Superintendent John Whritner said he is "particularly happy for the library staff, who have put themselves on the line." He added that he is still hopeful for a new building sometime in the future and that this millage will enable the library to keep going until then.

The board election was hotly contested, as four candidates vied for two seats. Incumbent President Fred Adams won what he called "my squeaker," beating third-place Timothy Howlett by only 46 votes.

As Hili shoppers discovered yesterday, the parking lot behind Hill businesses has been rerouted again.

For the next two weeks, paving work behind 131 Kercheval will change the traffic patterns, Farms police said.

The whole area is being dug up at the same time, which will eliminate the current oneway pattern. No traffic will have access in or out of the parking lot from Muir. All traffic will be routed onto McKinley.

Watch for the traffic cones and directional signs. The work is part of a larger project of widening Muir Road, which was part of the site plan for the Cottage Hospital parking structure approved by the Farms City Council earlier.

Muir Road at Kercheval will now have a left-turn lane in addition to the two lanes it currently has.

The project will cost some $64,700, with an additional $13,600 for engineering costs. The city must pay for half of the $64,700, and a combination of funds from Cottage Hospital and Bologna Construction will pick up the rest.

By Margie Reins Smith Staff Writer

The Grosse Pointe Health Education Council - for 43 years Grosse Pointe's health-link between school and home - will dissolve before the beginning of the 1988-89 school year.

According to Council President Donna Bramlage, poor attendance at meetings, a lack of new blood and reluctance of current members to take leadership positions are primary reasons for its demise.

"Our only hope is that someone will step forward and take a position of leadership," Bramlage said.

Past President Jan Dahl said, "It's a lack of volunteers." Dahl and Bramlage speculated that the increasing number of women who are employed full-time may he one reason for the volunteer shortage.

"There's a dwindling number day to volunteer," Bramlage said. Vomen who do volunteer are doing it at their child's school, she said.

The Grosse Pointe Health Education Council consists of reprelie and parochial schools in Grosse Pointe and Harper Woods. They meet about six times a year for business meetings and to hear a speaker on a health-related topic. They have sponsored a variety of health-related programs during the for 10th-grade boys. • Instruction in breast self-examination for 10th-grade girls.

"These are very viable programs," Bramlage said, "and they reach a large number of children." But, she added, as with all organizations, the council needs new faces and new leadership. "Many of us have of people available during the taken all the roles over the Health Education Council publicity chairman/historian Nancy Foresman said, "I hope pressure will be put upon the schools to pick these programs up. The chances are good that they will."

ing nutrition information for 1976 was turned over to the Grosse Pointe schools in 1983, because of our input that the schools even have a health program," she said.

The council was formed in 1945 as a mothers' health council to give nutrition information to mothers of school children.

"Now it has come full circle and we're doing a nutrition program aimed at the children," Dahl said. The CPR program will probably be most affected by the council's demise, she said. "It will be very much missed. It's the only CPR program in the country that trains and certifies kids. They get cards if they pass. "The scoliosis program was an educational process" (rather than an attempt to identify children with scoliosis,)" she said. "We brought scoliosis to people's minds and educated parents," This year, she said, council volunteers screened 2,298 children for scoliosis and referred about 100 of those to parents, who then may or may not take the children to their family physicians.

"The sad part," said Foresman, "is that the council has kept itself in the background. Parents have not understood who is responsible for these health programs. Parents think the schools are doing this.'

Dionne said his own father was busy, but family-oriented. "I'm probably with my kids more than average," he said. "My feeling is why have children if you're not going to enjoy them?"

"More fathers are participating in prenatal care, bonding; and the birth experience," said Maltz. "Those who have grown up in the '50s and '60s, when values and traditional sex roles were challenged," he said, "are fathers now. We have a group of fathers with different values. They see that men can be sensitive, caring, nurturing. These may be causing inner conflicts, however, and men are waging a silent internal struggle with these issues. Tony Mira, of Grosse Pointe Farms, also a two-time father, said he started out being closely involved with his children by being present at their births. Chase, 2 1/2, was born in Tulsa, Okla., and Chad, one month, was born at St. John Hospital in

Some Park residents voiced objections at Monday's council meeting to rlans for a group home on the 1400 block of Buckingham for developmentally disabled adults.

Mary Ann Darlak, a resident of the 1300 block on Buckingham, presented a petition with 102 signatures - Park neighbors who are opposed to the group home.

"People object for several reasons," she said. "They believe the home will be unsafe for people who will live there. They've invested in their own homes and they believe the group home will lower the values.'

Darlak said neighbors received a letter from Wayne Community Living Services saying the agency planned to open a group home for six adults.

Councilman Mark Valente said, "I'm concerned by the lack of communication with the state before this is a done deal."

The city attorney was asked to return to the next council meeting with information on the city's legal position in policing the issue.

Darlak said she is going to talk to the president of the neighborhood's block club. "We may go door to door or print flyers to get people to come to the next council meeting. People are upset. I was surprised that not more were at Monday's meeting."

Schools adopt AIDS curriculum

By Nancy Parmenter Staff Writer

A formal AIDS curriculum was expected to be adopted at the school board's June 14 meeting. The health and sex education classes have been gradually adding information on AIDS; now the subject will be addressed in every grade in varying ways.

'This will be more comprehensive," said Rosalie Bryk, one of the committee members. "We have always dealt with sexually communicated diseases like gonorrhea. Our bottom line message is that the only safe sex is no sex. We'll have a 'no sex' message for fourth graders and up."

Bryk said students that young are already receiving information on AIDS through television and at school. The Weekly Reader recently published an article on the subject, she said.

She said there is plenty of material available. "The problem with AIDS material is that everybody wants to get on the bandwagon," she said. "Some material is so technical that you get lost in the jargon."

Secondary Curriculum Director Robert Welch agreed. "Some of the movies are too long, too formalistic, too technical," he said. "And some are too sentimental and not very helpful. But there is a wealth of material coming out. Lots of organizations are capitalizing on the interest."

Under the new curriculum, instruction will start in kindergar-ten. That probably isn't too young, according to Welch.

"There is a serious question about how young AIDS instruction should start," he said. "Some kindergartners are asking questions — and they're rather pointed. Some would in the younger grades is Young students will learn about AIDS first in the context of wellness. Red Cross instructor Jan Thaxton, who has conducted Grosse Pointe's in-services, explained, "We're not going to go into a kindergarten room and talk about condoms. We're really talking about feelings of selfworth, so that when they reach the age, they feel confident in saying 'no."

Thaxton said students tend to be fairly sophisticated on the subject.

"These kids are so smart," she said. "Junior high students know what a condom is. If they have the questions, we have to be ready with the answers."

The problem with adolescents is that there is a gap between their knowledge and their practice, according to Welch. He said a state survey showed that high school students are knowledgeable about AIDS.

"They did well - they're not unsophisticated," he said. "But argue that it's too young, but they don't take precautions. (In that's not the consensus of in- Grosse Pointe,) all of our sex ed formed opinion today. The em- is predicated on values and ab-

"Lots of people want it to be taught at home," she said. "But it isn't always. It should be taught at home and backed up at school.

"We have to teach it in a nonjudgmental way. We discuss alternate lifestyles. Right or wrong babies being born to infected or good or bad are just labels so-

Parents have the right to hold their children out of the class, but administrators say only a small percentage of them do. Parents may also review all AIDS material by going to the principal's office in their child's building.

The committee has urged that the board adopt the proposals for implementation in the fall, even though future revisions may become necessary. It has also asked that the board review the district's policy on keeping students or staff out of school - and recommended that the board adopt the state model policy, which is more comprehensive than Grosse Pointe's.

If the board reviews policy, the teachers' union must be involved, according to union President Doris Cook. "Our contract calls for the union to be involved in policy," Cook said. "We knew there was a study going on, but we didn't know the curriculum committee was extending itself to school policy.

"I'm all in favor of having a carefully worded policy," she added. "But I don't want them Grosse Pointe is ahead of have (AIDS), because we know there are only certain ways to get it.

Cook said she has not polled the teachers' association, but that she personally favors the addition to the curriculum.

"I prefer to approach it as a health issue, rather than a sex education issue," she said. "The health implications extend to blood transfusions, drugs, and mothers.

They ended up out in Dryden. "Rip was thinking almost from the first of keeping it untouched," Patty said. The state society appointed three local chapters to look into the feasibility of the project, and that's how Don and Bee Naish got involved. "Bee was president of one of the chapters," said Naish, who has been "temporary" director of the center for nearly 13 years. "She was afraid she'd get lost coming over here,

Being a member of the board at Seven Ponds means leaving your business suit at home and keeping a pair of work gloves handy at all times. Volunteers finished the building project on skis and snowshoes in a threefoot blizzard. They cleared brush and built trails.

"People just appeared - and they stayed with it," said Patty Schemm. "When we started this trail, we had to be careful, because once it was made, it was made. I was following behind, and all the chips and branches were flying back on me and I was wondering what we were doing here."

At first, that's what the locals wondered, too. They looked askance at the city dwellers when they first built their cottage. But Rip, a Saginaw boy, and Patty, a small-town Ohioan, soon made it clear that they weren't planning to transplant Grosse Pointe to Dryden. The cottage, near the nature preserve, is still reached by a gravel lane and now serves as vacation headquarters for their 8-year-old grandson, who says it's too hot in Key West, where he lives.

Seven Ponds, then and now, received a great deal of support from Grosse Pointers - the is one of the five sponsoring chapters - as well as people from Flint to Ann Arbor. It was less popular with the local residents, Naish said, because they perceived it as something built by Grosse Pointers for Grosse Pointers. Now their viewpoint has changed.

The center now conducts an in-depth nature study program for the Almont schools and works with schools in Dryden and Flint.

It can be a learning place for grown-ups, too. Patty Schemm says one of her goals is to join a nature center study tour and learn some bird calls so she can lead tours herself.

"When I came out here, I didn't know anything," she said. "I knew corn - I could identify that. But I mostly followed Rip.'

Rip Schemm retired as president of Huron Portland Cement (now the LaFarge Corp.) in 1963, shortly before he and his brother sold their Bin-Dicator Co. He had always been interested in hunting and fishing, and with retirement his interest turned to conservation. He was also interested in fine books.

"Old Man Rose over on Calkins Road has spent his whole life digging over here," said Naish. Old Man Rose is shortly to be joined by Patty Schemm's grandson, who plans to cover the territory with a metal detector during his summer vacation.

"He loves it here," she said. "And it's my daughter's favorite place, the only one she ever misses.'

It was the Schemms' favorite place, too. They used to spend long weekends there every week. They watched the beaver build a dam across a channel beside a pond, adding to it every year.

But Patty Schemm was surprised to hear about the monster dam a few ponds down the chain of ponds. Even during the drought, the ponds have kept their depth - because of a "hellacious" beaver dam 150 feet long and 10 feet high, Naish "He had been retired about said. The dam has flooded three

The next year he wore Seven Ponds insignia.

Finances have always been a challenge for the nature center. "When we first went into Audubon, they told us point-blank we couldn't expect any help," said Naish.

'No," Patty Schemm agreed. "We turned to them for their expertise.

As a result, volunteers led by Schemm enthusiasm conducted an unending series of fundraisers. "We called everyone we knew to join us," Patty said. For years, Rip served as finance and fundraising chairman.

"If it hadn't been for Patty and Rip, this place would have folded long ago," said Bee Naish. "They felt so strongly about establishing an outdoor educational facility."

Patty Schemm has equal praise for the "gentle souls" who have volunteered so many times to help. "No one has lost enthusiasm," she said. "It's been such a wonderful addition to Rip's and my life. This place has been so good for us."

She believes it's good for the peace of mind of everyone. There are other places like this," she said, "but we need every one of them."

Will Lansing and the public back casinos?

Tow that Detroit's Casino Gaming Study Commission, as expected, I has backed casino gambling, the question is whether the people of Detroit and the members of the Legislature will be persuaded to support it.

Despite the commission's study, we remain strongly opposed to the recommendations on the grounds that in the long run casino gambling will cost in social terms far more than it might yield in economic benefits. That view also appears to be shared by the leading businessmen and clergy in the area who have expressed their opposition to legalization of casino gambling.

Despite the disparagement by casino supporters of non-Detroiters who oppose casinos, it is clear that the suburbs do have a stake in the gambling issue. Detroit's crime and drugs already spill over into adjacent communities. Any increase in crime, prostitution and drug use in Detroit as a result of legalization of casinos would no doubt do the same.

Furthermore, suburban residents, including many in Grosse Pointe, own businesses, have investments or work in DeOpinion troit. And many of them pay property taxes or city income taxes or both in Detroit. So clearly they have an important stake in Detroit's future, with or without

Whatever happens, it is clear that the city of Detroit, the suburbs and the Legislature will be bombarded for months with arguments pro and con, which makes it certain that the final decision on whether casino gambling will come to Detroit is yet to be made.

At his press conference announcing the commission's recommendations, Mayor Coleman Young said he intends to go along with the report, adding that if, after further study, he finds the report to his liking, he will "very actively campaign for

Since he appointed the commission and has been in favor of casino gambling for some time, it would be more of a surprise if the mayor had said he wasn't going to support the recommendation. But while the commission voted 46 yes and 15 no, with three abstentions, there were some powerful dissents among the members.

They included Walter McCarthy, chairman of Detroit Edison; Peter Stroh, head of the Stroh Brewing Co.; Al Glancy, chairman of Michigan Consolidated Gas Co., and Frank Smith, president of the Greater Detroit Chamber of Commerce, whose board had voted against the casino proposal even before the commission's report was issued.

Whether there will be one referendum, two referenda or none on the casino gambling issue in the city of Detroit on the Aug. 2 primary was still undecided as the Grosse Pointe News went to press. Proposals for both an anti-casino and a pro-casino referendum were being challenged on legal grounds although the betting still is that at least one referendum will survive.

Legally, a more important hurdle to be surmounted appears in the state Legislature which must authorize casino gambling if it is to become legal anywhere in the state. Up to this time, there has been little enthusiasm in Lansing for any such action. In fact, Senate Majority Leader John Engler, Mount Pleasant Republican, reiterated his opposition just after the commission's report was issued last week.

State Sen. Gilbert DiNello, East Detroit Democrat, has thrown some additional sand into the legislative gears by vowing he will oppose any casino gambling legislation that does not allow voters anywhere in Michigan to decide if they, too, want local casinos. The Senate Regulatory Affairs Committee, which he chairs, is likely to be the one to review casino legislation and he is in a position to influence what the committee does.

In its report, the commission took the position that "past history and current activities make the issue of the morality of gaming moot as a matter of public policy Without mentioning them specifically, it obviously was referring to the state's legal ization of horse race betting and the Michi gan lottery when it commented that "it is illogical and hypocritical to, on the one hand, benefit from the revenue of certain forms of gambling while decrying other forms of gambling.

But dissenters might inquire whether the commission recommends that the lid be completely lifted on all gambling proposals and whether it meant that the aim of improving the economic plight of Detroit would justify any means of achieving that goal. We strongly doubt even the commission's most ardent supporters of casino gambling would be willing to go that far and suggest that they rethink their effort to justify their action on such grounds.

A nasty '88 race ahead?

ow that Vice President George Bush and Gov. Michael Dukakis have wrapped up their nominations for the presidency, the stage is set for what is already being described as a nasty campaign.

Just why the '88 campaign should be any nastier than most previous ones is not apparent, but the idea enunciated by some pundits is that each side will try harder to impugn the honesty and integrity of the opposition candidate because no incumbent president is in the race.

For whatever reason, the campaign does seem to be getting under way on a low note. Republicans are deriding the Dukakis claim of a Massachusetts miracle and the Democrats are deriding the vice president's claim to positive contributions to the Reagan presidency. And each side is charging the other with "sleaze."

But so far neither side has offered any vision of the nation's future. Under a new president in 1989, surely there will be farreaching changes, if not of direction at least of emphasis, regardless of which party wins in November. To date, however, there has been precious little discussion of what the future might hold in either a Bush or Dukakis administration.

True, the rough outlines of a Democratic platform began emerging from last week's discussions on Mackinac Island. But the draft that emerged failed to define the party's stand on such essential issues as taxes and defense spending, even though the drafting committee claimed unity and agreement on most other issues.

The Republicans are no better off. Bush and his colleagues are still trying to figure out just how to write a platform and campaign on the accomplishments of the Reagan years, while avoiding most of the responsibility for the huge deficit and the various mistakes of the current administration.

With the top men already chosen, the party conventions will be sadly lacking in decision-making responsibilities. True, they will ratify the presidential choices, endorse the vice presidential nominees and even revise the platforms. But the delegates will not do much more than enjoy the hoopla that will launch the 1988 presidential cam-

A discouraging prospect for both parties,

THERE ARE CERTAIN TIMES OF THE YEAR WHEN JAYWALKING IN DETROIT IS NOT ONLY ILLEGAL BUT ILL-ADVISED.

Power corrupts in Detroit

It was, we suppose, appropriate to accentuate the positive and ignore the nega-Live for Detroit's Mayor Coleman Young during the week he celebrated his 70th birthday.

In his May 29 Sunday column in the Detroit Free Press, publisher David Lawrence reported that the paper had run five stories and a half-dozen other mentions dealing with Young's birthday celebrations. Lawrence also offered to send to anyone interested a copy of Bob Talbert's column of tribute to the mayor, paid his own respects to the city's chief executive and concluded that the city had been "fortunate to have Coleman Young as mayor.'

As Lawrence wrote, Young can be proud of his many accomplishments during the years he has served as mayor. Yet we wish he would accept with better humor some of the justified criticism for his failures, such as his inability to do much to benefit Detroit's neighborhoods.

But now that the celebrations are over, perhaps it is time to point an accusing finger at the mayor about another matter that tends to reflect his attitude toward his critics. It involves the mayor's role in barring Tom Barrow, who ran unsuccessfully against Young in 1985, from attending a tions meeting at the precinct station. Barrow told the Detroit news media he had been invited by community leaders to talk about casino gambling at the meeting, but was turned away at the door by Precinct Cmdr. George Merritt, even after he had promised to sit quietly in the audience.

recent 8th Precinct community-police rela-

Merritt also canceled the meeting, which had attracted about 100 community residents, but offered no explanation to the media and failed to return telephone calls.

Asked for comment by the Detroit News, Mayor Young replied: "I'm not going to answer any questions about Tom Barrow.'

However, Mel White, an 8th Precinct community relations board member and Young backer, complained that the incident had hurt police and community relations. He added that his group had discussed casino gambling at several previous meetings in the precinct station without any resistance from Merritt and that he has asked the mayor for an explanation.

In the absence of any comment from the mayor or the Detroit police department, we accept Barrow's report of the incident, his view that the mayor was responsible for barring him from the meeting and his additional view about such matters:

"We believe we are entitled to open access to all public buildings as long as they allow anybody in there. The city will spend an awful lot of money to get its message across, and the only way the people can be heard is through a lot of hard work and cement-pounding.'

That sounds like a reasonable viewpoint even though Barrow has indicated he might run against the mayor the next time out. However, does the incident mean that dissidents in Detroit, including those who run against the mayor, will get the same treatment they often get under dictatorships? And now that the mayor's casino gambling study commission has given its expected support to the idea, will the mayor adopt a more conciliatory attitude toward critics of casino gambling or simply use his power to punish them?

The incident involving Barrow calls to mind the contention by Lord Acton: "Power tends to corrupt; absolute power corrupts absolutely."

To the Editor: This year I had the unique privilege and opportunity of serving as instrumental music director at Grosse Pointe North High School in addi tion to my responsibilities at Grosse Pointe South High School, where I have taught since 1979. During these past nine years I have worked with over 200 students each year, preparing and presenting concerts with the Symphonic Band, Sym phony Orchestra, Concert Band and Jazz Band, and I can look back with great pride at the musical accomplishments of my students.

The 1987-88 school year, however, has set a precedent for musical excellence and improvement at both Grosse Pointe high schools. The North Symphonic Band and Orchestra presented outstanding winter and spring concerts, and for the first time, the North and South band students combined as a massed band to perform the entire Outdoor Band Concert together. South's Spring Concert at Orchestra Hall drew a record crowd of over 1,000, and the Symphonic Band, Choirs and Orchestra gave performances unequalled since I began teach ing in Grosse Pointe. The newly formed North/South Jazz Band has played for the dancing enjoyment of hun dreds of Grosse Pointe adults, and further proves that the rival Grosse Pointe high schools can cooperate in positive, non-competitive ac tivities.

I look forward with antici pation to working with our Grosse Pointe high school band and orchestra students next year. Grosse Pointe has much to be proud of in these fine young adults.

Saga of a stolen car

Or... How a Bucket of Water and a Vacuum Made Me Almost Love My Car Again.

I received a phone call at 5 a.m. a couple of Saturdays ago. As I stumbled to the phone, I never even wondered who was calling me. First of all I couldn't actually function and secondly, I knew it had to be important for I asked. someone to call me at 5 a.m. on a Saturday.

"Mr. Bernas?" said the voice.

I immediately thought they calls me "Mr." anything. But before I could reply, the voice continued.

This is officer...from the Riverview police . . .

into my head. Who do I have to bail out? Or worse. Who died? Or worse. They didn't receive my payment for the ticket I ordered for their policeman's ball.

I didn't think he would tell me my car was stolen.

'Do you own a 1980 Oldsmobile Delta 88?" he asked. Well I used to, I thought, but I answered, "Yes.' "Where is it now?"

Obviously not where I think it is I thought, but I answered, "It's parked in front of my building, why?

'Could you check, please?' That's when it sunk in. "Oh %-*!, did someone steal my car?"

"It appears that way, could you check, please?"

So like a dummy, I checked. Obviously my car wasn't going wanted my dad, because no one to be there, if the officer, who I'd never talked to before, from Riverview, where I'd never been before, had my phone number and called me at 5 a.m. on Saturday. What was he going to say? "OK, Yikes! I woke up quickly then thanks, I was just checking, and a million thoughts jumped Have a nice day."? NO! He was going to tell me my car was stolen. But there I was, checking if my car was where I parked it at 1 Say

Ronald J. Bernas

1:30 a.m. I wasn't very surprised not to sleep. to find that it wasn't there.

"Hello?" I said into the phone. "You're right, it's not there."

The guy must have thought, 'No kidding," but said, "Well, we've recovered it. It's in our pound here.'

Then why, I thought did you ask me to check if my car was here? I thanked him, he gave me instructions on how to pick up my car, where it was and what was wrong with it, which he said wasn't much, just a broken steering column. So I hung up the phone and went back to bed, but

I never thought it would happen to me. Who the heck would ever steal my car? I mean, come on. It's a 1980 Oldsmobile Delta 88 with many, many things wrong with it. The power windows don't go down. Well, that's not exactly true, they go down (sometimes), but they won't always go back up. And on top of that the air conditioning doesn't work. (I hope the jerk who stole it sweated to death on the ride down to Riverview.) It has 113,000 miles on it. It has a side view mirror that just dangles. It has a trunk that doesn't stay open unless you prop it up. It has a radio that switches stations just by going over a bump in the road. It has chips and scratches in its paint, which incidentally is its third paint job in addition to the original paint. No one would ever steal this, I always said as I got out of the carand went to my apartment, feeling secure in that thought.

I called a friend who gave up his Saturday morning plans of Mighty Mouse reruns to take me to Riverview and help me pick up my car. This friend was more upset than I was. I wasn't really upset that my car was stolen After all, it was recovered, and driveable. But when I saw my car, the only thing of value I own, with the steering column torn up, and the ash tray emp tied all over the inside, and the glove compartment contents scat tered around, I suddenly felt violated. On top of that, the jerk had the nerve to move my seat up and adjust my mirror. I was apathetic. I just didn't know what to do. This car would never be the same to me again. I didn't want to sit in it. I didn't want to drive it. I just didn't want it. But I needed it.

I drove it back home and called another friend who happened to be washing her car at the moment. "Bring it over," she said. "We'll get it fixed up in no time." No, I said. It won't help. But she persisted, and I reluctantly drove my car over to her house and we washed it and vacnumed it, but I knew that wouldn't help.

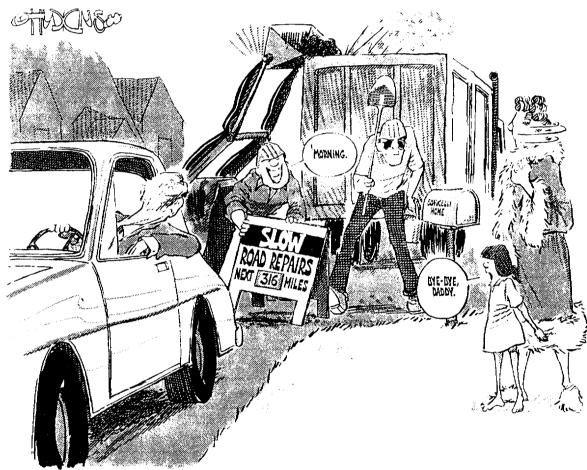

When we were done, I stepped back and looked, objectively, at a car I had hated earlier that day. What I saw was a beautiful car that any self-respecting thief would be proud to steal. I liked it again. And when I got into it, and the windows were stuck up, and the air conditioning didn't work and the radio changed stations when I turned a corner too fast, I thought, "This isn't much, but it's mine. And even though I may not love my car as much hurt and angry, but ultimately anymore, I'll learn to love it again.'

Business as unusual

Not that it affected police business, mind you. But when Farms residents tried to go to the police station over the weekend to pay tickets or make complaints, they found the station wasn't where they had left it.

Yellow ribbons were strung across police department doors, warning the unwary of the dangers of asbestos removal. And those fire trucks weren't parked on the apron just to look good.

"We're trying to cooperate with the police," said fire chief Sam Cardella. His department had given up all of its garage space to make room for the cop

The current reports were stacked neatly right over there between the two flashlights. Only long-term investigations were delayed - and then only for four days. Or six. Actually, the asbestos removal wasn't a surprise to officials but its timing was. Peabody did it

Charlene Haberkorn's nephew Clayton has his bike back, thanks to an early warning from Peabody the Bouvier. The 6-yearold's new bicycle was taken from Haberkorn's Park garage minutes after the family returned from a picnic at the park.

"I was just unloading the toys from the van - I was on my second trip — when the dog barked," Haberkorn said. The bike was gone.

Quick response by Park police and scouting by family members turned up a group of people taking the bike out of their trunk a few blocks away. They were already starting to strip parts off when the police arrested them, Haberkorn said. "I'm just glad Peabody barked," she said. "Ever since we've had the children, he's very protective.'

Thanks, Mr. Peabody.

What kind of swallows are we hosting?

Why they annually select only our boat from among the 250 vessels berthed at Windmill Pointe Park.

How these two little blue birds know when we are taking our sail boat out of winter storage so that they can be at our well to greet us when we arrive.

Whether our two feathered friends are the same couple or if we are now being selected by the children or grandchildren of the original pair that started this whole nursery bit so many seasons ago. Like, are we into a dynasty?

Perhaps some of your readers can answer our questions. Or you and they might just want to come to our dock to get a very close look at a very devoted couple of birds who have obviously decided that sailors have more fun.

Library committee thanks voters

To the Editor:

On behalf of the entire Library Millage Committee, we want to express our sincere appreciation to the electorate of Grosse Pointe and Harper Woods for their affirmative vote on the .4 operating millage increase proposal. Our library system is a measure of our community; along with our schools, parks and churches. The library transcends all age groups and your expression of support for this most vital community asset assures that current programs will continue and facilities remain open.

The success of this campaign was made possible only through the combined efforts of many dedicated individuals and service groups. Any attempt to enumerate them would surely lead to the inadvertent omission of either a person or a group. Ours was a total community effort for which all of us can be proud.

Prior studies have shown that Grosse Pointers love their library system. This affirmative millage vote clearly reaffirms this fact. As a resource for the entire community, quality library programs will continue to be provided to all age groups.

'The mission of the library is to serve people of all ages, actively providing easily accessible information, materials, services and programs designed to meet the community's evolving educational, recreational, cultural and informational needs."

Our campaign goal was to continue to maintain the current high level of quality programs and services currently enjoyed. Your affirmative vote will assure that this goal will become a real-

Thank you for your support.

Thank you

To the Editor:

For a candidate, the most rewarding aspect of any campaign is the chance to meet the voting public, to listen to their concerns and answer their questions. I have enjoyed meeting and talking with all of you whom I had not known before. I was delighted to renew acquaintances with those of you I had not seen in a while, and I cherish the friendship and support of so many of you who gener-ously offered it throughout the past weeks.

My sincere thanks goes to each and every one of you who encouraged me when the going got rough, who stood steady when I needed someone to lean on and, most important, who voted for me when it came time to make your final choice.

I look forward to serving on the Grosse Pointe School Board for the next four years and I thank you for providing me with this opportunity to give something back to a community that is giving so much to me and my family.

Bad taste

To the Editor:

The cartoon in your June 9 paper referring to a recent mugging on the Hill was in very bad taste. Being mugged or robbed is no laughing matter, regardless where it occurs. Was this simply poor judgment on your part or are you indeed so cynical when it comes to the safety of the citizens in the community you profess to serve? I hope you will let your readers know that not everyone appreciates this bizarre kind of humor.

Take action

To the Editor:

The cowardly, brazen assault on a Farms woman while pumping gas into her vehicle is an outrage to the decent citizens of all the Pointes. Citizens of all the Pointes have a right to enjoy safe streets.

The suspect or one like him will probably be back, because of the easy success of the hit-and-run tactic used against defenseless victims.

One solution would be to assign police officers to walk beats on the Hill. Armed police regularly walk beats in the Chicago Loop at all hours of the day and night. Police presence is there. You feel safe. A more effective solution would be to activate undercover police decoy units in the Farms police department. This method was used some years ago in Detroit and operated with a high degree of success and was known as STRESS - Stop Robberies Enjoy Safe Streets. The boldness of this attack demands that aggressive action be taken by Mayor Fromm immediately to prevent future assaults on our citizenry and the possible loss of life of an innocent man, woman or child.

Diet and enjoy

To the Editor:

I am writing in response to the article printed on June 2. I strongly agree that the dieter who drastically changes his/her social life along with eating habits will make dieting harder and more than likely gain the weight back. There is no reason you cannot enjoy an active social life and lose weight at the same time.

I have watched many people, relatives and close friends, continue with their social life and lose those unwanted pounds at the same time. The hardest way to stay faithful to a diet is when you're faced with a variety of foods that are all your favorites. Mary Busse, director of Diet Center, Grosse Pointe, gave some helpful hints that make eating out a time of relaxation.

1. Choose restaurants that are likely to have the food you want. If you go to a restaurant that has a mixture of foods, you're automatically going to want to try different foods out. Where if you go to a familiar restaurant, you will be able to find the light, low-calorie, nutritious foods.

2. Don't look at the menu. It was designed to tempt you. When you open up the menu, you might spot some new food that will seem scrumptious and you might end up getting high fatty food with triple the amount of calories you were expecting to have.

3. When asked to join friends or family in their homes, find out what type of an evening it is meant to be. You might go to a get-together expecting to have dinner and when you arrive, you only see appetizers. Then you end up eating more than you would have if there had been a full-course meal. I was very pleased to find an article about the social life while dieting. I'm sure there are many dieters who are missing out on the fun they used to have because they feel if they cut everything else out of their lives, they will lose weight faster. I'm sure some dieters who are living like this who read Mary Busse's article have learned a more fun-filled dieting social life where they can stick to their goal.

Silly regulations To the Editor:

Saturday, June 4, was a glorious Michigan spring day. Karen, Tom and I were sailing along in my 35-foot sailboat in a gentle breeze. Suddenly there was an awful sound as if we were hitting a rocky bottom. We were over the dumping grounds on Lake St. Clair. Attempts to heel the boat over and the only more grinding noise. I am no stranger to hitting bottom, at least on a sailboat. In twenty-five years of sailing I have been aground on all of the great lakes and in the Caribbean, but never before did I hear that earsplitting noise as if a sledge hammer was used against the full keel of "Caprice."

use of the engine produced

A call to the Coast Guard for assistance was the next step. A variety of questions were asked by a pleasant and competent voice on the other end. I expressed my concern about the delay since the rumbling noise below was getting worse, particularly when a freighter would go by in the nearby channel. I was reassured that while I was answering the few questions a rescue boat had already been dispatched. I have previously given my LORAN coordinates so that finding us was not a problem.

Twenty minutes later, as we were about to launch the inflatable dinghy and see if kedging off would get us going, a Coast Guard boat four men aboard arrived.

A few feet from us, they told us, there was eight feet of water, my depth sounder was showing only three feet.

A Coast Guardsman jumped aboard "Caprice" to see if there was any damage and risk of sinking. There was none. However, he, too, became alarmed by the intensity and nature of the noise caused by the banging against the hull. He communicated his concern to the skipper of the rescue boat who in turn called the station asking for permission to help us.

After a few minutes, the skipper told us that, "the Congress passed a law against helping boats which were not in immediate danger." They could not assist us directly but offered to call a commerical salvage company and would stand by until the operation was completed. It would take at least 30 minutes until a commercial vessel could be secured. The prospect of 30 or more minutes of the explosive noise below was painful. We decided to launch our inflatable eight-foot dinghy and see if we could get off with the use of our anchor.

It seemed ludicrous to have next to us a big Coast Guard rescue boat, its powerful engines running, four well-trained men eager to help, prevented by regulations from throwing us a line. What a waste of taxpayers' money!

A small, open power boat appeared nearby. I got on my megaphone and explained the situation. A man grabbed my tow line. Within 30 seconds we were in deep water hearing only the sound of our diesel engine. The Coast Guard boat came alongside "Caprice" and our would-be helper jumped back to his boat.

From The Capitol Good beginning for environment

By William R. Bryant Jr. State Representative

The Senate Natural Resources and Environmental Affairs Committee has sent to the Senate floor their version of the Governor's Quality of life Bond proposal. However, their version is much more realistic and practical than that which was originally proposed by the governor. The governor's proposal lumped together, into one bond issue question, matters dealing with the environment, recreation and economic development.

What the Senate committee has done is separate the proposal into two issues. One bond issue, for $700 million, would provide $450 million for cleaning up hazardous waste sites, $175 million for solid waste cleanup, $50 million for a water pollution control revolving fund and $25 million for state participation in the Great lakes protection fund. All parts of this issue would deal, therefore, with environmental protection.

The legislation for this bond issue would stipulate that not more than 10 percent of the environmental fund can be used for cleanup of activities directly related to economic development purposes. In addition, not more than one-third of the bonds could be sold in any one year.

The second bond issue would provide for a "recreation bond authorization" for $100 million. Money raised from this bond issue would include $70 million for state parks and recreation and $30 million for local communities,

These two bond issue proposals, if the Senate and House agree to the Senate Committe the voters, in November, as separate issues, allowing voters to decide the environmental and recreational questions, separately.

Assuming no major changes occur as the Senate takes action on these bills, my hope is that the House will agree to the two proposals. Frankly, I think a most dangerous sites.

proposal, would be placed before bonding question for environmental cleanup should be for more than $700 million. The estimated need to clean up our known toxic waste sites is in excess of $3 billion. But this is a good beginning and, with federal money and money collected from polluters, should allow the state to clean up many of the worst,

Doctors Invent 'Lazy Way' to Lose Weight

New 'Fat-Magnet' Diet Pill Gives You Steady Fat Loss

An amazing new weight loss pill called "fat-magnet" has recently been developed and perfected by two prominent doctors at a world famous hospital in Los Angeles that reportedly "guarantees" to help you steadily lose fat by simply taking their tested and proven new pill.

You Can "Eat Normally"

Best of all, "you can continue to eat all of your favorite foods as long as you don't increase your normal eating habits. You can start losing fat from the very first day, until you achieve the ideal weight you desire."

It is a totally new major scientific breakthrough for weight loss (worldwide patents pending).

Flushes Fat Out of Body

The several line of Body

The new pill is appropriately called the "fat-magnet" pill because it breaks into thousands of particles. each acting like a tiny magnet, "attracting" and trapping many times its size in undigested fat particles from food that you have just eaten. Then, the trapped fat is naturally "flushed" right out of your body.

Within 2 days you should notice a change in the color of your stool, caused by the fat particles being climinated.
"Pills Go To Work"

The fat-magnet pills alone, "automatically" help reduce calories by eliminating dietary fat, with no exercising. You simply take the pills with a glass of water before meals. However, you can lose weight "faster" if you choose to follow the fat-magnet diet plan along with the pills.

The fat-magnet pills are already sweeping the country with record sales and glowing reports of weight loss. It's a "lazy way" to lose weight for people who enjoy eating.

Now Available to Public

If you need to lose a large or small amount of weight, you can order your supply of these new highly successful fat-magnet pills and diet plan (now available from the doctor's exclusive manufacturer by mail or phone order only) by sending $20 for a 90 pill supply (+$2 handling), or $35 for a 180 pill supply (+$3 handling), cash, check or money order to: Fat-Magnet, 9016 Wilshire Blvd., Dept. Each week in this column, we will focus on the work of a student. It can be a poem, a drawing, a short story, a picture of a scientific experiment or a woodworking project, a book review.

Jamie Moyer, a seventh grader at St. Clare of Montefalco School in Grosse Pointe Park, wrote the following poem. She is the daughter of Lavinia Moyer of Detroit and Harlan Moyer of California.

Waiting in the principal's office

I sit tight and straight. I look at my watch, how long

How'd I get in the principal's office?

Dauphin, Werthman win Lake scholarships

Two high school seniors, Heidi Dauphin from South, and Jean Werthman from North, have been named 1988 John Lake Scholarship recipients. Each receives a $1,000 grant toward tuition at her chosen university.

Dauphin, who captured several awards at the Wayne-Oakland County Regional Scholastic Art Exhibit in Pontiac earlier this year, plans to attend the University of Michigan, with a ∈ajor in art.

A National Honor Society member, Dauphin was senior class president and held other class offices at South.

Werthman, who will go to Michigan State University, plans to major in music performance or music therapy, with a minor in arts management. Much of her extracurricular time at North has been devoted to mu-

Dancing for a smile

One hundred fifty-one student-dancers took their talents on stage June 10 to tell the story of "The Princess Who Would Not Smile."

The dancers, all students of Motria Makar-Fedirko's School of Classical Ballet, ranged in age and talent, but the spirit of the dance infected them all.

the spirit of the dance infected them all.

The dress rehearsal, where these pictures were taken, was a time to make last-minute costume adjustments, check the lighting, and help everyone to remember their cues.

The story of the ballet comes from an old Russian fairy tale about a king who promised "anything you desire" to the person who could make his daughter (played by Carey Kotz) smile. The show was conceived, directed, choreographed and designed by Makar-Fedirko.

Mercy dean looks forward to three new programs

By Pat Paholsky

Think of Mercy College and think of nursing. True enough for the time being, that is.

Robert W. Wildblood, dean of Professional Studies at Mercy, is betting that the business program at the school will surpass nursing in size and enrollment.

"Business has been growing at a rapid rate at Mercy over the last several years," he said.

Two years ago when he came to Mercy, there were three fulltime faculty members in the business program. "Now there are seven and it will go up to eight full time as well as quite a few adjunct faculty.

"It's the fastest-growing major of the college," he said. About 15 percent of Mercy's undergraduate enrollment is in business.

This fall, Mercy will become the first school in the metropolitan Detroit area to offer a weekend master of business administration program. The program has been in the planning stages for two years following a positive response to marketing studies done by the college, Wildblood

"We were overwhelmed by the number of people who responded to our survey and we were surprised at the number of people who said weekend was the option they wanted," he said. "There are about five MBA progams in the area and weekend is a different population. They don't want to go from work to school.'

The Weekend MBA program will meet two Saturdays a month with the third Saturday free for research and reading. The 36-hour program will take four semesters and one summer to complete.

Describing the program as "We expect people to have an undergraduate in business. We have a list of nine required fore, they come in and essentially take the second year."

For more information about the Weekend MBA program, call the admissions office at 592-

The Weekend MBA is only one of three new programs, however, in which Wildblood's division is involved.

In the fall Mercy will also begin an Addiction Studies Insti- once a week for three hours. tute. Mercy has a long history of working with substance abuse and it's the only institution to offer associate's, bachelor's and 100. master's degrees in substance

The institute will study other addictions, including eating dis-orders and gambling. "We will be seeing more addiction given that the mayor is intent on having gambling," Wildblood said, "front-loaded," Wildblood said, adding that he is opposed to gambling.

Plans are to set up a regional conference and within two years. courses one must have. There a national conference in Detroit on addiction studies, he said.

And the third new program to begin this fall will be a complete undergraduate business program offered at the GM Tech Center in Warren. GM employees with no college credits or several semesters will be able to go through orientation, testing and registration on site. Most classes will start at 4 p.m. and meet

"We will offer as many classes as necessary for a degree," Wildand addiction studies, he said, blood said. He estimates the first semester enrollment at about

"One of the things that's exciting is these people are pretty "The institute will do several motivated and some are in their things," he said. "It will create a mid-50s," he said. "They want crease job likelihood and some just want to go to school." Motivation is something Wildblood understands well. He began his academic career inauspiciously at Purdue University.

"I didn't do well the first year and they didn't invite me back," he said.

So he went to work in a factory for a year and then served in the Navy as a hospital corpsman for five years.

"I learned a little bit what it was like to earn a living and it helped me decide what I wanted to do with my life.'

Wildblood said he's in favor of some type of universal government service for that reason -"to have time to do other things and to think."

His experience, he said, helps him understand students who are not doing well because they are not motivated.

He went back to Purdue and earned a bachelor of science, with honors, in psychology. He then earned a master of science in child-clinical psychology and a doctor of philosophy in counseling psychology, both at Purdue.

While he was in graduate school, he was a teaching assistant. "I found I loved what went on in the classroom. I liked the feedback.'

He taught at Purdue and at Radford University in Radford, Va. He served as chair of the Department of Psychology at Christopher Newport College in Newport News, Va., and at Hood College in Frederick, Md. He came to Mercy from East Stroudsberg University in East Stroudsberg, Pa.

He has continued to teach and was elected teacher of the year twice, counselor of the year twice and "most unique professor" once at the various schools. He teaches a class in statistics for the psychology department at

"I really enjoy what I'm doing," he said. "I don't consider working as work."

Wildblood lives in Harper Woods with his wife, Rebecca Barnes, who is a legal assistant at Miller Canfield Paddock & Stone. They have a daughter and a grandchild who live in Pennsylvania. Wildblood is the first male to be elected a board member of the League of Women Voters of Grosse Pointe.

Fiscal reality could delay schools' strategic plan

By Nancy Parmenter Staff Writer

July will tell the story of the Grosse Pointe schools' first attempt at a comprehensive longrange plan. Months of hard work by the strategic planning committee are likely to result in a recommendation to adopt the plan - but not implement all of it while the district is in a belttightening mode.

pessimistic about it.

"Items with a financial impact could be adopted but delayed," said committee chairman Edward Shine, South principal. "It's a five-year plan; the costs can be spread out and factored in along the way."

Superintendent John Whritner said the $1.1 million plan won't be overly expensive when spread out over five years. Besides, the plan represents an ideal.

"These groups have been told to think about the ultimate and not be concerned about price," he said.

The important thing about the plan, according to Shine, is the fact that it exists at all. "Most planning has been done year-toyear before now," he said. "This is the first attempt to make a long-range plan. It gives us measurability, so we know whether we've accomplished what we set out to do.'

As a starting point, the committee brainstormed lists of strengths and weaknesses in the school system. Although the lists, which take up 17 pages, are not action items, they are an interesting overview of the schools, from the fundamental to the trivial.

Strengths include staff, school board and supportive community, small class size, special programs, a wide-ranging curriculum, public and in-school libraries, reputation and a usually supportive press.

Weaknesses range from the lack of a marching band to high taxes. According to the list, there is a resistance to curriculum change at the high schools, critical thinking skills are neglected, the curriculum is overcrowded and isolated to new ideas. The community is cloistered and there is too much emphasis on college preparation. Community affluence leads to over-emphasis on the material and to students' caring more about socialization than academics.

On the organizational side, there are jobs without authority and authority that can't de-School officials don't sound liver. There is too much territoriality among administrators and the chain of command on paper doesn't match real life.

That's why the system decided last year that it needed a strategic plan.

The committee has been working since October, first learning how to implement a planning process, then actually doing it. Many of the recommendations won't cost a cent.

"A good deal of it is organizational development." Shine said. "It will promote efficiency at no additional cost, or a minimal

The plan starts by taking a few firm stands. The schools will not get involved in such things as birth control clinics, which are considered "clearly the responsibility of home." Programs proposed by special interest groups will have to go through established procedures in order to be considered for adoption. All programs are subject to cost/ benefit analysis.

Objectives of the plan include greater participation in the staff development program, responding to declining enrollment, working technology into all learning areas and developing critical thinking among students.

"There's a big difference between saying 'think' and exposing kids to new research on ways to look at things," Shine said. "We want them to reach new levels of thinking.'

He said much of the back-tobasics movement, while well-intentioned, is counter to current ideas on critical thinking. "There has to be a balance between providing information and

ing," he said.

People educated 40 years ago were taught largely by rote. It's hard to convince them that that now. Information is doubling so fast - there is a need to transcend rote, to learn to make deci-

One of the major concerns expressed in the plan is the overcrowded elementary school curriculum. The proposed solution is not to offer less, but to organize using it as a catalyst for think- cern," said Whritner, who has sat in on most of the planning meetings. "The schools are being called upon to provide instruction in so many areas - how do isn't the way kids need to learn we fit it all in? The concern is to give teachers some uninterrupted time.'

Two objectives deal with techsions and synthesize information. nology in the schools. One calls 'We need our feet firmly in for technology and its applications to be implemented in all grades by 1992. This covers things like computers in the classroom.

The other, with the same 1992 goal, calls for development of a new technology curriculum to replace the now-outmoded voca-the entire curriculum, we may have the thing we need for the turn of the century," Shine said. "It's quite innovative - and different for Grosse Pointe. We're asking for a full-blown curriculum by 1992."

Vocational education has been losing enrollment for several

"If we're able to reformulate years. Some staff have already been cut back; Shine said he hoped the program would start before further cutbacks were necessarv.

Club to pair solo travelers

Great Getaways, AAA Michigan's travel club, offers an attractive "matchmaker" option which can cut vacation costs 50 percent by matching solo voyagers with compatible companions.

"Cruise ship operators usually charge extra for people who book alone," said Diane Willard, Great Getaways director. "And travelers who reserve land package tours with partners can avoid a $150 to $250 single supplement fee.'

Club members receive a profile team form when they join. It offers a choice of destinations, length and mode of travel, type of accommodations, dining selection and if smoking is taboo.

Great Getaways then compiles same-sex profiles and matches kindred travelers. The lone travelers seeking a match receive a list of names and phone numbers, then decide whether to contact a potential partner.

Great Getaways' annual fee is $35 for single membership or $40 for families. The club also provides cruise, air fare and car rental discounts for families and offers 24-hour telephone access to metropolitan Detroit and 1-800-222-1116 from elsewhere in Michigan.

Drug-sniffing dogs are recruits in war against narcotics

By Margie Reins Smith Staff Writer

Polo, an 11-month-old German room, tail asweep, ready to make some friends.

Paul Martinelli, the man on the other end of the leash, gently led the dog in a circular path around the edges of the room.

Polo sniffed the rims of trash baskets, the edges of bookshelves, under desks; he checked out staff writers' knees and shoes, stacks of telephone books and dictionaries, computer keyboards.

"Where's it at?" said Martinelli. "Where's it?"

Polo was heartened. Eager. He sniffed around file drawers, the edge of an open box of film cartridges. Martinelli shook the box and removed the lid from beneath it. Polo grabbed a fist-sized plastic-wrapped package of marijuana from the lid.

Martinelli, director of the K-9 Narcotics Detection Division of the Aaragon Investigation Agency, Inc., praised the dog and ordered him to drop the packet.

"Dogs are a deterrent," he said. "The drug problem is so bad. We can't eliminate it from homes, from after work, but we can help keep it out of the workplace.'

The marijuana in the Grosse Shepherd, sidled into the news- Pointe News newsroom was planted in the box lid by Martinelli about 10 minutes before the dog arrived. And the drug-sniffing dog was demonstrating his value as an investigative aid for a private firm whose clients are waging war against drugs in the workplace.

Martinelli has a license to carry these drugs in connection with the training and handling of his two sniffing dogs.

Kilo, a large, muscular 3-yearold black labrador retriever, found two more stashes of marijuana: on top of a newsroom file cabinet and in a wastebasket in the Classified Department. (Also planted by Martinelli before the dog entered the building.) Onlookers applauded. Kilo got lots of praise, pats on the head, scratches behind his ears.

Martinelli grew up in Grosse Pointe, went to Maire Elementary School, St. Paul School and Grosse Pointe South. After graduation in 1982, he went on to earn a bachelor's degree in criminal justice at Michigan State University. He was going to be a police officer or a drug enforcement administrator. Instead, he chose to become an investigator with a private firm.

"About 45 percent of our work is divorce work," he said. "About 25 to 30 percent is worker's compensation fraud. The rest is drug work. Martinelli started the K-9 division about a year ago and is certified as a handler for the firm's two drug dogs. He's going to become a certified trainer of narcotics detection dogs. "I've always loved dogs," he said.

"I'm not in this for the money, because the money isn't there,' he said. "The drug problem is bad. When people use drugs and alcohol at work - people get injured. It costs industry millions of dollars every year in worker's compensation and medical beneretrieve. They have to be playful. The dogs are trained to find drugs with what we call a dope ball. It's a hard rubber ball - a training aid - that smells like marijuana.

"We use Polo on inside jobs. Offices. He's more passive. Kilo is bigger, more muscular, more aggressive. He'll jump. A German shepherd can discern 25,000 different scents. A lab can identify less."

The average price for a good drug-sniffing dog, he said, is between $3,500 and $7,000. Aaragon owns the dogs, but Martinelli keeps them at his home. He said training takes between three and six months and he's up at 5 a.m. each day to maintain their training schedules.

"The best pets in the world are working dogs. They know when it's time to work and when it's time to play. They work for praise, not for food. They get their food at the end of the day, like any other dog.'

In most cases, he said, a client will hire his firm to find the distributors and sellers of drugs. The usual procedure is to go into the factory with the dogs after hours, when nobody is around. The dogs pick up the scent of drugs in lockers and on clothing. "The next step is to send in an undercover person to try to buy. Then we bring in the dogs again at the end, for added evidence.

Urinalysis is another drug detection method. "Employees must be notified that the dogs are going to be used. We bring them in every month - at random times. Employees never know when they're coming.'

Martinelli said that he hasn't had any schools as clients yet. "But most schools have drug problems. Most don't want to admit it. The new thing is crack."

Martinelli said he believes Grosse Pointe schools have the same problems as schools in other communities. "The drug problem is bad."

By Ronald J. Bernas Staff Writer

After months of petitioning Wayne County for partial payment for a light at the intersection of Mack and Vernier roads in the Woods, the Woods city council approved full payment and installation of it June 6.

The left turn signal for northbound traffic on Mack turning onto westbound Vernier has been needed for some time, according to the council and certain residents of the area, one of whom, Theodore B. Fleming Jr. petitioned the council at the June 6 meeting.

Fleming said the amount of traffic and the speeds people travel in that area have increased, and have made Mack and Vernier a dangerous section.

As it stands, northbound truffic on Mack must turn east on Vernier and go through a median crossover to go west, or it must cross Vernier and turn around through a median, then need for it to be changed, Gro-Police close down house party turn light will eliminate the turnarounds.

The city decided to totally fund the project because the county has refused to pay for it.

"I feel we're being discriminated against," City Manager Chester Petersen said. He felt the county should pay part of the cost because it is a county road, and because the county recently paid for part of the installation of lights at Lakeshore Road and Moross in the Farms and Lakeshore and Vernier in the Shores.

"I don't think we could justify spending county dollars for a project where it just isn't warranted," said Russell Gronevelt. director of public services for Wayne County. "The criteria just isn't there for the installation."

A neighbor told police that the dogs had had their legs tied so they couldn't walk. A Farms officer found the dogs in a basement. He reported that their eyes appeared scarred and their ears burned. They were "ex-

Farms police took the dogs to the humane society, where their owner later claimed them. He told officials at the shelter that the dogs' condition was due to their old age. He also wrote a police statement saying that his neighbor had gone into his house without permission.

Police plan no further action.

He said the county studied that intersection and made a presentation to the Wayne County Board of Commissioners, and it was felt that nothing needed to be done.

"I think we did everything we could, but there is no justification for spending county money,' he said.

Gronevelt said the county pays all the cost of installing a light when the intersection is of two county roads, and splits the cost with the city when it is the intersection of a county road and a city road.

Petersen said the Woods has saved the county thousands of dollars by mowing the median on Mack Avenue alone and by putting in handicap ramps on Mack, - both projects should be paid for by both municipalities and believes the county should pay for at least part of the anticlpated $34,000 cost.

"They've just refused to consider it," Petersen added.

The council unanimously approved the installation of the light and the full payment and work will begin on it as soon as possible, before repaving of Mack Avenue at that intersection is

Garden Clubs' annual tour visits area's top gardens

No, the heat wave/drought hean't really hurt local gardens and yes, the seven gardens on the annual Council of Grosse Pointe Garden Clubs' summer garden tour should be in all their glory for next weekend's event.

The popular Grosse Pointe tour - which began more than 15 years ago in Mary Lou Boresch's backyard garden — is set for Friday, Saturday and Sunday, June 24-26. The tour runs from 1 to 5 p.m. rain or shine. Tickets are $6 in advance, $7.50 on tour days and may be purchased by calling ticket chairmen Mrs. Eberhard Mammen at 884-0966 or Ann B. Cook at 882-9874.

General chairman of the 1988 Summer Garden Tour is Mrs. David C. Lowe; she is assisted by Mrs. Richard C. Mertz.

Tickets are also available at Vintage Pointe, 16941 Kercheval; Grosse Pointe Florists, 174 Kerby Road; Hollywood Pharmacy, 20853 Mack Avenue; or Maskell Hardware, 17020 Mack. The Garden Center Room at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial will also sell tickets on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Tickets will also be available on tour days at each of the gardens on the tour; a brochure describing each garden and a map with garden locations will accompany each ticket.

Tour attractions include the sale of crafts at the Grosse Pointe Academy from the Upstairs Shop of the Detroit Garden Center, under the direction of Mrs. George H. Lieber. Refreshments will be served at the Taylor garden, 280 Ridge Road.

Here's a look at each of the gardens on this year's tour:

The Blum Garden, 1007 Three Mile Road — The oldest garden on the tour, the Blum Garden has recently been improved for outdoor living by designer Bill Whetstone of Great Detroit Landscaping. White pines, arborvitae and hemlock serve as a privacy screen. Plantings of European beech, Japanese maple, rhododendrons, azaleas, daylilies, flowering crabs, forsythia, iris and impatiens supply year-round color.

The Trial Gardens, 32 Lakeshore Road — The popular Trial Gardens on the lake side of the War Memorial are sponsored by the Grosse Pointe Garden Center and supported by the Vincent DePetris Fund. The plots which make up the garden are planted and maintained by the clubs affiliated with the Garden Center, with the help of a professional horticulturist. This vear's theme is "What's New," but the center of the wheel design which makes up the garden is very old: It's the original, 18th century Windmill Pointe millstone.

The Russell Garden, 36 Briarwood Place - A hot tub, cedar decks, a child's play area and a magnificently carved redwood stained with concrete mix highlight the garden of this lovely Farms home. White flowering crabs, dogwoods, rhododendron and viburnum Maresi add spring color to the garden, with annuals and perennials woven throughout.

The Herb Garden, on the Grosse Pointe Academy grounds — Accessible from Lakeshore Road, Moran Road or the St. Paul Church parking lot, the Herb Garden - owned and maintained by the Herb Society of America — is divided into four sections. One section is devoted to culinary herbs, one for fragrance, a third to biblical and medicinal herbs and a fourth for herbs to be cut, dried and made into wreaths.

The Barroll Garden, 103 Merriweather Road - A French brick wall of different levels surrounds this for al garden. A fountain and pool center the garden's back wall; beds of spring bulbs and summer white begonias encircle the area. Large pots of white geranium and verbena are placed throughout the garden.

The Taylor Garden, 280 Ridge Road - Perhaps the most unusual garden on this year's tour, the Taylor garden is a beautiful blend of Japanese style and a traditional English flower garden, maintained completely by the owners. Trees highlight this garden in the form of weeping hemlock, pines, a fir tree, English walnut and blue rug junipers. There's a fresh water pool stocked with goldfish and in one corner, a lovely bonsai garden. There's also a bright profusion of wild flowers throughout.

The Hartmann Garden, 116 Kerby Road - Approaching the front of this refurbished farm house, visitors can see a large brick patio, two large Norway maples and pots brimming with tuberous begonias, impatiens and geraniums. The unusual features of this garden are a pair of herb gardens (called Friendship Gardens because the plants were started from cuttings given by friends) and three vegetable plots full of sprouting tomatoes, beans, eggplant, peppers and squash.

Trees dominate the landscape in the unique Japanese-English Taylor Garden.

There's a little bit of everything - including tips for new gardeners - in the Hartmann Garden.

The tiny - but unusual - Russell Garden is tailor-made for family living. There's even a tree swing.

Community Having a ball

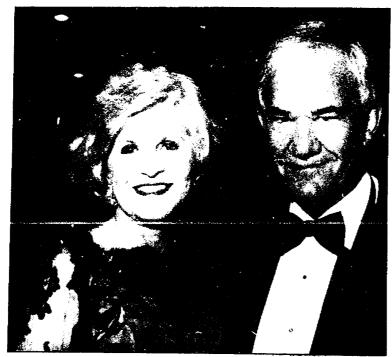

From start to finish, a good time was had by all at Michigan Opera Theatre Opera Ball

Tenor Luciano Pavarotti was there, fresh from his triumphant performance before 19,000 enthralled fans at the Joe Louis Arena. And so were 700 patrons, transported by bus to Cobo Hall's Riverview Ballroom to enjoy the long-planned 1988 Opera

They enjoyed a summery dinner menu in equally summerlike surroundings: two-tiered English cutting garden summer floral arrangements at each table, gold Versailles chairs and summer garden lattice fences adorned with urns of garden ferns as a background.

And then it was dancing to the big band music of the Fenby-Carr Orchestra. In all, it was a long, exciting day for Opera Ball participants and organizers, but it was a wonderful experience, said Michigan Opera Theatre public relations person John P. Finck.

"Eyes on the Classics, Automotive Design — Past, Present and Future," is the theme of the first show car and auto design show, set for the grounds of the Grosse Pointe Academy on Sunday, July 10.

A garden party brunch and preview of the show is planned from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m.; the show will run from 1:30 to 5:30 p.m. Tickets for the brunch and preview are $75 per person benefactor, $50 per person patron or $500 for a reserved table of eight. General admission tickets are $5; $4 in advance. For ticket information or details, call the DIO at 824-4710 or ticket chairman Tina Ricca at 881-7447.

The design show is a first in many ways. It's the first time the "Big 3" have gotten together to put on such a fundraiser; the show will feature automotive design samples by the studios of General Motors, Ford and Chrysler design staffs. The vehicles will either be historically significant, show or prototype cars from the past or present. Among the cars to be presented are GM's Cadillac Voyage, Buick Lucerne and GMC Centaur; Ford's Machete and DM 1 Bronco; and Chrysler's Portofino, Intrepid and Sling Shot.

There will also be awards given to the top designers, another first for a design show, organizers say. And local folks are encouraged to display their personally-owned specialty or historic vehicles. Deadline for application to the show is Monday, June 27. To enter a vehicle in the show, call 824-4710.

The benefit is chaired by Keith E. Crain, vice chairman of Crain Communications and publisher of Automotive News, Mary Kay Crain, and the design chiefs of the auto companies: Charles M. Jordan, vice president of design, General Motors, and Sally Jordan; John J. Telnack Jr., vice president of design, Ford Motor Company, and Janine Telnack; and Thomas C. Gale, vice president of product design, Chrysler Corporation, and Sharlene Gale.

That'll start your engine:

Last night's Grand Prix Ball for the benefit of the Music Hall featured a menu that was pretty grand itself. Those who attended the ball, chaired by Pointers Susie Lambrecht and Terry Rakolta, enjoyed poached Norwegian salmon filet topped with oysters in a lobster beurre blanc sauce with fleuron, served under glass bell. The main course was smoked roast veal loin on a bed of spinach with morel sauce, zucchini boat filled with carrot souffle and fresh asparagus parmesan. The crowning touch was a souffle glace Grand Marnier with Grand Marnier sauce.

Following dinner, guests enjoyed the sounds of Tony Bennett and the J.C. Heard Orches-

It's off to more work she goes: The Pointe's M. Teresa Gillis, M.A., J.D., LL.P., C.S.W., finishes her 24-year career as chief psychiatrist at the Recorder's Court Psychiatric Clinic this month. But her work is far from over.

Soon after her retirement party, to be hosted by her coworkers June 21 at the Polish Century Club, Gillis will visit her family in Italy. On her return, she plans to continue her volunteer work on the board of directors of the Coalition of Temporary Shelters (COTS) and will also lead parenting classes at COTS. She also hopes to help out at the Michigan Coalition Against Domestic Violence and plans to spend time on the golf course, in her sewing room and

A patient spirit

By Robert W. Boley Senior Pastor, GP United Methodist

4B

Slow-poke cars ahead of me have bothered me for years. Young drivers weaving in and out of traffic have, at times, incensed me.

Not making meetings on time for me has been a source of consternation, too. And I'm really never very patient with myself, either.

Recently the "A-Type" personality category (impatient, big agenda, nervous energy, etc.) has been diagnosed as mine, the implications of which are both indicting and disturbing. In fact, a friend tells me I am an "Triple A-Type," which is further indicting. He admonishes me to "cool down" to being merely an A-Type.

All of this is really about patience. Now that I have had cardio-vascular surgery the issues have emerged in bold relief. I need more patience . . . which is a Christian virtue, incidentally. St. Paul mentions it in his letters as one of the "fruits of the Spirit." What an admirable trait patience is! And due to the demands of survival, I am learning to cultivate this habit or virtue which has not been so evident in me in the past. So thoughts about this virtue have filled my mind lately.

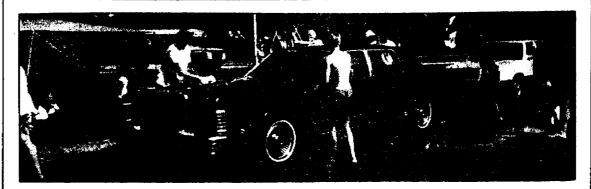

Patience! Traffic is bothering me much less now. Slow drivers are even acceptable (as difficult as they are).

"Patience," I say to myself, when results are not what were hoped for. The word "patience" emerges in health matters, in work programs, in my relationships with family and friends.

"We can't demonstrate patience with others until we have learned to be patient first with ourselves," writes an editor, who also points out that anger, easily aroused, may well be the opposite of patience. Yes, some subdued righteous indignation is a virtue. But our thoughts are powerful, and our inner thought-life is paramount. "As a person thinks in his heart, so he is," says the proverb.

This boils down to the reality that to cultivate a patient spirit (thus cooling down from the Type A syndrome) the inner life of quiet trust in God needs to be cultivated constantly with the assurance that "In everything God is working together for good with those who love Him," (Romans) and with the uppermost thought that most of the things we

Get your car washed — for free

The Grosse Pointe Baptist Youth have planned a number of fun activities this summer, starting with the group's eighth annual free car wash set for this Saturday, June 18, from 9:30 a.m. to noon. All vehicles are welcome to pull up to the church, 21336 Mack Avenue in Grosse Pointe Woods, for a free wash. While you wait, enjoy free coffee, punch and doughnuts.

No donations will be accepted, say the GPB Youth, since the event is being done as a service to the community.

The group will take a canoe trip and spend a day at Cedar Point this summer. For more information, call the church at 881-3343.

Jehovah's witnesses will gather

A series of 120 district conventions of Jehovah's Witnesses, designed to attract approximately 1,330,000 delegates, has been scheduled for the summer of 1988 in the United States and Bermuda.

Stanley Weigel, spokesman for the Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, sponsor of the meetings, said the conventions would be conducted at 57 different sites in six languages.

Locally, Jack Thomas, manager of the convention set for 2 p.m. Sunday, June 26 at the Pontiac Silverdome, said the four-day seminars would attract 47,000 delegates from Michigan and northwest Ohio.

more of a person.

In most diets, all you lose is a little self-confidence. It's easy to see why; only 5-10% of those who undertake conventional diets lose 40 pounds. And, with very few exceptions, dieters regain the weight they have lost.

Discouraging? You bet it is. That's why the doctors who developed The OPTIFAST * Program took a totally different approach. A caring, supportive approach combining a nutritionally complete diet supplement, dietary counseling, behavior modification and group support. And we don't stop there. The OPTIFAST Program includes close and continuing medical Studies have shown that up to 80% of OPTIFAST" treated patients may lose a minimum of 40 pounds. In patients who lose more than this amount, the average loss is 85 pounds.

But even more encouraging is the fact that in some people, long-term weight maintenance—the most important part of obesity treatment—is accomplished in The OPTIFAST Program.

Grosse Pointe Academy celebrates Grandparents Day

More than 400 grandparents gathered on the grounds of the Grosse Pointe Academy May 27 to celebrate the historic school's annual Grandparents Day.

Each May, Academy students personally invite their grandparents to share a day of their school experience. Students take their grandparents for tours of the school, introduce them to their teachers and proudly display their projects and handiwork. The highlight of 1988 Grandparents Day was a lakeside picnic held on the Academy's east lawn. Grandparents from as far away as New York and Florida joined local grandparents and students in sharing childhood experiences while enjoying lunch.

Weather stresses June crops

igan strawberries of the season are coming to market now, according to the Cooperative Extension Service of Michigan State University.

There wouldn't be a strawberry crop in Michigan this year if producers had not invested in expensive irrigation equipment. But technology can only do so much. MSU Extension horticulture agents advise that if hot temperatures persist, the fresh strawberry season will be short. The hot, dry conditions are stressing other Michigan crops well beyond normal limits for so early in the season. At this writing, fruit trees are exhibiting wilt never seen here so early in the season.

With some moisture relief soon, Michigan could yet have another normal crop of cherries, peaches and plums. It's too early

The biggest, most plump Mich- to judge the fall apple crop. The hot temperatures have already advanced the season for blueberries. The Michigan crop will begin by late June this year, following the accelerated trend of the last two seasons.

June traditionally is berry month in Michigan. The fate of the blackberries and black raspberries will be determined by drought and heat relief during early June. Those interested in red raspberries can postpone getting them until fall if the heritage variety is available.

Vegetable crops are experiencing adverse growing conditions, too. The asparagus season ended early due to extremely dry conditions. Improved weather would enable us to have homegrown green and snap beans, radishes, greens, cucumbers, green peppers and soft-shell squash by

Grosse Pointe A Unique Community

A Romantic Past As a Grosse Pointe resident, you'll walk upon grounds that were once the swamp, marsh and meadow haunts of deer, butfalo and beaver. It was this profusion of wildlife-plus fish from the 460-square-mile Lake St. Clair -- that attracted the French farmers who first settled the area in 1701.

During the century that they fished, farmed and traded with the local Indians, many legands began. And many infamous locations were indelibly named: Fox Creek, graveyard of the Fox Indian nation; Bloody Run, where a company of British soldiers from Fort Detroit were ambushed and

From Pristine to Prosperous After a brief period under British rule, the area began its history as an American settlement. Its beauty and bounty made it an ideal resort area for families from the growing city of Detroit. Between 1875 and 1925, Grosse Pointe became the elegant summer residence and then permanent home—of families who had amassed fortunes in lumber and automobiles. In the midst of the lavish mansions, farm cottages and resort ambiance, there gradually grew a year-round community of quality homes for families from all walks of life.

The sport of matrimony

I don't know why, but I've always compared life with sports. Nothing else but sports. If I would make a writing mistake, I'd think the pen took a bad bounce. If I dropped the mail, I used to say I got a bad pass. Or if someone would pull a fast one on me, I would say the sun got in my eyes.

In just over a week, I will graduate to the altar of matrimony. You know, take the plunge, such as diving from a platform (see what I mean). I am as excited to get married as I am to hit a grand slam, or score the game-winning goal. It's going to be fun, adventurous and at times tedious; just like a track meet.

Sandy and I have been planning our strategy as if we were out to win the Super Bowl. We have designed ways to pay for people's services like photographers, flowers and a disc jockey. Seems to me we've got all the dressings for a pre-Grand Prix

I've been asked time and time again why sports is the only thing I know, and I continually give my standard answer - because I can't get out of it until the fat lady sings. That never seems to go over very well. However, I have tried desperately to try and compare life with some politics, but I never seem to give an honest answer.

Getting married doesn't scare me, but if I happen to throw a brush-back pitch, the only fear I have is the motion of Sandy's right hand flying at me in retaliation. I don't think having to get married is the ending of a single life, but the joining of forces like a tag-team wrestling tandem.

Many friends of mine say that getting married will only pull our friendship apart because I will have a wife. The only thing I tell them is that all that means is that whenever we go anywhere, it's like a twoon-one breakaway on a soccer field. I also remind them that when going out, my wife and I will be together, and when they don't have a date they'll look as lonely as a place-kicker after missing a field goal.

It's difficult not to compare things to sports. Why, when I change the towels in the bathroom, do I feel like I'm the equipment manager? Why when I dust the tables do I feel like I'm brushing off the plate? And why when I vacuum the rug do I feel like I'm grooming the infield? When I get married I'm going to make an attempt to grab the apple out of the refrigerator and wash it off and hand it to Sandy. Not wash it off, rub it down and whirl it across the room as if I were giving it to a pitcher I also hope that when the floors need to be scrubbed, the Zamboni I ordered fits into the kitchen and bathroom.

Another bad habit I'll have to do away with is the handkerchief in my back pocket. I can't be tempted to throw it, assess a penalty and call fourth down when Sandy refuses to make breakfast. I guess I'll just have to keep it in my pocket, throw out the referee's shirt and toss frozen waffles into the microwave.

North hockey team gets new home

By Rob Fulton Sports Editor

The friendly confines of the Grosse Pointe Community Rink (GPCR) will no longer house the North hockey team.

After five years of skating on Norsemen have given way to a new home - St. Clair Shores several weeks ago, was studied endlessly and all portions of the scale were used in weighing the move.

According to North Athletic Director Tom Gauerke, parting is sweet sorrow, but it was done with no reluctance.

"We have communicated with them (Civic Arena officials) for years, but we didn't have feasible time slots for practices or games," said Gauerke, "but now with the availability of prime times, we felt very positive about behind us.' making the move.

Before the hockey programs were started in 1983-84, the Civic Arena was a consideration, but the GPCR won out when it was the only facility offering "feasible times."

"At the start of the program, we thought having two places for North and South would give us more leverage in scheduling, but GPCR was the only one with times that were educationally justified for the sake of the kids," said Gauerke. "We could have probably taken the Civic involved. We didn't want to burn Arena, but that may have meant practicing at 5:30 or 6:30 in the morning. That, we felt, was not in the best interest for the kids and the program."

The door to the Civic Arena the surface of the GPCR, the opened up when Lakeview High School decided to cancel its hockey program. Therefore, Civic Arena. The decision, made North made a quick move and determined that a new venue was in order. The major concern Gauerke and others had was how the move, if made, would affect their sister-school — South.

> "One of our biggest concerns was how it would affect South," said Gauerke. "Once we got a firm decision from Lakeview that they were going to drop their program, we immediately talked it over with Ed Shine (South principal) and Jo Lake (South athletic director) and felt confident they were very much

When the hockey programs began at GPCR, the Grosse Pointe Hockey Association had to relinquish the prime times (3 to 4 p.m., and 4 to 5 p.m.) to the high schools. With the departure of North, South will retain the 4 to 5 p.m. slot. Thus creating more of an opportunity for other teams to skate at GPCR.

"Ray (Rivard, general manager of GPCR) and I met in person and discussed the move," Gauerke said. "I was very relieved to know that it was going to work out better for everyone any bridges.

According to Gauerke, Rivard was receiving some pressure from teams trying to employ the 5 to 6 p.m. time slot.

"Actually it was helpful to the GPCR that we pull out,' Gauerke said. "He (Ray) was getting a lot of pressure for that time slot. Now, some of the pressure will be lifted.'

Rivard is confident he can fill the vacancy, but it just won't be the same around the 16-year-old building.

"We had a great relationship," said Rivard. "I'm kind of sorry they are leaving. We'll miss having them around."

At this time the move is reflecting positively on North, but there are four reasons that will make the move even more beneficial.

Gauerke stated:

1) North will be able to practice from 3:30 to 4:30 p.m. everyday.

2) Prices were very competitive with GPCR, and will actually save money for the entire budget.

3) Seating is provided on both sides of the rink; not like the GPCR where seating is limited to one side.

4) North enjoys hosting state events for the Michigan High School Athletic Association. At GPCR, the facility was not ideal to host a tournament.

At GPCR, based on which hour the teams would practice, the price would be either $75 or $100. At the Civic Arena, the practice fees will fluctuate from $55 to $75. Ice time for games, which generally come in threehour blocks, is $130 at GPCR. For a game at the Civic Arena, North will pay $90.

"As you can see that's quite a savings," Gauerke said. "I know that the same prices at GPCR will be in effect for South, but with the lower cost at the Civic Arena, it will definitely aid the entire budget. Not just the hockey budget.'

The paperwork is being drawn up at this time and North will sign the contract when it is finalized. Also, it is not known how long the relationship between North and the Civic Arena will last, but Gauerke is quite opti-

Cristina Staats Emergency tips

One of the challenges of boating is finding oneself in precarious situations. How skilled are you in making emergency repairs afloat?

Sooner or later most boaters are faced with some sort of emergency repair while on the water. If the boater can remain calm, analyze the situation, effect temporary repairs, a life may be spared. While that may seem a bit extreme, it is well within the realm of possibility, and we all need to be prepared, "just

The three most serious problems boaters face are:

1) Taking on water to the point of where the boat may be in danger of sinking.

2) Unable to steer, leaving the craft vulnerable, and out of control.

3) Loss of power, with sails or motor.

If the boat should suddenly take on water, DON'T PANIC. Immediately get someone on the bilge pump. If there is not a bilge pump, begin bailing with buckets, or whatever will hold water. Inspect for leaks in all the obvious places, like the engine water intake, the head (toilet) water intake, propeller shaft, or any place there is a fitting through the hull. It may be something as simple as a broken hose that can be easily fixed with one of the "just in case" parts carried on board. A through-hull can be stopped with a wooden plug pounded into place. Often hoses can be temporarily fixed with tape, like duct tape, until safely into port.

If the hull has been holed, stuff anything into the breach that will slow the flow of water. There are many good emergency repair kits for fiberglass, that set up and cure while under water, and can be useful for small holes. A large hole may be more difficult. Yet there may be a creative way to stem the tide, by using something large like a seat cushion, or a cabinet door wedged into the hole, until you can get the boat to a harbor. It may not completely stop the water, but it will help slow it down, and enable you to limp to safety.

If you lose the steering, you become vulnerable to other traffic. They will not know you are unable to steer. Generally you lose steering because you can't control the rudder. The connection may have jammed or broken. Frequently an oar will do nicely as an emergency rudder. It may be awkward, but effective. Another method is the drag-steering technique. This requires a bucket or sea anchor. By tying one line to each side of the sea anchor device you slow the boat down and by controlling the lines can steer the boat. It is crude, but also effective.

Loss of power close to shore can be serious. The first thing the skipper needs to do as soon as the realization that there is a problem hits, is to anchor to keep from drifting into danger.

Sailboats, not counting auxiliary engines, only lose power if a sail tears, tangles or they lose a mast. Sails can be changed quickly, taped or handsewn in a makeshift repair. A mast of sorts can be jury-rigged from the stump of the broken remains if need be. Canadian John Hughes sailed 4,500 miles with a jury-rigged mast using his spinnaker pole.

Powerboaters will have to do a bit of detective work in order to find the problem if they can. If not, they will have to radio for help. They will need to look at the obvious, like overheating problems, fuel problems, electrical problems. Powerboaters should have their owners manual, which will give them some clues and help them with the more common problems, but in the end may require a tow, because the problem is too complicated to be remedied while afloat.

Boaters are a self-sufficient lot, by and large. They tend to have the skill and expertise to venture offshore safely. But even the most well prepared, have problems. A few simple rules have gotten the most seasoned veteran through some serious incidents. Don't panic. Save lives first. Think things

As Abraham Lincoln said, "It is by presence of mind in untried emergencies that the native metal of a man is tested." Boaters' native metal is tested regularly and we seem to come through with flying colors.

Winning the first two races of the seven-race series, RUSH established an early lead, but the competition was clearly skilled and anxious to close the gap. RAGTIME posted a second and third, with boat speed looking good over the fleet of 18 IOR level-rated boats. (One Tons rate less than or equal to 30.55 feet).

The third race of the series was cancelled due to a lack of wind on Lake St. Clair, but evening hours brought on a building 14-knot breeze for the start of the 55-mile distance race. On the final stretch of the eighthour race, REGARDLESS overtook RAGTIME to emerge the winner, as well as becoming a force to be reckoned with. As the distance-race winner, REGARD-LESS won the George E. Van Memorial Trophy, presented by The Meade Group.

Disaster struck in race five when winds blew to 24-26 knots and gusted at 30. REGARD-LESS, looking sleek and confident, rammed the Canadian entry, STEADFAST AT & T, leaving a gaping hole in the boat's port side. A new way to burn calories

In aerobic class we use our arms a great deal, and new research clearly supports using the arms, as well as the legs, appears to burn more calories without placing additional stress on the cardiovascular system, according to research conducted at Teachers College of Columbia Univer-

Researchers found that you can do more work, burn more calories, without the same feeling of fatigue by using the

What does this mean to exercisers? Some of the practical implications of such research would indicate that runners, for example, would benefit more from use of their arms, meaning that a welcome addition might be an occasional run with hand weights. Also, you may think about such things as rowing machines, cross-country skiing, or machines that simulate such, as well as the new stair-climbing devices in which the legs are used to mount stairs and the arms pull on overhead han-

We've seen the serious walker's exaggerated gait in which the arms pump up or down. This is clearly beneficial.

A well-rounded aerobic class has had the right idea all along, for we use many combinations of exercise routines that employ both the arms and legs. Push-ups and upper body work with weights are always incorporated, as well as the use of arms during an aerobic routine. You can also reap the same benefits by using a stationary cycle, followed by an upper-body weight training routine, some calisthenics, another stint on the cycle and then the rowing machine.

Joggers might use the rowing machine after their jog or incorporate push-ups.

This study actually suports the theory fitness spe cialists have been touting lately; which is the idea of cross training or pursuing a variety of activities to achieve and maintain fitness. While tennis or swimming may be fine and will provide a certain level of fitness, a variety of exercises and activities provides more by involving different muscle groups. Higher rate of burning calories could result from spreading the work load over larger amounts of muscle, thus allowing the body's metabolism to tolerate a greater work load. Higher oxygen consumption is a good measure of how many calories are being burned. Researchers found that oxygen consumption went up when arms were added to the exercise program.

So, if you want to burn more calories while not placing more stress on your body, use your arms and upper body.

Tuning in

Do you know your fitness channel?

We're on the heels of summer, and certain cold weather habits will be gradually put to rest making way for outdoor recreation. For example, ask any television executive about reduced ratings during summer months. Many people opt for the sunshine rather than sitting indoors in front of the tube.

Keeping this in mind, American Heart Association of Michigan (AHA/MI) proposes a personalized programming schedule for effective exercise and fun. The plan will allow even the most diehard TV fan to get into shape and enjoy the great outdoors.

According to Dr. Barry Franklin, chairman of AHA/MI exercise and cardiac rehabilitation committee, "Any thorough program takes proper planning to insure success.'

"Our first suggestion is to become familiar with your own capabilities," he said. Remember that the main goal for physical exercise is enjoying yourself. To find out more about your personal exercise preference, ask yourself these questions:

1) How physically fit are you? If you've been inactive for quite some time you may want to schedule walking or swimming into your beginning time slot. Jogging right off the bat is not recommended. The key is to gradually build yourself up to more vigorous activity.

2) How old are you? If you are over 40 years old and have not been active, avoid strenuous programs for the initial three months. If you are over 60, walking and swimming are excellent forms of exercise. 3) What do you want to gain from exercising? If conditioning your heart is what you're after, a more disciplined approach is needed. "Three basic factors are necessary for your conditioning. Activities must be: 1) brisk; 2) sustained for at least 15-30 minutes, and 3) regularly performed at least three times per week," Franklin said. It's important to note that a physician's approval is highly encouraged before engaging in physical activity.

4) Do you like to exercise alone or with others? Are you a team player, or do your prefer one-on-one activities such as racquetball? Identifying how you like to play makes a difference in selecting the right schedule for yourself.

5) How much money are you willing to spend for sporting equipment or facilities?

There are many activities that require only time and a comfortable pair of shoes. Your community probably offers free or inexpensive recreation facilities and classes.

6) When can you schedule time in your day for exercise?

Consider the appropriate times to exercise. Are you a morning person? Can you squeeze half an hour into your working day? Set aside 25-40 minutes per session at least three times per week.

Dr. Franklin recommends consulting your physician before exercising if any of the following applies to you:

• Your doctor said you have heart trouble, or you've had a heart attack.

• You frequently have pain or pressure in the left or mid chest area, left neck, shoulder or arm during or right after you exercise.

• You often feel faint or have spells of severe dizziness. You experience shortness of breath after mild

Your doctor said your blood pressure is too high, or out of control.

· Your doctor said you have bone or joint problems such as arthritis.

• You are a male over 45 or female over 50 and not accustomed to vigorous exercise.

• You have a family history of premature coronary artery disease.

· You have another medical condition such as diabetes.

Next, determine what kinds of activities will do your heart the most good. Hiking, jogging, jumping rope, running in place and rowing are naturally very vigorous. Again, they need to be done at least 15 minutes, three times per week. This pace will condition your heart and lungs, burn off a lot of calories, and tone your muscles.

Bicycling, calisthenics, tennis, swimming, and walking are all moderately vigorous but can be excellent conditioners if performed briskly for at least 30 minutes, three times per week.

Softball, golf, and volleyball are not vigorous or sustained, but still have certain benefits. These activities can help improve muscle tone, coordination and relieve tension, too.

Now that the preliminary preparation is finished, you're ready to fill out your own personalized program schedule. Only you know what's right for you. We've included a suggested weekly maintenance format:

Mary Smart Controlling your cholesterol levels A national effort to control cholesterol levels is being promoted by the National Heart, Lung and Blood Institute and one of the National Institutes of Health.

Scientific studies have demonstrated that high levels of blood cholesterol are, in fact, a major risk factor for cardiovascular heart disease. And it is possible to decrease an individual's blood cholesterol by changing the person's

The magnitude of the public health problem posed by heart disease and the evidence supporting the benefit of lowering blood cholesterol indicated a need for a national program to address the treatment of high-blood cholesterol levels. As a result, the National Cholesterol Education Program was created to provide the necessary information and guidelines to impact on this national, treatable health problem.

Screening and treatment

National media has urged to the public to "know your cholesterol level." Now health professionals are being advised about who should receive treatment and the preferred modes of that treatment. The screening for who is most at risk for heart diseases includes the guidelines listed in the following chart. It is listed by age, moderate risk and high risk.

20-29, greater than 200 mg/ dl, greater than 220 mg/dl. 30-39, greater than 220 mg/ dl, greater than 240 mg/dl.

40 and over, greater than 240 mg/dl, greater than 260 mg/dl.

Treatment for those classified as "at risk" (the last numbers listed) includes dietary managment as the first step. Drug therapy is recommended only after rigorous dietary modifications have been implemented. For those overweight, a weight reduction diet is recommended because weight loss often reduces blood cholesterol levels.

So what do you eat if you have been told to cut back on cholesterol in your diet? For years, we have been told to avoid shellfish because it contains high levels of cholesterol. Newer studies show, however, that shellfish have lower levels of cholesterol than was previously believed. Early tests for cholesterol content were relatively crude measurements. They measured many kinds of sterols along with cholesterol. Modern tests indicate that seafood, especially shellfish, is much lower in cholesterol and has been omitted from lowcholesterol diets unnecessar-

Defining cholesterol

Cholesterol is a fat-like substance produced naturally by the human body. It is necessary for the daily production of hormones in the body and for maintenance of cell structure. When you have your blood cholesterol level checked, it is this cholesterol continually circulating throughout the body that is being measured. Problems arise when excessive blood cholesterol is deposited on the wall of the arteries; this can form a blockage leading to heart and blood vessel dis-

Non-animal sources of food, such as fruits, vegetables, grains and oil, do not contain cholesterol. Animal foods contain cholesterol, and most of these protein sources average between 50 to 100 mg. of cholesterol per serving, (for example, a 3-1 oz. serving lean beef is approximately 91 mg. of cholesterol.)

Current guidelines recommend that your average daily intake of cholesterol not exceed 300 mg. those at high risk for cardiovascular disease, the recommended level of intake my be even lower.

Guidelines for the diet focus on lowering total fat consumption, saturated fat and cholesterol consumption. We also need to be aware of certain oils, such as coconut and palm oils, that although they do not contain cho! sterol in and of themselves, can act as "sticky glues," and seem to prevent the cholesterol in you from flowing through in a natural rythym. Beware of labels that promise "no cholesterol." Read the in gredients. Many products contain these oils that can act as deterrents in your effort to gain control of high choles terol levels in your system.

Guidelines for the diet focus on lowering fat, saturated fat and cholesterol consumption. The recommendation is to follow a diet containing:

• Approximately 25-30 percent of total calories from fat. • No more than 250-300 mg. of dietary cholesterol daily.

· A saturated fat intake of no more than 10 percent of total calories.

• An increase in polyunsaturated fat intake no more than 10 percent of total calories.

To achieve the national godi of reducing heart risk, you should begin with a thorough examination by your personal physician, which will include a blood cholesterol test. Once your results are known, you and your physician can devise dietary guidelines and healthy life behaviors that can improve not only the years of your life, but most importantly, the quality of your life. Today is a good day to begin, it's the only day we have been given, so far.

tomed to that, too.

And in this case, viewers definitely get what they expect.

Sylvester Stallone's Rambo doesn't have a whole lot of friends. One tends to alienate people when everyone around them is getting killed. His one true friend, Trautman (Richard Crenna), who trained him to be a soldier, has been captured by the Russians inside the Afghan border. Rambo agrees to go 30 miles into Afghanistan, break into the Russian fortress, rescue Trautman, get back into safe territory and wash up in time for dinner.

All in a day's work for this man. Oh sure, he'll run into opposition along the way. But you way out of the Soviet fortress in "Rambo III."

Still, there's plenty to hold the average viewer's attention throughout the film's 90-minute running time. See Rambo plant explosives. See Rambo beat up men three times his size. See Rambo heal his own wound by placing an open flame to his bare skin. See Rambo shoot explosive arrows and grenades. See Rambo fly the enemy's helicopters and drive their tanks. See Rambo outsmart his competition. See Rambo defeat entire platoons of the Red army.

And, of course, see Rambo grunt and flex his pecs. What

A believeable plot would be asking too much. Forget that the Soviets are pulling out of Afghanistan, making this picture's premise completely moot. You'd also be pushing it if you wanted a new dialogue. Apparently Rambo hasn't expanded his vocabulary since his last adventure. He's still saying things like: "I put in my time," "my war is over," and "usssin."

Stallone does exactly what's expected of him in this picture, which is to say he sweats and mumbles with the best of them. Crenna, meanwhile, has few scenes in which he's asked to do anything more than grimace with pain. And Marc de Jonge as the Russian regional commander with a bad attitude does some of the best scowling you're likely to see on the screen this year.

"Rambo III" may not do a whole lot for East-West relations. But it will make money. So while Rambo is growling all the way to Afghanistan, Stallone is laughing all the way to the ish wonder and wide-eyed excite- what has happened, she screams ment that makes his adventure a delight to watch.

We first meet Josh as a typical 13-year-old, intrigued with monster games on his computer, talking between houses on an intercom with his pal, Billy (Jard Rushton) and yearning after the school beauty who is just a little too old for him.

That doesn't stop him from trying to impress her. But when she walks away from him at a carnival with the local football hero, he is crushed. When he spots an exotic-looking computerized contraption, Zoltar, that promises to make any wish come true for a quarter, Josh drops in his money, wishes to be big, and the fun begins.

Next morning when he wakes up he is the same size as Tom Hanks. The viewer gets the first look at him in his new body when a shot shows a pair of The collectors show features a hairy legs swing over the upper 1907 etching by Kaethe Kollwitz desk and they hear the thump of big feet on the floor. Josh discovers he got his wish when he tries to pull on his boy's shorts.

Oblivious of charts and market reports that are supposed to predict the kinds of toys that intrigues kids, Josh comes up with more practical suggestions. His boss is so impressed with his enthusiasm and ingenuity that he appoints him vice-president in charge of development and gives him an office where he is assigned to do nothing but play. Without stretching, "Big" makes the most of Josh's experi-

He is both believable and touching as a boy lost in a grown-up world.

"Big" is a comedy that rates a four-star billing and shouldn't be missed.
