Santa!

The Grosse Pointe Village Association's 12th annual Santa Claus Parade was held under sunny, cloudless skies Nov. 25, the day after Thanksgiving. The big guy himself made an appearance much to the delight of spectators who lined Kercheval. Passage of Senate bill would protect day cares in homes

By John Minnis
Staff Writer

Grosse Pointe Woods and other Michigan cities will not be able to exclude child day cares from residential areas if a bill now in the House is approved.

A substitute version of Senate Bill 687, which has been approved by the Senate and is now in the House Social Services and Youth Committee, will prohibit cities from prohibiting family or group day cares as permissible residential uses. A family day care can have no more than six children at any one time and group day cares are limited to up to 12 children.

The day care bill comes at a time when the city of Grosse Pointe Woods is attempting to close down state-licensed day cares in residential neighborhoods.

The city has acted to shut down four licensed residential day cares in the past year and a half since the day care controversy began. The city's argument is that residents taking in children for financial gain are operating businesses. Businesses are prohibited from residential homes in the Woods as well as most cities.

Senate Bill 687 states that family and group day care homes licensed with the state "shall be considered a residential use . . . and shall not be subject to a special-use or conditional permit or procedure different from those required for other dwellings" under the same zoning.

The bill, if approved, would obviously override the Woods' prohibition of day care operations as businesses in residential neighborhoods.

The Woods City Council passed a resolution Nov. 7 in opposition to the bill and forwarded it to state lawmakers.

State Rep. William Bryant, R-Grosse Pointe Farms, is opposed to Senate Bill 687 as it is currently written. He said most people don't mind a home day care with one or two children, but they are opposed to homes taking care of up to 12 children at one time.

Bryant said that while he couldn't predict how the House would vote on the day care bill, he pointed out that since the more conservative Senate approved the bill, it was likely the House would do likewise.

He said that as an opponent of the bill he had two choices: 1) He could outright vote no; or 2) He could work to get group day cares, which would allow up to 12 children, taken out of the bill. He said that if it appears the bill is going to pass no matter what he and other opponents say, then he will probably fight to get the group day cares taken out.

The House Social Services and Youth Committee was expected to consider the bill at its Nov. 30 meeting at 9 a.m. If the bill gets out of committee right away, then that will still leave at least two weeks for the House to vote on the bill before the end of the session.

Meanwhile, the city of Grosse Pointe Woods is defending its prohibition of day cares under its ordinance restricting businesses from residences in a suit brought by a state licensed residential day care operator who was forced to discontinue her child care activities.

Mary Roose filed a lawsuit against the city June 29 charging that the city's ordinance prohibiting businesses in residences is vague, unconstitutional and is selectively enforced by the city. Her suit is also seeking at least $10,000 in damages and court costs, interest and attorneys' fees.

Roose was one of three licensed residential day care operators who received cease-and-desist orders from the city after

Woods council officially adopts a permanent anti-pit-bull ordinance

By John Minnis
Staff Writer

The final, permanent version of the ordinance banning pit bulls was unanimously adopted by the Grosse Pointe Woods City Council last week, while the city has yet to take action against a single pit bull.

The ordinance adopted Nov. 21 is very similar to the emergency pit bull ban enacted by the council Oct. 3.

While the permanent ordinance takes effect in 20 days after its enactment, the emergency pit bull ban has been in effect since Oct. 10 and will remain in effect until the official ordinance takes over.

The emergency ban made it illegal to harbor a pit bull in the Woods, and it gave the Public Safety Department authority to inform pit bull owners of the ban and, if the dogs weren't removed from the city, impound the animals pending municipal court action.

If the court decides the animals are of the type banned, then it could order the dogs from the city or, as a last resort, euthanized.

City attorney George Catlin said last week that the city has yet to take formal action against any specific pit bull owners in the city. While public safety officers have been attempting to contact known pit bull owners since the ban was enacted, they have not impounded an animal, nor have they brought court action against a pet owner.

At the Nov. 21 meeting, Councilwoman Jean Rice proposed that the Public Safety Department go through its dog licenses and determine who has a licensed pit bull. Her fellow council members agreed and ordered the department to begin the records search. Owners of licensed pit bulls will then be notified of the ban.

Meanwhile, the city must defend itself against two lawsuits filed in opposition to the pit bull ban. The suits sought a restraining order against the ban in October, but Wayne County Circuit Judge Phillip Jourdan denied the order, ruling that the ban presents no immediate, irreparable harm to those bringing the suits.

The suits were brought by Terry and Molly Shook, whose ownership of a pit bull led to neighbors' successful petition to have the breed banned, and Friends of the Downtrodden, an assumed name.

The court has yet to hear arguments from the two suits that the pit bull ban is unconstitutional. Catlin said no court dates have been set.

Catlin said the Nov. 18 ruling in Oakland County Circuit Court that the Waterford Township pit bull ban was excessive and unconstitutional will be considered in Wayne County Circuit Court, but he believes he can defend the Woods ban.

He said he will use statistics he has found concerning pit bull attacks and present a "trail of information" to lead the court to the conclusion that a ban on pit bulls is not unreasonable and is justified.

The ordinance as adopted prohibits residents from harboring or keeping any dogs known as pit bull terriers because of the inherent danger to the public health, welfare and safety they present, according to the ordinance.

Pit bull terriers are defined in the ordinance as:

- A bull terrier.
- A Staffordshire bull terrier.
- An American Staffordshire bull terrier.
- An American pit bull terrier.

• A dog of mixed breed or of other breed than the above listed, which breed or mixed breed is known as pit bull dog or pit bull terrier and has the appearance and characteristics of being predominantly of any of the above listed breeds or any combination thereof.

Four detained in double theft at Farms market

Three men and a woman, all of Detroit, were held Monday following a purse snatching and theft of liquor at the Village Food Market on Mack in Grosse Pointe Farms.

A Farms woman's purse was taken at about 11 a.m. at the market, where she had left it in a cart while shopping, according to Farms police reports.

The store's manager also reported that two bottles of liquor were taken. As of Monday no charges had been filed against the four. Witnesses were unable to specify exactly which of the suspects took the purse and liquor.

The case is under investigation by the Farms Detective Bureau and warrants will most likely be issued.

The four suspects — two 39-year-old males, an 83-year-old male and a 23-year-old female — were held for processing Monday at the Grosse Pointe City Public Safety Department.

The female was released on a $150 personal recognizance bond and turned over to Detroit police on an outstanding misdemeanor warrant. One of the 39-year-old males and the 83-year-old man was released pending further investigation. The other 39-year-old was released pending charges and was turned over to Detroit police on a traffic warrant.

The store's manager approached the suspects while they were sitting in a gray Mercury Monarch after the reported thefts. He asked them to return the purse, but they said they didn't know what he was talking about and drove off.

The suspects were stopped on westbound Warren at Lodewyck by Farms officers with the assistance of a Grosse Pointe Park officer.

The officer found the victim's purse and wallet on the floor in the rear passenger's side. Two bottles of cognac were found on the floor in the front passenger's side.

While questioning the suspects, the officers recovered $30 that was believed to have been in the victim's wallet.

The suspects' vehicle was impounded.

Goodfellows to sell papers Monday

No matter what the weather is Monday, Dec. 5, Detroit's Old Newsboys, the Goodfellows, will be out selling papers as they have for the past 74 years to ensure that there will be no child in Detroit without a Christmas.

Plans for the 75th Goodfellow sale, with a goal of $750,000, were finalized by Detroit News columnist Pete Waldmeir, president of the group for 1988 and a Grosse Pointe resident.

Waldmeir will be selling at the New Center One Building at the corner of Second and West Grand Boulevard this year. The annual sale ensures a merry Christmas for 41,000 underprivileged children who might otherwise be forgotten.

Waldmeir said there are no administrative expenses. "The men and women running it are personally involved, many of them contributing their time, money and effort all year long," he said. "Every single dollar raised goes to the kids for whom it's collected."

Goodfellow packages include T-shirts, briefs, socks, caps, scarves and gloves as well as jeans, books and candy. Also included in little girls' packages are dolls dressed by local organizations and individuals.

In addition to Christmas packages, the Goodfellows support a year-round shoe program that provides shoes for those who need them, dental care when required and camperships for the deprived.

Goodfellow lists are compiled by members of the Detroit Board of Education Attendance Department. Gift boxes this year are being packed at The Detroit News.

Goodfellow dolls on display

More than 450 Goodfellow dolls are on display to the public on Level One, 100 Tower, Renaissance Center, just west of the Westin Hotel lobby.

There is a doll dressed as U.S. Olympic winner Florence Joyner in leotards, black flowing hair, gold and silver medals draped around her neck and long fingernails painted red, white and blue. There are baby dolls; brides; an Indian maiden on a wooden rocking horse; a Japanese doll in maize and blue kimono with slippers on her feet; and a doll in a hospital bed complete with the cast on her left leg and an intravenous tube on her right arm.

There is also a doll dressed as Liza Doolittle in the movie "My Fair Lady," a little Dutch girl in wooden shoes; a Raggedy Ann doll; Cleopatra in gold lame; a hiker with leather boots and knapsack; a nun; and a doll sitting down to a tea party with her smaller doll.

These dolls represent the 11,000 that were dressed by people in 56 metropolitan area organizations and numerous individuals. Girls between 5 and 8 will receive one of the dolls along with their Christmas package of clothing.

Farms awards tree contract for next year

An $8,000-plus tree contract for 1988 was awarded to a Warren company by the Grosse Pointe Farms City Council Nov. 14.

Shock Brothers Inc. submitted the lowest bid of $8,364 for 51 trees to be planted next year as part of the Farms' annual project.

The Farms is now completing the planting of some 50 trees in the median along Mack Avenue. The Mack plantings were a joint project between the city and Wayne County.

Historian critical of Grosse Pointe's preservation efforts

By Margie Reins Smith
Staff Writer

Guardrails along Lakeshore are an eyesore.

The loss of the Punch & Judy Theatre is a shame.

The Grosse Pointe Central Library building, designed by Marcel Breuer, is one of Grosse Pointe's most significant architectural gems.

New homes replacing Lakeshore's demolished mansions, in some cases, are garish; they're packed tightly on too-small lots; they're not designed within the historical context of Lakeshore.

So says former Grosse Pointer Sara Amy Leach, historian for the National Park Service in Washington, D.C.

"It's important to set certain standards for historic preservation," Leach said. "But effectiveness is always at the local level. It needs state and county incentives. It has to be a financially viable project. And there has to be a use for the building."

"It's a shame. In a community where there's so much money and education and people who appreciate their surroundings — it's a shame there's not more awareness for their history."

"Preservation shouldn't have to be forced on people."

Leach has been in her present position for more than a year. "People think of the National Park Service as an agency of natural resources," she said. "But there's also a huge component that deals with historic resources. My division, the Historic Architecture Buildings Survey/Historic American Engineering Record (HABS/HAER) documents and records buildings by using photos, measured drawings and historic reports," she said. "We set standards for preservation nationwide."

Leach is a 1976 graduate of Grosse Pointe North. She graduated from Ohio Wesleyan University with degrees in journalism and art history, and later earned a master's degree in architectural history from the University of Virginia, School of Architecture, with a certificate in historic preservation.

She lives now in Arlington, Va., just across the river from her favorite city — Washington. "I fell in love with Washington in the summer between my junior and senior year when I did an internship at the Corcoran Gallery of Art. It's a wonderful place, in terms of liveability — the Smithsonian — the parks — it's difficult to be bored in Washington, D.C."

HABS/HAER finds projects and mitigates the loss of buildings that have historic value. She said they focus on three-month summer projects carried out by graduate students who work in the field. Teams of historians and architects worked on 32 projects last summer. She said their research is compiled, edited and filed during the rest of the year. Leach edits documents and oversees research.

Some projects in Michigan last summer included one at the Sleeping Bear Dunes; a lighthouse in the upper part of the lower peninsula; the UP's copper mines; and the Illinois and Michigan canal.

Leach was in town Nov. 4-6 to present a paper at "Americans and the Automobile," a conference sponsored by the Society for Commercial Archaeology and the Henry Ford Museum and Greenfield Village in Dearborn. The society is concerned with structures, signs and symbols of America's commercial progress — highways, bus stations, diners, motels, fairgrounds, amusement parks and the like.

"Preservation is not just about buildings," she said. "It's about vistas, landscaping, parkways. Guardrails along Lakeshore would be a disaster. A lower speed limit could reduce the danger of driving into the lake."

Leach pointed out some successful historic preservation efforts in Grosse Pointe: the Shores police station; the Grosse Pointe Academy building; the one-room schoolhouse on Mack Avenue near Lochmoor.

"It's not always the glitzy stuff that's important," she said. "We should be preserving cottages, filling stations, storefronts, hotels, parkways. The current trend in historic preservation includes landscape, parks, scenic drives, even campgrounds."

Referring to the loss of several of Grosse Pointe's mansions, Stonehurst and Rose Terrace, she said, "Sure, these are impractical to heat. But if you have to take them down, at least zone so that new construction isn't squeezed into an area that was, historically, one estate."

"One of Grosse Pointe's problems," she said, "besides the apathy, is that there's not a highly visible historical society. It's hard to believe a little theater (like the Punch & Judy) couldn't make it. It's a shame. But there's not much a handful of people can do."

Leach said a local historical society needs to educate the community. "For instance, they could have quizzes in the newspaper to keep people looking at architecture. They could have walking tours. They could persuade schools to include (local history) in the curriculum. They could rally local architects. Keep track of cemeteries. Publish a guide to architecture. Do a big PR campaign — which, I know, takes time, funds and finesse."

Tax credits are available as incentives. A survey is necessary. "You can't do much until you know what's here."

She said that large estates, when they clearly aren't viable, should be allowed (by zoning changes) to be broken up into condos. "We need to find unique answers to problems. Tailored solutions. There will always be people who don't like it, but sometimes, in order to preserve a community, someone has to forego personal taste."

"Greed plays a large factor. Some people just want the money out of a building or a property," she said.

"There are thousands of historic districts around the country," she said. "Why can't a community with our financial resources hang onto a dozen buildings? There's something really wrong here."

But, she said, "It's never too late."

Milk River dredging aground in depths of sailboats' keels

By John Minnis
Staff Writer

A dispute has arisen as to whether the dredging of the mouth of the Milk River at Lakefront Park harbor is necessary for all boaters or if the only ones benefited will be the handful of owners of sailboats with fixed keels.

In September the Grosse Pointe Woods City Council directed city engineer Larry Pate and Parks and Recreation Director D.J. Hallmann to begin making specifications and coming up with cost estimates for dredging a channel to the lake.

The city had hoped the dredging could be done by next year's boating season, but after learning at a Recreation Committee meeting last month that the costly dredging — ranging from $36,000 to $250,000 — might not be needed except by the minority of boaters with fixed-keel sailboats, the council is now divided whether to continue with the project.

Mayor Pro Tem Robert Novitke said everyone was under the assumption that the dredging had to be done to keep the harbor operational. After the Recreation Committee meeting, however, Novitke said it appears there is enough clearance in the channel to allow passage of power boats and sailboats with retractable keels.

The estimated cost of dredging a canal 50 feet wide, 240 feet long and 3 feet deep is $50,000, or $37.50 per cubic yard, according to a figure obtained by Hallmann. Novitke said another estimate requires having to dredge 2,000 cubic yards at a cost of $13 to $18 a yard, or a maximum of $36,000. He said he has even heard an estimate as high as $250,000.

Novitke said it's too early to tell how much of the harbor is going to have to be dredged, what the cost will be or even if the dredging is needed. He said that if the dredging is needed only because of a small number of sailboats, then it would not be fair for the taxpayers to pay for something that only helps a few.

He said the city has to determine the draft of all the boats registered in the harbor to determine if only sailboats are presently threatened by the low water levels.

Of the 248 boat slips in the harbor, about 40 are occupied by sailboats, Novitke said.

Councilman William Wilson said the city engineer was directed to take more soundings last month. He said the soundings are needed to determine the best angle to get to deep water in the lake.

He said the Army Corps of Engineers expects even lower water levels in the Great Lakes than those experienced last year.

According to the November report of the Corps of Engineers, the Lake St. Clair water level at the end of October was 15 inches lower than it was a year ago and 4 inches lower than a month ago. The water level is expected to be another 4 inches lower by the end of this month. The lowering lake level is attributed to a seasonal decline that is expected

At the end of April 1989 Lake St. Clair is expected to be about 8 inches lower than it was in April 1988.

Novitke said that if the lower lake levels impairs the harbor for many of the boaters, then the city would have no choice but to have the dredging done.

In September, the council directed City Administrator-Clerk Chester Petersen to contact St. Clair Shores residents living along the canals that lead into the Milk River and who would also benefit from the dredging.

The council would like the canal homeowners to share in the cost of the dredging. The city is considering dividing the cost of dredging by the number of docks in the harbor and along the canals, with each dock owner paying an equal share.

Mayor George Freeman said the city engineer and the Parks and Recreation Department will have the water depths determined and cost estimates worked out in time for the council's Dec. 12 meeting.

He said that until the council has more information, it cannot make a decision concerning the dredging.

The Recreation Committee will review the data obtained by the soundings and the need for dredging at its Dec. 8 meet-

Airport committee develops statement of purpose

By Ronald J. Bernas
Staff Writer

The ad-hoc committee appointed earlier this year representing the Pointes and Harper Woods interests in the proposed expansion of Detroit City Airport now has a purpose statement, but no name yet.

Currently called the Grosse Pointes-Harper Woods Study Committee for Detroit City Airport, the eight-member committee met Nov. 21 and stated their purpose is in part, "to determine the facts relative to the expansion of Detroit City Airport; determine what actions the respective cities may take to restrict offensive flights over their boundaries (and) join study committees funded by the FAA relative to the expansion of Detroit City Airport."

The committee was formed in April after a number of residents expressed concern for safety and for the increased noise from low-flying planes that is sure to accompany airport expansion. The Woods council was the first of the five Pointes to pass a resolution opposing the airport expansion.

According to Jack King, who is co-chairman of the committee with Art Williams, the committee is concerned with the expansion because it might include an east-west runway which would mean planes would be flying low over the Pointes and Harper Woods. The low-flying planes bring with them concerns about safety and noise pollution.

King said with the larger jets comes noise pollution, which would cause depreciation in property values.

"(The committee will) seek assistance from state and local governmental agencies and officials; and propose courses of action to the respective mayors and city councils with the objective of preserving the peace, quiet, health, safety, tranquility and quality of life as we know it," the purpose statement concludes.

Also discussed at the meeting was the $400,000 given to the city from the FAA for a master plan study, including a noise study. The committee has asked to be invited to the meetings of the master plan committee, King said, but the city has not yet responded.

King said his committee will meet at the chair's pleasure or when new information needs to be presented to the members.

"There's no point in holding regular meetings just to hold a meeting," he said.

Other members of the committee are: Tom Sullivan, representing the Park, Lloyd Semple and Brandon Rogers representing the Farms; Paul Beaupre for the Woods, James Wright for the Shores, and James Leidlein represents Harper Woods. King represents the City and Williams represents the Park.

Parking meter vandal caught by Park police

A man was caught in the act of vandalizing parking meters by Grosse Pointe Park police Nov. 13, according to a police bulletin.

Public safety officers arrested the man at 2:15 a.m. and also found him in possession of property out of Detroit. The man was held for Detroit police.

Two vehicles reported stolen in the Farms

Two cars were stolen from parking lots at business establishments along Mack in Grosse Pointe Farms last week.

According to Farms police reports, a gray 1985 Oldsmobile owned by a Grosse Pointe Woods man was taken from a lot in the 18700 block Nov. 25. The car was left for service at 10 a.m., but at 4 p.m. the car was missing. There was glass on the pavement from where the car's driver's side window was smashed.

The other vehicle, a red 1978 Pontiac Catalina, was stolen between 11:45 a.m. and 2 p.m. Nov. 25 from a lot at the northeast corner of Mack and Moross.

School plan called no aid to the Pointes

Now that Gov. James Blanchard's new plan for financing public education in Michigan has become more of a political document than a reform proposal, there is little prospect it will be adopted by the Legislature or even by the public if it has a chance to vote on it.

In his comments on the subject, the governor contends that he offered his proposal in order to break a stalemate in the Legislature. But legislators involved in the negotiations still claim they were about to announce a compromise financing plan when the governor got into the act.

At any rate, it appears that the governor now has destroyed the legislative unanimity in support of a two-cent increase in the sales tax by recommending, instead, only a one-cent hike.

The criticism of the one-cent hike is that it will not produce enough revenue to increase funding of education in poor school districts in view of the governor's other proposal, which is to cut property taxes by 25 percent for homeowners and 10 percent for businesses.

In fact, by his actions the governor appears to have made the proposal basically a cut in property taxes, since in the first year even he admits the plan would not increase revenues for the schools. Instead, he claims his proposal would raise more than $1 billion over a five-year period but even that estimate is being challenged.

Nor has the governor apparently yet indicated how he would distribute the new revenues that would come from the sales tax hike under his plan. Yet he called for a 25 percent cut in the local schools district levies and put a 28-mill cap on all levies. If enacted, such a plan would cut the Grosse Pointe levy to 23.80 mills from its present level of 31.74 mills. That would require substantial program cutbacks unless the state made up for the loss in whole or in major part.

A funny reaction to the governor's proposal has set in. The Michigan Education Association, which usually supports the governor, has come out against his financing plan on the grounds it simply would not achieve the results for education that had been sought. On the other hand, the Michigan State Chamber of Commerce, which usually supports Republican proposals, has expressed "cautious optimism" over the governor's plan to limit property taxes.

Doris Cook, president of the Grosse Pointe Education Association, affiliated with the MEA, told Margie Reins Smith in an interview elsewhere in today's issue of the Grosse Pointe News that Blanchard's plan apparently would neither raise enough money for education nor close the differences in per-pupil spending between rich and poor school districts.

Her organization and other pro-school groups seek a plan that would provide additional state revenue for poorer districts without taking money away from well-funded systems such as Grosse Pointe's. They had supported the compromise that was killed by the governor's proposal. It would have provided a two-cent sales tax increase, property tax cuts of $1.2 billion and revenue increases of about $500 million for schools.

Why did the governor torpedo a compromise on which both parties and other interested groups had been working for several years?

Ms. Cook believes the governor is positioning himself for a re-election campaign in 1990. Many other observers tend to agree. They point out that the governor apparently sought to undercut state Sen. John Engler of Mount Pleasant who is planning to seek the GOP nomination and run against Blanchard. Until Blanchard's surprise proposal, Engler reportedly had been looking with favor on a two-cent sales tax hike as part of the school financing reform.

For whatever the reason, the governor has effectively killed a compromise that would have improved the financing of public education and helped equalize spending between the richer and poorer school districts in Michigan.

True, his own plan may be revived and revamped, especially now that GOP Sen. Norman Shinkle has added a proviso to require the state to spend $300 million more a year on education and a minimum of 12 percent of its general education on K-12 education. But without a two-cent sales tax hike, where would the additional money come from? So the governor's plan still looks more like a political issue than a school funding reform to us.

How to remember Spagnoli

It was disappointing that another flurry of charges and countercharges marked the close of Joseph Spagnoli's long service to the Grosse Pointe school system.

Even the question of whether the former deputy superintendent had resigned or been forced out by a "constructive discharge" was still being debated last week when the board of education finally ended his association with the system he had served since 1962.

Over the years, Spagnoli had held a number of supervisory positions, ranging from curriculum coordinator to deputy superintendent. He also had served as interim or acting superintendent from October 1984 to April 1985, when the board was searching for a new superintendent. When the board chose John Whritner as the new superintendent, the board named Spagnoli deputy superintendent and awarded him a bonus for his services during the interim period.

It probably would have been difficult under any circumstances for anyone to have served as acting head of the system for almost a year and then be asked to become the deputy to the new school chief. But it became clear early on that there was a clash of personalities as well as a lack of understanding between Spagnoli and Superintendent Whritner over the deputy's new duties and responsibilities.

In addition, Spagnoli was criticized by the superintendent and the board for writing personnel evaluation summaries that were claimed to be more negative than the actual reports. Spagnoli denied those and other charges and said, instead, that he had been made "the scapegoat for a diabolical, carefully planned and orchestrated series of events" that he described as "reprehensible, invidious, despicable and insidious."

But in the school system, as in other organizations, it is possible to have only one top person at a time and so Spagnoli's departure became inevitable. He refused a request to resign earlier this year after which, on Whritner's recommendation, the board unanimously agreed not to renew Spagnoli's contract which was to expire June 30, 1989. That action was followed on Nov. 2 by his resignation or "constructive discharge," as his attorney described it.

Over the years, parents and other members of the public had pleasant relations with Spagnoli while he was serving as curriculum coordinator; secondary planning director; assistant superintendent, first of administrative services and later as assistant superintendent of instruction; and acting principal and later principal of South High School.

To Whritner's credit, he issued a statement expressing his appreciation for Spagnoli's contributions during his many years of service to the local schools and to education, and offering him best wishes in his future endeavors.

It is clear that Spagnoli had done a good job in the variety of positions he held over the years or he would not have been promoted by the different superintendents under whom he worked. It is for those services, not for the recent unpleasantness, that he will be remembered in the community and in the school system he served for more than 25 years.

Letters

To the Editor:
As a property owner residing in Grosse Pointe Woods, I would like to think that one of the police department's primary concerns is public safety. You wonder, however, about their priorities. I have lived in the Woods for a relatively short period of time and have had two unsettling experiences that cause one to question the wisdom of the use of our public safety officers.

Quite often one can observe the GPW police cars hidden or parked unobtrusively along Marter Road nabbing the 50-year-old speedsters, such as myself, on our way to work in the morning. Not long ago, my next door neighbor's home was robbed at 10 a.m. on a weekday. It is disturbing when one thinks about police cars lying in wait along Marter, ready to pounce on speedsters, while a home is being broken into and robbed in broad daylight only a block away.

The other experience I had involved a merchant on Mack Avenue. The merchant, a furrier, had unfortunately been robbed moments prior to my arrival. A few fur coats and other items were still strewn about the floor of the store. I left the store as soon as possible and upon returning to my car, parked on Mack, I encountered one of the Woods parking enforcement persons writing an expired meter ticket for my car. I attempted to ask her if she might want to somehow assist the merchant who had just been robbed; she merely continued to write the ticket and would not respond in any way to my questions or statements.

If a GPW police spokesperson were to take the time to respond to my concerns, I am sure that the answers would be the obvious ones: the parking enforcement person and the police along Marter are simply "doing their jobs." But you begin to wonder if their primary concerns are of public safety or of raising additional revenue for the city. After all, $40 for 10 miles over the limit is quite a hefty sum and enough of these types of fines could have a very favorable impact on the city's budget.

Special thanks

To the Editor:
On behalf of the Grosse Pointe Village Association, I wish to thank all the people who made our parade possible. It was a beautiful day to celebrate the coming Christmas season.

Every year there are special parade "angels" whose contributions make the parade happier. Hood Sails Great Lakes, Inc. kindly allowed us to use their sail loft to prepare and store our floats. Pointe Dodge once again generously provided us with the use of four new Dodge Dakotas to pull the floats. Thanks also to Pointe Electronics for installing the sound systems in Santa's sleigh and at the podium in front of Jacobson's. Other contributors included Drummy Oldsmobile, NBD and Phillip F. Greco Tile Co. A special thanks goes to the Grosse Pointe Rotary Club volunteers who helped as parade marshals.

Bush picks pragmatists

President-elect George Bush's early selections for top offices in his administration suggest a pattern: one part holdovers from the Reagan administration, one part long-time Bush friends and supporters and one part tough ideological conservatives.

Yet news reports indicate that the majority who have been named and who have been mentioned for top administration jobs are pragmatists who will seek results even if they do not always follow the traditional conservative GOP line.

One person who does not fall into that majority category is the controversial Gov. John H. Sununu of New Hampshire who will be the White House chief of staff. Sununu is an engineer who was a college professor before getting into politics and is known as a tough politician with a reputation for abrasiveness.

He brushes off criticism of his lack of previous Washington experience, but it does raise doubts as to whether he will be able to deal with a Democratic Congress, to say nothing of Republicans in Congress and Bush aides who may not share all of his convictions.

On the other hand, Bush's designation of James Baker, treasury secretary and former White House staffer under Reagan, as his own secretary of state, plus his retention of Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady, Attorney General Dick Thornburgh and Education Secretary Lauro F. Cavazos, offer evidence that Bush wants to provide a sense of continuity with the Reagan administration.

In a way, the designation of Richard Darman, former deputy secretary of the treasury and ex-White House staffer in the Reagan regime, as director of the Office of Management and Budget, does the same thing. And the selection of Brent Scowcroft as national security adviser retains the services of a man who held the same position under President Ford and served on several commissions, including the Iran-contra panel, under President Reagan.

True, some observers think that in his selection of Vice President Dan Quayle as well as his White House chief of staff and the new head of the GOP National Committee Bush is showing a tough stance.

Yet Bush's actions, once he takes office, will speak louder than any words uttered on the campaign trail. Since he needs cooperation and support not only from the Democrats who control Congress but from the people as a whole, his actions are likely to reflect more often than not the kinder and gentler America that he has said he envisions.

I missed a lot

Every week I add to history with reports and scores. In my 25 years, however, I feel I have missed some important chunks of history.

With the recent attention on the assassination of John Fitzgerald Kennedy, I was absorbed in the well-chronicled TV reports and print media accounts. I don't, however, have a full flavor of the times.

I'm not asking for things to be relived. Terrifying things like death and destruction shouldn't be repeated. I am, however, asking for the impossible dream to step back in time and view things first-hand.

The only thing I know about JFK is what I read or watch. We studied him in history class, but I became more attached to it than that. First of all, I couldn't understand why Lee Harvey Oswald — or anyone for that matter — could pull the trigger. I understand that Oswald could have been sick, but killing a president is incomprehensible.

I, too, wish I would have known the man who was so much a part of the national and international scene. It seems to me that on the anniversary of his death (Nov. 22) many people were refamiliarized with, "Ask not what your country can do for you, but what you can do for your country."

Many people in my generation may not have known who said that until all the books were reopened. It's obvious a strong, influential and successful president made an impact to that generation. I only wish I was there to be influenced.

Another remarkable incident, which didn't take place in my lifetime, was the day Pearl Harbor was attacked by the Japanese. On Dec. 7 we will all relive the events of that day. The Pearl Harbor fleet was destroyed along with many lives and dreams in 1941. A race to drop the atomic bomb was on and the Americans stepped up their efforts to be the first.

I wish I could, from far above it all, look down and watch the years unfold as they did from 1941-1945. My father served in WWII. I'm sure that has something to do with my dream, but for the sake of living it, I would want to see it.

On May 8, 1945, the Germans surrendered. But it wasn't until September that same year that the Japanese decided to retreat — with the help of the United States' dropping of the A-bomb.

My father was fortunate enough to live through it. IF you call that fortunate. He, unlike many, lives to talk about it and educate people about it. It's hard for him to discuss the lives he's seen wasted, and it's tough on him to have to relive it all when asked. But I'm glad he's with me to talk about it.

I know I am living in times that will be a part of history someday, but it doesn't seem to be the same. In years from now people will be reading the Grosse Pointe News and reading some of the history of which I've played a part in my role as a journalist. Granted, my impact is slight compared to Kennedy's and the atom bomb, but I hope my history is appreciated half as much.

People like to recall historical events. It makes for interesting conversation, as well as creates many arguments. I can argue that lives shouldn't be wasted, but I won't argue with the fact that the Army, Navy, Air Force and Marines had to defend America.

I was born in 1963, 51 days before Kennedy was shot. I can't imagine the terror, the fear or anger. All I can do is continue to read the accounts of it all and allow my appreciation to grow for individuals who have served this country.

Local meteorological trivia

On Christmas Day 1982, Detroit recorded an afternoon temperature of 64 degrees. A sailboat was spotted on Lake St. Clair.

On Christmas Day 1983, Detroit was windy, bitter and cold with a morning low of 10 degrees below zero and an afternoon high of 4.

Detroit's year with the least snowfall? 1936-37.

Most snowfall? 1880-81.

Farms resident Mal Sillars, WDIV-TV meteorologist, has published the fourth edition of his Detroit Weather Book. The 88-page paperback contains every bit of climatological trivia you'd ever want to know about Detroit: all about the drought of '88; lake levels; record-setting rains and snows and winds and heat and cold; even an analysis of the events that led up to the storm of November 1913 — one of the worst ever; and an explanation of how Doppler radar works.

Weather buffs, what's normal for December in Detroit?

Sillars says: high temps of 35; lows of 22; one day of zero or less; 26 days below freezing; three clear days; 10.5 inches of snowfall; 14 days with one or more inches of snow; and an average of 165 minutes of sun each day.

"1989 Detroit Weather Book" is available at local bookstores for $5.95. Or send a check for $7.45 (includes postage) to Weather Enterprises, P.O. Box 36733, Grosse Pointe 48236.

Kidnapped

Pretty soon we're going to be seeing this dude's face on milk cartons.

Description: about 4-feet tall. Last seen wearing a black hat and a red scarf. Pale complexion.

Stocky build. Plastic.

Name: Frosty.

Last seen: minding his own business, in front of his own home, in Grosse Pointe Woods.

The chubby fellow has disappeared again — for the third time.

Kippy Kosorski says he's not a runaway. Somebody kidnapped him. And she's angry.

Her plastic Frosty the Snowman, a family heirloom ("He was my husband's grandmother's") was stolen twice last year. Woods public safety officers were getting to know this guy pretty well. They once rescued him from a lawn on Kenmore. They even took a mug shot.

"We came home Saturday night about midnight," said Kosorski, "and he was gone again. The police came over about 1 a.m. Sunday morning with a car full of stuff they'd found — candy canes and another snowman and a variety of lawn ornaments."

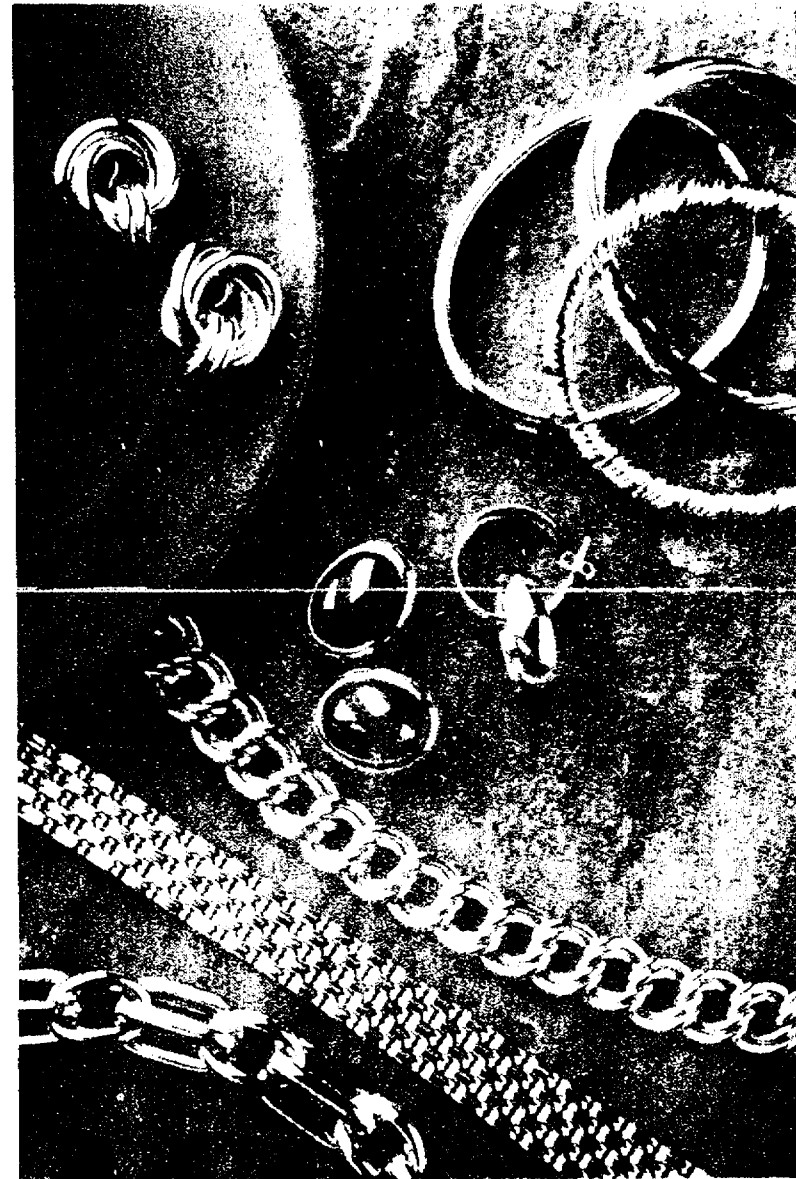

But no Frosty in the lineup.

"I just want him back," she said.

It didn't rain on this one

The Celtic Pipes, in red and black, played for auld lang syne.

Don Bentzen of Grosse Pointe Woods gives his grandson, Aaron Bentzen of Grand Rapids, a lift to see if the parade was starting.

Skies were blue and cloudless for Grosse Pointe Village Association's 12th annual parade down Kercheval.

The 60-degree day was a little warm for ushering in the Christmas season, but you couldn't hear any of the hundreds of parade-watchers complaining.

This was one of the largest parades, featuring more than 800 marching children, in addition to bands, floats and the grand marshal, Sesame Street's Big Bird. Because the theme was everyone's favorite children's show, there were lots of Cookie Monsters and Oscar the Grouches. There were also turkeys, Christmas trees, pilgrims, a fife and drum corps and a bagpipe band.

But the one float everyone wanted to see was the last one, the one holding the jolly old elf himself, who was given the key to the city in front of Jacobson's.

The 1st Michigan Colonial Fife and Drum Corps gave their 21-gun salute to the Village's parade, and to Santa.

Grosse Pointe Theatre's "Bug" was a big hit.

These are a few of the turkeys who made it past Thursday. But not for long, if this Pilgrim, right, has anything to say about it.

A 135mm lens enabled Monte Nagler to reach out and bring wrangler Aaron Adamson "up close" for extra impact. Notice the off-center placement of Aaron and the positioning of him against the dark background.

Reach out with a telephoto lens

Two weeks ago, I talked about the usages and benefits of wide angle lenses. Today, let's do an about face, stretch our vision, and discuss telephoto lenses.

By definition, a telephoto lens is one whose focal length is greater than that of a normal lens. The longer the focal length of the lens, the greater the degree of magnification. In fact, the magnification is mathematically related to focal length. For example, a 100mm lens produces an image exactly twice that of a normal 50mm lens. A 400mm lens gives you an image size eight times your normal lens!

As the lens lengthens, some interesting things happen. The lens's angle of view becomes narrower and depth-of-field becomes shallower. A narrow angle of view enables you to isolate a detail in a distant building or eliminate a cluttered foreground. A shallow depth-of-field is great for blurring distracting backgrounds so that attention is directed toward your subject.

By far the most useful telephoto lenses are those with medium focal lengths — between 85mm and 200mm. Because they minimize facial distortion and allow a comfortable distance between photographer and subject, medium telephotos are ideally suited for portraits. In addition, they are great for many other situations in which you have to keep a moderate distance from your subject such as candid street shots or animals at the zoo.

Telephoto lenses of 300mm or longer are usually for specialized demands and would be too powerful for average usage. However, if you have a keen interest in wildlife photography or prefer huge suns in your sunset shots, then these and longer lenses may be for you. For the occasional "long reach," a tele-extender combined with your telephoto will do just fine.

Remember, because the magnification of telephoto lenses accentuates the effect of camera movement, faster shutter speeds are needed. To obtain a sharp picture, the rule of thumb is to use a shutter speed closest to the reciprocal of the lens's focal length. For a 135mm lens, hand-hold at no slower than 1/125 second; with a 200mm lens, you should be at 1/250 second. If slower shutter speeds are required because of low light or aperture requirements, better get out your tripod.

So "reach out" to new and exciting photographic horizons — with telephoto lenses!

Northwood Institute to hold holiday reception

Northwood Institute will hold its annual holiday season reception for Detroit area alumni and friends of the college Tuesday, Dec. 6, at the Roostertail at the foot of Marquette Drive in Detroit. The reception will be from 6 to 8:30 p.m.

Reservations and additional information are available by calling 517/832-4350.

Library of Michigan opens

After three years of construction, the first phase of the new Michigan Library and Historical Center opened to the public Nov. 21.

The Library of Michigan, this state's version of the federal Library of Congress is a new five-story facility, with more than 5.2 million items on 27 miles of shelving.

Featuring 190,000 square feet of library area and 312,000 square feet overall, the new building is the second largest state library building in the United States, says the state librarian James W. Fry.

During winter months, a central 93-foot-high glass atrium will provide an attractive, sunny indoor atmosphere for library patrons.

The building at 717 West Allegan Street in Lansing is two blocks southwest of the state capitol and one block west of the original Lansing Civic Center. Main entrance will be from West Washtenaw Street, where public parking will be available directly to the south.

Replacing temporary headquarters previously located for 26 years at 735 E. Michigan Ave., the building offers three times as much space and is barrier-free throughout.

Designed by William Kessler and Associates of Detroit, the complex has been built for 100 years of use. According to Fry, it is the first major state building since the Capitol designed primarily for public use. Some 250,000 visitors are expected per year.

The Center is 465 feet long, or longer than one and a half football fields. It is 210 feet wide. In addition to the Library of Michigan on the west side, the State Historical Museum, State Archives and Office of the Great Seal will be housed on the east side.

Special features include a 45-foot-tall Michigan white pine in the center of the building, surrounded by a glass-enclosed rotunda on the first floor. Also there are a 225-seat auditorium/forum, a gift shop, meeting rooms and an eating/vending area.

Directly above on the second level is a large exterior courtyard, where up to 750 persons can come together for receptions, concerts and public gatherings. The reference, genealogy and documents areas of the library also are found on the second floor.

Various state and federal book collections are on the third through fifth floors. Administrative offices are also located on the fifth level, as is the Library of Michigan Board Room. A Rare Book Room on the fourth floor will be completed later.

One thing the library did not move to its new location was the traditional card catalog to list the books. Instead nearly 100 computer terminals placed in all areas of the building will immediately list materials by author, title or subject.

Materials for which Michigan is known have been used in all areas of the building, from its copper-clad central courtyard to extensive use of limestone for both exterior and interior walls. Furniture, doors and trim are made of Michigan white oak. Extra heavy steel beams were used in the floors to support double the present number of books. Granite steps and entrance area walls will mean durability and minimal future maintenance.

Formal dedication of the building will take place Tuesday, March 7 at noon, with special ceremonies during the week of March 6-9, 1989.

The Library of Michigan is nine years older than the state of Michigan and dates back to 1828. It stores compiled laws back to 1805 and contains the 15th largest genealogical (family history) collection in the United States.

Visitors will find the library open to the public Mondays through Fridays from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. Persons with questions about the new facility may call (517) 373-1580. Answers concerning the library's collection are available from (517) 373-5400 or the reference desk at 373-1300.

Farms approves $50 license fee for vicious dogs

Owners of vicious dogs in Grosse Pointe Farms will have to pay $50 for a license if they want to keep the animals in the city, according to action by the City Council Monday night.

The council's vicious dog fee is 10 times that of the normal license fee of $5 for non-vicious dogs. The normal dog license costs $10 if the owner doesn't obtain it within a certain time period.

The vicious dog license fee was required as part of the Farms' new vicious dog ordinance adopted by the council Nov. 14. Both the ordinance and the new fee went into effect immediately.

The vicious dog ordinance was passed in an effort to protect residents and to come to grips with pit bull fears in the Pointes as well as across the country.

The Farms' new ordinance, among many other restrictions, mandates that owners of vicious dogs keep the animals in cell-block type enclosures in the backyard when they are let outside the owners' homes. All vicious dog owners must have the special dog houses built.

While in the home, the vicious dogs cannot be kept on a porch or in a home with open windows that provide only screening to keep the animals in. Vicious dog owners must also obtain $100,000 in liability insurance to cover possible property and personal damage the dogs may cause.

If a Farms animal control or public safety officer has reasonable cause to believe a dog is vicious, then a hearing will be requested in Municipal Court to determine if the animal is vicious based on the evidence.

If a Farms resident's dog is declared vicious, he must obtain a 12-month vicious dog license for $50 and meet all other specifications under the vicious dog ordinance.

Cable company wants stolen radio returned

Grosse Pointe Cable wants the three teenagers who stole a radio from one of its vans last week to return it and "no questions will be asked."

The combination radio/telephone was stolen by three youths Nov. 23 at about 2 p.m. from a van parked behind the cable company's office on Mack. Even though cable employees saw the three teenage boys running away with the radio, they were unable to catch them.

A spokeswoman for Grosse Pointe Cable Inc. said the radio is new and had just been recently installed. She said the company just wants the radio back.

Cable technicians have talked to the teenagers on the radio and asked that the property be returned, but "you can imagine what they said," the spokeswoman said. She said the radio is also a mobile telephone.

She said she believed the youths took the radio for fun and not for profit. Now that they've had their fun, the cable company wants the radio returned. There will be "no questions asked if the radio is returned," the cable spokeswoman said.

Anyone with information should call Grosse Pointe Cable at 886-3109. The spokeswoman said the radio could also be mailed or dropped off at the Grosse Pointe Cable office at 19245 Mack Ave., Grosse Pointe Woods 48236.

Researchers seek 'Porgy' info

In April 1954, a production of George Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess," directed by Robert Breen, played in Detroit.

The Lawrence and Lee Theatre Research Institute, a special collections library of Ohio State University, requests that people who either witnessed this production of "Porgy and Bess," or interacted with the cast and crew relay their experiences to the institute so that these items may be preserved and made permanently available for the use of scholars of theater history.

Letters

The combined efforts of the City, Farms and Park police departments were terrific and kept both watchers and marchers safe.

The Grosse Pointe Theatre was once again a major contributor to the parade effort. The Theatre group blew up more than 1,000 balloons which were given on the parade route. On parade day they painted faces, manned the "Bug," and provided the Surprise Box and Humpty Dumpty to the line up adding a special touch to the parade.

Mae Gallagher and Rick Selke both deserve special thank yous. Mae organizes all the scouts troops and is the link to the Grosse Pointe Theatre. Rick acted as art director for the 12th year and all the floats reflected

I wish to thank all the wonderful community groups who participated in the parade. All the marchers were terrific and their efforts with costumes, banners and decorated vehicles made our parade a visual treat.

This is my final year as parade coordinator, but I know Mary Drummy will continue to make this a wonderful community event. I have met so many extraordinary people who give so generously of their time and talents during this past three years. On behalf of the Grosse Pointe Village Association, I wish you and your families the happiest of holiday seasons.

Park discusses tax financing authority extension

By Ronald J. Bernas
Staff Writer

The Grosse Pointe Park council discussed a draft of a master plan which proposes an 11-year extension of the city's Northwest Tax Increment Financing Authority.

Founded in 1986, the TIFA district is defined as the area bordered by Mack Avenue on the north; to the northern boundary of the Jefferson Avenue Downtown Development Authority on the south; and from the western city limits to the east edge of the alley between Beaconsfield and Nottingham. It includes the residential streets of Wayburn, Maryland, Lakepointe, Beaconsfield, Vernor, St. Paul and the commercial districts of Mack, Charlevoix and Kercheval.

The city is able to capture all tax increases in the special district that have taken place since Dec. 31, 1985. It must use all those tax dollars for improvements specified in a master plan developed by the TIFA board, and approved by the city council.

The district's first plan, adopted in 1986 by the council, was for four years and was termed an interim plan, according to TIFA President Jim Odell

Jr. The plan was developed and approved hastily to meet a deadline imposed by the state legislature, and most of the projects proposed in that plan have been completed in the two years since it was adopted.

The first plan included streetscaping along Mack. The TIFA board had planned to streetscape one block a year, but because financing was so good, they were able to complete two per year. There are still two blocks to go, Odell said, and they hope to complete them next year.

The new plan, discussed by the council, is still in draft form and must go before council and the public at a public hearing. That hearing will be set in the near future.

An increase in parking is needed both for commercial districts and for residential areas — parking which should be shielded from the street.

Odell said that many people move out or are apprehensive about moving into the area because the parking situation sometimes forces residents to park blocks away from their houses.

The following improvements are included in the new draft of the master plan, and are still subject to change by the TIFA board or the council. Input from residents is encouraged, especially at the public hearing.

- Pedestrian lighting: Installation of uniform pedestrian lighting on residential streets within the district similar to those on Wayburn and Maryland. It should take approximately two years to complete. Its estimated total cost is $115,000, of which $58,600 has already been used.

- Public and private parking improvements: The authority proposes further studies be undertaken to determine the feasibility of developing additional parking. They hope they can provide an additional 300 to 400 parking spaces which would encourage new business to locate in the district and discourage traffic on residential streets.

The TIFA is looking into offering a subsidy to property owners when they increase parking on their property by widening an existing driveway to accommodate additional cars, building a new driveway, constructing concrete or asphalt slabs for parking next to an alley, removing of garages that are in poor condition which opens up the slab for parking, and repairing garages so cars can be parked in them. This project will cost approximately $200,000.

The plan's draft outlines areas which could be bought for parking lots. Some homes adjacent to alleys along Kercheval may be purchased and parking lots constructed to serve the businesses and residents of the area.

- Facade and landscaping services: To encourage upgrading of properties in the district, the TIFA would like to provide landscaping services to the residents in it. Those services would include architectural renderings of

- Housing and commercial property rehabilitation: To encourage the upgrading of properties, the city has established two housing rehabilitation programs. The authority would like to provide additional funds to these programs that loan money to landowners who want to improve their properties. The funds are returned upon sale of the properties. The cost for this project is anticipated at about $730,000.

- Improved sidewalks, streets and lighting: Streetscapes on Mack will be completed and other additional work will be done throughout the district. Total estimated cost is $1 million.

Financing from the captured valuation increases and within the 15 years of the plan are expected to be in the neighborhood of $7.1 million.

The improvements are meant to improve the overall aesthetics of the district, to encourage renovation and improvement of private and publicly owned properties in the district, increase a feeling of safety and security of the district, increase the value of properties in the district, and to enhance the western entrances of the Park.

He said that the master plan is only in draft form, and is subject to change and negotiation.

Councilman Dan Clark said, "It is important to say that not only is the northwest area going to benefit, but the whole area is benefited by this program."

With his job, his Scouting activities and his family, which includes wife Nancy, an attorney at Ford Motor Co., and children Richard III, 6, and Kellie, 2 1/2, Schott doesn't have much time anymore for one of his favorite pastimes — racing sailboats.

A member of the Crescent Sail Yacht Club, Schott raced his 14-foot Laser and the 19-foot three-person Lightnings. He has won national championships and his team came in third in the Port Huron-to-Mackinac race in 1981.

He said he hopes to race again someday. For now, his spare time is taken up with Scouting activities, including taking his son to meetings at Richard School. Son Richard is a Tiger Cub in Pack 74.

His son's motivation to join, he jokes, was that he knew "Scouts get pocket knives," and he wanted a pocket knife. Their uniform is a gray sweatshirt with a Tiger Cub emblem that's ironed on, and as the cubs earn awards, they are allowed to iron on paw prints. His son will wear his prized sweatshirt "as often as we will let him," he said.

Schott's motivation to remain in Scouting, he said, was that it offered him the opportunity to travel, beginning when he was 14 when he went to Camp Philmont in New Mexico.

"It was the greatest thing in the world for a 14-year-old, to backpack for 10 days in the Sierra Madres. It builds a lot of confidence in yourself."

Scouting runs in the family. Schott's father was an Eagle Scout and he and his brother Richard "Rick" Schott, wearing the Silver Beaver medal, shows his framed citation he received along with the medal.

Jeffrey also earned the Eagle rank.

Over the years, Schott has held more than three dozen posts, including Lakeshore District commissioner for 1984-85 and serving as a staff member for the 1969 and 1973 National Jamborees and the 1971 World Jamboree in Japan, where he met the Emperor Hirohito. He was one of 72 staff members from the United States who was selected to go to Japan.

While he was at GM, he organized an Explorer Post for the skilled trades, bringing together Explorer Scouts with skilled tradesmen, including model makers.

"Fisher Body has some of the best model makers in the world and we were able to get some of the tradespeople involved to give the kids a hands-on approach. They would decide on some sort of project and they would be able to use the tools and do wood-working."

Schott also organized an Explorer Post in computer science, and with 300 young adults, it was one of the largest posts in the country, he said. Explorers are high school-age boys and girls.

"We had some kids that we were able to get scholarships to General Motors Institute," he said. "They were really super kids. One girl wouldn't have gone to college (without the scholarship)."

Schott collects Scouting memorabilia — old uniforms, old magazines, but mostly emblem patches of which he has thousands. "My wife will confirm that. She thinks it takes up much too much space in our basement," he said.

He has dovetailed his penchant for collecting into looking for uniforms for kids who can't afford to buy them. Over the past six years, he estimates that with the help of Mom's Toy Attic on Warren, they were able to clothe more than 1,000 scouts.

"That's why I'm in scouting, because I get to do all these neat things," Schott said.

He adds that any adult who is interested in volunteering should call Paul Norat at the Boy Scout Service Center, 897-1965.

Tree Advisory Committee gets a new member

Russell W. Smith was unanimously named to the Grosse Pointe Woods Tree Advisory Committee by the city council Nov. 21.

He is a member of the Grosse Pointe Historical Society.

New Cottage parking garage open for Hill holiday shoppers

The new, four-story parking garage adjacent to Cottage Hospital on the Hill is now open for holiday shoppers.

The garage, with 522 parking spaces, opened to the public Nov. 1. Hill merchants, however, are concerned that holiday shoppers are not aware that the first two floors of the parking structure are reserved for Hill shoppers and Cottage Hospital visitors.

The cost for parking at the garage is 75 cents for each of the first two hours and $1.50 for each of the third and fourth hours for a maximum full-day charge of $4.50.

The garage is open weekdays from 5 a.m. to 9 p.m. and from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Saturday. Access to vehicles after the garage closes must be obtained through the Cottage Hospital security office at the hospital's Muir-Kercheval entrance.

The entrance and exit for the parking deck is off Muir, west of Kercheval.

dogs believed to be of the banned breed. The impounded dog will be held until the municipal court determines if the animal is one of those banned. All municipal court decisions can be appealed to circuit court.

Throughout the Woods' pit bull saga, the Michigan Humane Society has spoken against a breed-specific ban, such as against pit bulls. The society believes the problem with pit bulls and vicious dogs of all varieties is with bad pet ownership.

The Humane Society would rather see tough vicious dog laws and higher licensing fees than see a breed of dogs completely banned.

Eileen Liska, director of research and legislation for the Michigan Humane Society, pleaded with the Woods council not to adopt the pit bull ban.

"I just don't understand why this community that doesn't have a problem should do this," she said, referring to the fact that there have been no recorded pit bull attacks in the Woods and that the number of pit bull owners in the city is probably small.

Resident Robert Sossi questioned whether Catlin could defend the pit bull ban in light of the Waterford Township decision. He said he favored a tough vicious dog ordinance rather than spending taxpayers' dollars on defending a ban that would be found unconstitutional.

Mayor Pro Tem Robert Novitke said he can't say he doesn't have any reservations about the pit bull ordinance, but he believed it is necessary because of the potential danger pit bulls represent. Concerning the constitutionality of the ban, he said he would have to stand behind the city attorney's judgment.

The council also said it will now begin looking at its vicious dog ordinance and licensing fees. The council indicated it will increase the license fees, partly due to the cost of enforcing animal control laws.

The council also indicated that it will be making its vicious dog ordinances more strict.

Cartoon history of golf author to speak at library

Beverley Burlingame

Beverley Burlingame, author and illustrator of "Wanna Play a Round," will speak at Central Library Thursday, Dec. 8, at 7:30 p.m.

Burlingame, an avid golfer and member of Orchard Lake Country Club, found herself in the writing business after having produced a series of posters announcing the club's weekly golfing event. The posters had a central theme based on the history of golf and the book was born.

Answers to the following questions are in the book: Why are golf balls dimpled; how many holes made up the early courses; why did King James I of Scotland try to outlaw the game in 1457?

There will be autographed copies available and time to speak with the author at a reception following the program.

Wayne County, Michigan Amendment to Animal Regulation Ordinance Ordinance No. 295

AN ORDINANCE TO AMEND ORDINANCE NO. 198, ENTITLED "AN ORDINANCE TO REGULATE THE KEEPING OF ANIMALS WITHIN THE CITY," CODE NO. 7-05.

THE CITY OF GROSSE POINTE FARMS ORDAINS:

SECTION 1. Section 1 of the Animal Regulation Ordinance, Code No. 7-05, enacted as Ordinance No. 198 on August 5, 1974, is hereby amended to add the following subparagraphs (c) and (d) defining "vicious dog" and "owner", respectively:

(c) the term "vicious dog" shall mean any dog which when unprovoked approaches upon any street, sidewalk or other public place, in a vicious or terrorizing manner, any person in apparent attitude of attack; or any dog with a known propensity, tendency or disposition to attack without provocation, to cause injury to or otherwise endanger the safety of human beings or domestic animals; or any dog which bites, inflicts injury, assaults or otherwise attacks a human being or domestic animal without provocation on public or private property; or any dog owned or harbored primarily or in part for the purpose of dog fighting or any dog trained for dog fighting. Notwithstanding the foregoing, no dog shall be declared vicious by reason of any injury or damage sustained (i) by a person who, at the time such injury or damage was sustained, was committing a willful trespass or other tort upon premises occupied by the owner of the dog or was teasing, tormenting, abusing or assaulting the dog or was committing or attempting to commit a crime, or (ii) by a domestic animal which, at the time such injury or damage was sustained, was teasing, tormenting, abusing or assaulting the dog, or (iii) by a person or a domestic animal of the dog was protecting or defending a human being within the immediate vicinity of the dog from an unjustified attack or assault.

(d) the term "owner" shall mean any person owning, maintaining, keeping or harboring a vicious dog within the City of Grosse Pointe Farms.

SECTION 2. Section 3 of the Animal Regulation Ordinance, Code No. 7-05, enacted as Ordinance No. 198 August 5, 1974, is hereby amended to add the following sentence at the conclusion of said Section 3:

"No person shall own, harbor or keep any dog for the purpose of dog fighting, or train, torment, badger, bait or use any dog for the purpose of causing or encouraging said dog to attack without provocation human beings or domestic animals."

SECTION 3. The Animal Regulation Ordinance, Code No. 7-05, enacted as Ordinance No. 198 on August 5, 1974, is hereby amended to include the following provisions to be codified as Section 13 and inserted after Section 12 of the Animal Regulations Ordinance:

"Section 13. Regulation of Vicious Dogs."

A. Determination of a Vicious Dog:

The Animal Control Officer or any public safety officer shall investigate all complaints of a vicious dog. In the event that the Animal Control Officer or any public safety officer has reasonable cause to believe that a dog is vicious, he or she shall institute proceedings in municipal court requesting the court to conduct a hearing on whether or not the dog should be declared vicious under this Ordinance. The issue of whether the dog is a vicious dog within the meaning of this Ordinance shall be decided based upon the preponderance of the evidence. If the court rules the dog to be vicious, it may order that the dog be confined to the owner's premises or euthanized. The court may establish a time schedule to insure compliance with this Ordinance, but in no case shall such time exceed thirty (30) days after the date of the court's determination. Court costs for such action shall be taxed against the owner of the dog.

The court may decide all issues for or against the owner of the dog regardless of the fact that the owner fails to appear at said hearing, and the determination of the court shall be final and conclusive upon all parties thereto. In the event that the Animal Control Officer or any public safety officer has probable cause to believe that the dog in question is vicious and may pose a threat of serious harm to human beings or other domestic animals, the Animal Control Officer or public safety officer may seize and impound the dog pending the hearing. The owner of the dog shall be liable to the City for the costs and expenses of keeping such dog.

B. Requirements for Registration:

Upon a finding by the court that a dog is vicious, its owner shall comply with the following requirements for licensing:

1. License Application. The owner shall apply to the City Clerk for a vicious dog license which shall be valid for one year from the date of its approval provided all conditions of this Ordinance and applicable court orders have been met. The license shall be renewable for successive one year periods provided that the dog is to be kept on the same premises under the same conditions and its owner has not violated any condition of this Ordinance or any court order during the previous twelve month period. No such license shall be transferable to a new owner of the dog or to a new location or address where the dog will be kept.

2. Insurance. Prior to the receipt of a license, the owner shall present to the City Clerk proof that the owner has procured liability insurance in the amount of at least One Hundred Thousand Dollars ($100,000.00) covering any damage or injury which may be caused by such vicious dog during the twelve (12) month period for which licensing is sought, which policy contains a provision naming the City as an additional insurer and shall provide that the City shall be notified by the insurance company of any cancellation, termination or expiration of the liability insurance policy. In addition, the owner shall sign a statement attesting that the owner shall maintain and not voluntarily cancel the liability insurance during the twelve (12) month period for which licensing is sought, unless the owner shall cease to keep or harbor the vicious dog prior to expiration of such license.

3. Tattooing Dog. Prior to the receipt of a license, the owner shall, at his own expense, have the licensing number or such other identification number as the City of Grosse Pointe Farms Public Safety Department shall assign to such vicious dog, tattooed upon such vicious dog by a licensed veterinarian or person trained as a tattooist and authorized as such by the City Public Safety Department. The tattoo shall be placed either on the upper inner lip or upper left rear thigh of the vicious dog. The City's veterinarian, may, in his discretion, designate the particular location of said tattoo. said number shall be noted on the City licensing files for such vicious dog, if it is different from the license number of such vicious dog, for the purpose of this section "tattoo" shall be defined as any permanent numbering of a vicious dog by means of indelible or permanent ink with the number designated by the licensing authority or any other permanent, acceptable method of tattooing.

4. Signs. Prior to the receipt of a license, the owner shall display a sign in a prominent place on his or her premises warning of a vicious dog on the premises. Said sign shall be provided by the City. Said sign shall be visible and capable of being read from any adjacent public right of way.

5. Confinement of Vicious Dog. Prior to the receipt of a license, the owner shall provide for the confinement of the vicious dog. If the vicious dog is to be confined outdoors, the dog shall be confined to a pen or structure with secure sides and top attached to the sides. The structure shall have a secure bottom or floor attached to the sides of the pen or the structure shall be embedded in the ground no less than two feet. The structure shall be constructed in accordance with standards set forth in the City of Grosse Pointe Farms Building Code, and shall be constructed of materials and be designed so as to prevent any escape of the animal or entry of young children. In addition, the size and location of the structure shall comply with the provisions of the Zoning Ordinance of the City of Grosse Pointe Farms, including lot coverage and setback requirements, applicable to accessory structures. The owner shall keep the structure locked with a padlock or keylock at all times that the vicious dog is kept inside the structure, and shall keep the structure adequately lit and in a clean and sanitary condition. If the vicious dog is to be confined indoors, the vicious dog shall not be kept on a porch or patio or in any other part of a house or structure that would allow the dog to exit of its own violation. In addition, no such animal may be kept in a house or structure when the windows are open or when screen windows or screen doors are the only obstacle preventing the dog from exiting.

6. Identification Photographs. Prior to the receipt of a license, the owner shall provide the City Public Safety Department with two recent color photographs of the vicious dog which clearly show the color and approximate size of the animal.

7. License Fee. The owner shall pay a license fee in an amount established from time to time by resolution of the City Council.

C. Control of Vicious Dogs:

All vicious dogs shall be confined as described in Section 13B(5) of this Ordinance. It shall be unlawful for any owner to maintain a vicious dog upon any premises which does not have a locked enclosure, unless such vicious dog is at all times maintained in the owner's dwelling.

It shall be unlawful for any owner to allow any vicious dog to be outside of the dwelling of the owner or outside of the enclosure unless it is necessary for the owner to obtain the veterinary care for the vicious dog or to sell or give away the vicious dog or to comply with commands or directions of the court, the Animal Control Officer or any public safety officer with respect to the vicious dog, or to comply with the licensing provisions of this Ordinance. In such event, the vicious dog shall be securely muzzled and restrained with a choker chain and leash having a minimum tensile strength of three hundred (300) pounds and not exceeding three (3) feet in length. The muzzle shall be made and fitted in a manner that will not cause injury to the dog or interfere with its vision or respiration, but shall prevent it from biting any human or animal. The animal shall be under the direct control and supervision of the owner of the vicious dog or his agent, either of whom shall be, in any event, a person of eighteen (18) years of age and physically capable of restraining the animal.

D. Reporting Requirements:

An owner shall notify the City of Grosse Pointe Farms Public Safety Department immediately upon discovery that a vicious dog is on the loose, is unconfined, has attacked another animal or human being, or has been stolen. An owner shall notify the City Clerk in writing within one day if the vicious dog has been sold or given away or has died, and, if the vicious dog has been sold or given away to a new owner residing within the City of Grosse Pointe Farms, the owner shall also provide the City Clerk with the name, address and telephone number of the new owner of the vicious dog.

E. Penalties for Violation:

1. Failure to Comply/Show Cause Hearing. Upon an owner's failure to comply with any condition in the court order finding a dog to be vicious, the Animal Control Officer or any public safety officer shall confiscate the dog and impound same pending a hearing requiring the owner of the dog to show cause why the dog should not be immediately destroyed. The owner of the dog shall be liable to the City for the cost and expenses of keeping such dog. Failure to comply shall, among other things, include:

- the failure to obtain a vicious dog license in accordance with Section 13B of this Ordinance;
- the failure to secure liability insurance in accordance with Section 13B of this Ordinance;
- the failure to confine the vicious dog to the premises with appropriate signage in accordance with Section 13B of this Ordinance;
- the dog's presence outside of the owner's dwelling or the enclosure except as provided in Section 13C of this Ordinance;
- the failure to tattoo the dog and provide identification photographs in accordance with Section 13B of this Ordinance; or
- the failure to comply with the reporting requirements of Section 13D of this Ordinance.

2. Vicious Conduct Show Cause Hearing. If any vicious dog shall, when unprovoked, kill, wound or assist in killing any domestic animal belonging to or in the possession of any person, or if any vicious dog shall, when unprovoked, attack, assault, wound, bite or otherwise injure a human being, the Animal Control Officer or any public safety officer shall confiscate and impound the vicious dog pending a hearing within seven (7) days requiring the owner of the dog to show cause why the dog should not be destroyed. The owner of the dog shall be liable to the City for the costs and expenses of keeping such dog.

SECTION 4. Section 13 of the Animal Regulation Ordinance, Code No. 7-05, enacted as Ordinance No. 198 on August 5, 1974 is hereby reclassified and renumbered as Section 14 and all succeeding Sections are reclassified and renumbered accordingly.

Pointe Plaza scheduled for completion in 1990

The Pointe Plaza office-retail-parking complex at Mack and Moross is expected to open in 1990, the developer and the owner of the property announced last week.

The announcement came after the Detroit City Council approved required zoning changes Nov. 16.

The 10-acre parcel, which lies partially in Detroit and Grosse Pointe Woods at the northwest intersection of Moross and Mack, is owned by St. Clair Health Corp., the parent company of St. John Hospital, which abuts the Pointe Plaza site.

Pointe Plaza is a joint development with Schostak Brothers and Co. Inc. of Southfield. Neither Schostak nor St. Clair officials have released a price estimate for the development.

The new Pointe Plaza, which replaces the 1950's vintage shopping center that was torn down last year, will include two five-story office buildings, a two-story, 1,600 car parking garage and a retail shopping strip facing Mack and Moross.

One of the office buildings will face Moross near St. John Hospital. The 98,000-square-foot Moross building will house doctors and administrative personnel for St. John and will be connected to the hospital with a second-level enclosed walkway.

The Mack building, which will front Mack Avenue and be at the property's northern most boundary, will have 124,000 square feet of leased professional office space.

The parking structure is expected to open in spring of 1990, while the rest of the development is scheduled to be completed later in 1990.

The L-shaped retail strip will be enclosed in a glass atrium with a 20-foot pedestrian concourse, allowing the shoppers to go from store to store and be protected from the weather. The type of retail stores is being described as upscale, but the names of possible tenants have not been released.

The parking structure will be concealed from view along Mack and Moross by the retail shops and atrium.

The architects and planners for the project are Neumann Smith Associates of Southfield and Walker Parking Structure Consultants of Kalamazoo. The general contractor is the Barton Malow Co. of Southfield.

Day care

city attorney George Catlin in September 1987 obtained the names of state-licensed day cares in the city.

Roose's suit follows an earlier suit against the city by another day care operator, Sheila Temkow, who has since moved out of Grosse Pointe Woods.

On Dec. 15, 1987, Wayne County Circuit Judge Lucille Watts, who was merely to decide at the time whether to continue an injunction against the city's enforcement of the ordinance prohibiting day cares and businesses in neighborhoods, said Temkow's day care operation was a business and was not exempt from the city's ordinance against businesses in residences.

Temkow also charged that the city was selectively enforcing the ordinance, but Temkow's attorney is no longer pursuing the selective-enforcement claim and case has been concluded, according to Catlin.

No date has been set for the Roose suit, which is also to go before Judge Watts.

Roose's attorney, Mary Ann Arsenault, is a strong advocate of Senate Bill 687. She points out that if cities prohibit residential day cares and enforce the law by getting a list of state-licensed day care operators, then people will simply not bother getting licensed.

"I think it (state licensing of day cares) is a protection for children and parents," she said. "We want to encourage people to get licensed and not go underground."

She said that according to the state Department of Social Services, some 60 percent of those taking in children for day care are not licensed. The bill, if approved, would make it easier to run a legitimate residential day care and would encourage people to get licensed, according to Arsenault.

The bill still allows some control of day cares through provisions that allow the city to yearly inspect family and group day cares to make sure they are up to building and safety codes. Local codes, however, cannot be more stringent than state codes, according to the bill.

The bill also stipulates that group day care homes cannot be within 1,500 feet of another group day care home; an adult foster care home; a substance abuse treatment and rehabilitation center for seven or more people; or a community correction center, resident home, halfway house or other facility for inmates.

Other group day care requirements include:

- Appropriate fencing for the safety of the children as determined by the city.
- The property is maintained consistent with the visible characteristics of the neighborhood.
- Meets local sign ordinances if the group day care has a sign.
- Meets local off-street parking requirements for the group day care home's employees.
- Does not exceed 16 hours of operation during a 24-hour period.

Arsenault said that even though group day cares are defined as having six to 12 children, that doesn't necessarily mean all group day cares have that many. She said the Department of Social Services mandates that a home day care have so many square feet per child, and day cares can't be licensed for more children than the size of the home can handle. For example, a group day care home may only be licensed for seven children maximum, she said.

Cities opposed to Senate Bill 687, such as Grosse Pointe Woods, point out that the bill is another example of the state telling the cities what they can and cannot do, an erosion of what cities call "home rule."

The resolution against the bill adopted by the Woods council called the legislation a "usurpation of local zoning control over the regulation and prohibition of commercial business operations in residential neighborhoods ..."

The inside dimensions of the enclosure shall be such as will permit adequate access for refuse collection vehicles and the enclosure shall be situated on a reinforced concrete pad at least six (6) inches thick, which pad shall extend at least six (6) feet beyond the opening of the enclosure.

A refuse dumpster shall be defined as a front-end container, roll-off compacting unit or similar commercial container which is in excess of one cubic yard in volume. Within one year of the effective date of this Ordinance, any out-side storage of rubbish in rubbish dumpsters shall be stored in compliance with the requirements of this Section 1512.

SECTION 2. Except as hereby amended, Ordinance No. 192, as heretofore amended, shall remain in full force and effect.

Far-reaching state school tax reform outlook appears bleak

By Margie Reins Smith
Staff Writer

A state school tax reform proposal that seemed workable — or at least palatable — to Grosse Pointe's schools, appears to be dead.

Just as the proposal was about to come up for a vote, Governor James Blanchard proposed his own plan — a plan that has been criticized by the state's teachers unions because it apparently would neither raise enough money for education nor close up vast differences in per-pupil spending between school districts.

Doris Cook, president of the Grosse Pointe Education Association, said she believes Blanchard's plan is politically motivated.

"He's positioning himself for the 1990 election," she said. "It's just a tax shift. There's nothing in it for education."

"And if it doesn't pass in this lame duck session, we'll have to start over next year."

Cook said most educators agree that funding reform is necessary to equalize per-pupil spending between rich and poor school districts in the state.

Grosse Pointe's concern as an out-of-formula district that has an adequate amount of money, she said, is to settle on a plan that provides additional money for poorer districts, yet does not take money away from well-funded programs like Grosse Pointe's.

There are about 150 out-of-formula districts in the state, out of a total 525 districts. Out of formula, according to Director of Business Affairs Christian Fenton, refers to a district that collects more money than the state guaranteed support (now $350 per pupil) plus incentives (which come to approximately $78 per mill levied.)

The current gap in per-pupil spending between districts is as much as $5,000 in some instances.

Cook said the plan that had been developed by the government affairs staffs of state teachers unions, state associations of school boards, administrators and principals, was a compromise. It was negotiated — and far from perfect — she said, but it was a liveable, workable plan with which Grosse Pointe's district could move forward.

The basics of the plan included a two cent sales tax increase. The new revenue would allow property tax cuts of $1.2 billion, and would provide increased funds of about $500 million for schools.

School millage rates would be capped at 28 mills. And the state would reimburse districts on mills over 28 at their highest rate levied in 1986, '87 or '88.

Blanchard's plan includes a one cent sales tax increase offset by a 25 percent residential tax cut. "In essence, anything left over would go to education," Cook said. "But there's no guarantee there would be money left over."

According to a Detroit News article on Nov. 17, the sales tax increase would generate about $800 million and the property tax cut would amount to about $810 million.

Sen. Norman Shinkle added a provision to Blanchard's plan last week that would require the state to spend $300 million more a year on education and at least 12 percent of its general fund on K-12 education.

Blanchard expressed optimism that his plan would be enacted before the legislature leaves this year, but Cook said, "Real school finance reform will probably be postponed now. Not just until January, but probably for a few years."

Fenton said he's opposed to any school finance reform that takes away the local district's control. "Property tax dollars are deductible," Fenton said, "and sales tax isn't. Taxpayers are smart. If they see a good return for their money, they'll vote for it."

Cook said that a lack of far-reaching finance reform for the state's schools may result in laws that nibble away at specific issues and, in the long run, may hurt Grosse Pointe.

"A law could take away all aid for vocational and special education," she said.

"Or a law could be passed requiring out-of-formula districts like Grosse Pointe to pay Social Security and retirement charges that are now partly paid by the state. This was threatened a year ago."

"Taxpayers should know our concern across the state about school financing. They should be aware of (these proposals) because of the impact on our local district," she said.

Park police report arrests

Three men were arrested in separate incidents recently by Park police. Two of the men were intoxicated and all three were found to be wanted on warrants elsewhere.

According to the police report, one man was arrested Nov. 18 at 6:50 p.m. at Maryland and Hampton after he was found to be intoxicated and belligerent and wanted on a warrant.

Another man was arrested Nov. 20 at 3 p.m. in the Jefferson-Maryland area while he was staggering in the street, yelling obscenities and swinging at passersby. He was wanted on a warrant from another jurisdiction.

The third man was found to have an extensive breaking-and-entering history and wanted on warrants after he was detained for loitering on Nov. 21 at 2:04 p.m.

Financial aid explained

The Guidance Department of Bishop Gallagher High School in Harper Woods is hosting a College Financial Aid Night for parents of high school students on Wednesday, Dec. 7, from 7 to 9 p.m.

Judy Florian of the Financial Aid Office of Wayne State University and Renee Moyers of Manufacturers Bank will present tips on the "art" of applying for financial aid. They will also accept questions from parents.

Bishop Gallagher is located on Harper Avenue (the I-94 Service Drive) near Moross Road in Harper Woods. Call the Guidance Office at 886-0855 for further information.

ULS to celebrate International Week

The halls of University Liggett School will resound with Spanish, French and Latin phrases during International Week, beginning Dec. 5.

Foreign language classes will decorate the school in preparation for Saturnalia, a Roman harvest banquet for the Latin classes on Wednesday, Dec. 7, and for the seventh-grade Family International Dinner on Thursday, Dec. 8.

At the seventh-grade dinner, each family will arrive in ethnic costumes, bearing dishes to share which reflect its ethnic heritage. There will be entertainment provided by the students, and prizes for the best costumes.

Throughout International Week, dining service will provide ethnic meals. The French V class will stage a medieval play, "La Farce du Cuvier," under the direction of senior Allana Stark.

8 excel in math

Eight University Liggett School students finished in the top 5 percent of the 19,652 high school students who took Part I of the 32nd annual Michigan Mathematics Prize Competition in October.

They are Anthony Abiragi, Jesse Bouwman, Michael Coello, John Dodds, Charles Simonian and Nishu Sood of Grosse Pointe; and Alex Stine and Sebastian Wiers of Detroit. The eight are among the 979 students in Michigan who have qualified to take Part II of the competition on Dec. 14.

The top 100 winners of the entire competition (those with the highest combined scores from Parts I and II) will be honored at a banquet at Eastern Michigan University Feb. 26. The top 50 will receive scholarships ranging from $250 to $2,000.

Barry Cogan, chairman of the math department, organized the competition at ULS.

Students in the French-American Back-to-Back Program locate the town in France where they'll spend three weeks next spring. They are, from left, Andy Dragovic from Richard Elementary School, Kate Callas from Defer, Meridith Akins, Bill Drummy and Michael Weyhing, all from Kerby.

Fifth-graders say oui to exchange program

Thirty fifth-graders are putting a little French in their lives as part of a new after-school program offered by the Grosse Pointe public schools. The French-American Back-to-Back Program, which gives students the opportunity to learn about French culture and language, began in October.

In March, 30 French school children will arrive in Grosse Pointe to visit with program participants; in May, the Grosse Pointe students will travel to Vaux le Penil, a suburb of Melun, one hour southeast of Paris, on a return visit.

The 30 students in the Back-to-Back Program come from seven of the district's nine elementary schools.

Participants meet with teachers Nancy Kline and Denise Manns every Monday from 3:30 to 5:30 p.m. at Parcels Middle School to learn about French culture, language and customs. The students have already completed a booklet called "The Grosse Pointe Connection," which contains snapshots and self-descriptive poems of themselves. They will send it to their French counterparts, along with a giant map of Grosse Pointe.

Participants pay tuition to join the program.

In order to establish a scholarship fund to make the program available to all fifth-graders, members of the Back-to-Back Program are holding a French wine tasting on Friday, Dec. 2, from 7 to 9:30 p.m. at Gallerie 454, 15105 Kercheval, in Grosse Pointe Park.

Guests will view contemporary French art. A lithograph by Bernard Gantner, "Le Jardin de Ma Maison," will be auctioned.

Tickets are $25 per person. Contributions are tax-deductible. For more information, call Louise Snyder at 884-3871.

School board gives apples to teachers

The Grosse Pointe Board of Education sent 14 1/2 bushels of apples to school system employees two weeks ago. The occasion was American Education Week.

"This seemed like a good time to let our staff know how much we appreciate the fine job they're doing for the children of this community," said President Jon Gandelot. "It's the healthiest way we could find to say 'thank you.'"

Students attend Holocaust symposium

More than 185 students and 25 faculty members representing 15 public and private high schools in the tri-county area gathered for the 13th semi-annual Interfaith Youth Symposium on the Holocaust Nov. 30 at the Holocaust Memorial Center and the Jewish Community Center in West Bloomfield.

Local participating schools included Grosse Pointe South, University Liggett, Dominican and Bishop Gallagher high schools.

They toured the center and met with Holocaust survivors. The focus of the symposium is to raise the consciousness of a person's responsibility for fellow human beings through the memory and the lessons of the Holocaust.

Teachers who were unable to register their students for the symposium may arrange independent visits to the Holocaust Memorial Center by calling 661-0840.

ULS Christmas rescheduled

University Liggett School's all-school Christmas program, originally scheduled for the evening of Friday, Dec. 16, has been moved to Wednesday, Dec. 14, at 7 p.m. in the main gymnasium at 1045 Cook Road, Grosse Pointe Woods.

The performance will last approximately one hour and 15 minutes. Groups of students from second through 12th grades will perform the music of Christmas and Hanukkah. There is no admission charge for the program, and parents are urged to arrive early. For more information, call the creative and performing arts department at 884-4444.

Education fact

The number of college students receiving degrees in history, sociology, English and education dropped to 50 percent in the last 10 years, according to the U.S. Labor Department's Bureau of Labor Statistics. The decline reflects student response to the changing job market. The number of students majoring in education should increase again in response to rising school enrollments and reduced class size.

Student Spotlight

Frank Grzanka

Each week in this column, we will focus on the work of a student. It can be a poem, a drawing, a short story, a picture of a scientific experiment or a wood-working project, a book review.

The following was written by Frank Grzanka, 11, a sixth grader at Pierce Middle School. He is the son of Frank and Donna Grzanka of Grosse Pointe.

Christmas Is More Than Gifts

It was two days before Christmas and a family that lived on top of a huge snowy mountain was very poor. They had no money and very few clothes. Their dad worked as a snow shoveler. Each day he would get up at 6 a.m. in the morning and climb down the mountain and shovel snow for the townspeople. He made a few coins, just enough to buy a loaf of bread and a jug of water. It was snowing very hard, almost three feet. The wind blew hard and most people would be in their nice warm houses. But the father would be shoveling snow. He would come back just in time for dinner. The Ricksans would have to save as much food as possible. That night was the coldest night. The children would have to put wood in the fire before bedtime, but the mother was very worried that night because father never returned.

The next morning the mother found a note. It said: "I would be better off not here anymore because you need the food and money more than I do. Good-bye." That morning was very sad. The father left his family. He left 50 coins for food. The children did not know what happened. The mother just said your father went on a trip. It was Christmas Eve and the children were sad because their family was poor. But while all the children and everyone was sleeping, something was walking on the roof. It was a bearded fat chubby man in a red suit. He had a huge sack with food and toys and he jumped down the chimney, but he was not a good Santa. He was a thief. He was going to steal, but there was nothing to take, so he left. That night was a very sad night. When the children woke up, their mom was crying, but the children weren't. The children said, "Christmas is more than getting gifts. It is a time to be thankful for what we have, not what we get because we have a family that cares and does not need gifts to open." And that Christmas was a very Happy Christmas.

Two years later the father returned. He said, "I will never leave you again," and he said that he had gotten a new job. He worked as a builder and he would build houses and later on, he opened up his own business.

The Fox is open again and the good times are back

By Pat Paholsky
Editor

It was a different time. Back then, it was known as the grande dame of downtown Detroit. Now it's being called the fox lady of Woodward Avenue.

No matter. The Fox is still the most magnificent, stupendous movie house ever created. That's not documented anywhere; it's pure biased opinion. It's also true.

The Fox is part of my heritage. A night downtown on the weekend was an event which generally meant a trip to the beauty salon in the morning. Carefully coiffed and carefully dressed, my best friend and I would catch the two buses it took to get downtown.

There were other wonderfully ornate, splendid movie houses — Palms, Adams, Michigan — but the grandest of them all was the Fox. Walking into the lobby of the Fox was walking into fantasy. It was a place to leave the world for a few hours.

It was as much a part of the evening as the show and even the most spectacular Cecil B. DeMille spectacle could not overshadow this garish, gaudy, glorious temple to Hollywood. It was part of the experience.

Stop and think about today's movie houses — one flat sprawling complex with a dozen or more tacky-white cells called theaters. The lobby has a concession stand the size of a football field, always staffed by two people. I've fought my way up to the front, got some popcorn that is priced by the gram and then walked through a maze of roped-off areas to get to the proper cell. There is a herd mentality connected with all of this. No wonder the home video business is a thriving, throbbing industry.

That's why I was so excited about going to the grand opening of the Fox. I put on a dressy dress, my satin dancing pumps and an evening cape and wondered if it might be too much.

I stopped worrying when we drove into the Fox district, lit up like daylight with spotlights, limousines creeping forward, that splendid mounted division stationed everywhere.

We parked at a surface lot a couple of blocks down on a side street and were amazed to see that fresh sod had been laid along the perimeter of the lot. Somebody cared.

People were milling around the outside of the theater and they were dressed up. Boy, were they dressed. I ran into a young friend in the newspaper business wearing a tux! Sixty dollars at a resale shop, he told me, showing me the lining. This is vintage, he said with pride. In fact, he told me, he paid more for the shirt than he did for the suit. It was a good-looking shirt.

The lobby — that magnificent lobby — was teeming with people looking up and around. A lot of people had cameras hanging around their necks. It reminded me a little of a tour group in a cathedral in Europe.

Only this was more precarious. People were holding long-stemmed glasses of champagne and carrying small plates of hors d'oeuvres with their coats slung across their arms — there were no cloak rooms.

There were a few accidents. I had a drink spilled down my front by a sedate-looking gentleman in black tie who was somewhat embarrassed and apologetic. Doesn't matter, my partner told him, it's good booze.

We walked around and up and around and up some more, marveling at the expanse. The Fox is a sensory experience. People didn't want to sit down. They wanted to walk around and visit and ogle the people and ogle the architecture. It was very festive.

The show began more than a half hour late and people were still walking around. I was amazed. During the entire performance, there were almost as many people standing as were seated. It was an event.

I sat like a proper person should while my partner wandered all over — among the lighting technicians hidden behind the gigantic faux marble columns and in the lobby where all the ice sculptures of lions were melting from the massive influx of body heat. We both enjoyed the evening.

Maybe the Fox is a throwback to something that will never again be. Maybe you had to be there before to appreciate it now. I don't know. Only time will tell.

But I'm cheering for this one. I already bought tickets for a show later this month and I'm looking forward to a special evening.

Restoring the Fox took more than hard work

The Fox Theatre opened Nov. 19, bringing a new era of entertainment to Detroit. Behind the excitement and glamour of the opening is the fact that a lot of hard work and resources were required to restore The Fox to its original grandeur.

- More than 300 workers have participated in the restoration, working more than 300,000 labor hours at The Fox.
- 550 gallons of paint were used during the restoration.
- 103 gallons of paint thinner were used.
- 600 paint scrapers were used by the craftsmen.

- 3,000 natural sponges have been used for cleaning since the restoration began.
- 1,000,000 gallons of soap and water was used to clean every inch of the 5,000 seat theater.

- 2,500 frames of scaffolding were constructed in the auditorium to assist in the restoration.
- 20 tons of dirt has been removed from the decorative walls, ceiling, heating and cooling ducts.

- 40 gallons of linseed oil were used during the cleaning process of the renovation.
- 5,000 original theater seats have been restored with the seat covers replicated to match the original design.

- 7,000 yards of colorful elephant patterned carpeting has been remilled to match the original.

- 100,000 pieces of stained glass have been repaired and restored.

- 300,000 sheets of "gold" leaf were used to repair ornamentation.

- 2,000 tons of hand-stenciled canvas were replaced on the vaulted auditorium ceiling.

- 17 private "suite-style" loges were constructed especially for corporate entertaining on the Grand Promenade.

- The restoration cost $8 million.

- The Fox Theatre has 168,000 square feet.

- A 1,100-car parking structure soaring eight stories high is located north of The Fox on Montcalm. Its construction marked the first time in 50 years that ground was broken in the Woodward Corridor.

- 318,000 ceramic terra cotta bricks cover the entire exterior of the Fox building.

Helga: I saw her at the Detroit Institute of Arts

By Ronald J. Bernas
Staff Writer

There was a poster we had hanging on the wall in our dorm. It showed a scantily clad buxom woman with the caption, "I don't know much about art, but I know what I like."

That sums me up. I don't know much about art. But I do know what I like. I don't like Gauguin. I like Erte. I like Van Gogh before he cracked; I didn't like Dali until he did. I like Renoir, but I don't like Impressionism.

I like Andrew Wyeth, and I like Helga.

Some 120 of the 240 paintings, pencil drawings and studies in the Helga Suite (which is what those in the art crowd are calling the collection) are on display at the Detroit Institute of Arts every Tuesday through Sunday until Jan. 22. Tickets are $4. For information, call 832-2730.

As a writer, I find the story behind the Helga paintings and drawings fascinating. A man, arguably one of America's greatest living artists, secretly studies the same woman for more than a decade. A woman with whom he must have spent countless hours alone, one who posed for him nude more often than she did clothed, yet a woman with whom Andrew Wyeth said he was not romantically involved.

Right. Looking at it from a man's point of view, that might be possible. Helga is homely. Her square face and jutting jaw, her unsmiling face, her leathery complexion, and the straight, unkempt hair do not add up to a classic beauty. But there is something about her.

You can hear the hushed voices of the woman patrons there who mutter something to their male companions about Helga being "beautiful." More than once, I heard those same male companions scoff and reply, "That is in the eye of the beholder."

Yet there is something about this Helga Testorf. You have to admire this woman. It isn't every exhibitionist who has the foresight to move next door to a world-famous artist. Wyeth saw something in Helga, and he captured that something on paper.

If you look closely at the individual pieces in the exhibit, you might conclude what Wyeth saw in his model. Nearly all show Helga bathed in light from an unseen source — against a drab backdrop of an orchard in the winter, a barn, or simply nothingness.

Was she a ray of light in Wyeth's otherwise empty world, or was he just too lazy to finish the background? (Indeed, many seem unfinished, and some look like the artist knocked his coffee over on them and had to start again. But they're framed and on tour, and you just paid four bucks to see it, so it must be art.)

What you can deduce about Helga, the woman, from the exhibit is really not much. She doesn't smile much. None of the drawings and watercolors show her with as much as a twinkle in her eye as if she is about to smile, or as if she had just finished smiling. It seems she spent 14 years of her life brooding and sleeping (another favorite Wyeth pose of her.)

You can tell she was a frugal woman, because she wears the same caped coat in many paintings, even though they were done more than a decade apart. Actually, judging from the show, it was the only piece of clothing the woman owned.

You can tell, just from the fact that she posed for these portraits for 14 years that she had some feelings for her artist. But what those feelings are cannot be discerned from her face, or her eyes. You don't know if she was married, but she did have a daughter, a fresh-faced smiling youngster who is the subject of two paintings on display.

Many of the pieces in the collection are, to be honest, just rough drafts, and while they are interesting, they probably really shouldn't be hung on the walls of a museum. But much of the collection is stunning.

Wyeth captures an aching, a longing, in his studies of Helga Testorf that is not often seen on canvas. It is a feeling of "something is missing." But exactly what that something is will never be answered. It is up to us to see and to feel and to guess what Helga wanted. And what Wyeth wanted.

A good idea would be to pick up one of the pamphlets explaining the display. (They are on a table outside the ticket gate. Get one before you go in, because you won't be let back in.) It adds a different insight to the experience. Where I saw a painting of a woman with a ring of flowers around her head, the pamphlet says that painting is "almost explicitly allegorical. Wyeth transformed Helga into a living embodiment of nature's annual renewal."

Oh, yeah, that's what I meant to say.

And what the pamphlet says is the "composition and theme," and the "complex inner rhythm" of the suite, I saw as a bunch of pictures of a woman in the same pose.

There is also a little tape recorder with a guided audio tour you can rent for $3. I didn't use it, because I figured it would be

Two Helga lectures scheduled

Two distinguished observers of Andrew Wyeth and the Helga phenomenon will share their provocative insights and opinions at the Detroit Institute of Arts on successive Sundays, Dec. 4 and Dec. 11. Each lecture is at 3 p.m. General admission tickets at $5 each are available in advance at the DIA Ticket Office, 832-2730.

Tickets for the exhibition "Andrew Wyeth: The Helga Pictures," which continues at the Detroit Institute of Arts through Sunday, Jan. 22, also are available exclusively at the DIA Ticket Office.

On Dec. 4, John Wilmerding will discuss "Andrew Wyeth: The Helga Pictures," an exhibition he knows intimately. Wilmerding is the author of the exhibition catalogue and was organizing curator of the exhibition at the National Gallery of Art, Washington, D.C. He is now Christopher B. Sarofim Chair, professor of American Art at Princeton University. This event is free to members of the Founders Society.

On Dec. 11, Robert Hughes, outspoken art critic for Time magazine since 1970, will present his observations. Hughes was the author/presenter of the acclaimed PBS television series "The Shock of the New." The Australian-born writer's latest success was "The Fatal Shore," an international best-seller dealing with the dramatic origins of his native country. He will appear in the DIA auditorium. General admission is $5 for all seats (no reduction for Founders).

some pompous sounding Brit whispering in my ear about the "complex inner rhythm" of the suite, and I really couldn't stand that. Apparently, neither could too many other people, because I saw a lot of them with their fingers glued to the fast forward button.

One of the most interesting aspects of the DIA's show is the crowd. On opening day more than 10,000 people came to the museum and impressive crowds have been filing through the cramped maze ever since.

"Filing through the cramped maze" is putting it mildly. It feels like a long bank line, only this line moves. But you only get as much time to study each piece as the person behind you allows. The crowd doesn't allow you to step back to get a full picture, but if you jump around, and go where the line is broken, you can see the collection at your own pace.

Because there are so many people coming out to see the exhibition, the crowd is eclectic. There are bored men dragged through by their female companions; the "elbow-patch crowd," their goateed chins resting comfortably in their hands as they study a painting intently and nod knowingly. There is the spiked hair and leather crowd, the arty, yet unbuttoned crowd.

That's when it gets fun, watching all the different groups react to the show, and to each other.

In a group like this, you hear all sorts of things. "It speaks to me," one says. "If it weren't for the nudes, I'd swear Helga was a man," says another. And yet again, "That is in the eye of the beholder," says a scoffing middle-aged man.

You hear questions. "This is art?" And one from the National Enquirer readers: "What was his wife doing for 14 years? 'Honey, lunch will be ready as soon as you and Helga are finished cleaning out the barn. Boy, that's gotta be the cleanest barn in the state.'"

When you near the end of the Helga exhibit, you don't want to leave. You start backtracking looking for one you might have missed, and when you see it, you devour it. Then you see another one, one you may not have liked at first, but seen again, in a new light, there is something there. There is a simple beauty in Wyeth's work, and yes, even in Helga.

When you leave, you take something with you. Maybe a little enlightenment, maybe a little culture. Maybe a little understanding.

And everyone can take with them a little button that proudly tells the world, "I saw her at the DIA."

Verheyden's enters 80th year in the community

By Ronald J. Bernas
Staff Writer

"Our tradition of service and professionalism is what keeps us going," said David Otto, one of five directors of the Chas. A. Verheyden funeral home.

It is that tradition of professionalism and caring which became the hallmark of Charles A. Verheyden and the business he started in a building on Field Avenue that is continued today, three years after his death.

Charles Verheyden, a native Grosse Pointer, returned to the Pointes from working in a large New York firm to open his own business, the Chas. A. Verheyden, Inc. Funeral Home.

Verheyden's was the first funeral establishment on Detroit's east side to include a chapel. That building is still standing on Mack Avenue near Sheridan. It served the area from 1908 to 1942 when he opened what is now an architectural landmark on Mack just at the edge of Grosse Pointe Park. The building, designed by O.C. Bouschor, was in sharp contrast to the funereal atmosphere of the day. Its colorful interiors and welcoming atmosphere soon gained national recognition.

Year after year awards were presented for the beautifully landscaped grounds developed on Mack and Whittier, so many in fact, that a lifetime award from the Michigan Horticultural Society was given to Verheyden to allow others to win.

The building was doubled in size in 1952, garnering more national attention for being the largest funeral parlor of its kind.

In 1969 a fire partially destroyed the building, but because of Verheyden's involvement in the community and the reputation he had gained, those he had served in the community worked with him and the building was re-opened within a month.

Not only was Verheyden a leader in his field, but he was a leader in the community as well. He was a member of more than 15 organizations, from which he received numerous honors for his service and dedication. On Oct. 2, 1952, the Grosse Pointe Business Men's Association took out a full page ad in the Grosse Pointe News and praised Verheyden for his "initiative and foresight in providing so admirably for the needs of this great community."

Verheyden led the way for the establishment of a complete Mortuary Service School at Wayne State, and student scholarship funds were started from which he would pick his pool of workers.

David Otto, who has been with the funeral home for 27 years, said that it is the tradition of quality and caring that carries Verheyden's into the future.

He said Verheyden's motto: "An establishment that grew to greatness on little extra things of service...without extra cost," remains the guidepost for today's directors.

One of the newest benefits the business is providing at no charge is a bereavement counselor, Elizabeth McCormick, A.C.S.W. She will deal with grieving families who want or need counseling.

"We want to give something back to the community," Otto said. "We want to become involved with the community and work with it."

To that end, they are planning an outreach program with the bereavement counselor to reach more people. They invite groups to tour the home and are active now and have been in the past in various educational programs throughout the community to try to take the "fear factor" out of going to a funeral home.

They also have completed an extensive redecoration of the inside to make it a more hospitable place, so families can feel at ease. They also provide pre-need funeral planning, and the best embalming and restorative art available.

"It was one of Mr. Verheyden's and the management's primary concerns that we provide not only caring, but also artistic preparation of the remains, and that we assure the clientele that all aspects of the funeral service are taken care of in a professional manner," Otto said.

The tradition of Charles Verheyden was passed to his successors who included Clayton Alandt, who retired in 1987, and the five current directors — Joe Miller, Doug Smith, John Reuter, Bob Freiburger and Otto. Among the five and four other licensed funeral directors is nearly 200 years of experience.

Bon Secours honored

The Bon Secours Nursing Care Center was chosen by the Michigan Non-Profit Homes Association as Facility of the Year for 1989.

The award is presented to the facility that demonstrates "leadership in programming, financing and/or administration which sets it apart from other facilities and sets standards for performance that can be emulated by other non-profit facilities."

The 200-bed center, opened in 1984, is dedicated to the Sisters of Bon Secours' mission of respecting the "innate dignity of each person."

"We have many innovative programs at the center that are aimed at fostering employee participation in everything we do," said Gerald Bruen, vice president-aging services. "I think those programs were very impressive to the association. We have a staff that feels very much a part of the organization and that really enhances the care that is provided and the way it is provided. These programs were initiated to foster that feeling."

Jones named CEO of new G.P. bank

Jerry D. Campbell, chairman and president of Republic Bank Corp. Inc., announced the appointment of Jeffrey S. Jones as chairman, president and chief executive officer of Republic Bank-Oakland, the company's proposed entry into the metropolitan Detroit bank market.

Jones assumes full responsibility for all operations in preparation for opening the newest Republic Bank offices at 18720 Mack Ave. in Grosse Pointe Farms (Kerby Place), and 1700 North Woodward in Bloomfield Hills. Subject to regulatory approvals, both offices are expected to be opened in the first part of 1989.

Jones joins Republic after eight years with Michigan National Corp. where he served most recently as the vice president and manager of private banking. He has had experience developing strategy and policy for treasury funding, investments, and revolving credit as well as commercial lending. Jones also spent two years as a financial consultant with Price Waterhouse & Co.

Darlow is Woman of the Year

Julia D. Darlow, of Dickinson, Wright, Moon, Van Dusen and Freeman in Detroit, has been named "Professional Woman of the Year" by the Michigan Association of the Professions.

The award is presented annually to a professional practitioner who is recognized by her peers as truly outstanding and who has made significant contributions to her profession.

Darlow, whose husband, John C. O'Meara, is also a member of the firm of Dickinson, Wright, Moon, Van Dusen and Freeman, became the first woman president in the 50-year history of the State Bar of Michigan in 1986.

Darlow attended Vassar College, Columbia University Law School and graduated cum laude from Wayne State University Law School in 1971.

Darlow served as an adjunct professor at Wayne State University Law School in 1974 and 1976. She became an officer of the Women's Lawyers Association of Michigan in 1975 and served as its president in 1977-78. She was appointed a member of the Board of Commissioners of the state bar in 1977 and was elected secretary, vice president and president elect before assuming the office of the president in 1986. She has also been a member of the Representative Assembly, the policy-making body of the Bar.

In 1981, Darlow was elected to the Fellows of the American Bar Foundation, membership in which is limited to one-third of one percent of the leading lawyers and judges in America. The Detroit Bar Association presented her with its Distinguished Service Award in 1984 and, in that same year, she was named "Michigan's Distinguished Woman in the Professions" by the Michigan Business and Professional Women's Association.

She lives with her family in Grosse Pointe.

Little Tony's Lounge in the Woods:

Friendly neighborhood bar with food

By Pat Paholsky
Editor

When Tony Alfonsi bought a neighborhood bar at 20513 Mack 18 years ago, he named it Lounge in the Woods.

His customers, however, had their own name — they always referred to it at Little Tony's. So 12 years ago, Alfonsi renamed his business Little Tony's Lounge in the Woods.

The customers still call it Little Tony's. That hasn't changed. What did change 12 years ago was Alfonsi began serving food.

"We wanted to have the best burger in the neighborhood," he said. "We use fresh ground beef every day and the cook still makes the patties by hand. Even though we make 300 a day, we still make them by hand."

Little Tony's is a true neighborhood bar in the sense that the owner is active within the community — he sponsors several local sports teams and he participates in other civic activities.

And it's a family business: Wife Carolyn works along with him and each of their five children has worked there at one time.

Alfonsi, a native eastsider who went to St. Bernard's High School, owned a party store in Detroit for 15 years. The riots changed his mind about remaining and Alfonsi found "this quiet neighborhood bar" which he renovated. Everything was remodeled except the bar, he said.

There are a couple of paintings on the wall by Bob Tyrell, a commercial artist who lives in Grosse Pointe.

Alfonsi has no plans to change anything at this point. "I think we have reached a plateau that's really great," he said, adding, "If it ain't broke, don't fix it."

The bar is open from 11 a.m. to 2 a.m. Monday through Saturday. There are 20 employees and the building will hold 90 people.

"One of our features is we keep our grill open until 1:30 a.m., so we get people after the theater," Alfonsi said.

Items on the menu include one-third ground round for $2; with double cheese, $2.25; homemade chili for $1.50; and sandwiches — reuben, German knockwurst, stacked ham, hot dogs, grilled ham and cheese and fish file.

Finger foods include french fries, onion rings, clam strips, zucchini, wing dings, mushrooms, potato skins and nachos, ranging in price from $1 to $3.25.

Alfonsi is on the board of trustees of the Grosse Pointe Crisis Club, a low-keyed service organization formed in 1955 by businessmen and professionals. He's also a member of the Knights of Columbus and Our Lady Star of the Sea Catholic Church.

Alfonsi is a golf widower. Last year, Carolyn Alfonsi, in her second year of golf, got a hole in one, and Alfonsi says, "I can't live with her. It was tough enough before..."

He enjoys boating and fishing and he especially enjoys talking about both with like-minded customers.

Carolyn Alfonsi says, "I like being in this business and I like being here. I like the people who come in and we have nice employees."

Savor the sweet 'Sounds of Christmas' Dec. 11

By Peggy O'Connor Andrzejczyk
Assistant Editor/Feature Editor

What better way to celebrate the holiday season than listening to the sounds of Christmas? And what better settings for those sounds than such architectural gems as the churches of St. Paul, Grosse Pointe Memorial and Christ Church Grosse Pointe?

The Grosse Pointe Historical Society thought so, too. That's why the society has scheduled "Sounds of Christmas," an old-fashioned afternoon to benefit restoration of the society's future headquarters, the Provençal-Weir House.

"It's a unique event and an appropriate one, I think, for the Grosse Pointe Historical Society to sponsor," said Lisa Gandelot, one of eight general chairmen for the event and a member of the Provençal-Weir House committee.

"To do this at three churches with rich architectural history and to follow with an afterglow at the Grosse Pointe Academy with its marvelous history, is just the icing on the cake," Gandelot added.

"Sounds of Christmas" begins at 2 p.m. Sunday, Dec. 11, at St. Paul Church, 157 Lakeshore Road.

Director of music David O. Wagner will perform Daquin's "Noel XX," and "Noel sur les flûtes;" Bach's "Chorale Prelude In dulci Jubilo" and "Wachet Auf, Ruft uns die Stimme;" Franck's Pastorale op. 20; and Vienne's "Finale from Symphony No. 1."

Historic St. Paul Church was opened at its present site in January 1899. Changes have been added over the years, but items in the church today which date to its origin include the pews, the Rose window, the nave windows, the baptismal font and the stations of the cross.

Then at 3 p.m., participants have their choice of two musical treats: a "Christmas Sing-Along with Carillon and Organ," at Grosse Pointe Memorial Church; or "Christmas Carols by the Men's and Boys' Choir" at Christ Church. William DeTurk is director of music and carillonneur at Memorial; D. Frederic DeHaven is musical director at Christ Church.

The program at Memorial Church includes favorite holiday tunes. At Christ Church, the choir will perform "Masters in this Hall," "Once in Royal David's City," "Noel Nouvelet," "The Blessed Son," "Sing Lullaby," "Sans Day Carol," "Hodie Christus natus est," "Tomorrow Shall Be My Dancing Day," "Shepherds Pipe Carol," and "Sussex Carol."

Historical buffs will enjoy Memorial Church's sanctuary rich with carvings, mosaics, stained glass and other art work, the gifts of many local residents and church members since the 1920s, when the church was built and dedicated.

Christ Church was dedicated on its present site in 1930. Its cloister was inspired by the one in Canterbury Cathedral and the organ was built and installed by Casavant Freres, St. Hyacinth, Quebec. Christ Church has an abundance of fine wood carvings, including the reredos of English oak behind the altar.

Members of the Grosse Pointe North High School choirs, directed by Ben Walker, will sing carols at each church and at an afterglow, set for the Grosse Pointe Academy. The afterglow is for benefactors, patrons and friends and runs from 4 to 6 p.m.

Friend, patron and benefactor tickets at $100, $250 and $500, include a light meal, holiday cheer and horse-drawn carriage rides.

General admission tickets for the concerts are $19 per person; reserved seating is $20.

"This is really our first venture into the world of fundraising," Gandelot said. "And we think it has the potential of becoming a holiday tradition in Grosse Pointe."

Proceeds from the event will go to restore the Provençal-Weir House, built in 1819 and now one of Grosse Pointe's oldest buildings. It was constructed by Pierre Provençal at the corner of what is now Provençal and Lakeshore Road. Provençal and his wife had one child, Catherine, who married James Weir in 1867 and used the home as a summer residence until its sale in 1899.

The home was then moved to its present site at 376 Kercheval. It was purchased by the Grosse Pointe Historical Society in January 1988 for its future headquarters. Restoration began this summer with clean up of grounds, plantings and replacement and painting of exterior wood.

The Provençal-Weir House purchase was, according to the society board member Jon B. Gandelot, "just one of those things we fell into. Fortunately, the board was willing to take a chance to get into this, knowing that it will be the headquarters somewhere down the road."

"We felt that if the society spent so much time talking about historical preservation, we needed to put our money where our mouths were," Lisa Gandelot explained.

The idea for the holiday-theme fundraiser came from society board member Jo Malecek, who broached the subject at a board meeting and found that members' acceptance was unanimous.

"Ron Lamparter said 'Great idea.' He took care of underwriting and told us to take care of everything else. So with the project being underwritten by so many gracious people, this should be a successful fundraiser," she added.

Community response to "Sounds of Christmas" has been terrific so far, Lisa Gandelot said.

"So many people — from the churches and the Academy and from the community — have been so helpful and responded so well. We think that this will be a great day and a wonderful way to start the holidays," she added.

Serving as general chairmen with the Gandelots are Beverly and Benjamin J. Burns, Nancy and Patrick J. Griffin and Jo and Robert M. Malecek. Hosts and hostesses include Judith and Randolph J. Agley, Paul D. and Lynn Alandt, Marlene and John A. Boll, Sybil and Leonard C. Jaques, Barbara and D.J. Kennedy Jr., Sandra and William P. Baer, Mary and Ron Lamparter and Jane and Kenneth G. Meade.

Tickets for the event are available at Village Records and Tapes and Grosse Pointe Florists, Inc., and will be available at the door on the day of the program.

Ready, set . . . deck the halls for the holidays

By Ellen Probert
Special Writer

Now that we have recovered from the culinary excesses of Thanksgiving, it is suddenly time to think about decking the halls for the holiday season of Advent, Christmas and Hanukkah. It's time for lights and sparkle and the scent of evergreens to pervade the scene.

When you think about it, there is a remarkable variety in the plants which symbolize this glamorous season. Some of them connect with very ancient traditions and customs and some are fairly new, such as poinsettias, which have only been the traditional Christmas plant for a couple of generations.

Ivy and mistletoe were sacred plants to the ancient druids and their uses as part of the annual midwinter festivals have been translated into our use as Christmas decorations and kissing balls. In the European flower calendar, holly is the symbol of December. In the Victorian language of flowers, holly indicates foresight and defense and mistletoe means good luck to a woman and bad luck to a man. It also stands for affection and love and to this day, is a sacred plant in India.

Holly has also been an important plant for celebrations and festivals. Virgil refers to it often in his writings by its Latin name: Ilex. There are hundreds of varieties of ilex or holly, and they are native to many lands in Europe, Asia, North and South America, the Canary Islands and Madeira, to name a few.

Some have red berries and some have prickly leaves and some are smooth. They may be green or golden or variegated in color. Holly and ivy are often used together for great decorative effect and are thus immortalized in the old Christmas carol, "The Holly and the Ivy."

It was a common belief in the Dark Ages that mistletoe did not grow from seeds because it only occurred high up in trees and never on the ground. Mistletoe was a sacred plant to the ancient Teutonic and Celtic peoples and was used in ceremonies by the druids. Branches were used in homes to ward off evil spirits. They are still used to decorate houses, but never in churches because of the pagan aura which still surrounds them.

In the Chinese flower calendar, the poppy is the flower for December and is the symbol for revelry and celebration.

All the evergreen trees are used for Christmas trees, a relatively modern custom introduced into England from Germany by Queen Victoria's consort, Prince Albert. Cedar trees are among the most popular, perhaps because of their lovely aromatic scent.

Cedars are mentioned frequently in the Bible and the Cedars of Lebanon are still as they were in biblical times. (The tem-pires one of these ancient trees. Every year at the Feast of the Transfiguration, the Greeks, Armenians and Mormons go on of many varieties, but all share in beauty and in their spicy scent which always makes us think of holidays.

In Victorian times, balsam and Douglas firs were widely used for Christmas trees and while markets in the cities could supply trees to urban families, those who could, made an annual expedition to the country to select and cut their trees and bring them home on sleds pulled by a team of horses.

Perhaps it is the nostalgia that overcomes most of us at Christmas time for the simpler life of "the good old days" before computers, but going to the country to cut your own Christmas tree is again a most popular event.

There are many tree farms which advertise festive days of sleigh rides, complete with bells and general Christmas cheer as incentives to bring the family and cut a tree.

Unfortunately, bringing it home sticking out of the back of a station wagon or lashed to the top of a car doesn't seem quite as romantic as horses and a sleigh, but the principle is the same.

Three wonderful places in the area offer a chance to relive past Christmas joys: Greenfield Village, the Van Hoosen Farm Museum in Rochester and Upland Hills Farm near Oxford. Each offers sleigh rides, jinglebells, hot mulled cider, Santa Claus, carols, country crafts and shops and Christmas trees.

A little closer to home, the Edsel & Eleanor Ford House in Grosse Pointe Shores boasts five beautifully decorated trees, uncounted banks of poinsettias, ribbons and roping and a marvelous display of antique toys to delight visitors of any age. There are public tours; call 884-3400 for more information.

At the Grosse Pointe Garden Center, located in the Grosse Pointe War Memorial, plans are already under way for exciting events in 1989. There are new books in the circulating library of garden books, seed catalogs, periodicals and brochures about garden-based day trips and places to visit.

The Gardener's Shed

ple in Jerusalem was built of cedar wood. The 12 oldest and largest of the Cedars of Lebanon have been revered by every monotheistic religion. Called by the Jews, "The 12 Friends of Solomon," by the Christians, "The 12 Apostles," and by Mohammedans, "Saints," it has been believed for centuries that an evil fate will befall anyone who ina pilgrimage to the cedar groves of Lebanon.

Spruce trees are also very popular for Christmas trees. They are members of the pine family and the Latin name for them, pinaceae, comes from the Latin word pix, or pitch, and refers to the resin or pitch that is obtained from them. Like the cedars, the spruces and pines are

FACTS YOU SHOULD KNOW ABOUT PLASTIC SURGERY.

FACT 1: FREE CONSULTATION WITH A SURGEON IS IMPORTANT.

When it comes to cosmetic surgery, we operate a little differently at Cottage Hospital. For example, our physicians offer a free consultation. A time to discuss your private questions in a private setting. Call 881-1800 for details.

FACT 2: EXPERIENCE AND TRAINING MAKE A DIFFERENCE.

In Michigan, any licensed physician can put "cosmetic surgeon" on a business card. But at Cottage Hospital, your doctor has completed extensive post-graduate training, including a residency in plastic surgery or otolaryngology (ENT). All cosmetic surgeons don't meet these strict standards.

But your surgeon at Cottage Hospital does.

FACT 3: COSMETIC SURGERY HAS MANY FACES.

That's why besides face lifts (rhytidectomy), we perform breast contouring, liposuction (removing fatty deposits) and more. Often without an overnight hospital stay.

FACT 4: A HOSPITAL ENVIRONMENT IS REASSURING.

Whether or not your surgery requires a hospital stay, it's important to know that you have the care of Cottage's expert staff, including highly trained nurses. If you do need an overnight stay, at Cottage you'll enjoy all the services you expect from a quality hospital...and more.

FACT 5: THE LUXURY OF A HOTEL IS YOURS.

At Cottage, you'll stay in a hospital that's actually hospitable. Our optional "Five Pointe Service" includes a special suite for cosmetic surgery patients and a VIP menu. You can even invite a guest for dinner.

Cosmetic surgery at Cottage Hospital. At a cost that compares favorably with other programs. Call us at 881-1800.

It should be one sweet sundae, um, Sunday, when the third annual Chocolate Jubilee to benefit Alzheimer's victims and their families is held Dec. 4, from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m. at the Somerset Inn, 2601 West Big Beaver Road.

More than 35 restaurateurs and chocolatiers, including Chocolatissimo, Nestle's, Stroh's, General Foods, Machus Enterprises and Merchant of Vino will participate. They will offer free samples of chocolate desserts, candies and speciality confections. Holiday gift items will also be available.

General admission is $25 per person. A patron brunch — with chocolate main dishes, naturally — will be served at noon. Patron tickets are $100 per person, which includes admission to the Jubilee.

Doreen Hermelin is chairing the event. Pointers on the committee include Dale Austin, Marilyn Gushee, Edye Longyear, Erma Reindel, Sue Vittoe, Virginia Tompkins and Susu Sosnick.

Reservations may be made by sending a check to the Alzheimer's Association, 17251 West 12 Mile Road, Suite 103, Southfield, Mich., 48076. For more information, call 577-8277.

Walk through a winter wonderland

The public is invited to explore nature's methods for winter survival at The Matthaei Botanical Gardens during the free monthly trail walk on Sunday, Dec. 4 at 2 p.m.

Winter is a season when energy is expended without being replaced. Life must subsist on food that was stored up during the green season. The cold, dry winds of winter can be as harsh as the hot winds of summer drought. Add to this the ice and snow and the problems of winter survival become worse. As daylight hours shorten and temperatures get lower, plants and animals prepare for winter.

Examine the various methods that are nature's way of plant protection. See how nature provides convenient food and shelter for the animals and learn how they use these provisions.

The 1-1/2 hour walk goes through the trails of the gardens and is open to the public. Doctors will meet the visitors at the steps in front of the conservatory at 2 p.m.

The Matthaei Botanical Gardens is located at 1800 N. Dixboro Road, Ann Arbor, 1/4 mile south of the Plymouth road intersection on the east side.

LWV plans party

The League of Women Voters of Grosse Pointe will host a holiday party on Sunday, Dec. 11, at 7 p.m. at the Grosse Pointe Hunt Club.

The event will feature two speakers followed by a discussion. Guests are welcome. Cost is $8.50 per person. Reservations are due by Dec. 6 and may be made by sending a check to Barb Lynton, 175 Vendome, Grosse Pointe Farms, Mich., 48236.

Christmas greens workshop set

The Detroit Garden Center, located in historic Moross House, 1460 East Jefferson Ave., will present a Christmas Greens Workshop on Thursday, Dec. 8, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Make a natural greens centerpiece that will last through the holidays, plus instructions on constructing a greens wreath, a swag, and a decorative bow to finish.

Fee is $10. To preregister, call 259-6363.

MCF president Michael Brennan and Rita Brennan enjoying the Nov. 15 "Angels" benefit for the Michigan Cancer Foundation.

Angels filled the newly opened Skyline Club in Southfield, raising some $200,000 for MCF and making a chilly November night a little warmer.

Guests enjoyed a magnificent seven-course meal, with five wines and champagnes, prepared by Olympic gold-medalist Chef Calvin Whitaker. Capping the evening was entertainment by actress and Broadway great Ruta Lee.

The Angels were conceived three years ago by Velvet Peanut Butter founder, the late Paul Zuckerman and his wife, Helen. Each year, the funds are earmarked for MCF's research program in metastasis, headed by Dr. Avraham Raz, who is searching for clues into the methods by which cancer spreads throughout the body.

Among those who enjoyed the Angels' benefit were Grosse Pointers Dale and Don Austin, Lucille Wertz, MCF president Michael Brennan, M.D., and Rita Brennan.

Tickets are $30 in advance and $35 at the door. Proceeds from the event will support programs and services for kidney disease patients in Michigan. For further information or to order tickets, call 368-8202.

Greens sale

Putting the finishing touches on items to be featured in the Christ Church Greens Sale are members of the Episcopal Church Women's group of the church. The popular Greens Sale begins today, Dec. 1, running from 2 to 8 p.m., and continues Friday, Dec. 2, from 9 a.m. to noon.

New this year are an artist's boutique and an "Artists and Angels" shop, in addition to the many other attractions at the annual sale. The church is located at 61 Grosse Pointe Boulevard.

Christ Church to present 'Christmas Oratorio'

Five masterpieces of Johann Sebastian Bach are considered the composer's finest and most frequently heard compositions. One of these great works is the "Christmas Oratorio," which will be performed at Christ Church this Sunday, Dec. 4, at 7:30 p.m.

The "Christmas Oratorio" shares many of the interesting characteristics of the "B minor Mass and the Magnificat," with Bach's special use of baroque trumpets for the joyous and triumphant movements, his exciting fast movements and grandiose choruses.

The Christmas work also tells the story in oratorio and operatic style with arias, recitatives, choruses, chorales and colorful flute, violin and oboe d'mour solos, as in the great "St. Matthew Passion," and "St. John Passion."

The "Christmas Oratorio" is a gigantic work to perform and while Handel's oratorio "The Messiah" is performed many times over the holiday season, the Bach work is a great alternative and an important work to perform.

The 50-member Christ Church Chorale will sing the choruses and chorales with orchesra. Members of the Detroit Symphony Orchestra and the Michigan Opera Theatre Orchestra will participate with soloists and the chorus under the direction of Frederic DeHaven.

Lyric soprano Linda Thorne has performed Bach extensively in the United States and in Europe. She was the recipient of the Fulbright Award, studying in Vienna and was received as "one of the most gifted students in Vienna."

Alto Elizabeth Elvidge is well known to Ann Arbor and Grosse Pointe audiences. She resides in Cincinnati while working on her doctoral degree in vocal performance.

Randolph Lacey is new to Detroit and has been active as a tenor in Houston. A specialist in performing recitatives, he will sing the role of the "Evangelist" in the oratorio. University of Michigan doctoral student Kyle Marrero will sing the bass role in the performance.

Tickets for the concert are $8 and may be reserved by calling the church office at 885-4841.

Christ Church is located at 61 Grosse Pointe Boulevard.

Church in changing world

St. Paul's Altar Society invites readers to attend the Dec. 5 meeting, whose speaker will be Father Walter A. Markowicz, pastor of St. Josaphat Church. He will speak on "The Church as a Moral Stabilizer in a Changing World, and Reproductive Morality." Markowicz is a priest, teacher and campus minister at Wayne State University, where he is also the Director of Human Values in Medicine.

The meeting will be held in the Parish Activities House, 157 Lakeshore, next to St. Paul-on-the-Lake Catholic Church.

Organ recital scheduled for Dec. 4

Concert Organist Kenneth Hamrick will give a recital at 12:15 p.m. Sunday, Dec. 4, at Sweetest Heart of Mary Church, 4440 Russell and Canfield in Detroit. A free-will donation will be accepted.

compositions by Boellmann, Guilman, Vierne and Mulet. He is completing work on his doctoral degree in organ performance at the Eastman School of Music in Rochester, N.Y.

For more information, call 831-6659.

Advent reflection

St. Paul Catholic Church youth minister Ted L. Maluchnik (above) will direct an "Advent Evening of Reflection" for adults on Tuesday, Dec. 6, at 7:30 p.m. at the St. Paul Parish House. Participants will reflect on spiritual gifts and ponder the season of Advent.

Maluchnik has been involved in Christian education for 14 years and is in his second year on staff at St. Paul. Known throughout the Archdiocese of Detroit as a retreat director, Maluchnik works with various groups at Manresa Jesuit Retreat in Bloomfield Hills. He also is producer and host of "Street Level," a weekly alternative Christian music radio show on WDTR 90.9 FM.

CYO reception

The Catholic Youth Organization kicked off its Agenda for Excellence program Nov. 29 with a private reception for members of the board of directors and board of trustees.

Grosse Pointe Park residents Mr. and Mrs. Vaughn Adams hosted the reception. Adams has been a board member for more than 20 years. He is a past recipient of the Joe Glaser Award, the board's highest honor for volunteer efforts in youth services.

Baby, it's cold outside

By Marian Trainor
Special Writer

With temperatures below normal so far this autumn, homeowners are wondering if this winter will be longer and colder than the last two. Winter may be fun for skiers and skaters, but for those paying the heating bills, it is a worrisome time when keeping warm must be balanced against a budget.

This is particularly true of older people on fixed incomes, but there are ways of keeping the cold out, the heat in and the money in your pocket.

Investing in heat-saving devices and taking advantage of discounts from utility companies is definitely better than turning the heat down to where it can be hazardous to the health.

Home temperatures of 65 degrees or less may be fine for younger folks, but unfortunately, the physiological mechanisms that compensate for variations of temperatures are less efficient in older people.

In some, even small changes in the thermometer can cause body temperatures to fall or rise to dangerous levels. According to the National Institute of Health, these changes can produce disease and even permanent damage to the body.

Excessively cold living conditions can lead to a progressive fall in body temperature and the collapse of the cardiovascular system which maintains the flow of blood to various parts of the body. This condition is called hypothermia.

Hypothermia can hit persons of all ages. In younger people, it occurs under conditions such as exposure to severe outdoor weather, such as young hikers stranded on a mountain or young sailors wrecked in cold waters. Such stringent conditions need not exist for older people to suffer from hypothermia.

Even mildly cool temperatures of 60 degrees Fahrenheit can trigger a condition known as accidental hypothermia. Diseases of the arteries and veins and treatment with certain drugs make a person more susceptible to this condition.

Accidental hypothermia is not a new condition, but recognition of it is. Credit for describing it goes largely to research done in Great Britain. Those studies showed that 10 percent of older people there were susceptible to accidental hypothermia. The percentage in the United States might be higher because there are more elderly people here and larger areas with harsher winter conditions.

Another contributing factor is an inability to shiver. Shivering, a series of muscular contractions, is triggered to convert energy such as sugar, to energy to heat the body. Usually, this heat production is sufficient to protect the body against hypothermia.

If the temperature is too low, shivering doesn't happen and the person goes into cardiovascular collapse. Blood flow to the organs becomes inadequate and blood pressure falls.

See PRIME, page 9B

The risk of hypothermia depends on several factors. The most vulnerable are persons living alone with few visitors, particularly if the victim has an accident, cannot get help and is left in that condition for several hours in a cold room.

Advice on sound nutrition after 50

Today's older Americans are some of this country's most active citizens. From sports to traveling to participation in a wide variety of social activities, older Americans are busier, more involved and healthier.

The key to an active lifestyle at any age is good health, and the American Institute for Cancer Research has published a new booklet which offers a variety of information on good nutrition and how to stay in better health during the later years of life.

"Be Your Best: Nutrition After 50," focuses on the changing nutritional needs of the mature person. These can include requiring fewer calories and increased needs for certain vitamins, minerals and other nutrients.

The booklet explains these nutritional changes and offers practical tips on how to meet these changing requirements. It includes easy-to-understand nutritional information, as well as great tasting recipes for dishes low in fat and sodium.

"As we mature, our bodies change and our nutritional needs change," said Christine Murray, director of education for the Institute and editor of this new booklet. "But if we understand those changes, and the potential that good nutrition can offer in providing better health, then eating right can be an important and enjoyable element in an active, happy lifestyle."

Mint Chicken with Fruit

4 chicken breasts, skinless, boneless or with bone
6 oz. apricot nectar
20 oz. canned pineapple chunks, reserve the juice
1 tsp. dried, crushed mint leaves

1 medium onion, thinly sliced
2 medium carrots, shredded
16 oz. mandarin oranges, drained

2 Tblsp. currants

Preheat the oven to 350°. In a baking dish, lay the chicken in a single layer, breast side up. Mix together the apricot nectar, pineapple juice and mint and pour over the chicken. Lay the onion slices and shredded carrots over the chicken. Bake for 30 minutes. Add the fruit on the sides of the dish and sprinkle with currants. Return to the oven for another 10 minutes or until chicken is done.

Serves four. Calories, 404; with 107 mg. of sodium and 5 grams of fat.

"Be Your Best: Nutrition After 50," may be obtained free by sending a stamped (45 cents postage) self-addressed business size envelope to the American Institute for Cancer Research, Dept. BY1, Washington, D.C. 20069.

Reaching retirement 'Edens' getting easier

Increasing numbers of older Americans are discovering that they can live comfortably abroad on their Social Security checks — in "retirement Edens" from Mexico to Europe.

Author Peter A. Dickinson estimates that for $1,000 a month a couple can afford a "stylish villa with a sea view, relax with household help and a gardener, entertain grandly, and travel comfortably" within a number of countries around the world.

Dickinson should know because for years he has investigated bargain Utopias the world over. He provided detailed information about them in his new book, "Travel and Retirement Edens Abroad," the latest in a series of AARP Books, an educational co-publishing project of the American Association of Retired Persons.

Dickinson, world traveler and author of the popular "Sunbelt Retirement" and "Retirement Edens Outside the Sunbelt" books, gives readers up-to-date information on retirement meccas in Mexico, Canada, Costa Rica, The Caribbean, Europe, Israel, Australia and the Far East.

Already two million Americans, excluding military personnel, are living or making extended stays outside the United States, a number that is expected to double or triple in 10 years.

Dickinson tells not only where but how a retiree should go about setting up a retirement

Eden outside the United States. His 454-page book has names, places, numbers and other details necessary to investigate living abroad.

"Travel and Retirement Edens Abroad" can be ordered by mail for $16.95 ($12.95 to AARP members who include membership number), plus $1.75 per order for postage and handling from:

English-Speaking Union meets

Members of the Detroit Branch of the English-Speaking Union of the United States met Nov. 13 for a Sunday brunch at the Machus Red Fox restaurant in Bloomfield Hills. The program reviewed the recent scholarship activities which sent two local students to Oxford University for the 1988 summer session.

ESU branch member Ralph F. Glenn, a professor at Madonna College, introduced a panel which highlighted the experiences of the two American students at Oxford. Panel members included Edward J. Wolff, professor of English at the University of Detroit; Margaret B. Pigott, professor of English at Oakland University; Oakland University student Anna Giddings; and University of Detroit student Mary-Jelisse Bonello.

GPYC officers

At the Grosse Pointe Yacht Club's annual meeting Wednesday, Nov. 2, voting members elected new director Edward B. Connelly and incumbent directors Thomas D. Ogden, Edward B. Palm and Charles E. Stumb Jr. The following officers were also elected: Commodore Fred G. Schriever, vice commodore Tymon C. Tote, rear commodore Thomas D. Ogden, secretary Charles E. Stumb and treasurer Herold M. Helping those over 50 get started in business

The years after 50 may be the best time to start a business, says author Ina Lee Selden in her new book, "Going Into Business for Yourself."

The new book is the latest in a series of AARP Books, an educational co-publishing project of the American Association of Retired Persons.

Selden shows older persons how to assess their entrepreneurial qualities and analyze their marketable skills. She provides expert advice and practical information about securing venture capital and trade credit; preparing a sound, workable business plan; and weighing the pros and cons of working full or part-time and away from or in the home.

The experiences of more than 20 people who started successful businesses after 50 are also described. An appendix lists organizations and publications that might provide prospective entrepreneurs with helpful information.

The author began her own travel planning business several years ago. She has also been a journalist for The New York Times, Washington Post, business magazines and other publications.

AARP Books are co-published at AARP and Scott, Foresman and Company. They are available in bookstores through Little, Brown and Company.

"Going Into Business for Yourself" can be ordered by mail for $8.95 ($6.50 to AARP members who include membership number) plus $1.75 per order for postage and handling from: AARP Books, Scott, Foresman and Company, Dept. 836, 1964 Miner St., Des Plaines, Ill. 60016.

Oddly enough, studies show that the old are less able to sense cold. Scientists have reported that the old are less likely to complain of cold than younger people, even though they were not adapting well to the cold.

Other conditions which could signal a vulnerability to hypothermia are dizziness when changing positions, such as getting out of bed, standing or any change of position. If these problems are due to low blood pressure, then hypothermia must be guarded against, since this involves failure of the blood vessels to constrict.

Slow thyroids that reduce the rate of metabolism, head injuries, strokes, immobilizing diseases such as arthritis and Parkinson's disease or a previous experience with hypothermia are other conditions that warrant special pains to avoid chill.

However, all older people and especially those 75 and older, should avoid prolonged exposure to even mildly cold temperatures without taking care to keep warm. Besides maintaining comfortable temperatures they should wear adequate clothing, including sweaters, robes, warm socks and enough blankets on their beds.

Because hypothermia has been so recently identified, there is much to be done in the way of identifying those who are susceptible. At present, the most effective way to protect older citizens from accidental hypothermia is to watch for signs and encourage older people to consult a physician to determine if they are vulnerable and be careful to keep warm at all times.

Grosse Pointe A Unique Community

Architectural Diversity As the great variety of home sizes and styles suggests, growth has continued slowly over many years. It continues even today. Old estates are subdivided for building contemporary homes, making the mansions that still survive (and many do) all the more treasured by their owners and tradition-minded residents. At the same time, the area includes homes of just about every style and size—from townhouses, two-family units and other small homes to gracious English Tudors, colonials, executive mansions, contemporary ranch styles and a variety of modern designs, including condominiums.

This diversity has helped make Grosse Pointe attractive to all who value well-maintained quality which far exceeds its price.

Uphill all the way

Back in August when the gymnasium was like an oven because of the extreme heat outside, the North girls' basketball team set out on a mission to win another league title as well as a district championship.

Neither one of those dreams became a reality, but the Lady Norsemen did manage to scoot into the District 17 finals against perennial powerhouse Regina. However, they lost 57-33 to end the season 14-8.

Losing was an emotional moment for the 11 girls and coaches Gary Bennett and Ray Ritter. More importantly, the girls played above their heads with heart and emotion.

In the district finals, one only had to look at North's bench and see how depleted it was. Three players out with injuries and only three reserves dressed for action. Five girls battled Regina on the floor, but the true war was won by the Norsemen throughout the season.

It was a team riddled by injuries from the first week. On Sept. 8 North defeated South (48-38) to open the season, but went into a tailspin from that point on. It wasn't that they couldn't win. It wasn't that they didn't have the ability and desire to be the best. It was the lack of depth.

Bennett and Ritter have always taught team unity. They can now say all 11 girls — injured or not — rallied around one another to be the best 14-8 team possible. Ankles were twisted. Knees were bruised. Fingers were swollen. But in times of distress, they played better, faster and with more pride.

Since Sept. 8, they didn't even have enough girls for an intrasquad scrimmage. Their drills were reduced to a slower pace as five girls worked offense and only three on defense. It was a trying time for North, but as any good team, they proved that defying the odds is possible if you want it badly enough.

The misfortunes never ceased for North. Heather Mergos, the big shooter for North, sat on the bench with Kerry Peters and Stephanie Gore, the rest of the team tried to extend the season by winning a second straight district championship.

It didn't happen. Big deal! More was accomplished by playing plagued all season. Melissa Champine, Katie Loeher, Kelli Gianunzio, Kim Reiter, Kelly Kunkel, Noelle Cormier, Michelle Miller and Melissa Drouillard were the girls left to carry out the mission.

In the first half North ruled. They were beating Regina 10-2 at one point, and doing it in a gym only large enough for elementary school children. In fact, it was difficult to put my two feet between the sideline and the 3-point line without stepping out of bounds.

In the second half, they couldn't muster an offense. It was very difficult to beat the Regina press, especially when Coach Diane Laffey continued to roll in fresh substitutes and North went with its rotating three-person sub list. They began to tire, but played to salvage some pride when they trailed by 20 points.

The end was inevitable after Regina poured in 13 unanswered points and then extended its lead to 18 points. It didn't matter at that point. But the unabashed Norsemen played until the buzzer ended their season. For three seniors, Mergos, Gianunzio and Peters, there's no tomorrow. They, like many others, may not play college basketball, but they were fortunate enough to have played on a team molded by heart and unity.

Norsemen can't dish up win over Saddlelites

By Rob Fulton
Sports Editor

An injury-riddled basketball team faced one of the district's finest teams and the result was more damaging than any injury.

The scars of a 57-33 loss to Regina in the District 17 finals, may be everlasting for the North girls' basketball team.

North finished 14-8 overall.

Although harboring thoughts of an upset, the Lady Norsemen were outmatched in numbers on and off the court. They dressed eight girls and had as many substitutes as they did injured people on the bench: three.

"It's been that way since the start of the season," said North coach Gary Bennett. "Injuries, to say the least, have been the biggest problem for us. We haven't been able to practice the way we should because we can't even put 10 girls in uniform."

What led to North's demise was a one-point third quarter. That's right. One point.

"We had a lot of trouble handling the ball," Bennett said. "We came out in the second half and they (Regina) applied a full court press and we tried dribbling through it instead of passing through it."

Bennett and assistant coach Ray Ritter had prepared the Norsemen for the Saddlelites' half-court press, but when they had to break the full court press, North simply added to its 29 total turnovers.

"We were better prepared for the half-court press than we were for the full court," Bennett said. "But then they (Regina) adjusted and we didn't have a very good second half at all."

Noelle Cormier, who led North with 12 points, gave North a 22-21 lead at the half by hitting a 10-footer, but it was the last basket North would score until the fourth quarter.

"There were times when we got across half court, but we began to stand around on offense," Bennett said about the start of the second half. "When we stood around, instead of moving without the ball, it caused us to turn the ball over and gave them too many opportunities."

When the door was open, Regina barged through with 13 unanswered points. Kim Reiter, North's junior center who hit for seven points, snapped the Saddlelites' run with her free throw with under three minutes to go in the third, but Regina finished the third quarter with a 10-point spurt to take a 44-23 lead.

Kelly Kunkel added eight points for the Lady Norsemen.

Regina, behind Polly Williams' 22 points, outscored North, 13-10, in the final eight minutes to wrap up the victory.

"I think they went in and got chewed out a little bit," Bennett said about Regina. "They came out in the second half all fired up. I think in the first half they were frustrated because they may have assumed they could roll all over us."

But, like a boxer in the corner, the Norsemen came out swinging in the first round as they punched out a 10-2 lead.

"You never know how your team is going to play," Bennett said. "But before the game I thought we could play very well and as it turned out we did."

In the first half, "We came out and played aggressive basketball," he said. "I was very proud of the girls because they didn't back down from anything. Even when we were down in the latter part of the game."

Early in the game, North couldn't do any wrong. However, the second half was certainly different, including time spent at the free throw line.

"We missed the front end of seven one-in-ones," he said. "Not only did we miss the chance to score seven more points, we missed the chance to shoot seven more."

As a team, North hit 44 percent from the line and 31 percent from the floor.

"We talked before the game and said we'd have to shoot well from the line in order to stay in it and we didn't," Bennett said. "Obviously our ball handling and our free throws just killed us."

With three of his players sidelined, Bennett's resources were limited when it came to substitutions, but in the end no excuses were made.

"I don't know if things would have been much different if we would have stayed healthy, but I'd sure like to say that this group of girls never quit," he said. "We just didn't have enough guns."

North's Kelly Kunkel (30) and Katie Loeher (10) box in Regina's inside game and deflect this rebound. Noelle Cormier (24) waits to see if she can grab the rebound and put it back up. North's season came to a quick stop after losing 57-33 to the Saddlelites Nov. 22 in the District 17 final.

North finished 14-8 overall and reached the district final by defeating South, 50-48, in overtime.

Curt Sylvester rolls with punches

By Rob Fulton
Sports Editor

Instead of taking a bite out of the Big Apple, Detroit Free Press sports writer Curt Sylvester decided he preferred the flavor of the Renaissance City.

Sylvester, 46, has been with the Free Press since August of 1967 after relocating in Detroit in 1965. Ten years ago Sylvester was promoted to a beat writer, covering the always-controversial Detroit Lions. Covering the Lions' rollercoaster ride has been interesting, he said, but if it wasn't for the almighty dollar Sylvester may be settled in New York.

"I really didn't expect to be in Detroit this long," he said. "I wanted to go to New York, but I wasn't offered enough of a raise to get there so I decided that I'd stay in Detroit."

With no hesitation Sylvester retained his United Press International (UPI) job he started one week after graduation from the University of Iowa. Sylvester, a farm-born man, believes that his luck runs deep. While studying for his final exam, UPI notified him of an opening in Detroit. Knowing the prominence of the sports teams, Sylvester headed east to launch his career.

"I wanted to go somewhere with major league sports," he said. "I was getting ready for my last exam when I received the phone call from UPI and one week later I was in Detroit."

One week before graduation, though, Sylvester was considering a move west that would have canned his trip to Detroit.

"I was going to work in the canneries in California," he admitted. "I was going to make all that money and then maybe travel to Europe, but I figured the UPI job was too good to pass up."

That it was. Sylvester earned his stripes early, but he couldn't manage to avoid his lumps.

"I know what it's like to start off as a one-man crew," he said. "The good thing is you get a lot of writing and experience, and you're also able to write a variety of sports. I definitely remember those days."

He also recalls growing up on a farm with horses and other amenities most kids didn't have. But he didn't appreciate his childhood until much later.

"I really didn't appreciate it all because I would have preferred to live in the city and play baseball with all the other kids," Sylvester said. "Now that I look back on it all, it was nice. There weren't too many kids who grew up with a couple of horses or the chance to go hunting anytime they wanted."

Besides bouncing baseballs off the front of the barn and riding horses, Sylvester was behind the wheel before he was a teenager.

"I used to ride more than horses," he chuckled. "I used to ride tractors and then I started driving them. I was driving around the fields and other places by the time I was 12."

Now his paths are paved as he drives from his Detroit home to the Pontiac Silverdome. Although the hours aren't very conducive to spending time with his children, Sylvester said his routine isn't as hectic as it could be.

While some people complain about the Lions, or ask the rhetoric question of "Why would you want to cover them?" Sylvester simply answers with in-depth stories and polished reporting.

"It's the best job (covering the Lions) because they always play on Sunday," he said smiling. "And the travel schedule isn't screwy. It's nice to work on a regular schedule during the week and not have to worry about getting to two or three different games in a week. I have no complaints."

With the recent attention owner William Clay Ford has drawn to his Lions with the firing of Darryl Rogers and the hiring of interim coach Wayne Fontes, Sylvester's hours have increased.

He has spent many hours in the press room at the Dome and has continued to travel I-75 to corral a story.

Besides his weekly output of stories, Sylvester also publishes an NFL round-up column, co-hosts Front Page Football on cable TV with Mike O'Hara of The Detroit News and has participated in radio talk shows.

"It's a lot of long hours spent with sports," he said. "There are days that are pretty routine, but then again there are days that are hectic."

In the 24 hours after Rogers' release, Sylvester spread himself thin.

"I left home at 9 a.m. and didn't finish writing until 7:30 p.m.," Sylvester explained. "Then Fred McLeod (Channel 2) wanted Mike and me on his pre-game show so we taped that, and then I was contacted by a radio station in Chicago so I had to talk on that show for a while."

Winter sports teams hope to freeze opponents

By Rob Fulton
Sports Editor

It's that time of year again when you drag out the winter coats and head for the basketball court and the ice rinks. Grosse Pointe North, South and University Liggett School (ULS) will field the teams, but it's up to you to fill the stands.

In the following story, we will take a look at the perspectives of the teams at each of the Pointe schools.

ULS

BASKETBALL

Coach Chuck Wright is pulling his troops out of the Michigan Independent Athletic Conference this season.

He wants better competition and he should get it by becoming an independent team.

"We are biting off a lot this year," said Wright, who starts his fourth year. "We play St. Clement, Redford St. Mary's, Notre Dame and Lutheran East so that will tell us what we're made of."

"This type of challenge is the only way a team can grow," Wright added. "Especially when you're trying to build a good team."

Wright will have to replace the school's scoring leader John Yancey who was lost to graduation. However, he has four starters back from last year so that should make things a bit easier.

"This year we have a more balanced team," Wright said. "Many of these kids know the system and have worked well together. Right now we just have to find out who wants the ball at the end of the game."

With Kandia Milton, a 6-foot-2-inch forward, Tarik Lester, Kevin Crociata and Bill Lucken back from last year's 19-2 team, Wright will have a fabulous nucleus to work from.

"I'm really looking forward to this season," he said. "With four starters back it makes things somewhat easier, but we are heading into a very difficult schedule. With these guys back on the court, we should be OK."

Complementing the foursome will be Dike Ajiri, Kevin Whitfield, David Darby, Anthony Abiragi, Dedan Milton, Mike Niccolini, Wade Brown, Arnie Knudson and Chris Carroll.

"This year we have a lot of depth," Wright said. "More than we've ever had. It's nice to look down the bench and see very capable players ready to go."

With only a handful of players over 6-feet, Wright has the unfortunate task of getting his players to play tall. However, if they can maintain pressure and protect the inside, they may surprise many teams.

"We are small," he said. "We're going to have to pressure the ball and protect the paint. It's absolutely imperative that we keep the opponents' big guys off the glass and take full advantage of our possessions."

From top to bottom, the Knights' schedule is thick, but so is their talent. With Harper Woods, Cranbrook, Notre Dame and Country Day listed as the first four opponents, Wright will quickly find his team.

"The beginning is tough," he said. "But we want it that way. We're going to find out plenty in those four games and take it from there."

They are also going to learn to play on the road because all four of them are away games.

HOCKEY

Captained by Shannon Nowowiecki, Doug Wood and Mike Coello, the Knights will be looking to improve on last year's 16-8-3 record.

To boot, Coach John Fowler has a complete squadron of defensemen back and that leads him to believe that the Knights can compete at a higher level.

"We are going with a very challenging schedule," Fowler said. "We're playing teams from schools bigger than us, but it will prepare us for the tournament at the end of the season."

Wood, last year's scoring leader, will be accompanied by Nowowiecki and Andrew Vandeweghe on the first line. Jonathan Davis, Bob Scoville and Akil Adams will play on the second line, and Armistead Burwell, Stefan Teitge and Matt Moroun will skate the third shift.

"We're going to have to get the second and third lines up to speed with the first line to make our team deeper," Fowler said.

Defensemen Mike Coello, Ross

Kogel, Jesse Kasom, Bill Robb, Paul Brigolin, Greg Akers and Ryan Thierry will be looked upon to carry out the task of being a very solid defensive team.

"We're going to have to work hard on defense," Fowler claimed. "Games are won or lost on defense, so we want to make sure we're prepared."

Handling the goaltending duties for the Knights will be Mark Sullivan. His backup is Jon Bell. Kamran Jafri and Larry Ayuyu will also crack the forward spots.

"The sooner we can come together as a team, the better we'll all be," Fowler said. "If we can play better defense, play as a team, and win each period, we'll do just fine."

Fowler is a stickler for organizing a game within a game.

"I want the kids to work hard for three 15-minute periods," he said, "but I want them to take it one period at a time."

"We'll work for 15 minutes and then adjust after that," he added.

Fowler is assisted by Jim Glover and John Murphy. Jeff Healy, who according to Fowler runs a very strong program, will head the jayvee squad.

SWIMMING

A slew of veterans will return to the pool for Coach Liz Stavale and the Knights should produce a winning season in the 12 meets they have.

The brother-sister tandem of Stacey and Dave Allen will return. Joining them will be Elizabeth Sieber, Dan Shanle, John Mozena, Jesse Bouwman, Sabra Dalby, Kelly Fitzsimmons, Teresa Parejo, Erika Teitge, Julie Muz, Abbey McIntyre, Amanda Poland, Cara Stackpoole, Shannon Burrows, Josh Nesi, Sonny Randazzo and Neil Wehying.

"We obviously have a lot of veteran swimmers that will give us a much needed depth," said Stavale. "Our main objective at this time is to get our training down at the beginning of the season and get ready cardiovascularly."

Tom Hoarsley will be assisting the Knights' co-ed swim team. The season opens Dec. 9 at the Parcels pool vs. South Lake.

GIRLS' HOCKEY

With experienced upperclassmen back on skates, the Lady Knight skaters will play a nine-game schedule.

Coach Biffy Fowler heads a team that won only two games in 12 tries last year, but this time out she has more confidence.

"It's going to be a tough season, but we've got a better team, by far," she said. "The juniors and seniors have increased abilities and we have a couple of freshman who are very capable of helping us out."

Meghan Brady, Karen Galsterer and Dana Warnez will head the list of seniors. Juniors

Carrie Carpenter, Lexie Crain, Stacey Westley, Molly Shields, Sarah Haggarty and Sarah Stackpoole will also be part of the only girls' varsity hockey team in Michigan. Newcomers to the program are Monica Paul, P.R. Stark and Julie Galsterer. Goalies will be Julie Palmer and Haggarty, and Kelly Gotfredson will also take the ice for ULS.

"We'd like to improve on last year's record and improve our skating," said Fowler. "We would just like to be a tougher competitor."

North

HOCKEY

The new look Norsemen have a new home.

North will be playing home games at the St. Clair Shores Civic Arena, but that won't be the only new thing for them.

Coach Mike Manzella is concerned about the lack of offensive punch his team has despite beating Livonia Stevenson, 2-1, to start the season.

"It's not going to be a North of the past," he said. "We just don't have the firepower we need on offense. Right now the coaches have one responsibility — to generate some offensive threat."

Competing in the powerful Michigan Metro League, North will have its hands full. Until they can get the offense off the ground, the defense may carry the load.

"We're going to be defensive oriented until we get our lines going," said Manzella. "We, right now, just don't have much of an offensive punch so we'll have to work hard on defense."

Manzella has 10 players back from last year, but with them comes a lack of actual game time.

"On paper we've got a lot of players back, but a lot of them don't have a lot of experience," he said. "That will all come with time."

Pete Mourad, Ben Gaskin and Tony Giunetti are the only seniors on the team. Ed Barbieri, Bob Beltz, Frank Lucido, Nick Black, Tim Ryan and Andy Bond will join them in the quest for the championship. Matt Krieg and Jimmy Bunn will draw time goaltending and newcomers John Ferguson, Blake Crawford, Brad Russell, Juan Gnaum, Scott Soule and Gary Corona will anchor the team as well. Brian Dennis is "working hard" as the practice goalie.

"Hopefully, with a lot of fine tuning, we can be putting the puck in the net consistently," Manzella said. "We're trying to find someone who can really dominate the game for us. We have a lot of talent, but we just have to put it all together and get everyone thinking as a unit."

At this point, Manzella won't push the panic button.

"This team is very mature," he said. "They don't get rattled. But, we're not moving the puck well and we have all new lines that still need some molding. We're a blue-collar team that will be grinding it out all season long."

North will host Port Huron Northern Dec. 3 at 7:50 p.m.

SWIMMING

John Bania and Chris Candilotti are the only two seniors on Les Roddis' team that have been through the program four years.

With that in mind, Roddis will build the season around those two in hopes of bringing the younger kids around.

"We're a young team," he said. "I've got good numbers (more than 40 kids are out), but we're going to do a lot of teaching this year."

Senior Matt Loumanis will step in and help out, as will a crop of juniors and sophomores.

"With the juniors and sophomores that are on the team, we've got an excellent chance at going 2-3-4 in a lot of meets," Roddis said. "That's where many points are won during meets and I think we can pick up those points."

Freshmen Eric Demeulemeester, Jeff Dungan, Charlie Roddis and John Woods, "should step in and do well for us."

"I'd be really pleased if we could go 10-4 this year and do well in the state meet," Roddis said. "We've got enough bodies so we won't have a problem filling lanes, we'll just have to make sure we can score some points further down."

VOLLEYBALL

Charles Buhagiar will step up from the jayvee post and command the varsity troops this year. His major task will be implementing a program that is foreign to some of the players.

"It's hard to say what the season will be like because some things will be different," he said. "We have only one starter back from last year, but we have some talented players on the team."

All-League player Kelly Giannunzio is back, as is Karri Andrews, Mary Spiewak, Kerry Peters and Sandy Gleis.

As a junior varsity coach last year, Buhagiar was 15-0. With him this year he will bring many of those players with him.

"There are some good kids coming up, but then again you have to be concerned with how the younger kids will blend in with the older kids," he said. "Everyone is working hard, so I don't think it will be a problem."

Laurin Schultz, Jane Rice, Alicia Lynch, Hope Peters, Lisa Fleming, Cathy Stencel, Katie Loeher and Pam Thomas will see plenty of action this year. "The people are there," Buhagiar said. "The question is time. Do I have enough time to implement a new system and get them to play together?"

Warren Woods-Tower, Romeo and Cousino will be the teams to beat in the White Division, and Buhagiar hopes to break even.

"I'd like to play .600 volleyball and get lucky a couple of times," he said.

BASKETBALL

Charlie Stumb and Matt Brady will be the only two representatives of the Norsemen back with any starting experience, but Coach George Olman doesn't seem too concerned at this point.

"We're going to have a good team, but we don't have any true experience," said Olman. "Charlie and Matt started a few times last year, but other than that they are the only ones with that experience."

Derek Lawson, Scott Clein and John Kennedy should round out the starting group, but Jason Serwa, Andy Dudeck and Lou D'Angelo will come highly recommended off the bench.

"All the kids who are going to play can score," Olman said. "We have a lot of people who can, on any given night, lead the team in scoring."

North will be a team built on the fast break and a decent half court offense.

"We're going to run when it's there, but if it's not then we'll stop and run our half-court offense," Olman said. "Nothing will really change. We'll run when we can."

An integral part to the transition game will be the rebounding. With an average height of approximately 6 feet, 4 inches across the front court, the Norsemen shouldn't do too badly on the glass.

"Our defense should get better as the season goes on," Olman said. "We have good average height so our rebounding should be good."

In order to repeat as White Division champs, Olman chuckled and said, "In order to do that, we have to beat the teams who have every one of their starters back."

Romeo returns all five starters, Lake Shore brings back four and Cousino and Tower return three each.

"We'd like to repeat," he said. "Winning the South game is high on the kids' list. Other than that, I'd like to see us play well and play hard at both ends of the floor. If we do that then the wins will come."

North opens on Dec. 2 at South. Game time is 7:30 p.m.

WRESTLING

Art Roberts will head the matmen this season. He replaces Don Maskill.

With a new program on the slate, Roberts has plenty of returning wrestlers including John Shefferly, John Klostermeyer, Dan Collins, Paul Attar, Joe Ament, Bryan Fleming, Ade Alli and Chris Irving.

"My job is to try and fit them in to their weight classes and fill in the other people around them," said Roberts. "It's a challenge, but I'm looking forward to it."

Reid O'Brien, Keith Giannico, Hardy Kim and Dan Rizzo will figure into Roberts' plans immediately.

"They are brand new kids, but they'll fit in just fine," Roberts said. "They have been working hard and catching on quickly."

With the blend of experience and inexperience, Roberts hopes his upperclassman will turn from students to teachers as the season progresses.

"Hopefully what we're doing is teaching everyone and you just hope the older kids can then teach the younger kids," he said. "We should do just fine. I'd like to win the league and then send about four or five guys to the state meet."

South

BASKETBALL

In his 10th season, Coach George Petrouleas is hoping an anniversary present could come shaped like an Eastern Michigan League trophy.

With the horses he has returning, his Blue Devils are the odds-on-favorite to win the league. Port Huron Northern and East Detroit, however, could have plenty to say about that as the season wears on.

Eight lettermen return to the lineup and that creates many options for the Devils in their quest for the title.

"We feel we've got the personnel to do a lot of things," said Petrouleas. "We feel our offense can create a lot of problems for the opponents' defense, and our defense should be strong as well."

Chris Gramling and Joe Caldwell will man the backcourt, while Andy Ament and Andy Ayrault return to the frontcourt. David McCormick, Tim Clarke, Lance Harding, Chris Rowan, Brian Letscher, Robert Khoenle, Durmon Coates, Chris Markus, James West and Kevin Sherwood round out the team.

"We feel pretty positive looking at the group up to this point," said Petrouleas. "We'll have a good evaluation after our first six games. Fortunately they are all non-league games."

As any coach, Petrouleas would like to be 6-0 after the pre-season, and it's quite possible.

"We'd like to be undefeated at that point," he said. "It's realistic because we have a very good opportunity to beat those teams."

With a strong junior class and the return of veterans, Petrouleas will enjoy much depth this season, barring injuries.

"We feel very positive about the club from top to bottom," Petrouleas said. "We still have a lot of polishing to do, but we should be just fine."

Offensively, the Devils will play run-and-gun. With Ayrault (6-feet, 7-inches), Ament (6-5) and Harding (6-3) the rebounding should be simple.

"We have the people who can get the ball off the glass and get the ball up the floor," said Petrouleas. "If we can't get it going, then we'll slow it down and play half-court offense."

South opens its schedule Dec. 2 at home against Grosse Pointe North at 7:30 p.m.

WRESTLING

The Devils will adopt a new style this year and Coach Larry Carr is hoping it will end a drought that left his team 1-12 last year.

"My one big thing to do this year is I want to get the kids to wrestle aggressively," Carr said. "We're small and weak, but hopefully I can get the aggressiveness I want for six minutes."

Gil Waitkus, Bert Paul, Tom Murphy, Tom Quirk, Kelly Graves, Lou Preston, Brion Czaicynski, Chris Sorensen, Frank Voelker, Pat Labadie and Robert Bruce lead the squad this year.

"I need leadership from these guys," Carr said. "I need them to set an example for the younger kids as far as our goals and my philosophy are concerned."

Those goals include trying to win five meets and finishing at least fifth in the league.

HOCKEY

Tim Zimmerman is hoping his small, but talented team, can play a big role in the Michigan Metro League.

"We're a very small, but enthusiastic team," he said. "We've only got eight players back, but the kids are doing a fantastic job."

South has already compiled a 1-2 record with its only win coming over Milford, 2-1.

"We want to survive," Zimmerman said. "By that I mean I want this team to get better as the season progresses. We have the ability, but we lack a lot of experience."

What they may lack in experience, Zimmerman feels they make up for mentally.

"This is a very smart club," he said. "They think out situations better than any other team I've had. They react quickly."

Leading the returning players will be goalie Kevin Newler. Derek Farr will play some in the nets, while Andy Burns, Jamie Osborne, Pat Clavet, Brink Cawley, John Olmstead and Mike Kisskalt lead the attack.

Other members include Renato Roxas, Jim Alderton, Jim Pappas, Aaron Grose, John Bellamy, Brian Campbell, Peter Bourke, Bill Quinn, Chris Paul, Marc Tucker, Brad Warezak, David Auld and Steve Tucker.

"Depth-wise we can't afford any serious injuries," Zimmerman said. "I'm really enjoying this team, though. They are trying everything we are telling them and at this point we can't ask for anything more than that."

Zimmerman is assisted by John Biliti, Sean Rosekrans and Paul Shumur.

"We feel if we have the correct attitude from the coaches on down, then it can all catch on and we can play just fine," Zimmerman said. "We're young, but we are very enthusiastic."

VOLLEYBALL

"We have a very big team," she said. "Whoever will play will either be big, or play big. We have a lot of big players on the front line and that is certainly to our advantage."

Meg Blondin, Chris Schulte, Jennifer Kalmink, Geraldyn Bocci, Katie Kolp and Traci Lee return for Sharpe.

"I think we could be a very good team," she said. "I mean really good. We can play well and I think we will surprise a lot of teams."

Sharpe and the Devils will try and run a very quick offense with the help of Anne Grose and Patty Blake.

"We have to be consistent," Sharpe said. "We have a team that can be physically overpowering. We'll be stronger on the outside and won't have to rely heavily on Chris (Schulte) to hit the ball."

At this time, many things have yet to fall in place, but Sharpe is not concerned because the season doesn't begin until Jan. 4.

'Scrooged' will fill you with Christmas spirit

By Michael Chapp
Special Writer

"Scrooged" tries so hard to be likeable, and is so unabashed in its holiday spirit, one truly would have to be an incarnation of Charles Dickens' classic character to reject it.

Based on Dickens' "A Christmas Carol," "Scrooged" casts Bill Murray as Frank Cross, a scheming network television president with a penchant for nastiness. The buck stops with him. He's the type of guy who likes the high impact advertisements for Christmas Eve television specials — the ones that make reference to the drug epidemic, highway killers and nuclear Armageddon.

He's also the type of guy who will give up a loving relationship with a great girl (Karen Allen) so he can polish the boss' apple, and who gives towels emblazoned with the network logo as holiday bonuses to his most valued employees.

Fire a man (Bob Goldthwait) just days before Christmas? No

In a nutshell, Cross is on the road to destruction. But it's noting a few well-timed visitors from the past, present and future can't help. A ghost of chance is all this guy needs. But that's all it takes.

As the ghosts of past and present respectively, David Johansen and Carol Kane lead Cross on a journey through time — a rerun of his life. And with a little help from the ghost of the future, they attempt to re-program Cross' heart.

There's no great mystery in figuring whether they'll be successful in their task. But the picture's point is not to be mysterious. Indeed, the idea here is to watch the development of a character everyone knows will turn out OK in the end.

And that, of course, means Murray's ability to hold audience attention is essential to the success of the film. Rest assured, Murray, like few other actors, has the on-screen presence and charisma to pull it off.

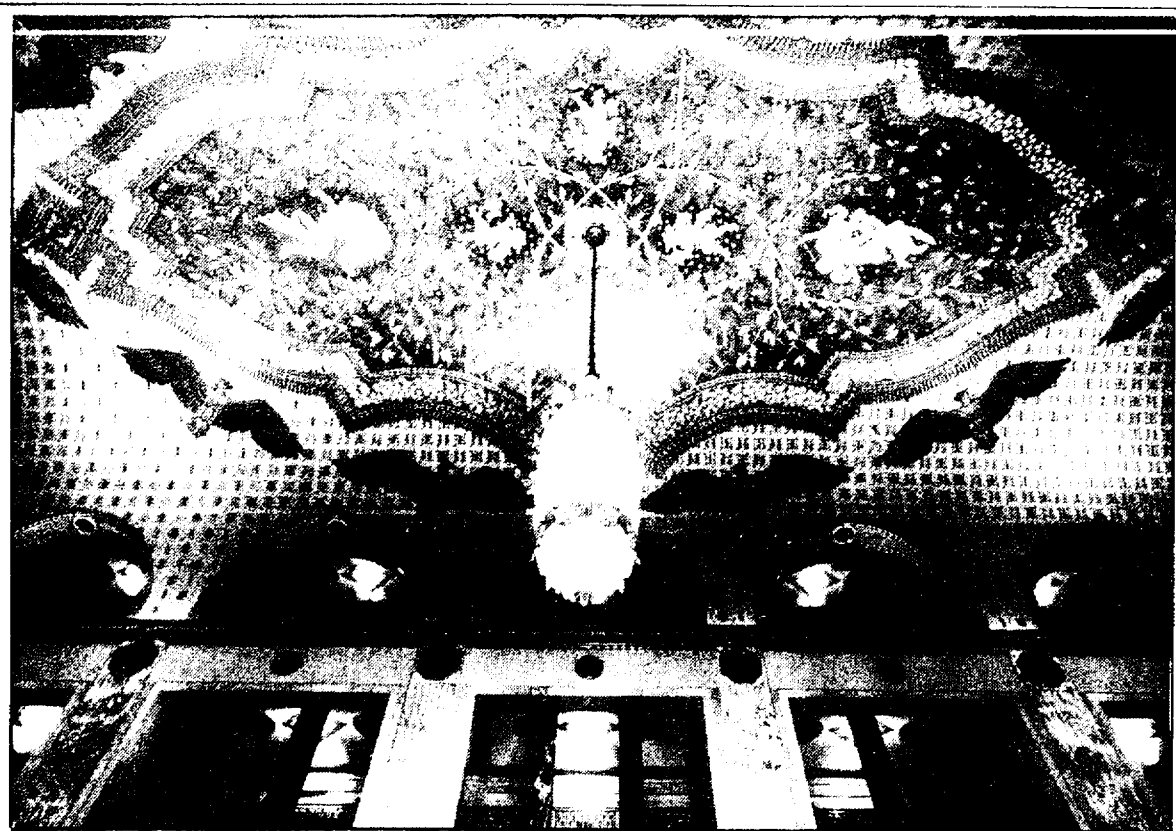

His delivery of even the most simple lines — such as when he asks stagehands to please stop hammering — is ultimately what makes the picture worthwhile.

"Scrooged" gets bogged down sometimes in its own narration, and is long by a good 20 minutes. But the important point is, it's a good 20 minutes at the end. It's here that Murray sees the light, and, in a very real and stirring speech, implores others to do the same.

Extensive comparisons to "Miracle on 34th Street" and "It's a Wonderful Life" would be unfair to each of the films. But like the best holiday pictures of the past, "Scrooged" fills viewers with the Christmas spirit.

And that is a wonderful gift.

The Fisher

Called Detroit's largest art object, the Fisher Building celebrated its 60th anniversary in October. The Grand Arcade lobby features handpainted barrel-vaulted ceilings and Art Deco crystal lanterns. Constructed in less than a year at a cost of $9 million and opening in 1928, the structure is considered one of the most beautiful in the United States.

Noel Night gets a touch of jazz

Under the theme, "A Shout of Joy!" the 16th annual Noel Night will add a touch of jazz with a performance by the Marcus Belgrave Quintet along with the Salvation Army Band Sing-Along as the season's traditional kickoff is celebrated from 6 to 9:30 p.m., Wednesday, Dec. 7 in the University Cultural Center.

Members of the University Cultural Center Association, including the Detroit Institute of Arts, Detroit Historical Museum, International Institute, Center for Creative Studies, Children's Museum, Museum of African American History, Your Heritage House and several churches and other civic organizations will host special programming.

Institution offerings include vocal and hand bell choirs, strolling carollers, a Kwanzaa demonstration, Victorian holiday celebration, family treasure hunts, arts and crafts for sale, children's activities and seasonal refreshments.

The Association will again offer horse and carriage rides through the area, starting from the Park Shelton Apartment building at Woodward and Kirby. Charges for rides will be $5 for adults and $2 for youngsters 12 and under.

Special this year will be the addition of a live jazz performance by the Marcus Belgrave Quintet on the bandstand at Woodward near Kirby from 7:30 to 8:30 p.m. The performance of Belgrave and company floating jazzy holiday sounds across Woodward Avenue will add a new touch to the 16-year-old event.

The evening will conclude with the traditional performance by the Salvation Army Band. Approximately 5,000 of the 20,000 visitors to the area during Noel Night join in the annual sing-along, which begins at 8:45 p.m.

Other participating institutions include Barat Human Services, Cathedral Church of St. Paul, Detroit Public Library, Detroit Public Schools — Schools Center Building, First Congregational Church, First Unitarian Church, Rosa L. Gragg Educational and Civic Club, Scarab Club, Smiley Brothers Music Company, and the Detroit Science Center.

'Oliver and Company' is brassy film for children that adults will enjoy

By Marian Trainor
Special Writer

It's a long way from the dark, gloomy streets of Dickens' Victorian London to the bright, bustling streets of modern-day New York, but Walt Disney's little orphan, Oliver, makes the trans-Atlantic trip with ease and brings to the screen a delightful version of the Dickens classic "Oliver and Company."

No mournful, sad-eyed child or mad, murderous villain here. Instead we have as Oliver, a winsome, orange-haired, cute-as-a-button kitten with a fighting spirit.

We first meet Oliver as one of a litter of kittens peering out of a cardboard box hoping to be adopted. One by one the other kittens are taken. Only Oliver is left, and that's hard to understand. He is so irresistible. He practically speaks with his pleading eyes and even seems to smile.

Oliver's expressive face as the story progresses is one of the joys of the movie. That talent to endow animals with human expression is part of the magic that makes Disney films special.

Oliver is left alone to curl up in the night hoping for better luck when daylight comes. He doesn't count on a drenching rain that sweeps the box into a gutter where he struggles against rising water to try to climb to safety. In the land of Disney we see the elements translated according to animal perception. A heavy rain becomes a torrential storm to a little kitten.

Oliver struggles out of the storm that threatens to sweep him away and claws his way to a doorway.

The next morning Oliver, determined to find a home, pads along the busy New York streets looking up at passersby hoping someone will notice him. No one stops and worst of all, he is nearly trampled under the heels of fast-stepping working people.

Things look up when he meets a rakish-looking terrier named Dodger. Dodger is a dog of the streets and knows a million tricks on how to survive. He is also untrustworthy. After he gets Oliver to help him rob a hotdog stand, he takes off wearing the ring of sausage around his neck.

But Oliver is desperate. He takes off after him in a wild chase through the streets that leads him to Dodger's hangout and Fagan (Dom DeLuise). Fagan is a faint-hearted cringing character who lives in fear of Bill Sykes (Robert Loggia). He heads up a gang of disenfranchised urban dogs who steal to support him and Sykes.

A clever story and outstanding animation makes Oliver a winner. Each character has a distinctive look and attitude. Much of that is due to their voices. Billy Joel as the raffish Dodger accents the terrier's man-of-the-world image. Georgette, the Park Avenue poodle is given just the right blend of hilarious naughty conceit by Bette Midler. Robert Lee Browne makes sad-eyed Francis a lovable would-be opera singer and Cheech Marin turns Tito, a lecherous, hyperactive cha-cha chihuahua, into the star of the pack.

Film

"Oliver" is a bright, merry romp all the way and it has some tender moments that children will love. It's a joyful rarity that parents will enjoy as much as children. Brassy and sassy, it is a mixture of savvy and schmaltz.

Scrooge

Booth Colman recreates his role as Ebenezer Scrooze in Meadow Brook Theatre's production of "A Christmas Carol" which opens a five-week run Dec. 1 on the campus of Oakland University near Rochester. Tickets are available at the box office, 377-3300.

'They Live' is science fiction, satire, social commentary

By Marian Trainor
Special Writer

In the tradition of "The Invasion of the Body Snatchers" and "Invaders from Mars," two science fiction hits of the '50s, John Carpenter presents "They Live," a film that is part science fiction, part social commentary and part satire.

By doing so, it is possible to make what might otherwise have just been entertaining fantasy into a threatening, scary

Since everyone looks like a human in the film, the problem becomes how to tell which ones are the aliens.

The hero of "They Live," John Nada (Reddy Piper), stumbles on the secret and from then on wages a one-man war on the creatures who are about to take over the world.

Nada is a drifter who has been on his own since he left home at 13 to escape his abusive father. When the film begins, he has wandered into Los Angeles where he gets a job as a construction worker. He makes friends with Frank (Keith Davis) who takes him to Shantytown.

Like many survivors who live on the edge of society, Nada is observant and watchful. While on the job, he notices some strange movements involving boxes being removed from a storage shed.

Another incident that arouses his curiosity is one that occurs outside a church next door to a place ironically called Justiceville. A street-corner preacher affiliated with the church warns passersby that "they" are exploiting a sleeping middle class.

Nada becomes concerned at what he hears and begins to wonder if the boxes and what is in them has anything to do with what the old preacher is saying.

Waiting his chance, he manages to get one of the boxes off the truck. When he opens it he is more confused than ever.

In spite of being a drifter, Nada has a strong belief in America and its promise. Since he is the only one who has learned of the plot to take over the country, he is determined to do something to stop the aliens.

There are no brilliant special effects to start and light up the screen in "They Live," but there are some ingenious, inventive developments that amaze and intrigue, such as a space-port from which travelers can shuttle to the alien planet.

"They Live" will undoubtedly join the ranks of cult films. It grows on you as you begin to realize how cleverly Carpenter has presented the social issue of the day. He subtly invites the audience to look at what is going on while leavening his message with humor and intriguing situations.

Sylvester

Would Sylvester swap places with anyone?

"No, I really don't think I would," Sylvester said. "It's a great place and I'm doing exactly what I love to do."

Front Page Football has given Sylvester and O'Hara another outlet — after they overcame camera fright.

"We were nervous at the start, but we've learned to relax," Sylvester said. "It's a lot of fun. It gives us the chance to air our opinions. I guess you could say it's a way to editorialize on TV."

In a two-newspaper city, it's only poetic justice for two sports writers — who cover the same beat for competing papers — to battle even though they co-host a show.

"We compete a lot," Sylvester said. "The only thing we cooperate on is the show. Out at the Silverdome it's very competitive."

Sylvester has had his share of scoops. He's also been scooped and that doesn't sit well with him.

"I don't know about Mike, but it bugs me if he's got a story and I don't," Sylvester said.

"I really try to (spend time)," he said. "As they get older, you find less of an opportunity to spend some time. Their lives change so I try to enjoy them as much as I can before they're gone."

Amy is a junior at North, Danny is a student at Monteith, and Rebecca is a freshman at the University of Michigan at Dearborn.

Sylvester is now working on a longer career in Detroit. However, if football becomes a wash for him, he's more than qualified to be a baseball beat writer — maybe.

"I enjoy covering football," he said. "For a job, I'd rather cover football, but if I'm just watching, I like to sit at baseball games."

Or just sit and toss a baseball off a barn door.
