Group to survey Farms for historical sites

By Margie Reins Smith

Staff Writer The Grosse Pointe Historical Society will begin surveying 1,100 Grosse Pointe Farms sites in the oldest neighborhoods as the first step in recommending a preservation plan for the city.

They hope to finish by February 1989 and plan to present their recommendations for preservation legislation to the Farms council soon afterward.

The purpose of the survey, according to Tish Colett, the society's vice president for preservation, is to find, identify and and Cloverly. evaluate the significant historithat a plan can be formulated for saving those of historical

For the University Liggett School girls' tennis team, it was another remarkable season. At the Class C-D state finals Saturday, ULS won its ninth straight title by beating Detroit Country Day School 25-21. In an artistic No. 9 signifying the win, beginning with the player nearest the trophy, are Shirley Kim, Dawn Martin, Natasha Levy, Elizabeth Thomas, Moon Chung, Lucy Allison, Elena Huni, Ali Frederick, Lexie Crain, Alexis Collins, Beth VanElslander and Lynn Sinkel. Standing next to the almost full tennis board are Manager Sean Byrne and Coach Bob Wood. For a full story, see page 1C.

Larry S. Golden, 17, of Detroit, stood mute at his arraignment Oct. 20 before Grosse Pointe Farms Municipal Judge Matthew R. Rumora, who set Golden's bond at $500,000 cash.

Golden waived a preliminary examination and was charged with: 1) criminal sexual conduct in the first degree, 2) assault with intent to commit criminal sexual conduct. 3) assault with intent to commit armed robbery, and 4) assault with intent to do great bodily harm.

The first and third charges carry a maximum life sentence, and the other two charges carry

Karen Depew stirred up a whole potful of scary things at Mason Elementary School's Halloween festival last Friday. The school was filled with parents, kids, teachers and ghouls of all sorts who played games, painted faces and pumpkins, and went through the haunted house. For more scary photos of Halloween in Grosse Pointe, see page 15A.

Pointes police, hours set for Halloween Eve

The public safety departments in the Grosse Pointes are ready and manned for the annual invasion of little ghosts, goblins and creatures of all sorts Monday night.

The word from most police departments is that Halloween trick-or-treaters should get started early and end early, said Shores Public Safety Chief Dan Healy. The Park was the only city to set the official haunting hours from 5 to 8 p.m., but those hours are a good guideline for parents throughout the Pointes.

Healy said parents should go with the children and remain with them at all times. He also said to make sure children watch out for cars and other vehicles.

Extra police patrols will be out for trick-or-treaters' protection.

The Park and Farms public safety departments will check candy with metal detectors for residents who bring their children's goodies in to the respective public safety departments.

The Park will check candy during trick-or-treating and afterward. Some checking may be done the next day, but parents are asked to call the department first.

Happy haunting!

Firefighter offers hot tips

Officer Donald Boyer was kept busy recently during Fire Prevention Week conducting tours of the city fire department. Right, Boyer and kindergarten teacher Nancy Schulte at Richard Elementary School show students protective fire gear. Below, Boyer tells students to keep low during a fire to avoid smoke inhalation. To emphasize the reason for staying low when trying to get out of a burning building, he showed the children a door that was burned extensively at the top but untouched on the bottom. He offered the students many valuable firesafety tips, including "stop, drop and roll," the best procedure to use when your clothing catches fire. The children were taught that matches and lighters are not playthings.

Attack

Judge James Lacey heard arguments as to whether Golden was to be tried as an adult. Last Thursday Lacey waived Golden's juvenile status and ordered him to be tried as an adult.

Grosse Pointe Farms public safety officers transported Golden to the Farms Municipal Court and then delivered him to the Wayne County Jail following the arraignment.

At 3 a.m. July 12, Farms police responded to a call from the security guard at the Grosse Pointe Club who heard a woman scream behind the War Memorial near the lake.

When a Farms officer arrived, the assailants scattered, and the officer found the distraught 19year-old woman. She told the officer her boyfriend, also a Woods resident, was killed and she was raped.

According to police, the four suspects had been drinking and swimming in the lake when they came across the Woods couple as they were sitting and talking near the lake. The assailants then went to their car and got weapons, including an aluminum baseball bat, a pipe with a taped grip and a wooden cane, police believe.

The 22-year-old Woods man was hit in the back of the head and dumped into the lake, and the woman was raped. Both victims were treated at St. John Hospital and released the same attack, and the fourth man, Zeweke, was arrested July 18.

At the arraignment last week, Golden's attorney wanted his client to be able to continue on the $25,000 bond set in juvenile court, but Farms Judge Rumora disagreed. "The stakes are entirely different now," he said, referring to the fact that now Golden, as an adult in the eye of the court, faces up to life in prison if convicted of the charges.

Rumora said he took into consideration that Golden has no prior criminal record, but he said $25,000 bond was "grossly inadequate" to protect society and to ensure the likelihood that Golden will appear in court at the scheduled times.

Rumora referred to a report prepared by Judge Lacey in Juvenile Court that said Golden had a conduct disorder and that he is a danger to society in that he will take advantage of another person if given the oppor-

Rumora, while explaining his setting of a high bond, said the charges against Golden were extremely serious, just short of actually taking a human life.

The 1st District in Wayne County includes all five Grosse Pointes and Harper Woods. Voters go to the polls Tuesday, Nov.

The son of local political giant, former Detroit Mayor Jerome P. Cavanagh, David Cavanagh claims his two years on the board have seasoned him and make him the best candidate for things he has done for the 1st

"I've learned a lot and absorbed a lot," the Woods resident have languished, but I made said. He says the relationships he has formed with the other commissioners and city officials will help him to continue to serve the people of his district. "I think I have brought Wayne County back into touch with the residents of the east side so they feel that there's somebody there," he said. "That was a major mission."

The mission was to make sure the residents of his district were getting back, in services, an equal proportion of the taxes being paid, and Cavanagh said he has done that.

"If we don't get any money back, we must get it back in other ways. Wayne County government affects the people of the east side most through the public services department," said Cavanagh, chairman of the Roads, Airports and Public Services Committee.

He said the county has been improving its services to the

"Lakeshore and Mack could sure they didn't," Cavanagh

One of the major issues facing the county is its sorry financial state, Cavanagh said, and balancing the budget would be high on his list of priorities were he to be returned to the board in

As chair of the Audit Committee, he is watching where all the money goes in the county. He believes he has "brought that committee out of the closet," and into the light as a committee with some power.

Other issues facing the county, as they are in nearly all communities across the country, are juvenile crime and drug use, which Cavanagh says are "very inter-related.'

That is one of the reasons Cavanagh said he has always voted for increased law enforcement in the area.

Hand-in-hand with law enforcement go the problems with the running of the county jails. Cavanagh has helped appoint a mediation panel to make recomthe county jails and how they should be run. "Mr. Cavanagh's claim to fame for the last two years is that he put some curbs on Lakeshore and fixed some potholes on Mack," Pochmara said. "He has done nothing to help balance the budget. Something's got to be mendations as to who should run done about the way money is being spent."

Although balancing the budget is an important issue in this election, there are other issues that need to be addressed by the county, Pochmara said.

"I'm convinced that the crime allowed to run the debt laden and drug problem is the main issue, and it has to be eradicated." "The sheriff has always run he said. He points not only to the jail and until we do more rethe city of Detroit, but also to a recent multi-kilo drug bust in Harper Woods.

News McNealy, Hertel compete in the 14th District

Staff Writer Voters in three of the Grosse Pointes will cast ballots Tuesday, Nov. 8 for United States representative for the 14th District. A newcomer is pitted against the incumbent who has eight years of congressional experience. The district includes Grosse Pointe Farms, Grosse Pointe Woods, Grosse Pointe Shores, Harper Woods, East Detroit, Centerline, most of Warren, all of Sterling Heights, Utica, Hazel Park, Madison Heights, Hamtramck, northwest Detroit and part of Troy.

Dennis Hertel

The Democratic congressman is seeking his fifth successive term in this district.

In an economically and demographically varied district, Hertel said he receives most of his correspondence from his Grosse Pointe sector, and the concerns are generally about the economy.

Even when things are going well, people are concerned about the economy, and that's something we need to pay attention to," Hertel said in a phone interview.

The main way to stabilize the economy is to get the deficit down, he said, and he thinks it can be done, but not in one easy

He also says special interest programs must be paid for by the state governments which are most affected.

"Michigan shouldn't have to pay for regional projects like irrigating the dessert in California," he said. "I've been voting against special interest programs like that.'

One thing he says he wouldn't do is vote for higher taxes.

"People are paying high enough taxes," he said. "I didn't support tax reform, which for some people was an increase an-

An issue of great importance to Hertel is education. He believes something must be done to open education to more people. "The money spent on education is always returned to the people," in the form of better government, better industry and better business, he said.

He also believes women need to be treated equally and strongly believes an equal rights amendment to the Constitution must be made law. Family needs, such as day care, latchkey, and all the myriad problems that come with single-parent households, need to be addressed, through state and federal laws, also.

"I think the two big issues are what type of foreign policy are w. g ing to have, and what kind of domestic and national policy we will have," McNealy said.

"We are dealing with a very strong system of government called the Soviet Union with its tentacles throughout the world,' he said. The United States must keep a strong national defense to with Russia.

He also believes there needs to be a total overhaul in the organization of the Pentagon and needs to open it up to competitive bidding, to keep costs down.

He would vote "every time" to fund the Contras, he said. "That part of the world is a flash point. The Russians are pumping millions of dollars into that country, and like the domino effect, if it goes, so will others. I think our nation's at stake."

He said the big internal issue is, of course, balancing the budget and paying off the national debt. But he would never vote for a tax increase, he said.

'The instant we impose higher taxes, the inflationary trend would go how it was in 1980,"

"We need to cut the deficit, continue to have good relations but raising taxes on the so-called wealthy is not how to do it,' McNealy said.

If there were a simplified form of tax filing, the government could do away with a large portion of the Internal Revenue System, which would also save the government millions of dollars.

He believes there should be a reduction in the amount of government which would get some people off the national payroll and, with the exception of the military, impose a hiring freeze.

To help pay off the national debt, he would look into possible privatizing of the post office, stop subsidizing and sell Conrail, and the U.S.-owned airport in Washington, D.C.

He would also like to try a national lottery which he says could raise $25 billion in the first year.

Pointes lack clout in U.S. House races rosse Pointe Republicans will face two unrewarding alternatives when They consider their choices for Congress in the 13th and 14th districts on Nov. 8. They can either cast their ballots for the two incumbent Democrats who are almost a cinch to win or they can vote for the two Republican challengers who have little chance at victory. For Republican voters, it's not a happy prospect.

But that's the way it has been during the 1980s, because Democrats constitute a huge majority in each district and the vote of the Republican Pointes is split between the two districts, thanks to a gerrymandering reapportionment that followed the 1980 census. That reapportionment shifted Grosse Pointe Park and Grosse Pointe City from the 14th to the 13th District and left the Farms, the Shores and the Woods in the 14th. In effect, that reapportionment split the GOP clout in the Pointes in two.

As a result, it is not surprising that Democratic Rep. George W. Crockett is seeking his sixth term in the 13th District and Democratic Rep. Dennis Hertel his fifth in the 14th. Nor is it surprising that neither of the Republican challengers is getting much help except advice from the Republican Party.

To end what he terms "an injustice" to the Pointes, Crockett recommends that in the next reapportionment after the 1990 census, the Park and the City be returned to the 14th District where, he says, those Grosse Pointers would find more compatibility with other voters than they now do with the majority in his district.

The left-leaning Crockett has often been criticized for not giving more attention to local matters and for putting too much emphasis on foreign policy issues. He replies, however, that he believes he is representing his constituency, except, of course, for the Pointes.

So he opposes aid to the Contras in Nicaragua unless aid is given to all Nicaraguans and favors a balanced budget by cutting defense spending and limiting foreign aid to the underprivileged masses abroad. He calls for improved social programs, especially in education and health, and says he would pay the costs "by taking back from the rich what Congress gave them in the 1981 tax law."

Hertel, a moderate Democrat, has sponsored legislation to put defense contractors in jail if they steal from the government and has recommended hiring a professional corps of procurement officers to reform the Pentagon's buying practices. He favors a balanced budget and would reduce the deficit by cutting Pentagon waste and rejecting special interest legislation.

Hertel feels that the government should do more to meet family needs now that most women are working outside the home. He, too, calls for increases in federal aid to education because, he says, it is the hope of the future both for the nation and its citizens.

Savage, who attacks Crockett for his leftwing views, identifies himself as a law and order candidate who believes the major issue facing the country involves crime and drugs. He recommends that the United States break diplomatic relations with any nation exporting drugs to this country and urges that welfare recipients be tested for drug abuse.

He favors a strong defense and would protect U.S. markets against imports from Japan and Korea. He also says he would recommend a review of all social programs in order to cut spending, balance the budget and make sure those who receive federal benefits need them.

McNealy, running as a traditional Republican, feels that the major domestic issue is cutting the deficit and the major issue on the foreign front is maintaining a militarily strong United States in order to deal with the Soviet Union's aggressive moves and its tactics in nuclear weapons negotiations.

McNealy, who attacks Hertel as a donothing congressman, urges an overhaul in the organization of the military in order to open it up to competitive bidding and keep costs down.

The GOP challenger does concede that he is an underdog because the district usually votes about 60 percent Democratic and 40 percent Republican, but he believes that if Vice President George Bush sweeps the state and his district, he might ride Bush's coattails to victory.

Under the circumstances, readers can understand why the Grosse Pointe News is reluctant to make endorsements in these two races. We sympathize with Pointers who will vote for the challengers in the hopes of upsetting one or both of the Democratic incumbents. But we also understand the motives of other Pointers who will vote for the favored incumbents but will still try to convince them of the error of their ways on specific issues.

Whatever happens, the election once again will underscore how Republicans in the Pointes are being deprived of their clout in the congressional races because of the gerrymandered reapportionment. We think Crocket is right on one point: People in the Pointes ought to begin campaigning now to be reunited in one district in the reapportionment that will follow the 1990 census.

Keep a lonesome Republican

7hen Grosse Pointers go to the polls Nov. 8, one of the certainties is that a majority will vote for the re-election of Rep. William Bryant, the native of the Pointes who has represented this district for 18 years and now is running for his 10th term.

True, Bryant is being opposed by a Democrat, Katherine Barnhart, a Farms resident for the past five years, who is trying to raise some issues against the long-time incumbent but does not appear to have the financial and party support necessary to wage a strong campaign.

In fact, the Republican Pointes have sent only two Republicans, Bryant and his immediate predecessor, Robert E. Waldron, to the House of Representatives in the past 34 years. Waldron served 16 years before Bryant succeeded him and began his 18year reign.

Bryant says the school finance issue still is a critical one for the Grosse Pointes. As vice chairman of the Taxation Committee and a member of the Education Committee, Bryant has been in the forefront of the legislators seeking school financing reform without requiring a cap on millage voted by the so-called out-of-formula districts such as Grosse Pointe. Such a cap would even limit the amount the Pointes might levy on themselves to support public education.

If agreement is reached this fall on the latest proposal, and both houses approve it by a two-thirds margin, it probably would be put to a vote of the public in a special election, tentatively set for March. But Bryant says it still is anyone's guess whether that agreement can be achieved, especially since some legislators still want to penalize higher spending districts in order to benefit lower spending districts.

Ms. Barnhart, a self-employed attorney who specializes in domestic law, earlier served for eight years in the Cavanagh administration in the city of Detroit. She also was a Peace Corps volunteer in Africa for two years. In her only previous political contest, she was defeated by David Cavanagh for the Democratic nomination for 1st District county commissioner two years

As a candidate, Ms. Barnhart acknowledges it's difficult to overcome Bryant's period of service and entrenchment in the Legislature, but contends that the Republican incumbent should be in a leadership position and isn't. She argues that if elected she could make a difference in Lan-

She backs the proposed doubling of the one-mill tax in Grosse Pointe and elsewhere in the county's Intermediate School District to improve services to handicapped children, favors restructing the ways the state finances public schools, sees solid waste disposal as a big problem for the future and in general believes we must be more careful of our environment.

On specific ballot proposals, she opposes Proposal A, which would in effect ban Medicaid abortions; opposes Proposal B, which would include crime victims' rights in the Constitution, because, while favoring such rights, she doesn't think they should be spelled out in the Constitution; and endorses both Proposal C, the $660 million bond issue for environmental purposes, and Proposal D, a $140 million bond issue to benefit state and local park maintenance and development.

Rep. Bryant, responding to his challenger's criticisms of his lack of leadership, points out he served four years as GOP floor leader in the House and still is a member of the leadership group by virtue of his post as Republican leader emeritus. On the Taxation Committee, he is playing a leading role in the school financing reform legislation, and on that committee originated the tax amnesty plan that was adopted by the Democratic administration.

He also points out that six years ago he originated the ongoing skills training program for legislators and their staffs known as Legislative Educational Development. He still serves as co-director along with a Democratic colleague for the only program in the nation to train legislative people in skills ranging from communications to ways of achieving change and diversity.

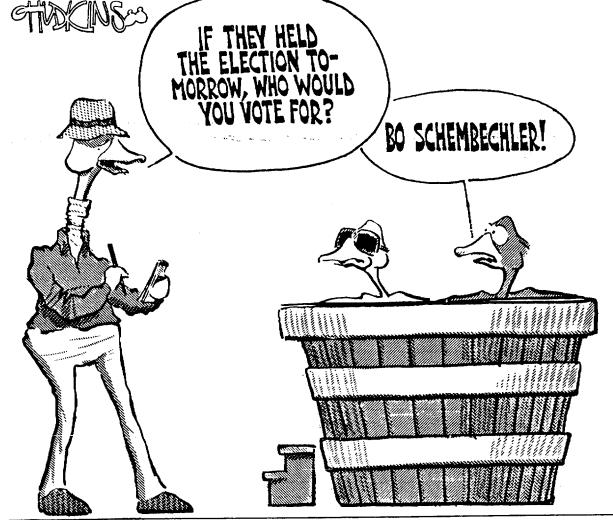

On the issues on the ballot, Bryant backs the proposal to double the one-mill tax to improve services for handicapped children, favors Proposal A because too many women use Medicaid abortions as a regular substitute for birth control and endorses Proposal B although he believes crime victims' rights are already spelled out in the Constitution.

On other issues, he favors Proposal C to authorize the state to issue $660 million in bonds for environmental cleanup and protection, but opposes Proposal D because the $140 million in bonds proposed for protection and preservation of parks and recreational facilities should be, in his view, a budgetary item.

This is only a partial review of the differences between Rep. Bryant and his challenger, but the News believes that the Grosse Pointe representative deserves reelection on the basis of his record. And contrary to the charges by his opponent, Bryant has been a leader in the Legislature, not only on statewide issues but on those immediately affecting the Grosse Pointes.

He is the senior Republican in the House and, in fact, might be seeking his final term. Why? Because he's thinking of running for governor on the Republican ticket in 1990, assuming he is re-elected this year and depending on which candidates take to the field two years hence.

At present, however, he is still the lonesome Grosse Pointer who is the only elected Republican representing the Pointes in county, state and national lawmaking bodies. And we think he deserves re-election to the state House for a tenth

Letters on page 8A

The race for commissioner

welve of the 15 members of the Wayne County Commission will get L a free ride in the November election because they have no opposition. Fortunately, the 1st District, which includes the Grosse Pointes, does have a contest that pits incumbent Democrat David P. Cavanagh of Grosse Pointe Woods against a GOP challenger, David P. Pochmara, of Harper

In the 1st District, Cavanagh, the stockbroker son of the late mayor of Detroit, Jerome P. Cavanagh, is being challenged by Pochmara on the grounds that he hasn't done much for his district in his first term. Cavanagh denies the charge and points to his record.

With two years of experience, Cavanagh contends that he has helped nurse the county back to financial health. He cites his lobbying for legislative approval of the bail-out package that provided new revenue for the county, authorized significant state loans to pay off the county's previous debts and revamped the county's expensive health care program for indigents.

Cavanagh also claims he has helped bring the county back into touch with people on the east side who now know that somebody represents their interests. He sees the road improvements, including the paving of Lakeshore, new traffic signs, grass cutting along the county roads and other public service functions as ways that tax dollars paid by county residents return to their own communities.

Pochmara, on the other hand, says that as a RenCen police security supervisor, he has gained experience that would help him in tackling the county's major problems: crime and drugs. He pointed to a recent drug bust in his home community of Harper Woods as evidence that this problem is now in our own communities.

The GOP challenger also contends the east side is not getting back a fair share of its taxes to improve its services, the county's budget isn't yet balanced and Cavanagh voted against a cap on spending proposed by the Republican member of the Pochmara also complains that Cavanagh had a high rate of absenteeism and tardiness in attending county board meetings, but his evidence that the incumbent missed four of 23 meetings and was late for two others in the period from January to December 1987, hardly proves the point.

We think Cavanagh's experience and onthe job training for the past two years qualify him for another term, even though he tends to exaggerate his record on such matters as the paving of Lakeshore Road and the state's bail-out legislation for Wayne County. Pochmara, on the other hand, has run for the city council in Detroit and state senator in the 1st District but lacks experience in public office.

More stuff to ponder

My stack of imponderables has grown to the point where I have to unload it again.

Imponderables are rag-tag bits of unanswerable, unfathomable, mostly unuseable stuff. Picky perplexing things I can't figure out. I've added a few items that I've seen in print during the last few years. Amazing stuff, all.

Some are miniscule personal

• How can a child (all three of mine, in fact) carry out a simple task like peeling a carrot (under manage to fling orangey slivers onto the ceiling, floor, walls, light fixtures, pets, cabinets, mini-blinds, and the refrigerator door, where these bits of carrot immediately dry to a superglue consistency and require a putty knife and a Brillo pad for removal?

· Why are men allowed (yea, encouraged) to engage in certain stress-reducing behaviors that are deemed highly improper (yea, gross) for women. I mean spitting, snoring, swearing, scratching in public, getting drunk and moaning about the subsequent hangover.

• Another gender-bender. I've been saving this one for awhile. It happened on Sept. 26, 1981 right on the front page of the Freep. The writer who reported Sandra O'Connor's historic swearing in as the nation's first woman Supreme Court justice added this: "She was wearing a simple belted pink dress.'

No mention of what Chief Jusrunning water, at the kitchen tice Warren Burger - or any of sink, with a vegetable peeler) yet the seven other justices - were for; then up and died anyway?

• While we're on the subject, does God really care about every sparrow? Or is He selective? Does He devote more time to people simply because we so desperately need His help?

Where does God draw the line of His concern anyway? After mammals? Above or below fishes? Does He agonize over the progress of every centipede? How does He feel about worms? Jellyfish? Amoebas? Viruses?

• (Gasp) is He rooting for the AIDS virus?

· Why do useless items multiply like crazy when your back is turned? I'm not talking about investments here. Or precious gems. Or opportunities.

I'm talking about wire coat hangers, pennies, cellulite, last week's newspapers, toast crumbs, weeds, dust, expired grocery coupons, and used-up fabric softener sheets.

The worst offenders are those dandy little twister ties that are wound around the ends of bread wrappers. Twister ties are secretely mating and multiplying in the bread box while you're busy tending to your daily affairs. When you whip open the bread box one morning, intending to make some sandwiches for the children's lunches, there's 40 litters of twister ties, all laughing in your face.

• In 1979, a New York woman sued her plastic surgeon because he misplaced her belly button. Seems she had a tummy tuck. According to this tuckee, the tucker repositioned her belly button two inches off-center. When she wore her bikini, anyone with an eye fixed on her midsection might think she's headed south, when, in fact, she's actually headed southeast.

The New York State Supreme Court awarded $850,000 for her pain and suffering, medical expenses, loss of earnings, and the unhappy sex life this travesty precipitated.

• A newspaper ad a few years back announced that selected local Sears stores would be featuring a visit from a national fur consultant "to answer any questions you may have about furs and help select the best style for you." This guy was spending an entire month, hanging around the fur department at Sears, waiting for people to come in for advice.

What are the qualifications for becoming a fur consultant? Does this guy have to go to fur school? Pass a fur exam? Do you suppose this man might say to me, when I go for a consultation: "You are obviously much too young for mink. You'd look smashing in beige wool.'

• Another New York woman has spent a lifetime collecting dryer lint. She creates artistic sculptures and designs out of these laundry-day leftovers and sells them to eager art-lovers. And — (I'm not making this up) - she sometimes augments the lint-sculptures with items from her collection of rusty nails and burnt waffles.

Talk about silk purses. Talk about lemonade.

If I were half as enterprising, I'd be making Brillo pads out of twister ties and selling them. Then I could afford mink.

Task force seeks public input

To the Editor:

Two Michigan Supreme Court Task Forces will hold three public hearings in Southeastern Michigan as part of their efforts to determine if some citizens receive different treatment in Michigan courts because of race, gender or ethnic origins.

The Task Force on Racial/ Ethnic Issues in the Courts will hold a public hearing on Tuesday, Nov. 1 in the Commissioners Auditorium in the Oakland County Courthouse at 1200 N. Telegraph Road in Pontiac and in the 13th floor auditorium of the City-County Building at 2 Woodward Avenue in downtown Detroit on Nov. 14 and Nov. 15. The hearings will be held each day from 9 a.m. to noon and 1 p.m. to 5 p.m.

The Task Force on Gender Issues in the Courts will hold public hearings on Nov. 17 and Nov. 18 in the 13th floor auditorium of the City-County Building in downtown Detroit. The hearings will be held on both days from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m., 3 p.m. to 5 p.m. and 6 p.m. to 9 p.m.

We are holding a total of 13 public hearings throughout Michigan to give citizens an opportunity to express their views on discrimination and bias in Michigan courts. We would like to hear from anyone who believes they were treated differently in a Michigan court because of their race, ethnic origin or gender.

Our mission is to investigate the nature and extent of bias in state courts and to recommend ways to reform the court system to prevent actual or perceived bias.

Persons who are unable to attend one of our public hearings but would like to express their views on this subject may do so by writing either Task Force. Letters should be sent to: Bias Task Forces, P.O. Box 30048, Lansing, Mich. 48909.

Like trying to keep a pet lion To the Editor:

In reference to the recent ordinance in the Woods, I completey support the banning of this breed.

My son was attacked by an American Bull Terrier (purebred with papers) when he was 22 months old and received 86 stitches to his head and eye. The pit bull was a family pet which was raised from a puppy. She was a wonderful pet. We also had a wire haired fox terrier and the two played and got along fine. When she was about 5 years old, my son was in the backyard with the dog. He wasn't even near the dog or looking at her, and the dog attacked.

We researched the matter and had the dog destroyed. We found out that with any animal that's bred to kill, no matter how it's raised from a puppy, chances are the trait will come through at some time. It would be like trying to have a lion as a pet.

I feel sorry for Terry Shook, what a way to start out in his new home with new neighbors, but as a mother of three and having this happen personally, I'm sorry Terry, but I support your neighbors.

Denise Kennedy Grosse Pointe

Shooks never had a chance

To the Editor:

Concerning the issue of banning pit bulls, I would like to say that there is more than this particular breed of dog involved. This real issue is the fact that there are laws against dog fighting and the cruel treatment of animals, in general, and neither of these laws are fully enforced.

The pit bull had gained its reputation from its training and breeding to be fighters and to attack - both for dog fighting and protection of various properties. The methods used to train these dogs are, to say the least, sickening, but they do the job the cruel owners desire. Pit bulls have, if they have been bred correctly, very sweet and loving dispositions and make wonderful pets, however, there are always ignorant people who judge not on merit, but on whatever the current idea may be. Thus, the "knee-jerk" reaction, as David Wills put it so well.

Now I realize that parents can get carried away with the idea that their children are at risk, but somewhere we have to look at the rights of our neighbors and not decide that we can dictate what type of animal people can own, unless that particular animal has pursued to be a so-called "killer!" Leash laws can be enforced and fences can contain an animal, if that proves not to be true, then you can press the matter from that point. Otherwise we will soon outlaw German shepherds, malamutes, great danes and a couple of other breeds, that have had, at times, reputations of being "mean dogs."

Before I can "ban" one person on my block, I darned well better wonder what I own that can be taken away from me. I personally own four cats. Many people dislike cats, in general. Should they be allowed to remove my pets because they have this prejudice? The Constitution is for all of us. It is a very precious part of our American way and it's not something to be looked on as only for "my" benefit.

Discrimination covers all areas of our lives and I firmly believe that Molly and Terry Shook have been treated badly by their neighbors and Grosse Pointe Woods. They at least deserved the opportunity to prove the gentleness of Buster. They never even had a chance and that, to me, is as good as a burning cross on their lawn.

The good guys To the Editor:

We the parents of the Cosmos soccer team want the community to know about our coaches.

As the season began, we had no coach for the third and fourth grade boys team. The boys were concerned that this would mean that they would not have a team and would not be able to play soccer this season.

Two young men, Gus Grodsinsky and Craig Wininger, both juniors at Grosse Pointe South High School, came forward and agreed to take on the coaching of our team. They have been positive examples for our boys by teaching the fundamentals of the game and stressing good sportsmanship.

In a day when adults are often quick to criticize youth for being self-centered or not caring for others, we feel they should be recognized for the care and concern they have for these young ath-

We want to publicly acknowledge these fine young men. Our sons want to thank them for sharing so much of their time. The boys will never forget the fun they've had in the fall of '88 soccer season.

Thanks, Gus! Thanks, Craig!

City of Grosse Pointe Park, Michigan NOTICE OF PROPOSED CHARTER AMENDMENTS

TO THE QUALIFIED ELECTORS OF THE CITY OF GROSSE POINTE PARK, MICHIGAN, please take notice that a Special Election to be held in the City of Grosse Pointe Park, Michigan, on the 8th day of November, 1988, there will be submitted to the vote of the qualified electors of said City the following charter amendment propositions:

Present Charter Provisions
Change in Term of Office or Compensation:

Section 5.5. Except by procedures provided in this charter, the terms of office of the elective officers and of members of boards and commissions appointed for a definite term shall not be shortened. The terms of elective officers shall not be extended beyond the period for which any such officer was elected except that an elective officer shall, after his term has expired, continue to hold office until his successor is elected or appointed and his successor is elected or appointed and has qualified. The Council shall not grant or authorize extra compensation to any officer or employee after his service has been rendered.

The salary of any elective officer shall not be increased or decreased from the day he is elected until the end of the term of office for which he was

Compensation of Presiding Officer:

Section 15.4. The presiding officer of the court shall receive such annual compensation as shall be fixed by ordinance, but not less than three thousand dollars nor more than six thousand dollars per year. The ordinance fixing his salary may not be amended less than one hundred and fifty days before the next election at which a person is to be elected to the office nor may his compensation be changed during the term of office for which he was elected. Until otherwise provided by ordinance the salary of the office shall be three thousand dollars

The salary for the office provided by charter or ordinance shall be in lieu of all fees, both in civil and criminal cases, to which the presiding officer might be entitled but for the provisions of this section, except those for the performance of marriage ceremonies and for administering oaths in matters not connected with suits and processings in his

The compensation paid to any substitute Judge or justice under the provisions of Section 15.11 shall be deducted from the compensation of the presiding officer of the Court, provided, however, that such deductions shall not be made because of disqualification because of interest in the case or because of absence from the City on official business of the Court

Substitute Judge or Justice:

Section 15.11. In case of the absence, disability or disqualification of the presiding officer of the court, any other justice of the peace or Municipal Judge in the County of Wayne shall be qualified to act in his place and for him in the performance of any of the duties imposed upon him by statute or this charter; and shall so act when called upon in the manner and under the condition herein set forth. The Council shall by ordinance fix the compensation to be paid justices or Judges for such services and the procedure to be followed in calling upon them so to act. The provisions of such ordinance relative to such compensation may not be amended less than one hundred and fifty days before the next election at which a Municipal Judge (justice of the peace) is to be elected nor may such compensation be changed during the term of office for which any Municipal Judge (justice of the peace) was elected. The first such ordinance shall provide that such compensation shall be twenty five dollars per week for regular sessions of the court and other matters pertaining to the office. Unless the Council shall so provide by ordinance, no such justice or judge shall so act or be entitled to compensation therefor.

Proposed Charter Provisions Change in Term of Office or Compensation:

Section 5.5. Except by procedures provided in this charter, the terms of office of the elective officers and of members of boards and commissions appointed for a definite term shall not be shorttended beyond the period for which any such offi-cer was elected except that an elective officer shall, after his term has expired, continue to hold office until his successor is elected or appointed and has qualified. The Council shall not grant or authorize extra compensation to any officer or employee after his service has been rendered.

The salary of any elective officer other than the presiding officer of the Court shall not be inreased or decreased from the day he is elected until the end of the term of office for which he was

Compensation of Presiding Officer:

Section 15.4. The presiding officer of the Court shall receive such annual compensation as shall be fixed by ordinance, but not less than six thousand dollars nor more than fifteen thousand dollars per year. The annual compensation of the office may be increased but shall not be decreased during a term of office except and to the extent of a general salary reduction applicable to all salaried officers of the City. Until otherwise provided by ordinance, the salary of the office shall be six thousand dollars per year.

The salary for the office provided by charter or ordinance shall be in lieu of all fees, both in civil and criminal cases, to which the presiding officer might be entitled but for the provisions of this section, except those for the performance of marriage ceremonies and for administering oaths in matters not connected with suits and proceedings in this

Substitute Judge or Justice:

Section 15.11. In case of the absence, disability or other disqualification of the presiding officer of the Court, any othere person qualified by law to act as a Municipal Judge may be appointed or designated to act as Municipal Judge in the manner provided by law or ordinance. No compensation shall be paid to such Judge except in accordance with an agreement between the City and the Judge made before appointment or designation of the Judge or as otherwise provided by law.

Raise funds, save energy

What do non-profit organizations and homeowners have in common? They both can benefit from an energy audit program developed by Detroit Edison, just in time for National Energy Awareness Month in October.

A touch of Europe: Walkways, benches

By Ralph Slovenko Professor of Law and Psychiatry,

Wayne State University
The other day, after a long while, I visited Hamtramck. Going there, on Holbrook Street, one cannot help but see the large sign on the Kowalski Sausage building, "Hamtramck – A Touch of Europe." "What kind of touch?" I wondered. I asked the general manager of Kowalski. He didn't know. He said the mayor of Hamtranck once coined the phrase, and they just picked it up.

It's wishful thinking. I too engaged in wishful thinking. I had hoped that the large vacant area on Joseph Campau in the heart of Hamtramck, where the pope spoke to thousands, would be turned into a public square or a park with tree-lined walkways and benches. That would have given the place a real touch of Europe.

Instead, it's now a parking lot and shopping center. To be sure, it's an improvement over the unkempt ground that was, but a far cry from what it might have been. Indeed, a public square or park would do much more for the revitalization of Hamtramck than yet another commer-

That's wishful thinking, of course, just as it's wishful thinking to imagine walkways and benches in Detroit or the suburbs. In reality, much of the suburbs are even without sidewalks. Is it any wonder that suburban living is dreary for so many people? Streetlife is woefully absent. People there walk in the parking lot of the shopping malls; it's a pathetic sight.

Walking is good exercise, it's enjoyable, it's sociable. But few walk, whether out of fear of crime or not. Even in safe Grosse Pointe few walk. When I walk there with friends or we play a game - we count the number of people we see walking. In an evening's walk, in good weather, we have yet to count more than five. It's like a ghost town.

It is a very long time since I have heard anyone say, "We spent last evening walking." In my years in Detroit, I have not seen a mother strolling with a baby carriage, sitting and chatting with other mothers. Instead, mother has baby strapped in a "love seat" in a car.

People would like to walk. They complain about "cabin fever," sitting so much either at home or in a car. For walking to be a pleasure, however, there must be service stations for people just as there are for cars. For people, little gardens with benches here and there. For cars there are two or sometimes three at an intersection. Without a resting place, people will not venture far from home.

There are some benches at Wayne State University, but hardly suitable for sitting. Flat boards or concrete slabs are not restful. They are designed against vandalism. Benches with a backrest are covered with advertising, located at busy intersections. They are not really intended for sitting. They are cheap substitutes for billboards.

And what do we see at the so-called Renaissance Center? To be sure, not a walkway with benches, as in Windsor, but a parking lot on the riverfront!

If you want people to come downtown, you have got to create pedestrian traffic and that is not done by fortress - like buildings and skywalks that take people off the street.

Strolling on a tree-lined walkway, especially along the river, on a spring or summer day cannot be anything but exhilarating. The people of our community are deprived of that simple, inexpensive but highly enjoyable experience.

Now I am told: "Walkways and benches, that's wishful thinking. Who would occupy them? The derelicts? The homeless? And what about the bullets that fly in Detroit?"

Europeans know how to have public places for public use. I have fond memory of my student days in Europe, sitting on a park bench, eating my lunch, and study-

It's Crockett vs. Savage in the 13th

By Margie Reins Smith Staff Writer

Voters on Tuesday, Nov. 8 will choose between the incumbent, Democrat George W. Crockett Jr., and Republican John W. Savage II for the 13th District seat in the U.S. House of Representatives.

The 13th District includes the city of Grosse Pointe, Grosse Pointe Park and a large portion of Detroit's lower east side.

George W. Crockett Jr.

U.S. Rep. George W. Crockett Jr. said his major accomplishment during his previous four terms in Washington is his voting record.

"When it comes to bills on jobs, education, health and crime," he said, "I've come down on the side that the majority of people in my district wanted me

Crockett said that he represents the bulk of the 13th District - black, urban working people. He said 95 percent are Democrats.

"I'm already elected," he said. "As far as I'm concerned, my campaign ended with the primary.

George W. Crockett Jr.

Crockett has not initiated any legislation while serving in Congress. "And I won't. We have too much already, according to my experience as a judge. The question is now to get the people to uphold the law.

Crockett presently serves on a subcommittee of the House Foreign Affairs Committee as well as the House Judiciary Committee and the Committee on the Aged.

His stand on the deficit: "I've always favored a balanced budget. The federal government is no different than an ordinary

He said that foreign aid should only go to underpriviliged masses, not to buy goodwill and military assistance.

"There is a need to increase social programs in some areas." he said, "like education and health. But we can't do it because we spend too much on military. We have lots of useless armaments. There's no need to blow up the world eight times over.'

He favors a tax increase, "to take back all that was given away during the first year of the Reagan administration. The 1981 tax law gave to the wealthy class," he said.

Crockett is 79 years old. He's a former Recorder's Court judge and has served four previous terms in Congress. He said he'll continue to run as long as his health holds out and the district elects him.

John W. Savage II

The Republican candidate for U.S. Congress in the 13th District believes that crime is the major issue.

"Especially drugs," John W. Savage II said. "Congress should do something. Break off diplomatic relations with any country that sells drugs." Savage also advocates random drug tests for welfare recipients.

"I will represent all the people in the 13th congressional district," he said. "I'll put an office in Grosse Pointe so people can come directly to me. Crockett has done nothing for the 13th

On the deficit, he said something must be done about the nation's budget: "Cut spending, cut social programs, amend the Constitution so that the budget must be balanced by 1992.'

He does not advocate a cutback in food stamps, but pointed out that ADC (Aid to Dependent Children) and welfare programs overlap and need reform.

"Social Security needs to be restructured so it will be solvent to 2030, and we need to look at some of the people who are getting Social Security benefits some of these are able to work."

Savage said the election is going as well as expected, but pointed out: "Black people can't continue to vote democratic all the time. Rumors are that Republican is just for the rich. This is not true."

He said he refuses campaign cian.

money from special groups and is financing his own campaign. "I'm getting no money from the state party. Savage said the state Republican party has written off the 13th District.

Woman abused in her fight to keep purse

A 40-year-old woman was dragged, punched and kicked before she finally relinquished her purse to snatchers in Grosse Pointe Park Oct. 15.

According to Park police reports, the woman was walking along Mack Avenue in the 14900 block at 10:28 p.m. when two men grabbed her purse and fought her while she hung on to it. After being physically beaten, she had to give up the purse. which contained $15 She received minor injuries.

The two men ran north on Wayburn from Mack and then fled east in the north alley.

Both suspects are described as black males, about 5 feet 6, and between 18 and 23 years old.

Ghosts vanish, Woods woman reports to police

Two large ghosts disappeared in front of a Woods home in the 700 block of North Brys Drive last week.

The ghosts were last seen at 11:15 p.m. Oct. 20 in front of the home. When the homeowner went back out to admire her ghosts about 15 minutes later, they had disappeared into thin

Fall peril for pets

Winterizing the family car this fall can pose a serious threat to pets, wildlife and children. The task of changing the anti-freeze in a car's radiator can be deadly, if you don't take special handling precautions.

Phe main ingredient of permanent type anti-freeze is ethylene glycol, a toxic substance with a "sweet" taste. If the used product is left in an open container, its appealing taste can attract animals and children. Ethylene glycol is so highly toxic that even a small amount can be fatal to both dogs and cats. The Michigan Humane Society annually treats up to a dozen cases of anti-freeze poisoning at its clinics. Such tragedies can be preventable.

I If you suspect your pet has ingested anti-freeze, it is imperative you contact your veterinarian immediately, as time is of the essence.

Protect unsuspecting children and pets from harm by disposing of used anti-freeze in leak-proof containers with child-proof tops. Hose down spills, too. Their lives are worth a few extra minutes of

Hospitals join forces to meet growing needs growing Macomb County, while saving costs by not duplicating services, the parent company of Mount Clemens General Hospital (MCG Telesis Inc.) and St. John Hospital-Detroit and Macomb Center, in Harrison Township, are joining together to propose new services.

The partnership is the result of an existing agreement between the two organizations which allows them to jointly pursue various potentially beneficial health-care opportunities in the Macomb County area and centers around the 96-bed St. John Hospital-Macomb Center

The new joint services partnership is contingent upon the approval from the Michigan Department of Public Health for a Certificate of Need which would

To meet health-care needs of a allow SJHMC to establish a 20- newly remodeled 25-bed adult bed alcohol and drug abuse treatment unit for adolescents. A decision from the site is expected in late November.

Under the partnership, MCG Telesis Inc. would acquire two seats on the nine-member SJHMC Board of Trustees, with the option of additional representation in the future.

Those two board positions would be filled by current MCG Telesis corporate board members Bruce A. Goodwin and Dr. Myron R. Emerick.

The partnership would also allow rehabilitation programs to further expand in Macomb

The new inpatient adolescent alcohol and drug treatment unit, the Oxford Institute Care Network's eighth location in Michigan, would complement the alcohol and drug abuse rehabilitation unit at SJHMC, which is set in a serene wooded environment. St. John Hospital-Macomb in Park break-in Center also has adult and adolescent outpatient programs.

The new unit would provide treatment for the growing number of chemically dependent youth in our area. Many of these youth either leave Michigan for through a rear window. He treatment or go untreated. This unit is expected to open in July

"Hospitals must be responsive to new and growing needs of the community, and they've got to find ways to respond without the costly duplication of similar programs near to each other," said Glenn A. Wesselmann, president and chief executive officer of St. John Hospital. "This affiliation meets that goal."

From ghoulies and ghosties. .

Gay Shuert on Rivard started decorating her house a few years ago when she noticed children weren't coming out for Halloween anymore. Last year she had 500 trick-or-treaters who weren't daunted by a flying witch or the bodies coming out of the ground, right.

St. Paul's goes for the big scare

It's that time of year. Black cats. Witches. Goblins. And candy, candy, candy. Ah yes, it's All Hallow's Eve.

It's time to — in the words of The Fly's girlfriend — be afraid, be very afraid. To oblige those strong of heart, St. Paul's Athletic Club has turned the school's auditorium into: "The Halls of Nightmares." (The music swells and you hear a big scream.)

This is not just your run-of-the-mill go-through-a-mazeand-get-screamed-at haunted house, although a maze is a big part of the show, and according to one of the event's planners, "show" is the only thing you can call it.

Rick Rutan said Craig Farkas, general chair of the Athletic Club, went to Hollywood to get ideas on sound effects, lighting effects and everything it takes to scare even the most hardened souls.

You have to be a hardy soul to go through the three phases of the house, because Rutan rates it a PG-13, nothing lewd, just probably a little more intense than is advisable for most children. Pregnant women and those with weak hearts are also discouraged from attending.

The scripted and well-choreographed event has a safety catch. If, after completing the first phase, you realize you bit off a bit more than you can stand, you can exit, before it gets really scary in the maze.

So Freddy and Jason et al. (if you have to ask, you probably shouldn't be at the haunted house anyway) will haunt the halls for the rest of the week, until Sunday night. Hours begin at 6:30 and run until 11:30 tonight, and until the crowds stop on Friday and Saturday.

"The Athletic Club thought it would be in the best interest to have one big fundraiser a year instead of a bunch of smaller ones," Rutan said. "So you might be considering this in the form of a first annual."

The Athletic Club raises money for all sporting programs at St. Paul School.

Calling all creeps

For those who just can't get enough greasepaint and plastic, there will be a party for all local children 12 and under in the Village on Halloween afternoon from 3:30 to 4:30. Come in costume.

All drivers, take note: Kercheval between Neff and Cadieux will be closed during that time as a safety precaution. Parking meters along Kercheval will be bagged at 2 p.m. and the street closed between 3: 15 and 3:30.

The University Liggett School Class of 1989 will participate in a costume parade with the school's first graders. The costumes will be planned in pairs. The parade is also Oct. 28 at 1:45 p.m.

Maire's annual Halloween parade will be Monday, Oct. 31 at 12:35 p.m. The students in costume will parade around the school block and will be treated to a magic show and parties afterward. Parents and friends are invited.

Because there are some real ghouls out there, the Park will be X-raying candy from 5 p.m. to 8 p.m. at the police desk in the Park City Hall. Also, Crowley Chiropractic will perform the same service at its office at 18550 Mack Ave. in the Farms from 5 p.m. to 9 p.m. If you plan to attend Crowley's, call 886-8822.

ANNUAL FINANCIAL REPORT

THE GROSSE POINTE PUBLIC SCHOOL SYSTEM

The following report is a summary of the financial condition of The Grosse Pointe Public School System for the fiscal years ended June 30, 1988 and 1987 as authorized by the Board of Education and in accordance with General School Laws R340.351-2.

The Board of Education wishes to supplement the financial data with a few brief comments:

All monies received and disbursed by The Grosse Pointe Public School System are maintained under four major governmental fund types which broadly indicate the function. These are:

> GENERAL FUND LIBRARY FUND BUILDING AND SITE FUND DEBT RETIREMENT FUND

Two Account Groups are maintained for General Fixed Assets and General Long Term Debt.

GENERAL FUND:

This fund provides for all general operating activities of the School System, with the exception of activities associated with other Funds as identified above.

The General Fund receives the bulk of its revenue from two main sources. The first and largest source is from tax levies on real and personal properties within the school district. The second is from earnings on investments.

Comments on the General Fund Operation: For the year under review we report that the School System received no basic per pupil membership allowance under the 1987-88 State Aid Act. Our School System does not qualify for basic membership State Aid because our State Equalized Valuation per pupil is greater than the equalizing factor contained in the applicable distribution formula.

The System, however, does qualify for some Categorical assistance in financing special education programs such as Reading Support, Mentally and Physically Handicapped, Emotionally Impaired, Teacher Aides, Social Workers, and School Psychologists. In addition, Categorical assistance is received for the Bilingual program, Vocational, Community Education and Special Education Transportation. All of this, however, is reduced by the Base Revenue Deduction of the State Aid Act.

The Board of Education continues to be committed to the concept of a balanced budget and continually reviews its financial condition and considers necessary adjustments to finance the educational programs within available sources.

military personnel to become engineers. Lindberg went to Princeton.

"Engineering was a total disaster," he said. "I couldn't get calculus through my head and analytical geometry was a total mystery. I was writing my themes on the backs of envelopes and getting As, and Ds and Fs in other subjects.

"My counselor said if I really worked at it, I'd probably be the worst engineer the school ever had, so I changed my major to journalism.'

He earned a bachelor of arts degree in journalism at the University of Minnesota and immediately began his first newspaper job with the Madison Daily Leader in South Dakota.

"It was a great job, doing so many things," he said. "I did most of the writing, wrote headlines, did layout, had to edit society news."

With a small suitcase and a portable typewriter to his name, Lindberg lived at a rooming house where he paid $5 a week out of his $30 salary.

"It was a tremendous experience. There was such a feeling of accomplishment when the paper came out of the flat bed press," he said. The South Dakota winters, alas, were not so great. Lindberg said when a blizzard came off the plains, it was necessary to walk at a 45-degree angle. He returned to Minnesota after one year and applied at the United Press (now United Press International.)

In the meantime, he had accepted a newswriting job in Wisconsin. After six weeks, he received a call from the UP regional business representative who offered him a job in Indi-

In 1954 Lindberg was promoted to Detroit bureau manager. The big story then was labor, he said, the 1955 auto negotiations and the guaranteed annual

"That was the summer I was downtown the entire summer. It was a page one story nationally until the end."

The motto of United Press, he said, was a deadline every minute. Of the wire service's 4,000 newspaper, radio and TV clients, 'somewhere, someplace, one of them was on the verge of going to press or on the verge of starting a newscast. Not just minutes, but seconds, were of critical importance.'

The Detroit office was a class A bureau, like New York or Chicago, and had about a dozen correspondents and five teletype operators. In 1956, Lindberg was named Michigan manager,

In 1958 he was approached by Michigan Bell to become district manager-media relations. Lindberg said he had gone as far as he could at UP without relocating and felt his opportunities would be better with Bell.

"I wasn't terribly hot on the idea of going into PR," he said. "I told them I would not compromise my principles and they said, 'You're just what we're looking for."

Two years later "the long arm of ATT reached out and grabbed me to New York," he said. He was named division managermedia relations.

"I was a typical New York commuter, living in New Jersey. I would catch the 801 that would get me into Hoboken by 20 to 9, get a cup of coffee, and get on the tube or the ferry.

Merely walking down the streets of New York was an adventure, Lindberg said. "The electricity of the place - I miss it tremendously.'

The family, which included daughter Susan and son Bradley, lived there until 1964 when Lindberg returned to Michigan

He remained there until 1982 when he retired.

"It was about the time of the ATT divesture and I thought it was just as good a time as any to biz.' leave.

He bought a sailboat and took up sailing. And he played golf. His golf game is "erratic, sort of like the Detroit Lions - I've never been able to put it all together. On the days the woods are working, the eight-irons aren't."

And it's hard, Lindberg said, to integrate sailing, which he prefers, with golf. He keeps his 23-foot Coronado at the Farms Pier Park.

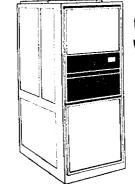

After two years of retirement

Journalism, he said, hasn't changed much through the years. His habits have changed some, however. He's gone from reading 45 newspapers a day while he was at UP to about three a day now. And, he says, there's no tremendous pressure anymore.

The Allante's 4.5 V-8 is rated at 200 horsepower, compared with 155 hp in the standard Cadillac 4.5-liter unit which powers the DeVille, Fleetwood, Seville and Eldorado models.

The big performance news at Ford Motor Co. are the 3.0-liter V-6 built by Yamaha powering the new Taurus SHO and the supercharged, intercooled 3.8-liter V-6 in the new Ford Thun derbird and Mercury Cougar.

The Yamaha SHO V-6 produced 220 hp by using four take system. The engine typifies the new muscle-car approach, which stresses today's sophisticated design, compared to the more-cubic-inches approach of the $^{\circ}60s$.

The supercharged V-6 in the T-Bird and Cougar uses a Rootstype blower driven by the engine's crankshaft rather than exhaust flow, as is the case with turbochargers. Since the supercharger does not have to wait for a pressure buildup as the turbo does, the power gain is more immediate and spectacular. The intercooled supercharger boosts power of the 3.8 V-6 from 140 to 210 hp, a rather dramatic 50 percent gain.

Chrysler Corp. has introduced a turbocharged version of its balanced-shaft 2.5-liter four-cylinder engine, which produces a torquey 150 hp.

Among imports, Audi plans a mid-year introduction of a new 20-valve 170-hp version of its five-cylinder 90 Quattro engine. An Audi V-8 is also in the works. BMW's new 525i replaces the 528e and is powered by a 208-hp 3.5-liter six.

Bentley introduces its $145,000 Turbo R, which is claimed to be the "fastest fourdoor production car on earth.' Maserati has a new 225-hp fuelinjected twin-turbo V-6, and Volvo has a more powerful four to be introduced on the GLE four in January.

Bryant, Barnhart face off in 13th District congressional race children drops some 70 percent publisher for a 600-page book on Blanchard is now using bonds to with Democratic lawmakers and ture, in the Nov. 8 general election for the 13th District.

Katherine Barnhart has a private practice downtown, and she specializes in domestic law. While she has not held office previously, she said she did make a respectable showing in the primaries two years ago against Wayne County Commissioner David Cavanagh.

The 13th District is composed of a small portion of eastside Detroit and all of Harper Woods and the Grosse Pointes. The Pointes are traditionally a Republican stronghold.

Katherine Barnhart

Barnhart, 48, agrees her work is cut out for her if she is to successfully oust Bryant, who has served nine consecutive terms. She indicated Bryant has outstaved his usefulness.

"It's hard to overcome his period in the legislature, his entrenchment in the legislature.

"Mr. Bryant has been in the legislature long enough," she said. "He should be in a leadership position, but for some reason he isn't.'

She also believes Bryant lost a lot of power when he sided with those who sought to impeach then new Gov. James J. Blanchard in 1983-84.

"I feel I could make a difference," Barnhart said. The Democratic Party has been supportive in her attempt to seek office, she county. She believes schools, insaid.

Her key campaign issues are education, environmental protection and family-law issues.

She said the state refinancing plans for the public school districts are "getting close" to something that will work and something she could support. She is in favor of raising sales taxes to pay for schools and, consequently, lowering property taxes statewide.

She is opposed to a provision in the schools refinancing plans that would put a cap on how many tax mills individual communities can assess to provide ments could raise for their own schools, regardless of whether the extra taxes. The school refinancing plan is designed to provide a more equal distribution of school dollars throughout the state, especially for areas that are unable to raise needed funds due to depressed property values, such as in Detroit. "I'm not sure absolute equality is the goal; good education is the goal," Barnhart said.

With the polls indicating Detroit voters will turn down a proposed 6-mill tax increase and a $160 million bond issue for debt service, Barnhart believes the tire metro area.

"It's a folly to think Detroit is an isolated entity that does not affect the Grosse Pointes," she said.

While she doesn't like the term "bail out" when asked A Grosse Pointe Farms lawyer what the state should do for Deis making the Democratic bid to troit if the school district doesn't unseat incumbent Republican get its tax increase and bonds, state Rep. William Bryant Jr., she indicated something would an 18 year veteran in the legisla have to be done for the Detroit school district, not just for the benefit of Detroit students, but for the benefit of the entire state.

Barnhart is also in favor of the 1-mill tax increase proposal on the November ballot for the Wayne County Intermediate School District. The increase would be used to help handicapped students throughout the cluding those in the Pointes, haven't done near enough to accommodate the handicapped.

Concerning the environment, Barnhart is in favor of Proposal C facing state voters in November. The proposal would authorize the state to sell $660 million in bonds for environmental cleanups, solid waste disposal projects, wastewater treatment facilities and Great Lakes protection. She said the proposal is "just a beginning" in what should be done for the environ-

She said the Great Lakes are the taxpayers are willing to pay in danger of becoming totally polluted. She said the problem is an international one because of adjacent Canada and requires long-range planning to solve.

The shortage of solid waste disposal sites in Michigan is another of Barnhart's concerns. She believes consumers are going to have to reduce the amount of non-biodegradable wastes they generate.

She said the state Department of Natural Resources needs more funding so it can be an effective watchdog of the environment.

As an attorney in many child failure of the Detroit school sys- support and other family law tem will be harmful for the en-cases, Barnhart is concerned about the welfare of the custodial parent and children of di-after a divorce. She would like to see something done for the members of split families whose quality of life has so declined.

Concerning the other ballot proposals facing state voters, Barnhart is opposed to Proposal A, which would restrict use of tax funds for abortions by people receiving public assistance.

She is leaning against Proposal B, which if approved would make crime victims' rights a part of the state Constitution. "I'm certainly in favor of victims' rights, but I'm not in favor of amending the Constitution," she said.

She is in favor of Proposal D. which would authorize the state to issue $140 million in bonds to preserve and protect natural resources and recreational facilities in the state.

Barnhart has lived in Grosse Pointe Farms for five years.

She earned a bachelor of arts degree from the University of Michigan with a teaching certificate. She earned her law degree from Wayne State University.

Barnhart served for two years in the Peace Corps in Africa. After that she worked for eight years for the city of Detroit in the Cavanagh administration. After the 1967 riots in Detroit, she served on the mayor's development committee.

William Bryant Jr.

At the age of 50, Republican Bryant is seeking his 10th consecutive term as state representative. He has lived in the Pointes all of his life.

He is vice chairman of the House Taxation Committee, and he is a member of Education and Urban Affairs committees. Bryant has held top leadership positions in the House in the past. He served four years as a floor leader and four years as the House GOP leader.

He resents his opponent's accusations that he is no longer a leader in the House.

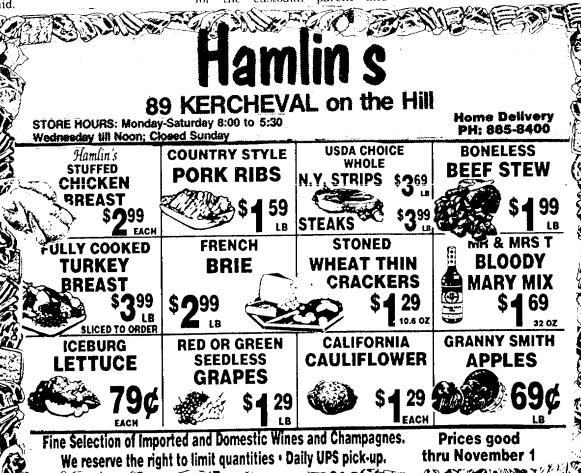

He said his tenure with the legislature has earned him the honor of being "Republican leader emeritus." He is a mem-ber of the leadership group; he goes to its meetings; and he said his influence, as the senior House Republican, is sought by leaders from both parties. He said he purposefully handed the reins of GOP leadership over to others so he could pursue other Bryant said he has other more important things to do than spend four days in Lansing, which would be required if he were once again the GOP leader. He said leaders have to manage staffs and smooth over political jealousies.

One of his interests is running the Legislative Education and Development program, which provides self-improvement instruction for legislators and staff politics he has written. The manuscript is called "Quantum Politics. Like his opponent, Bryant is in favor of refinancing plans for schools. In fact he has been one of the prime movers of the legislation, but he said he can't support the refinance plans because of a few objectionable provisions. One such provision is the proposed cap on property taxes that can be raised for schools locally.

William Bryant Jr.

Also like his opponent, Bryant favors the 1-mill proposed tax increase for the Wayne County Intermediate School District. While much of the extra funds raised in the Pointes would go to help students in other Wayne County communities, Bryant said some Grosse Pointe students would be helped, as well as handicapped students throughout the county.

Concerning the possible financial failure of the Detroit school district, Bryant said he is hesitant to support an increase in state aid to Detroit schools unless something really "radical" happens. He said such an action would be the state school board exercising its right to break up a financially troubled school district and distribute its schools to bordering districts. Such an action would have a profound effect in Grosse Pointe, he said.

Unlike his Democratic opponent, Bryant is in favor of Proposal A, which would restrict state-funded abortions. He points to past studies that have shown hundreds of women on state assistance have received statefunded abortions several times in a single year, making statepaid-for abortions merely means of birth control instead of using the pill or other conventional methods.

Bryant is lukewarm toward the the victims' rights proposal, Proposal B. He said he has no problem with voters approving the amendment to the Constitution, but he said he doesn't feel strongly about the need for the constitutional change.

He is in favor of Proposal C, the environmental cleanup measure, but like his opponent, he believes the $660 million sought is far too little to adequately do the job. Furthermore, he believes

ered in the general fund and should still be part of the

Likewise, Bryant said Proposal D is another attempt by Blanchard to pay for something that was once a regular part of the state's general budget. He is afraid the awarding of funds under this proposal for natural resources and recreational facilities would be used as political plums in return for favors.

Bryant disagrees with his opponent's belief that his past activity to impeach Blanchard has crippled his working relationship with House Democrats. He said he has no difficulty or animosity leaders.

Besides, he said, "Blanchard deserved the things I said about him in his early days. He deserved to be challenged."

Bryant has proposed and successfully followed through on several important pieces of legislation throughout the years. One such innovative idea was the highly successful tax amnesty plan later adopted by Blanchard in order to recover delinquent

Bryant attended high school in Grosse Pointe and earned a degree from Princeton in 1960 and a law degree from the University of Michigan in 1963.

"It" is alcohol, the drug most abused by teenagers everywhere.

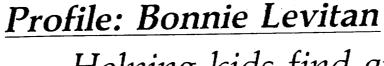

School surveys in Grosse Pointe have shown that 90 percent of area teens have experimented with alcohol. And the existence of such groups as Mothers Against Drunk Driving, Students Against Drunk Driving, the Substance Abuse Community Council of Grosse Pointe, Safe Rides and similar organizations indicates that many teens probably go beyond the experimental

This week, the Grosse Pointe News kicks off a ninemonth community campaign focusing on teenage alcohol use. The News plans a monthly page devoted to what many experts feel is a growing problem, not only in Grosse Pointe, but across the United States.

The News will emphasize the community's efforts in battling alcohol abuse by teens, write news stories on how authorities and parents handle teenage drinking and provide a source of information on where to go for help. We want readers to be aware of all aspects of the problem, and at the same time, to read about the positive things going on in the community in terms of treat ment and prevention. This week, we present an overview of the problem and provide a look at what an individual and an organization are doing to find a solution. Peggy O'Conno. Andrzejczyk

Academy to celebrate founder's canonization

The Grosse Pointe Academy and The Academy of the Sacred Heart, Bloomfield Hills, joined by the Religious of the Sacred Heart in the greater Detroit area, will celebrate the canonization of Rose Philippine Duchesne Tuesday, Nov. 1.

The first religious of the Sacred Heart to come to the United States from France, Philippine Duchesne was canonized this summer in Rome, by Pope John Paul II. In 1818, she arrived in St. Louis, Mo., and shortly therafter opened the first free school west of the Mississippi.

Sacred Heart Education began in Detroit in 1851. The request of Father Gabriel Richard to Mother Duchnesne, followed by the invitation of Monique and Antoine Beaubien, resulted in the arrival of four religious to begin a school on Jefferson Ave-

At a time when the education of girls was viewed as radical and before there were private schools, Mother Duchesne founded her schools. In 1883, the original Detroit Academy on Jefferson, purchased property on Lake St. Clair for a boarding school in Grosse Pointe Farms. Today that school is known as The Grosse Pointe Academy.

The community celebration includes a liturgy at Sts. Peter and Paul Church in downtown Detroit, only a few steps away from the site of the original Sacred Heart School. Bishop Dale Melczek will preside at the liturgy. A reception will follow at the University of Detroit Law School Atrium.

Friends of the academies, and alumni are invited to join the religious of the Sacred Heart as they commemorate this significant event, and acknowledge Philippine Duchesne's contribution to the society, to women and to education.

For further information, call Sister Seymour at the academy, 886-1221.

Tips on a safe Halloween

The Grosse Pointe Farms Public Safety Department offers the following tips to make sure trick-or-treaters get home safe after the night of haunting.

· Parents should escort small children to homes in the neighborhood, visiting only those people they know.

· Older children should use the buddy system and not go

• Children should wear reflective clothing or refective tape on their costumes to make them easier to see at night by mo-

• Costumes should be fire retardant and unrestrictive.

• Children should always look both ways before crossing the street, and never run from behind or between parked cars.

• Children should avoid dark streets and all alleys and stay away from any strangers and cars, vans and trucks they do not

• Use make-up or facial paint instead of a mask so a child's vision is not blocked.

· Advise youngsters to approach all neighborhood pets with caution while wearing a costume, as it may frighten an animal. • Advise children not to eat candy or food before getting

• And, finally, parents should check all candy, food and fruit carefully for any tampering, dangerous objects or any discoloration before eating. • As in all years past, this public safety department will check all candy and food for any tampering. Just bring it in to the desk officer and a check will be made.

Let's have a safe, happy Halloween this year.

Ada Catherine King Heatley

Funeral services for Ada Catherine King Heatley, 90, were Club of Detroit, at its original Saturday, Oct. 22, 1988, at the Chas. Verheyden Funeral Home. Mrs. Heatley, a former Grosse Pointer, died Oct. 19, at Bon Secours Hospital.

She was born in Leeds, Yorkshire, England.

She came to Grosse Pointe in 1910 and attended St. Clair School, which is now headquarters for the Grosse Pointe schools, and the old Kerby School, which was behind the Farms city hall. She graduated from Cass Technical High School in Detroit because Grosse Pointe didn't have an accredited public high school at the time.

She worked at the Country location behind Grosse Pointe Memorial Church, as a bookkeeper and switchboard operator. She later worked at the Detroit Athletic Club and at the Cable Piano Co.

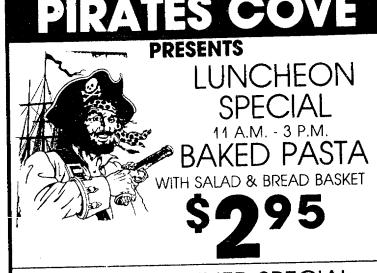

Her lifelong hobbies included dancing, the cinema, and read-

Albert John Cutting

Services for Albera John Cutting, 78, of Grosse Pointe Park, will be today, Thursday, Oct. 27, at 9:30 a.m. at the Chas. Verheyden Funeral Home and at 10 a.m. at St. Paul Catholic Church. Mr. Cutting died Sunday, Oct. 23, 1988, at Bon Secours Hospital, of complications following abdominal surgery.

He was born in Detroit. He graduated from Detroit Northern High School and the University of Michigan, with a bachelor of arts degree in 1932. He was a member of Theta Delta Chi fraternity. His career was advertising, and he worked for Detroit ad agencies Brooke, Smith, French and Dorrance, Kenyon & Eckert and Ross Roy, Inc.

In the late 1940s and early 1950s, nearly everyone in Michigan listened to the baseball broadcasts of batting-champion Harry Heilmann, the Voice of the Tigers, and the crowing of his mascot-partner, Brewster, the Goebel Rooster, according to Cutting's friend, Joseph P. Wright. "Only a few know that Jack Cutting was one of the principal figures behind the popular act," Wright said. "He organized tours throughout the state for Heilmann and the puppet rooster with their Fan in the Street broadcasts."

According to Wright, Cutting and his pals at B.S.F.& D. came up with the idea for the Brewster mascot, the first of a long line of beer animal-mascots, "a group now 'dogged' by Bud's Spuds MacKenzie and Alex, who barks for Stroh's," he said.

Mr. Cutting was a member of the St. Clair Country Club, Windsor's Essex Golf Club, and the Detroit Boat Club. Dr. Walter C. Crowson, DBC president, said, "Jack has had an outstanding career with DBC. He held nearly every leadership position, served on a host of committees, and was president in 1957. He'll be greatly missed — particularly next year, our club's 150th anniversary year."

He was also a member of the Grosse Pointe Senior Men's be made to St. John Hospital or Club, the Jesuit Seminary Asso-

Peter E. Westberg

Former Grosse Pointe Park resident Peter E. Westberg, 78, died Sept. 25, 1988, at Light House Point, Fla.

Mr. Westberg was born in Stillwater, Minn.

He began his business career in St. Paul, Minn, in 1927, with White Castle Systems, a Columbus, Ohio-based restaurant chain. He worked through the management ranks and was transferred to the Detroit area in 1942. In September 1955, he became president of Top Hat Inc., a 12-unit Detroit-based restaurant chain. He remained president until it was sold to Elias

He served as president of the Michigan Restaurant Association and was awarded the Distinguished Service Award in 1964. He also served on the board of kans, the Caribbean, and sold the National Restaurant Association from 1961 until 1975, when he was appointed an honorary director.

He was also a past master of the Corinthian Lodge 241 and was a member of the Detroit Rotary Club, Detroit Yacht Club and Grosse Pointe Yacht Club.

Survivors are his wife, Oval I.; two sons, Peter E. Jr. and Gary P.; and five grandchildren.

The body was cremated and buried at sea.

Deborah Jane Peeler

Services for former Grosse Pointe Woods resident Deborah Jane Peeler, 40, were held Wednesday, Oct. 26, 1988, at Trinity Presbyterian Church, in Venice, Fla. Miss Peeler died Oct. 22 at her Venice home.

She was born in Detroit.

She was formerly a secretary for the Detroit Osteopathic Hospital and formerly a travel counselor at the Grosse Pointe office

Survivors include her parents, Wilson and Lois Peeler, of Venice; a sister, Judith A. Brown; and a nephew.

Meade breaks ground on state's first automobile mall The Meade Group, of which he chase a new or used car or just Meade said. But this is the first will go over well in this area.

By Ronald J. Bernas Staff Writer

"Convenience is the game today - no matter what business you're in."

So says auto dealer Kenneth Meade. And to put his money where his mouth is, on Oct. 19 he broke ground at the state's first automobile mall, a 16-acre site in Utica across from Lakeside Mall.

The mall will start out with two dealerships. The first is a Toyota dealership set to open in April, with a Jeep/Eagle dealership due to open in June. He said there is room and plans for three or four more dealerships, making it more convenient for consumers to shop around.

is president and chairman of the need four tires," he added. board, will own the project and all buildings on it.

The present plan for the automobile mall calls for more than just a group of dealers: Meade wants it to be a total car center.

"We are going to have a tire store there, a rental car company, a car wash, a quick lube place, and a retail parts store for all makes," Meade said.

"It will be a total car needs center, whether you want to pur-

For added convenience, the center will offer shuttle service to the local malls so customers can do something while waiting for repairs to be done.

"People want to get in and out for repairs or be able to do something with their time," he said.

Automobile parks and malls are being used with great success in other states throughout the country, including California, New York and New Jersey, in Michigan, and one of the few throughout the country to be owned by one group.

The Troy Motor Mall, although called a mall, is not a planned development, Meade said. It is instead a section of the city the government said could be used for development of car dealerships.

"I've traveled a lot and I've seen this executed in other places in the country," Meade said, adding that he is sure it

Many malls in other states are put up in growing areas which do not have the population base to warrant their own dealership, but the car maker wants to be represented, Meade said.

This is a new concept and we think it's going to work," he said. "And it goes along with The Meade Group's thinking that investing in Michigan and in the Detroit area is a positive thing for everyone. Good things are happening here."

October 27, 1988 Grosse Pointe News Kate Walsh: Art student, typesetter

By Pat Paholsky

Editor At this point in her life, Kate Walsh does two things: She goes to school and she goes to work. And when she's not doing either of those, she's doing homework.

"I feel like this is all I do," she said. "I don't have any hobbies; mostly I have homework."

A third-year student at the Center for Creative Studies, Walsh carries a full load - 15 credits - and she works as a typesetter in the Grosse Pointe News Production Department about 24 hours a week. She was also working as a waitress at the Blue Pointe for the past three years, but she recently quit.

Studying graphic design, Walsh feels that her work experience at the newspaper will be a plus in the future. "I feel I should be doing something somewhat related," she said.

A 1982 graduate of Grosse Pointe South High, Walsh said she has put in "a doctor's amount of hours in school" to date. "I have been going part time and paying for it as I go."

She studied advertising design at Wayne State University for three years and discovered the Review insurance offers

The Michigan Consumers Council is reminding parents to carefully review any school insurance policy offers their child may bring home this fall. In many cases, the offers are not what they appear to be.

"Most parents don't read the fine print carefully enough, or there isn't any fine print to read," said Michigan Consumers Council Director Kent S. Wilcox. "These school-related policies are often supplements to the parents' current medical insurance plan. They usually pay only what isn't already covered, minus a deductible. In essence, parents who buy into one of these school policies may simply be throwing away their money.'

One of the most common areas of such insurance coverage is for school-sponsored athletic programs carry such insurance," Wilcox said. "Any requirement for a school athlete to carry such insurance in order to participate in a competetive sport is strictly a local school board decision." Parents who are confronted with these policies should ask the following questions: • Is the school aware that I already have health insurance that covers my entire family or this student?

• If I don't already have health insurance, is this policy adequate to meet the needs of my child?

 What will this policy cover that my present health insurance won't?

• Who made the decision to require such coverage? The school board? The principal? The athletic director? Is their decision open for discussion?

• If I have more than one student affected by the requirement quire that students who particiin my family, can I get a group

Study of new incorporations available

In 1985, the number of new to address the extent to which incorporations in Michigan was 26,000, the largest increase in the state's history, which included a 10 percent growth rate compared to a national growth rate of 5.3 percent. This increase in the number of new Michigan incorporations continued a 15-year strong growth rate that sparked substantial interest since little or nothing was known about these businesses other than their number and their legal status. In addition, the increased growth rate seemed to indicate a positive sign for Michigan's economic development and increased employment opportunities.

Last year, Wayne State University's Center for Urban Studies and School of Business Administration, conducted a survey and documented their findings in a publication, "A Study of Michigan's New Incorporations," published in August 1988.

Neva Nehan, program director of survey and evaluation services for the Center for Urban Studies and project manager, and Matthew Hyle, former WSU finance and business economics professor in the School of Business Administration, co-authored the published study.

"This research was designed the number of new incorporations could be used as an indicator of Michigan's economic growth," Nahan said.

Wayne State was selected by the Independent Business Research Organization of Michigan (IBROM), an independent agency of the state department of commerce, to conduct the survey, analyze the implications the new incorporations had for changing the structure of Michigan's economy, and address the reasons for incorporating.

The results published in the report were obtained through a combination of telephone and mail survey techniques, and are divided into four major sections: existence and legal form, demographics, motivational factors, and assessment needs.

According to Hyle, although the telephone survey technique yielded valuable insights, it had some limitations.

"To the extent that we could not locate telephone numbers for some of the sample, it could not be determined whether there was any systematic differences between those with and those gan really means." without accessible telephone numbers," Hyle said.

He added that the survey results were from new incorpora- ing Nahan, 577-2208 tions in 1985 and that a similar study should be performed every three to seven years to verify the survey results.

The report concluded that in 1985 the new incorporations were generally young businesses that tended to be small in size with close to 60 percent of them having four or fewer employees. About half reported corporate receipts less than $100,000.

Although more than half of the new incorporations were in the retail trade or service sectors, 12 percent were in the manufacturing sector and less tha 20 percent were professional corporations.

The report also found that firms incorporated for two basic reasons; to limit liability and to

"Our overall conclusion is that one should take great care in using the new incorporation rate for an indicator of a healthy economy," Nahan said. "What would be most useful is to be able to compare our results with that of other states to provide more insight into understanding what the growth rate in Michi-

When a baby dies

Perinatal loss teams form support systems

By Peggy O'Connor Andrzejczyk Assistant Editor/Feature Editor

Fourteen years ago, Donna Domanke Nuyhen gave birth to twins. Nuyhen was critically ill, as were the babies who were born two months prematurely.

They died before Nuyhen could emerge from surgical anesthetic in time to see her first-born children. When she did awaken, she was confused and grief-stricken, not even sure that she had delivered her babies.

Her only link to the lost babies was her own mother, who made the burial arrangements for the babies and had seen one of them before it was removed from the hospital. "She was my eyes. That was all I had," Nuyhen says.

That and the X-rays of her children, taken shortly before they were born. As a hospital employee, Nuyhen had access to her medical file and after she returned to work, she would often find herself searching the files and staring at the X-rays of her babies.

Her recovery from the double loss was difficult, she remembers. "I switched physicians because at my post-op visit, I was treated as if the babies had never existed. No one seemed to understand how I felt."

Except for a nurse, one Nuyhen met in the delivery room. "She was there for me then; she still is. She spent a lot of time with me, helping me deal with the pain of losing the babies. She even got yelled at by a supervisor who thought she was spending too much time with me.

"That experience changed my life. I became a nurse because that nurse had been so good to me," Nuyhen says.

Nearly a decade and a half later, Nuyhen still feels the pain of her loss as she talks about how the medical professional, nursing in particular, is learning to deal better with perinatal loss.

There are two local groups formed recently which focus on such losses. The Southeastern Michigan Perinatal Loss Association began in November 1987 and started a speaker's bureau this year. And Cindy Melitz and Lynn Houbeck formed Friends Supporting Parents, for parents who have lost an infant as a result of miscarriage, still birth or neonatal death.

The groups were formed as a response to the notion that parents who have suffered a perinatal loss were entitled to the same support systems available for those who lose an older family member. "Friends" is a network of parents who have suffered such an experience; SEMPLA is a combination of nurses, lay people, funeral home personnel and social workers whose aim it is to provide support systems.

Relying on those groups for information and expertise are a pair of nurses, Nancy Rancilio, R.N.C., of St. John Hospital, and Angela Collinson, R.N.C., of Bon Secours, who lead the perinatal loss teams at their hospitals.

They and Bon Secours prenatal class instructor Cathy Holland, R.N., have put together a resource packet for parents who lose their babies. Holland is a certified perinatal loss counselor who trained with the "Resolve Through Sharing" program.

"Our goal is to see that all women who suffer a loss like this get the same type of care," says Rancilio, who is a clinical nurse specializing in maternal health care at St. John's.

When a family suffers a perinatal loss, the staff at St. John and Bon Secours are instructed to use the perinatal loss team when possible. Staff will spend time with the parents, ask them to see or hold the infant when possible, help them name the baby and to make arrangements for a funeral or memorial service. The babies are dressed and photographed so that parents will have a memento of their child

Staff members offer assistance to family members on what to say or not to say, how to help the bereaved parents and how to deal with their own feelings. Books, pamphlets and information on professional grief counseling are provided.

"At St. John, where we have a larger number of babies born, we're trying to expand the team to obstetrics and out-patient service. We want to educate the staff to know what to do. And it isn't easy for everyone to do it.

But we tell them to just make sure to call someone who is comfortable dealing with the parents," Rancilio says.

"Some of the staff are open to the process and they are glad to help. Others are just not able to do it and they are relieved to see me coming," says Bon Secours' Collinson.

"We just try to make sure that there is somebody in each area when they are needed."

The perinatal loss counselors operate on the notion that all losses bear the same impact on those who suffer them. It is an idea that society has not grasped, Holland says.

"When we had a three-day conference on perinatal loss, we said we'd be pleased if one person came. Three came and one of them was over 70. She cried that day over a baby she'd lost 40 years ago," Holland says. "She'd never been able to grieve until that day."

Everyone feels loss in her or his own way, the nurses say.

"The attachment to the child can be the same for a loss early in a pregnancy as it as later. But society doesn't recognize that," Rancilio says.

Helping the parent realize that their feelings of loss are valid is important, Collinson says

"Part of what we do is to tell them that it's OK to feel bad, to grieve for their loss, even if it is a loss early in the pregnancy. Some of them are afraid to even feel," she says.

And that can lead to problems later on.

"I've seen women who miscarry and six months later when they are pregnant again and in my prenatal class, 99 percent of their thoughts are still with that first child. That mother still hasn't grieved over her loss... before moving on," Holland say

One couple whose child was stillborn refused perinatal loss counseling. "When they stopped by my class to announce that the baby died, you could just see that they had supressed their feelings. They really had a lot of heavy-duty work ahead of them," she adds.

But such counseling can't be forced, the group emphasizes. "You just have to put the educational information in their hands and hope it helps," Collinson

And as painful as grieving is, it does help, Nuyhen says.

"Each experience gets you over something new," she explains. "Each time you get through a phase — the child's birthdate, the due date, holidays — it helps you heal. I still feel it. I talk with a friend at work whose child is 14 so I can see how my 14-year-olds would act.

"Sure, it's painful. But it helps," Nuyhen says.

"When I lost my twins, my great-aunt came to me and told me about a baby she'd lost years before. She waited all those years to be able to have someone who could understand so she could talk about her pain."

There is a pattern to the healing process, according to Holland. The first year after the loss is the most difficult. At around 18 months, the parent begins to feel decent, she says.

"It's important to know that you are normal during this time. And these things — planning the memorial service, having a picture or other memory of your child, talking about it with people — are all tools to help you through," Holland says.

"It helps to have someone validify that what you are experiencing is normal. That's part of what we do."

The pain is also there for the members of the perinatal loss teams. It's difficult to share someone else's grief, the nurses say

"I do it because it makes a difference," Rancilio says. "It builds up, yeah," Collinson adds. "Sometimes, you just feel you can't go in and deal with that poor mother. It helps to talk with one another or to get someone else to do it.

"Somehow, though, the right people are always there when someone needs them."

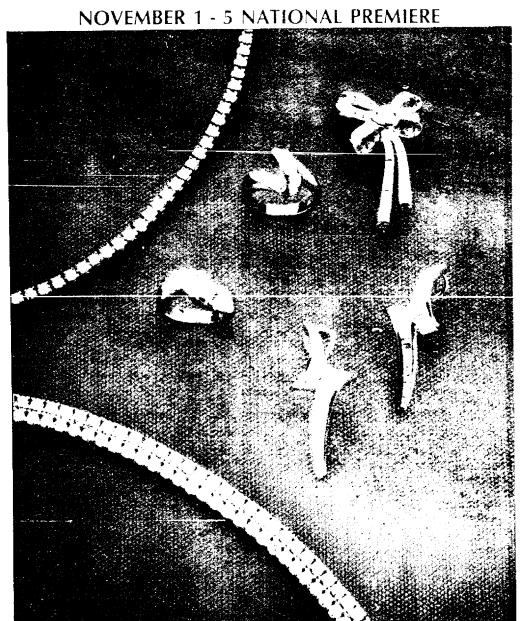

More and more people will be needed to "be there" because of the increase in substance abuse and consequently, the increase in high-risk babies and in the mortality rate of infants in the Detroit area.

"All of society is changing in its feelings on death and dying," Holland says. "The services are there for those who need them, but we also need caring people to carry them out."

St. John's team operates on a budget; the team at Bon Secours purchases much of the necessary items (baby clothes, stuffed toys,

The nurses' next goal is to provide more information on grief counseling and to get the word out on perinatal loss counseling. "More funeral homes and social workers need to get involved. People need to know where to go for help. They can start with us," Holland says.

Caulkins Ceramic Research Center at the pottery. 10125 East Jefferson Ave. Many members of the Caulkins family came from around the country for the dedication, including Caulkins' surviving children, Henry L. Caulkins and Mrs. Frederick S. Ford.

Area restaurants, including Tom's Oyster Bar, Sparky Herbert's, Cafe One-23, Cafe Le Chat, The Park Place Cafe, Pasta Fresca, Traffic Jam and Snug, Vintner's, General Wine Co., the London Chop House, The Lark, peter's Palate Pleaser, Sarah's Fine Foods to Go, The Money Tree and Dorothy Karpus, donated food for the evening.

Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. B. Courtney Rankin, Mr. and Mrs. John Mogk, Dr. and Mrs. Carl Sultzman, Amy McCombs and Fred Currier, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Dennis, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Karpus, Dr. Nancy Caputo, Mr. and Mrs. Pierre Heftler, Deborah Hecht, John R. Axe, Mary Zatina, Mr. and Mrs. Ploughman, Barbara Feld, Mr. and Mrs. Art Robbie and Mrs. Ella Peters, who worked with Mary Stratton from 1938 and continued running the pottery after Stratton's death.

Fall Fling '88:

The Detroit Symphony League is gearing up for its Fall Fling '88, a jazz concert to benefit the Detroit Symphony Orchestra, on Friday, Nov. 4, at Taboo Nightclub, 1940 Woodbridge in Detroit.

Social hour begins at 6 p.m., followed by the concert featuring jazz flutist Alexander Zonjic, at 7 p.m. The evening will draw to a close with dancing to "Big Chill" music at 9 p.m.

Tickets are $20 per person at the door. For more information, call 851-0963.

Friends of Music:

Tickets will be available at the door for this Sunday's special performance of the Essex Piano Trio at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Kim Lie, 15324 Windmill Pointe Drive in Grosse Pointe Park.

The event, which runs from 3: 30 to 5:30 p.m. Oct. 30 and includes refreshments, is sponsored by the Friends of Music of Wayne State University.

Mrs. Ken Meade, and Mr. and Mrs. William Vititoe.

For women of the '80s:

'Women of the '80s," a unique evening featuring a dinner-fashion show, will be presented by St. John Hospital, Hudson's and the Assumption Cultural Center at 6 p.m. Thursday, Nov. 10, at the Center, 2180 Marter Road, in St. Clair Shores. Cost is $15.

The evening features a dinner, informal fashion show and a presentation by Marie Fehribach, who will look at stresses in women's lives today; motherhood, career, divorce, widowhood and menopause.

For more information, call 779-6111

A silver night:

More than 150 opera buffs attended the black-tie dinner reception celebrating the opening night of the Michigan Opera Theatre's production of "The Ballad of Baby Doe" Oct. 7.

Putting together next Friday's benefit for the Foundation for Exceptional Children are, from left, Joyce Frohriep, Sal Vitale, Madelyn Kimball and Lorraine Hamacher.

The event, held in the Fisher Building's Recess Club, had a silver theme in keeping with the opera, which is set in the silver rush days of the 1800s.

Here come the 'Tigerlilies': The Tigerlilies, Princeton Unviersity's oldest all-female, a cappella singing group, will be performing at University Liggett School and the Grosse Pointe Academy in November.

Bridget McKeever, a Princeton junior and a resident of Grosse Pointe Park, is a member of the Tigerlilies.

Formed in 1971 with the first class of women at the university, the 'Lils have had a busy history. They've recorded six albums highlighting their extensive repertoire of songs from the '30s to the '80s. This year, they've toured the east and captured first place at the Collegiate Cabaret, a competition for a cappella groups across the East Coast.

For information on the Tigerlilies' Grosse Pointe performances, call 885-7829.

A benefit for kids:

Soroptimist International of Grosse Pointe will present a benefit to aid in the support of the Foundation for Exceptional Children, which educates handicapped children from Grosse Pointe and the Wayne and Macomb county areas.

"Holiday Magic - A Fashion Show" is set for Friday, Nov. 4, at 6:30 p.m. at the Assumption Cultural Center, 21800 Marter Road. Tickets are $20 and include cocktails, dinner and a showing of a variety of fashions. Proceeds go to the Foundation for Exceptional Children.

For tickets, call Lorraine Hamacher at 881-8660 or 884-6006; or Lee Meyer at 881-9007.

Traditional treatment for blocked arteries involves a surgical bypass of the blockage with artificial grafts. But laser vascular surgery is performed with an advanced medical laser that actually melts plaque deposits that block the arteries to the legiand in the legi With the artery cleared, circulation is restored. And pain is relieved.

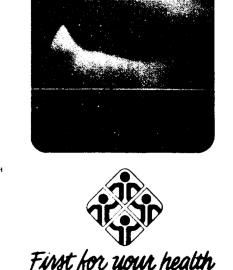

The advantages of laser vascular surgery are significant. The procedure requires only a tiny incision. The surgery itself takes far less time than traditional vascular surgery. The patient's hospital stay is reduced to as little as one to two days. And recovery time is far shorter and less painful

Dr. Josiah Blackmore, president of Capital University in Columbus, Ohio, will be the guest preacher for Reformation Sunday worship services at both St. James and St. Paul Lutheran churches on Sunday, Oct. 30. Blackmore will also meet with area high school students that afternoon at a 12:30 p.m. luncheon at St. Paul.

The public is invited to attend services at either church that day. Services at St. Paul, located at Chalfonte and Lothrop, are at 9 and 11:15 a.m.; St. James, on McMillan near Kercheval, are at 9:30 and 11 a.m.

High school students are also invited to the luncheon. Reservations may be made by calling St. Paul at 881-6670.

"It is especially appropriate that Dr. Blackmore preach on Reformation Sunday, since Martin Luther was himself a university professor," said St. James pastor Robert Rimbo. "The link between the Lutheran Reformation and the university is a strong one.'

Capital University, affiliated with the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America, has been recognized by the New York Times as one of the "best buys" in American higher education. It is committed to institutional distinctiveness, educational excellence and opportunities for rich and wholesome student life in the context of Christian higher education.

"We're excited about this 'preaching shuttle' and the opportunity it provides for area residents to hear Dr. Blackmore," said St. Paul pastor Philip Wahl, a member of the Capital University board.

For more information on the event, call St. James Lutheran Church at 884-0511 or St. Paul Lutheran Church at 881-6670.

An evening for women

On Thursday, Nov. 10 at 6 p.m. St. John Hospital will present an evening for women, focusing on how women can face motherhood, career, divorce, widowhood and menopause as not only adjustments, but as times of growth.

Marie Fehribach, M.A., C.E.A.P., a counselor from St. Clair Ambulatory Care Corp., a health care partner of St. John Hospital, will lead the audience through an informative look at stress in women's lives. She will suggest how to cope with stress, make positive changes and prioritize one's life.

The evening at the Assumption Cultural Center, 21800 Marter Road in St. Clair Shores, also includes a dinner and informal modeling of the latest fashions from Hudson's.

new one first and then sell?" Actually, both steps could be taking place simultaneously, but you'll need more information first and a helping hand to coordinate the steps so they'll fall into place painlessly. Your first step should be a visit to an experienced residential agency like ours. We will prepare a marketing plan for your present home. This will give you a firm basis for planning your new purchase. You'll have an idea of the cash you will have available to use for the downpayment on the next house. Also, you'll have a time-frame for the sale of your present home from listing to passing. This will help in planning the time you'll need to wrap up the purchase of the new home.

In selling one home to buy another, you are not alone. Over 70% of all residential transactions are hinged on one sale taking place before another is consummated. Our agency will help make this transaction more profitable and less stressful.

Changes of season sometimes mirror those in our lives

By Marian Trainor

Special Writer spires positive thinking. Unlike spring when all of nature's bounty is bursting forth with promise of abundant new life, fall is a time when summer's beautiful offerings slowly wither and die.

Sadly we watch the glory and gentleness of summer rally for one last magnificent performance. A determined sun highlights the gold and russet of turning leaves. We long for it to last but we know that soon those leaves will drift to the ground withered and brown, leaving behind skeleton-like limbs silhouetted against a cold sky.

The sun will no longer hang like a golden earring in an azure sky but will become pale and wan. It is the time now to go indoors and take up the affairs of

As we close our doors against damp and dreary mornings and frosty, chilly nights, we become aware that as all nature slows down and rests, so should we. Spring and summer are made for activity. Fall and winter are times for taking stock and planning for the new beginnings that come with each new spring.

It is time now to turn to quieter, less strenuous activities; to read, to make contacts with friends by phone, write letters, to bake and cook, finish projects that were set aside to allow time to enjoy the outdoors. Or we could plan a trip and even if we never go, it's fun and informative learning about faraway places; or plot next year's garden, catch up on favorite television programs and count our

Soon we will be celebrating Thanksgiving. If we think about it, we all have many things to be thankful for: families, friends, good health. These are obvious gifts that life bestows, gifts that we treasure but accept without really giving much thought to how precious they are.

All of those memories we hold dear as we do those that are closer in time to the present, particularly if we still have that all-important person with us who has been the mainstay of our lives; the one who joined with us in commitment of sharing, years back; one who in spite of the toll that time takes, still remains in our view as youthful and attractive as when we first met.

We remember how we put our lives together again after our families had grown and left; how we settled back to enjoy uninterrupted companionship such as we had known as newlyweds; the little luxuries and trips we could afford now that obligations to family had ended.

We enjoy the visits of our children and what good friends we have become since it is no longer necessary to accommodate to each other's moods.

What are Christian Science Lectures all about?

They are not a religious service. There is no attempt to change anyone's religious views. Rather, it is a talk by an experienced Christian Scientist on a topic of concern to the general public. This lecture will address the questions people often ask: Are Christian Scientists opposed to doctors? Doesn't God work through doctors? How does Christian Science differ from "faith-cures"?

The tradition will continue

On Oct. 29 at Grosse Pointe North, North and South will renew their annual football rivalry when they clash at 1 p.m. Since 1969, this game has meant a great deal. It has traditionally been the last game of the season. Some years, the game spoiled a season; other times it has acted as a stepping stone to the state playoffs.

At the start of each season North and South vie to win their respective league titles. In 1987 each did that, but neither will repeat this year. That alone has a tendency to affect the fickle fan. Some believe South's 6-1 league record isn't good enough, while others have imagined running North's Frank Sumbera out of town because of his 4-4 record.

As usual, the fan who doesn't follow the teams is wrong. South lost 17 starters from last year's 9-2 state playoff team. They rebuilt a strong, highly competitive team this year and have won six ball games entering the Oct. 29 game at North. They finished only one game out of first, and their only league loss came to league champ Port Huron Northern.

South was 1-2 after three games, but tied together a string of five straight wins in the last half of the schedule.

Under the direction of Jon Rice, Bob Schroeder, Hank Lewandowski and Dan Wyers, South is 15-4 over two seasons, including its first ever playoff win a season ago.

The Norsemen finished in second place in the Macomb Area Conference's White Division at 3-1, but they too have had great success.

North was in every game except a 48-14 blow-out by Utica Eisenhower. The turning point for them was a 14-13 home loss to Romeo. Before that game, the Norsemen were 1-3 and suffering through their worst season since 1980. But enough was enough. With their fourth loss, the Norsemen decided to awaken a sleeping dog. They rolled to three straight wins and now face going 4-5, or 5-4.

Maybe you, the Grosse Pointe football fan, have come to expect more because of the teams' recent fine seasons. Since 1982, with the exception of 1984, Grosse Pointe has been represented in the state football playoffs by either North or

To show you the parity since then, North has gone to the playoffs twice (1985-86) and South extended its season in 1982, '83, and '87.

This year the Devils and Norsemen will get an early start on Christmas shopping because the only way they will see the state playoffs is if they buy a ticket. But that's OK. Throughout the season, they battled back when they were outside looking in. They put fans on the edge of their seats more than once, and just because they don't win the league or enter the playoffs, doesn't mean the bandwagon has to be vacated.

As usual, you're only as good as your last performance. On Oct. 29, win or lose, many fans will fondly remember who won and who lost. If South wins, then all the talk about a poor season fades. North fans will review the lousy season their team had. And with that the season will become distorted because of one game, and not the route the teams took to get to that annual clash.

ULS can't lose Martin, Hunt pace Knights to state title

Sports Editor

If there were a Michigan High School Tennis Players' Hall of Fame, then names of the University Liggett School girls' team would be placed on every wall.

For the ninth consecutive time, the Lady Knights sit atop the lofty throne of girls' tennis after capturing 25 points to win the state's Class C-D trophy.

Going into the matches, Detroit Country Day School (second) was going to be ULS' stiffest competitor, but the Knights simply were better prepared.

The title was also ULS' 11th since the state began recording championships in 1974. For Coach Bob Wood, it was his 20th title (including boys and girls) in 24 years.

Not only is the team's success unduplicated, so is the play of Dawn Martin.

Martin, a Prince All-American, became the first girl in the state to ever win four state championships at the No. 1 singles spot. Not only did she win the title, she also never lost a game as she posted four wins of South. South vs. North vs. Norsemen, or the Norsemen play the Blue Devils.

No matter which team you cheer for, it's the weekend many look forward to as the South Blue Devils' football team will invade Grosse Pointe North Memorial Field to play the Norsemen in the annual football battle.

For the players on the football field, the North/South game means a battle for pride and a possible win on the final game of the season. For fans, parents, alumni and students, it means beating North, or crushing South.

Some years both football teams have used the season finale to catapult themselves into the state playoffs. This year there is no playoff berth at stake, but it goes without saying are on the line.

On Oct. 29, South will be North. The Devils play the trying to retain the city bragging rights it earned in last year's 14-3 win, and North will try to steal them back. Before South's win in 1987, North won three straight games.

Dating back to 1969 when Russ Hepner (South) and Jim Krucki (North) were the first combatants to coach the North/ South game, the healthy rivalry shows parity. North leads the series 10-9, but with a win, South could even things up.

"The series is so close that it indicates the great competitiveness of both schools," said John Kastran, North principal. "It's generally a classic battle in which both teams give 100 percent and more.'

Many of the players and students have grown up together separated only by district boundaries. Fortunately though, the

"When we (the administration) talk about athletics and bring up the North/South games, we always talk about them in a family way," said Ed Shine, South principal. "Often times the kids are friends and it becomes the most important series of games we have.

As in the past, the game promises to be a spectacle that the faint-hearted couldn't withstand. Kastran is partial to green and gold, and Shine will wear blue and gold, but both administrators look forward to the challenge on the field.

"In 1984, I remember the game was tied 0-0 and before the field goal was made that gave North the 3-0 win, I remember saying that both teams should be commended for how well they played," said Kastran, " and also another."

With the high regard the schools have for each other, Kastran would like to see a game that ends much the same way they all have.

"It's great to see the game end and all the players shake hands or hug," he said. "It just shows that this is more than a football game. It goes deeper than that."

While friendships are put on the line for three hours, so are the rights to brag for another year.

"The kids get up for it and hope for the bragging rights," said Kastran. "That's all a big part of it. It's fun to see how enthusiastic the kids can get over this. It just isn't for the teams, it's for students, too.'

While the student bodies will parade through the Pointe streets beeping car horns and being true to their schools, the athletic directors will be realizing the significance of the final regular-season game.

"I think from an athletic director's standpoint it's just another game," said Tom Gauerke, North athletic director. "But the truth of the matter is that it isn't just another game. It's something very special."

Since it is the last game of the year, South athletic director Jo Lake feels it adds a little punch.

"I think playing a rival school adds some interest to the last game of the season," she said. "Rivalries always add to the fun of the game."

While many eyes will focus on the hoopla, quarterbacks Brian said. "Always has been, always Letscher (South) and Scott Bern- will be."

> Both quarterbacks will be facing a big challenge, and according to Letscher, the physical preparation is done.

> "We're ready," he said. "I think we just have to get up mentally because by now our physical portion of the season is complete. Getting up mentally shouldn't be tough though ... it's the North game."

> A capacity crowd is expected for the 1 p.m. kickoff. While many may think the season can be made with a win in the North/South game, Blue Devils' coach Jon Rice has a different philosophy.

"This is never a season maker," he said. "I've been around for everyone of them, and win or lose it's always been a great way to end the season, not make it.'

North coach Frank Sumbera

"It's a fantastic game to be a part of," he said. "The kids, the coaches, and the players all respect one another. This is the type of game you are glad to be a part of.

"There will be a lot of people, and a lot of intensity," Sumbera

South sports Blue Devils spoil East Detroit homecoming, 24-0

By Rob Fulton Sports Editor

Kyle Schomaker recorded a hat trick, and for the second consecutive week the South football team received points from its defense to steal East Detroit's Homecoming, 24-0 last Saturday.

South (6.2, 6.1 second in the Eastern Michigan League) only managed 159 total yards offensively, but the defense came ready to pick up any slack.

Schomaker picked off three passes to up his team-leading total to seven, but more importantly he ran one back 70 yards to give South a 14-0 lead at half.

"That was pretty," South coach Jon Rice said about Schomaker's play. "That helped a lot."

Defensive end Rapo Nazarko recovered a fumble which led to a South score, and a 40-yard punt return by Jim West set up another Devil score.

"Every game we want at least one score from our defense," said Rice. "In the last two games Anchor Bay and East Detroit realized they couldn't run on us, so they had to throw. We've been fortunate to get some scores off our defense.

West's return gave South good field position, and six plays later Steve Rice plunged in from 3yards to give South a 7-0 lead after Jason Weissert's first of three extra points. With the touchdown, Rice, who rushed for 40 yards, became South's career touchdown leader with 20.

In the third quarter, Nazarko recovered a Shamrock fumble inside the East Detroit 25. Rice carried the ball from the 8-yard line, but Lance Harding (who also had eight solo tackles) scored the touchdown after picking up Rice's fumble.

"We weren't executing our offense as well as we are capable of," Rice said. "I know it sounds old, but East Detroit (2-6) is a good football team. They played us very hard. If you sit down and go through their games, you'll see that each of their losses was by no more than a touchdown."

East Detroit managed to get 195 yards off South's defense, but the Devils posted their sec ond goose egg of the year. At one time the Shamrocks were banging on the door, but Schomaker's first interception negated that chance.

"Kyle definitely made some big plays for us," Rice said.

South took control of the ball to open the second half up 14-0 and sustained an 8-minute drive before Harding's touchdown.

"They were throwing the ball well and using short passes to perpetuate their drives in the first half," Rice said. "At the half we talked about holding the ball when we received it on the kickoff and keeping them off the South maintained possession the majority of the second half, and with the inspired defense (led by Rob Crane's 17 tackles) the Devils built an insurmountable 24-0 lead.

"We were getting a little frustrated because we weren't moving the ball, but when you win 24.0, you kind of forget about those things," Rice said. "It was a great win for us.' By finishing second in the E.M.L., the Devils didn't realize their goal of repeating as league champs. However, South, a goaloriented team, set higher standards and is now looking to reach other plateaus.

"After we started the season 12, we realized that it would be tough to win the league unless someone knocked off Port Huron Northern." Rice said. "When we were 12, our second goal became to win seven football games and now we have that opportunity."

South will play at Grosse Pointe North this Saturday, in what will prove to be another "edge of the seat" contest.

"This game has never changed our attitude about the team we've coached for 13 weeks," Rice said in reference to the North game. "It's intense on the field, but when the game is over the kids always accept what transpired on the field.'

South's potent running attack suffered a major setback when it lost Mike Montagne, so that may cause them to throw the ball more at North.

"We're going to work on passing the ball and attacking that defense," Rice said. "They are an E.M.L. and 19-1 overall.

'Crossing Delancey' is a witty, warm romantic comedy that feels good

By Marian Trainor Special Writer

'Crossing Delancey" is a gentle romantic comedy that lifts spirits and sends viewers away feeling better about themselves and the world in general.

It's upbeat, honest and filled with down-to-earth human emotions. You care about the characters because they are so real and you become so involved in their problems that you can't wait for them to see the light and make the right choices, since it is obvious.

Part of that involvement comes from a well-written script by screenwriter Susan Sandler who adapted it from her 1985 off-off-Broadway play, but most of it comes from a delightful performance by Amy Irving. She plays the confused Izzy Grossman who has moved uptown away from her lower Eastside roots, but still maintains strong ties with it.

thors who welcome the exposure. The fact that they have a limited following doesn't bother her - they are published authors and she is impressed.

While she enjoys the present, she can't let go of the past. She spends her time off visiting with her grandmother, attending Jewish rituals and visiting with old

On her own, it is likely Izzy would have struck a happy medium, but her grandmother (Reizl Bozyk) has other plans for her. She wants her to marry a Jewish boy and settle down to a traditional life as a wife, and nothing Izzy says can convince her otherwise.

Determined, grandma hires a matchmaker (Sylvia Riegert), She is proud of her status as a who runs a family store on the bookstore manager where she Eastside - across Delancey

It does not turn out well. Izzy, who is now yearning for a relationship with a smooth-talking poet, fails to appreciate Sam's good points.

"Crossing Delancey" is more than just story of a woman trying to make up her mind about where she belongs.

It abounds with both comic and touching scenes, many of them built around Izzy's conniving, well-meaning grandmother.

Contrasting with the warmth and affection Izzy has known in her grandmother's house are the arid and brittle scenes in the bookstore. The air is heavy as competing poets spar for attention at the readings and snipe at each other over their respective "Crossing Delancey" is being compared with "Moonstruck" because of the strength of the dialogue. It has the same appeal.

Besides being bright and witty and warming, "Crossing Delancey" is thoroughly unobjectionable – a film the whole family can enjoy.

Izzy Grossman (Amy Irving, center) gets annoyed with her grandmother. Bubbie (Reizl Bozyk. left) and Hannah the Matchmaker (Sylvia Miles) as they plot Izzy's love life in "Crossing Delan-'Punchline' explores line between comedy, drama really is impossible. And it al-

By Michael Chapp Special Writer

There is a particularly telling scene just after the midway point in "Punchline." A dejected Tom Hanks, trying to prove his point to Sally Field, does a pathetic reinactment of Gene Kelly's famous dance from "Singin' in the Rain."

The scene looks good, and there is apparently a tremendous amount of emotional energy between the two characters. The only problem is that viewers have no idea what's going on.

And that is exactly why the scene is so poignant. "Punchline" is a film that works in spite of its numerous attempts to muddy the waters. Emotions are in motion throughout, making it difficult to get a handle on the characters. And motivation is constantly shifting, producing much the same result.

But the film still works.

an inability to maintain any she'll have to make a choice kind of serious relationship. Indeed, the only relationship alboth long since fallen apart.

Field, on the other hand, is a New Jersey housewife looking for a diversion. There's more to life than the constant juggling act of carpools, big dinners for the family and mid-life crises, she figures. Things like comedy, for example.

It's comedy that brings the two of them together. In the world of stand-up nightclubs, comedians are pieces of meat. Some are better, some are worse. Most are just tasteless and unmemorable.

Hanks and Field are exceptions. He is regarded by the local gang as the one who will eventually make it big. He has the ability to bring comedy out of the most routine situations. She is regarded, at least by him, as the comedian with the most potential. She has the ability to go as far as she dares, if only she'd dedicate herself to the profession.

That is her conflict. She's Hanks is a medical school trapped between the spotlight, flunkie who's looking to make it which she loves, and dedication big in the world of comedy. He's to a husband and family who got a closet full of neurotic skele- love her. Through most of the tons though, and he suffers from proceedings, it appears that

Hanks is more psychologically complex. The difficulties he's luded to in the film - one with having with a father who pulled an ex-girlfriend, the other with strings to get him into medical his demanding father - have school, the battle he's fighting with an irate landlord; both are secondary to the feelings he begins to have for Field. To him, their comedic symbiosis translates to a possible marital capability. He's smitten.

In most films, that's the routine - resulting in most films being little more than routine. In this picture though, there was enough weight in the plot to keep viewers occupied without lighting a romantic spark between the two chief characters.

That complaint aside, there is still plenty to like about "Punchline." It touches on the heartbreak of reality, when the dream

lows Hanks, like the character he plays, to learn about the line tively difficult role. She handles her side of the screen well, playing off Hanks' cues, both funny and straight.

'The War of the Worlds' to air on WDET Halloween Eve

most famous play, "The War of the Worlds.

Originally broadcast on Halloween Eve in 1938 by Orson Welles' Mercury Theatre, the newly updated version of Howard Koch's famous science fiction radio thriller stars Jason Robards as Professor Pierson, the main witness of a Martian invasion which starts in Grovers Mill, N.J., and threatens to destroy the world.

In keeping with the spirit of the original "live" broadcast, "The War of the Worlds" will air for the first time this Halloween Eve, Sunday, Oct. 30, on WDET-FM 102 at 8 p.m.

The program is the first authorized new production of Koch's script since Orson Welles brought it to the airwaves and made radio history 50 years ago.

Otherworld Media has an- It is also the first radio drama nounced completion of the 50th ever to be recorded on location, anniversary production of radio's like a movie, using a state-of-theart portable digital recorder.

> Prior to recording the production, director David Ossman worked with Howard Koch to update the language of the original script. The names, places and events have remained the same, but factors such as the military references, slang and news coverage style have been modernized so that the new production, while remaining true to the original, will sound current rather than like a nostalgia

Judy Adams, WDET's program director, is excited about the broadcast and hopes that the 1988 version will have the same effect on listeners as it did 50 years ago. Adams also hopes "The War of the Worlds" broadcast will spark a new interest in

Play about sinking of Fitzgerald

"Ten November," a play with music about the sinking of the S.S. Edmund Fitzgerald on Lake Superior, made its Michigan Premiere at the Attic Theatre the fallibility of invention was Wednesday, Oct. 26, and runs made known to us.' through Nov. 20.

The play by Steven Dietz, score by Eric Peltoniemi, is directed by Lavinia Moyer, the Attic's artistic director. Neil Woodward is the musical director.

On Nov. 10, 1975, the S.S. Edmund Fitzgerald went down on Lake Superior with its entire crew. When playwright Dietz researched the play he was struck with a sense of awe and wonder at the great power of the lakes, especially Lake Superior.

'We get cocky with nature," says Dietz. "Technology has enabled us, we think, to reinvent it mythic invincibility and dealing

Night of the living classics at Orchestra Hall

The Friends of the Detroit Symphony Orchestra will celebrate Halloween with "Bewitched Classics II -- the Night of the Living Classics" at enchanted Orchestra Hall on Oct. 28. The 8 p.m. musical melange of music and mirth, a nightmarishly new concept in Halloween festivities, will feature the DSO musicians in a harrowing holiday extravaganza.

Works to be recreated on this electrifying evening include Mussorgsky's menacing "Night on Bald Mountain," Saint Saens' demonic "Dance Macabre," and Berlioz' beguiling "Witches Sabbath." Guest soloist for Bewitched Classics will be pianist Steven Rosenfeld, whose performance of Lizst's ominous "Totentanz" is guaranteed to make one's hair stand on end.

PRAYER TO THE

HOLY SPIRIT Holy Spirit, you who make me see everything and who shows me the way to reach my ideal. You who give me the Divine Gift to forgive and forget the wrong that is done to me and you who are in all instances of my life with me. I, in this short dialoque want to thank you for everything and confirm once more that I never want to be separated from you no matter how great the material desires may be. I want to be with you perpetual glory. Thank you for your love towards me and my loved ones. Pray this prayer three consecutive days without asking your wish, after third day you wish will be granted, no matter how difficult it may be. Then promise to publish this prayer as soon as you favor has been granted. Thank you for

The Missing LUN

Linking individuals to Needs in the Community is a non-profit organization whose purpose is to coordinate needs with resources. This is accomplished by placing goods no longer needed by individuals and businesses into the hands of Metropoitan Detroit charitable agencies. Operating since 1971, LINC is proud of the accomplishments it has made and strives to increase its resource base. If you have recyclable items, no longer of use to you, Operation LINC knows who can and will use them. Please call LINC at 882-6100 with your donation. KEEP IT MOVING!

The CYSTIC FIBROSIS FOUNDATION is in need of a portable, self-threading 16mm movie projector, a portable (preferably) Kodak carousel model slide projector, a portable screen and a 13" TV set that is new enough to be VCR compatible and four electric typewriters. Cystic Fibrosis is the #1 killer of children in this country and the foundation exists first and foremost to raise funds for research efforts which are working toward eliminating this

Haig Point Daufuskie Island, S.C.

Special Section

Volume 1, Number 1

Haig Point: Romantic island paradise under South Carolina sun

romantic island retreat has caught the attention of a select group of people. They have discovered how their dream of a semi-tropical escape has been turned into a magical reality.

Haig Point, located on the northernmost headland of Daufuskie Island a mere mile across the water from popular Hilton Head Island in South Carolina, is fast becoming one of the most talked about – and most exclusive – island communities on the Southeast Atlantic Coast. Here you'll find a residential life-style unlike that experienced anywhere else in the United States. Only 950 homes are planned for this exceptional community which enjoys both the island's rich plantation history and natural recreational terrain.

By virtue of its perimeter of water, Haig Point remains a special place. Evenings are accented by gatherings of friends at the Strachan Mansion or intimate, specially catered, dinners for 12 at the quaint 1872 landmark Haig Point Lighthouse. Days are devoted to enjoying the private luxury of a home away from the

At Haig Point, the carefully preserved natural terrain is counterpoised by equal attention to the development of amenities that include distinctive homes, impressive guest accommodations and recreational facilities that have to be experienced to be believed. Golf, tennis, swimming, horses and genteel socialization are all part of a Haig Point life-style that puts progress in perspective – keeping the privacy, pace and enjoyments of the past as special features.

You'll find it easy to relax at the Beach Club -- an oceanfront reserve set aside for unobtrusive beach cabanas, a swimming pool, a picnic area and a refreshment cart service area -- at Haig Point's beautiful Outer Banks of Calibogue Sound.

Deep sea fishing in the Gulf Stream affords the excitement of landing great fighters like swordfish, marlin and other big game fish. Closer to shore, you'll find shrimping and crabbing are favorite island past times.

The exceptional Rees Jonesdesigned 20-hole golf course at Haig Point has been ranked in the top one percent of all golf courses in the United States, Soon, the main club-house, the hallmark of the Haig Point Club, will be built to provide the full spectrum of traditional country club amenities to the growing this Point companie.

Haig Point community. Your weekend guests, who are fortunate enough to be able to stay in one of the four guest rooms at the Strachan Mansion or one of the two guest rooms at the Haig Point Lighthouse. will come away with a new sense of what Haig Point living is all about. Both buildings bring a sense of Low Country luxury and gentility to the island. The Strachan Mansion, which serves as a visitors' center and focal point of community life, offers a hospitable atmosphere for both formal and informal entertaining. Haig Point-style. The smaller, 1872 lighthouse, which is the oldest structure on the island, sits on the site of the original plantation house which was the hub of gracious living here in pre-Civil War days. Both buildings have been fully restored and feature antique and reproduction furniture that invites genteel relaxation.

Beyond the Strachan Mansion and the Lighthouse, on the island, a rolling terrain of well-drained torests. Iresh water and brackish lakes, meandering salt marshes and a narrow beach are home to abundant low country flora and fauna. The whitetailed deer and over 140 different species of birds accent an environment that is rich in contrast from the offshore beach to the lush forests of magnolia, live oak, palmetto, oak and sweet gum.

Here all nature seems to be in harmony with what is emerging as a five star residential and recreational community. The connection—over a half-mile of elevated boardwalks that vault over the protected marshes so critical to the island's ecology works to link nature trails and pathways to get residents where they are

At Haig Point, which has been under development since 1985, you'll discover a special second home environment, that for many Haig Pointers, is the one true home to come home to.

come home to.

Boats, primarily the two 100 passenger ferries that are part of a seven-hoat fleet that crosses from Hilton Head on an hourly schedule, offer the only access. The automobile is prohibited and horse-drawn carriages, electric carts and foot-power remain Haig Point's basic transporta tion. Disembarking at the 360-foot long dock at Haig Point, you'll find it easy to leave behind all the complications of everyday life to embrace a tranquil, warm-island life-style. City noises, pollution and crowds are worlds away. The foudest sound here, residents insist, is the pileated woodpecker's hee-haw cackle reverberating among the furrowed hardwoods.

Positioned a 30-minute boat ride away from all the activity, shopping and socialization of Hilton Head. Haig Point has its own special style. Residents see their island getaway as the place to be weekends, vacations, summers and any time the spirit moves them to take off for paradise. Within a few hours travel of most Midwestern and Southeastern cities, the Haig Point life-style is worlds away from these same points.

Indeed, Haig Point offers easy escape from the frenetic pace of mainland life. And yet, the shopping, restaurants and excitement of Savannah and Hilton Head are but a quick boat trip away.

From St. Simon's to Daufuskie

The mansion that sailed to Haig Point.

then you first set eyes on the Strachan Mansion, circa 1910, you may feel like you're entering a time capsule. Reminiscent of a more graceful past, this handsome, old home serves as the reception center, guest house and premier restaurant, lounge and gathering spot for Haig Pointers, and characterizes the quiet elegance and tasteful ambiance that is part of the Haig Point lifestyle.

While the Strachan Mansion looks like it has always been here, such is not the case. The house was built on St. Simons Island, Georgia in 1910 as a summer residence for the ship building Strachan family. Two years ago this gem of period architecture faced demolition unless someone was willing to ante up $1 and move it from property being cleared for development.

Enter the planners of Haig Point with the first and winning offer. Barged up the Inland Waterway from St. Simons, the 7,500 square foot Strachan Mansion today has been completely and painstakingly renovated and restored. Exposed beams running across the room ceilings, high wainscoting and a three sailing ship motif in tile over the main fire place suggest the nearby sea.

Today the mansion serves as an elegant Welcoming Center for new arrivals to Haig Point as well as the focal point for social gatherings. Residents and their guests enjoy the graceful atmosphere of the spacious 65-seat dining room and low country dishes and continental cuisine.

The Strochan Mansion welcomes Haig Pointers and guests with fine dining and a relaxing lounge

The relaxed attitude of the comtortable lounge is another mansion attraction. The view to sea, with the sun setting over the ferry landing, is another reason dining at the Strachan Mansion is fast becoming a Hair Point tradition.

At the end of another special day, four tastefully furnished guestrooms upstairs are available for island visitors. Each with its own bath, the decorator designed rooms reflect the best of Southern hospitality, exquisite furnishings and creature com-

Point's and Dauluskie's gain. Once under the shadow of the wrecker's ball, the Strachan Mansion is a trea sured piece of history that has been reclaimed for present and luture generations to create new traditions to add to those of its past.

International Paper the "mover and shaker" behind Haig Point

Back in October 1984, when International Paper Realty Corporation of South Carolina purchased the approximately 1,040 acres that make up Haig Point, they brought a history of experience and expertise in multiple land use and environmental concern to the project. The parent company, International Paper Company, was founded in 1898 and is responsible for over seven million acres of timberlands. Over the years, International Paper has earned an enviable reputation for the preservation of wildlife, water conservation and the protection of outdoor recreation areas.

With respect for the ecology of Daufuskie Island, International Paper Realty Corporation of South Carolina is drawing on the extensive land-use and forestry knowledge of the parent company in taking a careful and principled approach to planning the future of the Haig Point community.

INTERNATIONAL PAPER

Spanish, French, British, Confederate and U.S. flags have flown over Daufuskie Island

uenos dias." "bon jour" and "good day" have all been the greeting of the day at various points in history on Daufuskie Island.

Today Daufuskie Island proudly flies the United States Flag. However, in the course of its more than 400 years of European-influenced history, Spain, France, Great Britain and the Confederacy each bannered the island home.

Haig Point is a place where history, legend and folklore intertwine. All three have been touched by the ideas, language and customs of the Spaniards, French, Scottish and British. Tales of pirates such as Blackbeard, Captain Kidd and Stede Bonnet, native Indians and Gullah blacks are also woven into the island's rich legacy. Some of the island folklore is familiar through the Joel Chandler Harris' Uncle Remus stories.

The Yemassee Indians, part of the Guale Indian Nation, were native to the island, possibly descendents of the Paleo Indians whose Daufuskie culture dates back to about 2,000 B.C. The first settlers to greet these native Daufuskie Indians travelled from Spain. In all probability Pedro de Quexos, the Spaniard who first took note of Hilton Head in 1521, was the first European to set sight on Daufuskie Island. By 1526 actual Spanish settlers came to the area and established a short-lived community nearby at "Santa Elena".

Soon, the French Huguenots, headed by Jean Ribaut, made their presence known in the area with a colony that lasted only a few months in 1562 on nearby Parris Island.

Remembering the Low Country charms, the Spanish returned to Daufuskie and neighboring islands about 1566 to establish a colony that lasted 21 years – long enough for the native Indians to learn Spanish. In 1587, however, the Spanish, yielding to pressure from the British, were forced to leave for Florida.

The ensuing 100 years saw Spanish, French, Scottish and assorted pirates compete for control of Daufuskie and nearby Hilton Head. By 1670, the British, partly due to the publicity English Sea Captain William Hilton gave to the area, established their first colony in the Low Country and began what was to become over 100 years of dominance in the area. As European influence grew, the Indian role in Island life diminished. Ultimately, after a series of bloody ambushes and battles in 1715 and 1716 – some of which probably took place right at Haig Point – the Indians left their island heritage behind and moved to the mainland.

At the same time, the waterways of commerce presented a great temptation to international pirates, and the ship-rich Intracoastal Waterway became fair game for their raids.

Legend has it that during the lengthy period of British influence, a successful pirate fighter for the British crown. Captain David Mungin was rewarded for his efforts with a small token of appreciation — Daufuskie Island. His indigo plantation was reportedly located on the tidal creek that today bears his name on the Bloody Point end of the island.

The continuing interest Scotsmen had in the island was reinforced in 1733 when a Scot Indian trader George Haig is believed to have purchased 800 acres to which he shortly added another 500 acre holding, thus establishing a three-generation Haig family presence on the island. This same George Haig became the namesake for the ground which today is home to Haig Point.

In Revolutionary War times. Daufuskie was sometimes referred to as "Little Bermuda" because of its zealous loyalty to King George III. Two factors influenced this choice. Most of the island's prominent families had been given their land by the King some years before. In addition, a strong British military presence in nearby Georgia was a motivating factor. Hilton Head, on the other hand, although just a mile across the water, was a Patriot stronghold. The two islands battled their own, now longforgotten, war as each tried to assert its own influence. By the time of the Civil War, both islands were part of the Confederacy. And today, both proudly hoist the American and South Carolina flags alking the still warm sands of Daufuskie Island's beaches in twilight, it's easy to feel like you've stepped into another world. As one of the last previously undeveloped islands off the Southeast coast. Daufuskie is a constant delight for those who love the splendors of wild, natural beauty. Overlooked until now, Daufuskie remains a microcosm of what greeted the eyes of the early explorers and settlers when they first set foot on this corner of America.

Nature an important concern to Haig Point

Company Is Careful To Preserve The Natural Environment

And the developers of the carefully planned community of Haig Point intend to do their part to keep it that way. Before a surveyor sights a property, the area has already been checked with the intent to disturb as little as possible the surrounding environment. Before an access road is planned, a pipeline mapped, or a foundation marked, the resulting impact on animal habitat and plant life is carefully considered. And as one walks Haig Point, this kind of thoughtful development shows.

Bayberry, red cedar, marsh elder and myrtle oak grow on miniature islands in salt marshes rife with cordgrass, spartina, salt grass, black rush and flowering ox-eye. Moss-draped live oaks (some 200 to 250 years old), palmettos, black, white and laurel oaks, sweetgum, hickories, aromatic red cedars and magnolias are among the more well-known trees that shade the island. In fact, when you walk the Haig Point golf course's 3rd fairway, tlanked by tweive stately magnolias, you'll understand why it's called the "Magnolia Fairway".

An aviary of birds in all colors and sizes call Haig Point and Daufuskie home. From the long-legged great blue heron and white egret to the redwinged blackbird and red, blue and lime green painted bunting. Fox, raccoon, bobcat and alligator are native islanders. White tailed deer browse along the sparkling freshwater lakes, home to bream, shell-cracker and bass. Fishermen take note.

Because the people behind Haig Point recognize and appreciate the fragile beauty of Daufuskie Island, they are creating the community with a care and sensitivity that bodes well for the future of the original settlers the special flora and fauna of this unspoiled sub-tropic paradise. And, most importantly, for you and I and future generations to enjoy they have created a quiet respite from the modern world.

Haig Point Golf Course ranks among top 1% in nation pyglass Hill, Augusta National and Pinehurst move over. Here on Daufuskie Island is a Rees Jones designed marvel of a golf course that is already earning a formidable international reputation.

Haig Point is twenty holes of twisting fairways, fresh and salt water hazards and strategically placed sand traps and bunkers. All set among the spectacular semitropic scenery of moss-draped wild oak, magnolia, sycamore and palmetto and sparkling lagoons. Seven holes play out to the white-capped sea, while the 5th green offers a picture perfect view of Hilton Head's famous candystriped lighthouse across Calibogue Sound.

The crowning achievement of renowned golf course architect Rees Jones' impressive career, the Haig Point course has already been ranked among the top 1% in America by USA Today. And Golf Magazine calls it "one of the world's 10 hidden gems."

Of course reading about Haig Point is a far cry from playing it. Nos.

Rees Jones.

8 and 17 are really four holes, instead of two, offering both land and sea versions. The exhibitanting choice and the challenge are yours to make. What's more, at every hole the golfer must choose between two or more equally intriguing tee placements.

This is what Roy Brown, editor of The Golf Reporter, says about the beautiful but perilous 5th at Haig Point: "If a golf hole can be breathtaking, this 190-yard, par 3, is the one that qualifies. Hit the tee shot toward the Harbour Town Lighthouse which rises behind an ample green overlooking the hollows and sand bunkers. The trees, the water and the challenge make this hole a golf treasure."

And the glorious finale at No. 18. "This is another example of architect Rees Jones inventive imagination and great sense of golf gamesmanship. Here again, he offers a choice. Tee it up on the outer banks version and the drive must carry 200 yards over sandy rough to an elevated fairway. This route becomes a straight 496-yard, par 5, let-it-all-out-and-head-for-home-hole."

Throughout the past year a great many PGA tour professionals from both the Regular and Senior Tours came to challenge Haig Point. None succeeded. The course record of 68, set by Bill Sander in April of 1987 has never been seriously threatened.

While few of the touring proscould tame Haig Point, they all had high praise for the course.

Until you personally tour this course, and feel the effect of this special setting, you can't really appreciate the many facets of playing a round at Haig Point. Once you've stood among its majestic magnolias and silent sycamores, gazing out at the endless Atlantic, you'll begin to understand what this course is all

As Director of Golf, Mack Briggs, likes to say: "Golfers don't really care what they shoot here, just being able to say they've had the experience of playing Haig Point is enough."

How easy is it to play here? Well Haig Point is a private club. However, for a limited time only, members of other private golf clubs around the globe will be allowed to know first-hand the thrills and chills of what is perhaps the most remarkable new entry among the great golf courses of the world.

The Haig Point challenge

n April 15, 1987 nineteen of the PGA TOUR's elite put the Haig Point Golf course to the test. It took place during Heritage week, just a mile across the sound from the fabled Harbour Town Golf Links.

What happened that Tuesday was surprising to many; but not to Mack Briggs, the Director of Golf, or Haig Point's Touring Professionals Gene Sauers and Donnie Hammond. Remarkably enough, when play was completed and the day's scores tallied, just two of the nineteen Tour players had bested par.

Ten year pro Bill Sander took the honors, firing a four under par 68 (breaking Gene Sauers course record of 69) and 1986 Bob Hope Classic winner Hammond posted a two under par 70.

Words of praise for the new Rees Jones layout were plentiful. Comments included: "a great course, it looks like it's been here forever." "Haig Point could hold any tournament including the U.S. Open right now" = "there's no let up, every hole makes you think and hit the right

Following the round, the players were asked to pick Haig Point's most challenging holes. Although opinions were varied, the Touring Pros named the following holes as the most challenging.

Number 3 – The Magnolia

This 415 yard par 4 was designed around a spectacular stand of specimen magnolias. The routing of the hole was altered several times by architect Rees Jones to save the magnolias and use them as beautiful natural hazards. In the landing area, several sentinel magnolias narrow the fairway and turn the hole to the right. The fairway rises to a relatively small elevated green and is surrounded by grass pockets and more magnolias. No other hazards are needed on this gem.

Number 8 - The Outer Banks

Many great front nine scores have been lost in the wetlands on this awe-some one shot hole. The second of Harg Point's short holes, number eight requires a long carry over marsh to an angled green on a spit of land on the Outer Banks of Calibogue Sound. The target becomes all that more elusive when the fickle breezes kick up on this seaside hole. More than a few of the 19 Tour players would have gladly marked a 3 on their card and walked away from this 192 yard test.

Number 9 - The Marshland

The finishing hole on the outward nine is one of the most beautiful and enjoyable par fives in the low country. At just 528 yards from the tips, it's a shotmaker's delight requiring 3 well placed shots to reach the putting surface for birdie try. The ninth begins on the Outer Banks and plays inland over marsh to a landing area guarded by live oaks and palmettos. The marsh winds its way down the

Every hole is a fresh challenge like the 18th hole at Haig Point.

Number 10 - The Lagoon

The tee shot on this 466 yard monsterstrikes fear into the hearts of even the most during golfer. Many times, early in the round, members find themselves thinking about the watery grave that separates the tee and the tairway some 180 yards away. This intimidating four par requires a good measure of brute strength and pinpoint accuracy. Once the tee shot is negotiated, all that is required is a long iron or fairway wood uphill to a narrow green that is well guarded by several formidable sand bunkers.

Number 14 – The Peninsula

A classic par 5, in the unique style of the Carolina low country, the 563 yard 14th is destined to become known as one of the world's great three shot holes. Beginning among the magnificent hardwoods of the inland holes, the 14th at Haig Point winds its way out to a spectacular view of the seaside's Outer Banks. Unreachable in two, this gentle dogleg right demands two strong shots to set up a short iron approach to a level bulkheaded green that is surrounded on 3 sides by marsh. A strong wind off the sound makes a knockdown approach shot a must.

Number 18 - The Carry

At 497 yards from the back tees. the par 5 18th hole provides an excit ing finish as it challenges the scratch player to go for the green in two for a possible eagle. An errant shot, how ever, can turn a fantastic finish intosudden death. Starting on the Outer Banks, the tee shot must carry 200 yards over salt marsh and waste bunker to an elevated fairway. The longsecond shot must carry over another area of wetlands that cross the fair way about 80 yards from the green. It it's strong and true, it will find a long contoured green fronted by a large swale and surrounded by the deepest set of grass and sand bunkers on the course. A fitting climax to a course worthy of the finest golfers in the

Haig Point has from earliest times supported the good life for its generations of residents. Abundant wildlife made the island a sweet home for early Indians. Colonists, too, enjoyed Daufuskie Island's bounty. For plantation owners, the land produced cash crops that bought all the luxuries of that era. In later years the simple life of the original residents and the sporting life of the recreational visitor both flourished in an untained setting

For centuries the Island terrain has remained untouched by the industrial world. Shore birds and white tail deer roam in what has essentially been a private nature sanctuary where few men have entered the scene. Golf cottages offer exciting, new residential concept at Haig Point.

f you happen to be the kind of person who lives to play golf or you simply enjoy the easy ambiance and scenic beauty associated with living on a golf course, the idea of owning a golf cottage on the fabulous Haig Point golf course could prove very tempting. Strategically sited under tall hardwoods between the 10th, 17th and 18th fairways, the golf cottages are within easy walking distance of the Haig Point Club clubhouse. Homes on the 10th fairway will overlook the bream-filled waters of a quiet lake while others on the 17th and 18th fair ways offer vistas across sun-spar kling Calibogue Sound.

For those looking for a cozy weekend getaway, there's a choice of a 2bedroom model with approximately 1,200 square feet or a larger 2-bedroom, deluxe model providing 1,400 square feet. Tennis and Beach Clubs offer non-golfers options attention to the design and position-

Tennis and swimming share the recreational limelight with golf at the multifaceted Haig Point Club.

Everywhere, neighbors and friends meet to enjoy the exceptional recreational environment. Whether the sport of choice is golf, tennis, swimming or dining room socialization, you'll find the Haig Point Club has the facilities. Specialized memberships in the club reflect these varying interests.

For tennis players, composition courts stretch out in welcome. Beginners and bona fide aces both find the well-maintained courts a pleasure. What will ultimately be an 8-court tennis complex currently has two courts in play. In designing the tennis facility, the choice was made to have soft courts which are easier on the back and knees than are hard courts. Whether you're playing doubles or singles, you'll enjoy full days of ten-

When lunchtime rolls around, and you've worked up an appetite, the tennis center grill is close at hand with a well-chosen menu selection of courtside favorites. Early mornings at the grill, you can get morning Danish and coffee. Sandwiches are available late into the afternoon. Positioned to be convenient for golfers also, the grill has gained equal popularity as a golfer's lunch spot.

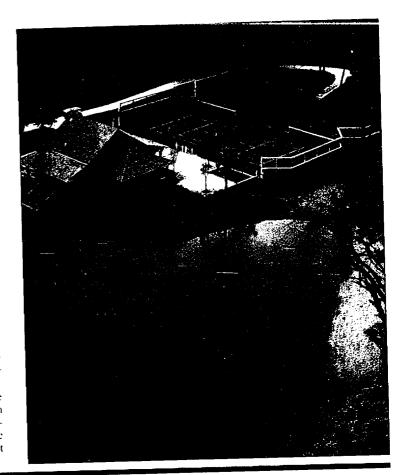

In addition to the grill, the tennis center also houses showers, lockers, and a pro shop.

Poolside and waterfront fun are both part of the unusual swimming opportunities at Haig Point. For now, all swimming activity focuses on the recently completed Outer Banks Beach Club. A large pool, with a sweeping view out over the Calibogue Sound is a welcome site if you prefer to enjoy the ocean from a pool. You'll find cabanas, refreshments and a picnic area that puts all the necessities within easy reach. Careful ing of all these amenities, however, leaves the beautiful sand beach environment unmarred by imposing

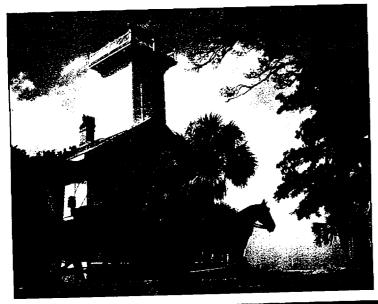

The beach club is positioned on a 25-yard wide sand ribbon forming a mile of island beach. Some 300 feet offshore in Calibogue Sound, this area is a nearly submerged relic of an ancient dune. Currently its coarse sand beaches act as a barrier beach, protecting a 250-foot wide tidal marsh. Strolling the beach, you'll come across oyster shells, sea whip coral, horseshoe crab shells and driftwood.

Here your children can gather shells, splash in the salty water and then gleefully move on to the clean blue pool. While you sunbathe and relax, far removed from the everyday world, serious swimmers count their laps under the warm sea island sun.

At the beach or on the courts, the atmosphere is relaxed and free from distraction. Haig Point Club members have quite obviously found the recreational environment that most other people only dream of.

Land transportation: Not traditional, but fun!

n approaching Haig Point on one of the lavish floating clubhouses, the first inkling one gets regarding the island's transportation system is a view of horses and white pasture fencing. Transportation on Haig Point is the responsibility of Ms. Eleanor Ellis, Equestrian Center Manager and Land Transportation Supervisor. As these are the only major means of transportation on Haig Point, Ms. Ellis' talents are called on to see that all transportation needs of residents and guests are met - either by electric cart or horse and buggy.

In addition to her responsibility for the fleet of electric motorized transportation vehicles, Ms. Ellis is charged with the operation of Haig Point's equestrian complex - which currently consists of a ten stall stable, six horses, a carriage house and 6 horse-drawn vehicles. The Equestrian Center will eventually include a riding arena and training facilities. but, even in its early stages of development, the Haig Point Equestrian Center offers horse enthusiasts the best of equine oriented amenities. Located between the Strachan Mansion and the Lighthouse, in the historic section of Haig Point, the Equestrian Center offers residents who board horses at the stable the best of riding facilities. Horse owners may enjoy riding on the beach, through the woodlands, along Haig Point's shell roadways, or on any of Daufuskie's miles of sandy roads. An additional point of interest at the Equestrian Center is the island's oldest tree - a 250-year-old live oak which adds to the elegant setting and offers shade to horses and riders.

Horses that are fortunate enough to become residents of Haig Point have the absolute best in equine accommodations. The lavish 10 stall barn and carriage house was built by Haig Point employees, and the oak tongue and groove lumber was milled from trees from the island's forest. Each horse is identified by smart, brass name plates on the stall fronts. The brick and tabby aisleway leads from the stable area to the carriage house. hot/cold water shower stall (for horses), office, lounge and tack

The "king" of the Haig Point stable is Big Ben, a Belgian/Clydesdale cross that was shipped to the island by barge. Just as his boat neared the Haig Point landing, Big Ben jumped over the side and into the water - he's been at home ever since. When not swimming or resting in one of the Center's lush paddocks, Big Ben takes visitors around in one of the island's touring carriages.

In addition to the horses owned by the Equestrian Center, the Haig Point stable is also home for horses owned by island residents. Brigadoon, a registered Morgan owned by one of Haig Point's first residents, is often seen being driven by her owner in a 4place touring carriage, complete with a self-contained stereo system.

For residents, guests and especially horses, the Haig Point Equestrian Center offers the finest in accommodations.

GULLAH. A language born of many influences, remote island life he local black tongue, called Gullah is a language passed down from generation to generation from former slaves brought to Daufuskie Island to work the famous Sea Island cotton fields. Carried to Charleston and Savannah from the Caribbean and Angola or "Gola" in West Africa, the name and special sing-song, musical language has survived with local island blacks to the

Unlike any language elsewhere in the world, the Gullah dialect is a lyrical, soft rolling combination of Old English and African words and sounds. It's a true English dialect and, when spoken rapidly and exclusively, it's almost impossible for the uninitiated off-islander to pick up the

Some typically common Gullah phrases are "greebunce gottum". meaning "when one is worried or troubled". And when the Gullah talk about "taking it easy" they say "saddlin' along". To speak about someone they wouldn't trust, the Gullah say "da gal him 'long de rood 'en a nubbah study 'bout nuttin' When you've fallen behind or late you're "outtuh 'e runnin' "

Joel Chandler Harris, one-time Atlanta newspaperman and author of the Uncle Remus stories including Br'er Rabbit, Br'er Fox and the Tar Baby Story, drew on his knowledge of folktales overheard while in the Carolina and Georgia low country

These wonderful old stories probably were first told in Africa and came to America on the slave ships. It is believed they were later adopted to reflect the slave experience, amusing the people and passing the time around the evening cook stove.

The spirits of the Gullah are often lifted by music derived from African rhythms.

Tknow de moon-rise. I know de star-rise lay dis body down I walk in de moonlight. I walk in de daylight lay dis body down'

Because of Daufuskie and its neighboring coastal islands' years of isolation from mainland influences, the Gullah language has survived virtually unpolluted by modern idiom or expressions. Sadly, Gullah is fading away with television, better education and a greater exposure to the outside world and opportunities. For now, however, the Gullah language is still commonly heard on Daufuskie as well as other coastal islands of the low country.

Haig Point's new residents find a special place

f you were to chat with Haig Point's new residents, you would find that this special community has a number of compelling attractions.

Quietness, limits on traffic, controlled growth, seclusion and the private residential community," head the list for Marvin and Karen Schroeder who are planning to begin construction on their home here this September.

For Marvin Schroeder, whose insurance business has been bringing him from his home in Columbus, Ohio, to Hilton Head for the past 10 years, Haig Point offers what he terms "an excellent opportunity to be at the forefront." He first started exploring real estate on Daufuskie about six years ago, and takes pride in being one of the first persons to purchase a lot at Haig Point.

A tennis player, Mr. Schroeder and his family have chosen a homesite facing the woods. They plan to build their home to "handicap" specifications so that they and their family can enjoy it for years to come - even if someone needs a wheelchair.

For the A.C. Arnolds, the idea of a Haig Point home represents something a little different from the hustle of life in hometown Atlanta, Ga. "We wanted a place to get away, a spot for the whole family to enjoy," Mrs. Arnold sums it up. They plan to build a two master bedroom home with their son Alan and his wife who had been vacationing at Hilton Head for

In their search for a second home, the Arnolds explored other options on Daufuskie, stayed at the Strachan Mansion, brought friends to see Haig Point, and ultimately decided that the 'tranquility and peacefulness'' of Haig Point were what they were seeking. They plan to build in early 1988.

'My husband has taken up golf," Mrs. Arnold says, adding that he hadn't had time for golf until now. "The Haig Point course is quite a challenge for a beginner.'

While Mr. Arnold may be a novice golfer, one new homeowner whose permanent home is in Augusta says that in his estimation, Haig Point's

Rees Jones' designed course is more challenging than the Augusta home of the Master's Another golfer, Atlantan Dr. Ben Eubanks has been enjoying the uncrowded Haig Point course ever since he and his family completed their home in October of 1987. He even got to play the course Thanksgiving Day.

The Eubanks built their five bedroom home jointly with Sharon Eubanks' parents, Don and Mildred Lamb, and Dr. Eubanks' mother, Mrs. Iris Eggert. Mr. Lamb, who is a builder in his hometown of Dublin, Ga., built the "three-family" Haig Point house and has a second house under construction nearby.

'This is really a house for the whole family," Mrs. Eubanks says. She adds that although everyone has thus far gone to Haig Point at the same time, she expects that in the future they will select separate weekends for Haig Point entertaining. The Eubanks expect that they and their two daughters will visit Haig Point about once a month. Commenting on Haig Point, Mrs. Eubanks said, "We're really impressed with the way the people at Haig Point have tried to keep everything natural. We love all the wildlife and the stocked lakes that attract the birds.'

The Eubanks had rented vacation property on the extremely isolated Cumberland Island for years. When they went to build their own second home, they felt that Haig Point offered the privacy they were seek-

Most Haig Point residents agree you have only to look out across the water and see Hilton Head's Harbour Town Lighthouse, to know you are not far away from shopping, a few favorite restaurants and the plane back to mainland cities. But when you look in the other direction, into the island, you see your personal paradise and know you're home.

As one new resident put it, "If Haig Point were more remote, we couldn't get here at the drop of a hat. If it were less remote, we wouldn't

You'll find part of the joy of preserving nature here lies in the fact that there are so many unexplored pockets waiting to surprise you. A five foot diameter magnolia, a mother alligator with her brood of young on a rare birds new plant life and shell-studded beaches all greet the perceptive nature watcher.

Ecologists point to Daufuskie's large trees, clearly larger than those found on Hilton Head, Pinckney Island or even at Moss Creek and Rose Hill Plantations on the mainland, and look to the island's past for explanations. Perhaps, tree growth was enhanced by the Daufuskie natives who annually freed trees from competition by burning off the understory. The fact that Haig Point is on high ground - averaging about 24 feet above sca level - has also contributed to the growth of trees unhampered by flooding.

Long-legged water birds are a common sight

Throughout the golf course, fairways are angled to preserve trees such as the corridor of Palmetto trees that line up at hole #2. Live oak, black oak, mockernut hickory trees and sweetgum are left to dominate the woodlands.

Even the man-made lakes at Haig Point were designed with preservation of the island habitat as a number one prerequisite. Consulting ecologists worked to contour the lake's banks with "littoral shelves" or shallow steps that provide the water depths at which wetland plants thrive. These "living" lakes, now but a few years old, attract the shore birds, mammals and insects that are part of the Daufuskie natural heri-

Haig Point commuters soon become old salts

Private commuter launches connect to Hilton Head and the mainland nce you go by boat from Hilton Head to Daufuskie Island and Haig Point, you'll be glad it's "the only way to go."

Abandoning your car and cares at the Haig Point Welcome Center near Palmetto Bay Marina on Hilton Head, you'll soon come to appreciate a very special boat trip that carries you the mile across Calibogue Sound home to Daufuskie Island.

The 30-minute crossing is a time of transition for the growing number of islanders who now call Haig Point home. They, like the generations of visitors who came to the island before them, appreciate the watery seclusion of the sometimes mysterious Daufuskie Island that lies ahead.

A fleet of seven luxury class watercraft maintains an hourly schedule of crossings to accommodate residents, visitors, employees and construction crews heading for Haig Point. Passenger service begins at 6 a.m. daily, and the boats operate until midnight. The cost of ferry transportation for Haig Point residents is covered by an annual fee which is part of their property owners assessments.

The Haig Point I and Haig Point II, two 100-passenger ferries, are the principal boats. These craft were custom-designed for Haig Point by naval architect Timothy Graul of Sturgeon Bay, Wis. The boats were constructed by the Breaux Brothers, internationally known as specialists who build this type of boat at their boatworks in Louisiana. Although they seldom approach top speed in the short Calibogue Sound crossing, both boats are capable of cruising, fully loaded, at 24 knots.

For your convenience, the hourly schedule of trips during the day has been worked out to accommodate an increasing need for transport to Haig Point from Hilton Head and Savannah. Currently most passengers travel from the Welcome Center on Hilton Head to Haig Point. Here there is a large, comfortable building which is both lounge to passengers awaiting departure and offices to the transportation company. There is also a covered drive-through shed for when you're unloading golf clubs, luggage and other personal belongings headed for Daufuskie.

Two additional points of departure are utilized in the well-planned transport scheme for Haig Point. One, located at Hudson's Landing on Hilton Head's north end, is used for service personnel. The third, situated in Savannah, is currently used for employees and the transportation of materials. Future plans call for this Savannah embarkation center to be used to bring property owners and club members to Haig Point.

In addition to the Haig Point I and Haig Point II, five other major watercraft work to keep people and materials moving back and forth from Haig Point to Hilton Head and the mainland. The other major boats in the fleet include two 41 passenger boats, the original "Haig Point," a 37-foot, 23 passenger T-Craft built in Florida and two Miami-built boats, the Haig Point Gannet and the Haig Point Petrel. These last two boats, each with a 20-passenger capacity, are prototypes of the water taxis that will serve Haig Point.

The intricate scheduling of boats, people and materials all works. Haig Point officials point out, because everyone involved in the transport work "cares a great deal."

When cotton was king on Daufuskie Island

hen cotton was king, and indigo and rice were also key plantation crops. Haig Point had its own thriving plantation economy.

The original plantation home has been gone for more than a century, and nature has long since reclaimed land that produced cash crops for the planters. However, the Haig Point of today preserves the ruins of what was once the scene of a flourishing, midnineteenth century plantation—a plantation that some historians believe to have been among the grandest in all the South Carolina Sea Islands.

The plantation house itself was situated where the current Haig Point Lighthouse stands. Surrounded by a great, pillared veranda that took advantage of the ocean breezes, and flanked by functional slave quarters (which date back to some time between 1790 and 1830), the stately house is thought to have been quite a showplace in its setting overlooking Calibogue Sound.

The great fortunes to be had from indigo and cotton supported a luxurious life-style for the island planters. Haig Point plantation was no exception. Although records and diaries of actual plantation life at Haig Point do not exist, all evidence points to a bustling plantation complete with a large work force, well-educated planter family and exquisitely-appointed plantation home. Horses and boats, then as now, carried people and their cash crops around the island and ultimately over the water to the waiting markets.

Believed to have been constructed in 1838 by plantation owner Herman Blodgett, the Haig Point plantation house has been described as one of the most stately of all the Carolina Sea Island plantation homes. It replaced an earlier home which had been built on the site around 1825. Marble from Italy, porcelain from China and champagne bottles from France, all found in its ruins, support the theory that the 1838 home was the scene of many a festive occasion.

By the time of the Civil War, the home had come to be owned by William (Squire) Pope of Hilton Head, who allowed his daughter Eliza and her husband, the Rev. Alsop Woodward, to live on and operate the property. She, like many other island plantation owners, left her island home during the Civil War. When she returned, not only was the Haig Point plantation house gone, but none of the six great plantation houses belonging to her father remained.

There is evidence that Eliza was able to make the plantation a going concern after the war, but the great plantation house was never rebuilt. Instead, the three acre site on which it sat was sold to the U.S. government which then erected the 1872 lighthouse atop the old tabby foundation of the original plantation house. Today the evidence of that grand era peaks out from under the more simple lighthouse which, until 1934 provided work and home space for a lighthouse keeper. The plantation house foundation, a large basement and footings for a grandiose veranda. were discovered in 1984 when work began to restore the lighthouse and strengthen its foundation.

In the years since Eliza revived the war-ruined plantation, the Haig Point site has had a number of owners. In 1980 the Daufuskie Land Trust purchased Haig Point and other Daufuskie properties from the Bostwick family of Aiken, S.C. In 1984 ownership changed again, when International Paper Realty purchased the Haig Point holdings, and plans began for Haig Point as we know it today.
