Farms police chief turns 50

Grosse Pointe Farms Public Safety Director Robert Ferber can't decide if he has a lot of friends or enemies.

The Farms chief was awakened by the sound of police sirens outside his Grosse Pointe Park home Friday, June 23, the day he reached the half-century mark of 50 years old.

Looking disheveled and bleary-eyed, Ferber emerged from his house to be greeted by fellow police officers, friends, neighbors and the Grim Reaper.

Tombstones were set up in the front yard, a casket was ready and the Grim Reaper — Ferber's neighbor Ron Koss dressed in costume — greeted the chief at his front door.

Ferber's office at the police station on Kerby Road was done up in black crepe paper, derogatory helium balloons and other macabre decorations.

When asked who was responsible for the elaborate plans to celebrate Ferber's 50th birthday, the police chief said his wife, Linda, was the perpetrator. Or rather, the chief said "the late Mrs. Ferber" was responsible, indicating that he will get even somehow.

On the evening before his birthday, the police chiefs in the Pointes had a party for Ferber on Grosse Pointe Public Safety Director Richard Caretti's boat. On the night of Ferber's birthday, Farms Mayor Joseph Fromm was to come by the station to pick the chief up to go on some type of clandestine celebration. Ferber said he had no idea what Fromm's mission was.

Ferber said he originally discouraged any big to-do over his birthday, but since no one heeded his pleadings, he decided the only thing he could do was "take my punishment like a man."

On the front of Ferber's desk there was a public notice which read:

"Police Notice: To whom it may concern: On June 23, 1989, the chief of police of Grosse Pointe Farms, Robert Kasper Ferber, will be 50 years old. Paid for by the Committee to Replace the Chief."

When pointed out that the good-natured ribbing meant he had a lot of friends, Ferber said everyone was just trying to get even with him, apparently for the pranks the chief played on them at one time or another.

Principal sues co-workers for $2 million for slander

By Nancy Parmenter
Staff Writer

Two Grosse Pointe teachers deny the charges of libel and slander filed against them last week by North Principal John Kastran. Speaking through their lawyer, union president Doris Cook and North teacher David Harchick said the allegations are unfounded.

"We don't see why he filed," said attorney Joseph Firestone.

Kastran filed suit in Wayne County Circuit Court for more than $2 million, naming Cook, Harchick and the Grosse Pointe Education Association. He has charged that they sent a memo to school Superintendent John Whritner and his deputy, Edward Shine, stating that Kastran had told students that he used pornographic videos to sexually arouse his wife. The memo also said Kastran discussed teachers' bottoms with students, the suit charges.

The suit seeks $1 million each for libel and slander, plus unspecified damages.

"This is a matter of exquisite sensitivity to the public," said Kastran's lawyer, James Goulding. "Dr. Kastran had no choice but to defend himself."

According to the lawsuit, Cook and Harchick wrote the memo in January, saying that Kastran talked with students about pornographic tapes and the appearance of teachers' buttocks as they walked down the hallway, and that they gave the memo to Whritner and Shine and discussed it with them. When Kastran was informed of the contents of the memo, he demanded a retraction, which was refused.

Defense attorney Firestone sent the refusal to Goulding:

"After reviewing the facts and the incidents involved in this matter with our clients, it is our conclusion that they will be unable to retract any statements allegedly made to Mr. Edward Shine," Firestone wrote on behalf of his clients.

"Not only is it our opinion that any statements allegedly made concerning Dr. John Kastran were not slanderous or libelous, but if they were published at all, they were published by individuals other than Ms. Cook and Mr. Harchick. Moreover, we recommend that before you take any action on behalf of Dr. Kastran, you engage in a more thorough investigation of the alleged incidents... as we believe the claims are frivolous."

Reached by phone this week, Firestone said he stands by the letter. "There was nothing to retract," he said.

Goulding, however, attacked the memo. "They did it under the shield of limited liability, but they took a shield and made a sword of it," he said.

Kastran has asked for a jury trial.

Whritner declined to comment on the case. "It's between individuals," he said. "I wish I could say more, but mum's the word."

'Fingerprints' proof of who dumped oil

By John Minnis
Assistant Editor

The county not only knows who is responsible for the hundreds of gallons of oil that got into the Milk River in late May, but it has the oil's "fingerprints" to prove it.

Wayne County officials would not comment on the spill or who they believe dumped the oil until they have received a written report from the Coast Guard, which sent a sample of the oil to labs to have it "fingerprinted."

Lt. Cmdr. Clay Evans, executive officer of the Coast Guard's Marine Safety Office in Detroit, said Tuesday that the Coast Guard's sample analysis has proved that one of the county's suspects is in fact the source of the oil. He declined to say who the suspected party is.

An estimated 700 gallons of oil found its way into the Milk River Pump Station at Marter and Parkway in Grosse Pointe Woods following heavy rains during the last few days of May. The heavy rains forced an estimated 200 gallons of the oil over the weir at the pump station and into the remaining Milk River channel, which empties into Grosse Pointe Woods' Lakefront Park at Jefferson in St. Clair Shores.

Evans said the substance dumped into a storm sewer in Harper Woods, Grosse Pointe Woods or southern Macomb County is No. 9 fuel oil. He said the heavy oil is used to run big industrial type engines. He said the Coast Guard has the ability to get oil fingerprinted to determine what its exact use is and, in many cases, by whom.

He said the oil sample the Coast Guard sent to Connecticut to get fingerprinted matched one of the suspects on a list provided by the county. He said the name of the suspected oil spiller would have to be obtained from the

Pointer of Interest

John Guinn

By Ronald J. Bernas
Staff Writer

Grosse Pointe City resident John Guinn never intended to be a journalist. He sort of fell into it as a result of his love of music and teaching.

As music critic for the Detroit Free Press for the last 14 years, Guinn has been able to combine his avocations and make them his vocation.

Guinn grew up in Charleston, W.Va., with dreams of becoming a musician. He played piano at home and the organ at a local church. And when he went to college at Notre Dame, he studied music.

But he wasn't sure what he really wanted to study, he said. He liked the composing classes, he liked the performing classes he liked them all, so it was difficult to choose in which music discipline he wanted to major. Guinn had a sympathetic counselor who let him change his major emphasis each semester.

Little did he know the broad base of music study would help him later in life as a music critic.

When he took a music theory class, he said he realized that "this is it." Music theory combined what he liked about all the different disciplines and he stuck with it, eventually getting a master's degree in music theory.

While at the college, he laid the foundation for what he does now by acting as the music critic for the college's weekly magazine.

It was a slightly tricky position because he was writing about recitals given by his friends — and his instructors.

Some of last year's participants get ready for the annual fireworks celebration, which is sponsored by the Grosse Pointe Business and Professional Association of Mack Avenue every year at Parcels field. This year's event is Sunday, July 2, at 8 p.m.

Fireworks to light up the sky

The Grosse Pointe Business and Professional Association of Mack Avenue will sponsor its annual fireworks display Sunday, July 2, beginning at 8 p.m.

The event at Parcels field will feature, for the first time, a sky concert, in which a musical program by Pyrotechnical Displays will be held at the same time the fireworks are lighting up the sky.

There will be square dancers, mimes and folk art dancers.

The public is invited to bring picnic lunches and chairs. In case of rain, the event will be rescheduled at a later date.

Shores home broken into

A Grosse Pointe Shores home on the lake in the 900 block of Lakeshore was broken into recently and a portable tape player radio was taken.

The burglar got in through a rear door of a Florida room sometime between 11 p.m. June 14 and 8 a.m. June 15, according to police reports. A brass door handle, valued at $100, was broken during the break-in.

The perpetrator tried to get into the main part of the house by prying at a door but was unsuccessful because the door was chained. Residents said they didn't hear anything, but they said there was a lot of noise on the lake that night.

The Magnavox radio tape player was valued at $125. Also a carpenter's hammer was taken.

Woods considers new flashing light amendment

Under consideration by the Woods City Council is an amendment to the property maintenance code requiring homeowners to install a flashing porch light to draw attention of emergency personnel attempting to locate a home.

Louise Warnke, deputy city clerk, said the amendment, if adopted, would require homes to have porch or front lamp post equipped with a device which, when activated, will cause the light to flash to serve as a beacon.

The flashing light would be required and inspected when a home changes hands, as would all electrical wiring, Warnke said.

The proposed amendment will go before a committee of the whole at an undetermined date.

A recent effort to promote a flashing light device resulted in the sale of about 25 units, which are now installed in Woods homes.

Paint-pellet gun shooting reported

Three Grosse Pointe Park youths were stopped by Woods police Monday for allegedly shooting a paint pellet at a motorist's vehicle.

At 12:37 a.m. three youths in a GMC sport utility truck were reported to have shot a paint pellet at a customer's car at a Mobil station on Mack in the Woods. The shot missed the car by a foot, but the pellet did hit the front door of the gas station, leaving a splat of orange paint.

A Woods officer on patrol saw the GMC vehicle on Mack at Anita and pulled it over. Upon approaching the truck, he saw a green Splatmaster paint pistol on the front seat. He confiscated the gun and unloaded 10 paint pellets and drained the CO<sub>2</sub> propellant.

Two of the youths denied being involved in the shooting, but the third later admitted involvement in the incident, according to police reports. The youths, ages 15, 17 and 18, were released after being told a detective would be contacting them.

Schools budget $45 million, offers similar program

School system enters era of local, on-site control

By Nancy Parmenter
Staff Writer

It was somewhat obscured in the excitement over the millage, but the Grosse Pointe schools have spent the last month working over details of a budget. June 20, the board voted to accept a $45 million proposal that officials say will continue to provide much the same program as last year.

There were some gains, largely in the area of supplies and fringe benefits, and some losses, in community education and lunchroom supervision. Nine or 10 new teachers are being hired at the elementary level; about 11 are either pink-slipped or retiring at the secondary level.

The big news in the budget is the budget process itself. For the first time, four schools took part in "site budget" planning, with a committee of staff and parents deciding how to spend the money. This local control is a widely hailed budget approach in use in a few school systems around the country and under discussion in Detroit.

"They're talking about it, but we have it," said Superintendent John Whittner. The process is expected to expand to several more schools next year.

During most of the past school year, committees at Kerby, Brownell, Trombly and Maire schools met, first to discuss the process and finally to make the decisions. Although theoretically the entire budget at each school was up for grabs, in fact, the committees were limited by labor contracts, which amounted to more than three-quarters of the budget.

So far, the process has won the approval of the participants. It was not, however, a case of total local control.

"It was within the scope of the committee to make recommendations, but we didn't feel we had unlimited discretion," said Trombly parent Beverly Hall Burns.

Maire parent Sandy Lowden: "We were led to believe that we couldn't make staffing decisions this year. The idea was to phase in slowly. But when we got to the last board meeting, they said we could have done so."

"I'm not entirely convinced that central administration is behind it. I sensed some hostility, some 'prove it to me.' A lot of it is giving away power, and that's not easy. To me, there was some hesitancy there."

"The process drew people's attention to costs," said Business Manager Christian Fenton. "It's easy to make a pitch for something at the building level when the costs aren't associated with it."

Several committee members agreed. "It's good to look at a budget from a zero base," said Maire Principal Jay Flowers. "You see how much personnel costs and how few discretionary dollars we really have. The committees found that quite an eye-opener."

The Maire committee decided to devote some of its discretionary budget to increased library staffing. Next year, Flowers thinks things might be different.

"My guess is that next year the committee will look at the use of personnel and how they might be used better," he said. "We might spend more time on the rationale of decisions."

Participants were generally happy to be part of the process. Burns called it "wonderful": "It's good to work with the staff and get to know more than just your child's teacher. . . With site-based budgeting comes accountability. (The participation) gives a feeling of ownership."

Lowden, too, is "very high" on the program. "It's a positive process. People felt involved. It did away with the feeling that things are out of their control."

There were some frustrations with the process, however. Parent Hugh Culik, who worked with the Kerby School committee, found the process "wonderful" — but feels the elementary schools are traditionally short-changed.

Kerby trials

Kerby School had a tough time with the new site budget planning process. Budget amounts are set by central administration on a per-pupil basis; Kerby's changing enrollment made it more prone than the others to uncertainty.

"One of the hardest things to grapple with is the number of students you'll actually have," said Principal Lee Warras. "Enrollment projections aren't exact and there are always more ideas than money."

The Kerby committee had hoped for enough money to hire another teacher, but didn't get it. So they had to make alternative plans.

"We looked at hiring extra aides," Warras said. "In the past, that might have happened, but Kerby wouldn't have had the option on its own."

"We felt we really needed another teacher, but we just couldn't do it under the formula. It shows you have to use judgment in addition to the formula."

The committee also decided to allocate more than twice the usual amount to the school library, but had to give up capital outlays to do it.

"The more we get involved, the more creative you'll see people becoming," Warras predicted. "Each building will choose to emphasize its strengths — which are different in each building."

Projected enrollment (up 48)	7,303
Tax increase with both propositions	8.5%
SEV increase	11.8%
Amount lost to Headlee (general fund)	$1.8 million
Projected fund equity (general fund)	$2 million
General fund budget	$45 million
Total budget (general, library, debt, bldg/site)	$55 million
Salary increase projections	6.2%
Fringe benefits increase	13.9%

"This process is symptomatic of the budget differential between high schools and elementaries," he said. "My feeling is that if we were doing certain things at the elementary level, we wouldn't have so much remediation later."

Culik's concerns go deeper than the finances. "In a lot of ways, site budgeting fosters the illusion of participation without actually increasing participation," he said.

"I'm convinced it's a labor negotiation strategy. It moves the conflict down to the building level and pushes labor negotiation into the community. That sort of thing should be fought out at a distance."

Deciding on a million-dollar budget can be frightening. Participants often went into the process worrying about the allocation of such big sums, said Trombly Principal Sheila Turney.

"There was anxiety, almost fear, that they would have to work with too much money and make a mistake," she said.

Instead, they quickly found that only a few thousand dollars per building was actually available after salaries were accounted for. Culik said he is impressed with the schools' frugality.

"The system is wonderfully careful about spending tax dollars," he said. "They're worrying about can we spend an extra $100 on paper."

Some details of the process remain to be worked out. Each building sets the size and composition of its committee; some plan to expand or change. The money is allotted on a per-pupil basis; final enrollment will not be known until September, and schools are unsure when they can implement their programs. When to reconvene the budget committee is unclear.

But those are minor glitches. The primary feeling for the new process is enthusiasm.

In a word, "wonderful."

Parade!

The Grosse Pointe Park Civic Association will sponsor its 14th annual Fourth of July parade and picnic on Tuesday, beginning at 2 p.m. at Somerset and St. Paul behind Pierce School. The parade will march to Patterson Park where numerous activities are planned, including raising of the flag, children's games, volleyball, refreshments and prizes for the best costumes, decorated bikes and floats. Band members, antique cars, floats and neighborhood groups that want to be in the parade can call Bob Buhl at 886-7488 or Pat McKeever at 885-7829.

Two appointed to fill City vacancies

Dale N. Scarce and Carl Rashid Jr. were appointed last week to fill two council seats recently vacated in the City of Grosse Pointe.

Scarce, 41, will serve the remaining of the term formerly held by M. Jackson Morris, who resigned when he moved out of the city late last month. Scarce faces election as an incumbent in November.

Rashid, 40, won't face election until November 1991 when former Councilman John F. Youngblood's term expires. Youngblood left the council June 1 because he and his family moved to Grosse Pointe Park.

A partner with the law firm of Butzel Long Gust & Van Zile, Rashid was the assistant legal counsel for the city of Detroit for six years. Councilman Robert L. Nugent nominated Rashid for the position and said the attorney's expertise in real estate law will be an asset to the council.

Scarce, an architect, is president of the John Cooley Construction Co. of Sterling Heights. Councilman William N. Montgomery, who nominated Scarce, said the architect can offer insight into the council's deliberations of building issues and variances.

Scarce has lived in the City since 1973 with his wife, Mary, and two sons, Ben, 14, and David, 10. He is a past commodore of the Grosse Pointe Boat Club and has been active in the Cub Scouts and Little League.

Rashid has been a life-time resident of the Grosse Pointe area and attended Austin High School before going to college. He has lived in the City for eight years with his wife, Grace, and three children, Carl, Lauren and Paul. He is president of the Grosse Pointe Hockey Association.

After being appointed to the vacancies by a unanimous vote of City Council June 19, Rashid and Scarce were sworn in by City Manager Thomas W. Kressbach and immediately took their seats and went to work.

Challenging incumbent Municipal Judge Matthew R. Rumora are Paul C. Gracey, Gene Casazza and Richard G. Roosen.

Gracey is a corporate vice president and counsel with DMR Financial Services Inc. He ran in the Park in 1967 and was unsuccessful in his bid for a council seat.

Gracey, 59, is a member of the State Bar of Michigan, the American Bar Association and an arbitrator with the American Arbitration Association. He is also an active member of St. Paul Catholic Church and a member of the church choir.

Casazza is an attorney with the Porter, Elliott, Knight and Casazza firm of Mount Clemens. He is running for his first public office.

Casazza, 43, is a member of the Michigan Bar Association, the Macomb County Bar Association, the Michigan Trial Lawyers Association and the American Arbitrators Association.

He is a member of St. Paul Catholic Church and he coaches Little League at the Neighborhood Club.

Another challenger for municipal judge is Richard G. Roosen, who has never sought public office. Roosen, 33, is a partner with Muller, Muller, Richmond, Harms, Myers and Sgroi of Birmingham.

Roosen holds memberships with the State Bar of Michigan, Macomb County Bar Association, Michigan Trial Lawyers Association and the Commercial Law League of America. He is also active in Knights of Columbus, Our Lady Star of the Sea Council No. 7780 and the Grosse Pointe Woods and St. Paul's-On-The-Lake Choir.

Incumbent municipal judge and former Farms city prosecutor Matthew R. Rumora is seeking re-election. Rumora, 40, is a member of the State Bar of Michigan, the Macomb County Bar Association and the American and Michigan trial lawyers associations. He is president-elect of the Municipal Judges Association of Michigan.

Rumora is also active in local Babe Ruth baseball and volunteers as a probation officer in Grosse Pointe.

Electronic meters will cost more on City streets

It will cost more to leave your car at the City's new electronic meters, which are planned to be installed soon.

In May, the City Council approved the $98,766 purchase of 95 electronic meters to replace the 16 to 19-year-old mechanical meters on Kercheval in the Village and in front of the shops on Fisher Road.

A nickel at the electronic meters will pay for 12 minutes of parking, down from 15 minutes at the existing mechanical meters. A dime will get six minutes less parking; 24 minutes instead of 30 minutes. Twenty cents will buy 48 minutes of parking instead of an hour. A quarter will still provide an hour of parking.

The City Council unanimously approved the new meter rates at its June 19 meeting.

The council approved the more expensive electronic meters because it believes they will save the City money in the long run. City Manager Thomas Kressbach did not have an exact date for when the battery-operated meters will be installed, but he said it would be soon.

Cars stolen

A car that was stolen from a parking lot at Mack and Moross June 19 was found partially stripped and burned the same day.

According to Farms police reports, the car was stolen about 5:15 p.m. The car wasn't reported stolen until 6:20 a.m. June 20, and when Farms police went to enter the information into the state's crime computer, it was discovered that Detroit police had already found the car.

The car was left in Detroit after it was partially stripped, set on fire and its wheels taken.

No arrests were made in the theft.

In the Park, one vehicle were reported stolen last week and another was aborted when the suspects were spotted by a resident.

A 1987 Jeep Wrangler was taken from the rear of a business in the 15000 block of Jefferson June 19 sometime between 7:20 and 8:20 p.m. The Jeep was found later the same day in the 1200 block of Marlborough in Detroit. The vehicle was partially stripped.

A resident saw two men attempting to steal a car in the 1400 block of Bishop at 6:27 a.m. June 22. The men fled across Mack and got into another car. A Park patrol unit spotted the suspects and a chase ensued.

The suspects bailed out of the car at Kensington and Chandler Park in Detroit. A tracking dog lost their trail in the 5900 block of Oldtown. The vehicle the suspects were driving found to have been stolen out of St. Clair Shores in the Harper-Nine Mile area.

In the Woods, a black 1986 Ford Mustang was reported stolen from the 2000 block of Norwood at 5:57 a.m. June 24. The car was found partially stripped at 10:20 a.m. the following day in Detroit. It was partially stripped.

It was Grandpa's birthday

Growing up on a Minnesota farm, I remember the Fourth of July as a combined family and patriotic event celebrating my paternal grandfather's birthday as well as Uncle Sam's.

In honor of the celebration of our nation's independence, members of the Grosse Pointe News staff were asked to write about their Fourth of July memories or about what Independence Day means to them. The author's name is at the end of each piece.

But the full significance of my grandfather's life as a Minnesota pioneer didn't dawn on me until after his death in 1920 when I read the 10-page type-written biographical sketch of Jonathan Dickinson Amnon Elston written by his widow for his grandchildren.

Born on July 4, 1837, in Middleville, now Hilton, N.J., he was at age 17 one of those who took the advice of Horace Greeley, the New York newspaper editor and politician, to "Go West, young man, go West."

He did so because he had no strong ties to New Jersey. His mother had died when he was 8 or 9 and he had lived with relatives after that. He learned the shoemaker's trade from his father, helped a relative run a light express line from Newark to New York, hired out to a company putting up a telegraph line between Philadelphia and New York and did odd jobs between brief sessions in school.

Apparently dissatisfied with his life, he struck out for Illinois to join an older cousin. They dug wells for several years in Illinois before transferring their base of operations to Minnesota, a territory that was to become the 32nd state in 1858. Tiring of well digging, they soon decided to turn to farming.

They bought a half section of land in Empire Township in Dakota County and moved onto it a house they had bought in Nininger, a boom town that had become a ghost town. The home served succeeding generations until World War II when the federal government requisitioned the farm to use as part of the site for the Rosemount Ordnance Works, a munitions plant.

My grandparents also owned a crossroads country store at nearby Rich Valley which my father operated and where I was born. When the store burned down a few years later, the family moved to the farm and my grandfather left Minnesota to spend the rest of his life in California.

All that sounds fairly prosaic today. Yet in my grandfather's early years, Minnesota was still the frontier. Neighbors were few and far between. Friendly Indians of ten stopped at the farm house for food and water, although after the Indian uprising and the New Ulm massacre of 1862, the settlers often said the only good Indian was a dead Indian.

Hauling grain and produce to Hastings often was a two-day trip with oxen. One winter Grandfather got lost in a snow storm while returning home and had to alternately ride and jump out of the sleigh to pound the oxen to keep them going. At daybreak he sighted the farm home just ahead.

When the Civil War came he sympathized with the South as a Northern Democrat and Copperhead because, he said at the time, he never believed in the war. He thought that without the war the slaves "would have been bought and freed." That was one of the unsuccessful solutions once proposed by Abraham Lincoln.

After my grandfather was married and began raising a family, he started the July Fourth birthday celebrations that he enjoyed the rest of his life. And so, even after his death, our family recalled that it was grandpa's birthday, along with Uncle Sam's, whenever the Fourth rolled around.

A grandfather now myself, I still think of the Fourth as a double birthday celebration in honor of our country and my grandfather.

— Wilbur Elston

Fireworks, flags, symbolism

Parades, barbecue, good company. Fireworks, a shell-shocked dog. A still, hot evening spent sitting on the front porch gazing at a sky full of pinpoint dots of fireworks exploded too far away to hear.

Fourth of July in the late 20th Century has evolved into a family event, an entertainment, largely devoid of the patriotic excitement that once pervaded it. As a co-worker pointed out, Independence Day is more likely to mean a backyard picnic with the extended family, too many eaters and not enough helpers, and finally everyone goes home and leaves Mom and Dad to put up their feet and watch television to find out how other people celebrate the Glorious Fourth.

It was always thus, in this particular lifetime, at least. There was the occasional trip to Euclid Beach to watch a fireworks spectacular. Traffic was always jammed. We fell asleep in the back seat on the long way home.

There was the memorable time we had homegrown fireworks in a field. Then, as now, fireworks of any size were illegal. But we had the particular fortune to live next door to good old Uncle Dink, who just happened to be the town police chief. That year, he confiscated a cache of fountains, Roman candles, Saxons, stars and whistling chasers, and turned himself into a combination bomb disposal squad and impresario.

A holiday is a device for helping us remember what we believe all year 'round. We are not supposed to love Mother more on Mother's Day, nor should we be expected to feel more patriotic on the Fourth — or less so on the third.

The Supreme Court last week gave us a timely reminder of the varied meanings of patriotism. A ruling allowing flag-burning as a protected form of political protest under the First Amendment has resulted in a spate of patriots wrapping themselves in said flag. Angry veterans and congressmen are demanding impeachment of the offending justices and a constitutional amendment against flag-burning.

It's an over-reaction similar to the storm that broke when '60s folks wore flag patches on the seats of their pants.

Flag-burning is not nice, but it's an action that is best governed by a moral code, not a legal one. We are, after all, talking about a piece of cloth that is only important because of the meaning we have invested in it. Democracy will not fail because someone burns a piece of cloth.

More important, democracy will not fail because someone criticizes it. The ability to criticize our government with impunity is what makes us different from, say, China.

Conversely, displaying the flag is not in itself a patriotic act. Is the gas station with the biggest flag owned by the most fervent patriot?

This July 4, we'll hang our flag from the front porch as we always do, but if our neighbors choose to burn theirs to protest Nicaragua or taxes or governmental indifference to the poor, we'll understand their point.

Hurrah for red, white and blue diversity!

Thanks — and explanations

To the Editor:

First of all, I wish to take this opportunity to thank the Grosse Pointe News for the beautiful article in the June 22 edition congratulating the Grosse Pointe Children's Theatre on its 35th anniversary. I would also like to thank your paper and the entire community for its support through the years.

In editing the article, however, for publication, you neglected to mention Mrs. Stelene Mazer, our musical director, who has given so much of her time and talent for many years. As I stated in my interview, I wish to express my gratitude for her dedication to Grosse Pointe Children's Theatre.

I would also call your attention to one error in the article which I would like clarified. I was asked, "What differences do you find in the youth of today in comparison with those of 35 years ago?" I was quoted in the article as saying, "Children today know too much." What I said was, "Children today are more knowledgeable." I went on to explain, "This is due to television, the space age, computers, etc. Children also have many more activities from which to choose. Unfortunately, it would seem some get involved in too many and, as a result, are on a treadmill not being able to give sufficient time to each. They become so programmed that they appear almost as little robots."

This was the entirety of my response to the question. I appreciate your printing this as these things are very important to me, to express my thoughts more clearly.

And, thank you, again, for all your support over the

Holocaust remembered

To the Editor:

The account of the efforts of Mr. Stefan Jagodzinski to help me to survive the Holocaust was sensitively written by Mr. Dan Jarvis. Mr. Jagodzinski and I were gratified by the fact that your readers were informed that during those dreadful years there were Poles willing to risk their lives to help Jews.

It is, however, not accurate that there were Poles "sympathetic to Nazis." There was widespread anti-Semitism but no support for the German occupiers. Unlike other occupied countries of Europe, Poland had no collaborationist movement. There was no Polish Petain or Quisling. The Polish people were united in their fight against the enemy.

The wonder of childhood

As fire trucks left the Grosse Pointe Park municipal complex at a crawl and headed down our street toward the waterfront park, the kids on the block, myself included, wondered about the pace and the lack of flashing lights and sirens.

Something was up and we intended to get to the bottom of it.

It was 1967. I was 7, and the sun was high.

The pop, pop, pop of firecrackers filled the hot summer air. We felt we were missing out and wanted to join in the celebration. Though we were told we didn't understand the special significance of the day, we didn't care why; we just wanted to join in the fun.

Upon investigation we discovered that later that night there was a fireworks display planned. I'm not sure I can put into words the feeling that the good news accorded us. We were in heaven and the best was yet to come.

My friends and I headed down to the park and witnessed heaven in the making. One of the fire trucks had pulled out onto the pier and hoses were stretched to the very end. To a group of second-graders, this lent an aspect of danger to the upcoming event.

As we strained to catch a glimpse of the activity at the end of the dock, our imagination soared. If the fire trucks were there, then maybe there would be a fire. We could only hope.

As nightfall approached, we could not contain our excitement. The whiz, bang, pops were growing both in frequency and volume as we prepared for the big event.

As we once again made our trek to the waterfront I can still remember the sense of community I felt as the caravan of friends and neighbors made the mile-long journey, some walking, some biking and some driving.

Once there and seated on the lawn, my friends and I beamed with the secret knowledge of the upcoming catastrophe. (I didn't want them to know that I was a bit worried about the whole thing so I feigned roguery.)

Boom! A brilliant display took to the sky.

Whiz! Still another.

The sky was alive with color and sound. For a child, few things in life can generate this level of excitement. In fact we were so captured by the array that we forgot all about our secret.

— Dan Jarvis

Land of the free

It's been three years since I visited the Soviet-bloc countries of East Germany, Poland, Czechoslovakia and Hungary, but it seems like yesterday. The images in my mind's eye are still clearly focused and fresh.

I'm haunted by a glass-enclosed room at Auschwitz filled with human hair, another stacked high with children's shoes. I'm standing in Wenceslaus Square in Prague where a young Czech set himself on fire to protest the Soviet tanks that lurched into his country 21 years ago. My hand shakes as I focus my camera, ostensibly on the Berlin wall, but also on the East Berlin guard on the other side. He is in a guard tower, watching me through binoculars.

It was perhaps the most emotional trip I will ever take, walking the land of my father less than two months after he died.

It was also the most heartening, despite the bleak existence of the people. I sensed a spirit in the people evidenced by a number of things.

Most symbolic perhaps were the flowers they left everywhere. At Auschwitz there were cut flowers in the crematorium, at the execution wall, in the barracks, in the showers where prisoners were gassed.

At Wenceslaus Square, there were dozens and dozens of bouquets marking the spot where the young man died for a principle. Keep in mind that the very act of laying flowers in this instance was an act of defiance against the government.

And a section of the Berlin wall was draped in black bunting and decorated with wreaths and wooden crosses with the names and dates of those who were killed trying to escape.

There were other signs of a people wearying of oppression, even among those too young to have known any other kind of life. The young were the most obvious with their admiration for anything American, from their jeans and T-shirts to the ever-present rock played on the radio and in the most unlikely places.

In a spartan government-run store in Warsaw that had more empty space than merchandise, I bought some wooden plates to the sounds of Stevie Wonder coming over the PA system.

In Prague where the government pays the salaries of the clergy and maintains the churches as a means of control, there are 18 different faiths practicing.

We attended a chamber music concert which consisted entirely of religious pieces sung in Latin and the audience of some 300 people were mostly young people. There were other references to religion in these countries.

From these and other things I saw and heard in an intensive 2-1/2 weeks of travel, I came home with a good feeling of hope for the people in that part of the world.

I've followed with interest every bit of news from Eastern Europe since then and the news has been amazing. Communism has been losing ground and the system is crumbling, there's no doubt.

I Say

Pat Paholsky

Citizens are voting for other than party members in Poland and the Soviet Union. In Hungary, the body of a top official, who was ousted from power and killed, was reinterred with a hero's burial, and the event was shown on state-controlled TV.

There are stirrings from other parts of the world. Even China, where the government's actions have horrified a world, one senses that its victory is temporary.

So when our editorial writer, Bill Elston, proposed that we write an editorial about our reminiscences for this Fourth of July issue (see page 6A), I wracked my brain for some memorable incidents of past Fourth's, but came up blank.

Most of my childhood memories are of staying at home because there were too many crazy drivers on the road. We celebrated by lighting some sparklers and firecrackers at night.

This year will be no different - I'll spend the day at home, watching my husband barbecue something and listening to the neighbor set off some firecrackers later in the evening.

The only difference is this year I'll be thinking of how really fortunate we are in this country. We sit back and gripe about taxes and the government while others are literally dying for the right to do that.

We complain about the teachers always wanting more, forgetting that they chose to teach, that the government here doesn't select who will teach, who will practice medicine, who will farm.

We accuse newspapers of sensationalizing stories to sell more papers. But even the highest levels of government can't stop a paper from publishing the Pentagon papers.

Thank God we live in a country where we can rail at the government openly and often. Where we don't have to worry about a knock on our door in the middle of the night. Thank God our children can worry about what they're going to do with their lives and not worry if they'll survive the system.

Happy 213th, America, and many more.

Prime Minister Macmillan denounced South Africa's racial policy as "abhorrent to the ideals with which mankind is struggling in this century."

The strike of 1,500 truck drivers and pushboys in the women's garment industry - New York's largest - was settled with a three-year agreement that called for wage increases of $12.50 a week over the contract period. The first year's increase was to be $7.50 a week and in the following two years, it would be $2.50 more a week.

New York Governor Rockefeller announced that the burned-out executive mansion in Albany would be rebuilt rather than replaced. His decision to restore the towering Victorian building which the state's governors had lived in since 1877 was based on both sentiment and practical grounds.

According to a former Cuban premier, the country was being infiltrated daily by men and supplies to help forces on the island to oust Castro and his regime.

The U.S. 6th Fleet accidentally dunked two visiting retired admirals in the Mediterranean. They were being transferred from an aircraft carrier to a cruiser when a line gave way and down they went.

R. Sargent Shriver was confirmed without dissent by the Senate as director of the Peace Corps. The 45-year-old brother-in-law of President Kennedy was to serve without pay.

Driver's license as rite of passage

By Ralph Slovenko
Professor, Wayne State University

An attendance law enacted in 1988 in West Virginia limits the driver's licenses of students who drop out of school. According to a recent report in the New York Times, the dropout rate in West Virginia's high schools has been reduced almost a third (B.D. Ayres, "West Virginia Reduces Dropouts by Denying Them Driver's License," May 21, 1989, p. 1).

The West Virginia Legislature enacted the law in order to deal with the problem of school dropouts. For the past decade in West Virginia, about 5,000 students each year dropped out of high school whereas only 3,400 students dropped out in the last school year. School officials and students themselves credit the change to the new law.

A student can still drop out after reaching 16, as permitted under school attendance laws, but under this new law, without a valid excuse like illness or economic hardship, he loses his driver's license and is not eligible for one again until reaching the age of 18.

Nationwide, one of every four high school students do not make it to graduation, resulting in a life of fewer economic and social rewards. The West Virginia law has attracted the attention of education departments and legislatures in a number of other states. A bill in the Michigan Legislature would authorize state and local governments to deny a driver's license or revoke an existing license for anyone under age 18 who drops out or is expelled from high school.

The right to drive is highly motivating. After all, the driver's license is today's rite of passage to adulthood, replacing First Communion or the Bar Mitzvah. It is today's mark of adulthood. Socializing or going to work depend on driving.

I am bemused by a recent event. When I gave a young friend a high school graduation present, he wrote in a note of thanks that graduation was even more exciting than receiving his driver's license because, he said, "graduation involved my entire class." But for many youngsters the driver's license is even more important than graduation itself.

The other day I asked a teenager, the daughter of friends who immigrated from Poland, about her memory of Poland. She quickly replied, "When I was 8 I could take a trolley or bus and go downtown by myself." In Poland, no one thinks of the driver's license as a rite of passage. Here, in Detroit, she mused, there is no public transportation and no downtown. So here, until recently, when she got her driver's license, her parents served as her "taxi driver."

Now, age 16, she has her driver's license but, with everyone needing a car, the rite of passage has turned into a passage to a traffic jam.

Hollywood bound

First prize winners in WKSG's "Singin' in the Shower" competition - Kingfish and The Mystic Knights of the Sea - will fly to Universal Studios in California in October to seek fame and fortune.

John Kosmas of Grosse Pointe Woods is one-fourth of the award-winning quartet which performed at the MeadowBrook Village Mall in Rochester June 3.

The act was performed ... uh ... topless. It was, uh ... clean, however, and definitely suitable for family viewing.

The group's rendition of "Under the Boardwalk" was performed in a bathtub. Costumes consisted of brightly colored towels around their waists and necks and the routine included a lot of mutual soaping and scrubbing of each other's backs.

Other members of the quartet include Mark Davidson of Warren, Jack Messina of Sterling Heights and Chris Miller of Detroit.

Kingfish and The Mystic Knights of the Sea won $500 in cash and a trip to California Oct. 5-8 to compete in the national "Singin' in the Shower" competition for a $5,000 prize.

Get a horse

Got a sturdy corral at least 6 feet high? Shelter? Transportation? And $125?

Then you qualify as a potential adoptive parent for up to four wild horses recently rounded up from fragile Western rangelands.

Adoption proceedings will be held Aug. 11 through 13 at the St. Johns Horse Auction, 8-1/2 miles north of St. Johns, Mich.

Since 1973, when the adoption program began, more than 90,000 animals have been placed with over 35,000 people nationwide. More than 600 animals have been adopted by Michigan residents.

Most of the horses are from Nevada, Wyoming, California and Oregon. They reproduce at a rate of 15 to 20 percent annually and must compete with native wildlife and domestic livestock for survival. All animals are thoroughly checked by a veterinarian.

For applications and more information, contact John Winnepenninx, Bureau of Land Management, P.O. Box 631, Milwaukee, Wis. 53201-0631. Or call (414) 291-4417.

Monte Nagler wasn't caught in a jam in this photograph taken early in the morning at Death Valley.

How to keep out of a jam

Have you ever shot a roll of film, begun to rewind it into the cassette and then you guessed it - found the film had never advanced through the camera? Don't feel lonely; it's happened at some time in almost every photographer's career.

But did you know there's a way to assure that your film always advanced through the camera? In fact, there are a number of helpful hints to keep you out of a jam and improve your photographs. Here are some:

- To resolve the film advance problem, simply watch the film rewind crank as you advance the film. If the crank turns, every thing is okay. If not, the film isn't going through the camera. It's that simple.
- Use a skylight or haze filter on all your lenses. They will not only warm up colors and cut through haze, but they will protect your valuable lenses.
- Thoroughly read your camera owner's manual. Carry it in your camera bag for quick reference. It contains valuable information on your camera and useful information on photography.
- To be safe, especially with electronic cameras, change batteries in your camera once a year, even though it still appears to be functioning properly. Pick a day you'll remember, such as Jan. 1 or your birthday.
- Tape the label from your film box on the back of your camera (some cameras have slots for this purpose) as a reminder of what kind of film you are shooting. If you don't take many pictures, it's easy to forget what's in your camera.

- Don't always use fast film (high ASA ratings). I recommend using the slowest speed film that faster. When limited light demands a slower speed, use a tripod.

- If your meter should fail, it is not lost. Simply set the shutter speed to the number closest to the ASA of the film you are using. Example: with Kodacolor conditions and lighting will permit. You'll get finer grain, more vivid colors, and save money on film, too.

- When is it safe to hand hold your camera? Shoot at the shutter speed that comes closest to the focal length of your lens, not slower. For example, with your normal 50mm lens, shoot at 1/60 second or faster. With a 135mm lens, use 1/125 second or 100, the shutter speed should be 1/125 second. Then set the aperture at f16 on a sunny day, f11 on a bright over-cast day, f8 when it's overcast, and so on.

- As always, try to add impact to your photographs. Move in close, compose carefully, watch your backgrounds, and learn how to use depth of field creatively.

Yard-to-yard theft suspect carted away by police

Park police responding to a call that a suspect was taking items from the back yards along the Beaconsfield-Lakepointe alley June 12 easily found the suspect with the goods in tow.

Officers responding to the call at 6:12 a.m. saw the suspect pulling a cart in which were a stolen lawn mower and step ladder.

LCC gives Topsiders an extension

By John Minnis
Assistant Editor

The lawyer representing Topsiders Uptown Cafe, formerly the Cracker Jax bar on Mack, has reached an agreement with the Liquor Control Commission to sell or transfer the establishment's liquor license within a year.

Topsiders co-owner Mark DiMaso said June 23 that his attorney, Norman C. Farhat, proposed to the LCC that since the establishment is closed that it be allowed a year to sell the liquor license. The LCC agreed, Di-Maso said.

The LCC had found United Syndicated Artists Inc., holder of the Class C liquor license for Cracker Jax and now Topsiders, guilty of 30 liquor law violations involving minors. The incidents occurred last year.

Owners of the Mack Avenue bar in the Farms were ordered to transfer or sell their liquor license by April 30 of this year or have it revoked. If the license is revoked, the owners cannot get any compensation for transferring the right to sell liquor.

Since United Syndicated Artists appealed the LCC's findings, the revocation of the license could not occur on April 30. A short hearing on the appeal before an LCC board was conducted April 23, at which time Farhat made his proposal.

DiMaso said Farhat suggested that since Topsiders closed as of May 22, then the business' owners ought to be given time to sell the rights to the license, subject to LCC approval.

DiMaso said the business is being offered by Wilcox Realtors of Grosse Pointe Woods. The purchase of the business would include the liquor license, a Sunday sales permit and a dance permit, DiMaso said.

He had originally hoped to buy out his partners, but DiMaso said he has other business interests now.

The LCC gave United Syndicated Artists until April 30, 1990, to sell or transfer the license or else have it revoked, DiMaso said.

Asphalt found in gas station's storm sewers

A curious Woods detective found what appeared to be a quantity of asphalt in the storm water catch basins at a Woods gas station last week.

At about 5:30 p.m. June 22, the off-duty detective was filling his car with gas at the Mobil gas station at Vernier and Mack when he saw waste and pollution control company out of Mount Clemens pumping fluids out of the station's catch basins for rain water. Curious, he went over and asked questions.

According to police reports, the company was called in after five gallons of gasoline was spilled while a fuel truck was filling the station's tanks that day, police were told. But there must have appeared to be much more gas spilled because an officer in his report said "the amount of gasoline that was spilled is very much in question."

Police then checked the catch basins with a flash light and saw what is believed to be "quite a sum of asphalt at the bottom of both basins, perhaps an excess when new drives (driveways) were put in." The officer believed that with each gas spill, the fuel mixes with asphalt, creating a sludge that is flushed through the storm sewer during a heavy rain.

Police informed Woods Public Works Director Thomas Whitecher of the situation, and Whitecher told police to order the station to have the catch basins cleaned or else the city would clean them and bill Mobil.

According to city records, the blueprints to convert the gas station into a convenience-type operation were approved in July 1988, with the construction and pouring of the asphalt probably having been around September of last year.

So he chose the pen name of G.P. Scarpia. Scarpia is the villain in Giacomo Puccini's (thus the G.P.) opera "Tosca." He wrote his articles and late at night slipped them under the door of the news office when no one was around. It worked, he said, and no one other than his editor knew who Scarpia was.

"People would wait to see what Scarpia had to say," Guinn laughs. "They would talk about him and wonder who he was and I would just keep quiet. I wasn't too mean, though. I tried to be truthful. No one ever caught on."

Armed with his degrees, he came to Michigan because he heard there were teaching jobs here. He taught for a while in Centerline, then taught music to non-music majors at the University of Detroit.

"That was exciting," he said. "I enjoyed turning people on to classical music."

Because of his love of music he attended concerts in the area. When he did he often saw the music critic for the Detroit Free Press. Guinn also saw that the critic was getting older.

Guinn sent a letter to his friend at the Free Press, Neal Shine, saying he would like to be considered for a writing position when and if the critic retired.

It happened that the critic was retiring and Guinn got the job. He has held the same position since 1975.

"Like at Notre Dame I always try to be truthful," he says. "My rule is that if you're going to say something is wonderful or something is not wonderful, you've got to say why."

He's truthful even if he knows it might hurt his source. Guinn remembers writing unflattering remarks about a piece of music that a conductor was excited about. When they spoke again, the conductor told him he was right.

"My writing isn't stuffy," he said. "I'm not writing to impress people, but to educate them. The most important thing in my writing is to make people think. You can't always get people to agree with you, but at least you can make them think."

Guinn spends two to three days a week in music halls at concerts, (usually he takes Catherine, his wife of 18 years, with him) and writes approximately 75 reviews a year. He loves it, though, because of the high quality of the Detroit Symphony Orchestra, an organization he says is getting more respect, especially after its successful tour of Europe earlier this year.

He says of the 75 reviews he writes each year, only about 15 are negative. He credits that, too, to the quality of the DSO.

"You don't expect, normally, something so refined as the DSO coming from such an industrial-based city. And the audiences in Detroit are much more sophisticated than people might give credit for."

He also believes the new management of the DSO and the move to Orchestra Hall will be good for the organization. He believes the new management will be able to turn the organization around and keep it viable in Detroit.

How does he keep his writing fresh, after hearing the same piece dozens of times during his tenure?

"Well, it's the wonderful mixture of the composer with the conductor and the performers," he said. "If they bring something new to the piece, maybe a new interpretation, then it's like hearing something for the first time."

The mood of the music world, however, is in a swing back from new interpretations to presenting music with technical beauty. It is a swing Guinn does not enjoy.

"We're in the midst of a time that is very distressing," he said. "A lot of artists think the proper way to perform is to be technically perfect and to distance themselves from the piece. Even the most intelligent audience can get impressed with sheer technical brilliance, but artists need to bring a lot more to the piece that they can't if they distance themselves."

Guinn hasn't given up playing the piano — he just doesn't have enough time to play as often as he would like, and he hasn't even given up teaching. He gives preview talks on DSO concerts at Village Records and Tapes on Kercheval in Grosse Pointe City and he also has a morning spot on WQRS-FM, the classical music station.

He's done some composing and in his spare time does a lot of reading and listening to his extensive library of music.

And after 14 years, he still loves his job. "I enjoy the music, I enjoy the writing. You can't ask for more."

Unusual-looking car invokes fond, nostalgic memories

Summer is a busy time for car fans, with old-car meets just about every weekend and the fun is looking at everyone else's cars, talking about cars, maybe lying a little here and there. But the most fun is the nostalgia.

Now I like the classics, the Cords and Auburns, the Cadillacs and Lincolns, but I think the most fun is when you see something unusual — not a classic, not necessarily beautiful, just an old car that you haven't seen in decades. The fun is not just the car, it's also the memories.

At this year's Carnival of Cars, sponsored by the Classic Car Club of America at the Ford test track in Utica, there were several such cars.

You don't exactly get jaded looking at '55-'57 Chevys, the Pontiac GTOs, the Plymouth Road Runners, the elegant Fords of the '30s, the Packards and all the other favorites, but you see them at all the shows.

Not so with the shiny black bullet-nosed '51 Studebaker Commander Land Cruiser that gleamed in the sun near a much more desirable Chrysler Town and Country and several excellent Ford Model As.

The Studebaker Land Cruiser is an unusual-looking car, a period piece which makes little sense to younger show visitors, but is immediately recognizable to anyone who came of automotive age in the '50s or earlier.

"I bought it at an estate sale in Pennsylvania," said its owner, Vern Hunt, a home builder in Lapeer. "It's original, you don't see many of these. When I discovered it was a Land Cruiser, I really wanted it."

Hunt said he had taken a truck to haul it home, but when it started right up, he decided to drive it back. Hunt spoke with the diffident, almost shy, manner that owners of interesting cars often display — not boastful, but pleased when someone recognizes it as a worthy car.

The '51 Land Cruiser is unusual. Its eccentric bullet nose and sharply sloping rear deck it shared with other Studebaker models of that year. But it had a 119-inch wheelbase, while all other Studebakers had 115 inches between the axles. That four inches made quite a difference in the four-door sedan's appearance, making the Land

Crucier quite an imposing vehicle.

The Land Cruiser is rare, most would say (including me), but in fact more than 38,000 of them were built, more than any other Studebaker model in 1951.

Hunt said the car was original, from its gleaming black paint job to its odd gray striped upholstery. Behind that bullet nose was a 232-cubic-inch V-8 which delivered 120 horsepower through an automatic transmission made by Studebaker. (Later, Studebaker switched to the same Borg-Warner unit used by Ford Motor Co.)

The Land Cruiser had "suicide

doors" in the rear, doors which opened from front to rear instead of the other way around, so called because to open the door while traveling at highway speed could be suicide.

Like the revolutionary '47 Studebaker before it ("couldn't tell if it was coming or going," comedians claimed) and the classic '53 and later coupes, Speedsters and Hawks after it, the bullet-nosed Studebakers of '50 and '51 were designed by Raymond Loewy's innovative team, which included Gordon Buehrig, Virgil Exner, Bob Bourke and Bob Koto.

That period from the end of World War II until the end of Studebaker (1963 for U.S. production, 1966 in Canada) included the company's golden age of high production and profits. In South Bend is the magnificent Studebaker mansion, which now houses an elegant restaurant, but it was not built with automotive money. It was built before the company got into building cars, when it was a major producer of horsedrawn wagons.

Started by Henry and Clement Studebaker in 1852, the company began as a blacksmith shop, building a few wagons. After brother John (who had made a fortune building wheelbarrows for the gold rush miners in California) joined the firm it grew into the largest producer of horsedrawn vehicles in the world (traveled by William Durant's carriage works in Flint; Durant later founded General Motors).

other Studebakers had 115 inches between the axles. That four inches made quite a difference in the four-door sedan's appearance, making the Land

Crucier quite an imposing vehicle.

The Land Cruiser is rare, most would say (including me), but in fact more than 38,000 of them were built, more than any other Studebaker model in 1951.

Hunt said the car was original, from its gleaming black paint job to its odd gray striped upholstery. Behind that bullet nose was a 232-cubic-inch V-8 which delivered 120 horsepower through an automatic transmission made by Studebaker. (Later, Studebaker switched to the same Borg-Warner unit used by Ford Motor Co.)

doors" in the rear, doors which opened from front to rear instead of the other way around, so called because to open the door while traveling at highway speed could be suicide.

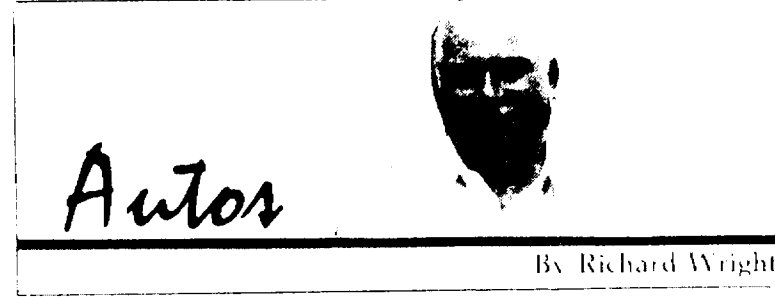

Like the revolutionary '47 Studebaker before it ("couldn't tell if it was coming or going," comedians claimed) and the classic '53 and later coupes, Speedsters and Hawks after it, the bullet-nosed Studebakers of '50 and '51 were designed by Raymond Loewy's innovative team, which included Gordon Buehrig, Virgil Exner, Bob Bourke and Bob Koto.

That period from the end of World War II until the end of Studebaker (1963 for U.S. production, 1966 in Canada) included the company's golden age of high production and profits. In South Bend is the magnificent Studebaker mansion, which now houses an elegant restaurant, but it was not built with automotive money. It was built before the company got into building cars, when it was a major producer of horsedrawn wagons.

Started by Henry and Clement Studebaker in 1852, the company began as a blacksmith shop, building a few wagons. After brother John (who had made a fortune building wheelbarrows for the gold rush miners in California) joined the firm it grew into the largest producer of horsedrawn vehicles in the world (traveled by William Durant's carriage works in Flint; Durant later founded General Motors).

Milk River problems attract attention of county, state

By Dan Jarvis
Staff Writer

At a public meeting Monday regarding problems related to the Milk River basin, residents living nearby were informed that help is on the way.

The meeting was conducted by a combination of representatives from Wayne County Public Works, the Michigan Department of Natural Resources and engineers studying both short- and long-term solutions.

Residents were also given a chance to explain problems such as odor and raw sewage.

Bob Vandermeulen, supervisor of the Milk River pump station, explained that during a storm, up to one million gallons of storm water enter the sewage system serving Grosse Pointe Woods and parts of Harper Woods. The storm water is combined with raw sewage and stored in a holding tank outside the pump station, located at Marter Road and Parkway in the Woods.

From there, the water is pumped into the Detroit sewage system interceptor, with the remainder being held in the tank and then released into the Milk River basin. Both the interceptor and tank have limited capacities and in high water conditions, water must be released from the basin into Lake St. Clair.

Because sewage and sludge settles in the channel, residents are faced almost daily with odor and visible raw sewage.

Some residents said that others living along the banks have used portable pumps to irrigate their lawns, and that children play in the sprinklers and drink the contaminated water.

In an effort to reduce sewage and odor, the channel, between Jefferson Avenue and the pump station, is drained by pumps at Jefferson and pumped directly into the lake through a 6-foot pipeline extending 520 feet into the lake. The process is carried out about once per week.

Residents said that boaters of ten anchor and swim in the area of the outlet, which can have detrimental health affects.

When the channel is drained and sludge is exposed to the air, the odor becomes unbearable, several residents said.

"One of the alternatives which we could start doing right now is to de-water (drain) and then refill the channel late at night and early in the week when residents are less likely to be out side," said James Murray, director of public works for Wayne County.

Another short term solution is to aerate the channel, which would allow oxygen to decompose much of the sewage. When oxygen in the water is depleted, non-oxygen burning bacteria take over, resulting in a strong odor.

Aeration can be achieved by installing a permanent aerator. A temporary system could be used until long-range solutions can be agreed upon, said Vyto Kaunelis, project engineer with McNamee, Porter and Seeley. The firm was hired by the Woods to perform an overall study on improving the outdated system.

Kaunelis said other possible solutions include installation of finer screens to keep solids from entering the drain or increased circulation in the channel to keep solids from settling.

Roy Schrameck, of the DNR, said that state funding for improvements in the system are a possibility.

He said a list of requested funding for projects around the state will be put together in January 1990 and presented to state officials for approval. The Milk River study is expected to be done in the fall of this year and will appear on the list, he said.

In order to qualify for state funding, any short-term solutions must be part of a comprehensive plan.

"I'm sure that there is a short-term solution that will fit into the guidelines of state and local concerns," Schrameck said. "We don't want to spend money foolishly, but we can reduce the impact on residents by rethinking the hours of pumping and draining the channel."

Kaunelis said McNamee, Porter and Seeley will come up with four overall plans to solve the Milk River problem. Once the plans are presented to Woods and state officials, the plans can be compared as to cost, time involved, long-term vs. short-term solutions and public health concerns.

"We will provide the information on various alternatives and will make recommendations on the best approach," Kaunelis said.

He added that the information-gathering section of the study is 80 percent completed. In the next phase of the study, engineers will offer solutions and alternatives to improve the system.

Young tells Rotary of need for cooperation

By Nancy Parmenter
Staff Writer

Detroit Mayor Coleman Young visited the Grosse Pointe Rotary Club Monday to make a pitch for harmony and cooperation — and to castigate those who oppose any expansion of City Airport.

"We need to attract industry, commerce, jobs," he said. "One sure way to discourage that is to close down our airports."

In answer to a question from Art Williams, chairman of the local airport study committee (which opposes expansion), Young said he was willing to commit to restricting the noise level of jets.

"I have no problem with a noise restriction on jets," he said, adding that small planes cause more noise than jets. "I would hesitate to put restrictions on private planes."

Young said the east side of Detroit and its eastern suburbs stand to benefit jointly from any commercial development. Commerce depends at least in part upon convenient air travel, he said.

"All of us certainly profit from air travel. To have someone in 1989 say 'I don't want airplanes flying over my back yard' is a bit much.

"To have air travel... you have to have airplanes flying overhead."

Although Detroit has the unfortunate distinction of being the only American city to lose half its population over the last four decades, increased air use for commerce and pleasure more than balances that out, according to Young. Metro airport will outgrow its capacity within five years, leaving City and a potential airport in Macomb County to pick up the slack.

"There's room for everybody, even with a new airport in Macomb or if Selfridge were converted (to joint use)," the mayor said.

Young also said he sees the dwindling population as a challenge and even an opportunity. The city is buying property as it is vacated, with an eye to new development, even a "new city" within the city.

He ended his brief remarks with another call for cooperation.

"We need you and you need us," he said. "That's why I'm here. I'd like to see some of you show up on the other side of Eight Mile a little more often."

Host families needed

Families are needed immediately to host more than 100 French and Spanish exchange students, mostly boys, who want to spend four weeks this summer experiencing American-style living.

Families do not have to speak French or Spanish to host, since the students have had four to eight years of English language study. Their parents supply the children with pocket money and pay for their transportation and insurance.

Students will visit July 10-Aug. 7, and July 24-Aug. 20. French and Spanish chaperones who are teachers of English accompany the teenagers and are also placed in families.

The program organizers match host families with students according to general interest and specific activities they would like to share with their guests.

In the reciprocal program, Naacel Cultural Exchange offers American teenagers the opportunity to live four weeks abroad as part of a French, Spanish or German family. For the first time, American teenagers who have hosted are being offered a $200 Naacel hosting scholarship off the price of their European homestay either this year or in the future.

This year the cost including transportation from Detroit or Grand Rapids is $1,295 or $1,095 for families who host or have hosted. More than 150 Michigan teenagers will be going abroad with Naacel this summer.

Families interested in hosting one of the teenagers or their chaperones should phone local representative Phyllis Reeve at 331-2378 or Evelyn or Julian Prince at 1-626-6641.

Camp stresses nature education

The Michigan Wilderness Preservation Environmental Education camp offers an alternative to the regular summer camp routine with a program emphasizing nature education.

The camp, founded in 1982, offers campers the opportunity to learn about nature first-hand. The camp is located near Glennie in the Huron National Forest.

Sessions include classes on topics such as forestry, wildlife management, fisheries and bird study. These are all hands-on nature projects taught by qualified instructors.

Camp sessions begin July 1 and are open to children 8-17. For more information, write or call Environmental Education Camp, 1700 Adams, Glennie, Mich. 48737, (517) 735-4542.

Back pain sufferers sought for study

The Gertrude Levin Pain Clinic located in the Harper Hospital Professional Office Building is looking for individuals to participate in a research study.

The use of Trilisate, a medication commonly used to treat arthritis patients, is being studied to treat individuals suffering from chronic low back pain.

Those who have chronic low back pain for at least six months, and do not have psychological or drug-related problems are encouraged to participate. For further information on the study, call Susan Sluis, Pharm. D., Monday through Wednesday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. at 745-9333.

Series on teens and alcohol opened eyes

What was said: Quotes from past A&A interviews

- "If a father likes sports, the kid will too. And the analogy works with drinking as well."*
—Barbro Lynton Wayne County MADD president Feb. 23, 1989
- "The kids are winning this battle. Parents are turning their backs when it's time to take a strong stand."*
—Tom Tetaert assistant principal Grosse Pointe South Feb. 23, 1989
- "Just telling kids to say no is easy. DARE gives eight ways to say no."*
—Sally Beghin Woods police officer and DARE instructor March 30, 1989
- "The problem won't go away. Alcohol is acceptable in this community."*
—Pat Gast Grosse Pointe parent Feb. 23, 1989

According to student surveys, about 90 percent of the young people in Grosse Pointe have experimented with alcohol.

In fact, surveys show that alcohol is the drug most abused by teenagers nationwide.

Last Oct. 27, the Grosse Pointe News kicked off a year-long focus on alcohol and adolescents in Grosse Pointe. We pledged to devote a page or more each month to exploring the problem from as many angles as we could muster.

During our nine-month community campaign, we wrote stories about people who work with teenagers and with alcohol abusers; stories about what the Grosse Pointe schools' curriculum teaches our kids about alcohol; stories about our high school athletic pledge; about alcohol advertising; about signs of chemical use in teenagers; ideas for preventing teen alcohol use. We did profiles of the local alphabet-soup-like list of organizations that discourage alcohol use: SAC, SADD, MADD, MASADA and DARE.

We publicized alcohol-free activities for teens in a calendar format. We published names and phone numbers of agencies where teens and parents can go for help.

We examined Grosse Pointe's student assistance program as well as that of West Bloomfield and Southfield — three of the metro Detroit's best programs.

We helped sponsor a free community lecture by Bruce Baldwin, a well-known parenting expert who spoke to a standing-room-only crowd about how to raise successful, achieving children.

Tom Tetaert, Grosse Pointe North's assistant principal said he believes the last nine months have brought a greater level of awareness in the Grosse Pointe community of alcohol use by youngsters.

"I think we're getting better information out to people," he said, "although it's too early to know how successful we are."

"The Grosse Pointe News' Alcohol and Adolescents series has definitely added to the community's awareness of the problem," he said.

Grosse Pointe North's Director of Athletics Tom Gauerke said he gets feedback from both parents and students. "There's definitely a greater awareness of the problem," he said.

"From students, I hear concern about having parties where alcohol is served in Grosse Pointe. They're afraid they'll get caught. I'm not saying the parties have stopped, but kids are more cautious."

"The Grosse Pointe News' involvement has increased this awareness," he said.

"This shouldn't be a one-shot deal. It shouldn't end now. This is an ongoing process."

Woods detective Dan Koerber, youth officer for the north end of the Grosse Pointe school district, said that there are definitely fewer teen parties than last year. "Adults and kids are more aware of the consequences," he said.

"The Grosse Pointe News' series has definitely been a useful one. I've seen a dramatic difference this year, especially at graduation time."

Children of alcoholics are at risk

By Nancy Parmenter
Staff Writer

Susan Pearce

Being a child in an alcohol disrupted family doesn't end when you grow up. The problems that result from an ill-functioning family remain and show up in compulsions and addictions in the adult.

Living with an alcohol problem teaches children to deny, discount and rationalize, according to alcoholism family counselor Claudia Black. These behaviors "will distort their perception of reality and will cause problems for those children in relating to their peers and to adults," she wrote.

At the same time, "a lot of children don't ever recognize that alcoholism is causing their family problems. It's very common for people to be in their 20s or 30s before they're able to say that what went on in their families was the result of their parents' drinking."

Children of alcoholics are traumatized by it in the same way as children of mentally ill parents or parents who are emotionally shut down, says Joanne McCoy, of Co-Dependent Specialists of Southeastern Michigan.

"Co-dependent is a term for children of trauma," she said. "These children minimize their pain in order to survive. They always say they had a happy childhood. It isn't till the symp-blaming parents," she said. "They are doing the best they know how. They probably didn't have good role models."

"But there is a wounded child who needs to be healed."

"There are plenty of children of alcoholics in Grosse Pointe, according to substance abuse counselor Susan Pearce. Typically, 25 percent of students have a parent who is alcoholic, and Pearce says that the higher socio-economic level tends to experience more drinking and more alcoholism.

Further, families tend to replicate themselves when the children grow up and re-create the pattern.

"The normal family is the one you grew up in," Pearce said. "Unconsciously or consciously, you look for the same when you grow up. Children of alcoholics tend to be attracted to people who need help."

"This happens because children recognize the weakness in the parent. 'There's a role reversal,'

McCoy explained. "The child is asked to take responsibility for parents who can't meet their own needs. They are bound by guilt to continue taking care of this, which sets them up for compulsive behaviors."

"But these behaviors serve a useful purpose. They keep the unresolved issues medicated."

McCoy's counseling is focused entirely on co-dependents. She advises a person seeking help to ask a potential therapist a lot of questions. Ask about his or her experience and whether he has ever been in therapy himself for co-dependency because, she says, a high number of therapists are former co-dependents who are attracted to the profession by its helping nature. This poses no problem unless the therapist has not recognized the problem in himself, McCoy said.

"Ask your therapist about shame," she said. "If he can't give a half-hour lecture on shame, he doesn't know about co-dependency."

Facts about children of alcoholics

- An estimated 28 million Americans have at least one alcoholic parent.
  - One out of every four school children comes from an alcoholic family.
  - More than 50 percent of all alcoholics have an alcoholic parent.
  - More than 30 percent of all children of alcoholics grow up and marry an alcoholic.
  - In 90 percent of all child abuse cases, alcohol is a significant problem.
  - A disproportionate number of children of alcoholics enter juvenile justice systems, courts, prisons, mental health facilities and are referred to school authorities.
- Children of alcoholics are prone to experience a range of psychological difficulties, including learning difficulties, anxiety, eating disorders, attempted and completed suicides and compulsive achievements.
- Children of alcoholics often adapt to the unpredictability and chaos of an alcoholic home by developing behaviors that result in low self-esteem, depression, isolation, guilt and difficulty maintaining satisfying relationships.
- Information published by the National Institute of Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism and the National Association for Children of Alcoholics.

Substance abuse: At-risk students helped

By Dan Jarvis
Staff Writer

For several years, the Grosse Pointe Public Schools have been working to solve the substance abuse problem experienced by students, staff and school employees.

At present, the Student Assistance Program, designed to help students overcome related problems of substance abuse, is a core program designed to provide help to any student, ages K-12, who might be experiencing personal or family problems, including substance abuse.

Students believed to be at risk are offered help by school professionals trained in dealing with problems related to substance abuse. Primarily, the program is designed to educate, support and guide students to emotional and physical health.

"When people have trouble, the problem needs to be identified," said Doug Merkle, student assistance coordinator at North High School. "We are able to get students the resources so that they can learn to their full potential."

Any student who needs help or is worried about a friend can contact the coordinators or seek help of school officials. Other students may be referred to the program by school staff members or parents.

Merkle said the fact that the number of students served by various programs has nearly doubled as compared with the previous year, does not mean the problem is growing worse.

"Now that the program has been established and is in place, people have been better trained in recognizing problems with students," he said.

Merkle said that one of the outcomes of better training is that more referrals are being made and more students are being helped.

Under the guidelines of the program, students may need a referral when teachers notice their behavior or classroom performance has worsened. Support is offered through continued counseling or through participation in a support group.

Evaluation of the student's progress is achieved by tailoring the program to fit students' individual needs. Complete evaluation is done periodically to ensure those needs are being met in an effective way.

Specific services available in the substance abuse program are individual counseling, support groups and alternative choice classes.

Individual counseling is performed by program coordinators, school social workers and counselors, all of whom are available to talk with students and parents. Support groups are formed through a common interest and are available for student in grades 6-12. Groups meet with both students and parents in an effort to help them overcome substance abuse problems.

"Choices" is a series of classes available to help middle and high school students evaluate their own use of alcohol and drugs. In some cases, Choices may serve as an alternative to suspension for students facing problems.

As part of their referral program, substance abuse program staffers often recommend community services such as self-help groups, treatment or professional mental health agencies.

When treatment is beyond the scope of the school district's substance abuse program, students are assessed and treated by professional specialists outside the school.

According to Merkle, a school should establish a substance abuse program because personal and family problems affect a child's ability to take advantage of educational opportunities.

These problems manifest themselves in the school setting, contributing to vandalism, absenteeism, tardiness, disciplinary referrals, classroom disruptions and declining academic performance.

Profile: Dan Clark

The ripple effect of a drunk driving fatality

By Ronald J. Bernas
Staff Writer

"I'm not telling this to be maudlin, or to get sympathy. I think that perhaps by telling this story I can be some sort of catalyst to get people to think. And maybe to act."

With that preface, Grosse Pointe Park resident Dan Clark remembers the day 21 years ago when "my family became a Labor Day statistic."

Clark was 18 at the time and was at his family home in Holland, Mich., when he received a telephone call from a neighbor. She had been listening to the radio and heard that there had been a terrible accident, one involving a number of children. And she had a bad feeling about it.

Clark called the police and his fears and those of his neighbor's were confirmed: His family was involved in that accident.

Clark's father and six of the 14 Clark children were coming home from a drive-in movie when a woman — who was later determined to be drunk — plowed into the Clark's car.

A police car took Clark and one of his sisters, who was also at home, to the hospital where he found out his father and one of his brothers were so badly hurt they were rushed to the more advanced Bronson Hospital. A third brother and a sister were also very badly injured and near death. The rest of the kids in the car all suffered broken bones and cuts and scrapes, and lost most of their front teeth.

Clark went to Bronson to see

what could be done there. That's when he learned that his father had been rushed immediately to the operating room where he died on the table. His brother never made it to the operating room.

His other brother and a sister were hooked up to life support systems and within a few days it was determined that the brother wouldn't live. The children — Clark's mother had died of cancer eight years earlier — had to make the decision to disconnect the life support systems.

The sister hovered near death for six months, eventually surviving the skull fractures and spinal damage, drainage of the liquid which was creating pressure on her brain, spinal meningitis, brain damage and facial deformities caused by the accident. "She still has problems today," Clark said.

Another sister, who had remained conscious during the entire accident still has psychological problems stemming from what she witnessed.

"The immediate result of the accident were the deaths," Clark said. "But it also created five orphans who had to be taken care of."

It was difficult, he said, but the older brothers and sisters took the younger ones in their homes. "We felt we had to maintain a family identity, and we did."

The Clark children obtained a lawyer and they thought about suing the bars who served the woman who caused the accident under the Dram Shop Act.

"But those were different times, and there were different attitudes," Clark said. Because the prospects of getting any settlement seemed dim, the suit was never filed.

Incidentally, the woman involved received a broken ankle from the accident. Clark was told she had a history of drunk driving arrests. Hospital officials later told Clark that someone smuggled alcohol into her hospital room. Clark is not exactly clear on what happened to her, but he believes she was convicted of negligent manslaughter but never served time because she had minors she had to tend to.

"The effects of the accident are like ripples in water," he said, "touching places you never think of immediately."

"My father was a fine man, he had a wide range of talents you rarely find in someone. He played several musical instruments, he read in four languages, he was a research chemist," Clark said. "We were friends, not just father and son. My wife has never met him, and never will. My children will never benefit from knowing him. They won't ever hear him play the piano, and he could really play the piano."

"It's harder to know what you've missed when you talk about my brothers because they were young and it wasn't all there yet, but I miss them."

Ironically, Clark's uncle — his father's brother — was also killed by a drunk driver while taking a walk a few years later.

In the 21 years that passed since the accident, Clark, who is also a Grosse Pointe Park councilman, said the climate and the attitudes toward drunk drivers have changed. Tougher laws and stiffer penalties are now in place, but he says the laws need to go further if they are ever to be a deterrent to drunk driving.

"I'm telling this story because the statistics need to be said, publicly, to make a point," Clark said. "I provide a kind of living example on how alcohol abuse can change so many lives forever in ways you never think of in just one millisecond."

Future of assistance program looks good

By Dan Jarvis
Staff Writer

School officials know that drug use in our schools increases as students move from elementary to middle to high school. To offset the tendency toward drug use, programs are designed to increasingly help students as they move toward graduation.

Because the formalized program in the Grosse Pointe schools is relatively new, coordinators are concerned that too much of their time is spent in contact with students, allowing too little time for planning.

"We need to concentrate on planning, training and more parent education," said Doug Merkle, student assistance program coordinator at North. "The coordinators are overloaded with direct services, but if we work as a team to establish programs in each school, I think we can do a good job," he said.

Among the recommendations to improve the student assistance program, Merkle and fellow coordinator Susan Pearce at South note that student assistance teams should be given released time from regular duties and be required to attend training sessions designed by the coordinators.

"I believe we have the backing of the Board of Education," Merkle said. "I think they realize this and now we can proceed with the program."

Merkle said the fact that the

Woods, Park homes robbed

Three homes in the Park and two in the Woods were reported broken into last week, and a Woods resident scared off a would-be burglar of another home.

A home in the 900 block of Nottingham was broken into through a bathroom window sometime between 7 p.m. June 14 and 7 p.m. June 15. Taken were several pieces of stereo equipment and a jar of quarters.

A dining room window at a home in the 600 block of Barrington June 18 was the place of entry for a thief who made off with a purse and wallet that were on the kitchen table. The burglary occurred between 12:01 and 8:40 a.m.

The wallet was found with $20 missing in a vacant lot in the 300 block of Ashland.

An upper flat was broken into in the 900 block of Beaconsfield sometime between 11 a.m. June 15 and 11:30 p.m. June 18. The burglar got into the second-story dwelling by shinnying up a front porch pillar. It was not known what was taken.

In the Woods, a home in the 2000 block of Lennon was broken into sometime between midnight June 25 and 6:37 a.m. June 26. The thief got into the home by removing a kitchen screen that was held in place by tape and sewing pins.

A purse and men's tri-fold wallet and a money clip with $40 was taken from a kitchen table. The purse was found discarded near a home on Beaufait.

At another Woods home, $60 was taken from a kitchen table during a 45-minute period while the resident was out walking the dog.

The theft occurred some time between 11:50 p.m. June 25 and 12:30 a.m. June 26. Police believe the thief got into the house through the unlocked side door while the man was outside with the dog. When the man returned, the dog growled and sniffed near the side door, the resident told police.

A third break-in was aborted when a Woods man at a home in the 2000 block of Fleetwood heard a noise and saw a flashlight shining outside his home. He then yelled to scare off the burglar and called police.

Police found one of the house's screens ajar and pry marks on the window frame. A neighbor said she heard someone running from the area.

Hot weather tips for keeping pets cool, safe

The Michigan Humane Society offers some helpful tips for pet owners, during hot summer weather. While the heat and humidity is uncomfortable for us, it can be potentially dangerous for pets.

- Never leave a pet unattended in a parked car. Even when the windows are left partially open, the temperature can rise to unbearable levels in a very short time, creating the conditions for heat stroke, and even death.

- If your pet is outdoors, make sure he is confined and that shade and fresh, clean water are available at all times. Also, watch for any insect bites. They generally appear on the face and the ears. Consult with your veterinarian if you notice any irregularities.

- Exercising and walks are best done in the early morning or late evening when temperatures are cooler.

- Be very careful about the use and storage of fertilizers, pesticides and cleaning products to avoid accidental poisonings.

- Don't let pets hang their heads out of the car window while you're driving and never let them ride in the back of a pick-up truck. Eye and ear infections can result from blowing airborne particles, as well as severe injury or death, from leaping or being thrown out of a moving vehicle.

- Panting is a dog's way of "sweating." Never bind a dog's mouth closed. As crazy as this sounds, some people tie or tape their dogs' mouths closed to stop them from barking. This unacceptable training measure has resulted in heatstroke and death.

- Be sure your dog has been tested for heartworm and is on preventative medication from April until the first frost. Unprotected dogs can get heartworm from an infective mosquito. Animals love the outdoors and you and your pet can have a terrific summer with a few precautions.

The Michigan Humane Society urges you to contact them at 872-3400 if you have any questions or concerns about your pets well-being, or if you spot any animal in distress.

6 City streets to be improved

Six streets in the City of Grosse Pointe will be improved this summer at a cost of nearly $91,000 through the city's 1989 street resurfacing program.

On June 19 the City Council awarded the resurfacing contract to Nagel Paving Co. of Farmington Hills, which submitted the low bid of $90,798.

Of the six streets slated for improvements, three will be completely resurfaced. City Manager Thomas Kressbach said the streets to be resurfaced will be milled from curb to curb and a complete new surface put on.

The streets to be resurfaced are University Place from Jefferson to Maumee, St. Clair from Maumee to Kercheval and Maumee from Washington to Fisher.

The other three streets in this year's road work will have sections resurfaced. The three streets affected are Washington from Kercheval to Mack, Neff from Kercheval to Waterloo and Charlevoix from Neff to University Place.

Kressbach said the repairs will most likely be done in July and August, but as of last week no timetable for each street had been set.

Woods woman detains alleged sex offender

A 36-year-old Woods woman detained a man until police arrived last week after he allegedly exposed himself while committing a sex act in his car, she told police.

According to Woods police reports, the woman was leaving a drug store in the 19000 block of Mack at about 9 p.m. June 22 when she saw a man sitting in a car parked in a space next to hers. She told police that the man beckoned to her and when she looked, he had his pants down to his knees, fully exposing himself while engaged in a sex act.

She then got into her car, where her 3- and 6-year-old daughters were waiting for her, locked the doors and rolled up the windows. She backed the car out of the parking space and pulled behind the alleged sex offender. She called the Woods police on her car phone and waited for officers to arrive.

The Woods woman said the man came to her car window and knocked on it a couple of times, but she ignored him. At one point, the man backed his car into hers, she told police, but the officer saw no visual damage on either car.

The man, a 26-year-old Farms resident, told police that he was tucking his shirt into his shorts when the woman saw him. He said he was going to go into the store to buy a pop, but didn't go in when he discovered he didn't have any money in his wallet.

He was asked to go with the police officers to the police station and he agreed to do so, according to an officer's report. Police found the man has no criminal record and is not wanted on any warrants. After questioning he was taken back to his car at the drug store.

Former Marines sought

A concerted search is on for former Marines who have served with or been attached to, the Second Marine Division, the division famous for its participation in historically significant engagements such as Guadalcanal, Tarawa, Saipan, Tinian, Okinawa, the Cuban crisis, Dominican Republic, Lebanon and Grenada.

The Second Marine Division Association is conducting the search for participants in the above or those who served with the Division during peacetime, or are currently in the Corps. Although many friendships

Mayor, judge races look hottest in Grosse Pointe Park

By John Minnis
Assistant Editor

With incumbent Mayor Palmer T. Heenan being challenged by a fellow Republican and former Municipal Judge Beverly C. Grobbel seeking to get her bench back, the mayoral and judicial races may be the hottest facing Park voters in November.

And with incumbent council members Carroll F. Evola and Mark Valente III declining to file for re-election, there will be at least a couple of new faces on the council from among the five challengers.

June 20 was the filing deadline in the Park for municipal judge, mayor and three City Council seats. The mayor and three council members' terms expire in November and the judge's term ends in December. Because there are less than twice the number of candidates for the vacancies, there will be no primary in August, and all the candidates will be on the November ballot.

Incumbent Municipal Judge Kirsten Frank, 32, is running in her second election after being elected in 1987 to fill a vacancy after Judge Grobbel resigned.

However, Grobbel, 60, is running to get back on the Park's municipal bench. Now an attorney engaged in family counseling, Grobbel served a decade as the Park and Shores municipal judge from 1977 to 1987.

She said last week that personal circumstances forced her to resign a couple of years ago, but now she is in a position to take on the court responsibilities again.

Frank is a partner with the law firm of Durant & Durant, where she started as a law clerk in 1979. She is president of the Michigan Association of Municipal Judges.

For mayor, Heenan's challenger, Dutch Hendricks, 41, is president and owner of Hendricks & Associates Realtors with offices on the Hill in the Farms. He has been active in GOP politics at the state, local and national levels.

His political activities have included chairman of the Grosse Pointe Board of Realtors political affairs committee, two-time elected Republican delegate, state convention delegate in 1988 and Michigan Association of Realtors Wayne County Campaign '88 chairman.

Hendricks' local business and social activities include National Association of Realtors Federal District coordinator, president and vice president of the Grosse Pointe Farms Hill Association, the Grosse Pointe Mens Breakfast Club and a member of the choir at St. Clare of Montefalco Catholic Church in the Park.

He said he is on a friendly basis with Park Mayor Heenan and will remain so during and after the campaign, regardless of how it turns out.

Heenan, 67, is seeking his fourth term as mayor. He, too, is active in GOP politics and has been a delegate to the national convention twice. Concerning his challenger, Heenan said, "He's well-known and so am I." While he said he knew Hendricks well, he stopped short of calling him his friend.

Heenan said he is glad to see many people new to politics running for office. He said it reflects interest in the community and in the running of the city. Heenan said he looks forward to a fourth term in office: "There's a lot of unfinished business. I'm anxious to serve the people again."

Of the three incumbent council members, the only one to file for re-election was James E. Robson Jr., 41, who is ending his first term in office. He is an executive sergeant with the Wayne County Sheriff's Department, where he is in charge of community service projects and training.

He has been with the Sheriff's Department for five years. Before that he was a member of the Metropolitan Airport police. He has 15 years experience in law enforcement.

Councilwoman Evola, 50, said she didn't run for a third term because "it's time" to move on. She said she will miss being on the City Council, but she said not to count her out as far as being active in the community.

Valente, 32, would not say why he's leaving the council after two terms, but he said public service has been a way for him to give back to the community. As a staffer for the National Republican Party under Lee Atwater, Valente spends a good deal of time in Washington, D.C.

The Valente name may remain on the council after November, however, because Valente's brother, Dean Peter Valente, 30, has filed. An attorney with an office in the City, this is his first attempt to run for public office. He declined to speak for his brother as to why the incumbent decided not to run again for the council.

A retired mechanical contractor, Art Williams, 63, is co-chairman of the Grosse Pointe-Harper Woods Airport Study Committee for Detroit City Airport and he represents the Pointes on the City of Detroit Advisory Committee for City Airport.

For three years he has been monitoring developments at the airport, and has been fighting to keep the airport from expanding and posing accident and noise threats to the Pointes. He has lived in the Park since 1966, and he says he has extensive administrative experience from holding two corporate presidencies as well as running his own business.

Homemaker Beverly Miller, 43, is seeking a council seat because "I like living in the Park. It's a great place to live," she said, adding that she believes her input on the council can help to see that the Park continues to be a good place to live.

She said she resigned her position on the Board of Canvassers when she decided to run for office. Community involvement has always been important in her family.

Nancy Pilorget, 41, is chairman of the Park's Beautification Commission. She is proud of her part in making the Park a Tree City through the commission's tree plantings, according to her campaign manager, Gwen Balance.

Valerie Moran, 41, has been a substitute and part-time teacher with the Grosse Pointe Public School System for the past six years. She was laid off last year, she said. She has also taught at Wayne State University.

A lifelong Pointes resident and a Park resident for the past 17 years, she said she has been active in school activities, such as working for passage of the millage. Her bid for council is her first attempt to seek public office.

St. John is all of the above.

What makes a great hospital? On the eastside, it is a facility which has become a designated regional medical center, and a referral hospital for physicians and other hospitals throughout the metropolitan area.

It is an institution of advanced learning for physicians and other health professionals.

And it is an integrated system of health care facilities and services with more than 500 physicians on staff, and more than 40 medical and surgical specialties, working with the latest diagnostic capabilities, and a caring, knowledgeable staff.

In all, one hospital on the eastside has become as much a resource for health care professionals as it has for its neighbors in the community.

One hospital is all of the above; St. John Hospital and Medical Center.

Tower staff honored

The Tower, Grosse Pointe South's student newspaper, won the Spartan Award for the third consecutive year in journalism competition sponsored by the Michigan Interscholastic Press Association at Michigan State University in April.

Tower staff members compiled 32 points, winning honors in 10 different divisions of the competition. A total of 18 points were required to earn the Spartan Award, symbolic of overall achievement. Only four Class A newspapers achieved that level.

Shana Huntington and Molly Maycock dominated the opinion page category, placing first and second, with each school limited to no more than two entries per division.

Other firsts were won by Janine Cairo for editorial writing, Sunny Swarthout for sports feature, and the sports staff for

Second place awards were won by Swarthout for sports news and Katherine Zachary for human interest feature.

Winning third place were Rachel Konrad for feature column and Julie Nichols for news analysis, as well as the staff for in-depth, investigative reporting.

Finally, Nichols and Stephanie Kitchen were awarded honorable mention for front page design.

Julie Wheeler, Tower editor, was named to the all-state newspaper staff and helped edit the Student Journalist, a convention newspaper produced in one day.

Earlier this year, South junior Mikael Elsilä qualified in the first round of the Pilot Pen Journalism Scholarship contest. To qualify, Elsilä wrote a 500-word news story within two hours following a taped press conference. He will now compete nationally for a four-year scholarship.

Day by Day

An interested audience of fourth-graders from Jeanne Johnson's class at Deter got a first-hand look at some of the editorial cartoons of Bill Day from the Detroit Free Press recently. Day, a Grosse Pointe resident, answered students' questions, from the materials he uses to draw his cartoons to what individual cartoons were all about. Here he makes a point about a cartoon on the homeless to students Christoph Heinen, John Skovran and Mike Delmege.

St. Clare students honored

Eight students were given the Presidential Academic Fitness award: Danielle Pankowski, Paula Sanders, David Slusser, David Soranno, James Younan, Daniel Barduca, Jill Ryder and Aaron Sikora.

Ten students were recognized with the Who's Who Achievement and Science Award: Danielle Pankowski, Paula Sanders, Tom Petko, Aaron Sikora, Jill Ryder, David Slusser, David Soranno, Daniel Barduca, Jennifer Belen and Christopher Sharp.

Two students received special awards based on kindness, compassion, courtesy and Christian awareness. Jennifer Belen received the Katie Kemp Memorial Award; Joe Kustosz received the Steve Salkowski Memorial Award.

Student Spotlight

Mike Lucido

Each week in this column, we will focus on the work of a student. It can be a poem, a drawing, a short story, a picture of a scientific experiment or a wood-working project, a book review.

The following was written by Mike Lucido, who has completed the fifth grade at Ferry Elementary School. The 11-year-old is the son of Jack and Nancy Lucido of Grosse Pointe Shores.

Mike Lucido

When I went into the house, my aunt said "Where have you been?" And I told her, "Oh, just swimming with my snorkel!"

Undersea Adventure

It was April 3, 1989. I was swimming in the Atlantic Ocean at my aunt's cottage in Florida and it was exotic and fun. That afternoon, I felt something tugging on my leg. It pulled harder and harder! I began to scream. I started to breathe and I thought to myself, this is weird. I tried to swim back up, but nothing happened. And then right in front of me was a strange-looking creature with pipes on his head. All of a sudden, millions of the creatures came out and they said that they were called the Snockels. So I told them my name. The king of Snockels asked, "Why were you intruding in our area?" And I said, "I didn't know you lived here." They said, "We thought you were Mad Max, the meanest and the most dangerous catfish alive."

I said, "Why is he after you?" "Because he wants to eat us," they gurgled. I told them I would get rid of the catfish and they were real happy.

So when Mad Max came, I hid behind some rocks. Then he went up to the Snockles and said, "Time to come with me!" I jumped out and said, "Bye! Bye! catfish," and threw him out of the water. Then I told the Snockles I had to go, so I swam up out of the water.

Carolyn Kirchner

The following poem was written by Carolyn Kirchner for her father, Art, for Father's Day. She completed her freshman year at Our Lady Star of the Sea High School. She is also the daughter of Barbara Kirchner. The family lives in Grosse Pointe Shores.

Father

How is it that he can understand such things
When somehow I cannot.

And bring out all the good points in people
When those are the very points I forgot.

He takes in all the information and listens
To every fact.

Before forming an opinion upon a single word or act.

He tries to understand me and has
An open mind and heart

If he wasn't here to watch over me
I fear I'd fall apart.

And even when I'm disrespectful,
A burden, or a bother,

The truth is that I love him
And I thank God that he's my father.

Music festival opens 32nd season

The Grosse Pointe Summer Music Festival opens its 32nd season at the War Memorial, Monday, July 10 at 8 p.m. with Chicago Chamber Brass.

The five-member ensemble enjoys an international reputation through their extensive concert tours, radio and television broadcasts, recordings, commissioned works and performances with organ, concert bands and symphony orchestras.

Their concerts have universal appeal as the group combines an ongoing commitment to the art of chamber music with a dash of warmth and wit.

The program selected for their Summer Music Festival performance features Chicago Chamber Brass in a selection of light-hearted favorites from the group's classic pops repertoire.

The concert will open with the sounds of an American circus: Karl L. Kings' "Barnum and Bailey's Favorites." Trumpeter Stephen Anderson will perform his rendition of a gentle waltz, "My Regards," and French hornist John Touchton offers a French country dance, "Le Basque."

Chicago Chamber Brass will then join forces to escort the audience through an international tour of the Baroque period (1600-1750) featuring music from France, Italy, England and Germany by Mouret, Gabrieli, Purcell and Bach.

In the second half, the group will perform Benedetto Marcello's "The Heavens Are Telling" and their own arrangement for brass of three selections from Bizet's "Carmen" followed by a selection of American music by Lucky Roberts, Herbert L. Clarke, John Philip Sousa, George Gershwin and Irving Berlin. This final portion of the program includes a tuba solo performed by Chicago Chamber Brass founder, Richard Frazier.

Tickets for the first of six Summer Music Festival Concerts are on sale now at the War Memorial front desk or may be purchased at the door. Reserved tickets are $10; lawn admission is $6.50; children under 12, half price. Several money-saving ticket packages are also available.

Concerts are performed outdoors on the lakeside grounds of the War Memorial. Gate opens at 6:30 p.m. Concertgoers are invited to bring picnics from home or may purchase suppers from the War Memorial at $7

Chicago Chamber Brass

Belle Isle Zoo offers special summer events

The Belle Isle Zoo, once known as the Children's Zoo, is still a favorite with small children.

Its elevated boardwalk provides a safe vantage point from which youngsters may view the zoo's collection of exotic animals. Three-quarters of a mile in length, the boardwalk also offers a pleasant, leisurely walk for adults.

Recent additions to the animal collection include a half-dozen American alligators, a pair of small apes, and a trio of Mexican wolves. A rare spectacled bear from Peru and two fox-like maned wolves also from South America were exhibited last year for the first time. Alpacas, reindeer, llamas, storks, flamingos, kangaroos, and a variety of waterfowl make up the remainder of the animal population.

The Belle Isle Zoo also offers special events during the summer. Teddy Bear Day on June 24 will feature contests and free admission for all youngsters with teddy bears. In addition, zoo visitors will be treated to a hot dog on Free Hot Dog Day, July 8, and ice cream on Free Ice Cream Day, July 22.

A picnic or birthday party at the zoo is another activity offered during the season, at which a free birthday cake is provided. Special group rates are available. For reservations, call

Vietnam vets to host all-day picnic July 2

Vietnam Veterans invite the public to join them at Welcome Home Reunion '89, an all-day picnic to be held at Freedom Hill County Park Sunday, July 2, sponsored by Vietnam Veterans of America Chapter 154 Mount Clemens, the Macomb County Parks and Recreation Commission and Van Dyke Dodge.

More than 21,000 attended the first reunion last year. The event this year is expected to draw an even greater crowd, with veterans expected from all over America. Canadian and Australian veterans of the Vietnam War are also coming, and will be hosted by Chapter 154 members.

Opening ceremonies of Reunion '89 will begin at noon. Among speakers will be Congressman David Bonior from the 12th District, majority whip and Vietnam era veteran, and Mary Stout, president of Vietnam Veterans of America and formerly a nurse in Vietnam.

The ceremony will conclude with a reading of the names of 75 Michigan men still missing in action while 2,377 black balloons, commemorating all of the Americans still missing in Southeast Asia, are released. One white balloon, symbolizing hope, will be included.

'Batman': A psychological study

By Michael Chapp
Special Writer

While "Batman" is easily the biggest and most anticipated film of this big film summer, it may or may not be remembered as the best. The film is good, mind you. Very good. But it's likely that a debate will go on for some time about the picture's artistic merits.

Despite that debate — or maybe because of it — "Batman" is certain to do well at the box office. Given the subject matter and the sheer amount of pre-release publicity the film garnered, there are few moviegoers who won't feel compelled to check out for themselves what all the excitement is about.

When all the money has been counted and all the related merchandise has been packed in America's cultural attic though, the movie will mostly be remembered for the solid performance by Michael Keaton and the tour-de-force performance by Jack Nicholson. Both bring a hauntingly distinct quality to their characters, making them the quintessential Batman and Joker respectively.

Unlike the campy television series of the 1960s, the movie's foundation is its character development. Aside from a high-tech batmobile and a higher-tech batwing, there are no gadgets to propel the narrative. There is no Robin. And there is no Wham! or Ka-Boom! spliced in after a particularly painful uppercut to a bad guy's chops.

Instead, Director Tim Burton has opted for an intellectual approach to the story: a dark, psychologically compelling study of the neurotic title character — or more specifically of Bruce Wayne, his alter-ego. Things get plenty bloody and violent during the course of that study, something parents may want to be aware of from the outset.

Millionaire Bruce Wayne's life is no comic book. He witnessed the murder of his parents when he was a boy, and has dedicated his life to ridding Gotham City's streets of the considerable scum that covers them. As the dark, mysterious Batman, he swoops out of the midnight shadows and brings the criminal element to justice — often by killing them.

What makes this Batman so much more compelling than the television version of 20 years ago is the motivation for his actions. And the private battle he is waging with himself even as he deflects the bullets and punches off the bad guys.

Bruce Wayne is, as he describes himself, complex. He is the battle of good versus evil personified. There is a generous, altruistic side to him, the side that donates the charities and gives without asking in return. But there is a dark side, too. A side that finds fascination with death and pain and suffering.

Making the conflict more tangible is the Joker, whose white face, perpetual grin and manic laughter are a direct result of Batman's weaknesses. Before being dropped by Batman into a vat of chemicals, the Joker was Jack Napier, a borderline psychotic who was second-in-command of a crime ring in Gotham City.

After the chemical accident, the Joker became the epitome of Wayne's dark side — finding delight in murder, and boredom in anything less. Domination of Gotham City is his goal. That, and Batman's head.

The conflict is a good one, and it's fought on two levels — in the mind and with the body. Both battles are adequately developed in the film, well enough, in fact, that the frequent chase scenes, attempts at humor and music video-ish sequences are unnecessary. Indeed, they detract from the business at hand.

Burton has developed a viscerally exciting battleground for the story. The dark, shadowy, gothic Gotham City with heavenly-reaching architecture is an apt metaphor for the torn soul of Bruce Wayne. Too, the richly layered script and accessible motifs provide more than enough for viewers to ponder. All the rest is incidental. There is little need for a scene in which the Joker and his minions dance to Prince music and trash an art gallery, for instance.

Film

These are small, but important, criticisms of a generally well-constructed picture. They are certainly considerable enough, however, to trouble viewers, or at least force them to think twice about the picture's place among all-time great films — a spot many would have expected it would occupy, based on the generous amount of hype it received.

As for Keaton, bravo. There are, no doubt, other actors who could have captured Bruce Wayne's internal struggle. But none could have done so with more conviction than Keaton. From his weak chin (over which he had no control) to his non-verbal ticks (over which he had complete control), Keaton captured the nuances of his most complex character to date.

Nicholson, meanwhile, is again as strong as his reputation. His ability to be repulsive and somewhat endearing and funny at the same time is due largely to his patented delivery and his impeccable timing. Surely there is no actor working who could have played the Joker better with Nicholson's chutzpah and vitality.

In a supporting role as the love interest of both Wayne and the Joker, Kim Basinger is very forgettable. She's a pretty face, yes. But nothing more.

You should see "Batman" for the performances of its leading actors. You should see "Batman" for its occasional unabashed winks at the audience, such as when the flying batwing is briefly silhouetted against the moon.

You should not be "Batman" because of the relentless hype.

Go in with the right attitude, and you'll leave with the intended message: Nothing, not even the classic battle of right and wrong, is as simple as it appears to be.

Detroit-Windsor has international celebration

The 31st annual International Freedom Festival, June 23-July 4, will celebrate the peace and friendship between Detroit and Windsor, with more than 100 international events.

The joint celebration, created by Detroit journalist Paul Lutz-eier in 1959 to highlight both nation's birthdays (Canada Day, July 1 and Independence Day, July 4), featured a historic visit by Queen Elizabeth II. The festival has grown to become a tradition of over 100 events, attracting more than three million people.

Highlighting the international theme of the festival are events that can be enjoyed on both sides of the Detroit River. Included are the Wheels of Freedom Antique Car Show and Parade; this year the Detroit activities will move downtown to Greektown (Lafayette and Beaubien); and the Tug Across the Detroit River, pitting teams from Detroit and Windsor against one another.

The signature event, the Hudson's Freedom Festival Fireworks, is scheduled for Friday, June 30, with an alternate date of July 1. Featured will be pyrotechnics from around the world including Spain, Japan, France and Germany, fired from three barges in the Detroit River by Zambelli International.

A highlight of the 40-minute show will be a 24-inch "Friendship Shell" in honor of the freedom and friendship enjoyed by Canada and America.

Additional Detroit events include; "A Fort Night," an evening of fun and entertainment at Historic Fort Wayne; Cinema Canada, a showing of Canada's award winning films at the Detroit Institute of Arts; a Children's Day celebration in the Cultural Center, the 10K Freedom Festival Run and a wealth of free entertainment on Hart Plaza.

The Freedom Festival George E. Van Memorial Renaissance Regatta will set sail again this year in conjunction with the American Cancer Society and will give participants a sneak preview of the new St. Aubin Park & Marina slated to open on July 1, the course spans the Belle Isle to Ambassador Bridges.

McDonald's GospelFest will feature some of the best gospel choirs in the United States. The New Citizens Swearing-In Ceremony will officially welcome more than 200 new citizens to the United States.

Windsor highlights include "Arts Alice," featuring music, dance and other forms of entertainment; a Monte Carlo Casino; Voyager Village, an authentic camp of Voyager Indians; the Canada Day Parade, and live entertainment featuring a carnival on the riverfront.

Celebrate 4th at Greenfield Village

From pie-eating contests to three-legged races, chocolate sodas at the Ice Cream Parlor to hamburgers on the grill, Greenfield Village offers an opportunity to experience an Independence Day celebration from times gone by.

With the grounds remaining open until 9 p.m., visitors can plan on a full day of fun, food and festivities during Greenfield's Village's observance of "July 4: A Family Fourth."

Children of all ages can test their balancing skills as they roll a large hoop across the lawn or try their hand at tossing horseshoes or playing croquet. For those seeking a slower pace, there's always a game of checkers to be played in front of the general store.

Visitors who want to show off their brawn might join in the Tug-of-War, while those who pride themselves on their dexterity may prefer the Three-Legged Race. For the hearty eater, there will be a seemingly unending supply of pies available to participants in the Pie Eating Contest.

Visitors will be promenading with their partners as they learn the traditional contra dances of early America. The Ruffwater String Band will set the pace as Glen Morningstar calls the steps to this lively style of formation dancing.

While there may not be quite 76 trombones, the 5th Michigan Regimental Band will have "rows and rows of the finest virtuosos" as they perform 19th century brass band music from the bandstand. Visitors can listen to the concert as they enjoy a typical picnic feast selected from a variety of food available.

Though the exhibit buildings will close at 5 p.m., the 1913 carouse, the Suwanee Steamboat, and the train will operate until 9 p.m. Refreshments will be available from many locations throughout the day and evening.

Upon entering the village, each visitor will receive a program listing the times for the day's events, along with a small United States Flag. Tickets will be sold until 7 p.m.

A total of 18 special weekends have been scheduled through 1989 to mark the 60th anniversary of Henry Ford Museum & Greenfield Village. These weekends have been themed to reflect both the scope of the museum's collections and visitor interests, with activities ranging from small, intimate demonstrations to major, large-scale productions.

Future programs include "Colonial Life Festival," July 8-9, and "Fire Engine Muster," July 22-23. There is no charge for special weekend activities beyond regular village admission.

Harbortown gamble turns into Detroit success story

By John Minnis

Corporate America is often criticized as being afraid to take the risks necessary to make good things happen, but fortunately that isn't the case for those responsible for the Harbortown project.

Grosse Pointe Lawrence R. Marantette, president of ANR Development Corp., is one executive who stuck his career neck on the line for something he thought was worthwhile and beneficial for Detroit.

"It took an awful lot of guts and fortitude to get where we are today," Marantette said of the decision to build Harbortown. "It was intended from the beginning to act as a catalyst for residential development in Detroit."

Today the ANR Development project points to the Stroh's Plaza Place apartments, the Burns Building and other residential projects along East Jefferson near Harbortown to prove that the catalyst label is no idle boast. "It's working," he said of the redevelopment of East Jefferson. "It's not happening in one year or two years, but the growth is there."

Marantette, 38, began his career with American Natural Resources in 1976 as a financial expert and held positions as manager of cash management, director of financial planning and director pension investments. With a bachelor's degree in economics from Georgetown and an MBA in finance from the University of Michigan, Marantette never dreamed he would be a major residential developer and landlord.

Besides Harbortown, ANR Development has several other real estate holdings, including office buildings, but Harbortown gets most of the attention, which it deserves.

Before Harbortown existed, the 48-acre site contained abandoned buildings and vacant land that people used as a dump. Even while the land was being cleared, people would use it as the city dump.

Today the site bounded by the Detroit River, East Jefferson, Mount Elliott and Adair Street is an oasis 1-1/2 miles from downtown.

With the first phase of the project more than half completed, Harbortown now has a 19-story, 101-unit apartment tower, 58 townhouse condominiums, a three-tiered lagoon and a 62,000 square foot retail plaza. Phase I will be completed with the opening of a 15-story, 172-unit apartment tower in August and the building of 22 more condos next year.

The complete project calls for a total of 1,500 units and a marina. Other amenities include tennis courts, winding walkways, swimming pools and fitness rooms.

Marantette said, though, that there will probably be fewer townhouse condos than originally planned. He said Harbortown is finding that the larger condos are selling better, that people are willing to pay more for the extra room and quality.

Of the 58 townhouses built, of which occupancy began in 1987, only about 10 remain to be sold. The townhouse condos are available in two to three bedrooms (or optional two bedrooms and a den) and range from 1,250 to 2,115 square feet. Prices vary from $125,000 to $240,000.

Marantette said the rentals are moving easier, with the first apartment tower 85 percent to 95 percent rented. Rent ranges from $700 to $1,800 a month among the one to three bedroom units with square feet from 740 to 1,580.

While the location of Harbortown is an obvious advantage to professionals who work downtown, Marantette said others who find the residential complex appealing are retirees who split time between Michigan and the South and Southwest. He said that since Harbortown has its own 24-hour security force, retirees can leave their condominium or apartment for months without fear of it being robbed or vandalized. Business people who frequently travel would also benefit from the year-round security.

With a wall of shops on Jefferson and a guard house with gates requiring security cards, some have criticized Harbortown as being a walled-in community for the wealthy, shunning the Detroit natives surrounding Harbortown.

Marantette points out, however, that people have to feel safe and comfortable before investing in a condominium, apartment or home. Another plus is Harbortown provides jobs for nearby Detroiters. The retail shops alone provide some 200 jobs, Marantette said.

Also, Harbortown effectively closes out the noise and auto fumes and captures the fresh breezes off the Detroit River. In fact, once one enters the Harbortown village, all the city noise is gone and birds can be heard throughout the park-like setting.

The condos surround the three-level lagoon, which has a fountain in the center, and the walk path circling the lagoon is perfect for evening strolls. Eventually, Harbortown residents will be able to saunter down to the water's edge when the marina is built. To the east bordering Harbortown is a Coast Guard station with many large crafts coming and going.

ANR Development manages all of its properties itself and will continue to manage Harbortown. Marantette said he tried using a professional management company with another ANR property in the past, but the outside managers did not take as personal an interest in the maintenance of the property and the concerns of the tenants as ANR would have liked.

The quality of a residential complex's management is just as important as the quality of the buildings, Marantette said. "People are willing to pay more if the quality is there," he said.

ANR Development owns two-thirds of Harbortown, while MichCon Development Corp. owns the remain third. Marantette said the two development divisions couldn't have engaged in the Harbortown project if it weren't for the backing of their parent companies.

American Natural Resources President James F. Cordes is a former Grosse Pointe who now lives at Harbortown. ANR began as a gas company at about the turn of the century. ANR and its predecessors provided the fuel for Detroit's gas street lights. In 1985, ANR was acquired by Coastal Corp., a diversified energy company based in Houston.

Marantette said Coastal has stood behind ANR's Harbortown commitment, which began in the planning stage in the late 1970s and land purchases began in 1979.

Michigan Consolidated Gas Co. Chairman Alfred R. Glancy III, a Grosse Pointe, has also been a supporter of Harbortown. Last month he and Cordes accepted an award for the Harbortown project from Jack Kemp, secretary of Housing and Urban Development.

HUD has provided 10 percent of the $61 million spent on Harbortown so far. Also, ANR and MichCon have been able to obtain $12 million in tax-exempt funding by working with the Michigan Housing Development Authority.

With the first phase of Harbortown due for completion next year, Marantette said the second phase will depend on market conditions. He said the residential complex will expand as demand dictates.

Residential development, Marantette said, is one key to making Detroit and its downtown area a viable place to work and live. He said the only remaining piece in the puzzle is retail shops, but with residents moving to Harbortown and other downtown complexes, the merchants will come.

Already, Harbortown Plaza is 70 percent leased. The shops there include Perry Drugs, Concept One Florists, Harbortown Cleaners, Vantinus Hair Salon, Yogurt Gourmet, Pizza Papalis and the Harbortown Market, which features prepared foods, hard-to-find items for gourmet cooking, as well as the normal grocery store staples.

A new addition to Harbortown Plaza is a Blockbuster Video, which is already a popular stopping off place for Grosse Pointers on their way home from work.

Marantette is very proud of the success of Harbortown, and as a leading corporate executive who has pushed for the project, it will most likely certainly help his career. The project could very well have been a flop.

Harbortown could have turned out differently. What if after the expensive project was started, nobody wanted to live there? After all, as Marantette will admit, at the time Harbortown was proposed, experts were asking, "Why would you want to build in Detroit?"

City residents request Lakeland ramp opened

Several residents near the foot of Lakeland in the City have asked that the old boat ramp at Lake St. Clair be opened.

The ramp was closed in the early 1970s due to high water. In the meantime, new sea walls have been installed on either side of the ramp and steel plate put up across the mouth of the ramp to act as a temporary sea wall. The ramp was also filled in with dirt.

The City Council received a letter June 5 from Lakeland resident Dr. Walter F. Baer asking that the ramp be opened. He said he believed the land at the foot of Lakeland was deeded over to the city with the stipulation that the ramp be kept in use.

At the council's June 19 meeting, however, city attorney Richard Hinks said the deed stipulation probably did not exist and that the city had no legal obligation to keep the ramp open.

The council took no action on Baer's request.

Contacted last week, Baer said 10 homeowners on Lakeland south of Jefferson approved of opening the ramp or at least had no objection to it. He said the only person he knows who is opposed to the ramp is a resident whose property abuts the ramp.

In the past, when the ramp was open, residents complained about the vehicles with trailers that parked up and down Lakeland, especially on weekends and holidays. A survey by the city over the 1972 Labor Day weekend revealed that 6 percent of those using the ramp that weekend were City residents, 14 percent were from the other Grosse Pointes and 80 percent did not live in any of the five Pointes.

Baer said his letter to the council was merely a request that the ramp be opened, or at least that its opening be discussed. He said he wrote the letter on behalf of other Lakeland residents who would like to be able to use the ramp.

If the ramp were to be re-opened, the city would have to at least excavate the dirt covering the ramp and repave it.

City Manager Thomas Kressbach said the city had once hoped to be able to purchase the property between the ramp and Neff Memorial Park so that the small-boat ramp could be included with the park's marina facilities. He said the property purchase proved to be not feasible.

Hospital to sponsor weight loss program

In the United States, approximately one in 20 people are morbidly obese. Aside from the social stigma associated with obesity, statistics show that these individuals are 12 times more likely to die a sudden death than those who are at a normal body weight.

Harper Hospital, together with the Wayne State University School of Medicine, will sponsor an orientation session for individuals who would like to participate in a weight management program aimed at reducing risks for the medically obese.

The scheduled sessions for the summer will be held July 10, July 31 and Aug. 28, from 6 to 7:30 p.m. in the Kresge Auditorium located at Harper Hospital, 3990 John R, Detroit.

The 22-week program is designed for patients who are at least 50 pounds overweight. Participants will be supervised by a team of experts including endocrinologists, nutritionists and behavioral therapists.

A nutritionally balanced supplement, Optifast, will be used during the first 12 weeks of the program to ensure maximum weight loss.

During the second phase of the program participants will gradually return to fixed amounts of regular foods. The final phase involves learning proper weight maintenance.

For further information on the orientation session, call 745-3312.

State drivers not lead-foot free

If it seems to you that Michigan drivers really are zipping along on the freeways, your perceptions may be right.

Approximately 55 percent of Michigan motorists said they drive faster than the 55 mph speed limit on urban freeways, according to a University of Michigan study. On rural freeways where the limit is 65, 12 percent admitted going faster than the limit. Nine percent admitted driving at speeds of 70 mph or faster. Another 56 percent, however, said they drive slower than 65 mph on rural highways.

Almost half of the respondents believed they could drive at least 10 mph over the speed limit on urban freeways before they were likely to get a ticket, and a quarter said they could drive 10 mph over the limit on rural freeways and highways.

The driving habits and attitudes of state residents are reported in the 1988 Omnibus State Safety Survey, directed by Alexander C. Wagenaar, associate research scientist at the U-M Transportation Research Institute (UMTRI) and at the U-M School of Public Health, and Frederick M. Streff, assistant research scientist at UMTRI.

Sponsored by the Michigan Office of Highway Safety Planning, the telephone survey of 760 respondents — first conducted in 1987 — provides information on public attitudes towards a broad range of highway safety topics: road conditions, police patrols, radar detectors, safety belts, drunk driving policies, driver education, trucks and speed limits.

A majority of the residents in the 1988 survey favored an annual car safety inspection and retention of the 55-mph speed limit for heavy trucks. Almost half rated road conditions on freeways and major roads as average and nearly a third said they were good. On the other hand, nearly a third said Michigan's major roads are in poor condition.

A majority also supported a curfew that would prevent persons under age 18 driving between 11 p.m. and 5 a.m. unless they could show a need to drive to work or school. Similarly, nearly three-quarters favored an 11 p.m.-5 a.m. curfew law for persons over age 70 unless they could pass a medical examination that proved they were fit to drive at night. "A majority opposed a law prohibiting people past a certain age to drive, however," Wagenaar says.

A majority also supported requiring rear-seat passengers to use safety belts and limiting heavy trucks to the right lane on freeways.

A majority was against reducing the hours for selling alcoholic beverages or holding restaurants, bars, stores or private hosts liable for damages or injuries caused by drunk customers or guests.

"Respondents were split evenly over whether there is a need for more police patrolling for traffic violations," Streff says, "and whether radar detectors should be prohibited or permitted."

Just over half of the drivers said they always use safety belts and another 22 percent said they used them most of the time.

However, roadside observations conducted annually since 1984 by UMTRI show only 45 percent actually using belts. "People seem to know that belt use is important but many don't buckle up on every trip," Streff said.

Sixty-five percent favored a law requiring back-seat passengers to use safety belts. Half reported they preferred manual safety belts in their cars, while nearly a third would like to have both safety belts and air bags as safety restraints.

Folk Dancers — Mimes — Great Time

"MACK AVENUE USA" is about to get its annual summer B12 shot. The FIREWORKS are due to shoot off, Sunday, July 2nd with our pre-show beginning at 8 p.m. That's not all your Grosse Pointe Business and Professional Association has been doing, however. We provide a spring tonic which consists of a dose of Brooms and Blooms on a Saturday in May. The barrels and flowers and the general tidy appearance are courtesy of the Association and individual businesses. During the winter we have hosted meetings which had a variety of business topics. Simply our work through the business sector is guarding your greatest financial asset, your home. All the "shots" and tonics given to "MACK AVENUE" have a "trickled down effect", a beautiful community to live and work in.

The Association wishes to thank all of those who have contributed to this community project: Sloan Barbour; Pointe Electronics, The Grosse Pointe Board of Education, The Lochmoor Club, Peter Behr, Lee Meyer; This n That for Pets, The Grosse Pointe Woods Police and Fire Departments, Helen Geisbuhler, The Grosse Pointe Police and Fire Reserves and especially those who have contributed to this event.

Eyes on the Classics: DIO features classic automobile designs

By Margie Reins Smith
 Feature Editor

Eyes on the Classics is appropriately named.

The one-day event — held for the second year in a row — will take place Sunday, July 9 on the grounds of the Grosse Pointe Academy. It's a benefit for the Detroit Institute of Ophthalmology, a not-for-profit organization dedicated to the preservation of vision through education, research and support for the visually impaired.

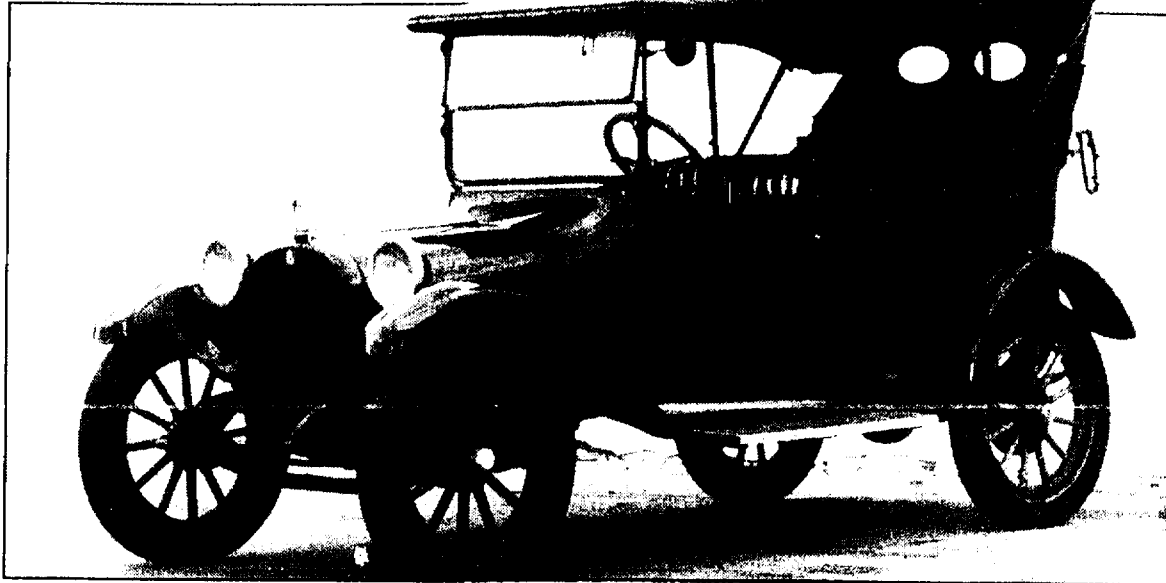

The eyes are the DIO.

There are, in fact, 12 classes of cars. Three crystal Steuben glass awards will be presented after the judging in each class.

One of the cars on display July 9 will be this 1914 four-door Dodge touring car provided by Chrysler Corp.

Mendelsohn, who lived in Grosse Pointe Shores on the lake. Mrs. Mendelsohn died in the mid-'50s, and we bought it then. It only has 38,000 miles on it."

Mary Lauve said the car is only driven on special occasions, when there's a doorman available. It has a beige leather interior, an electric partition, a sunroof and telephone.

"Also, there's a little folding table and foot-rest," she said. "I'm going to buy some Grey Poupon mustard to put on the table," she said with a smile.

not only helps its members find low-vision aids, equipment and information about programs for the visually impaired, it also provides a vehicle for friendships and better understanding.

Eyes on the Classics is more than classes and competition and prizes, however. Additional cars will be on display ... just because.

For instance, a display of 17 Cadillacs from various years; a display of the best current design, chosen by Chrysler, Ford and GM designers; an exhibit and sale of original, framed artwork by automotive designers; a 25-50-75 exhibit — that's a 25-year-old Mustang, a 50-year-old Mercury and a 75-year-old Dodge.

The awards ceremony will begin at 1 p.m. on the veranda of the Academy. As each car is announced, it will be driven around the circular drive for viewing.

Besides the awards for cars, individual awards will be presented for such categories as Designer Lifetime Achievement, Best in Show, Peoples' Choice, Exhibitors' Choice, and several Examples of Exceptional Merit.

"Grosse Pointe Academy is a beautiful setting for this," said Clark, "overlooking the lake, with the cool breezes from the lake. And — there will be some magnificent cars on view that day."

Eyes on the Classics will begin at 1 p.m. on the grounds of the Grosse Pointe Academy, 171 Lakeshore, Sunday, July 9. Tickets are $5 at the gate.

A preview champagne brunch and show begins at 10:30 a.m. Tickets are $65 per person or $500 for a table of 10. Clark said organizers expect about 500 people to attend the brunch.

Group advance purchase general admission tickets are $100 for 25 tickets.

Parking will be permitted on Grosse Pointe Boulevard, in St. Paul Catholic Church's parking lot, along Lakeshore, and in Grosse Pointe South High School's parking lot, with shuttle service provided.

Stair said there will be a variety of food and drinks for sale. Golf carts will be available to transport people who have trouble walking around, and there will be an art show and sale put on by the Center for Creative Studies and the Design Center in California.

For information or to purchase tickets in advance or to volunteer as a marshal or a ticket-taker, call 824-5554.

Mary and Henry de Segur Lauve will display this 1939 Rolls Royce Wraith. Lauve is a former GM automotive designer.

But there's more than competition. Douglas Stair of Grosse Pointe Park, entrants co-chairman for this year's event, promised something to please everyone — old cars, new cars, classic cars, historic cars; food; drink; artwork; awards; cool breezes from the lake ... and sunshine.

"It will not rain," he said. (If it does rain — the show goes on. There will be plenty of tents.)

David Clark of Grosse Pointe Woods, site committee chairman, said that Eyes on the Classics is unique. "Nowhere else in the world is there a show like this that focuses on the designers of the cars."

Henry de Segur Lauve (he's a former automotive designer for GM) and Mary Ashley Lauve will enter their 1939 Rolls Royce Wraith.

"This is an old Grosse Pointe car," said Mary Lauve. "It was ordered by Mrs. Louis

Stair and Clark said last year's Eyes on the Classics was the first DIO fundraiser of this sort, and was a surprise success. The event raised about $20,000. This year, he said, they expect 2,500 to 3,000 people. Their goal is to raise $75,000.

Funds will be used for the DIO's ophthalmic research, ophthalmic education and for a support system for the visually impaired.

DIO was founded in 1972 by Philip C. Hessburg, M.D., and the late James R. Marshall Jr., M.D., to improve the quality of clinical ophthalmology for residents of eastern Wayne County and to impact on developments in eye care.

The DIO operates an ophthalmic technology training program; the Friends of Vision, a volunteer organization that sponsors public service seminars; and a support group for the visually impaired. Friends of Vision

The Ford Splash multi-purpose concept vehicle, shown at the right, will be on display at the DIO benefit, Eyes on the Classics.

Created by four transportation students from the industrial design department of the Center for Creative Studies, Splash can be a scuba, ski or surfing vehicle. The upholstery is made of the same durable, rubberized material used in scuba wet suits.

Richard and Joyce Thams of Grosse Pointe Shores will display this 1947 Chrysler Town and Country convertible.

Michigan offers variety of choices for vacation tours

"Summertime and the livin' is easy" is a memorable song from a favorite classic, "Porgy and Bess." Obviously Porgy was not singing of the favorite American pastime — tourism. From time immemorial, the closing of schools in June has been a signal for vacationers to plan an itinerary and take to the roads, air and sea. Besides a change of scenery, they seek to refresh and refuel their minds and bodies. It helps to see them through the stresses and strains of earning the wherewithal to take care of all obligations and still have enough left to explore new sights and sounds.

However, sometimes vacations can be taxing, not to mention downright frustrating. Roads are crowded, planes are booked and cruises sold out. These are the problems of those who still toil in the work-a-day world.

In September, when school is in session, roads are comparatively free of travel, airlines are advertising reduced rates to everywhere and there are bargain cruises. That is the prime time for retirees to see the world, other states or tour their own state of Michigan.

Actually, touring Michigan can be a memorable vacation in the fall. The leaves are changing from the faded green of late summer into the glowing vibrant colors of fall. From north to south and west to east, there are roads that provide a sweeping panorama of glorious color. The brilliant yellow of poplars, the gold of sugar maples and the bright crimson-red maples combine to make traveling Michigan roads in fall a wonderful experience.

In the Upper Peninsula near the tip of the Keweenaw Peninsula on a ridge high above Lake Superior near Copper Harbor, a tourist can view all the colors of the forest set against the panorama of the blue waters of Superior.

Porcupine Mountain State Park, above Lake of the Clouds, offers a panoply of colors and a visit to Tahquamenon Falls is not to be missed. Walk to the platform at the brink of the falls. The trees above the walls of the river are gorgeous.

These are but two of the many scenic color tours possible to enjoy in upper Michigan.

If you don't care to travel that far, plan a short trip to the Irish Hills. There are many possible routes. One of the most rewarding is M-50 which will take you to Hidden Lake Gardens, a complex owned by Michigan State University and comprised of natural upland and lowland forests interspersed with exotic plantings.

While you're waiting for the summer tourist crowds to thin out to make the trip into upper Michigan, you might like to brave a vacation respite closer to home, such as visiting some of Michigan's historical sites.

A tour of the elegant historical homes in Marshall makes for an interesting day trip. The city of Marshall is proud of its architectural past and has made historic preservation a number-one priority. Unlike small towns where structures were torn down to make way for progress, the town has emphasized the restoration of old homes built in the 1800s. As a result, the town basks in an aura of elegance, charm and grace.

Probably the best known is the Honolulu House. Abner Pratt, a lawyer, judge and U.S. consul in the Sandwich Islands, built the house in 1860. It is regarded by many authorities as the most important historic house in Michigan.

Niles is one of the few Midwest communities that have been successively under the flags of England, France, Spain and the United States. One of Niles' best known citizens was Ring Lardner, sports writer and sardonic humorist. The Lardner House is still a showplace. Lardner was born there in 1885 and the house has been in existence for many years.

Mention Grand Rapids and immediately one thinks of the furniture industry. But the stately homes on Heritage Hill built by the tycoons are major attractions. There are 591 buildings in the area rated significant by architects and 20 judged outstanding.

One of the most touching and personal records of growing up in Michigan is Bruce Catton's "Waiting for the Morning Train." He was born in Benzonia in the Leelanau Peninsula near the Sleeping Bear Dunes.

One of America's most famous called Bloody Run. Fort Wayne is another historical site. It was constructed shortly after the War of 1812 to shield Detroit from the invasion of Canada. One of the most elegant railroad stations in the nation, the old Michigan Central depot at Ann Arbor, is now a restaurant.

Another thematic tour might be visiting Michigan historic churches. The year 1884 was a time of growth and fervor of 19th century churches. The 1884 state census listed 2,856 church organizations from 30 different denominations.

55Plus volunteer staff answers Medicare questions

Confused about Medicare/Medicaid?

The Bon Secours 55Plus Program can help.

You can bring your questions to our trained volunteers on the first Wednesday of each month from 10 a.m. until 3 p.m. The counseling sessions will be held at the 55Plus office, 19701 E. Eight Mile Road in St. Clair Shores.

"Many people are confused about the Medicare/Medicaid program, especially since the new Medicare Catastrophic Act passed," said Peggy J. Brey, director, aging services. "We hope that by meeting people on a one-to-one basis, we will be able to clear up some of the confusion and help them make more informed decisions about their health care coverage options."

Volunteers will be able to provide information about Medicare forms, claims, appeals, supplemental insurances and eligibility.

Make an appointment by calling the 55Plus office Monday through Friday, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.: 779-7477.

The Medicare/Medicaid Assistance Program is coordinated by the Area Agency on Aging and co-sponsored by the American Association of Retired Persons.

Junior Sailing program (which, incidentally, is open to the public and has been recognized as a 501 (c) (3) charity by the IRS. Contributions are tax-deductible) will benefit from funds raised at the Mackinac Race Ball, Saturday, July 8.

According to George Uznis, chairman of Bayview Yacht Club Junior Sailors Inc., this will be the first year the Ball will benefit junior sailors.

The three-year-old junior sailing program is open to teach children seamanship and sailing. He said there are 53 kids enrolled in three classes, on four different instructional levels.

It's filled up this year. To sign up for next year, call Bayview Yacht Club: 822-1853.

The Mackinac Race Ball is open to the public. Sponsors include the Cadillac Division of GM, Eagle Ottawa Leather Co., T.K. Lowry Sales, Miller Brewing Company, Hiram Walker Inc. and The Meade Group.

The Ball committee includes Commodore and Mrs. John S. Barbour, Cheryl and Sloane R. Barbour, Mark D. Steffke, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas K. Lowry and Mr. and Mrs. George M. Uznis.

The $75 per person tax-deductible tickets include buffet, music by the Johnny Wallace Little Big Band and Montage. Call 822-1853 for reservations.

terrace — all as an official bicentennial happening, for the benefit of the Detroit Symphony Orchestra Hall, the first such fundraiser since the merger.

Chairwoman for the evening is Nicole Stroh, assisted by Vera Axxom, Susan and David Thoms.

The Pastor's Corner

Grosse Pointe pastor relives Beijing: May 1989

Associate Pastor, Grosse Pointe Memorial Church

Remember the hymn, "Were You There...?" Vividly, my wife, Marion, and I "were there" in Beijing at the peak of the massive student and peoples' demonstrations on Tiananmen Square (Gate of Heavenly Peace).

And we arrived home in Grosse Pointe the day before "all hell broke loose" in Beijing with the bloody assault of the People's Army on students and citizens. What I now say in this comment below is reinforced by a saying of T. DeWitt Talmage: "Men do not die for a lie; they die for the truth."

Were we participating in the world's most crucial non-violent uprising of the 20th Century? It felt that way, really! Yet whether these mass demonstrations for democracy and freedom will long be remembered, only history will tell.

For 33 Americans, mostly Presbyterians, to be caught up in the joyous, communal spirit of those days, I can only say — "We all had fantastic experiences in Beijing, May 17-22, 1989!"

Put crisply, here were the landmarks:

- The uncommon language of all of us was to raise 2 fingers, the sign of victory. This symbol was everywhere — used by millions of Chinese and 33 Christians from U.S.A.

- The contagious smile on all faces — little kids, students, farmers, factory workers, professors, policemen. Everyone was on center stage in this dramatic act of joyous individual and group smiles. Unknown people were immediately beloved friends. Beijing's chaotic streets were then the safest, happiest rendezvous in the world.

- The Church was there actively participating. Christian Youth were leading — as students poured into Beijing from all over China and Hong Kong.

At worship in Outer Gate Church, Beijing, (The same church President Bush worshipped at several weeks ago), Sunday, May 21, we were able to take a breather from the continuing excitements of a city and nation caught up in a forward surge for a larger measure of democracy and freedom.

Worshippers were of all ages — 1-year-olds to senior citizens. The choir of 20 voices was 80 percent made up of high school and college-age youth.

After church, while the congregation lingered in the shade of the church's lovely courtyard, Marion and I, along with Dr. G. Thompson Brown, his wife Mardia, and others, met a remarkable person, a Korean Christian.

Chung He Yang is an amputee from the Korean War Days (1950-53). He was the Korean team leader, in 1954, along with Presbyterian Missionary, the Rev. Ruben A. Torrey, Jr. (also an amputee). These two amputees developed for the church and nation an Amputee Rehabilitation Program for the thousands of civilian amputees from that savage war.

And now, May 1989, he is co-ordinating with Chinese professionals a much-needed comprehensive amputee rehabilitation program for the People's Republic of China.

Bishop K.H. Ting, key church leader and its spokesman, is President of the China Christian Council and Chair of the Christian Three-Self Patriotic Movement Committee. The latter emphasizes self-government. Self-support and self-propagation.

On May 23, Bishop Ting issued a wise statement which says in part: "Christians support the patriotic actions of Chinese students."

I wish to add that I am glad that Christians are making their presence felt in these demonstrations. I am very glad that the students in the Nanjing Theological Seminary are taking an active part. They not only join the demonstrations but also try to serve their fellow students by sending them drinking water and bread. I understand that Christians in Beijing are also playing an active role.

Later in Nanjing, home of Nanjing Union Theological Seminary, we saw our seminary students. First they were out walking together on the streets — singing, shouting — gleefully cheered on by a large sidewalk crowd, witnessing for freedom. Scripture to me became "goose-pimple" alive. Did not theirs and our Lord Jesus Christ say: "You shall know the truth, and the truth will set you free?" (John 8:32).

Second, we saw them at study in Seminary classes and in the library. These blossoming theologians — women and men — are vitally committed to Christ and the gospel ministry.

Do you realize the Chinese church grows by three

Alma College president to visit Woods Presbyterian

Alma College President Alan J. Stone will preach Sunday July 2, at Grosse Pointe Woods Presbyterian Church. His sermon, based on the talents parable, is titled "Five, Two and One Talent Students."

Alma's president since June 1988, Stone was inaugurated as the college's 11th president in October. He included in his inaugural celebration a symposium on "Religion in America: Changing Visions for the Year 2020."

"This symposium," Stone said, "will serve as a reaffirmation of Alma's ties to its history, in particular its founding by the Presbyterian denomination. It also will signal our mission to strengthen the voluntary relationship between the college and its church."

Stone, 46, has said his challenge at Alma will be to enhance the school's reputation on the national level and to build on its already strong financial resources. In his inaugural address he announced a $13 million Campaign for Science and the Performing Arts, the ground breaking for the construction of a new $4.5 million laboratory facility, and a three year grant of $500,000 from the W.K. Kellogg Foundation of Battle Creek to enrich science teaching education programming at Alma.

Alma College was founded by Michigan Presbyterians in 1886. This year, four students from Grosse Pointe Woods attended Alma.

L'Alliance Francaise awards scholarships

Thirty-four students from seven high schools received annual scholarship awards from L'Alliance Francaise de Grosse Pointe June 11 at a ceremony held at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Kim K. Lie of Grosse Pointe Park.

The ceremony, known as La Distribution de Prix, is a time-honored French academic tradition of spring. Students are recognized for their outstanding academic accomplishments throughout the school year. In France, the prizes are usually books related to the subject in which the student has excelled.

L'Alliance Francaise de Grosse Pointe recognized high school students of the French language for their outstanding performance. Students were selected by their teachers and were honored at the reception by receiving a prize, a certificate and a bicentennial booklet from the French consul general.

The following students were honored:

From Regina High School: Carolyn McCarty, Melissa Mandl, Nicole LeVeque and Kathryn Hribar.

From Notre Dame High School: Michael Willems, Michael G. Miceli, David Bradley and A. Raymond Lyle II.

From Our Lady Star of the Sea High School: Amy Caste, Liza Rublico, Margaret Baginska, Rebecca Schutter and Anne Mitchell.

From Grosse Pointe South High School: Courtney Whitehead, Joyce Stuckey, Susannah McAndrew, Scott Gatteno and Molly Maycock.

From Grosse Pointe North High School: Monica Rhee, Amod A. Sarhaik, Lisa Williams, Shannon Sullivan, Heather Henning, David Wollse and John Beacon.

From University Liggett School: Mara Vorhees, Sunil Gollwala, Julee Mertz, Tamara Lie and John Maycock.

L'Alliance Francaise de Grosse Pointe is a Michigan non-profit corporation affiliated with the national federation of Alliance Francaise, whose purpose is to foster increased cultural awareness and understanding between the French and the American peoples through cultural exchange, speakers, language study, etc.

churches (re-opened or brand new) every two days?

Let me put it straight from the heart. Friends, I'm a different person (I trust for the better) because I was in Beijing at the tumultuous height of the massive movement (more than a million strong at its peak) represented by students and people of all walks of life in Tiananmen Square.

What the future holds, only God knows. The Beijing experiences in May '89 were fantastic for all — Christians and everyone — for we all long for larger democracy and freedom in the People's Republic of China, in the United States, in the Soviet Union, in our neighbors Mexico and Canada, and in the hearts of all humanity.

And wherever we went, Chinese Christians reminded us in their open friendliness that the writer in 1 Peter penned a fantastic challenge for his day, for Beijing days, and for yours and our days! "By his great mercy we have been born anew to a living hope through the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead." (1 Peter 1:3).

Bridge

HAVE A PLEASANT TRY AT PERFECTION BRIDGE BY WOODY BOYD
THE PASTEBOARD PASTIME

In the past sixty years, Philadelphia, New York, Los Angeles, Dallas, San Francisco and Miami have produced more celebrated greats of the bridge world than any other spots on forty-eight state map. While Detroit has never challenged as one of this country's cradles for famous players or strong games, we have produced such well-respected names as Roosen, Robinson and Remey. Just behind them there were, and still are, a host of very talented masters.

How many readers realize that Detroit is the birthplace and home of one of the heralded players of the world? Charles Burger's pre-eminence transcends any other Detroit master and he has held that pedestal position for more than two decades.

If hard pressed, I would still have to say that the Northwestern suburbs produce the great share of our better players today. I am surprised and delighted though, to see the duplicate activity and enthusiasm that has developed in Grosse Pointe these past few years. Today they have a number of weekly games ably directed by such stalwarts as Win Malchie, Don Curtice, Judy Thomas and Jim Schmidt. The neighborhood duplicate game is where it all begins to have meaning and a feeling of accomplishment. Add a year or two of advanced lessons, a couple of good books, lots of come from today's Grosse Pointe unknowns. I'm not suggesting that the road to glory is easy, or that another Phil Leon stands on the horizon, but diligence and concentration, coupled with study and play, are the required ingredients and the East side has some excellent potential talent.

Twenty five years ago, Bob Emke was one of the bright young comers of Detroit bridge, but he chose not to compete to the degree needed to become a superstar. Even today his schedule is restricted due to business commitments, but it is a pleasure and worthwhile lesson to kibitz or partner him in a game at one of his favorite Grosse Pointe clubs.

SOUTH	WEST	NORTH	EAST
1 ♠	PASS	1 ♥	PASS
3 ♣	PASS	3 ♠	PASS
4 N	PASS	4 N	PASS
5 S	PASS	PASS	PASS

Recently I witnessed his declarer play in a hand where he and his partner almost didn't break off the bidding in time on their climb to an unmakeable slam.

As you can see, eleven tricks aren't so easy either, but Bob, sitting south deftly found the method.

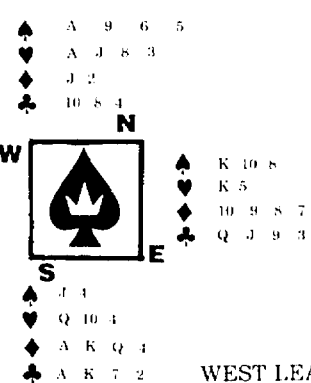

Declarer ducked the Spade deuce to East's King. Won the Club Queen switch. IF the Heart was on side, he had eleven tricks so South led the Ten which was also won by East's King. Back came the Diamond Ten won by Dummy's Jack. At this stage, South still was looking for Eleven. His first consideration now was to determine whether West originally led a Spade from the Queen or Ten. On the assumption that he couldn't win eleven tricks if East still held the Spade Queen guarded, he continued his careful consideration of the position of the remaining hidden cards. At trick two East had shown a Club holding or a very clever defensive maneuver. A gain on the assumption that he couldn't win his contract if West had the Club Jack guarded, he initiated a squeeze on East's black suits. The Spade Ten on his right was imperative!

At trick five, a Diamond to declarer's Ace. Then the Spade Jack, covered by West's Queen, Ace and East's Eight. Next a Heart to declarer's Queen followed by the King, Queen of Diamonds. At trick ten a small Heart to dummy's Ace and this was the three card ending.

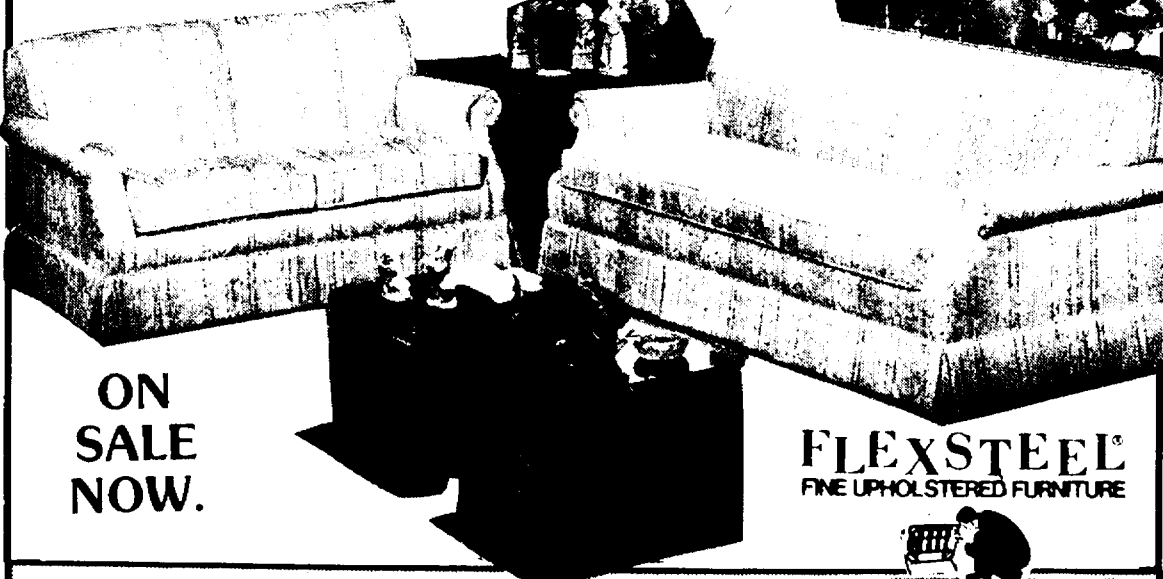

When Bob played the Heart Jack, the defense crumbled. When we see this kind of execution, we worry that if Bob ever retires from business and devotes all of his time to bridge, what chance have we got?

If your child has braces, you'd call a professional. If your child is troubled or depressed, that's even more reason to call a professional.

-Actress Patty Duke

Patty Duke, spokesperson for Psychiatric Institutes of America, part of the NME Specialty Hospital Group.

For years and years I suffered from depression, even as a kid. At the time, people couldn't understand that children can suffer from the disease and need you to find them help.

How do you know if your child's "bad" behavior is really a cry for help? Here are some signs: Excessive school absence. Staying out late and not coming home. Personality changes. Hanging out with the wrong crowd. Absent-mindedness. Dropping grades. Defiance and short-tempered hostility. Withdrawal or secretiveness. Excessive sleeping, isolation. Selling possessions. The list goes on.

Take it from me—things will not get better on their own. They will get worse. Find the strength as a parent to make the call. Now. Depression can be treated.

Mrs. Alistair N. Mitchell

Glancy-Mitchell

Joan Courts Glancy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Robinson Glancy III of Grosse Pointe Farms, married Alistair Norval Mitchell, son of Mr. and Mrs. David N. Mitchell of Lake Forest, Ill., on June 10, 1989, at the Cathedral Church of Saint Paul in Detroit. The bride's parents were married at the same church 27 years ago.

The Rev. Edward A.M. Cobden Jr., of Christ Church Grosse Pointe, officiated at the service, which was followed by a reception at the Country Club of Detroit.

The bride's gown was made of Swiss organza strewn with appliqued lace daisies, ending in a cathedral train. Her veil was studded with matching flowers.

Suzanne Zinn Mueller was matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Heather Robbins, Natali Cracchiolo and Suzanne Mueller, classmates of the bride; Karen McCrackin, cousin of the bride; and Christina Dorson-King, cousin of the groom. Attendants wore full-skirted floral peasant dresses over rustling petticoats. Each wore a brilliantly colored sash to match her shoes and carried a bouquet of pink and yellow roses.

The best man was Julian Mitchell, the groom's brother. Ushers were Alfred R. Glancy IV and Douglas Roby Glancy, brothers of the bride; Timothy Dorson-King, cousin of the groom; Steven Nugent and Christopher Gockjian, Andrew Roby Glancy, the bride's brother, served as ring bearer.

The mother of the bride wore a full-length dress in chartreuse woven gazar and tucked tiny white rosebuds into her chignon.

The bridegroom's mother wore a pink silk beaded tea-length dress.

At the bride's request, members of the University Liggett School chorale sang the benediction at the ceremony — chosen because the bride and her ULS classmates toured Europe with the chorale in 1982 and closed their concerts with the traditional benediction.

The bride graduated from ULS in 1982 and Hamilton College in

The groom is a 1983 graduate of Hamilton College and is a foreign service officer with the U.S. State Department.

The couple will move to Taipei, Taiwan in August.

Carbone-Harwood

Nancy Jean Carbone of Chicago, daughter of Mrs. Rocco Carbone and the late Mr. Carbone, married Robert Nicholas Harwood, son of Mrs. Laurance J. Harwood of Grosse Pointe Farms and the late Mr. Harwood, on May 20, 1989, at St. Francis of Assisi Church in Huntington, N.Y.

The Rev. Peter Kaczmarek officiated at the ceremony, which was followed by a reception at the home of the bride's mother.

The bride wore her maternal grandmother's silk wedding dress and carried a loose arrangement of white and lavender lilacs.

Attendants included Anne Carbone of Studio City, Calif., the bride's sister; Jane Matheson Stille of Collingswood, N.J., the bride's cousin; and Cindy Caputo Cristman of Patchogue, N.Y. They wore dropped-waist pink cotton print dresses and natural straw hats. They carried purple lilacs.

Thomas Harwood was best man for his brother. Two other brothers, Laurance J. Harwood III and John M. Harwood were

The mother of the bride chose a beige crystal pleated silk dress and the mother of the groom chose lapis blue linen.

The bride is a graduate of Our Lady of Mercy Academy and the American University in Washington, D.C. She is midwest regional personnel manager for Brooks Brothers.

The groom attended Albion College and graduated from Northwood Institute. He is employed as general manager with Brooks Brothers in Chicago.

Lohmeier-Sanford

Margitta Dorothea Lohmeier, daughter of Walter and Ingrid Lohmeier of Schleiden, West

Many vegetables are American natives

Those of us who have flourishing vegetable gardens have our hands full these days, controlling the weeds that proliferate overnight in response to all the rain we've had lately, and discouraging the hungry insects and pests that feast on our prize crops when we aren't looking.

In the midst of all our endeavors it is kind of fun to think about how many of the vegetables and fruits we take for granted in the garden and the supermarket are really native to this hemisphere and can be called truly American. It is perhaps more glamorous to think of our tomatoes as love apples or tomatoes as we strive to defend them from predators.

Tomatoes came originally from Peru, Ecuador and Bolivia and it was the Aztec Indians who gave the tomato to Europe in its cultivated form. Tomatoes were a staple food of the Indians before the discovery of America. The Indians of Mexico, who also used them lavishly, called them tomatls. When first introduced into England, about 1597, the tomato was grown only as an ornamental plant. The fruits were called love apples and were regarded as highly poisonous. This seems odd since it was well known food in South America. Perhaps Europeans considered themselves a race apart, with different physical reactions.

Thomas Jefferson advocated tomatoes for culinary use in 1781. In 1799, a Frenchman living in Philadelphia tried to get people to eat them as a vegetable — but with no success. Tomatoes were first sold as food in the Quincy Market in Boston in 1835. Now over half a million acres of tomatoes are grown each year in America.

In the beginning of colonization in America, a sort of exchange of food plants took place between Europe and America. The colonists lost no time planting familiar foods in their new country and the native food plants of this hemisphere became prize items to be grown in European gardens.

On his second voyage, Christopher Columbus found oranges growing in great quantity in St. Augustine, Fla. They had been planted when the settlement was first founded in 1565. He took some back with him, along with pineapples, which he rapturously described in his journal as "a fruit resembling green pine cones, very fragrant and sweet." The pineapple was originally from the valley of the Amazon and used mainly in tropical America. Europeans found pineapples interesting and were intrigued by the fact that they were the only fruit with a stem passing through it and emerging at the top into a tuft of stiff leaves.

economic importance all over the world. They are a major crop in our southern states. The American chestnut was important to the colonists but, unhappily, is now nearly extinct. Efforts are under way to protect it so that it will not disappear altogether.

Our culinary ambassador — good old Chris Columbus — is also responsible for the appearance of peppers, which are native to South America. He took capsicums of various kinds including red peppers, cherry peppers, and green peppers back with him in 1493.

And then, of course, there is that famous native plant: tobacco. It is currently not in great favor, but it has had a long and exciting history. Its formal name, Nicotiana tobacum, is a compliment to Jeanne Nicot who introduced it to the French Court in the early 17th century. While it's not a food plant, it has long been associated with food, and is often listed along with culinary plants and herbs. In 1559, a book about tobacco published in France was titled "Joyful Newses out of the Newe Found World."

A Spanish doctor from Seville stated that it was a plant of great antiquity among the Indians who taught its various medicinal uses to the Spaniards. Introduced as a garden plant and grown as a panacea for many ailments, tobacco was introduced to Britain from America in 1750. Sir Walter Raleigh, as everyone knows, made it famous.

Among the Woodland Indians of the Eastern heartland and around the Great Lakes, wild rice was always a staple crop. It was gathered by traversing the rice fields in canoes and bending the rice stalks over the side of the canoe and hitting them sharply to make the rice grains fall into the boat. It is still harvested this way and wild rice is to this day an Indian-owned industry.

Researching plants which originated in this hemisphere can be a fascinating project. Every area has its own native plants. Many of them are edible and almost all of them have medicinal uses as well. In an age in which a large part of the art of the pharmacist was also the art of the herbalist, plants learned about from the Indians were prominently featured in so-called Apothecaries Gardens, popular in the 17th and 18th centuries.

Coffee and Allspice, as well as a number of other spices, come from the West Indies and the South American countries. Native varieties of many fruits and some varieties of grapes are native to the Americas. The spectrum of the edible contribution of America to the world is very wide.

Garden Shed

By Ellen Probert

A number of other early food discoveries were mere curiosities, but have since become of worldwide importance in basic food economy and have changed the eating habits of many peoples.

The Jerusalem artichoke, native to both North and South America, was discovered in 1605 as a plant eaten by Indians. It was introduced into Italy and England. The Indians of North and South America were familiar with snap beans, lima beans and kidney beans. Cliff dwellers in our Southwest grew all these beans for food thousands of years ago. After 1500, they appeared in Europe. They're now grown worldwide.

Early explorers found Indians growing corn from Canada to Florida, where it was the leading food crop. Corn is the best known and most valuable food plant contributed by the New World to the old and its true botanical origin goes back at least 100,000 years. It belongs to the genus Zea of which there is only one species. Corn was not known in the Eastern Hemisphere until after the discovery of America.

Peanuts, native to Brazil, are now widely grown in many tropical countries and are of great

Where would the world be without the American squash clan? The crooknecks, the hubbards, the butternuts and zucchinis, the turbans and summer and winter squashes, some gourds and melons, and pumpkins — which early voyagers described as "great golden globes called pompions" — are all New World offerings to the foods of the world.

Sweet potatoes, relatives of the morning glory, are an American native too. Their history goes back thousands of years before Mr. Columbus made his voyages. Records show that they were found in the West Indies and were taken to Spain in 1526, they're now found everywhere.

Chocolate, tons of which are consumed worldwide every year, is another American native. The cocoa trees of Central and South America furnish most of the chocolate of commerce.

The first colonists in New England found wild cranberries growing along the coast from Newfoundland to the Carolinas and now they are a fixed part of our traditional Thanksgiving feast. Red mulberries are not planted much any more, but were once very common. They're

"this is the best house we've seen in 6 months, we'll pay whatever they want"

"our future is so perfect" "I'm sure we'll pay a little more because we won't need to re-decorate"

As ludicrous as it may sound, that's what you're really doing each time you buy real estate without a BUYER'S broker agreement.

When sellers list their property with a real estate company, all agents (even agents of other companies) must act in the best interest of that seller-client.

That means what you thought was a confident remark made to the agent must, by law, be passed on to the seller.

BUT, you the BUYER can have an agent working in your best interest by utilizing a BUYER'S brokerage agreement.

Only then do you become a client and the agent is obligated to give you the full benefit of their experience and expertise.

So, when you're the BUYER of real estate, gain the benefit of equal representation at no extra cost. Become a client!

Low-calorie treats: Granitas, ices, sherbets and sorbets

Sorbets are French sherbets — the coarser textured ones are the Italian Granitas. All are low-calorie and low cholesterol cousins of ice cream. Their flavors are usually much sharper, because they're made from pureed fruit or pureed vegetables and simple sugar syrup. Beautiful to behold, their versatility is as refreshing as their tastes and colors.

Those made from lemon juice, cranberries, tomatoes and other vegetables are a real delight when made an adjunct to the entree. Arranged on a compatible raw or cooked vegetable, they make a delectable salad or first course.

Granitas are scraped into fluffy, snow-like crystals. Sorbets are scooped into balls, placed in a cake pan lined with plastic wrap and refrozen until firm.

Their coldness, granularity, and distinct flavors provide contrast to the preceding tastes and textures.

All are inexpensive desserts, consisting of nothing but flavored crushed ice made from sugar syrup, to which purees of the plentiful fruits or vegetables of the season have been added, along with a dash of spirits or citrus juice, perhaps some coffee and a few spices.

Easy to prepare, all that is needed is a refrigerator/freezer. Granitas do not require frequent stirring, and the icy particles that are to be avoided in other frozen desserts are desirable in a granita. An ice cream maker is excellent for all these delightfully irresistible concoctions.

When using the refrigerator method, place the mixture in a metal container (an 8 inch layer cake tin is ideal for 1 quart) before fast freezing. After they are frozen, they must be partially thawed, then beaten in a food processor, with a steel blade or a wooden spoon. If egg whites, yogurt or liqueur are called for, they should be added at this time and the mixture refrozen until serving time. The more you beat an ice, the finer the crystals will be. Two beatings, however, are usually enough. For the best flavor, this type of gourmet dish should be eaten within a week.

Before serving, it is important to let them soften ever so slightly for the best taste. The flavor is intensified and made more vibrant with the chill removed.

What could be more eye-appealing or palate-pleasing than a zesty granita, sorbet, ice or sherbet served with Meringue Kisses or Oatmeal Lace cookies?

CAFE GRANITAS

There's nothing so delicious as this granita. In Italy, it is the perfect ending to a dinner!

1/3 cup granulated sugar
2 Tbsp. instant espresso
12 ice cubes
4 strips lemon peel

Measure water, sugar and coffee in container or electric blender; whirl on low speed until sugar is dissolved. Chill 4 sherbert glasses.

Just before serving, turn blender to high and add ice cubes to mixture, one at a time. Keep blending until mixture is a complete mush. Spoon into chilled glasses. Add a twist of lemon and serve at once with crisp Lace Cookies.

CANTALOUPE GRANITA

3 Tbsp. sugar
2 Tbsp. dark rum
2 tsp. grated lemon peel
1 cantaloupe, peeled, seeded, cubed, pureed
1 Tbsp. lemon juice

In a saucepan combine water, sugar, dark rum and grated lemon rind and bring to a boil over moderate heat, stirring until sugar is dissolved. Simmer the syrup for 5 minutes and let it cool. Transfer the puree to a large bowl and stir in the cooled syrup; add the 1 tablespoon lemon juice, or to taste. Pour the mixture into a freezer tray and freeze until it is firm but not frozen hard. In a food processor fitted with steel blade or in a chilled bowl beat the mixture until it is smooth.

Freeze the mixture in a tray for 3 hours more, or until it is firm. Let the granita stand at room temperature for 5 minutes or until it is just soft enough to scoop. Using a small ice-cream scoop, scoop out balls from the granita and eject them into a baking pan lined with plastic wrap. Freeze the balls for 30 minutes to 1 hour or until they are firm. Pile them into a chilled serving bowl. Makes 2 to 3 servings.

Calories, about 81 for each of 3 servings. Cholesterol, 0.

HONEYDEW GRANITA

1/3 cup water
3 Tbsp. sugar
2 tsp. grated lime peel
1 honeydew melon, peeled, seeded and pureed
3 Tbsp. lime juice, or to taste

Grosse Pointe A Unique Community

A Cultural Cornucopia Appreciation of the arts begins at an early age for Grosse Pointe children. The public library, a division of the Grosse Pointe Public School System, offers, at no cost, a variety of children's reading programs at its three locations.

For adults, the library programs range from travel films to informative presentations on subjects of current interest. These, too, are free to residents of all the Grosse Pointes.

Another great source of local culture is the beautiful War Memorial Center, the former mansion of the Russell A. Alger family. With its subsequently added ballroom and theater overlooking Lake St. Clair, the center is a community attraction that rivals the many private clubs in the area. Here—open to all residents—are offered art classes and exhibits, lectures, concerts, plays, ballet and social dancing instruction, and children's theater, as well as membership in a long list of special-interest clubs whose focus is either cultural, informative or just plain fun.

A more recent addition to public property is the Edsel and Eleanor Ford House. Designed by architect Albert Kahn and supported by a $15 million endowment, this gracious replica of an English manor house is now open for tours and is used for meetings, fund-raising events and several series of "house" concerts.

Thinking again

- Hubie Brown and Dick Stockton, CBS' tandem for the NBA finals, should become full-time employees of the Lakers.
- How many stitches are there in a baseball?
- When was the last time you saw a Reggie candy bar on the shelf?
- One-hundred twelve stitches.
- Kerri-Sue Kelly and Darcy Jones, pitchers at North and South, respectively, have yet to come forward and meet the challenge of pitching against me.
- You know something's wrong when Magic Johnson receives more camera time when he's injured, than the Pistons do the entire series.

Hitting homers

- Think Fennis Dembo and Michael Williams care they hardly played this season?
- Who hit the most home runs in the majors during the 1970s?
- I'll miss Kareem.
- Oh, did you know the Tigers are finally into their season?
- Rodney Peete will start at least three games for the Lions.
- Thank you, voters, for saying "yes, yes" to kids.
- Reggie Jackson, that's who.
- Think the Red Wings have the message now that the Pistons and Tigers own recent world titles?

Disabled or traded

- I'm just glad the ring isn't on Kareem's finger.
- I don't think Barry Switzer resigned on his own.
- I really like Dave Bergman. I wish he was in the lineup more often.
- Guilty or not, I still like Pete Rose.
- I just hope Rose's nickname — Charlie Hustle — didn't originate from the gambling world.
- Name the starting lineup the Tigers opened the season with and see how many of them are in the lineup today.
- Clue: seven of the 10 starters are either on the disabled list or traded.
- Since his return, Sparky Anderson doesn't look as energetic.
- I'm glad the Bad Boys image is being killed.
- Do you realize it's only 41 days until the prep football season begins with practice?

Rain, rain

- I've got to get to Toledo to watch the Mud Hens.
- Williams (CF), Lovullo (1B), Whitaker (2B), Trammell (SS), Lynn (LF), Nokes (C), Brown (3B), Lemon (RF), Sheridan (DH) and Morris pitching.
- Baltimore is going to go from the worst record in baseball in 1988, to an American League East championship in 1989.
- Last summer the drought; this summer rained out baseball games.
- Does it ever occur to you how fortunate we are to have a city filled with major league sports?
- Do fans from Traverse City, Mackinac, Alpena, travel to Tiger games?
- The Wings open exhibition play on Sept. 15.
- Wayne Gretzky shouldn't have been named the NHL's MVP.
- Prediction: Lions finish 9-7.

Dr. Elie has been bitten by the bug

Elie's labor of love is the GPSA

By Rob Fulton
Sports Editor

Although he spends Wednesdays performing surgery, and every other day laboring through his doctor duties until the wee hours of the morning, Grosse Pointe's Dr. Jean Claude Elie still has room for soccer.

Elie, who has been tagged with the nickname Godfather, was instrumental in starting the Grosse Pointe Soccer Association (GPSA) in 1974, but he has yet to leave the game.

"I can't leave the game," he said, "because I can't get enough of it."

It's probably trite to say that a doctor has very little free time, but Elie manages to balance both labors of his love.

"I HAVE BEEN coaching since the GPSA began," he said. "I've coached one or two teams in one season, and sometimes three. Oh, yeah, sometimes I still practice medicine, too."

People throughout the league know the Godfather as a very influential soccer advocate, but he enjoys being known as a good friend, too.

"The greatest thing about soccer is that it's allowed me to form many friendships," said Elie, who was recently given the 1989 Outstanding Coaches Award by the Youth Sports Institute of Michigan State University. "It's satisfying to know that kids become your friend. I get a lot of kids coming to my office whether it's a health visit or not. They just come to talk to me about personal things and that is gratifying."

HAVING NEVER really played organized soccer when he was growing up, Elie believed in creating an organization which would open doors to kids. He has led teams to championships, taught kids the skills, but he's more concerned with simply offering the kids an avenue to pursue.

"I've given a lot to soccer," he said, "but the best thing I've given is opportunity. Soccer gives the kids an inexpensive form of recreation. I also believe that it has kept many kids off the streets."

Elie, who remains quite active in maintaining the original by-laws of the GPSA, has no idea of his win-loss record through the years. He does, however, know his secret to success.

"I'm not a disciplinarian," he said. "I just tell the kids that if they don't want to work hard that I'll go home. Doing that makes more of a point than having them do 20 push-ups. I let them goof off, but then I cut them off and ask them if they want to play. Generally, the answer is yes."

Born in Haiti and raised in France, Elie found solace in soccer.

"WE NEVER HAD organized soccer when I was young," he said. "We used to go and watch the older kids play and just hope that someday we could play."

Meanwhile, he practiced on everything he could get a toe on.

"I began playing soccer at 2 ... I think," said Elie. "We used to kick a can, an orange peel, a rock or even a tennis ball all the way to school. We'd kick any of those things all the way to school in the air. Nothing ever touched the ground."

Elie went on to finally play organized soccer and then played in the amateur leagues.

In 1952 he could have gone on to play in the World Cup, but ...

"I could have been selected to play, but I knew I wasn't going to be in the country to play," Elie said. "I wasn't going to be around because I was going to school. It's a decision I never regretted."

IT WASN'T a decision that he regretted, but he did question it somewhat. In his first year of medical school at the University of Paris, Elie had trouble balancing the ball with the books.

"I was playing for the University Club team and it became too much," Elie said. "I quit playing because I flunked my first year of medical school."

"I was flunking many exams, but I got a second chance in September of that year, after I passed an exam. It was then, that I decided I better find time to study and the only way to do that was to quit the soccer team."

Elie then concentrated on the books and upon graduation five years later, received his most treasured award.

"The thing I treasure more than anything is the bronze medal I received from the Board of Regents of the University of Paris," Elie recalled. "They passed out two gold, two silver and one bronze for accomplishments. I was very proud of that because it meant that I finished at least fifth in my graduating class."

IT ALSO MEANT that Elie was one of 970 students who survived.

"It was very tough," he said. "About 5,000 students began, but less than 1,000 came out. That's another reason why my medal is so cherished."

Like many doctors, Elie relishes his work and his days off.

"A lot of doctors get a day off and they play golf, jog, play tennis or do something else," Elie said. "I don't like those things. I'm selfish to the sport of soccer because I enjoy it. I like to ski, listen to good music and I'm interested in photography, but soccer is my first love."

Anniversary ensign to voyage into Grosse Pointe

A special voyage around the United States will be making a stop in Grosse Pointe on July 8, when an ensign marking the 75th anniversary of the United States Power Squadrons will be delivered by sailboat to the Grosse Pointe Power Squadron.

Local dignitaries and Squadron officials will be on hand to accept the ensign at the Grosse Pointe Yacht Club at 3 p.m.

The flag is one of five being ferried along every stretch of coastline and major waterway in the continental United States in observance of the founding in 1914 of the world's largest private boating organization.

The anniversary ensign started its voyage in Miami Beach on Feb. 12, following the annual meeting of the U.S. Power Squadrons. Its route takes it to each of the organization's 33 districts and to virtually all of the more than 440 local squadrons.

Fittingly, the ensign has been hoisted aboard sailboats, powerboats, trailer boats, rowboats and canoes as Squadron volunteers pass it from district to district. A marine Log Book accompanies the ensign to record its historic voyage and the names of all dignitaries and members involved in the anniversary celebration.

The "Voyage of the Ensign" will end Sept. 16 in Richmond, Va. at the Fall Governing Board Meeting of the U.S. Power Squadrons.

There are now some 70,000 members in local squadrons located in almost all states, including Puerto Rico, the U.S. Virgin Islands and other areas around the world where Americans congregate.

The organization is dedicated to making pleasure boating safer and more enjoyable, and members are encouraged to improve their skills by taking advanced courses in seamanship, piloting, plotting and celestial navigation, marine electronics, on-the-water weather conditions, and marine engine maintenance.

When gasoline-powered craft were first beginning to appear in 1912, the Rear Commodore of the Boston Yacht Club formed the Power Squadron of the Club to provide instruction in the safe handling of the new power boats.

tion. In 1914, representatives from 70 yacht clubs and boating associations met at the New York Yacht Club to form the United States Power Squadrons.

Membership grew to some 500 within two years. As the United States made ready to enter World War I, classes were organized, open to non-members as well as members, for study of seamanship, signaling and naval procedures. More than 5,000 persons who attended the classes entered the Armed Forces. Many of them received commissions on the basis of their training.

With the return of peace, the boat drills were dropped and the emphasis shifted to instructional activities. Through continuous development dating from the early 1920s, the organization evolved its comprehensive nautical educational program which is administered by the members, who are among the best informed and most enthusiastic boaters in the country.

During World War II, the courses were opened free to members of the Armed Forces and Power Squadron instructors taught in Navy and Coast Guard schools.

Grosse Pointe North High School honored five senior student-athletes at its Senior Athletic Awards Brunch held at the Grosse Pointe Yacht Club.

Derek Lawson, Matt Brady, Tim Ballew, Kelli Gianunzio and Lisa Bauer were the five athletes recognized for their outstanding performance and dedication to the Norsemen programs.

Ballew and Lawson were honored as co-winners of the Male Scholar Athlete Award, while Gianunzio was cited as the female winner. To be nominated for the scholar award, the student must have maintained a four year cumulative grade point average (gpa) of 3.0 and have lettered in at least one sport as a senior.

This year, 36 seniors were nominated for the award.

Ballew participated four years in cross country, winning three varsity letters. In his senior season, Ballew was captain, qualified for the state championships and was named the team's Most Valuable Runner. Ballew was also an All-Macomb Area Conference selection in both his junior and senior years. Ballew also participated in track for four years, winning varsity letters three years and serving as a team captain as a senior.

Academically, Ballew was a National Honor Society (NHS) member, Rotary Club winner, Senior Men's Club winner, Chemistry Olympiad participant, University of Michigan Regent Scholarship winner, National Merit Scholarship winner, All-Conference Scholar Athlete eight times, while earning a 3.8 gpa in four years at North.

Lawson had equally impressive accomplishments. He participated in one season of cross country, four seasons of basketball, two seasons of football and four seasons of track.

As a member of 11 teams, Lawson earned six varsity letters. He was captain of his team in basketball as a freshman and senior, and was the team's most valuable player as a senior. In track, Lawson was All-Conference as a sophomore, junior and senior. Academically, Lawson was a member of the NHS for two years, and a scholar athlete 11 times. His cumulative gpa was a 3.4.

Gianunzio was a four-year participant in both basketball and volleyball. In basketball, she was a captain of the freshman and varsity squads. She also was named the team's best defensive player as a junior, won the Coaches Award as a senior and was a two-year letter-winner.

In volleyball, Gianunzio won three varsity letters and was captain of the jayvee squad as a sophomore. She was All-Macomb Area Conference as a junior and senior. In her junior year, she was named the team's MVP and as a senior was voted the best of fensive player.

Academically, Gianunzio was a Scholar Athlete eight times and a member of the NHS. Her gpa was 3.62.

Bauer and Brady were honored as North's Van Hee Award winners. The award is presented to one boy and one girl who were chosen by the coaching staff and administration as the most dedicated athletes.

Eric Van Hee was an outstanding swimmer at North who graduated in 1974. Van Hee was killed in a car accident after graduating from Michigan State University in 1979. Van Hee was not only an excellent athlete, but was enthusiastic, hard working, a caring, friendly young man who enjoyed helping others and demonstrated leadership as a member of the North Varsity Club.

Bauer participated in one season of basketball, two seasons of cross country and four seasons of track. She was selected to captain the cross country and track teams in her senior year, and was later named to the Macomb Area Conference's cross country team. Bauer earned six letters at the varsity level.

In basketball, he earned second team honors in the MAC's White Division, and was named the White Division's Most Valuable Athlete by winning three events in the track conference meet.

Clarke, a junior on the Miami swim team, captured sixth place in the 200-yard butterfly at the NCAA Championships. He also qualified sixth with a time of 1:46.59, a Miami and Mid-American Conference record, and held his sixth-place spot in the final, lowering his record time to 1:46.43. Clarke had finished 18th in the event as a sophomore.

Lakers win CYO championship

Many players contributed to the success of the St. Paul baseball team this year under the direction of coach Bill Smith.

The Lakers, who finished the regular season of the Catholic Youth Organization (CYO) 10-0, won all four of their playoff games en route to the CYO championship.

Smith, in his ninth year, was honored as the CYO Coach of the Year.

Catcher Steve Bednarchik helped the Lakers in the championship series by throwing out 12 base runners attempting to steal. Bednarchik, who had two triples and batted .450 in the four games, was recognized as the league's Most Valuable Player.

Pitchers Fritz Coyro and Kevin Brennan, who both won seven games and tossed two shutouts each on the season, helped the Lakers record a state playoff record of 26 consecutive scoreless innings.

Brennan also carried a hot bat as he ripped three homers, three triples and averaged .475 from the plate. Coyro had six extra base hits and averaged .495 from his clean-up position.

Matt Stentz and Joe Provenzano were two clutch players for the Lakers as they scored or batted in the winning run in two playoff victories.

In post-season action, Brennan, Coyro, Bednarchik and Tom Rajt, will be traveling to Moscow in mid-July to represent the United States on the Junior Olympic Team.
