South's Bob Button: Teacher receives national honor

By Margie Reins Smith Staff Writer

The Tower, Grosse Pointe South's weekly newspaper, has had its share of scoops during its 58-year existence. Last week's news, however, concerned the Chief Scoop himself, Robert L. Button.

Button, adviser to The Tower and a teacher of journalism at South for the last 23 years, was named 1988 National High School Journalism Teacher of the Year by the Dow Jones Newspaper Fund.

Farms council puts bite on vicious dog ownership

By John Minnis Staff Writer

Owners of dogs that are found to be vicious face stringent and costly requirements if they are to keep the animals, under an emergency ordinance adopted by the Grosse Pointe Farms City Council Monday night.

The council adopted a strict vicious dog ordinance rather than a breed-specific ban - such as against pit bull terriers - because it wanted a law that would withstand a constitutional challenge, according to Councilman Greg Berendt, who is a member of the Ordinance Committee. He also said the committee wanted the ordinance to be able to restrict all vicious dogs, not just pit bulls that may be found to be dangerous.

He said that five years ago doberman pinschers were the threat, today it's pit bulls and tomorrow it could be other breeds.

The Farms' new ordinance, which went into effect immediately, mandates that owners of vicious dogs keep the animals in cell-block type enclosures when outside the home. If in the home, the dog must kept in a solidly closed area. Screened windows and doors are not permissible barriers, according to the ordi-

In the decision, Colombo said Judge Robert Colombo Jr. ruled that because the city had offered to buy the theater five times since 1985, and because the city had purchased other properties in the Jefferson Avenue business strip, and that theaters are not allowed in the city's zoning ordinance, the city had not acted racially or exclusionary in its decision to close the theater.

In a prepared statement, Eric Steiner, speaking for Esquire Theater, Inc., said they were "extremely disappointed, hurt and angry," with Colombo's decision, and that the decision did nothing to change his mind about the reason for the condemnation.

"Condemnation by eminent domain was originally designed to allow the government to take private property to build roads, schools or hospitals," the statement said. "The city of Grosse Pointe Park, Mayor (Palmer) Heenan and the city council have twisted the intent of this law to take our prayate property because they did not like the use or patrons.

Charter amendments approved

Two amendments to the Grosse Pointe Park city charter were approved by wide margins by voters in last week's general election.

One allows the city to pay the municipal judge up to $15,000 up from the $6,000 the charter currently set as a maximum passed 4,188 to 1,599.

The change was proposed by the city council to get the Park up to the salaries of the surrounding cities, and because the municipal judge's workload had the village charter which are increased, while the salary had

The other proposal brought the charter into conformity with state laws regarding the appointment of a substitute judge. That resolution passed by a margin of 4 to 1.

One proposal allows the village to enter into contracts for the purchase of materials or for construction with a cost of $10,000 or less without the prep. aration of specifications for sealed bids.

November 17, 1988 Grosse Pointe News Suzanne Acton: Michigan Opera Theatre's Girl Friday

Suzanne Acton talks with the fast pace of the show she is currently conducting at the Michigan Opera Theatre.

Gilbert and Sullivan's rollicking operetta, "The Pirates of Penzance," starring television star Gary Sandy and a host of other talent, opened Nov. 11 to good reviews due mainly to the resident for the past five years.

As chorus master for the past seven seasons, Acton, who is in her 30s, is known as MOT's Girl Friday. Her main duty is to coach the singers, from the principals to the chorus, and to audition new talent for the company.

14 youths questioned for fighting

After responding to reports of shots fired and two youth gangs fighting, Grosse Pointe Park police questioned the youths but found no guns last week.

Two shots were reported to have been fired by someone among the two groups of youths Nov. 8 at about 10:30 p.m. after they apparently got into an argument at Alter and Jefferson. The youths, who ranged in age from 15 to 22, were also reported to police to have been fighting.

Park public safety officers detained 14 youths between Wayburn and Maryland for identification. The youths were dispersed after questioning and without incident, according to a Park police bulletin. None of the youths was found in possession of a gun.

Woods day care suit dropped; a second lawsuit still to be heard

By John Minnis Staff Writer

One of the lawsuits against a Grosse Pointe Woods ordinance prohibiting day care businesses in residences has been dropped, but a second suit is still awaiting trial.

City attorney George Catlin informed the City Council Nov. 7 that the suit brought by Richard and Sheila Temkow against the city Sept. 1, 1987, was dropped by the plaintiff. He said the Temkows have moved out of the city.

The other suit was filed June 29 by Mary Roose, who was forced to discontinue operating a day care out of her Fleetwood home in April. Catlin said a hearing date has not been set for Roose's suit, which is to be before Judge Lucille Watts in Wayne County Circuit Court.

The Temkows, who lived on Shoreham, sued the city when they were forced to discontinue taking in day care children. Grosse Pointe Woods has an ordinance banning operating businesses through residences.

The Unicorn Hunters of Lake ing to its nominators, Peter argued that a day care operation In their suit, the Temkows is nothing more than babysitting and cannot be described as a business under the intent of the ordinance. The suit also sought to prove that the ordinance is selectively or arbitrarily enforced throughout the city and that the city's action against the Temkows was discriminatory.

On Dec. 15, 1988, Watts ruled that the Temkows day care operation was in fact a business and that there was no reason why it should be excluded from the ordinance banning businesses operated through private residences.

Watts was to hear the arguments concerning the city's alleged selective enforcement of the ordinance, but since the case was dropped, the argument will not be heard until the Roose case comes before her.

The Roose suit also charges that the city's ordinance against businesses operated in homes is being selectively enforced. Also, the suit charges that the ordinance is vague and unconstitutional, two new issues the judge will have to examine.

Roose is also seeking financial Committee. and emotional damages of at least $10,000 and court costs, interest and attorneys' fees.

Based on the judge's decision favorable to the city in the Temkow case, Catlin expects Watts will rule likewise in the Roose case. He said the city's insurance carrier is handling the case for the city.

In related business, the council adopted a resolution Nov. 7 in opposition to Senate Bill 687, a bill which would prevent communities from effectively excluding child day care operations from residences.

The Senate approved the bill Sept. 27, and it is now before the House Social Services and Youth

As currently written, the bill prohibits local legislative bodies from excluding family day care and group day care homes from operating in residential areas if the day cares have been licensed by the state.

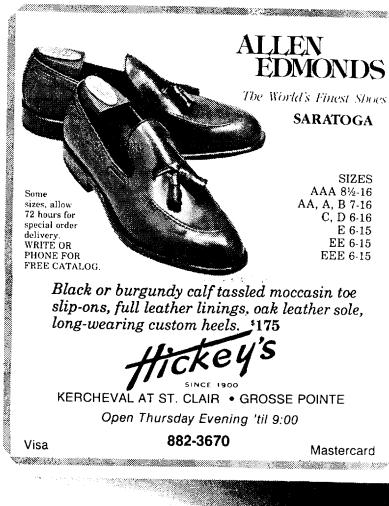

If the bill is approved, it would be possible for an operator of a group day care home to care for more than 24 children per 16. hour day, seven days a week, in a residential home, according to the resolution unanimously adopted by the council.

The resolution also referred to the traffic that would be created by a group day care home operating at the maximum legal capacity.

Will gridlock in Washington stall action?

Table the election over, interest shifts to what will happen next, now that the nation has clearly voted for a popular Republican president and a strongly Democratic Congress.

The results mean that we still will have a divided government in Washington. That raises the question as to whether we will have gridlock or whether we will have the cooperation that will be required to achieve legislative accomplishment in the nation's capital.

President-elect George Bush was warned over the past weekend that any further delay in tackling the twin problems of the federal deficit and the trade deficit could be disastrous. In fact, some economists are even talking about an imminent economic crash unless the president and Congress immediately get together to map out an acceptable plan of action.

The markets responded to the election with warnings of their own. The U.S. dollar went into another nosedive under the pounding from abroad, and especially from the Japanese who are worried about the value of their holdings in this country. Wall Street also responded negatively to the election, although the stock market's dip was written off as resulting from profittaking.

Fortunately, Bush aides responded to the economic warnings by reporting that the president-elect puts top priority in meeting with congressional and administration leaders to tackle the nation's economic problems. Now back in Washington after a brief Florida vacation, Bush may already have started those discussions by the time these words are in print.

Bush, like most presidents, is obviously going to rely heavily on his old friends and colleagues when he fills his cabinet and makes other appointments. His designation of James Baker as his secretary of state and the appointment of Robert Teeter, the Detroit pollster, as co-chairman of his transition team fall into that category. So does the rumored offer to Nicholas Brady to remain as secretary of the treas-

Beyond such moves, however, we don't know for sure whether Bush will pick similar pragmatists for other top posts, or whether he will choose ideologues like some of President Ronald Reagan's appointees, who it turned out, were not particularly well qualified as administrators.

As for his relations with Congress, in his first two appearances as the presidentelect, Bush did extend an olive branch to the Democrats who will be in control. The defeated Democrat, Gov. Michael Dukakis, in turn offered the vice president a helping hand by reminding his party that Bush would be the president of all the people and deserved Democratic as well as public

It will not be clear until the congressional session begins, however, whether the Democratic leaders in Congress will be as gracious as Dukakis and Lloyd Bentsen were in their congratulatory messages to the president-elect. Some Democratic leaders already have warned that they will make Bush pay for his low-blow attacks on Dukakis' record and his patriotism.

Yet when the disappointment of defeat has worn off, the Democrats are likely to come to the same realization that Bush has already expressed: Cooperation is needed for the good of the country and the problems are so vast that anything less will be a disservice to the American people. News reports from Washington early this week supported this version of Democratic reaction.

Furthermore, at his first post-election press conference, Bush told reporters that he intended to try to "heal" the political wounds caused by the campaign. He admitted he had not discussed his future legislative agenda in detail but said that he had a "game plan." He added that he hoped during the transition period to spell out his priorities in greater detail than he had done during the campaign.

Bush apparently recognized, too, that he did not have a "mandate" because he did not use that word when questioned about his future policies. Instead, he said that the victory margin was big enough to "give a certain confidence to the executive branch" and expressed the hope that would "carry over and influence Congress.'

So we shall see what kind of a president Bush will become, whether he will emphasize the "kinder, gentler nation" that he has said he wants or whether he will return to the low road he occasionally pursued on the campaign trail.

For the good of the country, he ought to take the high road, of course. If he does, he will be more likely to win the cooperation of the Democrats who can determine the success or failure of his legislative goals. More important, that cooperation could head off the threat of a crash or recession that some economists are warning could occur without timely action in Washington on the nation's economic problems.

Proof of a gerrymander

If the Pointes needed any more proof that they were gerrymandered by the Democratic Legislature in 1982, they could find it when they examined the Nov. 8 election returns for the 13th and 14th congressional districts.

Both Democratic congressmen, Reps. George W. Crockett in the 13th District and Dennis M. Hertel in the 14th District, won re-election by lop-sided margins even though the Pointes gave strong support to their respective Republican challengers, John W. Savage II and Kenneth C. Mc-Nealy.

Crockett, the left-leaning incumbent from Detroit, received 100,194 votes to 12,721 for Savage. But Crockett received only 754 votes in Grosse Pointe City and 1,991 in Grosse Pointe Park, or only 2,745 of his vote total in the two Pointe communities added to his district in 1982. Savage, also from Detroit, received 6,402 votes from the two Pointe communities and that was more than half his total for the entire district.

It is true that Crockett has made no secret of his belief that the Grosse Pointes really don't belong in his district. He admits he spends more time with and pays more attention to his constituents in Detroit and justifies that action on the grounds they constitute a majority and give him their votes.

But the same thing is true in the 14th District, which once was far more competitive for Republicans than it is now. Hertel of Harper Woods was re-elected with 114,745 votes to 64,907 for Kenneth Mc-Nealy of Madison Heights. But the Farms, the Woods and the Shores contributed only 7,032 votes to Hertel and gave 11,122 to McNealy.

It is true that even if the votes for Savage in the Park and the City were added to McNealy's totals, he would not have won election to Congress. But that additional 6,402 votes would have made the race more competitive and might have persuaded Republicans outside of the Pointes to seriously consider the GOP alternative to Hertel.

There is another important factor to be considered. The Republican Party, which offered the two GOP nominees in the 13th and 14th districts only advice and little if any money, obviously would contribute more financing if their party stood a better chance of victory.

Unfortunately for the Pointes, the Republicans gained only three seats in the state House of Representatives on Nov. 8, even though Rep. William Bryant Jr. of Grosse Pointe Farms won his 10th term. That state result means the state GOP will have to make much greater gains in 1990 to regain control of the House and play a more important role in the reapportionment of the congressional seats in 1991.

We repeat this message often in the hope that it will be heard and understood not only in the Pointes but elsewhere in GOP circles: In the next reapportionment, the Pointes should be reunited in one district, preferably the 14th, and thus obtain at least an outside chance of influencing the choice of their congressman.

As it is now, the Pointes are effectively disenfranchised from the selection of a congressman who is supposed to represent their interests. As a result of the 1982 gerrymandering, neither of the two incumbents needs to pay much attention to the minority interests of the Pointes.

Urges Woods to reconsider

To the Editor:

Chemical dependency is a major problem every community faces today. The Grosse Pointe School System has developed the Master Plan for Alcohol and Other Drug Related Programs which deals with substance abuse in the schools and the community.

The Children's Home of Detroit recently proposed a plan for providing aftercare services for students returning from inpatient treatment. Both of these plans would have worked well together and the families in this community would have benefitted from these services.

The City Council of Grosse Pointe Woods did not accept the proposal of the Children's Home and a valuable resource has been denied those families with chemidependent children.

The schools cannot provide essential aftercare services that increase a child's chances for recovery.

The Grosse Pointe Branch of the Association of American University Women continues to support the Children's Home in its efforts to gain approval for its proposed aftercare program. We recognize the right of the City Council of Grosse Pointe Woods to proceed cautiously and hope that the seriousness of the problem of chemical dependency will prompt the council to consider the proposal again in the future.

Pointes win some, lose some he national voter turnout, we're told, was only about 50 percent of the eligible voters. In the Pointes, the turnout ranged from 83.5 percent to 65.4 percent of the registered voters in the five communities.

Those figures are not directly comparable, of course, but they do remind us that once again voters in the Pointes showed their understanding of their right and responsibility to participate in the selection of their own leaders and to help approve or reject public issues by going to the polls in large numbers.

The highest turnout was recorded in the Shores where 83.5 percent of the registered voters went to the polls. Percentages of registered voters who cast ballots in the other Pointe communities were 76 in the Farms, 75.3 in the City, 71 in the Woods and 65.4 in the Park.

As usual, the Pointes went heavily Republican, giving George Bush a huge endorsement, 22,662 to 7,146 for Gov. Michael Dukakis, a division which was not surprising in view of the Pointe's reputation for supporting Republicans, Bush's victory in the presidential primary in 1980 and his strong showing in the GOP caucuses in 1988. But the only Republican they elected to a legislative body was Rep. William Bryant Jr. who won a 10th term in the state House by a more than 2.5 to 1 margin over his Democratic challenger, Katherine Barnhart.

Two proposals to increase the pay for the municipal judge and revise the pay system for substitute judges in Grosse Pointe Park easily passed. Four proposals modernizing the Grosse Pointe Shores charter were also approved.

So the majority can feel satisfied that they turned out in large numbers to support the election of a president and a state representative and contributed to the passage of four state proposals and two county measures. However, they found themselves in the minority on the re-election of Democratic U.S. Sen. Donald Riegle, Democratic Reps. George W. Crockett and Dennis Hertel, Democratic County Commissioner David Cavanagh and a batch of other Democratic Wayne County officials.

There's nothing like a day off work

Last week I got a day off work. It wasn't just any day, though, it was a Friday. I could hardly believe my good fortune and was determined to take full advantage of it because days off don't come too often.

I stayed up late Thursday night, not because I wanted to -I was dead tired - but simply because I could. It wasn't necessary to go to sleep after being bored to death by the news, so I stayed up, television remote in one hand, bowl of popcorn in the other hand and a whole evening of late-night television in front of

I found something I liked, (which is not an easy task so late at night) and settled in, wrapping an afghan around me. I was so warm and comfortable - and feeling a little decadent by allowing myself to stay up past 1 a.m. on a work night that the next thing I knew I was pulling my face out of the bowl of popcorn and watching the credits for the show.

I thought, since I didn't have to wake up tomorrow, I didn't have to be near my alarm clock so I stretched out on the couch. My neck was wrenched in a weird position, and the afghan didn't cover all of me, but I was feeling snug.

Thoughts of what I would do with a whole day off lulled me into a comfortable pre-sleep. I would sleep in, not too late, but just late enough so I could look at the clock and say to myself, "Ha, ha, I'd be rushing around by now, trying to get out the door," while I rolled over to catch a few more winks.

I would do the dishes before I got dressed and went shopping. I wouldn't buy anything. I would go just because I could. I would watch "All My Children" as it was broadcast, instead of on my VCR. Oh, life was grand.

I got the message. I wasn't wanted, so I bundled myself up in the afghan and trundled myself off to my rightful place.

But now I was up. I couldn't go back to sleep, so I decided to start my day early. I went to get a cup of coffee. I was out of coffee. I got ready to do the dishes. The sink was clogged. I decided to take a shower (I thought about bringing the dishes in with me, but decided against it). Just as I stepped in, the phone rang. I dripped my way to the phone. "Hello?" Wrong number. My first day off in months was to get worse, though.

As I prepared to leave for my first shopping trip in months, (I couldn't wait to try on expensive clothes and then not buy them) I noticed I couldn't find my wallet. I looked on my dresser, in my drawer, in my clothes and in my coat. No wallet. I looked on the furniture, on the floor, on the bookshelf and on the piano. No wallet. I looked in the refrigerator, in the oven, in my laundry, and in the cat box (I was getting desperate). No wallet.

I was trapped. My first day off and I was without money, or a driver's license or. . .

So I cleaned my apartment looking for that dumb little piece of cow that holds everything I am. I actually vacuumed under the cushions of the couch. I washed the windows. And because there was no stopping me once I got started, I even moved books to dust. Still no wallet.

My first day off work and I was trapped in my now sparwas only noon. There was nothing left to do. So I watched "All My Children." I knew it would be good because Skye had been holding Barbara hostage for who knew about it was himself ing.

Later in the afternoon, because I was bored to the bone, I did the dishes. In the bathtub because the sink was still clogged. And after that I turned on the television. I had my choice between watching a heavy-set woman with a hairdo as big as her mouth berate men or a chain-smoking loudmouth who gives men a bad name (men, hell, he gives mankind a bad name) so I turned off the television and read a book.

I really didn't do anything at all the rest of the day. I looked for my wallet again. This time in my car, but I still didn't find it. The working theory now is that it was abducted by aliens, unless someone proves it wrong.

So my only day off in months was wasted, stuck in my apartkling clean apartment. And it ment. Although there were times that day when I wished I were at work, I suppose now at least I have a clean apartment, and clean dishes.

I hope I don't get another day three days, and the only person off too soon, they're too exhaust-

Series is a positive effort

To the Editor:

We, The Substance Abuse Community Council, would like to extend our appreciation to the Grosse Pointe News for its commitment of time, energy and staff to produce the educational series "Alcohol and Adolescents." The first installment in the Oct. 27th issue was an example of accurate and responsible journalism.

You are providing a valuable service to this community. You are affording us the opportunity to reflect upon and evaluate our attitudes and behaviors concerning the drug, alcohol; an opportunity to explore what message we are giving our children about alcohol.

The Grosse Pointe News is an excellent vehicle to reach all segments of our community in addressing these vital issues; issues that affect each of us in our daily living. We would like to underscore the notion, as you so aptly reported, that alcohol abuse is a societal problem that all age levels must confront. Our youth are simply a reflection of our societal

Guidelines are ridiculous

To the Editor:

I am writing to you concerning your article about the Halloween curfew. It was printed in the Oct. 26 edition, and titled "Pointes police, hours set for Halloween Eve." That article states that the official haunting hours are from 5 to 8 p.m. in the Park. It also suggests that parents should accompany their children while trick-or-treating.

These guidelines for Halloween are ridiculous. I would like to think that the Pointes would be safe enough for children to be out on their own, even after 8

Besides, the funnest time of Halloween is later at night. And as for going with parents, that ruins the spirit of Halloween, which is being a free spirit, unbound and roaming from house to house for candy.

I suggest that if parents are so over-worried about their children's safety, they should hold a private party in their homes with their children's friends over to join in on the fun.

I would also like to commend you on your idea for checking the candy. X-raying it would be great to detect any foreign objects inside.

Lake level

Lake St. Clair's water level at the end of October was about 15 inches below what it was one year ago and about four inches below one month ago. At the end of October, the lake elevation was at 573.40 feet above the mean water level at Father Pointe, Quebec.

The October monthly mean level was about one inch above the long-term average. This level was about 38 inches below the all-time October monthly mean high, which was set in 1986, and about 29 inches above the alltime October monthly mean low, which was set in 1934.

For mariners, the end of October level was 20 inches above chart datum.

The six-month forecast of levels for Lake St. Clair shows that the lake is expected to be near its long-term average level during the next six months. The forecast shows that at the end of November, Lake St. Clair will be about four inches below what it was at the end of October. The lake is expected to continue its seasonal decline into February.

At the end of April 1989, levels are expected to be about eight inches below what they were at the same time in 1988. The April mean would be above the long-term average level for that month but 30 inches below the all-time high mean for April, which was set in 1986.

November 17, 1988 Peters Funeral Home takes top beautification award

Staff Writer

The A.H. Peters Funeral Home took the top prize in the 1988 Grosse Pointe Woods Beautification Awards program last week.

The funeral home, which has been at Mack and Vernier for 21 years and has undergone extensive lanscaping work, took the Landmark Award at the 14th annual Beautification Awards Night at the Lochmoor Club Nov. 9.

Candidates for the Landmark Award must be previous Mayor's Trophy winners. The Peters Funeral home won a Mayor's Trophy in 1978.

Three trophies a year are awarded to businesses or institutions. The selection process begins with the nominating of trophy candidates in early June. The final selections are made in September by a vote of the Mayor's Beautification Advisory Commission.

This year's Mayor's Trophy winners are Christ the King Lutheran Church, Josef's French Pastry Shop and Standard Federal Bank.

Christ the King Lutheran Church won Mayor's Trophies in 1980 and 1982. Angelo Di-Clemente, awards night cochairman, said the church continues to age and mellow very gracefully. "We can't ever imagine Grosse Pointe Woods without Christ the King Lutheran Church as a neighbor."

Josef's French Pastry Shop underwent extensive exterior renovation. The entrance was moved to the corner of the building on Mack, and small French panes were added, giving the pastry shop an Old World charm.

Standard Federal Bank, which has an entire block on Mack from Cook Road to Blossom Lane, won a Landscape Award in 1979 and an Architecture Award in 1984.

DiClemente said the bank's efforts show what can be done to beautify an expansive area. Ständard Federal Bank certainly represents a total beautifidently found one of the club's three-wheeled bikes in Warren last week. It had been missing since July.

Yacht club bike found in Warren

According to Grosse Pointe Shores Public Safety reports, the harbor master was driving along near Nine Mile Road and Schoenherr in Warren early last week when he spotted the Schwinn three-wheeler outside a thrift shop near Schoenherr. He said it was easy to tell the bike belonged to the yacht club since it was one of three tricycles the club purchased and had painted with black baskets at the rear.

He stopped and talked with said she had bought the hike ported stolen.

The harbor master at the from a Grosse Pointe youth who Grosse Pointe Yacht Club acci- in turn had bought it from a flea market. She did give the youth's name or any other indentifying information.

> The owner told the harbor master that the tricycle had been sold and that she is holding it for the purchaser. She told the harbor master that if he could produce the bike's serial number, she would hand the bike over to the yacht club.

On Nov. 10 the harbor master provided the correct serial number only to learn that the bike had been given to the purchaser. The shop owner, however, called the purchaser, who then called the Shores police Nov. 11 to verthe owner of the thrift shop who ify that the tricycle had been re-

stolen. - John Minnis

Bryant's gubernatorial intentions at this early date seem to be more like a trial balloon to see what type of support he can count on from around the state.

When asked if he would support Senate Majority Leader John Engler's expected bid for governor, Bryant responded with a lengthy pause and then said:

"There is some possibility I may run myself. I feel some need (to run for governor) if I don't see someone better stepping forward.'

Republican Bryant, 50, beat his Democratic challenger, Katherine Barnhart, 48, by a 2.5-to-1 margin Nov. 8, thus winning his 10th term to represent the 13th District in the state House of Representatives. He received 27,267 votes to Barnhart's 10,537.

Barnhart, a Grosse Pointe Farms resident, is a lawyer with her own downtown practice specializing in domestic law. This was her second attempt for office. Two years ago she ran for county commissioner against incumbent David Cavanagh in the primaries. While she lost that

Woods approves mixed-use law for Mack homes

An amendment to the mixeduse ordinance for residential homes on Mack Avenue was approved for the second and final reading by the Grosse Pointe Woods City Council Nov. 7.

The ordinance makes businesses in homes on Mack to be permissible only when the homeowner is the one operating the business. Allowable businesses are limited to a doctor's, dentist's, lawyer's or real estate agent's office.

Previously, lawyers were not allowed in residential homes along Mack. While the amendment adds lawyers to acceptable businesses, the ordinance is more restrictive in that it limits businesses to be operated by the homeowner only and allows only one business per home.

in the zoo's funding allocations. Button took a sabbatical in 1982-83 and worked full time at the Detroit Free Press to get some practical experience as a newspaperman on a large city daily. He wrote features, sports and news; he edited; he wrote for the city desk and The Way We Live section.

He also helped put together a publication, "Editing Notebook," as part of the Free Press' Newspapers in Education Program. The workbook-type publication is a concise explanation - for students of journalism - of what a big-city daily newspaper's editors do. Button continues to work part time for the Free Press as a copy editor - mostly during summers and during school vacation time.

Button received his bachelor's and teacher's certificate from the University of Northern Iowa; his master's degree in journalism from the University of Iowa.

He also conducts a variety of seminars and clinics for teachers and students of journalism.

'The Tower is willing to tackle current and important stories in the lives of young people and develop these as well as most professional journalists," Button said.

For example, he said, last week the Grosse Pointe school board agenda included discussion of a recommendation to increase the weight of final exam grades when determining high school final grades.

'South students read about this in The Tower before it was brought up in the board of education meeting," Button said. Because of The Tower's story, nearly two dozen students attended the Nov. 7 board meeting and presented their views on the proposed policy.

The presence of students caused the board to postpone a decision on the matter, allowing students a chance to prepare arguments for the December board meeting.

Button also credited The Tower's success to it's immediacy. "It's always been a weekly. It's alive. Current. It gives up to date new news," he said.

And that's exactly what its readers want.

He said the newspaper is successful also because of its constantly changing design. "It's never static. Graphics and dechanges constantly. The Tower is always pushing to do better than it has in the past," he said.

Button is high on journalistic freedom for students. He sees his role as an adviser, not a dictator.

"There's never a question of freedom of the press at South," he said. "Students need journalistic freedom in order to understand the necessity for responsible freedom.

"I'm an adviser only. It's not my paper. I don't make the decisions. I don't do the work.

"I challenge. I push. I help refine and develop. Adviser is an active, not a passive noun."

Kiska, of the News, said he remembers that Button often stood up for Tower staff members, even against the school board. "He was a coach," Kiska said, "but we never had the feeling he was on our backs. He advised us - but didn't clamp

In the early '70s, when Parochiaid appeared on Michigan's ballot, The Tower took a stand on the issue and ran an editorial olics.

Thanksgiving Pointers

Christopher Hessler: Roast Michigan Pheasant with Natural Sauce and Pecan-Sage Dressing

At 26, Christopher Hessler, head chef at the Lochmoor Club, is spending his first Thanksgiving without his family. Instead he'll be up to his gizzards in, well, gizzards preparing the club's holiday feast.

The family's traditional celebration centered around his mother's turkey, ("She's a really good cook") and family.

As Hessler's recipe here shows, Thanksgiving can be just as traditional without turkey, and just as filling.

Roast Pheasant

5 young pheasants 2 tsp. salt and pepper 1 tsp. game spice (see recipe)

3/4 cup clarified butter 2 c. brown stock 1/2 c. brandy

3 T. cold butter Remove wings from breast completely. Next remove legs from breast by slitting the connecting skin and then cutting through the bone that connects the breast and legs on the back side. Season legs with salt, pepper and game spice. Heat butter on top of stove in roasting pan. Place legs, wings and giblets in and brown on both sides. Cover with foil and place in preheated 3250 oven. (Legs of older pheasants should be braised) Continue by roasting legs, turning occasionally until tender (about 45 minutes). Remove legs from pan, keep warm.

Drain fat from pan and reserve. Add brown stock and brandy to roasting pan, removing the drippings, place in sauce pan and simmer for 20 minutes, strain and set aside. Clean roasting pan and place in preheated 450° oven. Season breasts with salt, pepper and game spice and place in roasting pan with fat drained from legs. Roast breast for 20 minutes turning occasionally. Remove breasts from pan, discard fat and deglaze pan with liquid from legs adding cold butter to liquid while whipping. Place legs in sauce and reheat gently (remove bones from legs if desired). Slice breast removing wishbone while slicing, but allow breast to rest at least 10 minutes after roasting and then serve sliced pheasant breast with legs, spooning sauce over both.

Game Spice

- 3 T. black pepper
- 1 T. bay leaves 1 T. thyme
- 1 T. allspice berries
- 1 T. juniper berries 1 T. coriander

Grind all together in spice mill. Spice should be kept in a cool area in a tightly covered container. May also be used on other game.

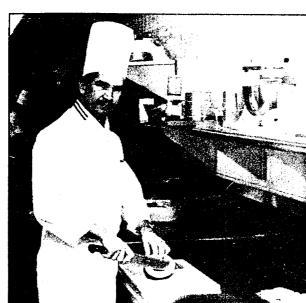

Chris Hessler

Pecan Sage Dressing

- 7 slices white bread, trimmed, cubed and lightly toasted 1/2 c. milk
- 1/4 pound softened butter
- 3 egg yolks 1/4 c. pecan halves
- 1 tsp. rubbed sage
- 1 pinch nutmeg pinch of salt 3 egg whites

Sprinkle milk over bread in hand mixing bowl. In another bowl whip butter and egg yolks until light and fluffy, add this to bread and milk along with pecan halves, sage, nutmeg and salt. Whip egg whites in mixing bowl on high speed until they peak, but not too stiff. Fold into first mixture.

Place stuffing in greased baking pan and bake at 325° for 30 minutes or until golden brown on top.

Kathy Groustra

After listening to Park resident Kathy Groustra tell the following story, we were worried about what kind of recipe she would share.

"My family loves Brussels sprouts," she said. "When we have them, we count them and make sure everyone gets the same amounts so no one is getting more than anyone else."

But her first recipe comes from old family tradition, passed down from mother to daughter; and her second comes from a recipe adapted from a book, like most of her dishes.

Groustra said she adapts recipes to suit her and her family's tastes, and usually they come out better than the original.

"My family likes to eat, the kids are used to me throwing all sorts of new things at them," she said, adding that the Groustra family's Thanksgiving celebrations include "anything and everything" in the way of food.

The following recipe can be served hot or cold, although the taste is different when served cold. It can be microwaved to heat it up the next day, she said.

Persimmon Pudding 1/2 c. sugar

1/2 c. butter

2 eggs

2 c. persimmon (peel and run through food processor or food mill)

2 c. sour milk I tsp. each soda and vanilla, cinnamon

2 c. flour

Cream butter and sugar. Add eggs and beat well. Add persimmons, vanilla and cinnamon. Dissolve soda in milk. Add alternately milk and flour. Bake in a slow oven at least 40 minutes, or until done. Serve warm with ice cream or whipped cream.

Potato Cheese Puff 12 medium boiling potatoes 2 medium onions, minced 1/2 c. plus 2 1/2 tablespoons steeped in traditions.

Thanksgiving at the Duffy house in the Woods is, according to Mike Duffy, a day for legalized gluttony.

But asking Mike Duffy, columnist for the Detroit Free Press, for a recipe is like asking Gloria Steinem for the phone number of a good man. because Duffy can't cook, he declares with more than a little pride.

"Let's see," he says when asked what his specialties are. "I do peanut butter sandwiches, and chili - canned chili. My wife does 99 percent of the cooking.

Usually Thanksgiving day begins for Duffy with the aroma of a turkey roasting. Which, of course, he had nothing to do with. Jane, his wife, is in charge of that.

After watching the parades with his children Christopher and Elizabeth, the rest of the dinner is prepared, which, of course, Duffy has nothing to do with. Jane, his wife, is in charge of that.

His favorite item on his family's Thanksgiving table is stuffing. "I'm just a stuffing fanatic. I can't get enough of it," he says without shame. But, of course, Jane, his wife, is in charge of that, too.

So where do Mike Duffy's Pickled Peaches come in?

"It's a part of my childhood I carry with me to today," he said, reminiscing about the Thanksgivings of his youth when he would wolf down pickled peaches. But, of course, he had nothing to do with that. His mother was in charge of that.

Whether it's gobbling up a turkey, or sitting around the television set with the family watching the Lions lose vet another game, Grosse Pointe Thanksgivings are

So every year in the middle of November, Jane, his wife, searches local supermarkets for canned pickled peaches, which Duffy admits is not a high-sale item. They are usually packaged and sold only during holiday times, and are sometimes hard to find.

His recipe is the easiest on this page.

Mike Duffy's Pickled Peaches

Go to store and buy can of pickled peaches. Open can and place in bowl. Serve and enjoy.

Duffy says they're good after the relish tray, or just any ol' time, plopped on your plate next to the potatoes and gravy. An interesting sidenote. One year, after Jane scoured local supermarkets for Duffy's favorite holiday treat, Mike let them sit, untouched in the bowl.

Now Mike, Jane's husband, is in charge of the pickled peaches.

Charity Suczek: Pumpkin au Gratin and Trifle

If you mention the words "good cook" in the Grosse Pointes, the name Charity Suczek of the City comes immediately to

For 40 years Suczek has been sharing her artistry in the kitchen with students of all levels, many of whom have gone on to teach classes of their own.

She began her love affair with food when, as a child, she would come to her estate in the Austro-Hungarian empire on vacation from boarding school and run straight to the pantry, where the family's French chefs would fill her with tasty pas-

She studied cordon bleu cooking in Paris, and began teaching in the United States when a radio announcer asked her to come on his show and answer questions about how to cook with wine.

After one 15-minute session, she was so flooded with letters she decided to share her knowledge of the craft. She was known as "The Traveling Cook" when for 10 years she taught at colleges from Kalamazoo to Detroit. But she had to slow down, and now has her own line of classes through Grosse Pointe Community Education, and also at the Pointe Pedlar.

While Suczek didn't celebrate Thanksgiving growing up in Europe, her recipes bring new uses for old favorites on the ta-

"Pumpkin doesn't have to be just for pies and for soup," she said. "And the trifle can be made a day ahead."

Pumpkin au Gratin

- 2 pounds pumpkin or one No. 2 1/2 can pumpkin
- 1 c. water
- 1/2 tsp. salt
- 2 c. thick sauce Mornay 2 T. each grated Gruyere and

"Detroit has a reputation," Dragovic said. "The general area of Detroit is perceived as a tough, urban environment.

Dragovic said he never gets the opportunity to test people's belief in the importance of his job - a job that is tough, sad, and at times, gruesome.

He thought for a while, pondering a way to explain what he does. And why.

Because of the specialized nature of his training, Dragovic feels a special obligation to work as a volunteer doing diagnostic work in Alzheimer's research -"because there is a need," he said. "There's not many neuropathologists in this area," he said. "It's the only way relatives can confirm that a person has suffered from the disease. Degenerative diseases of the brain are becoming an overwhelming problem because our life expectency is increasing.

"It's also a challenge to convey these ideas to our children."

Dragovic's soccer team, the Seagulls, just completed a successful season, taking a second place in the Grosse Pointe Soccer Association's final standings. Dragovic's two oldest boys are members of the 16-member team that practices twice a week and plays a game every weekend.

The purpose of the conference is to bring local teens together to discuss issues of interest to modern youth, and to guide them in learning how to make positive choices.

This year's conference started with a panel discussion on the value of the 1987 conference. Among the six teen panelists were Kandia Milton and Julie Muz of ULS.

After the panelists were finished, adult facilitators worked with small groups of teens to guide them through their own discussions. Included among the facilitators were ULS faculty members Doug Goodman, Jeff Healy and Carla Walker, and ULS parents Penny Bailer and Vivian Buffington.

Using a 28mm wide-angle lens was the only way Monte Nagler could capture this exciting photograph taken on Baffin Island high in the Canadian Arctic. Notice the tremendous depth-of-field and extreme sharpness that are easily obtained from use of a wide angle lens.

Use wide-angle lens for unique photos

Second, you can get by with

By Monte Nagler

widen your photographic horizons by using wide-angle lenses? Wide-angle lenses are truly exciting to use and are my favorite of all lenses.

A wide-angle lens will alter depth-of-field and perspective and give you a picture quite unlike what a normal or telephoto lens will produce. In short, it's a lens that "sees" more, taking in a wider expanse than other

There are several advantages to the wideangle lens. First is the increase in depth-offield — the zone of sharpness realized in the final picture. A 28mm lens (moderate wideangle) at an aperture of f/8 will produce a depth-of-field from five feet to infinity. In contrast, a normal 50mm lens, properly focused, will give you a depth-of-field of about 20 feet to infinity. This means that with the wideangle lens more of what you see in the viewfinder will be sharp and in focus.

Going even wider, a 17mm lens (super wide-angle) at f/16 will produce an astounding depth-of-field of 10 inches to infinity. This means that if light conditions enable you to shoot at f/16, you never have to focus the camera as long as you are at least 10 inches from the subject!

Second, you can get by with much slower shutter speeds with a wide-angle lens, a nice advantage when light is limited. The "rule" is that a lens can be hand-held at the shutter speed closest to its focal length. Therefore a 28mm lens can be safely hand-held at 1/30 second and a 17mm lens can be held at 1/15 second. With slow speed film, low level light, and a desire to maximize depth-of-field, this can be quite an advantage. Try shooting a normal or telephoto lens at these shutter speeds and see your shaky results!

Many photographers ask about distortion, the bending of light rays characteristic of wide-angle lenses. Buildings will curve upwards and some subjects may begin to look unreal. It happens, and there may be situations when distortion is undesirable.

But the inherent distortion of wide-angle lenses can be turned into one of your biggest advantages. Selective distortion can be a plus. Strength, drama and excitement can be added to your photographs through proper use of distortion.

Creatively used, distortion can emphasize certain parts of a picture and can give a photograph an artistic quality no other lens can produce.

Proper woodchopping is an art

Woodchopping, an almost lost art, has emerged as a popular way of supplying fuel for the cold winter months.

Whether the return to woodchopping is to feed the woodburning stove, the cozy fireplace, or as a hedge against rising fuel costs, selecting and using the proper tool to do the job safely is important.

A large number of the novice woodchoppers are not knowledgeable about using the proper wood-chopping tools nor the importance of periodic inspection of the tool's condition.

Woodchoppers who believe that the single bit ax, an ax with a cutting edge on one end and a striking face on the opposite end, is the all-purpose woodchopping tool, are risking serious injury, warns the Hand Tools Institute.

The single bit ax should be used only to fell, trim trees, split and cut wood. It can also be used for notching and chopping logs and timber. It's important to remember the striking face opposite the cutting edge of the ax is to drive wooden stakes, and never to be struck against metal, stone and concrete. This means emphatically that it should never be used to strike steel wood-splitting wedges; serious injury could result.

The double split ax, a cousin of the single bit ax, is limited to the splitting, cutting, trimming and shaping functions described above; is does not have a flat striking face.

Hatchets, the smaller but more versatile cousins of axes, are used for cutting and trimming. The striking face of hatchets is properly hardened for driving common nails, but should never be used to strike chisels. punches or other hardened metal tools.

If your woodchopping chores include using the handy steel wood-splitting wedge, then be certain to use the woodchopper's maul when striking the steel wedge. A woodchopper's maul, available in hardware and home center stores, has a round bevel edge striking face with a sharp, opposite edge.

In addition to splitting wood with the sharp edge, the maul is used in conjunction with a steel wedge by first making a notch in the wood to be split with the sharp edge, placing the steel wedge in the notch, followed by driving the wedge with the maul's bevel striking face. Never use an ax or hatchet as a wedge as serious injury could result.

All striking and struck tools used for woodchopping and splitting should be sharpened as needed. A dull tool not only makes for a more difficult job, it often can be dangerous. Likewise, HTI warns, discard any maul, ax, hatchet or wedge if it shows dents, missing chips, cracks, mushrooming or excessive wear. Handles can and should be replaced when dam-

HTI cautions that safety goggles must be worn to prevent eye injury from flying chips and fragments. This also means keeping on-lookers away from work area when chopping wood. The Consumer Product Safety Commission, Washington, D.C., reports over 76,000 serious hand tool-related injuries are treated each year by hospitals.

St. Ambrose Church: Bridge between Detroit, Grosse Pointe

By Margie Reins Smith Staff Writer

This is the fifteenth in an occasional series about Grosse Pointe churches.

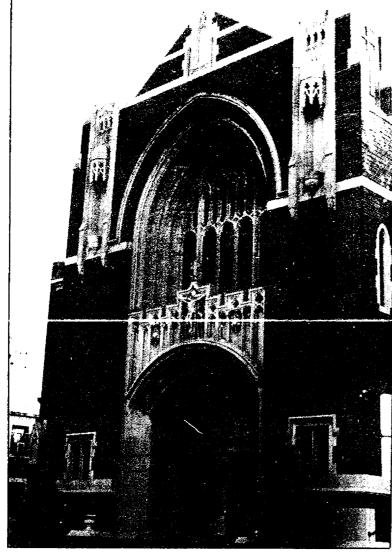

St. Ambrose Catholic Church, on the corner of Hampton and Maryland in Grosse Pointe Park, stands like Colossus - one foot in portions of Detroit's most economically disadvantaged areas one foot in some of Grosse Pointe's most affluent neighborhoods.

"When I look out over my congregation, I see a diverse mix of humanity," said the Rev. Timothy Pelc, St. Ambrose's pastor. "For years, St. Ambrose has stood on both sides of the street, so to speak," he said. "This is, however, an artificial distinction. It shouldn't make any difference. It doesn't affect us in terms of our work.1

Pelc said the diversity of St. Ambrose's congregation results in a creative tension that is beneficial to all. "We use resources of Grosse Pointers to help the physical needs of the poor of the parish. And everybody is en-

we receive, then nobody loses.'

St. Ambrose is an amalgamation of five buildings that sprawl over several blocks on the westernmost border of Grosse Pointe incorporates an impressive range of structural elements: brick, Pewabic tile, carved limestone, carved oak, slate, copper and stained glass. Pelc said the exterior of the church is virtually unchanged from 1926.

The rectory, directly in the church's shadow, was built much later, designed as a home for the priests assigned to the church. It's now also used for administrative offices.

St. Ambrose Academy has 190 students in grades K through 8. Most are non-Catholic, Pelc said, and most are from Detroit.

The original St. Ambrose Church, a wooden structure, built in 1917, is still standing, but has been moved to a lot behind the Park City Hall. It's currently used as a parish hall.

The convent building was erected in 1949 to house the Dominican Sisters who staffed St. Ambrose school. When the high school closed, the building was leased to Goodwill Industries for use as an adult foster care home. It's now being leased to Wolverine Human Services for use as a residential treatment center for neglected and abused adolescent boys, and for Wolverine's administrative offices.

Back in the early part of this century, when the parish was established, Pelc said, Grosse Pointe was growing rapidly, making the transition from a resort community to a suburb for the movers and shakers in Detroit's blossoming automobile in-

St. Ambrose parish was one of the first established by Bishop Michael Gallagher, he said, just about the time the city of Detroit was beginning to expand. Also, just about the time the Grand Marais swamp was filled and the area had tapped into the city's sewer system.

The area grew so fast, he said, the archdiocese didn't have the chance - or the foresight - to purchase a large parcel of land for St. Ambrose's parish. "The neighborhood grew so quickly, they had to buy pieces of land here and there. That's why the buildings are so haphazardly scattered over several city blocks.

doned houses come on the mar- said. ket in the neighborhood, we're trying to buy them up.'

St. Ambrose is consolidating, renovating and participating in a major capital improvement program deisgned to create a more campus-like atmosphere. "We're working with the Park's Downtown Development Authority, " he said. "We'd like to pull all the buildings together to turn this section of the city around to a whole new upscale look. The church is a magnet for this."

When two nearby Detroit churches are closed, according to recent plans, St. Ambrose will probably pick up an additional 200 families - adding to their

About his diverse congregation, Pelc said the wide range of experiences and economic resources invigorates him. "Some of our people have no cars. They walk to church or have to be picked up. Another unique aspect of St. Ambrose, he said, is the familyoriented educational program. "No weekday sessions for kids. We do it all on Sunday morning," he said. "This also gets the intellectual juices of the adult community flowing.'

Indeed education has always been high on St. Ambrose list of priorities, Pelc said. "The parish is committed to its school ministry. We've kept the school open because we're committed to education and to the city of Detroit."

In fact, he pointed out, St. Ambrose was so committed to the education of its youngsters, that back in 1919, the first order of business - even before a permanent church was built - was the construction of a grade school. By the mid-'20s, a high school had been added to the grade school.

Only after the schools were well-established and thriving, did the congregation turn toward the construction of a permanent

The '70s brought decreasing enrollment in the wake of the 1967 riots in Detroit. The resulting decline and deterioration of nearby neighborhoods spelled doom for St. Ambrose High School and it closed in 1971. The building was demolished in the early '80s.

The grade school, St. Ambrose Academy, however, continues to keep pace with educational innovations, according to Pelc, and is dedicated to its nearly 200 students. Many are non-Catholic, he said. Most are from Detroit, and nearly half of many students' tuition is paid for by an operating grant provided by the Catholic Services Appeal.

St. Ambrose also has a welldeveloped social service program, Pelc said. "We support Crossroads East with food, staff and collections. We also have two full time pastoral sisters who work with neighborhood block clubs, Meals on Wheels, home visitations, People in Faith United (PIFU) and the St. Vincent de Paul Society.

"Yet - the priority here is still worship," he said. "Beautiful space, beautiful music. It's unique. There's no catalog worship here."

Give a gift of music

The lovely gift of holiday music will be made available to residents of Grosse Pointe by the members of the Grosse Pointe South High School Choir this season.

Holiday caroling will be offered, either for yourself or as a gift to a friend or relative, by groups of eight to 10 choir mem-

The cost is $10 and proceeds will join the funds set aside for the choir to compete next spring in a festival at Walt Disney World.

The dates set aside for caroling are Thursday, Friday, and Sunday, Dec. 15, 16 and 18, the times in late afternoon and early evening. If the session is a gift, the choir group will leave your holiday gift card.

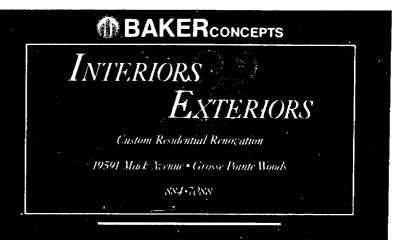

To make arrangements for holiday caroling, call Rebecca Mc-Namee at 881-2944, or send your check and necessary information to McNamee at 1353 Harvard, Grosse Pointe 48230.

November 17, 1988 Rosse Pointe News People who drive pickups aren't who you think Driving a Ford F-150 pickup, a big ol' hound dog sitting next to me, I figured all I needed was a gun rack and a rifle behind my head to complete the picture.

The dog wasn't mine and I was not armed and that's just a side. But you don't have to, bestereotype anyway, because most pickup truck buyers aren't good ol' boys at all. There probably aren't that many good ol' boys, because the Ford F-Series pickup America. And it has been for seven years.

Plus that, you sit up high so you can see what's going on down the line of traffic, you have plenty of headroom and the bench seat is so wide you can't reach the door on the passenger cause you've got power windows and power locks.

A 4.9-liter V-6 with five-speed manual transmission is standard in the F-Series pickup, but the is the biggest-selling vehicle in test vehicle had 5-liter V-8 which put out 185 horsepower, 40 more than the V-6, and a three-speed

That's pretty impressive. The two biggest selling vehicles in the country are both full-size pickup trucks, with more than a million sales between them. I have never been a truck fan and have always found their mystique a bit baffling. When I was young, pickup trucks were noisy, harsh of ride and lacking in the creature comforts long associated with the passenger car. But no more. The F-150 test vehicle had all the goodies one expects in an automobile - elaborate sound system, power windows, smooth, quiet, comfortable ride and plenty of pep.

It all seems very civilized and I had a suspicion that suburban types might go for this vehicle as much as farmers and that more of these workhorses haul guys to the office and run errands to the malls than haul manure and drain pipes. To find out, I called Ray Windecker at Ford Motor Co., who keeps track of things and more often than not has done a statistical analysis which will answer almost any question about the automotive market.

Sure enough, Windecker had the figures and relayed this intelligence about the F-Series pickup: 10 percent of owners are farmers, but 13 percent are professional and technical people, 7 percent are managers and owners of businesses and 20 percent are in the skilled trades.

What do they use the trucks for? Well, said Windecker, 66 percent say they haul things in

NOTICE OF HEARING ZONING BOARD OF APPEALS

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that the Zoning Board of Appeals will meet at the Grosse Pointe Farms Pier Park Lakefront Building, 350 Lakeshore Drive, on at 7:30 p.m. to hear the appeal of Mr. Daniel Hughes, owner of the premises located at 268 Lewiston, from the denial of the Building Department to issue a building permit for the construction of a family room to the rear of his existing dwelling located at the foregoing address. Such permit issuance was denied for reason that:

a. The residence located on the foregoing premises is nonconforming for reason that it is in violation of the side yard provision of Article XIII, Section 1300 of the City's Zoning Ordinance, and in accordance with the provisions opf Article XV, Section 1502, Item 4-A of the City's Zoning Ordinance, no such structure may be enlarged or structurally altered unless a variance is granted.

b. The proposed addition on the rear would also infringe upon the minimum side yard requirements of 4 feet leaving a side yard of 3.41 feet, thereby requiring a variance from the provisions of Article XIII, Section 1300 of the City's Ordinance.

The Hearing will be public. Interested property-owners or residents of the City are invited to attend. Those wishing to submit written comments may do so to the Office of the City Clerk. A drop-box at the Public Safety Department may be utilized for hand-delivered mail during non-office hours.

Gail Kaess fights for the home front

By John Minnis Staff Writer

Individuals protective of their privacy aren't the only ones concerned about the encroachment of the Orwellian Big Brother. Cities small and large have the same fears of big government.

As the newly elected president of the Michigan Municipal League, Grosse Pointe Farms Councilwoman Gail Kaess is perhaps the most influential person in the state to protect cities' sovereignity, which is known as "home rule."

Kaess, who has served on the Farms City Council since 1979, became president of league at its 90th annual convention in Saginaw in September. The league is composed of 501 member cities and is a major influence on the state and federal levels of government.

Home rule is one of the most important issues the league stands for. It defines home rule as "the right of our cities and villages to handle their own affairs within the limits of local resources and consistent with practical economic and social factors, believing that in our field of municipal affairs municipalities should stand in equal dignity along with the state and federal government. We believe in the maximum local authority consistent with the position of the municipalities as a constitutent element of a sovereign state."

In other words, Big Brother, bug off.

The Grosse Pointes are intensely protective of their independence. Grosse Pointe Woods, for example, sends many resolutions to state or federal government in opposition to legislation that would undermine the city's authority.

On Nov. 7, the Woods council sent a resolution to state lawmakers opposing a Senate bill that would prevent the city from excluding family and group day care homes from residential neighborhoods. The Woods maintains day cares are businesses, and businesses are restricted to areas zoned for such activity.

The important point as far as home rule is concerned is that cities should be able to determine on their own where business will be conducted in the city.

As president of the league, Kaess draws on considerable influence with state and federal lawmakers, and Woods and other Pointes officials call on Kaess and the league regularly.

Woods resident reports missing driveway ramp

A Grosse Pointe Woods man returned to his Vernier Road home one night last week only to have his van swallowed by a 2-foot, water-filled hole at the end of his driveway.

When the man left for work Nov. 10 his driveway was OK. Even though there has been ongoing construction along Vernier, the resident told Woods police that none of the road work has been done near his home for two weeks.

When he got home that night, he noticed a pool of water at the end of his driveway, but he thought nothing of it since it had been raining and the construction was preventing the water from reaching the storm sewers properly.

When he entered the pool of water, his van literally fell off the edge of the world. He was unable to get the van out without a wrecker. The vehicle received damage to the front and undercarriage. The resident told police he believes the construction crew dug the hole during the day, but failed to put any type of barricade at the end of his driveway. A Woods officer investigating the incident agreed with the man that some type of barricade should have been provided to warn the resident. This incident is one of many filed with the Woods police concerning the construction on Vernier. A couple of weeks ago, three motorists filed police reports, all within minutes of each other, stating that their front right tires were blown out by a protruding piece of pavement.

In fact, Woods Mayor George Freeman received the highest honor bestowed by the league at its September conference. Freeman, along with Gov. James Blanchard, was named an honorary life member of the league.

Kaess said one of the best things about her leadership in promote the Farms, the Pointes and Wayne County.

As a senior research analyst for Wayne County Executive Ed McNamara, Kaess is often on the road doing public relations work for the county. She is also on the executive committee of the Southeastern Michigan Council of Governments and chairwoman of its data center advisory council.

local, county, regional and statewide level, it is little wonder that she is perhaps one of the Pointes' most influential and enthusiastic boosters.

Concerning issues the league is considering, Kaess said solid waste disposal is one of the state's most important and imthe league is that she gets to minent problems. With landfills almost filled to capacity and new sites scarce, the state has to find alternatives.

Kaess said the league is studying the problem at this time and has yet to develop a course of action it will promote. Composting is one alternative being looked at for disposing of leaves and grass instead of in landfills. Kaess said foliage and lawn wastes are a concern in the Pointes.

She is also promoting the importance of the 1990 census. She said government funds are tied to population, which is determined by the census. If communities get short-changed in the census, as Detroit did several years ago, they could lose millions in state and federal aid.

Kaess said residents have to be educated to the fact that census data is completely private. In this case, she said the census is not the federal government trying to be Big Brother.

On the local level, Kaess said the Pointes have to do more future planning, such as providing housing for senior citizens, a population group that is expected to mushroom as baby boomers reach retirement.

She also said it is important the Pointes do more for youths in the way of activities so that they don't get involved with alcohol and other drugs. She said cities should support school. church and other youth programs, instead of taking a passive approach and leaving the youth for others to take care of.

Besides home rule, the league also stands for:

 Efficient and adequate municipal government at the lowest possible cost to taxpayers.

• Educating the public on the problems and actions of municipal government.

 Adequate sources of revenue to finance municipal govern-

• Equitable division of statecollected motor vehicle revenues.

• Fair representation for municipalities at the state and county levels.

• Uniform and equitable property assessment for all governmental units.

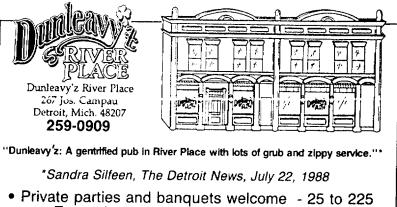

The league also provides many services for its member cities, such as educational programs on personnel management, planning and zoning, dealing with unions, and liability. The league even offers insurance and legal defense at reduced group rates for its member cities.

To make sure employers have a skilled work force available, ITI works with Michigan's 29 community colleges to provide the necessary training. Jacobs specializes in "customized training" - that is, tailoring community college programs to meet the needs of specific employers. The automobile companies regularly seek customized training through community colleges.

With the expertise he has acquired through ITI and his tenure in teaching, Jacobs believes he can play a leadership role in WCCC's continued improvement in education.

He said WCCC has been steadily improving from its low point two years ago, but it still has a way to go before it regains the trust of employers as a source of reliable, well-trained workers.

Jacobs said his predecessor on the WCCC board, Grosse Pointe While many economists are resident Dennis Mongoven, has contributed a lot to improving dustrial society featuring a domi- the quality 'of education at the

As an expert in technical training at the community college level, Jacobs said there are three types of students whose needs have to be met if WCCC's program is to be successful:

1) The young, full-time student who needs basic job skills, such as reading, writing and mathematics, as well as technical skills, such as operating computers. Workers today will face constant training and retraining throughout their working lives, therefore they must have a foundation that makes them trainable and adaptable.

2) Members of the present work force, who must keep up with the ever-increasing advances of technology in the work

3) The unemployed, displaced workers who haven't the skills to get a new job. The adult, nontraditional student poses an immediate challenge to occupa-

Jacobs is quick to point out, however, that he isn't saying that WCCC is not providing technical or occupational training to students now. But he believes he can contribute to the quality and scope of the educaity in southeastern Michigan.

As a member of the prestigious ITI, Jacobs believes he can offer the WCCC board some valuable assistance and knowledge.

Through the institute he has access to studies on what employers want and need, occupational trends, good ways of teaching technical programs, and sources of customized training programs.

ITI has been instrumental in placing some $6 million worth of customized training programs with employers, Jacobs said. These specialized programs could be sources of income for WCCC as well as being a benefit to local employers, he said.

As a new trustee at WCCC, Jacobs said he must first help the college board gain the trust of the business and industrial community. He said the faith can be built by first providing quality education and, consequently, better workers.

Sparky Herberts: Going back to its roots

By Pat Paholsky

Sparky Herberts, celebrating nine years in business next month, is going back to its roots. Almost.

It began as a small neighborhood bar serving burgers and key lime pie. Over the years, there have been a couple of major expansions, and about four years ago, Sparky's embraced nouvelle cuisine.

"It certainly improved our quality and variety," owner Darrell Finken said. "But we feel the public tastes are changing and we want to reflect that in our menu and also in our prices."

The new menu, fresh from the printer, offers a regular variety of sandwiches, salads, soups and hot and cold appetizers.

There are daily changing luncheon and dinner specials as well as the daily dinner special. Served from 5 to 7 p.m. seven days a week, the special offers an appetizer, choice of three entrees - fish, beef or chicken potato, vegetable and beverage for $9.50.

Sandwich prices range from $4.25 for a Sparky burger to $5.95 for a club sandwich. A Caesar salad is $5.50 and a smoked capon breast salad is $6.50.

The lunch specials range from $5.50 to $9.95 and dinner specials from $10.95 to $19.95.

The entire menu is available for carry out. Sparky Herberts is noted for its catering, which can include people to serve the food, valet service, tents, dishes, etc. For information on catering, call Finken or Peter Dewey at 824-

Finken then worked in Ann Arbor at the Campus Inn for four years and in 1975, accepted a position as general manager at the Grosse Pointe Club.

In the meantime, he and Liz

"We flipped a coin and decided on starting a restaurant in the area. We felt it needed something of value and a comfortable tures imported as well as domesatmosphere," he said.

At the time, the area was "somewhat seedy," Finken said. He credits Grosse Pointe Park officials for applying for federal funds to restore the area.

The restaurant helped spark a renaissance in the area and Pointe Park. The telephone numother businesses have since opened, making it a "more solid part of Grosse Pointe," he said.

The first expansion - the Derby Room — was completed in April 1984. A bright and fresh room in the back, the Derby Room was designed by Liz Finken, who is an artist and decorator. It's now reserved for nonsmokers.

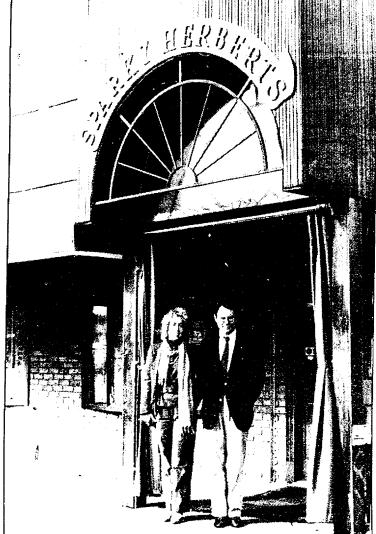

In December 1986, the Wine Cellars to the left of the main dining room was opened. The room offers a more intimate, romantic atmosphere.

The bar area, part of the main dining room, is "more jovial, raucous at times," Finken said.

The expansions, increasing seating from 45 to 110, and the three rooms offer patrons a choice of atmosphere, from subdued to loud.

Sparky Herberts employs about 40 people. It's open seven days a week: Monday through Saturday from 11:30 a.m. to midnight for food service and until 2 a.m. for beverages; Sunday brunch from noon to 3 p.m. and dinner from 5 to 11 p.m., closed at midnight.

A Festival of Trees

Children's Hospital benefit opens Nov. 23

For those who love Christmas - and who doesn't? -Festival of Trees, the fantasy land fundraiser for the Children's Hospital of Michigan, is fast becoming another wonderful holiday tradition.

On Wednesday, Nov. 23, the fourth annual Festival of Trees will open its doors, showing visitors a Cobo Hall Riverview Ballroom transformed into one big, brightly wrapped Christmas package.

Inside will be a fantasyland of 100 professionally decorated holiday trees and vignettes: Santa and Santaland, where children can be photographed with Santa; Gingerbread Village, the Isle of Wreaths and a magnificent model train display; continuous entertainment, including mimes, clowns and costumed characters; and a Festival Gift Shop.

Festival of Trees is a major, annual fundraising effort for Children's Hospital's Evergreen Endowment Fund, which was established in 1985 to fund research into the causes and cures of childhood diseases. Since 1985, Festival of Trees — a 100 percent volunteer effort — has attracted more than 85,000 visitors and raised $510,000.

Organizers of this year's event hope to raise $380,000 to bring the four-year total to $1 million.

The festival schedule opens with a preview party from 6 to 9 p.m. Tuesday, Nov. 22. Hours for the general public are 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. Wednesday, Nov. 23; 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. Thanksgiving Day; 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. Friday and Saturday, Nov. 25 and 26; noon to 9 p.m. Sunday, Nov. 27; and 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday, Nov. 28.

Admission is $3 for adults, $2.50 for senior citizens and

$1 for children. THE 100 FESTIVAL trees and vignettes have been sponsored by area businesses or individuals for donations of $400 to $2,000. The trees are decorated by area designers who have contributed their creative talents to trimming a tree according to a selected

Local tree sponsors include the Assistance League to the Northeast Guidance Center and Jacobson's Stores, Inc. Among the 80 designers who supply the stars of the show for Festival of Trees are Kennedy & Company of Grosse Pointe, which has also created a vignette for its tree called "Memories of Christmas"; Grosse Pointe's Design Detroit Interiors/Hawkins Enterprises, Ltd.; Accents Interior Design, Grosse Pointe Farms; Mr. and Mrs. Robert C. Ramsey of Grosse Pointe Park; Old Dominion Interiors, Grosse Pointe Farms; Jennifer and Joyce Janowski of Harper Woods; Edith Richard and Dr. Irene E. Gromek of Harper Woods; and the Assistance League to the Northeast Guidance Center, St. Clair Shores.

Some 67 garden clubs throughout metro Detroit have created special, handcrafted holiday wreaths. They'll be displayed on a special Isle of Wreaths and will be available for purchase during the Festival of Trees. Individuals and garden clubs designing and donating the wreaths include the Pointe Garden Club, the Grosse Pointe Unit of the Herb Society of America, Trowel & Error Garden Club, Grosse Pointe Farm and Garden Club, Junior League Gardeners, the Garden Club of Michigan from Grosse Pointe Farms, the Grosse Pointe Park Garden Club, Windmill Pointe Garden Club, Grosse Pointe Shores Garden Club, La Societe Des Jardinieres of Harper Woods, the Harper Woods Garden Club, Pat and

So 14 professional chefs and 19 culinary students put their talents together to construct what should be the sweetest place in Detroit -Gingerbread Village at the Festival of Trees.

FORMER GROSSE POINTE Yacht Club chef Jeffrey Gabriel has directed the assembly of the 33-building village. The buildings are made entirely from edible ingredients such as chocolate, marzipan, royal icing, sugar and nougat in the forms of structures, streets, sidewalks, curbs and lights.

Contributing a "sweet structure" to the chef's division of the village is Chef Josef Bogosian of Josef's Pastry Shop in Grosse Pointe Woods. His creation is titled, "Warm Winter."

Gingerbread houses will be for sale at the festival.

If all of that isn't enough to keep holiday fun-seekers enchanted, the festival will feature round-the-clock entertainment by local orchestras, chorales, instrumentalists, soloists, choirs and dancers. Helping put the Festival of Trees together are Grosse Pointe committee members Diana Kohler, development; Beth Hastner, Santaland; Karen Eisenbrey, Cobo Hall; and Kathy Neumann, Cobo projects and displays.

Community Volunteers can help make holiday happy for the homebound By Peggy O'Connor Andrzejczyk Assistant Editor/Feature Editor

Last year, a willing volunteer called her local newspaper to find out where she could offer her services to help deliver that willing volunteer and a homebound elderly in Detroit, Hamtramck, Harper Woods, Highland Park and the five Grosse Pointes. "This is the first time we have attempted holiday meal delivery to seniors who ordinarily go without a hot meal on weekends and holidays," said Paul Bridgewater, executive director of the Detroit Area Agency on Aging (DAAA), which administers the program. 'We have succeeded in raising almost all of the necessary funds to provide the meal itself, but we still need volunteers willing to give a few hours of time to make Thanksgiving a more joyous time for the homebound.'

Some 250 volunteers from Michigan National Bank, Michigan Consolidated Gas Company's "Project Heart" and other organizations have joined existing volunteers to deliver traditional Thanksgiving dinners. But an additional 150 volunteers are needed between 9 a.m. and 1 p.m. on Thanksgiving Day, Nov.

Volunteers must have current driver's licenses and use their own vehicles for delivery, according to Barbara McKeand-Stevenson, development manager for Detroit Meals-on-Wheels. Attendance at a one-hour training session will also be required.

The volunteers will pick up meals at the Woodbridge Tavern in Detroit or at various churches and local agencies in the area. The meals, packed in individual thermal containers, will then be transported in volunteers' vehicles to some 4,000 senior citi-

people. I can picture them sitting there on Thanksgiving Day all by themselves with nothing to do. I know how it feels to be alone on Thanksgiving," Flaum

She recalled a Thanksgiving alone in another city, far away from family and friends. "I sat at my window watching people out walking, seeming to enjoy themselves. I didn't feel real sorry for myself because I could go out if I wanted to. Think about those who can't get out, who are at home and alone."

It's not going to be easy for Flaum to fit her volunteer hours into a busy Thanksgiving. She has two young sons and will be hosting dinner for a houseful of guests next Thursday.

"The company will watch the kids, my husband will drive and I'll deliver the meals. It won't be much trouble at all," Flaum

"Besides, it's only three or four hours. And think of how happy these people will be to receive a hot meal. And, to be a little selfish about it, think of how good it'll make me feel. Isn't life filled with little rewards for things we do for others?," she added. "That's what life is all about. Helping others and feeling good about it.

Downtown sing-along Nov. 21

Imagine thousands of people from all walks of life and from all over the metropolitan Detroit area gathering for a night of fellowship and song welcoming the holiday season.

It actually occurs every year at the Detroit Aglow Symphony Sing-Along sponsored by the Central Business District Foundation, the fundraising arm of the Central Business District Association. This year's event will be held on Monday, Nov. 21 at 8 p.m. in Cobo Arena.

The evening begins with the lighting ceremony on Hart Plaza where the mayor and other dignitaries turn on Downtown's holiday lights officially welcoming Swedish Festival of Lights, Christmas and the celebration of the new year.

The Symphony Sing-Along begins at 8 p.m. in Cobo Arena with the Detroit Symphony Orchestra led by "Pops" Conductor Richard Hayman providing the musical accompaniment for Detroit's grandest chorus. Musical guests Barbara Bredius, Ortheia Barnes, Phil Marcus Esser, Lewis Dale von Schlambusch and the children of the St. Cecelia Youth Chorale will lend their voices to the celebration.

Adding to the fun, three special guests will be joining the audience: Santabear, thanks to Thankgiving, Hanukkah, the the Dayton Hudson Company, Milky the Clown from the Twin Pines Dairy and Santa Claus, direct from the North Pole.

All proceeds from the Sing-Along go to the "Light Up Detroit!" campaign, a $15.6 million plan designed to improve the beauty and safety of downtown through the lighting of streets, landmarks and monuments.

Tickets for the Symphony Sing-Along are $10 for adults and $5 for children 12 and under and are available at all Ticketmaster outlets or may be ordered by phone by calling 423 6666. For general information or group rates, call the CBDA office at 961-1403.

The Pastor's Corner A prayerful skeptic

By Rev. Jack L. Mannschreck G.P. United Methodist Church

Wow! Am I glad that election is over! I though it would never end. And as we near the Thanksgiving holiday, we should really be thankful . . . primarily because the meanest, vilest presidential campaign ever is past.

Now that the mud has settled, perhaps we can get down to the true business at hand: running this nation in ways that are efficient and beneficial to all red-blooded Ameri-

Frankly, I hope that we can still hold our heads high enough to see over the garbage we left behind from the campaign trail.

My predictions for this next presidential term are basically the same they have been after previous elections. And in my personal experience, I have generally been correct in my predictions. Taxes will go up, spending will rise and the deficit will grow.

Now, before you accuse me of slinging more mud at President-elect George Bush, remember that my predictions are the same as they have been since I attained the age of political reason (how's that for an oxymoron?).

Before the election, I heard the same criticism of both presidential candidates expressed in nearly the same way. One friend proclaimed, "The election of Mike Dukakis will bring this nation to its knees." Later that week, a colleague of mine lamented, "If Vice President Bush is elected, this nation will be brought to its knees at the end of two years."

At the time, I was amused at how the same descriptive opinion could be levied against two different candidates by two different people.

Now, I wonder if maybe our nation shouldn't be brought to its knees. No matter who you voted for, no matter who won, the important issue is whether or not we are able to work with the current administration. Are you able to support this nation and its leaders, despite the fact that you didn't vote for them? And those who voted for the new administration need to continue to support their candidate now that the election is over.

No matter how you voted, no matter who won the election, perhaps we should be on our knees . . . in prayer.

Mr. and Mrs. James M. Baciulis Schulte-Baciulis

Donna Marie Schulte, daughter of Mary L. and Carl W. Schulte of Grosse Pointe Woods, married James Michael Baciulis, son of June A. and Robert F. Baciulis of Rochester, N.Y., on May 21, 1988, in the Grosse Pointe Academy Chapel.

The bride's maternal uncle, the Rev. Donald Leininger of Dunedin, Fla., officiated at the 5 p.m. ceremony, which was followed by a reception in the Alger House of the Grosse Pointe War Memorial.

The bride wore a two-piece dress, styled with a white silk moire jacket accented with jeweled buttons and a full, gathered lace skirt. The bride and her mother made the veiling and white straw hat worn by the bride. She carried a loose bouquet of mixed white and golden orchids tied with a white satin bow and a lace handerkerchief which had belonged to her greatgrandmother.

Joan E. Sutton of Traverse City was the matron of honor. She wore a gold-colored silk jacket in a woven floral design, with a gold skirt; the outfit was custom designed and made in Traverse City. She carried a bouquet of gold orchids and English ivy and placed a headpiece of gold orchids and greenery on her head.

The bridegroom's niece, Jessica Baciulis of Brockport, N.Y. was the flowergirl. She wore a floor length dress of pale gold satin designed and created by her mother, Bonnie Baciulis. Her headpiece was natural golden orchids and greenery. She carried a small basket of natural and silk gold and white flowers, babies' breath and ivy.

The bridegroom's brother, Robert G. Baciulis of Brockport, was the best man. Ushers included the groom's nephew, Michael Massar of Greece, N.Y., and the bride's brother, Donald W. Schulte of Grosse Pointe Woods. The ringbearer was the groom's nephew, Christopher Kucmerowski of Spencer Port, N.Y.

They wore gold textured silk cummerbunds and ties with their black formal wear; the accessories were designed and handmade by the bride

The mother of the bride wore a full length dress of ivory satin, appliqued in peach, which had been custom designed and made for her. Peach lace applique accented her wide-brimmed ivory hat and her beaded ivory satin

The bridegroom's mother wore a full length dress of taupe, appliqued in ivory, with a matching jacket. Their flowers were peach roses and English ivv.

A string quartet, the Michigan Recital Artists, played classical music at the wedding ceremony.

The wedding had an Hawaiian theme, in keeping with the vacation area where the newlyweds became engaged. The couple designed the invitations with a pineapple theme; flower arrangements of gold silk and dried flowers were used and pineapples were placed at the head table. The bride's mother, brother and aunt hand-crafted the 150 porcelain pineapple ornaments given to guests as keep-

The bride is a graduate of Grosse Pointe North High School and the University of Michigan, where she earned a bachelor of fine arts degree in graphic design and advertising.

Giving thanks for beautiful gardens of past and present

By Ellen Probert Special Writer

Detroit's first large-scale flower show was a huge success. Under the auspices of "The Detroit Journal," a newspaper now long gone, and its editor, William H. Brearly, the show had been a city-wide project and was one of the highlight events of the social scene of 1890.

At one exhibit, the ladies acting as hostesses wore lavender dresses and hats decorated with pansies in shades of purple and lavender. The descriptions in the local press of the show's attractions were flowery, in more ways than one.

In the '90s, Detroit was a garden-filled city. Just before the turn of the century, the Detroit City Garden was created. It was an area about 150-feet square occupying space in the center of the city near the river. There was a small outdoor theater, arbors and shade trees, with roses and flowering shrubs bordering the paths. It was a popular place and shared honors with its rival and competitor, the Michigan Garden, which was located at what is now the corner of Jefferson and Brush and was, in the lavish language of the time, "an example of noble planting."

At that time, on many of the streets radiating from downtown Detroit, the spacious gardens of prominent citizens enhanced their large and comfortable homes. Iron stags pawed the its woodlands, lawns and playing fields. During the early years of this century, flowering crabapple and cherry trees were planted along the lakeshore and at the zoological park.

The first of all the commercial orchards in Michigan was planted in 1824 and heralded the way for the vast apple and pear orchards that comprise a leading industry today. William Woodbridge, later governor of Michigan, planted 2,000 apple and pear trees on his Detroit farm. The Detroit farm of Theodorus Lyon became famous far beyond the boundaries of the state as a testing ground for many varieties of fruit trees as early as 1844.

Flower shows are a continuing tradition here and there are more garden clubs in Grosse Foitne than in any other city in the country except Stamford, Conn, which has two more clubs.

One flower show not to be missed is the annual display of chrysanthemums in the Anna Scripps Whitcomb Conservatory on Belle Isle. Opening this week, it will run until the second week in December and offers everything from tall-stemmed giants to miniature buttons. Colors range from gentle pastels to rich, deep tones in daisy types, anemonies, Japanese fujis, cascades,

Now that the winter heating season is upon us and greenhouse owners are fearfully anticipating the high cost of heating the greenhouse, it might be well to consider some pluses that might justify the expense.

Some greenhouse owners make their greenhouses pay off by raising vegetables, or at least salad makings, in the winter. One greenhouse owner is on record as raising $400 worth of vegetables for a heating cost of $170. If your greenhouse is attached to your house it can be a very valuable help in keeping the humidity level at a healthy

And of course, there is the therapeutic value of horticulture as a relaxing activity, and the asthetic value of flowers and ferns to brighten dark winter

Insulation in the greenhouse and weather stripping around the door are heat-saving things to do, as is sealing fan vents for the winter. You could turn down the thermostat in the greenhouse and concentrate on plants that thrive in cooler temperatures, but whatever the cost, greenhouse owners maintain that it is worth it because horticulture is a year-round activity.

Working toward the 'American Dream' is a life-long effort

By Marian Trainor Special Writer

The American Dream. Basically it is economic security and beyond that the means to have some of the "extras" that make up a better life. For older citizens there is one more - responsive services.

On the question of economic security, retirement, pension plans, the right to work, parttime work and the status of Social Security are important considerations for older citizens.

We are assured that Social Security will remain solvent into the next century despite overextension of benefits to other segments of the populations such as Aid to Dependent Children and the disabled.

This is good news because quality of life is related to economic security. Without adequate means, life breaks down it. There are cards, exercise into a struggle for mere survival. Once life's basic necessities are taken care of, there remains a need for amenities that make life enjoyable.

incomes or transportation problems they are cut off from these enjoyments.

Consumer affairs is another area of concern. As inflation rises, the older person's income goes down. The median income of older families is half that of younger families. Older Americans on a fixed income are caught in a spiral of "downward mobility.'

Protection against fraud is one area where legislation requiring "Truth in Insurance," "Truth in Investments" and "Truth in Home Improvements" could help protect what assets seniors have.

A campaign for better labeling of products is needed. Any older person who tries to read labels on cans and packages in supermarkets to determine contents and ingredients can tell you that the print on those containers should be much larger. Local demonstration projects which provide models for consumer education, advocacy legal assistance and advice to older consumers are also needed.

Another problem which deserves attention is crime. Statistically, older persons are no more likely to be victims of crime than persons of other ages. Part of the reason for this is their self-imposed "low exposure." Many are afraid to go into the streets. Thus their lives are demeaned not only by actual crime against them but also by fear of crime.

If they do become victims of crime, they are more deeply affected. A slight injury to a younger person can be a serious one to someone who is older. It takes longer for them to recover from physical and emotional injuries. Loss of money can devastate an already low budget and possessions taken cannot be replaced.

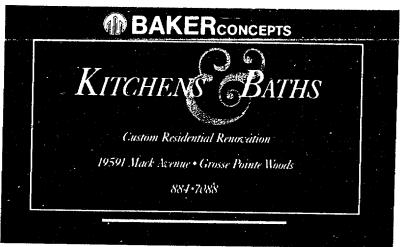

Preventive measures against crime that might be considered include low-cost loans or direct subsidy programs at the community level to enable older homeowners to make their homes more secure; community action programs such as escort services, neighborhood patrols and telephone reassurance; and basic education on crime prevention.

Transportation is another urgent need. Present transportation systems do not adequately importance of transportation in insuring access to vital services.

To improve the mobility of come. older persons, reduced fare programs, local and special discount fares on airlines, buses and railroads are necessary. Subsidized jitney systems, community volunteer drive programs or direct for the present generation of operation of such services by the older citizens but for those who local transit authority would will in the future be a part of it help social service, welfare or health programs.

Grosse Pointe A Unique Community

Architectural Diversity As the great variety of home sizes and styles suggests, growth has continued slowly over many years. It continues even to-day. Old estates are subdivided for building contemporary homes, making the mansions that still survive (and many do) all the more treasured by their owners and tradition-minded residents. At the same time, the area includes homes of just about every style and size—from townhouses, two-tamily units and other small homes to gracious English Tudors, colonials, executive mansions, contemporary ranch styles and a variety of modern designs, including condominiums.

This diversity has helped make Grosse Pointe attractive to all who value well-maintained quality which far exceeds its price.

Sports is news

Today, many news departments at newspapers consider sports writers "a different breed.'

Well, I'm here to proudly defend my profession and turn back all the obnoxious remarks that offend my literary feelings.

News staff writers have to sit in courtrooms and listen to deliberations. They have to scrape the muck off the bottom of a poorly run political campaign and turn it into a rather appealing story. And all sports writers get to do is sit in press boxes, eat decent food, watch games and write intriguing, exciting and invigorating stories. Seems to me sports writers have the edge.

I enjoy reading hard news stories but often, they lack that certain "something."

Instead of reading about a fire that spread quickly, why can't we read about "how the swiftly moving fire was shoved across the room by rapidly blowing winds that created havoc for fire fighters." Adjectives and adverbs are used frequently in news stories, but you never hear of a "southpaw fire fighter calling for a relief pitcher who can hurl a hose at 95 mph."

Talking to the Grosse Pointe News' editorial consultant Bill Elston last week, I learned that some newspapers refer to their sports departments as the toy department of the organization. So be it. References have been made to my cutely decorated and rather sporty wallpaper, I've also been told to remove the basketball rim, the picture of Kirk Gibson, the Michigan pennant and the picture of Curly (Three Stooges) from my wall. Wouldn't you rather shoot a hoop than think of ways to nave fun at city meetings?

Let's take a look at the walls on the news staff side of the

On them are lists of meetings at the city council. Updates of millages. Reports of proposals, fights against ordinances and assignments to take photos of construction. They have to keep tabs on the local and national candidates instead of tabulating votes for Cy Young winners or American League MVPs.

Wouldn't you much rather have statistics of players, winning hits, shots from threepoint land, and records of sports teams? Why would you want pit bull pin-ups and accounts of mandates when you could have sports paraphernalia from wall to wall?

Many people assume that sports writers are not aware of political, world or national issues. But have you ever heard of any political figures becoming athletes? No. You only hear of former athletes being city, state or county officials. Seems to me sports still holds the advantage.

I know news and sports stories are related because both need to inform the reader. But some have said that sports writers can stray from the English language and use trite and colloquial phrases. True, but wouldn't you prefer hearing about a player intercepting a pass, rambling down the field like a locomotive on track, eluding six would be tacklers and delivering a powerful downwardly projection of the ball into the gridiron turf.

Doesn't that beat reading about how some senator delivered an eloquent speech deciphering all circumstantial evidence that more than proves the budget deficit faces increasing danger?

Seems to me sports departments surely enjoy their repu-

3rd loss crushes ULS title hopes

Sports

By Rob Fulton Sports Editor

University Liggett School coach David Backhurst would prefer to think that his soccer team isn't snake bit.

However, after a 3-1 loss to the Detroit Country Day School (DCDS) Yellowjackets in a C-D state semifinal game Nov. 9, he has to consider the possibilities.

"It's tough asking me that 24 hours after a tough loss like this," Backhurst said in reference to the snake bit question. "I would like to think we weren't. In this game we were trying to win, but we were hoping to swing things back to our side."

The Knights (16-3-3) were ranked No. 3 going in, and the No. 1 ranked Yellowjackets didn't seem unbeatable, but ULS was trying to avenge more than one loss.

The bitterness of a 3-1 loss to DCDS in last year's state finals was still on the Knights' palates. They didn't want a repeat of the '87 finals, but they also had to deal with a 3-1 regular-season loss this year.

"I think the kids came out and tried to feel Country Day out," Backhurst said, "but I know they were also thinking about last year's loss in the finals.'

After Doug Wood's goal tied the game in the last minute of the first half, the Knights were in control. They used their finesse game to their advantage, but the more physical DCDS game began to take its toll. "We know they are a very aggressive team," Backhurst said. Everytime these two teams meet, there is plenty of physical play.'

Adam Uzelack of DCDS and Bill Lucken of ULS, two of the more physical players, were purely combatants on the field. Everywhere Uzelack went, so went Lucken, and vice versa.

"I wanted to put Bill on Uzelack because they both play very tough games," Backhurst said. Bill did an outstanding job on Uzelack."

The defending Class C-D champs opened the game with a vengeance. ULS couldn't move the ball from its own zone, but Backhurst's squad was persist-

"In the first half, they (DCDS) came out and took it to us," Backhurst said. "Our defense held up very well and our goaltending (Brian Schmidt) was very strong. The goal they scored came off a headed ball on a corner kick. In fact, the ball hit the post.

Either way DCDS controlled the play. But, after Wood's goal ULS had the momentum.

"In the second half, we started controlling the ball," Backhurst said. "We were all around the net and it was just a matter of time before I felt we would score. "They (DCDS) couldn't move the ball out of their own zone and that's when we were mounting our attack to win the game," Backhurst added. "We had the ball probably 70 percent of the second half." As the Knights swarmed the Yellowjackets' net the game grew increasingly tense. "The game was intense," Backhurst said. "At that point you know one goal could make the difference, so both teams are trying to score, while they try to hold off the opponent." ULS' threat to score came from Lucken, but his shot ricocheted off the crossbar and into the hands of the Yellowjacket net-minder. 'We were doing everything we could," Backhurst said. "Bill's shot just didn't make it.

Minutes later the twist of terror descended upon the Knights as they lost Lucken's services after he was yellow-carded for the second time.

"There was a bunch of kids in the corner and it was obvious there was a tussle going on,' said Backhurst. "After it cleared out all I could see was a DCDS player laying on the ground holding his back.

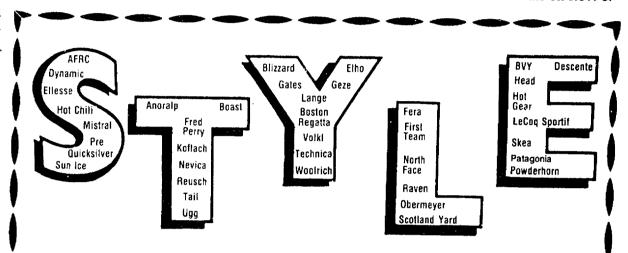

"I tried to piece it together, but all I was told was that Bill couldn't play the rest of the game. The ref also told me Bill had retaliated," Backhurst added.

It was bad enough that ULS was forced to play the rest of the game short-handed, but when Wood was carded and ejected

"The rivalry is tough with DCDS," he said. "I have a great respect for their program, but the fact that our soccer team can go head-to-head ... and make them earn a victory is some consolation."

In the meantime, ULS will try to evaluate the nightmare it couldn't escape. Backhurst said he'll return to the drawing board, but a prosperous season won't be forgotten.

Managing the stress in your life

What is stress?

Stress is one of the major complaints of modern day life. For most, its negative effects creep up slowly, ignored, until major problems occur, such as illness, accidents, inability to function, and difficulty with interpersonal relationships. In itself, stress is essential to life. It provides the energy to get things done. It energizes us and stimulates us to grow. Stress can be positive as well as negative.

Stress is not what others are doing to us. It is our body's physical and emotional responses to what happens around us - to events such as holidays or children going to school for the first time; to completing a major project at work or waiting for a promotion; to dealing with other people, and to our own demands on ourselves. How we interpret these events also influences the way in which we respond. No two people will perceive stressors in the same way. In the case of a divorce, for example, one person may experience a great sense of relief and another may encounter so many changes that it creates phenomenal pressures.

Even though we may not perceive the same stressor in the same way, each of us responds physically in similar ways to these demands. This response is called the fight or flight response. In primitive times, it prepared man to react to danger in the environment, and still our bodies prepare us to react to many situations automatically as if there were danger. Adrenalin is released to prime the

The heart beats faster and blood is diverted from all parts of the body to send energy to the large muscles of the arms and legs; muscles become tense, eyes dilate, breathing becomes rapid and shallow; and our thinking narrows so that we see events in black and white terms. This response is self-protective and can be useful. But what happened in primitive times is that this energy could be released. Man ran from the beast or fought it.

Today, our dangers are not of the same kind. We respond to everyday happenings — even daily hassles - and we may not be able to release this energy we have built up. We may not even recognize this increasing tension as we go from one stressful situation to another, as in the executive who handles one difficult decision after another during the course of a normal day. We ignore the signs of distress until we get stress overload or chronic

Recognizing the sources

The first step in managing stress before it gets out of control is to learn to identify what are your sources of stress and how you respond to those stressors. Take a look at different aspects of your life and do an inventory: are there major events occurring, such as job change, moving, illness in the family, major holidays? What are the daily hassles that get you wound up?

Consider your social pressures friends, family, community, how you are affected by others. If you work, what are the tensions there? Do you have too much or too little to do? Are there growth opportunities? Do you have positive working relationships with others? Do you place undue pressure on yourself to be or perform in certain ways? Also take a long look at your behavior: Do you run by the clock, concentrate on the quantity rather than the quality of what you do during the day, are you impatient and always in a hurry or take things in stride?

It is important to recognize counteracting the stress re- up, symbolically drop your cares when you are under stress and how you respond in order to break the chain of distress. As you identify the sources of your stress, see if there are alternatives in how you are responding to those stressors in order for you to cope more effectively with these events and people - and yourself.

Management techniques

1) Get a check-up from your doctor. Sometimes underlying physical problems can both cause and contribute to stress.

2) Exercise regularly. Exercise itself is a stress producer. It triggers the body the same way as fight or flight situations do. During exercise, stress-related hormones that sustain the arousal response are burned off and endorphines, natural hormones which create a calming effect, are released. Once you have finished exercising, your body relaxes. To be effective, an exercise program needs to include vigorous activity lasting 20-30 minutes three times a week.

3) Proper nutrition. Good nutrition is vital to good health and is especially critical when you are under unusual stress or are going through a major life change. You need to be careful about what you eat and include a well-balanced diet - including proteins, vitamins and minerals to repair damage caused by dis-

4) Relaxation training. There are many different relaxation exercises which are helpful in sponse. If you clench your fist for a few minutes and then relax, you will see how other muscles in your body become tense and need to relax this tension. Progressive relaxation involves three steps: Get in a comfortable sitting or lying position; breathe slowly and deeply and concentrate on your breathing (count one, two; one, two) to eliminate disturbing thoughts; and gradually tense and relax each muscle of your body, beginning at your feet and working your way up to your head. It is recommended that relaxation exercises be practiced daily for about 20

5) Thinking positively. As mentioned, the way we perceive events influences how we respond. There are positive and negative interpretations for every situation. We have a choice in how we think about things. Some hints in managing negative thoughts include:

Breaking irrational thought patterns, talking positively, stop negative thinking, maintain relaxation.

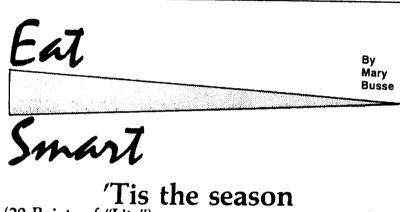

6) Managing time. Plan out your day, scheduling in time for rest and relaxation. Be realistic about what you can accomplish and don't over-extend yourself. Try to keep your work problems at your office and vice versa. One technique is to say goodbye to work as you close the door. Another is to allow yourself x and worries in an imaginary box at your doorstep which you lock until the next morning.

7) Problem-solving. Often we don't see alternative ways of responding to situations. Identify ing and writing down the problem you are encountering and the way you respond is the first step. Take a look at the problem closely and see if there are other ways of addressing the situation.

8) Managing change. Sometimes major life changes create stress. At other times, the absence of change can be harmful. As you look at events that are happening in your life, you may consider avoiding additional changes if you have too many coming at the same time. If you are experiencing distress from the lack of activity, perhaps you could consider making some changes. As noted, daily hassles can contribute to distress.

The negative effects of stress take a long time to occur. Breaking patterns also takes some time and effort. Start by recognizing how you respond to stress and identifying what are the sources of your stress. See what you are currently doing that is effective and what is not effective. Add to your coping repertoire. By using these and other techniques, you have the opportunity to use the positive aspects of stress — the stimulation — to be creative and make the best use of your energy.

(20 Points of "Lite")

Tables bowing from the weight of the multitude of traditional holiday dishes. A host of desserts that could tempt the most dedicated dieter, and plates heaping with food the abundance is overwhelming!

It is no wonder that our ancestors referred to the holiday table as the "groaning board."

It is part of our tradition to eat, and often overeat, during the holidays. After all, many of the foods served during this season are special to this time of year, and will not be made available at any other time. Consequently, the "enjoy-theholidays, diet-after-the-New-Year" attitude has become a way of life for many of us who are not so fortunate to have a body that can "throw off" unwanted calories.

This time of year, we often find people eating as a result of mental and emotional cues that have been etched deeply in our minds. We do not react out of actual hunger, but from learned responses to the sounds, smells and sights of the holidays. We even may have made a promise to ourselves that this holiday season will be different, but too often we find we cannot resist all of the tempations, and start with one tiny bite, which leads to another and another. If we interpret this action as another example of our failure to follow through with our promise, it often leads to feelings of guilt.

For some, the holidays are a positive and exciting time. For others, it can be a time of depression. Either way, you can experience stress, which often results in overeating. Therefore, it is important that we take time right now to relax and plan ahead.

This advance planning can decrease a lot of the stress of the last minute hassle and let you enjoy the holidays instead of just "surviving" the holidays. Following is a list of some of the ideas at Diet Center that help our clients truly enjoy a happy and healthy holiday season.

For the guest

First, and foremost, don't allow yourself to be pressured by the host and hostess or other guests. Remember, you were invited to the party because your company is enjoyed, not to be fattened up!

While a hostess often gauges the success of her dinner parties by the amount of food and drink consumed, you can put her mind at ease by assuring her what a wonderful party it is. If you don't carry the attitude around that you are being deprived, no one will get the impression that you are, and feel the need to compensate.

1) Don't starve all day so you can overindulge that evening. Research has shown: eating most of your calories in one big meal is the worst way to expect your body to metabolize those calories. As far as your body knows, just such a message could mean that you are stranded in a desert somewhere, so when you finally do eat, the body will "hoard" the food, as a survival reaction.

2) Do you remember your mother warning you not to eat before dinner because it would spoil your appetite? Well, the reverse of that advice can be exactly what you need before attending a party. Eat an apple and drink a glass of water before you leave for the party to help take the edge off your hunger. 3) As soon as you accept the invitation, make a mental note of what you will wear to the event, along with a mental picture of seeing yourself in control of what you eat, focusing on the interesting people and conversation.

4) Set up a reward system for yourself. For instance, if you stay true to your "party resolve," you will buy that terrific new outfit you saw.

5) Don't avoid the scale. Set a realistic amount of weight you will be at the onset of the holidays, during the holidays, and then what you will weigh when the celebrating is over. A zero weight gain is your

6) Go to the party with the intent of not just meeting new people, but with the promise you will really get to know at least one new person. This helps us focus on the other guests instead of using food as a "crutch."

7) If the meal is served buffet style, be one of the last in line, and one of the first to go to another room to eat. If the meal is a sit-down dinner, take a small amount of what is being served, and yes play with your food!

8) Watch your alcohol consumption. Alcoholic beverages do a number on your fat cells besides what it can do to your brain! It can trigger the appestat and make you hungrier, and it also loosens up your resolve to overeat. A glass of mineral water with a twist of lemon or lime is not only refreshing, but gives you something to sip at the same time saying "yes, I have a drink, thank you very much."

9) Depending on the party, you can offer to bring a dish to share. Your hostess may appreciate the gesture, and you can be assured that there is a food item that is perfect for your game plan.

10) Observe those around you at the party. It is sad but true, that many who are overweight are often the ones who have their plates piled high. Keep that in mind as you choose what and how much you will eat.

11) Take your time when eating. Set down your knife, fork and spoon in between bites. Relax, enjoy your meal. This will also help avoid those after-party feelings of being "stuffed." It gives the digestive tract time to digest and assimilate what you are eat-

12) Even though time is a more valuable commodity this time of year, MAKE time to exercise. A daily 15-minute workout, whether it is going for a walk around the block, simple floor exercises or riding on a stationary bike; whatever you choose, the activity will not only help you maintain your weight, but will help reduce some of the accompanying stress associated with the holidays.

13) Remember to separate love and food. A nice, big hug can feel as good as "scarfing" down that gooey dessert.

14) Go to the party with a game plan. Instead of relying on the old standby of "oh, I'll just try to watch what I eat."

make a definite plan. A firm commitment put to paper will go along way in backing you up, once you get to the party.

The host and hostess

15) The prime goal of any host or hostess is to ensure that your guests are having a good time. This is greatly determined by whether or not they feel comfortable.

If a guest says "no thank you," as hosts we should respect their wishes, and not take it as a personal insult. After all, our guests were invited for their company, not a contest to see how much food they can pack away!

16) Offer a few varieties of foods that will appeal to those who may be watching their weight and those who are not. Fresh vegetable trays, fruits and such are foods that everyone can enjoy.

17) Don't allow the planning and preparation of your party to create undue stress in your life. Start a type of party-day countdown, and do a little bit toward the actual event each day.

As you work out the budget for your party, don't skimp on getting some help. The extra dollars it might take to pay for help cleaning the house is well spent. You will enjoy your own party more, and more likely not be left overtired and out of control of your own eating.

18) Don't call attention to what your guests are eating or not eating, or that you can't eat such and such because you are watching your weight. If the subject is not brought up, most people will not notice what you are choosing or what one of your guests is eating or not eating.

19) For an informal celebration, try a light buffet. This option makes it very easy for your guests to choose foods they can eat without obvious elimination of a certain dish.

20) Get rid of the leftovers! Either send them home with your guests, freeze what can be frozen, or discard them. Leaving all the leftover foods in the refrigerator only tempts you for a midnight

There is nothing more discouraging than ringing in the New Year several pounds and guilt trips heavier. This does not have to become a yearly tradition. With planning and personal commitment, you can enjoy the holidays and the many wonderful traditions without adding to a weight problem. And by navigating through the holiday successfully, you truly will have something to celebrate in the New Year.

'Pirates of Penzance': Raucous good humor, high spirits

Editor

If you need to get away from the world for awhile, go see "The Pirates of Penzance" at the Fisher Theatre.

It is an evening of raucous good humor and high spirits done up in fine costumes and scenery. But it's the anythinggoes choreography and the controlled performances that make this comic operetta fun and keep it from sliding into silly.

This Gilbert and Sullivan play, presented by the Michigan Opera Theatre, was first performed in New York in 1879. It's safe to say that audiences then didn't see any moonwalking or Keystone Kop stuff as there are in this production, but the story line is timeless.

The music is pleasing and the lyrics hold their age well.

My last encounter with Gil-Co-starring with them are Jo-bert and Sullivan was in high

'Good Mother' tests rules of behavior By Marian Trainor

Special Writer

Sue Miller's novel, "The Good Mother," published in 1986, was a national conversational piece. A myriad questions were raised on whether the promises of the sexual freedom in the '60s were attainable in the '80s and whether a single mother should be forced to choose between her lover and her child.

The film version based on that book and bearing the same title asks the same questions, but with a difference. In the book characters are presented in such a way that what they do is wrong. The film offers a softer, more sympathetic view toward them. It emphasizes the ways that each of them is right.

Diane Keaton plays the part of Anna in the film. She is portrayed as a good mother, so much that in the ending, Anna confides that one of the comforts that has come out of her ordeal .

After an amicable divorce from her husband Brian (James Naughton), Anna is given custody of their 6-year-old daughter Molly (Asia Vieira). Choosing to be independent, she refuses to take any money from Brian and supports herself and the child by working part-time in a hospital laboratory and giving piano lessons in her home. The rest of the time she devotes to Molly.

They have a happy life, but for Anna, it's not a complete one.

So it is when she meets Leo (Liam Nesson) a free-spirited architect, she is enthralled by him and they become lovers.

Leo has no problem making friends with Molly and for a while it seems Anna has managed to have it all - passion, motherhood, work.

Her idyllic life is shattered when Brian informs her that he is taking Molly from her and intends to sue her for custody of the child.

He claims that Leo has sexually abused their daughter. What happened was curious Molly, seeing Leo naked, asks if she can touch him. Thinking liberated Anna would approve, he allows it.

The incident becomes the basis of a nasty trial during which Anna is asked if the child is returned to her, will she give up her lover.

Keaton does a magnificent job as the young mother who experiences love for the first time, and the distraught torn-up woman who fights for her child in brutal courtroom proceedings.

Other actors who contribute to this film's impact are Jason Robards, Ralph Bellamy and Teresa Wright.

One of the strengths of the film is that it forces the viewer to decide the gravity of the charges against Anna and Leo. These are knotty questions that tests the rules of acceptable behavior, and what happens when boundaries are crossed.

It had to happen. If Kevin Costner made a successful movie about an athlete, as he did in this summer's "Bull Durham," it follows that his Hollywood clone Dennis Quaid had to do the same thing.

Not that Quaid isn't a fine actor in his own right, and not that "Everybody's All American," this late fall entry into the sports film genre, isn't a worthwhile project. On the contrary, "American," which concerns itself with football, is a fine complement to the year's earlier baseball picture.

Despite its occasional propensity for sweeping melodrama, this film is a more easily acceptable and understandable tale than "Durham" was. Where "Durham" concerned itself more with the metaphysical aspects of the institution of baseball, "American" explores the human consequences of superstardom.

Quaid is the title character, film makes a strong case for years pass. Grey's inner conviction and integrity, even as he's getting pulled further away from what he knows is life's reality.

College ends, and the star jock marries the beauty queen, but they do not live happily ever after. Oh sure, he gets a contract with a pro team, and the money begins to pour in. But what good does money do when you can't even trust your best friends, who want to use your status to make a few bucks for themselves? And what good does money do when the match made in heaven can't even spark a conversation about what's beginning to happen in their relationship?

"American" is about relationships as much as it's about football. The film's point is that things change over a lifetime, and these changes manifest themselves most rapidly in rela-Gavin's tag-along cousin, be-

And Babs and Gavin, who seemed to have everything going for them during the glory years of college, are just another couple out there in the real world. They have financial problems to deal with, career challenges to face, and personal struggles to overcome.

Football — and the glory of being an All American — is just one chapter in the book of life. Football may have been the cause of the best memories this couple shares, but it is also the cause of their greatest problems.

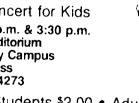

Making it clear that sports is more than just kids' stuff is one of this picture's accomplishments. And even though it might not do a whole lot to demonstrate to viewers that there are indeed some differences betionships. Cake, who was little tween Quaid and Costner, it more to Babs in college than does, nevertheless, come off quite successfully.
