Adult day care: An option to nursing homes, home care

Staff Writer
The gray bearded 81-year-old man walked and spoke slowly and deliberately. But there was obviously life dancing in his eyes.

"I got so weak, I couldn't take care of myself," Carrey Ferrier said.

His daughter, Caroline Seeburger, said she didn't want to put him in a nursing home because he didn't need one.

"But my daughter and her husband are working and they couldn't be with me during the day," he said.

So on weekdays since July 7, Ferrier has spent his days at Cottage Belmont Senior-Care, an adult day care center affiliated with the Henry Ford Continuing Care Corp.

His daughter takes him to the center on Harper Avenue in Harper Woods on her way to work, and picks him up on the way home.

Each day Ferrier has the opportunity to be with others his age, reading, talking, exercising and playing games. The adults go on field trips — to the museum, to the zoo, and sometimes in the summer they just go fishing.

He helps prepare meals every now and then, including the set up and clean up. Sometimes a music therapist comes and they have a sing-a-long. Once a week young children come and play and every once in a while someone brings in puppies or kittens to play with. They sit in their chairs and play floor hockey.

The only thing Ferrier said he wanted was a little competition in checkers. He has beaten everyone at the center so far.

Adult day care is a growing field. According to Susan Ganote, president of the Michigan Association of Adult Day Care Centers, six years ago there were fewer than 20 adult day care centers in Michigan. Today there are more than 40. Because adult day care centers do not need a license to operate - a matter of concern for the MAADC there may be more open. Nationwide, there are upward of 1,000 centers. A vast majority are associated with churches or hospitals.

Day care centers fall into three categories, Ganote says, depending on the needs of the patient.

• There is social day care, like the one Ferrier attends at Cottage Belmont, for those who need additional stimulation and help getting back in the social mainstream.

• Health maintenance (usually is associated with, if not in, a hospital) for adults who are functionally impaired by strokes or other diseases. Medication can be dispensed at these centers.

Ladder training

Grosse Pointe Farms Public Safety officers and firefighters received hydraulics training from Griffin Fire Equipment owner Ken Griffin last week. Highest on the ladder is Sgt. Clarence Reichling, and in front of him is Detective Daniel Jensen. At the bottom of the ladder is the instructor Ken Griffin, and the man in the jeans with his back to the camera is firefighter Robert Gmerek. The hydraulics training included all aspects of using the aerial ladder, which can reach up 100 feet in the air.

Group continues to oppose license for War Memorial

By Dan Jarvis Staff Writer

A group of Grosse Pointe Farms property owners opposing the War Memorial's application for a Class C liquor license filed a petition of opposition last week with the Liquor Control Commission.

The seven-page document, filed by the Grosse Pointe Property Owners Association, states that a liquor license held by the War Memorial would irreparably damage the values of neighboring residences and should be denied at the state level.

The petition states the license is unnecessary since the War Memorial has operated satisfactorily on the basis of 24-hour liquor permits for several years.

Mark Weber, War Memorial president, said the center needs a public license before liquor liability insurance can be purchased. Currently the center operates without insurance and liquor is brought in by groups holding functions.

"Why should groups risk their assets for a public gathering?" Weber asked. "With liability insurance the War Memorial and the groups would be protected."

Weber added that there is no control over alcohol consumption and that groups using the facility must pay $1,500 for a 24hour license.

"We can only get five of the one-day licenses per year. If we could get 230 of them each year, then they (the property owners association) may have an argument," Weber said.

"We want control over the alcohol," he added. "That's the is-

"We don't want alcohol abuse in the parking lot. It is very un-professional to have bottles going in and out of the building.'

The property owners association has collected more than 1,000 signatures from residents. Weber said the War Memorial has nearly three times as many.

The petition states that several attempts by the War Memorial to gain permission from the Farms City Council to seek a state license were denied.

On April 17, the city council in a 4-3 vote approved a request by the War Memorial to seek a public liquor license from the LCC based on the following con-

· That a five-member advisory board be established to periodically monitor alcohol-related activities at the center. The board is to include the pastor of Grosse Pointe Memorial Church, the Rev. Bruce Rigdon, or his designated alternate; the Farms police chief, Robert Ferber, or his designated alternate, and three qualified voters to be appointed by the mayor and approved by the council.

William Markus

By Dan Jarvis Staff Writer

As vice president of student affairs at Wayne State University, William Markus has seen the best that students have to offer. He has also seen the worst since his job often puts him in the hot seat. Markus came to Wayne 10 years ago from the University of Pittsburgh where he served as vice chancellor of student affairs. He earned a doctorate from the same school. Markus also earned a bachelor of arts degree from Baldwin-Wallace University in Berea, Ohio and a master of arts degree from Indiana University.

"Since I came to Wayne State, the portfolio of departments falling under the responsibility of student affairs has increased dramatically," he said.

The list of departments now includes Admissions, Financial Aid, Records and Registration, Academic Advising and Enrollment Services.

In the student support area, Markus oversees the university counseling and testing area, placement and a minority access program for financially disadvantaged students who qualify for college entrance.

But the best part of the job. Markus said, is being in the Student Center building, which he helped make a complete full-service student center.

"The center is full of excitement and electricity at any given time. I'll stack our center up with any of them.'

Today the student center houses veterans services, international services, a large collection of campus organizations and the hub of student program activities located on the third floor. The newest departments to fall under the wing of student affairs is intercollegiate athletics and intramural recreation. Included in the package is the operation of the 42-acre Matthaei sports complex, complete with the neighborhood program of which Markus is obviously proud.

The Matthaei neighborhood summer youth program makes the complex available for 500 intercity youth and offers skilled instruction and recreation programs.

Farms municipal judge race laced with several allegations

By Dan Jarvis Staff Writer

Amid allegations of improperly handled absentee ballots in the Grosse Pointe Farms municipal judge primary, more than 320 ballots will be reviewed by the Michigan State Police and Wayne County election officials.

Wayne County Clerk James Killeen received complaints the day before the Aug. 8 primary alleging that the wife of municipal judge candidate Paul C. Gracey improperly acquired absentee ballots, took them door-todoor seeking votes and promised to deliver them to the city clerk.

State law prohibits a candidate's family members from taking absentee ballots to voters, using them to solicit votes or delivering them to a polling place.

Mrs. Gracey said she was offered the absentee ballots by employees at the Farms City Hall after she picked up several absentee voter applications from her neighbors and delivered them to City Hall.

She then agreed to take the ballots to voters and later returned the sealed ballots to City Hall. She added that she was given absentee ballots for people she did not know and returned the blank ballots to the city.

"I did not know I was breaking the law," Mrs. Gracey said. "It's a pretty loose organization at the City Hall and I was just doing what I was offered."

Gracey and his wife both allege that another candidate and associate of Killeen called and asked that a news conference be scheduled to discredit Gracey.

City Clerk Richard Solak said he received no complaints about See POINTER, page 16A improperly handled ballots. As of Tuesday, Aug. 8, Solak had not complaints, but was unable to been contacted by State Police or learn the source. county election officials and had

After 20 years, Woods meter maid writes final ticket

By John Minnis Assistant Editor

After 20 years of patrolling Mack Avenue, Grosse Pointe Woods meter maid Dottie Graul retires at the end of August.

Graul, 57, began working for the Woods as a meter maid in 1969 at the age of 37. She said that before joining the Woods police, she worked in offices and as a bar maid, but when the chance came to work outdoors, she grabbed it.

"I just love to work outside," she said. "If anyone would have told me I'd be here 20 years, I wouldn't have believed it."

She said that 20 years ago -Aug. 19, 1969, to be exact - she just happened to hear the Woods Police Department had an opening for a meter maid and she applied for the job.

Today Graul has an air-conditioned Plymouth Horizon to take her on her rounds up and down Mack Avenue, but during her first 11 years on the job she walked the beat -12-1/2 miles day for a total of about 34,000 miles over the 11-year period.

She said she enjoyed walking the beat, even in the winter. It was great exercise and she got to know every nook and cranny tires at the end of August.

Of course, Graul has not always met people at their best, especially if they spied a parking ticket stuck under the windshield wiper. She said she's been accused of hiding in bushes and inside stores just waiting for one particular person's meter to run out. She said she's even been accused of falling out of the sky.

Graul, however, said she's never waited for some hapless motorist's meter to expire so she can write a ticket. There just isn't enough time in the day to do that, she said. Besides, she said, the Woods has never demanded any kind of quota on parking tickets or anything like that.

Irate parking victims aside. Graul said she's met mostly nice people on her beat. "They can take my word for it," she said. "There's a lot of nice people out there, a lot more nice than nasty.

Her successor, however, might take issue with the antiquated job title.

School board to decide on new library proposal

By Ronald J. Bernas Staff Writer

The Grosse Pointe Board of Education will vote on a proposal Monday which, it is hoped, will get the ball rolling on a new library building. It will do so without Doris Brucker, however, who has chaired the Library Building and Finance Committee for 10 months.

After the board proposed to raise the library committee's self-imposed cap of $6 million to $8 million, and select one of seven options given the board by a consultant, Brucker resigned because she believes the school should find an alternative that lives within the $6 million cap.

The Library Building and Finance Committee asked the board Monday to raise the cap because nearly all the alterna-

Minors cited with alcohol

A total of eight minors in two separate incidents were cited for possession of alcohol in Grosse Pointe Woods last weekend.

The first incident occurred Aug. 5 at 9:05 p.m when a resident stopped a Woods patrol car and reported teenagers in a caravan of three vehicles cruising the area had thrown out a beer

While the man was talking to the police officers at Briarcliff and Wedgewood, the three vehicles drove by westbound on Briarcliff. The resident pointed out the vehicle from which the beer can was thrown.

The Woods officers caught up to the car when it pulled into a driveway in the 21600 block of River Road. Apparently the driver of the vehicle decided to stop at a stranger's house to ask to use the phone.

When a police officer approached the vehicle, which was a convertible, he saw beer on the floor and one of the passengers handed over a wine cooler she was holding.

The four females - ages 15 and 16 from Grosse Pointe City. Park and Farms - were taken to the station for their parents to pick them up. They were all cited for possession of alcohol. In all, 14 cans of beer and one wine cooler were found in the car.

The second incident occurred at 3:29 a.m. Aug. 6 when park officers stopped a car on southbound Mack that had a taillight out. Beer was found in the car, which was driven by a 20-yearold Metamora man.

Also in the car was a 20-yearold Woods man and a Woods boy and girl, who were both 16. All the occupants were cited for possession of alcohol, and the two 16-year-olds were taken to the Woods police station for their parents to come and get them.

Families are invited to enjoy their picnic dinners at Neff Park beginning at 5 p.m. Festivities get under way at 6:30 p.m. with a marshmallow roast. Following the roast, there will be games for children of all ages and special adult games. Winners will get prizes.

The fiesta concludes with a pinata smashing and water balloon tossing. The Family Fiesta is fun for the entire family.

Party date changed at Neff Park

The date of the party being put on by Grosse Pointe City Councilwoman Myrna Smith has been changed. The new date is Sunday, Aug. 27, from 6 to 7

Originally, the party was planned for Aug. 26, but Smith said last week the date had to be moved back one day due to arrangements with a band. The party will feature ice cream and cake and a barbershop quartet and brass band.

tives proposed by consultants came in above $6 million.

Superintendent John Whritner called the current library system "tired, ineffective and inefficient. It's not adequate for today and it's certainly not adequate for tomorrow."

He said it is a problem that has plagued the school system for years and it needs to be addressed soon.

In November 1987, after months of planning, the board presented an $8.625 million proposal to expand and renovate Central Library (the Breuer building on Kercheval), to voters. The proposal was rejected, mainly because parking was inadequate and new parking lots would cut into practice fields at Grosse Pointe South High.

A new committee was formed last fall which was to look at building a new library on the site of Brownell Middle School for not more than $6 million. When study after study showed that a library that meets the school's needs could not be built for that amount, the library committee voted to ask the school board to release the cap.

A stumbling block in the whole process is the public's perception of the library system. People who don't use them often don't see the problems, a committee member said. He praised the library staff for their efficiency in covering up the needs.

Whritner said someone will have to show the public what is wrong with the libraries because "if you wait for the public to educate themselves, you'll be waiting until the cows come home."

The major problem with the libraries is space. Currently, between Central Library and its branches in the Woods and Park, there is a total of 28,000 square

In order to have a state-of-theart library system with enough materials and related services such as computers and other equipment, the system needs 60,000 square feet, studies show.

The overriding concern, especially if a new building is to be built at Brownell, is that the Breuer building - which was given by the Ferry family to the schools for the express purpose of a library — will be superfluous.

sons, most people want to see it remain used for library purposes.

The proposal the board is expected to vote on Monday is to change the cap to $8 million, but seek private funding for at least $2 million and go to the voters to bond the balance.

The board had suggested that the committee choose one of seven options proposed by a consultant, and that a new committee be formed to discuss what to do with the Breuer Building.

That proposal caused Brucker to resign.

"The board has to assume the leadership now," she said.

She added that the board should educate the public about the need for new and better libraries, and make a decision now, not wait for more committee reports.

"We have studies on studies," she said. "It's time to do some-

"Other communities have done it. Why can't we?"

It is not clear now when or who will choose one of the seven options the board is considering. The board had hoped it would be as soon as possible because it wanted to go to the voters in June with the bond issue. Some board members said that there should be no deadline so they can explore all the options avail-

Whritner said that whatever is decided, the committee and the board must present a united front if they are going to successfully sell the bond issue and the private fundraising to the public.

"If there is any divisiveness, we're working toward failure,' he said.

Director of Library Services Charles Hanson said he was encouraged by the proposal, even though so much is still up in the

"They've decided the $6 million cap isn't written in stone so we can move forward with that idea now." he said.

The board is expected to vote on this issue Monday, Aug. 14 at the board offices at its meeting scheduled to begin at 8 p.m.

Biking for Burns

For three years in a row, Grosse Pointe City Public Safety Department officers have helped raise funds for Detroit Receiving Hospital's burn center. On Aug. 2, firefighters pulled one of their trucks into a municipal parking lot in the Village and solicited "boot" donations. Lt. Al Fincham accepts a donation from Park resident Dee Clark, who got into the spirit of things by donning Fincham's fire hat. Public Safety Officer Paul Onderbeke, who organized this year's fundraiser, looks on. The City's fundraiser was a prelude to Detroit Receiving Hospital's Biking for Burns marathon Aug. 5 on Belle Isle.

State budget goes up again to new record

Tichigan's state budget for the fiscal year starting Oct. 1 is in excess of $7 billion for the first time in history, but it still didn't satisfy everybody before the Legislature called it quits for the summer.

Education was the biggest gainer, with a 19 percent increase in general fund dollars for school aid over the budget approved last summer and a 5.2 percent hike for higher education. Senate Majority Leader John Engler, who is gearing up to run for governor against incumbent James Blanchard in 1990, claimed credit for a $150 million boost for K-12 public schools.

Gerald Faverman, chairman of Public Sector Consultants, a Lansing consulting firm, told The Detroit News he was "deeply disappointed" with the document. He claimed it was "driven by political considerations and not by policy concerns," although in our view that is nothing new in Lansing.

But he agreed, according to the News report, that Blanchard and Engler came out about even in the legislative session.

Blanchard scored by appearing to hold down welfare spending while increasing anti-crime dollars while Engler took credit for the extra money for education.

Yet there were many special interests that were disappointed with the budget. Fiscal conservatives not only deplored higher spending but also warned that the welfare budget was underfunded and will require large supplemental appropriations

School supporters were unhappy that the Legislature's school reforms ended up as two referenda, neither of which is likely to be much help even if approved in November. Property owners felt, with some justification, that their demands for property tax relief had not been met, even in one of the referenda. And some liberals felt the state's social programs are still underfunded.

In November, voters will be given the choice of a one-half cent increase in the sales tax to provide an extra $300 million for the public schools or a 2-cent increase in the sales tax that would make possible a cut in property taxes as well as about $300 million more for schools.

Michigan residents already rank 12th in the nation in the amount of state and local taxes they pay for every $1,000 they earn, according to a recent Citizens Research Council of Michigan report. But the tax shift under the proposed 2-cent sales tax increase would at least cut the state's property tax bill.

On the other side of the coin, property taxes are deductible from federal income taxes while sales tax expenditures are not. Yet part of the burden of the increase in sales tax would be borne by tourists and other visitors to the state who would in effect be helping pay for the state services they get while in Michigan.

While the complaints about high property taxes are being heard on a nationwide basis, Michigan property owners have good reason to object, according to the Citizens Research Council. Property taxes amount to $45.57 per $1,000 of income in Michigan, or about 33 percent more than the national average of $34.35 but it is questionable whether that fact can be a useful argument in support of the proposed referendum that cuts property taxes since it also boosts the sales tax.

One often-ignored factor is that Michigan has become a high wage state, chiefly as a result of the successful bargaining efforts of the UAW and the failure of the auto companies to hold the wage line back when production was all-important. High pay for UAW employees led to higher pay for other unionized workers, including those in the public sector at the state, county and local levels.

True, the quality of Michigan's work force, the state's accessibility to large markets as well as to the Great Lakes, its natural resources and even its climate provide many advantages that help offset the state's reputation as a high-cost state. But those higher taxes that reflect in part the higher cost of the public work force still are a factor that often damages the state's economic hopes.

PERSONAL PROPERTY OF THE PROPE A bitter defeat for Lucas

t is difficult to understand why the Senate Judiciary Committee refused to per-I mit the nomination of William Lucas to go to the floor of the U.S. Senate after the committee had deadlocked, 7 to 7, on the former Wayne County official's confirma-

Perhaps the GOP members were correct in charging that the reason the Democatic majority didn't give the Senate a chance to vote was that they feared the full Senate would approve Lucas to be the government's top civil rights lawyer. In short, the GOP argument is that Lucas was denied confirmation for political and ideological

The controlling Democrats said, however, that Lucas, the first black ever nominated to run for governor of Michigan, was turned down for the post as assistant attorney general for civil rights because of his lack of background and experience in civil rights issues.

But running the civil rights division is a management position as well as a lawyer's job. In that connection, surely Lucas' experience as executive of one of the biggest counties in the United States and earlier law enforcement work as a sheriff and FBI agent should have counted for more than it apparently did.

Like Rep. John Conyers, who withdrew his backing of Lucas after first introducing him to the committee and endorsing him with warm praise, the committee Democrats took sharp issue with Lucas' refusal to criticize recent Supreme Court decisions in the civil rights field.

But was it reasonable for them to expect that a president who had himself supported these civil rights decisions would have nominated someone who disagreed with him and the court? And do they think that the president now will nominate the kind of strong civil rights advocate they prefer and perhaps even a Democrat for the position?

We think that is very unlikely.

It was a bitter defeat for Lucas who, in our opinion, deserved at least a chance at confirmation by the full Senate. True, the possibility of a recess appointment by the president still exists at this writing, but even that action would not wipe out the sting of rejection for Bill Lucas.

U.S. system rooted in law ne of the great protections afforded by the U.S. Constitution is the individual's right to refuse to testify against himself.

The importance of that right is apparent when one compares it with the lack of such protection for individuals in the Soviet Union and the People's Republic of China as reported recently by two people jailed in those countries.

In both those Communist-governed nations, prisoners are regularly urged to "confess" to their crimes or wrongdoings and, usually without the right to defense counsel, they are warned of the horrible fates that await them if they do not in effect incriminate themselves.

True, the Fifth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution that says in part that no person "shall be compelled in any criminal trial to be a witness against himself," has had its detractors in the United States. The late Sen. Joseph McCarthy, for example, often described those who refused to incriminate themselves before his committee as "Fifth Amendment Communists." Nien Cheng, the extraordinary Chinese woman who survived 6-1/2 years of imprisonment in Communist China on charges of being a British spy before being rehabilitated, tells her story in "Life and Death in Shanghai." Nicholas Daniloff, the Moscow correspondent of U.S. News and World Report who was held for two weeks in 1986 and charged by the Russian KGB with being an American spy, relates his experiences and those of a Russian ancestor who also had run afoul of the Russian government in "Two Lives, One Russia."

In both cases, the Communist governments charged the prisoners with spying and denied them adequate defense counsel. Again and again they were asked to incriminate themselves by confessing to their supposed crimes, even though both denied to the end of their confinement they had been spies.

Why recall their experiences now?

Because Americans should remember what happened to two innocent people even though both China and the Soviet Union now are trying to improve relations with the United States.

True, the Bush administration has been critical of the repression of the student demonstrations in China, but many American businessmen are anxious to expand their recently acquired business relationships with China.

In the USSR, Gorbachev seeks arms reduction deals with the United States but the Russian people have been given only a small taste of commercial and political freedom.

In an epilogue to her book, Nien Cheng writes that for its 38 years of rule in China, the Communist party's policy "has swung like a pendulum" from left to right and back again. And then she adds:

"Unless and until a political system rooted in law, rather than personal power, is firmly established in China, the road to the future will always be full of twists and turns."

Those are important words for Americans to remember these days from a Chinese survivor of those "twists and turns.

Appreciation To the Editor:

Lakes shoreline tour.

I would like to take this opportunity to extend my appreciation to the people of Detroit for the warm welcome I received during my recent Celebrate! The Great

The tour reinforced my commitment to preserve Michigan's magnificent natural resources and recreation facilities. It also allowed me the opportunity to see firsthand how state government is working with communities to preserve the unique heritage of each while expanding the local economy through cooperative development projects. The residents of Detroit are to be congratulated for their outstanding efforts to protect and enhance the environmental, recreational and economic resources of Michigan's 3,200 miles of Great Lakes shoreline.

Liquor license

To the Editor:

As a director of the Grosse Pointe Property Owners Association Inc. and a candidate for the Grosse Pointe Farms council, I feel compelled to advise those citizens who have followed the debate regarding the Grosse Pointe War Memorial's application for a public Class C liquor license as to the status of said application. Having been one of the leading opponents to the War Memorial's request to the Grosse Pointe Farms council for authorization to file an application for a public Class C liquor license with the Liquor Control Commission, I read, with interest, the application that was received by the Liquor Control Commission in June 1989.

To briefly review the history of this matter, you will recall that the debate on this issue was heated and extensive. The Farms council voted 4 to 3 in favor of allowing the War Memorial to apply for the license with Mayor Fromm casting the

Is Toronto really that fantastic?

Is Toronto really all that wonderful, or is the grass always greener on the other side of the border?

My wife and I went to the Ontario capital last weekend along with thousands of other Detroit area residents. Well, we didn't actually travel with them, nor did we know them, but we quickly learned that escaping to Toronto for the weekend wasn't an idea exclusively our own.

In our case, it was a "mystery weekend" arranged by wife, Terry. The idea of a mystery weekend wasn't new with us, either. Actually we got the idea from another couple, but we thought the concept was worth stealing for our own pleasure as

It wasn't our first Toronto trip. We've probably been there at least a dozen times over the years. But no matter how often we go we are always amazed at how beautiful and vibrant the city is, especially compared to

Apparently my wife and I aren't the only ones who think Toronto has a lot more to offer than Detroit. On weekends, long lines of passenger cars travel the tracks between Windsor and Toronto, carrying thousands of Detroiters to an escape weekend.

I'm not quite sure what makes Toronto so great. Is it the clean subways and quaint, fun-to-ride steetcars? Or is it the window shopping up and down the main drag, Yonge Street, at 1 or 2 a.m.? Or is it the exciting waterfront where one can take harbor tours and dinner cruises among the islands?

Or is it the many fine restaurants of all ethnic varieties? (Good thing we didn't have to pay duty on extra pounds gained over the weekend.)

Too bad Detroit isn't as much fun as Toronto. Can you imagine thousands of tourists from Toronto flooding Detroit each weekend? Think of all the money that transportation for those who would be coming into Detroit, couldn't afford to drive or chose instead of leaving Detroit and not to would have been against further unbalancing the balance of trade.

After all, Detroit has a riverfront and some fine restaurants. Of course, we are short on good downtown hotels. And visitors would have to rent cars or take taxi cabs because there is no mass transportation system. It's a shame, too, because I understand Detroit used to have a very good streetcar and interurban system.

I guess, though, the mass transportation system had to be sold to Mexico City because it wouldn't do for the Motor City to rely on anything but automobiles. Inexpensive, reliable mass the best wishes the Big Three.

I also understand that Mexico City retired the last of Detroit's old street cars not too long ago.

Of course, crime isn't near as bad in Toronto as it is in Detroit or other major U.S. cities. I wonder why that is? After all, Toronto is the largest city in Canada with a metropolitan population of 3 million.

Some believe that Canada is 10 years behind the United States as far as urban evolution is concerned, and that eventually Canadian cities will also experience deterioration, white flight and murder-city status. I'll bet they can't wait to grow up.

Well, we've been going to Canada for more than 10 years, and I've yet to see Toronto get to the point Detroit was even 10 years ago. I hope the doomsayers of Canadian cities are wrong.

It would be great if Canada would share with us its secrets on urbanology. How does Canada keep its cities alive and

Of course, part of the secret could be high taxes. I think we paid an 8 percent tax on restaurant tabs. I'm not sure what the general sales tax was. Furthermore, everything seems to be quite a bit more expensive in Canada and particularly in To-

Cost-wise, eating, drinking and shopping in Toronto is like spending the weekend at the airport, paying airport prices. And the 15 percent extra we got for our U.S. dollars didn't offset the extra expense that much.

Good thing I decided to quit smoking before going to Canada. Cigarettes in machines, I noticed, cost $4.40 a pack, which boosted my resolve to kick the unhealthy habit. Perhaps if the United States had such a hefty tax on cigarettes, the American Lung Association may have to look for another cause.

Toronto is also doing great things with the never-never land between downtown and the waterfront. The expressway and railroad tracks there separate downtown from Lake Ontario in much the same way Detroit's expressways carved up once united neighborhoods.

A reclamation, however, is going on in Toronto to connect the "Harbourfront" with downtown. The new connective development should do much for the city's already booming tourist and convention trade.

Part of the redevelopment was spurred by the building of Skydome, which is a fantastic stadium. We saw a Blue Jays-Yankees game, which was sold out but we got $9 seats for only $35 apiece from a scalper. It was

But again, am I and thousands of others being naive? Is Toronto really that great? Or does it just seem that way to the tourists? I like to think Toronto is really a marvelous major city that is enjoyed by its residents as well as its guests.

At any rate, it might just be worthwhile for Detroit's urban planners to take a trip on the CNN train to Toronto and ask their counterparts there how they do it. What's their secret?

cil members Kaess, Berendt and Rockwell in favor of the proposal. It was apparent to all in attendance at the Monday, April 17, 1989 meeting, as evidenced by your paper's lead article dated Thursday, April 20, 1989, that the approval was based on seven conditions set forth in the minutes of the council meeting and reiterated in your paper.

As our legal research previously indicated, these conditions pre-empted the statutory perogatives and responsibilities of the Liquor Conrol Commission. Further, it was our position that approval by the City Council subject to the conditions which conflict with the legal concept of a public liquor license was not authorized under Michigan statutes and such conditions would not be legally binding or enforceable. Therefore, it was of no surprise that when the War Memorial made such application in June, not one condition as set forth in the minutes of the council was included in the application. And why not? Because the Liquor Control Commission will not accept conditional applications, just as we advised the council and as our research had indicated. This information was in the hands of the council but we were apparently not persua-

News All about plastics

Use of metal in production of automobiles is dropping off

don't like to think about it this way, but the division's much pose Vehicle) is sort of a descendant of a Ford vehicle - specifically a Fort built before World War II with a trunk lid made of plastic derived from soybeans.

Plastic is usually derived from petroleum, but most plastics are based on organic polymers, so it can be made from soybeans, too. And Henry Ford the elder was a nut about soybeans.

The promise of plastic in the auto business has been discussed, dissected and hyped for decades in the Sunday supplements and, depending on your point of view, has (1) still not quite made it, or (2) made it.

There have been only a handful of successful cars with plastic bodies, most notably, of course. Chevrolet's Corvette, the body of which has been made of fiberglass-reinforced plastic ever since the car was introduced in 1953.

And there was the Avanti, introduced by Studebaker in 1960 with a fiberglass-reinforced body which survived Studebaker and still looks modern. After Stude baker folded, Nate and Arnold Altman bought the dies, founded Avanti Motor Corp. and continued making the Avanti in South Bend. Now the New Avanti Motor Corp., headed by John Cafaro, builds the same car in Youngstown, Ohio.

More recently, Pontiac tried a different and innovative approach with its Fiero mid-engine sports car. The Fiero had a steel "space frame" with plastic panels attached to it. Unlike the Corvette and Avanti, the plastic body panels on the Fiero were not really load-bearing. The Fiero could be stripped naked and still be drivable.

Chevrolet's Lumina APV will have a structure somewhat similar to the Fiero space frame, but will also use plastic structural panels in its swooping 21st-century body.

But the plastic-bodied car is just part of the automotive picture for plastics. If you doubt that, take a look around the interior of your car and you will see little but plastic, from the dense material in your steering wheel, to the plastic dashboard, to the vinyl upholstery on your seats (unless it's leather, also a polymer but not man-made: polymers are giant molecules based on carbon, so wood, soybeans and other vegetation are also made up of polymers; so are we) to the woven nylon carpeting on the floor.

Plastic hoods, deck lids, fender extensions and fascia panels have been used on cars for a couple decades. The body of Ford's Taurus SHO is all plastic from the windshield forward. But there is no doubt that Chevy's Lumina APV, to be introduced Chevrolet people probably next month, and similar vehicles of the vans each year, compared from sister divisions, Pontiac (Trans Sport) and Oldsmobile heralded Lumina APV (All Pur (Silhouette) later in the year will represent the biggest plastic application in automotive history.

Each of these vehicles will use ities and levels of performance future and foresaw that plastic and workability. The soybean derived plastic used by Henry Ford was quite different from current materials.

(At a press conference to hype the miraculous new use of soy beans, Henry was to take a whack at the deck lid with an axto show how tough and durable it was. He was supposed to hit it with the blunt end, but unfortunately, he turned the head around and hit it with the blade end, splitting the panel +

There are so-called engineering plastics, various forms of nylon, Tellon, etc., which are used for gears, bushings and other functional parts.

There are sheet molding compounds (SMC), which can be compression-molded in much the way that sheet steel is stamped. One of the things that made steel difficult to replace was the fact that body parts could be quickly stamped out of it on high-speed stamping machines. SMC materials are becoming ever more rapidly molded and so more widely used - as on the new GM vans.

Another contender in the body panel race is reaction-injected molded (RIM) polyurethane, now widely used for bumper covers and fascia.

Whatever the plastic used, it has to be considered as a complete process, since it most often replaces steel, which is cheapen as a material but usually quires more processing for ax ample, intricate parts may be molded of plastic in a single operation, whereas several pieces of metal might be required. which must then be machined and assembled.

So while plastic has had to overcome a price disadvantage to replace steel, it has often done it by requiring less proposing and also because of certain undenia ble advantages it provides -- it is lighter in weight and it does not rust.

A recent study of plastics use in the automotive industry which was done by Springborn Laboratories, Enfield, Conn., and Harborside Research Group. Marblehead, Mass., predicts that by 1996, there will be 272 pounds of plastic in the average car, up from 258 in 1991 and 225 in 1985.

The study foresees plastics not only changing the structure of morrow's car but Aso of to morrow's auto industry

Plastic bodies have trouble competing with steel in highvolume runs, but because plastic can be cheaper to tool for, it makes lower-volume production runs feasible. Many of the lowvolume specialty cars and replicars on the market have plastic bodies. The result is a burgeoning of low-volume car makers.

As was so often the case, ent characteristics, costs, capabil Henry Ford had peered into the would become an important part of the auto industry. But as was also often the case, his vision was cloudy.

Soybeans would become an immense and important crop in the United States, but would not become an important source for plastics, despite the fact that after a soy-processing plant was established by Ford in 1937, every Ford car contained about two pounds of soybean products.

And it was rival GM which got into plastics use in the biggest way, eschewing soybeans for petroleum-based plastics. But old Henry might take consolation in one thing. Those GM (and Ford) designers who did not make their cars of soybeans are now eating them in a variety of health foods - made of soybeans.

Green Circle training to be offered

Green Circle training will be offered by the Racial Justice Center of Grosse Pointe this year beginning in August. The first session of training is Tuesday, Aug. 15 and Thursday, Aug. 17 from 7 p.m. until 10 p.m. in the annex of the Grosse Pointe Unitarian Church located at 17150 The goals of the program are:

The Green Circle is a symbol of the child's world of people: the people the child cares about, the people taken into his or her circle. The Green Circle Program, Inc. is an educational, non-profit organization committed to helping children build that circle.

1. To help children develop a

Planting helps solve global problem

By Joy Aschenbach

National Geographic News Service Global question: What can an independent power producer do to offset 15 million tons of carbon dioxide that its new coalburning plant in Uncasville, Conn., will release into the atmosphere? One answer: Plant 52 million trees in Guatemala.

The trees-for-power-plant connection is both "an imaginative experiment in the quest for solutions to the greenhouse effect" and "a viable solution to the serious deforestation problems of a developing country," says James Gustave Speth, president of the World Resources Institute, which helped forge the Trees absorb carbon dioxide, the primary contributor to the greenhouse effect, the warming of Earth's atmosphere. The trees to be planted by 40,000 farmers in Guatemala over a 10-year period are expected to mitigate carbon dioxide emissions during the power plant's 40-year life.

The Connecticut power company, a subsidiary of Applied Energy Services of Arlington, Va., will contribute $2 million to the plantings through a grant to CARE, the international relief and development organization, which oversees the world's largest non-governmental reforestation program.

CARE, whose reforestation program reaches 34 countries in Latin America, Asia, and Africa, has planted more than 70 million trees in the past decade.

Although the trees alone cannot cool global warming, Speth says there should be an international effect toward a net gain of trees on Earth by halting tropical deforestation and promoting reforestation. Major sources of carbon dioxide are the burning of fossil fuels and the destruction of forests.

Since World War II, deforestation has reached alarming rates in the tropics. Every hour 3,000 acres of tropical forests are destroyed, primarily for agriculture. In a year, that amounts to 27 million acres, about the size of Pennsylvania.

A 1980 U.N. Food and Agriculture Organization study comparing global reforestation to de-hectare (about 2.5 acres) of trees

"Logic tells you that the 10-to-1 ratio has gotten worse in this decade," forester Peter T. Hazlewood of the World Resources Institute tells National Geographic.

Only in the temperate regions of the world is the situation now stable, primarily because of the proliferation of tree plantations. In the United States, Canada, forest biomass is increasing by 1 percent a year, says John Michale Kramer, senior forestry adforestation found that for every visor of Energy/Development International and former director planted, 10 hectares have been of CARE's reforestation pro-

> In Europe, however, forests are still losing ground because of air pollutants and other environmental stresses.

No developing tropical country has reversed the deforestation trend, with the possible exception of Haiti. More than 40 million trees have been planted there in the past seven years by Scandanavia and the Soviet the Pan American Development Union, for example, the standing Foundation and CARE, with about half surviving. Haiti had been stripped of nearly all its forests.

New officer hired in Park

Timothy Brandon, 22, of Burton, Mich., has been hired as a new public safety officer in Grosse Pointe Park.

He recently graduated from Nazareth College with a bachelor's degree in law enforcement. He also recently completed the Kalamazoo Regional Police Academy.

Brandon, who is single, will relocate to a home in the Park.

Suspected dad escapes from Park police

A man being held by Grosse Pointe Park police on a paternity warrant out of the Wayne County Sheriff's office escaped from the police station July 29.

The man was being held in a temporary holding room instead of a cell because of other prisoners already in the cell. In a report, police said the man broke into a lavatory and kicked out a window screen.

The man was arrested at 4:30 a.m. when police responded to a report of a prowler. The man was found in the Wayburn-Maryland alley in the 1300 block. A background check found the prowler suspect was wanted by the county on a paternity warrant. He escaped at 3:15 p.m.

BETTER BUILDING By Rinaldo's Construction SHEDS & GARAGES

When building sheds or garages, first one must decide what style they want. The most common are the barn type and the standard type with a gable roof. The barn is very nice. The drawback is because of the shape of the roof. The walls are short, this takes away from you storage space and it is more economical to build.

To start with you need concrete. You will need a 4-inch slab that sits on a 4 inch by 24 inches deep ratwall. If you plan on bricking your garage, then an 8-inch by 42 inches deep foundation is necessary. Anchor bolts should be used.

For the actual construction we start with the bottom plate. This should be pressure treated lumber so as to avoid rotting. Your studs should be 2x4's, 16 inches on center. After the walls are built, raise them and ottach them to the anchor bolts. Use your level to make sure your walks are plumb. Then take a piece of long 1x4 or 1x6 and use it as a temporary brace by nailing diagonally along the walls to hold them plumb. Now a double top plate should be used. This will keep your walls from separating.

At this point I should mention kits that are sold in the stores. They are fine, however you will usually end up back at the lumber yord for more material. They usually do not give you lumber for a double top plate or enough studs to put them 16 inches on the center. Many kits also give you flakeboard or chipboard for the siding and roof. Yes, it is inexpensive but it will not last as long as good plywood and it is not as strong. Building from scratch is the best way to go.

For the roof of a shed, 2x4's 24 inches on center for your rafters is fine. For a garage 2x6's 16 inches on center are what is called for. Remember to always use a ridge board. The roof sheating should be plywood. The use of plywood clips is recommended. This will keep the seams from sagging or warping so your roof will look nice.

For siding Texture III is always nice to use. It gives a nice appearance and is durable. Texture III is a plywood that has a rough sawn texture to it with seams already put into it. Vinyl siding is also a nice alternative; after the siding is up, use 1x4's and 1x6's for trim an all the corners and for loscia board etc. . Now put on your shingles and you will have a good storage space that will give you many years of service.

· Rehabilitation, which works with people to overcome their setbacks brought on by illness or accident.

"Our day care has changed over the years," said Carol Severn, administrator of the Calvary Day Care for Adults on Mack and Gateshead in Detroit. "But the reason it was started is to serve older adults who require supervision and provide respite for caregivers; that has stayed the same."

That's the reason for the growing number of day care centers.

centers has grown so fast for many reasons, Ganote said. The higher cost of nursing homes is one reason, as is the fact that there are so many two-income households which may be taking care of older relatives. But the main one is the increase in the population of older Americans.

"People are living longer now than they ever have before," she said. "And technology has advanced so much that people who at one time died from certain diseases are now surviving."

Many, however, survive the procedure, but still need assistance with day-to-day duties. Hiring another adult to sit with the person every day is costly, Ganote said, and then there is the safety factor.

That's where adult day care comes in. People - like Ferrier - living with caregivers, can be with others and continue their lives with dignity by doing things for themselves.

"This service," Severn said, "helps to delay or prevent nursing home care.

Ganote says that when people are living at home with caregivers, they aren't given a chance to do anything for themselves.

Judy Baarck of Cottage Belmont day care adds that "it's a long day if they don't have something to do."

So doing for yourself is encouraged at Belmont. Once a week the clients - they're not patients - help make lunch. There are two gardens in a courtyard The number of adult day care which they tend. They make pompom flowers - the kind used to decorate newlyweds' cars out of plastic bags and sell them.

"They feel more useful." Baarck says. "They're doing worthwhile things."
"Day care," Ganote says,

"gives them a chance to be who they are now, not someone's image of what they were 10 or 20 years ago."

But day care is also good for the emotional state of the caregiver, Baarck says.

"There's not the guilt of just dumping them in a nursing home," she said. "If you can see a progression of a disease, such as Alzheimer's, it's a way of getting yourself and the family prepared for the next step. Plus there's not the guilt associated with putting someone in a nursing home.'

Ganote echoes Baarck's sentiment.

"They are giving themselves honestly say to themselves, 'I've really done the best for them that I could."

Day care doesn't need to be a daily thing, either. Many people come just two or three days a week. Some come less, depending on the cost and the schedules of the caregivers. Ganote says day care centers cost an average of $30 a day, with health and rehabilitation types costing more, because of the attention needed for those clients.

Calvary Day Care receives some funding from United Way and the Detroit Area Agency on Aging and provides some financial assistance with those funds.

Severn said the main concern about adult day care centers is that many people are not familiar with the concept. Calvary Day Care gives local ministers and community leaders information about their center in the hopes that they will pass it on to those who might need it. Cottage Belmont advertises through pamphlets distributed at other Cottage Hospital centers.

Most of the people in Belmont's day care live with a child, a few live with other relatives and some live with their spouses. A majority suffer from a progressive disease such as Parkinson's or Alzheimer's, others have been diagnosed as having age-induced dementia and others were weakened by strokes.

The trend in day care centers, Severn said, will move toward specializing. There will be units specifically for Alzheimer's disease, or the hearing or sight impaired, or the developmentally disabled. She also looks forward to the time when day care cen-See ADULT, page 15A ters will be licensed and reimbursable by insurance companies and Medicare and Medicaid.

The licensing and the thirdparty payment go hand in hand, she said, but the legislature must be educated first, she said. The MAADC is working on that with State Rep. Walter DeLange (R-Kentwood) who is expected to introduce a bill in the fall which deals with licensing of centers.

The MAADC recently established a certification tool that sets up rigorous guidelines for staff requirements, building requirements and other items they feel are necessary for a day care center to be certified. To date only a few centers in the state have been certified, because the guidelines are so new, and because the inspection process takes such a long time. The certification guidelines are expected to be the basis of the licensure bill DeLange will introduce.

U.S. Rep. Dennis Hertel (D-Harper Woods) has presided over hearings on the subject of longterm health care, during which the subject of senior day care was discussed. The purpose of the hearings, held last September in Warren, was to gather information for federal funding of senior programs like day care centers.

The main hurdle facing adult day care is getting information about it out to the people, Hertel said. That is why he has sponsored for four years a National Adult Day Care Week. This year the special week is scheduled for Sept. 20. "When we first started gathering information in 1980, most people didn't know what it was, but now we know that day care is a cheaper form of health care, keeps seniors healthier. One lady told us it keeps her alive, gives her the will to live knowing that she was needed and cared about," Hertel said. "The problem is getting that message out to the taxpayers.'

Too many people who don't need nursing homes are falling through the cracks, Hertel said. Those are the people who could most use adult day care.

This is one of the most costeffective things we've seen with older people," he said, because it keeps people healthier and out of nursing homes which are paid for by Medicare and Medicaid.

Hertel said the lack of information, and the deficit have kept the government from increasing funding for adult day care centers, although many private sector factions, like churches and other community agencies, are picking up the slack by providing facilities and funding for day care centers.

INTRODUCING GENTLE CHIROPRACTIC!

Hi, I'm Dr. Mary Quarnstrom. Perhaps gentleness in chiropractic is a new concept to you; it was to me before I began the six years of college training necessary for my doctorate degree. During those six years I learned the precise locations where light pressure can bring chiropractic relief to pain.

In addition to my doctorate, I am certified in both Impairment Rating and Ergonomics (man's relationship to his work). I have completed courses in advanced Orthopedics and Neurology. Even now I attended nationwide seminars to stay current on the advances in this rapidly changing field a weekend each

If you have hesitated visiting a chiropractor, perhaps you didn't know about this gentle or "soft touch" technique. It has been effective treating:

Back Pain Neck Pain Numbness Headaches Arthritis Bursitis

Shoulder Pain Arm/Leg Pain Hip Pain

Painful Joints Stiffness Cold Hands/Feet

And, because most insurance companies recognize and cover Chiropractic care, your treatment may be at little or no cost to you according to the limits of your insurance policy.

His job is unpredictable.

Recently an 11-day student sitin at the student services building required several sleepness nights of negotiations between demonstrating students and unversity officials.

The incident was sparked by a cartoon in the South End, the student newspaper, which a number of students saw as a racist comment.

"All across the state, many black students are clamoring for change," he said. "The demonstrations at Wayne, which represented a small minority, was a call for an expansion of the Black Studies program. They wanted a crisper commitment from the school.

The pressure fell on Markus to form a response to the takeover of the building by a group of students. Many people called for a sharp police response to quell the protest, but Markus and other officials decided to talk to the students and avoid force.

Winners

Four Our Lady Star of the Sea students were recently honored for their participation in the Partners in Excellence reading program, sponsored by World Book. For the past seven weeks, the children in grades K-8 have been participating in a read-a-thon. Those who read more than eight books received a silver medal, those who read 10 or more received a gold medal. The winning student was kindergartener Nicolas Sinclair who read 84 books. The secondplace winner was third-grader Julia Coble, and third-place winner was first-grader Kelly Huetteman.

Student Spotlight Michael Hindelang

Each week in this column, we will focus on the work of a student. It can be a poem, a drawing, a short story, a picture of a scientific experiment or a woodworking project, a book review.

The following poem was writ-ten by Michael Hindelang, who said he wrote it this summer "just for fun." He will be going into the fourth grade at St. Paul School. He is the son of Robert and Paula Hindelang of Grosse Pointe.

Happiness

Happiness is the color of roses. It tastes like chocolate candies. It smells like fresh pinewood. It looks like a piece of cake. And sounds like firecrackers going off.

Happiness feels like fresh air.

Michael Hindelang

They're tops

More than 180 award-winning graduating high school students have been honored by WXYZ/Channel 7. Elias Brothers and First of America in the ninth annual Best of the Class public service campaign. These top students were featured in a number of 60-second public service announcements which will run on WXYZ throughout the summer. Shown are the Grosse Pointe students, Rebecca Hunt, representing Grosse Pointe South, and Paul DiPasquale of Grosse Pointe North.

Factor into this scenario a bevy of career difficulties, plus specifically family relationships, ety and in need of psychiatric worries about a vagrant brother by gangsters unless he pays them $23,000; a divorced sister (Diane Wiest) whose kids want little to do with her; and a brother-in-law (Rick Moranis) who pushes his 2-year old girl to be a little Miss Einstein.

The film is clearly heavy on the negatives of family life, accenting the explosiveness of the nuclear family. Any clan that has as many problems as Martin's immediate and extended families would probably have long since taken up residence at the nearest asylum.

Still, it isn't the daily headaches of family life we're supposed to remember about "Parenthood." Rather, it is the beauty and the almost transcendent peace that accompanies those problems.

We're not supposed to remember the images of crying children and nervous adults. These scenes, numerous as they may be, simply help viewers better understand the film's conclusion a happy family gathering played out for us without dialogue.

There are plenty of laughs here, but this is not really a comedy. And even when we do laugh, we do so in spite of ourselves. We can't laugh too hard at the misfortunes of these people, we think, because they represent the most vulnerable characteristics of our own personalities.

The cast is well-rounded and effective, especially Martin, who has grown immensely in his ability to be three-dimensional Normal Guy; and Jason Robards, who displays the questionable priorities of a man whom Martin has vowed not to be.

"Parenthood" is not perfect any more than the institutions it explores. Its honesty is refreshing enough though - and its humor revealing enough - that it will be remembered as one of Howard's best works.

There are stories that no matter how many times children read them or see them on the screen never lose their magic, "Peter Pan" is certainly one of the most popular.

In Walt Disney's "Peter Pan," the audience experiences the happy state of childhood. But as we all know, childhood is not entirely without fears.

Consequently the children have some scary adventures involving Captain Hook but everyone knows Peter Pan will win out, so they settle back and enjoy the excitement and suspense.

Besides playing the villain, Hook provides humor. There are few things more satisfactory or funny than being able to laugh at the bad guy.

Because of its timelessness, "Peter Pan" has been seen on video and television, but every child deserves to see this endearing cinematic treasure on a movie screen where the characters, the music and the color are enlarged and enhanced.

Bush Grosse Pointe N Taking an inventory now can save headaches later

By Ronald J. Bernas Staff Writer

Barbara Kenitz has been prac- whose sole function is to provide ticing interior design for more a complete and detailed picture than 10 years both here and in Pittsburgh.

San Grand Control of the Control

She has designed for businesses and homes and most recently designed the 180 private suites at the Palace of Auburn Hills.

She chooses furniture, artwork, rugs and accessories for homes. "People spend a lot of time and money designing their homes - it's not just the basics anymore," she says.

But while working on homes, she said she noticed two things: The first was that most people underestimate the value of their home furnishings. The second was that most people do not have a detailed list of items in their homes.

That causes a major problem in the event of damage or theft of items, and homeowners either cannot describe their belongings adequately, or cannot remember each item in the house, or cannot provide proof of ownership.

of a homeowner's personal as-Kenitz's service is personalized to each client and the type of service each client gets is tailored to his needs, and, she believes, is the only service of its kind in the Detroit metropolitan

"What I find hard to believe is that people will pay insurance premiums year after year, but fail to take the one measure that will assure them 100 percent reimbursement," Kenitz said.

She personally meets with each potential client to determine what he or she wants. It ranges from a starter kit so the homeowner can record all items to a photographic inventory complete with a coded, itemized and computerized list of each item in the house.

Everything - from furniture. accessories, artwork, jewelry, clothing, kitchenware, appliances, tools, even the kitchen So Kenitz started Lifetime sink - are itemized for the list but she will refer a client to which is then compiled into a Personal Assets Record. Stereos and other appliances are recorded with a serial number for easier identification. The record, Kenitz suggests, should be kept outside the home, at the home of a relative or perhaps at work or at a safe deposit box.

Kenitz does not do appraisals.

other businesses which do appraisals, then give her the information.

Kenitz does all the work and the homeowner generally does not get involved, she said.

"It's a very grueling process to go through everything you own, and we try to spare the home-owner that," she said.

The inventory can be updated at any time if an item is sold or a new item is purchased.

Kenitz says the Personal Assets Record allows homeowners to not only plan for adequate insurance protection, but provide a well-documented response to any insurance claims, plan for last will and testament, or make distribution of property - as required in an estate settlement or divorce --- easier.

The cost of this service ranges anywhere from a couple of hundred dollars to a couple of thousand dollars, depending on the type of service requested, the size of the house and the scope of the collection.

"It's worth it," she said. "That cost is only a fraction of what they stand to lose in a disaster or a theft.

"It's very useful," said Richard Caretti, director of public safety in Grosse Pointe Park.

Recently a person who had some items stolen brought in a home inventory listing describing a clock, a picture and some oriental rugs. A search warrant was issued and the items were found, based on the descriptions in the inventory.

"From a crime prevention sense, it's very important that you are able to identify everything you own," Caretti said. He suggests scratching some form of identification on the back of each item, perhaps a Social Security number, if a professionally done home inventory is outside your budget.

Judy Samra, an agent with the Aitken & Ormond Insurance Co. in Grosse Pointe City, said any type of list is extremely important in the event of loss through fire or flood or theft.

"At the time of a loss, you're excited and you're maybe not sure what was taken," she said. "You see something every day, but you may not even notice it's there, so photographs and a list kept outside the home are very helpful."

A list will help jog the memory at such a time and assure the homeowner full reimbursement for everything that was lost, she said.

Pat Rousseau: Winding up, but not winding down

By Pat Paholsky

Editor Winding up a 34-year career with the Grosse Pointe News and reminiscing about her life in general, Pat Rousseau says, "I've enjoyed it all. I've had a very good productive career." She says it matter of factly, but it's obviously an understatement.

Rousseau's life reads like the stuff of novels.

Born and reared in New York City, she spent summers with her family on Cape Cod. She majored in English and minored in philosophy at the College of Mount St. Vincent on the Hudson. The school had a box at the Metropolitan Opera and attendance was mandatory.

'You had to go, but I wanted to go," she said, adding that she and her friends hung out with the ballet crowd. "We used to watch ballet classes backstage in the Metropolitan Opera House."

Her parents wanted her to be a teacher, but Rousseau wanted to write advertising copy. She wrote an advertising campaign for Ford, focusing on two Fords in every family. "This was way back," she said.

Campaign in hand, she went to an advertising agency. The company didn't have a spot for her in advertising, but she was hired as assistant to the producer for a CBS radio show sponsored by Borden's.

About this time, Rousseau bephotographed by Richard Ave- New York. don, celebrity photographer.

They were married in the Lady Chapel in St. Patrick's Cathedral in April 1950.

The couple moved, settling first in Grosse Pointe City.

Rousseau by now had been doing live commercials for TV. She traveled for the Lincoln-Mercury Division doing shows for nine years and she also did a weather show as one of the Miss Fairweathers. She wrote and emceed a show for J.L. Hudson's called "Girl Talk."

While Rousseau was doing shows for Lincoln-Mercury, she did walk-ons with Ed Sullivan when he filmed commercials in Detroit.

Rousseau said she was trying to get back into writing. She was asked to promote Men's Night in the Village and that brought her to the attention of the advertising manager at the Grosse Pointe News.

He asked her to do Pointe Counter Points, a column advertising various specials and services in local businesses. Since it offered her the opportunity to write commercial copy, Rousseau accepted. She began writing the column May 5, 1955.

In the meantime, Rousseau freelanced, accepting fashion accounts, industrial and real estate vice to the community. That's what the paper has done and is doing.'

Rousseau may be winding up her career with the Grosse Pointe News, but she isn't winding down. She and her husband have sold their Grosse Pointe Farms home and are moving to Vero Beach, Fla., where her main priority will be to get set-

After that, she plans to get busy again and has already been offered a job in Palm Beach. Her husband will do consulting work. They've taken up golf again and plan to continue with tennis.

Older adults and insomnia: Sleep isn't always easy

By Margie Reins Smith Feature Editor

Not everybody is sleeping peacefully in the old Howard Johnson's Motel on West Grand Boulevard in the New Center area.

The former motel is the Sleep Disorders Center, a division of Henry Ford Hospital's psychiatry department. It serves as an outpatient facility for diagnosis and treatment of patients with complaints related to sleeping and waking.

which sometimes occur every 60 seconds, or hundreds of times during an eight-hour sleep - makes them more sleepy during the

Fatigue, lack of alertness and irritability occur during the day. Sometimes the lack of sleep causes lethargy, memory problems and microsleeps - nodding off for a few seconds several times during the day. This in turn, disrupts the sleep/wake rhythm and the recuperative value of sleep is dimin-

A research subject at the Sleep Disorders Center is hooked up to monitoring devices before going to sleep.

The Center is also involved in a number of research projects concerning insomnia and sleep problems.

Grosse Pointe Farms resident Timothy Roehrs, director of research at the Sleep Disorders Center, said the nine research rooms and nine patient sleeping rooms are used by patients and research subjects - for

The five clinicians, two researchers and a support staff of 25-30 people aid in the diagnosis and treatment of people with sleep

"Almost everybody experiences insomnia," Roehrs said. "Stressors trigger shortterm transient insomnia for everybody for one or two nights.'

Usually, no treatment is necessary.

Complaints about sleep increase dramatically for elderly people, he said. And the nature of the complaints change as well.

"Younger people have difficulty falling asleep. Elderly people have difficulty staying asleep or they wake up too early in the "Objectively, elderly people sleep differently than younger people," Roehrs said, "regardless of complaints.

"They have lighter sleep. More fragmented, disrupted sleep. And the frequency of sleep-specific pathologies increases.

For instance, elderly people are more apt to suffer from sleep apnea, a breathing disorder that involves a cessation of breathing that can last up to 100 seconds or more. Sleep apnea can aggravate a heart condition or can even be fatal. It occurs more frequently in older people.

Older people are more apt to suffer from nocturnal myoclonus, or twitching of leg muscles that cause kicking and stirring during the night. This problem affects an estimated one-third of people over 65.

Restless leg syndrome is also a disorder that often occurs in older adults before bedtime, making falling asleep difficult.

Older people are also more apt to have skeletal-muscle pain because of other physical problems such as arthritis.

All these problems causes them to rouse many times from sleep - however briefly during the night. These brief arousals, Roehrs debunked several ideas about older people's sleep.

• Elderly people do not need less sleep, as has been widely believed.

• Most elderly people do not have psychological problems that are interrupting their sleep. Most difficulties turn out to be physiological.

For instance, "We've found that some drugs, for some people, are stimulating, and can cause sleep problems," Roehrs said. He named caffeine, certain asthma drugs, sleeping pills that are mismanaged, some blood pressure medications and alcohol.

"May of us suspect - although nobody has proven it - that many elderly people self-medicate (their insomnia) with alcohol. Alcohol is a sedative, but people rapidly develop a tolerance for alcohol. For instance, alcohol may effectively induce sleep for

How to sleep easy

Here are some easy sleeping suggestions that came out of a recent symposium "Sleep problems in the Elderly: The Health Consequences," sponsored by the Upjohn Co. and the American Association of Retired Persons.

• Above all, the bedroom should be a place reserved only for sleep. Sexual activity is the only exception to this rule.

• A regular daytime and nighttime schedule should be observed, since the body's sleep and wake cues are less acute in the

• If unable to fall asleep within 15 to 20 minutes, get out of bed and do something relaxing and pleasant, such as reading a book or writing a letter. Return to bed when sleepiness arrives. This also should be done if you wake up in the night and are unable to fall back to sleep.

· Avoid alcohol, caffeine and nicotine after

 As a rule, an older person should always rise at a regular time, even if still tired.

• In most cases, naps do more harm than good. A nap should not be used as a substitute for nocturnal sleep.

for four weeks. 'Elderly people are better off seeking the help of their physicians instead of alcohol or over-the-counter medications. Sleeping pills are sometimes the answer."

Patients are referred to the Sleep Disorders Center by physicians, he said. Evaluation includes medical, psychiatric, sleep and drug histories and a daily sleep diary, which the patient keeps for several weeks.

Treatment is on an out-patient basis. Patients sleep at the Center while hooked up to monitoring devices for a continuous measurement of what is happening while they

"It's like having a continuous eight-hour physical exam," Roehrs said.

Patients are connected with electrodes and wires to devices that measure electroencephalographic (brain wave) electro-oculographic (eye movement) and chin electromyographic activity, respiratory effort and respiration rate, heart rate and rhythm, limb movements and blood oxygen saturation while they sleep. A small microphone records snoring and a video camera tapes the sleeper's tossing and turning.

All these electrodes and wires lead to a machine in an adjoining room which records the patients' full night of sleep on a huge graph. A staff member monitors the recording machinery in an adjoining room throughout the night.

People often complain that they don't sleep a wink, Roehrs said. "I can say that in 10 years, I've only seen one or two people who didn't sleep at all in eight hours. Most insomniacs sleep more than they realize."

Patients are usually diagnosed after several nights of monitoring and a close examination of the resulting graphs by clinicians, consultants and the patient's own physician.

Roehrs described one of the elderly patients the center was able to help.

The patient worked as a professional Santa Claus. Like Santa himself, he was overweight and he had a full bushy white

"His problem was - he kept falling asleep while children were sitting on his lap. The kids either didn't notice; or they'd have to poke him to wake him up," Roehrs

Santa was diagnosed as suffering from severe apnea. During sleep, he would stop breathing hundreds of times during the night. This would arouse him briefly, and he'd resume breathing. His overweight condition was causing an obstruction of the airway, which caused the apnea.

In this case, treatment options were restricted because of his occupation, Roehrs said. Santa needs to be big. And he needs a full beard.

"There were three options for treatment of his daytime sleepiness. He could lose a lot of weight. He could have a tracheostomy, which is a surgical hole in his neck."

Neither was possible for Santa.

"So we used a medical device called a CPAP, or Continuous Positive Airway Pressure. It's a mask worn at night which is connected to a small engine that blows air into the airway, keeping it open.'

Roehrs said he'd like older adults to know the following facts about sleep and aging:

• Sleep naturally changes as we age.

- Physical problems often cause difficulty sleeping. The physical problems should be addressed first.
- Misuse of drugs will cause sleep difficul-
- · Senior citizens should tell their physicians about sleep problems.

Sleep problems of seniors

A nationwide sampling of 568 adults over age 60, who were questioned about their sleep problems, found:

- Forty percent suffered from sleep prob-
- · One out of five reported their sleep was worse than it had been in the past.
- One in three believed their poor sleep was related to worry about health, housing, family or finances.
- Active retirees had fewer sleep problems than those who were less active.
- Respondents averaged 6.8 hours of actual sleep at night, but their average time in bed was 7.7 hours.
- · Napping was more prevalent among seniors who were in fair or poor health, than in those who were in good health.

Overtures is a new-last-February group of Detroit-area professionals recently organized with this group in mind - and dedicated to supporting the DSO.

Overtures sponsors evenings for their peers featuring the Detroit Symphony Orchestra - but with an added twist. For instance, brunches, lunches and dinners that include music as well as food at the Whitney, the Rattlesnake Club, the Fox Theatre and Meadow Brook.

Their next event is called a Picnic Fest and it's Sunday, Aug. 13, before a DSO Meadow Brook performance.

Tickets are $25 and include a picnic and concert seats in the pavilion

Picnic fare will be ready at 6 p.m. under a tent on the grounds of Meadow Brook. The all-American picnic menu includes crispy fried chicken, corn on the cob and watermelon.

Included in the evening — a chance to join a croquet game on the lawn — or watch exhibition matches of the Detroit International Croquet Tournament, who will do their thing to benefit the Detroit Area Boy Scouts of America.

At 8 p.m., the final DSO con cert of the eight-week Meadow Brook season will be directed by Gunther Herbig and will include Liszt's Les Preludes, waltz selections by Johann Strauss Jr. and George Gershwin's Piano Concerto in F Major by pianist Flavio Varani.

Thanks

By the Rev. William C. DeVries First Christian Reformed Church

No, in fact, at times this summer has been crashing storms and bitter medicine. But there is some gravity, some force or impulse, which impels me to say something about the good around me. So please bear with me while I give in publicly to this late-season urge.

Thank you for vivid pink rose petals cascading in a torrent around my shoes as I trim the bushes beside my back yard. And for the laughing colors of flowers around the walks and driveways of my neighbors. Thanks for the shocking contrast of green leaf against the sky, and for the always new shape and shade of lake-reflecting cloud and

Thank you for the sharp joy of hearing a cardinal in the early morning. And for the soft call of dove and harsh cry of crow. Thank you for the silence as a storm approaches from neighborhood to neighborhood. And for the trembling drums of thunder through the pelting drops. Thank you for the song of leaves dancing with breeze, and of children intent on life.

Thank you for farms spread out in order and profusion as I mount a hill. And for the rush and sparkle of a stream hurrying past the trees. Thank you for a spider's web and a chipmunk's tail. And for the deep brown of my dog's eyes searching for a sign of my attention.

So much that has been there for so very long becomes fresh and new to me in the summer. I just need to say thanks. I don't know if any who don't believe there is a God ever read this church page. If they did, they might even say I had invented my god as a recipient for my feelings of joy and gratitude at the world I experience. Well frankly, right now I don't care what you say. I am profoundly aware of the wonders all around me, and I am deeply convinced of the reality of One who is responsible not only for them, but also for me.

So, I just must say thanks. Thank you God for summer, for color, for sound, for wonder, for me.

St. Paul Lutheran members attend workshop

More than 160 people from 49 church congregations, including a group from St. Paul Evangelical Lutheran Church in Grosse Pointe, took part in the Congregation Heritage Workshop July 23-25 at Luther College.

Workshop participants learned Schneller, a European historical about planning church anniver- researcher and family research saries, writing histories, celebrat- consultant whose topic was ing their heritage and preserving historical documents.

Keynote speaker for the workshop was Paul Jay Polansky

"How Old Is Your Congregation? Schneller encouraged participants to be aware that the roots of their heritage are much older and deeper than the 75, 100 or 150 years of the anniversary their congregation may be celebrating.

Workshop leaders included H. George Anderson, president of Luther College, Jutta F. Anderson, a specialist in art history and art education, Duane Fenstermann, Luther archivist and president of the Iowa Library Association Foundation and Roger W. Peterson, director of the Congregation Heritage Workshop and director of church relations at Luther.

Among the other workshop leaders were Elisabeth Wittman. chief archivist for the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America, based in Chicago, and Gracia Grindal, author, lecturer, hymn writer and associate professor of pastoral theology at Luther Northwestern Seminary in St. Paul, Minn.

Vacation Bible school to be at Christ Church Aug. 21-25

Sonseeker Safari Vacation Bible School at Christ Church, Grosse Pointe, 61 Grosse Pointe Blvd., begins Aug. 21.

Diane Jahnke, director of Christian Education at Christ Church, said the church is geared up for an unforgettable experience. The Sonseeker Safari theme will create an atmosphere of fun and excitement for the children, she said, and will feature life-related Bible stories, skits, the Lord's prayer, lively songs, imaginative crafts, games and creative movement.

Aug. 25, 9:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Children should bring a bag lunch. Beverage and snacks are provided.

There is a suggested fee of $10 to cover the cost of the T-shirt and supplies.

On Wednesday, Aug. 23 at 12:30 p.m. the community is invited to join the youngsters by bringing their pets to be blessed on the front lawn of the church. On Sunday, Aug. 27, all the

Christian Science lecture Aug. 13

This world where problems have reached awesome magnitude, and where answers are hard to come by, may be overlooking a resource for solutions that has been proved highly successful. It is illustrated in scripture, where individual human beings faced and overcame problems in ways that mere human expertise, careful planning, and skillful execution couldn't.

This resource is to be discussed in a public lecture, "Looking for solutions? How about the Master's way," to be given on Sunday, Aug. 13 at 3 p.m. at Second Church of Christ, Scientist, 147 East Grand Blvd.

The speaker is Gloria Christena of Michigan City, Ind., a member of the Christian Science board of lectureship.

The public is invited. There is no charge. Supervised parking will be available behind the church. Child care will be provided.

INC: Clearinghouse that links needs with supplies

By Ronald J. Bernas Staff Writer

A drapery company donated scraps of fabric to Operation LINC which in turn matched the donation to an agency that teaches parenting skills. The agency's clients used the scraps to make quilts which they sold in a drawing. They used the money for summer outings with the children.

Cindy Boeneman, resource coordinator at LINC, calls her program a clearinghouse which funnels donations from local businesses and individuals to non-profit agencies in the area.

And it is just that. A company hosted a fancy luncheon at a local hotel. When for poultry feed and as food for parrots and other large cage birds. Most birds like sunflower seeds as a matter of fact, and a few sunflowers at the back of your garden are a guarantee that birds will sing for you throughout the summer.

Most annual sunflowers (there are several varieties) grow from seven to 10 feet high and have blossoms a foot or more across. Not all sunflowers are golden. Some varieties are pale yellow, white, deep orange or red. There are also dwarf varieties which only grow two or three feet tall and have blossoms the size of crysantheniums.

If you have sunflowers in your garden, don't let the birds have all the seeds. Toast them in the oven and sprinkle them with salt for a nutritious snack. Next year you may plant more sunflowers than you did this year. The perennial varieties, however, are not a very good idea for a small garden. Unless sternly restrained, they tend to spread and take over the same way mint does.

Other flowers can be culinary as well as visual delights. One is the daylily which was enjoyed by the Chinese both as food and flower before there was the written word. An herbal from the T'ang Dynasty (about 650 A.D.) informs us that it quiets the digestion, reduces worry and benefits the mind.

In China, daylilies are a cultivated crop grown for cash. The statistics of New York City tell (golden needles of dried daylily) and soak them in tepid water for an hour before you use them, as you would the fresh blooms. They are delicious chopped and added to honey for two weeks. Strain the honey before you use it. You'll have captured all the delicate aroma and taste of the flowers. Chopped daylilies are good added to scrambled eggs or omelets. Place daylily buds in the juice of dill pickles and refrigerate overnight to serve with cold meats or shred the blossoms and add them to salad for color and flavor.

Save some for the centerpiece on your dinner table too. There are dozens of ways from appetizers to desserts to serve daylilies and as an added bonus, they are high in vitamins and minerals and are rich in protein.

Roses, violets, carnations, crysanthemums, dandelions, gardenias and hollyhocks are all edible flowers, as are marigolds, nasurtiums, pansies and tulips. Lilacs and squash blossoms and gladiolus are other edible

Gladiolus, according to legend, has a sad history. A wicked old man chopped down a sacred tree killing the wood nymph who lived there. From her blood sprang the gladiolus. The name derived from the name of the short swords used by the gladiators. In Europe, it is often called the sword flower. There are hundreds of varieties of sword flowers of every shade of every color. Gladiolus tastes like lettuce natural cups to fill with chicken salad or diced fruit or dips at a cocktail party. In the middle ages, flowers were used as food far more than they are today, but maybe modern progress has missed one or two things along the way, like more flowery menus. How glamorous a diet of flowers as a weight losing regime would be. There must be one among all the diets around these days.

Coast Guard vessel available for tours

Free tours of the U.S. Coast Guard's Aids to Navigation vessel are featured at the St. Aubin Park Boat Festival on Saturday and Sunday Aug. 12 and 13.

The 63-foot craft will be on display at Detroit's newest riverfront park between 11 a.m. and 4 p.m. each day.

Built in 1976, the aluminum craft is used to deploy buoys and channel markers in Lake St. Clair, the Detroit River, Sandusky Bay and Lake Erie.

The Aids to Navigation Vessel is being presented as part of the St. Aubin Park Boat Festival sponsored by the Junior League of Detroit and Detroit Recreation Department.

All children under 12 visiting the ship will receive a free Boat Festival Fun Guide, a 12-page booklet filled with puzzles and games.

"The Festival is a celebration of Detroit's Great Lakes heritage and this wonderful new park,' said Junior League Festival Co-Chairman Annette Knoll. "Tall ships and Great Lakes vessels of all types will be on display on weekends running through September 10."

While at the park, visitors can also take Detroit river excursion cruises aboard the Renaissance Queen or the Star of Detroit Too. 5889 or The Star of Detroit Too The 42-passenger Renaissance at 961-2190.

Queen sails Fridays at 5:30 p.m. and 7 p.m. and again on Saturday at 1:30 and 4:30 p.m.

Ticket prices for Renaissance Queen excursions are $5; $2 for children under 12. The Star of Detroit Too, 150-passenger paddle wheel boat, leaves St. Aubin Park at 2 p.m. on Sundays. Tickets are $6.95.

St. Aubin Park opened to the public on July 14 and is located in the heart of Rivertown between St. Aubin and Orleans streets, one-half mile east of the Renaissance Center.

Its transient marina provides short term or overnight docking for boaters visiting downtown Detroit. The free Rivertown Rambler trolley bus provides service from the park to all the Rivertown restaurants, Harbortown, the Renaissance Center and Greektown. It runs at 30-minute intervals on Fridays; 3 p.m. until 11 p.m., Saturdays, 11 a.m. until 11 p.m. and Sundays, 11 a.m. until 10 p.m.

For docking reservations or additional Boat Festival information, please call the St. Aubin Marina at 259-4677.

HAVE A PLEASANT TRY AT PERFECTION BRIDGE BY WOODY BOYD THE PASTEBOARD PASTIME

The exceptionally skilled are found in all facets of life. Most of them are well paid and some are well publicized. Not so of most Bridge expets and we have an illustrious corps of them. I suggest that the challenge to play well is almost their only motivation for few have become wealthy from Bridge alone and a fine players's press is rarely page one.

One of the most remarkable and least understood of this splendid assemblage is Ira Rubin whose performance the past thirty years has been astonishing, but sometimes min-gled with wonder. His world ranking is attributable to his uncommon skill. Yet many at his level are uncomfortable with him and some of less sufficient rank are quite intimidated. This dubiety has been disconcerting and cost Ira

In the past ten years, I have played with him often and there's no question, he's difficult. In spite of this, the experience was rewarding for he is the most formidable opponent and challenging partner I've ever encountered. Nothing short of your best effort will satisfy him and this, while vexing, forces you to concentrate on your partnership responsibilities and play up to his expectation of your game. He can be a marvelous instructor who has on many occasions shown a tolerant capcity for one's inadequacy. While his caustic talk has been regrettable, he would prefer to punish you with his play, not with his repartee. Away from the table there's a kindness one wouldn't expect and for this he has many friends and a fine family.

A year and a half back, Ira chose to take a well earned sabbatical to rest, relax and establish a new perspective for the game and his performance. He will be back. A talent of such magnitude and intense desire still has his destiny to find in our fine game. I have said that he isn't easy to play with. As you can see, he's not easy to write about either for he is a brilliant, but complex person.

I reviewed many of Ira's academy award performances before selecting the following hand for today's column. Maybe you remember this one.

It was actually played at New York's famous Cavendish Club in 1966 and reported in the popular Goren/Sharif column shortly after. It was a classic clash between two magnificent performers. At first glance, it looks like declarer has an easy time taking ten tricks losing only the Ace, King of Hearts and the Ace of Trumps.

We'll be back next week with the exciting conclusion to this exceptional example of Bridge perfection. In the mean-time, is your money on declarer or the defenders?

Women of the Etching Revival: A lost chapter in history

By Mary Combs

Smithsonian News Service

When "Women Etchers of America" opened up at Boston's Museum of Fine Arts in November 1887, the Boston Transcript commented that "a good many people must have been surprised to think that there could be enough of that sort of thing to make an exhibition of." The writer was not proposing a shortage of etchings — this was the heyday of a period that would later be known as the Etching Revival. He was instead anticipating a certain astonishment that women could etch - and do it well.

In fact, curator Sylvester Koehler's assembly of 388 examples of "that sort of thing" proved to be so popular that New York's Union League mounted a larger version. The Boston show was the first exhibition devoted exclusively to women artists to be held in an art museum, the first to recognize women as professional art-

Koehler was also curator of graphic arts for the Smithsonian Institution, and the enduring friendships he formed with these women made it possible for him to add many of their works to the national collections. That was a stroke of good fortune, said Helena Wright, curator of graphic arts at the Smithsonian's Museum of American History, for much of the work of those women etchers has since vanished.

In the annals of art history. the Etching Revival was doomed to be over-shadowed by Impressionism, and the role of these women artists was all but forgotten - until the High Museum in Atlanta decided to mark the centennial of Koehler's show with a traveling exhibition, "American Women of the Etching Revival."

In her research, guest curator Phyllis Peet found a treasure trove of material at the National Museum of American History and at another Smithsonian museum, the National Museum of American Art. Peet also found that, contrary to accepted scholarship, "19th-century women who made etchings produced work of great excellence, and by the 1880s many of them were supporting themselves and their families as professional artists

... Their etchings cannot be distinguished from men's in quality, style or subject matter. Yet their work has been neglected or treated separately from the mainstream of the 19th-century Etching Revival by historians, critics and collectors primarily because they were women.'

Up to that time, Wright said, women's art had been either relegated to "women's sections" of exhibitions - alongside examples of lace making, pressed flowers and needlework - or exhibited with men's work as a kind of curiosity. The "Women Etchers" exhibitions were the first serious showcases treating women as professional artists.

Their contemporaries (and later art historians) looked upon this as a new role for women - and they could not have been more mistaken.

"It has become clear during the past 10 years," Peet said, "that in fact for centuries many European and American women earned their livings and often supported families as artists." From the mid-19th century on, the burgeoning publishing industry needed skilled labor, including wood engravers and lithographers, and many women desired or needed — employment. At such schools as the Philadelphia School of Design for Women (founded in 1848 by philanthropist Sara Worthington King Peter), the Chicago Academy of Fine Arts (now the Art Institute of Chicago) and the California School of Design (now the San Francisco Art Institute), women learned the necessary skills.

They found employment in lithography, some as creative il- man." lustrators and many more as anonymous colorists and technicians. "Many people with artistic inclinations end up doing something not quite creative to earn a living," Wright said. The Etching Revival offered an exciting new opportunity for artistic creativity and financial reward.

"Paint a landscape or a portrait, and you can sell it to only one person," Wright explains. 'An etching can be produced in far greater numbers - but still has the cachet of a limited edition." The Victorian buyer saw etchings as "real" art, unlike the steel-engraved reproductions that were mass-produced by the tens of thousands.

The market for original etchings flourished, sustained by the eagerness of artists to create; of distributors, gallery owners and publishers to sell, and the public to possess original art - usually landscapes. The fashion in decor and the market for art served each other nicely, for a Victorian family's art collection was not limited by wall space. The parlor was likely to contain an attractive easel carrying a selection of prints that could be displayed in turn or examined admiringly by guests. An elegant album, filled with pictures and tied up with ribbons, might provide a conversation piece.

As a field of employment, the arts represented "an area in which women could get a foothold without seeming to leave their proper sphere," Wright said. "This type of work was safe, not threatening to men." Indeed "most women who became professional artists chose to observe the social proprieties," Peet said. "They usually practiced as modestly and privately as they could and were far less visible to the public than their male colleagues." Some artists actually declined Koehler's invitation to participate in the Boston show.

Such reticence didn't help to ent belief that women artists were strictly amateurs. Perhaps part of the problem was that the lady amateurs were so visible and so encouraged.

In "A Letter to Artists: Especially Women Artists," which appeared in Lippincott's Monthly Magazine in March 1900, painter, etcher, muralist and illustrator Anna Lea Merritt commented: "The misfortune is, we flatter them by involuntarily adopting a different standard of criticism ... We should really take our amateur painters seriously and tell them painful

Among Merritt's truths: "Of all businesses (for women) art is the most popular and fashionable ... (therefore) an excessive number of young ladies with very moderate ability come to art for a living ... They should know that there is no income so fluctuating as that of the artist, wood engraving and aspects of even of the fairly successful

At the time of the Etching Revival, an artist of either sex who wished to be fairly successful was well-advised to live abroad "so as," Merritt wrote 20 years later, "to enter their native land in foreign colors." Peet suggested that this was even more important for women, providing an opportunity "to assert their independence as artists and to demonstrate the seriousness of their commitment to art."

However, the European experience was not quite the same for both sexes. "How I longed to be a man, freed from the tiresome conventions of young ladyhood," Merritt recalled. The conventions, including decent accommodations, made life expensive, as did the double rate of tuition women were often charged by private teachers.

Still, most of these women artist spent summers — and often years - working abroad. Some settled there permanently. One of these, Mary Cassatt, today has the most prominent place in history, because of her association with the Impressionists. In their own time, Mary Nimmo Moran was the best-known. She was trained by her husband, Thomas, a famous illustrator, and they worked shoulder to shoulder. Her work was highly praised for its masculine qualities. "No suggestion of a woman's hand" is one example of compliments that seem dubious today.

Most of the artists who exhibited in "Women Etchers were single, Wright says. With some notable exceptions, those who did marry seem to have had to surrender much or all of their art to the considerable demands of managing a household. Merritt sounded a timeless note: "The chief obstacle to a woman's success is that she can never have a wife. Just reflect what a wife does for an artist: Darns the stockings; keeps his house: writes his letters; visits for his

It is exceedingly difficult to be an artist without this time-saving help. A husband would be quite useless. He would never do any of these disagreeable things.'

For those women who were able to persist in their careers, the end of the Etching Revival and a change in artistic fashion did not mean an end to their art. They tried etching when it was trendy, but then went on to other media," Wright said. other media," "Most of them lived to be 80 or 90, and some worked well into the 1930s," as professional artists and teachers of the next gen-economy, lower taxes and reign in inflation, thus proving wrong the pernicious purveyers of gloom.

Sweeping away the clouds of doubt, Reagan went right on shining the light of optimism on every dark, dreary prediction that what he was suggesting was an impossible dream. Because of his determination and faith in the American people, the nightmare that enveloped the nation in doubt and indecision became the impossible dream come true.

This will to overcome was apparent in his personal life also. Witness the determination and absolute belief that would not only survive an assassination attempt and the invasion of cancer, but would return to his duties as hale and hearty as before the mishaps.

The lesson that it is better to look at the light than cry in the dark, is one that the people of this country have taken to heart and adopted as their own, particularly his attitude toward the physical setbacks of his career.

Those who have hesitated to seek for suspected cancer signs have been bolstered by the former president's courage and dent's operation. However, because the public was so sharply alerted to the good results that are possible if early help is sought, people who might not have gone to a cancer clinic before are seeking advice.

The aftermath of it all is peace of mind for those who have no reason to worry and early help for those who might have waited too long.

In his book "Can You Prevent Cancer," Ernest H. Rosenbaum, M.D., associate chief of medicine, Mount Zion Hospital and Medical Center, San Francisco, the author of 10 other books on cancer, presents the thesis that cancer prevention is a series of several positive actions.

He contends that if every person adopted a prudent lifestyle, we would begin reducing the toll of cancer tomorrow, if not today. This includes abstinence from tobacco and adherence to proper discussion of what cancer is, how it develops and the probable causes. The succeeding chapters are on cancer-related components, explanations of risk factors, and specific recommendations for prevention.

The sources of information are the latest findings on cancer reported in medical journals and at medical conferences.

The risk of lung cancer by those who smoke cigarettes is generally known. What may not be so well publicized is that the risk increases with the number of cigarettes smoked per day. Sometimes smokers will rationalize that there is a genetic factor involved. It is true that those with genetic susceptability can withstand more environmental cancer-causing agents than someone with a greater genetic susceptability.

But risks can be lessened by following a lifestyle recommended for cancer prevention. In other words, one who takes the view that cancer runs in the family and no matter what he does, it's not going to help, is wrong.

We have control over our diet and our smoking and drinking habits, but what about the risks in our environment?

In the workers' ongoing battle against assault by cancer-invaders of the workplace, they face an enemy in one or more of five different guises - dust, fibers, metals, chemicals and radiation.

Little League's got to have Art

Getz, Little League celebrate anniversary

Classified......4C

It just so happens that Art Getz's 34th anniversary as a volunteer in Little League coincides with the nation's 50th celebration of Little League.

Getz, who entered the Little League ranks in 1955 as a coach in the Park organization, has found solace, life and happiness in the "big leagues." A baseball man himself at Eastern High School, Getz didn't crack the major leagues, but he's very content with the way Little League has drafted him.

"I've been in this a long time, and I probably will be even longer," Getz said. "In retrospect, I began to get involved in something that I admired. I really felt, and still do feel, that I was doing something for the kids in the Grosse Pointe community.'

Getz stepped into the Park 16 years after Carl Stotz founded Little League in Williamsport, Penn. According to Getz, Stotz's idea grew so quickly that he couldn't handle it. Getz, among many others, nursed the league along through its fetal stages, and has since watched Little League become the largest youth organization in the country.

Little League now conducts baseball and softball programs in six divisions for more than 2.5 million young people ages 6-18, and is the only sports program in the United States to hold federal sanction under Congressional Charter.

"Nobody had a concept on how big this thing would get," Getz said. "I myself have watched this thing grow and I'm telling you, it's the greatest thing on earth.'

The circus ranks up there, too, but for Getz, Little League is his lifeline.

"I've thought about giving it all up a couple times," he explained, "but I can't. Everytime I think I'm going to retire, I talk to my wife Sheila and say, 'It's got to be about that time.' And he encourages me to stay in it."

Not only is Getz involved, but Sheila is also active. When Art became interested, Sheila began typing letters, cooking meals, organizing games and meetings. Besides, it was the only time she could spend time with her hus-

"Little League is such a part of my life, and I'm also very fortunate because it's such a part of Sheila's life as well," Getz said. "My wife has played a big part in our family involvement."

Art and Sheila watched sons Art Jr., Chuck and Mike, filter through the local system, and now they are witness to their grandsons' expertise.

"I became interested in the concept of Little League," Getz said. "It stands for family and fun, love for the game and happiness. I trust in God, I love my country and always do my best.'

The latter part of that quote was a portion of the Little League motto: "I trust in God, I love my country, and will repsect its laws. I will play fair and strive to win, but win or lose I will always do my best."

"I have lived with that in mind for some 30 years," Getz added.

Before the 1989 season, Getz tried to emancipate himself from Little League, but failed.

While overseeing the Park's Little League operations, Getz was acting as the assistant to the administrator in charge of district tournaments. In 1965, however, he removed himself from the local organization to become the district administra-

In his limited spare time, Getz was compelled to start new leagues. About 15 to 18 years ago, he started a program for 1618 year olds in Grosse Pointe and Harper Woods.

"I had sons going into that age group at the time, but more importantly, I wanted to give kids more opportunities to play ball," Getz said. "I saw so many kids that wanted to continue to play, but couldn't because the leagues weren't offered.'

Much to his surprise, the leagues went belly up approximately five years later.

"It's sort of a mystery," he said. "There were a lot of factors why, I'm sure, but the biggest thing I think is that the parents weren't very involved. In order to have successful programs, we need the family tradition behind the programs."

Art Jr., who coaches an instructional team in Farmington Hills, and Mike, who coaches an instructional team in the Pointes, are both following in their father's footsteps. Art Jr. smile on their faces. I think Lit-

"I'd like to think I played a part in all that," said Getz. "All I ever wanted to do was share with everyone - what I've experienced. My family had the great experience of playing and participating in the program, and now it's nice to see them giving something back."

Speaking of giving something back. The Getzes get plenty of return on their investment. Through the years they have attended birthday parties, graduation parties and weddings of once callow ball players.

"It's nice to be remembered by some of the former players," Getz said. "When we see them, Sheila and I still see the same tle League teaches great things that stay with kids throughout their life."

By his own admission, Getz figures that being around the 9-12 year-old ball players keeps his 71-year-old body and mind

"My heart and soul is with the younger kids," he said. "That's not to say I don't like being with the older kids. It's just that I've been involved with the younger ones so long that it would be hard to move up."

How about moving out?

"Well, I have two years left as district administrator," Getz said. "I like to do things where people are happy and satisfied. Little League has made me happy and left me satisfied, but it's a good possibility that I may retire. Then again, I think I'd give up something else before I'd give up Little League baseball."

GPYC swimmers finish undefeated season

The Grosse Pointe Yacht Club (GPYC) swim team ended its season with a perfect record again - after beating Oakland Hills Country Club, 566-417, and 578-397. It was the 13th consecutive year that GPYC finished unbeaten in dual meets. Against Oakland Hills, the winning boys' medley relay consisted of Kile Zeller, Eric De-

the Grosse Ile Country Club,

Meulemeester, Jon Sieber and Matt Kirchner. In the 8-and-under medley relay, Joe Hanley, Anne Follis, Alexis Kirchner and Paul Rashid placed first. Ted Stedem was in great form and took first place in the 50-meter breaststroke, 50-meter butterfly and 50-meter freestyle.

Other first-place ribbons were awarded to Heather Olson, Dana Mertz, C.T. Brown, Kathryn Tusa, Pat Kirchner and Lauren Kordas for their performance in the breaststroke events.

Suzanne Toledo, Katie Tompkins, Brenn Schoenherr and Chris Kean took blue ribbons in the backstroke. In the butterfly, Shera Teitge and Ashley Moran came in first, and John Mc-Lellan, Susan Cornillie and Katie Thompson earned blue ribbons in freestyle events.

In the meet against Grosse Ile, the girls' medley relay team of Suzanne Toledo, Dana Mertz, Ashley Moran and Courtenay Youngblood took first place.

Swimmers performing well in the backstroke were Megan Moran, Kelly Huetteman, Drew Bossler, Rebecca Murray, Scott

Gregory, Kathleen Storen and brothers Chris and Craig Gauss. Jeanine, Jamie and Jackie Taylor received ribbons in both the back and freestyle events. Strong performances were turned in by Emily Brennan, Ben Debski and Lindsay Youngblood in the but-

Swarthout, Morrow sail in finals

Sonny Swarthout and Sarah Morrow, both Laser boat sailors from the Grosse Pointe Yacht Club, sailed in the National Finals of the United States Junior Women's Sailing Championships Aug. 5-10.

Swarthout and Morrow, who will be representing the Detroit River Yachting Association (DRYA), earned the right to attend the nationals in Gulfport, Miss., after collecting 10-3/4 points in the series of races in Laser dinghies on Lake St. Clair July 12.

Other medal winners in the local singlehanded regatta included Sarah Deeds (18-3/4 points) from Crescent Sail Yacht Club, Joanne Davies (15) of Grosse Pointe Club, and Amy Gmeiner (14 3/4) of Pointe Yacht Club.

Kay Baubie organized the event and Ted Dickson was the race chairman. Lynn Stedman Jr., Michael Thompson and Debbie Schoenherr were the judges.

The perpetual trophy and medals the sailors received were given by Bayview Yacht Club. Swarthout and Morrow will be competing for the Nancy Leiter Clagett Trophy, with the winner

Hypertension can be a silent killer

By Susan Walthall, MSN, RN

High blood pressure or hyper-

tension is the most common car- brain and kidney. diovascular disease in the United States, affecting more than 60 million people.

Individuals with high blood pressure have an increased risk of developing a heart attack, stroke or kidney disease. Yet, because symptoms are often absent, many people do not know they have the disease.

Hypertension occurs most often without a known cause. It is diagnosed when there are three separate blood pressure readings of 140/90 or above, although some physicians feel that a pressure of up to 160/95 may be acceptable in the elderly.

When blood pressure is consistently high, artery walls stiffen and thicken, inviting a buildup of cholesterol, which reduces blood flow. Body organs most affected by this are the heart,

The degree of risk for having a heart attack is directly related to elevation in blood pressure. Symptoms are headache, dizziness, fatigue and nosebleeds; however, it is important to remember that hypertension is known as the silent killer because there are often no symptoms associated with the disease.

The primary treatment is medication. However, much of the success of controlled hypertension is dependent on the individual. For example, some of the drugs available can cause side effects such as fatigue, lightheadedness upon standing, and impotence. Discussing these or other suspected side effects with your doctor before discontinuing the drug is essential in order to find the best medication.

Diet is the next major consideration. Losing excess weight is important, since there appears to be a close relationship between weight, elevated cholesterol levels and blood pressure.

Excessive alcohol intake can also contribute to hypertension. The upper limits of an acceptable daily intake is one ounce of ethanol - equivalent to two ounces of 100-proof whiskey or eight ounces of wine or 24 ounces of beer.

Salt restriction has been found to lower blood pressure in people who seem to be sensitive to sodium. The goal for these people is to limit intake to 1,500-2,000 milligrams of sodium (4,000-6,000 milligrams of salt) per day.

Since much dietary salt comes from prepared foods, it is important to read sodium labeling on foods. The dietary recommendations can be very difficult to fol-

Cigarette smoking is the most important preventable cause of coronary heart disease in the United States, with smokers ciation or the American Cancer having twice the risk of nonsmokers for developing heart dis-

High blood pressure is often more severe and more difficult to control in smokers. In addition, it is not clear that controlling hypertension in smokers reduces the risk of having a heart attack, stroke or kidney disease.

Effects of smoking include decreased blood to the heart, irregular heart beats and clotting of blood. These effects are reversed when smoking is stopped. It has > Regular exercise can contribute to weight control and stress reduction and can therefore be helpful in blood pressure control. Check with your doctor first.

Blood pressure should be checked every one to two years. Many businesses have employee health clinics that will check blood pressure upon request. Public health departments are also open to perform blood pressure measurement.

manufacturing of three of these neurotransmitters (there are at least 30) - dopamine, norepinephrine and serotonin — is influenced by the food we eat.

The amino acid tyrosine stimulates the production of dopamine and norepinephrine, which are known as the "alertness" chemicals. Judith Wurtman, in her book, "Your Mind and Mood Through Food," asserts that when the brain produces dopamine and norepinephrine, people feel mentally energetic. They become more attentive, think more clearly and react more rapidly. The best way to increase the

Some excellent sources of protein are shellfish, skinless chicken, veal, very lean beef, eggs (but no more than three yolks a week), low-fat cheese, skim or low-fat milk or yogurt, beans, lentils, tofu and other soybean foods. Only three to four ounces of these foods is all that it takes to begin the complex process that manufactures these chemicals.

The neurotransmitter serotonin, known as the "calming" chemical, decreases alertness, hastens the onset of sleep, desupply of these neurotrans creases appetite (especially for mitters is to eat protein-rich carbohydrates) and diminishes pain sensitivity. The presence of effective serotonin producers the amino acid tryptophan stimulates the production of serotonin, but because tryptophan is one of the more scarce amino acids, protein consumption actually interferes with its production by crowding it out.

Therefore, the best way to allow tryptophan entrance into the brain is to eat foods that entirely lack protein, such as carbohydrates. The digestion of carbohydrates stimulates the secretion of insulin, which in turn forces all don't wait for an explanation other amino acids from the bloodstream, but leaves tryptophan alone.

An interesting sidelight is that milk, which is high in protein and often thought of as a natural tranquilizer, will not increase the production of sleep-inducing serotonin because it contains a small amount of tryptophan relative to other amino acids.

Low-calorie carbohydrates are as effective as high-calorie, highfat choices. While fresh fruits and vegetables are healthful, vitamin-rich foods that should be eaten every day, they are less than other foods. Better choices include potatoes, popcorn or a corn or bran muffin.

There is no doubt that foods we eat affect our behavior. But the human body is very complex, and there is a complexity of variables governing our health and our moods.

It is important to observe your personal reaction to the foods you eat. If you get a headache every time you eat chocolate, from science before you change your ways.

By staying in tune with your body and being aware of your food choices and how those choices affect you, you can make nutritional decisions that will enhance your health and lifestyle.

To help you find optimum physical and mental health, choose a well-balanced diet, including all the nutrients, selecting fresh unprocessed fruits and vegetables, whole grains, lean sources of protein, and drink eight glasses of water a day.

Exercise can help reduce high triglyceride levels

Besides dietary changes and weight loss, regular aerobic exercise is one of the most effective ways to lower dangerous levels of triglycerides, according to the National Exercise for Life Insti-

"New data show that triglycerides are an independent risk factor for heart disease," said Dr. mally high triglyceride level is William Castelli, director of the Framingham Heart Study. Triglycerides are lipids or fatty molecules, the largest of the blood's oily particles. Formed in the liver from the fats you eat, or from your body's synthesis of internal fat, they are composed of three long strings of fatty acids attached to a sugar molecule.

Triglycerides are also known as very low-density lipoproteins which, along with low-density lipoproteins, make up the "bad" cholesterol in the blood. Recent research has shown that these are the blood fats that cause the

United Way, MichCon hold run

Michigan Consolidated Gas Company (MichCon) and the United Way of Southeastern Michigan invite runners, joggers and walkers in the tri-county area to the first United Way Torch Drive Run/Walk on Sept. 17 in Detroit.

The event offers a 5K run and walk, a 10K run, and a 400-meter children's run.

Kicking off the event on Sunday, will be the 5K run (3.1 miles) at 9 a.m. The 5K walk begins at 9:05 a.m., with the 10K run at 10 a.m. and the children's run at 11:30 a.m.

"This event is not a fundraiser for the United Way," said Lewis Barr, MichCon director for human relations and event spokesman. "It is an opportunity for southeastern Michigan families, individuals and organizations to get involved in a fun activity for the United Way Torch Drive."

The course begins at the MichCon Guardian Building (Griswold and Congress) and ends in Hart Plaza. The Motor City Striders, one of America's pre-eminent running organizations, is organizing the event.

Entry fees are $8 for adults and $3 for children age 12-andunder, if entries are postmarked no later than Sept. 17. Late registration, with fees increasing to $10 and $5, respectively, will be accepted on the 17th in Hart Plaza. PRAYER TO THE

HOLY SPIRIT

Holy Spirit, you who make me see everything and who shows me the way to reach my ideal. You who give me the Divine Gift to forgive and forget the wrong that is done to me and you who are in all instances of my life with me. I, in this short dia-

State Cup finalists

The Pointe Girls Soccer Association was well represented in the recently concluded State Cup Finals.

After beating the Livonia Hawks (3-0) in the semifinals, the U-12 Mustangs of the Little Caesars Premier League, were defeated by the Hawks, 5-0, in the finals.

Standouts for the Mustangs were goalie Rebecca Hessen, right wing Robyn Maples, striker Maureen Zolik and sweeper Lauren Kordas. The defense was anchored by Laura Somogyi. Amanda Hanley, Joanna Catalfio and Kathy Storen. Halfback play was handled by Laurie Ness, Kim Hepner, Emily Grenzke and Robyn Dold. Forwards and strikers were Molly Mc-Kenzie, Tere Chevalier, Shera Teitge, Carey King and Maggie Durant. Assistant coaches were John Somogyi an Bob Chevalier.

Tourney champs!

Girls, aged 14 and under from the Grosse Pointe Mustangs and East Detroit Express, teamed up to win the Wolverines Soccer Tournament during the Fourth of July weekend.

The team, coached by Stuart Dow and Jim Nickens, advanced to the finals after beating the Livonia Hawks, 3-0, in a semifinal match. The finals against the Beechmont Bombers of Cincinnati went into double overtime before the Pointe Express team nailed down the win with α goal with under one minute to play.
