

Local Coast Guard official assists in Valdez cleanup

By John Minnis
Assistant Editor

Exxon is doing an exemplary job in the cleanup of the most devastating and expensive oil spill in U.S. history, according to one local Coast Guard environmental expert who spent time at Prince William Sound.

Lt. Cmdr. Clay Evans, executive officer of the Detroit Coast Guard's Marine Safety Office at the foot of Mount Elliott, returned from Alaska last week after spending four weeks as assistant federal coordinator of the cleanup.

Evans, 39, a Grosse Pointe Park resident and 14-year veteran with the Coast Guard, had nothing but praise for how the major oil company has responded to the March 24 spill of 11 million gallons of crude oil from the Exxon Valdez tanker that ran aground on a reef well outside the shipping lanes in the sound.

He said Exxon has already spent $1.3 billion on the cleanup and has fielded 11,000 workers along the 1,300 miles of affected shoreline. Together with the Exxon cleanup workers, there have been 240 Coast Guard personnel and some 500 representatives from an alphabet soup of various governmental agencies.

During his four weeks in Alaska, Evans coordinated cleanup efforts, wrote reports to the Coast Guard commandant in Washington, D.C., and briefed various governmental officials, both bureaucrats and members of Congress.

Though Evans has worked on many oil spills, his first being in Puerto Rico, he was unprepared for what he was to see in Alaska. He said the teenagers' phrase "totally awesome" best describes Alaska. He described the mess he found along Prince William Sound as "an environmental disaster of national proportions."

Despite the enormity of the disaster, Evans came home optimistic that America's "last frontier" will recover, that it has not been irreversibly destroyed.

"I've got a lot of respect for nature and its ability to take care of itself," said Evans, who has a master's degree in environmental management from the University of Michigan. "It will come back. I don't want to diminish that it was an environmental tragedy, but there are signs it's bouncing back."

Of the 1,300 miles of oil-contaminated shoreline, 900 have been cleaned, Evans said. But winter is coming fast along the isolated coast, which means cleanup efforts will come to a standstill soon — Sept. 15, in fact.

Amid speculation and public outrage that Exxon will abandon the cleanup in September, Evans said continuing cleanup efforts will be required throughout the winter, weather permitting, and in the spring. Evans believes Exxon will be there in the spring to finish the job.

Exxon has fielded six task forces, or teams, to handle the cleanup. Those who worked on the actual shoreline were soldiers on the "battlefield," Evans said. Many techniques were used to remove oil from the coastline; some were traditional methods, while others were developed to meet the special Alaskan challenges.

Music in the woods

These benches in the bowl at Interlochen Music Camp are empty now, but last Sunday they were filled with lovers of the arts as the campers presented their traditional summer-ending show "Les Preludes." More than 7,000 people watched the event which included nearly all the students at the camp. For the story and more photos, see page 12A.

Farms woman hit, killed by semi-truck in Mack-Moross lot

By John Minnis
Assistant Editor

A 78-year-old Grosse Pointe Farms woman died Aug. 18 after being hit by a semi-trailer truck and dragged nearly 58 feet in the parking lot at Mack and Moross.

Brigida Catalano of Moran Road died at 3:16 p.m. in the emergency room at St. John Hospital from massive internal injuries and an open-skull fracture as a result of the accident that occurred at about 2:41 p.m.

According to police reports, the truck's driver, Joel Garcia, 31, of Detroit, had just finished dropping off merchandise at the A.L. Price loading docks at the rear of the store facing the parking lot when he pulled forward out of the loading area and struck the woman.

Garcia told police he "felt a dragging sensation" and thought one of his brakes was sticking. He pushed a brake button, but the dragging persisted. He then heard a horn blowing. He looked around and didn't see anyone at first, and then he noticed a man in an armored car ahead of him and to his left motioning for him to stop.

Garcia then got out of the truck and looked in front and found the woman. One witness said the woman had just walked in front of the truck when Garcia began moving forward. The woman was struck, knocked down and dragged 57 feet, 11 inches, according to police measurements.

In order to check the driver's visibility from the truck, a police officer sat behind the steering wheel while another officer walked in front of the truck. The officer behind the wheel could barely see the top of the 6-foot officer's head when he was in front of the truck.

When police arrived the woman was laying on her back in front of the truck. Farms emergency medical technicians began administering cardiopulmonary resuscitation and the woman was rushed to St. John Hospital.

The victim's wooden cane was found on the pavement behind the truck.

According to police, Garcia has a clean record and he did not appear to have consumed any alcohol before the accident occurred. No charges have been filed against the truck driver.

A Michigan State Police accident reconstructionist is investigating the incident.

Following the accident, police notified the woman's son, Jasper Catalano. A widow at the time of her death, the victim had been married to Gaspar Catalano.

She was born in Italy. Funeral services were held Tuesday at St. Philomena Catholic Church in Detroit. Interment was at Mount Olivet Cemetery in Detroit.

And he will be there with his Model T, no doubt about that.

"I've owned the car since 1926," Lange said. "I bought it from the original owner."

So his love for this car is not new, but his passion to have a perfect example of this remarkable automobile is relatively new. For most of his life, while he was acquiring his education at the University of Illinois and at the University of Minnesota, the car sat in storage.

Lange pursued his career as a plastic surgeon, one of the earlier practitioners of this specialty. During that career, he served in the Army, conducted a busy practice in Detroit and during the '60s and early '70s played an important role in the valuable auto crash research conducted at Wayne State University.

Park's kids raise money for Jerry's kids

By Ronald J. Bernas
Staff Writer

When a group of Grosse Pointe Park kids got bored with summer a few weeks ago, they decided to have a garage sale.

They presented the idea to their moms who thought: Good idea, but let's give the money to a charity.

And what better charity to give money to at the end of summer than the Muscular Dystrophy Association, which is gearing up for its annual Labor Day telethon.

"We all have our pet charities and MDA is ours," said Robin Missant, who along with her friends volunteers each year to answer telephones. "The kids watch the telethon every year and they love Jerry Lewis, too."

The kids, Al, James and Charles Missant, Denny Ignagni and Anne Johnson scoured their toy boxes, basements and garages.

Their parents spent hours pricing the items (some of which were donated by Palmer Video in Grosse Pointe City).

Then the night before, they popped and bagged eight pounds of popcorn so that they were ready for customers.

"They were real good about it," Missant said.

"They didn't just pick items they didn't like, they picked toys they still play with, and neighbors dropped off baby clothes. Everybody has been so nice."

At the end of the two days, they had surpassed the $200 goal the MDA had set for them, and they even passed the $500 goal they had set for themselves. When all the receipts were counted, the kids had collected $639.58 for Jerry's kids.

"We're just thrilled," Missant said.

Her son, Al, spoke for the rest of the kids: "It's nice to help MDA. We want to give because we have a lot. We're lucky."

And so are Jerry's kids.

These five kids donated their toys, comic books and stuffed animals, among other things to raise money for the Muscular Dystrophy Association. Their garage sale last week brought in more than $600. They are, from left, James Missant, Al Missant, Denny Ignagni, Anne Johnson and Charles Missant.

State Police continue to investigate ballots

By Dan Jarvis
Staff Writer

Results from the Aug. 8 Farms municipal judge primary election remain in question as Michigan State Police continue to investigate several absentee ballots.

As reported last week, a press conference was called by Wayne County Clerk James Killeen the day before the election. Killeen said the wife of candidate Paul Gracey had improperly handled absentee ballots by illegally obtaining them from City Hall, delivering them to voters and dropping them back at City Hall.

State law prohibits a candidate or family member from taking absentee ballots to voters, using the ballots to solicit votes or delivering them to a polling place. Mrs. Gracey was given the ballots by a city employee.

Killeen, a supporter of one of the other candidates, will not comment on why the press conference was called the day before the primary or who made the original complaint.

State Police Inspector Gerald Johnson said interviews are being conducted with some of the absentee voters to determine how the ballots were handled.

Of the total 1,789 votes cast, 115 are absentee ballots. Incumbent Municipal Judge Matthew Rumora led the field with 1,034 votes, with Gracey coming in second with 308.

If the absentee ballots are discounted, candidate Eugene Casazza would edge over Gracey by 10 votes and join Rumora on the November ballot.

Casazza, a next-door neighbor and contributor to Killeen's last bid for county clerk, also would not comment on allegations that the press conference was called to discredit Gracey's candidacy for municipal judge.

The Grosse Pointe News filed a Freedom of Information request Aug. 9 with Killeen's office, asking for all documents relating to the primary election.

Killeen responded by sending

articles from The Detroit News, Detroit Free Press and Grosse Pointe News along with the original press release alerting local media to the allegations about Mrs. Gracey.

Johnson, overseeing detectives in the investigation, said last week that when police complete their investigation, the final report will be turned over to the Wayne County prosecutor, who will decide if charges will be brought against Mrs. Gracey.

As of Monday, Aug. 21, both agencies were waiting for the final report to be completed before commenting. No time frame or schedule for completing the investigation was given.

Richard Solak, Farms city clerk, said the city's board of election canvassers were scheduled to meet Tuesday, Aug. 22 to perform an audit of the vote count. He said aside from the possibility of an illegal vote, the number of votes match with city tallies and election results are ready to be certified.

Solak said board members are unsure whether to certify the election results until the State Police have completed their investigation. The deadline to certify the results was Aug. 22.

Solak said the board is being careful not to second-guess the State Police, but they must meet their duty of deciding whether the numbers can be certified.

If the State Police recommend that charges be brought, then the election results would rest in the hands of the prosecutor. If no charges are to be brought, Johnson said, Killeen would have final authority to determine whether absentee votes will be counted.

Bradley Whittman, of the Michigan Elections Bureau, said the law is not clear on who or what body makes the final determination in an election laced with impropriety and allegation.

He said a local board of canvassers would determine whether the votes were tallied correctly or if the voting machines worked properly. Whittman said the board of canvasser's findings have little to do with police investigations where legality of votes are in question.

The law states that if the local board of canvassers does not certify the election by the deadline date, the issue is bounced up to the county's board of canvassers, Whittman said.

Only a court order could strike down the recommendation of the local board. In this case, a recount election may have to be held before November, he said.

Park police assist Detroit in drug bust

Park police captured a suspected crack dealer after he fled on foot from Detroit police at about 8:55 p.m. Aug. 17.

When Detroit officers interrupted a drug deal on Marlborough, the suspected pusher dropped 30 rocks of suspected crack and fled on foot through back yards. Park patrol units watched Alter Road and when the suspect appeared, the Park officers made the arrest after a short foot chase.

The suspect was turned over to Detroit officers.

Cottage doctor proposes advanced EMS for Pointes

By John Minnis
Assistant Editor

The head of Cottage Hospital's emergency room has proposed an advanced emergency medical system to serve all five Grosse Pointes.

McMillin

Dr. Michael McMillin vocalized his plans before the Grosse Pointe Farms City Council Aug. 14 while presenting the city with an automatic defibrillator, which was donated by Cottage Hospital.

The automatic defibrillator is used by emergency medical technicians to get a cardiac arrest patient's heart beating regularly.

McMillin has two plans through which an advanced cardiac life support emergency medical system can be provided throughout the Pointes. Currently, only Grosse Pointe Woods offers the advanced EMS.

One plan calls for the existing advanced life support system to serve the Woods and the Shores, with a second advanced EMS rig staffed at the Grosse Pointe City fire hall to serve the Farms, City and Park.

All the existing basic life support rigs would be maintained at the Park, Farms and Shores for quick initial response and exclusively for calls that clearly do not require advanced EMTs, who are properly called paramedics.

Both the advanced and basic ambulances would be able to transport patients to whichever of the Pointes' three hospitals is closest or desired by the patient.

McMillin's second ALS plan calls for an advanced rig and paramedics based at Cottage Hospital. McMillin calls this second plan the hospital-based system because Cottage would purchase the ALS ambulance and hire the paramedics. When not on runs, the Cottage paramedics would work in the hospital's emergency room.

The cities using the hospital-based system — most likely the Farms, City and Park — would pay a fee to Cottage Hospital for providing the advanced service, including equipment and paramedics. The cities would continue to maintain their own basic EMS.

If an advanced rig was placed at the City's fire house, then the longest possible run would be to the Farms' northern tip on Mack, about a 2-1/2 mile run, which could be made in about five minutes. Of course the Farms' basic ambulance would also respond much quicker for initial CPR, oxygen and defibrillation.

If paramedics are stationed at Cottage Hospital, the farthest run would be to Windmill Pointe, the Park's southern-most tip. That run would be about 2-3/4 miles and could be made in a little over five minutes. Again, the Park's basic EMTs, who are also equipped with an automatic defibrillator, would be at the scene until the paramedics arrived.

If the Woods were to provide advanced EMS for the Shores, the farthest run would be about 2-1/4 miles to the county line at Lake St. Clair.

Under both of McMillin's plans, Grosse Pointe Shores would get advanced EMS from Grosse Pointe Woods while maintaining its current basic EMS. The Woods may benefit by having Shores taxpayers share in the more than $200,000 it pays annually to maintain an advanced life support system.

The costs for advanced EMS would most likely have to be borne by property owners through a special millage assessment.

Based on the Woods' roughly $200,000 a year to support its advanced EMS, McMillin estimates it will cost about $6.50 per person per year to provide paramedic service in the Farms, City and Park.

"You can't even go out to dinner for what it would cost for paramedics," McMillin said.

"A paramedic system is what's really needed for the Grosse Pointes. It really provides the best level of service, and if we can share the cost it can be financially viable."

Based on state equalized evaluation figures of the various Grosse Pointes, the Grosse Pointe News has made rough calculations of what it would cost taxpayers in each of the cities to support advanced ambulance service.

A special assessment of a 1/4-mill property tax for Farms, City and Park would raise the $200,000 for advanced EMS and would cost the taxpayer of a $200,000 home $25 a year. Of course, the $200,000 annual advanced EMS budget does not include annual start-up costs, such as a new ambulance and equipment.

If the Woods and Shores were to share the existing advanced EMS in the Woods, then it would cost the taxpayers in those two cities a little more per person than the Farms-City-Park system. The higher cost per person is because the $200,000 operating cost of a paramedic system is being split over a smaller tax base.

Woods taxpayers, however, are already paying a special 1/2-mill tax just for advanced EMS. If Shores taxpayers were to share the cost, then the EMS tax could be reduced to about 1/3 mill, thus saving Woods residents a little in taxes and making paramedics available in the Shores.

If each of the cities wanted to fund its own paramedic service, then it would cost the owner of a $200,000 home in the Farms $53 a year and in the Park and City, $45. The Park provides EMS for the City as well. The Shores

Cottage Hospital officials donated an automatic defibrillator to the city of Grosse Pointe Farms last week. Taking part in the presentation outside the emergency entrance of the hospital are, from left, Ann Burns, administrator of diagnostic and outpatient services; Farms Public Safety Director Robert Ferber; Dr. Michael McMillin, emergency room director; Farms Mayor Joseph Fromm; and Gregory Vasse, Cottage chief executive officer.

Cottage Hospital donates defibrillator

Cottage Hospital donated an automatic defibrillator to the Public Safety Department of Grosse Pointe Farms last week.

The presentation was made at the Farms City Council meeting Aug. 14 by Dr. Michael McMillin, who is head of Cottage's emergency room.

The defibrillator, a Heartstart 1000, is designed to read a heart attack victim's vital signs and, if necessary, provide the patient with an electric shock to get the heart out of ventricular fibrillation.

The Heartstart 1000 is completely automatic. All the specially trained basic emergency medical technician has to do is apply the patches and stand back. By getting the heart beating regularly, the defibrillator can increase a cardiac arrest patient's chances of survival up to five times.

The defibrillator, which costs about $6,000, not including accessories, was donated to the Farms as a community service, according to Gregory Vasse, Cottage's chief executive officer.

Vasse said the hospital is an advocate of advanced life support for the Grosse Pointes. He said the hospital's donation of the automatic defibrillator to the Farms is part of the Cottage's and the city's ongoing efforts to improve emergency medical service.

The Farms, Park and Shores have basic life support. The addition of an automatic defibrillator to basic EMS increases the level of care the EMTs can provide heart attack victims.

The Park purchased two of the Heartstart 1000s and has already had to use them. Grosse Pointe Shores is also looking into getting a defibrillator.

According to Farms Public Safety Director Robert Ferber, about a dozen EMTs will be trained in October to use the automatic defibrillator. After the EMTs have received the six hours of training, they will be able to put the defibrillator in service.

The EMTs will be trained by McMillin, who is serving the Farms' medical director. The EMTs also have to take refresher training every three months.

Battle opens over 2 votes on school aid

Battle lines already are forming to win support for or defeat the two school reform referenda that will be on the statewide ballot in November.

At issue are two referenda: Proposal A calls for a half-cent increase in the state sales tax with the proceeds, an estimated $400 million, to boost state aid; and Proposal B proposes a 2-cent sales tax increase to add an estimated $350 million to $400 million to state aid and, at the same time, provide an estimated 17 percent cut in property taxes for most businesses and homeowners.

The early listing of organizations taking sides emphasizes the extent of the division over the two proposals. The Detroit Free Press editorially prefers Proposal B but backs both and The Detroit News apparently opposes both.

The Promote Michigan Education Committee backs Proposal A and opposes Proposal B, while the Michigan Municipal League and the Michigan Association of School Boards endorse Proposal B but do not oppose Proposal A. The Michigan Education Association has endorsed Proposal A. The Michigan State Chamber of Commerce opposes both, while the Greater Detroit Chamber will withhold support from both until legislators require reforms for all school districts.

Gov. James Blanchard favors Proposal B while his expected Republican opponent in 1990, GOP Senate Majority Leader John Engler, now opposes both. Engler once voted for putting the 2-cent sales tax hike on the ballot but now claims credit for a compromise that boosted K-12 budget spending that he feels satisfies the demand for higher school aid.

But Engler hasn't convinced all of his Senate colleagues he's on the right track. Ten GOP senators last week announced their support for Proposal B which Engler once supported.

Each of the proposals also requires a core curriculum, school improvement plans, accreditation and an annual report by each school board to the local community. Beyond those matters, however, the two proposals diverge.

Proposal A supporters claim their plan also specifies the use of the new state funds for pre-school support, computers in the classrooms, drug-free schools, drop-out prevention, educational extension service, a student improvement fund, professional development and an improved science, math and technology curriculum.

They also warn of what they regard as disadvantages of Proposal B such as a 14-mill statewide property tax on businesses and a 9-mill statewide property tax on residential property. They also contend that some homeowners would get as much as a 25 percent property tax cut while others might not get any, depending on current spending levels of the local school district.

Yet the Michigan Municipal League, which backs Proposal B, estimates that the

2-cent plan "will provide an average one-third reduction in homeowner school taxes." It adds that the plan is not perfect but is "the only proposal that will put a permanent cap on school operating tax rates and reduce school taxes in almost all cities and villages."

Rep. William R. Bryant Jr. of Grosse Pointe, who serves on the Taxation Committee of the House, opposes both proposals on the grounds they would limit the local district's ability to run its own schools and to provide the local financing required.

On the basis of all this testimony, both proposals face an uphill fight for approval. Taxpayers have turned down many other tax-hike proposals in recent years and while Proposal B also calls for an offsetting property tax cut, it does not appear to be winning as much support as Proposal A. A State Chamber of Commerce poll last spring showed 65 percent of the respondents opposed the tax switch the proposal would require.

The Grosse Pointe News currently tends to oppose both proposals on the grounds Rep. Bryant cites. We might be persuaded, however, to support one of the two plans if it could be proved to our satisfaction that one of them would actually close the gap in per pupil spending between the poorer and wealthier districts around the state without penalizing districts like Grosse Pointe.

New questions about primary

More questions appear to have been raised than answered by the response of the Wayne County clerk's office to a Freedom of Information inquiry lodged by the Grosse Pointe News in an effort to obtain more facts about the controversial primary election in the Farms on Aug. 8.

The response comprised of copies of news stories from The Detroit News, the Detroit Free Press and the Grosse Pointe News about the controversy over the absentee ballots circulated for the primary, plus a press release issued by Wayne County Clerk James Killeen the day before the election explaining that he had called for an investigation by the State Police after receiving a complaint alleging "irregularities" in the primary.

The complaint to Killeen apparently alleged that the wife of one of the municipal judge candidates, Paul C. Gracey, improperly acquired absentee ballots, took them with her while seeking votes and promised to return them to the city clerk's office.

Mrs. Gracey said she had been offered the absentee ballots by employees of the Farms after she had picked up several applications from her neighbors and delivered them to City Hall. She said she was given absentee ballots for people she didn't know and returned them to the office. She also said she didn't know she was breaking the law.

The letter from Steven T. Kelley, deputy county clerk, in response to the News' Freedom of Information inquiry, marked the first time the Grosse Pointe News had received the clerk's press release and, indeed, the first response this newspaper had received from his office despite numerous telephone calls seeking more information about the inquiry.

But the information still did not cover the source of the complaint, which should have been included under Freedom of Information regulations if it was a formal, recorded complaint that prompted the investigation. If the complaint was made verbally and no written record made of it, then the State Police seems to be making an investigation without a written complaint. That, too, would appear to be unusual.

The press release is itself unclear about whether the clerk received one or more complaints. In the first sentence, he refers to his receipt of "a complaint alleging irregularities" in the Farms primary but later he says "the complaints made to me." Was there more than one? We don't know.

Since no record was provided to us of any written complaint or complaints, nor any written record of a request by the clerk's office for an investigation by the State Police, nor any written communication with the city of Grosse Pointe Farms about these matters, the investigation so far seems to be proceeding on the basis of oral discussions, presumably telephone conversations, between the clerk and the State Police and between the clerk and the Farms office staff.

It all appears to be a strange way to run what purports to be a serious investigation into irregularities into the Farms judicial primary.

In view of Mrs. Gracey's admissions, there is little doubt she did distribute both applications and absentee ballots, but apparently did so without knowing she was violating the law. Ignorance of the law never is an excuse, of course, but our concern is that the investigation be fair to all parties concerned. To make that determination, we require more information than we have been able to obtain to date.

Meanwhile, the results of the State Police investigation and the outcome of the primary election are still unknown. The results of the election may not be certified until after the State Police makes its report on the investigation.

The complaint about the handling of the absentee ballots is important because the unofficial results, including the contested absentee ballots, gave the incumbent, Judge Matthew Rumora, the top position in the election, with Gracey second, Eugene Casazza third and Richard Roosen fourth. Without the absentee ballots, Casazza would become the second nominee and run against Rumora in November.

Press freedom flickers out

Freedom of the press, which seemed to be permitted in China within strict limits for several months earlier this year, now has apparently flickered out.

The People's Daily, the Communist Party newspaper, last week reminded Chinese news organizations of their responsibility to concentrate on Marxist ideas, not on confusing readers with discussions about press freedom.

The Communist daily warned that during the student protests in May and June the ideal of press freedom had been used to "cook up rumors and instigate attacks on the party and the people." It reminded the news organizations that "freedom of the press, like other forms of democracy and liberties, is relative and not absolute."

For the Chinese students and some of the Chinese news people who had been reaching out for freedom, it is clear that the current government leadership has reverted to Communist practice not only to propagate Marxism but to tell its big lies about what happened during the student uprising.

So even though many Chinese citizens, including many Chinese newsmen, saw what happened during the demonstrations, they are now told by their government that the People's Liberation Army never fired on the students, only a few "thugs" and "hooligans" were involved and those responsible were "counter-revolutionaries" backed by foreign interests, including some from the United States.

It may take some time but we think there still is hope that the voice of freedom once more will be heard in China and the students' aim to liberalize and democratize their government will be achieved.

Home-school issue

To the Editor:

I am writing, by the insistence of more than just a few people, to respond to the woman who suggested that "anyone" could home school their children, including drug addicts imposing their views on their children and to the extent of calling this "child abuse."

While I am sure there are children being taught by less than "qualified" parents, we must remember that this country was founded on the principle of freedom.

There is, in existence, at least one publication that I am aware of, that provides, in catalog form, resources available to home learners, "The Big Book of Home Learning," (Crossway Books, Westchester, Ill. 60153) and there are most likely other publications similar to this one in circulation. There is also a great deal of curriculum available from very reputable learning institutions; the scope and sequence of which exceed that of the public schools by at least a year. In addition to these, there are professional organizations that provide guidance, administrative and legal assistance to home schoolers.

Besides the fact of the obvious inadequacies found in today's public school system, research proves that children can learn far better outside the peer pressure, drug abuse and hostile environments found in most schools today. When tested, these home-schooled children have shown genius level results in specific areas of study, time and time again.

When examining the home school issue it would probably be more objective to look at the track record rather than concentrating on the isolated instances of misuse, misunderstanding, or exploitation of our constitutionally guaranteed right of freedom as it applies to educating our children.

Thank you for printing the other side of the home school issue.

Drunk driving rules a joke

To the Editor:

It is no wonder that the citizens in the tri-county area think our drunk driving rules and drug related offenses are a joke. We have recently had three cases that have been very prominent in the media both local and out of state and considered very, very serious offenses of the drunk driving laws of our state and our community. I am referring to Mr. Dutko, Mr. Probert and Mr. Klima.

Students Against Driving Drunk and Mothers Against Drunk Driving must feel very frustrated. How can you expect students, athletes or the youth of our communities to pay any attention to your laws or the threat of punishment. You have Mr. Dutko with his drunk driving record. He is finally caught, he finds religion (so to speak), and is remorseful until he realized he was not going to get his sentence changed or lessened. He, therefore, has reneged on his promises. The more things change

The song "Is a Puzzlement" from the classic Rogers and Hammerstein show "The King and I" begins with the following lines, spoken by the immortal Yul "Just Don't Smoke" Brynner:

*When I was a boy
World was better spot
What was so, was so
What was not, was not.
Now I am a man
Things have changed a lot
Some things nearly so
Some things nearly not.*

The king laments the radical changes the world was going through in the mid-1860s. More than 120 years later, the song still rings true.

I spent a recent weekend learning how much things have changed, and how much they haven't.

I played nanny to my two nephews -- one nearly 2, and one 4 months -- while their parents went away for the weekend. I think I've recovered sufficiently to write about my experience.

It started with a nearly 10-page instruction manual written by my sister as to feeding habits, personalities and fun things to do with my wards. There was no glossary or index, however. But the last page, which started "To whom it may concern, Ronald J. Bernas has our permission to seek medical help for our children," and was signed by my sister and her husband, gave me a start.

So they left me with two kids, a battery of phone numbers "in case of any questions, or if you just need to talk to another adult," and a nervous stomach.

So I fed the kids and put them to bed. Easy.

While they were asleep, I read in the newspaper about the new possibilities for freeing the hostages and about a judge who was accused of taking bribes and of a police officer who was killed at a suspected crack house.

I Say

And I shook my head at the idiots who run the world because in that room were two tiny things, sleeping like innocents. (I knew they were sleeping because I got up every 10 minutes to make sure they were breathing.) And they would have to deal with things like this their whole lives.

Then they got up. And needed clean diapers. And wanted attention. And wanted more food. And wanted to play

And the older one wanted to help feed the younger one. And he laughed heartily when the little one burped.

So I put aside the paper and laid down on the floor and tossed the older one up and down, and he laughed and smiled and called for more.

The smaller one, hearing the laughter, smiled and cooed. So did I. There was a small feeling of joy when the three of us were laughing, and time went into slow motion, just for a moment.

Have you ever noticed how much effort people go to to make a baby smile? When do we stop trying to make people smile. Why do we stop?

I learned a few things that weekend. Not the least important was that even if you left the baby powder in the other room, don't leave an undiapered baby to go and get it. Especially don't leave one of those babies that has one of those little guns.

I also learned that even a 4-month-old who spends most of his waking hours staring off into space needs attention, and can respond to music and to laughter.

I re-learned a few things, too. Band-Aids still smell good, but the little strings that are supposed to help you open them still don't work. Graham crackers still leave those little mushy deposits in the corners of your mouth and a kiss on a banged knee can stop a pout in its tracks.

"The Cat in the Hat" and "Sam I Am" are still fun to read, and although I had once memorized the entire tweetle beetle battle thing the Fox in Sox taught the Knox, I had trouble saying it out loud. The audience wasn't demanding, but I wanted to get it right for him.

And when I shushed the children so I could hear about the latest allegations at the Department of Housing and Urban Development on the news and they shouted even louder, demanding my attention. When the 2-year-old turned off the television, probably because he just learned how, not because he didn't want to see the state of the world, and we went outside and the older child pointed out things he knew -- a tree, a hammock, a garage, a bird -- and I in turn showed them to the small bundle in my arms, I re-learned that a bird, and a hammock, and even a garage, are new and exciting to a child and that even the far-reaching effects of world events can't -- thank goodness -- touch this child's excitement.

And I re-learned that excitement is contagious. And nice.

July 24, 1958 --

The New York Times reported that Premier Nikita Khrushchev accepted Western proposals for a summit meeting on the Middle East within the framework of the U.N. Security Council. He said he was prepared to go to New York to begin negotiations. No date for the talks were set. The British were pleased with his acceptance and the French, hostile to the idea, were rethinking their views.

Secretary-General Dag Hammarskjöld drew up tentative plans under which the proposed summit meeting would be held behind closed doors.

The third Air Force missile to carry a mouse into space thundered from its pad. The tiny passenger was in an air-conditioned room.

Leaflets with a photo of President Eisenhower were dropped in Beirut, Lebanon by U.S. airplanes. The text, in Arabic, explained why American troops had been sent to the Middle Eastern country. It also asserted they would leave as soon as the U.N. took measures assuring the independence of Lebanon.

Contralto Marian Anderson was named by President Eisenhower as one of seven new members of the U.S. delegation to the 13th session of the U.N. General Assembly.

In Jordan, young King Hussein declared that the Iraqi government "must be punished" for acts during the revolution that overthrew and killed his cousin, King Faisal.

The Shah of Iran told members of the Parliament in Teheran that his policy of "positive nationalism" had achieved cordial relations with the Soviet Union and Western powers.

The U.S. controller general sharply criticized the army for having bought $20 million worth of faulty goods that were being distributed. The Army said it bought the anti-tank grenades on a rush basis from a farm in Belgium during the Korean War and had not had a chance to list them adequately.

In Grosse Pointe, the Grosse Pointe City Council approved a proposal to convert city-owned parking lots in the Village shopping area to attendant parking.

The Woods council approved the purchase of a radar unit to be used in traffic control, surveys and other purposes. The unit cost $1,907.

The Farms council tabled a proposed garbage disposal ordinance for further study. The city manager said the city was seeking a means of eliminating garbage pick-ups and an ordinance compelling the installation of a grinder or incinerator unit could solve the problem.

The first polio case of the season in Grosse Pointe was reported July 21. A 1-year-old Farms boy was diagnosed with infantile paralysis.

The Coast Guard rescued six Grosse Pointe teenagers whose boat sank in Lake St. Clair, about a mile off Lakeland. The boys were in the water for 90 minutes before they were pulled out.

Two Park firemen and a policeman assisted in the birth of a premature baby boy on Nottingham Road who weighed in at 3 pounds. Mother and baby were taken to Bon Secours Hospital and the police officer was given membership in the Stork Club by his colleagues in the department.

A five-room apartment on Beaconsfield near Jefferson was renting for $80 a month, including heat and a garage. An eight-room, tri-level house in Grosse Pointe Shores near the lake was selling for $61,000. A seven-room colonial in the Farms was listed at $42,500.

Penny Weadock was featured as Pointer of Interest. An archaeologist, she spent six months on a digging expedition in Iraq.

The Park police chief ordered officers to crack down on minors operating miniature autos on city sidewalks and streets. He warned that parents would have to go to court with their children. The vehicles, run with gasoline or electric power, are required to have a Michigan license and the operator must have a driver's license, he said.

Two mornings in a row they sighted an unusual finch-like bird with a kelly green tail.

They called the Audubon Society and learned that three other callers from Grosse Pointe had reported sighting a similar bird.

School board postpones library decision — again

By Ronald J. Bernas
Staff Writer

The Grosse Pointe Board of Education put off making a decision Aug. 14 on where, when and how to build a new community library until more information could be given to each board member.

On Aug. 7 the board discussed a request from the Library Building and Finance Committee to raise the $6 million cap on library expansion, because studies have shown that construction of a new library and renovation of the branches in Grosse Pointe Park and Grosse Pointe Woods could not be completed for less than that figure.

At Monday's meeting the board discussed a proposal by Superintendent John Whritner that the board raise the cap on the library to $8 million, and include in that figure all financing and site improvements.

The motion also asked for:
• the Library Building and Finance Committee to bring its recommendation for the site of the new library by the end of September so the board could take action in early October.

• Brownell to still be considered an option as a site for the new building.

• the board to develop another committee chaired by board member Vince LoCicero to recommend future use of Central Library, and

• private fundraising to begin to cover a minimum of $2 million of the project. The rest of the project would be paid for by a bond which would go before the voters.

According to Whritner, the project assumes three library buildings, which means a new, probably non-library, use must be found for the Breuer Building which now houses Central Library at 10 Kercheval.

Without much talk, the board acted on board member Carl D. Anderson's motion to table the matter and set a special meeting to discuss it.

Jon Gandelot, president, said he had hoped the board would be able to come to a decision soon, and not ask for any more studies.

"We have enough expert studies to sink a battleship," he said.

But another board member, Jane Nutter, welcomed the delay, saying the board has moved too easily off the $6 million cap, especially when it was so determined to stick to that figure.

"I feel we're being pushed to make a quick decision," she said.

Included in Whritner's recommendation was a tentative timeline which called for a study to be done to determine public support for a new library, and how much could be expected from a fundraising drive.

That timeline tentatively called for a bond issue vote in February 1991. The amount of the bond would be determined by how much could be raised privately.

The board will set a working meeting within two weeks and take action, perhaps at its Sept. 5 meeting.

Brownell keeps counselors; Parcels gets a part-timer

An administrative proposal to share counselors between Brownell and Parcels middle schools that met with parent outcry has been reversed.

Superintendent John Whritner said that Brownell will retain its two counselors and a half-time counselor will be added to the Parcels staff.

The proposal called for the sharing of one counselor between the two schools to make the student-to-counselor ratios more in line with each other.

Parcels, with two counselors, has a 317 to 1 ratio, and Brownell, with two counselors, has a 185 to 1 ratio.

Approximately 75 angry parents showed up at the July school board meeting to protest the action.

Brownell is one of the schools participating in the site-budgeting test program. Its budget was completed with the two counselors, and it was felt that the proposal to take away a counselor undermined the site-budgeting process.

Parents said they felt short-changed by the decision, because they had recently voted for the millage increase under the impression that they would feel no loss of programming.

In the new proposal, Brownell must give a little more than $4,000 back to the school district to help pay the salary of the part-time counselor.

"The parent protest had a little to do with the decision," Whritner said. "I have heard what that community was saying."

Whritner said he agreed with the parents when they felt the integrity of the site-budgeting process was damaged by the move.

He also said enrollment at the elementary level is coming in less than what was anticipated, which means money allocated for an extra teacher can be used to pay for the extra counselor.

In a letter to the board, Joan Coyle, president of the Brownell PTO, thanked Whritner for his decision and said, "We are confident that this mutual cooperative effort will continue to provide the excellence in education that the Grosse Pointe community consistently strives for."

Coyle said the PTO board will attempt to raise $3,200 this year through fundraisers, and come up with $1,000 more from the budget to pay its share of the counselor.

would have to assess its taxpayers 1-1.4 mills for its own $200,000 paramedic system, which means an extra $125 a year for the owner of a $200,000 home.

Each of the cities would also have to buy its own advanced ambulance and equipment.

McMillin is a member of the Detroit-East Medical Control Authority, the agency which oversees eastern Wayne County emergency medical services. He favors having full-time paramedics who do not have to split their time doing police and firefighting duties.

Currently, the public safety departments in the Pointes train police fire personnel to be EMTs or, in the Woods, paramedics. Sometimes paramedics in the Woods are trained to also be police officers and firefighters.

McMillin said he envisions hiring already trained paramedics whose only responsibility will be to provide the best emergency care possible.

"This is not meant to be a criticism of EMS personnel," said McMillin, adding that he's sure all the cities' EMTs work very hard to provide the best basic EMS possible.

"I think they do a good job, but as technology changes, we have to change with it."

McMillin said he has talked to public safety officials from all five Grosse Pointes. He said that while nothing has been decided, at least people have begun talking about advanced life support for all the Pointes.

"With any plan you draw up there are going to be obstacles," he said. "You just have to overcome the obstacles."

"I think if all the cities work together you can get the most cost-effective system."

McMillin, a Shores resident, grew up in Grosse Pointe City. During the past seven years he has worked in the emergency rooms at St. John, Bon Secours and Cottage hospitals.

"I have seen people come in who may have been saved if more advanced techniques had been used," he said.

As a lifelong Pointes resident, he wants the best emergency service available.

"We live in one of the most wealthy communities in the country," McMillin said. "Here in Grosse Pointe we have the resources and a population density in a well-defined geographic area to make a paramedic system work."

"Through a system like this, lives can be saved."

He said his concern and Cottage Hospital's concern is for the community. Even if Cottage were to be used under the hospital-based paramedic plan, McMillin said the hospital would be doing it as a community service.

'With any plan you draw up, there are going to be obstacles. You just have to overcome the obstacles.'

Dr. Michael McMillin
Cottage Hospital
Emergency room director

Cottage Hospital Chief Executive Officer Gregory Vasse said the hospital is an advocate of advanced life support for the Grosse Pointes. He said the hospital's donation of the automatic defibrillator to the Farms is part of Cottage's and the city's ongoing efforts to improve emergency medical service.

"The bottom line," McMillin said, "is if you're in your dining room and someone falls down with a heart attack, who do you want coming through the doors responding? You would want people with the best level of training and technology available."

It is estimated that in the United States there is one cardiac arrest a year for every 1,000 people. The combined population of the Shores, Farms, City and Park is nearly 34,000, which means there are some 34 heart attacks a year that are currently not getting advanced cardiac life support, which only paramedics can provide.

More than half participating in curbside recycling program

By Ronald J. Bernas
Staff Writer

REACT, Grosse Pointe Citizens for Recycling's pilot curbside recycling program, is more than halfway completed, and the project coordinator is calling it a success — so far.

"We believe it's going very well," project coordinator Sheila Osann said. "After five weeks, we have 58 percent participation."

REACT, which stands for Recycling Education and Curbside Test, began July 10 and was made possible by a $10,000 grant from the Garden Club of Michigan's Fund of the Community Foundation for Southeastern Michigan.

"We're shooting for somewhere around 40 percent participation, realistically," Osann said. "But in our hearts we're shooting for much higher than that."

A survey was given to the study participants prior to the program's beginning, and the same survey will be given after the program ends on Sept. 1, to see if anyone's ideas about recycling have changed.

Although there aren't any numbers relating to tonnage collected, 87 percent of those who put out their bins are filling them with newspapers, and 70 percent are recycling glass, metals and plastics on a regular basis. Figures were not available for those who have put their bins out at least once.

Frank Polizzi, in the front, of Waste Management North America collects the recyclables after David Sultzman, who works for Grosse Pointe Citizens for Recycling, records who put out their recycling bin and what they put in it.

The program works like this. One hundred houses in each of the Pointes and Harper Woods — the six communities in Grosse Pointe Citizens for Recycling — were chosen for the program. Each received a red bin and instructions on how to recycle.

The filled bins are put out each week on garbage day. The materials are collected by Waste Management of North America, sorted and recorded by a college student who then puts the information into a computer.

According to Ron Caramagno, general manager at Waste Management Michigan-North, the recyclables are delivered to their center on Mack in Detroit, then stored in containers and weighed.

They are then sold to an "end user" who does the actual recycling. The materials are sold to the company that gives the best price. The money is given to Citizens for Recycling.

But as important as getting the public to recycle, the other leg of the program is education of the public. Osann said the participants will receive one more educational piece prior to the program's end.

That pamphlet will describe uses for the recycled materials, and will also describe the need for creating a market for items made from recycled materials.

For example, paper for copiers, computers, newsprint, corrugated paper and boxes are all made from recycled paper. So is poster-board and drywall, as is toilet paper, napkins and brown paper bags.

But it is with plastics that the most creative things are being done, Osann said. Research is being conducted to see what else can be done with recycled plastics, but currently everything from picnic tables, playground materials, paintbrush handles and bristles, fake down fillings for coats, clear plastic egg containers, highway pylons and the like are being made from plastics.

"One of the problems in doing the recycling is that there aren't enough markets for these things," Osann said. "We have to learn how to reuse these things. We can't just collect them."

At the most recent Grosse Pointe Citizens for Recycling Collection Day at Grosse Pointe South High School, 950 cars collectively dropped off 4,200 pounds of metal, 4,248 pounds of plastic, and 9.39 tons of glass, along with approximately 18 tons of newspaper.

The next collection day is Sept. 2 from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. at South High School.

Nearly half of the 40 houses on Nottingham between Charlevoix and Vernor looked like this last week. The red bin on the left is filled with recyclables.

And a few notes...

Organizers of the Community Newspaper Recycling Center, located in the University Liggett School parking lot on Cook Road at Chalfonte in Grosse Pointe Woods, asks recyclers to leave their non-newspaper items at home.

Participants are welcome to bring newspapers tied with string or bundled in paper bags, but are reminded that the Community Newspaper Recycling Center will not accept magazines, newspapers bundled in plastic bags, or any other recyclable materials such as plastics, glass or aluminum.

Newspapers are to be put inside the bin, not on the side.

The Community Newspaper Recycling Center is open Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. and Saturdays from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Take the other items to the Grosse Pointe Citizens for Recycling drop off at Grosse Pointe South High School at Fisher and Grosse Pointe Boulevard on the first Saturday of every month from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m.

While Grosse Pointe Citizens for Recycling appreciates the participation they have received so far, they ask people to come during the specified hours. They say too many people are coming later and interrupting the clean-up process.

They accept glass, metals, opaque plastics (rinse them, please), and newspapers. For more information about Grosse Pointe Citizens for Recycling, call 881-9588 or 371-7366.

Also, the Detroit East Area Residents Association (D.E.A.R.) has formed a recycling drop off center for clear glass, metals and high density plastics. They cannot accept newspapers at this time, but suggest you bring them to the St. Matthew Church parking lot at Harper and Whittier. The newspaper drop off there is always open.

The D.E.A.R. center is located at the Cannon Recreation Center parking lot at Blue Hill and Warren, just east of Cadieux. Recyclable items may be dropped off on the last Saturday of each month — beginning Sept. 30 — from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. For information on D.E.A.R.'s collection center, call Jackie Rybinski at 885-1470.

How to recycle

Keep one container under your sink. When this container fills, sort the recyclables into three or four boxes kept on your back porch, in the garage or in the basement.

Glass: All clear glass containers, rinsed. Labels are OK. Don't include: Light-bulbs, mirrors or ceramics.

Metals: All metal cans and jar lids, rinsed and flattened. Convenience food trays and clean aluminum foil are also accepted.

Plastic: All high density opaque plastics such as detergent and laundry bottles, and milk jugs. Don't include: Clear plastic, plastic bags, yogurt or cottage cheese cartons or styrofoam. (Those items may be taken to Arts and Scraps in the basement of the First Lutheran Church at Cadieux and Waveny in Detroit on Saturdays from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. Schools and scout groups use these items for craft projects.)

Newspapers: Bundled by string or in brown paper bags. Don't include: magazines, newspapers in plastic bags, cardboard.

ACLU's busy agenda delays Woods park camera challenge

By Dan Jarvis
Staff Writer

The American Civil Liberties Union has been delayed in its constitutional challenge of public surveillance cameras in Ghesquiere Park.

Howard Simon, executive director of the ACLU, said that due to a packed agenda, the all-attorney volunteer committee has not yet reached a decision on whether to challenge the use of public surveillance cameras in the Woods, adjacent to the municipal complex.

Earlier this year the ACLU's Detroit branch President Leonard Grossman said the ACLU will undertake a constitutional challenge based on the fact that the cameras will not only surveil people undertaking criminal activities, but will place the general public under surveillance as well.

This practice, Grossman said, is a violation of constitutional law and should be forbidden in one of the country's safest cities.

Jean Rice, Woods councilwoman, said the cameras have been installed not to infringe on people's rights, but to protect children and property in Ghesquiere Park.

"We regret the vandalism we have had in the park. The gazebo has been carved up and pieces have been stolen," she said.

Rice said she has seen the gazebo used as a boxing ring where kids have been roughed up.

"That is not acceptable behavior. The gazebo is for everyone's use."

Rice said that a citizen once confronted a man sitting in his car in the parking lot adjacent to the park. The woman told Rice that the man looked suspicious and was in the lot watching children. When confronted, the man left.

"We all read about a lot of these incidences that happen," Rice said. "If the cameras could stop these situations or lead to a conviction, then the cameras are warranted. It is a very popular playground, there are lots of children there," she said.

Chester Petersen, city administrator/clerk, said on Aug. 14, three youths were arrested after one was seen on the police monitor carving initials in the gazebo at about 11:15 p.m.

All three were cited for curfew violations and one charged with destroying public property. The youths were later released to the custody of their parents.

Petersen said the police were able to zoom in on the youth carving initials in the gazebo and because of the surveillance monitors, police were able to spot the vandalism and make the arrests.

Simon said the ACLU's state committee will take up the matter in early September.

Adult skinny dippers reported at Hunt Club

Three men in their 30s and two 18-year-old women, all of Grosse Pointe Woods, were reported to police last week for skinny dipping in the pool at the Grosse Pointe Hunt Club last week.

The five adults were what was left of a party earlier in the evening Aug. 17 at the private club on Cook Road in the Woods.

According to police reports, the group approached the dining room manager at the club at about 12:30 a.m. and asked to use the pool. The manager said the pool could not be used because there wasn't a lifeguard on duty and because of the noise.

The adults disagreed and took off their clothes and jumped into the pool, according to the dining room manager, who then called the security guard. When the guard ordered the skinny dippers out of the pool, one of the men yelled a popular curse and told the guard to come in and get them. The men were 33, 37 and 38 years old.

The security guard then called Woods police. When officers arrived all the swimmers were out of the pool and clothed. Three of the party-goers were in the clubhouse and two were near the pool looking for one of the men's contact lenses.

When the dining room manager's supervisor was contacted and it was decided that no charges would be brought by the club, the five adults left without further incident.

3 men allegedly beat fourth man with baseball bats

Three young males allegedly beat an unsuspecting victim with baseball bats on Mack in Grosse Pointe Woods last week.

The attack, however, is being questioned by police because the victim appeared not to be injured and walked out of the hospital without notifying police or filing a complaint.

The 37-year-old male victim was allegedly attacked by the three men at Mack and Roslyn at about 5:50 p.m. Aug. 14.

A witness who stopped to help the victim said three young men jumped out of a red and white Chevrolet Blazer and beat the other man with bats. At one point the victim staggered into a drug store for help, according to police reports.

A Woods patrol car was flagged down by the witness who was helping the victim. The witness, a Woods man, was traveling southbound on Mack when he saw what he thought was an attack on another man. He was concerned about the victim's welfare and stopped to help.

Woods officers instructed the witness to drive the victim to the Woods police station for immediate medical assistance.

The victim is a Puerto Rican black man who is believed to be a vagrant. He spoke poor, broken English. The only identification on the man was a Social Security card, but police do not know if the card is in fact his. His alleged attackers were described as white males in their late teens or early 20s.

The victim complained of a hurt leg and asked to be taken to the hospital. He was taken to Cottage Hospital and later walked out of the hospital without notifying officials, police said.

The victim could not give police information concerning his alleged attackers, and police know of no motive.

COMBINING QUALITY, PRICE, AND PERSONAL SERVICE FOR A QUARTER OF A CENTURY

An unidentified camper at Interlochen fills the woods with strains of violin music.

Music and kids — a winning combination between the lakes

Spanish author Miguel de Cervantes said, "Where there is music, there can be no evil."

If that is not the motto of the Interlochen Music Camp, maybe it should be.

Nestled between Lake Wahbeganess and Lake Wahbeganetta are 1,200 acres of forests, beaches and blue skies. And, of course, the music.

The symphonies, played by hundreds of the most talented student musicians from across the country and the world, can be heard on the beach and deep in the quietest corners of the woods.

The horns playing 100-year old music beneath 100-year old Northern pines create a majesty.

The violins that rise on a breeze and hover just out of hearing range, to be heard again a few bars later on a fresh breath, bring magic with their melodies.

Although Interlochen Center for the Arts is best known for its music, thousands of actors, dancers, artists and writers from this country and others are given the opportunity to surround themselves with encouragement from professionals and the competition and support of peers.

Founded in 1928, the summer camp has become a haven for young artists who hone their talents and get a chance to learn from masters. This summer alone The Canadian Brass, Philip Glass and the Philip Glass Ensemble and Itzhak Perlman performed for, and in the case of Perlman, with the students.

Alumni include actors Tom Hulce and Meredith Baxter Birney, newsmen Bruce Morton and Mike Wallace, and cartoonist Cathy Guisewite among myriad others. The Detroit Symphony Orchestra has 18 Interlochen alums in its ranks.

The eight-week program concluded Aug. 20 with the traditional playing of Les Preludes, a performance in which every musician and every dancer participates. It is a graduation, of sorts, for many of the students who may not come back the next year. It is an emotional performance for all involved.

So what is it like, each summer, between the lakes? Four Grosse Pointe students spent the last two months studying their arts. Cindy, Edward and Charles Smith all of the Woods studied music, and Caroline DeFauw of Grosse Pointe Park studied voice and acting.

This summer was the third time the Smith children attended Interlochen. Cynthia, who will enter Cornell University to study English and pre-med, and Ed who will be a senior at Grosse Pointe North High School, have played the violin for five years, and Charles, who will be a junior at North, has played the cello as long.

"I love it here," they all said at the same time. "It's great."

Caroline, who will be a senior at Grosse Pointe South High School this year, echoes their sentiments: "It's a really different world," she said. "There is music everywhere. We sing in the cafeteria, there's always someone playing in the woods. I love it here."

Their days begin at 6:30 a.m. with reveille and exercises. The boys live on one side and the girls live across the street, some distance from the boys.

After breakfast there's orchestra rehearsal for the Smiths for 2-1/2 hours, then lunch and more classes, then more rehearsal, a private lesson one day a week, and in the afternoon an hour of "forced fun."

Forced fun is time every day set aside for non-arts related activities, usually volleyball or soccer or swimming. Sometimes the cabins — which house anywhere from 12 to 16 students — compete against each other for bragging rights.

DeFauw's schedule is much the same, but instead of rehearsing for the orchestra, she rehearses for the plays and choirs she is participating in.

In the evening, if you're not performing, there is always something to attend.

There is a chance to explore other art disciplines. For example, Cindy studied figure drawing along with her music.

Every Sunday the World Youth Symphony Orchestra performs, so each week the students who are part of that group have three or four pieces to learn. On top of expanding their repertoire and improving their skill, they learn the value of discipline and diligence.

"At the end of the eight weeks, you've improved like 200 percent," Charles said.

Students learn a lot about other things, too, they said.

"You learn a lot about other people," said Ed. "In my cabin, there's someone from South Africa, someone from Ireland and someone from Venezuela."

"You get to make a lot of friends, here," Charles said, "because you live with the people and have so much in common with them."

Caroline learned a lesson she says she can take with her for the rest of her life: "A lot of what happens here depends on what you do."

She explained that you can't get into the productions and special groups unless you try out, and that the more you participate, the more you get out of it.

And what is it like to see a master like Itzhak Perlman play?

"We played with him," the Smiths chimed. He played a Mendelssohn concerto with the World Symphony Orchestra playing behind him.

Simultaneously they expressed their admiration: "Only he could play something like that so well," said one. "He is my hero," said another one, and the third said "He's a god."

There is, of course, something the students don't like at the camp: the food.

"They even mess up the coffee here," Cindy said. "We eat what they serve us just to stay alive, not because it's good."

Of the Smiths, only Charles thinks there might be a possibility for a professional musical career, and Caroline DeFauw is not saying what she wants to do with her talents.

All this experience does not come cheap. This summer, eight weeks at Interlochen cost $2,650, but there are many scholarships available through the camp and locally through music organizations.

But the students say the opportunities they have, every day, to learn about themselves and their artforms cannot be measured in dollars.

Text and photos by Ronald J. Bernas

Below are the stone practice cabins for the campers. At right are four Grosse Pointers who attended the camp this summer. They are from left, Caroline DeFauw, and Ed, Charles and Cynthia Smith.

"On Tom Edison's Trail," will feature a three-hour luncheon/tour stopover alongside Port Huron's new Thomas Edison Inn. Bluewater Michigan Chapter of the National Railway Historical Society will present this year's final outing of its Yes! Michigan Train on Saturday, Oct. 21.

The trip will carry excursionists through Holly, Durand, Flint, Lapeer and Imlay City to Port Huron, where it will traverse a switching branch over a drawbridge on the Black River onto the landscaped grounds of the Thomas Edison Inn.

Passengers may reserve luncheon at the inn or walk or use buses to other restaurants in the area. They also may visit the recently restored Fort Gratiot Depot nearby in the shadow of the Blue Water Bridge. It was here that Thomas A. Edison learned telegraphy.

The train then will head south on the route young Tom Edison traveled as a newspaper "butcher." It will pass station sites where he later worked as a telegrapher, including Smith's Creek and the historic "Edison Depot" in Mount Clemens, now the Michigan Transit Museum, where he saved the stationmaster's child from being struck by a moving freight car.

The circle will be completed as the train passes through Fraser, Roseville, Warren and Detroit, to Milwaukee Junction for the run back northwest to Birmingham and Pontiac.

"On Tom Edison's Trail" will be powered by Grand Trunk Western diesel-electric locomotives and will consist of coaches, a snack/souvenir car and a Premium Service section. Adult coach fare is $50 and the fare for children, ages 5-16, is $40. Reserved luncheon at the Thomas Edison Inn is $15. And the Premium Service fare is $110 per person, including reserved coach seating, access to the adjacent private lounge car, hors d'oeuvres, coffee and soft drinks, and a special luncheon in the Abbey Room of the Thomas Edison Inn.

Some reservations still are available for Bluewater Michigan Chapter's other fall excursions: the "Wine Festival Express," a one-day round-trip from Birmingham and Pontiac to the "Wine and Harvest Festival" in Kalamazoo and Paw Paw on Sept. 9; and, the "Mackinac Limited," a three-day extravaganza including hotel and meals on Mackinac Island or hotel in Mackinaw City, Sept. 15-17.

Advance reservations are required for all three of these rail excursions, and capacities are limited. Informational flyers and reservations may be obtained by calling 399-7963 or 272-5848 between 9 a.m. and 9 p.m. daily.

With the opportunity to become a Michigan Lottery Millionaire occurring in every two-weekly Super Lotto drawing, readers asked for more information on winning.

Q. How many prizes of $1 million or more have been won in Michigan?
A. Through the end of June this year, there had been 352, with 39 of these prizes awarded to lottery clubs.

Q. How many of these were jackpot winners in a Lotto game?
A. There have been 365 Lotto jackpot winners. Of these, 284 received prizes ranging from $1 million up to $17 million.

Q. How many have been won this year?
A. Through the June 28 drawing, 28 prizes worth $1 million or more were won this year, or an average of about one a week. This is slightly ahead of the 1988 pace when 51 were awarded during the full year.

Q. How many Lotto jackpot prizes have been worth more than $10 million?
A. As of this writing there have been 10, with 45 others in the $5 million to $10 million range. The largest number of winners, 126, won prizes worth $2 to $5 million. Another 103 lucky players won between $1 million and $2 million.

Q. What determines the size of the jackpot for each drawing?
A. The top prize is based on the number of plays in the game since the jackpot was last won. When a rollover occurs, Lottery officials establish a new guaranteed minimum based on the amount already in the jackpot plus anticipated sales for the next game.

Q. How many plays does it take to add another $1 million?
A. About 2.2 million. From each dollar in Lotto game sales, 26 cents is placed in the jackpot prize pool for investment to pay a prize over 20 years. But, because winners collect this money plus all the interest it earns over that 20-year period, $1 million can be awarded with only about $550,000 in the prize pool.

Q. Are my odds of winning the jackpot better when it goes above a $1.5 million minimum?
A. Your odds of hitting the jackpot remain the same, about one in seven million, no matter how large the jackpot is. But, as larger jackpots attract more players, there is a greater chance that the top prize will be shared by two or more winners.

Q. How many times have there been multiple jackpot winners?
A. Through the end of June, the Super Lotto jackpot has been won 107 times with multiple winners in 37 drawings.

Q. Since the start of Lotto play in 1984, how many other prizes have been won in these games?
A. As of the end of June, 3,561,450, which includes more than 80,000 players who matched five numbers for awards worth up to $4,767. Winners matching four numbers have received prizes of up to $144.

Q. What is the total won in Lotto games in Michigan?
A. Counting the full value of jackpot prizes, this total is now past $1.38 billion.

For submitting the first question leading to this column, Suresh J. Patel of Taylor will receive 50 "Fame & Fortune" tickets. Note: When duplicate questions are received, that with the earliest date stamp upon arrival at Lottery Central wins. In case of a tie, the winner is selected by random drawing.

If you have a question not yet covered in these monthly columns, send it to "Winners Circle," Michigan Lottery, P.O. Box 38077, Lansing, MI 48909.

as it is now," Lange said. But the rural peace of Big Beaver Road is now a distant memory. "I decided I had had enough," he said, "and called an associate to see if he would take over my practice. I walked away."

Was it difficult, after all those years? "No," he said.

Since retiring, Lange has had the time to plunge into the arcane world of antique and classic car competition and exhibition. "An antique car is one built before 1925," he explained. Classics were built from 1926 through the '30s.

Lange said he found his Model T in a stable — "actually a chicken coop with running water" — in Lake City, Minn., his birthplace. He asked around to see who owned the obviously abandoned car and was directed to a man who had moved to St. Paul.

"I hitchhiked to St. Paul, found the owner and asked him if he would sell it to me. I was still too young for a license, but I wanted that car. Well, the man said it wasn't his car. Then he thought about it a while and said yes it was his, he had forgotten all about it."

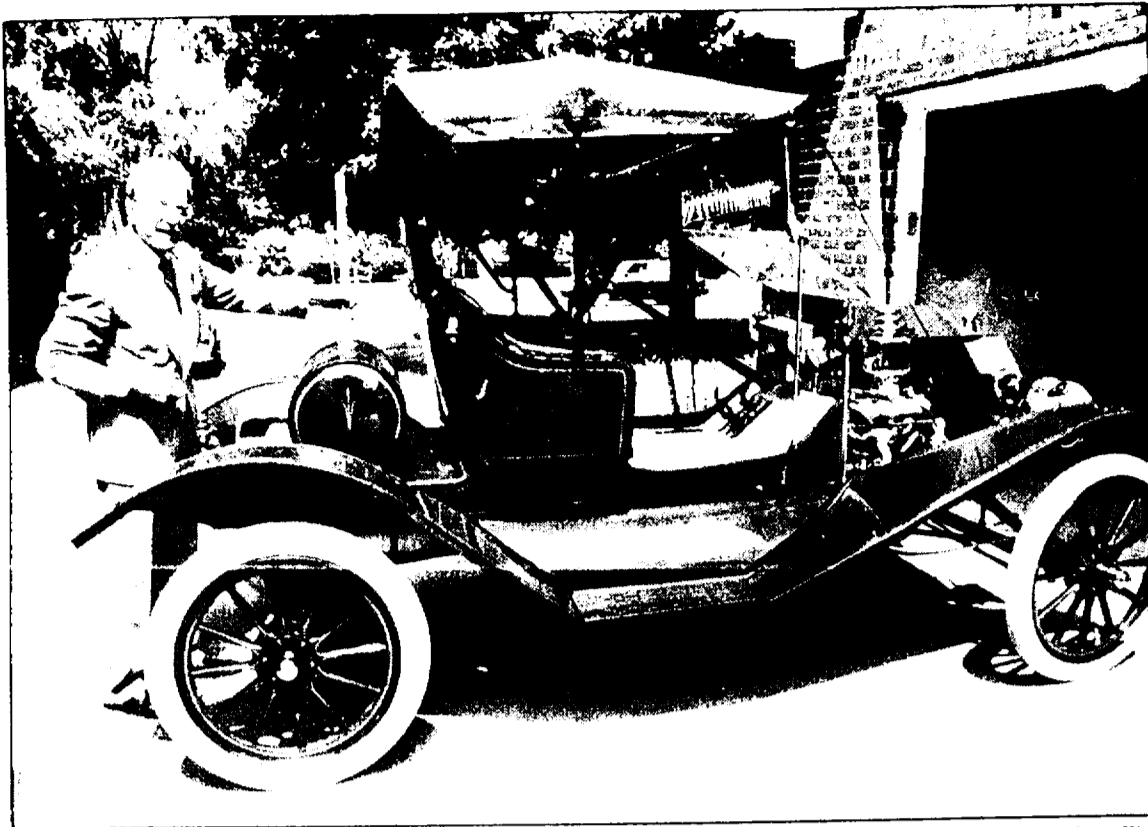

"He said I could have it, but he didn't have the title for it any more. I said I would give him $5 so I could have a bill of sale and register it."

Lange registered it, eventually got his driver's license and when he left for the University of Illinois, he left it in his mother's garage. It stayed there until 15 years ago, when he had it shipped to his home in Grosse Pointe Park on a haulaway.

A restorer in Yorktown, Ind., Joe Batthauer, carefully restored it to a magnificence it had never had before. Its slate blue finish is flawless, the brass radiator, lamps and trim is perfect ("It takes days to polish it before a competition") and, yes, it runs.

How careful and detailed was the restoration? "It had been restored by a talented amateur earlier," Lange said, "but Joe did everything to perfection." He pointed to the transverse leaf spring which made up the front suspension (same in the rear).

"Joe didn't just paint the leaf

Photos by Jenny King

Dr. William Lange shows his 1911 Ford Model T for which he recently received a silver trophy from the Antique Car Club of America.

springs, he took them apart and painted each leaf separately. Otherwise, when you drive it, the leafs rub against each other and little traces of rust become visible. That costs you points in competition."

Lange showed features of the Model T (engine No. 55151, made in Highland Park), the inventiveness and simplicity of which clearly demonstrated the genius of Henry Ford — simple, direct solutions to the problems of getting such a complex machine as an automobile to run and be dependable and to be better than a horse.

But most of all the car is beautiful in its simplicity, evoking nostalgia in those few old enough to remember the Ford Model T, which went out of production in 1927, after more than 15 million were built in 19 years. Only the Volkswagen Beetle has topped that record.

"People ask me what the car is worth," he said, "What can I say? It is priceless."

This is literally true. The car is a Runabout Roadster, which cost $680 when new. But cars in the condition of this one are so rare that no value can be established. It is worth what someone will pay and what Lange will take. Since it is not for sale, it is priceless.

Lange is a medical man. He transferred from the University of Illinois to the University of Minnesota, where he received his undergraduate and medical degrees — B.A., B.S., M.B. (Bachelor of Medicine) and M.D. Dr. Lange explained that at the University of Minnesota, the student received an M.B. upon completion of medical school, then got an M.D. after completion of intern training.

He came to Detroit and specialized in the relatively new area of plastic surgery, both cosmetic and reconstructive repair of accident victims. Because of his specialty, he became involved with traffic accident research at Wayne State University.

"Maybe you remember those stories of dropping cadavers down elevator shafts," he said. "Well, I was shocked to see a story about our work in a tabloid newspaper in New York. The press had some fun with this story, but it was serious and valuable research."

One of the results of this pioneering work and of later research with a crash sled by WSU's Department of Engineering Mechanics was development of air bags, or air cushion passive restraint systems.

The air bag is a device which is actuated by sudden deceleration — as occurs when you hit something with your car — and fills a bag using an explosive device, so that the driver and passengers are thrown into the bag instead of the steering column, dashboard or windshield. These devices will be phased into all new cars over the next three years.

"When we started our research, we used pigs, which are physiologically similar to humans. But we had to go to cadavers because we had to know how humans would react in crash situation," Dr. Lange said. "After the air bag was developed, Chrysler Corp. supplied us with some for research. One thing we wanted to know was what would happen to a passenger's ears when the bag exploded in a closed sedan.

"We set one off with a cat in the car. A cat's ear is remarkably similar to the human ear. The cat suffered no damage, but again, we could not be sure that the human ear would react in the same way. You can't ask for a human volunteer. So Prof. Larry Patrick, who headed the project, underwent the same experiment. He came out OK, but it took courage to do that. We really didn't know what would happen."

Lange believes that air bags will be a positive advance in auto safety, but stressed that they must be used in conjunction with the three-point seat belts which are now in cars. Because the air bag deflates almost immediately after inflation, it is of no use in a second collision. And, of course, it does no good in a side impact, rear impact or rollover.

Whatever the effect of air bags, we have come a long way to the modern car from that 1911 Model T. And Lange has helped in that progress.

There is no question that his Model T is a champion. So is Lange, scientist, plastic surgeon, car enthusiast and gentleman.

COTS helped

COTS, the Coalition on Temporary Shelter in Detroit, has benefited from months of fundraising by the sophomore class at University Liggett School. The class of 1991, assisted by its dean Jeff Healy, carried out several fundraisers, including a wreath sale last Christmas. Class members purchased a new television and VCR, which were presented to COTS earlier this summer. COTS Executive Director Peggy Posa told the students that the video equipment will be used for educational videotapes to help homeless mothers with parenting skills, good nutrition and self-esteem.

Lucille Wertz dies after donating $3 million to aid cancer patients

Three days after Grosse Pointe Farms resident Lucille Wertz pledged $3 million to Harper Hospital for the fight against cancer, the disease claimed her life.

Mrs. Wertz died Monday, Aug. 21 at Harper Hospital in Detroit.

A memorial service for Mrs. Wertz will be held today, Thursday, Aug. 24, at St. Paul Catholic Church, Grosse Pointe Farms. Burial will be in Holy Sepulchre Cemetery, Southfield.

Memorial contributions may be made to the Boys and Girls Clubs of Southeastern Michigan.

Mrs. Wertz's generous gift to Harper Hospital before her death was made in her name and in that of her late husband, Vic Wertz, toward efforts to advance the clinical care activities of Harper Hospital in The Detroit Medical Center.

In recognition of her gift, plans call for the realignment of certain aspects of the hospital's cancer programs to be relocated to an existing facility within the hospital complex. It will be known as the Lucille and Vic Wertz Clinical Cancer Care Center. Her gift will help to reorganize the hospital's resources, enabling many more patients to be seen on an outpatient basis and allowing greater access to cancer treatment.

Mrs. Wertz was president of the Vic Wertz Distribution founded by her husband and her in 1955. She succeeded her husband, the former Detroit Tigers outfielder, up death in 1983.

Long active in civic and charitable causes, both Lucille and Vic Wertz had been honored many times for their volunteer leadership positions. The annual Vic Wertz Memorial Golf Outing, which began in 1980 and of which Mrs. Wertz was chair, raised more than $1.4 million over the last ten years for the Boys and Girls Clubs of Southeastern Michigan.

Among her other civic commitments, Mrs. Wertz was a board member of Michigan Opera Theatre, the Detroit Historical Society, the National conference of Christians and Jews, and the Michigan Cancer Foundation.

She also chaired the Family Art Game annual magazine promotion for the Detroit Institute of Arts for four years. One of the many recognitions she received was Gov. James Blanchard's citing her, in 1987, as one of the top 50 women business owners for Outside Business Achievement Honors.

When she made her gift to Harper Hospital, she had said:

"The metropolitan Detroit community has meant much to both Vic and me. We always wanted to give back to the people of this community who contributed to our livelihood and made our lives special. Fighting cancer - a universal disease - is one of the ways I've chosen to do so. I hope that this gift will make a real difference in people's lives."

Cancer specialist Dr. Vainutis K. Vaitkevicius, who serves as chief of the Department of Medicine at Harper-Grace Hospitals and physician-in-chief of the Detroit Medical Center, said, "It touches me deeply that Mrs. Wertz made this outstanding gift. Her generosity will be invaluable in our efforts to eradicate cancer."

Lloyd A. Semple, chairman of Harper-Grace Hospitals board of trustees, said, "It is rare indeed that we are privileged to witness such a selfless demonstration of an individual's commitment to her community, and to human kind. Lucille Wertz's philanthropy and vision bring a great deal of hope to many people."

The president of The Detroit Medical Center, Joseph L. Hudson Jr., added: "Lu's generosity is an extremely significant catalyst to our efforts to move the Detroit Medical Center's cancer activities to a still higher plateau. Words can only begin to express our appreciation - but the impact of her gift will be felt by many for years to come."

Farms buys new firefighting clothing

By Dan Jarvis
Staff Writer

The Grosse Pointe Farms council approved the purchase of new firefighting clothing Aug. 14.

Lt. Arthur Turner said the city has ordered newly styled bunker coats and helmets, not only to meet new requirements of the U.S. Department of Labor, but to protect firefighters.

A low bid of $3,710 for 11 coats, 11 helmets and one pair of bunker boots by the Apollo Fire Equipment Co. was accepted by the council.

Turner said the current overcoats are made of an oil-derivative plastic material which, when exposed to high heat, can transmit heat and cause burns.

The new coats, made of cotton and coated with a fire-retardant material, are much the same as the ones worn by race car drivers, Turner said. Even in a flame-flash situation, the suits are designed to resist heat and offer a greater level of safety for firefighters.

The helmets used now by firefighters have aluminum brackets and metal rivets which can transmit heat in flashover situations. The new helmets have no metal rivets or brackets and like the coats, provide greater safety for firefighters.

Flashovers, Turner said, often occur when an unventilated room is opened and the rush of oxygen entering the room causes the fire to flash. The flames literally implodes, then explodes outward - shooting a wall of flame out the opening.

Turner said over the years, several firefighters have been burned from flashovers, some receiving burned ears and extremities. He said the new equipment will not only help to avoid burns, it will save lives.

One manufacturing change affecting firefighters over the past few decades is increased use of synthetic material in carpets, drapes and furniture. When ignited, many synthetics emit toxic fumes and can cause severe lung damage or even death.

Last year, the city bought several self-contained breathing units to guard against inhaled toxic poisoning. Turner added that the city will buy more breathing masks in the future as the need arises.

War Memorial announces annual summer closing

The War Memorial will be closed to the public Sunday, Aug. 27 through Monday, Sept. 4, for refurbishing. The facility will reopen at 9 a.m., Tuesday, Sept. 5, with a new calendar of classes, workshops, lectures, trips and special events.

The War Memorial staff uses the annual closing to make necessary repairs and for a thorough top-to-bottom cleaning of the historic Alger House and Fries Building.

During the period, all houses who served their country in World War II, Korea and Vietnam. Registrations and ticket sales during closing will be handled by mail.

The War Memorial is located at 32 Lakeshore Road, Grosse Pointe Farms. The center, which is housed in the former home of the Russell A. Alger Jr. family, has served the civic, cultural and educational needs of the Grosse Pointe community since 1949 in honor of those Grosse Pointers who served their country in World War II, Korea and Viet-

Farms woman's purse snatched

A 71-year-old Grosse Pointe Farms woman's purse was snatched from a shopping cart in the parking lot at Mack and Moross last week.

The woman was loading groceries into the trunk of her car from a shopping cart when she was approached by a stranger. As she went to grab her purse out of the cart, the man said, "No, you don't" and pushed the woman to the ground. The man fled east through the alley and was last seen at Manor Avenue.

Farms man, 18, faces felonious assault charge

An 18-year-old Grosse Pointe Farms man was arraigned on a felonious assault charge last week after he allegedly pulled a switch-blade knife on a 10-year-old.

Municipal Judge Matthew Rumora entered an innocent plea on behalf of Stephen English Gove of Cloverly Road Aug. 17 on a charge of felonious assault.

According to police reports, two Farms boys, ages 10 and 11, were riding their bikes north on Belanger near Williams at about 7 p.m. Aug. 16 when they heard a car accelerating behind them. The boys turned around and saw the car apparently trying to hit the 11-year-old and almost succeeded.

The 10-year-old told police that as the car raced by, the man in the passenger seat, Gove, stuck his arm out the window of the car and waved a switch-blade type knife. If the 10-year-old hadn't have leaned away from the knife, he would have been cut, the boy told police.

As the boys were relating the incident to police, the suspects' car went by and the boys pointed out the vehicle to the officers.

The maroon station wagon was stopped and the driver and passenger were ordered to get out. One officer saw a switch-blade knife under the passenger seat near the door. Both men were placed under arrest.

The driver of the car was released while Gove was charged with felonious assault. Gove was released after paying 10 percent of the $10,000 bond.

A preliminary exam is scheduled for Aug. 23 before Rumora.

Cameras lead to detaining of three teens

The surveillance cameras in Ghesquire Park led to the arrest of three teenagers Aug. 14, with possible charges of malicious destruction of property and possession of marijuana pending.

The incident occurred at 11:10 p.m. when the dispatcher at the Woods police station adjacent to the park spotted four youths in the gazebo. One of the youths, a female, was seen carving something into the gazebo.

An investigating officer found the youths, three 15-year-olds and a 16-year-old, at the gazebo and saw a girl carving something into a railing on the gazebo. Closer examination showed the girl had carved her initials into the wood.

The girl said she used a stone to carve her initials, but she told police she didn't think she was doing anything wrong since the gazebo railing was already pretty well defaced.

A 16-year-old boy was told to go on his way and the remaining girl and two boys were taken to the police station.

Once at the station, all three were cited for violating the curfew. The girl, a Woods resident, was told a detective will get in touch with her concerning a possible charge of malicious destruction of property.

One of the boys, a Harper Woods resident, was searched prior to being detained in a conference room, and was found in possession of less than 1/2 ounce of suspected marijuana. He also had a hashish pipe, according to police reports. He was told detectives will be calling concerning a charge of violating controlled substances laws.

The other boy was from St. Clair Shores.

The three youths were turned over to their parents.

This daguerrotype from 1839 is the first photograph ever to show a human being. Look closely and you'll see a man getting a shoe shine in the lower left corner of the picture. All other activity on this busy Paris street was moving far too quickly for the camera's very long exposure to depict.

150th anniversary of photography

In my column today, I'd like to provide some "food for thought" about the 150th anniversary of photography and what photography means to us today. Let's begin by stepping backwards through time.

When we remember the Vietnam War, photographic images immediately form in our minds... perhaps the little girl fleeing from the destruction of napalm bombs or the haunting execution of the Viet Cong guerilla.

We remember pictures of Eisenhower visiting our troops in Korea and, of course, we all recall the inspiring flag raising over Iwo Jima towards the end of World War II.

Think back to World War I and what usually comes to mind are soldiers in odd-shaped helmets huddling in hastily dug trenches.

And who can reflect on the Civil War without recalling the many dead sprawled over the now lovely hills of our eastern states?

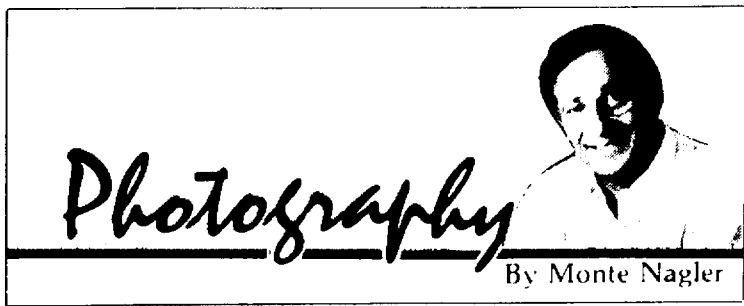

But think of the War of 1812 or the Revolutionary War and what comes to mind? Paintings and drawings. We can't relate as well to these occasions because, of course, photography didn't then exist.

Our backward journey through time using America's involvement in war as a yardstick is a good way to illustrate the significance of the photographic image as this year we observe the 150th anniversary of photography.

For the past 150 years, photographs have been used to inform, inspire, entertain or shock us in ways that no other medium could ever or ever will be able to do. With photographs, we can travel to distant lands we can otherwise only dream about. Scenes can be etched in our minds we never have known about if it weren't for photography.

this milestone year for photography and imagine how difficult and unsettling life would be without photographs. What else in the world today can evoke the emotions that a photograph can without the use of a single word?

We are able to share special moments with celebrities and athletes we can otherwise only dream of meeting. And we have intimately endured the sorrows of people just like us who have lost ones in a plane crash or other disaster. And all of this through the wonder of photography.

Think for a moment during

Whether it's the well-known image of John-John saluting a farewell at President Kennedy's funeral or an old, tattered picture of a favorite relative that has meaning only to a few, photographs touch us ways no other medium can.

And we as photographers can touch people, too. We have the ability to make visible what others can only sense. We can move people and stir emotions in a way that is truly unique.

Take a moment and appreciate how very fortunate we are to have photography play such a vital role in our daily lives.

Adult parties flout police

A group of adult parties at a Grosse Pointe Woods home became uncontrollable after the homeowner apparently passed out.

Woods police responded to half a dozen loud party complaints against a home in the 1900 block of Roslyn Aug. 12.

The officers first went to the home at 11:22 p.m. and told the homeowner that there were complaints and that he would have to quiet the party down, which he did. At 2:56 a.m. officers again checked the address and things were still quiet.

At 3:29 a.m., however, police responding to renewed complaints found the music at the home was so loud it could be heard on Mack Avenue. When the officers arrived, a man and woman were playing basketball and there was loud singing and dancing going on inside the home.

As the officers approached, the adults went into the home and shut the doors. A man came out on the front porch when the officers asked to speak to the homeowner.

The unknown guest told police, "He (the homeowner) is sleeping and I'm not going to wake him up." The guest refused to show police any identification and went into the house and locked the door.

He then yelled out a window, "If you have a problem and want to talk to the homeowner, you can sit out there all night and wait for him to wake up." Those in the house then turned off all the music and the lights.

The matter has been turned over to the city attorney for possible action.

Women gather to honor Women's Equality Day

Women from all over the Detroit area will gather on Aug. 25-26 to celebrate Women's Equality Day, an annual commemoration of the anniversary of women gaining the right to vote.

The two-day event will be at the downtown campus of the Wayne County Community College. The theme is "Women: Working for Justice and Freedom For All." The event is sponsored by the city of Detroit Human Rights Department and Human Rights Commission.

Maureen Reilly, Michigan Court of Appeals judge, is the keynote speaker for the leadership and awards breakfast on Friday, Aug. 25, at 7:45 a.m. During the breakfast, awards will be presented to several women for outstanding achievements in their profession and for their community service. The cost of the breakfast is $15.

The conference continues on Saturday, Aug. 26 from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. Luncheon speaker is Lotie Shackelford, former mayor of Little Rock, Arkansas and presently a city director for Little Rock.

Event organizers say that Women's Equality Day is essential in helping women to focus on their accomplishments and to continue the fight for equality.

"If it were not for the hard work of women, we would not be able to enjoy the freedoms we have today," said Ruby Butts, event chairperson. "However it is essential that we continue the fight."

Butts added, "Women's Equality Day not only gives women an opportunity to reflect on the past but motivates women to think about the future."

Other Women's Equality Day events include a series of workshops on various topics. The topics are health concerns, welfare rights issues, women and labor, civil rights issues and family support in the 1990s.

The cost of the luncheon is $10. Workshops are $7. For both, the cost is $15.

Child care facilities are available. A limited number of scholarships also are available through the Human Rights Department.

For more information, call the Human Rights Department at 224-4965.

Surprise: Fox, Penn are great in 'Casualties of War'

By Michael Chapp
Special Writer

There are two assumptions that "Casualties of War" addresses and proves false within minutes of its opening credits.

The first is that there is nothing viewers would less rather see than yet another war movie about Vietnam. The second is that Michael J. Fox cannot be believable in such a film.

Those are certainly reasonable assumptions. In the past few years, we've been subjected to "Apocalypse Now," "Platoon" and "Hamburger Hill." "Full Metal Jacket" and "Gardens of Stone." Though each film took a slightly different approach, all were set in the jungles of Southeast Asia and all were brutally violent and realistic.

As far as the concerns about Fox, only in last year's "Bright Lights, Big City" did he demonstrate that he can handle a dramatic role of any real substance.

Indeed, it's hard to picture his most famous character, Alex Keaton of television's "Family Ties," cigarette in hand, spitting obscenities as he prepares to shoot an army of enemy soldiers.

But the film works. Based on a true story about an American platoon that kidnapped, gang-raped and murdered a Vietnamese girl, the picture is actually about a moral war being waged on a military battleground.

As one might expect, Fox plays the good-guy soldier. He's the one who doesn't understand why his fellow soldiers have kidnapped the girl. And he's the one who refuses to participate in her brutal attack.

His enemy in the battle is his sergeant, played — not surprisingly — by Sean Penn. His psychotic, power-hungry, devil-may-care attitude is in direct contrast to Fox, who believes that even in the moral abyss of war, a sense of ethics is essential.

The picture demonstrates just how tough it is to fight the system, especially when the system is the government during wartime. It documents Fox's fight against his apathetic superiors with a steady and even hand.

But even better is the way viewers are forced to feel and understand Fox's dilemma. It's hard enough to stand up for what you believe when you're in a secure environment. In the middle of a war, when the people you have to take a stand against are the same ones you're depending on to save your life on the battlefield, the dilemma is a strong one indeed.

"Casualties of War" works best because of the performances by Penn and Fox. Given their real life situations, they are both infinitely believable in their roles. Fox's wide-eyed innocence serves him well here, as does Penn's unstable energy.

Like most of the films of the genre, "Casualties" is violent in places, and more graphic than many viewers will be comfortable with. Still, its powerful theme is more than enough to make it worthwhile. It's reasonable to assume the picture will be remembered positively among the slew of recent wartime movies.

DIA's Detroit Film Theatre opens 32nd season

The Detroit Film Theatre of the Detroit Institute of Arts opened its 32nd season Aug. 18 with "Sex, Lies and Videotape." The new American film was the Grand Prize winner at this year's Cannes Film Festival.

This contemporary comedy begins with a familiar situation — a young wife is trapped in an unhappy marriage with her unfaithful, ambitious lawyer husband. But when her husband's former "mysterious" roommate enters her life, all bets are off.

The film's director, 26-year-old Steven Soderbergh, also won the prestigious Critic's Prize for Best Film at Cannes and co-star

James Spader received the Best Actor Award. After the first screening at the 1989 U.S. Film Festival, tickets for the remaining shows became so scarce that they were scalped.

Because of the anticipated popularity of "Sex, Lies and Videotape," the film will be shown a second weekend Showtimes in the DIA's 1190-seat auditorium located off of Grand and Farm- 1000, are 7:30 p.m. Friday, Aug. 19, 9:30 p.m. Saturday, Aug. 20, and 7:30 p.m. Sunday shows are 1, 3, 5, 7 and 9 p.m. Tickets are $5.

Other season highlights include a lineup of new films such as "Little Vera," a controversial movie which looks at the bleak quality of life among ordinary Soviet people. The film's star, Natalya Negoda, who posed for Playboy earlier this year, gives a brilliant performance as Vera.

"Heavy Petting" delves into the subject of teenage passion in the 1950s and includes footage from some of the most outrageous "educational" films of the era.

Also showing will be "The Little Thief," based on the late Francois Truffaut's final screenplay, which gives an unflinching yet compassionate view of a rebellious 16-year-old girl coming of age in post World War II provincial France; "Let's Get Lost," photographer Bruce Weber's Oscar-nominated portrait of the tortured, brilliant trumpeter and vocalist Chet Baker; and a single screening of "Tribute to Josephine Baker," the St. Louis-born superstar of the cabaret circuit in France in the 1920s.

Movie patrons will get to see twice as many films this season. Many of the films are classics and new releases that have had little or no exposure to Detroit audiences. On a number of Sundays, as well as many Saturdays, moviegoers will enjoy a retrospective of "Scope" films, presented in their true widescreen format without electronic tinkering or image-cropping.

With the exception of "Sex, Lies and Videotape," tickets are $3. Discount coupon books of 10 tickets for $20 are available. This offers movie patrons a savings of 33 percent. Tickets can be purchased in advance or at the door.

For more information or to request a free copy of the Detroit Film Theatre schedule, call the DIA ticket office 9:30 a.m. to 5:15 p.m. daily at 832-2730.

Ansel Adams photography exhibit now open

During his lifetime, Ansel Adams (1902-1984) took more than 40,000 photographs. Before he died, he selected just 75 subjects to represent the range of his life's work and designated this group "The Museum Set" prints.

A Museum Set owned by Pacific Telesis Group is now touring the country as "Ansel Adams: Classic Images" and will be on display at the Detroit Institute of Arts through Sunday, Oct. 29.

The Museum Set personally selected and printed by the artist, displays the breadth of subjects and locations photographed by Adams — from Alaska to the Appalachians, from the Maine coast to Yosemite.

While known primarily for his expansive and heroic wilderness landscapes, Adams also is recognized for his portraits, still life and architectural studies and intimate glimpses of nature. The photographs were chosen not only to represent the high quality of his artistic achievement, but also to give a complete and conclusive picture of his work.

Adams had an uncanny ability to transform landscapes into metaphors for epic themes. His photographs idealized nature and heightened viewers' appreciation of it, especially in the American West. A prominent spokesman for the conservation movement, Adams was an active member of the Sierra Club for more than 60 years.

The Ansel Adams exhibition is open free to the public during regular museum hours: 9:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Tuesday through Sunday; closed Mondays and holidays.

The exhibition is accompanied by a fully illustrated hardcover book containing all 75 images in the Museum Set and an extensive biographical essay by James Alinder, former director of the Friends of Photography, an organization founded by Adams in 1967. ($29.95 at the DIA Museum Shop).

Freddy is back for the fifth time

By Marian Trainor
Special Writer

Freddy Krueger, America's most beloved miscreant is back, for the fifth time, haunting the dreams of his victims and turning those dreams into terrifying nightmares. His loyal followers — and there are many — will flock to see what their anti-hero with the scarred face, razor blade gloves and battered fedora is up to in this latest offering.

For those who have never seen the "Elm Street" happenings, Freddy (Robert Englund) was a high school janitor and child killer who was captured by a posse of small town parents and tossed into a fire. He comes back to revenge not only the vigilantes, but their sons and daughters.

Freddy came into being when his mother, Amanda Krueger, a nursing nun, was trapped in a ward for criminally insane men for an entire weekend. There, she was raped and conceived a child.

Freddy is the genetic result of the maniac who passed on his murderous genes. In this film we get to see that father in a camera closeup. It is Robert Englund, Freddy without his horror makeup, which in a gruesome way gives credence to the saying, "Like father, Like son."

And indeed, from the moment of his birth Freddy has a demonic disposition and an ugly hatchet face that even incineration doesn't quell.

He is born mad at the world and death only adds to his determination to get even.

But how? He has learned his lesson that you pay for crime committed in life, so he cleverly preys on his victims in their dreams, leading them on to their own destruction by preying on their vanities.

It is a device that at once makes Freddy a fearsome creature but also an endearing one. He provides his audience with the vicarious thrill of a bad dream and the comforting knowledge that none of it is true.

Horror fans love it. Not since Boris Karloff's "Frankenstein" and Bela Lugosi's "Dracula" has an actor been so firmly entranced as Robert Englund and his grotesque-faced, razor-fingered Freddy.

In "Dream Child" Freddy returns to haunt the dreams of Alice (Lisa Wilcox) back from "Nightmare 4." This time, by virtue of a clever gimmick, he inflicts brain torture even when she is awake, a phenomenon that is explained by her pregnancy.

Freddy is entering the dreams of her child trying to be reborn as a new soul.

Since the nightmare movies have been around five years and have drawn record audiences, it's a little late to protest the hard core violence.

What sets Freddy apart from Michael Meyer of the Halloween film series and Jason Voorhies of "Friday the 13th" epics is that he is the subject of nightmares and the sleeper awakes without being harmed.

It's easy to be intrigued by Freddy. He isn't real. You're not likely to encounter him except in nightmares.

Because they involve the unlimited potential of dreams, the "Nightmare" films are creative and represent the best of the horror genre of films. Add to this Freddy's sardonic humor — "Don't drink and drive" he chortles as he steers a car over a precipice. The special effects are macabre and scary and it relies on psychological horror rather than blood.

Advertising veterans discover The Team Works

By John Minnis
Assistant Editor

Two advertising veterans with a combined century in the business have started their firm in Detroit and are looking for a couple of hundred top-notch professionals.

Grosse Pointe Woods resident John Bracken and longtime associate John McAlpine have combined their talents and experience to start their own agency in Ross Roy's former headquarters on East Jefferson near downtown.

Their company's name is The Team Works and is associated with a New York company headed by Joe Bracken, who is John Bracken's brother.

The Team Works is not a traditional advertising agency. The Team Works in itself does not have large advertising accounts. Instead, The Team Works is a talent agency for the best free-lance advertising professionals in the country.

In New York 2-1/2 years ago, an out-of-work advertising man, Al Blanco, discovered that it was very difficult as a free-lancer to get work and, on the other hand, it was difficult for those needing advertising free-lancers to recruit talent without spending hours and days interviewing candidates.

The Team Works was created to bring the best advertising free-lancers together with those seeking top-notch talent for a day, week, month or project. With Blanco as president and advertising executive Joe Bracken as chairman, The Team Works-New York today has a stable of 1,200 free-lance advertising people on a computer database for prospective clients.

The Team Works-Michigan, which opened for business the first of August, has access to New York's list of free-lancers, and John Bracken and McAlpine are beginning to interview local free-lancers.

The Team Works, however, is only looking for the best, experienced talent. Free-lancers have to be able to do the job well every time with a minimum amount of supervision, if any.

"You're going out with our endorsement," McAlpine said of his free-lancers. "This time your references will be checked."

In fact, with McAlpine and Bracken's combined 99 years in the business, they can weed out the true professionals from those who just talk a good game.

Bracken, who has 42 years in advertising, has seen the same piece of work being passed off as the original work of several job applicants. McAlpine started in the business 57 years ago working for Bracken's father and knows virtually everyone in the advertising community.

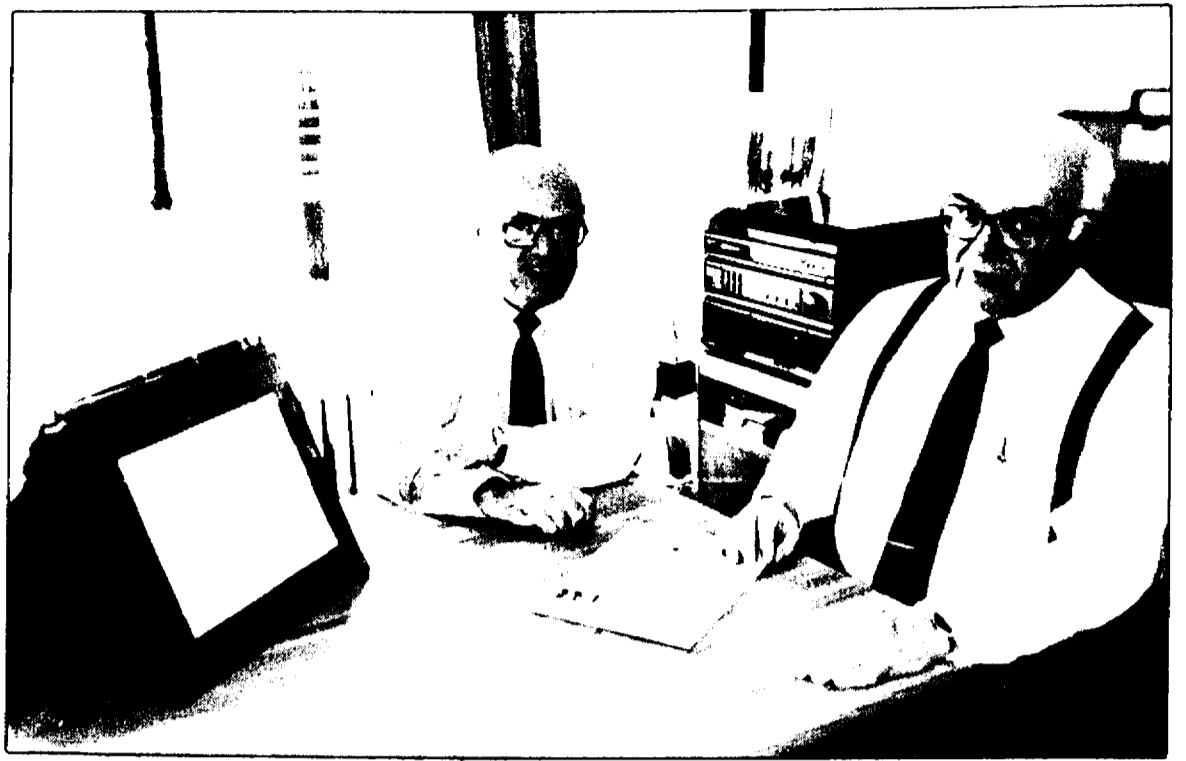

Only about 40 percent of the free-lancers looking to join The Team Works are actually accepted under contract for future work.

The Team Works acts as a free-lancer's agent. The free-lance copy writer, for example, agrees to be represented by The Team Works. If the writer gets work through The Team Works, then The Team Works gets 10 percent of the writer's pay. The free-lancer tells The Team Works what he or she desires per hour, day or project. There are no set rates for all copy writers, for example.

Also, there is a first-time-only fee of $150 that The Team Works takes out of a free-lancer's first assignment. The extra fee is for the company's expense in putting together a portfolio of the free-lancer's work and for administrative costs, such as maintaining a database, billing and payroll.

Free-lancers are paid by The Team Works instead of by the clients for whom the advertising services are being performed. The Team Works in turn bills the clients, making another percentage for its middle-man services.

The Team Works handles free-lancers in every field covered by John Bracken of Grosse Pointe Woods, left, and John McAlpine have merged their 99 years in the advertising business to start their own firm, called The Team Works, a talent agency for free-lance advertising professionals.

the traditional, full-service advertising agency. Some of the fields of expertise represented by the free-lance talent include marketing, research, creative development, media, promotion and public relations.

The media represented include print, television, radio and audio-visual presentations. Prospective clients of The Team Works are advertising agencies or the advertisers themselves.

An advertiser, for example, may know what type of commercial it is looking for but doesn't have the in-house creative and technical people to do the job. One call to The Team Works and the advertiser can get all the people needed to do the project. The advertiser doesn't have to hire the advertising experts or pay benefits.

The advertising agencies that use The Team Works can benefit by having a ready source of professionals, from marketing and advertising directors to copy writers, photographers and cameramen, on call. The advertising agency can have a large pool of human resources available without having to carry hefty payrolls in between major projects.

Bracken said the Detroit advertising community, which represents every major agency in the country, has been very receptive to The Team Works concept. "The reception has been 'Gee, we really need something like this,'" he said.

Most recently, Bracken was vice president-director of client services at CTS Associates in Detroit. He began his advertising career in Detroit with Brooke, Smith, French and Dorrance and moved next to Campbell Ewald on the Chevrolet account. After that were stints at Kenyon and Eckhardt on Lincoln/Mercury, Young and Rubicam on Chrysler/Plymouth and on the Gulf Oil account in Houston.

McAlpine is also a metro Detroit native who came out of retirement from Young & Rubicam to head The Team Works-Michigan. He started in advertising with N.W. Ayer & Son on the Ford Motor Co. account. He later held positions with J. Walter Thompson and Young & Rubicam. In addition to Ford, his accounts have included Packard, Exxon, 3M, Chrysler/Plymouth and Lincoln/Mercury.

While McAlpine as chairman will provide the administrative and financial management expertise for the new company, Bracken's all-around advertising experience including account and project management will come in handy as president and dealing with clients and free-lancers on the day-to-day basis.

Bracken, 62, has lived in the Grosse Pointes for virtually all his life. He moved here from Philadelphia with his family when he was a boy in the 1930s. He graduated from Grosse Pointe High School and raised his own family here. Except for a short time in Houston and seven years in Petoskey running a radio station and a restaurant, he has always lived in the Pointes.

After two lifetimes in the business, Bracken and McAlpine look forward to the success of their newest venture, and with a century of experience between them, they should succeed on sheer know-how alone.

Michigan Bell wants to reach up to 600,000 Michigan households that may qualify for its Lifeline Telephone Service plan, approved in November 1988 by the Michigan Public Service Commission to help defray a portion of the cost of phone service for low-income residents meeting eligibility guidelines.

Of the 600,000 households that may be eligible for the program, about 400,000 are DSS clients, 70,000 are low-income senior citizen households not receiving DSS help, and the balance are low-income households not receiving formal public assistance.

The Lifeline Service plan has two major features:

- A $4 monthly credit against the cost of basic telephone service; and,

- A 50 percent discount of the telephone line connection charge (i.e., Lifeline customers would pay $21 of Michigan Bell's $42 charge to establish phone service).

In adopting the measure last year, the MPSC said it believes the plan removes the two major barriers to phone service for low-income people. Currently, 94 percent of Michigan households have telephone service.

Recipients of assistance from the DSS are considered automatically eligible for Lifeline Service. Applications for households not receiving public assistance are available from such agencies as Red Cross, Salvation Army, the Michigan Employment Security Commission, the Social Security Administration, area aging agencies, community action agencies, Hispanic and Arabic social agencies and many other organizations.

To be eligible for the program, candidate households must be at or below 130 percent of the federal poverty level. Currently, a family of four earning $15,730 a year would be eligible for Lifeline assistance.

Farms parking committee to make recommendations to City Council

By Dan Jarvis
Staff Writer

A meeting of an ad-hoc committee studying the overall parking situation in the Hill area Tuesday resulted in several items to be recommended to the Grosse Pointe Farms City Council for approval.

As secretary to the non-voting advisory committee, City Clerk Richard Solak asked for cooperation from all parties involved.

One concern hammered out in the early morning meeting was the time and cost to be assigned to parking meters in the retail area.

The committee will recommend the following:

- Meters in front of retail shops on the Hill remain one hour, primarily for customers.
- Meters on both sides of Kercheval between McKinley and McMillan be set at two hours.
- Meters in the lot behind the Punch and Judy office building set at one hour.
- Meters in the Richard school lot set at one hour.

Solak said the meters along Kercheval will be set at 50 cents per hour. They now cost 20 cents per hour.

Meters in the Richard lot will be set at 25 cents per hour.

Solak said the thinking of the committee was to keep the short-term, convenience shoppers parking on Kercheval, while keeping longer term shoppers in the Richard lot.

The municipal lot behind the Hill shops, now being converted from a metered to an attended lot, will most likely have parking set at 25 cents for the first hour, an additional 25 cents for the second and an additional 25 cents for the third. The fourth hour would cost an additional $1.50, and the all-day rate in the lot is being recommended at $5.

Solak reiterated that the Cottage Hospital parking deck is open for customers, and he recommended that business owners inform customers that the deck is available.

He added that Cottage Hospital's B-lot, located between the parking structure and Ridge Road, is available for long-term leasing for Hill employees at a rate of $20 per month.

Solak also said new signs will be installed to help customers find parking spaces while the municipal lot is being reworked, but he stressed that education and word-of-mouth is the best way to inform customers.

A concern of several merchants is the width of the parking spaces in the municipal lot. As recommended by National Garages Inc., the firm that manages the parking structure and one likely to be operating the attended lot, spaces should be 8 feet 6 inches wide.

Some merchants felt the spaces would not be wide enough, leading to difficulty when exiting vehicles and resulting banged cars. Others felt that widening the spaces would cut down the capacity of the lot.

Solak said if the spaces were set at 9 feet wide, the capacity of the lot would drop from 195 to about 188.

In the end, the committee agreed to recommend the 8-foot-6 width, but with double lines to help people center their cars to avoid damage to other vehicles.

Leased parking in areas other than the Cottage B-lot was another item of concern for most of the people present.

Since merchants are divided on whether the city should offer leased spaces, Solak will recommend that the city offer no leased spaces. However, because many on the Hill want leased spaces, the item could be taken up at a later meeting.

He added that if the city determines that leased spaces are needed, he will bring the item back before the parking committee for reconsideration.

Solak told the committee that the gate house for the attended lot has been ordered and should arrive in the weeks following the Labor Day Weekend.

National Garages has several recommendations for the city on how to best handle the interim period between the lot opening and the gate house arrival and will meet with Solak and present solutions.

At the close of the meeting, merchants noted that Solak has worked hard to coordinate several items of concern and has offered several solutions that satisfy the majority of people directly affected by the Hill's parking capacity.

All recommendations by the ad-hoc parking committee will go before the City Council at its Sept. 11 meeting.

Seagull Beach

That's the name of the strip of land off Lakeshore near Moross, according to 5-year-old Aaron Kessler Wagner. The strip attracts numerous seagulls, and Aaron, who drives past the area with his family almost daily, decided it was an appropriate, if unofficial, name. Now his parents, Tami and Jerry Wagner, and younger brother and sister all refer to the spot as Seagull Beach. The family lives in Grosse Pointe Woods.

Excalibur Bar to put up two satellite dishes

The owner of the Excalibur Bar on Charlevoix in Grosse Pointe Park plans on installing two satellite dishes in the near future.

Excalibur owner Brian MacLean sought permission from the Planning Commission Aug. 15 to put the two 10-foot dishes on the roof of the bar, but the planners would be on the roof of the bar, but the planners thought the dishes on the roof would be obtrusive and unsightly. Planner Robert Klacza took exception to MacLean's plans. He said he felt it was bad enough for the bar to want one satellite dish on its roof, let alone two.

MacLean said the two dishes were necessary so that patrons of the sports bar could watch more than one sporting event at a time.

A compromise was reached in which the bar was given permission to install the satellite dishes on the ground behind the bar where they would not be seen by the public.

Hammond Chevrolet agrees to keep vehicles off the grass

After a round of good, old-fashioned horse trading with the Grosse Pointe Park City Council Aug. 11, the owner of Hammond Chevrolet promised to keep cars off the grass in front of his dealership on Jefferson.

Iberville Hammond came before the council to get permission to put up a GEO sign and a used car sign at the dealership, which is next to City Hall. During the discussion, several council members pointed out that they did not like Hammond parking cars for sale on the grass in front of the showroom.

Hammond promised to only put cars in front on special occasions and with written approval from the city. In return, the council gave Hammond permission to hang the new signs.

The following day there were no cars on the grass in front of Hammond Chevrolet.

Suspected armed robber runs away

A man entered a business in the 15000 block of Mack 1:45 p.m. Aug. 16, held up a paper bag and threatened the clerk in an apparent armed robbery attempt.

When the clerk fled into a back room, the would-be armed robber also fled. Six hours later the clerk made a report.

The suspect is believed to carry a rifle wrapped in a blue and white towel.

Lawnmowers, grass whips can kill young trees

The bark on the trunk of young trees, up to 3 and 4 years old, is especially thin and can be easily damaged by lawnmower bumps and scrapes and by the cutting action of grass whips, according to J.K. Abbs, of the Grosse Pointe Park Beautification Commission.

Even small nicks can interfere with the flow of water and nutrients upward to the tree's leaves by way of the inner bark or cambium, with growth severely retarded and the death of the tree resulting once the trunk has been girdled.

Richard W. Harris, professor of landscape horticulture, says, "Trees really in need of a friend are young nursery trees recently planted in an established lawn. All but the most vigorous trees will grow slowly and be a disappointment if the grass is too close to the trunk. Grass near the trunk invites debarking by the lawnmower."

Keep grass at least 16 inches from the trunks of young trees, Harris adds.

Regular deep watering and cultivation of the soil around the trunk, or the use of a mulch, such as wood chips or buckwheat hull, is also recommended.

Carl Hedeem: Featured artist at Grosse Pointe Artists Association's Fall Art Fair Sept. 9

Margie Reins Smith
 Feature Editor

Grosse Pointe Shores artist Carl Hedeem started painting seven years ago. He was 69 years old.

Since then he estimates he's completed about 150 paintings.

"At my age," he said, "I've got to paint like hell."

Hedeem is a member of the Grosse Pointe Artists Association. He will be the featured artist at the Association's 30th annual Fall Art Festival Saturday, Sept. 9 at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial.

The outdoor fair will include a selection of 150 artists and craftspeople who will display and sell their work on the grounds of the Grosse Pointe War Memorial, a co-sponsor of the festival.

Participating artists will show watercolors, oils, wood, jewelry, leather, stained glass, sculpture, pottery, fiber arts, pen and ink drawings and more. Most of the art work will be for sale.

In addition, the festival will include demonstrations, a drawing for original works of art, music by Carl Fernstrum at the portable keyboard, by the Ban-Joes and by Bill De Turk on the Carillon of Grosse Pointe Memorial Church, food and free helium balloons for kids.

No admission. Free parking.

Carl Hedeem will display a selection of his work inside the Fries Auditorium, and will be available to talk about his painting, about the Grosse Pointe Artists Association, and ... about life.

He's enthusiastic about all of these.

Upbeat, with an engaging smile, a droll sense of humor and a vast knowledge of automobile design, Hedeem is usually wearing a snappy brimmed hat, and — with a little imagination — could be called a Jimmy Durante look-alike.

His training and background are in design. Serious painting, however, is his second career.

"My granddaughter was working on a school project when she was about 9 or 10 years old," he said. "It was about Egypt. She asked for my help. I did a painting for the front of her folder. That's when I got interested in painting."

Hedeem had been general director of engineering at Fisher Body division of General Motors Corp. for 16 years when he retired 12 years ago. Before that, he spent 30 years at G.M. involved in the design, engineering, testing and manufacturing of automobiles.

He was responsible for more than several dozen automotive safety developments — engineering and design features that most of us take for granted, such as the air cushion restraint system, reduced penetration windshield glass, restraint belt systems, the side door guard beam, unitized body construction, the starter interlock system, and more.

He was also involved in the development of computer graphics to aid in the design and stress analysis of automobile bodies.

The administrator of the U.S. Department of Transportation at one time credited Hedeem with saving thousands of lives as a result of his leadership in automotive safety.

"I have no college degree," he said.

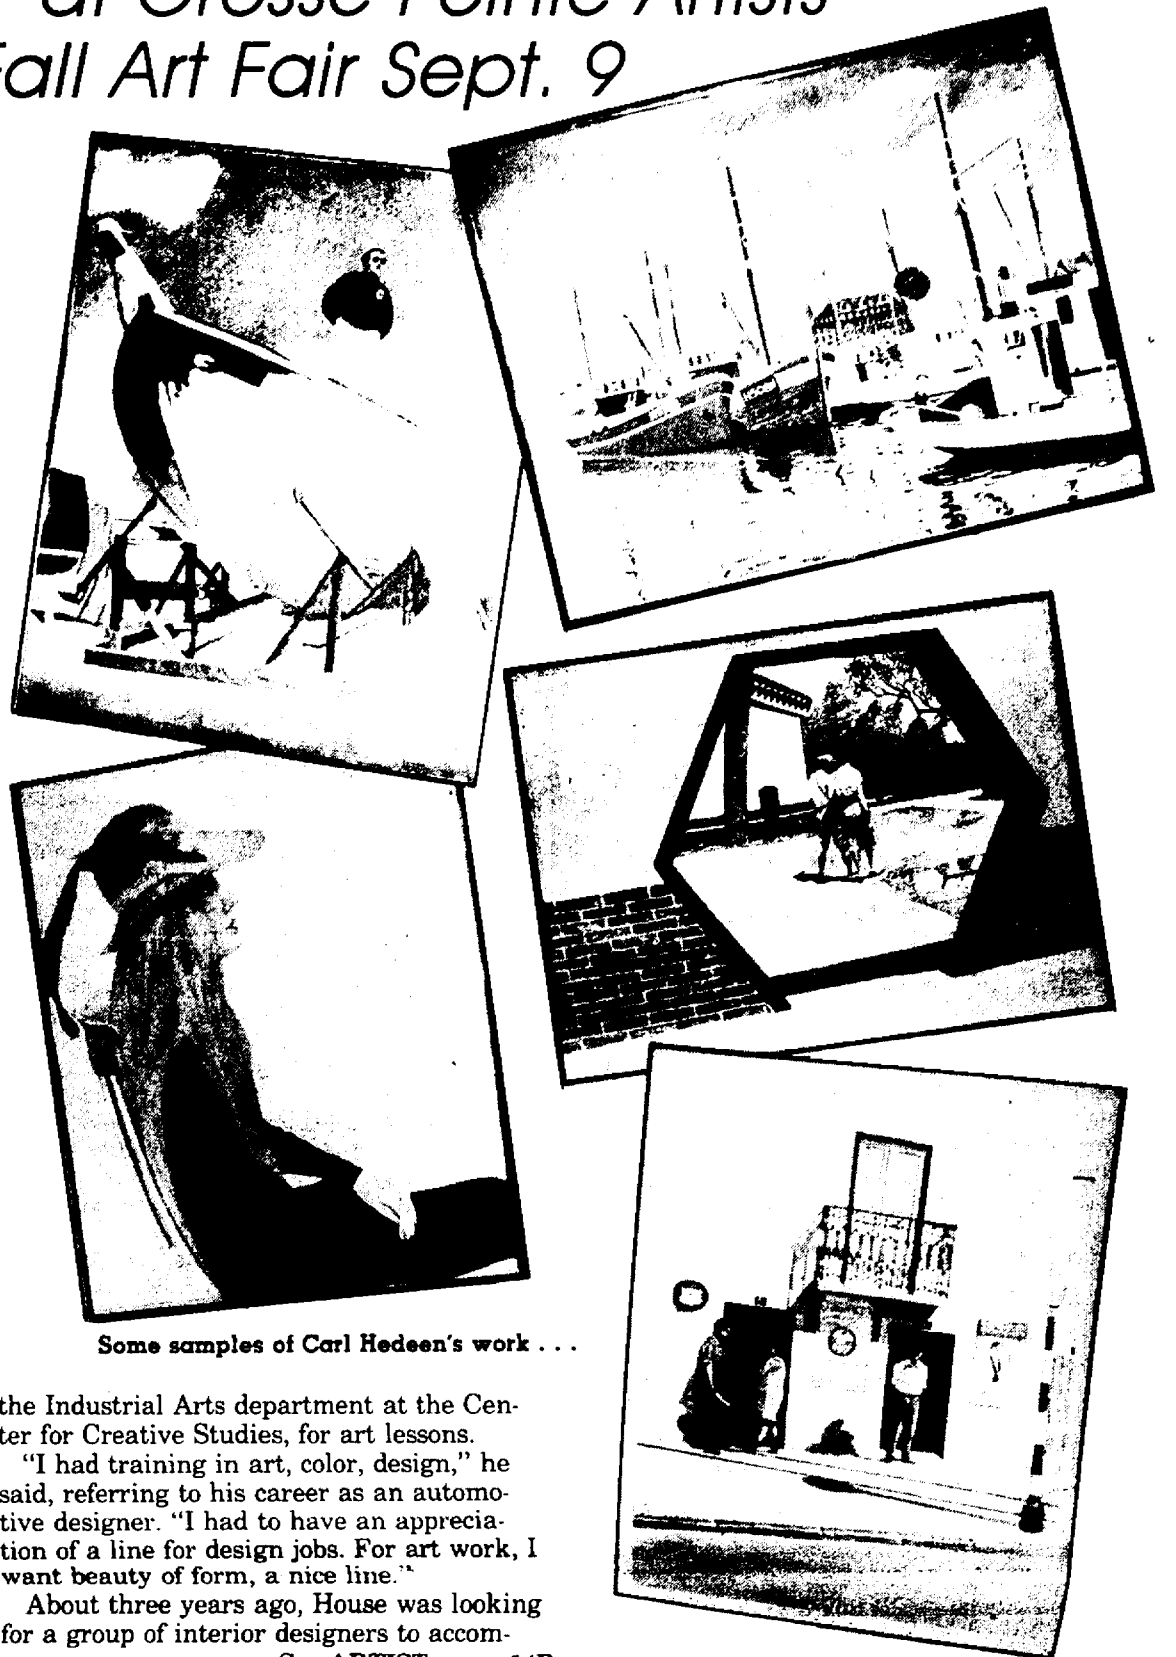

Nevertheless, at times, Hedeem had up to 7,000 people working for him; many with master's degrees and doctorates.

Hedeem said that, once he decided to pursue painting, he went to Bill House, head of the Industrial Arts department at the Center for Creative Studies, for art lessons.

"I had training in art, color, design," he said, referring to his career as an automotive designer. "I had to have an appreciation of a line for design jobs. For art work, I want beauty of form, a nice line."

New 'young-old' can shake stereotypes, pursue new goals

Now that older is younger, those who reach the age of 65 have a whole new set of options to consider.

Not too long ago, age 65 and retirement were synonymous. One day you were an active and valued member of an organization. Twenty-four hours later you were out the door. Never mind that you didn't feel any different physically or mentally.

You were 65 and you were old. To add insult to injury, you were stereotyped as old by your family as well. You felt as though you had been placed in custodial care. Those around you began to urge you to take life easy. They planned your day. They decided what you should eat and when.

Some retirees welcomed the release from work and responsibility. They were glad to sit back and let the world roll by.

Others fretted and fumed. They missed the patterned day of going to work in the morning and returning home at night.

Cottage Silver Program is designed for seniors

Senior citizens are invited to discover a variety of health and good-living tips through the Cottage Silver program at Cottage Hospital of Grosse Pointe.

A series of talks and health screenings, customized for persons 55 years and over, has just been announced, along with a Silver Symposium scheduled for Saturday, Oct. 14, featuring Martha W. Griffiths, Lieutenant Governor, as keynote speaker.

All lectures and screenings are held at Cottage Hospital. All Cottage Silver talks are free, but since seating is limited, reservations are requested. Appointments are required for most of the health screenings.

The Cottage Silver programs kick-off on Aug. 31 when Richard J. Sharon, M.D. presents "Down with High Blood Pressure," at 7 p.m. The talk is accompanied by free blood pressure

Then there were those who filled their time with hobbies cultivated over a lifetime.

How the time table has changed. Sixty-five is no longer regarded as old in the sense it once was. We have added a new dimension to life's span. What was old, is now middle-aged: 50 to 60. What was elderly, is now old: 75 and over.

Age 75 to 90 is elderly. This phenomenon of the growth of the older population is one of the most significant trends of the 20th and 21st centuries. In just 20 years the 65-plus age group grew twice as fast as the rest of the population.

By 2010 one-third will be over 55. The fastest growing segment of the population is 75-plus. Four generations of families are increasingly common.

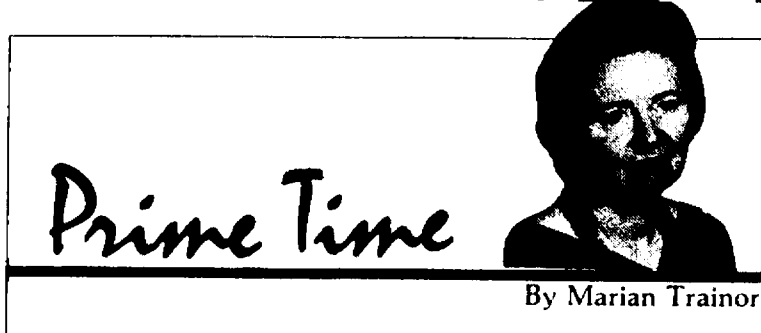

This lengthened life span has a significance to all segments of society which provide services. Advertisers are beginning to realize that "over 65" is a big market for products. Unlike the teen screenings, from 1 to 3 p.m. on Aug. 30.

"Every Woman's Concern: Cancer in Females" is the subject of Robert M. O'Bryan, M.D.'s lecture on Sept. 26, 3:30 to 5 p.m. Mammograms are offered on Sept. 19, 20, 21, 26 and 27, at a special reduced rate of $50.

Cottage Hospital also will offer its popular "Memory Improvement Workshops" on three consecutive Wednesdays, beginning Oct. 4 or Jan. 24, 10:30 to 12:30 p.m. This six-hour workshop will focus on how memory works, how memory changes, compensating for change, techniques for improving memory, and the importance of exercise, nutrition and stress management. A workbook is included in the $20 fee.

For further information or to register for this workshop, call 884-1177.

market that flourished in the '50s, they have money to spend.

We hear a great deal of comments about retirees who have little spendable income. This is true of those who live on Social Security. We are told also that most 'young-old' are on a par financially with their younger compatriots because they have incomes from private pensions and investments.

Politicians should be particularly aware of the power of this increasingly important segment of voters. Sixty-five percent of all persons age 55 to 74 vote, compared to 52 percent of the 35 to 44 age group.

Charitable institutions owe persons age 65 and older a vote of thanks. Thirty-six percent in this age group devote time to charitable and voluntary organizations.

Educators need to recognize their importance. They are eager and willing to learn new skills.

Witness the success of Elderhostel, an organization that has set up a series of educational programs on campuses across the country and abroad to provide seniors with an opportunity to travel and to have an educational experience.

Nor does this age group shy away from what might be thought of as primarily of interest to those who were born into it — computers.

Older adults are entering the computer market. In their book, "Computers for Kids Over Sixty," authors Greg Kearsley and Mary Furlong write: "Teaching seniors to be computer literate was not significantly different than teaching any other age group about computers." They found that older adults were more interested in learning programming, word processing and budgeting.

Their interest in the educational aspects of the computers fits with the national trend. A year ago, 90 percent of all software was aimed at entertainment; now 50 percent is education or home-productivity oriented.

In Menlo Park, Calif., more than 100 members of the "Little House Senior Adults Community Center" take computer classes. They use computers to pursue their interests in graphics, finances, stocks and real estate.

Pioneering is not easy and that is exactly what this newly created young-old group must do. An opportunity to partake of life on an active basis is a welcome gift. It is also a challenge. The idea of older people moving into areas formerly considered to be open only to younger groups takes some getting used to. But it is happening.

Almost daily, a newspaper or magazine carries a story about the achievements of older persons who have distinguished themselves in competitive sports or have made it as entrepreneurs. What it takes is confidence, enthusiasm and dedication.

Ordinarily the over-60 group would not be interested in a book titled "Go For It," by Irene C. Kassorla, a psychologist and family therapist who was voted one of the world's 10 most influential women by the University of California Panhellenic Council. The title suggests that here is a book of primary interest to readers starting out on their careers. Not so.

In her book, Kassorla discusses problems and situations that could occur at any age. She does so in a warm, friendly manner that inspires confidence. Each chapter ends with two succinctly capsulized columns that tells the reader what makes a loser versus what makes a winner.

Ironically, one of the biggest problems the young-old face is one shared by people of all ages — lack of confidence. Kassorla has this advice: "You have come to a crossroad. You can choose between two equally compelling directions. You can choose the familiar, comfortable road or the unfamiliar which is more productive and challenging. Along the way, you will develop new interests that will make life more rewarding."

"I believe," she writes, "the healthy way to get your revenge with death is to truly live every moment of your life now."

You have the time. Have the courage to do all the things you have been afraid to try.

You may not be one with the Pepsi generation, but your induction into the Geritol group has been postponed.

Polo will benefit Junior League of Detroit's Sibley House

Divot stamping. Is it the newest dance step?

Nope. It's something spectators are allowed — even encouraged — to do at a polo match.

Polo is apparently one of the fastest growing, least understood, spectator sports in the last few years.

Actually, polo's origins can be traced back to about 400 B.C., so the game itself is nothing new.

As a fundraiser, however, it's new.

The Junior League of Detroit's Lexus Gold Cup Polo Match is set for Sunday, Sept. 10 at the Detroit Polo Club in Milford, from 11:30 a.m. until 5 p.m.

For many who are planning to attend, it will be their first polo match.

"We're trying to get some information about the game of polo out to people ahead of time," said Mary Lamparter, chairman of the fundraiser. She said there will be more than polo during the day — plenty to keep people entertained and occupied — including: a live and silent auction under tents around the polo field; brunch or tailgate picnics; a dressage exhibition; the polo match itself; and awards afterward.

"We hope to create an atmosphere, more than a party," Lamparter said. "All who are involved are excited about this. We hope it will be a yearly event."

Mary Benfer, president of the Junior League of Detroit, is just as excited about the fundraiser, which she said "just kind of fell into our laps. Polo is an upcoming sport of great interest to the Detroit community."

Others on the committee: Shannon Agan, Cheryl Brennan, Judy Burke-Brooks, Jane Burton, Christi Cracchiolo, Terry Dietrich, Alexis Glendenning, Georgiann Henritzy, Susan Howbert, Sheila Ingwersen, Barbara Kennedy, Jan Kirk, Beth Klein, Deborah Leslie, Carrie Maliszewski, Barbara Prues, Grace Rashid, Christina Roehl, Laurie Strachan and Mary Vasse.

Honorary chairmen are Lynn and Paul Alandt.

Tickets are $75 per person for the VIP Brunch, Polo Match and Auction. For a tailgate picnic, polo match and auction, tickets are $15 for adults; $7 per child.

For more information, call the Junior League office at 881-0040.

will present the Man/Woman Show and Benefit on Sept. 10 at 6:30 p.m. at the Fairlane Town Center. It's a fashion and lifestyle event featuring fall and winter styles for the contemporary male — and female — with product sampling and demonstrations.

Help the homeless:

Want to tidy up your home and, at the same time, help homeless families and the Grosse Pointe Foundation for Exceptional Children?

How about contributing some unwanted or little-used household items to the Great American Yard Sale?

Items needed are large and small appliances, rugs, furniture, clothing, toys, kitchen utensils, linens, etc. All clean, workable, useable stuff, please.

Sponsored by Schweitzer Real Estate, Inc./ Better Homes and Gardens, the sale will take place in the cafeteria at Grosse Pointe North High School from 10 a.m. until 4 p.m. on Sept. 16.

Small donated items may be dropped off anytime at the Farms office of Schweitzer Real Estate Inc., 18780 Mack Ave.

Larger items may be taken to Grosse Pointe North High School on drop off day, Friday, Sept. 15, from 4 to 9 p.m. Or, bring items on the day of the sale starting at 8 a.m. Fifty percent of the proceeds from the sale will go to the Better Homes Foundation, an organization dedicated to helping homeless families.

The other 50 percent of the proceeds will go to the Foundation for Exceptional Children in Grosse Pointe.

"We hope many will participate," said Paul R. Schweitzer of Grosse Pointe Woods, president of Schweitzer Real Estate, Inc./Better Homes and Gardens.

"The Great American Yard Sale will be taking place at the same time in more than 135 cities and towns across the country. We're sponsoring the sale because we believe every American family should have a home."

"Homeless families have more than 500,000 children — more than half of them under age 5. It's a terrible situation and we know that people here in the Detroit area would like to help these unfortunate kids. This is a great way to do it."

The Better Homes Foundation provides services to homeless families through local community organizations and service providers. Rather than simply providing emergency shelter or food, the Foundation's mission is to address long-term problems of homeless families to help get them back on their feet and on their own again.

The Foundation also supports pre-school programs, medical, dental, vision and hearing services for children, recreational and tutoring services for children, and job training, counseling and parenting workshops.

It was founded in 1988 by Better Homes and Gardens magazine. Since last Christmas, the magazine's readers have contributed $1 million.

Call 885-2000 for more information.

No aprons needed: Tour some of Grosse Pointe's most beautifully decorated kitchens.

Cottage Hospital Auxiliary's 1989 Kitchen Tour will feature seven kitchens designed to complement the architecture of the homes and the lifestyles of the families who live in them.

The tour is set for Thursday, Sept. 14. Tickets are $8 per person; $6 per person for a group of 15 or more. They're available at Cottage Hospital's Gift Shop, Village Records and Tapes and at the door on the day of the tour.

Tickets may be ordered in advance by mail. Make checks payable to Cottage Hospital Auxiliary Kitchen Tour, P.O. Box 36363, Grosse Pointe, 48236. Include a self addressed stamped envelope.

Chairmen of the event, which will raise money for Cottage Hospital's cardiac monitoring systems, are Nanette Quinones and Mary Nolan.

Kitchens are by Mutchler, Cox & Baker Builders, Pointe Kitchens and Customcraft.

East vs. West: A group of Grosse Pointe couples, who call themselves the East Side Gators, traveled to Milford on Aug. 6 to compete against a similar group, the Milford Panthers, in the Lake Sherwood East Meets West Olympics. The tongue-in-cheek stuff got out of hand, according to Donald E. Siegel, of Milford.

The Gators team included Judy and Randy Agley, Mona and Joe Gualtieri, Mary and Ron Lamparter, Carolyn and Paul Sadows, Darlene and Tony Soave and Michelle and Morrey Taylor.

The Panthers (named after the elusive, so-called real panther who has been playing hide-and-seek with Milford residents for several years) included Jan and Bill Guran, Marj and Ron Kirchner, Susan and Jim O'Neill, Pat and Don Siegel, Sharon and Bud Stefako and Sherri and John Weber.

Competition included the Be Kind to Your Webbed-footed Friends Race (jogging while wearing swim fins), the Greater Gator Derby (a water relay on alligator-shaped rafts), the Splash and Dash (a massive water balloon fight), and La Cage Aux Folles Claiming Race (men raced, wearing women's clothing).

The Pastor's Corner

Turning times

By the Rev. Harry S. Benjamin
Associate Pastor
St. Paul Catholic Church

I consider myself most fortunate. The desk in my study looks out directly onto Lake St. Clair.

Since I arrived at St. Paul's Parish 10 months ago, I have been able to observe the many moods and changes which this body of water displays. From the autumn through the winter into spring and summer, I watched the curious mutations in the water and in the sky and I savored the haunting hues of sun and moon.

The turning times of nature find their counterparts in the events and movements of our own lives.

For those who identify their lives with God, the turning times of our lives are also the turning times of God's life and activity. It is not just we who pattern our lives on His or direct our lives to revolve around Him.

Within the Judeo-Christian tradition, it is our belief that God also accommodates us and adapts to our ways. He always has. We hope and believe that within His limits He always will.

Turning times are wonderful times. They can also be painful times. Births are exhilarating; deaths are mournful. Between birth and death fall all the upswings and downturns of life. Our times and our seasons become God's times and God's seasons. His turning times become ours. There we meet. Moment by moment, day by day, event by event, God and we humans touch and influence each other.

With the predictability as well as with all the unpredictability of Lake St. Clair, our turning times with God mark our lives. Frequently there is beauty; often there is turmoil.

But the consistency of a lake and the shimmering of its water in some way reflects upward to draw our attentions to the constancy, the fidelity and the passion of a God who is jealously in love with His creation and His creatures.

What a joy to experience — whenever and however — these turning times with God in our lives.

Colonial Church may be clock, calendar or compass

By Joy Aschenbach
National Geographic

In lonely majesty near a Chesapeake Bay village, has historic Christ Church kept a secret for more than 250 years?

Is it more than a house of worship? Does it cast shadows that tell time and count the days from spring to fall? Does it capture sunbeams by design? Is it a clock, calendar and compass? Is its stark simplicity deceptive?

Indisputably, Christ Church is an architectural gem — the best-preserved colonial church in Virginia. A registered national historic landmark, it is an imposing, mausoleum-like brick structure built around 1732 in the form of the Greek cross.

Unquestionably it was designed by an architect of sophistication, but his name and the building's plans have never been found. Some scholars believe it could be a design of the great English architect Sir Christopher Wren. Christ Church resembles Farley Church, a late 17th century country church in Wiltshire, which some authorities have attributed to Wren.

Christ Church was privately built by one of colonial Virginia's wealthiest planters, Robert "King" Carter, whose holdings covered some 300,000 acres and whose prominent descendants include Virginia governors, signers of the Declaration of Independence, and U.S. presidents.

The church's location, wrote an early descendant, was "a rather lonely one, with woods all around, few or no houses near, and no good roads."

Was it precisely aligned on this site to tell time? Were its dimensions specifically calculated to tell time?

"It's a time machine, no question about it," said H. Stephen Stewart, a longtime student of horology, the science of time measurement, who has observed the church nearly every day since last March 30.

"The whole building is a building of numbers. It's inundated with calendric, solar and lunar numbers," he told National Geographic. There are, for example, 188 brick dentils over the church's main door, and 188 days from the first day of spring to the first of fall.

Stewart said he has uncovered numerous clues to Christ Church's secrets. An oval sunbeam shines on the altar on the mean date for Easter — 14 days after the vernal equinox — and again 14 days before the autumnal equinox. The beam is captured through an oval window above the main entrance, which faces almost due west.

A similar splash of light falls on a tomb in the exact center of the church on the day halfway between the vernal equinox and the summer solstice.

A shadow cast from a cornice, Stewart said, counts the days from spring to fall as it moves up or down the outside west wall — one row of bricks a day. There are 94 days between spring and summer, 94 between summer and fall, and 94 rows of bricks between the building's water table and cornice.

"I was counting the courses of brick. When I reached 83, tears came to my eyes; I had to stop," he said. "I thought, my God, it's a calendar!"

For eight hours each day, Stewart says, the church also is a sundial, casting a shadow on the north lawn.

"No way on earth can all this be happenstance," he said. Although there's no proof, he is convinced that the church was designed by Wren, who also was an astronomer, mathematician

"Wren did this with a twinkle in his eye," Stewart said. "He's not revealing his secrets. You've got to find the trick."

Can't this be by accident? "How could that many things happen in one building and be

Journal from Oxford: Preparing for travel Church

Joseph Samulowicz, an 18-year veteran audit supervisor for Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Michigan, took advantage of the company's early retirement plan last August.

His options: another full-time job, a part-time job, volunteer work, pursuit of a hobby or travel.

"I finally had the opportunity to do some of the things I wanted to do," he said. "One of those — travel."

Samulowicz signed up for a six-week study tour to Oxford University near London, England. He chose to study the evolution of arts in England and British architecture.

Samulowicz was born and raised in Detroit. He joined the U.S. Navy after high school and was stationed in San Diego where he became active in the Old Globe Theatre and wrote for the U.S. Navy News.

He graduated from the University of Detroit with a major in finance and he took journalism and creative writing classes at Wayne State University. He has also studied painting and is active in Grosse Pointe Theatre.

Samulowicz has prepared a series of personal articles about his travel and study at Oxford. The first "Journal From Oxford" follows.

When the company I worked for offered an early out, I ran for it. The special offer consisted of a two-month window in which I had to make up my mind to accept or reject the offer. I didn't have to think. I filled out the forms, got them notarized and submitted them in record time, on the second day.

I finally had the opportunity to do some of the things I wanted to do.

One of them was traveling. Not just any travel. Traveling with a tour group and seeing 10 different countries in three weeks just didn't appeal to me. I have to travel with a purpose and have an opportunity to interrelate with people, not just my traveling cohorts.

I chanced upon an article in this newspaper about a local university offering study tours.

After some investigation, I found just what I had in mind: a six-week study tour to Oxford University near London, England. I chose to study the evolution of arts in England and British architecture.

After my decision was made, I started to tell my friends of my plans, and anybody else that would listen. Spreading the word turned out to be a good idea. People gave me contacts of friends or acquaintances to look up, special places to see and interesting restaurants and pubs to go to during my stay.

Shortly after I divulged my plans to a particular friend, I was told that the famous choir of Christ Church, Oxford, was currently on its 1989 American tour and would be making a one-day stop in Detroit at St. John's Episcopal Church.

I've seen the church hundreds of times, but have never been inside. When I arrived at the church, it seemed I was magically transported to England. The church's gothic architecture was everything I imagined the churches of England to be.

The choir consisted of 15 young boys, all sopranos, between the ages of 7 and 12, and 12 men ranging in ages from early 20s to 40s.

The choir loft in the back of the church was the setting for the first half of the concert. The selections were sung a cappella. If you've ever wondered what a choir of angels sounded like, you would have to imagine no further.

Also, the acoustics were tremendous. After intermission, the choir was positioned in front of the main altar. Several of their second-half selections included spirituals written by an English composer, Michael Tippett around 1905. It was fascinating to hear spirituals sung with a British accent.

All too soon the concert was over and an announcement was made that there would be a reception for all in the lower level of the church.

The younger choir members raced madly for the food table and weren't about to socialize with anyone, but a more casual approach was taken by the older choir members. Obviously, they were exhibiting proper English reserve. I approached several choir members about their impressions of America. They thoroughly enjoyed the people here and thought that Americans were much more open than their own people. Soon the choir director joined us. I told him that I would be going to Oxford University for a summer study program. We talked about the history of Oxford University, "Look", he said, "I tell you what — when you get to Oxford, look me up and tell me more of the history of Oxford and, in return, I'll take you to some pubs that are not touristy."

"A deal", I said. We then exchanged names and he gave me his phone number. I had another item on my agenda for when I got to Oxford. I hoped I would have time to go to classes.

The two professors leading our summer study program called an orientation meeting so that we could all get acquainted. The program was limited to 50 people. About half were from the Detroit area; the other half were from out of state: Florida, New York, Connecticut, Kansas City, etc.

The group was a nice mixture of ages, anywhere from early 20s through somewhere in the 60s. There was a high decibel level as everybody was trying to get acquainted at the same time.

One of the first things we were told, was to remember that we would be the foreigners in the country we were visiting. Customs and traditions differ. What is considered as a norm for us, is not necessarily theirs.

Body language and voice inflections are extremely important in communication with people of other countries. We were told to always be aware, and not take it for granted that our ways would be acceptable to those of other lands. We saw a video demonstrating how our voice inflections sometimes can adversely affect others. For example, anything we say has a certain sing-song fashion. No one ever speaks in a complete monotone. "Come in," can either turn someone on or off. If the "in" of "Come in" has a downward note, you're telling the other person you are not pleased. If the "in" ends on an upward note, you're implying that you're very pleased with the person's arrival.

In addition, he said Americans have an invisible bubble around themselves that means "don't invade my privacy."

When we converse with people, we do so with a certain amount of distance between us. In other countries, it's often the custom to stand closer to the person you're talking to. In the video demonstration, the American kept stepping back a foot, and the person from the other country kept coming forward. In our eyes, coming close signifies intimacy. In other countries, it's just the norm.

The lesson learned: observe people in the country you're visiting, and adapt their mannerisms.

Jet lag. We've all heard about it and most of us have been affected by it. "Overcoming Jet Lag" by Dr. Charles Ehret and Lynne Scanlon, is a three-step program to be started three days before departure. It is primarily useful if you're crossing several time zones. The diet plan consisted of high-protein breakfasts and lunches and high-carbohydrate suppers, alternating with generous servings and limited portions on certain days.

If coffee is to be consumed, it is to be taken only between 3 and 4:30 p.m.

However, on the day of departure, I was supposed to drink two or three cups of black coffee after 6 p.m. — something to do with tricking your clock.

Statistics show that it normally takes about nine days to recuperate from jet lag. With this program, the jet lag symptoms are supposed to be eliminated or reduced to one day.

The next installment will appear Sept. 7.

chance?" said P. L. Anderson, a Danville, Va., builder of colonial-style structures. "The strongest arguments are your eyes. The first time I saw the church I was struck by its extraordinary height. The architect had to have a great familiarity with astronomy and trigonometry to figure out these dimensions."

Planetarium specialist Henry H. Mitchell and astronomer Rickey Parker agreed that the design does not appear accidental. They used computers to check the church's astronomical alignment.

"We are in a wait-and-see stance," said the Rev. Thom W. Blair Jr., rector of Grace Episcopal Church in nearby Kilmarnock, which has jurisdiction over Christ Church. "This is not anything anybody has thought about before. We need solid documentation."

"I'm very skeptical," said

Kerry Downes of the University of Reading in England, who is a Wren scholar. He explained that no Wren structures in England are known to act as clocks or calendars.

"There's no evidence in any of Wren's surviving manuscripts that he was interested in calendar devices or such puzzles," said another Wren scholar, James A. Bennett, curator of the Whipple Museum of the History of Science in Cambridge, England.

There's also no evidence that any other American colonial church or structure acts as a clock or calendar, said Dell Upton of the University of California, Berkeley, who is an authority on colonial architecture. "What you have," he said, "is a lot of would haves, could haves and might haves."

Stewart, undeterred, is confident he can continue to discover mysteries in Christ Church.

Lifeline Counseling Center to offer course

"The Lord God has given me His words of wisdom so that I may know what I should say to all these weary ones." Isaiah 50:4.

This verse from Isaiah expresses in a nutshell what Lifeline is all about, according to the Rev. Mervin D. Pastorius, executive director.

Lifeline is a Christian phone counseling ministry with a staff of 60 counselors who meet the needs of nearly 700 callers each month, he said.

Lifeline is a personalized, non-profit, confidential telephone crisis counseling service designed to listen, counsel, or, when necessary, refer to professional agencies those going through any of the stressful experiences of life.

Since its inception in February 1978, counselors have handled 63,515 calls, Pastorius said.

Lifeline Counseling Center is again presenting its 15-week crisis counseling course, a series designed for those wishing to more effectively communicate their skills either as a phone counselor or as an understanding listener in their daily lives.

Among those who have taken the course are pastors, youth ministers, professional and para-professional counselors, Sunday school teachers and lay persons, according to Pastorius.

Classes are in conjunction with William Tyndale College and are held at Ebenezer Baptist Church, 21001 Moross, near I-94, beginning Tuesday, Sept. 5. Classes meet every Tuesday, from 7 to 9 p.m., through Dec. 12.

Registration will be Sept. 5; from 6 to 7 p.m.

Instruction will focus on answers to problems arising from substance abuse, child and spouse abuse, self-image, youth counseling, rape, emotional disturbances, grief and bereavement, suicide prevention, marriage counseling, biblical counseling and more.

Classes are conducted by specialists such as psychiatrists, psychologists, certified social workers, pastors and experienced professional counselors.

Bridge

HAVE A PLEASANT TRY AT PERFECTION BRIDGE BY WOODY BOYD
THE PASTEBOARD PASTIME

Few of the great players of the early era placed a great deal of importance upon bridge partnerships until the illustrious Howard Schenken put a premium upon its worth for a winning game. I'm not sure that he said, "The most important person at the table is your partner," but it's easily attributable to a Master of his magnitude.

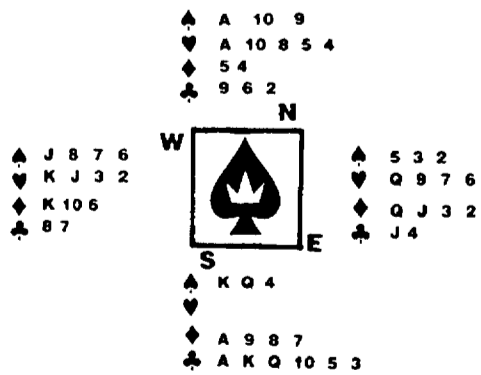

I don't think a bridge player has really matured until he's come to grips with the value of a partner relationship at the table. Once accomplished, there's no telling to what heights one's ability can carry him.

This is one of the principal reasons I try to play with many different partners. It's a wonderful challenge to work with your partner to achieve the best result. The considerate expert takes great pride in this accomplishment for he knows it's good for bridge. Our own Russell Rossen once tried to explain this to me, but at that time, some years back, his words were wasted as I couldn't grasp the significance of his wisdom. Today, the single condition I ask of that matchup is a sincere effort to develop as we pleasure at play.

On occasion these past few years, I've been fortunate enough to draw Masters of great acclaim, but usually they are everyday players who enjoy bridge tremendously and I'm rewarded when they perform like a pro.

Dr. Max Parker is one of those everyday players who really works hard at improving his game. Not so long ago, we agreed to spend an afternoon at one of Oakland's duplicate tables and the occasion was most enjoyable for me.

Max sat North and for two and a half hours he played admirably. As is the case so often, an excellent lesson hand was the last one and you will enjoy it.

The bidding at most tables got North/South to three no-trump, making eleven tricks easily.

Not so at ours! As you can see from looking at fifty-two cards, the Club slam is unbeatable and we found it...all because Dr. Parker carefully described his hand effectively with three exceptionally fine bids.

"Interior designers?" Hedeem said. "You couldn't find a better one than me. I just bought new carpeting."

He worked up a resume and was selected for the trip. He did several paintings as a result of that trip.

His house is filled with his own paintings, photographs and artwork by friends. A large painting by Joseph Maniscalco hangs over his fireplace.

He calls himself a realist and he paints almost exclusively in oils and acrylics. He's tried his hand at abstracts.

"I don't have any long range plans. I just want to be involved in artwork as much as I can. It's not an obsession."

Hedeem has sold a few — perhaps 10 paintings. He gives away much of his work.

"I think art is a marvelous way of expressing yourself. If you can sit down and do a painting that gives you a good feeling — that's worth a million dollars."

"If you're lucky enough, your peers and artist friends like what you do and that's an additional reward."

He's working on a painting of the Grosse Pointe Yacht Club — a view from Lakeshore with some children sitting on shore. He's not satisfied with it yet.

He stood back and appraised the work-in-progress.

"I want some dark stormy water and sky in the background, behind the tower." He swept a hand over the foreground. "I want to extend this tree." Three children in colorful jackets are sketched in, gazing out over the waters of Lake St. Clair.

"I found out early in this game," he said, "that I didn't want to get into a rut. The basics (of art) aren't that complex. All you've got to do is paint what you see. I do a flower just the way it looks — different shades, different tones."

"Art is just appreciation of what you see. It's not fancy. No hidden theoretical talent is involved. I just keep practicing until I get it right."

Mum's the word

Under pressure

Although the regular season doesn't begin for eight more days, football players at North, South and ULS are already feeling the effects of the new season.

When the pigskin flies on Sept. 1, the 18-day preseason will end and the nine-game regular season will commence. All the quirks are supposed to be worked out of the offense, defense and special teams, but for many teams those loose ends won't be tied until round two or three.

Quarterbacks are the players stuck in the limelight the most. We, as fans, look to them as responsible field generals who must direct their teams into the end zone. Points win games, not statistics.

In the North football camp wide receiver Charlie Stumb and quarterback Scott Bernhardt are two of the main cogs that spin Coach Frank Sumner's team. Bernhardt returns as the metro area's top passer with 1,626 yards. Stumb, a 6-foot 6-inch senior, returns as one of the midwest's top college prospects.

As a tandem a year ago, Stumb and Bernhardt connected on five touchdown passes, twice set a single-game reception record with eight catches, and finished their junior years as the top throwing and receiving connection in Norsemen history.

Pressure to repeat those feats.

At South, Brian Letscher steps under center for the second straight year and it's time for him to turn a few college scouts' heads, too. Letscher ended his junior year without throwing a touchdown pass. In fact, the Blue Devils scored all 15 touchdowns on the ground.

It's time for Letscher to show his experience and expertise. In 1988, he completed 24 of 65 passes for 376 yards. Not bad. Now, however, he's seasoned and ready to play. In camp, his passes are crisp, his confidence is up and he's in the right frame of mind. I know he's capable of averaging another 15.5 yards a toss, but more important, he's capable of spearheading South's drive to an E.M.L. title.

Rookie. Fresh. Green around the collar.

Those are just a few of the words that describe ULS quarterback Kevin Whitfield. Whitfield, perhaps more than the other Pointe quarterbacks, has more pressure to perform.

He's also got more adjusting to do.

As a sophomore, Whitfield was only a backup quarterback. He played linebacker full time. This year, however, he gives that up to take control of the offense.

Whitfield will be Coach Bob Newvine's starting quarterback on Sept. 1 at home against Harper Woods. Because of his speed — and young arm — it looks like Whitfield will perform better from the quarterback option than he will from the straight pass. Whitfield is only a junior, but his athletic ability makes him look like a senior. However, having to erase the skepticism will be tough for a player who has yet to play one full game as a starting quarterback.

Pressure at this level is great, only because the competition is great. South will remain in the E.M.L. one final year before moving into the Macomb Area Conference in 1990, and there would be no better way to leave than with a championship. If that happens, it would be Jon Rice's second in three years. North, a team which won four straight to close the season 5-4, will have its hands full as well, but should contend for the White Division hardware.

ULS is coming off its best finish (4-5) in four years, and many of the players are predicting at least a 9-0 finish.

Pressure.

South's Mike Montagne doesn't want to look back on what happened in 1988; he's just happy to be back for the 1989 football season.

'88 eye injury can't keep him out

Montagne optimistic about 1989 season

By Rob Fulton
Sports Editor

As a junior fullback in his first varsity football season, South's Mike Montagne was beginning to make a name for himself. All that ended, however, on Oct. 8, 1988.

In five previous games, Montagne rushed for 378 yards, scored five touchdowns and averaged six yards a carry. On a sun-soaked Saturday at Mount Clemens, however, Montagne's junior season came to a screeching halt when he was tossed to the turf.

Montagne, who at the time led the team in offense, was rolling with quarterback Brian Letscher on an option play. Montagne, who is now battling back as a senior for Coach Jon Rice, recalls only two things.

"There was one guy for Mount Clemens that was going to get either me or Brian," Montagne said. "Brian pitched the ball to me and all I could remember was waking up, opening my eyes and saying, 'Everything is so bright.' I couldn't understand why."

The answer was simple. The tackler wrapped up Montagne and made a legitimate tackle. When tossed to the ground, Montagne's arms were not in any position to brace his fall, subsequently his head hit first.

After being escorted off the field under his own power, Montagne received various checkups and just waited for the word to go back in. Everything was bright to him, but he also struggled to see past a cloudy spot in his left eye. After several attempts to clear the spot, Montagne realized that it wasn't going to clear.

The Blue Devils went on to beat Mount Clemens, 13-6, with Montagne on the bench.

"It was not much fun," Montagne said. "I was going to go to the hospital, but I decided that I wanted to be with the team for the second half. It was important to me to stick around and at least be with them."

Montagne knew he was out for that game and possibly the following week against Anchor Bay, but doctors advised him to sit out the remainder of the season.

At the time the injury ended his season, Montagne had been on a record pace. He had racked up 30 points (the team's third highest total on the season), rushed 61 times and tied Josh Winquist for the longest run from scrimmage, 49 yards. Numbers some ache to earn over nine games.

"I wanted to play, but the doctors assured me that I was better off not playing," Montagne said. "I had accepted the fact that the blur was there, but I had a difficult time dealing with not being able to do anything."

His diagnosis: The retina, which is the sensory tissue that lines the inside of the eye, was bruised.

"Right after it happened I had to take it easy," Montagne said, "because the eye was very delicate. I couldn't run, or lift weights, or basically do anything."

It was an adjustment for a rather active Montagne, but the risk of losing the eye was incentive enough to follow orders.

Montagne remains confident that his permanent condition may some day be erased, but is often hassled by its constant reminder.

"It's always there," he said of the blur. "Sometimes it bothers me, but it's not inhibiting. It's just a nuisance."

"Obviously, I'd like to get rid of it, but I don't know if that'll happen," he continued. "It can always go away, but chances are better that it'll continue to be permanent."

A team player, Montagne didn't worry much about his condition. He tried to maintain an ordinary schedule, but that only frustrated him.

"Not being able to play was frustrating," he said. "I felt very helpless. I was at practice everyday and at the games, but I especially felt bad because I couldn't help the guys. I didn't feel a part of the team. It was tough for me to see the guys getting pumped up, knowing I wasn't going to play that day."

After struggling aimlessly for a couple months, Montagne's outlook improved. The eye got stronger and after a few months, he began lifting weights again. Last spring, he even ran track.

"I guess you could call it a comeback," Montagne said. "I just think of it as resuming my normal life."

Since Aug. 9, Montagne was back in the saddle on the South practice field. Understandably his mind wanders back to his accident on Oct. 8. For the most part, however, he concentrates on the '89 campaign.

When asked if this would be his comeback, Montagne responded, "I don't think of it like that. I'm trying to forget it because this is a new season."

It's easier said than done.

"Every so often I begin to think about what happened," said Montagne, who is a potential 1,000 yard rusher this season. "When I begin to do that, I have to try and pick myself up and get on with things. I'm not apprehensive to hit someone, but you can't help but think about it sometimes."

The blur doesn't affect Montagne's perception of light and dark, nor colors. But, he occasionally has difficulty reading.

"Except for a word or two at times (they blend together) I don't have a problem reading," he said. "When I can't make out the words, I just adjust my head until my eyes can figure it out."

Not one to discuss his condition, Montagne is not skittish to buckle the chin strap and reacquaint himself with the sport.

"People may think I may not be able to take a hit, but I can take a hit," he said. "I can give 'em, too."

Through Coach Rice's philosophy, Montagne will not play defense, but from his fullback spot he'll do plenty of hitting.

"When I'm hitting, I don't think about anything else," Montagne said. "You've got to pretty much play reckless. If you can't go full tilt, you should be on the bench."

A place Montagne hopes to avoid this season.

"I'm not here to worry about me," said Montagne. "I'm here to help the team do as well as it can."

Welcome back, No. 44.

Smith runs away with records

Sandy Smith, the daughter of Grosse Pointe News Feature Editor Margie Smith, competed in the 1989 Metro Beach Biathlon and came away with several records.

Smith, who is currently attending the University of Michigan, finished 22nd overall, but was the first female to finish with a time of 33 minutes 28 seconds. With her time, Smith became the new record holder for the course as well as her age group (women age 18-24).

The old course record (36:30) and the age group record (39:29) were set in 1988.

Smith will be competing in the Metro Beach Triathlon on Aug. 19.

Jim Boutros, also of Grosse Pointe, finished ninth overall and fifth in the men's 18-24 division with a time of 30:31.

DRYA sailors collect hardware at ceremony

The climax of an exciting and busy eight weeks of regattas between the seven Detroit River Yachting Association (DRYA) clubs with Junior Sailing programs was the presentation of awards on Aug. 10 at the Grosse Pointe Club.

DRYA Rear Commodore Ben Gravel and DRYA Junior Sailing Chairman John Garr presented more than three dozen trophies, medals and awards to the area's top young sailors.

Both the quarterfinals and semifinals of the Sears (sailed in Flying Scots), Bemis (sailed in

Woods team wins lakefront championship

Earning a total of 372 points, the Grosse Pointe Woods swim team captured the Lakefront Swimming Association league championship on July 26.

Coming in second was the Farms with 243 points, followed by the Park (219), City (167) and Shores (87).

This year's meet had the added importance of being the tie-breaker for the dual meet championship as the Woods, Farms and Park had identical 3-1 records. By winning the league championship, the Woods claimed the dual-meet championship as well.

In addition to the titles, the Woods won trophies for the most points in the 10-and-under, 12-and-under, and 17-and-under age groups, as well as the trophy for relays. The Farms captured the 8-and-under and 14-and-under age groups.

Highlights included three league records: In the girls' 17-and-under backstroke, Heidi Mader set a new mark with a time of 33.52; in the girls' 12-and-under 50 breaststroke, Christine Jamerino did the same with a time of 36.45; and Karen Dundon broke the girls' 17-and-under 50 breaststroke record with a time of 36.66.

Pointe foursome joins forces

Locals win national baseball championship

By Rob Fulton
Sports Editor
After being reunited this summer on the baseball field, Dan Cimini, Sean Bruce, Marcus Wysocki and Dave Feys may not want to separate.

The Grosse Pointe foursome unveiled more of their talents in the National Amateur Baseball Federation (NABF) Baseball Championships in Dayton, Ohio, Aug. 11-12, by playing on the national championship team from the Adray Appliance League, Buff Whelan.

Cimini, Bruce, Wysocki and Feys, all of whom played Little League, Babe Ruth and high school ball at South together, supported a strong Buff Whelan team that went on to win the national title.

Through the years, the four athletes have combined wits for many teams, all of them successful.

The Buff Whelan team, under the direction of Dr. Joseph Arends of Bloomfield Hills, gained a berth in the national championships by winning the Regionals in Livonia the week before.

In order to get to Dayton, the Buff Whelan team survived a three game, 12-hour marathon in Livonia. The team took the field at noon Aug. 5, and didn't leave until it collected the hardware three games later around 12:30 a.m. Aug. 6.

"That was our test," said Arends. "We knew that if we could survive three games and 12 straight hours of baseball, that we would survive in Dayton."

The team's mettle was better tested in the NABF finals.

The Buff Whelan team was six outs from elimination in game two, but scored nine runs in the bottom of the eighth inning to beat Dayton, 10-6. In that game, Cimini led the team with three hits, Bruce had a pair of singles and Feys knocked in the go-ahead run with a triple.

"I can remember standing in the coach's box at third base in that second game and worrying about checking out of the hotel, getting the kids something to eat and heading home," said Arends. "But it turned out to be a Hollywood comeback."

With all the glitz of Tinsel Town, the Buff Whelan team, which finished the season 29-17, forgot about a 17-10 loss to Miami, Ohio, in the opener, and concentrated on improving its 1-1 record. Still facing elimination with one more loss, Buff Whelan took on New York City in game three.

In that game, Wysocki smacked three hits, Feys two and Bruce two, but the big play of the game came when the fleet-footed Cimini ran down a ball in the gap in the ninth inning.

With two outs and the Whelan team up 13-6, New York City cut the gap to 13-9 and loaded the bases. The next New York batter made a bid to tie the game, but Cimini dashed to the ball at the 395 mark and hauled it in on a diving catch to end the game.

"My belief was that if Dan Cimini can't get to the ball, nobody can," said Arends. "He's the fastest player I've ever coached. He's got tremendous speed."

After that, the team called itself the Cardiac Kids. Fitting, too, that Arends is an M.D.

In game four, it was Wysocki, a 1988 South graduate that made the house call.

Wysocki gave up three earned runs in eight innings pitched to earn the 9-4 win over Miami, the same team Buff Whelan lost to in the tourney opener.

Helping his own cause in the semifinal game, Wysocki had two RBI on a triple and single. Bruce, who completed the tourney by batting .400 (8 for 20), had three hits, including a triple, and Cimini, who will play ball at U of D this year, had one hit.

The only story in game five — the finals — was the sterling performance by Whelan left-hander Kevin Knoche. Knoche, who was later named the tournament Most Valuable Player, tossed the only shutout of the series, 4-0, over Miami.

Knoche retired 17 of the first 18 batters he faced, and tossed a no-hitter through 5 2/3 innings. "I don't think the whole thing has even settled in yet," said Arends. "We were six outs away from being eliminated and eventually won it all."

Arends' son, Dave, who attends Hillsdale, finished as the tourney's top hitter with a .429 average. Over the final three games, Bruce was six of 11. Wysocki batted .316 and Cimini finished with a .333 clip to go with six stolen bases.

Country Club swimmers finish strong season

The Country Club of Detroit swim team finished another outstanding season by winning all of its six dual meets, and claiming the White Division trophy of the Michigan Inter-Club Swim Association.

Individual performances highlighted the season, but so did the team's sixth-place total of 384.5 points in the M.I.C.S.A. Championships held at the Lochmoor Club on July 29-30.

Beth Weyhing highlighted the championship meet for CCD with a first place in the 13-14 year-old 50 freestyle. Weyhing took the medal in a time of 29.47. Andy Shelden, Powell Peabody, K.C. Cleary and Rory Cleary won the 8-and-under mixed freestyle, and set a M.I.C.S.A. record with a time of 1:12.54.

In the 8-and-under division, the mixed medley relay team of Tracy Gehlert, Bracken Zimmerman, Nicholas Clark and Charlie Starr took eighth place. Rush Zimmerman placed 11th in the girls' 25-yard breaststroke, and Sarah Gehrek finished sixth in the girls' 25 backstroke. Tracy Gehlert was 10th in the 25 back, and Powell Peabody was sixth in the 25 free and seventh in the 25 butterfly.

For the 8-and-under boys, Andy Shelden finished second in both the 25 back and 25 fly, and Rory Cleary took two fourth-place medals in the 25 breaststroke and 25 free. Nicholas Clark was seventh in the breaststroke and ninth in the fly.

Leading the strong contingent of 9-10-year-old girls was Erin Coyle. Coyle finished second in the 50 backstroke and 50 free. Libby FitzSimons placed second in the 50 breaststroke, and teammate Dan Howbert took fifth.

Anne Magreta came in sixth in the 50 free and seventh in the 25 fly. Ann Clark was 12th in both the 50 breaststroke and the 25 fly. Ellie FitzSimons rounded out the scoring for the 9-10-year-old division with an 11th place in the 25 fly.

In the 11-12 age group, Betsy Belenky took a fourth in the 50 fly and fifth in the 50 backstroke. Anne Petz was seventh in the 50 breaststroke and 12th in the 50 free. Elizabeth Bourke came in eighth in the 50 fly.

For the boys, J.B. Peabody finished second in the 50 fly and sixth in the 50 free. Jeff Shelden had a fine day with a seventh in the 50 fly and an 11th place in the 50 breaststroke. Ryan Milligan placed eighth in the 50 fly and 11th in the backstroke. Topher Ollison picked up points with a 10th place in the 50 backstroke.

In addition to her win in the 13-14 50 free, Beth Weyhing took a second in the 50 fly. Fitz Ollison scored for his 10th-place finished in the 50 free and John Turnbull came in 11th in the 50 back.

In the 15-16 age group, Susan Quilter took a fifth in the 50 breaststroke, and Neil Weyhing came in ninth in the 50 free and 10th in the 50 backstroke. Jason Power performed well with a 10th in the 50 fly and 12th in the 50 breaststroke. Bo Ollison finished sixth in the 50 breaststroke and 10th in the 50 free.

The medley relay team of Erin Coyle, Betsy Belenky, Beth Weyhing and Susan Quilter took second, and the freestyle relay team of Anne Magreta, Anne Petz, Carolyn Begg and Quilter finished sixth.

The boys' medley team of Jordan Damm, J.B. Peabody, John Turnbull and Bo Ollison, and the freestyle relay team of Jordan Damm, Jeff Shelden, Fitz Ollison and Neil Weyhing both placed eighth.

Katie Young and Stephanie Beckenhauer assisted coach Tim Kennary this season.

The record-setting 8-and-under relay team from the Country Club of Detroit consisted of Powell Peabody, Rory Cleary, Andy Shelden and K.C. Cleary.

Jason Jaworski, Mike Haskell and Colm Moore, were selected to the All-American team for their outstanding performance at the AAU National Baseball Championships in Cincinnati.

The 18 members of the Grosse Pointe Babe Ruth All-Star baseball team went to Cincinnati looking to win the first-place trophy, but instead was content to pick up the next best thing.

The team, consisting of 14-year-old All-Stars from the Farms-City-Park Babe Ruth League, and the Woods-Shores league, compiled a 5-3 second-place record in the AAU 1989 National Baseball Championships.

Twenty of the finest teams from around the nation competed in the eight-day tournament, which veteran observers described as one of the most competitive tourneys in memory.

Most of the teams invited to play had won a state, regional or district title. The Grosse Pointe team, coached by Paul DiLaura and Bob Johnston, and managed by Joe Spada, was invited on the basis of recognition earned by the 1988 Woods-Shores 13-year-old Babe Ruth state champs.

Grosse Pointe's three losses were to the national champion and host team, Cincinnati Nuckols. The Michigan team beat teams from Arkansas, Pennsylvania, Wisconsin, Iowa and Florida, to gain a berth in the championships.

In addition to the honors earned by the team, third baseman/pitcher Mike Haskell, outfielder/pitcher Jason Jaworski, and shortstop Colm Moore were selected to the 15-member AAU All-American team. The team members were selected by opposing managers.

The tourney, which was organized in Olympic format, had five pools of four teams each, with the top two finishers moving to the championship round. Grosse Pointe finished second behind Nuckols in its pool and in the championship round.

An outstanding comeback in the bottom of the seventh pushed Grosse Pointe past the Florida Gold Coast team and into the championship game.

Trailing 5-2, the Michigan team put together singles by Tom Rajt and Eric Lindsay, followed by Aaron Michael's triple to right center. Moore followed with a single to score Michael, stole second and scored the game-winning run on Kevin Brennan's single. Fifth-inning singles by Scott Spada, Lindsay, Michael and Moore accounted for the other three runs.

Coming off a seven-inning performance on just two days rest, Jaworski pitched 6 2/3 innings, allowing just six hits.

Tom Kolojeski came in with runners on and two outs to finish the game.

The championship game immediately followed the Florida victory, and the Grosse Pointe team got pounded, 15-3, by Nuckols. Grosse Pointe played well, but could not overcome the Nuckols' relentless hitting. Grosse Pointe scored in the fifth when Danny Devlin singled, Mike Klobuchar walked, Adam Hogan took first on a fielder's choice, Moore singled, Mark Dakmak walked and Tony Romolino doubled to right.

The Grosse Pointe team was well-rounded, with several players moving into a variety of positions and role players Kevin Magee and Kurt Barr pinch hitting and filling in at third and outfield, respectively.

Tony DiLaura started seven games at catcher and threw out six would-be base runners.

In the first game of pool play, the combined pitching efforts of Fritz Coyro and Jaworski, backed by a seven-hit performance, gave the Pointers a 4-3 win over Arkansas.

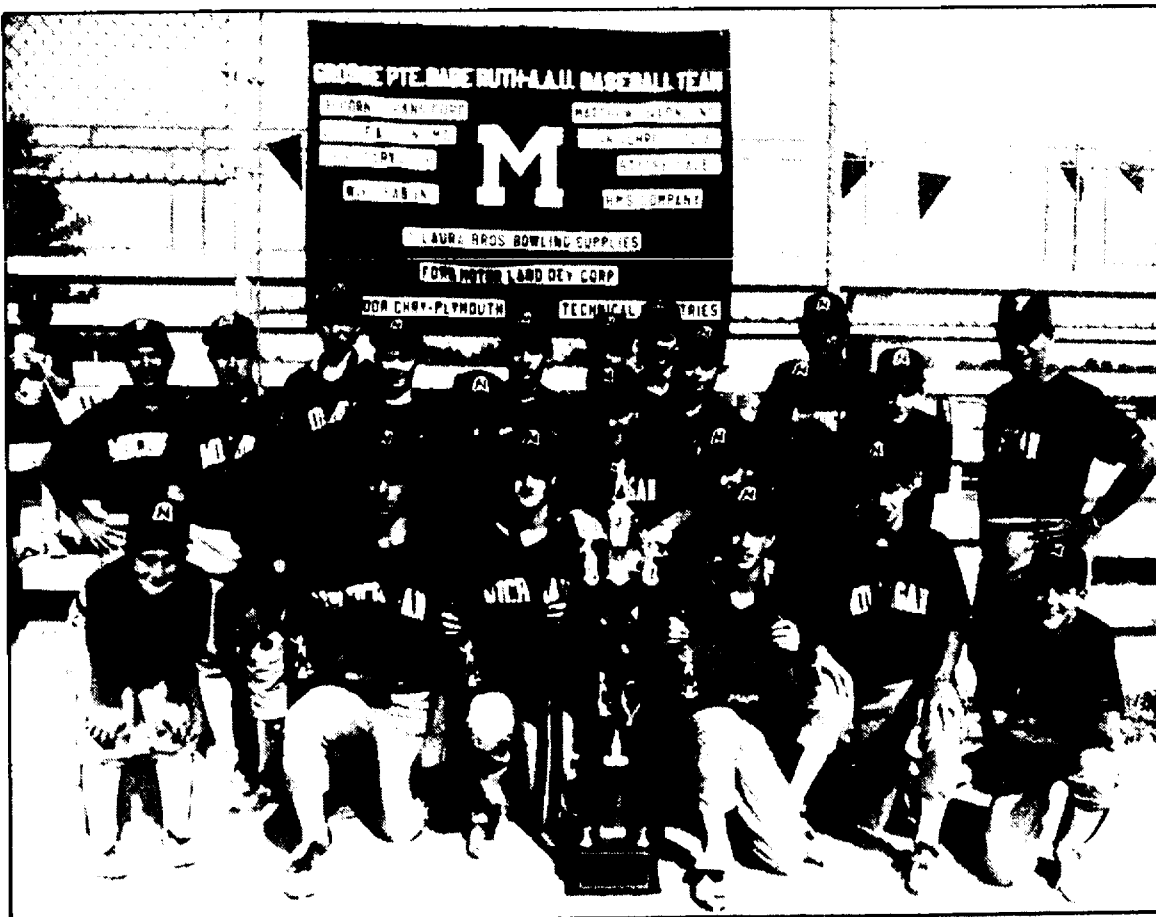

Scott Spada led the way with two extra base hits, and Brennan cracked a triple.

A six-run first inning by Nuckols proved too much for Grosse Pointe, as it suffered an 11-1 drubbing in the second game of pool play. Aaron Michael and Kolojeski pitched well in relief. Spada contributed a hit and scored the only Michigan run. Haskell and DiLaura also hit safely.

In the final game of the preliminary round, Grosse Pointe jumped out to a 3-0 lead over Pennsylvania and held on for a 6-5 win.

With the aid of a Moore single, two walks and a couple errors, Michigan took the lead. Pennsylvania tied the game with three hits and a walk in the second, but Grosse Pointe regained the lead on two walks and a wild pitch.

In the third inning, Jaworski and Brennan laced back-to-back doubles. In the sixth, with the score deadlocked at 5-5, Moore hopped aboard on an error, stole second and moved to third on Haskell's bunt. Haskell put himself in an intentional rundown between first and second, and

The Michigan team, consisting of all Grosse Pointe ball players, exchanged hats with the national-championship team, Nuckols.

Buhl surges into SAAB racing lead

After earning his third consecutive pole position, Robbie Buhl ran away with his fourth consecutive race car win in the Barber-SAAB Pro Series. This time it came at Heartland Park in Kansas.

With the win, Buhl, a Grosse Pointe native, has five victories in nine races, and a commanding lead in points (150) and earnings, $56,000, with three races to go.

Buhl is now the odds-on favorite to win the season series of 12 races. The season's champion, determined by each driver's 10 best races, wins a $100,000 career enhancement award. Buhl's nearest competitor is England's Justin Bell, who has 117 points.

Winning his third consecutive pole position, Buhl was a half second faster than the rest of the field. However, he lost the lead to arch rival Bell in the difficult 90-degree first turn, eventually falling to fourth. By lap four, Buhl had worked his way back to second place, waiting for his chance to pass.

Passing was made easier when Bell's car was grounded with a broken drive shaft on lap 11. Buhl then raced out to a 20-second lead before he suffered car problems.

"With three laps to go, I started to run out of gas," said Buhl, 25. "So I started shifting at 4500 rpms instead of 6000 and I zig-zagged on the straightaways to slosh fuel into the left side intake port. I was able to conserve my fuel and I only lost 10 seconds of the lead in the process."

Ironically, Buhl bested his qualifying speed by almost a full second on lap 14 when he toured the 2.5-mile track in 84.985 mph.

With a 33-point lead over Bell, Buhl remains confident he can take the $100,000 purse.

"There are three races left and anything can happen," said Buhl. "These are expert drivers in this series, and you have to remember that they get to drop their two worst races in determining the final points."

The Barber-SAAB series reconvenes on Sept. 10 at Sears Point, Calif.

All-State

Four members of the Class C-D state champion University Liggett School tennis team have been named to the Class C-D All-State tennis team by the Michigan High School Tennis Coaches Association. Earning first-team honors are Anthony Abiragi '90, Sean Byrne '90, Mike Niccolini '89 and Doug Wood '90. Niccolini and Wood won the No. 1 doubles title at the state championships in June. Byrne and Abiragi were runners-up at the states in No. 1 and No. 2 singles, respectively. For Wood, the All-State tennis honor marks the third time in the 1988-89 he has achieved first team All-State status. Wood was also named to All-State teams in soccer and ice hockey.

State champs!

Pointe Aquatics head coach Mike O'Connor celebrates on poolside with his 11-12 year-old girls' state champion 200-meter medley relay team. Champions are, front, Christine Jamerino and Suzette Atrasz. Back, Betsy Belenky and Suzanne Toledo. The girls also placed third in the 200 free relay at the state championships.

Also, the Pointe Aquatics team will be holding its Open House on Saturday, Sept. 9 from 10 a.m. to noon at the Grosse Pointe North Pool. O'Connor will be on hand to make necessary group assignments. New swimmers should bring a suit and towel and must be able to swim at least one full length of the pool. Everyone interested is invited, and this is the final registration for the fall season, which runs from Sept. 11 to Nov. 22. For more information, call Debbie Dumler at 881-9182.

Sorenson offering aerobic class on Sept. 11

An aerobic course, choreographed for the non-dancer, is being sponsored by Jacki Sorenson Aerobic beginning Sept. 11.

The classes are medically approved and last 12 weeks. Participants will work on firming the body and strengthening the cardiovascular system. Classes are self-paced, with persons monitoring their own heart rates and calories burned.

Classes are being held at Barnes School on Mondays and Wednesdays from 9 to 10 a.m., and at Parcels on Mondays and Wednesdays from 7 to 8 p.m.

To register, call 881-5183.
