set for July 18-23 from 9 a.m. to noon.

Clinics will be conducted by Gallagher coaches and will feature daily scrimmages, free throw contests, low player-to-coach ratios, and fundamental gamesmanship will be stressed.

Attendance at either camp is by advance reservation only and space is limited. For more information, call Coach Hayes, 886-0855,or 881-9451.

Sane/Freeze holds 'Legs Against Arms'

The Detroit area Sane/Freeze will hold its fifth annual "Legs Against Arms" walk-a-thon on Saturday, June 25.

This year's walk will begin at Congressman George Crockett's office (Woodward near Euclid in Detroit), and go up Woodward to Congressman William Broomfield's office (Paul Street) in Birmingham. The theme of this year's walk is to expose the relationship between the military budget and the needs of our local communities, as well as give individuals the chance to partake in some sort of exercise.

Registration is at 8:30 and 11:30 a.m. at the First United Methodist Church of Ferndale.

For more information, call the Sane/Freeze office at 548-3920.
