Return trip to Holland renews memories for ex-GI

By Ronald J. Bernas

Laddy A. Rice was part of the 7th Armored Division which helped to liberate Holland from Nazi rule during World War

Rice returned recently from Holland -this time as a guest of its government which spent a week entertaining a group of ex-soldiers who did their own small part in the country's liberation.

"Remember September" is the name of the week-long celebration which is to Holland what the Fourth of July is to America. But it's more.

Stichting Nederland-Amerika is one of a number of non-profit organizations in Holland that bring ex-soldiers to the celebrations which include parades, parties and other events, as a way of thanking them.

Holland, neutral before the war, has never forgotten the wounds caused by Nazi Germany. Although they have healed, the scars remain.

"These organizations were formed to ingrain and impress upon their children and each other the need to work together for peace and to never allow what happened to happen again," Rice said.

Eighteen ex-GIs were brought back to Holland, many of whom Rice served with. He has seen some of them, occasionally, at reunions of the 7th Armored Division, but he has never been back with them to the place they served.

"It was a humbling yet rewarding experience," Rice said. "A lot of memories there.'

Rice was nominated by the 7th Armored Division and was chosen to attend the festivities by Stichting Nederland-Amerika.

The guests were taken to military museums, many of which had original Allied and Axis power war vehicles such as oneman submarines, amphibious vehicles and the famed half-track, which had a tank backside and wheels on the front. Although Rice worked building military machinery for Chrysler, the sight of these old tanks took him back.

"I guess once an old soldier, always an old soldier," he said.

A remembrance ceremony in Arnhem which honored those from other countries who fought and died for Holland was attended by some 3,500 people, including a representative of Holland's royal family. It was one of the most moving events of the week - especially when hundreds of school

Attorney Mary Nasser, representing the Wayne County Board of Canvassers, was asked by Gribbs why the county board failed to report the recount results to the state, as required by state law.

Nasser said that board members believed Mrs. Gracey had used undue influence in delivering ballots to voters, therefore the votes were megany obtained. Nasser was not able to produce evidence to that effect.

After lectures by Gribbs and Sullivan on the importance of the county board performing its duty, Nasser was instructed to assemble the county board and report the results of the Sept. 29 recount to the state canvassing board within 24 hours.

Gribbs added if the county board would have reported the results of the recount to the state, as required by law, the issue would have been settled long

"The county board is the primary problem in that process,' Gribbs said.

Sullivan added that the county board acted on allegations rather than evidence. Lawrence Friedman, an attorney representing candidate Gracey, said even if the absentee ballots were mishandled by Mrs. Gracey, the votes were legal and should not be thrown out because of allegations of illegal activity.

"State law says the misdelivery of ballots does not invalidate the votes," Friedman said.

Park man arrested after 80 mph chase

A 28-year-old Grosse Pointe Park man was arrested and charged with drunk driving after traveling 80 mph down Mack Avenue Oct. 24.

A Grosse Pointe Woods officer first spotted the man at 11:58 p.m. traveling westbound at a high rate of speed. Though the Woods officer gave chase and had the police car traveling at 90 mph, he never was able to get close enough to clock the suspect's actual speed or able to get his license plate number.

At Cadieux and Mack, the Woods officer broke off the chase because he lost sight of the suspect's car.

Responding to a police broad-cast, Park officers spotted the suspect traveling 80 mph without lights westbound on Mack at Nottingham. The officers followed the suspect to his home in the 1400 block of Maryland. The driver of the car, after twice failing a Breathalyzer test, was arrested and charged with drunk

Advertising critic takes on $65 billion alcoholic beverage industry

By John Minnis Assistant Editor

When Jean Kilbourne takes on an enemy, it's a big one.

A nationally known media critic, Kilbourne travels the lecture circuit exposing audiences of concerned parents and residents to the real truth in adver-

While she considers all aspects of the $100 billion advertising industry fair game, Kilbourne came to Parcells Junior High School last week to talk specifically about alcoholic beverage advertising. Kilbourne's presentation, "Under the Influence: Pushing Alcohol via Advertising," was sponsored by the Substance Abuse Community Council, a community organization in the Grosse Pointes known as SAC?. The trilogy of speakers in SAC2's fall series "We've Just Begun to Fight!" concluded with Michigan drug czar Donald Reisig Wednesday. The first speaker was Peter Bell, a nationally known drug abuse preventionist.

Kilbourne pointed out that the $65 billion alcohol industry spends $1 billion a year in this country advertising its products.

Throughout her presentation, Kilbourne said that many of her startling statistics concerning alcohol and advertising come from the National Council on Alcohol-

"America has a drug problem," she told the well-attended gathering at Parcells, "but for now it is alcohol.

"The war on drugs has to include the No. 1 drug. It's a sham if it doesn't.'

A compelling speaker on her own, Kilbourne spiced up her presentation with slides of not only statistics but also of alcohol advertisements taken out of magazines and from television.

Each advertisement is designed to send a message. The message may be consciously unnoticeable to the viewer, but it's there nevertheless. Kilbourne said the ads are clearly and expensively designed to leave a message, and you don't have to look at the ad for more than a few seconds because they're designed to grab the reader.

What kind of messages?

· Alcohol is fun. It's cool. Alcohol provides security, happiness. · Alcohol is a means to, and a symbol of, success and power.

· Alcohol makes you sexy and makes sex possible.

 Alcohol is a means to seduce a reluctant female.

Oops, wrong yard

A resident in the 300 block of Rivard in Grosse Pointe City called police Oct. 28 to complain about a load of dirt that was dumped in her front yard.

Apparently, landscapers mistakenly dumped the dirt in the wrong yard. The next door neighbor was supposed to get the topsoil.

While police advised that a misplaced dirt pile was a civil matter, the officer checked with the resident Monday and learned that the dirt had been moved and she was satisfied.

 Alcohol provides security and self-esteem.

· Alcohol provides friends and is a friend.

These are just a few of the rewards of alcohol as presented by advertisers, and if these messages strain credulity, take for example the ad that reads: "If your date won't listen to reason, try Velvet Hammer."

"You certainly may not believe any of my interpretations," Kilbourne said, "but the important thing is to get out and look for yourself.'

Looking is easy. Each day we are bombarded by 2,000 ads. On network television, there are some 5,000 beer ads a year. And these ads are selling far more than products; they're selling values, image and concepts of success, worth, love and sexuality, popularity and what is perceived to be normal.

Furthermore, Kilbourne claims, alcohol advertisers are seeking drinkers at younger and younger ages. Why else would dogs be used to promote beer, she asks. She said the beer advertisers will say Budweiser's Spuds MacKenzie is designed to appeal to men 25 to 40 years old, but if that's the case, Kilbourne wonders why Spuds isn't also selling cars and insurance?

She said alcohol advertisers, like cigarette advertisers, say they are not trying to recruit new customers; they're only trying to help existing drinkers make brand decisions. But with 1,000 people a year dying from alcohol, how can the advertiser not seek new drinkers?

"If your product is killing people, you have to recruit new users," Kilbourne said.

Alcohol advertisers will also proudly point out that they are taking a stance promoting responsible alcohol use. Even Spuds knows when to say when. But Kilbourne wonders if the alcohol industry really wants drinking in moderation, or if it really wants a world free of alco-

She pointed out that if all the country's existing drinkers decided to drink to moderation two drinks a day, which is a lot - the alcohol industry would be destroyed.

One half of the all the alcohol produced is consumed by 10 percent of the drinkers. And is it any coincidence that one out 10 drinkers is an alcoholic, Kilbourne asks? "If all alcoholics dried up, the industry would be ruined," she said. "Alcoholics are the best customers. Do the (alcohol) manufacturers really want this?"

Kilbourne, who has a doctorate in education, has two films and a book on the cumulative impact of advertising on individual attitudes, values and behavior and on society as a whole.

While she criticizes the detrimental impact of advertising, she said she is not a censor, a destroyer of the First Amendment or a prohibitionist.

"Our greatest threats to freedom are giant corporations promoting alcohol use, no matter what the costs to public health, for profits," Kilbourne said.

While one solution to the negative effects of alcohol advertising on television would be to ban alcohol ads, Kilbourne said she much prefers counter-advertising. She favors an increase in the federal excise tax on alcohol and using part of the additional revenue to pay for counter-advertisements.

She said counter-advertising or rather the threat of it worked beautifully on getting rid of cigarette ads on television. Kilbourne said tobacco ads weren't banned from television, as many believe, but rather they were deliberately stopped by the advertisers who didn't want counter-advertising being shown.

Besides the tax increase and counter-advertising, Kilbourne also favors former Surgeon General Everett Koop's recommendations on alcohol, which included warning labels on alcoholic beverages. The warning labels have already been approved. Kilbourne recommended that people write their congressmen and urge them to adopt Koop's recommendations.

She said that while it seems an impossible task to change people's perceptions and norms concerning alcohol, it's not impossible. Again, she said to look at what happened with smoking. Gradually people's views changed and today smoking is socially unacceptable.

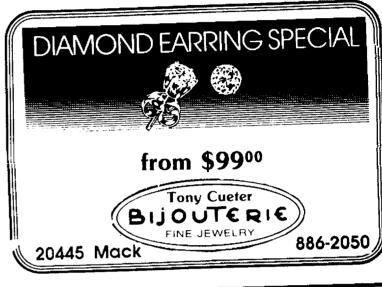

Perhaps the same thing will happen with drinking. Already the message about drinking and driving is starting to take hold. Maybe drinking alcohol is the next social custom to become ta-

Kilbourne said she personally does not consume alcohol because she has made a deliberate decision not to drink. She is not

Some 35 percent of Americans abstain from drinking; 32 percent are light drinkers, 22 percent drink moderately, and 11 percent are heavy drinkers.

Of the one out of 10 drinkers who is an alcoholic, only 5 percent are on skid row.

"The overwhelming majority of alcoholics are functioning in the world in high-powered jobs and with families," Kilbourne said, "and alcohol will eventually kill them.'

She served as president of the South Choir Booster Club, was a volunteer with the Blue Dolphins swim team and organized the first South High Madrigal Dinner. She led the $25,000 fundraising drive to send the South Choir to Disney World.

A longtime school volunteer, Janet Miller has spent the past three years working on behalf of the North High Choir. She organized fundraisers, handled performance details, and made choir's trips to Chicago and Washington, D.C. Miller also planned the choir breakfast, did the make-up for "West Side Story," and met with the staff bi-weekly to help coordinate all choir activities.

The 1989 Board of Education honorees were chosen by a special committee of the board composed of Carl Anderson, Jane Nutter and Carol Marr, who served as chairperson.

The awards were presented by President Jon Gandelot and Superintendent John Whritner, following a reception in the Community Room at Parcells Middle School.

All candidates in the Pointes 'well-qualified'

s Grosse Pointers prepare to go the polls next Tuesday, we want to make a few comments about our practice of endorsing candidates in the municipal contests as well as about several other election matters.

In response to several complaints about our endorsements, we remind our readers that as the only newspaper of record in the Grosse Pointes, we have a responsibility to express our opinions as well as report the news that affects this community.

Our endorsements reflect only our opinions which, however, are based on our study of the candidates' experience, background and records in public service and the personal interviews we had with all of them. Even so, it is obvious that many people have views about candidates that are different from our own. We respect those voters' rights to make their own determination. That, after all, is in the democratic

In fact, we agree with our critics that the candidates whom we failed to support are excellent people. Once again the Pointes have distinguished themselves by offering excellent slates for all the positions to be filled at the election. And as we said in many of the specific endorsement editorials, the candidates are all well-qual-

If that sounds a bit like humorist Garrison Keillor's description of the children of the mythical community of Lake Woebegon in Minnesota - who are all above average in intelligence - we would agree but emphasize that these excellent people who are running for elective office here are all real, live Pointers.

Whether we're talking about candidates for mayor, council, judge or even the school board, whose candidates do not run in this election, the caliber is universally high and it is seldom that anyone except a highly qualified candidate seeks a local of-

These people certainly don't run because of the money involved. The city of Grosse Pointes Woods pays its mayor $1,500 a year, its council members $1,000 and the municipal judge $7,500; the Farms pays its mayor $900 a year, its council members $600 and its judge $12,000; the Park pays its mayor and its council members no salary but does pay its municipal judge $12,000, and the City pays its mayor and council members nothing but provides $5,250 as the salary of its municipal judge.

The Shores, which held its election last spring, does not pay its president or trustees anything and does not have an elected municipal judge. The Board of Education, whose annual meeting also comes in the spring, pays members $30 per meeting.

So why do these people run?

For the most part, they are people dedicated to maintaining and even improving the quality of life in the Pointes. Some have special issues in which they are interested but all want to maintain municipal services at their current high level, keep taxes as low as possible without endangering the quality of those services and respond to the needs of local people.

Another point we wish to make: This year more concern than in past years was expressed about environmental problems by candidates in all of the Pointes.

The problems include ways to alleviate the Milk River overflow that pollutes Lake St. Clair, the need to continue the recycling pilot program recently begun in the Pointes, the necessity of improving the operations of the Grosse Pointes Clinton Refuse Authority, and especially the resumption of its incinerator operation, and monitoring the increased air and noise pollution in the Pointes caused by expanded airline services at the Detroit City Airport.

These are only a few of the issues of vital concern that our citizens are confronting and for which they seek answers. We cite them to emphasize the important responsibilities these public-spirited candidates are willing to undertake on behalf of the rest of us.

We remind voters that the decisions are theirs to make Nov. 7 and that their responsibility is to inform themselves before they go to the polls. We offered our news reports and editorial endorsements to meet our responsibility to help inform the voters about the choices available when they cast their ballots.

Those Proposals A and B

ublic opinion in Michigan appears to be so widely split that neither of the proposals that will be on the state ballot Nov. 7 to increase funding of public education is likely to be approved.

For Grosse Pointers, we think excellent advice about the positions to take on Proposals A and B comes from the Grosse Pointe Board of Education as well as from Rep. William R. Bryant Jr. who represents the Grosse Pointes in Lansing.

In a recently adopted resolution, the school board said it takes no position on Proposal A because it "neither helps nor harms the Grosse Pointe Public School system," but opposes Proposal B because it "restricts the amount of taxes that can be raised locally.'

It went on to say that Proposal B "in essence makes the Grosse Pointe public school system largely dependent on the state for its funding, a change this board views as extremely detrimental to the tradition of excellence for which this school system is known.'

Rep. Bryant, who is a member of the House Taxation Committee which worked on both proposals, has distributed to his Pointe constituents excellent summaries which express "point" and "counterpoint" as well as the ballot wording for each one.

However, 'in earlier columns in the Grosse Pointe News and in discussions with News people, Bryant has taken no position on Proposal A but has strongly opposed Proposal B on the grounds it would be unfair to districts like the Grosse Proposal A provides for a half-cent increase in the state sales tax with the revenues devoted to public education. Proposal B would hike the sales tax by two cents but only about one-quarter of the revenue would be devoted to the schools with the rest providing for property tax relief.

The News has no strong feeling about Proposal A because its approval would not affect the Grosse Pointe school district very much. But it agrees with the critics of Proposal B that a cap on local spending for education would not be in the best interests of the Pointes or other districts which currently receive little state aid and finance most of the costs of public education themselves.

Instead, Proposal B would seem to promote egalitarianism and would do little to achieve its goal of narrowing the gap between districts that now provide adequate funding and those which now find it difficult to meet even minimum requirements.

for the JOA An argument

obody knows what the Supreme Court will do about the Detroit newspapers' application for a joint operating agreement (JOA) on which oral arguments were heard Monday.

But we think a strong argument in support of the JOA that would keep the two newspapers alive but permit them to merge their business operations was made by news stories in the Sunday papers.

The Detroit News, apparently backing off in its support for the JOA, reported that Monday's hearing was to hear oral arguments "in the Free Press' efforts to win a joint operating agreement with The Detroit News." It reported that the Free Press had been denied permission to argue for the JOA but added that Gannett, owner of the News, had not sought time to join in the oral arguments. But it did say both companies had sought a JOA.

In its story, the Free Press said that that attorneys for the government and the opponents were to "argue the case of the Detroit newspaper joint operating agreement." It added that the retired chairmen of Gannett and Knight-Ridder "had originated the agreement in 1986.'

And so they had, according to the original application for the approval of the JOA which was filed by "Detroit Free Press, Inc., and The Detroit News, Inc.," on May

Perhaps too much can be made of this example but the differences between the stories on just the single point about who now seeks the JOA illustrate that Detroit would be better off if both newspapers continued in publication, even under a JOA, and gave us two versions of current events in Detroit, the state and the world.

Judicial sparring finally over?

ow that the Michigan Court of Appeals has put Paul Gracey back in the race for Farms municipal judge, the long legal hassle over the nominees finally may be over.

We say "may be" because at this writing the possibility still exists of an appeal to the Michigan Supreme Court by Eugene Casazza, who now stands third in the con-

An attorney who is vice president of a financial services firm, Gracey blames the start of the controversy over absentee ballots on "inadvertent and innocent mistakes" by the Farms clerical staff. Regardless of who was at fault, Mrs. Gracey has been charged with unauthorized possession of absentee ballots.

The legal hassle leaves Gracey with only a brief period in which to campaign for the judicial post now held by Judge Matthew Rumora. He said it will be a "short, concentrated battle, uphill all the way." In view of Rumora's big lead in the primary results, that comment surely understates the challenger's problem.

While we sympathize with the Graceys because their troubles do not appear to have been entirely of their own making, we repeat our endorsement of Judge Rumora on the basis of his experience both as Farms city prosecutor and judge.

Word usage

To the Editor:

The Oct. 26 Grosse Pointe News presented me with a classic good news, bad news situation.

The good news was that your fine paper endorsed my re-election to the Grosse Pointe Park City Council. For that I am gratified and honored.

The bad news was the News' liberal usage of the term "cabbage patch" in both the editorial and in the candidate profile. Ouch!

Please, once and for all, I am requesting that the Grosse Pointe News pledge to never again print that term when referring to the northwest neighborhoods of Grosse Pointe Park. Residents (including yours truly) of those neighborhoods do at times use that term in a selfeffacing way. But in truth the streets of northwest Grosse Pointe Park are upbeat and trendy with a marvelous mix of professionals, working folks, young families and long-time residents.

There is but one Grosse Pointe Park, 2 square miles in size, consisting of nearly 14,000 beautiful souls. And while I have taken a common sense interest in the Park's northwest neighborhoods, I am the councilperson for all of the citizens of our great city.

James E. Robson Jr. Councilman Grosse Pointe Park

Propositions

To the Editor:

On Nov. 7, Grosse Pointers will again be asked to vote on two propositions that, if passed, could have a profoundly negative impact on our fine local public school system.

Both Proposition A and B are compromises resulting from pressure from a number of interested groups, none of which represents the best interests of Grosse Pointe.

Proposition A simply raises the sales tax with no guarantees that the additional revenue will really be used wisely for education.

Proposition B purports to reduce property taxes with no guarantees that such tax relief is permanent, and because it caps the ability of local school to raise millage when needed, it permanently takes control of the school system out of the hands of Grosse Pointers and gives it to Lansing.

Realtors have been lobbying for property tax relief for many years, and officers of the Grosse Pointe Board of Realtor have spent many hours in Lansing studying these proposals and talking to analysts and legislators. However, Proposition B is not the answer and could result in a mediocre school system for our community, which would make Grosse Pointe a less desirable community for young families, reduce property values, and inhibit the ability of Grosse Pointers to market their property.

Help maintain local control of our fine school system and vote against both Propositions A and B.

Forman S. Johnston 1989 President Grosse Pointe Board of Realtors

People versus politicians

Election Day 1989 is Tuesday. With the candidates for city council and mayor and judge gearing up for the final media blitz, I can't help but thank my foresight for moving into a part of the city no one cares enough about to send their campaign workers to.

I have this little rule. I don't let religious workers or campaign workers into my apartment. If I deign to open the door, I keep the chain on. Even fundraisers and wrong numbers get the most common courtesy from me. I guess there's something I don't trust about people who believe I should think and act like they do.

Perhaps I'm a little more cynical about politicians than the average Joe, because through my work with newspapers I've had to deal with them more than the average Joe.

I covered a bitter congressional race about three years ago when I lived in south central Michigan. A very liberal incumbent was facing a very conservative challenger for the second or third time. I was fresh out of college and thought that everything candidates said was important.

This was back before politicians here were urinating in cups and thinking that was an important issue so the conservative candidate challenged the liberal to what amounted to you-

The liberal, being a liberal, scoffed at the conservative's challenge. The conservative, being a conservative, then called the liberal a Communist and said he was more concerned with matters in the Third World than what was in the cup in front of

for a drug test. "John," I told my publisher in disbelief, "I can't believe she would say that. I wrote the story myself. I still have my notes from when she said it. We ran the story on Page 1."

'Ron, that's the way it is," my publisher said to me. "Politicians always rewrite history. Learn nothing is so admirable in poli-nearby. tics as a short memory.

That lesson digested, I still had one to learn.

Recently, while attending a community event, I bumped into a candidate for local office. We both knew each other from my work at this paper.

"Ron," the candidate said with a genuine smile. "How are you?" 'Fine," I replied.

"Say, Ron, do you live in my city?" "No, I don't." I said, adding that the candidate had asked me that question a number of times and each time I said that I

"Oh." There was a long pause. The genuine smile saved for constituents turned into the forced smile put on for those other people. "Is there something I could do for you?" the candidate asked,

"No," I said, because there was nothing I wanted, I just happened to be passing by.

"Well, then," the candidate said, dismissing me, "I'll be seeing you." The candidate wandered off into the crowd, smiling that constituents smile.

I suppose that most politicians, somewhere in the backs of their minds, do care about issues, but discussing them doesn't make good copy, and without good copy they don't get elected.

Hubert Humphrey said that we need more politicians who run for office because they want to do something, and fewer who run because they want to be your schools!

The future of our schools depends on you. Please, it is absolutely essential you vote on November 7. Vote no on Proposal B. Proposal A is OK, so vote yes on Proposal A, if you are willing to pay a half-cent more to improve schools in Detroit and other low spending school districts. But Proposal B must be defeated.

Proposal B would raise the sales tax by two cents, take part of our local school property tax and give it to the state and tell us we can't vote to increase millage as we see fit to save or improve our schools.

Proposal B would jeopardize our excellence in education, because it would guarantee only one thing - that our independence from state handouts would end and, forever, we would become dependent on state appropriated largess. We might get money from the state to keep our present level of program or we might not.

I strongly believe we would not. It would take only a statute adopted by a two-thirds vote of the Legislature to deny us any funding at all. And that twothirds vote is a real and substantial danger, not a mere theoretically possible castastrophic nightmare.

All it would take under Proposal B to deny us our educational excellence would be for one of the many legislators who already admit they view us as "the enemy," who see variations in funding levels as inherently evil, to come up with a school aid spending plan to take all the Vote no on Proposal B or lose money away from the few highest expenditure school districts and give that money to the many low expenditure districts.

Proposal B, further, and even more dangerously, would hand a federal judge an easy way to pull us down to pull up lower spending districts, to create a universal mediocrity. I don't believe any judge would throw out the entire present, existing property tax system. But, if Proposal B were enacted, then a judge would only need to order the state not to pay any money to districts like Grosse Pointe. By such a simple order he could make more money available for lower spending districts, destroying our schools in the process.

Vote no on Proposal B Proposal A is innocent. It would provide nearly as much new money for school aid as Proposal B would and Proposal A doesn't hurt our schools. We won't see any appreciable amount of new money coming to our schools, but that's OK, because we can take care of our-

Ln Grosse Pointe, a Grosse Pointe Park man and his son were found guilty of the illegal use of gas coupons by the Office of Price Administration. The case came to the attention of the Park police chief when the boy and some friends were arrested for turning in false fire alarms. The boy bragged to the chief that he had a new car given to him by his parents and that he had already logged 50,000 miles on it. That attracted the attention of the Grosse Pointe Ration Board which thought it highly unusual that a young boy could get enough gas coupons to drive 50,000 miles in one year.

The State Tax Commission's recommendation to the city of Grosse Pointe and Grosse Pointe Township to reduce assessments from 10 percent to 50 percent on residential buildings valued at $40,000 and more caused considerable anxiety to the school board which feared a dangerous reduction in revenue.

Four men from Grosse Pointe were among the 853 scheduled to graduate from West Point.

Thirteen young men departed from the Neighborhood Club, with the usual sendoff, for induction in the army.

history, Weaver planned to be a teacher. He played football and sang with a male octet.

The lead tenor of the group was the chief announcer at a radio station who kept urging Weaver to audition for a job. And so he did. Five times. And five times he was turned down.

He finally got the job by default when the person who was hired didn't show up. Weaver was fired after one week.

"I couldn't talk my way out of a paper bag," he said, "and I played records at the wrong speed.'

After graduating, he landed a job in Fort Wayne at WKJG where he wrote and narrated a syndicated entertainment show and did sports color for the Fort Wayne Pistons.

With the station located in the Purdue Center, Weaver enrolled in some writing classes. And since the station was also owned by a newspaper, he would go over to the newsroom, learning more about writing.

He and his family moved to Toledo where he got a job at WTOL-TV as a news reporter. When he was offered the position of anchor man, he said, "It was the only way I could get a raise, so I became instant anchor man.

Enjoying top ratings, Weaver was offered a job by WJBK-TV in 1963. He co-anchored the 6 and 11 p.m. newscasts with Carl Cederburg and Jac LeGoff.

As No. 2 in the market, Weaver said there wasn't the success everyone hoped for and he was made special projects editor in 1970.

"I was devastated at the time, but it was one of the best moves, because I could write," he said.

He began writing and producing weekly documentaries, traveling extensively.

He did a program on volunteerism with then-first lady Pat Nixon days before the Watergate scandal began dominating the news. On his wall hangs a photo of her and Weaver and some of the crew. She signed it to him: "With deep appreciation to a master of production and with sincere gratitude.

He also hosts an interview show, "Focus Detroit," shown at 8:30 Sunday mornings. Then at 10:30, also Sunday morning, he's on "Take 2," a half-hour news program devoted to issues. He jokes that he and his wife can't get to church until noon on Sundays because they have to watch the programs. He and Angela have been married for 15 years. He has five children from a previous marriage and she has three. Between them they have 11 grandchildren.

They have lived in Grosse Pointe Woods since 1976 and are in the midst of completely renovating their house. "My wife has drawn me into the remodeling business and we completely gutted the whole place," he said.

A handyman, Weaver has a workshop in which he does woodworking projects. He has built a deck and done the plumbing and wiring in one house.

Weaver is involved with the National Leukemia Society and Goodwill Industries. He is chairman of the Communications Committee for the Friends of Aurora Hospital, the only mental hospital for children in Michigan. He also helps with fundraising events at Holy Trinity Church and he helped in the formation of the Lakeshore Optimists Club of Grosse Pointe.

He and his wife attend several benefits a week and he says it doesn't leave them much time for other things. They like to spend as much time as they can with their family.

He has started writing two books, completing two chapters on one and three chapters on the other. He and his wife plan to collaborate in the production of TV programs that are issue-oriented and that they can syndicate. And there are other writing projects he has kicking around.

Weaver has two brothers in broadcasting. His older brother,

Richard, is the vice president of sports at a station in Miami and is the voice of the Miami Dolphins. His younger brother, Bob, now a data processing salesman in Detroit, was a radio announcer in Ohio.

Weaver calls himself a "golf junkie" who doesn't "shoot very well, but I love it." He was an avid tennis player until a knee injury related to his his early days of football flared up. "Now the doctor says I can't play unless someone will hit the ball right at me and no one will do

Ande Meyers

Each week in this column, we will focus on the work of a student. It can be a poem, a drawing, a short story, a picture of a scientific experiment or a woodworking project, a book review.

The following was written by Ande Meyers, a third grader at Defer School. Her grandmother is Ethel Meyers and her aunt is Andry Meyers.

The Ghost

Once a girl named Ethel was walking down to the forest and as she was walking, she heard a whisper. And the whisper said, "Come here please." It sounded like a nice whisper. But Ethel was so scared that she was shaking all over. So she ran to the castle. But she knew she shouldn't go in because her mother and her friends had warned her not to go near that part of the forest. But she went in the castle anyway. It was haunted many years ago. And a boy was hung by Elvira because Elvira did not like children, not even babies. So she walked in and sat down and lit the fire and went to sleep for five days. Her family was looking for her and by now, the mother found her Ethel and took her home. The

Fifth-graders prepare for visit to France

Twenty-four Grosse Pointe fifth-graders have begun studying French culture, language and customs as part of the French-American Back-to-Back Cultural Exchange Program offered by the schools through the Association of French-American

Though only in its second year in Grosse Pointe, the program operates in nearly 70 communities across the United States -13 of them in Michigan. Through the program, Grosse Pointe will be paired with a community in France and individual students will then be assigned French friends. Once the pairings take place, many hours of class preparation and letterwriting is capped in the spring by a three-week visit to Grosse Pointe by the French students. and a three-week trip to France by the local children.

According to Dr. Alfrieda Frost, director of elementary curriculum and exchange program coordinator, the initial exchange, which took place during the 1988-89 school year, was highly successful, and this year's program can only benefit from the experience and knowledge fifth-graders.

Again this year, Richard Elementary School will serve as host school during the French students' visit, and Principal Jack McMahon will act as host principal.

Teacher Nancy Swartz and counselor Joseph Girardi meet with participants every Monday from 3:30 to 5:30 p.m. at Richard School. Since the students come from eight different Grosse Pointe schools, they have spent the first several sessions getting to know one another as well as learning about France. They have prepared profiles of themselves and a giant map of Grosse Pointe to send along to their French counterparts as soon as the community assignment is known, early in November.

The Grosse Pointe French-American Back-to-Back Cultural Exchange Program is funded through tuition paid by participants. In addition, several money-raising events are planned during the year to cover the cost of field trips by the French students during their visit, and to support a scholarship fund established to make the program available to all whether for business or recreation, is never predictable, as veteran sailors attest. The recent "Edmund Fitzgerald" discoveries remind us that even modern vessels are vulnerable. This was even truer in years past when crews challenged the lakes with less navigational and technological knowledge than we have to-

A rare 1894 chart of wrecks and casualties on the Great Lakes, just reprinted by the Historical Society of Michigan, is a vivid reminder of the dangers awaiting those who ventured out on the Great Lakes a century

"Wreck and Casualty Chart of the Great Lakes, 1894" is a map detailing shipping accidents in one year. It was produced by the Weather Bureau, U.S. Department of Agriculture. Each shipwreck is marked and annotated. There were 112 on all the lakes in that year. Also noted are the locations of lighthouse and life saving stations. Navigational signals are shown as well.

The chart was reprinted to exact detail from an original in the State Archives of Michigan in Lansing. According to Thomas L. Jones, Historical Society of Michigan executive director, only a few originals remain of the 6,000 printed in 1895. The reprint measures 23" x 32 1/2" and is printed on top quality parchment paper in original colors.

The charts are available directly from the Historical Society of Michigan at $12.85 for Michigan orders, a price that includes packaging, postage and state sales tax. Non-Michigan orders are $12.44 and Canadian orders. $15.85. Included with each chart is a descriptive narrative by LeRoy Barnett, archivist, State Archives of Michigan, Michigan Department of State.

Orders and further information may be directed to the Historical Society of Michigan, 2117 Washtenaw Ave., Ann Arbor. Mich. 48104 (313) 769-1828.

The bureau issued storm warnings, charted winds and currents, measured water temperatures, investigated lake hydrology and collected data on ship-wrecks. Norman Conger, raised in Port Huron and Romeo. In his notes on the chart, Conger states that, of the 112 accidents that year, 44 vessels were total losses. He calculated financial losses at $643,243. However, the human loss of 68 lives was more significant, he adds. Interestingly, Conger blames the dense smoke from summer forest fires as the cause of some wrecks. But Great Lakes storms were at fault on most occasions, the most severe taking place on May 18, 1894, when 18 ships were lost or badly damaged. models

Look for plenty of changes in 1990 Detroit is in deep trouble and its automotive sky is falling in, if one is to believe much of the press coverage of introduction of the 1990 models. Detroit has been pronounced as lagging far behind the Japanese in both the number of new models and technical changes for 1990. There is no question that the Japanese have more interesting new models than the domestic makers. Much of the new-model excitement in the press is centered on the new models and technical changes for 1990.

There is no question that the Japanese have more interesting new models than the domestic makers. Much of the new-model excitement in the press is centered on the new Toyota Lexus and Nissan Infiniti lines, which are undoubtedly of excellent design. But so are Mercedes-Benz, BMW, Cadillac, Lincoln, Volvo, Saab, Acura Legend and Sterling, to name a few. One might ask if we really need more luxury sedans.

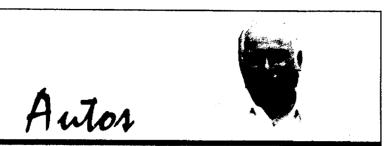

Perhaps of more long-range interest are the Chevrolet Lumina APV and Pontiac Trans Sport minivans. These new offerings from General Motors, whice has been getting a lot of heat for being too cautious and conservative, use a variation of the spaceframe construction introduced on the Pontiac Fiero and represent the biggest use of phastic in bodies in automotive history.

While GM is expanding plastic use on its new minivans, Ford Mot. - 10, breaks new ground by offering a high-strength plastic composite pickup box on its fourwheel-drive Ranger S Plus.

Under the skin, both domestics and imports are opting for more power and better ways to control that power. Biggest news on the domestic engine front is a new 3.3-liter V-6 from Chrysler Corp. The new V-6, of conventional design, will give new punch to a number of cars formerly powered by fours. More powerful versions are under development, including 24-valve and turbocharged units.

General Motors is upgrading 2.0-liter four-cylinder engines in its Chevrolet Cavalier, Beretta and Corsica to 2.2 liters and the 2.8 V-6 is replaced by a 3.1-liter powerplant. The 3.1 V-6 also replaces 2.8-liter units in Pontiac 6000, Grand Prix and Firebird.

The Quad 4 engine has been given more power and torque in both standard and high-output versions. The 180-hp high output Quad 4 powers the new Olds Cutlass Calais Quad 442, Olds Cutlass Supreme models and the Chevrolet Beretta GTZ (successor to the GTU). It also replaces the 2.0-liter turbo on the Pontiac Grand Am SE. At the upper end of the market, Cadillac boosted output of its standard 4.5-liter V-8 from 155 to 180 hp.

By Richard Wright

The all-new 1990 Lincoln Town Car features a modern appearance, an assortment of major functional improvements and traditional full-size luxury, roominess and ride

At Ford, a 4.0-liter version of the Scorpio's 2.9-liter V-6 is available in Ranger XLT and STX pickups and Aerostar passenger vans.

Among the imports, an all-new 3.4 liter V-8, rated at 290 hp. powers the new Ferrari Mondial and 348 models. Lotus adds an intercooler to the 2.2-liter turbocharged four in its Esprit Turbo SE. Aston Martin's new Virage gets a four-valve-per-cylinder version of the makers 5.3-liter V-8. And Mazda's new 929S has a four-valve-per-cylinder version of the maker's 3.0-liter V-6.

Among devices to better control all this power, Cadillac has developed a traction control system for its Allante, using enginecontrol computer with anti-lock brakes to limit front-wheel slip during acceleration. When the computer detects front-wheel slippage it applies the appropriate brake. If slip is severe, the computer cuts back engine speed by shutting off fuel to one cylinder at a time up to four. As slip diminishes, it releases brakes and restores fuel flow.

Chevrolet and Ford are offering four-wheel-drive on their Astro and Aerostar minivans. Mercedes-Benz introduces its 4Matic all-wheel-drive system to the United States on its 300E and 300TE models.

Biggest model news for 1990 is introduction of the Toyota Lexus and Nissan Infiniti lines of luxury cars. The Lexus LS400 is powered by a 250-hp 48-valve V-8 and carries a price tag of $35,000, while the smaller ES250 (based on the Toyota Camry) is powered by a 24-valve V-6 and sells in the $21,000 range.

The Nissan Infiniti Q45 sedan has a 4.5-liter V-8 and base price trum but gets the Scott, a of $38,000, while the M30 Coupe with 3.0 V-6 goes for $23,500. A convertible M30 is expected next spring at around $30,000. Almost, but not quite, lost in the excitement is an all-new Nissan Stanza and a four-door Pathfin-

Honda introduces a new Accord for 1990 and a new Acura Integra. Rival Mazda offers a new 323 Hatchback and 323 Protege sedan. Pay attention to the 1.8-liter Protege, because it will be reincarnated as the next Ford Escort. Earlier introduced (and well-received) were Mazda's Miata sports car and MVP mini-

There is a lot of news in the high-performance sports-car arena, topped by introduction of Chevrolet's Corvette ZR-1, the long-awaited "king of the hill." Corvette faces tough challenges in sales if not top speed from the new Nissan 300ZX Turbo. In addition to twin turbos and intercoolers producing 300 hp, the 300ZX is a knockout of a looker, as is Toyota's all-new Celica.

Chevrolet's most visible new model is the Lumina APV minivan, which turns heads wherever it goes with its swooping, futuristic looks. Pontiac has the same vehicle and Oldsmobile is also slated to get a version. A coupe joins the Lumina Line, of which the four-door was an early

Chevrolet has dropped its Cavalier convertible, but offers a 190D, leaving it without a diesel Beretta droptop with rollbar (a la Volkswagon Golf) in its place. Also getting a convertible is Oldsmobile, which will offer a Cutlass Supreme version of the Beretta, complete with rollbar. Buick adds a sleek Americanstyle (no rollbar) Reatta convertiduces 195 h.p. and 203 pound feet of torque that stays on the road due to an all-wheel-drive system providing road-gripping performance in virtually all driving conditions.

Chevrolet's Celebrity has been supplanted by the Lumina, except for the station wagon, which lives on. Pontiac has dropped its big Safari wagon, but if you want a big, old-fashioned luxury wagon, you can still get an Olds Custom Cruiser. Speaking of big, Olds has restyled its Toronado and made it a toot ionger Chevy's Geo loses the Specsportster made by Foze, which can be had with a 2004 p 16valve 1.6-liter four.

Big news at Ford Motor Co. is the new Lincoln Town Car, which has survived in spirit as a big old American luxury boat. Its lines are more rounded than the '89 Town Car, but it still has all the goodies that have made it a continuing favorite.

Starring in Chrysler Corp.'s 1990 lineup are the early-introduced Plymouth Laser and Eagle Talon, brethren of the Mitsubishi Eclipse, all built at the joint Chrysler-Mitsubishi Diamond Star plant in Illinois.

Chrysler Corp. finally degree ! its rear-drive Fifth Aberea the name continues on as the top model of the Chrysler New Yorker line, its original role. Rear-drive Plymouth Gran Fury and Dodge Diplomat are also liquidated, as are the original K-Cars, the Plymouth Reliant and Dodge Aries, succeeded by the Acclaim and the Spirit. Audi unveils its new $47,500 V-8 sedan and $30,000 five-cylinder Coupe Quattro, Hyundai has an all-new Excel with a more powerful 1.5-liter engine. Isuzu, which builds the Geo Storm for Chevrolet, will introduce its own version to replace the current Impulse.

Mercedes-Benz cancels its car in the United States, although it plans a larger diesel car for mid-year. New 300SL and 500SL two-seaters are also expected during the model year.

Yugo promises its under-$9,000 convertible will appear this fall.

Gribbs said he did not agree with Jacobs' inference of illegality on the part of Mrs. Gracey.

Jacobs said if the Appeals Court threw out Kaufman's orders and Gracey appeared on the ballot, that he may seek relief from the Michigan Supreme Court.

Gary Gordon, assistant attorney general representing the state's canvassing board, said Kaufman did not have the jurisdiction to order the recast absentee votes. Gordon then asked the panel to overturn Kaufman's orders and reinstate the original absentee vote tally, as recounted by the county board.

Even though the ballots were mishandled by Mrs. Gracey, Gordon said, there is no evidence of fraud or undue influence.

At a meeting of the county board the following day, members reluctantly agreed to report the results of the Sept. 23 recount of absentee ballots to the state board for certification.

On Friday, Oct. 27, the state board finalized the judicial primary by certifying the original absentee tally.

In a surprise move, Chris Thomas, clerk for the state board and director of the state's election commission, added a motion wherein state election workers will investigate the Farms absentee ballot distribution system. The investigation will take place after the November election is finalized.

The Farms city attorney said the city has mailed out 203 absentee ballots for the Nov. 7 election and that several have been

VA sees increase in aged vet population

A new study by the Department of Veterans Affairs (VA) projects continued growth in the number of elderly veterans in the 1990s, but a decline in the total veteran population for the foreseeable future.

"The study provides valuable assistance in developing spending and program policies," says Department of Veterans Affairs Secretary Edward J. Derwinski. "It is particularly important in planning for future medical care for veterans."

In Michigan, veterans 65 years old and older will increase from today's total of 221.000 to 279,000 in 2000, according to the projection. But the total veteran population in Michigan is expected to continue its decline from 1 million today to 887,000 by 2000.

The veteran demographics assist the Department of Veterans Affairs in formulating policy, budgeting, and program planning. Included are national and state-level data on living ex-ser-

According to the study:

• There were 27.2 million veterans living in the United States and Puerto Rico as of March 31, 1989. By the turn of the century this number is expected to fall to 24.1 million and by 2040 to be down to 13 million

• While the number of veterans will be on a downward trend, the elderly veteran population will grow dramatically. The number of veterans at least 65 years old will increase from today's total of 6.7 million to a peak of 9 million in 1999, a 34 percent increase. Veterans 75 and older will grow from today's 1995, and then more than triple from other states.

in size over the next 15 years to 4.4 million.

• Those 65 years old and over now represent 25 percent of the veteran population. This percentage will rise steadily over the next 25 years before peaking at 46 percent in the year 2016.

• The overall decline in the number of veterans will not be distributed evenly among the states. In general, the Northeast and industrial Midwest will lose the most veterans, while certain states in the Sunbelt will lose the fewest veterans. In fact, only one state, Alaska, is expected to gain veterans between now and the turn of the century, although Florida and Arizona will experience only a slight decrease due 1.4 million to 2.6 million in to a significant influx of veterans

About those proposals: A and B

On Nov. 7, Michigan voters will have a chance to change the way the state's schools are funded. At right is the wording of the two proposals and following is a translation:

Proposal A calls for an increase in sales tax by one-half cent, all of which goes to fund the schools.

It will raise approximately $400 million for schools, but because Grosse Pointe is an out-offormula district, it won't see much of that money.

Grosse Pointe will also be able to keep local control which, according to the school board, is imperative to keeping Grosse Pointe Schools at the level they Proposal B calls for an increase in sales tax by 2 cents, of which only a portion goes to the schools, and significantly lowers the property tax across the state. Less money for schools would be raised than by Proposal A.

The proposal sets a cap on the number of mills which can be levied by the local districts, thereby eroding the power of the local boards, which concerns the Grosse Pointe school board.

The Grosse Pointe school board passed a resolution taking no position on Proposal A and recommending a no vote on Proposal B. A person can vote yes on both, or no on both or yes on one and no on the other. In the event they both pass, the one with the most votes wins. In the event neither passes, the current system will stay in effect until the voters can approve another pro-

Foundation to be highlighted

The Community Foundation for Southeastern Michigan has been selected as one of four community foundations from throughout the U.S. to be highlighted at a congressional briefing Nov. 14 in Washington, D.C.

The briefing will highlight for congressional leadership successful programs managed by community foundations to improve the quality of life in their communities.

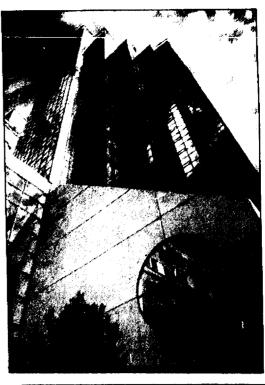

The congressional briefing is one of the activities taking place during the week of November 12 to 18 which has been designated "Community Foundations Week" in recognition of this American tradition of finding local solutions to local problems.

At the congressional briefing, the Community Foundation for Southeastern Michigan will highlight the Family Development Program, one of its targeted grantmaking programs.

Other community foundations represented at the congressional briefing will be from El Paso, Texas; St. Paul, Minnesota; and the State of New Hampshire.

Formed five years ago, the Community Foundation for Southeastern Michigan is built around a concept first originated seventy-five years ago. It is a permanent community endowment built by gifts from hundreds of community citizens and organizations who are committed to the future of southeastern Michigan.

The foundation is governed by a 40-member board of civic leaders and serves the seven counties of Wayne, Oakland, Macomb, Washtenaw, St. Clair, Monroe and Livingston.

before the Michigan Court of Appeals, won the right to challenge incumbent Judge Matthew Rumora in the Nov. 7 election.

Gracey, 59, is an attorney and vice president of DMR Financial Services Inc. A 29-year resident of the Pointes, Gracey is a graduate of the University of Michigan Law School and the Wayne State University School of Business Administration.

Because of the short time period before the Nov. 7 election, Gracev said he has a short and concentrated campaign. "It's going to be uphill all the way."

Not his first bid for public office, Gracey in 1967 unsuccessfully ran for a council seat in Grosse Pointe Park.

Regarding the recent judicial primary, Gracey said it all started by inadvertent and innocent mistakes by the Farms clerk staff. Gracey said he is convinced that the employees did not know it was wrong to give ballots to his wife, Irene, who was recently charged by the county prosecutor's office with unauthorized possession of the ballots.

Paul C. Gracey

He said the recent action by the Michigan Court of Appeals, which placed him back on the ballot for municipal judge, vindicates him and his wife of any wrongdoing.

Gracey wants to retain the municipal court system in the Pointes. Currently, most of the state uses the district court system. The five Grosse Pointes and palities in the state still using locally controlled municipal courts.

"Because of the strong sense of community unique to the Pointes, our present system must be retained and any moves toward a district court system must be strenuously resisted."

Gracey said if he is elected to the judicial seat, the position will not benefit his career as a corporate attorney for a mortgage company.

Informing residents of court procedures is high on his list. "I want to ensure that local residents and others having contact with the court are fully advised of procedures and receive a fair hearing," he said.

A lot of work, a lot of love make for a champion horse has been retired from the hunt-

By Ronald J. Bernas Staff Writer

It sounds like the plot for a good old-fashioned family movie.

A young girl takes an ornery horse, and with care and determination turns it into a champion. But that is exactly what happened to Amanda Brown of Grosse Pointe Woods.

Jimmy was a 10-year old quarter horse that Susan Moffit kept to give riding lessons. But he was mean, and he was getting old and tired.

Brown, now a freshman at Grosse Pointe North High, had taken riding lessons. She spent time at riding camps and wanted a horse of her own.

Through a mutually beneficial deal, her parents, Tim and Virginia, started leasing Jimmy for their daughter. After a month, when it was clear the horse and its rider were getting along, they bought him.

"He was really flabby and out of shape," Brown said. Jimmy was known as "the dun-colored school horse with the attitude." But Brown spent every other day brushing him and feeding him and riding him across the countryside.

Amanda Brown and Jimmy, a horse-and-rider combination, proved the skeptics wrong.

want to show him. I just wanted a horse to ride," she said.

It wasn't long before Brown had Jimmy jumping over fences. When she felt it was time, she decided that she would enter Jimmy in hunter-jumper competition - a course of jumps based on what horses would have encountered in the fox hunts of days gone by.

"My riding teacher (Moffit) had a lot to do with it," Brown said. "She was training other riders for competition and got me interested."

Moffit said that because the horse and its rider were so green, few paid attention to them in the first few competitions. But in the first competition, they took fourth place, and in shows that followed, they took firsts.

"People were saying, 'That horse will never do anything," Brown's mother said. "But when people who knew Jimmy before see him now, they just can't believe it's the same horse.'

She competed with and beat horses with better breeding and better training, and because of the pair's consistency, Brown

"I didn't think I would even was named Rider of the Year in the novice division at the Windemere Equestrian Center, the site of a number of her competitions.

"I think it's because we were both learning together," Brown

"It's really exciting to jump," she said. "You can't ever get bored, because when you start a jump, you never know how it's going to end up.'

She's been thrown more than she cares to remember, but Brown says it wasn't all that painful.

Jimmy developed arthritis and pate in flat course, and Brown's younger sister, Lauren, hopes to take Amanda's place in Jimmy's As for Amanda, she is moving forward with her new horse, Caesar, and will be competing in a three-day event which involves dressage, cross-country and huntjumping.

Moffit says she has big plans for Brown because she has the ability, the attitude and the commitment to go all the way.

Gracey, 59, is an attorney and vice president of DMR Financial Services Inc. A 29-year resident of the Pointes, Gracey is a graduate of the University of Michigan Law School and the Wayne State University School of Business Administration.

Because of the short time pe riod before the Nov. 7 election, Gracev said he has a short and concentrated campaign. "It's going to be uphill all the way."

Not his first bid for public office, Gracey in 1967 unsuccessfully ran for a council seat in Grosse Pointe Park

Regarding the recent judicial primary, Gracey said it all started by inadvertent and innocent mistakes by the Farms clerk staff. Gracey said he is convinced that the employees did not know it was wrong to give ballots to his wife, Irene, who was recently charged by the county prosecutor's office with unauthorized possession of the

"Because of the strong sense of community unique to the Pointes, our present system must be retained and any moves toward a district court system must be strenuously resisted."

A lot of work, a lot of love make for a champion horse

By Ronald J. Bernas Staff Writer

It sounds like the plot for a good old-fashioned family movie.

A young girl takes an ornerv horse, and with care and determination turns it into a champion. But that is exactly what happened to Amanda Brown of Grosse Pointe Woods.

Jimmy was a 10-year old quarter horse that Susan Moffit kept to give riding lessons. But he was mean, and he was getting old and tired.

Brown, now a freshman at Grosse Pointe North High, had taken riding lessons. She spent time at riding camps and wanted a horse of her own.

Through a mutually beneficial deal, her parents, Tim and Virginia, started leasing Jimmy for their daughter. After a month, when it was clear the horse and its rider were getting along, they bought him.

'He was really flabby and out of shape," Brown said. Jimmy was known as "the dun-colored school horse with the attitude.' But Brown spent every other day brushing him and feeding him and riding him across the countryside.

Amanda Brown and Jimmy, a horse-and-rider combination, proved the skeptics wrong.

want to show him. I just wanted a horse to ride," she said.

It wasn't long before Brown had Jimmy jumping over fences. When she felt it was time, she decided that she would enter Jimmy in hunter-jumper competition - a course of jumps based on what horses would have encountered in the fox hunts of days gone by.

"My riding teacher (Moffit) had a lot to do with it," Brown said. "She was training other riders for competition and got me interested."

Moffit said that because the horse and its rider were so green, few paid attention to them in the first few competitions. But in the first competition, they took fourth place, and in shows that followed, they took firsts.

"People were saying, 'That horse will never do anything," Brown's mother said. "But when people who knew Jimmy before see him now, they just can't believe it's the same horse.'

She competed with and beat horses with better breeding and better training, and because of the pair's consistency, Brown

As for Amanda, she is moving forward with her new horse, Caesar, and will be competing in a three-day event which involves dressage, cross-country and huntjumping.

Moffit says she has big plans for Brown because she has the ability, the attitude and the commitment to go all the way.

Program offers local students a Safe Ride to their homes ther a caller is in need of help or -tance be necessary, student vol- - and serve periodically on Friday

Staff Writer

"Hello, this is Safe Rides."

Those words have meant safety for many students over the past three years. And for someone whose friends have been drinking and cannot get home, they can be welcome words.

"Do you need a ride? Where can we find you?"

"I'm at a party and

Though Safe Rides organizers say the calls for help are not commonplace, helping just one student who has been drinking or whose friends have been drinking, can make all the dif-

Entering their tourth year with the program, South High School Safe Rides President Mary Begg and North's President Jennifer Galvin said the program has created an awareness at the high schools, where students are learning that there are alternatives to drinking.

"We are not encouraging peo-ple to drink," Galvin said "We just offer a safe ride home when someone has been drinking."

Begg said the philosophy of the program is not really important What's important is the fact that by helping just one student get home safe, the program may be saving a life, she added.

"We may have already saved a life." Begg said. By keeping students from drinking and driv mg, the program not only keeps students from endangering themselves, but protects other drivers on the road

Begun in Darien, Conn. in 1982 after the community lost seven teenagers in one year because of alcohol or drug-related fatalities, the program has successfully ended fatalities in that community

The program is designed for students who need a free, confidential ride home from within the Grosse Pointes. The basic premise of the program is that responsible young people can have a positive and meaningful impact on the problems of alcohor and drug abuse, particicu farly as they relate to the mey table risks of driving while under the influence

One unique and important facet of the program is that these Safe Rides members can provide role models for their peecs. Most importantly they do this in a non-judgmental, confidential way

The Boy Scouts of America or iginators of the program list af cohol-related automobile crashes as the leading cause of death and injury among young people between the ages of 15 and 24

The Council's Safe Rides pro gram is designed for teenagers who may not be in a condition to drive safely or may need a relia ble, safe ride home.

Unfortunately, Begg and Gal vin said the program has been used by students who simply need a ride. "We are not a taxi service," Begg said.

Because some of the calls that come in are questionable, volunteers often must determine whe

The program is open every Friday and Saturday night from 9 p.m. until 1 p.m., when student volunteers and an adult supervisor meet at one of the two Safe Rides headquarters

For students living in the North High School area, the headquarters are in North High and can be reached by calling 88-home-8.

For students in the South High area, the Safe Rides headquarters is in the Grosse Pointe War Memorial and can be reached by calling 884-9494.

While in the headquarters, one student acts as the dispatcher maintaining constant contact with co-ed driving teams, who use their own family cars

The adult volunteer is on duty for the students to consult if help is needed Should further assis-

> The adult volunteers at the headquarters may assist in decision making, in the case of an injury or unexpected event, but does not give rides to students.

Though the program is a na tional effort, it is primarily a student operated program to benefit students.

Begg and Galvin said the program attracts hundreds of students at each high school and is one of the most popular student programs today

The program is open to student volunteers in grades 9-12 who are willing to take the training course, attend meetings and Saturday nights.

Students must show a commit ment to help prevent tragedies associated with drug and alcohol abuse Parents are welcome to attend meetings

The program's designers hope that the students' concern for each other's safety will lead to a greater appreciation of both risks and responsibilities associated with the critical issue

"The organization has improved over the years," Begg said "It brings students to gether.'

Galvin said it is important to keep the program going because, as she said. "Even if we ont, get one call all year, we may be saving a life

Fire safety

The Harper Woods Fire Department taught fire-safety tips to the students at Poupard Elementary School during Fire Prevention Week Oct. 8-14. Students were taught the dangers of playing with matches, how to get out of a burning house and the importance of establishing a family meeting place in case of a fire. Above, firefighter Bob Phillips talks about the importance of smoke detectors and at right, Laura Hakim listens intently.

Get your car ready for winter the walk. Put the VCR on pause. Instead, spend that 30 minutes preparing your car for winter, AAA Michigan advises.

"A half-hour is all it takes to perform a winter car care checkup," said Robert Tellier, AAA Michigan emergency road service manager. "The test is easy and helps detect minor problems that could turn into major hassles when your car won't start on a cold winter morning."

The only items required are the owner's manual, tire pressure gauge, screwdriver, antifreeze hydrometer and baking

"At our Winter Car Care clinics last year, more than 90 percent of tested vehicles had at least one problem requiring attention," Tellier said. "The most common problems were low tire pressure and improper antifreeze levels or strengths.'

To perform the check-up, AAA Michigan recommends these 12

•Battery -- Use a wire brush dipped in a baking soda/water solution to clean battery terminals and cable ends, but do not splash on painted surfaces. If the battery is not maintenance-free. make sure water is at the correct level.

•Tires — Check pressure with a gauge for correct inflation and inspect tread wear, including the spare. For accuracy, check inflation pressures when the tires are cold. A "cold" reading can be taken when a car has not been driven more than one mile or after sitting for three hours or

• Antifreeze - Use a hydrometer to check the antifreeze strength in the radiator. The reccomended level is 36 degrees be-

Put down that book. Forego low zero. Also check the level in the overflow tank.

• Oil -- Use dipstick to check oil level. Add oil as needed. Check owner's manual for exact intervals between changes and for SAE viscosity grade. Some car manufacturers suggest lower viscosity during winter. • Brake fluid -- Keep the level within 1/4 inch from the top of the reservoir. Use a screwdriver to pry off the chamber's cover clips. Some vehicles may have screw-off caps. New models have translucent reservoirs and can be checked visually.

• Power steering fluid - Follow directions in owner's manual when checking the indicator stick. If fluid is needed, add slowly to avoid overfilling.

• Automatic transmission fluid Check indicator stick, usually

Carron family: Fiercely loyal to MSU

By Ronald J. Bernas Staff Writer

Michigan State University admissions directors must feel they've made a mistake.

For the first time since the early 1970s, there isn't a single member of the Carron family from Grosse Pointe Woods on their roster.

In June, Anita Carron became the eighth of nine Carron family members to graduate from State. The ninth is Michael, and he just recently enrolled in De La Salle High School, so he has a little time before he has to make a decision about college.

The Carrons say the tradition just happened. Their oldest son, Ronald, graduated in 1976, followed by Cynthia and Deborah who graduated in 1978; Brian in 1981, David in 1983; Richard in 1985 and Patrick in 1988.

At one time, there were four Carrons there.

The parents, Patrick and Genevieve, aren't State alums, but rather from the University of Western Ontario. They were a little apprehensive about sending their children to a school that size, Mrs. Carron said, but after a little investigation, they gave their blessing.

"It's a good school," she said. "It's not too far from home, but they got the experience of going away from home.

She said that a Michigan State Rose Bowl appearance or a State hockey game are great excuses for family gatherings, although there isn't much room with spouses and children and friends cheering for the green and white.

Even Chauncey, their 8-yearold golden Retriever, is an honorary Spartan, and many times accompanied family members on trips to the school. Brian said the family tradition of going to State has made the family closer.

"Of course you fight a lot when you're kids," he said, "but when you grow up, you become the best of friends.

Care for elderly available

Services for Older Citizens announces an innovative program for families that care for the elderly in the Grosse Pointes and Harper Woods. The program called Lifespan, links trained high school students from the area and senior citizens in need of companionship and supervi-

Lifespan offers respite to families caring for older relatives in their homes, particularly those who cannot safely be left alone while family caregivers are away from home. The program allows caregivers time for shopping, attending to personal business, outings with friends and family, or just time to be alone.

Trained students are currently available for employment on a weekly basis. Through Lifespan, students can work four hours each week for a nominal cost to participating families. Interested families in the Grosse Pointes and Harper Woods can contact Services for Older Citizens for Floral designer Bill Thomas will demonstrate the use of fresh greens and flowers to brighten up your home for the holidays during a one-session workshop, Wednesday, Nov. 8 from 10 a.m. noon at the War Memorial.

Whether traditional or contemporary, simple or elaborate, Thomas will offer suggestions that will suit every taste. Construction of wreaths, swags and topiaries will be demonstrated. Cost is $8. Call 881-7511

"I'm not a sentimental old slob, but that got to me," Rice said. "Remembering all those people who died there really triggers thoughts of your own mortality."

A large part of the celebration each year is the recreation of the parachute drop which was known during the war as Operation Market Garden, and was the subject of the movie "A Bridge Too Far." This year, however, it was postponed due to the weather, and Rice and his contingent missed it.

He was told, however, that some old soldiers wear Allied uniforms given to them during the war, and jump out of the planes as part of the commemoration.

The trip was filled with memorable meals which Rice described in mouth-watering detail.

"If they eat that way every day," Rice said, "It's a wonder the Dutch aren't 300 pounders.'

And as an added bonus, Rice was able to purchase and smoke some Havana cigars that aren't available in the states.

But Rice wasn't the only one who had special experiences on the trip. One man visited the family who had nursed him back to health after he was wounded during the war, and another man found the gravesites of some friends he had served with. He took photographs of the head-

Great Lakes calendar available

Lighthouses are part of the Great Lakes' maritime history, legend and lore and the Historical Society of Michigan has its seventh annual lighthouse calendar available.

Featuring the pen and ink drawings by artists Leo Kuschel of Taylor, Mich., "Great Lakes Lights" draws attention to the colorful maritime history of the Great Lakes and those sentinels that have marked the lakes' routes for sailors since the early 18th century.

According to Thomas L. Jones, executive director of the society, this series has drawn attention to lighthouse history and prompted concerned citizens to support their preservation.

The "Great Lakes Lights" 1990 calendar includes lights on all the Great Lakes and in the states of Illinois, Wisconsin, Ohio, Minnesota and New York, the province of Ontario and the state of Michigan.

The calendar is available from the Historical Society of Michigan, 2117 Washtenaw Ave., Ann Arbor 48104, at $9.25 (includes postage and handling, plus Michigan state sales tax). Non-Michigan orders are $8.95, and Canadian orders are $10.35.

While not quite so long and bloody as John Jakes' "North and South," Grosse Pointe's version is no less epic.

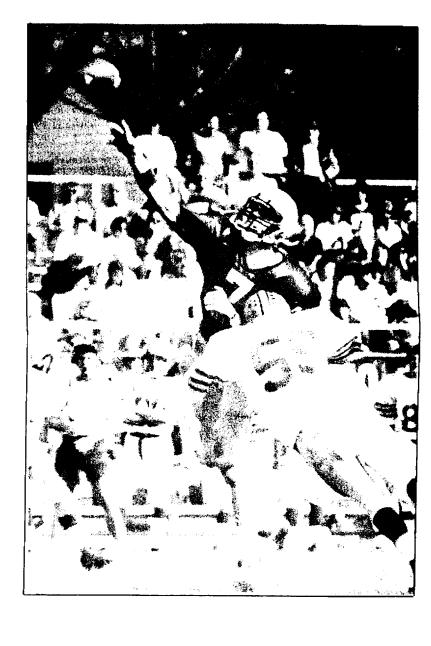

Grosse Pointe South came out on top in the 21st meeting between Grosse Pointe's two high school football teams 42-14.

North, however, still had a reason to hold its head high because they won the tug-o-war held during halftime.

The school's cheerleaders got together for a combined routine which showed that even though the school's rivalry is strong, the schools can still come together.

How well do you know Grosse Pointe?

What is the significance of the windmill in the Grosse Pointe Historical Society's logo?

One of the early landmarks in the Grosse Pointe area, the windmill dated back to the mid-1700s. It was a grist mill (ground grain) and was located at the foot of Lakepointe in Grosse Pointe Park. Thus, the Windmill Pointe area receives its name. Legend has it that the windmill was haunted and was later destroyed by lightning.

All nominations must be received no later than Jan. 10. The winners of the 1990 plaques will be chosen in January; plaques will be presented at the society's annual meeting in April.

The bronze plaques, designed to be mounted in a visible location, feature an interpretation of the society's logo, the windmill, which gave its name to Windmill Pointe. The windmill was erected sometime prior to 1750 at the foot of Lakepointe in what is now Grosse Pointe Park. Both the French and Indians took their grain to the mill to be ground until about 1800.

The Grosse Pointe Historical Society was founded in 1945, reorganized in 1979 and has nearly 500 members. The society's goal is to preserve Grosse Pointe's rich heritage by increasing awareness of the area's history and educating its residents through lectures, workshops and field trips.

City Charter Amendment Proposal I:

Nagler patiently waited for hours for a cloud pattern to appear in the sky in order to enhance this photograph of Scotland's Dunnottar Castle.

Develop a sense of patience the importance of making photographs. . .not just taking snapshots. Today I'd like to discuss one of the most important ingredients in the recipe of making strong photographs - developing Developing a sense of patience in photography can not only offer a welcome break from the turbulent pace of everyday life, but it will reward you with more impact-filled pictures.

How do you develop photo-related patience? For starters slow down and study your subject carefully and thoroughly.

Let's use the approaching fall color change as an example. You've just driven out to the country and discovered that cluster of trees that is exploding with magnificent color. Wait, don't snap that picture yet! Remember, we're nurturing a sense of patience. So begin by really looking at those trees. Walk around them, get to know them and begin to get a feeling of the way they're being lit.

Ask yourself some questions: Would a different time of day improve the picture? Should I move in close or remain farther there an approaching cloud pattern that is worth waiting for? Or is there a fence or road that would serve as an effective "lead-in"?

Do you see what's happening? You're developing patience and your studying, planning and thinking about those trees will compensate you with a memorable photograph.

The photograph shown here is one of my favorites from a recent trip to Great Britain. It's of the spectacular Dunnottar Castle on the eastern coast of Scotland.

It took a lot of walking and climbing and studying the castle from many perspectives to find this vantage point. But alas, the sky was bald and I really wanted the added impact of dark clouds. Patience, I thought. If I wait long enough, Scotland's fickle weather would come through for me. Perseverance prevailed. A storm brewed and I got the payoff!

So place yourself in the category of all the good doctors and dentists. After all, where would they be if they didn't have "patients"!

Stay away from 'Shocker'

By Michael Chapp Special Writer

You may recall last week in this space we discussed "Halloween V," a film whose merit we called into question. Faithful readers probably thought at that time things could not get any worse, movie-wise,

Then along comes "Shocker." an utterly ridiculous picture from Wes Craven that rivals the "Halloween" film in its stupidity, redundancy and contempt for

I mean really, this picture must assume that viewers have never been to the movies before. Or that they've been to the movies before but have very short memories. Or, in the worst-case scenario, that they've been to the movies before, have good memories, but have extremely low standards.

"Shocker" asks us to buy into

The killer, meanwhile, is able to transfer his spirit from body to body (sound familiar?), simply this plot: A psychotic killer by making physical contact. So (sound familiar?) gets sentenced what we have here is a killer who won't die, quietly stalking innocent victims for no reason, then killing them in grisly ways.

And this clearly sounds very familiar.

There is nothing to recommend about this picture, except perhaps that the killer has a different name and face than Jason, Michael or Freddy. Different face, maybe, but same inclination toward nastmess. Indeed, there are parts of all of them in this guy

That means we almost certainly haven't seen the last of

And that, of course, leads to the biggest horror of all - in about a year, we're bound to be faced with the prospect of "Shocker II: The Power is Back."

'Music Man' next production at Golden Lion

"The Music Man," Meredith Willson's Tony award winning musical comedy, opens Friday, Nov. 3, at the Golden Lion Dinner Theatre.

The classical musical will run Friday and Saturday evenings through Saturday, Dec. 30. There will also be a special New Year's Eve performance on Sunday, Dec. 31. Price for the special New Year's performance is $80 per couple or $40 per person which included dinner, show, tax, gratuity, party hats, noisemakers, and a champagne toast.

"The Music Man," tells the story of Harold Hill, a fast-talking traveling salesman, who lands in River City, Iowa in 1912 and begins mesmerizing the town with his pitch for a boy's band. Included in this popular show are such hit songs as, "Ya Got Trouble (with a capital T and that rhymes with P and that stands for pool!)," "76 Trombones," "Goodnight, My Someone," and a song later popularized by the Beatles, "Till There Was You."

ADMIT ONE ADMITOUR

November 2, 1989 Enterlainment 'The Bear' is a stunning, winsome tribute to nature

Special Writer

In this magnificent film, "The Bear," the most winsome character since "E.T.," acts out her story of misadventure and struggles for survival in the untained wilderness of the Bayarian Alps. That character is Youk, played by a bouncy, cuddly female cubbear. Her costar is Kaar, a 4,800 pound grizzly bear.

What makes this film truly unique is that all of the action is experienced from the bear's point of view. There is no voiceover to explain the what and and hard with the animals, the almost anything you have in why of what they do. Nor is there any need for it. These bears can act!

They eloquently express the human emotions of grief, fear, anger, loneliness and trust.

The story is so vividly presented that we become involved in their fate. We fear for their safety and are alarmed by the intrusion of hunters into their territory.

To achieve this end, Director Jean Jaques Annaud spent assertion that innocent societies seven years, $25 million and are more in touch with their endless patience.

During the course of the tale we are amused and captivated by the antics of the bear cub. It is hilarious to watch her as she gazes in wonder at the moon's reflection in the water and tries to figure out why it ripples when she paws it; to follow her as she bounds through a sun-drenched field of yellow wild flowers; plays with a turtle like a baby with a rattle or chases a bullfrog.

Watching this film, we marvel at the courage and ingenuity of animals, even one as young as the bear cub. She breaks her bonds and escapes but faces graver danger from a predatory leopard.

This extraordinary live-action film may be enjoyed by adults as well as children seven or under. Younger children would love the cub, but might find it hard to follow the story.

Originally produced in Europe where audiences paid a hundred million dollars to see this elegiac tribute to nature and its habitats, "The Bear" is basically an American product. It is based on a story written by a Michigan author, James Oliver Curwood, titled "The Grizzly King."

When in Japan, do as the Japanese — and bring a sense of humor

By Ronald J. Bernas

Staff Writer After she went to Japan, the first thing Nancy Schubeck says she learned to say in Japanese was. "We just passed my bus

Jan Dunn couldn't find a root beer to save her soul.

But both treasure the time spent in Japan and they work to educate people here about the culture and things to know when doing business in Japan. Dunn teaches, among other classes, "Introduction to Japanese Culture" through Grosse Pointe Community Education, and Schubeck has taught similar classes throughout the year at Assumption Cultural Center, with more offered this winter.

Schubeck lived in Japan from 1985 to 1988 when her husband worked there with Mazda on the development of the Ford Probe. Dunn lived there from 1971-79 teaching English and Bible studies.

While in Japan, Schubeck gave classes to Mazda women who were coming to America. preparing them for daily life in America, because, Schubeck said, many of them were terrified. Schubeck got the same training from Ford prior to her

The following tips are offered to those who are going to Japan for business:

· When conducting business, always present your business card. It is rude, however, to keep it in your back pocket or to jot notes on the back.

· Wear shoes that are easy to slip on and off, because when entering homes, it is necessary to remove your shoes.

• To look for a grocery store, go to the basement of the nearest department store. That's where it is. And you can take the subway train which stops conveniently beneath the department store, so it's just a short escalator ride up to the shopping area.

• There are three levels of subways stacked on top of each other. The trains are numbered with Roman numerals, so they are easy to decipher. And they are always on time. There is a saying: "If you are supposed to take the 8:09 train and you take the 8:10 train, you're on the wrong train."

 Japan is a cash society. Don't look for checkbooks or credit cards. To pay bills, take them and your savings passbook to your bank which will automatically debit your account.

• The restaurants are easy. Most have plastic replicas of their food in the front window. If you can't order, you can at least point. But be wary. What looked like a hot fudge sundae to Dunn was ice cream with bean paste

Nancy Schubeck

How much do you know about Japan?

6. How many years of English language are required as a subject in school in Japan? a) 2 years

c) 6 years

Answers:

1. It is Heisei 1 in Japan. The years start over when a new emperor begins his reign.

2. Because of the cost of living in Japan is so high Japanese families can really only afford two children

3. Japan is roughly the size of California. Although the population of Japan is about half the population of the United States, they reside in only 15 percent of that country because the rest is too mountainous to live in.

4. The average Japanese saves nearly 15 percent of his salary.

5. The average American saves nearly 2 percent of his salary.

6. Six years of English language are required in Japanese schools

And by the way, there are about 130 Japanese companies in Detroit, a Japanese school to help keep the culture going and a new Japanese language newspaper.

 Public bathrooms are co-ed. Most are basin-like in the floor and require squatting.

• Bring small token gifts for exchanging. If visiting homes, bring photographs of your home. Chances are if you're there on business, you won't be invited into homes of the people you are working with.

 When speaking English, if you're not immediately understood, don't rephrase the sentence. It is too confusing. If you still can't communicate, write it down. Many Japanese can read English better than they can understand it.

• Don't expect to see kimonos on any women except for the oldest ones.

• Carry a dictionary.

• Learn the metric system, or at least how to convert. When Schubeck wanted to buy ground beef, it was priced in grams per ven. She ordered 100 grams and had enough for approximately one meatball. Ovens are in centigrade.

According to UAW officials, "the construction of the Leonard Woodcock Wing will allow the UAW to continue its close, cooperative relationship with the Walter Reuther Archives and encourages local unions, individual members, staff members and officers to donate to and make use of the facilities at the archives.

The 26,500 square foot Leonard Woodcock Wing will nearly double the current capacity of the Reuther Archives, Construction of the new facility is expected to begin in 1990.

Since it was donated to Wayne State in 1975 in memory of Walter Reuther, the Reuther Archives has been the nation's leading source of labor records and information for researchers, faculty members and graduate students from colleges and universities throughout the United States, Asia and Europe.

In addition to increased document storage capacity and staff China by Jimmy Carter.

Wayne State University's Wal- offices, the Woodcock Wing will ter P. Reuther Archives of Labor include a 900-square-foot conferand Urban Affairs, which houses ence room; film processing facility; viewing and storage area for cords, publications and photo- film, video and audio tapes; migraphs in the world, will expand crofilm room; conservation laboits capacity as the result of a ratory; exhibit preparation and storage space; and oral history interview room.

The new facility will be visible from Woodward Avenue looking West along Kirby, giving the facility increased exposure to the Cultural Center area and the tive of the addition is to match the character of the Reuther structure as closely as possible, yet create an entrance image separate from that of the existing building.

Former UAW President Leonard Woodcock attended Wayne State University (then Detroit City College) during the Depression years, but left his studies in 1933 for a job as a machine assembler for the Borg-Warner Corp.

Woodcock was a member of the Wayne State University Board of Governors from 1959 to 1970 and was the board's first chairman. He served five oneyear terms as chairman of the board. Woodcock resigned shortly after his term in 1970 because he had been elevated to the UAW presidency, following the death of Walter Reuther. He was elected to a full term as president of the UAW in 1972 and won re-election for a threeyear term in 1974.

In 1977, Woodcock was appointed the first U.S. ambassador to the People's Republic of

The Sounds of Christmas:

The Grosse Pointe Historical Society will present its second "Sounds of Christmas," a Sunday afternoon progressive musical/historical Christmas festivity - a benefit for the restoration of the Provencal-Weir house.

On Sunday, Dec. 10, beginning at 3 p.m., ticket holders must begin the afternoon by making a choice between two musical performances at historic Grosse Pointe churches.

Christ Church, 61 Grosse Pointe Blvd., will feature a program of Christmas music by the church's Men's and Girls' Choir, under the direction of Frederic DeHaven.

OrGrosse Pointe Memorial Church, 16 Lakeshore, will offer a Christmas music singalong with Director and Carilloneur William DeTurk and the Grosse Pointe South High School choir, under the direction of El-

Then, at 4 p.m., at St. Paul Catholic Church, 157 Lakeshore, Music Director David O. Wagner and the Grosse Pointe North High School choir will perform Christmas carols and holiday music under the direction of Ben Walker

An afterglow for benefactors, patrons and friends will take place from 5 until 7 p.m. at the historic Grosse Pointe Academy building and grounds, and will include a light meal, holiday cheer and horse-drawn carriage rides around the academy's grounds.

The Historical Society put together a similar musical fundraiser for the first time last December, and they were pleased with its success. The event netted $27,000 and drew more than 500 people.

They decided to stay with the successful format, but to fine-tune some details.

"We've changed our logistics a bit this year," said Lisa Gandelot, one of the general chairmen for the event. "We're starting an hour later, so the old-fashioned horsedrawn carriage rides will take place just about dusk.

afternoon at St. Paul Church," she said. The path from St. Paul to the Academy (where the afterglow will take place) will be illuminated by luminaria.

"We wanted to keep the feeling of an old fashioned Christmas and the idea of a family day. People said they liked the low-key, traditional, family oriented feeling.'

Gandelot explained that all costs of the benefit have been underwritten. The proceeds, except for a donation from the society to each church, will be used entirely for restoration of the society's future headquarters, the Provencal-Weir house.

"This year we're hoping to raise $35,000. We're counting on a larger turnout," she Christ Church Grosse Pointe was founded in 1923, an offshoot of the Detroit church, which was founded in the mid-1800s. The building on Grosse Pointe Boulevard was dedicated in 1930 and was intended to be the chapel for a much larger edifice, which would be erected later. It never was built.

Christ Church's narthex is patterned after the chapter house at Wells Cathedral in Somersetshire, England and its cloister was inspired by the one in Canterbury Cathedral. The Grosse Pointe church is known for its outstanding stained glass windows and fine interior wood carvings.

Grosse Pointe Memorial Church's congregation was traces its roots back to 1867. The present building was constructed beginning in the mid-1920s, and is noted for its wood carvings, stained glass windows, interior and exterior stonework. The carillon was completed in 1951.

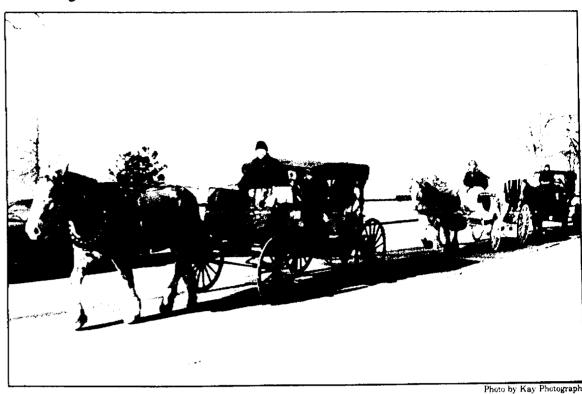

St. Paul Church was Grosse Pointe's first church. Founded in the early 1800s, it served the predominately Catholic French farmers who settled the Grosse Pointes.

St. Paul's present building was dedicated in January 1899. It's noted for its the rose window, its Italian marble and onyx main altar and its interior decor, which is decidedly French-influenced.

The Grosse Pointe Academy was built in 1885 as an academy and convent. It is listed in the National Register of Historic Places and the grounds have been designated both a Michigan and a national historic site.

Grosse Pointe Historical Society's benefit will mix history and music

Horse-drawn carriage rides will be available for purchasers of friend, patron and benefactor tickets to the Grosse Pointe Historical Society's "Sounds of Christmas" on Sunday, Dec. 10. The fundraiser will take place at three historic churches: Christ Church, Grosse Pointe Memorial Church and St. Paul Catholic Church, and one historic school: Grosse Pointe Academy. The program will include two musical concerts with local high school and church choirs.

The Grosse Pointe Historical Society's "Sounds of Christmas" last December featured music, historic churches and horse-drawn carriages.

This year will be a repeat of the successful agenda.

LINC volunteers are looking for new toys, gifts for kids

Operation LINC volunteers are working on two annual holiday programs for kids: the Gift and Toy Chest Program, now in its ninth year, and the Foster Care Holiday Project, now in its 16th year.

The purpose of the Gift and Toy Chest Program is to brighten the lives of those less fortunate during the holidays. LINC is looking for donations of new toys, candy, clothing, books, new stuffed animals, children's mittens, puzzles, games, bedding and personal care items — or money

Last year this program serviced 20 non-profit agencies with new gift items for the holidays.

The purpose of the Foster Care Holiday Project is to distribute gifts of new toys and clothing to children who are in foster care in the Detroit metropolitan area. Items are distributed through the Wayne County Department of Social Services.

These gifts are collected from children in Grosse Pointe schools and churches. Last year the project distributed toys and clothing to nearly 4,000 children.

People involved with public or private schools, churches or nursery schools who are interested in participating in one of these holiday programs should call Operation LINC for details.

Martha Popovich is chairman of the Gift and Toy Chest Program

Donations are needed all year, not only during Christmas holidays. LINC also needs donations of appliances, furniture and office equipment.

Cordes is chairman of Petal Power, a public-private partnership formed to beautify gateways to the city and, as she said, "to give visitors that first, positive impression that is so vital."

Cordes has already received contributions toward the project from the Grosse Pointe Farm and Garden Club, the Grosse Pointe Shores Garden Club and the Garden Club of Michigan.

Those at the Petal Power kickoff from the Grosse Pointe Farm and Garden Club were Rosemary Durant, president, Lois Mack, Ann McCormick, Marie Carpenter and Marianne Endicott.

Also spotted in the crowd were Sally Spitzley, Ordway Clifford, Goody Semple, and Mary Roby, president of the Garden Club of Michigan.

On hand to help with the initial planting of 100,000 bulbs along the interchange of I-94 and the Southfield Freeway were James F. Cordes, chairman of ANR Pipeline Co. and William T. McCormick Jr., chairman of Consumers Power Co. Both firms

For All The Saints

away over the past year. In essence, All Saints Sunday is a time to remember. While it is extremely unhealthy for a person or a church to cling neurotically to the past, it is good to celebrate and give thanks for the past, as we live in the present and look forward to the future.

As we remember the past, and particularly our loved ones who have gone before us, we are brought face to face with the reality that we do have a history. Our histories are filled with many events, but more importantly, many people - people who have gone before us; people who have been there when we have needed them; people who have often sacrificed for us.

All Saints Sunday reminds us of the reality of the old German adage: Ein Mensch ist kein Mensch – one person is no person at all! We are born into a family, we have been nurtured by people who love and care for us and we indeed do need each other.

E. Mansell Pattison in his book "Pastor and Parish - A System Approach," points out that the normal person has about 20 to 30 persons in his or her psychosocial system: family, friends, neighbors and associates from work, recreation, church. In contrast, neurotics have only 10 to 12 in their psychosocial system and psychotics only four to five in their system. Pattison goes to point out that the psychotic is caught in an exclusive, small system that is binding, constrictive and destructive.

Indeed, we do need each other.

In addition, those who have the joy and privilege of being an active part of a church community, have the advantage of another caring family beyond that of blood relatives or friends at work or play. Over the years of ministry I have witnessed the blessings of the church family: cards and prayers when one is ill; a warm and sincere greeting at worship; a phone call or visit when one is homebound; strength and support and the ministry of presence when tragedy has struck. All are signs of the love and care shown by the church family.

I will never forget the story told me by one of my members at the first parish I served in the state of Oregon. I will call her Mary; she had breast cancer. It was necessary for her to travel 30 miles one way, over a span of several weeks to receive radiation treatment. With no urging on my part, her fellow members quickly volunteered to drive her to and from her treatments.

It was a few months later and Mary was getting ready for worship on Sunday morning and her husband, who unfortunately drank too much, started to ridicule her about going to church. Mary turned to her husband and very matter-of-factly replied, "Your drinking buddies never once volunteered to drive me to my treatments. My friends at church were there every time.'

Yes, we do need each other.

All Saints Sunday is a time to remember — a time to remember those who have gone before us, who have given so much of themselves; a time to remember those still with us.

Why not take the time to say thank you and most importantly to remember Him, who gives to us that abundant life both now and forever. Jesus Christ our Lord.

The Grosse Pointe Historical Society was formed 44 years ago and re-organized in 1980. It has provided leadership in recognizing the historical significance of the Grosse Pointes, in enhancing public awareness for recording and preserving Grosse Pointe history and in promoting educational programs to generate awareness of the unique history of the area.

The society's collection is temporarily housed in Poupard Elementary School. It will be eventually placed in the society's headquarters, the Provencal-

Weir House, which is believed to have been built around 1819.

"We've done a lot of work on the house with the funds from last year's benefit," Gandelot said. "We upgraded the exterior by installing a sprinkler system for the grass, did some roof repairs, painted the exterior, did some landscaping maintenance work and decreased the mortgage.

Bridge

HAVE A PLEASANT TRY AT PERFECTION BRIDGE BY WOODY BOYD THE PASTEBOARD PASTIME

If you were to tour the Duplicate clubs of this district with me, you would conclude that bidding wit and sophistication far surpass playing performance. This isn't unexpected for good reason. We spend way too much time reading and studying about the bushel bags of bidding gadgets and little time learning to play. Likewise, it is much easier and more social-ble to bid well than play well ble to bid well than play well.

Sometime back I made reference to a comment one of France's handiest Bridge wizards made some thirty years ago about this subject. When asked which was more difficult to learn, bidding or playing, Jose Le Dentu's response was sagacious. "If you wanted to take the trouble you could become an above average bidder in fifteen days, but to become a good card player might take fifteen years."

Accept that as fact, but also recognize if you're sincere in your educational effort and willing to collect direction you can cut that a third if you'll diligently practice one doctrine.

Count Winners and Losers Before You Proceed With Your Play

Today's hand is a masterful example. Six Diamonds is agressive, but reasonable in spite of only twenty nine combined high points. The singletons and doubletons are well placed and skill should prevail.

When Dummy becomes visible with West's small Diamond lead declarers counting responsibility commences. He immediately sees that even with a ton of luck and successful finesses twelve tricks aren't likely. It would therefore seem with the eight high trump holding, a far superior plan, to execute a dummy reversal. This only requires that Diamonds break 3-2 (68% chance and either Spades divide 4-3 (62% chance) or the Heart FKing on side (50% chance). This would mean declarer would win four Diamonds in Dummy . . . three Spade ruffs in the closed hand. . . two Clubs in Dummy and either a second Spade in Dummy or two Hearts via a successful finesse. . . so be it.

At trick one the Diamond Ace is won. A Spade to the Ace and a Spade ruff. A Club to the Ace and a third Spade rough. A Club to the King and a fourth Spade rough which fortunately establishes Dummy's long Spade. Now a Club ruff in Dummy and Dummy's last two Diamonds gather in the out Trumps. The Spade Queen is the eleventh trick and the Heart Ace is a certified twelfth. Only a galoot would go for all thirteen and as the cards are he would be down.

Environmental issues concern retirees

The diamonds are sold to tourists for $200 to $1,000 a carat depending on the size and color of the stones — not much money for years of back-breaking labor.

But the prospectors don't come to the park for money. They look forward to their day in the park despite the hard work.

Now this outdoor activity may be denied these latter-day prospectors.

Mining companies maintain that the park isn't living up to its economic potential and the state doesn't reap any tax dollars from its meager discoveries. A commercial mine they contend, would not only provide tax revenue but would attract tour-

Some of the local residents think otherwise. They argue that a commercial mine might get played out in a few years and that tourists who come would enjoy doing it themselves rather than watching machinery at

Environmentalists fear that if the park is turned over to commercial development, other parks will not be safe from commercial invasion.

All of these objections may go unheeded. Although the state had promised not to allow commercial testing, because federal funds were used to develop the park as a condition for funds, the department officials in Washington reversed the decision after a visit from the Arkansas diamond lobbyists.

Progress goes on without a backward look at those who get lost in the onward and upward movement. Involved in this issue is leisure vs. economics.

Just as controversial is one issue vs. economics. It is one in which many grandparents are interested. They worry about the kind of world they will leave their grandchildren - about pollution, endangered species and is considerable controversy over old growth forests and the spotted owl. Little by little the owl's habitat has been diminished to the point where the Fish and Wildlife Service formally proposed that the owl be designated a threatened species.

The Douglas fir where the owls nest are 4 feet in diameter. They are anywhere from 300 to 1,000 years old.

In congressional conference is an amendment that would nullify certain injunctions won by environmentalists in federal courts. One would make not only spotted owls but other species at risk also.

Sometimes it seems that while the world is filled with a number of things, they are all controver-

Trees are Earth's oldest inhabitants

This year the fall colors of the trees in Grosse Pointe have seemed more beautiful than usual, perhaps because of the changeable weather.

Whatever the reason, it is a joy to behold the beautiful tones of gold and scarlet and amber and bronze which are decorating our city streets.

Somehow it's hard to think of trees as plants. They seem somehow in another category, perhaps because they are such large-scale plants compared to African violets or even sunflow-

To distinguish one species of tree from another is a matter of training. They are not all just a mass of green on green. There are vast differences of leaf form, branching, bark textures and general outline, and when some of these are learned certain trees can be recognized wherever they are seen, and can be named as friends. Just as in human relationships one friendship often leads to others, so identification of one species of tree can lead to another and the unknown can gradually become familiar.

There are some trees, however, which are so unique that they are instantly recognizable from pictures even if one has never actually seen them. The great redwoods of the West Coast of this country are examples of this, as are weeping willows and royal palms.

The oldest living things on this earth are trees. Sequoias and redwoods live to a ripe old age. The famed cedars of Lebanon are still as the Bible describes them. But the oldest trees to be found anywhere are the bristlecone pines, which grow only in the American Southwest. In the Inyo National Forest in California is the ancient bristlecone pine forest, a stand of trees documented as being over 4,600 years old.

Imagine a tree alive today which was germinated when the great Assyrian kings ruled Babylon and Nineveh, before Egypt had emerged as the most powerful nation of the civilized world. When the pyramids were being built this tree would have been some 1,400 years old. After another 1,300 years Christ was born. Empires rose and fell and this tree kept on growing. When the Crusaders set out to liberate the Holy City Jerusalem this tree was 3,740 years old. More than 800 years later, when men walked on the moon, it was still growing and each year a new to the trunk of the tree.

The growth rings of trees tell us many things about the world in addition to the age of the tree in question. Periods of extreme drought or severe cold or great rainfall are recorded by trees. Earthquakes which damage the root systems of trees are reflected in their ring patterns. Tremendous forest fires with great heat are recorded. A fairly new science called dendrochronology, which is based on the study of tree rings, is revealing more and more about trees and the world in which they and we

The University of Arizona is one place where the study of tree rings and of the trees in the American Southwest have resulted in the establishment of a calendar which goes back almost 7,000 years. This helps archeologists to date remnants of ancient civilizations and provides climatologists with a complete record of a given area's precipitation.

It is not necessary to cut the tree down to study its rings. A core sample is taken with a drilllike bit that extracts a rod-like core of wood from the bark to the center pith and provides a sample of every growth ring of the tree.

Readings of the tree ring calendar tell us, for instance, that in 1.290 B.C. a catastrophic 24vear drought began in the American Southwest and there is reason to believe that it was this drought that caused the abandonment of the ancient cliff dwellings and pueblos of that area. No one can tell what more we will be able to discover from the records kept for us by trees.

A very important part of the reference library at the Grosse Pointe Garden Center is the large collection of books and periodicals which constitute the library of the Grosse Pointe Shade paper thin layer of wood is added Tree Council. This ongoing collection is maintained by the Bristlecone pines are not council and housed at the Garriants like Sequoias or red den Center, which welcomes visitors to its headquarters in the Grosse Pointe War Memorial.

It is easy to understand why and their habitat is the high cold trees were worshipped as deities by early man. They were not only the largest living and grow ing things he knew about, but they seemed so permanent. The same tree was familiar when he his father and his grandfather before him. He knew that it would still be there for his children and grandchildren after him. Trees are the perfect symbols of strength and eternity.

It is believed that the concept of the tree of life began in ancient Chaldea, a section of southwest Asia bordering the Euphrates and Tigris rivers. One of the oldest sacred tree symbols dates back to ancient Assyria and is a stylized ornamental depiction of a tree. This symbol idea spread to Arabia, Egypt and was a boy, a youth, a man and Asia Minor, and through central an elder, and he knew that the Asia into the Far East and same tree had been familiar to thence to South America.

Your Goal is RX: WEIGHT CONTROL

Our Goal is YOUR HEALTH

As Southeastern Michigan's only university and hospital-based treatment center for obesity - The Optifast Program at Wayne State University and Harper Hospital -- we understand that obesity is a disease. A complex and multifaceted disease requiring more than quick answers and fad diets. Our scientific knowledge, medical expertise, state-of-the-art technology, and highly qualified staff make the difference.

This area's only program staffed by a team of scientists, psychologists, nutritionists, and endocrinologists - specialists in obesity, lipids, diabetes, and hypertension - our approach integrates the most current concepts in obesity treatment: rapid weight loss; exercise instruction; and development of personal awareness for improved lifestyle management. We also offer individual psychological and nutritional counseling, group support, and the most technologically advanced equipment for body composition analysis.

The average weight loss for patients participating in our program is 60 pounds. And, because our nutritional and behavioral training continues for one full year, patients have a greater chance to sustain their weight losses.

So, if the doctor instructs you to lose weight, remember the prescription for obesity treatment - The Optifast Program at Wayne State University and Harper Hospital. Our experience and expertise is a proven treatment for obesity and its disorders.

He's the difference

Matt Wysocki.

When that name is spoken many words come to mind, especially hard working, diligent, sportsmanship and gentleman.

Matt Wysocki has been some what overshadowed on the South football team this year, only because fullback Mike Montagne is having a superb season. Wysocki is to Montagne what Rocky Bleier was to Franco Harris: a heck of a blocking back.

Blocking is not his only attribute, however. All season long, Wysocki was a second threat when he handled the ball. He kept the defenders off Montagne, but he also put a few on their backs when he rammed them.

Wysocki fits the hard-nosed football image that South portrays. He'll tattoo you with a hit, but he'll be the first one to pick you up and dust off your butt. He's congenial, kind, but yet relentless on the football

He plays with a controlled reckless abandon. That sounds vicious, but he's a kinder, gentler player who will let you know he's your enemy only with the pads and helmet.

Knowing that he probably won't play college ball, Wysocki completed one more task against North last week. He banged, bumped, ran and blocked, and he did it like he's done for two years now: with gusto!

Wysocki has rushed for 297 yards and caught four passes for 28 yards this season, and scored four touchdowns. But, his role is to keep the drives alive with short-yardage plunges, and protect Montagne. He will continue to carry out his task, with no complaints, a smile and a pat on the rump, when South plays Detroit King Nov. 4 in the first round of the state playoffs. King may be trying to head off Montagne and quarterback Brian Letscher, but they better not ignore Wysocki, because he can and will beat you.

It's hard to say that a high school football player would be professional, but Wysocki carries himself with poise and maturity on and off the field. He's exactly what coaches look for in a young man who wants to play sports for all the right rea-

When he gets angry, he doesn't get down. He sports a tough, rugged facade because he's a captain. He's not tough on his teammates, he's tough on himself. He's a hungry, natural competitor. Maybe that's why he's such a talented ath-

He's only 5 feet, 9 inches tall, and one can only wonder how a heart so big fits into an average frame.

Letscher, Z-back Jim West and Montagne are three of four seniors in the Blue Devils' offensive backfield, but it is Wysocki's resilience, talent and excitement that keep the frustrating times even fun.

South became the Eastern Michigan League champions for the ninth time in 16 years, and finished the regular season with a 42-14 win over North, and I believe that without a player of Wysocki's caliber, neither of those would have hap-Wysocki helped Montagne gain 880 yards and score 11 touchdowns thus far, but he wouldn't have it any other way. That was his job, and he did it not only from 9 to 5, but put in a lot of overtime.

In 10 years, Wysocki may look back on his football years and enjoy the memories, but what he should also know is that he reached the pinnacle of high school sports by doing his job, quietly, with a lot of dedication, emotion and integrity. Matt Wysocki is a name synonymous with professionalism even if it's only on the high school level at this time.

Letscher proves too elusive

South clinches playoff berth with win over North

Sports Editor Letscher ran for three touchdowns and passed for another, as the Blue Devils routed crosstown 27-6 loss for the Blue Devils. rival Grosse Pointe North, 42-14, at South Oct. 28.

The win, South's eighth straight since losing 8-7 to Edsel Ford in the season opener, catapulted the Blue Devils into the state playoffs for the second time in three years. The loss dropped the Norsemen, who shared the Macomb Area Conference White Division title (4-1), to 5-4 overall for the second straight season.

South game, and North still leads the all-time series, 11-10.

South, which edged out Detroit Northern by three points to fill the fourth spot in Region IV, will battle Detroit King - No. 1 in the region — Nov. 4 at 1:30 p.m., at Lorenzo Wright Memorial Field.

North's Brian Ford, whose team lost 42-14 to South, rushed for 79 yards and one touchdown in his final high school game.

South last qualified for the playoffs in 1987, when it also South quarterback Brian needed a win over North, which it got (14-3), in order to get in. This win also avenged last year's

The return trip to postseason play came compliments of Letscher, who rushed for touchdowns of 54-, 22- and 13-yards, to up his touchdown count to seven on the season. Letscher also hit Mike Chambers with a 28-yard scoring strike.

"That was one of the more outstanding performances we've had by a young man," said South coach Jon Rice. "North took away Mike (Montagne) on the option, so we worked hard to get Brian loose.'

Montagne agreed. They (North) couldn't stop both of us," he said, "so one of us had to do it. I wanted to take what they'd give me, but sometimes that wasn't very much and that's when Brian broke for a couple big runs."

What was coined as a battle of fullbacks between North's Bryan Ford and South's Mike Montagne, turned into a one-man show from Letscher. Letscher finished with 149 yards rushing and 112 in the air, and accounted for four touchdowns. He also directed an offense to more than 500 yards on the day.

Montagne, who had a 70-yard touchdown run in the fourth quarter, had 132 yards on 14 carries, and Ford, who also had a touchdown, rushed for 79 yards.

"Letscher made the big plays and we couldn't contain him," said North coach Frank Sumbera. "We knew going in we had to stop him, but when we couldn't we knew we were in some trouble. Letscher's a fine, elusive quarterback.'

South's line of Andy Shaffer, Dave Asker, Jim Campagna, Brett Brownscombe, John Bednarchik, Chris Harwick and Mike Chambers allowed Letscher to have a big day.

North got on the board first when quarterback Scott Bernhardt, who led North with 90 rushing yards, popped in from the 1. Angelo Gritsas added the extra point, giving North a 7-0 lead with 3:15 to play in the first South quarterback Brian Letscher saw many holes and took advantage of them as he scored three rushing touchdowns and threw for another one in South's victory over North.

South didn't score, the momentum definitely was gained by South. North had five turnovers and South didn't commit any.

"We were moving the ball after they tied it, but the famble after a reception just crushed us," said Sumbera. "That, in my mind, changed the momentum in the game and allowed South to take control.'

South's defense, which pressured and forced Bernhardt to throw the ball early, held the Norsemen to 290 yards. North's Charlie Stumb, one of the top tight ends in the state, didn't touch the ball all day.

"Our defense did an outstanding job," said Rice. North inside its 10- and 25-yard lines. After a North quick-kick, South took over on the Norsemen 27. Two plays later Letscher eluded several would-be tacklers and scampered 22 yards for a score.

On its next series, North ran a broken play and South's Voelker pounced on the loose football with 53 seconds to play in the half. Letscher then went to the air, where he found Chambers open for a 28-yard touchdown. Weissert's extra points gave South a 21-7 lead at the half.

"Even after the fumble, we were still very much in the ball game," Sumbera said. "We couldn't afford to give up anything, let alone a touchdown. That really hurt."

"That was a quick turn of events that had us in good stead," said Rice. "In the second half, we just wanted to come out and continue what we were doing. We had the lead, we just wanted to keep it going." North, however, wanted to get going but failed.

"We didn't execute very well in the second half," said Sumbera. "We talked about hanging onto the football and not shooting ourselves with turnovers."

After a scoreless third quarter, Letscher opened the fourth quarter on a 13-yard option touchdown, extending the lead to 28-7 after Weissert's extra points. Letscher kept that drive alive when he scampered 21 yards on third down.

North came right back and cut the lead to 28-14 on Ford's 3yard plunge, but then South went to tailback Matt Wysocki. who jaunted in from 16 yards out to up the score to 35-14. After South's Rob Khoenle recovered a fumble, Montagne took off for his 70-yard run that closed the scoring.

"After last year's loss to North, a lot of people were very emotional," Wysocki said, "and all we could think about was getting revenge and we got it."

Sports rts Field hockey squad finishes 2nd in the state

The University Liggett School girls' varsity field hockey team saved the best for last: turning in its best performance of the season at the Michigan High School Field Hockey Tournament Oct. 28.

ULS battled to the finals, only to be beaten by state champion Ann Arbor Pioneer, 2-1, in a shoot-off.

ULS finished second in its pool to advance to the semifinal round, where the girls topped Ann Arbor Huron, 1.0, on Monica Paul's goal. The championship game pitted ULS against Pioneer, which had beaten ULS earlier this season.

ULS took a 2-1 halftime lead in the title game, but Pioneer tied the game and sent it into a 10-minute, sudden-death over-time. ULS dominated the overtime period, but failed to score. In the shoot-out, which matches lone players shooting against the goaltender, ULS was outscored 2-1 and wound up with a secondplace finish in the state.

Although the loss was disappointing, ULS first-year head coach Nancy Dau said, "The girls came together and played as a team and for that they should be proud. Pioneer was a team that had dominated and intimidated us earlier in the sea-

"The girls rose to the occasion of a big game and played what were probably their two best games of the year against the Ann Arbor schools," Dau added. Against Pioneer, Sarah Stack-poole and Carrie Carpenter scored during regulation play, and Sarah Haggarty scored in the shoot-out. ULS finished the regular season 7-3-3.

Carrie Carpenter and Sarah Haggarty were named to the All-League team, with Monica Paul and Sarah Stackpoole being placed on the second team, and Elizabeth Wisgerhof picked up an Honorable Mention.

Soccer

With a 6-0 shutout of Warren Bethesda Oct. 28, the ULS Knights wrapped up their fourth straight district soccer title.

In the championship game with Bethesda, the Knights extended their shutout string to four games -10 on the season - on the strong goaltending of Paul Lanzon and Bill Schervish. Goal scorers for ULS were Doug Wood (2), Larry Ayuyu, Paul Fozo, Jonah Smith and Jonathan

Earlier in district play, the Knights defeated Lutheran East. 8-0, behind Wood's two goals. Walter Gasser, Ayuyu, Smith, Jess Kasom, Anthony Ayuyu and Davis tallied solo goals. In the second round, ULS exploded to beat Immaculate Conception, 11-0. Davis scored four times and Tom Reynolds had two goals. Other scorers were Mike Coello, Larry Ayuyu, Wood, Smith and? Gasser.

Basketball

Martina Jerant hit for 25 points and P-R Stark and Linda Morreale had eight each as the Lady Knights ended their losing streak with a 47-28 drubbing of South Lake.

On Oct. 26, ULS faced Lutheran Westland, which had defeated ULS by one point earlier in the season, and suffered a 35-32 loss despite keeping the game close. Jerant had 22 points.

Cross country

Jon Sieber and Jennifer Miller will represent ULS at the boys and girls state finals, respectively, after their outstanding performances at the regional meet Oct. 28.

Sieber worked his way from 34th position to finish 15th. Sieber will also compete in the Kinney Nationals in Wisconsin Nov.

Miller placed 10th to qualify for the state meet.

'Jenny hasn't trained much this season and only competed in weekend meets," said ULS coach Paul Langford. "Virtually all of her conditioning comes from being a member of the varsity basketball team.'

Hamtramck showed up late to the game, and then sat on the bus an extra five minutes before battling the ULS football team.

And perhaps the Cosmos should have stayed on the bus after ULS ripped off a 55-0 win.

The Knights picked up their third consecutive win by shutout, giving them the school's best record of 7-2 since the unbeaten 1966 team.

"The seniors wanted to go out with a bang, and they did," said ULS coach Bob Newvine. "We came out ready to get a shutout and did.

It was ULS' fifth shutout on the season.

"People are claiming we played some weak teams," said you that we are a strong team. Good, strong teams make wins look like the other teams were weak and that's what we did."

Junior tailback Chris Carroll, who rushed for touchdowns of 9and 3-yards and totaled 103 yards rushing, broke the 1,000 mark on the season by finishing with 1,102 yards. Carroll also scored 18 touchdowns, averaged eight yards a carry and scored 112 points.

Junior fullback Kevin Whitfield scored twice from 27- and 3yards, and finished the day with 144 rushing yards on seven car-

"I'd have to say that Kevin and Chris could be the two best running backs in Class C," said Newvine.

Sophomore quarterback Jason Drook added to the onslaught by throwing to Michael Barnes for a 12-yard score, and tossed for a 2-point conversion. Jumanne N'Nimdi and Mike Fox added touchdown runs of 12- and 38yards, respectively, and John Dodds closed the scoring when he popped in from the 2.

Mike Whelan added four extra points.

Dodds also led the defense with five quarterback sacks for a negative 57 yards, and Andrew Stroble added two sacks.

'We've always finished strong at ULS," said Newvine. "This win was big, because we finished with three straight wins, something we've never done before. and we allowed our seniors to Newvine, "but let me reassure leave with a victory.

Lady Norsemen run to first regional title since 1986

By Rob Fulton Sports Editor

Nikki VanOppens and Laurin Schultz were on a mission. And when the mission was complete, the two Lady Norsemen paced their cross country team to its first regional championship since

"The difference in the meet was the way Nikki and Laurin took off," said Norsemen coach Charles Buhagiar. "They went out to win it and led most of the race, but lost it only in the last half mile to the eventual champion."

VanOppens and Schultz finished second and third overall, respectively, and kept the South "pack" from impeding North's surge to the top.

"All season long, South has bunched their girls together and finished with four or five straight spots," said Buhagiar. "We needed some people out in front of them (South) to avoid any chance they had of slipping the pack ahead of us. Nikki and Laurin made sure of that."

Allison Liebold (10th), Hope Peters (14th) and Stephanie Liebold (16th) rounded out North's scoring.

"Our goal now is to finish in the top 10 of the state," said Buhagiar. "We've been to the state finals and had our chances, but we didn't capitalize on them.

We had the teams that were capable of it, but for one reason or another, we didn't get that top 10 finish."

North is currently ranked in the state's top five teams, so maybe this is the year.

"You never know," Buhagiar said. "We've got a strong team and we have a good shot at it, but again, you never know.'

North finished the regular season unbeaten.

For the 21st time in 22 years, the boys' cross country team qualified for the state finals with a third-place finish at last week's regional meet at Metro Beach.

Scott Collins (16:09) led the team with a third overall, and Tom Gauerke (17:07) and Jim Moore (17:27) took ninth and 17th, respectively. Other runners who contributed to the team were Dave Meda (17:40), and Chris Hamilton (18:27).

DeLaSalle Pilots fly by North, South in playoffs

North's David Miller was heads up against DeLaSalle.

By Rob Fulton Sports Editor

DeLaSalle Collegiate High School has two numbers: Grosse Pointe North and Grosse Pointe South.

After beating both Pointe schools in last week's district soccer playoffs by identical 4-1 scores, the Pilots moved to the regionals, while North and South moved to an early winter.

South (14-2-1) and North (13-2-2) both enjoyed successful seasons, but they found out how tough it is to compete with the No. 2 ranked team in the state.

After beating Notre Dame (3-2) in the first round Oct. 23. North awaited the winner of the DeLaSalle/South game. South took an early 1-0 lead on Jason Dritsan's goal, but the Pilots struck for a quick 2-1 lead and cruised through the second half to take the 4-1 win.

North, on the other hand, got two goals from John Ferguson and one from Nick Karabetsos to knock off the Irish, setting up the second-round showdown with DeLaSalle, a team North upset one year ago in the playoffs.

The Pilots, according to North coach Guido Regelbrugge, took advantage of a depleted Norsemen team en route to the win.

"They noticed we were a little thin on our bench," he said, 'and they took advantage of it. However, we don't feel bad, because we know we played our best.

"All season long, we have played under the most adverse conditions I've seen in 48 years of soccer," Regelbrugge said. "I am very proud of the kids on this team. A lot of people told us we wouldn't survive, but we proved that we'd never throw in the towel."

Ferguson gave North a 1.0 lead, but the Pilots tied it just before the half.

"We played 55 minutes of tough soccer," said Regelbrugge, "but we just got too tired. You can only go to the same guys so long before they start to tire. We just didn't have the depth to match up.'

North never quit, but several crucial blows to the team hindered a potentially big season: Stopper John Karabetsos was lost for the season after the season's third game; high-scoring forward Angelo Gritsas suffered a hamstring pull and sat out three weeks; several players were dismissed from the team for a week on disciplinary action, and Regelbrugge was forced to promote some jayvee players.

"All this happened and we still won the league, beat University Liggett School and tied South (0-0)," he said. "Those were are three goals for the season and we accomplished them, with much adversity. This team, I will never forget because of its courage and dedication.'

Without Karabetsos, a 1988 All-State player, North strung together two winning streaks of seven and 10 games, recorded eight straight shutouts, and scored an average of five goals a game.

'Just before we played South and ULS, people were asking us why we weren't forfeiting," said Regelbrugge. "We don't forfeit or throw in the towel at North. That would have been a disservice to the kids.'

South also had a proficient offense, scoring more than 70 goals, led by Chad Schomaker's 23 goals and 13 assists, and allowing only 10. It was no wonder the Blue Devils went 15-2-1. But, perhaps the weak Macomb Area Soccer League didn't prepare South for the playoffs.

'That wasn't the case at all,' said South coach John Case. "This year the league had teams that were not as good as De-LaSaile, but were strong. The caliber of teams was higher this year than in years past.

South's success began early, with 10 straight wins before a loss to ULS. Five wins and one tie rounded out the season, before the loss to the Pilots.

"Somewhere, somehow," said Case, "our season began clicking. The kids were playing very well together and that made the difference. Since our first game, I've only had to make one change, and that's highly uncommon. It doesn't normally work that way, but for this team it did. Unfortunately, we weren't able to beat DeLaSalle.'

Neither was North, unfortu-

The U-12 Little Caesars team was in first place after the preliminary rounds and went on to beat the Rochester Roadrunners, 4-1, in the title game.

The U-12 defense, which didn't allow a goal through the preliminary rounds, was anchored by Kathy Storen (goalie), sweeper Kim Hepner, fullbacks Emily Grenzke and Dana Mertz, and centerback Abbey Heck.

Offensively, the scoring was spread throughout the team with Katie Spicer, Shera Teitge and Molly McKenzie leading the way. Rounding out the rest of the lineup were Abby Tompkins, Missy Kordas, Katlin Shapiro, Maggie Durant, Melanie Lewis, Heather Hill and Leah Kaplan.

Katie Grenzke scored the only goal in the U-14 Mustangs' championship win, 1-0, over the Rochester Raiders.

The previous day, the Mustangs played five preliminary games to qualify for the finals. Throughout the tourney the defense held the opposition scoreless, with Robin Dold, Rebecca Hessen, Emily Shapiro, Karen Clark, Cassie Pangborn and Lauren Kordas taking credit for the stingy defense.

The offense was led by Robin Maples, Maureen Zolik, Gretchen Sazama and Becky Johnson. Betsy Grego, Lana Khalidi, Jody Costello and Laurie Ness anchored the front line.

"This was the best effort I've ever seen at the beginning of the season by one of my teams," said Coach Rick Grenzke. "The girls played as a team from the first game to the finals. I hope we can keep it going during the regular season in Little Caesars play."

It is now common knowledge that people with high blood cholesterol are at risk for heart attacks. However, there are several questions about cholesterol commonly asked by patients that may be helpful to readers.

Q: What are blood lipids? A: Lipid is a generic term for the fat carried in the blood. There are two major kinds: triglycerides and cholesterol. The public is most familiar with cholesterol.

Q: What is the good and

bad in cholesterol?

A: Cholesterol doesn't float freely in the blood. It gets carried in several small particles called lipoproteins. Certain lipoproteins carry the cholesterol from the liver and the intestine to the vessel walls, causing hardening of the arteries. These particles are called low density liporproteins (LDL), or bad cholesterol.

The other lipoproteins carry the cholesterol from the wall of the arteries to the liver. Liver produces bile and eliminates the cholesterol. Since these particles help to clear cholesterol from the body. they are called good cholesterol, or high density lipoproteins (HDL).

The amount of cholesterol deposited in the arteries depends upon the balance between LDL and HDL choles-

Therefore, we try to decrease the bad cholesterol and increase the good with treatment.

Q: Do we need to fast before getting our cholesterol checked?

A: Not really. Cholesterol levels are quite stable in the blood. Even after eating, cholesterol measurements would be accurate. However, if you are getting the whole lipid panel checked, including triglyceride levels, you will need to fast overnight and not have breakfast in the morning before the blood test.

Q: Does everyone need a cholesterol determination?

A: Since high cholesterol levels don't give any signs or symptoms and one usually discovers high cholesterol after having a heart attack, it is prudent to check the blood cholesterol level routinely. Therefore, every adult should get his/her cholesterol checked at least once. However, people with strong family histories for heart attacks definitely need to get a whole lipid panel, including good and bad fractions measured.

Q: I've been following a low-fat cholesterol diet for a while. My cholesterol is still high, why?

A: Blood cholesterol level is determined not only by the dietary intake of cholesterol, but also by the amount of cholesterol produced in the body.

Some people produce tremendous amounts of cholesterol in their liver and despite restricting their dietary fat, cannot normalize their blood cholesterol. Those patients require drug treatment. The notion that one can cure high cholesterol only by dieting is a wrong one. People with a mild or moderate amount of cholesterol elevation can improve their cholesterol by diet alone. However, people with cholesterol levels above 280 mg/dl usually require drug treatment along with the diet.

Q: Do I still need to follow the diet if I am on medication?

A: Absolutely. Diet helps to decrease the cholesterol and you may be able to use less medication by continuing your diet.

Q: Are the drugs safe and effective?

A: Some of the drugs used for cholesterol treatment have been around for 15 years or longer, and they are quite safe. Some others have been available for the last couple of years and they do not have the long-term safety record yet, however, they are very effective.

When one considers safety, one has to make a differentiation between the long-term safety and the side effects. Side effects can include problems like flushing, constipation and indigestion, which are inconvenient but are not associated with a medical risk in the long run. Long-term safety refers to medical problems such as gallstones, cataracts, etc., which may appear several years later.

Q: Is the drug treatment lifelong?

A: In most cases, it is. High cholesterol levels in many instances are caused by basic problems in the metabolism, which usually don't get corrected by themselves. In certain cases, cholesterol and triglyceride elevations may be due to other reasons such as obesity, diabetes and thyroid problems. In that case, once the basic disease is resolved (the person loses weight, controls the diabetes and/or receives thyroid medication), drug treatment for cholesterol may not be necessary any longer.

Q: I have high cholesterol. Do I need to get my family checked?

A: Most of the lipid problems run in the family. Your blood relatives, siblings and children are likely to have high cholesterol levels as well. Therefore, it would be prudent to check the family.

Q: What is the evidence that decreasing cholesterol will prevent heart attacks?

A: There are several longterm, very large studies, which indicate that lowering blood cholesterol decreases chest pain, heart attacks, the need for angioplasties and bypass surgeries. The biggest criticism about these studies is that, despite the improvement in heart attack rates, treatment does not seem to prolong the longevity.

Q: Does low cholesterol cause cancer?

A: There seems to be a relationship between very low cholesterol levels in the blood (165 mg/dl or less) and cancer. We don't know whether low cholesterol causes the cancer or is just associated with it. Therefore, eating high-fat, high-cholesterol diets to increase the blood cholesterol with the hope of preventing cancer is not warranted.

After your personal inventory is finished and the family discussion has ended, here are a few more suggestions that may help make the holiday season one of fond memories and less stressful.

Eat health-promoting food and get plenty of sleep. With all of the holiday activities going on, it is especially important to take good care of your physical self.

You can enjoy holiday foods without indulging in holiday excesses. The tiredness, the fatigue and irritability that often tarnish the holiday glow are usually caused by lack of sleep and too many rich foods.

 Make holiday planning a family affair. More satisfaction will come from a family effort. If holiday plans feature the wishes of the entire family, the mood will be more relaxing; reducing resentment of children who have to do something or go somewhere because you said so.

• Delegate your stress. Nobody expects you to be a one-person show. The benefits of delegating are two-fold: It relieves you of total responsibility, and it involves other family members, possibly resulting in greater family togetherness and unity.

Although more and more women are pursuing careers outside the home, a sense of loyalty to tradition may dictate spending more hours hovering over the latest holiday recipe, creating miraculous endeavors. You had better think twice about trying to match someone else's concept of the "perfect" gourmet dinner. Instead, keep it simple and create a few Christmas favorites and let the rest go.

• Put the joy back into giftgiving. We are a spoiled society and at times our gift-giving appears to have turned into another competitive sport. It's rewarding to give the perfect gift, but something less than that should not ruin the festivities. If you feel insulted by an overbearing relative, try not to take it too seriously. By now, you know what to expect. Appreciate their good points and let the bad ones go.

So, as the holiday festivities settle around you, enjoy them more this year by doing less and rediscovering the simple joys of the season. In the end, these simple pleasures are really what we are seeking to begin with.

What does it mean to be physically fit?

By Kathleen Koerner Special Writer

So what does it really mean to be physically fit, and why should you care anyway?

Physical fitness is a complex concept that will often mean different things to different people. For the purpose of this article, without exhaustion from routine defined as an enhanced physiological of functional capacity allowing for an improved quality of life. Sounds a bit generic, doesn't it? OK then, let's say that quality of life refers to an overall positive feeling and enthusiasm however, physical fitness will be activites. A high level of physical fitness allows us to perform required daily tasks as well as additional activities for personal enjoyment without fatigue.

Put another way, physical fitness is what too may of us have

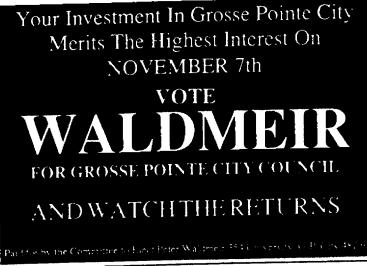

When we are young, we are typically very active and participate in sports, bicycling, dancing, etc. As we grow older, our activity level decreases - we ride instead of walk, drop out of sports, sit at desks and watch too much TV. The results are quite visible in the form of expanded waistlines, sagging postures, weak muscles and stress and fatigue. Sound familiar?

Fitness is not a condition. Fitness is a way of life, requires establishing and maintaining appropriate patterns of activities. Just as sitting in front of the TV with a bowl of ice cream has become a negative activity pattern, the many aspects of fitness can become positive habits with benefits such as decreased stress and tension, increased self-image, improved appearance, increased energy level and feeling of well-being, just to name a few.

The five components of physical fitness, which will be discussed in other articles, are 1) cardiovascular endurance, 2) muscular endurance, 3) muscular strength, 4) flexibility, 5) body composition.

DESPERATELY SEEKING GOOD HOME SPECIAL DOG

This affectionate, loyal, gentle Shepherd/Retriever mix has either been lost or abandoned for a long time. She was seen with another dog in East Detroit and rescued by a kind person that cannot keep her. Her dog companion was hit and killed by a car. This dog is a female, about 8 years old and even though she appreciates and responds to the love we give her, she keeps watching the cars that pull up, as though she is waiting for someone to come back to get her. She is housebroken and obedient and needs a loving home to help her regain her confidence and to feel secure. Please help us keep her from going to a shelter where she will become that much more frightened. Call 773-1246 for more information.
