

Local notables go public with their New Year's resolutions

By Margie Reins Smith
Staff Writer

Merely five days into 1989 — and millions of New Year's resolutions have hit the dumpster.

Bright-eyed resolution-makers, firm and flinty, earnestly committed to various forms of self-denial, self-control and self-improvement, have slipped into spineless surrender, have given up their good intentions.

We queried some notable Grosse Pointers about their resolutions for 1989.

Whether these optimistic forward-looking citizens have held fast for the first five days of the year, whether they've displayed the pluck and moral fiber and serious single-minded purposefulness necessary to change one's own ingrained behavior and attitudes — is — well, THE QUESTION. — Ask them.

David Lawrence Jr.

David Lawrence Jr., publisher and chairman of the Detroit Free Press, said he resolves to keep on running.

"I started running seven months ago and I run two or three miles a day, six times a week," he said. "I've lost 30-plus pounds so far. I resolve to keep on going and to lose 10 more pounds."

Lawrence said he runs through the streets of Grosse Pointe, never the same route because it's boring.

M. Jane Kay, vice president-administration for Detroit Edison, said, "I've been indulging so much. I'm going to take it easy on the food. My waistbands are too tight."

Because of some early-in-the-year social obligations, however, Kay said her diet won't begin until mid-January.

"I also resolve not to be short with people who call me Mary. The M in M. Jane Kay stands for Marie, which I've never used."

Brandon Rogers, city planning consultant, owner of Brandon M. Rogers & Associates, P.C., is involved in planning for the City, and often works on assignment for the Woods, Farms, Park and Harper Woods. Rogers has three resolutions:

"To support continued revitalization of the Pointes' commercial districts, including the 7-Mack area, Kercheval on the Hill, the Village and East Jefferson in the Park.

"To plan some affordable housing for Pointe senior citizens.

"And to help in historic preservation: efforts of the Pointes' few remaining land-

Lakefront attack trial starts Jan. 9

The trial of four suspects in the July rape of a Grosse Pointe Woods woman and the beating of her boyfriend behind the War Memorial is scheduled to begin Jan. 9.

The trial is in Detroit Recorder's Court before Judge George Crockett III.

Kevin Simowski, the Wayne County assistant prosecuting attorney handling the case, said the four suspects will be tried together.

One jury will decide on each of the three adult suspects, while the fourth suspect who was a juvenile at the time of the attack has waived his right to a jury and will rely on a verdict from Crockett.

Police responded to a call at 3 a.m. July 12 and found a 19-year-old woman at the scene who said she was raped and she thought her boyfriend, also a Woods resident, had been beaten to death and thrown into the lake.

The couple had been sitting near the lake behind the War Memorial when the attack occurred. The victims were treated and released from St. John Hospital.

Three of the suspects were arrested within 90 minutes of the attack, and the fourth man was arrested July 18.

One of the suspects was a juvenile, 16 years old, at the time of the attack. Now 17, he was ordered to stand trial as an adult.

Taking advantage of the last few days of Christmas vacation, the Shirilla family of the City took Max, their neighbor's dog, down to the track field at Grosse Pointe South Friday for a little workout. That's mother Joan, from the left, Colleen, Kathryn and Matt.

At the right, Chris Lopez of the Farms shows where there's a supply of snow for those who were dreaming — in vain — of a white Christmas. Well, there were a few flakes. . . The snow is in the parking lot back of the Village shopping district.

Woods eyes ULS property

By John Minnis
Staff Writer

A public hearing has been scheduled to discuss the possible disposition of the University Liggett Middle School property if the private institution decides to consolidate its campuses.

Last week the Grosse Pointe Woods Planning Commission scheduled a Jan. 24 hearing for citizen input on what should be done with the ULS property on Briarcliff Drive if it is no longer used by the school.

Last April the ULS Board of Trustees announced its decision to "accept in principal" a committee recommendation that the middle school be relocated to the main campus on Cook Road. Both campuses are in Grosse Pointe Woods.

The consolidation of campuses on Cook Road would mean the private education would have to sell its Briarcliff Drive property and build a new middle school at the Cook Road campus. The ULS board has not yet announced whether it will definitely close the Briarcliff school.

Planning Commission Chairman John Kennedy said the public hearing is a "forum for discussion" on what should be done with the property should the school consolidate its campuses. He said one of the options is rezoning the property from general facilities to residential.

The public hearing and rezoning considerations are not in response to any request by University Liggett, Kennedy said. The planning commission is trying to be "pro-active" rather than reactive, he said, meaning that the city would like some say in what happens to the property should the school decide to sell it.

Woods City Administrator/Clerk Chester Petersen said the planning commission is trying to make sure that the now non-taxable property is put to its best, highest use, which could be rezoning the property and having it developed into residential homes.

Contacted last week following the Dec. 27 planning commission meeting, ULS board President W. Merritt Jones Jr. said he was unaware that the city was going to hold a public hearing concerning the rezoning of the middle school property. He said he could not comment further concerning the private school's plans.

In a statement released in April, the ULS board said the reasons for consolidating the campuses included the fact that the middle school will soon "require a very substantial capital outlay," presumably in upkeep.

The statement also said two task forces arrived at the same conclusion: "Ideally, ULS and its students would be best served if there were a single campus."

Since April the ULS board has been undertaking an intensive study to determine the financial feasibility of consolidating the

Pointer of Interest Salvatore Ventimiglia

By Pat Paholsky
Editor

Salvatore "Sam" Ventimiglia exudes an intense passion — for his family, his work, his civic involvement, his leisure-time activities, for life in general. He cares and that explains why he gets things done.

His only lament is "it's going by so fast" and that explains why he's in a hurry to get things done.

Salvatore Ventimiglia

He's on the board of the Boys and Girls Clubs of Southeastern Michigan, an organization he's been involved with for seven years. He was chairman of the Unit Management Council for the Holden Building, one of eight complexes the organization supports.

"The organization is about working for kids," he explains, "not sick kids or dying kids, but kids on the street. They're fighting what's on the street."

And that, for Ventimiglia, is reason enough to volunteer his time.

He's also a member of the executive board of the Italian American Cultural Society, an organization dedicated to preserving Italian heritage.

With a senior citizen day care program, child care program, hot lunch program, classes and other activities, the center is accomplishing its goals, but there is a cost.

"We're struggling," he said. "We have a big mortgage to pay. There are a lot of Italians living in Grosse Pointe and I don't think they understand what it's all about."

His goal, besides assuring that

Farms police bust underage party

The teenage nephew of a Farms resident may be charged for throwing a loud party at his uncle's home and allowing underage drinking.

Farms police responded to a report of a "teen drinking party" at 1:07 a.m. at a home in the 300 block of McMillan. Upon arrival, according to a police report, the officers detected a strong smell of intoxicants in front of the home and the front yard was strewn with discarded cups.

When the officers shined a flashlight at the front door, several of the occupants in the home ducked out of sight, police said. Police knocked on the front door and someone finally opened it.

The person at the door told police that the person in charge was a relative of the homeowner, who was not at the residence at the time. Police later learned that the youth who was said to be in charge was an 18-year-old nephew of the homeowner.

Police entered the home and found half a carafe of wine and a coffee cup filled with what was believed to be alcohol. The suspected alcoholic beverages were confiscated for evidence. The police report stated the interior of the home was quite messy, but no damage was noticed.

Police identified two 18-year-old males and two females, ages 20 and 16, in the home. One of the men was a Grosse Pointe Woods resident.

No charges were brought immediately by Farms police, but detectives are investigating and may bring charges against the homeowner's nephew.

Oops!

A 19-year-old Warren man found out last week that new jobs are a headache. The man had recently started working at the Grosse Pointe Yacht Club, and as he was making his way down the winding driveway to leave work at 1:30 a.m. Dec. 20, he misjudged the curves and ended up smacking right into the back of the guard house. Fortunately little damage was sustained by either the man's car or his employer's property, according to Shores police reports.

1988 busy, this year busier, in Park

By Ronald J. Bernas
Staff Writer

Although Grosse Pointe Park had a banner year in terms of construction and improvements to the city, 1988 is expected to be even busier.

In 1988 the Park saw a new city manager, an old theater condemned, new buildings, plans for newer buildings, and old buildings torn down to make room for development.

Former City Manager John Crawford resigned in March, and after six months, the search for his replacement ended when Dale Krajniak, formerly city comptroller and Crawford's interim replacement, was named to the post.

One of the first orders of business for the city is to complete the search and hire a city comptroller.

The city was involved in litigation after the council voted to close the Esquire Theater to make way for the rejuvenation of the Jefferson Avenue business district.

The owners of the Esquire claimed the city's action was racially motivated because of the large black crowds the theater drew. A Wayne County judge disagreed and the city took possession of the building on Jan. 3, 1989.

The Park's Downtown Development Authority saw the first green shoots from the seeds they planted when the council approved the Pointe Office Centre, a two-building development on Jefferson between Nottingham and Westchester; and again when the council approved a project just down the street between Alter and Pemberton.

Work has already begun on the Pointe Office Centre, and work on the other project, which includes limiting Barrington's access to Jefferson Avenue, is expected to begin in spring.

The Park Community Foundation spent $175,000 to renovate the former bathhouse at Windmill Pointe Park into the Tompkins Community Center. The center is expected to be dedicated in February.

Middlesex Boulevard was resurfaced and the streetscaping on Mack was continued on the Wayburn to Maryland block. Parking improvements on Nottingham and Jefferson and near-completion of installation of new lighting in the northwest sector of the Park made the city more amenable to drivers and residents.

Year-end review

In other business, a charter amendment to allow the judge's salary to be raised to a level competitive with surrounding cities was approved by the voters, and an auxiliary police officer program saw 11 new officers sworn in. And to handle the rise in cases going to court, a new computer system for the Park's municipal court was installed.

But 1989's plans dwarf 1988's work, Krajniak said.

The pool at Windmill Pointe Park will be renovated and a new concession stand connected to the bathrooms near the tennis courts will be constructed, he said.

Also at the park some spot dredging will be done in the spring to take care of some low-water areas that created difficulty for boaters. Also piers two and four will be raised.

All marina work will be paid from the Marina Fund which gets its money from well rental fees.

Routine resurfacing will be done, as will a major resurfacing of Mack Avenue, in conjunction with Wayne County and some federal funds. Streetscaping along Mack will continue. There are still three blocks to be finished, Krajniak said, and they will be done according to the money accumulated by the Park's Northwest Tax Increment Finance Authority.

TIFA funds will streetscape the entrance to the Park on Kercheval at the Detroit border. The Authority also hopes to increase parking within its boundaries — from Mack to the northern border of the Jefferson Avenue

Downtown Development Authority, and from the western city limits to the alley between Beaconsfield and Nottingham.

Plans are under way to provide and improve parking at Goethe alley.

The Downtown Development Authority plans to implement its master plan and possibly begin the boulevarding of Jefferson from the western city limits to the end of the business district there, Krajniak said.

Public safety facilities will be improved in 1989, Krajniak added, and the department will move to the current fire house. There are also plans to improve the jail cells and offices with an addition.

Because many of the projects are being funded by TIFA or DDA or have already been funded, Krajniak said all the work will probably not mean an increase in taxes.

"The Park is conservatively progressive," Krajniak said. "And it's mostly due to the council which works very well together."

Gone Blue: Flag stolen

The worst sacrilege imaginable happened to a University of Michigan fan in Grosse Pointe Woods during the Rose Bowl Monday night.

The Michigan booster at a home in the 1900 block of Hunt Club discovered his 2-1/2-by-4-foot U of M flag was stolen between 8 and 10:41 p.m. while flying on an aluminum pole in front of the home.

The Woods police were immediately notified and are investigating.

Woods lawyer arrested after being released from hospital

By John Minnis
Staff Writer

The Woods lawyer who may be charged in the Dec. 8 death of his female passenger while allegedly trying to elude police was arrested Dec. 23 after being released from St. John Hospital.

Police believe Dennis Allen Peppler, 36, who was wanted on a July warrant from Detroit Recorder's Court for failing to appear on a possession of cocaine charge, was driving the car and trying to elude police when he smashed into a tree at the Grosse Pointe Academy, killing a 32-year-old Mason woman.

Peppler was in critical condition at St. John Hospital following the accident. On Dec. 12, he was reported in fair condition.

Some time between Dec. 12 and Dec. 23 when he was arrested, Peppler left St. John Hospital. Police were apparently not notified that Peppler was leaving the hospital, even though he was wanted on the warrant out of Detroit Recorder's Court.

St. John Hospital spokesman Michael Kairis said last week that the hospital was unaware that Peppler was wanted by police. He said that if a patient is known to be a police prisoner, the hospital will notify authorities when the suspect is being released.

Kairis said that due to patient confidentiality laws, he was unable to release any information about Peppler's hospital stay or whether he released himself or was routinely discharged, requiring no further hospital care.

Peppler could not be reached for comment.

On Dec. 23 a Grosse Pointe Woods public safety officer saw Peppler eating at the Big Boy restaurant on Mack. According to police reports, the Woods officer knew Peppler was wanted on a warrant and subsequently arrested him. The following day he was turned over to Wayne County sheriff's deputies.

On Dec. 27 Peppler went again before Detroit Recorder's Judge Dominick R. Carnovale, who had put out the warrant for Peppler's immediate arrest as well as a cash bond of $50,000 for failure to appear at a preliminary hearing on the charge of possession of cocaine under 50 grams, which was brought against Peppler in July by Woods police.

Last week Carnovale rescheduled the preliminary examination for Jan. 12, and Peppler was released on $2,000 bail, of which he had to come up with 10 percent.

Farms police have yet to bring charges against Peppler concerning the accident that killed the Mason woman, Diana June Gaedke. Public Safety Director Robert Ferber said his department will most likely file charges against Peppler this month.

Peppler may face a charge as severe as second-degree murder.

Police believe Peppler was driving the 1989 Ford Probe owned by Gaedke when it crashed through a 4-foot cyclone fence and struck a tree at about 2:50 a.m. on the grounds of the Grosse Pointe Academy on Grosse Pointe Boulevard in the Farms.

About 15 minutes before the accident, Peppler was clocked at traveling 52 mph on Kercheval on the Hill. A Farms officer pursued the vehicle and at one time was able to identify Peppler as the driver, according to a police report.

The officer lost sight of the car during the pursuit, and shortly thereafter found the car smashed into the tree at the academy.

Police obtained a warrant for a blood sample from Peppler to determine if he was intoxicated or under the influence of other drugs. The results of the blood test have not been released.

Police are also awaiting an accident-reconstruction report from the Michigan State Police.

Bargain hunters

Lines began forming before the stores opened Dec. 26 — the day after Christmas. On the Hill, most shoppers found Christmas items marked 50 percent off: wrapping paper, ribbon, wreaths, tree ornaments and such. By noon, many stores were sold out of Christmas decorations.

Park takes possession of theater

The Esquire Theater was turned over to Grosse Pointe Park Jan. 3, marking the end of a long and futile fight between the owners and the city.

"This whole thing has been tough on the entire family," said Eric Steiner, one of the owners of the theater a day after it was closed for good to make way for the Park's revitalization of the Jefferson Avenue business district.

"It's tough to fight city hall," he added.

The theater was condemned by the Park City Council in February as non-conforming with the zoning law and not compatible with the master plan for redeveloping Jefferson Avenue.

The owners, Eric Steiner, Ervin A. Steiner III and Debra McLaughlin, challenged the closing, saying it was racially motivated because the theater drew large black crowds, charges the city consistently denied.

After going to court to stop the condemnation, a Wayne County Circuit Court judge said in November that the city had not acted racially or exclusionarily in its decision.

According to City Manager Dale Krajniak, the city is required to pay the owners the amount of its last offer — which was $271,000 — and then the two sides must go to court again to determine the fair market value of the property. If it is more than the down payment, the city will make another payment; if less, the city will get a refund.

Steiner, who was upset by what he called "slanted" newspaper coverage and negative treatment of his family by local residents, said the entire process "personally affected my whole family, including relatives who weren't involved with it."

The closing also affects the business, Michigan Theaters, which was formed after purchasing the Esquire in 1983.

"We've had a lot of fond memories. That was our flagship, and it affects our whole chain of theaters when you lose the flagship," he said.

Michigan Theaters owns theaters in Dearborn, Riverview, Coldwater and Manistee, he said.

"I've had a lot of people come up to us and say they were sorry to see it close," Steiner said.

Krajniak said the city will market the theater later in the month.

Pit bull on Lancaster dies due to parvovirus

Buster, the pit bull Lancaster Road residents feared enough to successfully get the Woods City Council to ban the entire breed in October, died Monday from a bout with parvovirus.

Buster's owner, Terry Shook, said Tuesday that the dog was discovered with the highly contagious disease about four days ago and did not respond to medicine.

Shook received a citation from a Woods public safety officer Saturday for harboring a pit bull in violation of the new ban on the breed adopted by the council. Two days later Buster had to be euthanized because of the parvovirus.

Shook had filed a suit against the city in an effort to get the pit bull ban struck down as unconstitutional. The suit has yet to be heard in court. Shook did not comment on whether he will continue with the legal action.

There also is a second suit pending against the pit bull ban brought by Friends of the Down-trodden, a group of dog owners. The suit also seeks to have the pit bull ban struck down as unconstitutional.

Police respond to brothers' TV dispute

With all the football games on television over the weekend, it was bound to happen: Tempers would flare over which gridiron confrontation to watch.

Woods police responded to an argument by brothers that led to fistcuffs at a home in the 1200 block of Paget Court. The 17- and 19-year-old brothers were fighting about a television program.

According to police reports, the 17-year-old admitted to pinning his older brother to the floor and slapping him a few times about the face. The older brother's face had some redness, but no swelling or cuts, according to the officer at the scene.

The 19-year-old said he did not strike back at his younger brother, and he wanted to pursue assault charges. The father witnessed the fight, but he was unaware that the police had been called.

The siblings were told that detectives would be getting in touch with them.

Good thing they weren't watching hockey.

City to dredge at Neff Marina

By Ronald J. Bernas
Staff Writer

The city of Grosse Pointe is preparing bids for the dredging of Neff Marina, which at the end of the boating season last year was becoming "critical."

According to City Manager Thomas Kressbach, some fixed keel sailboats and some powerboats with stern drives were running aground. Soundings were taken near the end of the summer to determine just how much dredging must be done to accommodate the most number of boats, without over-dredging.

"It's a difficult decision to make because if the water continues to recede, it will affect a larger number of boats," Kressbach said. "Conversely, if the lake level goes up, the problem dissipates to a point."

Three plans were discussed by the council at the Dec. 19th meeting, and a number of boaters who use Neff Marina were present to give their views.

Out of the discussion, the city decided to draw up bids to dredge just the harbor closest to the shore, which is about one-third of the marina. Because the marina starts right at the shoreline, instead of a few hundred yards out, like other marinas do, Neff is affected more by the rising and falling of the lake levels.

The last time the city did any dredging was in 1964.

"It's funny, because we're basically still spending (for the work which was done) to combat the high water we had two years ago," Kressbach said.

Some boats — usually those with fixed keels — were reassigned to wells in deeper sections of the marina, he said, but because most boats were assigned wells in a common sense way, there were not too many which could be rearranged.

Some boats have been hitting bottom on the canal from the marina to the lake, and city administrators are looking into possibly dredging that, too.

The price tag for the dredging varies, depending on how much is actually removed, but can range from $50,000 for a smaller project to $300,000 for the entire marina. It would be paid out of the marina user fees, which, depending on the project cost and length of financing term, could make those fees jump 48 to 88 percent, Kressbach said.

A boater at the meeting said, "I think we feel that whatever it's going to cost us, it's going to cost us."

The bids for the project will be approved by the council at its Jan. 23 meeting.

"The feedback is incredible," he said. "The recognition that everybody else gives you — that's success."

Through his association with M. Jane Kay, vice president-administration for Detroit Edison,

During his spare time, Ventimiglia enjoys playing golf. The America Group is one of the sponsors for the Michigan Open, and last year his team finished seventh.

Ventimiglia enjoys duck hunting and he is currently training a new dog, a black labrador, for the sport.

Ventimiglia is also the owner, along with several friends and family members, of two flower shops they acquired last year.

Another area he hopes to get more involved in this new year is charitable gift counseling for institutions, such as universities, figuring out ways they can make more money through fundraising.

He is a member of the National Associations of Life and Health Underwriters, International Association for Financial Planning and American Society of CLU. His awards include being named a member of the Million Dollar Round Table and the State Mutual Circle of Honor.

Ventimiglia is looking forward to his 20th reunion this year, a gathering of the class of 1969 of Austin High School.

Pointe home offers proof of one world

The view that the world is now one huge market became clear in one Grosse Pointe home last week when the seven family members who were home for the holidays examined the origins of the gifts they had found under the Christmas tree.

They discovered that their gifts, all purchased in the United States, had been assembled or produced in more than a dozen foreign countries. They also learned that most of their gifts from foreign countries, which a few years ago had originated in Western Europe, this season had come from the Asian rim.

There were, for example, an Eddie Bauer rain jacket that was made in Malaysia, doll house furniture from Thailand, a tin of perfume and a woman's sweater from Taiwan, a woven basket from Bangladesh, a woman's purse and a man's down vest from China, men's linen handkerchiefs and an AM/FM double cassette portable stereo from the Philippines, audio cassettes from Japan and Singapore, and a woman's watch and a double deck of playing cards produced in Hong Kong but using pictures of the Pointes supplied by a Grosse Pointe resident.

Our friends south of the border were also represented. There were spices grown in Central America and packaged in Baltimore, a plastic kitchen brush made in Colombia and Nicaraguan coffee processed in Holland and imported by a Fort Wayne, Ind., trader.

And from our old friends in Western Europe? Very few Christmas gifts this year. There was a hand cultivator made in England, a few tree ornaments from West Germany and nothing else, except several books written by English authors, including Charles Dickens, Anthony Trollope, Frances Hodgson Burnett and Gerald Durrell.

Many of the more than 20 books that came into this Grosse Pointe home on Christmas also reflected the increasing concern about the environment and the world's vanishing species that is being expressed not only in this country but in all parts of the globe. So these books, too, represented a world view.

There was, as a prime example, "Serengeti, the Natural Order on the African Plain," a marvelous collection of photographs by Mitsuaki Iwago of the diminishing numbers of world game that inhabit the Serengeti in Tanzania.

Other gifts included the Time-Life display of "Vanishing Species"; "A Practical Guide for the Amateur Naturalist" by English naturalist Gerald Durrell; "Flying Free," Dan Free's story of an eagle he raised; and "Quiet Magic," tales of coping with life in Northern Minnesota told by outdoors writer Dan Cook.

Adding to the environmental trend under the Christmas tree was a framed Audubon lithograph of a great blue heron, which is native to Michigan and the Midwest.

Literature was still represented by Dickens' famous "A Tale of Two Cities"; Trollope's two-volume, "North America," written in 1862; Alfred Kazin's "A Writer's America"; "Secret Garden" by Frances Hodgson Burnett; and Wilhelm Grimm's recently discovered addition to his Grimm Fairy Tales, "Dear Mili."

As the earth turns, our interests and our concerns change along with the markets that serve us. These changes affect our economic life as well as our social and political beliefs.

We're often told that U.S. producers and manufacturers must learn to compete better in the world market because American and other consumers give no indication of cutting back on their purchases of goods made abroad that they prefer for price, design or quality reasons.

The other side of the coin is that competitors from many developing nations now produce for export to markets in the developed world, earn the money to import the goods they need and thus make their contribution to world trade.

Inexorably, the globe shrinks as it moves toward Wendell Willkie's goal of "One World" not only in improving trading opportunities but in recognizing the necessity of protecting the environment and the human and animal species whose very existence depend on it.

A couple of good trends to note at Christmas.

It can be the best of times

As the nation moves toward the Jan. 20 inauguration of its 41st president, we think it is appropriate to recall the famous opening lines from Charles Dickens' classic, "A Tale of Two Cities":

"It was the best of times, it was the worst of times, it was the age of wisdom, it was the age of foolishness, it was the epoch of belief, it was the epoch of incredulity, it was the season of Light, it was the season of Darkness, it was the spring of hope, it was the winter of despair, we had everything before us, we had nothing before us, we were all going direct to Heaven, we were all going direct the other way — in short, the period was so far like the present period that some of its noisiest authorities insisted on its being received, for good or for evil, in the superlative degree of comparison only."

Dickens was setting the scene for a tale laid in the England and France of 1775, but the words are still pertinent today. They can be applied to the varied reactions to the president-elect's pre-inaugural activities and especially to his nominations to his cabinet and other high-level members of his official family.

By and large, Bush's nominations and appointments appear to be of high quality, but that record has not spared him from criticism from both the right and the left and from aspirants who unsuccessfully sought the offices already filled.

Most observers credit the president-elect with a good good political start. He has touched base with GOP political rivals Rep. Jack Kemp and Sen. Robert Dole by naming the New York congressman as his secretary of housing and urban development and picking Elizabeth Dole, the wife of the GOP minority leader, as his secretary of labor.

He has selected a black for the politically sensitive post as secretary of health and human services despite protests from GOP right wing ideologues that Dr. Louis Sullivan has not been as ardent a foe of abortion as they wished. He has picked two members of the Spanish-American community for high posts and has named another woman, in addition to Mrs. Dole, to a top position.

Even more important, he has retained from the Reagan administration or brought back from the Ford and Nixon administrations a flock of experienced and moderate retirees who are better known as pragmatists than as ideologues. Those appointments are another indication that Bush will put an end to the practice of "running against Washington" that was characteristic of both Ronald Reagan and Jimmy Carter.

As we've indicated, the major criticism to date has come from the uneasy GOP right wing. It apparently feels it deserved more appreciation of its campaign efforts than Bush showed by picking such conservatives as Kemp for his cabinet, Gov. John Sununu of New Hampshire as his chief of staff, former Texas Sen. John Tower as his secretary of defense and Sen. Dan Quayle of Indiana as his running mate.

Overall, however, the president-elect appears to be moving toward an independent course of action that will enable the public to identify 1989 as the first year of the Bush presidency rather than a postscript to the Reagan years.

So in the holiday spirit we express the hope that the positives from Dickens will apply at least at the start of the president-elect's regime: the best of times, the age of wisdom, the epoch of belief, the season of light and the spring of hope.

There will be time enough, after Jan. 20, for the negatives that will surely arrive for the next president when he confronts the Democratic Congress.

A dove who became a hawk

A holiday greeting to a member of the Grosse Pointe News staff from Max Kampelman brings word that he is leaving government service after four years as head of the U.S. delegation to the Negotiations on Nuclear and Space Arms in Geneva and as counselor to the state department.

Kampelman has been given credit for much of the success of the Reagan administration's recent nuclear disarmament negotiations with the Soviet Union, especially the achievement of the treaty to eliminate intermediate-range nuclear forces, and deserves the thanks of a grateful nation as he heads into retirement.

His card reminds us, however, that despite his years in the Reagan administration, he remains faithful to the memory of his late friend and mentor, Hubert H. Humphrey, the former vice president and U.S. senator, by quoting him as follows:

"Our strength is not to be measured by our military capacity alone, by our industry, or by our technology. We will be remembered, not for the power of our weapons, but for the power of our compassion, our dedication to human welfare."

Kampelman, who served on Humphrey's staff when he was mayor of Minneapolis and U.S. senator, is a classic example of the dove who became a hawk. A conscientious objector in World War II, he later had a change of heart, served in the Marine Corps Reserves for seven years, became a foreign policy hard-liner and founded the Democrats for Reagan.

Serving as the chief U.S. arms negotiator, Kampelman told a recent interviewer, was the toughest job he ever had because of the responsibility and stakes associated with it. He also explained that he doesn't feel that party business exists in foreign policy, doesn't feel bound by one party but, instead, follows what he regards as a sound foreign policy consistent with his own ideas and beliefs.

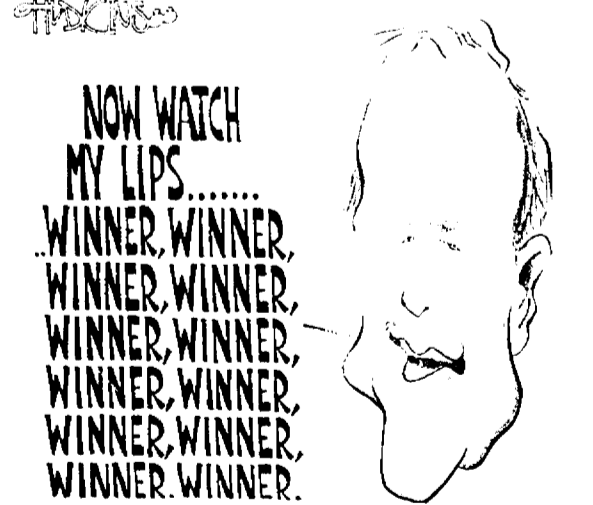

All of which helps explain why the follower of Hubert H. Humphrey who led the Democrats for Reagan used the quote from the late Democratic vice president on his New Year's greeting.

A Look Back

An exercise in futility or economy?

Ah, the first of the year. A time when we try to atone for the last 12 months of overeating, over-drinking and over-spending by depriving ourselves of all of the tools needed to accomplish such excesses... thereby putting ourselves in a rotten enough mood to start doing them all over again.

I'm probably as guilty as the next person at trying to go from dissolution to resolution in one week. Normally, I don't make New Year's resolutions. I don't need to, since I go on a diet every Monday and each month at bill-paying time I vow not to charge anything more with my VISA.

This year, though, things are different. This year, I have resolved to get more exercise.

This is not a resolution motivated by guilt, worry over an untimely death because of poor exercise, or by a glance in the mirror (although it probably should be). What really got me thinking about increasing my efforts at becoming more physically fit was a conversation I had with one of my nieces.

I'd sent her down to the basement to look for something. When she returned, she asked me where I'd gotten that "sweater-dryer thing" in the basement. She wanted to get one for her mom for Christmas.

"What sweater-dryer thing?" I replied. "You know," she said, "the thing with the wheels and the handle bars and the little clock. The thing you have your blue sweater draped over."

"Oh. That's my exercise bike," I whispered.

"You mean that's a bike for EXERCISE?" my niece said. "You're supposed to RIDE it?"

"Say it a little louder, kid. They didn't hear you in Red Square," I growled.

"So how come you don't ride it? My mom says it's good exercise," the 11-year-old said, smiling.

"Yeah, yeah. She weighs 110 soaking wet and can do the Jane Fonda exercise video with her eyes closed. What does she know?"

After a while, I managed to convince the poor, deluded child that too much of anything -- especially exercise -- isn't good for you. But later, as I draped a red sweater over my exercise bike to dry, I started to feel guilty.

Here I had this expensive, top-of-the-line exercise bike which I never used, and all the while there were people in China starving for exercise.

And, after all, sweater-dryer things sell for around $3.95. I paid $138 for the stationary bike and after four years, I'd only put around 200 miles on it.

Thus economically inspired, I have decided to hang my sweaters over chairs to dry from now on. Which means I'll be using the bike for the purpose for which it was intended: an extraordinary means of self-abuse.

I plan to set aside some time each evening to ride my exercise bike. I'll dust off my sweatsuit, put on the old headphones, get on the sweater-dryer thing and pedal my way to health and fitness. It'll be easy, I tell myself. I can listen to some inspirational exercise music (Mozart's Requiem and Luciano Pavarotti Sings the Rolling Stones' Greatest Hits, for starters) and put 30 or 40 miles a night on that puppy with breaking a sweat.

And when I'm done with that, I might start using the four other obscenely expensive pieces of fitness equipment rusting away in the basement: the winter boot dryer (cross country ski trainer), the ironing board (sit-up bench), the milkshake mixer (indoor running trampoline) and the 320-pound paperweight (rowing machine).

I know that keeping my resolution to get more exercise isn't going to be a piece of cake (a little physical fitness humor, don't you know). After years of disuse, giving that rusty old thing a good workout is going to be tough at first, what with all that groaning and squealing and creaking. The machine is probably going to make a lot of noise, too.

But hey, no pain, no gain, right? (I only hope that old saying didn't come from one of those famous fitness runners who went to that Big Marathon in the Sky during a race.)

The way I figure it, after a few months of good eating, clean living and a hearty workout each evening, I'll soon be healthy, happy and able to bench press the 500-pound weight we have in the basement (the washing machine).

For kids only

John Swegles, of Grosse Pointe Farms, age uh... the big 40, isn't quite as up to playing with the kids as he thought he was.

An anonymous source tipped us off about his all-night Christmas Eve competition on Nintendo's new power pak olympic game. (In this one, you play a video game by running, triple jumping and hurdling around a floor pad to make the little man on your TV screen move around the board.)

Not for kids only?

Swegles ended up in Beaumont Hospital and is now nursing a sore back at home.

Anonymous source sez Swegles sez the Nintendo box should read, "Beware. Not for kids over 21."

Power in the tower

The Westin Hotel's PR peeps special-delivered an IMMEDIATE RELEASE of Westin highlights for 1988. Some trivia from the hotel where, it says, "the hectic holiday pace never stops, and where nothing unimportant ever happens."

Westin staffers washed 4,679,600 pounds of laundry last year: using 1,189 gallons of detergent and 700 pounds of starch to put the suds to 2,444,844 pounds of sheets; 282,102 pounds of pillowcases; 132,864 pounds of towels; 83,340 pounds of food and beverage linens; and 5,536 pounds of blankets and bedspreads.

Westin food peeps purchased 24,960 pounds of shrimp last year and 5,200 pounds of dry ice.

Westin luggage-carrying peeps handled more than 500,000 pieces of luggage. Engineering peeps changed more than 15,000 light bulbs. Maids made more than 700 beds every day last year.

1988 guest freebies ran to 40,400 itty bitty bottles of shampoo; 247,000 teeny weensie soaps; 59,000 little bottles of mouthwash, and 49,000 tubelets of toothpaste.

Notable VIP guests during 1988: President-elect George Bush, actress Joan Collins, Olympic gold medalist Bruce Jenner, the king and queen of Sweden, tennis king Boris Becker, singers Stevie Wonder, Prince, Liza Minnelli, Sammy Davis Jr. and Frank Sinatra, impressionist Rich Little, comedians Sheeky Greene and Fred Travalina, Tigers' manager Sparky Anderson, Red Wings Coach Jacques Demers and Mr. Hockey Wayne Gretzky.

Two celebs tied for the longest stay -- 14 days: Prince and Stevie Wonder.

The most unusual request? The king and queen of Sweden had a special mattress sent to their Westin room from Sweden.

The most unusual food request? Joan Collins pleaded for the recipe for the Summit's house salad dressing, which she received, and now declares to be her favorite.

The Westin -- for those new in town -- is the 73-story hotel (actually the world's third tallest hotel) that's adjacent the Renaissance Center office complex in Downtown Detroit.

Yesterday's Headlines

Jan. 3, 1946 --

The New York Times reported strikes and prospective strikes involving upwards of two million employees of the telephone, telegraph, meat packing, steel electrical and other industries clouded the nation's peacetime horizon. The Western Union operations in New York were practically stalled and the meat supply was dwindling because of the strikes.

General Douglas MacArthur was reporting the Communist party was coming to life in Japan and some younger Japanese were questioning whether the future and salvation of their country lie in Democracy or Communism.

Admiral Harold A. Stark told the congressional committee investigating Pearl Harbor that he was surprised by the attack, and would have been less surprised if the Japanese had attacked San Francisco. He denied all responsibility for the deaths which occurred on that day.

The war crimes trial of 21 German Nazi leaders re-opened with proof that Gestapo head Ernst Kaltenbrunner was responsible for his group's mass murders, deportations and executions of Allied prisoners.

Hollywood was coming to Michigan. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer was finishing pre-production work on "This Time For Keeps," a musical romance starring Esther Williams, Jose Iturbi and Xavier Cugat and his orchestra. It was to be set on Mackinac Island.

Four sets of twins were born at Butterworth Hospital in Grand Rapids, Mich. just prior to midnight, Dec. 31, 1945. Just in time to ring in the New Year.

In the first incident, a couple returned to their home after an evening of ringing in the New Year to find a man sleeping on their couch. They called the police who took him away. He explained he had taken his girlfriend out, and, while walking home got very cold, and since the front door was open, he thought he'd take advantage of it.

In the second incident, a young woman described as "an attractive service woman" saw her date take some money off a wad of bills in his parent's refrigerator. She returned later and took the money. She was picked up later in a bar along with an attorney who was drinking with her who had just met her that evening. She was returned to her base by military police later.

Grosse Pointe City's clerk was upset that his city was not getting credit for births of children to residents in his city. Most expectant parents were going to the nearby Cottage Hospital which is in the Farms. The Farms got credit for the births, not the City. He said the figures made it look like the City was "a decadent and dying municipality."

The search was continuing for a small plane that crashed into Lake St. Clair off the Grosse Pointe Yacht Club.

As the Pointes looked back on the year which just finished, the outstanding dates were May 8 and Aug. 14, the dates that marked the end of fighting in Europe and Japan respectively.

Julianne Johnston Rust

She was a member of the well-known Denishawn Dancers and was the president of the Mary Pickford Fan Club. According to Lockwood, she counted actresses Gloria Swanson and Colleen Moore among her closest friends. Mrs. Rust also had personal reminiscences of Douglas Fairbanks Sr., Douglas Fairbanks Jr., Anna Mae Wong, Mildred Davis, Charles Chaplin and Hedda Hopper.

She was also a member of the Detroit Institute of Arts Founders' Society, the Country Club of Detroit and the Grosse Pointe Club.

Survivors include two daughters, Patricia R. Healy and Peggy R. Johnson; and one granddaughter, Elizabeth P. Rust. She was predeceased by her husband, David, and a son, David.

The body was cremated.

Memorial contributions may be made to the DIA Founders' Society.

Arrangements were handled by the Chas. Verheyden Funeral Home.

She was born in Wisconsin.

She was a former silent film actress and co-starred with Douglas Fairbanks Sr. in "The Thief of Bagdad."

Mrs. Rust made more than 35 films between 1917 and 1932, according to friend Don Lockwood, of Grosse Pointe. She bridged the gap between silent films and talkies. The most famous of her films, "The Thief of Bagdad," opened in New York City in 1924 and was the most ambitious and extravagant spectacle ever filmed by Douglas Fairbanks and United Artists. The film was voted Best Picture of the Year 1924 by Film Daily Magazine and was named one of the 10 best films of 1924 by The New York Times.

According to Lockwood, Mrs. Rust said she didn't tell her mother when she would be filming the flying carpet scenes for "The Thief of Bagdad," for fear of worrying her. The carpet was suspended by piano wire from a derrick.

In 1983, Mrs. Rust was the recipient of the Rosemary Award, which is given to a living actor or actress in recognition of achievements in the film industry. The Rosemary Award is the equivalent of the Oscar, according to Lockwood, and was given to those whose contributions were made before the Academy Awards were established.

Construction, roadwork top Shores' activities

By Ronald J. Bernas
Staff Writer

Construction was the theme for 1988 in Grosse Pointe Shores, according to Village Manager Michael Kenyon.

Five tennis courts at the Shores park were resurfaced, and in other Park improvements, 20 new boat wells were installed through an agreement with the Grosse Pointe Yacht Club. Kenyon said in exchange for some property, the yacht club is installing new boat wells for the village.

The work was billed as Phase II of the project to bring the total number of boat wells to 205. Phase III is already under way and is expected to be completed by spring.

Curbing, a part of the village's five-year program to re-curb and re-surface Lakeshore north of Vernier, was completed. The re-surfacing is scheduled for 1989.

Also on Lakeshore, but south of Vernier, resodding was done on the islands, and a sprinkling system was installed. The same will be done on Lakeshore, north of Vernier, in 1989.

"When we're done, it should make it a pretty clear ride down Lakeshore," Kenyon said.

The council approved a special land use ordinance which allowed for the activity center at the Edsel & Eleanor Ford House to be built.

"It's a nice addition, and will enhance the community and the Ford House," Kenyon said.

Year-end review

The year ended with the resignation of board president Gerald Schroeder. He had been on the village council for 34 years, the last 17 of them as president. The resignation was for personal and professional reasons.

"He's made tremendous accomplishments in the village," Kenyon said. "He's surely going to be missed."

Edmund Brady Jr. was elected by the council as interim president until the next election, scheduled for June of this year.

The resurfacing of Lakeshore will be the main project this year and is expected to cost $300,000.

Plans are being laid for 1990 when work is being planned on new sewers, including those on Colonial Street, as well as other infrastructure work, Kenyon said.

1988 was the year of the infrastructure

By Ronald J. Bernas
Staff Writer

If Grosse Pointe were to take the Chinese custom of naming its years, City Manager Thomas Kressbach said that 1986 was The Year of the Lake, 1987 was The Year of the Infrastructure, and 1988 would be called The Year of the Infrastructure II.

"We have a lot of activity for a city our size," Kressbach said. "And every year it gets a little busier."

"The city did a lot of unglamorous work, like repairing sewers," he said. "The city is getting older and the infrastructure needs a little tender loving care."

Renovations on two blocks of sewers, which includes lining but not replacement of them, will be completed in early 1989.

Year-end review

at a cost of nearly $260,000, he said. And a new 12-inch water main was installed on Kercheval from Cadieux to Neff, replacing 60-year-old main in need of repair.

Other work included re-Marcating of the swimming pool and wading pool at Neff Park, installation of a new gatehouse there and resurfacing of that park's lot.

The last unpaved block in the city — Roosevelt — was paved from Maumee to Charles. That project included a new storm sewer and the partial closure of Charles. Total cost was $57,699; nearly half was paid for by residents adjacent to the streets.

Various other streets were resurfaced at a cost of more than $168,000, in the city's continuing street repaving program.

Three new subdivisions were either started or continued.

Lakeside Court, a new eight-lot single family development, is being constructed on the site of the former Hubbard estate, and the former Rust Estate, also known as Cameron Place, is home to five new single-family lots. The development at Dodge Place continued, and to date there are only three lots left, Kressbach said.

1988 could also have been called The Year of New Business. At least six businesses opened in the Village, keeping stores full. TCBY, a frozen yogurt store; and Laura Ashley, Judith Ann, Limited Express and Ann Taylor, all women's clothing and accessories stores; and Toy Village opened their doors. Blake Co., builders and designers, also opened in the Village.

Offices for the Bon Secours Home Care Center were opened on Mack. Also on Mack four businesses — the Alger Party and Deli, Lango-DeMango Shell, One-Hour Martinizing and the Amoco — all went through extensive revisions, making them better able to serve the area, and improved the looks of the city, Kressbach said.

After planting some 100 trees, including 16 on Mack Avenue medians, and employing foresters to control Dutch elm disease, the city was designated Tree City USA for the third consecutive year.

In administrative action, a city-wide reassessment and conversion to a state certified micro-computer software program was completed.

And like the rest of the Pointes, a 911 emergency phone number was installed.

The Grosse Pointe City Foundation conducted its initial fundraising drive and is currently selecting a project to undertake, Kressbach said. "We do the nuts and bolts, and the foundation can take care of the amenities."

1989 looks like more infrastructure work, Kressbach said, as well as dredging at Neff Park marina.

Work with the foundation will continue and he hopes it will include landscaping of some village parking lots. Also in the works is the usual resurfacing of some streets — although Mack will probably have to wait until 1990 because of limited federal funding, he said.

"We haven't had a chance to program too many things, but we are looking forward to a good year," Kressbach said.

Contract signed

Grosse Pointe Shores Department of Public Works employees have a new contract. It was accepted by the village council at its Dec. 20 meeting and signed by President Gerald Schroeder.

After twice going to mediation, bargainers and DPW workers came up with a three-year contract, which gives the nine workers an increase of nearly 2.5 percent, according to Village Manager Michael Kenyon.

The workers will receive a 25 cent an hour increase in the first two years of the contract, and a 30 cent an hour increase in the final year.

Cars owned by the rich and famous acquire pricey tags

Classic car collectors are particularly fond of cars that were owned by famous people. A 25-year-old Cadillac is valuable, but even more so if it had been owned by Elvis.

Thomas Barrett III, 60, of Scottsdale, Ariz., buyer, seller and auctioneer of some of the world's most expensive cars, has one for sale that is hard to beat in the celebrity sweepstakes.

In a recent issue of Hemmings, bible of the collector car industry, a monthly magazine of wide popularity which carries no editorial material, only ads, Barrett offers a magnificent Mercedes-Benz 540K roadster that had been given as a gift by Nazi dictator Adolf Hitler to Soviet dictator Joseph Stalin.

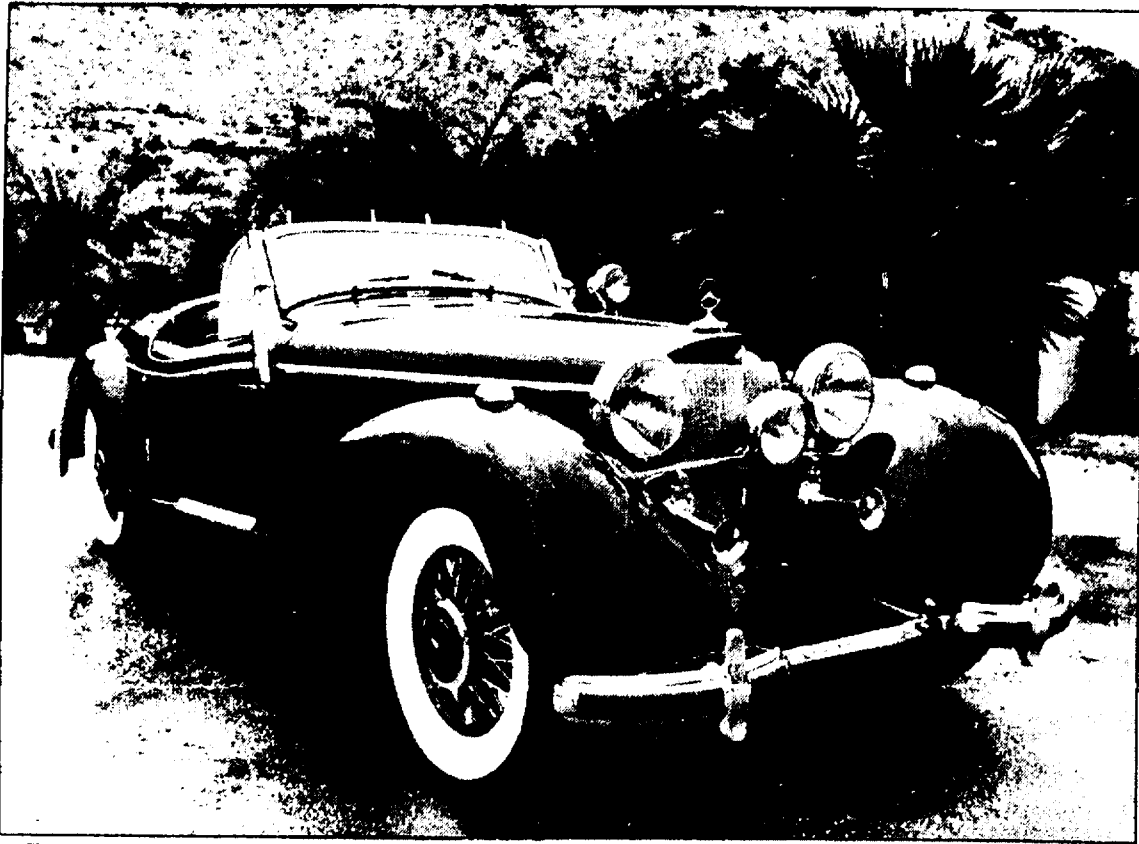

If you're reaching for your checkbook, it had better be a hefty one, because Barrett is asking a cool $3 million. If it is not sold before then, it will be auctioned at the Jan. 26-29 Barrett-Jackson auction in Scottsdale, Ariz., along with about 1,000 other collector cars, valued at about $50 million.

The Stalin Mercedes was the last 540K, specially built by Mercedes-Benz for Hitler, who gave it as a token of good faith to Stalin in 1939 after Germany and the Soviet Union signed a non-aggression pact. Germany invaded the Soviet Union shortly thereafter.

The non-aggression pact between these two sworn enemies stunned the world, as did Hitler's subsequent treachery. It might not have been such a surprise if the world had known about the Mercedes, because it may well have been worth invading the Soviet Union to retrieve. But Hitler was not a car buff.

Neither was Stalin. The Mercedes was very low mileage because Stalin rarely used it. His son sold it in 1975 to a Swedish collector who spotted the rare car while on business in the Soviet Union. Barrett bought it 10 years ago and brought it to the United States.

It has flaring pontoon fenders,

This unique 1939 Mercedes-Benz 540K roadster was given by Adolf Hitler to Joseph Stalin after the signing of the infamous (and short-lived) non-aggression pact between Nazi Germany and the Soviet Union on the eve of World War II.

a windshield that can be lowered flat, cut-down doors, disappearing window cranks, a metal cover that fits over the convertible top when it is down, a rumble seat, two rear-mounted spare tires and there's an option you don't see everyday: a gun holster built into the front glove box.

Black with a black leather interior, the Mercedes was the only 540K built with a five-speed gearbox.

The 540K is not Barrett's first brush with either Hitler or Stalin. Barrett got into the car business at 14 just before World War II when he bought a '31 Buick Roadmaster for $15 and sold it for $25. He joined in a partnership with collector-restorer Russ

Jackson and at their first auction in 1972 they sold two cars owned by Hitler, one of them a bullet-proof, bomb-proof, 11,000-pound Phaeton of the 770 series for $153,200.

Barrett also sold a Rolls-Royce that had been owned by Stalin, who seemed to acquire some awfully nice cars for someone with no interest in them. Not one to snub any dictators, Barrett once sold a 1939 Lancia Astura that had been owned by Benito Mussolini.

He has also bought and sold automobiles of a more democratic heritage, including President Franklin D. Roosevelt's armor-plated Packard and the first 1953 Cadillac Eldorado convertible, used for President Dwight D. Eisenhower's inauguration that year.

Another unusual offering at the auction will be a 1948 Delahaye with swoopingly elegant coachwork by Figoni and Falaschi which boasts a number of interesting, even unique, features. In addition to rumble seat and pivoting windshield, the French classic has upholstery of antelope skin!

Dean Kruse, Auburn, Ind.-based auctioneer of collector cars who auctioned the Harrah collection, whence came Tom Monaghan's $8.1 million Domino's Pizza Bugatti Royale, has also sold many cars of the famous and infamous.

"I sold a Cadillac owned by Al Capone for $68,000," Kruse said. "The car Bonnie and Clyde were killed in, a '34 Ford shot full of holes, brought $176,000."

Kruse said a couple collectors are trying to get all the armor-plated Mercedes 770 models. "There were seven of them made, two owned by Hitler, the others by his henchmen, Goering, Goebbels and so on."

How does anyone know who owned what cars?

"By comparison of the wood trim on the inside of the doors with photos that are available," Kruse said. "That wood grain is just like a fingerprint."

Detroit-area collector Ed Lucas sold a Duesenberg a few years ago that had been custom-built for Father Divine, complete with a throne in the back. It was given to the famous religious leader of the '30s by an admiring follower. It brought $200,000, not because it was the biggest (and perhaps ugliest) Duesenberg ever built, but because it had been owned by Father Divine.

Other automobiles of the rich and famous bought and sold by Tom Barrett included a French-built Delage driven by Gene Kelly in the movie "An American in Paris," Rolls-Royces that belonged to the screen star Constance Bennett, the Sheik of Kuwait and the Queen of England, Elton John's '49 Delahaye, a 35 Hispano-Suiza sold to the late Shah of Iran's brother-in-law, Amelia Earhart's Franklin roadster, and John Lennon's psychedelic Bentley.

Man, woman robbed over the weekend

Two men robbed a Grosse Pointe Woods man after beating him in the face and head in his own garage and a Park woman was robbed at knifepoint in separate incidents last week.

The Woods resident had just gotten out of car after entering his garage at his home in the 2000 block of Beaufait at 8:14 p.m. Dec. 30 and was confronted by two men believed to be in their late teens.

One of the men told the Woods resident to keep quiet and then proceeded to hit the man about the face and head, according to police reports. The blows were strong enough to knock the Woods man to the ground, after which the suspects took his wallet and fled on foot.

A neighbor who was returning home saw the men fleeing and followed them in his car. At Helen and Beaufait the suspects got into a tan or cream color Chrysler K car stationwagon with a temporary vehicle tag in the rear.

The Woods victim and his wife had just returned home from grocery shopping. The Woods man dropped his wife off at the side door of their home before he pulled his car into the unattached garage. The wife was unaware of the attack on her husband until she saw the two men flee past the side of the house.

In the Park incident, a woman was returning home at 11:30 p.m. Dec. 29 when she was grabbed and thrown to the ground by a man after she got out of her car, according to police.

A second suspect searched the woman's car and took her coat, purse and watch. The two men took off on foot.

Nine handguns, jewelry reported taken in Farms

Nine handguns, jewelry and other items were reported missing from a Farms home on Tonacour Place last week, according to police reports.

At 10 p.m. Dec. 19, the Farms man went into his basement where his locked gun room was and found the key in the lock of the door. Once inside he found nine handguns missing from the gun cabinet.

Further investigation throughout the home revealed more items missing, including several pieces of jewelry.

While trying to place a time on the theft, a daughter living in the home remembered that on Dec. 15 at 3:20 p.m. she returned home and found the family's pet dog in the garage, which was unusual. She also said a door leading down to the basement was open and a sliding glass door was unlocked.

It is thought the thefts occurred between 8:05 a.m. and 3:20 p.m. Dec. 15. A neighbor reported seeing a reddish-orange, newer-model car in the victims' driveway at about 2:15 p.m. Dec. 15.

Farms detectives were given a name of a possible suspect and are investigating.

And away we go

Cadillac Allantes were given to five members of the board of directors of the Grosse Pointe Yacht Club as part of a program to create public awareness of the car. They could only keep them for a week, however, and they had to return them the day before New Year's Eve. These lucky guys were, from left, Jimm Jeffrey and Bob Riker, from the Allante VIP program; Fred Schriever, commodore; Harold McC. Deason, director; Ed Connelly, director; Don Endres, and Charles Stumb Jr., director.

Man stabbed and robbed behind Mack bar

A 28-year-old East Detroit man was stabbed and robbed New Year's Eve while in a rear parking lot of a bar on Mack Avenue.

The man was stabbed in the shoulder with a 7-inch butcher knife at 8:33 p.m. Saturday by an unknown assailant in the 18600 block of Mack. The victim received a minor 1-inch cut.

The assailant demanded the victim hand over his pistol and wallet. The East Detroit man told the thief that he didn't carry a gun, but he could have his money.

The suspect then took the man's money and told him to walk to the front of the bar. While the victim did so, the assailant fled in an unknown direction. A search of the area by police was negative.

Police also questioned a Detroit man who was delivering bread to a nearby delicatessen. He said he too was confronted by the suspect, whom he believed may have been intoxicated. The suspect asked the delivery man for a couple of dollars for gas. The Detroit man said he didn't have any money and the suspect walked away toward Mack.

The assailant is described as black, in his mid 30s to early 40s, 160 to 200 pounds and dark complexioned with a two- to three-day beard. He was wearing a full-length black wool coat, a black brim hat, green leather pants and shirt and black dress boots.

The memories of that toy train set you received as a child many Christmases ago may seem priceless, but have you ever wondered how much that set is really worth?

Find out at the Detroit Historical Museum Sunday, Jan. 8, from noon until 3 p.m. during a post-holiday toy train appraisal session by the Blue Water Michigan Chapter of the National Railway Historical Society.

Toy train experts will give verbal appraisals of Lionel, American Flyer, Ives, Marx, and other pre-war and post-war locomotives, cars and accessories. There will be a one dollar donation per item and a limit of three items per person. The do-

It was like a scene from Santa's workshop Dec. 3 as 227 busy little pairs of hands assembled an assortment of Christmas treasures at Defer School's annual Holiday Craft Fair.

For the seventh year in a row, children in kindergarten through fifth grade gathered for a morning of making and wrapping their own holiday gifts and ornaments.

The craft choices ranged from colorful bookmarks for 25 cents to stenciled hand towels for $1.50. Seventy parents were on hand to supervise 14 different crafts and help the children wrap and label their creations. Nine 4th and 5th graders assisted the craft leaders throughout the morning.

Karen Hill coordinated the event. More than 225 children took part in this year's fair, creating and wrapping 823 objects d'art.

Learn bistro cooking from Charity Sucek

Grosse Pointe's acclaimed master cooking teacher Charity Sucek will teach a series of nine single-session classes on Tuesdays beginning Jan. 17, for the Department of Community Education of the Grosse Pointe public schools.

The first, "Bistro Basics: Casseroles," will provide students with a look at rustic, stick-to-the-ribs style of French cooking. It will be offered Jan. 17.

The second, "Bistro Basics:

Soups," will be Jan. 24.

The third, "Bistro Basics: Desserts," will be held Jan. 31.

"Rustic Italian Breads," will be presented Feb. 7.

On Feb. 14, Sucek will offer the introductory class, "Belgian Home Cooking." The class Feb. 21 is "The Spice Route," and Feb. 28, "Vegetarian Ideas: Main Dishes."

Sucek will also teach a three-week class, "When in Rome . . ." on Tuesday evenings, beginning March 7.

"The authentic, robust native cooking of Rome is quite different from what is considered Italian cuisine in most parts of the world," she said. "It's getting harder and harder to find. The real cucina romana takes its character from the produce and specialties of the Roman countryside." The fee is $39.

In addition, Sucek will teach a six-session class beginning Feb. 2 on Thursday mornings, "The Classic Cuisine of France." Fee is $59.

And a single-session daytime class, "A Taste for Calvados," will be at 9:30 Thursday, March 16.

Single session classes are $10 each. All classes will be held in the kitchen of Barnes School, 20090 Morningside, Grosse Pointe Woods.

Call 343-2178 for more information and registration.

Leaving

After nearly 23 years of teaching third and fourth grade at Maire School, Mary Ellen Floer is retiring. There will be a reception in her honor Tuesday, Jan. 10, from 7 to 8:30 p.m. to give former students, parents and friends a chance to say goodbye and to renew old memories. The reception will be held in the media center.

Did Shakespeare write it?

Did William Shakespeare write the body of work attributed to his name?

Or was he part of an elaborate conspiracy — a genuine Elizabethan Watergate, involving murder, corruption and intrigue?

The Friends of Grosse Pointe Public Library are sponsoring a Shakespeare program Thursday, Jan. 12, at 7:30 p.m. at Central Library.

Mark McPherson believes his research with 16th century documents and archeological exploration of the ruins of an English manor house provide the clues necessary to cast long shadows on many of the traditional notions concerning the Bard of Avon.

McPherson recently completed a book, "The Marlowe Tryst," which unites several of his theories, including who wrote certain Shakespearean works, and the nature of the four-century conspiracy which may survive to this day.

The program is free. Reservations are suggested. Phone 343-2074.

Dear Mr. President: Third-graders write

The 8-year-olds in Anne Flanagan's third-grade class at Trombly School wrote the following letters to President-elect George Bush. The students worked hard on their letters, according to Flanagan, and with the inauguration about to take place, readers may be interested to know what issues are of concern to the youngsters.

On Education

Dear Mr. Bush,
I am so glad you became president because if I was 18 I would have voted for you. I hope that you will give some of the tax money to the poor. And I also think that people who speak different languages than English should go to a school where the other students and teachers speak the same language. I think that would help them learn better.

Sincerely,
Erin Trybus

Death Penalty

Dear Mr. President,
I think that one of the most important issues is death penalty's. I think a way to solve this issue is that if anyone murders somebody they should be put into jail for life or at least 10 years. So what I'm trying to say is I'm against the death penalty's.

P.S. congratulations for winning the election. I'm glad you did.

Yours Truly,
Laura Berman

On Drugs

Dear Mr. Bush,
I am so happy that you won the election and will be President.

I think that drugs is the worst problem in the country. I think that it is the worst problem because there are too many drugs. Drugs make people crazy and also sick. Drugs make people want to steal and kill each other. I think you should try to prevent this by checking everyone that comes from a foreign country to make sure they don't have drugs. You also should have Police Officers go around to find all the crack houses and have them knocked down. When they find drugs dealers the police officers should lock them up for life.

I hope you will work very hard and do a good job in making "a kinder and gentler America."

Sincerely,
Jill Snyder

On Space

Dear President Bush,
I think our country should try to beat Russia in space knowledge because I'm really interested in space. I'm glad you became president. My mom and dad voted for you.

From:
Christopher Gauss

On National Debt

Dear Mr. President,
Congratulations on your winning the election.

It would be nice if you could reduce the National Debt of our country.

My daddy has a business called American Pie and will be writing to you soon. He has an idea that will help you.

I hope I will be able to meet you while you are in the White House.

Your friend,
Nicole Patenga

On War

Dear Mr. President George Bush,
Congratulations on your new job to be the next president.

The most important issue our country faces is WAR, because people die with guns.

I don't know how to stop war or what to do about it, but please don't forget about us kids.

Amy Jo Fodell

On Homeless

Mr. President-Elect,
Now that you have won you have alot of work to do to help our people. Old people and children need protection. They should not be hungry or homeless. More tax money should go to programs for the poor and homeless. You should make a deal with the U.S.S.R to spend less money on defence and more on mankind. To have a strong America, people must feel safe and be fed.

Sincerely from,
Zack Iles

On Taxes

Dear Mr. President,
Here's what I think you should do as president.

Taxes are too high. Stop giving money to people who won't work. Stop giving money to countries that won't help themselves. Crime is too high. Put people in jail for one week who steal bikes.

Thank you,
J. Wesley Robertson

On Defense

Dear President Elect-George Bush,

I am glad you won the election. I think you will be a good president for the United States. If I was president I would use the money from the taxes for roads, buildings, and other sorts of things. I thing you should use our money for to get soldiers to fight our enemies and use our money for air-planes, bombs, aircraft carriers, and things like that.

From,
Gillian Yee

On War

Dear Mr. President,
I think you should stop all the wars in the U.S.A. because the wars are bad. The way I think you could stop the wars is to get rid of all the weapons. That's how I think you stop wars.

From,
Teddy Terrien

On Taxes

Dear Mr. President,

My advice would be with the issue taxes. The taxes should not be raised just for the poor women in America. Then they can get food and a place to eat and sleep. I also think you should help them get job so that way they can get money.

Sincerely,
Melissa Wilde

The Poor

Dear Mr. President,

I think you should help poor people alot more than you have. An be the best you can by doing everything right. Your going to be in the White House pretty soon so you should start thinking about what you have to do. I think if you do that you'll be a good president.

P.S. keep up the good work

sincerely,
Nicholas Grant

On Drugs

Dear President elect Bush,

Congratulations for becoming our next president and I think that since you're becoming our next president you should do something about drugs. I think you should do something about drugs because a lot of people die from them. What I think you should do about it is to keep drug dealers in jail for there lives. The reason why I picked this issue is because drugs are dangerous and its sad when people die because of them.

sincerely from,
Amanda Crowley

On Jobs

Dear Mr. Bush,
Congradulations for winning the election.

I wish you luck and have a good presidential period.

It is important that everyone get a job, and all the children can go to school.

sincerely,
Patty Russa

On Environment

Dear Mr. Bush,

Hi how are you? My name is Alexis Clark. I'm writing to you from Grosse Pointe Park. I've got a question. If a human's life is so important how come people don't care if an animal is killed just to make a mink for some person? I just think life is so important and millions of animals shouldn't be killed just to make a fur! It seems like no one even cares.

Sincerely,
Alexis Clark

On Drugs

Dear Mr. Bush

Congradulations Mr. Bush. I know that you will be a great president and I hope you will take care of drugs and I think that our tax money should be spent on poor people.

From
Brian Addy

On Education

Dear Mr. Bush,
My problem is that we kids should have friday off for a weekend. Because two days for a weekend and five days for school is not fair. What do you think you do about this problem?

Matthew Sperling

On Drugs

Dear Mr. President Elect Bush,

I think you should try to stop more of the crime in our country, you have a four year period to change this country. In that period I think you should stop drugs in our country. Drugs and crime are some of the worst problems in the city of Detroit and many other problems in the city of Detroit and many other places too. On January twentieth you could start on that. It would take a long time but I think our country could do without it, just like we could do without candy.

Sincerely,
Ben Burns

On Taxes

Dear Mr. President,

I am so, so, glad you were voted President of the United States. I would like it if you would take Monday off for part of the weekend. There is one other thing you could do also and that is lower the taxes.

Sincerely
Clint Carpenter!!!

On Drugs

Dear President Bush,
Kid shouldn't take drugs because many people have been dieing and no countrys or states should have any drugs. How can we help kids to not take drugs? Why do they take them anyway? What can you do to help?

Sincerely,
Kristin Lorenger

On Crime

Dear Mr. President,

I am very concerned about the increase of crime in our area. I know police work very hard to keep our community safe. However, every day the news paper contain stories about murders and violence. Our jails are filled up with criminals and citizens do not want to spend more money to build new jails. Please help. I want my city and area to be safe for me and my family.

Very truly yours,
Michael Jon Garza

On Drugs

Dear Mr. President,

Drugs effect many people in our country. Some of the way drugs effect people are that workers don't do good quality work. They cause trouble. People on drugs cause a lot of our crime in this country. People on drugs can mess up their bodies and brains. Mr. President, as you can see above, people on drugs cause the Government a lot of money. Here are some of the ways I think we can solve the drug problems. One would be better education in our schools. Also we need tougher laws on people using and selling drugs.

Sincerely
Lauren Atsalaks

On drugs

Dear President Bush:

Congradulations and good luck in your new job! I would like you to find a way to stop drugs coming into our country. Also, I would like you to lower prices on toys, sports equipment, like skateboards, BMX bikes, and Hockey Ice Skates. I know President Reagan's favorite snacks were jelly beans.

I heard that your favorite snack is popcorn. Mine too! I hope that someday I can visit you at the White House.

Sincerely,
Robby Bair

On Abortion

Dear Mr. President,

I don't think it's fair when people use tax money for abortions. We are paying for something we don't even believe in. I think abortions should be against the law. I think we should have special people to talk to the mothers and tell them how important their children are.

Sincerely,
Lisa Devries

Justin Spencer

The following letter to the president was written by 8-year-old Justin Spencer, a third-grader at Richard School. He is the son of Sandy Spencer of Grosse Pointe Farms and Ken Spencer of Dearborn.

Dear Mr. President, There is a problem of the incinerator. It gives out pollution. It blows toward Grosse Pointe. It will kill 108 people. People are making another one in Dearborn. I think it should not be built.

Parcells students write how to say no and live drug-free

Parcells students — 187 of them — said no to drugs in the fourth annual "Just Say No to Drugs" essay contest sponsored by the school's SAC² team.

Sixth-grader Sean Ziegenhagen, seventh-grader William Stephens, and eighth-grader Ken Priebe were first-place winners; each received a prize of $25.

"Both our school and community have made major investments in battling all forms of drug abuse among our students," said Sharon Masek, Parcells SAC² coordinator. "We feel that this writing experience will help our students to reaffirm their values as they address this vital issue."

Principal William Christofferson, Student Assistance Coordinator Doug Merkle, and parent Carol Marks judged the essays on the basis of content, grammar and legibility.

Second-place winners Jennifer Rio (sixth grade), Tom Costello (seventh grade), and Kevin Magee (eighth grade) received $15 awards. Third place winners Kathryn Donahue and William Stevenson (sixth grade), Mike Marks (seventh grade) and Peter Fox (eighth grade) were awarded $10.

My Campaign Speech on How to Say No to Drugs

How does one say no to drugs? This is a persistent dilemma which has reached epidemic proportions in the last quarter of the 20th century. Drugs are attractive today to young people because they are a quick and easy way of becoming affluent, a way of forgetting their problems, and a way of enabling athletes to perform superhuman feats. Three ways I feel that one can say no to drugs are by choosing friends wisely, by trying to be the best one can in life, and by choosing heroes for the right reasons.

Choosing friends wisely is an important part of saying no. Your friends should have values similar to yours, know right from wrong, and not indulge in any type of substance abuse. Your friends should have parents who are interested in where their children are, whom they are with, and what they are doing.

Trying to be the best you can in life is another way of saying no. Working hard and doing well in school will give you a feeling of success and eliminate the need for drugs, which come from desperation and failure. Following parents' directions is another way of being the best you can and will keep you on the right path, because parents have your best interests at heart. Developing your talents is also a way to stay on the right track; for example, musical or athletic accomplishments will give you a feeling of achievement, which no drug can give.

Heroes or role models are very strong influences on kids today. Instead of being impressed by flashy cars and gold jewelry, one should admire the genuine heroes of today: our parents, teachers, policemen, firemen, and fine athletes, such as Isiah Thomas and Darrell Evans, who have set superb examples for youth, both on and off the playing fields.

There are many ways to say no to drugs; avoiding bad companions, preventing failure, and not being influenced by false heroes are three of the best ways I know to stop this evil. Saying no to drugs is actually saying yes to life.

My Campaign Speech on How to Say No to Drugs

My Friends, we are gathered here this evening to discuss the most important issue facing you, the American students, today: How do you say no to drugs and substance abuse? This problem is difficult for many teenagers today. Three approaches can help a young person face the problem of drugs.

Becoming more knowledgeable about the effects of drugs and alcohol on your body helps you to make a wiser decision. Drugs invade your bloodstream until you reach a point where you cannot live without them. If you try them once, you may become addicted. You care for your body. You want to protect it. So, say NO.

Parents, teachers, and friends must be a good example for you. Their attitudes are what you use in developing your own attitude. When they laugh at drunks, it makes intoxication seem socially acceptable. When they come home and "need a drink," it makes drinking seem all right. You must help your parents and teachers realize that they are setting examples that you will utilize the rest of your life. Encourage them to set good examples for you.

You must establish your own course of action when pressured about drugs and other substances. You are the one who makes the decisions in your life. You are the one who will have to make your own mind up about substance abuse. Make the right decision. Just say NO.

How do we say no to drugs and substance abuse? We think of how drugs and alcohol harm our bodies. We look for good examples in others. And we set our own attitudes against drugs.

William Stephens

An American Dream

It's not just a dream, it's a necessity that America conquer its drug problem. Drugs are increasing our country's crime rate, the death rate among our youth, and affecting productivity at all levels. We can't remain a first-rate power if our young people are being infected by drug abuse. Whether we take drugs ourselves or not, we are all affected by illegal drugs.

I don't fully understand why anyone would want to turn to drugs. I have a close family and friends, so I have someone to turn to when problems arise. However, some teens seem to think that drugs will solve their problems better than their family and peers. Kids with low self-esteem are at risk for drug abuse. They think they're not smart or prepared enough to have a decent future, so they turn to drugs, which leaves them with no future at all. Kids with low self-esteem also crave peer approval, so if their friends tell them to do something, they'll go ahead and do it, even if they know it's wrong. It's easy for us to tell these kids to "Just Say

No," but it's not easy for them to say "No."

Drug abuse affects everyone in one way or another, so it's not just up to one person or group to stop it. It's up to all of us. Schools, parents, kids and the government can all play a part in this. The government must enforce the law to get drug dealers off the streets and into jail. They can provide money for law enforcement and social programs to help kids at high risk for drug problems. Schools can do a better job of identifying high-risk kids and find ways to make them successful, so they don't feel like failures.

Parents need to enforce discipline and listen to their kids, so they can help with their problems. They should also make it clear to their kids that they love them for who they are. Kids should be more accepting of differences in others. Putting people down for silly things like clothes, size, appearance, etc., only reinforces poor self-esteem and can make them seek acceptance from the wrong group.

We all need to work together. Since drugs in our society hurt all of us, we will all benefit from a DRUG-FREE AMERICA.

Press review, new models distinguish Detroit's International Auto Show

To join the ranks of the world's great auto shows, leaders of the Detroit Auto Dealers Association realized that making a quantum leap in the Show's stature depended upon attracting national and international press.

Like shows in Frankfurt, Geneva, Paris and Tokyo, this year's North American International Auto Show will feature a two-day press preview before the Show opens to the public on Jan. 7.

Attractions will include the world debut of two new divisions of Japanese luxury car lines — Toyota's Lexus Division and Nissan's Infiniti Division.

Chevrolet and Pontiac will display their new all-purpose-vehicles for the first time anywhere. Mazda will introduce a new product and Motor Trend magazine will announce the winner of its 1989 "Car of the Year" award.

Journalists and show-goers also will get first glimpses of a fabulous array of futuristic concept cars by Chrysler, Ford, Buick, Cadillac, Oldsmobile, Pontiac, GMC, Mitsubishi and Peugeot.

Volkswagen will unveil for the first time in North America its new Corrado sports car while Audi's new V-8 model will make its U.S. debut.

In addition to news-making model introductions, journalists will have access to such top auto industry executives as General Motors Chairman Roger B. Smith, GM President Robert Stempel, GM Executive Vice President Lloyd Reuss, Ford Chairman Donal Petersen, Ford Executive Vice President Philip Benton, Chrysler Motors Chairman Gerald Greenwalk, Chrysler Motors President Robert Lutz, Toyota Motor Sales USA President Yukiyasa Togo, Toyota Motor Sales USA Executive Vice President Robert McCarry and Nissan Motor Corp. USA Executive Vice President Tom Mignaneli.

Other executives, designers and engineers are expected to be available in exhibit display areas to brief reporters on new products and answer questions.

Recognizing the nature appeal of an international auto show in the Motor City, Michelin Tire Corp., the world's second largest tire manufacturer, volunteered to staff and equip a media center to assure that traveling journalists will have the comforts and conveniences necessary to perform their jobs.

Auto Show organizers began spreading word of their ambitious plans last summer and have since contacted more than 1,000 journalists throughout the United States, Canada, Japan and Europe.

Show's internationalization coincides with Cobo expansion

The internationalization of the Detroit Auto Show Dealers Association's annual Auto Show coincides with completion of a $225 million expansion and renovation of Cobo Hall.

"Mayor Coleman A. Young deserves credit for the vision and leadership he displayed in orchestrating this impressive project," said Auto Show Co-Chairman David Fischer and Kenneth Meade. "Without the Mayor's foresight, our Association's dream of bringing to Detroit the kind of world-class auto show that it truly deserves would never have become reality."

This year's Charity Preview will mark the Grand Opening of the new Cobo Conference-Exhibition Center, now one of the nation's largest and most flexible trade show and convention sites.

Cobo's expansion enabled this year's Show to increase its display space by 60 percent and add 17 exhibitors to the 24 that displayed cars and trucks in 1988. And the 1990 Show promises to be even bigger and better yet when an additional 100,000 square feet becomes available on the building's west side.

As impressive as Cobo's sheer size is its majestic new granite and marble block facade with four three-story glass atriums overlooking downtown Detroit.

Cobo's physical attributes now include:

- 84 meeting rooms ranging in size from 600 square feet to 33,000 square feet.
- A 27,000 square foot Grand Ballroom

- A completely carpeted Concourse area stretching the length of two city blocks.

- Four elevators to roof parking and 26 escalators connecting halls, meeting rooms and registration areas.

- Shuttle bus service from 18,000 hotel rooms in 10 metro Detroit locations within 30 minutes of downtown.

- A 12 foot bronze sculpture of Detroit boxing great Joe Louis.

- An oil portrait of Mayor Coleman A. Young.

- A wall mosaic in Venetian glass at Cobo's new People Mover station, the 13th along the City's 2.9 mile elevated downtown transportation route.

"We're delighted with the way our expansion has shaped up," said Cobo Director June Roselle. "The convention and trade show industry is growing so fast that we were in danger of losing several long-time costumers because we simply did not have enough room to accommodate their events."

"Within a few years, we expect to pump nearly $225 million annually in convention-related revenue into this region compared with about $100 million prior to the expansion. We expect the number of conventions and trade shows to double to 90 in the next five years, doubling our current annual attendance to nearly 800,000 people," Roselle said.

Originally opened in 1960, the Cobo expansion project began in October, 1985.

Dealers draw support from government, industry

The lofty goal of creating an international Auto Show could not have been realized without strong support from industry leaders and public officials.

"It would have been easy to fall short in our first try at staging a truly international Show. But the notion that the Motor City is, and will continue to be, a major focal point in the automotive universe proved too appealing to fail," said Auto Show Co-Chairman David T. Fischer and Kenneth G. Meade.

"Detroit's Big Three automakers embraced our plan, as did our 27 Asian and European exhibitors, Detroit Mayor Coleman A. Young, and Gov. James J. Blanchard," Fischer and Meade said.

"This year's show is our Association's 73rd and we believe it will be the best of its kind in the United States. We are proud to sponsor this world-class event, and we hope it will engender a sense of pride in our industry, our region and our state," Fischer and Meade said.

Gov. Blanchard predicts "spectacular success" for the upcoming Auto Show.

"Greater Detroit is more than one of the great auto manufacturing centers of the world. It is also the center of high technology manufacturing in North America — our competing and winning on a global scale with the manufacturing elite of Europe and Asia.

"We welcome international competition in Michigan. It brings out the best in us. So it is fitting that the Detroit Auto Show Dealers Association has gone international with its traditional Show and has transformed it into the North American International Auto Show," Blanchard said.

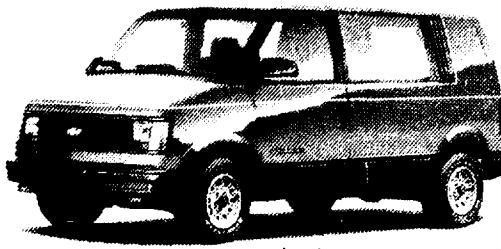

Mayor Coleman A. Young said the Show will highlight the new Cobo Hall, the People Mover and other downtown improvements.

"Virtually all of the Show's exhibitors have increased their display space and they have been joined by 17 new exhibitors. This dramatic growth demonstrates the confidence of automobile manufacturers and dealers, and their desire to make Detroit the showcase, as well as the headquarters of the automobile industry.

Motor Trend moves "Car of the Year" announcement to Detroit show

An industry tradition becomes part of this year's North American International Auto Show when Motor Trend magazine announces the winner of its annual "Car of the Year" award on Jan. 5.

"We have always felt like were in the automotive business, not the publishing business," said Robert E. Brown, Senior Vice President for Corporate Development, Petersen Publishing Co., publisher of Motor Trend.

"As part of an industry that has supported Motor Trend and our other automotive magazines, we felt like we wanted to be here when the domestic industry put its best foot forward," Brown said.

Since 1949, Motor Trend has recognized what it regards as the best new U.S. car each year. Nominees for 1989 are the Mercury Cougar, the Ford Thunderbird Super Coupe, the Dodge Spirit and cars are judged on such performance characteristics as acceleration, braking and handling. Although automakers are well aware of these broad criteria, they do know how these criteria are weighted by Motor Trend and test drivers, Brown said.

For the last 20 years, Motor Trend has announced its annual award winner in California. "This year we thought it would be appropriate to salute Detroit as the automobile capital of the world and the Detroit Auto Dealers Association for staging the first truly international auto show ever held in Detroit," Brown said.

DADA Auto Show Co-Chairman David T. Fischer and Kenneth G. Meade welcomed Motor Trend's association as a boost to the Show's stature.

"One characteristic of Motor Trend that separates it from some of the other enthusiasts' magazines is that Motor Trend writes about the kind of car that ordinary people actually drive and buy," said Fischer and Meade. "These are the very people who have been coming by the hundreds of thousands for the last many years to our Auto Show."

With a circulation of 750,000 Motor Trend has made its mark in the automotive publishing industry by providing consumers with extensive road test reports.

Two more childrens charities benefit from traditional Auto Show preview

Two additional childrens charities will benefit from this year's Charity Preview, the traditional black-tie party that opens the Detroit Auto Show Dealers Association's annual Auto Show.

This year's Preview also marks the Grand Opening of the vastly expanded, and hand-somely renovated Cobo Hall.

The March of Dimes and the Detroit Institute for Children join four other childrens charities as financial beneficiaries fo Detroit's International Auto Show.

Last year's Charity Preview generated more than $200,000 for Boys' and Girls' Clubs of Metropolitan Detroit, The Children's Center, the Easter Seals societies of Wayne, Oakland and Macomb counties and the Assistance League to the Northeast Guidance Center.

"The DADA's Charity Preview is one of the best things that ever happened to us," said Joe Kozo, executive director of the Boys' and Girls' Clubs.

The Charity Preview is a major social event, attracting top automotive executives, elected officials and other dignitaries. The Friday night crowd sips wine and champagne as it gets the first public glimpse of the Show's dazzling displays.

Tickets cost $50, with each charity receiving whatever amount it sells in tickets.

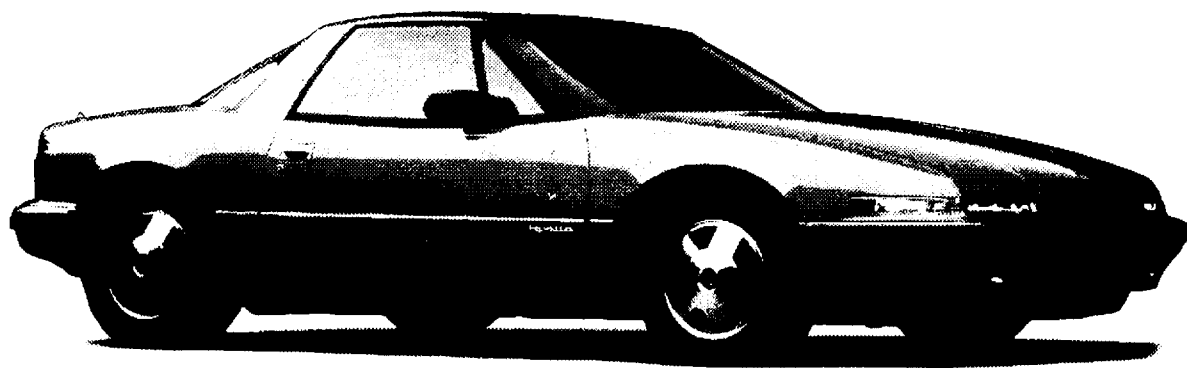

"These additional funds will enable us to expand our volunteer educational program, which is crucial to our success," said Georgia Olson of the March of Dimes, which funds research and provides medical services aimed at preventing birth defects.

The Detroit Institute for Children specializes in treating infants, children and young adults who suffer from sensory, and perceptual disabilities. Proceeds from this year's Preview will be used for the Institute's Cerebral Palsy Clinic.

"Each of these charities provides important services to needy children," said DADA President Robert L. Thibodeau. "Our dealers are very proud that our annual Auto Show has been able to make significant contributions to the welfare of the entire Greater Detroit community."

Mr. Goodwrench

She specializes in tax consultation to expatriates

By Ronald J. Bernas
Staff Writer

When someone studies toward a bachelor's degree in accountancy at Walsh College in Troy, the person might not expect that career to lead to a dinner in China where the main dish is sea slugs and duck's web.

But that's what happened to Farms resident Kathleen M. Kosmatka, who was recently named a partner of Touche Ross in Detroit.

As a certified public accountant with the firm, Kosmatka specializes in tax consultation to expatriates, a specialty she just sort of fell into.

When she joined Touche Ross in 1977, Chrysler Corp. asked the firm if it could do the taxes for its employees living and working abroad. The firm then had 35 workers, all of whom learned the specialized field. But the company saw that there was no need for all of their employees to study that area of tax preparation and asked only a few, including Kosmatka, to continue.

Because it is a highly specialized field, she has been asked to give speeches throughout the country to companies with employees living abroad.

"Basically, I specialized be-

cause of word of mouth about our program," she said, adding, "I've always liked to travel."

The combination of the two was unbeatable.

"Not only do we do their (expatriates) tax returns, but we also counsel them on what they have to do differently when working in a foreign country," she said.

One thing that must be done differently, for example, is getting royal approval for any meetings prior to holding a training session in Saudi Arabia.

As coordinator for Touche Ross' National Expatriate Services, she must be aware of the laws and customs of the various countries to which she travels — laws that, in parts of the Middle East, forbid a woman to ride in the front seat of a car with a man other than her husband, and customs that make it an insult to shake hands with the left hand.

A newsletter is distributed explaining the various laws and customs, and employees are briefed to help them get used to the new country. They also give referrals regarding schools for children.

When Kosmatka travels, she generally deals with Americans, however, she must deal with many foreigners who find that dealing with a woman is difficult.

One foreign businessman asked Kosmatka's husband what he thought of his wife working.

And there are other things to deal with, like the sea-slug dinner, and being searched by armed guards en route to the Japanese airport, or wandering into an anti-American rally in Japan by accident.

Traveling abroad to work is different than seeing the area as a tourist, she said. Even in a free society, there are things you have to watch out for, and in some countries you are only allowed to see so much of the city.

But despite the problems, she says, "Not a day goes by when there isn't something funny that happens. I love it, I've really enjoyed my job."

When Kosmatka isn't traveling, she is in Detroit working on her other specialty — taxes for women-owned businesses.

"I'm not talking about cottage industries," she said. "I'm talking about women-owned car dealerships, stores and other businesses." The number of women-owned businesses in Michigan is close to 50 percent, she said.

Women have not been trained to work in the financial aspects of running a business, and still face prejudices and problems because they are women.

"Women don't have the benefit of the old boy network, so they're pulling together and creating an old girl network," she said.

Kosmatka works with the National Association of Women Business Owners, and is a member of the American Business Women's Association and the Michigan Woman magazine's Committee of 100, representing top Michigan businesswomen.

Immediately after a snowfall is an opportune time for recording dramatic winter shots on film. Snow etching the tree branches provided a beautiful, serene pictorial for Monte Nagler's camera.

Photography By Monte Nagler

Don't let the cold weather keep you indoors this winter. Winter scenes are different, beautiful, and have a mood all their own. Quite often, ordinary scenes in the summer take on a totally new dimension in winter light.

The minor discomfort you might encounter in the cold air is more than worth the picture possibilities that await you. Bundle up both you and your camera gear and head outside for some exciting shots.

In preparing for cold weather shooting, there are some things to consider. First is your film which, without precautions, may become brittle and break in your camera. Minimize the danger by keeping your camera and film as warm as possible by storing them under your jacket and never leaving them in your car for prolonged times.

Also, on cold days, the camera meter can become sluggish because of a weak battery. Always make sure your camera batteries are fresh and even get into the good habit of carrying an extra one with you.

Use a slow, steady movement when advancing the film from one exposure to the next. A slow cranking will reduce the strain on the film and cut the possibility of static electric marks.

Wear thin wool or cotton gloves under your regular gloves. When you're about to take a shot, remove the outer pair. The inner gloves will give adequate protection from the cold and also flexibility to handle the camera controls.

If you plan to do a lot of winter photography, it would be wise to purchase a special photography vest. They consist of many pockets providing convenient space for carrying film, lenses, a spare battery, etc. Because the vest is worn right next to the body, all items are kept warm by your body heat.

Here are some pointers to help

Cancer program offered

If you or a member of your family have cancer, attend "I Can Cope," a six-week education program sponsored by Harper Hospital and the American Cancer Society.

The free program will be held on Wednesdays, beginning Feb. 1, from 6:30 p.m. to 8:30 p.m. at

Register for children's theater

New as well as continuing students are invited to register for Grosse Pointe Children's Theatre workshops, Saturday, Jan. 14 at the War Memorial.

The 10-week theater classes will begin Friday, Jan. 20 at 4 p.m. and Saturday, Jan. 21 at 10 a.m. Classes are 1 1/2 hours a week. Students are assigned to classes according to age and experience.

Instructor Sally Reynolds will register new elementary school add impact to your winter photographs:

- Back lighting or side lighting gives dramatic effects. Your pictures will capture the sparkle of sunlight on the snow and reveal textures and patterns not obtainable from direct, overhead light.

- Sun or bright snow can cause flare in your shot. Always use a lens hood.

- The abundance of white areas in winter scenes can fool your meter which is calibrated to read normal proportions of lightness and darkness. So pay particular attention to exposure or your shots may come out too dark. Open up a stop, or, better still, take your reading off a gray card or the back of your hand.

- On a blue sky day, use your polarizing filter. The sky's blue hues will be darkened for added impact without adversely affecting the color values of other subjects in the scene. You won't lose the effects of sparkling snow either.

- Daylight balanced film will render true color reproduction of your shot. But, for a special effect, try using tungsten balanced film outdoors without the necessary correction filter. What will happen is that your pictures will pick up a romantic blue tint that can be quite unusual and dramatic.

- Keep your vision tuned for close-up photo possibilities. Frost patterns on a window, sun shimmering on an icicle, or snow delicately etching a tree branch will all reward you with a fine shot.

- Don't restrict your winter photography to landscape and natural scenes. Winter can make its mark on faces and activities of people and this effect alone can produce striking pictures.

- So this winter, don't give your camera the cold shoulder. Rather, warm up to the thought of getting yourself some exciting, impact-filled wintertime photographs.

When resolve dissolves

Can't keep your New Year's resolution? Don't take it personally, experts say

By Peggy O'Connor Andrzejczyk
Assistant Editor/Feature Editor

At around 90 seconds past midnight last Saturday, thousands of New Year's resolutions died quietly — without ever seeing the light of day — as resolution-makers had one more drink, one more cigarette or ate just one more goodie.

It's a scenario played out every year, and a harmless one if the person doing the resolving doesn't take it too seriously, according to a Grosse Pointe psychologist.

"People make resolutions because it's been such a tradition to do so. Then there's all the hype in the newspapers and on TV. Actually, we make resolutions all through the year. We only put them down on paper at this time of year," explains Virginia Sargent, registered clinical psychologist and marital and family therapist.

AS A THERAPIST, Sargent sees nothing wrong with making resolutions — "or goal-setting, which is what resolution-makers are really doing.

"Any time we take stock of ourselves and our lives and try to make changes to improve ourselves, it's a good thing."

The problems arise when we set goals — make resolutions — that are a little too lofty. Add to that the natural tendency to be depressed when we don't succeed at our resolutions and the whole process ceases to be fun or constructive.

"As long as people are realistic and try not to bite off more than they can chew, making resolutions is harmless. And it can even be helpful, such as in with some of my woman clients. Making resolutions gives them a sense that they are entitled to do something for themselves. Without guilt.

"Guilt at doing something for oneself is an occupational hazard for women who are wives and mothers. So if making resolutions can start them on a pattern of allowing themselves to take time for themselves, I think they can be very helpful," Sargent says.

THE KEY TO keeping those resolutions you made last weekend, Sargent says, is making them achievable goals — in other words, no major lifestyle changes — and recognizing that "we take two steps forward and one step back when we set out to achieve goals like this.

"Taking stock of ourselves at the beginning of a new year is fine. Just remember to do it in moderation, don't set yourself up for failure and don't get too upset if you break your resolutions."

Mary Busse, owner of Diet Center, Inc., in Grosse Pointe, tells her clients not to bother making resolutions on New Year's.

"It's too much of a social tradition," Busse says. "It's done more out of rote than with any real thought. I'd rather see people sit down on their birthdays and take stock of themselves.

"Birthdays are more individual, more special. We can sit down and think about what we can do to better ourselves in our next 12 months. Your birthday is your special day . . . what better day to do something for yourself?"

BUT THERE WILL always be people who want to make their New Year's resolutions and stick to them. For those folks, Busse offers these suggestions:

- Find a quiet place and sit down with a paper and pencil. Make a good evaluation of your life, paying particular attention to things you want to change or improve.

- Say you come up with 10 items. Pick just one of those 10 — the one that's most important to you — and focus on it.

- When you fail — and you will because you are human — try to focus on the positive.

"By focusing on one thing, you've knocked your goals down to a more manageable size. And through my work, I've found that when we improve one area of our lives, there is no way that can't have an impact on the other aspects of our lives," Busse says.

And the key to any successful resolution or goal-setting — be it giving up smoking, learning not to lose your temper, saving money or losing weight — is to learn from your failures.

— Virginia Sargent

"No one goes through life without failure. Lee Iacocca, Donald Trump, all the wildly successful people of the world, had failures. Their successes came from getting back up after a failure.

"When you screw up, you just 'apologize' to yourself and get on with it. Focus on your successes, rather than on your failures," Busse advises.

Advice which in itself might make a good New Year's resolution.

Park's Hartway wins ASCAP award

A 1988-89 ASCAP Award has been presented to James J. Hartway of Grosse Pointe Park, professor in the department of music at Wayne State University and chairman of the Division of Composition and Theory.

The award is given by the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers to assist and encourage writers of serious music across the nation. The award is based on the unique prestige value of the writer's catalogue and the performances of his compositions.

Hartway has received numerous commissions from both professional and educational organizations and is in demand as a guest lecturer.

"The last several years have been filled with performances and commissions to write new works. My favorite piece is my next one, so I hope my good fortune continues. I'm always available to compose," Hartway said.

His music has been recorded, choreographed and performed internationally. The Detroit Symphony Orchestra premiered Hartway's concerto for jazz quartet and orchestra "Cityscapes," with the composer at the piano. The work has had many subsequent performances and was nominated for the Pulitzer Prize.

Hartway is involved in a wide variety of activities which include appearances with symphony orchestras, composing music for film, artist residencies and a jazz historian series.

He won the Probus Club Award for Academic Achievement in the Humanities, and a Presidential Citation for outstanding achievements at WSU. He is also the recipient of an Arts Foundation of Michigan Award. Since 1979, he has been an annual winner of the ASCAP Standard Panel Award for his compositions.

Hartway holds bachelor of arts and master of music degrees from Wayne State University and a Ph.D. in music from Michigan State University.

Grosse Pointers put Pewabic Pottery on winter lists of fun things to do

Sure, life is a cabaret, especially during the holiday season. But post-party and pre-fundraiser time can get pretty dead around here, especially when the temperature drops and brings the snow along with it.

And those who look for something different to do during this time of year often come up empty-handed than a Christmas stocking on Jan. 5. Unless they look west down Jefferson Avenue a bit.

The winter session of pottery classes at Pewabic Pottery begins Saturday, Jan. 8, and runs for 10 weeks. Anyone interested in ceramics is invited to enroll. There are afternoon and evening classes for adults. Children's classes — kids can bring their parents — are offered on Saturday mornings.

Pewabic Pottery is a nationally recognized ceramics learning center located five minutes from downtown Detroit. The 80-year-old institution has been a leader in the development of American ceramic art and has produced most of the fine art tile for which Detroit architecture is noted.

Students study under a faculty with a national and international reputation, as well as experience the techniques which have made the pottery famous. A variety of forming methods are taught and firing techniques include wood, salt, gas and electric. An "open studio" policy encourages the use of the studio outside class time.

Undergraduate and graduate credits from Wayne State University may also be arranged.

Tuition includes use of clay, glaze material and firing of completed work. Lectures, gallery openings and other special events are offered free or at a discount to students. Discussions with and technical demonstrations by visiting artists highlight the sessions.

Pointers participating in recent classes included Julia Music, Terry Dietrich, Alex Zachary, Becky Santora and Virginia Ryan.

For more information about the classes or membership in the Pewabic Society, call the pottery at 822-0954. Or pack up the family and enjoy a winter treat by touring the museum, sales gallery and working areas of Pewabic Pottery.

While we're talking art

... "Recent Acquisitions: Featuring 'Ten Winter Tools' by Jim Dine," will be on exhibition Jan. 6-28 at the Joy Emery Gallery, 131 Kercheval Ave. in Grosse Pointe Farms. Dine's "Ten Winter Tools," is a set of 10 lithographs, each of which is hand-colored with watercolor.

Also to be shown in the January exhibition are recently acquired works by Francis Bacon, Richard Bosman, David Hockney and Yvonne Jacquette.

Jim Dine was originally identified with the American Pop Art movement of the '60s, although his work has undergone profound changes over the past two decades. "Ten Winter Tools" exemplify his transformation to painterly expressionist as seen in the utilitarian artifacts he knew as a child working in his grandfather's hardware store.

The exhibition will be the subject of a lunchtime gallery talk by Eastern Michigan University art teacher Hope Palmer on Wednesday, Jan. 25, from noon to 1 p.m. Palmer holds a master of fine arts degree from the University of Michigan and a master of arts in art history from Wayne State University.

Reservations for the informal talk, including lunch, can be made by calling 886-1444.

Gallery hours are Tuesday through Sunday, 11 a.m. to 6 p.m.; Thursday, until 8 p.m.

On the 'Bal':

Award-winning mezzo-soprano Kathleen Segar, who has appeared many times with the Michigan Opera Theatre and the Detroit Symphony Orchestra, will highlight the after-dinner entertainment at the sixth annual "Bal Polonais" gala dinner-dance set for Saturday, Feb. 4, at the Detroit Athletic Club.

Among the selections to be performed, Segar will sing Jadowiga's aria from Moniuszko's "Haunted Castle," in honor of the upcoming MOT production of a Polish opera, for which the Bal Polonais is a benefit.

Other participants in the evening's festivities will be members of MOT's Overture to Opera Company and the Wiska Dance Ensemble, which will lead the Grand Polonaise and begin an evening of dancing to the music of Joe Vitale's Orchestra.

Tickets for the event are $125 per person ($175 for patrons, $250 for benefactors). For more information, call 642-2730 or 646-5250.

Four Michigan humanitarians... will be honored at the March of Dimes' 17th annual Sweetheart Ball, set for Saturday, Feb. 18, at Detroit's Westin Hotel.

Ralph Cash, M.D., pediatrician at Children's Hospital of Michigan; Marc Stepp, vice president, international UAW; Vincent J. Brennan, attorney and former appeals court judge; and Bill Bonds, Channel 7 anchorman; will be honored.

John G. Marshall is this year's Sweetheart Ball chairman. Honorary chairmen Alan Kiriluk and Heinz Prechter are helping organize the black-tie event.

This year's ball will begin with a reception at 6:30 p.m., followed by dinner at 7:30, then dancing to the music of the George Dunn Band. There will also be a silent auction. Tickets are $150 per person, with proceeds going to support the community service, education and research programs conducted by the March of Dimes to help fight birth defects and lower the incidence of low birthweight.

For more information on tickets, call Sharon Reeves at the Southeast Michigan Chapter of office, 423-3200.

The Pastor's Corner When is Christmas?

By Rev. Robert A. Rimbo
Pastor, St. James Lutheran Church

The question which forms the title of this column seems strange, especially given the Jan. 5 publication date! We all KNOW what happened: The angel of the Lord appeared to shepherds on the fields of Bethlehem and made it plain: "Fear not, for behold, I bring you good news of great joy for all people. For born to you THIS DAY in David's town a Savior, which is Christ the Lord. And these are the signs by which you will know him. You will find him wrapped in swaddling cloths, lying in a manger."

But for people of our time, perhaps that message is too simple. For status-conscious folks like us, God should have chosen a more fitting place for his arrival. For people who are known by their achievements as we are, God should not have bothered to send Christ at all. So, tell me, when is Christmas? Or, put another way, where do you find hope?

I'm not interested in the date we celebrate Christmas. I know the date and sometimes I can't believe we're celebrating the birth of Jesus! We visit Christmas decorated homes. We see the lights and scenes on our streets. We read the Christmas editorials and even listen to the Christmas preachers.

But often, these do not answer the question, "When is Christmas?" for over and against these we hear the cries and feel the pulse beat of the trembling heart and realize the tremendous lack of concern for the needs of others. And we ask, "When is Christmas?"

"To you is born a Savior, which is Christ the Lord." With this simple sentence, everything was said that could be said. But we have taken it, embellished it, and polished it and made our Christmas an island of majestic wonder so far removed from life's realities that it is nothing more than fairy tale, legend.

This is quite the opposite of what God intended when he descended into life's realities with forgiveness.

When we understand that God has come to get beneath the burden of our human need, identify himself with us in all the realities of life and save us from our sins — THEN is Christmas. When we know that God has come to peel away our masks and let us know that he is here because he MUST be here if he would save us — THEN is Christmas.

When we know that God in love has taken up our cause and there is nothing more to fear — THEN is Christmas. When we get it through our hearts that we find Jesus in the midst of human need and that we are in it with him as his answer to the need for love — THEN is Christmas!

That might be Dec. 25. It might be Dec. 29 or Jan. 5. It might be the Fourth of July.

Christ Church member will discuss African experience

Susan Anslow, a 1987 graduate of Yale University and a member of Christ Church Grosse Pointe, will be the guest preacher at the 11:15 a.m. service at the church, 61 Grosse Pointe Blvd., on Sunday, Jan. 8. Anslow recently returned from a challenging year of ministry at the Holy Cross Missions in Bolahun, Liberia, in West Africa. She served as administrator for the mission as well as an art teacher in the high school. She also trained diaconate students and evangelists to serve the surrounding villages.

At the service, Anslow will be presented with the Presiding Bishop's Distinguished Service Award. She will then present Christ Church with a chasuble which she made from Liberian fabric.

Anslow will share more of her experiences at the Adult Forum at 10:20 a.m. Jan. 8 in the Christ Church Undercroft.

Celebration of heritage set for Jan. 8-14

As it did at the turn of the century, the Catholic church today has an immigrant face, reflecting the large numbers of immigrants, refugees and migrant workers of every color and national origin. And the correlation between the migrants of today and that long-ago refugee family — the Holy Family which had to live as political refugees in Egypt — is obvious.

Such comparisons are what organizers of the first National Migration Week had in mind, back in 1980. Since then, clerics, lay people, various social agencies and immigrants of all kinds have celebrated National Migration Week.

This year, the Archdiocese of Detroit will celebrate National Migration Week Jan. 8-14. Kicking off the event is a special liturgy planned by the Archdiocese of Detroit's Department of Christian Service and scheduled for this Sunday, Jan. 8.

There will be a noon Mass at Holy Redeemer Church in Detroit, located at Vernor Avenue and Junction. Following Mass there will be a special program and refreshments served in the church hall.

Observance of National Migration Week also follows closely the feasts of Christmas and New Year's Day, which is also observed throughout the world as a day of prayer for world peace. According to national organizers of Migration Week, the Office of Pastoral Care of Migrants and Refugees promotes the special week on behalf of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops.

As they have in past years, American church leaders and bishops will issue pastoral letters on National Migration Week and many will also be personally involved in various aspects of the celebration.

Among the special celebrations planned are: the offering of prayers in different languages for peace, harmony and justice; sharing through music and dance the beauty of various religious traditions; the sharing of ethnic foods in the spirit of communion and friendship.

Dennis L. Scanland, director of the Archdiocese of Detroit's refugee settlement office, says that donations will be accepted to help defray the cost of the Detroit program. He also encourages Detroit area Catholics to be more aware of their heritage during this special week.

For more information on local Migration Week celebrations, call 237-5900.

individual, marital and family counseling. Her presentation will address the conflicts that families encounter resulting from various stressors, including changing roles, and the different stages and ages in family life.

The presentation will also explore tools to assist family members in problem-solving and responsible decision-making.

G.P. United women to meet

The Women's Association of Grosse Pointe United Church will meet on Tuesday, Jan. 10, at 11 a.m. Following a business meeting and the installation of the 1989 slate of officers, luncheon will be served by the Mary Group.

Memorial will host special program

Looking to a new leadership

By Marian Trainor
Special Writer

The dust of the presidential campaign trails has settled, the echo of oratory has drifted away into silence, the cheers and jeers no longer blister the airwaves. All of the trappings, rhetoric, the promises and accusations, exhortations and proclamations have been set aside for four years from now. The victors are veying the spoils and the losers have slipped into the shadows to emerge again another day.

And not a moment too soon. A weary constituency is tired of listening to and looking at candidates. We are ready to accept the will of the majority and join hands to bring about all the good things that both parties said were possible to accomplish. Winners and losers alike are hoping for the best.

President Reagan, who so loved the spotlight, will be stepping down, probably still wishing it could have been "four more years" for him. But he can take some consolation in a generous pension.

Former presidents when they leave the White House take with them a million dollar transition fund to ensure a return to private life in accordance with the dignity of the position they once held. In addition they are accorded a retirement salary of approximately $70,000 a year, upgraded regularly to keep pace with inflation.

THAT'S JUST THE beginning. For instance, each of America's living ex-presidents have sold the right to books they authored for more than $1 million. Books needed to be promoted and what better way to do that than for the author to go on a lecture tour at around $25,000 an appearance?

Add to that $250,000 a year to rent office space, hire a staff and buy office supplies. They are also provided Secret Service protection.

And that's not all, as they say in the commercials. There is a travel allowance of $30,000 a year, a staff allowance of almost $100,000 and free mailing privileges that average between $5,000 and $10,000.

However, as we flash our image of well-being and prosperity by cable to all the countries of the world, we would certainly lose face if we failed to maintain our former leaders in a style appropriate to their station.

NOR SHOULD WE wish them to be less than they were. They are entitled to dignity and respect as former leaders of our great country. There is a certain pride that filters down to each one of us that we are able to so honor those whom we once chose to head our nation.

Prime Time

The British are proud of their royalty. They never seem to consider it a burden to support them in splendor. The people seem to love the pomp and circumstance and follow the everyday comings and goings with loving interest. For them, royalty is a national emblem and they have managed to project the importance and symbolism and make it newsworthy around the world.

We have something more important going for us than the symbolism of royalty. We have the ideology which has served us well since its inception. We have the privilege of choosing the best person to head it up every four years.

Now that we have done so, we can move onto other matters of Social Security earnings base to increase

The annual earnings base — the maximum amount of earnings that counts for Social Security — will increase to $48,000 for 1989, up from $45,000, the 1988 base, according to Verlyn J. Rebelein, district manager of the Social Security office located at 17420 Mack Ave.

The increase is based on the change in average earnings levels from 1987 to 1988. The 1989 Social Security tax rate will be 7.51 percent, same as the rate for 1988.

Other Social Security figures are scheduled to increase in 1989 as well, Rebelein said. The annual exempt amount used in the annual earnings test will increase. The annual earnings test is the measure used to determine whether a person who works will receive benefits during the year.

The 1989 annual exempt amount for people 65 and over will be $8,880, up from the 1988 amount of $8,400. The 1989 exempt amount for people under 65 all of 1989 will be $6,480, up from the 1988 amount of $6,120.

A person whose earnings do not exceed the annual exempt amount will receive all benefits due for the year. A person's benefit is reduced $1 for each $2 of earnings above the exempt amount. The annual earnings test does not apply once a person reaches 70.

More information about Social Security taxes and benefits can be obtained by calling 800-2345-SSA.

Search is on for outstanding senior programs

The search is on for nominees for the 1989 Michigan Project Independence Award, sponsored by the Michigan Office of Services to the Aging (OSA).

Programs are nominated by the 14 statewide Area Agencies on Aging, according to a criteria. Two winners — one urban and one rural program — will be selected by a prestigious selection committee comprised of representatives of the Michigan Commission on Aging, the State Advisory Council on Aging, OSA staff and an expert in the field of intergenerational programming.

For this fifth year of the award, Consumers Power Company has donated a cash award to go to each of the two winners who will be presented with their checks and honored as part of the scheduled activities at 1989 Senior Power Day, May 16.

The deadline for submission to the Michigan OSA is 5 p.m. Jan. 31. Those interested in being considered for nomination should contact their local Area Agency on Aging.

For more information, contact Wendi Middleton at 517-373-4070.

Grosse Pointe Senior Men's Club

Drugs." Presenter will be John D. King.

Reservations may be made by calling Jerry Bultinek at 886-0607 or Gene Royer at 823-2757.

WHEN NOT TO USE
$125,000 EXEMPTION

Homeowners over age 55 may exclude from gross income any profit up to $125,000 realized on the sale of a principal residence. To qualify for the exclusion, you must be age 55 by the day the residence is sold, and you must have owned the property and used it as a personal residence for at least three of the preceding five years. This tax break can be used only once in a lifetime.

Does this mean that it ALWAYS makes sense to use this tax break if you sell a home for a good profit when you are 55 or older? Not necessarily. This exclusion was made primarily for a retiring couple to sell their home and buy a small retirement home without having to pay significant capital gains taxes. If you are going to buy another home that will cost as much or more than your present one, it might make more sense to avail yourself of the rollover break which allows you to defer all the profit from the sale and which can be used as many times as you desire.

A holiday poem . . .

Four senior citizens from the St. John-Bon Secours Senior Community wrote the following poem in poetry class in honor of the season.

Snowbells ring and children sing, And Christmas is the day that we all bow our heads and pray.

High above the sky, a shining star leads us to the stable far.

The lambs and the children frolic in every place; hearts and souls are filled with grace.

SEMCOG publishes senior housing guide for county

A recently published senior housing guide documents the need for decent and affordable housing for the elderly residents of Wayne County.

Wayne County senior citizens who want to live in a public sector development for the elderly will wait an average 2.5 years before they're accepted, according to the report. And private sector housing is expensive — average monthly rent usually exceeds $800.

These facts and others, including maps and charts, were compiled by SEMCOG, the Southeast Michigan Council of Governments, the Senior Alliance Area Agency on Aging 1-C and the Detroit Area Agency on Aging.

"About 70 percent of all elderly residents in Wayne County live in their own homes," said Robert McMahon, SEMCOG Community and Economic Development Programs Manager. "Still, they should be aware of other housing opportunities available to them."

To receive a copy of the guide, call Jim Thomas at SEMCOG, 961-4266.

St. John Hospital resident physicians and nurses from the hospital's affiliates, St. Clair Home Health Care and Professional Services, administer blood pressure readings the second Wednesday of the month from 10 a.m. to noon at the Harper Woods Community Center, 19748 Harper Ave. in Harper Woods.

Presbyterian Church, 19950 Mack Ave. The next meeting will be Jan. 10. For more information, call Elmer Stanke at 268-1044.

Grosse Pointe A Unique Community

A Cultural Cornucopia Appreciation of the arts begins at an early age for Grosse Pointe children. The public library, a division of the Grosse Pointe Public School System, offers, at no cost, a variety of children's reading programs at its three locations.

For adults, the library programs range from travel films to informative presentations on subjects of current interest. These, too, are free to residents of all the Grosse Pointes.

Another great source of local culture is the beautiful War Memorial Center, the former mansion of the Russell A. Alger family. With its subsequently added ballroom and theater overlooking Lake St. Clair, the center is a community attraction that rivals the many private clubs in the area. Here—open to all residents—are offered art classes and exhibits, lectures, concerts, plays, ballet and social dancing instruction, and children's theater, as well as membership in a long list of special-interest clubs whose focus is either cultural, informative or just plain fun.

A more recent addition to public property is the Edsel and Eleanor Ford House. Designed by architect Albert Kahn and supported by a $15 million endowment, this gracious replica of an English manor house is now open for tours and is used for meetings, fund-raising events and several series of "house" concerts.

Put Number 1 to work for you.®

Fulton Awards

It's that time of year again to open the envelopes and announce the winners of the Fulton Awards: a complete list of sports subjects I deem necessary to highlight:

Coach of the Year:

This award goes to an accomplished coach who has given his all to a program for 10 years.

Nominees are: South cross country coach Steve Zaranek; ULS tennis coach Bob Wood; and North's girls' hoop coach Gary Bennett.

It was difficult, but Steve Zaranek gets the nod. Zaranek led his team to its second consecutive regional title and its 10th Eastern Michigan League title. He also coached the girls to the state meet for the ninth time in 10 years.

Loudest coach:

This award has drawn a lot of attention since it was first introduced last year. Many of the coaches believe they should be this year's recipient, but it will go to a coach who takes one deep breathe, never exhales until he's done talking, yet looks over his shoulder to see who may have heard him and then chuckles with nobody seeing him.

Nominees are: South ice hockey coach Tim Zimmerman, North cross country coach Charles Buhagiar, and ULS football coach Bob Newvine.

Since Zimmerman is in closed confines of a rink, it's not too difficult to be heard. Buhagiar is always cheering for his girls while they run the hills, but Newvine is so boisterous, he makes megaphones obsolete and forces his players to quell the shouting by responding, "What?"

Newvine collects the honor.

Play of the year:

Many plays deserve the credit of this award, but I believe South's Jim West should come on down to pick this one up.

West returned a kickoff 88 yards to start the football game against Roseville. He slashed his way to that run that clipped all returns in South history and he now owns the longest return for a Blue Devil. South went on to win, 28-0.

Role model:

This award is dedicated to a coach who best exemplifies the typical all-around coach. The do-all guy who doesn't mind carrying some extra luggage to a huddle.

North football coach Frank Sumner, who steered his team to a 5-4 record, earns this award after winning back his full-time coaching hat. In the second game of the season, Sumner was so short-handed that he had to take the water bottles to the huddle during a timeout. The following week, his children delivered the water.

Beating the odds:

This award goes to an athlete who did what few others are capable of doing.

Nominees are: South's track high-jumper Pat Bruce; ULS' football star Dike Ajiri; and Melissa Champine who plays hoops at North.

Although Pat Bruce won the regional track meet with a jump of 6-feet, 7-inches, and Ajiri recorded more than 110 tackles in football, Champine gets the plaque for nailing a 3-point hoop from just inside the half court line in a game at Regina.

With time running out in the first half, Champine launched a shot that landed directly in the twine of the net. A shooter's touch she has. North lost the game, but Champine gets the award for beating the odds.

Looking at a Grand Prix: Adelaide vs. Detroit

Grosse Pointe resident Doris A. Goleniak recently visited Australia for a Formula One Grand Prix and writes to tell about her experiences in the Land Down Under. In this piece, Goleniak compares Detroit's Grand Prix to that of Australia's.

By Doris A. Goleniak
Special Writer

On the exotic Indonesian isle of Bali, not too far north of Australia, thousands of religious statues are perpetually draped in black and white checkered cloth. I'm not sure what it symbolizes, but I sure know what the checkered flag means in auto racing. The south Australian city of Adelaide certainly deserves to wrap itself in "chequered" flags, because it recently proved itself a real winner in staging its fourth Formula One Grand Prix.

"Adelaide Alive" was the theme and the city more than fulfilled the slogan. Over 300,000 people attended the four-day racing program, and thousands more attended concerts, fireworks, and other special events, not to mention the spontaneous street parties.

Approximately 48,000 interstate and foreign visitors were expected to crowd into the city, which has a population around 1 million. It was estimated the Grand Prix generated $60 million into the economy. The Australian dollar compares at 85 cents to the U.S. dollar. Hotel rooms were reserved a year in advance, and the Grand Prix Office had an elaborate arrangement with private homeowners for housing thousands of guests for the weekend.

The race track surrounds Rymill Park, a large city recreation area a few blocks from downtown, an easily walkable distance from many hotels.

Part of the park, Victoria Park Racecourse, is used for horse racing most of the year. The pits, with their temporary garages, control tower, and team paddock areas, plus huge temporary grandstands, are located here. The horses race on a wide, grassy oval track. There are two places where the auto track intersects. When the horses run the rest of the year, these paved portions are buried under dirt and grass. During the Grand Prix, the grassy parts of the horse track are protected by huge green mats wherever they are crossed by pedestrians.

The city streets bordering Rymill Park make up most of the auto track. They are amazingly wide, and according to the drivers, much smoother than the Detroit track they used last June. There are many places to pass safely, and much more room to maneuver if the driver makes a slight mistake, unlike Detroit, where he would end up against a concrete block. Emerging star Ivan Capelli, who sustained a broken bone in his foot in a Detroit crash, described the Adelaide track as "50 percent street track, 50 percent other."

Adelaide's track is considerably faster than its Detroit counterpart, with a top average speed for the race at 102 mph, compared to Detroit's 85 mph. The fastest pole position time ever set at Detroit was 91.5 mph; at Adelaide it was 109.4 mph. The Aussie track is 2.347 miles in length, slightly shorter than the 2.5 mile Detroit circuit. But at Adelaide, the full race distance is 192.454 miles, which takes almost the full two-hour limit for a Grand Prix race. In Detroit, the race distance was only 157.5 miles, the shortest of the 16 Formula One races, and it was completed in 1 hour 50 minutes in 1987, the fastest of the seven Detroit races. Only Monaco, which has a two-mile long track, is slower than the Detroit circuit, but not by much.

The park grounds in Adelaide are lovely, and have excellent facilities to serve the masses. The ample, clean rest rooms were in either permanent buildings or large trailer units, although an isolated "Rent-A-Loo" could be spotted here and there. Food was plentiful and relatively cheap. Hot dogs appeared to be the most popular food item, with $1.80 a typical price. An "Aussie whopper dog" with BBQ sauce cost $2 and a "Down Under Dog" with beans $2.80. At another stand, a dog "with the lot" was a hefty $3.50; but hamburgers $2. Meat or vegetable-filled pies were also popular, with prices slightly over a dollar. There were numerous Aussie versions of ethnic delicacies, such as "dim sum," "gyros," "chikos" (dough filled with chicken and veggies), "snags" (whatever they are!), Lebanese falafil, shaslik, kafta rolls, curry, tacos, Oriental spring rolls and Greek dishes. There was a large area behind the main grandstand that even had cappuccino and strawberries and cream available.

Souvenirs were on the expensive side, however, with T-shirts running $20 and sweatshirts $40-50. By comparison, this year's official Detroit Grand Prix T-shirt cost only $12. Some shirts in Adelaide sported prices as high as $65, such as one that contained the names of the 18 F1 teams. But after the race Sunday, many prices came down at nearby shops. I was able to pick up a sweat shirt for half price, and the store took charge cards. The official souvenir stands at the track also took charge cards, which made them quite tempting.

Race tickets were also hefty in price. The coveted chicane grandstand set one back $300. Seats in the huge grandstand across from the pits ran $215 (compared to a top price of $120 for Detroit). A four-day general admission pass was $65; Sunday-only tickets were $30.

Park capacity is considered to be about 125,000, which allows for huge numbers of general admission tickets. There were excellent spots for viewing race action with such a ticket, unlike many circuits. Last year, there were 125,000 for the race Sunday. This year, attendance dropped to 108,000 (but still over 300,000 for the four-day weekend). Nevertheless, Adelaide had nearly twice as many people on race day as did Detroit, which relies on a Friday "Free Prix" day to inflate attendance for the three-day weekend to the 200,000 range. Also unlike Detroit, the Aussie organizers were remarkably open in revealing attendance figures, ticket sales, and financial budgets.

On the track, besides F1 activity, there were several support races, a celebrity race, and even a drag race on the long Brabham straight. In between practice and racing, there was entertainment in the sky, with military aircraft on display, precision flying, sky divers, aerobatics and parachutists.

Phillipe Alliot cruises the course in the Formula One Grand Prix in Australia.

In the evening, the general public could ride around the track by bicycle during the Friday "Ride for Life" benefit for a local children's hospital. Saturday evening, there was a 5K "Fun Run" on the track.

The park grounds also contained an amusement area, a large eating and drinking space with race action projected on a giant screen, and a "Guinness Challenge" area, where silly contests were held for record-breaking feats. These included gum boot, tea bag, rolling pin throwing, potato peeling and can stacking.

Inside the Expo trade show structure, there was a replica of the Adelaide track set up for radio-controlled slot cars. There was even a competition some of the F1 drivers entered.

Several betting windows were available because Adelaide allows legalized gambling; its old, historic train station was recently turned into a world-class casino. One could place a 50 cent bet on the outcome of the race (minimum wager - $1), or the fastest lap, pole position, or who led after 20 or 40 laps. Odds on the race results were posted Sunday morning, well before windows closed. There was even a trifecta and quinella. Saturday's winning pole position paid 80 cents on a 50-cent bet; correctly predicting the winner Sunday paid $1.70, not a bad payoff. Surprisingly, the total amount wagered was only $70,000; down $50,000 from the previous year.

of Ages" concert (Tickets $20) at the Adelaide Convention Center also featured classic rock and roll. Finally, Grand Prix ticket holders could stay for an "End of Race" concert late Sunday afternoon, featuring "Noiseworks," a well-known band from Sydney.

But the best entertainment was in the streets. It seemed every store and restaurant was "alive" with race fever. With the race in mid-November, shops had Christmas decorations interspersed with their Grand Prix regalia - an odd mixture, indeed. Every evening, huge throngs congregated on Rundle and Hindley Streets. Just past the main downtown shopping district on Rundle Street is a neighborhood similar to Detroit's Greektown, but with an Italian flavor. This "East End" area borders the track. Gift shops and boutiques, all selling Grand Prix items, are mixed with Italian restaurants and cafes.

The old, defunct East End Market was turned into a "Nations Festival" featuring food from the 16 Grand Prix countries and live entertainment, but it cost $5 to get in, and the food was extra.

Hindley Street, in the heart of downtown, was closed to traffic each night for a giant street party called "Rhythm Alive" with live bands. This street used to be lined with ethnic restaurants, but lately fast food restaurants and garish discos are taking over. It's still a fun spot, however, and a few of the old favorites remain.

Despite the disruptions of closed streets the people of Adelaide appear to have little opposition to the race. A recent survey shows 86 percent of the population supported the Grand Prix. The Grand Prix Office works closely with city officials, and they have a full-time community relations officer to deal with neighborhood problems.

The race organizers initially received $6 million in government grants, but they currently receive no federal or state funding. After operating with a deficit the first two years, they broke even in 1987, and expected to do as well or better this year. To raise funds, they are involved in several year-round business endeavors. For example, they set up a clothing company that makes team uniforms and provides official T-shirts for the Grand Prix.

They have a regular staff of 13, which expands to around 30 at race time. Most of the temporary workers are paid; they have few volunteers, unlike the Detroit operation, which relies on the 2,500 Detroit Grand Prix Association volunteers.

According to Mike Drewer, the Publicity Manager, since Australia is heavily unionized, there would be much opposition from labor if the jobs were unpaid. So they hire about 3,000 workers for the weekend. A security officer, for example is paid $12-15 per hour. However, many of the functions are contracted out, such as ushers, catering, and trash removal.

The Grand Prix Office was set up by an Act of Parliament, but they operate as an entity. The legislation provided for a race through 1991. The GP Office is currently negotiating with Formula One officials from the Constructors Association and the International Automobile Federation (FIA), headquartered in Paris, to extend the contract another 10 years. Several newspaper articles expressed concern that the Grand Prix people were acting illegally and that a bill to authorize the extension was being forced through Parliament without ample time for debate.

There was also grumbling over the use of more parkland when it was rumored the track might have to be lengthened. But since the park is on state land, it appears there is not much the minority opposition can do.

It appears the local, state, and federal governments are firmly behind Adelaide's efforts. In fact, Prime Minister Hawke was on the podium after the race Sunday, where he was drenched in champagne by third-place finisher Nelson Piquet of Brazil. He didn't seem to mind at all.

Mr. Drewer also told me that it takes about six weeks to set up the grandstands, garages, fences, and other structures needed for the race. Most streets don't close until Wednesday of race week, and reopen by Monday.

If Adelaide can do it, why can't Detroit? With the shocking news of Detroit's inability to retain its Formula One race still fresh, I had the opportunity to talk to several F1 people about it. The general consensus is that the Formula One community is sad to see the Detroit race dropped, although it feels the track had to be improved.

French driver Philippe Alliot, who drives for the Larrousse-Camels team that will use a Chrysler-backed Lamborghini engine next year, expressed sincere regrets they would not be coming to Detroit, especially since it is the center of the motor industry. Eddie Cheever, the only American driver, stated "It's a great loss - Detroit put on a good show - the public was great. I will bitterly miss not racing in Detroit."

British team owner Ken Tyrrell remarked "If Detroit can't come up with the money, it's a bad scene for Detroit." He expressed surprise that Detroit would be "going second class and down-market" to an Indy-type car race, and then added "I will miss coming to Detroit. I enjoyed the race very much."

The official FIA position, according to a press release issued at the Media Center, stated that Detroit's application was withdrawn because it could not meet safety standards with the downtown track. However, it is widely believed the race was dropped because Detroit could not provide garage facilities at the pit area.

Although FIA would make no concessions to Detroit, a very unusual request, albeit minor, was granted to the Australian organizers. Formula One practice always starts Friday morning and runs 10-11:30. The time is standard at all races and is strictly enforced. It seems the Australians have a custom of commemorating Veterans Day (called Remembrance Day) at 11 a.m. on November 11. Thus, practice was stopped for a few minutes and a brief ceremony was played over the public address system. This was a most rare occurrence for a Grand Prix weekend.

The rest of practice and qualifying produced no real surprises, with the McLaren-Honda cars on top again. Fortunately, there were no serious incidents, just several spins and minor crashes. The weather was hot (getting into the 90's) and dry, and both the track and park walkways started getting dusty. On Sunday, rain was predicted, but it held off with just a few sprinkles toward the end of the race.

This 1988 Australian Grand Prix was significant in many respects. It was the last race of the turbo-engine era. Next year, turbos are banned, and all cars will have less powerful normally-aspirated engines. Many records were set or tied at Adelaide. Thirty-four year old Riccardo Patrese of Italy tied the record for the most Grand Prix starts (176) and Alain Prost of France went over 100 points for the season and extended his career point tally to over 500. Team McLaren won 15 out of 16 races and poles this year and scored a record-breaking number of points. Prost also tied the record for the fastest laps (28). The world championship was also won with a record number of points. It also should be remembered that the Grand Prix was one of the primary events for Australia's Bicentennial.

So how did it all turn out? Remember Ayrton Senna of Brazil, three time Detroit Grand Prix winner, who clinched the 1988 World Championship in Japan October 30? Senna had already won a record breaking eight races this year, and he was the favorite again. Ironically, after the Japanese Grand Prix, Senna went to Bali, land of the checkered-flag gods. But they didn't protect him. He injured his wrist playing soccer! He still managed to get the pole position, for a record-breaking 13th time this season. But he made a bad start in the race, and McLaren teammate Alain Prost took the lead.

Prost was soon passed by Gerhard Berger's Ferrari, but he wasn't worried, because he expected the Ferrari to run out of gas. Berger crashed instead. So Prost won for a record 35th time, and his second win at Adelaide.

But he lost the championship, even though he outscored his teammate this year. Only the eleventh best finishes can be counted for the championship. Maybe the gods favored Senna after all.

Boaters welcome to join class

Anyone interested in becoming more familiar with Loran boating equipment is invited to attend a four-week class at Barnes beginning in February.

Picking the winners

During the football season the football coaches from North, South and University Liggett School, filled this space with their weekly predictions on college and professional football games.

Before the college bowl games were on the slate, Bob Newvine of ULS was crowned the regular-season champ with a record of 80-36-3. North's Frank Sumbera was second (79-37-3) and Jon Rice of South finished third (76-40-3).

Then came the bowl season. After the first five bowls, Newvine controlled a 4-1 record, while Sumbera and Rice stepped in at 3-2 and 2-3, respectively.

Ten bowl games were selected last week and a reversal of sorts took place.

Sumbera, who hasn't led since week No. 2, went 7-3 to finish 10-5 and in first place. Rice upped his record to a second-place 9-6 in the final week, and Newvine fell from the top spot by going 4-6, finishing 8-7. It was the first time since the third week Newvine had fallen from his perch.

A special thanks to the coaches for their continued prognosticating.

The Detroit Skating Club of Bloomfield Hills is hosting the United States Figure Skating Association (USFSA) Midwest Regionals now through Jan. 7.

Skates will be competing in figures, freestyle, dance and pairs. Winners will advance to the Nationals, and possibly on to the World competition. In Olympic years, USFSA competitions qualify U.S. skaters for the Olympics.

During the regionals, more than 300 world-class and potential world-class skaters, ages 4 and up, will be competing.

Cost is $20 for all four days, or $5 per day.

Kristin Buckler of Grosse Pointe Woods, will be competing for her hometown. In 1988, the 13-year-old Buckler has taken the top prize in the Lansing Invitational, the Wyandotte Invitational and the Garden City Invitational. She also finished fourth in the EGLR competition.

The Detroit Skating Club is located on 888 Denison Court, north of Square Lake Road.

For more information about this four-day event, call 540-5627.

Jimmy Carson gives $1,000 to GPHA fund

Jimmy Carson, the Grosse Pointe native now starring for the Edmonton Oilers of the National Hockey League, has not forgotten where he got his start.

Carson, who was traded to Edmonton when Wayne Gretzky moved to the Los Angeles Kings, received the 1987-88 Dodge Ram Tough Ranking Award of $1,000 after leading the L.A. Kings in a combined total of power plays, short-handed, game-winning and game-tying goals.

Each award winner designates the youth hockey association of his choice to receive the $1,000 donation. Carson, who played in the Grosse Pointe Hockey Association (GPHA), selected the GPHA to be the recipient.

The high-flying center compiled 31 Ram Tough points to pace the Kings. He finished fourth behind Joe Nieuwendyk, Mario Lemieux and Michel Goulet.

Carson finished second in team scoring a year ago, behind Luc Robitaille and became the first American-born player to score 50 goals in a season. Of his 55 goals last season, 22 were power-play, seven were game-winning, and two were game-tying.

The Dodge and Chrysler Canada divisions of Chrysler Motors sponsor the Performer of the Week, Month and Year and Dodge Ram Tough Award programs, and have contributed more than $120,000 to youth hockey associations across North America on behalf of the award recipients.

The Grosse Pointe Hockey Association, which graciously accepted Carson's donations, will put the $1,000 to great use by forming a revolving scholarship fund.

The scholarship fund, according to GPHA president John McSorley, will be directed for use by players who need financial assistance to continue in the GPHA program.

Preventative medicine for the winter weekend warrior

A few years ago, I chanced to be cornered at a party by a young lady who had recently been started on some high blood pressure medications by her physician. For a variety of reasons, she was somewhat distraught about having to be on the medicine and proceeded to give me a 10-15 minute lecture on how remiss physicians were that they did not practice "preventative medicine," but rather the treatment of medical problems after they had already occurred.

She spoke over this period of time in such a way that I gained the impression that she felt "preventative medicine" was some type of pill or prescription that could miraculously prevent one from experiencing disease or impairment of any type.

Our discussion brought me to ponder the meaning of "preventative medicine."

Certainly just because one receives a pill of some sort does not exclude that treatment from the realm of "preventative medicine." High blood pressure pills, insulin injections for diabetes, cardiac medications and, in fact, even surgeries of some type are all designed to prevent additional diseases or illnesses from occurring.

It was obvious, however, that this young lady was not referring to this type of "preventative medicine," but what we might call "natural means of preventing disease.

I chuckled when our talk ended as it dawned on me that this one-sided conversation had taken place with one who perhaps epitomized a stellar example of how not to practice "preventative medicine."

What is preventative medicine?

First of all, this young lady was approximately 50 pounds overweight, and she smoked two cigarettes in the course of our conversation. I'm sure she'd downed 1,500 calories in what might be considered the most unhealthy type of junk foods (potato chips, candies and chocolates). It was clear that she considered "preventative medicine" to be something other than proper nutrition, proper exercise and perhaps most of all, avoidance of smoking.

Sadly, it's unlikely that 20-30 years from now, if her present lifestyle is maintained, that a simple high blood pressure pill will be all that is needed to prevent any further illness or complications of diseases that have progressed to the point where they cannot be prevented.

What does all of this have to do with the winter weekend warrior (WWW)? The point is, once again, that the solution is not easy if one does not practice basic principles of fitness.

Prevention of injuries to the muscles or bones requires a fitness level which includes proper weight, proper flexibility, proper cardiovascular capacity and endurance. One should also have a basic knowledge of equipment and physical demands of the activity in which he/she is participating in.

Preparation for the slopes

Skiing is probably the prime winter sport in our area of the country. Basically speaking, two to three months a year is the extent of the season. Often times, for most of us, muscles are used which don't come to play in the same degree in other sports throughout most of the remainder of the year.

Most of these muscles involve the lower extremity (legs) and in preparing for the winter ski season, specific attention should be given to the strength and flexibility of those muscles. Perhaps most important in the strength category, are the quadriceps muscles. Although, anterior (front side) thigh muscles are the ones that take most of the stress throughout the day and seem to tire the quickest.

Exercise programs to strengthen these muscles, such as knee extension exercises with varying degree of weights, are beneficial in preparing the skier for those long days on the slopes.

Another exercise for these muscles is "chairless sitter" — sitting with your back up against a wall and your hips and knees flexed at 90 degrees, as if there were a chair present. This can put quite a stress on the quadriceps (front of the thigh) muscles over a period of 10 to 15 minutes. Attention to the quadriceps muscles is necessary "preventative medicine" for the skier.

Also important are flexibility of the quadriceps, hamstrings and other lower extremity muscles. Slow, prolonged stretching of the hamstring muscles, as well as the quadriceps muscles, is important in preventing strains and sprains.

An excellent way to increase your endurance to combat the fatigue that sets in after hours of skiing, is to participate in a three or four day a week stationary bike program.

Know when to stop

Most important, with regard to skiing in the prevention category, would be the avoidance of the temptation to "get my money's worth."

It's commonly known that the majority of the ski injuries occur in the latter half of the skiing session. The fatigue factor becomes very significant. You should know your limits and make sure that plenty of rest periods are spread throughout the day.

If you begin feeling excessively fatigued, resist the temptation to get in the last run.

Another "preventative medicine" might also be called preventative maintenance.

Proper prevention of disease and injury requires a daily discipline in the nutrition area, exercise and moderation, or avoidance of certain temptations which our culture has placed in our way.

The WWW who is relatively fit can, with the judicious use of stretching and strengthening, and most importantly with a little common sense on the slopes, hopefully not spoil a ski vacation with a trip to the doctor.

Smart

Just a few days ago, many of us sat down and made a list of 1989 resolutions. Some of these may be new for our particular lives, and some may be resolutions that we've had written down for the past 'umpteens years' and still haven't accomplished. But, we are forever optimistic, and yes, maybe this year will be the year we finally see success.

One of the perennial favorites is to lose weight.

But, before you start your diet, it makes sense to review some basic knowledge about foods, and also to evaluate our basic understanding of individual bodies and how they work.

The 80s have marked a period in history where we have been inundated by thousands of articles, talk shows, TV and radio shows geared to subjects of weight gain, nutrition, exercise, etc. But, we often end up more confused and disenchanted in direct relationship to such a mountain of information.

Six nutrients

The human body requires six nutrients to sustain and nurture life. They are carbohydrates, fats, proteins, vitamins, minerals and water. If we eat foods that provide these nutrients we will not just survive, but we will flourish.

Each of these nutrients has its own special function and relationship to the health of our bodies, but there is not one nutrient that can function on its own. They are team members for our good health, and depend on each other for a winning combination.

Water

This nutrient is listed as No. 1 because it is the most important. The body can survive without food for days, and for some, weeks. Without water, however, we would soon perish. And contrary to belief, you should not substitute coffee, tea, soft drinks, etc. for good, plain water.

Although these drinks are made with water, your body has to work extra hard to break down the chemistry of these drinks to get to the water it really needs. And some drinks can contain chemicals that may be harmful to your system when used in excess.

So, what does water do for you? It aids digestion, absorbs waste products, transports the other nutrients throughout the body, helps the liver metabolize fat, maintains proper muscle tone, prevents dehydration, feeds the skin and supports the skin tissue during weight loss.

The average adult needs approximately eight 8 oz. glasses of water a day. When you're losing weight, you may require even more. If you have any questions, check with your physician.

Vitamins/minerals

Vitamins are organic food substances found in living things, plants and animals. Minerals are nutrients that are found in the body and in food and can be from organic or inorganic combinations. If we eat healthy, natural foods we can't avoid taking in vitamins and minerals.

What do they do? Vitamins are essential to most of the metabolic functions. They help convert fat and carbohydrates into energy, and they assist the formation of strong bones and tissue. Minerals are found in all tissues and internal fluids of living things. They are necessary components of our bones, teeth, tissues, muscles, blood and nerve cells. And they help to maintain each of these to maximum efficiency.

Carbohydrates

This group of nutrients is the main source of energy for all our bodily functions. Nutrients are also necessary for the digestion and assimilation of other foods.

The easiest way to remember this group of foods is that they all originally grew from plant life. This includes all fruits, vegetables, grains, nuts and legumes. Their principle makeup contains sugars, starches and cellulose, or the fiber of the food.

When you see or hear the term "complex carbohydrates," it refers to the foods listed above that are in their most natural state. Once a carbohydrate becomes over-processed, the delicate balance of their original composition has been altered and are then considered empty carbohydrates; they are too quickly absorbed in the body, and much of their nutritional value is disturbed. Diets high in these refined carbohydrates are often low in vitamins and minerals, and definitely have lost much of their fiber content.

The best choices of carbohydrates are those most closely related to their natural state, and should make up the majority of our food selections in our daily eating program.

Proteins

Foods that contain all of the essential amino acids that the body can't manufacture on its own are considered complete proteins. The body requires approximately 22 amino acids to make human protein. All but eight of these acids can be produced in the adult body.

Complete proteins would be red meats, chicken, turkey, pork, fish, eggs and dairy products. If we choose small amounts of these proteins and we are eating healthy choices in the complex carbohydrates, we will not have to worry if we are getting enough protein.

Fats

Fats or lipids are the most concentrated form of energy in the human diet.

One gram of fat will yield approximately nine calories to the body, whereas proteins and carbohydrates yield four calories per gram. Saturated fatty acids are those that are usually hard at room temperature and except for coconut and palm oils, come from animal sources.

Unsaturated fatty acids, including the polyunsaturated fats, are usually liquid at room temperature and come from vegetable, nut or seed sources. When a fatty acid undergoes hydrogenation, such as margarines and shortenings, they become more saturated and are not as easily broken down in the system. Other sources that provide fats are eggs, milk products and cheese.

In addition to providing energy for the body, fats are the carriers of fat-soluble vitamins such as vitamin K, D and E. We need fat deposits to surround and protect such organs as the kidneys, heart and liver. Fat also acts as an insulator, helping our bodies regulate temperature changes. These deposits also surround and support the skeletal and muscle system.

When excessive amounts of fat are consumed in the diet, these fat deposits no longer act as just a support system, but indeed actually impede the efficient functioning of all our body processes.

Because fats are a concentrated form of nourishment, we again need very little in our diets to remain healthy.

It is recommended that approximately 50-60 percent of our daily caloric intake come from complex carbohydrates, 20-25 percent from proteins, and 15-20 percent from fats, preferably polyunsaturated.

So now you are ready for your diet. If you have already started, it may be a good time to evaluate how your particular choice of program meets your daily nutritional needs. And while you're at it, don't forget to drink those waters!

Family fitness can be more than just another gathering

As an American living in a modern society, you probably have to make sacrifices in order to keep up the fast pace.

"Time-budgets" get tight and no doubt you frequently need to give up some of the things you enjoy the most, such as favorite activities, recreational time, regular exercise and family time. That's why developing a "family fitness plan" is so important.

With it, you can help make the most of your free time while strengthening your own fitness level and your bond with your family members.

A commitment to physical fitness is one of the most important aspects of a wholesome family life. Regular exercise promotes physical and psychological health, and healthy families are the framework of our society. Within this framework come the values our youth carry into adulthood. Leading a healthy, vigorous lifestyle is one value we, as a nation, cannot afford to ignore.

Each generation can benefit from regular exercise. Youths develop healthy habits that will help them avoid chronic illness as adults. Some studies show that exercise helps boys and girls do better in school. Exercise can reduce stress and calm nerves, helping both child and parent deal with family tension. And, physically fit grandparents are more likely to have the energy and strength to keep up with the younger "generation."

The fitness formula is basically the same for all family members — follow a well-designed program at least three times each week, incorporating exercises for strength, endurance and flexibility. Older family members should always check with a physician before starting an exercise program.

Keeping a family commitment to exercise requires some creativity and an understanding of the differing needs of each family member. Some families may find motivation in exercising together, choosing an activity that mom, dad, and the kids all enjoy. Other families may find it more effective when each member chooses their own exercise and then shares their progress and experiences.

Here are a few tips to help your family develop and stay with a fitness plan:

- Choose group or individual activities that are enjoyable. Studies show that people who have fun while they exercise are more likely to maintain their commitment and get results.

- Involve each member in planning the family program. Kids are more likely to get excited about exercising if they've had a say in selecting the activity.

- Choose an activity you can turn into an adventure. Biking, walking and hiking are ideal because you can discover new places with your family. Warm-up as a group and then allow each member to pace themselves for awhile. Establish meeting points along your route before you leave and then meet up with each other on the trail.

- Vary your exercise activity. Family members often have different weather preferences. Take advantage of the climate change and alter your fitness program so everyone can enjoy their favorite season with a new activity.

- Include other families in your activity. Plan a weekend bike ride or run/walk with your neighboring families.

- Monitor your family's progress. Keep track of each member's fitness achievements as you would your child's height and weight through the years. Fill in kitchen calendars with the week's activity plans and mark off each day a workout is completed.

Receiving encouragement from people who mean something to you makes exercise rewarding. Staying with a family fitness plan will add health, excitement and fun to your life.
