Local police practice when to shoot-don't-shoot

By John Minnis Staff Writer

I was blown away by a gunman last week.

At about 1:30 p.m. on a cool, overcast day March 30 I was working with my partner when we got a call of a disturbance on the third floor of an office building. My partner went up in the elevator while I checked out the lobby.

A hysterical woman in her late 20s came running up to me saying she thinks my partner's been shot. I told her to calm down, that I'd take care of it, and she should wait outside. Seconds later the elevator returned to the main floor. The first thing I remember seeing when the elevator doors opened was my partner lying on the floor in a pool of his own him.

I was numbed at first by the surprise, but when the assailant turned toward me and started raising a handgun, I knew I'd better act. I fired once, but the shot went wide, by about six feet. I shot again, but I couldn't tell where the bullet went. The gunman fired once. His shot was on the mark, I fell dead just feet blood. A man was standing over from my partner. The gunman got away.

The overhead lights flicked on and Special Agent Robert J. Seymour, principal firearms instructor for the Detroit office of the FBI, told me I did OK, especially since I'd never held a handgun before. He said my judgment was good. I had fired my modified Model 13 Smith & Wesson in a true shooting situation.

School millage election Voters go to polls Monday

By Nancy Parmenter Staff Writer

The last week before the school millage election still finds voters with questions about the tax requests.

The PTA/PTO groups of a number of the schools have come together to sponsor a questionand-answer forum tonight, Thursday, April 6, at 7:30 p.m. at Parcells Middle School. Speakers will be Edward Shine, deputy superintendent, and Christian Fenton, business affairs director.

The schools are asking for a 25.3-mill renewal and a 2.2-mill increase, hooked together in one request and covering a threeyear span. A three-year renewal of 1.3 mills for library operation is requested separately.

Because of recent assessment increases, the full amount that the district could capture under Headlee limitations amounts to a 17 percent increase, but Fenton predicted that the board would only levy about 9 percent. Costs for building projects and for personnel health insurance are two of the biggest causes for the increase, according to Fenton

"Building repairs are going up 7.5 to 9 percent," he said. "The big question mark is those building projects out there: roofs, North's pool, window replacements. Some of those are bigticket items."

Health insurance costs have things being equal, we'd have to pay it in some other area. "We're part of Local 1; we know what other school employees' groups earn - we have to remain competitive.'

Fenton said he had expected the residential assessment increase that was announced a few weeks ago, and based the schools' millage request upon it. Without the increase, the schools would have had to ask for more.

"For eight of the last 11 years, we had a voluntary rollback," he said. "Every year the board has looked at the program and decided the needs. They didn't levy the full amount that had been approved by the voters.

"Right now we're at the max - and that's the point. We need the 2.2 mills because we'll be maxed out in two years and short the third."

Fenton said he plans three years ahead, which makes specific statements about tax rates difficult. Budget assumptions are made each spring and often changed in September.

Where to vote

Polls will be open Monday, April 10, from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m. for the school millage election. Grosse Pointe Park votes at Pierce Middle School,

15430 Kercheval. Grosse Pointe City

Budgeting vagaries are illustrated by the current increase in interest income the schools are enjoying, owing to higher interest rates. But Fenton said rates can change and costs can go up or down.

"In terms of total budget, $200,000 is a small portion," he said. "But $200,000 is a significant amount of money to anybody, and it could equate to a half percentage point tax increase or decrease.

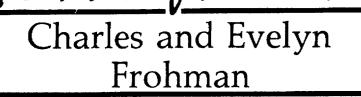

"The point is, we've got a track record of not taxing more than we need."

The school board opted to tie the renewal and increase requests together, making passage crucial. "If it doesn't pass, the board will have to come back with a new proposal," Fenton said. "We wouldn't have enough to continue.

"We're not taking this lightly - look what happened to the library request."

Voters turned down an $8 million request to approve bonds for library construction and expansion last year.

According to school figures, a 2.2 mill increase would cost the owner of a $100,000 home (with an assessed value of $50,000) an additional $100 a year. The owner of the average Grosse Pointe home (market value $147.203, SEV $73,602) would pay an extra $147.20 a year. Figures have no bearing on the hike in assessments.

But this fame hasn't gone to her head. "I'm very honored to win, because there are at least 10 teachers in our building who could be up for this award," she said

Susalla was nominated by the school's administrative staff and was praised for the way she communicates with her students, inspiring and encouraging their inventiveness.

"I try to give students a fun atmosphere," Susalla said. "I really want everyone to succeed, so I make it kind of like home for them."

In her life skills classes, Susalla teaches everything from canning to cake-baking and encourages experimentation with recipes and insists on proper manners among her students.

"I try to show the kids things that can help them - life skills,' Susalla said. "They need to know how to save money, so I show them how to make a casserole that can last for four days for the same amount of money a burger and fries costs.'

Another important aspect of her classes is that she encourages parent participation. Her class hosts a dessert day in which all parents are invited. The students make the dessert and serve their guests, like waiters or hosts.

"I also make them introduce their parents to me, as a courtesy," she said.

Most parents are happy to be included, she said because for many of them, once a student leaves elementary school, parents seem to be ignored by the schools until high school. Susalla's mother died when

It isn't too difficult to realize why Susalla went into teaching. Her stepmother and two sisters are teachers. Teaching home economics blended both her love of cooking with her love of kids.

"Junior high is such a unique age," Susalla says about her classes. "They're not grown up, though they think they are, and they're not babies, and they're trying to balance the two. They don't want to show you they care, but they do. I'm kind of their

Tax checkoff to prevent child abuse

Michigan taxpayers may use a check off box on their Michigan grams for latchkey children. State income tax returns to donate $5 or more to the Children's Trust Fund, a private, nonthe prevention of child abuse and neglect.

This year, for the first time, taxpayers who owe tax money as well as those receiving refunds may contribute to the Children's Trust Fund. For the that, so far, only half as many past six years, the voluntary check-off was available only to those receiving refunds.

According to David C. Mills, CTF executive director, the fund was established in 1982 as a permanent source of funding for local programs throughout the state that work to prevent child abuse and neglect. CTF provides grants to local organizations for programs such as sexual abuse prevention, pregnancy/newborn education programs, family resource centers, parenting skills training courses and support tions. State legislation was necgroups, and after-school pro-

"These programs really work," Mills said. "While most programs provide after-the-fact profit organization dedicated to treatment of abuse, the CTF is a unique organization that works to prevent abuse and neglect before it happens."

Mills said that CTF support is primarily from donations solicited through the tax return, but people are giving this year as gave last year. "We're very disappointed. We don't know what to attribute these poor results to. With over 50,000 cases of child abuse reported last year, it's hard for us to believe there aren't more people concerned about supporting child abuse prevention efforts.

The Children's Trust Fund, a private non-profit organization, is administered by a board appointed by the governor. It is funded entirely by private donaessary to include it on the income tax form.

Some Wayne County organizations who receive grants from the CTF are: Family Services of Detroit, the YWCA of Western Wayne County, the Wayne County Intermediate School District, Mercy Hospital, Lula Belle Stewart Center, Inc. and Latino Outreach & Community Service.

Since its beginning in 1982, funds collected through the tax check-off have risen steadily, from $664,913 in 1983 to $1,220,161 in 1987. According to Mills, these funds are added to other donations and placed in a trust account. Half of the money is invested each year and the other half is distributed to local child abuse prevention programs throughout the state. Forty percent is designated for local child abuse prevention programs and 10 percent goes to administrative costs.

According to Mills, the 50-50 method of saving and spending will continue until assets reach $20 million, when all programs and operating costs can be paid entirely from interest earned from the account. At that point, the check-off box will be eliminated from Michigan's tax form. He said the number of reported child abuse cases in Michigan has risen dramatically in recent years, but funds collected through the Michigan income tax check-off have fallen sharply.

"If every Michigan taxpayer gabe only $5 each, we would have $21 million for child abuse prevention," Mills said. According to Mills, reports of suspected child abuse and neglect have increased more than 500 percent over the last 15 years. "More children under the age of 5 die from injuries inflicted by their parents than die from tuberculosis, whooping cough, polio, measles, diabetes, rheumatic fever and appendicitis combined." - Margie Reins Smith

Headlee limit confuses vote on tax boost

E ven though the Headlee amendment limits voted tax increases, it is causing confusion for prospective voters as the Grosse Pointe school board seeks a proposed 2.2-mill boost in the Grosse Pointe public school and library levies at a special election next Monday, April 10.

That amendment, often called simply "the Headlee" or "Headlee," is named for its major sponsor, Richard Headlee, now chairman of the board of the Alexander Hamilton Life Insurance Co. Headlee chaired Taxpayers United for Tax Limitation that directed the petition drive that put the proposal on the ballot and led to its passage in 1978.

What the Headlee amendment does is put a cap on the amount of property taxes that can be collected as a result of increases in state equalized valuations (SEVs). In general, it means that property tax increases cannot exceed increases in the annual cost-of-living, especially after the first year.

In fact, the amendment has a compounding effect, meaning that the longer the millage has been voted in terms of years, the more Headlee reduces the authorized maximum tax rate and the more it complicates understanding by taxpayers and officials alike.

To add a further complication, the portion of the Grosse Pointe school tax imposed by the county, which amounts to 7.65 mills this year, is subject to a different compounding factor under Headlee than the one applied to the voted portion. Counting the county portion, the overall millage rate for the Pointe school system will be 35.20 mills if both propositions are approved April 10.

In Grosse Pointe, the application of the amendment in the first year of the renewed and increased school and library levies would permit, if both proposals pass, a maximum increase of 17 percent in the average homeowner's tax bill. However, the board next September is expected to set the increase at no more than 8 1/2 to 9 percent effective Dec. 1 for the 1989-90 school year.

That boost would mean an annual tax increase of about $147.20 in school taxes on a typical Grosse Pointe residence with an SEV of $73,601 and a total valuation of $147,203. That is the same amount that the school administration forecast earlier in the year by estimating the SEV increase at about 10 percent.

To support the estimate of a levy less than that authorized, school officials have reminded the public that in eight of the last 11 years the school board has voluntarily levied less than the maximum permitted by law.

Since Headlee went into effect, the board in the first year of a newly authorized millage has always had the authority to levy increases of between 12 and 20 percent but the biggest increase actually imposed has been 9.9 percent. So while the 8 1/2 to 9 percent boost in school taxes is still a substantial one, we believe it is likely to be the maximum the board will levy.

It is also important to note that variations in assessments occur within each city and between individual homeowners. While one millage rate rate is set for the school district, the effect on each homeowner depends on the SEV for his home. And while the average increase in assessments for the entire district amounted to 12.9 percent, the average was different for each of the five Pointe municipalities.

Overall, the district expects to boost its revenues by about $3.1 million if its requested millage increase is approved. Such an increase would bring the district's overall budget to approximately $52 million for the coming year.

With school enrollment declining or just holding its own in recent years, why is such a large hike in revenue required?

The school system offers a series of reasons. A major one is to enable the schools to continue providing small classes, especially in the elementary schools. Another is that the system insists its salaries must remain competitive in order to attract and retain quality teachers and other staff.

In addition, the five-year projection is for an increase of 945 students by the 1993-94 school year with most of the increase occurring in the elementary grades. And school health costs, like those of the nation as a whole, have risen rapidly in recent years and next year are expected to go up another 13 percent.

Another factor is that costs of books, computers and other technological hardware have continued to escalate. And with buildings in the system averaging 47 years in age, and some more than 60 years old, the district is facing costly major repairs in the near future.

Over the years, the Pointes have posted an impressive record of supporting the district's public schools and libraries, with one result being that both systems now have reputations for excellence. Unfortunately, the costs of maintaining and continuing excellence are still rising, which means that higher taxes must be imposed to produce the revenue required.

The other side of the coin is that if the millage propositions fail, drastic staff reductions and other cutbacks would be required unless the proposals were resubmitted and approved in June. In our view, maintaining a record of excellence is costly but worth it. So we recommend a yes vote on both propositions on the ballot April 10.

Both issues need yes votes

Two issues will be on the ballot at the special school election April 10, but both need approval if the public schools and libraries are going to be able to continue their excellent services to the Grosse Pointe community.

In fact, voters will be asked to renew the levies for both the library system and the schools as well as approve a 2.2-mill increase in the school levy.

The first proposition is a request to renew a 1.3-mill levy to operate the libraries that expired in December 1988. In June 1988, voters approved a four-tenths of a mill library levy that will remain in effect until 1993. This year approval of the 1.3mill request would mean a three-year renewal that would carry the full 1.7 mills through 1991. Other people have wondered how the Grosse Pointe district might be affected by the efforts toward school finance reform in Lansing. The answer, of course, is that nobody really will know unless and until specific legislation is approved by the Legislature.

Recent efforts at state legislation could have capped millage rates and severely limited local control in the Pointes. In addition, the school system has heard speculation that the Legislature might end state-paid Social Security and/or pension benefits for districts like Grosse Pointe. Such an action could cost the district approximately $2.5 million a year in state aid.

It also is true that any state school fi-

The second proposition asks 27.55 mills to operate the schools for a three-year period through 1991. The total includes a 2.2-mill increase, plus renewal of the 25.35-mill levy that expired last December.

Some people have raised a question about the school board asking for the renewal and the increase in the school levy in the same proposition. In effect, they wonder why they will not have the choice of voting separately on the renewal and the increase.

The school administration's answer is a simple one. It is that both the increase and the renewal are needed if the school system is to continue to provide a quality education for its students. Since all operating millage for the schools and all but fourtenths of a mill for the libraries expired last December, approval of both propositions is required if the current excellence is to be maintained. nance reform that provided for an increase in the state sales tax would require a statewide referendum. So even if the Legislature votes to approve a proposition such as the recent one for a two-cent increase in the sales tax, the issue still would require approval by the people.

The Grosse Pointe Board of Education has pursued a careful and prudent policy in the past. That has meant that by not levying the full amount permitted by law in eight of the last 11 years, the board through voluntary rollbacks, in addition to those required by the Headlee amendment, has saved an estimated $18.7 million for taxpayers.

We fully expect the board to continue that prudent policy, meaning that it is likely to levy no more than needed this fall, which, we have been assured, will be less than the full amount authorized if both propositions are approved April 10.

Crime dips in the Pointes

Objectively, the five Pointe communities showed a slight decrease in major crimes last year, according to a comparison of the 1988 and 1987 crime reports that appeared in the Grosse Pointe News in recent weeks.

The major offenses – listed in the reports as homicide, rape, assault, robbery, burglary, larceny, auto theft and arson – declined from 1,859 in 1987 to 1,708 in 1988.

Violent crimes, however, were up slightly in the Pointes, increasing from 100 in 1987 to 109 in 1988. But there were no arsons reported, only two homicides (both in the Farms), eight rapes, 52 assaults and 47 robberies.

Larceny was the most frequently committed crime in the Pointes with a total of 1,197 cases reported in 1988, or 116 fewer than in 1987. Car thefts remained about the same in 1988 as in 1987 with thefts in the five Pointes reported at 213. And burglaries dipped slightly from 229 in 1987 to 193 in 1988. What caused the slight decline in major crime at a time when many other communities were reporting increases in offenses?

Public safety directors tended to credit community support and cooperation, the high visibility and the presence of welltrained, uniformed public safety officers, and the fact that all the Pointes are stable, law-abiding communities.

The low crime figures for the Pointes as a whole and the comments of the public safety directors offer further evidence of the attractiveness of the Pointes as communities in which to live, work, attend school and, in general, enjoy the good life without too much worry about criminal activities.

And obviously much of the credit for the excellent crime control in the Pointes should go to the public safety departments of the five Pointes and the cooperation they give to each other whenever it is needed.

Say yes To the Editor:

On Monday, April 10, the Grosse Pointe Board of Education will ask voters to approve a millage renewal for the library and a millage renewal and increase for the schools. The request for an increase is not one that Board of Education members make lightly. We take seriously our responsibility to practice fiscal responsibility in operating the schools, and we believe our record proves that. In 1983-84, we reduced the school millage rate by 2.2 mills, and we have operated within that financial framework up to the present time.

Increases in SEVs have allowed us to do that, but they have provided the school system with no great windfall in revenue. In fact, over the past 10 years, school taxes have increased an average of only 6.3 percent annually.

Now we find that increasing costs and the effect of the Headlee Amendment tinue our educational programs without a return to the '82-'83 millage rate. We have instituted a number of cost-cutting measures, and we continue to look for other ways to save. However, we remain committed to providing the best education possible for our students. That, unfortunately, can no longer be accomplished without a millage increase.

Every board member is a Grosse Pointe taxpayer. When we ask the voters for an increase, we ask the same thing of ourselves. All seven board members agreed it was absolutely necessary. My choice To the Editor:

The answer to a "yes" or "no" vote in the millage election on April 10 is really very simple. Deciding whether to support our school system, which has earned a fine reputation nationwide and should have earned our trust, is projecting the value we put on ourselves.

If we support it, we value ourselves and where we live. If we don't support the millage request, we are saying we aren't worth the price we pay to live here.

That is the choice we will be making April 10. I know what my choice is!

Man (and me) vs. machine

Somewhere in a musty old records hall in Washington, D.C., there exists a test sheet upon which is written "Lowest score seen in 25 years of testing." The test was one for mechanical aptitude, given as part of a battery of exams to high school seniors. That particular test sheet belongs to me.

It was the spring of 1975, my senior year in high school. My classmates and I took dozens of tests in preparation for college. I did well enough on most to earn myself several scholarships. Except from the U.S. Navy, which was looking for a few good men - and women - but was definitely not interested in me.

Shortly after the test, the U.S. Navy representative returned to school with our test scores. He distributed all of them, save one, which he held back to show me in private after everyone else was gone.

"Little lady," he said in his best macho militaryese, "in my 25 years of testing, I have never seen such a low score on this little, old mechanical aptitude test. You scored a three. That's three right out of 100. How in the world do you get the cap off the toothpaste every morning?"

After sizing up the beefy-looking swabbie, I quickly abandoned any thoughts I had about making sure he would never have to worry about using toothpaste again. I just listened to him chuckle, waited while he advised me to stay away from any career involving mechanical things of any sort and tried not to blush when he told me he'd be forwarding my scores to the Pentagon to be placed on file.

Today, 14 years later, I am settled comfortably in an artistic career, where, oddly enough, I am called upon from time to time to serve as the newspaper's computer expert. (Which should spews a month's worth of-dust tell you something about our computer system).

Generally though, mechanically speaking, I can drive a car, run a sewing machine, make margaritas in a blender, and even remove and replace the cap from the toothpaste tube each day.

But I don't like it very much. Because I have come to believe that machines are out to get us. And they seem to be winning.

Take my vacuum cleaner, for example. No matter how many times I change the belt and the bag and clean those yucky hairs off the roller, the silly thing still all over every time I turn it on. My self-cleaning oven isn't.

And as a matter of fact, it never has. Although the buzzer on the oven timer goes off all by itself rid of it. The day I traded it in, sometimes, even when no one the gear shift froze, making it has used it in weeks. That's probably the self-cleaning gizmo, had to send a tow truck and I laughing its maniacal, mechanical laugh at me for having the gall to expect that it will work.

I won't even get started on the mechanical horror stories my cars have caused me. OK, since you asked, I will.

My late, lamented Renault Appliance, er, Alliance, once named Car For a Year, um, Car of the Year, tortured me from the very first day. In five years of ownership, I paid for two windshields, two transmissions (one new, one rebuilt), four brake jobs, three new exhaust systems and countless fan belts, tires, hoses, etc.

When I finally got rid of it, the only thing that still worked was a switch we'd rigged up inside the passenger compartment. The switch would turn on the engine fan, since the fan had long since ceased operating on its own.

But the worst part of the car was that I almost couldn't get impossible to move. The dealer could swear I heard that red devil of a car calling my name as it was dragged away.

My new car works better, for now, even though it is a machine. But I don't want to think about that. Not when I've got the washing machine to worry about.

About three months ago, it began to leak green water from the bottom. Of course, that was after the main dial was stripped. Now we turn the washer on with the tip of a pen. Except for Mike. He uses the end of a hunting knife. Something about showing that damn machine who's boss, he said.

Which is why I've taken to leaving anything and everything having to do with machines to Mike. He knows how to talk to them, how to baby them and how to nurse them along into cooperation. And in lieu of that, how to kick the bloody heck out of them.

Me, I got a three out of 100. I don't even know what to do about the can of hair mousse I store in the bathroom. I noticed this morning that it sits there, with a soul all its own, spewing forth great globs of snowy-white hair stuff. Without anyone pressing a button or even standing within arms' length. A regular Mount St. Helens of hair products.

I wonder what the Pentagon would think of that.

License needed

To the Editor:

There appears to be some concern that the Grosse Pointe War Memorial's attempt for a license to own the alcohol served at the Center is contrary to the Algers' intent in donation of the building to the community in 1949. This is not true!

In fact, my late husband, Alger Shelden, along with Paul Moreland and Richard Huegli and all founding board members in 1949, believed that the Center would need a license in this day and age so that proper control and liability insurance could be in place. John Lake also strongly believed the Center should be licensed.

Alcohol consumption at certain functions has been going on for 30 years. As a concerned citizen and board member, I endorse the War Memorial's efforts to control the consumption of alcoholic beverages. The War Memorial, as the host organization, should own it so that alcohol may only be served through War Memorial channels – not by outside individuals who "brown bag" and give it away.

ary board member, I have always wholeheartedly supported our efforts to obtain licensure.

Object to liquor license

To the Editor:

I happened to attend the first meeting requesting the granting of a Class C Liquor License by the Grosse Pointe War Memorial.

You would think every minister, parent, teacher, and the board of education would want to tell their side of the story. We already know the other side of the story.

It is only a few years ago that Grosse Pointe South High School would not allow its students to play in an orchestra where they served drinks.

Must we say more! The students are now trying to help themselves by offering rides to anyone who calls them. The parents are trying to do the same.

We know that substance abuse nearly always starts with beer, and then goes on to something stronger. Who would ever dream that a neighborhood memorial center would promote or even consider the risk of exposing its residents to what could become a life-taking habit.

I happen to be a member of Grosse Pointe Memorial Church, and I am writing to record my objections to the proposed issuance of a Class C liquor license to the War lemorial. Such a license as I understand it, would give the holder permission to sell retail beer, liquor wine and spirits for consumption on the premises. The premises are located on a rather large

I would think the community should be thanking the War Memorial for being responsible and caring in this issue.

A very important responsibility this association has is to control the distribution of alcohol on its premises in an effort to protect the youth as well as the community. This is our objective. As an honorthought I had walked in to the bleachers of Tiger Stadium.

Here we are supposedly part of the most polished segment of the United States, and I hear such statements being made by the pre-license group such as -drinking is the American way - it must be the thing to do - because one of our socialites confesses to brownbagging her liquor, etc. What drivel.

An insult to any naive. neophyte.

The church comes under this category.

Besides the church building proper, the church has a columbarium of 300 niches or more. I own two of them, and I can wait.

I am unable to find any reference or issuance of a liquor license in relationship to the distance from a cemetery or columbarium.

There are no restrictions as to how far or where liquor can be dispensed - if at all.

It would be my suggestion that the statute be rewritten so that a cemetery or columbarium are covered whether near a church or not.

To bring in liquor by the glass is tantamount to set ting up a bar on the steps of the Lincoln Memorial.

To try to dignify the selling of liquor by the glass by ignoring the influence it would have on the neighborhoods and the people who live there is like throwing gas on the fire.

Monday's school board meeting may have set a record for efficiency, brevity and directness. And maize and blue-ness.

At 8 p.m. - right on time the meeting was called to order by President Jon Gandelot (U of M, B.A. '66).

Gandelot announced that an executive session was scheduled after the public portion of the meeting. He fixed one eye on the clock. "There's a new, unwritten rule for this board. If two or more members are graduates of a university that has a basketball team in the national playoffs - uh ... the agenda can be expedited."

Vice President Carl Anderson (University of Michigan, M.A. '67) smiled.

"All those in favor?" Gandelot said.

Trustee Fred Adams leaned forward, "Is this where you told me to say yes, Jon?'

The board whipped through the evening's agenda with lightning speed. Comments were short: a few brief ones from board members; none from the superintendent; none from the public.

Gandelot asked for a motion to adjourn.

'This must be where I say yes," Adams said.

The meeting was adjourned at 8:14 p.m., in undertime.

The University of Michigan basketball team won the NCAA championship 80-79, in overtime.

The Grosse Pointe Public School System has a long history of fiscal responsibility and sensitivity to the taxpayers. In the last eight years, the school system has chosen not to levy ^{$}18.7 million in authorized millage, while limiting increases in spending to an average of 6.3 percent annually. We believe the request for a millage renewal and increase is both reasonable and necessary in order to ensure that the children of this community receive the excellent education they deserve. The leg didn't slow him down on the Florida trip. He broke it just two days before their departure, but Évelyn Frohman simply rented a wheelchair and a mini-van and they were in business. The cast is due to come off 10 days before they leave for China.

No problem.

The docent thing is another story. He can't wait to get back at it. "I wish I'd done this all my life instead of what I did do." Frohman said with a grin.

Victims forgotten To the Editor:

Because 1 am the mother of a crime victim and have experienced firsthand the horror of what goes on in our American criminal justice system, I would appreciate your printing the following:

Every 23 minutes, some one is murdered. Every six minutes a woman is raped. As I write this, two people will be robbed and two more will be shot, stabbed or seriously beaten. Only 9 percent of violent crimes reported are resolved with the perpetrator being incarcerated.

Somewhere along the way the system has lost track of the simple truth that is supposed to be fair and to protect those who obey the law while punishing those who break it. The system serves lawyers, judges and defendants, completely forgetting about the victims.

Victims find little protection from our American criminal justice system and criminals know that the risk of punishment for their crimes is minuscule.

We have the truth in advertising and truth in packaging; what is needed is truth in sentencing. We must make the punishment fit the crime. Why play this game of giving long sentences that cannot even be legally served?

News

If we take the justice out of the criminal justice system, we leave behind a system that serves only the criminal.

Quality costs To the Editor:

I read with some concern the arguments expressed recently concerning opposition to the upcoming school millage. Unlike any other country in the world, the major responsibilities for the education of youth in the United States rests with local comnunities.

The decision to keep educational funding at this level was made deliberately and after much thought by our Founding Fathers. Jefferson argued, for example, that "no other surer foundation can be divised for the preservation of freedom, and happiness" at a time when other less optimistic leaders worried that the citizenry would not have the foresightedness to tax themselves adequately and hence in current language prefer to simply increase their own disposable income either out of misinformation, spite or greed. In this year's millage campaign, there are those who are understandably distressed by the recent tax assessments, but "striking back" at "irresponsible despotism" by voting against the school millage is like kicking your dog because someone cut you off on the freeway on your way home.

There have also been a number of comparisons between the environment and operation of private organizations and public ones. Such comparisons can be useful but they can also be misapplied.

It is simply inaccurate to say that teachers are not evaluated when they are subject to extensive written assessments periodically. Nor is it accurate to describe a teacher's days worked "one of the shortest in the world" when most teachers write references, grade exams, attend staff meetings, attend school events during the term and use summer to prepare classes, attend conferences and take graduate classes.

Inaccurate as well is the assertion that academic personnel never meet payrolls. Public sector spending accountability is far more closely scrutinized than that in the private sector. The "three-martini lunch" did not emerge as a description of public sector budgets.

There is, however, a useful aspect of the analogy between private and public organizations. An inadequately capitalized business will fail to deliver a competitive product and an underfunded school system will produce less than competitive students. Do we realy want to risk falling further behind the other industrial nations who finance education at the national level and far more generously? And like all public goods (schools, roads, parks, etc.) quality affects us all. An underfunded Grosse Pointe school system will fail to attract the best teachers and the best students leading to a general decline in the quality of the community in general.

As a father who will no longer have a student in the school system next year, I will be proud to cast my vote for the millage increase.

Explain taxes To the Editor:

I would like to see the Grosse Pointe News do all of its readers a service and inform us of the voter approved millage for all of our areas of taxes.

I understand that under the Headlee amendment, an increase in state equalized valuation can only raise your taxes an amount equal to the past year's cost of living increase; therefore it is important for all property owners to know what effect the new state equalized valuation will have on their taxes.

We certainly should know if we are presently paying the maximum millage for all these areas of taxes.

Pay for quality To the Editor:

We moved to Grosse Pointe six years ago because of the quality of life in these communities. An important part of that quality is the excellence of our schools.

Those who would have you vote against the school millage complain about teacher salaries and rising property values resulting in higher taxes. Howard Troglodyte says teachers are overpaid because he calculates they make more than $25 an hour. Well, unlike the line workers, who can make as much, the good teachers don't get paid for overtime and they put in lots of extra hours.

And the Taxnay bird, whose call is "cheap, cheap, cheap," harkens back to 15year-old tax bills and forgets about the galloping inflation we had during much of that decade.

The fact is that the hundreds of dedicated professionals, who have chosen to teach in our schools are not overpaid and they contribute to the quality of life we value. The tax dollars from increased property valuations do not automatically wind up in the coffers of the school district.

While we believe the schools are well run and well staffed, anyone who visits the schools or the administration offices would quickly conclude no money has been squandered on facilities or support staff.

Our schools are in need of additional funds and we urge you to go to the polls and vote in favor of the millage. Even if you don't have children in the schools, you will benefit because your property values will continue to be secure and your investment in education will pay off.

Support millage To the Editor:

A few weeks ago we got some good news from the City of Grosse Pointe Farms that we would like to share with our neighbors. Our assessment went up! There are many reasons why this is we were first looking at homes in the Grosse Pointes, we were astounded at the prices compared to other communities. Even though we had no children at that time, we still realized that the value of the homes reflected the values of the community. Over the next 11 years our assessed value rose as did the value of our home. The one time we questioned our assessment we discovered that houses in our neighborhood were selling at prices indicating that our assessment was right. I realize in some cases assessed value provides the mechanism for review and correction. The main reason our assessments are up is because there is continued demand for homes in a community offering excellent schools and a pleasant living environment. I have heard people complain that their assessments are too high but I don't hear anyone who has sold a house recently admit that their home was really not worth the sale price. While I hope house prices never get as high as in California and New York, I am glad I live in a community whose real estate is appreciating.

can be in error, but each city

I have also heard people say that they plan to oppose the millage to send a message to city and school officials. But what is the message this sends? That they are ignorant of the fiscally responsible policies the Grosse Pointe School System has been following, that they can care little about continuing to provide excellent educational opportunities for the young people in this community, and that ultimately they don't realize where much of the value of their house is based.

I am supporting the proposed millage increase because the message I want to send is a continuing commitment to excellence in our schools and our community. Connie Frev

Use good judgment To the Editor:

The March 16 editorial, "Freedom of speech under fire," in the Grosse Pointe News made some good points marching in Skokie have all provoked controversy. These activities and others are within the realm of free speech, but they are events that cause offense to a large part of the community. It is true that "times change" and that we sometimes determine what is acceptable, even legal, on the basis of community mores, as if moral standards should be based on a majority vote. Thus, today the electronic, film, and print media have somewhat eased their standards as to what is acceptable. However, as we hear about concern for freedom of speech, we also see that there still are limits. What happened to "Jimmy the Greek" illustrates this rather well.

At the same time that we see the media demonstrating a greater freedom to use language, pictures, or other means of expression that are offensive to many of us because they ridicule our religious beliefs or other sensitivities, we hear of people losing their jobs, or being punished in other ways, for violating current standards of conduct with respect to racism or sexism that, while far from inappropriate, are much more stringent than those of even a decade ago.

Even so, there is an unevenness, a selectivity, in deciding what to be fair about. The infamous Grosse Pointe News cartoon of a couple of years ago, that unfairly and incorrectly portrayed pro-life people was a good example of this. Women, blacks, or others would not have been generalized about in such a way.

It seems to me that much of what we do under the protective umbrella of the First Amendment involves, or should involve, voluntary human decency, rather than adherence to detailed laws. In a sense, this comes down to the Golden Rule.

Sometimes people offend unknowingly, and sometimes deliberately. It would be difficult to imagine that those involved with either "Last Temptation" or "Satanic Verses" were unaware of the hurt they would cause. Many, including Muslims, have seen a parallel here. The response, of course, was very different; numerous Muslims have stated that Rushdie should be killed, while Christians, as far as I know, did not go beyond peaceful boycotting of MCA/ Universal and picketing of theaters. Yet, this does not mean that Christians were less offended than the Muslims.

I would not object to a fictionalized film on the life of Christ which does not distort what the Bible says about Him, but I was very distressed that Hollywood would put a film that presented an image of my Lord and Savior that was very different from, and in some ways exactly opposite to, the Biblical account. Why would anyone want to do such an unkind thing?

Some people base their morals on what is legal, operating on the assumption that whatever is legal is moral. A characteristic of the kinder, gentler nation proposed by President Bush would be that we are considerate of others even if the law doesn't require it, asking ourselves not only if an act is legal, but if it is fair, kind, and just. I don't expect that people will stop using profanity, or smoking, or doing other things that offend me, especially if I don't say anything. These are offensive behaviors that people usually do unknowingly. What I am objecting to is the deliberately offensive act, and a person who attacks another's religion in the way that the authors of these two works of art have is about as offensive as can be.

This is an example of the principle that freedom involves responsibility. As they say, we shouldn't yell "fire!" in a crowded theater, but neither need we go out of our way to ridicule others, regardless of our First Amendment rights.

There is another principle involved here, too. Special acts are special because someone did something that was not required. I would prefer to have people be nice to me because they want to, not because they have to.

In the newspaper business, you often make judgments about what to print. You ask yourself if something is not only legal to print, but also if it is right, fair, decent, etc.

Sometimes you misjudge.

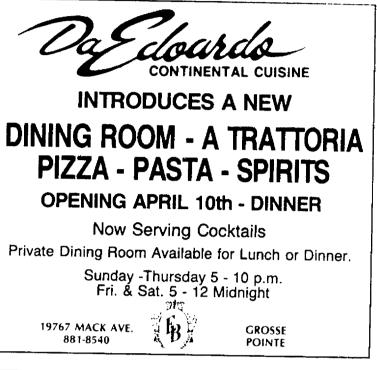

I found it ironic that last week's paper had a front page on teen alcohol use, and the op ed page had Ron Bernas' "I Say" column which spoke of "a whole afternoon of dirt-dishing and drinking," referring to socializing in a bar, and stated that "a house that use to hold the wildest parties (at CMU) is now a Christianonly rental unit."

I'm not a teetotaler, and I'm not sure that we need to sneak around with alcohol, although I'm more and more convinced that it is our most dangerous and widespread drug, but we could be more careful about publicizing it as something we are obliged to use in social situations, or might find useful any time we experience some stress. I didn't see any pictures of adults at a reception, each holding a "drink," as is so common, giving the underage drinkers the message that that is a way to be grown up.

This has been a rather wide-ranging letter, but all of the topics I've covered are related, and relate to the editorial I mentioned. I hope that I might have stimulated your thinking.

He said it was very gracious of Patterson to invite the FBI out, and he thanked the chiefs from the departments for coming or sending representatives.

Attending the seminar when this reporter was shot were Patterson, Shores Public Safety Chief Daniel Healy, Farms Chief of Police Operations I.A. Backman, Park Public Safety Deputy Director Phillip Costa, Sgt. James Smith, also from the Park, and Sgt. Lyle Reece, representing the City police.

Seymour explained how the shoot-don't-shoot projector and gun work. The system is known by the acronym FATS, for Firearms Training System. He joked that officers who have completed the seminar are called FATSOs, meaning Firearms Training System Officers.

The portable system is made up of a computer, a video disk player, a projector and screen, laser light detectors and a modified police handgun.

The handgun has a batteryoperated laser light emitter installed in the barrel. When the trigger is pulled, the laser light hits the slide projection screen, bounces back and is picked up by the light sensors on the FATS machine. The computer calculates where the shot hit the screen and highlights where the bullet would have struck The system provided 40 different scenarios that are flashed on the screen. The officer has only a split second to decide whether a situation warrants his firing his weapon

After the officer has shot, the something you bought your child times, the newer system can be bank robbery, a gunman hidden used with semi-automatic weapons now used by some departments and which, more importantly, is the weapon of choice by drug dealers. After an officer gets done shooting at the projection screen with a laser-emitting semi-automatic, the screen lights up like a Christmas tree.

The scenarios are quite lifelike and the FBI has put together situations that the average patrol officer is likely to run into.

One scenario has the officer walking through a park when a woman bails out of a car yelling that a man is trying to rape her. The man jumps out of the car with what looks like a weapon in his hand. If the officer fires at the man, he's in trouble because the man only had a billy club. It was not a shooting situation.

Other scenarios include а in a trunk, and the situation cited earlier where the reporter got blown away.

Patterson said the FBI is doing a good service for the small police departments throughout the state. He said police departments can't afford to buy a FATS machine, and they can't send men away for two weeks to police academies.

"This way we can put all our people through the training exercise," he said.

Grosse Pointe City Public Safety Director Bruce Kennedy, who was unable to personally attend the shoot-don't-shoot session, said the FBI is offering the local police departments excellent training.

'We're grateful to the FBI for allowing us to take part in this," he said. "It helps us maintain our excellence."

By John Minnis Staff Writer

An ordinance that was blocking the opening of a second yogurt shop on Mack Avenue was revised by the Grosse Pointe Woods City Council Monday, allowing the new shop to obtain a business license.

Last month the city rejected a business application from partners Jeffrey Quinlan and Michael Nepi due to an ordinance that limits the number of businesses in the city to six in a category comprised of bakeries, delicatessens, confectionaries and ice cream stores.

The partners appealed the denial and asked the City Council to revise the ordinance to allow additional yogurt shops. Currently, TCBY is the only other such shop in the Woods. Earl Wakely, city safety inspector, suggested in a letter to City Administrator-Clerk Chester Petersen that since delicatessens, bakeries and ice cream

All the world's a stage

Grosse Pointe Park's Don Azigian, a member of Grosse Pointe Theatre, manned the backstage booth to communicate with the light booth, making sure the actors looked their best.

Kathy Babylon, above, and Celeste Sisson, below, of Actors Theatre of Grand Rapids presented the one-act play "Graceland." In it, both women talk — the day before the opening of Graceland mansion to the public — about how Elvis has touched their lives. Their work earned them second place.

The Grosse Pointe War Memorial's Fries Auditorium was the setting for a weekend of nonprofessional theater fun.

Hosted by the Grosse Pointe Theatre, AACT Fest, a competition of productions by community theaters in Michigan, brought actors, directors, crew people and lovers of the stage to Grosse Pointe Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

Each group that participated, nine in all, had 10 minutes to put up their set, one hour to perform a play or a cutting from a play, and 10 minutes to strike their set. Then they were publicly adjudicated by three judges, Lavinia Moyer artistic director of the Attic Theatre, Bob McElya, professor in the Communication and Theatre Arts Department at Eastern Michigan University, and Tom Small, theater professor at Western Michigan University.

"It was an exciting weekend," said Mary Lou Johnson, president of Grosse Pointe Theatre.

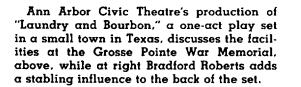

The winner was the musical comedy "Nunsense" about a group of nuns who host a benefit to raise funds to bury 52 of their sisters who were wiped out by botulism. It was performed by the Music Society of the Midland

Center for the Performing Arts. "Nunsense" will go on to compete in the AACT Fest regional competition. The winner of that goes on to national competition, and that winner competes in Monaco in the worldwide event.

Police arrest alleged drug dealer

A joint investigation by the Grosse Pointe Park police and the Wayne County sheriff's Narcotics Task Force led to a suspect living and operating out of a house on Harvard.

Armed with a search warrant, the police arrested the target of their investigation on March 16, finding evidence of narcotics sales. The suspect was in possession of several quarter-ounce packets of suspected marijuana, packaged for sale; several packets of suspected cocaine, and some hallucinogenic mushrooms, according to the report.

Officers conducted a field test of the suspected drugs. The test was positive, according to Park Capt. William Furtaw, who cautioned that field tests are not definitive. He said the substances have been sent to a laboratory for analysis, which is expected to take several weeks.

Furtaw said no charges will be brought until police have the results of the lab tests.

Cracker Jax found guilty of more liquor violations was found guilty of six additional liquor law violations by a Liquor Control Commission administrative law judge late last month.

The LCC's findings come amid negotiations between the city of Grosse Pointe Farms and Cracker Jax owners to have the business, now operating as Topsiders, transferred entirely to the fathers of two of the present owners.

The LCC ruling resulted from a hearing March 20 during which testimony was given concerning six liquor violations involving three under-age customers of the Mack bar in July and September of last year.

In December, an LCC administrative law judge found Cracker Jax, which holds a liquor license under the corporate entity United Syndicated Artists, guilty of 24 of 36 liquor law violations involving some 18 under-aged customers during police investigations in May, June and July of last year.

In the December ruling, the LCC also ordered that Cracker Jax management pay $9,200 in fines and that its liquor license be revoked unless it is transferred to another party approved by the LCC by April 30 of this year. United Syndicated Artists is appealing the earlier LCC ruling.

> On Feb. 7, the Farms City Council voted to revoke the cityissued business license held by the owners of Cracker Jax. The council also voted to recommend to the LCC that the United Syndicated Artists liquor license be revoked > Cracker Jax attorneys, however, obtained a temporary restraining order preventing the city from revoking the business license. A revocation of the business license would have put the current Topsiders out of business.

Under the preliminary terms of the settlement, which is being negotiated, the four current owners will sell the business to the fathers of co-owners Mark Di-Maso and Sam Tocco. The Farms council has yet to take official action on the settlement.

As part of last month's LCC ruling, the administrative law judge also stipulated that United Syndicated Artists' liquor license be tranferred by April 30 or else it would be revoked, just as had been previously ordered by another LCC judge after the November hearing.

This activity takes place at Poupard and Defer schools under the auspices of art teacher Augie Tedesco. The purpose, she said. is to expose students to artists outside of the classroom environment.

The show presented local Grosse Pointe and east side artists who demonstrated and displayed and sold watercolors, porcelain dolls, acrylic paintings, weaving, drawing, silver jewelry, leather work, pastels, clay and pencil drawings.

Included in the program was Toshie Tamura, the mother of one of Poupard's students, who made oragami figures.

lifestyle of the gentleman farmer on both sides of the Atlantic. From Colonial American plantations and English country manors come the classic influences for this traditional furniture design.

Crafted in pecan solids and richly figured pecky pecan veneers, Fisher Park pieces are finished in a deep nut hue, enriched with golden undertones. The patina of the finish is reminiscent of carefully tended antiques.

Jaguar is both modern, traditional — and very, very British stract names like Infiniti, Lexus, Lumina and Axxess, the oldfashioned marque of Jaguar reminds us of an earlier tradition of names like Black Hawk and Terraplane, Bearcat and Thunderbird – names that 150. clearly belonged on automobiles, not legal data services or computer programs.

The elaborate and ferocious head of the jungle beast still adorns the Jaguar, named for a fast and powerful feline, both in the hub of the steering wheel and on the front hood. And the Jaguar is fast, powerful and, in a curious way, feline.

The Jaguar comes in two quite different forms, a V-12 sports coupe and convertible and an elegant six-cylinder four-door luxury sedan. Although the Jaguar than 12,000 of them were built is very modern, it has a strong sense of tradition, polished wood and leather inside, a conservative and graceful exterior British tradition about it, but in trimmed in bright metal as were most cars in years past.

The Jaguar has long held a favored spot in the American heart, which is a bit unusual for a British car. The United States is by far the biggest market for Jaguar (as it is for Rolls-Royce also) and it has had a magic appeal ever since its XK-120 twoseater sports car with the smoothly curved hood (or bonnet) and flaring fenders (or wings) first excited motorists here in the late '40s and early '50s.

In those days, foreign cars were very scarce in the United States, but one could spot a few strange-looking Volkswagens and - rarer yet - the dashing British sports cars, MG, Triumph, Sunbeam and Jaguar.

A special sporty Swallow was built in 1936 and given the name Jaguar in an effort to promote sales of the SS Swallow. Instead, the Jaguar swallowed up the Swallow and Jaguar emerged as a separate marque in 1945.

In 1961, Jaguar introduced one of the most beautiful modern designs, the XK-E, a low, sleek, pure mathematical curve of a car which was so breathtakingly beautiful that its fans forgave it all sorts of mechanical problems. In '71, a V-12 engine was put in the XK-E, which did not elimi-As imports became a more nate these problems, but did add to the Jaguar's mystique. Over the years, problems with the Vkey role. are royal, wealthy and conservative in their automotive tastes.

Not so. There are cars on the roads in Britain so odd that they are sometimes alarming, as when a three-wheel Reliant comes up over a hill toward you, driven on the wrong side of the road with the heart-stopping abandon of the British motorist.

There is the Mayflower, a sharp-edged sedan which looks like a dwarfish Rolls-Royce. There is the Morgan, a true aficianado's sports car of great tradition which well into the modern age eschewed such developments as chassis made of steel and some of which used leather straps to keep the hood from popping up.

Soon the achingly beautiful MG-TDs and TFs and Sunbeam Alpines were gone, junked by their owners or stored away as the collector classics they would become. And the odd-looking English Fords, Hillman Minxes and Morris Minors were just junked.

What survived were the highstatus marques, the Jaguar, the Rolls-Royce, the Bentley, the Rover (although the latter has been exiled from this aristocratic market a couple times and is now incarnated as the Sterling

Not only did he take on an after-work job as an unpaid assistant to the pro at a local golf course, but he also practiced almost every day. Over three years, he reported $3,000 in tournament winnings and $21,000 in expenses. The IRS disallowed the losses, arguing that golf was just the taxpayer's hobby. But the Tax Court disagreed. Since the aspiring golfer clearly intended to make a profit the court deemed the losses legitimate.

Another side to medical deductions: A homeowner who was severely allergic to mold sneezed her way to an unusual deduction. The siding on her house had grown moldy, aggravating her allergies to an unbearable level. Her doctor recommended that she change her siding to alleviate her condition. The ruling? In a conversation with undercover IRS agents, the drug dealer bragged about the amount of money he earned as a result of his activities. Cell saver Blood-cleaning machine — and the staff which runs it — meet the challenge of serious surgery

By Peggy O'Connor Andrzejczyk Assistant Editor/Feature Editor

One day recently, the fourperson perfusion staff of the St. John Hospital and Medical Center crowded into the tiny office of supervisor Ann Fleming. It was between heart surgeries and the group seized the chance to relax or finish paperwork before the next surgical procedure began.

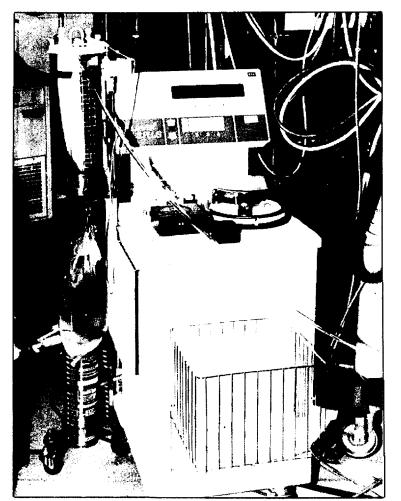

There aren't many opportunities for the perfusionists to relax. They are either in surgery, serving as back-ups to those working in surgery or on call. Perfusionists are vital to heart and vascular surgeries, trauma cases and orthopedic operations. Yet few people have heard of the discipline or know what a perfusion-ist does.

"There are only 2,000 of us in the nation. Not many people increase in angioplasty proceknow what we do," says Fleming, a registered nurse and certified perfusionist who started the department at St. John's 17 years ago.

Perfusionists are responsible for operating the heart-lung machine which sustains the action of those organs during major surgery. It is a high-stress job, made even more so by a shortage of skilled perfusionists, an increase in the number of medical procedures which demand the technology and by the very nature of the profession.

"The demand for perfusionists has skyrocketed in the last three

The Cell Saver.

ORIGINALLY, PERFU-SIONISTS were physicians. Then in the late 1950s and early '60s, heart surgery began to really take off and the heartlung machine was born. The first machines were large and bulky, but as improvements were made, they became more vital to the success of heart surgery. And so did perfusionists.

'I did the first heart surgery at Beaumont, the first one at Sinai and at Children's and I did the first one here at St. John's in 1972," Fleming says. "I ordered the nuts and bolts and wheels of the perfusion department here. And I'm still around," she says with a laugh.

Others in the department are Gwen Stewart, Jeffrey Chores and Robert Tobin. Each testifies to the high stress of a job in which they must run machines responsible for keeping patients alive.

"Yeah, it's stressful. All of us share one big fear: of an air bubble passing through the lines and into the patient, which would be fatal," explains perfusionist Chores.

"But you can't let it get to you. You have to learn to deal with it. I was really nervous my first year, which is when you are learning to 'solo' on the ma-chine. I finally said to myself that I had to settle down and just do the job or else I'd wind up on the table.

"We laugh a lot. We have a good relationship with one another and that helps.'

Each perfusionist has his or her own way of dealing with stress.

In an early morning valve replacement surgery recently, perfusionist Stewart moved quietly about her station next to the operating table. She was busy monitoring several of the patient's vital signs, recording all while operating the heart-lung machine.

Later, in a more-complicated surgery for an abdominal aortic aneurysm, Chores whistled and joked as he readied the heartlung machine. Despite the stress, Chores says that there's "no feeling like driving home and being able to say that I had a hand in saving someone's life and allowing them to go home to their family."

DURING HER SURGERY, Stewart was responsible for taking the patient's body temperature down through medication, in order to reduce the body's need for oxygen. She also put the patient on the heart-lung machine, first stopping the heart by injecting a solution of cold potassium - a procedure called cardioplegia - then continuing to administer the drug to keep the heart stopped during surgery.

At the appropriate time, she removed the patient from the machine and rewarmed the body, all the while keeping track of vital signs and blood gasses and fluid output and replace-

In general, perfusionists also operate the aortic balloon pump used on many patients, and are responsible for operating and maintaining their machines, as well as being key members of the surgical teams.

"The doctors expect us to be there. I tell perfusion graduates that their goal is that no matter what surgery they do, the doctor should never have to ask who's going to be the perfusionist of the day," Fleming says.

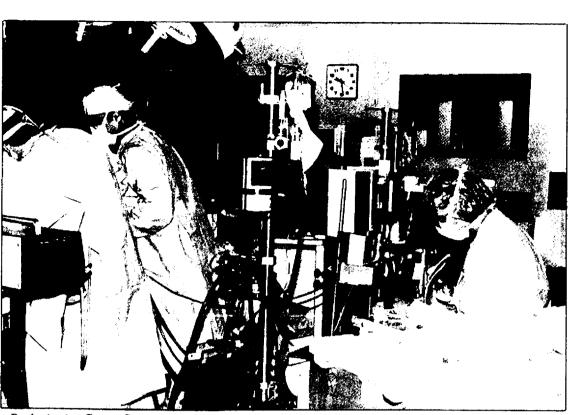

"And although we're not at that table, we have to know where they are in the operation. You get to know very intimately the sound of a clamp."

Although it wasn't in use during that surgery, Stewart is also responsible for running the "Cell Saver," a relatively new machine which collects blood lost during surgery, purifies it and returns it to the patient, thus reducing the need for transfusions from a donor.

And although it adds another responsibility to the perfusion staff's job, it is one they gladly accept.

"This is such an important piece of equipment," Fleming says. "If the public only knew how important. At first, it was used because everyone recognized the need to save blood because of what had become a recognizable shortage of donated blood. Now, with AIDS, there's a clamor from the public for what the Cell Saver can do."

What the Cell Saver does is this: A suction tube collects blood from the surgical wound into a reservoir attached to the Cell Saver system. A filter in the reservoir removes debris such as blood clots. From the reservoir,

"We'll continue to recruit new people, but right now, new machines would certainly help."

National Volunteer Week is April 9-15

More than 900 volunteers are 1988 expected to attend the fifth annual National Volunteer Week of United Community Services of Kick-Off Breakfast on Monday, April 10, signaling the beginof volunteerism. National Volunteer Week is April 9 through April 15.

Coordinated for the first time by the UCS Center for Volunteerism, the breakfast will be held at 8:30 a.m., April 10, at the Westin Hotel's Renaissance Ballroom.

One of the highlights of the Kick-Off Breakfast will be the presentation of awards for outstanding volunteerism, including the Cheers Award given to a metropolitan Detroit area employee volunteer for volunteer accomplishments outside of working hours. Nationally known author and lecturer Paul Pearsall, Ph.D., founder of the Daily Living Clinic at Sinai Hospital, will be the keynote speaker. He is the author of three international best-selling books; his latest book, released October 1988, is "Super Joy; Learning to Celebrate Everyday Life.' Grosse Pointe's Louis A. Weil III, president and publisher of The Detroit News, is this year's honorary chairperson; community volunteer Kay White is the 1988-89 National Volunteer Week Chairperson. Tickets for the breakfast cost $11.50 per person and are available from The Center for Volunteerism, United Community Services, by calling 226-9415. National Volunteer Week, the nationwide celebration honoring the efforts of volunteers, began in 1974 during President Richard M. Nixon's administration. An estimated 1.6 million people (42 percent of Detroit area residents) volunteer an average of 4.2 hours weekly, generating approximately 240 million volunteer hours annually of cemmunity service. Forty-nine percent of these volunteers are employed full time. Of these Detroit area volunteers, people 25-34 years old volunteer the most, followed by people 35-49. Younger adults (18-24) and older adults (65plus) are less involved in volunteer activities. In Wayne, Macomb and Oakland counties, more than 1,000 human service organizations use volunteers to enhance community service. An estimated 80 million people whose efforts are valued at more than 150 billion dollars volunteered nationally in

What better way to welcome spring than with an event which combines free showings of floral arrangements, demonstrations, horticultural and gardening displays, with various admission events, all at the Detroit Institute of Arts?

It's "Art and Flowers: A Festival of Spring," scheduled for April 11 through 16 at the DIA. More than 50 flower arrangements, created by members of the Federated Garden Clubs of Michigan Inc., will complement works of art in the museum's permanent collection.

The goals of the spring festival, which was held for the first time in 1985, are to bring more visitors to the museum, encourage membership in the Founders Society and to raise monies for the Art and Flowers Tribute Fund, an endowment dedicated to the beautification of the museum.

A gala preview at 6 p.m. Tuesday, April 11, will feature a cocktail reception, music, first viewing of the celebrity invitational displays and a fantasy auction hosted by J.P. Mc-Carthy, Ben Bidwell and Frank Boos. Tickets are $35 each.

Daily event packages include a luncheon and fashion show by Bonwit Teller; docent tours; lectures by K mart lifestyle spokesperson Martha Stewart, Connoisseur Magazine editor-in-chief Thomas Hoving, designers Mario Buatta and Renny Reynolds, and table-setting expert Judith Smith of California.

Then on Saturday, April 15, demonstrations will be presented on plant propagation by David Smith, on edible flowers by Christopher Steele, and on Ikebana, the Japanese art of flower arrangement, by Tommy Thompson.

The original work of 24 Michigan artist finalists in the Art and Flowers poster competition will be shown through April 16. Local groups participating in the Art and Flowers event are the Grosse Pointe Garden Club, the Garden Club of Michigan and the Junior League Gardeners.

Free displays may be enjoyed through regular museum hours: 9:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Tuesday through Sunday. Tickets for daily events are limited and advance reservations are recommended. For reservations and complete information, call the Founders Society Development Office at 833-7969.

"Art and Flowers: A Festival of Spring" invitational flower arrangers include, from left, Betsy Campbell of Grosse Pointe, representing the Garden Club of Michigan and the Federated Garden Clubs of Michigan; and Marilyn Gushee of Grosse Pointe, Junior League Gardeners. Both are also Art and Flowers underwiting co-chairmen and Gushee was general chairman of the very first Art and Flowers event at the Detroit Institute of Arts in 1985.

Hills, Southfield, West Bloomfield, the Pointes, Palmer Woods, Bingham Farms and Romeo.

Party-giver extraordinaire John Bloom will host "Grand Canyon Suite," a musical feast with a Southwestern flair, on April 9 at 6 p.m. Cost is $50 per person.

The Grosse Pointe events include "Viennese Variation" in Grosse Pointe Park, prepared by DSO cellist Marcy Chanteaux on Friday, May 12. Cost is $65 per person for the evening, which features a Vienna-style menu prepared by Chanteaux and her gourmet cook husband Bill Stein.

The Grosse Pointe Yacht Club will be the setting for a "Venetian Boat Festival," on June 19. Participants can enjoy wine and hors d'oeuvres dockside and sail off to a Lake St Clair cruise to the sound of a DSO brass fanfare. Cost is $40 per person.

Among those working on these fun food festivals are Pointers Ann Lawson and Pat Young.

Helping others help themselves is CROP Walk, CWS goal

By Peggy O'Connor Andrzejczyk Assistant Editor/Feature Editor David C. Bower, Michigan

director for Church World Service/CROP, came to the Grosse Pointe Rotary Club's luncheon Monday to thank the service club for its assistance in the Church World Service's effort to feed the hungry of Michigan and the world.

He also came to remind Rotary Club members and guests that their work has resulted in more than just food for the hungry.

"More important than food, we can give hope," Bower told the group at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial. "We can share new skills and education and give the people we serve the opportunity to be self-sufficient.

"That's what we do with money we raise through events like the CROP Walk, right here in Grosse Pointe.'

Bower has been involved with CWS/CROP for 25 years. He has worked extensively in Michigan and has also traveled to such places as Pakistan, India, Botswana, Mozambique and throughout South Africa on behalf of the group and its relief and development effort.

"Michigan is the leading region in the United States in terms of its CROP fundraising work," Bower said. "Last year we had 107 communities in Michigan support our effort. And of course, 25 percent of what is raised stays in the local area. Grosse Pointe was No. 1 in the Detroit area in last year's walk.'

Seventy-five percent of the funds raised in the annual CROP Walk are used in the overseas effort. Bower spoke about those efforts Monday as he showed slides of the areas he had visited in Africa.

"The thing that makes us unique," he said of CWS, "is that we operate through the local agencies rather than through the government. And one of the exciting things is that we meet with the community leaders in the countries we serve and help them work with their people in solving the problems of education, nutrition and public health."

One way CWS puts the funds raised to work is by developing cooperatives in the refugee camps in South Africa, teaching the people to sew, cook, read or to build things for their use or to sell.

"For each $1,200 raised, we can help the people put in a new well. They dig the well and we help pay for the cement and the work to finish the well," Bower said. "But we help people help themselves.'

Bower asked Rotary members for their assistance in helping the CROP Walk effort by sponsoring walkers or participating themselves.

"And as we walk the streets of Grosse Pointe next week, we should keep in mind that the people we help must walk miles every day, just to survive," he added.

The ninth annual CROP Walk is set for Sunday, April 16, at 1:30 p.m. The 10-kilomter walk will begin and end at St. Paul Lutheran Church, 374 Lothrop Road in the Farms.

Organizers of the event have set a goal of raising $35,000, topping last year's effort of $32,000.

Grosse Pointe A Unique Community

A Cultural Cornucopia Appreciation of the arts begins at an early age for Grosse Pointe children. The public library, a division of the Grosse Pointe Public School System, offers, at no cost, a variety of children's reading programs at its three locations.

For adults, the library programs range from travel films to informative presentations on subjects of current in terest. These, too, are free to residents of all the Grosse Pointes

Another great source of local culture is the beautiful War Memorial Center, the former mansion of the Russel-A. Alger family. With its subsequently added ballroom and theater overlooking Lake St. Clair, the center is a community attraction that rivals the many private clubs in the area. Here - open to all residents are offered art classes and exhibits, lectures, concerts, plays, ballet and social dancing instruction, and children's theater as well as membership in a long list of special-interest clubs whose focus is either cultural, informative or just plain fun

A more recent addition to public property is the Edsel and Eleanor Ford House. Designed by architect Albert Kahn and supported by a $15 million endowment, this gracious replica of an English manor bouse is now open for tours and is used for meetings, fund-raising events and several series of "house" concerts

16B Community Grosse Pointer Wisteria and willows prove that spring will triumph ders, reds, golden yellows, or-

Spring and winter seem to be contending for first place these days, taking turns in their attempts to prevail. But we all know that in spite of appearances, spring really will triumph.

The flowers of April, in the various flower calendars, are wisteria, daisy, cherry blossom and willow. The willow is the Chinese symbol of resurgent spring and the willows on Lakeshore are beginning to present a hint of green.

Spring means garden planning and the Grosse Pointe Garden Center has already held its first planning session for the Trial Gardens on the lakeside of the Grosse Pointe War Memorial. Meeting in the Garden Center last week were representatives of all the garden clubs which will plant and help maintain the gardens this summer.

As usual at this first meeting, a theme was chosen and this year's plots will echo the patterns and colors of American Patchwork Quilts. Another meeting is set for April 19, when designs for the plots will be approved and funds allotted in preparation for the planting days in mid-May.

The Trial Gardens have been a local landmark since 1950 and were originally designed by landscape architect Eleanor Roche. The wheel pattern was planned so that the center was the original Windmill Pointe millstone.

Year after year the gardens have been a popular place for summer weddings, visitors from around the world, artists and gardeners, butterflies and children. The gardens are supported by the Vincent DePetris Fund at the Garden Center, named for a much-loved Grosse Pointe florist, designer and chrysanthemum hybridizer.

Wildflowers will soon make their annual appearance in the woods and the little golden Lady's Slipper Orchid is certainly one of the loveliest. Orchids are one of the oldest of the world's flowers and as long ago as five centuries before Christ, they were grown and loved in China. Confucius mentions them frequently and Theophrastus, a student of Plato, is credited with giving them their European name.

In medieval Europe, orchids were considered to have aphrodiest flowering plant family. More siacal power. Jacob Breynius, a 17th century German botanist, described orchids very poetically. "If nature ever showed her playfulness in the forming of plants, this is visible among the orchids. They take on the form of little birds, of lizards, of insects. They look like a man or a woman, sometimes like a clown. There are thousands of amateurs growing orchids in this country and each year, more flower-lovers take up this hobby. For generations it was thought that orchids could only be grown in greenhouses, but in recent years, it was discovered that many varieties can be grown on window sills as house plants providing exotic and romantic beauty in even the most humdrum of rooms.

Frankel has been the garden writer for the Free Press for more than 20 years.

You're in good hands

Only once in my two years at the Grosse Pointe News, have I entrusted my sports estate to anyone other than myself. I am, however, placing the heavy responsibility into Nancy Parmenter's hands for one week.

It's not a trial period for Nancy. She's done this sort of thing before and if I didn't know any better, I would say she enjoyed. After her first stint as sports editor last June, Nancy was ready to return the reins to me and let me once again guide the department.

Well, it's time to reciprocate and allow Nancy the dubious honor of handling the sports section as I pack for a week's vacation

As a pinch-hitter, Nancy is plenty qualified despite the fac that she thinks a triple play is when a customer plays the Lotto three times. Nancy is an intelligent writer and a qualified sports junkie, despite the fact that she believes stealing second should be placed in the police reports.

Now, don't get me wrong, I like Nancy and wouldn't let just anyone plop into my chair. despite the fact that she thinks rounding third and heading for home is when you beat the yel low light and make it home in time for dinner.

Since baseball season will be in full swing, Nancy will have to attend some games. She'll also cover softball games tennis matches and track meets. But, by the time she gets out there, I hope she knows that a shortstop is not a quick visit at a friend's house.

Nancy is conscientious and knows right from wrong so I'm not too concerned about the content of the sports pages. I only hope she remembers that a foul tip is not something a bogus salesman gives her.

Nancy has already started formulating some ideas about her column next week. She talked to me about the allegations facing Pete Rose, where the Tigers would finish this year, the NCAA basketball tournament and the local sports scene

I don't know what she'll write about next week in her column, but whatever it is I'm sure it'll be informative and en-

Trab your stadium seat and your sunglasses, because the spring sports season at North and South is under way. Coaches are gearing for baseball softball, tennis, soccer and track and field and also for a run at the league title.

Teams have been practicing since the end of February and coaches were working hard long before that. The spring coaches at North and South can't predict how the season will unfold, but do assure us all that it will be another enjoyable spring sports season in the Pointes.

The following preseason articles outline the coaches' expectations for the next two months.

Baseball

With nine of his 16 roster players being labeled as pitchers. it's obvious North baseball coach Frank Sumbera will have a sturdy staff, and a veteran staff.

Led by Mike Rancillio, who was 2-1 with a 2.98 ERA last season, the Norsemen's team strength rests on the mound. Jamie Acord, who didn't have a decision last year, will hurl, as will Scott Schorer and Kevin McCarron. Schorer and Mc-Carron will have full time jobs at catcher and shortstop, respectively. Not only will they be strong defensively, but they bring back a combined 52 RBI from a year ago.

McCarron, an all-league shortstop, batted .327 with six game-winning hits and two home runs, while Schorer slammed four homers to pad his .304 average.

"Our strength will come from our pitching staff," said Sumbera, "but we're also going to be strong in our skilled positions.'

North, South shoot for league titles

Rancillio is expected to be the sound," said Sumbera, who pil-pitching ace, but he's also quite oted North to the White Division effective at the plate. Last year he ripped one home run, batted in 11 runs and hit at a .320 clip.

Juniors Kevin Endres and Lou D'Angelo are also two promising pitchers who have impressed Sumbera through training camp. "Kevin and Lou basically have limited experience," Sumbera injury, will also play outfield, said, "but they have proven that but it's not sure where, yet.

championship last year. "My biggest concern is the strength of our arms in the outfield." Chris Meathe and Acord will battle for the left field job. Tim

Robertson and Scott Bernhardt, who is recovering from a hand

SOUTH

Baseball

With average team speed and plenty of inexperience, South won't be picked to repeat as league champs, but don't count them out.

"We're probably not favored because we lost a lot of players, including five all-league players," said South coach Dan Griesbaum. "We're inexperienced, but we're not looking to rebuild. We'll be in the thick of things.

South, which finished in a tie for first place in the Eastern Michigan League at 10-4 last season, will need plenty of help from the pitching staff in order to give the league title a shot.

'The season will be judged on how well the pitching staff comes on and if the jayvee kids perform well," Griesbaum said. 'The only real starter we have back from last year is Dale Wilson.

Wilson, who spent most of last season in the designated hitter slot, will return to that form and bring with him a .343 average. eight home runs and 22 RBI.

Limited experience on the mound causes Griesbaum to be cautiously optimistic.

"I'm a little concerned about it, but the kids just have to get some time in on the mound," he said. "We have a very strong nucleus and I'm sure they'll get the job done.'

Sean VonSchwarz and Dan Monahan will pace the pitching crew. VonSchwarz was 2-0 with a 2.95 ERA last season, and Monahan was 3-1 with a 2.30 ERA. Bill Leonard, who will also play some outfield, will pitch, and Mark Jungwirth will bring his 5-1 jayvee record with him. Marty Gulewicz, who was hurt most of last season, will also pitch.

Griesbaum wouldn't divulge his starting lineup, but his infield could consist of an entire crew up from last season's 17-8 junior varsity team.

It may be a Cinderella season if South were to win the league, but Griesbaum doesn't want to settle for that, either.

Bob Collins hasn't even entered his team in any competition, and yet North is already behind the rest of the pack.

Collins, who coached North to the dual and league meet titles of the Macomb Area Conference last season, may have to relinquish that top spot.

"The winter has really taken its toll on this team," said Collins. "Besides the usual aches and pains, we've been hit by more serious injuries.'

Senior high jumper and quarter-miler Matt Brady is still hobbled by an ankle injury he suffered during basketball season, and top sprinters David Vier and Brayton Cherry will be out another two to four weeks with broken ankles. Senior Vicki Groustra will return to the high jump pit, joined by Sara Liliensiek and Jenny Williams. Monaghan, a junior, and Mary Srebernak will be South's top competitors in the long jump.

"This is a real encouraging year because we had 80 girls come out, and 33 of them were freshmen," Zaranek said. "The girls have been working very hard."

Tennis

Although it lost half of its team to graduation, the South tennis team should be very strong for first-year head coach Tom Berschback.

According to Berschback, many may think this should be a rebuilding year for the South program, but that's not his approach.

"We're not rebuilding," he said. "We've got a lot of talented kids on the team and this season should be one of the best ever at South.'

South will have one of the strongest singles lineups with Lee, Nick and Emiliano Lorenzini all in the top three spots. South has never had three topcaliber players from the same family on the same team. Lee is ranked 23rd in the Westerns for the 18-and-under boys, Nick is ranked 5th in the Westerns and 45th in the nation in the 16-andunder division. Both of these ranked 21st in the Westerns and 120th in the nation for the 14and-unders. He will probably hold down the No. 3 singles spot.

But, the Lorenzinis aren't the also return. Other contenders for only newsworthy players. Ray Tumacter, the only senior on the team, will be back again to play doubles. Junior Craig Kostecke and sophomore Bill Wundram the remaining spots are Jim Pappas, Steve Carlin, Ned Johnson, Matt Smucker, Brian Disser, John Morreale, Peter Bourke, Chris Schilling, Rob McLaren and David Reed.

According to Berschback, the team will go through several tournaments and challenge rounds to establish the final team.

Soccer

Still in its 1989 molding stages, the Lady Blue Devils' soccer team will definitely have to replace many players: seven to be exact.

"On paper, I'm afraid we're hurting," said Coach John Case. "We have some key people back, but we're going to have to get a lot of help from our some players who were on the jayvee last year."

Currently holding intrasquud scrimmages, Case feels his team is ready, but he's a little reluctant to say how ready.

"At the moment the players are looking good against one another," he said, "but I'm not sure how strong we are compared to other teams. We'll have to wait and see."

Katie Kolp, who sat out most of the 1988 campaign, brings back 11 goals. She will be teamed with Beth Bonnani, Judy Gamen, Stephanie Vititoe and Michelle Kovalcik, all of whom sport plenty of experience.

"We're building around these girls," Case said. "We will have to blend them with players from the jayvee."

North is the defending league champ.

Tennis

Scott McSkimming and Bob Hetchler will be back at No. 1 doubles, but after that your guess is as good as Coach Ken Gutow's as to who will play

Gutow has to replace 10 of his top 12 players this year and he's going to have to do it with four new singles players up from the iavvee team.

'I'll be looking for leadership from Scott and Bob," Gutow said. "We're just hoping we have enough depth to do well in our division.'

Last year North was 13-0 and won the American Division of the MAC.

"Certainly one of our goals is to win the division, but it will be tough for us," Gutow said. "The goaltending will need to be strong for us to win and right now that's the position I need to fill in a hurry.'

Offensively, Regelbrugge has the fortune of seeing 20-goal scorer Beth Stevenson back on his front line. Joining Stevenson will be Michelle Stema, Christi Mack, Kerry Werschki and Rebecca Damm. Mid-fielders Jennifer Graham, Patricia Dugan and Paige Pelok could be one of the league's toughest combinations, but North's strength rests on defense.

"We have some key people back on defense so I'm not too concerned about that," said Regelbrugge.

Captain Laura Ferguson keys the defense, which is also supported by Soo Hur and Becky Miazek. Beth Blosnick will also play defense.

"We have the potential to be a good team," Regelbrugge said.

Grosse Pointe South - will have

Scott Nesom will be the No. 1 pole-vaulter and the injured Scott Collins will need to hurry back and earn points in the 800 run.

"Once we get over these injuries, which I hope we do soon, we'll be a pretty good team," Collins said. "It's going to be rough, but we'd like to win the White Division again and do well in the regionals.'

Girls' track

Coach Charles Buhagiar would like to finish the season unbeaten, but his old nemesis -

Bolden is a returning regional champ and top 10 state runner. With three of his top sprinters gone, Buhagiar is hoping some young athletes can fill the gaps.

"We're going to have to find some young kids who can be good sprinters and hurdlers," he said. "We've got some holes to plug up. I hope the young kids strength of our team will come from the doubles teams. Our success will also be determined on how far along our singles players come and if they do it quickly."

Sporting Goods Association, 25 million men and women were running or jogging for fitness in 1987, the latest sports participation statistics. They run for health, tension release, improved performance in sports and other activities, and enjoyment.

To get the most fitness benefits from running (or jogging which is basically running at a slower speed), it is wise to follow some basic guidelines. This will help prevent injuries and keep you on the road longer.

If you are new to running, check with your physician first. You may want to get a fitness evaluation to assess your starting level. While no one can tell you exactly how far to go at the beginning, a rule of thumb is to begin with a warm-up and then walk briskly until you are moving easily and comfortably.

As for running style, run in an upright position keeping your head up and your back straight. Carry your arms slightly away from your body with your elbows slightly bent. Running is a great endurance exercise, but it is not a total conditioning program. Include flexibility and muscular strength and endurance exercises on a regular basis to give your fitness regimen proper balance and better prepare you for running.

Liposuction: A procedure whose time has finally come

Beginning in Europe in 1976 and formally introduced to the United States in 1982, Liposuction (Suction Lipectomy) has become the most frequently performed cosmetic surgery operation in the United States.

In 1986, more than 100,000 suction lipectomies were performed by members of the American Society of Plastic and Reconstructive Surgeons. Clearly, this is a procedure whose time has come.

Liposuction is body sculpturing. It is not a substitute for dieting but it may be a useful adjunct. Dieting eliminates fat more-or-less uniformly. If one has a localized collection of subcutaneous fat (for example, lower abdomen in women, flank area - love handles - in men), these regions will continue to be prominent despite dieting.

The weight is lost uniformly and the area is still prominent as compared to the surrounding body. In fact, prominent "love handles" are even seen in men who exercise frequently. Women continue to have a prominent lower abdomen despite successful dieting. In order to sculpt the body to a pleasing appearance, the fat cells must be removed. Liposuc-tion can do this through small incisions with minimal scarring.

A small incision in a carefully selected location is made. A thin surgical cannula placed into the fat layer beneath the skin and the fat is sucked out a little at a time by a suction machine connected to the cannula. This is done until the necessary sculpturing effect is achieved. Generally, this can be done as an outpatient procedure with local or general anesthesia depending on the number of areas to be treated and the patient's preference.

Patients usually return to their normal activities within one to two weeks.

Ideally, liposuction alone will suffice when the patient's skin has enough elasticity. The skin will contour itself to the new body shape. This is especially applicable in younger individuals with lower abdominal or flank fat collections or excessive fat in the thigh area. Other individuals (for example, older patients or women who have several children) may need a skin tightening operation that requires removal of the excess skin that will remain after the underlying fat is removed.

For example, liposuction of the lower abdomen may need to be combined with an abdominoplasty. This involves a very low incision that will be hidden by clothes with excision of the excess skin of the abdomen. The result is a youthful appearing abdomen without any obvious collections of fat.

Liposuction is a very useful adjunct in cosmetic surgery of the face. The neck is a very important consideration when attempting to create a more youthful appearance to the face. Excess fat under the chin and in the jowl area is removed through a small incision under the chin. Then, the excess skin of the face and neck, which have accumulated because of the effects of decreased skin elasticity with age and gravity, is removed through conventional facelift incisions hidden in the scalp behind the ear. A blepharoplast is usually also done to remove excess fat from the lower eyelids ("bags") and excess skin from the upper lids. Additional areas for which liposuction has proved beneficial are the buttocks, thighs, knee area, upper arms and in male breast reduction.

People contemplating liposuction should be in good general health. Excessively obese individuals are not candidates until dieting has lessened their weight. The best candidates are those who are near normal weight who have remaining areas of fat which cannot be removed by dieting.

As in any surgical procedure, there are risks and possible complications. Fortunately, complications are infrequent. For patients having large areas treated, where significant amounts of fat are removed, one night in the hospital is advisable. Most of the problems that do occur involve the aesthetic results. These include contour irregularities, ripples and depressions in the skin and asymmetry. Most patients, however, have exellent results and are happy with their procedures.

If you are considering plastic surgery, it is my advice to make sure that your surgeon is a well qualified plastic surgeon. Insist that he/she is certified by The American Board of Plastic Surgery. Surgeons so qualified have had five to eight years of surgical training beyond medical school and have passed a series of rigorous examinations given by the Board.

Not all surgeons who perform cosmetic surgery are certified by this Board. Pamphlets concerning cosmetic surgery can be obtained free of charge from the American Society of Plastic and Reconstructive Surgeons, 1-800-635-0635.

This article was written by Dr. Walter G. Sullivan, chief of Plastic and Reconstructive Surgery at Harper Hospital.

Then, run at a comfortable pace until you feel a little fatigued. Switch to walking and then run when you feel ready again. Repeat this cycle for 20 minutes. Try this every other day until you are running continuously for 20 minutes.

The intensity should remain fairly constant during the 20 minutes, as your heart and breathing rates increase. After four to six weeks, if you practice three to four times per week, you should be running consistently for 20 minutes. (It may take older people a little longer to reach that point). Then you can start adding on time to a total of 40 minutes. For aerobic benefits to take place, a 20-40 minute workout is recommended. Of course, if you set a goal for yourself of completing a marathon you will have to outline a very specific training program.

As mentioned before, a warmup should always be included. A proper warm-up includes low level movements (example, knee lifts, walking in place, arm circles) combined with stretching for three to five minutes before starting on your run. This helps get your body ready for more intense activity.

Also important is to gradually cool down when you are done. Finish your run by easing to a slow walk and then continue walking until you feel that your heart and breathing rates are approaching your resting level. Then finish with some stretching exercises.

Running is a fairly inexpensive way to get in shape. About all that is necessary is a good, well-constructed and comfortable pair of running shoes and comfortable clothing. Training shoes with heavy, cushioned soles and arch supports are preferable to flimsy sneakers.

ence is lower back pain.

An accident or structural deformity may be the cause of this discomfort in some, but for most people it is due to improper posture, weak abdominal muscles or poor flexibility of the lower back. A slow, controlled curl-up is Strong and balanced abdominal muscles flatten the mid-section and help stabilize the lower back area. Weak abdominals cause the well-recognized "pot belly" and enhance the curvature of the spine, causing increased pressure in the sensitive lower back area.

Also, weak and inflexible lower back muscles further "tighten" the lower back, making it feel stiff and uncomfortable. Without some degree of strength and flexibility, you're more likely to injure your lower back when you have to reach or stretch for something.

Since the muscles of the upper and lower body are used in so many activities, they are more likely to develop some degree of strength and endurance. Strengthening the abdominal muscles, however, requires a specific approach.

Exercises that strengthen the abdominal muscles are commonly knows as sit-ups or curlups, and there are quite a few variations of each. The most effective and safest way to do situps, is to:

• Keep knees bent and the lower back flat on the floor when doing curl-ups. (Straight-leg situps or straight-leg raises cause your back to arch and strain. These actually strengthen muscles knows as the 'hip flexors' that lift your legs). To strengthen the abdominals you must bring the lower and upper parts of your torso towards each other. Keeping your knees bent makes abdominal exercises more effective.

• Exhale as you perform the Several running magazines motion. As you mu your upper to the floor. This will help you to further flatten the abdominals and keep you from holding your breath, which could adversely af-'ect your blood pressure.

• Perform the exercises slowly. more effective than rapid movements, which use momentum. By stabilizing your arms, either across your chest or behind your head, and slowly performing the exercise you make your abdominals work harder, which will make them stronger. Do as many as you can, rest and repeat.

It is important to also maintain strength and flexibility of the lower back muscles. Since we spend so much time sitting and standing still, this area becomes particularly "tight" and fatigued, resulting in swayback.

The pelvic tilt is commonly recommended to help alleviate this condition. Lie on your back with your feet flat and knees bent. Breathe evenly and flatten your lower back to the floor. Hold for one second and relax. Gradually build up to holding for five seconds, but don't hold your breath. Then, try it with your legs slightly extended so your feet are further away from your body.

Remember, your lower back naturally curves so it will be impossible to flatten your back totally with your legs fully extended.

Exercises for the lower back should be done with caution as this is a sensitive area. If you tend to have any discomfort, you should check with an expert for advice. Assuming good posture and adhering to a regular strength and flexibility program for the abdominals and lower back should keep you walking tall

Vietnam war is background for '1969'

By Michael Chapp Special Writer

There's a message at the heart "1969" which, despite being cliched, deserves to be heard. The thesis of this anti-Vietnam film is that, in America, it's all right to disagree with the government and it's all right to practice civil disobedience. This, after all, is what freedom is.

A noble message, that.

Unfortunately, the message is blurred by a script that first drags and then confuses. Further complicating the situation is a cast of characters that, with only two exceptions, is static, one-dimensional and virtually incapable of change.

As a result, viewers may very well lose interest in the proceedings by the time any of the worthwhile portions of the movie are revealed.

Set in one of the most tragic periods of American history, the climate - the recent assassination of Martin Luther King Jr. and Bobby Kennedy and the escalating conflict in Vietnam – to propel its narrative.

Its center of interest is a 19year-old intellectual (Keifer Sutherland) caught up in his own misgivings about what's going on in Southeast Asia. His brother has just been shipped over to fight, and he knows -- if it weren't for a convenient diversion called college - that he would be there, too.

His best friend (Robert Downey Jr.) shares the mindset. Both are somewhat unfocused and freewheeling; both refuse to conform to society's rigidity. And both are vehemently opposed to the war.

Their plan is to hit the road and not look back. Live like the Easy Rider, blowin' in the wind. But they can't escape the shac-

'Leviathan' is horror/underwater adventure By Marian Trainor

Special Writer

There's more than fish and flora at the bottom of the sea in "Leviathan," a horror film that takes us into the depths of the ocean in a submarine where battle is done against an outrageous monster.

The film owes much to "Deepstar Six," a previously released underwater adventure. It is much better, however. It's a more lavish production. The hardware, the special effects, the photography, the music, are all an overall tour of a modern submarine equipped with the latest technology and devices capable of monitoring sophisticated marine exploration.

The "Broadway Bound Budget Benefit" - a fundraiser for the Eton Academy, Michigan's only accredited K-12 school devoted solely to the education of learning-disabled students - is scheduled for Thursday, April 6, at 6 p.m. at the Plaza of Birmingham and the Birmingham Theater.

After a dinner of coneys and beer, participants will see Neil Simon's "Broadway Bound."

Tickets are $35. Proceeds from the event will provide funds to continue the library renovation and purchase necessary library equipment for the school, which has several Grosse Pointe stu-

'Three Sisters' at Bonstelle

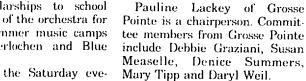

"The Three Sisters," one of Anton Chekhov's four great masterpieces, opens Friday, April 14, at 8 p.m. for a two-weekend run at the Bonstelle Theatre. Performances are Friday and Saturday at 8 p.m. and Sunday at 2 p.m., closing April 23.

"The Three Sisters" is a moving drama, rich in comic moments, about a family in a country town in Russia. It is a story rich with romance, charm and sentiment, with the earthiness and full range of emotions that has been compared by translator Michael Frayn to "the changing of the seasons."

Director is Robert Emmett McGill. The setting, a farm house in a small rural town 90 miles outside of Moscow, is created by Sharon Yesh, designer, and Reid Downey, technical director. Costumes are designed by Judith Cronk and lighting by Michael Angelo Tortura.

For ticket information, call the Wayne State University Theatre box office at 577-2960.

"I love baseball, you know it doesn't have to mean anything, it's just very beautiful to watch." - Woody Allen

At times, suitors can't get to first base. Periodically, politicians play hardball. Often, business managers give ballpark figures. And always, at winter's end, like an airborne outfielder straining to snatch the ball before it soars over the fence and becomes forever a home run, all true baseball fans are climbing the walls until life starts anew and the season begins

The English language -American division - for more than 100 years has been laced with the imagery of the national pastime. An early baseball fan, Walt Whitman used to describe a great success as a "home ing, head down, as if our praise stroke" and spoke of catching things "on the fly." In his later years, Whitman, long before the thumped, wept, and chanted 'We of throwing someone a curve. When he heard the rumor of a new kind of pitch, Whitman asked a friend if it were true that "the fellow who pitches the ball aims to pitch it in such a way the batter cannot hit it?"

Upon learning the awful truth about the curve ball, the poet, thinking such deception unfair and undemocratic in the sport he loved, called it "everything that is damnable.'

Baseball has been called "the poet's game" and the "writer's game." A New York State Museum exhibition, "Diamonds are forever: Artists and writers on baseball," reveals that it is the artist's game as well. The show illuminates the hold of baseball on the American imagination.

He ran as he always ran out home runs --- hurriedly, unsmitwere a storm of rain to get out of. He didn't tip his cap. Though we hid in the dugout, he did not touchstone." come back. Our noise for some seconds passed beyond excitement into a kind of immense open anguish, a wailing, a cry to be saved. But immortality is nontransferable.

- John Updike on Ted Williams

"By baseball we join hands with the long line of forefathers and the dead," writes poet Donald Hall. "... My grandfather was a New Hampshire farmer a Democrat, and my father was a Connecticut businessman - a ries' Republican. What they had in common was baseball.

"I'm a New Hampshire poet, and my son is a New York mathematician. But we can talk about the Yankees and the Red Sox. As poetry does, baseball makes connections, provides a mately in the pocket of a glove, sense of continuity and looks to well describes the beauty of one the future while retaining the object's natural affinity for anpast. Baseball, recognizably the other.

"Coach," pleads an 11-year-old whose back is barely big enough to contain the uniform words, Ken Dixon Chevrolet-Buick-Honda, "somebody's got to help me. Scott just filled my batting helmet with dirt.' This is partly baseball, but mostly one of those few remaining places where everybody gathers to pass on the tribe's collective sense of itself. Thomas Boswell, from any baseball is beautiful. No other small package comes as close to the ideal in design and utility. It is a perfect object for a man's hand. -- Roger Angell Newspaperman Bob Greene was forbidden by his paper to take gifts from an outside source, but when he got his own Louisville Slugger in the mail, all bets were off. Writes Greene: "For it is true: a Louisville Slugger, for the American male, is a talisman – a piece of property that carries such symbolic weight and meaning that words of description will not do it justice.

The place and the objects of the national pastime are invested with magic. And upon a few players, a belief in their superhuman powers and an all-toofleeting hero worship are bestowed. Some are able to resist time gracefully and remain heroes.

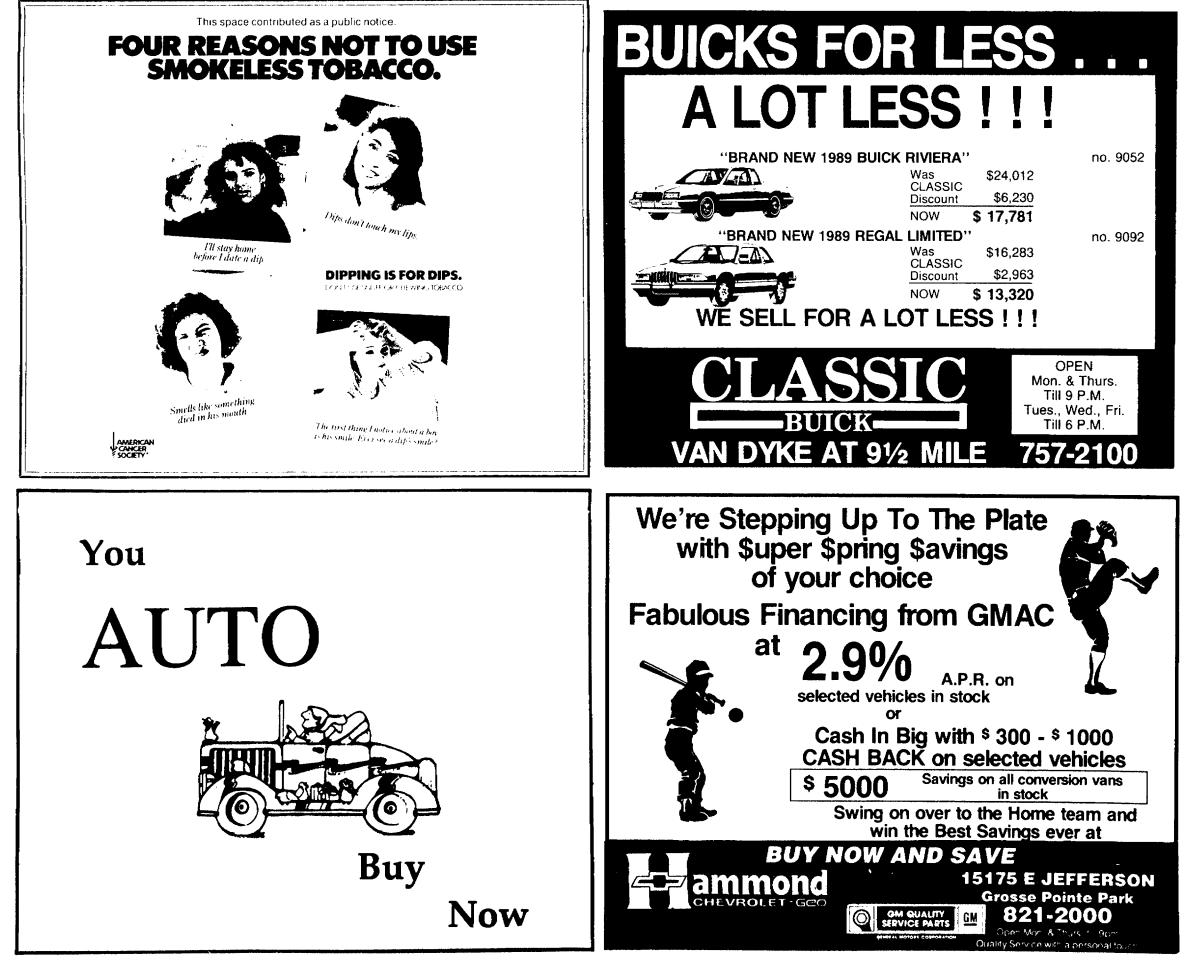

But I must have confidence and I must be worthy of the great DiMaggio who does all things perfectly even with the pain of the bone spur in his heel. - Ernest Hemingway, from "The Old Man and the Sea"

Even baseball has a literary dark side. But nobody really believes in it. In 1919, the "Black Sox Scandal" threw America a curve when eight members of the Chicago White Sox, including Shoeless Joe Jackson, one of the greatest hitters of all time, were accused of throwing the World Series.

"It is likely that he did accept money from gamblers. But throw the Series? Never!" writes W.P. Kinsella in "Shoeless Joe.'
