

Mack business owners want more than fireworks

By John Minnis
Staff Writer

Business owners along Mack Avenue in the Grosse Pointes want to be known for more than just setting off fireworks once a year.

Adding to its annual Fourth of July extravaganza, the Grosse Pointe Business and Professional Association of Mack Avenue is planning a major cleanup of the business corner on May 6.

According to Village Locksmith owner Robert Mowbray, who is organizing the effort, all business association members will be participating in the cleanup, as well as local civic groups including the Boy and Girl Scouts.

Businesses will also be donating food and beverages for the cleanup workers.

Mowbray said the business association isn't asking for any of the residents to help, but he would appreciate it if residents would stop by during the cleanup just to say hello to the business owners and comment on the project.

The cleanup was announced at the association's cocktail and hors d'oeuvres party Feb. 21 at the Jefferson Colonnade in St. Clair Shores, which had a very good turnout of business owners and civic leaders.

Speakers during the program were Chris Matthew, assistant to the Grosse Pointe city manager; Richard Solak, Farms city clerk; Jeff Mueller, assistant to the Park city manager; and Angelo DiClemente, a member of the Woods Beautification Commission.

Matthew said the City planted 29 new trees along Mack and will continue its efforts to get its portion of Mack recognized. She said the City section of Mack is scheduled for paving, but not until at least next year.

She was upbeat about the future of the Mack corridor.

"We're getting new businesses. No stores are vacant. Things are going great. We love everything you (the businesses) are doing."

Solak said one of the Farms' main concerns along its portion of Mack is the Sears block at Moross. He said the city is applying "positive pressure" to get the owners and tenants of the Sears block to police the area for litter or else face being fined by the city.

He said the city is urging A.L. Price owner Perry Drugs, Inc. to make facade improvements to the rear of the store.

One business owner at the gathering asked whether rumors were true that the Sears block was sold or up for sale, but Solak could not confirm the rumor.

"We hope to more fully address the problems we see in the Sears block," he said.

Like the other Grosse Pointes, the Farms is planting new trees in the median along Mack and adding other landscaping improvements, such as a higher berm. Solak said part of the cost is being borne by Michigan Bell, since the telephone company is laying a larger cable along the median to service the Mack/Moross area.

Solak said the Farms is considering using Community Development Block Grants for a facade study of businesses along Mack.

"We'd like to soften the effect, the harshness, of the front of those businesses there," he said, "without obscuring the fronts."

He said the Farms is always looking for property to buy to make more parking available along Mack.

Mueller said the Park plans to repave and widen its portion of Mack this summer. The Park has ambitious plans for improving Mack and providing more parking.

He said the Elias Brothers' Big Boy plans a major expansion, which the Park is working to incorporate in its overall Mack improvements. By working with the Big Boy management, the Park can provide more parking and landscaping in the area.

He said the Cadieux intersection will be realigned during the Mack paving.

DiClemente told the business owners how the Woods Beautification Commission worked and how it incorporated businesses into its plans. DiClemente is not a Woods resident, but he was appointed to the commission as a business owner on Mack. He and his wife, Antoinette, own The Dried Flower Shop.

He said the Woods awards businesses yearly for improvements they've made.

The Woods is currently working on a plan to add landscaping along five blocks of Mack Avenue. The improvements include trees and landscaping along the sidewalks on the west side of Mack, as well as additional trees and shrubbery in the medians. The Woods is using block grant funds to make the improvements.

The members of the business association also promised to work more closely together to improve the lot of all businesses along Mack.

Lesson one: Don't cross nurses, moms

I learned a valuable lesson in the past few weeks: Don't underestimate nurses and Grosse Pointe mothers.

Let's begin with nurses. In the Feb. 16 issue of the Grosse Pointe News, I wrote a story about two St. John Hospital doctors and two nurses who helped to save the life of a Detroit woman who suffered a heart attack while walking across Moross near the hospital Feb. 8.

I was first tipped off to the story by a St. John employee who called to suggest a doctor he worked with would be an excellent candidate for our "Pointer of Interest" column.

"He's something else," the caller said of doctor. "Take for example what he did this morning. He was driving and saw a woman collapsed in the street from a heart attack. He stopped his car right there and helped."

Well, we at the Grosse Pointe News thought that the mere fact that doctor happened across a woman in the street who suffered a heart attack and then offered assistance in Good Samaritan style was worth a story in itself.

I later learned that a second doctor was at the scene before the doctor I called first. So I called the second doctor and learned two nurses were there before him.

Well, I still thought it was a good story — no matter how many Samaritans stopped.

The only problem I had in writing the story is that nobody knew who the two nurses were. The police report didn't list any names at all. The ambulance report didn't list the nurses' names. The doctors just said "two nurses" were there.

Well, the Feb. 16 issue couldn't have been out for half a day when the first of many irate nurses called. The nurses who called, and some who wrote, insinuated that I had deliberately withheld the names of the nurses from the story because they were "just nurses."

That is absolutely not true. I have nothing against nurses. In fact, I have a great respect for what they do. I have a lot of admiration for anyone who does a job I personally do not think I could do, even if I were trained to do it. Likewise, I have a lot of respect for doctors and teachers.

I Say

The thing is, I don't have a malicious bone in my body for nurses, despite what some might think.

I am still trying to find out the identity of the mysterious "two nurses." I've even sought the help of the St. John public relations staff in finding out who they were. I am told that they've even put notices up at the St. John time clocks asking the nurses to come forward.

As I write this column, the identities of the nurses have not yet been determined. When I learn who the nurses are, I will give them the attention they deserve.

My only regret is that I didn't explain in the original story why the nurses' names weren't given. It would probably have saved a lot of phone calls from miffed nurses.

One last observation concerning the Good Samaritan story.

I was telling a friend about the reaction of the nurses to the story, and he asked, "What ever happened to the Christian attitude of not expecting praise for doing a good deed?"

Concerning mothers, I learned: Don't mess with the safety of Grosse Pointe children.

This lesson came in response to the January revelation that "a suspected sex offender" was living in our community and said to be lurking around Grosse Pointe schools.

I first learned of the alleged offender through a letter sent home to parents by the Grosse Pointe Public Schools System. I suspect, however, that the moms in Grosse Pointe were well aware of this guy long before I was.

The man I'm referring to, of course, is the Park resident who was arrested by Park police Feb. 13 and charged with giving alcohol and pornographic material to minors and exposing himself outside a Grosse Pointe middle school.

Before the man was even arrested, a Grosse Pointe mom called and me and gave me the suspect's name, occupation, address. In fact, the mom gave me more information than the police and court officials have yet been willing to give out. I wouldn't be surprised if Grosse Pointe moms know more about the suspect than the police do.

Furthermore, it appears Grosse Pointe mothers were following the man around, making sure he wasn't getting into any kind of trouble.

About a week before the suspect's arrest, an interesting report appeared in the Grosse Pointe Farms police records.

Apparently a Grosse Pointe mom was following the suspect around. He is a postman, and the mom was tailing him on his route. Well the man got aggravated by being followed and started following the mom.

The mother then drove quickly to the Farms police trailer on Kerby and ran inside. She told the officers inside that a man was following her, and she ran inside the bathroom so that he wouldn't see her when he came in.

Sure enough, the man in question came into the police trailer and said he wanted to file a complaint that he was being followed. After the man left, the mom came out of the bathroom and gave her side of the story.

The mothers in Grosse Pointe were afraid of what this suspect may do to their children, but I don't know what they were worried about. It sounds like they had the situation well under control. For all I know, they probably had a scheduled surveillance system in operation.

Here's a warning to anyone entering Grosse Pointe: Our mothers are standing watch.

Postscript: I would like to especially thank the woman who was driving from the Cadieux/Mack area and stopped and gave me a ride to a gas station after my car died on I-696 last Friday morning. It was a brave thing to do, especially nowadays, and you won an everlasting friend, especially after you told me I "looked OK."

Rick Teranes, manager of the Kickstand Bicycle Shop, 15302 Kercheval, Grosse Pointe Park, got a long distance call last week.

Really long. The Kickstand sells new and used bikes and bicycle accessories and does repairs.

The call was from Switzerland. Teranes said the caller had heard about some special handlebars used by triathletes.

"He called the company that makes these handlebars and the company gave him our name. They're not available in Switzerland.

"They're triangular," Teranes said. "The rider can rest his elbows on two sides of the triangle and grab onto the point of the triangle. They're aerodynamic."

The caller ordered some. Gave his Visa number. Said his cousin, who lives in the area, would pick them up. They cost $75.

The New York Times reported that Secretary of the Interior Walter J. Hickel, in an extraordinary letter of protest, complained to President Nixon that the administration was turning its back on the great mass of American youth and thereby contributing to anarchy and revolt. Hickel warned that further attacks by Vice President Agnew on the motives of young Americans would solidify their hostility beyond the reach of reason.

pushed into Cambodia at two new locations, widening operations there to six fronts and bringing to nearly 50,000 the number of allied troops committed to the Cambodian forays.

The House of Representatives, in a confused climax to an increasingly emotional debate on Cambodia, refused to either sanction President Nixon's intervention in Cambodia or to place restrictions on his authority to undertake military operations in Southeast Asia.

More than 80 colleges across the country closed their doors for periods ranging from a day to the rest of the academic year as thousands of students joined the growing nationwide campus protest against the war in southeast Asia. In California, Gov. Ronald Reagan, citing "emotional turmoil," closed down the entire state university and college system from midnight to the following Monday. More than 280,000 students at 19 colleges and nine university campuses were involved in that state.

The narrow streets of lower Manhattan were crowded with protesters as the tempo of student protest over the U.S. involvement in Cambodia and the shootings at Kent State University quickened in the metropolitan area, and the scope of demonstrations broadened, moving off the campus and into the streets.

President Nixon ordered a complete report on the fatal shootings of four students at

Bill would prohibit dropouts from getting driver's license

By William R. Bryant Jr.
State Representative

Legislation has been introduced in the House which would require mandatory school attendance for 16- to 18-year-olds who want to get and keep their driver's licenses.

The bill is in response to the state's steadily increasing dropout rate. According to the last available figures, from the 1985-86 school year, grades 9-12 have a dropout rate of 23 percent. In Detroit alone, 41 percent of the students leave school before graduating.

In response to these statistics, House Bill 4184 would prohibit people under the age of 18 from getting their licenses if they are not conforming with the attendance policies of their school, if they have been expelled or if they do not have a high school diploma. Exceptions include personal or family hardship or medical-related purposes.

The Secretary of State would be required to suspend the driver's licenses of 16- to 18-year-olds who have dropped out of school. The license could only be reinstated if they re-enrolled with the intent of earning a high school diploma.

This legislation, according to the sponsor, is a different approach in trying to stress the importance of staying in school to our young people. A driver's license is a privilege that must be earned and responsibly maintained — not a right. By withholding driving privileges from young people who choose not to complete their basic education, we emphasize that the right to certain privileges goes hand in hand with responsible preparation for one's future.

Its rewards are abstract: changed attitudes, new friendships, broken barriers, reforms, social responsibility, harmony, understanding. Much of the work is done by volunteers on standing committees and task forces.

One of Buffington's responsibilities is the coordination of two annual high school conferences, Youth Conference and Exchange Days, that are designed to improve race relations between city and suburban teenagers.

Last year, she said, nearly 300 students from 38 public, parochial and private schools in Wayne, Oakland and Macomb counties participated in two days of activities designed to help them understand each other.

"The purpose (of the conference) is to bring students together in activities designed to promote good will and positive interactions," Buffington said.

Improved relations between races isn't the only goal, she said. Ethnic differences are explored as well.

"This is not just for black and white students, but for Chaldean, Arabic, Asian-American, Jewish, black and white kids who often don't even get to meet each other."

On the first day of the two-day conference, students break into small groups and draw perceptions of each others' environment. "The drawings reflect stereotypes," she said.

Buffington sees progress, however. "Last year I noticed less stereotyping of city kids by suburban kids. Their drawings showed a less harsh depiction of the urban environment."

On the second day of the conference, the high school students exchange schools. Detroit kids visit suburban schools and suburban kids visit Detroit schools.

Four years ago, the first year of the Youth Conference and Exchange Day, Buffington said, Grosse Pointe had 10 high school students participating in the program.

"On the second day, when the Grosse Pointe kids were supposed to visit city schools, all the parents of those participating at one Grosse Pointe high school called and said their kids couldn't go to a Detroit school."

It's a shame, she said, because in three years of conferences, there has never been a single incident of any kind on exchange day.

"In order to change animosities and heal the separation between city and suburbs, we're going to have to interact more. Students need to spend time with kids who don't live in Grosse Pointe."

Buffington was born in Montana, grew up in California and graduated from California State University at Long Beach with a degree in speech and communications.

She taught special education at the high school level in California. She moved to Ann Arbor and taught special education at the elementary and middle school level in Jackson, Mich.

She earned a master's degree in school administration and supervision from the University of Michigan. From the mid-1970s until 1983, while in Ann Arbor, she also worked at the Desegregation Assistance Center. The center offered technical assistance to schools that were desegregating.

In 1983 and '84, Buffington switched to part-time public relations work, then served as executive director of the Grosse Pointe Inter-Faith Center (now called the Racial Justice Center of Grosse Pointe.)

She began working for New Detroit, Inc. in December 1988.

Besides the high school exchange days, she develops and implements other activities for New Detroit, Inc. that are designed to improve racial and cultural relations in the city and in the suburbs. One activity, called the Cultural Exchange, is planned for May 1989.

"The Asian community is doing a fashion show," she said. "They'll be modeling ancestral dress at a downtown theater."

Most of the cultural exchange activities are well-planned programs in informal, social settings, designed to build coalitions among diverse groups.

"Last fall we had a concert. The people who attend these events are not just the leaders.

Lots of neighborhood groups and grassroots organizations are represented.

"We hope for a ripple effect." New Detroit, Inc., she said, tries to be a catalyst for change. "We're not in the fray. We work through organizations and groups and we have a wide representation of groups from the metro Detroit area who work with us."

As for her view of race relations in Grosse Pointe, Buffington said, "If we continue to isolate ourselves, race relations will get worse and worse. We can't rely on just a few people. Everybody has to work on it."

She said she's seen some changes in the last few years, mostly with children and young people. "I've seen changes in essays children write and I've observed changes when I speak to students. Grosse Pointe kids are much more concerned now about improving race relations. They're always full of suggestions."

"There's also a few people out there who are willing to let their bias show."

As for her view of progress in race relations among adults, she said, "I think we're static in Grosse Pointe right now. Things are on an even keel. There's no great discussion about who lives here."

"Some adults are still concerned about living close to Detroit and are concerned about crime, which they perceive to be race-related. I can't negate people's realistic fears."

"Others in the same community have no problem."

She said she feels optimistic when working with organizations like New Detroit. "A good deal is going on to bring all cultural and ethnic groups together and to address common issues such as economics, housing and education."

Buffington's wish for Grosse Pointe during the next 10 years? "I hope that Grosse Pointe will become a more culturally integrated community. We have so much to offer. We could be a model for the nation."

Buffington said she wishes she had more time to read. She's working on Wolfe's "Bonfire of the Vanities" and is trying to get to "Parting the Waters: American in the King Years, 1954-63," "The Bright Shining Lie," and Barry Goldwater's autobiography this spring.

She's also an enthusiastic gardener. "I'm already inspecting my beds for the early crocus I planted last fall and mapping out where the annuals will go."

She and her husband are regular attendees at the Attic Theater and the Detroit Symphony Orchestra concerts. She's active in her church and in the Junior League of Detroit.

The fourth annual Youth Conference and Exchange Day sponsored by New Detroit, Inc. will be March 14 and 15. So far, she said, Grosse Pointe South has seven students participating.

When students finish the exchange day, she said: "Their attitudes are different. Maybe they're only modified. Maybe they'll need reinforcement. But — it's a start."

The cafeteria at Grosse Pointe South High School became the dining room in a medieval castle for the night.

Mike Heppner entertained as a jester, and played that part in a play later in the evening.

A Grande Olde Tyme

The lords and ladies, kings and queens and crusaders and wizards dined as only royalty dines, and were entertained by performers fit for a king.

It was all in fun as the Grosse Pointe South High choirs put on a Madrigal Dinner for parents and other Medieval history buffs Feb. 25. The dinner — of, what else, mutton, roast beast, and wassail — was prepared under the direction of parent Ann Matish. All proceeds raised go to the choir program.

Following the meal, the diners were entertained by ballets and singing. A play, "The Jester's Test," was performed.

A goode tyme was had by all, and some $5,000 was raised, too.

Our own Chuck Gaidica spreads 'Fame and Fortune'

By John Minnis
Staff Writer

Chuck and Diane treat all their guests like royalty.

This royal couple, however, don't make their home at Buckingham Palace. Rather, they're at home at the WDIV, Channel 4, studios downtown and are seen in the living rooms of some 2 million Michigan homes each Saturday night on the Michigan Lottery's game show "Fame and Fortune."

Chuck Gaidica, of Grosse Pointe Shores, and Diane Sarnecky, of St. Clair Shores, aired their fifth "Fame and Fortune" show last Saturday night, and already the success of the lottery game show has been phenomenal.

According to recent ratings, the show is being watched each Saturday night by nearly 40 percent of the viewing audience in the metro Detroit area. State-wide rating figures are due to be tabulated soon, but already the show's creators estimate they have reached their goal of being viewed in 2 million Michigan homes.

While the reasons for the show's success are many, much of the success has to go to Gaidica, who's outgoing personality and fun-loving nature endears him to the show's six contestants each week and the many viewers at home who watch their friends and neighbors actually win fame and fortune.

"These are ordinary people," Gaidica said last Friday afternoon before the taping of the Feb. 25 show. "We don't screen contestants." He said contestants for other game shows are screened, and often the game shows' producers are looking for people who are exceptionally clever or outrageous. Not so on "Fame and Fortune."

"It's strictly a game of chance," he said. "You don't have to know something to win. Everyone has an equal chance."

"Fame and Fortune" co-hosts Chuck Gaidica, of Grosse Pointe Shores, and Diane Sarnecky, of St. Clair Shores, say good-bye to the 2 million Michigan viewers at the end of last week's show.

To get on the show, all one has to do is purchase an instant lottery ticket and be lucky enough to scratch off three "TV" symbols. The ticket holder then mails the ticket to Lansing, and if his entry is drawn from a barrel of 250 tickets at the end of the show, he gets to appear on next week's show.

The minute a contestant's name is picked, he knows he is at least $500 richer. Once at the show, he can win as much as the $50,000 grand prize or a car, a dream vacation and other generous gifts that rival the prizes of any of the nationally syndicated game shows.

Even the "Fame and Fortune" set is first-class. Gaidica said it was designed in Hollywood by the best.

Les Roberts, the original producer and head writer of "The Hollywood Squares," helped create "Fame and Fortune." He is also known for such popular game shows as "The Joker's Wild" and "Tic Tac Dough."

Diet Pills Sweeping U.S.

Doctors Invent 'Lazy Way' to Lose Weight

U.S. Gov't. Approves Patent Claims for New Diet Pill

BEVERLY HILLS, CA (Special)—An amazing new weight loss pill called "fat-magnet" has recently been developed and perfected by two prominent doctors at a world famous hospital in Los Angeles that reportedly "guarantees" you steady fat loss and caloric reduction by simply taking their tested and proven new pill.

The U.S. government has just approved the doctors claims for a hard-to-get patent that confirms "there has never been anything like their fat-bonding pill process before." It is a totally new major scientific breakthrough and is revolutionizing the weight loss industry.

You Can "Eat Normally"

Best of all, "you can continue to eat your favorite foods and you don't have to change your normal eating habits. You can start losing fat and reduce calories from the very first day, until you achieve the ideal weight you desire without exercising."

Flushes Fat Out of Body

The new pill is appropriately called the "fat-magnet" pill because it breaks into thousands of particles, each acting like a tiny magnet, "attracting" and trapping many times its size in undigested fat particles. Then, all the trapped fat and calories are naturally "flushed" right out of your body because they cannot be absorbed.

Within 2 days you should notice a change in the color of your stool, caused by the fat particles being eliminated.

"Automatically" Lose Fat

According to one of the inventors, Dr. William Shell, heart specialist and associate professor of medicine at UCLA medical school, "the new fat-bonding process is a "lazy way" to lose weight because the pills alone "automatically" reduce calories by eliminating dietary fat. It is 100% safe and not a drug."

The fat-magnet pills are already sweeping the country with glowing reports of weight loss from formerly overweight people in all walks of life who are now slimmer, trimmer and more attractive again.

Now Available to the Public

If you are trying to lose 20, 50, 100 pounds or more, you can order your supply of these "no-risk" highly successful fat-magnet pills directly from the doctors' exclusive manufacturer only (includes optional calories-reduction plan for even better results). Send $20 for a 90 pill supply (+ $3 handling), or $35 for a 180 pill supply (+ $3 handling), to: Fat-Magnet, 9016 Wilshire Blvd., Dept. WX44, Beverly Hills, CA 90211. Gaidica was already well-known before his game show debut in Detroit as a weatherman in his regular position on WDIV's "WeatherWatch 4" team. He is liked for his friendly, relaxed style as a weather forecaster and has coined such terms as "ORF" (Outdoor Recreation Factor), a weather planning indicator for weekend activities, and his ever-popular "Cuddle Alert," when temperatures fall below normal.

He came to WDIV in August 1987 after five years as the primary weatherman for WJBK-TV, Channel 2, in Detroit. Since 1983, he has also been a weather forecaster and consultant for WNIC radio in Detroit, an extra duty he still performs.

Indeed, his youthfulness and enthusiasm are put to the test particularly on Fridays as he juggles his responsibilities with WDIV "WeatherWatch," WNIC, his public appearances, and taping the lottery show.

His typical Friday begins at about 9:30 a.m., when he first meets that week's contestants and does the filming for the introduction of "Fame and Fortune." At 12:30 p.m., he gets his suit and has makeup put on and his hair styled. He then meets with the contestants again. The meeting with the contestants is crucial. He chats with them, asks what they do back home and generally tries to relax them.

The contestants, however, are usually making their first appearance on television, and they never get very comfortable.

Before coming back to the studio, the contestants have been chauffeured around downtown Detroit and have been made comfortable at the plush Omni Hotel and given a first-class lunch at The Whitney.

The accommodations, lunch, chauffeur service — as well as the hosts' wardrobe and makeup and hair styling for Gaidica and Sarnecky and the contestants — are provided at no cost to the state or the contestants. The services are provided in exchange for being recognized in the credits at the end of the show.

It's the celebrity service to the contestants that helps make "Fame and Fortune" more than just a name for a game show. The contestants actually experience for a day what has made Robin Leach a household name.

After making small talk with the contestants once they're back at the studio, Gaidica then makes sure the set is ready and discusses technical details with the control room. At about 2 p.m., Gaidica and Sarnecky welcome the members of that week's audience, which is composed of the contestants' families and friends, as well as students on a field trip.

The rules of the game are explained to the audience. People are told when to applaud and so on. Gaidica, Sarnecky and the show's director orchestrate a pep rally to make sure the audience is in the proper mood and at a respectable noise level.

At 2:30, it's time to start taping.

With all the fanfare of a major event, "Chuck and Diane" are brought out and the contestants are introduced. Then the game begins.

Because of state regulations, the show is taped without stopping. In fact, a lottery official and the official auditor have seats right up front between two of the cameras to monitor the progress of the show. If something goes wrong, the show has to be taped all over again from the beginning.

Gaidica said the hardest part of his job is when something unusual happens, such as when no one gets the game-winning $1,000. In that case, the contestant who has the amount closest to $1,000 wins.

It is when the unexpected happens that Gaidica gets to use his weatherman's skills in ad-libbing. The weather forecaster is the one who expands or shrinks his presentation during a news program to make up for segments that ran short or long.

Likewise, Gaidica has to fill in the blanks or quicken the pace to get a "Fame and Fortune" show to fill the half-hour format - minus commercials and three and four digit and Lotto drawings. He has to think fast on his feet.

"It's my opinion that every (television) reporter should do weather at least once," he said of the spontaneity being a weatherman has taught him.

Concerning his opportunity to co-host "Fame and Fortune," he said, "As a broadcaster it gives one a chance to stretch and have fun."

Even though Gaidica had an inside track with WDIV, his selection as a "Fame and Fortune" co-host was not automatic.

Puppet workshop

The Detroit Puppeteers Guild will present a day-long series of workshops and performances for adults Saturday, March 4, at the International Institute, 111 Kirby, Detroit.

Especially planned for teachers, librarians, group leaders and those who want to learn more about the art, this day of puppetry will offer a choice of eight workshops, covering such subjects as manipulation, foam puppet construction, mask making and storytelling with puppets. A Puppetry store with puppets, books, scripts and puppet-related materials will be featured.

Included with the registration will be two puppet performances, "Runaway Rocket," presented by George Latschaw at 11 a.m. and "Strings of Fantasy," presented by the Wayne Martin Puppets at 2 p.m. Tickets for each of these shows may be purchased at the door by non-registrants.

Registration for the entire day, 9 a.m. to 3 p.m., is $16 for adults and $13 for teens, 18 and under. For information, or for a flyer, call Nancy Henk, weekdays, at 898-6341, or Pat Moehring, evenings at 885-8918.

Loud party broken up in the Woods

A loud drinking party with some 35 youths in attendance was dispersed by the Woods police last week.

Officers responded to a complaint that a loud party was going on at a home in the 1500 block of Ford Court at 10 p.m. Feb. 24.

The officers found beer cans and liquor bottles strewn about outside and inside the home. Some 20 youths were outside the home and 15 were inside, according to police reports.

The 15-year-old resident of the home said she invited a few friends over and the situation got out of hand. Police sent all the youths on their way, and the 15-year-old was told not to resume the party.

New employees hired in Park

Eleanor Krajewski began work as a secretary with the Grosse Pointe Park Public Safety Department recently. She has 30 years' experience of civilian employment with the Detroit Police Department.

Also, Carol Otto joined the public safety department, recently as a part-time dispatcher.

Lauren Moss of Mariomax of Farmington Hills does Chuck Gaidica's makeup and styles his hair before last Friday's taping of "Fame and Fortune." Mariomax prepares Diane Sarnecky's and the contestants' makeup and hair for the show in exchange for being listed in the credits at the end of the show.

He said he competed in an extensive talent search and he auditioned several times. Sarnecky went through the same process.

Lottery officials wanted a couple to host the show that could work well together and give "Fame and Fortune" a fun, natural feel. After more than a month, it seems Gaidica and Sarnecky fill the bill as Michigan Lottery's royal couple.

Sarnecky has been a professional model for the past six years. She worked the auto show circuit across the country, and has been a lifelong Eastside resident. She graduated from Lake Shore High School and studied fashion merchandising and communications at Macomb Community College.

Gaidica has fond memories of growing up in Chicago. Before coming to Detroit nearly seven years ago, he worked in weather forecasting in Little Rock, Ark., Girardeau, Mo., and Evansville, Ind.

Following last week's taping of "Fame and Fortune," Gaidica couldn't relax. On Fridays he has to do his weather forecast from a metro Detroit locality. So off he ran, out of the warm studio and into the Michigan cold, changing hats from game show host to weatherman.

Furthermore, his day wasn't complete after his on-the-street forecast. He then had to rush to Grosse Pointe's Ferry Elementary School where he was the official sauce taster at the school's spaghetti supper. It was an invitation he couldn't refuse; his daughter attends Ferry.

Gaidica and his wife, Susan, have three children: Matthew, 2; Charlie, 4; and Tiffany, a sixth-grader.

After the show, the contestants enjoyed saying goodbye to friends, family and strangers in the audience who had come to enjoy their good fortune and television stardom.

Goodman to present program on India

Dr. Robert J. Goodman, noted local geographer, will present the second of his winter programs, co-sponsored with the Department of Community Education, "Through the Eyes of a Professional Geographer," on Tuesday, March 7, with a program on India.

Goodman lived in India for a year as he served as a Fulbright Scholar at Karnatak University. He photographed the effects of the wet monsoon as well as those of the dry monsoon. His slides also show the severe results of poverty and the caste system.

The series, which began Feb. 28 with a program on China, will conclude on March 14 with slides on Japan. While he taught at Japan's Nara University, Goodman had an opportunity to interpret and photograph the emerging industrial complex that produced Japan's challenge of the American dominance in international economics. His presentation underscores the Japanese ability to accomplish almost impossible tasks with a severely limited resource base.

Goodman is a professor emeritus of geography and has taught at Wayne State University over a period of 36 years. He received a number of honors in his career, including the "Excellence in Teaching Award" from WSU and the "Distinguished Teaching Award" from the National Council from Geographic Education.

Programs will be presented in room 203 of Barnes School, 20090 Morningside.

Fee for each session is $8. Call 343-2178.

South business students visit Chicago Board of Trade

In the global perspective of today's students, Chicago is practically a suburb of Detroit. You commute to it. That's how Grosse Pointe South High School business administration students think about the Windy City these days.

On March 2, 27 business students, accompanied by their teacher, Charles Hitch, will have an opportunity to tour the floor of the Chicago Board of Trade after commuting from City Airport at 9 a.m. that morning.

The students have raised funds for their trip by forming a corporation called "Prime Time Devils" and selling T-shirts and baseball caps since last fall. They even kept a corporate bank account precisely for the purpose.

In Chicago, the South students will be guests of Mark Bajer of the Board of Trade. They will have first hand experiences observing the commodities and exchange market in action. At 7:15 p.m. they will board a flight for the quick commute back to Detroit.

Assistant Principal Bernard LeMieux will accompany the students. The classroom in the air is already part of Grosse Pointe South.

Brownell magazine wins award

Brownell Middle School's literary magazine, Scroll, has received a superior rating by the National Council of Teachers of English.

Student editor for the 1988 edition of Scroll was Molly Tannian. Faculty adviser was Donica F. Keogh.

Principal Donald Messing said that Brownell was the only middle school in Michigan in the superior category. Categories included above average, excellent, superior and highest award.

Judging teams reviewed such criteria as literary quality, kinds of writing included, editing and proofreading, and front matter and pagination.

In 1988, 1,451 school submitted entries. Of those, 25 received the highest award; 349 were superior; 602 were excellent; and 381 were above average.

South Pointe Players advance to state finals

Grosse Pointe South High School's Pointe Players advanced to the state finals of the Michigan Interscholastic Forensic Association Theater Festival with their production of "Identity Crisis."

Only 12 schools were chosen from the regional level to continue on to the state competition held at Central Michigan University Feb. 17 and 18.

At the regional level, "Identity Crisis" received 292 out of a possible 300 points, and was the automatic qualifier for the state finals from their region.

"Excellent" awards were given to Genevieve Dwaihy, Mike Heppner and Shana Huntington for their acting ability; to Rachel Klein and Julie Stade for lighting; and to Caroline deFauw for sound. "Superior" acting awards were given to Laura DeMercurio for her performance as Jane; and to Tom Huse for his portrayal of Robert, a character with four personalities.

At the state level, the students received an "excellent" award for their set design and construction. They finished eighth in the class 'A' division.

"This is the first year that South has made it to the state finals in the MIFA competition," said director Mary Martin. "I feel that the growth of the Performing Arts Department at South has contributed to our success. I am very proud of all the students involved, and am looking forward to making the state finals another South tradition!"

Johnson awarded memorial scholarship

University Liggett School has announced that Louis Johnson is the recipient of the Ti Juan Kidd Memorial Scholarship for the 1988-89 school year.

The scholarship was established in memory of Ti Juan Kidd, a member of the Class of 1990 who was shot to death in Detroit in a much-publicized incident in July 1987. The award is presented to a freshman who, like Kidd, "demonstrates honesty, determination, confidence, self-assurance and dependability."

Johnson, the son of Patricia Boykin Johnson of Detroit, is currently a ninth-grader.

"We feel that Louis exhibits the positive characteristics indicative of Ti, and that he deserves this special recognition," said ULS Admissions Director Douglas J. Goodman.

This is the first year that the stipend has been awarded.

What do turn signals, heaters have in common?

By Richard A. Wright
Special Writer

Space-age electronic technology has transformed the automobile during the '80s. After a couple decades trying to give the U.S. government what it wanted in the way of safety, clean air and better fuel economy, the auto industry's engineers have returned to developing what they think car buyers will like. And these efforts are bursting forth with all kinds of goodies aimed at putting more fun into motoring.

1989 Cadillac Eldorado

But not all the great ideas work out. Some are hot, some are not. It is very difficult to predict what features will capture the popular imagination.

Many of the features we consider necessary standard equipment today started as extra-cost options. Turn signals, for example. We assume all cars have turn signals and younger drivers are surprised to hear that we once stuck our arm out the window to signal a turn.

Heaters did not become standard equipment on all cars until the '50s. Now air conditioning is standard on many cars, as are systems which combine heater and air conditioner into a single climate control system.

Autos

standard on many cars, as are systems which combine heater and air conditioner into a single climate control system.

In the late '30s, a number of options were introduced that we now take for granted — windshield washers by Studebaker in 1937, directional signals by Buick in 1938, the first modern automatic transmission by Oldsmobile and the first air conditioner by Packard in 1939. With introduction of the '40s models in 1939, the industry adopted sealed beam headlamps. Makers began installing pushbutton radios in many models and heaters and defrosters were made standard on some upscale models.

The industry continues to develop new features, some destined for greatness, others to be promoted as the greatest thing since the automatic transmission and then quickly discontinued.

A few more models are being offered with air bags as an option, but if any new feature has met with opposition, this is it. Without the force of the federal government behind it, the air cushion restraint system would probably have disappeared long ago, but the industry continues to refine them and try to sell them to a skeptical public.

In the area of instrument displays, the digital readouts and video graphics that were so highly touted a few years ago have done only so-so. Many drivers prefer the old-fashioned analog instruments, finding them easier to read quickly and less distracting. Cadillac offers digital readouts in analog form in its Allante.

The electronic readouts will not die, however, because they promise lower cost, greater reliability and longer life. And a promising variation is the "heads-up" display, which shows speed and directional signals on the windshield. Pontiac's Banshee concept car has holographic heads-up display which makes speed, directional signals and fuel level appear to float above the hood of the car. And Pontiac's Turbo Grand Prix, coming soon, will have a heads-up display which projects speed, a high-beam indicator, turn signal pointers, low-fuel warning and a "check gauges" warning triggered by high engine temperature or low oil pressure.

Less well-received have been multi-purpose in-dash computers and electronic control centers, or "Visual Information Centers," video displays set in the dash which provide a wide variety of data and controls using touch-screen technology.

First used in Buick Riviera and called the Graphic Control Center, the systems won little praise and a lot of gripes because it required too much activity by the driver to data, set the heater level or just change the station on the radio. Next year's Riviera will not have them.

Pontiac put sound-system controls in the steering wheel hub of a few models in the last couple years, a system many drivers like, and Oldsmobile put controls in the steering hub for the Visual Information Center in its '89 Toronado and Trofeo models.

One of the most surprisingly successful options in recent years has been the cellular phone and Oldsmobile added that item to its option line for '89. You have to figure that option is a success when fake phones are purchased to acquire the attendant status without paying the rather steep price.

The Chevrolet Corvette has an option which seems likely to win a following, a system which constantly monitors air pressure in tires and signals the driver if pressure drops.

Since Oldsmobile introduced the Hydra-matic transmission in 1910, both automatic and manual gearboxes have been refined, redesigned into front-drive systems, but the only new way transmitting power emerged in the early '60s on a little Dutch car called the Daf. This car used pulleys and belts in what it called a continuously variable transmission.

The Daf died, but the CVT idea intrigued engineers. Now, Subaru becomes the first maker to offer a CVT in the United States, an option on the front-drive Justy.

The Subaru CVT consists of a magnetically engaged clutch and two variable-diameter pulleys which continuously vary the ratio between engine speed and road wheels for optimum efficiency.

Technological trends of the future can usually be previewed in the show cars and concept cars the makers build and an item that appears on several concept cars is a video display which lets you know where you are and how to get where you're going.

Most of these navigation systems use color video displays on the dashboard on which road maps can be called up. Down the road, say designers, is a satellite system which will supply navigational and traffic information to the motorist anywhere in the country.

Four-wheel drive continues to be a surprisingly strong-selling technical feature. The jury is still out on four-wheel steering. Its benefits compared with cost do not seem favorable for most vehicle types and drivers, but the same was thought of four-wheel drive. Many people who never take their vehicles off the road buy four-wheel drive.

Power windows and power door locks, once thought to be luxury overkill, have become very popular both because they are handy and because of security.

One of my favorite options is the system in which an infrared beam in the key fob is aimed at a receptor inside the car to lock or unlock the doors. I still like magic.

I recently test-drove a '89 Cadillac Eldorado. I found its power window system useful because I park in a structure which you enter with a magnetic card. Pushing the button to open the driver's window all the way down lowers the window to the bottom without the need to hold the button down.

While running the car through an automatic car wash, it came off the conveyor in the middle as strands of fiber slapped the car. I did not want to move the car forward because I could not see what was ahead.

An attendant noticed and shut the system off. He came to the car and I rolled down the window. He told me to pull it forward to put it back on the conveyor. I rolled the window up, pulled forward and felt the conveyor take hold again.

As the car moved forward I noticed I had caught one of the strands when I raised the window. I pushed the button to lower the window and at that moment the high-pressure spray hit me in the face. I fumbled for the button as the window continued to lower.

Finally I got the window raised and the car rolled out into the sunlight, where a couple workers wiped it with towels. I was almost as wet as the car and one of the workers rapped on the window. I lowered it.

"Want a towel?" he asked. "Thanks," I said.

"He should have shut the system down," the worker said. "He did," I said, explaining briefly what had happened.

"When you came out, one of the guys said 'man, that guy is really sweating.'"

I dried myself and the instrument panel and seat and headed off for the parking structure. I still like that feature.

Fifth-grade students from Vaux le Penil, France, stand in front of their school, the Ecole Romain Rolland. The 30 youngsters, who arrived in Grosse Pointe Feb. 28, invite the community to a special program Thursday, March 8, at the Pierce Middle School auditorium. They will perform "Spectacle," their gift to Grosse Pointers at 7:30 p.m.

The three-week visit is the first part of a cultural exchange that will culminate in Grosse Pointe students traveling to Vaux le Penil on a return visit April 25. They are participating in the French-American Back-to-Back Cultural Exchange Program.

Pierce plans 50th anniversary celebration

During the last year, current and past staff members of Pierce Middle School have been busy searching through historical materials and information that will help in the schools' 50th anniversary. Ginny Downs and Florence Miller, former members of the Pierce staff, have been planning, researching, and checking lists and scrapbooks for names and events in the history of Pierce.

Assisting in the search and in the planning of the September 1989 celebration are Donald Bassett, former principal, Dr. William Brownscombe, PTO president, Dr. Suzanne Klein, principal, Nancy Salamas, Assistant principal, and Fran Lamb, current staff member.

The committee is putting together activities that will begin on Sept. 30 with a reunion for past and present staff members followed by an open house for Pierce Alumni on Oct. 1. Activities will also include creating an alma mater, as well as a school flag, and programs which will continue the celebration for the entire year.

The committee is looking for staff members, people who have worked at Pierce over the years. In addition to the staff members, the committee would like any unusual memorabilia, things that tell about the beginning of the building. The years of 1944 and 1945 are especially important because very little information is available for that period.

Any person with information or who would like to serve on a planning committee should contact Downs at 884-0218 or Pierce Middle School at 343-2094.

Musical day trips scheduled

The War Memorial's early spring day trip schedule includes two opportunities to enjoy musical theater at its best.

Reservations are due Friday, March 3 for those planning to participate in the London Grand Theatre excursion, Saturday, April 1.

The day includes a visit to Eldon House, London, Ontario's oldest home. Lunch will follow at Friars Two prior to the matinee performance of "Pal Joey." From this classic '40s musical came such hits as "Red Hot Mama," "I Could Write A Book," "The Lady Is A Tramp," and "Bewitched, Bothered and Bewildered."

The trip leaves the War Memorial at 8:30 a.m. and returns at 7 p.m. Theater seats are section A, balcony. An elevator is available for those requiring it. Cost is $45 per person and includes transportation, tour, lunch and theater ticket. Proof of citizenship is required.

Next on the day trip schedule is a Wednesday, April 19 excursion to Oakland County. Highlight of the day is the matinee performance of the musical, "Quilters" at Meadow Brook Theater.

The play is based on the true story of a female pioneer family facing the challenges of wagon train travel. The music, dance and dramatic intensity of the play have made it popular with regional theater audiences throughout the country.

The day, which begins with a 9 a.m. departure from the War Memorial, also includes time to shop in Rochester and lunch at the Paint Creek Restaurant prior to the performance. Return home is planned for 6 p.m. Cost is $39 per person. Reservations are due by Friday, March 24.

Business

He knows his marbles — like his father before him and now his son

By Pat Paholsky
Editor

When Benjamin W. Capp walks into any number of major buildings in the area — the Fisher, the Guardian, Renaissance Center, the old City-County Building — he's surrounded by his work. Ditto the Fox Theatre, Cobo Hall, Ford Auditorium, Veterans Memorial.

His firm, Wolverine Marble Co., has done work at each of them. Now in its 66th year, Wolverine is the largest of about seven marble companies in the area.

It's a good position to be in — marble is on a comeback — and Wolverine has a long history of quality workmanship that includes many of the homes of prominent people, like the Fords, the Fishers and the Dodges.

The Capp family involvement in the business began when his father, Benjamin A. Capp, lived in a rooming house with other boarders who worked for a marble company. His father, who had worked at Chrysler Corp. and the Budd Co., became fascinated with the marble business from listening to his friends talking about it.

Ben Capp

He got a job with the company and was general manager when the stock market collapsed, precipitating the Depression. The company stockholders began bailing out, Capp said, and his father bought them out. He was backed by a couple of friends from the town in Ohio where he was born.

The company was down to between five and 10 employees, but his father never missed a payroll nor did he miss drawing a weekly salary.

Capp began working at the company while he was a student at St. Joseph High School. He worked in the office and handled the wholesale counter sales. At that time, Wolverine supplied about 80 percent of the marble in Detroit, he said.

He graduated from Lawrence Institute of Technology with a degree in construction engineering and spent two years in the U.S. Army.

The industry has undergone a number of transformations. After the Depression, the style of building and design changed and marble wasn't used as much anymore, Capp said.

He adds that the marble business was probably the first industry affected by foreign importation. "It changed the entire complexion of our business."

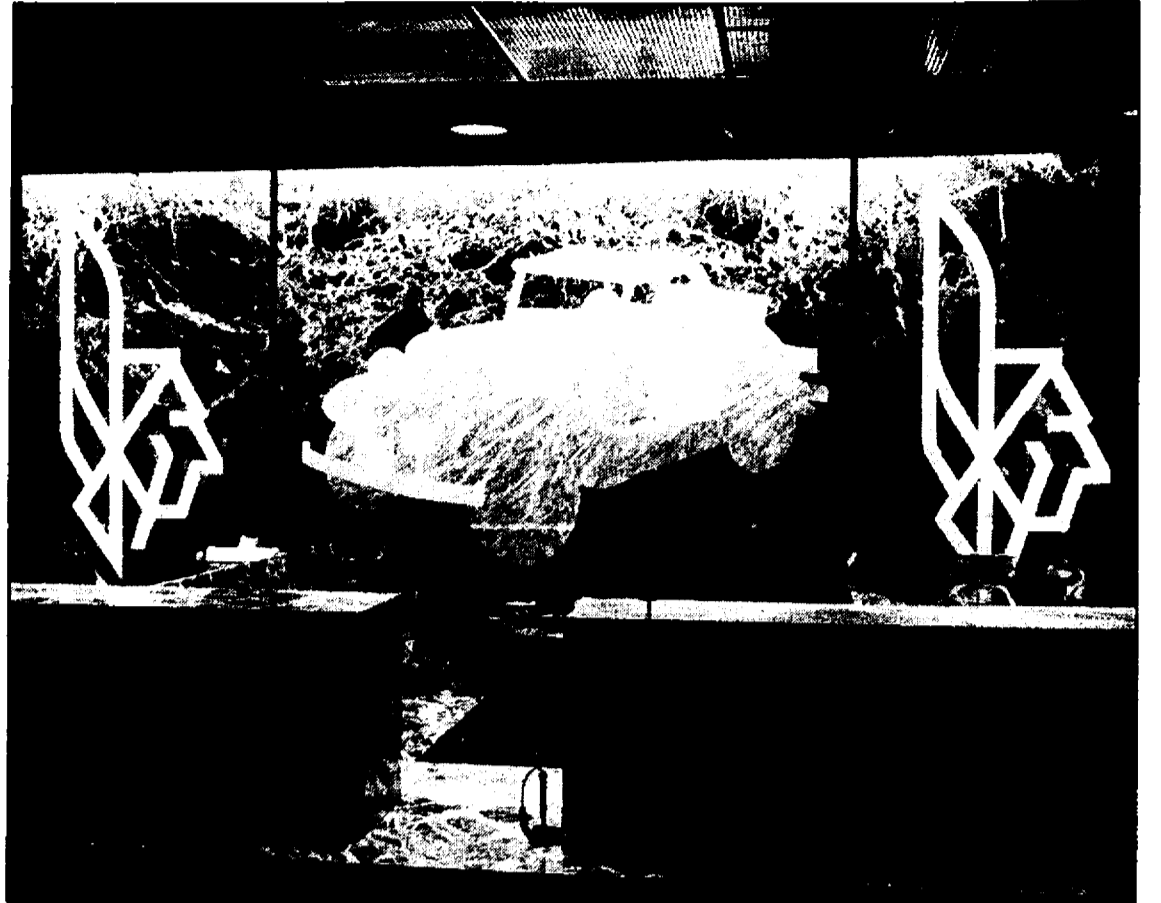

Where all the finishing had been done locally in the past, it is now done in Europe and shipped here by freighter, packed in steel crates, ready to install.

"We have considerable marble in the United States, but I don't think we will ever overcome the difference in labor cost," Capp said. "More important, the Europeans, and the Italians in particular, stay more technically advanced than we are."

Capp goes to Europe two to four times a year — he's made 40 trips since 1972. There are hundreds and hundreds of varieties to select from and he goes not only to make selections, but to coordinate the engineering and to keep abreast of technology and new materials.

He gets marble from Italy, Spain, France, Portugal and the United States. Now there are about 20 other countries quarrying marble that had not been in the market before, Capp said.

His favorites are Verdi antique, a dark green marble with a lighter concentration of serpentine; Botticino, a tan marble; and Italian Crema, a white marble.

The first marble mural done in the country in about 40 years took Wolverine Marble Co. about five months to complete. It's at the former Detroit Bank & Trust, now Comerica, in the Renaissance Center and is the only branch that didn't remove the old logos. Three colors of marble were used. Not shown as part of this mural is a map of downtown Detroit in white marble.

oggy and new materials.

The Capps moved from the Woods to the Farms last year. They did extensive remodeling, including a marble entranceway, marble fireplace, marble baths and a kitchen with marble floors and counters. It took more than six months to complete.

The advantage, he said, besides being aesthetically pleasing, is that marble is easy to maintain. "The surface is so flat and smooth of joints and if you select the right type, you don't have to worry about staining."

A marble bath costs about three times more than a tile bath, he said.

On faux marble, Capp said that from a distance, he can't always tell whether it's real or not. He adds: "It has its place because it's an art form. Unfortunately, there are very few craftsmen who can do it anymore."

Wolverine, now located in an old building in Detroit, will be moving to Troy in August. "We have outgrown the building and we need three times more space," he said.

The move means the company will also be able to sell again to the retail and wholesale trade as it did in the early years.

The family business will remain in the family for awhile.

Capp is president of Wolverine Marble and his brother, Stanley, is executive vice president and treasurer. Capp's son Ron, 31, who began working at the business when he was 16, was recently appointed general manager.

And to keep the business going, Capp, his brother and a third partner, Robert Dunn, formed General Field Services, Inc., a structural steel and machinery-oriented business.

"It aids our marble business in one area," Capp said. Marble is installed on steel panels in the warehouse and used in building construction.

"We feel even though we've been successful for all these years in the marble business, it's really safe and wise to diversify," he said. It also guarantees room for family members who want to get into the business.

Capp and his wife Mickey also have two daughters, Lee Ann and Lynn. In his spare time, he enjoys playing golf and platform tennis. He and his wife, who sometimes accompanies him on his business trips, enjoy traveling.

And his father, who will be 84 this month, is still active and healthy. "He likes to check on how we're doing," Capp said.

Rosh Sillars: Genesis of a photographer

By Pat Paholsky
Editor

When Rosh Sillars says, "I'm getting my career started now," you believe him.

At the grand age of 20, his work experience would put some adults to shame.

He began his working career when he was 14 delivering papers, a job he had for a few years. From there he went through the co-op program at Grosse Pointe South, delivering prescriptions for Zimmerman's Pharmacy for 1-1/2 years.

Then he got a job at the Camera Center, and while he was there, he did forensic photography for a lawyer in Birmingham. That experience gave him the incentive to market his talents as a freelancer.

When he was 19, he and two friends formed R.C. Photographic Services.

"We are not as active as we should be," he says almost apologetically. "We have a lot of things on hold."

Small wonder. All of the youthful owners attend college full time.

And somehow, Sillars manages to block out two days a week for the Grosse Pointe News, where he has worked as a darkroom technician for the past six months. He also takes photos for the paper in his off-hours.

When Sillars says, "My whole life has always consisted of a million directions and everything has always worked out for me the best way," you believe him.

His low-keyed manner hides, but not for long, an optimistic, upbeat person eager to learn.

"I love knowledge itself and learning new things. I love philosophy and religion and history — those are my three favorite topics — and politics is mixed up in there. I'm fascinated by all of that."

Sillars was born in Flint on Dec. 3, 1968. He attended Flint Open School through the sixth grade, a school that espouses the open classroom concept. "I liked it, but it didn't do much for me academically," he said.

His family moved to Grosse Pointe where he attended Brownell and graduated from Grosse Pointe South in 1987.

When they lived in Flint, his father took up photography, and would take him in the darkroom to teach him the various processes. Sillars said he wasn't particularly interested, however, until he went to South High and took a photography class taught by Jack Summers.

"He was a big influence," Sillars said.

He enjoyed the class so much, he took it for three years, and in the process, won two national awards and one regional.

While he was at South, Sillars also won state and regional awards during his junior and senior years as a member of the Distributive Education Clubs of America (DECA).

After graduation, Sillars enrolled in the general studies program at Macomb Community College where he maintains a 3.1 G.P.A. He was recently accepted by the Center for Creative Studies.

He plans to study advertising photography and hopes to combine his two loves — photography and business. "That's why I like advertising — it's a business and you can be creative."

But, he adds, he keeps his options open. He might work for an agency or stick with his business.

He and his partners, Chris Lopez and Steven Portell, have done a variety of photographic work in the area, including family portraits and small business advertising. Each partner has his own specialty — Sillars specializes in informal portraits of children from age 3 and up.

"People like the informal portraits because it shows the child's personality," he said.

Much of their work comes from word of mouth, Sillars said. "We are trying new things all the time." The number for R.C. Photographic Services is 886-1628.

In another honor, his work was on display at the Scarab Club in November. Out of about 250 entries, 60 were selected for the exhibit, Sillars said.

He doesn't have much time for other activities, but he is learning to play the guitar.

"I would love to write and I would love to write music, but photography is the one thing I can do well," he said.

"I would like to know the basics of just about everything," he adds. And you believe him.

The people behind the Grosse Pointe News

The Grosse Pointe News employs more than 35 full-time and part-time people in five departments, all working to put out the best weekly newspaper possible. The talent involved in this endeavor is impressive.

Since June, we have been featuring an employee from a department — Classified, Circulation, Advertising and Production — that is not as visible to the public, in order that you, the reader, can better understand, and appreciate, the parts that make up the whole paper.

"The Treasures of Tutankhamun" is the title of a 35mm slide show illustrating Dr. Frank W. Martin's long-held fascination with ancient and modern-day Egypt.

He will emphasize the finding of the tomb of King Tutankhamun by Howard Carter and its priceless treasures. For contrast and interest a little time will be spent showing modern-day Egypt.

Martin was born in Detroit and he lives in North Rosedale Park. Next to teaching, his first love is travel. He has circumnavigated the world twice, and has visited at least 50 different countries.

After service in the U.S. Army Air Corps during World War II, he completed work at Wayne State University for a bachelor's and master's degree, then was awarded a Ph.D. from the University of Michigan.

After retiring as a principal from the Detroit Public Schools in 1984, he was offered the opportunity to teach in Toyota City, Japan. Although many have gone to Japan to teach in private schools, he understands that he is the first to have a contract with a public school system.

Much of his time is spent in volunteer work. He works in the office of Readings for the Blind, Inc., and is currently a board member and president of the organization. He is also a board member of Wayne State University's Beta Sigma Phi Fellowship, and of Unlimited Seniors — a social/support group for senior citizens, and also a member of the Detroit Association of Retired School Personnel, and of Michigan Association of Retired School Personnel, where he is also president-elect.

Band concert

The Grosse Pointe Community Band will present a free winter concert Wednesday, March 8, at 8 p.m. in the Grosse Pointe South High School auditorium.

The program will feature a variety of selections, including Slavonic Dances by Dvorak, selections from "My Fair Lady," Bach's Prelude and Fugue in G Minor, Prelude to Act I of "La Traviata," and two marches. Any musicians who are interested in joining the concert band should call Miller at 343-2240 between 2-4 p.m.

Nagler, a regular columnist for the Grosse Pointe News and Observer & Eccentric Newspapers, studied under Ansel Adams.

Students will learn the principles of good photography by viewing samples from the instructor's collection. Class fee is $35 for four sessions. For additional information, call 881-7511.

'Francis': Grosse Pointe cleric's newest book sheds an interesting light on a familiar 'old' saint

By Peggy O'Connor Andrzejczyk
 Assistant Editor/Feature Editor

For about a year, the original manuscript for "Francis: A Call to Conversion," sat in a drawer while its author waited for a new direction to take with his work.

He found it in Great Britain, in the magnificent library of a now-dead bishop of the Anglican church. The research the Rev. Duane W.H. Arnold did in that library lent new form to his manuscript . . . and gave birth to a revealing look into the life of a familiar saint, Francis of Assisi.

"Why Francis? Well, he tends to be regarded as a 'safe' saint — put him out as a statue in the garden with the birds — and not as someone who challenges our essence," Grosse Pointe resident Arnold explains.

"I wanted to change those perceptions, as mine had changed upon researching Francis' life."

That Anglican bishop had 8,000 printed sources on Francis of Assisi and Arnold was given access to them all. In them, he found a different Francis than he had come to know previously.

"I had always perceived him as a radical, but not as an attractive person," Arnold says. "But I discovered that he was an attractive person because he was so authentic, so human. There's a lovely little legend about Francis that allows us to see him as an attractive person."

"It tells the story of a vision Francis had. In it, he saw Jesus walking and leaving footprints in the earth. Behind him came the apostles and early leaders of the church, all of whom were having tremendous difficulty following in those footsteps. Then there came a little man in a plain brown robe . . . who was able to fit perfectly into those footprints."

Like Francis, Duane Arnold was able to make his biography of the medieval saint fit perfectly into a style which appeals to a 20th century reader.

The book is broken down into three sections. It begins with a biographical essay of Francis' early life and times. A subsequent section examines the significance of Francis' life in terms of the major issues facing the world today.

In these chapters, we meet the Francis whose best friend was a woman he called "the most Jesus-like" person he'd known. And the Francis who mourned the loss of a wife and family he'd forsaken for the religious life . . . then created those family members out of snow and laughed at his own joke. And the familiar Francis who danced and sang and "talked" with animals and birds. The book concludes with a bibliographic study of the influences on the authors of this book.

That section stands as proof, if you will, of why Francis of Assisi appeals to all branches of faith, not just Catholicism.

More proof of Francis' appeal comes when, throughout the book, Arnold and co-author the Rev. C. George Fry make extensive use of vignettes glimpsing Francis' life.

"Our emphasis was on telling his story the way Francis used story-telling to teach," Arnold says.

"We tend to think of the medieval church as dark and joyless. But you see it is not, when you come across stories such as the time when a man came to Francis to seek admittance into the Franciscan order. While out on a walk with the man, Francis danced with joy — as he often did — and watched the other man react with horror.

"Francis told the abbot that he didn't think the man would make a good brother since he didn't enjoy life enough."

The meat of the book is Arnold's conclusion that St. Francis was a man of complete and total faith. It is that message that Arnold says is just as important today as it was in the 12th century when Francis lived.

"One of the lessons we learn from Francis is that consequences bear little relationship to the actions we take. That's the message of faith: to do what is right is what's important regardless of the end result."

That's the challenge to which Arnold refers.

"Francis stands out now more than ever for his teachings on peace and justice. Then, he was considered a fool or an eccentric. Just as those who speak about peace and justice today — like Terry Waite, the peace envoy who remains a hostage in the Middle East — are considered fools for their willingness to take a chance and speak out despite the danger.

"That's the challenge of faith."

Arnold's book is written in prose, flowing style. It is easy to read, especially for lay people who enjoy a good historical biography.

"One of the things I wondered about while writing the book in this way was whether or not the passionate style in which it was written would go over well with the reader," Arnold admits.

"I chose to do it because I wanted to elicit an emotional response. I wanted it to be impossible to read without that image of Francis remaining in the reader's head."

"Francis: A Call to Conversion" was released just before Christmas. The reaction thus far has been positive, Arnold says, and sales are going well.

"I think I would term the book a success if it challenges people to look at their lives in terms of faith and action. That's the crux of Francis' life and the point we want to make.

"Personally, the book was a success. It was a labor of love for me, something I enjoyed doing."

"Francis: A Call to Conversion" is published by Cantilever Books, Grand Rapids, Mich. Foreword by John Michael Talbot. 171 pp.

NEGC partygoers solve a mystery

More than 180 partygoers were witnesses to a "murder mystery" sponsored by the Assistance League to the Northeast Guidance Center on Feb. 4.

The scene of the crime was the Grosse Pointe Hunt Club, where revelers attempted to solve the mystery of who "murdered" the fictional Parke Davis, heir to a vast pharmaceutical fortune. Local detectives Grace Tindall and Julie Ledo walked away with first and second prizes, respectively.

The party was a project sponsored by the Assistance League to the NEGC. Proceeds from the event will support the Infant Mortality Program co-sponsored with the St. John Hospital and Medical Center.

Upcoming Assistance League activities include an open house on Wednesday, March 8, at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial. League members and NEGC executive director David Walker, Ph.D., will offer an informal presentation of the Assistance League and the NEGC's activities and services.

Sign-in and refreshments begin at 7 p.m. in the reception room.

The sixth annual Art on the Pointe sponsored by the Assistance League is set for the Edsel & Eleanor Ford House on Saturday and Sunday, June 10 and 11. Approximately 150 artists will display their wares on the estate's grounds.

For more information on these events, call the Assistance League to the Northeast Guidance Center at 885-8993.

Ian and Gloria Jackson of Grosse Pointe Park participated in the recent murder mystery weekend sponsored by the Assistance League to the Northeast Guidance Center.

What a weekend:

That was the weekend of Feb. 10, when members of the Otsego Ski Club gathered on the slopes and in the clubhouse to celebrate this unique organization's 50th anniversary.

The club, one of the few private ski clubs in the United States, counts 160 Grosse Pointe families among its members. The club's storied history began in 1938 as the dream of Donald B. McLouth, when he and a group of ski enthusiasts from Detroit started the club.

The private membership grew so quickly that in 1947, an expansion and modernization process that would last for 38 years was undertaken, resulting in the club which Grosse Pointers and others enjoy today.

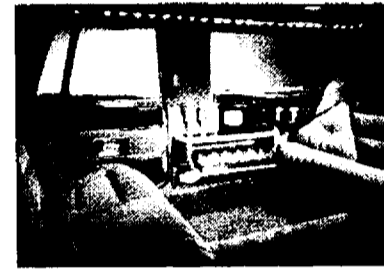

The highlight of the 50th anniversary celebration was a black-tie dinner dance at which members enjoyed a gourmet dinner and danced to the music of "Mel Ball and Colors." Comedian (and club member) Tim Allen entertained.

Churches

Special events mark Grosse Pointe Unitarian's 50th anniversary

The Grosse Pointe Unitarian Church will celebrate its 50th anniversary this month.

To commemorate the event, there will be a special appearance by the Rev. Dr. William F. Schulz, president of the National Unitarian Universalist Association, as well as a welcome home celebration for the Rev. William D. Hammond, minister of the Grosse Pointe Unitarian Church from 1959-64.

Hammond will conduct the 11 a.m. Sunday service on March 5. His sermon will be "Freedom of Belief is Not Sufficient." Hammond was recently president of the Southeast Chapter of the Unitarian Universalist Ministers Association.

Schulz was elected president of the Unitarian Universalist association in June 1985. He is an outspoken advocate of liberal religious values and philosophies and has debated conservative columnist Cal Thomas on National Public Radio.

Schulz will speak at 8 p.m. Sunday, March 12.

At 11 a.m. Sunday, March 19, the Grosse Pointe Unitarian Church will celebrate Founders Day. The Rev. John Corrado, minister at the church, will conduct the service.

The seeds of Unitarianism sprouted in Europe during the Reformation and gained strength in the 17th century. It took hold in America during the 18th century with the founding of the First Unitarian Church of Philadelphia, encouraged by the father of chemistry, Joseph Priestly.

Rev. William D. Hammond

The movement flourished during the 19th century under the leadership of, among others, Ralph Waldo Emerson. Universalism, which took root in America in the early 19th century, merged with the Unitarian movement in 1961.

Groundbreaking for the current home of the Grosse Pointe Unitarian Church at 17150 Maumee took place in April 1964. For more information on the church, its anniversary celebration or events, call 881-0420.

Husband-wife members a first for Grosse Pointe Woods Lions

Lions Club history was made on Feb. 16 when the organization's first husband and wife team was sworn into membership of the Grosse Pointe Woods Lions Club.

Michael and Deborah McNamee became members of the service organization at installation ceremonies that evening.

Deborah McNamee, 34, told fellow members she was delighted to be the first female member of the Woods Lions.

A registered nurse assigned to the critical care unit at Bon Secours Hospital, McNamee said she hoped that more women would join Lions clubs, since women constitute an enormous pool of untapped talent that could be utilized to further Lions' goals and achievements.

McNamee is a graduate of Regina High School and Wayne State University. Her first serious contact with Lions clubs came when an older brother underwent a successful corneal transplant. His new cornea came from the Michigan Eye Bank, an organization supported by all Michigan Lions clubs.

Later, McNamee became involved with Woods Lions fundraising sales during the club's annual Christmas sale of coloring books and candy whenever time permitted.

She met Michael P. McNamee, 28, at a retreat held at St. Raymond Catholic Church five years ago. The couple were married in August 1987. They live in Grosse Pointe Woods.

Michael McNamee is a graduate of Madonna College and DeLaSalle Collegiate High School. He is employed as a legal assistant on the General Motors legal staff, where he is involved primarily with product liability.

Sponsoring the McNamees was Michael Patten, a past Grosse Pointe Woods Lions president and zone chairman of Zone 1 of the Michigan Lion District 11-A-1.

Patten also performed the installation of the couple, explaining the purpose of the Lions Club, the group makes philanthropic donations to various organizations, with special emphasis on those which assist the blind.

On Friday, March 10, at 7:30 p.m., Milligan will discuss the urgent need among children and youth of the community for a strong, well-balanced approach to spiritual health and Christian education.

The purpose of the series is to help Christians discover God's power within themselves to care for one another. In his presentation, Bishop Untener will explore the spirituality of caring — how our caring for one another is a reflection of God's care for us.

Untener is a native Detroit who studied in the area and was ordained to the priesthood in 1963. After parish work and service in the chancery, he studied at the Gregorian University in Rome, obtaining his doctorate in theology. He has been bishop of the Saginaw diocese since 1980.

His articles have appeared in various periodicals and he is the author of the book "Sunday Liturgy Can Be Better."

Is your teenager smarter than his or her SAT score?

Probably. Even a case of the butterflies can affect your child's SAT score. To do better, your son or daughter should prepare better. For nearly 40 years, Stanley H. Kaplan's test-taking techniques and professional educational programs have helped over 100,000 students prepare for the SAT. Many have increased their scores 150, 200, as much as 250 points.

Call us. We could be your teenager's smartest move yet.

All that delicious fish . . . and Omega-3's benefits, too

The anti-cholesterol benefits of Omega-3 fatty acids in fish are well known and "the talk" of medical professionals. However, misleading information suggests that canned fish may be a poor source of Omega-3 because the canning process destroys them. The facts say otherwise.

Researchers at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology say that canned herring, sardines, salmon, mackerel and white tuna are all excellent sources of Omega-3 fatty acids, providing more than 1 gram per four-ounce serving. It is important to know that the Omega-3s in tuna come from the fish, not the oil in which it is packed. Buy water-packed tuna and cut calories in half.

While tuna and salmon hold a prominent place in our diets, herring, mackerel and sardines are treated as poor relations in the every day planning of menus. We think of marinated herring as an appetizer, but fresh herring is delicious.

Here are some recipes presenting new and interesting ways to introduce more Omega-3 into your regular diet.

The following recipes come from the low-calorie, low-cholesterol, budget-wise kitchens of Thera Grey Howard and Helena DeWitt Roth.

Maine's Marinated

Herring

3 herring (6 fillets)
1 1/2 pint sour cream

1/4 cup vinegar
2 tsp. olive oil
1/2 lemon, sliced
2 small onions
2 medium sour apples
1 bay leaf
2 black peppercorns

The best fish for marinating are male fish, called milters. Wash and soak the milters in cold water for 24 hours. Cut out the milt sacs, chop finely and mix in a bowl with vinegar, sour cream and olive oil. Strain and add sliced onions, apples cut into thin strips, peppercorns, bay leaf and lemons.

Remove head and outer skin, split fish and cut out all bones. Wash and slice to serving size pieces. Arrange in porcelain pot, pour dressing over and keep refrigerated. Let soak 24 hours before serving.

Sardine Rarebit

2 Tblsp. butter
2 Tblsp. flour
1 tsp. dry mustard
1/4 tsp. salt

1 tsp. Worcestershire sauce
1 1/8 tsp. pepper
1 cup milk
2 cups grated cheese
1 can sardines

Melt butter in a double boiler, add flour and seasonings and stir until well blended. Gradually add milk, stirring constantly until mixture thickens. Add cheese and when it melts, remove from fire and add sardines and Worcestershire sauce. Serve on toast.

Mackerel Goulash

2 Tblsp. margarine
3 minced onions
6 tsp. Hungarian rose paprika
1/8 tsp. pepper
1 can flaked mackerel
6 chopped tomatoes
1/2 tsp. salt

Saute onion in margarine until brown. Remove pan from heat and stir in Hungarian rose paprika and mackerel. Return to heat and toss fish with a fork. When heated, add tomatoes and green peppers. Lay a small slice of salt pork on top, cover pan and simmer until fish is tender.

Baked Tuna Croquettes

1 12-1/2 oz. can water-packed tuna
1 cup fresh bread crumbs
1/2 cup wheat germ
1/2 cup low-calorie mayonnaise
1/4 cup evaporated skimmed milk
1/4 cup minced onion
2 tsp. lemon juice
1/4 tsp. salt
1/4 tsp. pepper
Bottled tartar sauce

Grease a cookie sheet. Drain liquid from tuna into medium bowl; add crumbs, wheat germ and blend well. Stir in mayonnaise, undiluted milk, onion, lemon juice, salt, pepper and tuna and mix well.

Sprinkle some wheat germ on waxed paper. Shape mixture by hand into 8 croquettes and roll lightly in wheat germ. Place croquettes on cookie sheet and bake in 375° oven for 25 minutes. Serve with tartar sauce. Serves four.

Calories per serving, about 317. Cholesterol, about 46 mgs.

Salmon Divan

1 can (7-3/4 oz.) red salmon
2 Tblsp. margarine
2 Tblsp. flour
1 tsp. bouillon base (chicken)
1 cup skim milk
Dash of salt
Dash of pepper
2 Tblsp. grated Parmesan cheese
2 tsp. sherry
1 cup cooked broccoli spears

Drain salmon, reserving liquid and break into chunks. Melt margarine. Blend in flour and chicken bouillon base. Add reserved salmon liquid, milk, salt and pepper. Cook, stirring constantly until thickened and smooth. Blend in cheese and sherry.

Arrange cooked broccoli spears in small, shallow baking dish. Top with salmon and cream sauce. Bake at 350° for 15 minutes. Makes two servings.

Calories, about 416 per serving. Cholesterol about 61 mgs.

Older generation has special place in American history

By Marian Trainor
Special Writer

In an attempt to determine where we are going, we sometimes seek to understand where we have been. We turn to the past, not to recapture a world we have lost but to learn the lessons of history.

This thought comes to mind after reading W. Andrew Achenbaum's provocative book, "Old Age in a New Land," (Johns Hopkins Press). Drawing upon a wide range of sources, from social, intellectual and political history, Achenbaum sketches a surprising picture of the place of the older generation in American history.

Surprisingly enough, it has come full circle from good to bad and back to better, it's not as good as we would like it to be. Like all history, this one contains a lesson. If you want better things, you've got to keep working at it. You cannot afford to retire from life.

Much has been accomplished. Social Security, private pension systems, Medicare, Medicaid, political activism, legislation, medical advances.

While older Americans today might look forward to shorter work hours or lighter work as a goal, Achenbaum in his work finds a precedent for this problem in the past. This was due to the striking differences in the way early Americans defined older people's place in society. Americans between the Revolutionary and Civil War believed their infant republic depended upon the commitment and ability of men and women of all ages to work together in creating a new society.

Prime Time

They judged the assets and liabilities of being older invaluable in shaping the cultural and social life of the new land. People who enjoyed a "ripe old age," were regarded with respect because they believed that living a long and fruitful life was in itself an achievement in a world where sickness, injury and death plagued all age groups. Those who attained the biblically inspired three-score-and-10 seemed remarkable.

In fact, a number of elderly people in the United States became a powerful ideological weapon to demonstrate that the New World environment was beneficial.

It is interesting to note that in 1790 as today, many of the maxims for maintaining health are still advocated: fresh air, regular exercise, moderate diet and sufficient sleep.

Older Americans were also emulated because they had demonstrated that temperance, industry and exercise contributed to longevity. This assumption led to the conclusion that it was advantageous to rely on older men and women to help direct and safeguard the moral development of the young nation. Since older Americans were deemed well-equipped to give sound advice, it was concluded that youth and old age could benefit by association.

Older people were expected to remain economically and socially useful as long as they were physically able to work. Early Americans considered it foolish to stop working because of age.

Oddly enough, it took the Great Depression to bring about an improvement in the economic situation of seniors. Those years proved that all citizens needed an alternative means of insuring their financial independence. The result of that realization materialized into Social Security.

Other benefits followed — Medicare, Medicaid, a federal government clearing house for ideas about older citizens, the White House Conference on Aging, the National Institute on Aging, the Older Americans Act, the Supplementary Security program.

Since 1970, it appears that older Americans as a group benefitted more than any other group from the legislative achievements of the past decade.

We've come a long way, but there are still roads to travel in the ongoing effort.

Thinking again

Got to thinking the other day:

- Why is it that referees wear white and black striped shirts?
- I hope the Tigers never trade Jack Morris.
- Think dart throwing could catch on as a varsity sport?
- Do you think Jacques Demers and Chuck Daly could have a coaches exchange day?
- Yo, John Salley! Great commercials.
- I think we should re-name the Palace.
- This summer, Ernie and Paul will be back, but I'll miss Darryl Evans.
- Adrian Dantley should have never been traded.
- It seems Detroit's professional lacrosse team, the Turbos, have drawn plenty of attention.

Balking the balk

- The NHL should pass a ruling that would allow the Wings to wear their red jerseys during all home games.
- If they trade Morris, management would have a hard time naming an opening day starter.
- Demers would be fun to watch at the Palace.
- I'm glad to see the Major League has rescinded its one-year trial with the balk rule.
- Is the Silverdome quiet without the Pistons?
- Yzerman and Daly don't make a great combination when it comes to making car commercials.
- Michigan's basketball team will never advance to the NCAA Final Four with Bill Frieder.
- Whatever happened to Evil Knievel?

Get rid of those pucks

- How much are the electric bills at arenas and stadiums?
- Black and white are the most neutral colors, that's why.
- Travesty is the only word needed to describe the nightmare University of Oklahoma is trying to wake from.
- Why do those little orange pucks you use for street hockey hurt more than the real thing?
- Does anybody chew gum better than Demers?
- Why do fans pay $16 for standing-room only tickets at the JLA?
- College basketball games should only be two minutes long.
- The daredevil simply aged.
- Who will be the next player to hit a home run that lands on the lumber yard across from Tiger Stadium?
- I won't miss Arena Football.
- How fast do Zambonis go?

Nokes can do

- I hate to say it, but the Milwaukee Brewers can make plans to play for the American League pennant.
- It would have been nice to welcome Jimmy Carson back.
- Matt Nokes might be able to hammer a shot into the lumber yard.
- Why are the keys on a basketball court painted?
- What new tactics will be used to doctor the baseball this year?
- Do you think Mark Aguirre has been to Greece-town?
- Calgary is the team to beat for the NHL championship.
- UNLV has the nicest collegiate basketball uniforms.

Swim season nears end

South proves worth at Brighton; North second in MAC

By Rob Fulton
 Sports Editor

The regular swim seasons for North and South are over, but both teams had more to prove last week in league competition.

North, competing in the Macomb Area Conference Swim Championships, didn't stand a chance at upsetting Fraser, but still managed to finish second. South, which doesn't have a league meet, participated in the Brighton Invitational and finished first.

North, 6.7 overall, collected 207 points, 117 shy of Fraser's winning total of 324. South, which considers the invitational its league meet, had 262 points. Novi, ranked No. 4 in Class A, was South's closest competitor with 222 points.

South, ranked No. 5 going into the meet with a 13-0 record, has swam in the Brighton Invitational in the past, but according to Coach Fred Michalik, this year there was more at stake.

"I wanted to win it more this year than in previous years," said Michalik. "In the past I've gone in and let the kids swim in the events they wanted to. This year, because Novi and Milan (No. 1 in class B) were in it, it meant more to us."

It was the second consecutive time the Blue Devils have won the invitational.

North, which didn't practice in the water for more than one week because of pool troubles, overcame that obstacle to fulfill a dream that Coach Les Roddis doesn't want to wake from.

"This was a sensational meet for us," Roddis said. "It was almost a dream because it worked out so well for us. Not having a pool was a blessing in disguise because I think we were more rested than usual. I couldn't be happier."

Roddis and the Norsemen, who finished second in the White Division, didn't have one first-place finisher throughout the two-day event. Points are given to the top 12 finishers in each event and the bulk of North's points came from the seventh- to 12th-place finishers.

"Once you get points from your top six swimmers, you really have to get more points in the final six positions," Roddis said. "It's always a dog race for the points because the kids are a lot more even."

The pivotal points in the final six places came from Brad Sisk, Charlie Roddis, Graham Sisk, the 400-free relay B team, Jason Kahn, Bob Straske and Andy Bringard.

"Going in we really didn't anticipate having any first places," Roddis said. "We had some kids who were close, but we're not that kind of a team this year. You have to have seniors to get those big points, and we're very young."

There are three seniors on the Norsemen squad.

North's highest finish came from the 200-medley relay team where Steve Swan, Chris Detloff, Ted Loumanis and Victor Perez took second (1:47.5). Perez also had a second in the 200-free (1:52.6) and Loumanis and Swan took second in the 50-free (23.4) and 100 backstroke (1:08), respectively. Loumanis was also third in the 100-free (52.3). Peter Ellison took a third in the 200-individual medley (2:15) and Bob Jara compiled 328.9 points to finish third in diving, his highest point total of the year.

South, which has nine swimmers already qualified for the state meet March 10-11, is a team loaded with depth. Andy Walter was one of South's five first-place finishers on the weekend as he swam a 22.57 in the 50-free. Tim Mello (100-free), Craig Winninger (100-back), Ted Stedem (100 breaststroke), and the 400-free relay team of Mello, Walter, Brad Stedem and Winninger rounded out the top finishers for the Devils.

"Our kids were really up for the meet," Michalik said. "They know that this is considered our league meet and they had a lot to prove up there. They worked very hard and not only swam well to get into the finals, but did well in the finals."

As the meet drew to a close, South needed some big points so Michalik went to work on his 400-free relay team.

Trenton forces Devils to exit tourney early

By Rob Fulton
 Sports Editor

A defensive letdown and a five-goal spurt by the Trenton Trojans, led to a quick exit by the Grosse Pointe South Blue Devils in the opening round of regional hockey play Feb. 27.

South, which owned a hapless 6-12-4 overall record heading into regional play at the St. Clair Shores Civic Arena, had planned to forecheck the powerful Trojans but instead found itself strapped in its own zone most of the game, eventually falling 8-1.

South finished the season 6-13-4 overall and 1-9-3 in the Michigan Metro East.

The second period proved pivotal for the Blue Devils as they defensively shut down and allowed netminder Derek Farr, who was virtually unprotected during that 15 minutes, to handle 27 shots. Trenton, which was 11-1 in the Michigan Metro East league, was averaging 6.5 goals per game and proved why it is rated No. 2 in the Class A polls by peppering Farr with 55 shots on the night.

"The second period was the worst defensive period of hockey we've had since I've been here," said South coach Tim Zimmerman, who's been at the helm for six years. "I'll attribute it to lack of experience on our part, and their (Trenton's) strength.

We were outmuscled and definitely outmanned."

Farr gave up the eight goals, but Zimmerman still believes his junior goalie played an outstanding game.

"He did give up a couple weak goals, but we also have to look at how many saves he made when he shouldn't have," Zimmerman said. "He really played well for us."

South's Jim Alderton gave the Devils a 1-0 lead with a goal at the 7:03 mark of the first period. The Trojans, however, struck quickly to tie it at the 8:18 mark and three seconds later got the go-ahead goal when Farr mishandled the puck.

"The same thing happened when we played Trenton the first time," Zimmerman recalled. "We scored first, but then they came right back to take the lead." South lost that game 6-2.

Trailing 2-1 at the end of 15 minutes, South was looking to carry the puck in the second period but again failed to clear its own zone, allowing Trenton to strike for the quinary.

"We were not clearing the puck and were giving it away too much," Zimmerman said. "I think part of that came because we were apprehensive to take a hit. Trenton was very physical, but we should have been able to clear the puck."

Trenton added a final goal in a penalty-riddled third period.

After the second period, Zimmerman tried to get his troops regrouped, but he was more concerned about maintaining pride when the game was obviously out of reach for a team which averaged only 1.7 goals per game in the league.

"I really didn't say much after the second period," Zimmerman said. "We just got off the ice from playing our worst period all season and I was just worried about the pride factor. This (South) was a team that gave up only 25 shots and two goals in the last two games. It's obvious it wasn't the same team, but I wasn't going to let them give up."

"Other teams may have wanted to give up, but this team didn't," Zimmerman added.

Of South's 13 losses, 11 of them came to top 10 teams in Class A. When reflecting on the season, Zimmerman concluded that it was better than what the record indicates.

"It's (season) better than we expected, seriously," he said. "If you look at it, we only lost one more game this year than we did last year."

South was 12-12-2 a year ago. "It's hard to end the season this way," Zimmerman said, "but I'm pretty satisfied."

Scott Clein hits for 14; Norsemen fall to 10-10

By James Moore
Special Writer

Riding a four-game losing streak is not exactly how North basketball coach George Ohman wanted to start district play, but that's exactly where his team stands.

The Norsemen have lost four straight and six of their last eight to close the regular season at 10-10. North finished last in the White Division of the MAC at 3-4.

On Feb. 24, North traveled to South Lake was drilled 63-47. The Norsemen surrendered a 16-9 lead in the first quarter and trailed the rest of the way. Senior center Scott Clein led North with 14 points.

Earlier in the week, North lost its sixth game at home, 56-29, to Lake Shore.

North fell behind early and never made a true run at the lead.

North will try to snap the losing streak and advance past round one of district play when it faces Notre Dame March 2 at 7:30 p.m. All district games for North are being played at Notre Dame.

Volleyball

It was just another easy evening for the Lady Norsemen as they never really broke a sweat in a 15-6, 15-2 win over Romeo.

Mary Spiewak did the job from the service line as she led all scorers with 14 service points. Senior Kelli Gianunzio was trouble for Romeo as she delivered 11 kills.

North will play South, at South, March 4 at 10 a.m. in the opening round of the district volleyball tournament.

The jayvee team is 14-5 and the freshman volleyball team finished 16-1.

Gymnastics

At South, the Lady Norsemen squeaked out a 116.5-115.40 win over the Blue Devils in the annual battle.

Nicole Venettis attained a regional-qualifying score on the vault, and Megan Gray took second on the floor exercise. Andrea Lane took second on the uneven parallel bars and the senior duo of Soo Hur and Simone DiLaura both reached season goals on vault and beam, respectively. Jennifer Dube earned the best all-around score with a 36.75.

Swim for Sports

The annual North sports fundraiser, Swim for Sports, will be held Friday and Saturday, March 17-18 at the North pool.

Anyone interested in joining this event can contact 343-2214.

On March 17, the day will begin at 2:30 p.m. and close at 10:30 p.m. Saturday, the event will run from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Register for Park baseball

There is still time to register to play little league baseball this year in Grosse Pointe Park.

An early registration was held Feb. 15-16, but players who are interested and missed the two-day registration can still sign up by April 1.

The league is open to all players between the ages of 7 and 12. To register, call Jim Bright at 884-5422. For further information, call Kevin Sullivan at 754-5100.

Winning it all

Rachelle Atrasz, who swims for the Pointe Aquatics swim club, traveled to the February Invitational Swim Meet in Cincinnati Feb. 17-19, and came home with the meet's top prize.

Atrasz, 8, won the High Point for the girls' 8-and-under events by finishing first in each event she participated in.

Her first-place finishes came in the 100 individual medley (1:25.34), 50 butterfly (37.44), 50 backstroke (39.46), 50 breaststroke (43.45), 100 freestyle (1:15.21) and 50 freestyle (32.34).

Rachelle's 50-free time qualified her for the 10-and-under girls' state meet later this month. Atrasz is coached by Mike O'Connor.

North's Scott Clein, who led North with 14 points at South Lake last week, will have to go to the hole more tonight when North opens up district play at Notre Dame.

Swimming

"I told them we were behind by a few points and that we needed a win," Michalik said. "I really don't keep track of points and coaches were coming up and telling me the meet was coming down to a battle between us and Novi. I guess it worked because the kids swam out of their minds."

"But, I have a good group of kids," Michalik said. "They knew that I was pulling their legs. I really didn't keep track, but I know we had to be in the lead."

Not only are they deep, but the Blue Devils have one of the finest diving trios in the state. Ken MacLean, Norman Florence and Neal Combs, who are under the direction of Don David, finished fourth, fifth and sixth, respectively. "Don David is a fantastic diving coach," Michalik said. "He does a nice job with all the divers."

Ted Stedem went on to finish second (2:02.2) in the 200 IM, and Andy Walter took a second in the 100-free (50.33). Third-place finishes were turned in by Jim Mello (50 free), and the 200-medley relay team of Winner, Ted Stedem, Brad Stedem and Chris Keane (1:43.1).

Tim Peacock and Tim Jogan, two swimmers who battled the flu all week, finished sixth and fourth, respectively, in the 500-free.

North will send divers Bob Jara and Jason Kahn, who finished seventh in diving, to the regional diving qualifiers on March 7. If either one can get out of that meet and qualify for the state meet, Roddis stated it would be just another tale in this storybook season.

"At the start of the season I thought we wouldn't be very strong, but the kids just continually worked hard," he said. "It would be very exciting for them to qualify for the states, but all in all we've had a very good season."

Next season, the young Norsemen team should come of age to be one of the favorites to win the MAC.

"We knew we couldn't beat Fraser this year because they had a lot of seniors coming back," Roddis said. "Really, what we were looking for at this meet was to come out of it second. We thought if we could do that, then we'd have to be considered the odds-on-favorite to win it next year. I think we gained some respect."

Michalik speculated earlier in the year that his Devils were strong, but would have never thought they'd cruise to an unbeaten year.

"I really didn't think we had this good of a team," Michalik said. "During the season some teams would take a first, but we'd come right back and take a second, third and fourth because of our depth. That's really why we're so successful."

To maintain its reputation as a top-five state team, South will need some gutsy performances at the state meet.

"I think it'll be a four-team race for the state title," Michalik said. "I hope we put in a strong showing. In order to do so, the key will be how well Ted Stedem swims in the breaststroke and how well our top two relay teams do. Brad Stedem also has to swim a low 24 (seconds) in the butterfly. If all of this comes together, anything can happen."

Behling leads Knights to 3rd

Greg Behling, the superior freshman swimmer at University Liggett School, was named Most Outstanding Wrestler at the Class C-D state swim meet Feb. 18 at Eric-Mason.

Behling, who helped the Knights finish third, took first in the 100-yard individual medley and the 100 breaststroke. Behling's breaststroke time of 1:04.5 set a new meet record. His first-place finishes also earned him all-state status.

Earlier in the week, ULS lost to Cranbrook Kingswood, 47-31, but bounced back to beat Avondale, 96-75. In that meet, Dan Shanle and Behling took two firsts for the 8-1 Knights.

Liz Stavale and Tom Horsely's team concludes its season at Marine City on March 2.

Hockey

Paced by the strong goaltending of Mark Sullivan and a four-goal performance from Doug Wood, the ULS boys' hockey team defeated Gabriel Richard, 7-2, to end the regular season.

ULS finished the regular season 19-4-2.

Sullivan was credited with 22 saves and allowed only one goal before turning the job over to Jon Bell midway through the third period. The game-winning goal was scored by senior Shannon Nowowiecki at the 5:59 mark of the second period. It was Nowowiecki's 44th goal of the season. He has 70 assists.

For junior tri-captain Wood, the game took on a special meaning. Wood's assist of one of Andrew VanDeweghe's two goals broke Allen Taber's school record for career points (238). Wood now has 242 career points with one year at ULS remaining.

With his four points, Wood is also now fifth on Michigan's high school all-time scoring list with 116 goals and 126 assists. Nowowiecki is 10th on the career list with 80 goals and 108 assists.

Wood and Nowowiecki also finished the season as the state's single-season scoring leaders.

ULS opens regional hockey play March 2 against Allen Park Cabrini at 6 p.m. at Cabrini. If the Knights win, they will face the winner of the Cranbrook/St. Clair game on March 4 at 8:30 p.m.

Volleyball

In a dual match at home with Lutheran Westland, the Knights prevailed in the first match 15-13, 15-12, but slipped in the second match, 11-15, 8-15.

ULS travels to Oakland Christian March 2 for its last regular-season game. ULS then plays Lutheran East at Almont High at 10 a.m. in the first round of district play.

Basketball

The Knights marched on the victory path last week with wins over Redford St. Mary, 61-49, and Lutheran Northwest, 70-58.

With the double win, ULS ran its winning streak to 11 and closed the regular season at 17-3.

"The St. Mary's game was a big one for us," said ULS coach Chuck Wright, who was unable to coach due to illness. "They (St. Mary) were real fast and every time they tried to take the ball to the hole, we shut them down. We played great team defense."

ULS struggled through the first three quarters at Northwest, but behind Kevin Crociata's 13 fourth-quarter points, the Knights scored 30 points in the final eight minutes. Crociata finished with 19 and Kandia Milton led all scorers with 24 points. Tarik Lester followed with 18 points and four assists.

At home against St. Mary's, ULS took command from the opening tip. Crociata paced the Knights with 16 points, while Milton and Lester each canned 14.

ULS will face No. 1 ranked (Class C-D) Detroit Country Day March 2 in district play at St. Clement. The game is set for 6 p.m.

'Pudge' Cavanaugh beats nation's best players

Walter "Pudge" Cavanaugh, a former Grosse Pointer now living in Florida, has continued to polish his tennis game in the land of sunshine.

Cavanaugh plays in the senior men's circuit in the 75-year-old division and has done quite well since last fall.

Since October of 1988, Cavanaugh has won five singles championships and five doubles championships. His doubles partner is George Reynolds.

Playing singles, Cavanaugh's biggest win came at the Parkside Meadows Club at Fort Meyers when Cavanaugh knocked off Harry Hoffman, 7-6 (7-4), 6-4. Hoffman had been the nation's top seniors player.

Cavanaugh also beat Jack Staton, the nation's No. 4 ranked player, 7-5, 6-4 at the Oasis Club in Fort Meyers.

At all the tournaments he has played in since October, Cavanaugh has yet to lose at singles or doubles. Also, in each tourney, he plays singles and then follows it up with a doubles match.

Quite a feat for a 75-year-old player from Grosse Pointe.

Blue Devils head for postseason with 16 straight basketball wins

By Rob Fulton
Sports Editor

The first goal was to be Eastern Michigan League champions. The second goal was to be only the third team in the 80s to be unbeaten in the league.

And now, with both those goals accomplished, the South basketball team can set its sights on winning the district basketball title at Notre Dame.

South, 18-2, finished the E.M.L. circuit with a resounding 70-59 win over Mount Clemens Feb. 24. In that game, Andy Ament, an all-league selection, poured in 28 points and grabbed 10 rebounds. He also blocked two shots. Andy Ayrault, who joined Ament on the all-league team, hit for 11 points, had 10 rebounds and two blocked shots. Chris Rowan, seeing plenty of action after being hurt, scored 10 points.

Guards Joe Caldwell and Chris Gramling led the offense with "an outstanding floor game," according to Coach George Petrouleas.

South, which finished the E.M.L. 14-0, has won 16 consecutive games heading into tonight's 6 p.m. contest with Detroit Finney. The Devils haven't lost since Dec. 13 and now own the school record for most consecutive wins in a season. The league championship is also the first one in eight years for South, and Petrouleas' second in 10 years.

South lost to Finney by 30 in the first round last year, so it will be looking to wash away that embarrassment.

Hockey

If you look at the overall record (6-12-4) of the Devils, you may think they struggled all season.

Part of that is true, but in the last two games they were a formidable opponent for Cabrini and East Kentwood as they played both teams to a 1-1 tie.

South, 1-9-3 in the Metro East League, outshot Cabrini 39-14 and East Kentwood, 17-11. Derek Farr picked up the tie against Cabrini, and the goal was scored by Brink Cawley. Pat Clavet and Steve Tucker assisted.

Renato Roxas and Andy Busse assisted Peter Bourke's goal against Kentwood.

Volleyball

South wrapped up the Eastern Michigan League championship with a 15-5, 15-8 win at home against Mount Clemens.

South, which strung together eight straight wins in the middle of the season, got 13 service points and five kills from Traci Lee. Chris Schulte added six kills and Jenny Kalmink and GERALYN Bocci combined for eight kills.

At the Ann Arbor Tournament, South finished second in its pool and eighth overall in a 36-team field.

South advanced to the quarter-finals by beating Lakeland (14-16, 15-4, 15-7), but lost to Ladywood, 15-6, 15-6.

On the day, Schulte had 31 kills, Lee had 17 and Kalmink added 16 kills. Bocci slammed 14 kills for South.

South, 18-7 overall and 12-2 in the E.M.L., will face North on March 4 at 10 a.m. in the first round of district playoffs at South.

South's Chris Gramling will have to thread the needle when the Devils partake in the district playoffs tonight.

McSkimming, Egler win

The 1989 Art Van Pro-Am Tennis Tournament was held at the Wimbledon Racquet Club (WRC) Feb. 4-6 and drew more than 300 spectators.

Teaching pros from area racquet clubs were paired with qualified amateurs for this doubles tournament. Forty-eight competitors vied for the $2,400 purse.

In the Men's Open Division, Fraser McSkimming (G.P. Farms) and Don Egler beat Dick Keller (G.P. Woods) and Wayne Jackson, 6-3, 1-6, 7-6.

Kirsten Streng and Jennie Cross beat Lucy Gorski (G.P. Woods) and Robbie Risdon, 6-4, 2-6, 7-6, to win the Women's Open Division.

Keeping good 'Company' with help from friends

By Mary Valentic
Special Writer

Poor Robert. Poor Happy-go-lucky, single, successful, young Robert. He has everything. Good health, good looks, good friends. So what is left to wish for when blowing out the candles on his 35th birthday cake?

This is Robert's dilemma. And our own dilemma, as we examine urban life and love in Stephen Sondheim's timeless musical, "Company."

With all the grace and charm of a television game-show host, Davis Gaines as Robert, ushers us through a maze of marital mimicry, as we explore the relationships of five of his friends.

There is the diet-obsessed Sarah (Nancy Johnston), joyful non-conformist Jenny (Lucinda Hitchcock Cone), sweet, southern Susan (Sean Murphy), anxious, non-committal Amy (Donna Lee Marshall), and the jubilantly judgmental Joanne, expertly played by Alison Bevan.

Theater

As we fall in love with each of these ladies, so does Robert. And with a little help from their supportive spouses, played by James Hindman, Kurt Ziskie, Gary Lynch, Timothy Wahrer and Michael Mulheren, he soon realizes what he has been missing in his own life — company. Close encounters of the spousal kind.

Likely wifely candidates are Kathy (Linda Gabler), a head-in-the-clouds airline hostess played by Anne Connors and a convincing, metropolis-mesmerized Marta (Carolee Carmello).

"Company" opened on Broadway in 1970, a time when the value of marriage was being questioned by youth.

If there is a purpose in "Company," it is as a vehicle for Sondheim's rebuttal — that marriage is valuable, necessary and relevant.

"Company" is expressive, energetic entertainment and with the exception of the symbolically interesting but slow, awkward "Tick-Tock" dance, is performed well by a hard-working cast.

Musical highlights of the production include "Another Hundred People," "Getting Married Today" and the most familiar, "The Ladies Who Lunch."

At the Birmingham Theatre through March 19, the pleasure of this "Company" belongs to the audience.

Tom Hanks takes off in 'The Burbs'

By Marian Trainor
Special Writer

Tom Hanks fans who rush to see "The Burbs," expecting to see another "Big" will have to adjust their perspective to appreciate the film. It is a chaotic satire on the paranoia of the suburbs, where anyone who deviates from the set mode of lifestyle is suspect.

In "The Burbs," Hanks steps out of his role as a confused teenager dealing with adult problems in a man's body as he feet from the garage to dispose of garbage, stopping long enough to beat it into the can before driving back into the garage.

Ray Peterson (Tom Hanks) is on vacation. His wife, Carol (Carrie Fisher), urges him to go to their cottage for a rest. He refuses. He just wants to laze around the house and enjoy the peace and tranquility of his neighborhood.

There are distractions to keep life interesting. There is his Vietnam-veteran neighbor, Runfield (Bruce Dern), who goes into a raging fit when another neighbor's white toy poodle pays a visit to his lawn every morning.

There is the kid who wings the morning newspaper with the deftness of a major league pitcher. He never misses his target; namely Hanks waiting on the porch.

Then there is Art Weingerner (Nick Ducommun) a walk-in-anytime-but-especially-at dinner-neighbor who gets up from a meal he has not been invited to share and goes to the refrigerator to help himself to last night's leftovers. These are everyday irritants that are tolerated.

Hanks is mildly curious about what goes on in the new neighbor's house but he is ready to let it go at that. Dern and Ducommun are not. They want to know what the neighbors are up to. Hank's wife holds the view that there is nothing wrong with them. They are just different.

The film then shifts into a comic horror story. Hanks and Ducommun decide to pay a call on the neighbors. When they lift the door knocker, it falls off and they are attacked by a swarm of bees; a human femur bone is found buried beside Hanks' fence and Gale Gordon, the poodle's owner, disappears.

What follows is pure slapstick enhanced by some Speilberg-type special effects.

Although "The Burbs" is not expected Hanks' fare, there are scenes that belong only to him and add to the worth of the movie.

There is a surprise ending that is one of the best features of the film.

Film
