Drunk drivers forced to face their drinking habits

By John Minnis Assistant Editor

Ron, 40, a Detroit resident who lives near Grosse Pointe Park, was celebrating. He had just gotten his first article published. He started drinking at a har near his office downtown, and he continued his celebrating at a bar in the Park.

He knew he had too much to drink, but he attempted to drive home. A short way from the bar, a Park officer pulled him over. Ron doesn't feel the officer had sufficient cause to stop him, but the bottom line is Ron blew a .19 on the Breathalyzer - nearly

Tree sale

Gross sales of approximately $24,000 were taken in by the Grosse Pointe Academy Alumni Association and the Lakeshore Optimist Club over last week's bone-chilling weekend sale of Christmas trees, wreaths, roping and other seasonal items, according to Mary Ann Tindall, alumni treasurer. This was the second year the sale was held. The event included a celebrity sing-along, ice carvers, mimes and a visit from Santa and Mrs. Claus. Proceeds benefit alumni scholarships and local community youth programs.

Arrest in Harper Woods closes Park burglaries

By John Minnis Assistant Editor

The arrest of a career felon by Harper Woods police last month closed the book on 24 home burglaries in Grosse Pointe Park during the past three years.

Al Allan Goodwin, 31, of Detroit, was bound over to Wayne County Circuit Court Nov. 29 after a preliminary examination in Harper Woods 32nd District freeway before Cadieux. Court on charges of breaking and entering an occupied dwelling and car theft.

Goodwin allegedly broke into a home on Washtenaw Nov. 16 at 4 a.m. Harper Woods Detective Sgt. Jeffery Manor said Goodwin entered the home through an unlocked front door and was confronted by the resident who was sleeping on the couch. The burglar then grabbed the resident's purse and car keys, which were near the front door, and fled in her car.

She called Harper Woods police, who a minute later saw the suspect in the woman's car entering westbound I-94 at Moross.

Goodwin is being held on $25,000 cash bond in Wayne County jail and is awaiting a Dec. 13 arraignment in Detroit Recorder's Court.

Manor said that when Goodwin was arrested, he was carrying a watch taken from a home a block away from the Washtenaw address. Goodwin is believed to have entered the other home through a kitchen window.

Manor said Goodwin raised the kitchen window and reached in and took the watch that was near the window. The theft occurred sometime between 2:30 and 4 a.m. while the residents were asleep. Goodwin has not

Grosse Pointe Park Detective Sgt. James Smith said the burglary as described in the Harper Woods arrest bulletin concerning Goodwin matched the descriptions of many burglaries in the Park. He said Goodwin's method of operating was specific, and he

Goodwin only entered homes between the hours of 2 and 6 a.m. and only where house lights were on. If the lights were on upstairs, that's where he'd go. He figured if the lights were on, he would see the residents com-

He would not enter a home with an alarm, and he sometimes disconnected the phone before going upstairs. He might take a kitchen knife for protection, and he sometimes stole the resident's car.

He never broke any glass to enter a home. He would find an unlocked door or window, and he often used a bicycle, patio table or lawn chair to allow him to reach an unlocked window.

Following the Harper Woods arrest, Smith interviewed Goodwin for four hours at the Harper Woods jail. Smith said Goodwin described two burglaries committed on Balfour in the Park.

Smith then took Goodwin on a street-by-street ride through the Park, and Goodwin pointed out

In Goodwin's case, he will be tried on breaking and entering and on car-theft charges. If he's found guilty of one or both felonies, then a hearing will be held to determine if he is guilty of being a habitual offender.

Of course, he first has to be charged as a habitual offender, but the prosecutor's office can add the habitual offender charge later.

Will Pointes' school chief be 'outsider' or 'insider'?

ow that Superintendent of Schools John Whritner has announced his resignation effective March 7, the Grosse Pointe Board of Education has begun its search for a successor with the major question being whether the person will be an "insider" or an "outsider."

This time the search is beginning at home with a special board committee headed by President Jon Gandelot starting to look at "internal" candidates for the job. Whritner's successor will be the district's 13th superintendent or, if two interim officials are included, the 15th since the consolidation of five districts into the local district in 1921.

Whether to "look outside" or "recruit internally" is always a hard choice for any school board. Gandelot, senior member of the current board who now is in his 12th year of service, has taken part in two national searches and can see the advantages and disadvantages of both approaches.

If someone currently in the system measures up, the appointment normally eases the changeover because the new superintendent is familiar with the system, its professional staff, its operations and the laws and regulations under which it operates. Avoiding the costly national search also saves the district money, perhaps as much as the $30,000 sometimes invested in such a search.

But an outsider often brings to the district excellent experience in running a school system elsewhere as well as new ideas and new ways of doing things that are beneficial, even though the new superintendent often is not fully operational for up to two years because of the time required for the search and the settling-in process.

It is clear, however, that the Grosse Pointe District has not become a "revolving door" for superintendents although nationally superintendents now tend to serve for shorter periods than they did a generation or two ago. In big cities, superintendents often serve no longer than three years and nationally the average service is only about seven years.

J.W. Bushong, who became superintendent on Jan. 1, 1951, and served until his successor, C.H. Wilson, took over on Oct. 16, 1962, apparently had the longest term of service in the Pointes, more than 11 1/2 years. Samuel M. Brownell, whose name adorns Brownell School, served almost as long, from August 1927 to July 1938.

Superintendent Whritner will have served about a month less than five years when he leaves his office March 7, 1990, but he says that period is slightly above the average span of service for Grosse Pointe school superintendents.

In the last 20 years, the district has had six superintendents: Theos. I. Anderson from July 1967 to July 1974, James A. Adams to July 1976, William D. Coats to July 1981, Kenneth Brummel to October 1984 and Joseph Spagnoli to April 15, 1985, when Whritner took over.

Whritner came to Grosse Pointe from Connecticut and is returning to that state to become superintendent of the Greenwich school system. The major reason for his departure, he said, is that by going back to Connecticut he will be 700 miles closer to his children. Earlier this year he had been one of the three finalists for the superintendent's post in West Hartford, Conn.

Grosse Pointe board members speak highly of Whritner's administration, are sorry to have him leave but feel that he has brought some excellent talent into the system.

With the board already "looking hard" at possible internal candidates, as Gandelot says, it would be no great surprise if it found what it was looking for among several first-rate local school officials. If it doesn't, of course, the board will begin another national search and undergo a much longer wait before a new superintendent arrives from the outside.

But do they earn their pay?

igher salaries can be justifed for many elected public officials on the basis of their performance, the rising cost of living or salaries paid for comparable work in private industry.

Yet in the case of Mayor Coleman Young of Detroit as well as members of the U.S. House of Representatives, it is doubtful that their performance would justify the increases just approved.

Young's pay has just been boosted to $130,000 a year, which ties Detroit with New York City for the top pay for any mayor in the country. The two-step hike to $125,000 a year for the House members represents a 39 percent increase over their current pay of $89,500 a year.

We agree with William O'Brien, director of Civic Searchlight, a nonpartisan political monitoring organization, that the Detroit mayor does not have the responsibilities the New York mayor has.

But the Detroit Elected Officials Compensation Commission, made up chiefly of friends of Mayor Young, voted the raise. It will go into effect along with increases in the salaries of council members and the city clerk which will rise to $60,000, from the current level of $57,770, unless the council says no. Rejection appears to be

The House members at least were required to vote for their own increases and, to their credit, they also adopted an ethics package. The legislation bars House members from accepting speaking fees and other honoraria from lobbying groups and limits the value of gifts and the number of expense-free trips members can accept.

The two Democratic congressmen whose districts include the Grosse Pointes divided on the pay issue. 14th District Rep. Dennis Hertel, Harper Woods, voted against the raise and 13th District Rep. George Crockett, Detroit, voted for it.

According to Common Cause, both congressmen accepted honoraria in 1987-88. Hertel, a member of the Armed Services and Merchant Marine committees and chair of the Oceanography Subcommittee, received $30,000 from 19 contributors, many of them major defense contractors. Crockett, a member of the Foreign Affairs and Judiciary Committees and chair of the Western Hemisphere Affairs Subcommittee, accepted $6,362 and contributed

Rep. John Dingell, Trenton, chairman of the House Energy and Commerce Committee, collected $93,200 in honoraria during the same period to lead all Michigan congressmen in that department, but contributed $40,900 of the total to charity.

$1.500 of the total to charity.

The amounts of the honoraria, combined with the huge amounts members of Congress and candidates accept in campaign contributions, explain why some people contend it's the best Congress that can buy.

True, it's only the first year of the new congressional term. But can House members in all honesty contend that they earned the $35,500 a year raise they voted themselves, even though it won't become fully effective until 1991 or after the next election?

They did little to cut the federal deficit, failed to get final action on child care legislation, took no action to improve the nation's highway system, ignored other domestic needs that require funding and did nothing to limit the campaign contributions that have become a national dis-

Schools

To the Editor:

The New York Times (Nov. 18) reports that New Jersey's Department of Education has mailed "report cards" to the parents of every child in the state's public schools. The cards tell how each child's basic skills compare to averages for similar schools. Facts about spending, enrollment and student-teacher ratios are also in the mailing.

Governor Kean says: "New Jerseyans have a right to know what they are getting for their money.

That's precisely the thrust of "Profiling Michigan's School Districts," our report ranking the performance, financial means and value (performance adjusted for financial means) of our state's K-12 school districts. The public data permitted us to evaluate only school districts, but New Jersey proves that it is possible to measure and compare results in every classroom and for every student.

As with our report, the New Jersey effort has been criticized by educators. There was even an unsuccessful court challenge to the issuance of the report cards.

Accountability and evaluation in public schooling are inevitable. Michigan needs to catch up to states like New Jersey, Illinois and California in measuring educational results and informing parents and educators of what they are getting for money spent.

Our efforts may be viewed as a threat by many school officials, but we are on their side, and in the long run believe our efforts to increase accountability will help improve K-12 education in Michigan. We welcome the assistance of every concerned educator.

Robert Kleine Frances Spring Public Sector Consultants,

Editor's note: A story regarding the study and local reaction to it was printed in the Nov. 23 issue.

A new world order in offing?

f people needed any further evidence that a new world order is in the mak-Ling, they got it when they saw the presidents of the two superpowers holding a televised joint press conference at the end of the Malta summit.

Here was Mikhail S. Gorbachev promising on live television that "the Soviet Union would never start a hot war against the United States," declaring that "we have ceased arms shipments to Central America" and recommending that use of force, the arms race and other characteristics of the Cold War "should be abandoned."

True, Gorbachev's statements do not indicate the source of those Russian arms that U.S. officials have spotted being shipped from Nicaragua into El Salvador. So they did not satisfy President George Bush's demand that the Nicaraguans go through with "certifiably free elections" and do not "export revolution" into El Saivador.

It's also true that Romania and perhaps Bulgaria are still Eastern European holdouts against Gorbachev's policies of glasnost and perestroika, that Communist Cuba still is swimming against the tide and that Communist China still is sticking to the hard line it adopted when it used force to crush the student uprising last

Despite his earlier caution, President Bush at the press conference said that "With reform under way in the Soviet Union, we stand at the threshold of a brand new era of U.S.-Soviet relations." And then he added: "It is within our grasp to contribute each in our own way to overcoming the division of Europe and ending the military confrontation there.'

At the same time, Bush reiterated at his own press conference that nothing at the summit had altered his desire to keep NATO strong and that while "it's fine to envision a group of countries that spend a lot more time worrying about the economic side and less on the defense side, we are not there vet."

No formal agreements were reached at the summit and there was not even a communique at the conclusion. But when the two leaders can stand before the world on live TV and discuss their disagreements as well as their agreements, we think there is reason to hope that a more peaceful world is also possible.

Holidays are for families

Dull the knives and hide the firearms, the family's coming for Christmas.

Whenever I see commercials or movies where family members gather 'round the tree to smile and sing Christmas carols, or read Clement Moore's "Twas the Night Before Christmas" while sipping hot cocoa, I know Christmas is becoming a product of the media. Things like that don't happen. This is America,

Where do those families on television come from? Everyone is happy to see each other, no one makes snide comments about how fat someone has gotten since last year, everyone is happy with their gifts and no one gets drunk.

My favorite holiday family gathering is in the film "Home for the Holidays." A very young Sally Field stars in this film about four sisters who come home for the holidays and meet their new stepmother, played by the wonderful Julie Harris.

The sisters don't like or trust the new stepmother even though there's really no reason not to. But there's no reason to like her

Anyway, the sisters are murdered one by one, and in an overly dramatic climax, we find out the murderess is the spinster sister who is tired of being held emotionally hostage by ungrateful family members.

Finally, an honest depiction of a family during the holidays.

Christmas should come in, weather for a backyard barbe-

I've been dreading holiday gatherings since Halloween when stores first put up holiday decorations and hauled out their Christmas tapes and started smiling more. It's funny, but when store owners smile around the holidays, their eyes look like little dollar signs.

Yes, I love my family. I just like, early May - perfect don't like being around them for extended periods of time.

How families have survived the tradition of gathering around the table, each armed with knife and fork, for so many centuries is beyond me. My mother gives us weak plastic forks and cuts all the meat into bite-sized pieces before serving it — she doesn't trust any of us with knives.

We use paper plates so no one breaks china over anyone's head. She hides the fire poker, and for that matter, the matches.

She pats us down at the door as we come in. I have to give her credit, though, she makes it feel like a hug. We know better.

I wondered once if my family was the exception and the ones in the commercials were the rule. Then I visited other families on the holidays and watched as one family gagged an aunt who suggested everyone sing Christmas carols. She was put in a closet until the feeling passed.

We got to know each other really well that year, because not only did we have to talk to each other, but we had to feel our way around. That, and because we had our own well we couldn't flush the toilets without electricity.

I now know why Bing Crosby always dreamed of a white Christmas. If a storm hit, maybe he'd be snowed in and wouldn't have to deal with the relatives.

But what would Christmas be without family? Just another cold day off work in December snuggled under a blanket watching "Home for the Holidays" and sipping hot coffee.

Hmmm. I'll pray for snow.

Recycling

To the Editor:

It is likely that the Pointes will soon have difficulty finding landfill sites or incinerators for their waste. Fortunately, in the past year Grosse Pointe residents have shown by their response to the efforts of the Grosse Pointe Citizens for Recycling and by the success of the pilot curbside project, that they are ready, willing, and able to make the effor to recycle.

Before the election, several members of the Farms City Council expressed an interest in recycling. Now, when the need is here, and when there is momentum for recycling, they could make a demonstration of that interest by finding a place to put a drop-off site for recyclables in the Farms. This would also be a good time to investigate a permanent curbside recycling service.

Solicitations

To the Editor:

Annually, the citizens of Michigan contribute millions of dollars to what they believe to be worthwhile causes. In reality, many of these dollars are donated by citizens because of deceptive tactics and outright fraud.

The Michigan State police Troopers Association (MSPTA) is concerned that unscrupulous solicitors are securing donations in the name of various police organizations within the state, including some allegations that they represent State Troopers. It should be noted that neither the MSPTA nor the Michigan Department of State Police solicit funds through telephone or mass mailing programs.

Fraudulent solicitation is easily accomplished claiming sponsorship by a police organization, because it immediately creates the impression of legitimacy. It also makes the sale easier if the solicitor infers that some sort of police service will be withheld or enhanced, depending on the contribution. No reputable police agency would cut its services to the community it protects, or offer preferential treatment to citizens, based on financial contributions.

Legislation that regulates and controls solicitation by telephone and mail must be enacted if we are to protect our citizens without harming legitimate solicitation programs.

Any bonafide police organization that is soliciting funds should be willing to provide any and all information on request. Any hesitation to do so should cause a citizen to question the organization's legitimacy.

The following hints may be helpful in dealing with telephone solicitation:

It is your telephone. It is your time. If the solicitor is uncooperative, rude, or uses pressure, simply hang up. Telephone solicitors are highly skilled salespersons. Don't rush into a decision. Take your time and ask questions. If you are not satisfied, simply hang up.

Request that the solicitor clearly explain who they represent and for what purpose the money will be spent. Request this information in writing prior to contributing. If they are reluctant, simply hang up.

If you feel the solicitor is using unscrupulous tactics or suspect a fraudulent operation, simply hang up.

> Sincerely, Richard J. Darling President, MSPTA

Every 22 minutes, a life is lost in an alcohol-related traffic crash. Many of these deaths were unsuspecting victims - a non-drinking driver, passenger, pedestrian or bicyclist. These victims were not "the other guy." They were the husbands, wives, children, friends and family of people just like you or me.

You might feel that because you do not drink and drive, drunk and drugged driving is drunk driver - it can kill you, attitude.

And there will be times when we may have to make our friends' actions "our business" too. Don't let someone who is drunk get into a car and drive home. It may be uncomfortable to take someone's keys - but it may be the biggest favor anyone will ever do for him.

A good time to start this new way of thinking will be during Drunk and Drugged Driving Awareness Week, Dec. 10-16. This annual event will highlight the problem and remind us all of our opportunity and responsibility to eliminate drunk and drugged driving.

As the administrator of the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, I'd like to encourage you to join me in taking part in this special week. 2-year-olds must be numbered

According to the IRS, there are not many changes in the rules for filing this year's federal income tax returns. But there is one change that will affect any Michigan taxpayer.

Taxpayers who claim a dependent age 2 and over will be required to provide the dependent's Social Security number on their tax return. Previously, the number was required for dependents age 5 and older.

To be issued a Social Security number, a dependent must have proof of the following items: age, U.S. citizenship or legal alien status, and identity.

For more information, taxpayers may contact any Social Security Administration office for Form SS-5, Application for a Social Security Number Card, and for the free leaflet, "Applying for a Social Security Number."

St. Clair Shores votes down Woods' proposed fishing pier

By Dan Jarvis Staff Writer

The fishing pier proposed for construction in Grosse Pointe Woods Lake Front Park was again rejected, this time by neighboring St. Clair Shores.

In a unanimous vote, the St. Clair Shores City Council rejected the planned project at its Nov. 20 meeting. Woods officials have been trying to get the project approved for the last three Chester Petersen, Woods city administrator, said the neighboring City Council rejected the planned pier at the recommendation of the St. Clair Shores Water Resources Board because of possible safety problems.

The latest rejection was not the first the city has experienced regarding the project. In January the Michigan Department of Natural Resources rejected the plan because of possible adverse effects on fish and because the project could create a navigational hazard to boaters.

The DNR later approved the project when the Woods agreed to shorten the proposed 400-foot pier to 250 feet.

Current plans call for a 12foot-wide, L-shaped pier extending 250 feet into Lake St. Clair. The actual length of the pier, if straightened out, would be about 450 feet. The section closest to 2,000 yards of broken concrete. The remainder of the pier would be constructed of wooden decking supported by steel piping.

If the plan is approved, Petersen said, the Woods plans to dredge the area near the pier to create deeper water, which would attract more fish.

DNR officials earlier said dredging is proposed for an area of shallow water which provides basin for foraging, spawning and nursery habitat variety of fish species. The area of the lake is also a habitat for aquatic invertibrates, which are an essential part of the food chain and contribute to fish productivity.

land would rest on more than Dredging would eliminate the the lake. area as a prime fish and invertibrate habitat, according to the DNR.

> The St. Clair Shores City Council must approve the project before it can be constructed since Lake Front Park is located within the city of St. Clair Shores. Petersen said the project was rejected for three primary reasons:

> • The pier could present a danger to operators of small water craft.

> • Carp are the only fish that can be caught at the site.

• Residents of St. Clair Shores feel the pier is unnecessary since people can fish from the banks of

George Catlin, Woods city attorney, said early in 1950, when the Woods was constucting an outdoor swimming area, a resident of St. Clair Shores sued the city, fearing that the swimming area project would restrict his view of the lake. The Woods and residents in the immediate area agreed that no project would be built more than 5 feet in height. At the recent St. Clair Shores council meeting, some residents complained that the project would violate the agreement and obstruct their lake view.

completed, would be of benefit to residents of the Woods.

"We have had a great number of requests by people, many senior citizens, who would like to fish in the lake from a pier," he

Petersen said the Woods City Council will review the subject and plan further action in the coming weeks. He would not indicate whether the Woods will again approach the St. Clair Shores council for re-evaluation and possible approval of the pier project.

'Tie One On'

Public Safety Officer David Scheuer "Ties One On" for the holidays. All the police departments in the Pointes are participating this year in Project Red Ribbon by Mothers Against Drunk Driving. The annual tying of red ribbons to the antenna or door handle of cars by police, government and institutional employees and citizens is to remind residents not to drink and drive during the holidays.

Gift pets not a good idea

The holiday season is a traditional time of giving, but a kitten or puppy may not be an appropriate present, according to The Humane Society of the United States.

Phyllis Wright, vice president for companion animals, said that the holidays may be the very worst time to bring a new pet home.

"It's a season filled with excitement, visitors, noise, general chaos. An animal, with all its special needs, may be an added burden instead of a welcome addition to the family. And in all the confusion, young children may treat a puppy or kitten as just another toy. If the family and pet get off to a bad start together, there's a greater chance they won't stay together long," she said.

Wright also noted that many humane societies around the country experience an influx of unwanted "gift pets" in the weeks and months following the holidays.

Wright says that giving an animal as a surprise gift is never a good idea, regardless of the season. "Taking care of an animal requires a commitment that not everyone is prepared to make. And choosing a pet is a personal decision, rather like picking a best friend. It's a choice that really shouldn't be made by someone else."

Instead of giving an animal, Wright suggests giving a book about pets that will help a potential pet owner make a decision about what kind of animal would best suit his or her lifestyle.

Some humane societies offer gift certificates that can be used to adopt a pet after the holidays. A symbol of a pet, such as a collar, leash or toy can be wrapped with a note announcing the later arrival of a pet.

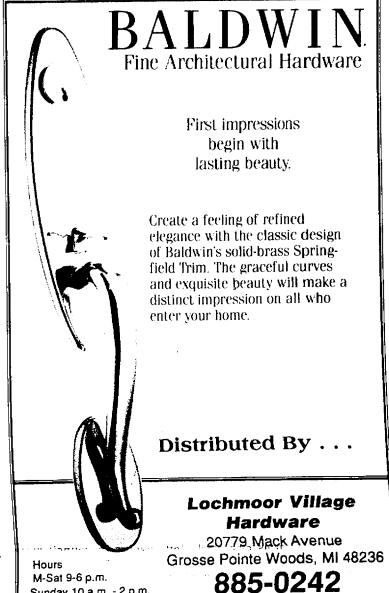

Wright noted that, when the new pet is brought home, the best time of day to do it is morning, so the pet will have the daylight hours to explore its new surroundings. She also urges people to avoid putting a puppy or kitten in a closed box or wrapping a ribbon around its neck. Animals can panic or even suffocate in the box, or chew and swallow the ribbon.

Other holiday safety tips are:

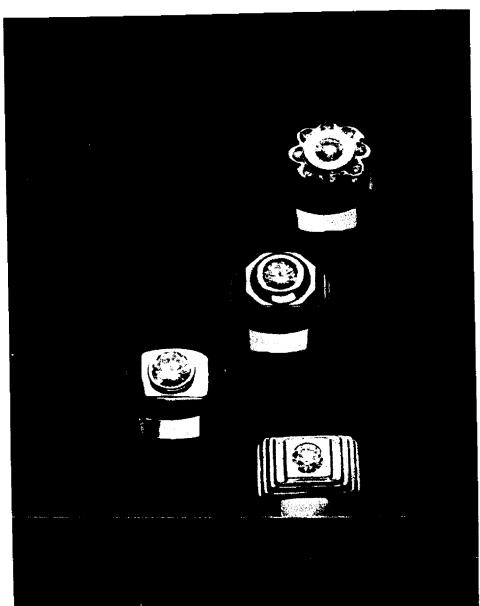

· Keep plants like holly, mistletoe and poinsettias out of reach, as they are toxic if eaten.

• If you can't keep pets out of the room where the Christmas tree and gifts are displayed, at least be sure the tree is securely anchored and that ornaments and tinsel are hung out of pawreach.

Wright also cautioned against taking pets on shopping excursions. "There seems to be added temptation to steal pets out of parked cars during this season. It may be a bad time to get a new pet, but it's an even worse time to lose one," she said.

Woods lawsuit challenges mixed-use zoning restrictions

Staff Writer

A lawsuit stemming from complaints about zoning practices by the city of Grosse Pointe Woods has been filed in Wayne County Circuit Court.

Thomas Handlos, a Woods real estate professional, has filed a lawsuit against the city claiming it has effectively confiscated his property without just compensation.

In 1988, Handlos built a house at the corner of Hollywood and Mack with the intent of living in one part of the house and renting the other part out as a lawyer's office.

The events leading to the suit began in the fall of 1988 when Handlos petitioned the City Council to loosen the city's mixed occupancy zoning ordinance.

When Handlos approached the council last year, the mixed-use ordinance allowed physicians, dentists or real estate offices to operate in residential homes abutting Mack Avenue. Handlos wanted lawyers added to the acceptable list of business uses so

In November 1988, the ordinance was amended to add lawyers to the list, but the council added several restrictions to all of the office uses.

The ordinance currently limits mixed occupancy to only one of yer the acceptable businesses at one time. Furthermore, the professional using the office must be a resident in the home. A resident on Mack is prohibited from leasing office space to another person, such as a doctor or a law-ment's approval last November, Handlos said he was opposed to the change because the amendment limits use at his Mack address to just his real estate office and prevents him from leasing space to others.

George Catlin, Woods city attorney, said Handlos wants his property's classification converted from mixed occupancy to restricted office use so that he can lease space to other busi-

"The city's position is that the property is located in a primarily residential area," Catlin said.

Handlos has filed suit in Wayne County Circuit Court, where Judge Claudia House Morcom will hear the case.

Handlos applied for rezoning in March of this year, but the City Council denied the request, stating the property is located in a residential area.

In his lawsuit, Handlos is asking the court to render his property exempt from the city's mixed-use ordinance. The suit also asks that the court direct the city to re-zone his property to restricted office use and change

At the time of the amend, the assessment status from commercial to residential use.

After his application for rezoning was denied, Woods Assessor Gerald E. McNamara informed Handlos that his property had been changed from residential to commercial status. The change brings the property's zoning status in line with other mixed-use properties along Mack Avenue, McNamara said.

But Handlos said the denial of the zoning change to restricted office use is unfair and the classification change from residential to commercial has increased his assessment by $39,000 in

In addition to the re-zoning request, Handlos is asking the court to order the city to reimburse him for the lost rents because of the restrictions placed on the ordinance a year ago.

"The city wants to tax me as a commercial property. However, they insist I am a house and have attempted to further restrict my use to owner-occupant only," Handlos said.

Several members of the Woods Planning Commission said prior to the amendment approval that Handlos overlooked the original intent of the mixed-use ordinance, which was to allow a homeowner on Mack who was a doctor or dentist to run the business from his home.

No court date has been set. Catlin said the case may go before Judge Morcom sometime in late 1992.

The purpose of his mission: to provide the military with longrange air navigational maps. Without precise information, Goodman said, the American planes could not fly into enemy territory.

After the bombing of Pearl Harbor by Japanese fighters, Goodman and his map makers worked around the clock to provide maps for invading allied forces. Soon after, Goodman joined the Army Corps of Engineers and was inducted at Camp Grant near Rockford, Ill.

As a geographer with the Corps of Engineers, Goodman prepared invasion reports for the historic meeting between Franklin Delano Roosevelt, Winston Churchill and Chinese military leader Chiang Kai-shek.

When American forces under the command of Gen. Douglas MacArthur were preparing to liberate the Philippines from the Japanese in Oct. 1944, the U.S. forces needed detailed geographic information on populated areas, air strips and vegetation. Again, Goodman was called in to study aerial photographs and provide the information.

The following year, when U.S. troops were laying the foundation for an invasion of the Japanese mainland, Goodman provided the same type of infor-

"The U.S. was gearing up to invade Japan from the north." he said. "We prepared invasion reports for the Kurit Islands, now occupied by the Soviet Union as a result of the war."

The invasion never took place because President Harry Tru-man authorized use of the atomic bomb, which led to the unconditional surrender of Japanese military forces.

He stressed that for many younger people, World War II is merely a history lesson. The harsh reality of the war has been distanced by nearly 45 years.

The war experience was very real to me, he said "I had see close friends who were place. From there, Detroit's ex-

Robert Goodman has learned a lot about the world and its history by studying and compiling killed in battle."

After the war, he returned to the Chicago area to further his education. By 1948, Goodman decided to come to Detroit to teach at Wayne University (now Wayne State University).

"I had planned to stay at Wayne only one year. I didn't plan to stay because we were taught in the Upper Peninsula not to like the Detroit area. Much to my surprise I began to enjoy the quality of the students and I ended up staying at Wayne for 36 years.

Goodman's late wife, Marjorie Smith Goodman, also a geographer, was in charge of mapping all data to locate sites for Detroit's expressway system. Goodman said teams of people were interviewing drivers all over town, seeking information on their area of residence and employment. Millions of rides to work were plotted on maps as geographers drew straight lines from comwmuteria a homes satoutheir a work-pressway system was plotted and constructed.

"This was before the widerange use of computers," Goodman said. "Everything had to be done by hand."

Expressways in the future will be geared to solve traffic problems created by rapid growth in Macomb and Oakland counties.

"Now the patterns have shifted across Macomb and Oakland counties," he said. "The I-696 corridor may help. We need more east-west four-lane highways above 8 Mile Road."

Goodman has produced two educational films. He began by designing maps that "draw and explain themselves." One effort, aided by his students, is titled, "Detroit's Pattern of Growth."

"The film starts with the landing of Cadillac and explains why Fort Pontchartrain was built at the site which is now the foot of Woodward Avenue.'

Goodman explained that Woodward was built on top of an old Indian trail that led from areas north to fur trading markets on the banks of the Detroit River.

"It tells about the Detroit fire of 1805 and the new plan for the city, much of which was devised by Judge Augustus B. Woodward, who named the main street after himself," he said.

"The film also describes the layout of the French ribbon farms.'

Many of today's roads were once paths between farms. These boundary paths were later named after the property owners of farms accessed by the pathways. Detroit streets, like Brush and Beaubien serve as examples.

In the Grosse Pointe area the same principle holds true, Goodman said. The border paths of the ribbon farms were later changed into streets named for French families such as Cadieux, Moross and Vernier. Today the names of these pioneer farming families are household words to Pointe residents.

Originally a sandy path (now known as Mack Avenue) was the only north-south cross street for

Get the

French farmers. The path was laid out on a sandy beach ridge created by the glacial predecessor to Lake St. Clair.

When the glacial lake receded about 15,000 years ago, dirt and sand deposits were left behind, creating a ridge later used as an Indian trail. In more recent times, the path was paved and became the western border of the Pointes.

By the time the French settlers arrived, Goodman said, much of the area now known as Grosse Pointe was swampland. Many of the farmers brought their goods to Fort Pontchartrain markets by way of Lake St.

Goodman said an example of the original French ribbon farms can still be seen in the area of Canada between Windsor and Amherstburg. "There the area looks like Grosse Pointe did 100 years ago."

Goodman shows films, gives lectures and presents slides as part of an educational program which he has delivered around the metropolitan Detroit area and beyond.

He recently showed his film, "Detroit's Pattern of Growth" at the War Memorial as part of a geographical history lecture. Goodman welcomes opportunities to speak before civic and social

North grad prepares for deaf-blindness

Debbie Wright is 20 years old spunky, animated, a natural leader. She is profoundly deaf and is losing her vision due to a hereditary condition known as Usher's syndrome.

"I don't think of deaf-blindness as a handicap," she said. All people have handicaps . . . mine are just more noticeable than others and it makes living life a little harder."

Her parents encouraged her to learn speech and lipreading, rather than American Sign Language. Teachers, specialists and audiologists at the Detroit School for the Deaf and Wayne State University supported their decision and worked with Wright from the age of 11 months to 5 years. She attended regular classes (called mainstreaming) throughout grade school, junior and senior high school.

During her years at Grosse Pointe North High, Wright often contributed to the school newspaper. She described her disability, then admitted that making friends in school was hard and explained that deafness cuts off total communication.

When she was about 8 years old, she first noticed some vision problems, especially at night. Then she started bumping into things. "I thought everyone did that a nighttime. I thought I was just a world-class 'klutz', Wright said.

It wasn't until she was about 14 or 15 that she learned that she had retinitis pigmentosa or RP (a retinal degenerative disease). After spending two years at Madonna College in Livonia, Wright enrolled at the Helen Keller National Center. Headquartered in Sands Point, N.Y., it is the only national facility which provides diagnostic evaluation, comprehensive rehabilitation training and job preparation and placement for all Americans who are deaf-blind.

"I wanted to acquire confidence and the skills I needed to function in the world as a person who is deaf-blind," she said.

In addition to learning braille, home management skills, tactual sign language, and safe traveling skills during her five months at the center, Wright has participated in several on-campus work experiences.

She has taught beginning sign language to staff who are hearing/sighted; worked with clients in the residence to develop their social skills; and produced several materials for the printshop while working with other clients on an IBM computer with a large print display.

Every Friday, Wright serves as a teacher's aide with children in a nearby school for the deaf assisting them with school work, storytelling and games. She represents her fellow clients on a steering committee to organize and plan monthly town hall meetings.

Recently she was chosen as spokesperson for her peers and addressed more than 200 women at a community fundraising luncheon.

"I'm applying to a local university and if I'm accepted I may consider staying in New York, working at the center and completing my BS degree in psychol-Wright said. "Otherwise. I'll return to Madonna to finish my education. I'm interested in advocating for other persons who are deaf. For example, to enlist note-takers and interpreters so that deaf students can be mainstreamed through school. I know I'd like to work with people who are deaf or deaf-blind.

Wright stands as a role model for other young adults with Usher's syndrome, which accounts for 1 to 3 percent of all cases of profound deafness and is a major cause of deaf-blindness.

"Don't grieve for what you have lost or may lose," she said. Appreciate what you have." Keep on learning and meeting people. The more you do that, the more things you will have to appreciate."

Certificates to be issued

The secretary of state has begun issuing newly designed certificates of title for all motor vehicles, titled watercraft and mobile homes.

The changes were initiated to comply with odometer disclosure requirements established by consumer protection legislation, including the federal Truth in Mileage Act of 1986 and Michigan Public Acts 254 and 255 of 1988 affecting salvage titles.

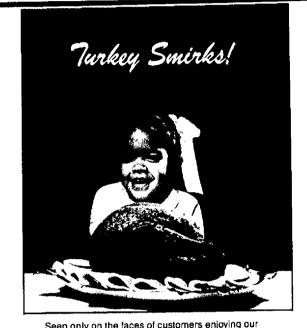

The Truth in Mileage Act requires vehicle owners to declare odometer mileage at the time ownership of the vehicle is transferred. That mileage now becomes part of the document and will be printed on the front of the title when it is issued.

The law also requires owners to declare whether the mileage is actual, not actual, or if it exceeds the mechanical limits of the odometer. That information will be also be printed on the front of the title.

Public Acts 254 and 255 require titles to list major component non salvageable parts and the color of the vehicle. Non salvageable parts would be those major components that have been badly damaged and cannot be used. Among those parts or components that must be listed on the title are engines, transmissions, front fenders, frames, passenger doors, rear bumpers and truck cabs.

Questions concerning the new certificates of title should be directed to the Bureau of Driver and Vehicle Records at 517/322-1166 or by writing to the bureau at 7064 Crowner Drive, Lansing, Mich. 48918.

News Schoolchildren learn dangers of drugs from puppets

By Ronald J. Bernas Staff Writer

Nugget the Turkey is always afraid he's going to be somebody's Thanksgiving dinner. To calm those fears, sometimes he smokes eigarettes.

He feels more grown up when he lights up.

Sometimes he drinks beer, saying it's a "happy drink." And sometimes he takes pills he gets from his friends.

But the children at Poupard Elementary School told him how wrong he is for doing that.

They told him that taking drugs, smoking and drinking alcohol is dangerous and that it doesn't solve problems - it only causes them.

Nugget, along with his friends Tyler, a young boy who thinks drugs are gross; and Tugger the Cool Cat who knows that drugs don't make you cool, but being yourself makes you hip, daddy-o; and Amy, a little girl from a dysfunctional home, talked about drugs with the students at Poupard and at all elementary schools in the Grosse Pointe school district.

Nugget, Tyler, Tugger and Amy are all puppets brought to life by Todd Gale of Jackson, who created Double Talk, a substance abuse prevention program sponsored by Jacobson Stores

The program was written and developed by Gale with script approval by the South Central Michigan Substance Abuse Commission, to assure the materials are age-appropriate and actively involve the children.

The program uses humor to discuss the serious topics of substance abuse, self esteem, peer pressure and ways to cope. The children can't get enough.

"What do you say when someone wants to give you drugs?" Gale asks.

Rex, a big blue dinosaur, shakes his head no. The students watching all yell "No!" One student could be heard above the others yelling "No way, Jose."

Gale, who at 22 is still young enough to relate to the children, does two different shows. The younger kids are told of the dangers of smoking and drinking and drugs in general.

The older ones, fourth through sixth grades, discuss marijuana, cocaine and alcohol. The older ones also discuss ways of coping in a dysfunctional family where both parents drink to excess.

"I get into a little more detail with the older kids," Gale said. 'The younger ones can't relate to cocaine. They don't know what dysfunctional means.'

With the older students he uses a drawing to show how drugs affect the brain.

Tugger tells the students that the best thing about them is that they are unique, and that being an individual - even if it thing from self-esteem, health means admitting they don't take drugs - is important.

It is also necessary for people to like themselves and to know that even though they are kids, they're important. Drugs, he says, undermine self-respect.

"Drug abuse is a very important topic, which includes everyeducation and they all must be touched on when discussing drug abuse," Gale said. "I've never been involved with drugs in any way. I want to make sure kids know the dangers of drugs. And I really enjoy performing for the

Counterfeit scam scuttled in Woods

An scam by two women perpetrated on a 73-year-old woman visiting her son in Grosse Pointe Woods was prevented by the older woman's suspicions.

The woman had just returned to her son's home on Hawthorne after shopping at the Great Scott store at 13 Mile and Harper Dec. 1 when two women came to the door at the home and presented themselves as law enforcement officers.

The two women produced a $10 bill and said it was counterfeit and that it had been used by the older woman to make a purchase at the store. The woman did use a $10 bill.

The woman was then asked if she had any more money, and she took out $28, which included two $10s. She was told those were also counterfeit. She was then asked if she had any money in the bank. The older woman produced a National Bank of Detroit passbook that reflected a little less than $3,000 in the account.

The two women made a call to their "supervisor," who then requested to speak to the older woman. He told her that she could be arrested for passing counterfeit money. She was then asked to assist in the investigation by withdrawing $2,000 from her account to see if the bank tellers were passing the bogus bills. When she asked what denominations she should get, the man told her it didn't matter.

According to Woods police reports, the older woman was suspicious and said she would not go anywhere until she talked to her son. The two women said there wasn't time to make any calls, but the older woman succeeded in calling her son. He questioned the women and he demanded the telephone number of their supervisor.

The women provided a telephone number for their "sergeant," and the son hung up. The two women then had the older woman drive to the bank while they followed in another

The woman said she picked the longest line in the bank hoping that the two women would get tired of waiting and leave. Shortly afterward the bank manager began passing the word among the tellers to expect the woman to come in. The older woman said she heard the manager saying her name.

When police arrived, the two female suspects had apparently already left.

The investigation is continuing. The two women were described as black and in their 30s. One is said to be very attractive. - John Minnis

He praised the staff at all levdents and its ability to accept the changes instituted.

He also thanked the community for its support: "The latest

Gandelot praised Whritner for his work in Grosse Pointe, and said that under Whritner the system has made great strides toward improvement.

He said the board will move

tion of the Mathematical Association of America and is designed to promote wide interest in math, to focus attention on the necessity for math training in the professions and trades, and to identify and provide scholarships for capable math students.

The 100 students with the highest combined scores will be invited to a banquet in their honor at Eastern Michigan University on Feb. 24. The top 50 will receive scholarships ranging from $250 to $2,000.

Paula Sinkel, chairman of the math department, organized the competition at ULS.

This year, as they have for several years, University Liggett School Middle School students participated in a food and friendship outreach with Detroit's Guyton School. Throughout November, students collected enough foodstuffs to fill 16 baskets with complete Thanksgiving dinners. Members of the Student Senate bought turkeys and milk to add to the baskets, which were delivered two days before Thanksgiving. Members of the School Senate are shown here loading vans with the Thanksgiving baskets. They are eighth-graders, from left, in front, Omar Sawaf of Grosse Pointe and Pat Moltane of Detroit; and, back, Peter Mertz and Peter Anthony Brown, both of Grosse Pointe. Jeff Bond, assistant head of the middle school, helped coordinate the project.

Reading is fun

State Superintendent Donald Bemis, at Trombly Elementary School recently, read H.R.H. the Duchess of York's (better known as Fergie) book "Budgie At Bendick's Point" to Lillian Kachadourian's second-graders. Each of the students prepared a statement on the importance of reading. "Books are special to me because you can learn a lot from them and I like to learn." one student wrote. Wilomena Witch is the weirdest person in Blueberry Town. She puts the wrong ingredients in her brewing pot. She tries to eat it, but she spits it out.

News A personal view from the pilot house

U.S. Coast Guard

From my first exposure to Grosse Pointe, while house hunting last spring, I found many Grosse Pointers and visitors alike have a tremendous fascination with the "great ships" that regularly ply the waters of Lake

St. Clair and the Detroit River. As the Coast Guard captain of the port, I was afforded the opportunity to make a trip on one of these ships with the pilots. The trip was everything I had often imagined it would be as I watched the ships passing from my vantage point at Windmill Pointe Park

The call came during the last two weeks of October while we were experiencing a delightfully prolonged Indian Summer.

The dispatcher at the Port Huron pilot office told me that my request for a familiarization trip with the pilots was about to materialize. I was to meet the pilot at J.W. Wescott Co. at 11 a.m. Together we would drive to Port Huron and board the M/V (motor vessel) Federal Agno, a Philippines registered ship, for the transit from Port Huron to Detroit. I was ready, and the weather was perfect.

All ships transiting the lakes are required to have an officer on board who has been highly trained and is thoroughly familiar with the local area, in addition to the regular complement of mates. These officers are examined and licensed by the U.S. Coast Guard and are called pilots. Many of the ships we see passing the Pointes are specifically operated within the Great Lakes and the master and mates have the required pilotage endorsements. Foreign flag vessels, "salties," however do not have that expertise on board and are required to "take a pilot" for the transit.

I met the pilot at Wescott's as instructed. During the drive to Port Huron, we discussed many of the aspects of his profession.

The pilot station in Port Huron is a small log cabin structure below the Blue Water Bridge.

time to board the pilot boat and make our way out into Lake Huron and transfer to the Federal Agno.

After a twenty-minute boat trip, the Federal Agno mystically appeared in the haze and the captain of the pilot boat skillfully placed his small boat under a Jacob's ladder dangling down the side of the ship. Both vessels were moving at about 10 knots. I had forgotten about this aspect of riding large ships, but the 30-foot climb was easily made, the other pilot departed, and we were under way.

The captain and crew were most hospitable. The pilot's first order was "engines ahead full, steer course one eight zero."

Shortly, we altered our course, lining up on the range for the Bluewater bridge. The pilot religiously reported our positions to the Vessel Traffic Center (VTC) in Sarnia, Ontario. The VTC traces all large vessels and provides vessel traffic information to any ship requesting it.

As we approached the bridge, our discussion centered on the current and the natural bottleneck at the bridge. "Many ships," the pilot said, "will naturally tend to follow the current around the turn."

Ours was no exception, the strong current pulled our almost 700-foot-long ship to the left with a little assistance from the rudder. I very quickly came to realize that our pilot was highly skilled, not only in the waterways, but in determining the handling characteristics of diverse ships.

We passed myriad chemical and petroleum plants in Canada, and other industrial facilities in the United States, our pilot making necessary course changes, some minute, to steer us through the maze. A blast from our ship's whistle and a similar blast from an oncoming ship signaled that each pilot understood the other's intentions, and the two steel islands smoothly slid by each other, close enough to shout friendly "hellos" from bridge to

During the summer, we had spent a weekend at the St. Clair Inn and had seen the ships passing close aboard. I wondered what it looked like to those piloting the ship. Our ship seemed larger than the inn itself. There were only a few people outside watching and waving as we passed, continuing our journey down river.

The next couple of hours were uneventful as we passed beautiful homes and exploding fall foliage. Our pilot guided the ship down the narrow waterway toward the environmentally sensitive areas near the entrance of Lake St. Clair.

It was getting late in the afternoon, and the combination of haze and stillness of the water made the horizon difficult to see. I feared that I would be prevented from seeing the Pointes. Only time would tell. My worries were quickly put on hold by the steward serving dinner to us on the bridge. Since the pilot has no relief, he must remain on the bridge for the entire transit.

The channel cut through Lake St. Clair is narrow and relatively shallow. In some places on both the river and the lake, vibrations, called ground effect, were felt. Ground effect is caused by a deeply laden ship transiting relatively shallow waters. While there is plenty of water beneath the keel for the ship to safely transit, ground effect vibrations serve as a constant reminder of how precarious the ship's position would be without the pilot.

As we continued across Lake St. Clair, we encountered a Coast Guard helicopter and 41foot motorboat practicing hoisting from the boat with the rescue basket. In that one brief minute, I realized that many of the major programs of the bicentennial Coast Guard converged on a single point in Lake St.

Even with the daylight on the wane, I soon saw Grosse Pointe Yacht Club, a most imposing structure when viewed from the middle of the lake. Much of the detail of the shore was difficult to ascertain, but the War Memorial soon came into view. The steeple of Christ Church reached above the tallest elms and oaks silhouetted by the orange and purple sky.

Soon we were passing Windmill Pointe with its distinctive

I had often reflected on what these mariners saw and thought while passing the Pointes, and almost as quickly I had the thought we had left the Pointes in our wake.

My thoughts were quickly snatched from the tranquility of the Pointes as we approached Belle Isle. Our pilot was soon to be relieved, but not without a final test of his shiphandling

Shortly after dark, we sighted the lights of Scott Fountain against a backdrop of lights from downtown Detroit. And then, just as if a choreographer were controlling it all, a multitude of navigational situations arose that was spectacular to say the least, and we were part of it.

Ships passed upbound on both sides, railroad ferries crossed ahead, ships were at anchor, and ships were following. There was an array of red, green and white lights all moving in different directions in testimony of a world dramatically alive between two countries. Up ahead lay the Ambassador Bridge, and beneath it, the J.W. Wescott, our ride back to Detroit.

We bid the ship's master farewell, our pilot passed necessary information to his relief, and we clambered down the Jacob's ladder to the waiting boat below. As we sped toward shore leaving the M/V Federal Agno in our wake, I could imagine the new pilot saying, "Engine ahead one half, port 10 degrees rudder, steer two zero one.

It's 50 years and out at Chrysler for Chris Templeton of Grosse Pointe

Staff Writer

Chris Templeton will have a lot more time now to play golf. She'll also be able to to swing her clubs in a sunnier climate now that she is officially retired from Chrysler after 50 years.

Templeton joined the company at the beginning of World War II as a temporary clerk in the insurance department at Dodge Main in Hamtramck.

More recently, she worked at Chrysler headquarters in Highland Park as a staff specialist in benefit services and was responsible for administrating and monitoring all life insurance benefit plans.

"When I first went to work, I knew absolutely nothing about insurance," she said.

Her boss, John Wilson, manager of benefit services at Chrysler, said she caught on quickly.

"She's absolutely marvelous," he said. "She's very bright, very accurate and conscientious. Chris is very employee-oriented and likes providing good service to retirees and employees."

In her 50 years at Chrysler, Templeton has seen many changes, including an evolution of very complex benefit plans and provisions.

As for the relationship between the corporation and the unions, she said, "Over the years there has been increased cooperation and better understanding between Chrysler and the unions. Also there has been increased efforts to build quality cars at competitive prices.

Templeton feels that even in some of the company's darkest years, the good times have outweighed the bad. During World War II she remembers the factories churning out war machinery since her office was located in the center of a factory. Even during the auto company recession of the 1970s, Templeton kept a positive attitude, which has paid

The Templetons have lived in Grosse Pointe for 14 years and have resided in the immediate area for about 30 years.

Her boss said her secret of success is her ability to get along with people and to understand complicated procedures.

Hill parking validation working, merchants say

The recent renovation of the municipally owned parking lot behind shops on the Hill has apparently solved parking prob-

And while employees, customers and business owners have complained that the recent parking rate hike on the Hill has chased customers away, others who offer parking validation say now that more parking is available and customers are coming back to the Hill.

Local merchants and shoppers point to one aspect of the parking plan — validation of parking stubs - as bringing back customers who temporarily sought easier parking in other areas during renovation of the parking

According to Keith Mangus, manager of Perry Drug Store and vice president of the Hill Association, the validations have worked in bringing customers back. "We have about 300 to 400 validations per day," he said.

"We validate for purchases over $5 and our sales staff will ask if customers have a parking stub so we can validate.'

Sandy Gillespie, owner of Something Special, a Country Store, agreed that validation of parking stubs has worked in attracting customers back.

"It's been working out wonderfully." she said. "We make a point to ask if the customers are parked in the lot and we validate even if they don't buy anything. "If customers leave their stubs in the car, we can validate a piece of paper which can be presented when the customer leaves the lot."

But Richard Solak, Grosse Pointe Farms city clerk, said the renovation project has not always been smooth.

At the Nov. 27 meeting of the Farms City Council, members

Recycling directory available

Knowing where to go with household recyclables has been made one step easier for Michigan residents, according to the Department of Natural Resources.

In response to a growing number of requests about the location of various residential recycling centers in the state, the "Michigan Recycling Directory" has been developed by the DNR.

The directory contains information on more than 200 dropoff sites for recyclable materials. as well as a listing of the 25-plus communities currently participating in curbside recycling programs. The directory includes the county location of the center or program, the operator's name, telephone number and drop-off site address, days and hours of drop-off collection, and what materials are accepted.

costs from $200,000 to $260,000.

"The price hike was mainly because of running the utility lines underground," Solak said. "There were changes required by Edison that led to additional work before the system can be operational." The architect omitted items relating to the placement of the utility lines that should have been included, Solak

The municipal lot before the renovation contained about 175 spaces. The lot now contains about 200 spaces.

Since Nov. 1, the lot has been used at about 60 percent capacity, according to Keith Huntley, a manager for National Garages, the company that designs and staffs attended parking lots and structures all over the United

"During the month of November the municipal lot has had 12,528 cars parked," Huntley said. "The revenue for parking during that period is $6,494.30."

Solak said so far the system has worked, but in order to attract more shoppers and service customers to the Hill, customers have to be made aware that validations are available.

Solak stressed that no facet of the Hill's overall parking plan has been cast in stone.

"When the parking committee devised the parking plan, we wanted a six month trial period because the parking habits of employees and customers have to be redefined before any adjustments can be made," he said.

The participants weren't actually volunteers, they were ordered to attend by the judges from various courts. The weekend program is recommended by the Grosse Pointes probation department as part of drunk driving sentences.

Susan O'Shea, chief probation officer of the Grosse Pointes Voluntary Probation Program, said the Maplegrove Alternatives Program is recommended for those convicted of drunk driving and who are suspected of misusing or abusing alcohol and other drugs.

She said that while many of those in the weekend program are second offenders, some firsttime drunk drivers are put in the program if they had an unusually high blood alcohol level at the time of their arrest or if they give other indications of having a substance abuse problem. All drunk drivers in the Pointes are evaluated by probation officers after conviction but before sentencing.

Depending on the individual circumstances, some drunk drivers are sent to educational programs, some are sent for out-patient treatment and others are put in month-long in-patient programs.

The Maplegrove Alternatives Program is relatively new and is designed to intercept those who are approaching compulsive substance abuse. O'Shea said the weekend program is for frequent substance abusers who need more than an educational series but not an in-patient hospital

"We've been really pleased with the program," she said of the Maplegrove Alternatives Program, which is known locally as the Cottage weekend pro-

Labor first

The first state law authorizing the 10-hour day for all workers was passed in 1847 in New Hampshire, according to the U.S. Labor Department. The committee that studied the issue concluded that with a shorter work day, "employers would realize a greater profit, even in less time, from labours more vigorous and able to work, from having had suitable time to rest; while operatives would be allowed that time for intellectual and moral culture, which daty to themselves and others most imperatively demand."

Larry Campbell, who is a recovering substance abuser and a trained substance abuse therapist with Henry Ford, is director of the program. He said the Cottage weekend sessions have been going on for about a year. While the Grosse Pointe courts were among the first to adopt the program, many district courts throughout the metro Detroit area now make use of it.

Not only do drug abusers have to look critically at their actions, but also family members and friends have to look at their response to the substance abuser.

Drugstore Cowboy' exposes seedy side of drug culture Clyde gang, only their targets because of a masterful execution as a Thelonius Monk saxophone Lunch" and "Junky," Burroughs comes to visit him bearing a bag

By Chris Dellas

Special Writer "I have learned the junk equation Junk is not, like alcohol or reced, a means to increase enjoyment of life. Junk is not a kick. Junk is a way of life.

- William S. Burroughs Far from the hysterics of the anti drug films of yesteryear like "Reefer Madness," yet certainly not in any way a glorification of the drug subculture, "Drugstore Cowboy" is a film that exposes to us the naked underbelly of drug addiction for all it's worth.

Starring Matt Dillon, who has finally graduated from the School of James Dean Wannabees, it is a riveting story of a "drug crew" in the Pacific Northwest in the early '70s.

Far from hippies, Bohemian only in appearance, Dillon's character Bob Hughes, his wife Diane (Kelly Lynch) and another couple live a twisted fantasy not unlike a modern-day Bonnie and and hospitals. Their loot is not the camera. money, but hard drugs.

Directed with a wonderfully Sant Jr., the film approaches the controversial topic of drug addiction from the perspective of Hughes, a clever and ambitious dope fiend who measures his success with a different barometer than the rest of society.

He is rich when he makes a big score of drugs like morphine and dilaudid. He and his crew are successful not when the stock market's up, but when they steal enough dope to keep them high for a whole week.

It is accurate to say "Drugstore Cowboy" is not light entertainment. This ain't no Disney flick. When drug addiction is dissected on the big screen, it is not always a pretty sight, but the audience is compelled to peer into the microscope nevertheless aren't banks, but pharmacies of the film, from both sides of

Van Sant utilizes Felliniesque surreal sequences of floating passurrealistic touch by Gus Van toral images of cows and trees when Hughes is on a drug trip. He then juxtaposes those fantasies with the painful realities of Hughes' real-life problems, such as constant hassling and abuse by the police, the incapability to express love to his wife in a sensual way as well as the countless dangers and risks facing the fulltime criminal.

> Bob is driven only by the ambition to score, while external forces like superstition (he believes a hat on a bed is the ultimate bad omen and jinx), fear and the constant threat of death or prison overpower him and render him impotent to really be the master of his own fate.

The tone of the movie has an almost beatnik sensibility. Editing is often as quick and sharp solo indeed raw jazz is an integral part of the soundtrack and underscores the manic scenes of drug heists.

In an early robbery, Bob and Diane and their accomplices, Rick (James Le Gros) and his naive girlfriend Nadine (Heather Graham), enter a pharmacy, looking ridiculously conspicuous in their black leathers and dark sunglasses. Nadine fakes a seizure while Bob hops over the counter to ravage through the drawers of assorted pills.

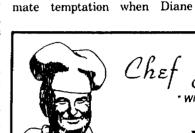

When Bob finishes pilfering the desirable narcotics and Diane steals a copy of "Love Story," Nadine simply stops her convulsions, gets up and walks quietly out of the store while onlookers stand dumbfounded and incredulous.

This dark comic touch is returned to often, suggesting a bizzare lightness to their situation until tragedy hits the crew. It is then that only Bob has the forsight to realize he must change or face his worst fears head-on.

When Bob makes the decision to enter a drug rehab program, he knows it will separate him from Diane, whom he truly loves. She loves him back, but admits that she is too weak to suffer through the hardship of the withdrawals.

Bob enters the straight life and trades his drug paraphernalia for the drills and hammers of a blue collar job. In the drug clinic, he runs into an ex-ally, an old priest and addict named Father Tom, played by novelist William Burroughs. Burroughs adds credibility to the cast of ad-

As the noted author of "Naked has documented his own real-life battles with the demons of heroin addiction. Father Tom symbolizes to Bob the gentleman addict of the past. He seems to rationalize, even romanticize the myth of the addict. At one point he laments authority's intolerance of his lifestyle. "The idea that anyone can use drugs to escape a horribe fate is an anathema to (them). I predict one day right-wing fanatics will use drug hysteria to institute a world-wide police state."

As profound as Father Tom's sobriety. He even rejects the ultiof "gifts."

Although the narrative takes place in 1971, Van Sant foreshadows the violence and horror of today's drug crews, who are much more vehement and callous than Bob's crew. A young user named David (whom Bob refers to as a "TV baby" meaning a child who grows desensitized to extreme violence) serves as a fatal warning of the shape of things to come in the drug underworld of the present.

Bob Hughes triumphs against a hopeless situation and "Drugstore Cowboy" triumphs as an paranoia seems, Bob sticks to his extremely well-crafted film of one of the most pressing and controversial issues of our time.

Chevy Chase is all there is in 'Nat'l Lampoon's Christmas Vacation'

National Lampoon's "Christmas Vacation" is not exactly "A Christmas Carol" or "It's a Wonderful Life." It's not destined to be a holiday classic like "Miracle on 34th Street." And it won't end up on most people's list of "must-see" pictures during the Christmas season.

But it is a rip-roaring slapstick fest. It's Chevy Chase at his clumsy, fall-down best.

But alas, that's all the picture has to offer. And it's a routine we've seen twice before, in "Vacation" and "European Vacation," plus many times in his other pictures, and on television on "Saturday Night Live."

This is a man who gets hit in the face, falls down, stumbles and bumbles better than almost anybody in the business.

In the "Vacation" pictures, Chase plays the inept Clark Griswold, a family-man with a heart of gold who wants nothing more than to give his loved ones a memorable experience. In the previous films, that meant taking them on the road. This time, it means keeping them home for the holidays.

Most of the humor in the picture is based on Chase's inability to do even the most simple tasks without messing things up. He tries to put a tree up in the living room but breaks the window. He tries to put lights on

Some of the humor is merely good for a slight chuckle or smile. But almost all of it works in spite of itself simply because of Chase's ability.

The picture does itself a favor by keeping the family at home, and by basing a good dose of its humor on things that most people can understand from firsthand experience.

Not everybody is as clumsy as Chase. But everybody has been remembered.

There is little storyline to speak of, beyond Chase's quest for the perfect home-style Christmas. He may be worried that he won't get an expected Christmas bonus from the boss, but he'll still keep trying to entertain his family and make memories for Objectively speaking, this picture is probably much worse than you think it is when you're sitting in the theater watching it. Still, it's hard not to speak well about it.

Business Business Scrosse Pointe New Christmas is celebrated all year long at A Dickens of a Place

Don Josef loves Christmas. All year long, he thinks it, plans for it and works toward it - it's his business.

Owner of A Dickens of a Place in St. Clair Shores, Josef is in his 13th year of operating a year-round Christmas store. Lo-Eight and Nine Mile, A Dickens of a Place is just that — a tiny two-floor shop that is cramped, cluttered and crammed with Christmas goodies, from the commercial to the exclusive.

There are men's (or women's) cated at 22210 Harper between ties covered with red sequins and a goose feather tree from Germany sitting atop an antique tree stand. The stand, dated about 1890, is a revolving music box with richly mellow tones. It's $975.

black one, titled City Lights, City Nights, decorated with mauve silk flowers. Another pair of trees, white, revolve slowly along with a pair of carousel

Then there are the lighted glass dome creches, created by Josef in different sizes. In the center of the dome is cork bark on which Josef positions the various figures of the nativity. He wires the dome with lights and the result is a creche unlike any other. One that is 18 by 10 costs $395.

And of course there are lights and bulbs of all sizes and types, Dickens shops and houses that make up a village, and snow real plastic - in bags. There are wreaths, including one covered with white and irridescent sea shells.

A Dickens of a Place is a sponsor store for the Anna Lee collection, dolls with uniquely expressive faces, that have become collector's items. The store carries the entire line of Anna Lee dolls, which are made in New Hampshire and can be bent into any position.

Some of the older pieces are worth up to $1,000, Josef said. An Anna Lee angel that can be used to decorate a tree or wrapped around a light fixture costs $17.50.

Josef got into the business via circuitous route. He operated Don Josef's Salon on Morang in Detroit. All year long, in his spare time, in his basement, he designed and created Christmas trees and wreaths and centerpieces

One day a year, he would set up everything in his shop and open it to his customers. It was so successful that he decided to shut the doors of his beauty salon and turn his avocation into a business

His love for Christmas began early, Josef said. His father was to different states as he looked for work, and with eight people in the family, there was never enough money for a Christmas

The first tree the family had was when Josef was 10 years old

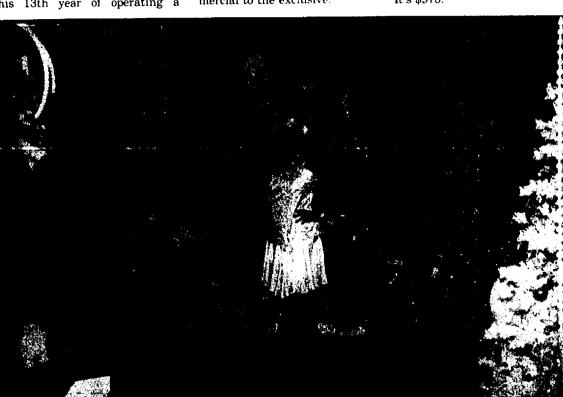

Among the designer trees is a a coal miner who took his family school. After the play, the teacher had the tree on stage delivered to Josef's house.

Besides running a business, Josef also decorates homes for Christmas. And he has had a tree, for the past five years, in

Grosse Pointe News Business Eastern Bloc cars have as interesting histories as any of the dramatic events in Eastern Europe, most particularly, the crumbling of the Berlin wall, were the protests of West Germans against the cars many East Germans came visiting in, a much-maligned machine called the Trabant.

The Trabant looks like a '50'svintage cross between a Morris Minor and the cheapest Fiat, as opposed to the more upscale East German car, the Wartburg, which looks more like a '60's-era Fiat. It has quite a way to go to catch up to the Yugo, which looks like a Fiat of the '70's.

It is no accident that many Eastern European cars look like Fiats - so do many Polish, Rumanian and Soviet cars - because Fiat sold tools, dies and technology to many East Bloc nations over the years.

In fact, it helped the Soviet Union build a plant on the Volga River which can build 750.000 cars a year (the Lada, which has been imported into Canada for over a decade; in the Soviet Union, it is called the Zhiguli, for a nearby mountain range) and can undercut Fiat in pricing on the international market. A grateful Soviet Union renamed the little town on the Volga where the plant was built Togliatti after the Italian Communist leader. It is now a city of a half-million.

The Trabant is a descendent of more highly regarded automotive ancestors, mainly Auto Union's once-ubiquitous DKW. It still has basically the engine which powered the DKW, a twostroke three-cylinder unit. A similar engine also powered the first Saabs which came into this country in the early '60's.

Most of Auto Union, which had been based in Zwickau and Eisenach in what is now East Germany, migrated west after the end of World War II. The DKW was built in Dusseldorf and later the Audi nameplate was revived. It is now a part of Volkswagen.

The four-circle emblem on the Audi is the old Auto Union emblem and signified the four car brands which team to form Auto Union - Audi, DKW, Horch and Wanderer. These were all impor-

the Festival of Trees fundraiser at Cobo Hall. This year's tree was called Gifts of the Magi.

Josef gets into the spirit of season with his Dickens outfit complete with top hat. He's now looking for a top coat to finish the ensemble.

He came up with the name for his store, he said, while he was riding in a cab in New York

City. "I was pondering over a name and it just hit me out of the blue," he said. "I love everything Victorian — I must have lived in Victorian England."

Every year on a Sunday in October, Josef opens the season with a premiere of his designer trees. He offers entertainment and refreshments and the shop is packed, he says.

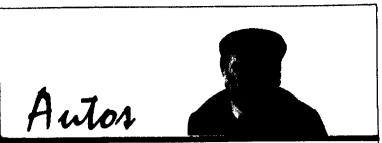

Josef travels to New York, Chicago and California for merchandise. "I try to get something unusual, not run-of-the-mill."

More people are going into designer trees, he said. The hottest colors last year were peach and mauve. This year it's mauve. People are decorating trees to complement their living space, he added

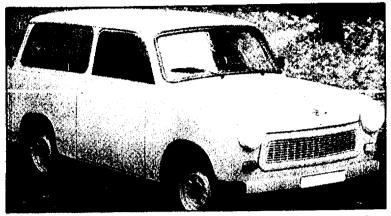

Josef also makes one-of-a-kind nativity figures by dressing 12inch Italian figurines with authentic jewels and fur, among other materials. He also puts hair and beards on the figures. They are signed and dated and run from $250 for a shepherd or king to $500 for the three figures of Jesus, Mary and Joseph.

In order to keep his business viable all year, Josef stocks the first floor with greeting cards, wrapping paper, music boxes, music tapes and a variety of paper goods. He also stocks seasonal items for Easter, Halloween and Valentine's Day. The second floor, however, is all Christmas.

During the Christmas season, the store is open from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday through Saturday and from noon to 5 p.m. on Sunday. The phone number is 772-3620. Visa and MasterCard are accepted.

tant and respected nameplates in that peculiar item, a "concept pre-war Europe. Now the Tra- car." Called the Kompact, the bant and Wartburg are built in prototype is a five-door, five-seat former Auto Union facilities in Eisenach.

Assuming that the opening of Eastern Europe continues, the auto makers of the socialist states will have to shape up to survive. And there are indications that the Soviet industry is doing just that. Plans to increase production of about 1.3 million cars a year to 2.3 million by 1995 have been announced. Those figures don't look so formidable by Western standards, but while car ownership is expected to increase in North America by 8 to 10 percent by the year 2000, close to a 100 percent increase is predicted for the Eastern Bloc.

The best-known Soviet car in the West is the Lada, based on the old Fiat 124. But its maker, VAZ (Volga Automobile Works), recently introduced the Lada Samara, a modern 1.5-liter car developed by the Soviets in cooperation with Porsche.

car with modern aero-styling, a body of plastic panels, a pneumatic suspension system and air

Since the Western industry does not seem to be afraid of Fiat, it is probably not too worried about competition from the Eastern Bloc, but there are some fine old nameplates in addition to Trabant's East German forebears - the Czech Tatra, for example.

The Nesselsdorf Motor Works began building cars in 1897 in Nesselsdorf in the Austro-Hungarian Empire. After World War I, Nesseldorf became Koprivnice in the newly created country of Czechoslovakia and began building the Tatra (named after a mountain range on the Czech-Polish border).

Nesseldorf's guiding genius, Hans Ledwinka, had joined Steyr in Vienna during World War I, but returned to design The Russians also showed up the first Tatra, introduced in at the Tokyo Auto Show with 1923. It became a classic with its blazed new ground in 1934 with the aerodynamic Type 77, powered by an air-cooled 3.4-liter V-8 placed in the rear. An even sleeker Type 87, resembling the Chrysler Airflow but not an imitation of it, was introduced in Production of the Tatra ceased in 1941 during the Nazi occupation. After the war, the Tatra plant was nationalized and the rear-engined Tatraplan was introduced. A few of these earlyday Batmobiles were brought into the United States. Another Czech car that was imported into the United States in the '50s was the Skoda, an odd-looking but snappy little car. Both nameplates are still produced, but are no longer innovative.

The Lada (or Zhiguli) is the Soviet "people's car," but there are upscale automobiles for higher-ranking officials. A General Motors-like big car called the ZIL is made for top party officials. Back in the '40's and '50's, that factory made a car that looked just like a Packard (it was made with tooling bought from Packard) called the ZIS, which were the initials for the Russian words "Factory in the Name of Stalin.

After Stalin fell from grace, it became ZIL for "Factory in the name of Likhachev." Ivan A. Likhachev was a Russian automotive pioneer and former director of the plant. He was also not controversial.

A car called the ZIM, for "Factory in the Name of Molotov,' was made at a factory in Gorky and designated in honor of Vyacheslav Molotov, until 1957

The factory name was changed to GAZ (Gorky Auto Works) and now produces the Volga, a midrange car larger than the Lada air-cooled opposed-twin engine, a when this former hero (Molotov and popular for use as taxicabs, and the Chaika, an Americanlooking V-8 sedan favored by Kremlin big shots.

Eastern Bloc cars may trail the West in innovative design, but their histories are as interesting as any.

Social service agencies reveal 'Wish Lists' to help children enjoy holidays

Christmas is for children.

All non-profit agencies that serve children in the metropolitan Detroit area are getting ready for the holidays. Most could use some help.

All 20 agencies listed below are non-profit organizations. All could use money. But at Christmas time, many benefactors like to share the spirit of the season in a more personal way - with a gift of new or good usable items that are needed or requested by specific agencies or specific child-

Holiday show: The interior of the Detroit Artists Market was transformed Nov. 16 into a street filled with holiday giftgiving ideas by art students from Lawrence Technological University. The preview party served as a kickoff to the traditional holiday exhibition which runs through Dec. 23.

The preview party was chaired by Grosse Pointers Marianne Kassab and Hadley Mack, and it gave patrons the first chance to select unique art objects and gift items created especially for the holidays - while contributing to the Detroit Artists Market's scholarship fund for students at the Center for Creative Studies-College of Art and De-

Each year, the Detroit Artists

Market gives scholarships to promising young artists from one of three local institutions: CCS, Cranbrook Academy of Art or Wayne State University. The concept of the preview party as a separate fundraiser for these scholarships is attributed to Grosse Pointer Jim Bridenstine. All proceeds from the patron party, and a percentage of art sales during the evening, went toward scholarships.

MOT fundraiser: Dinner at the Detroit Club preceded the opening of Michigan Opera Theatre's holiday production of "Hansel and Gretel" at the Masonic Temple on Saturday, Nov. 25. Waiting for Christmas

By Joel E. Beam, M.Div. Chaplain, Bon Secours Hospital

The days before Christmas seem peculiar in a hospital. Lovely decorations, greenery, music and carols bid us be merry and remind us of both the secular and sacred messages of the season.

But among the brightly colored lights are the lights on the ambulance and the traditional decorations become unkind reminders of normality at a time when many find their lives on hold waiting for test results, waiting before and after surgery, waiting for . . .

Yet waiting and pecularity are the essence of these special days. Saint Luke tells us of the young Mary being overshadowed by the Holy Spirit. Mary's elderly kinswoman, Elizabeth, conceives long after her normal child-bearing years, even as her husband, Zechariah, is struck speechless (an event which this older father can readily imagine).

Mary's wonderful song, "The Magnificat," speaks not only of her fulfillment of ancient prophecy, the result of waiting.

Imagine yourself a shepherd filled with fear and awe at the appearance of first, an angel, and then, a multitude of the heavenly host praising God.

Imagine following the star's light across the Judean hills as you are cold, weary and full of fear. Then you see a different light - the blinking light near the emergency room at Bon Secours Hospital.

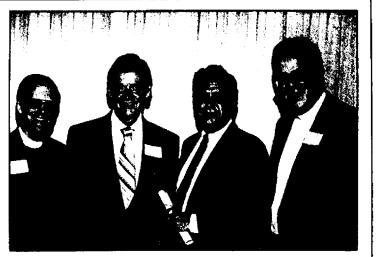

The time and scene have changed as you find yourself in any room or hall waiting expectantly with, perhaps, some of the same feelings of the ancients.

As we wait expectantly in this place of Good Help, please join us in the joy of the angels' message, "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace among humankind."

Biblical scholar visits

The Detroit branch of the English-Speaking Union featured a nationally-known biblical scholar at its dinner meeting on Tuesday, Nov. 7, at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial.

The Rev. Dr. James A. Sanders, professor and president, Ancient Biblical Manuscript Center, Claremont, Calif., spoke to 250 ESU members and guests about the Dead Sea Scrolls which were discovered between 1947 and 1961 in caves at the edge of the Dead Sea.

Sanders, the translator of Psalm 151 of the Dead Sea Psalms Scrolls, was in the Detroit area for three days of lectures and cable TV appearances in November.

HAVE A PLEASANT TRY AT PERFECTION BRIDGE BY WOODY BOYD THE PASTEBOARD PASTIME

The legendary Sidney Lenz, inspired by a squeeze play he witnessed at a baseball game in 1925 coined the term in it's application to forcing an opponent to discard a winner, potential winner or guard to a winner prematurely. Before then it was only known as a "Coup" a term used to describe many fascinating plays. In those days only a handful of whist or auction players knew how to execute such hoodoozery. Even today the average player places great mystique upon its execution. Most just refer to it as "an expert's play." Few have investigated its implementation or the card conditions applicable to its consummation.

Cylde Love has written extensively on the subject since 1951 and his latest, "Bridge Squeezes Complete" first published in 1968 is entertaining, instructive and comprehensive. I like his style as he tends to be understandable to everyone. Early on he refers to the thirteen cards you've been dealt by simply defining them as "Idle" or "Busy" and it's when "Busy" cards are put under pressure a squeeze is being perpetrated.

In the most matter of fact way he states that a squeeze is surely present whenever the following conditions are satis-

B. One Defender is "Busy" in two suits, his partner being helpless.
L. Declarer has only one "Loser" remaining.

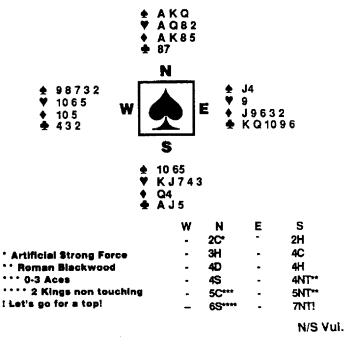

U. At least one threat card lies in the "Upper" hand. (The Upper hand lies, at the left, of the victim and the one at the right is the lower).

E. There is an "Entry" to the established threat. Memorize these conditions by remembering the color BLUE and you're ready to execute a simple squeeze.

The performance of a squeeze may start early in a hand, but it's always consummated at a three or four card end position and it's unquestionably one of the prettiest plays a declarer can make.

Before we show you a simple squeeze, just remember one more important point. Don't try and count all of the intended victims discards. It will tire you and is a waste of time. While you're running your suits just watch for no more than two or three key cards. If they don't show then you're sure the fourth suit will run or the intended victim was never busy in two suits.

After the club four lead declarer counts twelve tricks, his only chance for thirteen is if one defender has clubs and-diamonds then he's busy in two suits. The threat card becomes the club jack after east queen is captured by the ace. As the reader can see BLUE is working so south plays three spades and five hearts. If the club king never appears declarer is sure that at trick ten he can win the last four diamonds or the squeeze won't work as east isn't busy in both minors.

You say "Amazing!" No it was just a smiple squeeze that any good bridge player can perform.

You say, "How does it work?" I "like Clyde Love's answer. "When you slip a nickel in a parking meter and the needle moves you don't care what went on inside. You shouldn't try and visualize what the defenders hands will look like after nine or ten tricks. Just watch for the key cards. In this instance the club king. If it doesn't appear you have him squeezed if he's busy in two suits.'

SULLIVAN -ROLLINS THE RIGHT REASONS!

Everyone has a different reason for wearing fur. For some, it's getting back to nature with natural warmth and beauty. Others choose fur because it lasts a lifetime. Still others choose fur for the special way it makes them feel!

At Sullivan-Rollins you'll never have to feel intimidated when buying fur. It's just not our style. We're educators, furriers, and yes, family. And no, iust because we're independent furriers, it doesn't mean our prices are extraordinary. In fact, you will save.

IMPROVE OR TRADE UP?

It seems like elementary arithmetic. You ad a $10,000 bedroom to your home. Yourplace is now worth $10,000 more, right? The cold fact is that the cost of a home improvement is usually greater than the value it adds to the property. Why is the outlay seldom fully recovered? Mainly because additions and renovations almost always cost more per square foot than building complete houses.

Formany homeowners, the decision should be whether to fixup or tradeup. Selling your place and buying another that already has that modern kitchen or garage might be the better course. To decide, you must consider the amount of profit you might make on the sale, what tax breaks you'd get on the higher proportion of interest to principal on the new mortgage, property taxes on the new place compared with those on your improved home.

Remember, it costs less to buy an improved kitchen in an existing home than putting one in yourself. This is an important consideration in trading up.

Who's who in Pointe sports

When a new sports season begins, I wonder who will make the big plays, who will be the biggest impact player, and how teams will perform in times of adversity.

Success in sports is measured by wins and losses, but coaches will tell you that if the talent isn't on the floor, then the season will be longer than pre-

Grosse Pointe athletics have long survived on the consistent flow of athletes, and this year's class is no different.

Players to watch this season when watching volleyball, hockey, basketball or swimming include:

• North setter, Jane Rice. Rice comes from a sports background. Her father Jon coaches South's football team, and her brother Russell played basketball and baseball for the Norsemen.

Jane will be the key to North's volleyball success. She's one of the area's top volleyball players and is destined to play college ball. She'll have to stay healthy and consistent if North stands a chance to win the MAC White Division.

 South's entire swim team. Coach Fred Michalik believes this is the year of the Blue Devils. South has a stacked lineup and should make a run for the state championship. It'll be an exciting season in the pool for South, and if it manages to pull off the state title, Michalik may look to retire-

• Greg Behling. Behling is the workhorse of the ULS swim team. Last year he was the Most Outstanding Swimmer at the Class C-D Meet, and took two fifth places at the Class B-C-D State Championships. The best thing about freshmen is that they become sophomores. Behling is looking for a repeat performance.

 Joe Caldwell. Caldwell is the backbone of the South basketball team. Without him on the floor the team's complexion changes. When he plays, the team plays. Caldwell is the money man. He cashes in at the foul line and can bomb the 3-pointer.

 North's Charlie Stumb. As a junior a year ago, Stumb was not a take-charge player. This year he's going to have to be patient and take the open shot instead of dishing off the ball. Stumb can carry the Norsemen, but he's got to be there at crunch time.

 ULS' Mike Coello. Coello is the steadiest player for the ULS hockey team.

The Knights have their strongest defense in years, and that's because Coello returns for his senior season. His contributions won't come on offense and that's fine. He's responsible for keeping players off the puck and the goaltender from getting shelled.

• South's Katie Kolp. Kolp loves to take control and she will, as setter for the volleyball team. She's strong and makes all the right moves She's one who plays the game the way it should be.

• North's hockey team. Ten seniors anchor the team's quest to make it to the Final Four. Tim Ryan, Brad Russell, Ed Barbieri, Frank Lucido, Andy Bond and Bob Beltz, to name a few, need banner seasons for North to upset Trenton and Southgate Ander-

• Milton and Crociata. Their names sound like a small law firm, but actually both ULS basketball players will make large contributions. Kandia Milton and Kevin Crociata, both quick, agile and exciting to watch, start their fourth straight season.

y now, most of us are ready to step inside from the cold and sip egg nog and hot cider. But, instead of lounging on the couch, or reclining in the chair, pick your favorite seat at the basketball game, volleyball match or hockey game.

Practices have been under way for three weeks now, but it seems there's never enough time to prepare for the challenging and hectic seasons that should end sometime in mid-March.

Previews of the basketball, hockey, wrestling, volleyball, swimming and gymnastics teams at North, South and University Liggett School follow:

BASKETBALL

Repeating as champions will be difficult, but not impossible.

A year ago, South started the season 2-2, but won 19 straight before losing to Southwestern in the regional finals. With Joe Caldwell being the only starter back from that 21-3 team, Coach George Petrouleas remains optimistic about his team's chance to repeat the feats of 1988-89.

'We're going to have to get healthy right now," said Petrouleas, whose team plays its second game of the season at Highland Park Dec. 8. "We've had some injuries that have kept us from finding our proper chemistry, but if we can get over the injuries and find the guys that play the best together, then we do stand a good chance at repeat-

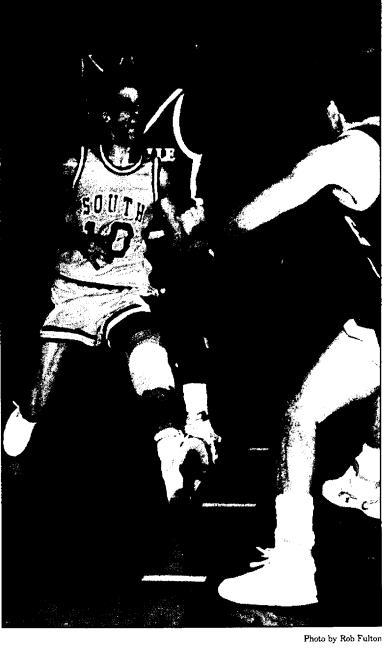

Last year South won the Eastern Michigan League crown with a 14-0 record and won the district and regional titles.

"We're not going to be as tall as we were a year ago," admitted Petrouleas, "but overall we'll be a better shooting team."

Brian Letscher and Mike Chambers were the first two casualties, and Paul Disinger went down with an early-season injury as well. With those three out of the lineup, South's size dwindles. However, the speed, quickness and agility of this team will cause problems for slower oppo-

"We won't match up with any 6-foot-9-inch centers," Petrouleas said. "But we will have guys at 6-3 and 6-4 who will be strong, quick and good shooters. It's a trade-off of sorts, height for speed."

Caldwell returns to run the show at point guard. Flanking

South's Joe Caldwell (10) is the only returning starter from last season's 21-3 team that lost in the regional finals. Caldwell will run the show for the Blue Devils from his point guard position.

him will be junior guard Tim and finding the proper chemis-Gramling, a 1988-89 jayvee player. Durmon Coates (6-3) and Rob Khoenle (6-4) will man the forward and center spots, with the fifth position up for grabs between Bill Lyons, Kevin Sherwood (6-1), Mark Jungwirth (6-3) and Letscher and Chambers. Look for Keith Baer (6-3) to get some time up front as well.

Jeff Kerfoot, Bill Saylor and Jay Van de Wyngarde will also play the guard positions.

Our weaknesses right now are our physical health and our lack of a big man," said Petrouleas. "We'll have a better assessment of our squad after Christ- a repeat performance is the last mas, but right now we're thing Devils' coach Tim Zimmerconcentrating on getting healthy

If South can heal and mix the ingredients, it should make a push to win the E.M.L. again. However, Port Huron, Port Huron Northern and East Detroit will also be making bids.

"For us to repeat, everyone on this team is going to have to do multiple chores," said Petrou-"We can compete, but we leas. ' have to get the two and three guys - who are integral pieces HOCKEY

After suffering through a lethargic 6-12-4 season a year ago, And he shouldn't get it either. "We have a great attitude this year," said Zimmerman. "Comparing this year's team to last year's team is like trying to compare night and day. We came into practice with a great attitude and I think it'll carry through the entire season."

Last year the Devils came into camp optimistic, but consecutive losses doomed that hope. Zimmerman doesn't make any promises that it won't happen again, but he's quite sure it won't.

"I think we can more than better last year's performance," he said, "but right now it's difficult to tell. We've got two strong lines and we'd like to find a third, but we've got to come up with the right combinations.'

Leading the cast of returning players is captain Mike Kisskalt. John Olmsted, Brad Warezak, David Auld, Bill Quinn, Steve Tucker, Jim Pappas, Renato Roxas, Peter Bourke and goaltenders Chris Paul (C) and Kevin Nesler also return to a lineup that is more experienced and more confident. Additional players include Brian Czarnik, Dan LeFebvre, Kevin Mc-Cracken, John Morreale, David Tucker, Brian Crane and Tommy Rajt.

"I'm not sure how the lines will take shape," said Zimmerman. "But I know we'll be a much better team. We've adopted 'Find a Way,' as this year's slogan and no matter what we do, we've got to find a way, whether it's in practice or a game. We've got to find a way to get the job done."

Zimmerman has many returning players, but lacks depth.

"We've got a great work etnic," he said, "but I'm a little concerned about our depth. We're going to need some of the younger guys to come through for us.'

WRESTLING

Coach Larry Carr almost guarantees that his squad will not be a pushover any longer.

With interest in wrestling increasing, this year Carr has more athletes to work with. With that in mind, Carr, who hasn't won an E.M.L. title, thinks his grapplers can vie for the league championship.

"We're going to go for the E.M.L.," he said. "Right now we're going through a lot of drills and working very hard. But, we can't just work hard now. We've got to sustain it through the season because we wrestle in such a tough league."

Carr generally enters the season looking for a couple of wins, but this year he is looking for more than that.

"We've got the people we need to win some matches this season," he said. "We've got basically everybody back from last season and instead of entering the season looking for a win or two, we're shooting higher than that."

The big guns for South include, Paul Kelley (103), Kelly Reed (112), Lou Preston (119), Robert Bruce (125), Andy Doyle (135), Tom Murphy (140), Jon Ostrowski (145), Brion Czaiczynski (152), Kelly Graves (171), Voelker (heavyweight), Brett Brownscombe (189), Jim Aldridge, Joe Wood, Chris Sorensen and P.J. Burkhardt.

"In the past, we've been a very weak team," Carr admitted. "But our strength and ability

Crane, Devils burn Rice in a minute

By Rob Fulton Sports Editor

Sophomore forward Brian Crane scored four goals in the third period as the Grosse Pointe South hockey team spoiled the Brother Rice Warriors' homeopener with a 5-5 tie Dec. 2. South (1-0-2 overall, 1-0-1 Michigan Metro East) trailed 3-0 at the end of two periods, but scored five times in the final period, including two goals in a one-minute span, to earn its second tie of the young season.

"We played good hockey for one period," said South coach Tim Zimmerman. "We didn't play well in the first two periods, but in the third period the kids just found a way.

"Finding a Way" has been the adopted theme for the 1989-90

"During the second intermission, we didn't talk about anything except our mistakes," Zimmerman recalled. "Really, my talk wasn't anything inspirational even though we were down 3-0. We just wanted to skate well and work on some things, but the kids came out and refused to quit."

Crane netted two quick goals to cut the Warriors' lead to 3-2, but Brother Rice came right back with a goal of its own. Crane got South within one goal, 4.3, but Brother Rice extended the lead to two, 5-3 with three minutes to play.

"A lot of our fans left after the second period, and then even more left when Brother Rice scored the fifth goal," said Zim-with 1:26 to play to close the gap to 5-4. With goalie Kevin Nesler on the bench, South took advantage of the extra man as Crane drilled his fourth goal with just 26 seconds to play.

But the show was just beginning as the Devils scored twice in one minute to get the tie.

"We were just going nuts after the game," Zimmerman said. "It was just like a win for us because they beat us 6-0 last year. Early in the game, it looked like much of the same, but the kids found a way.'

At home Nov. 29, Brad Warezak scored twice and goalie Bill Quinn tipped in a shot Chris Paul allowed only two goals as the Devils routed Ann Arbor Huron, 6-2.

> Brian Crane, Jim Pappas, John Olmstead and Mike Kisskalt netted solo goals, and Pappas, Kisskalt, Tom Rajt and Peter Bourke drew assists.

are both coming along. I'm excited about the season. VOLLEYBALL

Apparently, the season's success hinges on the performance of Coach Cindy Sharpe's juniors. With a fine blend of juniors and seniors, the only weak link in Sharpe's chain is the passing.

"We are going to have a strong, tall and exciting team," she said. "But, in order to take advantage of our height, we've got to have all the other pieces in order.'

Katie Kolp is the team's No. 1 setter and Patty Blake will be the middle hitter. Jenny Kalmink, Anne Gross, Emilie Ayrault and Ellen McGahee round out the players who will be called on to support the team. Newcomers Sue McGahee and Tina Higel will also see some

"We're going to have to play with mental toughness," said Sharpe. "In the past, we haven't been strong in that department, but this year if things fall apart in a match we've got to be able to remain poised. If so, then we can be a strong team.'

Anchor Bay and Port Huron Northern will be South's two strongest opponents. South finished 20-8 overall and won the E.M.L. title a year ago.

GYMNASTICS

Al Trombley, only in his second year at the helm, is still working on building his pro-

Denise Brown and Lee Deuban, a state competitor last year, are the "two strongest gymnasts" right now, but Amy Keenan and Andrea Reynolds will also earn their share of points. "I'm trying to establish some structure and tradition," said Trombley, whose co-coach is Angie Baughman. "As a team, we're much further ahead than a year ago, but it's hard to say how we'll do. We have a great strong," said Coach Mike Mandeal of potential and right now I'm more concerned with our individual development. As long as we do well individually, I think the season will be successful."

North

BASKETBALL

Depth and seniors will key the move to improve on last year's 10-11 overall record for the North basketball team.

Traditionally not deep, the Norsemen will be able to use 10-12 players and not lose a step.

"We can probably play 10 or more kids at any given time and be a solid ball club," said North coach George Olman. "We're in a position this year that we can put someone on the court and not have to make a lot of adjustments because we're two deep at every spot.'

The Norsemen may be deep, but they lack game experience.

'We're a senior team," said Olman, "and our only weakness is the lack of game experience in our underclassmen. They only have experience in a backup role and not in starting or getting a lot of court time."

Charlie Stumb (6 feet 6 inches, 215), Andy Dudeck (6-3, 220), Jason Serwa (5-10, 165), Lou D'-Angelo (6-2, 205), Mark Zoltowski, Kevin Endres Brian Sheehy, Tim Wilhelm, Dave Senter, Pat Palus, John Mank, Jon Kesman, Tim Sacka, David Vier and Ted Bidigare pack Olman's experienced lineup.

"We're probably not as quick as an overall team as we were last year, but it'll also depend on who's on the floor," Olman said. "The kids feel they're going to have a good season, but in order to do that, we have to put it all together on the floor, and pick up our intensity a couple notches."

HOCKEY

With 10 returning players and six new faces in the lineup, the Norsemen are going to make a bid to win the state champion-

Realistically, North can go back to the state's Final Four, a place it visited in 1986-87. "On paper we look very zella. "But we need the right chemistry. We have depth and leadership, but we also feel we're further behind this year than we were at this time a year ago. We do feel, however, that we have over into this season. We're a the right ingredients to get to the Final Four."

Ed Barbieri, Frank Lucido and Scott Nesom will front the first line, with Tim Ryan and Jeff Jensen anchoring the defense on the first shift. Bob Beltz, Blake Crawford and John Ferguson will join defenders Andy Bond and Nick Black on the second shift, and the third line includes Gary Corona, Derek Smith, Scott Collins, Brad Hea and Brian Michalak.

"We have three strong lines," Manzella said. "We have many options of moving guys around on different shifts and that's nice to have. With three strong lines we should be able to put the puck in the net consistently, but you never know.'

Defending the goal for the Norsemen will be Matt Krieg, Jim Bunn and Jeff Miller.

"We're lacking some consistency in our game right now,' said Manzella. "We've been preaching that we have to take one game at a time and be patient. We've got to pick up our intensity in practice, and I think we will because we've got so many guys looking for jobs that it should push all of us.

The seniors in the 1989-90 season should carry the club. In two years, the team has won 30 games and lost only 13. "We've been nurturing this team for three years now," said Manzella, "and now we've got to have our seniors set the tone. We have a great possibilty of playing well, but we've got to get our intensity up and our chemistry going.'

SWIMMING

Filled with seniors and talented sophomores, the North swim team will be more balanced than in the three previous

Les Roddis' team will be captained by seniors Victor Perez, Steve Swan and Chris Detloff, but the real push is coming from the sophomores.

"Our sophomores are really pushing everyone this year," said Roddis. "Last year they pushed poeple and it's rolling deep team with a lot of talent and I think we stand a real chance of winning the American Division.

In order to win the title, North will need sterling seasons from Eric DeMeulemeester, Charlie Roddis, John Galvin, Chris Pearce and Graham Sisk.

"We'll be a strong dual-meet team, but in order to be better than that, we're going to need some great seasons from some of those guys," Roddis said.

Juniors Peter Ellison, Andy Bringard, Bob Jara (diver), Matt Van Copenolle, Rick Nelson and Brad Daniels will further balance the attack, and freshman Craig Williams will also be heard from.

"We've got some good swimmers, but right now I'm concerned because we really don't have the 'prime cut' swimmers,' Roddis said. "We've got great balance and should be a strong team.'

VOLLEYBALL

Under the direction of firstyear head coach Leslie Harwood, the Lady Norsemen must adjust to a new system. That could be their only problem.

No. 1 setter Jane Rice leads a supporting cast of returnees, including Hope Peters, Laurin Schultz, Pam Thomas and Lisa Fleming. Juniors Katie Loeher and Becky Macks will add some spice to the new offense and defense, and Lori Haskell is Harwood's No. 2 setter.

"We're very well balanced," said Harwood. "Everyone can do a lot of different things and that should give us balance throughout the season."

"The toughest thing for the girls right now, though, is to get comfortable with a new offense. We need a great team effort and not a lot of individual efforts."

Harwood's team will benefit from height, quickness and diversity, as well as a strong contingent from last year's jayvee

"Were doing very well right now," said Harwood, "but as we learn more and become more comfortable, we're going to be a much stronger team.

BASKETBALL

Filled with seniors and juniors, confidence and a transition game, the University Liggett School basketball team is ready to make a move to knock off defending Class C champion Detroit Country Day School.

With seniors Kevin Crociata (5-11, 160) and Kandia Milton (6-4, 185) leading the attack for the fourth straight season, the Knights have a great opportunity to advance further than the Hope Peters will be one of several talented players battling on the front line for the Grosse Pointe North volleyball team. Peters leads a cast of seniors who should spark the Lady Norsemen in the White Division of the Macomb Area Conference.

"We're not going to have quite the team we did last year," said Belloli. "We've got to find a setter and work on our defense. There are a lot of young kids out, but they are all working hard. It may be a tough season, but we're going to do our best and have fun doing it."

Fire Preparing for winter sportsresistance.

There's a fantastic new movie at local theaters these days: "The Bear."

The movie traces the wild adventures of a young grizzly bear cub befriended and protected by an older, experienced adult bear. The cub learns to explore his new world; challenging his strength and agility in the mountains while developing speed and strategy in the open fields.

All this activity comes to an end, however, with the approaching winter. As the snow starts to fall, the baby once again follows the bear's lead as he climbs into his cave to hibernate for the next five months

This practice may be fine for bears, but it will surely sabotage all your hard efforts to achieve and maintain peak health and fitness attained this past spring and summer. Opportunities for healthy foods, stress-relief and physical activity abound throughout the winter months. Redefine winter for yourself by keeping memories of spring and summer in mind.

How many of us have limped into work on Monday mornings after the first run of the spring season? Who hasn't longed for a nice hot tub after opening day at the softball field or golf course?

Sore muscles and aching joints seem to be an accepted, almost honorable, rite of spring. Instead, imagine jogging off the tennis court next April and still feeling good enough to go dancing that night. It's not as impossible as it may sound. The answer is maintaining your activity level throughout the winter months.

You may have to attempt changing activities totally, or merely shifting gears such as moving indoors, refining your technique or cross-training. For example, try swimming or cross country skiing instead of running or biking. Whatever the activity, certain "summer" principles remain.

As in all instances of activity, whether it be sport or shoveling snow, monitoring your body's tolerance is important. For someone with a known cardiac condition, monitoring is essential.

The warning signs to keep in mind are:

1) shortness of breath, 2) chest pain, 3) dizziness, 4) sudden onset of weakness, 5) nausea and, 6) sweating associated with clamminess.

The intensity of your workout can be measured via your pulse or heart rate. Your target-heart rate, or beats per minute, can be calculated accordingly: 220 minus your age in years multiplied by 60 to 80 percent. For example: 220 minus 40 years, X 60 percent equals target heart rate. The percentage varies with your overall physical condition and desired activity level. It is recommended that 50 percent of your maximum heart rate be your starting level.

Tolerance for cold weather activity is as much an acquired training effect as tolerance for hot weather activity. A day of gusty winds and 30 degrees is as stressful to the heart as a sunny day in the 80s. Also, continue to drink plenty of fluids. It is essential to hydrate your body yearround.

Another important aspect of winter sports is warming up your body, preparing it for the activity to come.

Warm-up exercises will increase blood flow throughout your body, increase your body temperature and, in a sense, prime your muscles and heart. These activities should be low intensity, such as marching in place, swinging your arms or riding a stationary bike without additional

Stretching can be per-formed either following your warm-up, or before your cooldown, as long as it is included in your regular routine. Remember, stretching should be slow and gentle. Do not bounce or hold a painful position while stretching. An excellent resource for stretching routines is a book by Bob Anderson, called "Stretching." Following your activity, spend five to 10 minutes cooling-

Walking at an easy pace or riding a stationary bike minus any resistance are excellent examples of cool-down activities.

And remember, the sequence of 1) warm-up, 2) activity and 3) cool-down is important not only for sports, but also activities such as sledding, shoveling snow, ice skating or hiking.

Obviously, there are many similarities between summer and winter sports. There are, however, some specific winter rules. First, dress in layers and make the first layer nylon or polyester fabric to help move sweat away from your skin.

A sweaty body will quickly become a cold body. Always cover your head and hands. Avoid exposing excessive skin surface to the air. Frostbite is a definite danger during any outdoor winter activity. Last, but by no means least, be aware of your personal safety by wearing reflective outerwear and appropriate identifi-

Spring is a beautiful time of the year. Enjoy it next year with a healthy and energized body that is ready for that long bike ride or hike in the woods. Avoid bear-ish tendencis and explore a different winter world while discovering new talents and strengths.

Celebrating with satisfaction

Christmas - a time of magic, a time for parties and a time for celebration.

Whether parties include crowds of people or a few good friends, or are formal or informal, if our calendars are not filled with a variety of get-togethers we do not feel that the holidays are complete.

However, the abundance of parties usually means culinary excesses; festive foods loaded with calories, sugar and fat. We know that we feel better and accomplish more when wise eating habits accompany our varied activities, but we often cast aside our good sense in the name of Christmas celebration.

What other time of the year can you justify eating chocolate for breakfast? No matter what excuse you use for reckless eating, the outcome is basically the same: having that over-fed feeling that can cause you to feel tired and depressed, sapped of both physical and emotional enhome. You can choose from a deal with the vast array of choices. This may sound much more difficult than it really is.

We practice this form of mental picturing on a daily basis without even realizing it. For instance, when we are invited to a party, we glean enough information from the host and hostess to give us information necessary to "see" ourselves at the party: What time is the party? Is the dress code formal or informal?

With just that little information, we consciously go through our closet to think of clothes to wear that would be appropriate. The same goes for our mental response to food.

What time will the party start? Don't sabotage your good intentions by going to the party on an empty stomach.

It may sound crazy, but one of your best defenses before a party is to eat a small amount of healthy food before leaving small green salad, a crisp apple, But, rest assured that you can three to four wheat crackers, all followed by a tall glass of water.

Enjoyment and over-eating are not synonymous. Take small portions of the meal and eat slowly. Remember, it takes a minimum of 20 minutes for your stomach to tell the brain that food is being consumed. If you over-load your plate, you will probably feel compelled to eat everything on it, even though the satisfaction of what you are eating is long

Make a conscious effort to get involved in the conversations and activities around you. Mingling with friends is the main purpose of why we are getting together. Devote your energies to strengthening friendships and family ties rather than in devising strategies to work your way back to the buffet table. A good party is not an eating marathon.

This Christmas, experience the joy of the season without having to deal with the aftermath of holiday regrets. By taking charge of your eating habits, you will maintain energy, enthusiasm and self-esteem. Weight training -- an important aspect

When was the last time you wandered into a weight room?

You probably have an image of clanging steel and overly developed body-builders. Right? Not quite. These days you will see people of all shapes and sizes, men and women, young and old. So what's the draw?

The fact is, more and more poeple are discovering that the benefits of weight training read like an anti-aging potion: sound interesting? Read on.

In our ever-increasing sedentary society, many muscle and joint problems are actually a result of weakness and inflexibility from lack of use. By increasing strength and flexibility, it is possible to prevent injuries and slow the loss of muscle function associated with the aging process.

How does all this work? One of the things that happens when you become involved in a weight-training program is that the tissues connecting your bones (ligaments) and your muscles to bones (tendons) actually get stronger along with your making to the stress placed on it by the weight training. These changes will help protect the joints from injury and make everyday tasks like running up and down the stairs, or carrying groceries much easier.

Recent research reveals that weight training may help prevent the loss of bone mineral that occurs as we age, and some studies have documented an increase in bone density and thickness of cartilage.

By now, you're probably say-This sounds great for someone who is already fit, but what about me?'

Well, hold on. In a study at Tufts University, physiologist William Evans studied strength gains in 80- and 90-year-olds in a nursing home. After an eightweek weight-training program, muscle size increased by 10 percent, and muscle strength increased 160 percent. You know what I'm going to say next?

It's also important to learn proper weight-training tech-

Lucky numbers

CHOOSING THE RIGHT LOTTERY NUMBERS must be tough, since so few of us do it! If playing Mary Margaret's birthdate, or anyone else's for that matter, hasn't made you millions, your luck might be changing. But, first, you must ask Santa to bring you the video game "Taboo. The Sixth Sense" for Christmas. Designed for the Nintendo' Entertainment System. Taboo comes from Tradewest, the video game maker that puts you in the action. Taboo offers what may be a better way to choose lottery numbers. This adult video game has the ability to help pick personal exclusive, "hucky" numbers for the lottery or any other reason. The popular game uses ancient Tarot principles to help users select numbers, or "predict" the future. Tradewest offers no guarantees of wealth and fame for Taboo's lottery feature. However, when it comes to reaching those lucky stars. Taboo just might be the Christmas gift that really keeps on giving....

The gift of pure, clear water, 365 days a year

If you're looking for a gift that's really useful all year long, nothing can be more welcome than pure drinking water.

Unfortunately, much of our municipal and well water is not as pure as it should be, and the EPA is fighting a losing battle against the various forms of pollution from manufacturing, agricultural chemicals and acid rain.

Drinking water is vital to our health—but not when it's loaded with cancercausing agents, lead and radon, to mention but a few!

So, when you really want to wish someone a happy and healthy holiday, the Regal Purewater System makes the perfect gift. It's as easy to use as a coffee-maker.

You just pour a gallon of tap water into the compact, tabletop unit and switch it on. It costs less than 10° a gallon to make delicious, pure, healthful water.

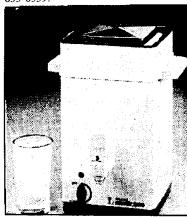

The Regal Purewater System is unique, according to the foremost expert in water microbiology, Professor Gerba of the University of Arizona. It is the only true purification system for home use, destroying 99.9 percent of the bacteria, which no system relying on filters along can do. It also removes toxic metals, such as lead, radon and a wide range of chemicals found in our water.

The bonus is that you'll enjoy drinking plain water again because it tastes so good—much better than the average bottled water. And everything you make with it, from coffee to juice, will taste better too.

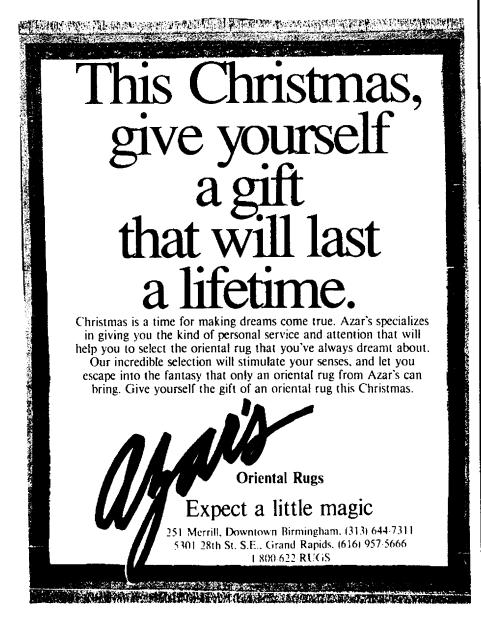

The Regal Purewater System is made in the U.S.A. by Regal Ware, Inc. It costs $89.00, plus $5.00 tax in New Jersey, with one filter and two 1/2-gallon storage containers.

Replaceable filters—change them about every four months—cost $17.50 or $60.00 for four.

This price includes shipping and handling from Geo Products, Inc., P.O. Box 1346, Montclair, NJ 07042. You can send a check or use the toll-free number to order with Visa or MasterCard, 800-833-0339

"Plain English" commands make learning to use a personal computer easier

LEARNING TO USE A COMPUTER is easy and fun with the help of DeskMate*, the friendly face in the PC crowd

"A computer? I wouldn't know what to do..." Have you thought about buying a computer for your home but hesitated because they seem difficult to master? Did you find that all the nice, friendly interfaces only run on expensive computers?

It's time to look again! For the first time, there's a friendly face in the PC crowd. It's an easy-to-use interface that runs on any compatible PC—even the inexpensive ones.

Best of all, some of the biggest names in software — Lotus, Symantec, First Byte, Activision, Broderbund, Intuit, Software Publishing Corporation, Electronic Arts, Star Software, DAC Software, Quantum Computer Services, Power-Up! Software, Sierra On-Line and The Learning Company — are using it, to name just a few.

This "graphical user interface" is called DeskMate*. Because of its ease of use, first-time computer users are finding that personal computing is not only fun but also very helpful.

A graphical user interface acts as the "interpreter" between the user and the computer's operating system, much like an interpreter would with speakers of two different languages. Through the graphic use of pull-down menus and popup dialog boxes, the interface lets you talk your language to the computer, instead of having to learn confusing and hard-to-understand commands. From the pull-down menu list, you select plain English terms like Run, Copy, Delete, Print or Exit.

DeskMate is the only interface of its type available for low-end personal computers—computers most often used in the home

Software programs are available today from leading developers who have taken notice of the DeskMate interface. For example, Lotus has announced a version of its famous spreadsheet program and Symantec introduced its number-one rated executive Q&A Write¹⁶ word processing software—both using the friendly look and feel of the DeskMate interface.

What this means to DeskMate users is that once they become familiar with the basic operation of one software package, they know essentially how to use any DeskMate-based application. It couldn't be simpler.

Tandy, as you might guess, includes DeskMate with its most popular family of Tandy. 1000 personal computers, and with the new Tandy. 1100 FD laptop portable. This built-in feature of the Tandy PC gets you up and running in just seconds, and you'll be greeted by the friendly face of DeskMate.

The Tandy 1000 family has built its reputation on state-of-the-art technology, value-added features and an impressive record of quality and reliability. Three models—the Tandy* 1000 HX, Tandy* 1000 SL and the new Tandy* 1000 TL/2—are on sale for the holidays at $300 off the suggested retail price. Prices are good at participating Radio Shack* stores and dealers nationwide.

More than one million computer users have discovered the DeskMate difference. Their response today —"A computer? I wouldn't know what to do... without DeskMate."

Flower power is back again

Flowers are the universal gift of thought and appreciation, and are certain to lift the spirits, especially during the holiday season.

This Christmas, the stores are abloom with exquisite floral gift-giving ideas: Roses, chrysanthemums, lilies in every shape, size and form imaginable. They're blossoming everywhere this season!

Gift shopping for fashionable accessories is like stepping into an enchanted flower garden. Chintz challis scarves, "flower power" crystal brooches and floral tapestry vests, slippers, bags and belts are excellent choices for your high-style friends or relatives.

Crocheted and hand-knitted sweaters and scarves with colorful floral motifs are just the thing to warm the body and soul on those chilly winter nights.

Festive ethnic clothing and accessories embroidered with bright floral designs make unique gifts, especially for the young or the young at heart.

In home furnishings, too, flowers are in full bloom in linens splashed with bright floral patterns, needlepoint pillows bedecked with garden blooms and all manner of exquisite, flowering tapestry cushions that bring instant old-world charm to any home.

Miniature topiary bushes—a little

"tree" of dried flowers—make a grand statement, despite their diminutive stature, while the more traditional and well-loved poinsettia plants always add a festive touch to the holiday table.

At the cosmetic counter, too, everything's coming up roses. Charming floral patterned gift sets from Neutrogena make elegant gifts for loved ones of any age, from teenager to grandmother.

Who wouldn't love a pretty chintz treasure chest filled to the brim with skin same Body Oil, Liquid Neutrogena, Neutrogena Moisture, Night Cream, Shampoo and Conditioner, and, as if that weren't bounty enough, there's also a bar of the famous clear glycerin soap.

Jewelry is always a popular gift during the holiday season (this year the winning motif is floral, of course!), and you can store prized gems and fun faux pieces in a Neutrogena treasure chest, or in their charming designer jewelry box that charming designer jeweiry oox that comes in the same lovely pink and lilac floral fabric. It, too, contains a collection of skin care basics to keep skin soft and supple, and in the best of holiday spirits!

For friends and family who like to tra-vel or simply go on relaxing weekend getaways, there are brightly colored, flo-ral chintz bags that are lightweight and functional

And to brighten a rainy day, you could give them a matching umbrella and hat to protect them from the elements.

Another great travel gift idea is Neutrogena's handy tri-fold cosmetic bag. Tucked inside the pretty floral bag are miniatures of Neutrogena Shampoo and Conditioner, an essential duo for beauty on the go!

A creative way to send flowers is with charming hand-crafted gift items. A keepsake bouquet or corsage of preserved flowers makes a wonderful memento of holiday festivities. By arranging handpressed roses or other flowers in a beautiful Victorian picture frame, you've created a romantic mantelpiece attraction that will be treasured for years to

Flowers are all the rage for holiday gift-giving. So, make this Christmas the most breathtaking ever with a bouquet of beautiful, colorful gifts to bestow on loved ones. These floral treasures will remain fresh and in full bloom long past

This holiday, pirate toys promise high adventure

Some of the greatest minds knew the benefits of creative play. "Humans are truly human only when they are at play," said philosopher Gustav Shiller. Benjamin Franklin asserted, "To cease to think creatively is but little different from ceasing to live." And Albert Einstein maintained, "Imagination is more important than knowledge."

These great minds knew that truly creative adults were once creative children. Luckily, today there are toys made specifically to build a child's imagination. The new Lego Pirate line, for example, offers many opportunities for creative play. And its imaginative benefits lie in its role-playing possibilities.

Edward DeBono, an expert on creative thinking and inventor of the term "lateral thinking," cites role-playing (also called scenario building or script writing) as the second important stage in a child's creative thinking process.

First, a child builds some sort of original creation, such as a pirate ship or a site for buried treasure, using Lego bricks as a concrete extension of the imagination

The act of building and creating develops a child's ability first to imitate (by closely following the building instructions), and then to modify and improve the creation. After the child has built the creation, however, the child uses what has been constructed to execute fantasy stories.

DeBono points out, however, the importance of imposing a discipline within the role-playing process: "After all, true creativity arises from achieving an effect within a discipline." The pirate environment offers such a discipline.

The pirate series is a particularly rich source for adventure role-playing. The popularity of Robert Lewis Stevenson's Treasure Island is a testament to children's love of the pirate genre.

Now, they can actually build the famed ships of pirate lore and act out their own new adventures with Governor Broadside, Captain Red Beard, and his team of swashbuckling pirates.

A wide range of toys within the pirate theme, such as the Caribbean Clipper, the Eldorado Fortress, Forbidden Island and the Black Seas Barracuda, are also offered by LEGO Systems, Inc. (555 Taylor Road, Enfield, CT 06082; 203/749-2291), thus increasing the adventure possibilities.

According to a spokesperson at the company, "The pirate environment, like our other town, space, and castle play environments, epitomizes realism—shown by the details of the models and the many special building elements. The environments provide a child with a sense of history and unlimited play potential."

Details also heighten the possibilities for role-playing—from the crow's nest, jail and shark with jaws that move included with the Forbidden Island set, to the authentic cloth sails and cannons that highlight the Eldorado Fortress set.

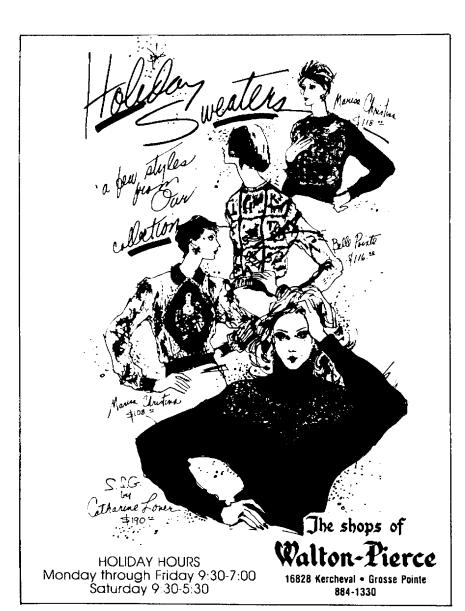

the authentic cioin sains and cannons man highlight the Eldorado Fortress set. Every pirate toy fits perfectly into the LEGO System of Play—the industry 'dictum' on toy perfection. Established by Godtfred Kirk Christiansen in 1955, the system of play outlines 10 essential characteristics for the perfect toy, including unlimited play possibilities, endless hours of play, and the potential for the development of imagination and creativity through role-playing.

Great for gift-giving, charms are the latest look in jewelry fashion

This holiday season. Jeweiers of America (JA), the national organization dedicated to consumer information and education about fine jewelry, has a charming idea for everyone on your gift list: Bracelets and necklaces adorned with charms. Yes...whether worn singly on graduated longer length necklaces of gold (or leather!), or dangling en masse from layers of links encircling throat or wrist...charms are back!

Some of the new motifs are puffy hearts, keys and locks, crosses, animals, acorns and leaves, and coins (whether authentic or replica), executed in gold or silver that is often accented with color. whether it be enamel or gemstone

Some designs hark back to antiquity and suggest a sense of mysticism; others reflect the wearer's interest in sports, nature or hobbies. Charms are once again the choice for displaying one's in dividuality, showing a sense of humor and making a fashion statement.

Lewelers of America offers consumers information on "What You Should Know About... Karat Gold Jewelry, Sterling Silvering S About ... The birth of the Christmas card

While Christmas cards are taken for granted today, as among the most established of holiday customs, their use actually only dates back to the last century.

With the advent of the Industrial Revolution - which made possible the mass production of printed matter, such as Christmas cards—and the invention in Britain of the "penny post" in 1840 — which allowed people to correspond with family and friends relatively inexpensively—the stage was set for the creation of the Christmas card

The date of the first Christmas card is asked John Calcot Horsley to design an illustrated card which contained greetings of the season. This card, in tryptich form, depicted three scenes. Two involved charitable deeds—giving gar-ments and food to the poor. The third showed a family celebration, with each member toasting the occasion with a glass of wine

One thousand copies of this card were printed and sold—the first step taken in what has become an extremely profitable business venture, and a ubiquitous holi-day time tradition that, over 150 years young, shows no sign of waning in popularity.

ATHLETIC SHOES SCORE POINTS WITH FAMILIES this holiday season. According to Athletic X-Press, kids of all ages are requesting the "hottest" name in athletic shoes this Christmas. Even tiny tots are sporting the latest name in athletic shoes. Pictured here: British Knights high-top basketball shoes for tots, big brothers and Dad.

Give the gift of health with athletic shoes for the family

According to recent studies, only 50 percent of the nation's children get the proper amount of physical activity. So, this Christmas, many families will give one another the "gift of good health" with athletic shoes.

"Athletic shoe sales explode at holiday time. Kids of all ages want to find the 'hottest' name in athletic shoes under their tree Christmas morning," says Ted Bertrand, vice president and general merchandise manager for Athletic X-Press, the nation's largest chain of family athletic footwear and apparel stores.

"Even tiny tots are sporting the latest name in athletic shoes like their big brothers and sisters." Bertrand cites Nike, British Knights, Reebok, L.A. Gear and Converse as some of today's most popular brands

If the demand for athletic shoes is so high, why aren't children getting enough exercise?

"Youth fitness begins at home with the parents," says Bertrand, "The boom in athletic footwear and apparel is only the first step. It may take years to get youth fitness back on track."

According to an in-store survey conducted by Athletic X-Press, as part of its annual National Youth Fitness Program, "parental encouragement and guidance is the first step towards improving fitness in our nation's youth."

While shopping for children's athletic shoes this Christmas, many people are buying athletic shoes and apparel for the whole family. It's the first step on the road to good health.

Family fun runs, bicycling, racquet sports and nature walks are great ways for everyone to have fun and get fit. And, of course, there are shoes designed especially for each of these activities.

Athletic X-Press, with 195 stores nationwide, carries all major brand names of athletic shoes and apparel, including Nike, Reebok, British Knights, L.A. Gear and others.

Tips on taking great holiday pictures

MAY ALL YOUR MEMORIES BE BRIGHT...AND SHARP! Clo group shots and anything in-between are point-and-shoot easy with the high-tech Ricoh Mirai, a great gift for a very special someone.

From mid-November throughout the winter, it's a great time to capture holiday memories. But photography isn't just for family get-togethers. How often have you said to yourself, "Gee, I wish I had a picture of that"?

In addition to the remembrance of festive days, most of us want to capture memories of vacations and cruises, school plays and recitals, sports events and backyard games. Some of us may even want to take artistic photos of inter-esting buildings or scenery.

Here are some handy "how to's" from camera manufacturer Ricoh, to help you get the most out of your wintertime photo sessions.

• For the ultimate in ease, use an "auto everything" camera that loads, advances and rewinds the film automatically, and focuses automatically. For the person who wants a degree of creative opportunity, consider an SLR with a zoom lens

These features—point-and-shoot ease in an SLR that will zoom from 35mm to 135mm (and from 28mm to 200mm with two simple lens attachments)—are found in the Ricoh Mirai, named the "Camera of the Year" by Fortune Magazine.

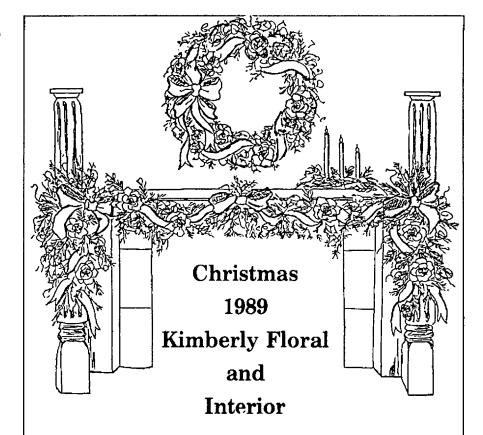

- When taking indoor photos, especially of children, get down to their level so that you have eye-to-eye pictures, not bird's eye views. This is especially true of very small children, such as the baby playing with wrapping paper under the
- Action photos—a fast paced ice hockey game or kids having a snowball fight -have special requirements. A telephoto-zoom lens brings the action closer so that you can focus on one or two key players. And you'll need to shoot at a speed of at least y_{123} second or even faster for stop-action results. A "fast" film is recommended.

- When the kids are outdoors playing and the sun is behind them, they'll be thrown into silhouette. So use the flash a "fill flash"-to throw light into the subject's shadows so that they're lit and not too dark.
- To compose good outdoor photos, remember the "rule of three"—the horizon line should be either 1/3 from the bottom or 1/2 from the top of the picture for a more visually pleasing composition.
- An auto-focus function works like a charm when you want to take pictures quickly. Group shots of the whole family are simplified if you use a wide angle setgroup pictures quickly so that family members don't look frozen in place.

 • If you want to join the group for a
- family portrait or two, put the camera on a tripod and set its self-timer.

If you're thinking of a camera as a gift for someone special, consider the fully-automatic all-in-one Ricoh Mirai, which can handle all the situations mentioned. It's been dubbed "the camera of the future" and works with the ease of a point and shoot...perfect for this holiday...(or any) season.

Cheers to a healthy holiday: How to avoid gaining those holiday pounds

If you're like most Americans, the holiday season will bring you more than joy and good cheer. The average American gains seven to 14 pounds between Thanksgiving and the new year. Cooking celebrity Ruth Fremes suggests that cooking with filtered water in-stead of fats can keep off those holiday pounds while still titillating the palate. "It is important to cook with filtered water to insure the clarity of flavor. I use a top-of-the-line home water treatment system called Shaklee BestWater because my tap water contains chemicals and hard minerals that can tarnish the delicate flavors of vegetables, fish and other fresh ingredients," says Fremes

"Filtered water also gives me 'quality insurance." With the mounting concern over tap water, I don't want to lose sleep over the water I drink and use for food preparation.

The following are a few mouth-watering tips from Ruth's kitchen:

Sauteing:

Holiday dressing tip: When you saute onions for your holiday dressing, try using water instead of butter or oil, which has approximately 100 calories a table-spoon. Use a tiny bit of water, just enough to minimally cover the bottom of a large heavy pan, put your onions in and turn the heat up.

When the water begins to boil, tightly with a lid and lower the heat to medium for 10 to 15 minutes, and you get sweet-tasting, sautéed onions. You can also do this with garlie.

If you are making a sauce that requires a glaze, remove the onions when they are ready. Then take a teaspoon of arrowroot powder and dissolve with a teaspoon of water and stir until thickened. Add spices, herbs and juices to flavor the

Soups:

Give your family and friends a cup of holiday warmth: What is more cheery than a steamy cup of soup? Many of us use fats to thicker + soup base. Instead, try boiling potai and pureeing them with a little water. Add other vegetables. bouillon and spic or additional flavor.

This makes a wor a fut, thick base.

Cooking with water instead of butter or oil is a great way to lower the calories, cholesterol and fats in your diet. If you would like more information and recipes using water, write for a free booklet by Fremes called "The Food Lover's Guide: New Ways to Cook Fresher with Water." Send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Shaklee Corporation, 444 Market T321, San Francisco, CA 94111. Healthy holidays!

Binoculars will help enhance enjoyment at favorite activities

A PERFECT GIFT FOR THE ENTIRE FAMILY is the new Pentax 8x42 DCF roofprism, weatherproof binoculars. Pentax has designed these fast focus binoculars to produce the brightest, clearest image at the optimum distance—with or without plasses. The full line of Pentax binoculars can be seen at better camera, sports and department stores.

Binoculars are the ideal gift for your special person. No matter what his or her favorite sport, hobby or activity, the world will be more enjoyable with binoc-

Why:

With binoculars, anyone can reach out visually to get a close-up view of distant subjects. Binoculars extend your vision eight to 10 times.

You'll find they add to the enjoyment of travel, hunting, sports, nature study, camping, boating, scouting and all types of outdoor activities. Plus, binoculars are relatively inexpensive and can be pur-chased at almost any quality sports, camera or department store.

But, how do you choose the best bin-oculars from all those available?

Start by shopping for the highest quality binoculars available. The experts at Pentax, a well-known leader in precision optics for over 60 years, offer a complete line of binoculars to suit every purpose.

The new 8x42 DCF and 10x42 DCF roof prism, weatherproof binoculars, for example, are designed for viewers desiring compact binoculars that provide crisp, clear images at an affordable price. An added feature is extra long eye relief to assure the best possible viewing image with or without eyeglasses.

But, what do all those letters and numbers mean? According to Pentax, the model designations tell almost everything about a pair of binoculars:

 Magnifying power is the first number. 8x means the image seen through the binoculars appears eight times larger than that seen by your unaided eye. With eight-power Pentax binoculars, a soccer player at 200 feet appears to be only 25 feet away. 10x provides even more magnification.

- The diameter of the front lens in millimeters is the next number. Large-aper-ture 42mm objective lenses allow you to see clearly even at dusk on cloudy days or through haze and fog.
- The last section of the designation describes the mechanical and optical characteristics of the binoculars. Roof-prism binoculars, designated by a "D," are designed to be compact and light-weight. Center-focusing, which most us-ers prefer, is designated by "CF."

While that's all there is to understanding binocular designations, there are a number of other features, such as durability, construction and optical quality, to

- check out when shopping for binoculars.
 A good basis for comparison is provided by the Pentax 8x42 DCF and 10x42 DCF binoculars, which have a number of other features found in only the best binoculars:
- Superior optical performance fur-ther enhanced by multi-coated lenses, which increase light transmission while filtering out harmful rays.
- Compact, rubber-coated bodies that are shock and water-resistant, with internal mechanisms securely sealed for protection against rain, sand, dust and snow.

When shopping for binoculars, either for a gift or for yourself, look for the very best—Pentax Binoculars.

An elegant gift set for coffee lovers is a present that can be enjoyed for years

IF THERE IS A COFFEE LOVER ON YOUR GIFT LIST, why not surprise him or her with an elegant gift set that can be used for years? Combine specially flavored coffee beans with a small coffee mill such as Oster's Cafe Mill, a good quality automatic drip coffee maker like Oster's Thermo-Cafe coffee maker, and a coordinated set of coffee mugs. This gift will remind the lucky recipient of you every day.

If there is a coffee lover on your gift list, why not surprise him or her with an elegant gift set that can be used for years?

Delicious coffee starts with the perfect bean. Stop by a coffee specialty shop and check into all of the terrific flavored beans available. Look for a flavor that the recipient might never purchase for him or herself...perhaps an after-dinner bean flavored with cinnamon or amaretto.

The next step for a delicious cup of coffee is to grind the beans properly. A coffee mill is the perfect choice because it will grind the beans quickly. Grinding coffee beans for an extended period of time creates heat; heat can release the flavor of the bean prematurely and give the coffee a burnt flavor.

A small coffee mill, such as Oster's Cafe Mill, is best. It should have a stainless steel grinding cup so that the varied flavors of different beans do not mix. Instant stop and start control will allow the beans to be ground to the perfect size for individual tastes.

A good quality automatic drip coffee maker is the next necessity for a great cup of coffee. If the gift is for a single person or a couple, consider a small 4-6 cup unit. Compact and easy to use, there are many small coffee makers available today.

If the gift is for someone who likes to entertain, or for a heavy coffee drinker, look for a larger coffee maker. A coffee maker that brews into its own thermal carafe, like Oster's Thermo-Cafe coffee maker, would be a good option. The coffee will stay hot for hours without tasting bitter...and the carafe can go anywhere (from the kitchen to the patio).

The perfect finale to a coffee lover's gift package is a coordinated set of coffee mugs. There are many different styles, sizes and colors available...choosing the perfect style won't be easy!

If there is a coffee lover on your gift list, choose one of these items or combine them into a matching set. Your gift will remind the lucky recipient of you every day.

In this season of giving what is the ultimate gift?

Adults will appreciate it as an eye-catching conversation piece while, for children, an aquarium provides an excellent learning experience which is also an enjoyable hobby. If you're interested in purchasing an aquarium, the experts at Tetra Sales are offering an informative full-color illustrated starter booklet. In fact, a recent study by researchers at the University of Pennsylvania concluded it is even a benefit in relieving Bestowing a home aquarium upon a friend, relative or your own children has many positive benefits. Throughout the U.S., 10 million aquariums are being enjoyed in homes, offices, restaurants and hotels.

In order to select the best aquarium for your money, one that's filled with color-ful tropical fish and is easy to maintain, it's a good idea to do a little investigat-

First, you will want to locate a good dealer in your area. If you have a friend who has an aquarium, ask for a refer ence; otherwise, the phone book lists most tropical fish retailers.

It is advisable to purchase a book that provides complete instructions on setting up and maintaining an aquarium.

One basic rule to follow, however, is to buy the largest aquarium possible, since the greater the water environment, the less chance of water problems.

If you receive an aquarium as a gift, you must assume all the responsibilities for maintenance.

Deciding placement

When determining where to put your new aquarium, you should consider sev-eral factors. You will not want to put it in direct sunlight, since this will cause algae to grow on the glass and plastic accesso-

You will also not want to put it on your best carpeting since, during water changes, it is possible for some water to splash on the floor. And you should also be sure to put your aquarium on a firm stand, since water is heavy

After you have decided on the aquarium, your first accessory will be a tightly fitting canopy cover equipped with a fluorescent fixture. Fluorescent fixtures throw off a cool light and will not cause fluctuations in the water temperature.

While we are on the subject of water temperature, tropical fish require an environment maintained at around 75°F (25°C). You will therefore need a good heater and an aquarium thermometer.

Of all Christmas presents, perhaps the most beloved is a living gift, such as an eter which affixes to the outside of the eter which affixes to the outside of the aquarium yet measures most accurately water temperature

You will also need a quality filter. Your fou will also need a quanty little. Tout dealer can give you proper advice since there are several types of filters and your needs will vary with the size of your aquarium. If you are going to keep a lot of fish, you will also want a separate air pump to add overen to the water. pump to add oxygen to the water.

Many decorating options

Decorating an aquarium is great fun. There are multi-colored gravels, highly decorative backgrounds and hundreds of ornaments, as well as plastic plants so real in reproduction it's almost impossible to distinguish them from live plants.

Most good retailers will have a complete assortment and your selection should be based on the size of your aquarium and the amount of money you decide to spend.

Once you have set up your aquarium, you should add a chlorine neutralizer to the water and add only a few fish initially. These few fish will help develop the proper biological conditions neces sary to maintain a fully stocked aquar-

After three to four weeks, assuming everything is functioning properly, you can then go ahead and add the rest of Aguarium maintenance is a lot simpler than people think. Every two weeks a partial water change (not greater than 20 percent) by siphoning the water from the bottom of the aquarium is all that is re-

A device called the HydroClean allows an efficient siphoning by separating the debris in the gravel and removing it with the water from the aquarium. On a monthly basis, your filter will require minimal maintenance. That's all there is.

Following this simple routine, chances of fish disease or any other aquarium problems are remote. In fact, one of the biggest problems people have is spending too much time maintaining their aquar-

On a daily basis, of course, fish should be fed and a good quality flake food will provide a complete diet for almost all

Tropical fish are beautiful—they are easy to maintain and provide a lifetime hobby. For more information, write Tetra Sales, 201 Tabor Road, Morris Plains, NJ 07950, for a free full-color starter book-let including illustrations and complete information on 30 popular tropical fish.

Christmas gifts that are appropriate

What do you get for the person who has everything? How do you make your gifts more unique and personal? When your Christmas list is long, and your time and inspiration are short, what do you

"There are certain gifts that just can't miss," says Karen Quinn, Director of Marketing Services for Liz Claiborne Cosmetics, "They are things everyone can use and things people often neglect to buy for themselves. They are appro-priate for friends, relatives and business

"A few simple guidelines can help you choose the perfect gift and make it unique, without breaking your budget." The five sure-success Christmas gifts are gifts for the home, food, fragrance, of-fice accessories and memberships, subscriptions and tickets

Gifts for the home

Gifts for the home are ideal for Christmas because everyone does at least a litthe bit of entertaining. In fact, more people are entertaining at home than ever before, "Baby Boomers are 'cocooning' and are more likely to spend the holidays at home than in restaurants or on the ski slopes," says Karen.

Some sure-fire ideas for gifts for the home are:

- Scented candles:
- Potpourri:
 Unusual-looking or high-quality serving platters or utensils:
- · A gift certificate for maid or butler service:
- A subscription for flower arrangements.
- Liz Claiborne has introduced a new Potpourri and Fragrance Candle that make ideal gifts of this type. The candle is hand dipped, and hand carved, and it's self-contained, so it always keeps its great look.

The Potpourri is unusual because it is a modern interpretation of an old-fash-ioned favorite. It's a fun mixture of Liz Claiborne's vivid signature colors of white, blue, yellow and red. Both are appropriate for use in any room in the

The Liz Claiborne scent is so comfortable and appropriate for all occasions, that it is ideal for translation into an environmental scent.

It is extremely diffuse, meaning that it goes into the air and becomes part of the atmosphere of a room. This is in contrast to an intrusive scent that localizes in the immediate area of its placement. Here are some tips for choosing scented items:

- Choose a scent that is fresh and comfortable. Light green and floral scents translate best into fragrance for the home.
- · Make sure that scented candles are made with the scent infused into the entire candle—not just around the edges. This makes for an even distribution of scent when the candle burns.

These two tips will make choosing other items for the home easier:

- Know the color scheme of the room in which the gift will be used.

 Know the style of dishes and cuttery.
- if you're going to augment them with serving pieces.

Even the pickiest eater loves to get the food he or she loves. There are lots of fun ways to give food, such as:

• Food baskets—Caterers and gift

- services can make up beautiful baskets of any kind of food you ask for. They can adjust the gift to any budget and their presentations are spectacular. They can also arrange to have the gift shipped out of town or delivered locally, making your job much easier.
- Food subscriptions—There are many companies that will offer a subscription to a particular type of food. Once the subscription is purchased, they will automatically ship a different fruit, dessert, meat, bread, etc., to the recipient.
- Food service—A gift certificate for a chef to come to someone's home and prepare or deliver a gourmet meal is a gift everyone loves

Here are a few tips on giving food:

Find out about allergies and personal tastes before selecting a gift of food.
Do not send liquor to someone who

- does not drink, If you're not sure, don't send it.
- Do not send fattening food to someone on a diet.

Fragrance

For three years in a row, a national Christmas gift-giving survey by Liz Claiborne Cosmetics has revealed that fragrance, fashion accessories and household items are the most oft-requested gifts.

You can choose from a wide range of scented items, such as perfume, cologne, body lotion, dusting powder, soap, etc. If you follow a few guidelines, you won't miss with a gift of fragrance:

· Always ask people what kind of frawhat kind of the granter they like and give them exactly what they ask for. Fragrance is a very personal accessory that is primarily for the enjoyment of the wearer. Get them what they like, not what you like.

Introduce them to new forms of their formations of their formations.

favorite scent. If they usually wear per-fume and powder, try giving them body lotion, body grains or shampoo and con-ditioner in their favorite scent.

• If they have a favorite fashion designer, find out if that designer has a signature fragrance and what type of scent it is. For instance, Liz Claiborne has a fragrance that's a light green and floral scent. If the recipient likes Liz Claiborne clothes and that type of scent, you can't go wrong

And, here's Karen's Golden Rule of Giving Fragrance:

"Don't try to lit the recipient into a personality category a fragrance claims to embrace. Fragrance should help people express many facets of their personal-ities and suit many occasions. Select fragrance that gives the recipients the freedom to wear it wherever they

Office accessories

Whether working at home or at an office, everyone loves office accessories. For the full-time homemaker and the person without a traditional 9-to-5 job. lesk accessories make an ideal gift. Some suggestions are:

- Personalized note pads:
- Antique items such as a quill pen and
- ink well or sealing wax:
 A how-to book on how to start a business, get a raise or manage time (assuming, of course, that you know what the person wants to do).
- A few guidelines will make choosing this sort of gift simpler
- Select something that enhances the person's performance or enjoyment of something at which he or she excels.
 Don't give something aimed at improving skills, unless you've been told he or she wants to improve.
- When personalizing stationery, match the colors of the paper and ink to colors on company stationery.

Memberships, subscriptions and tickets

Try giving someone an experience instead of an item this year

- Some ideas are:

 Ballet, opera or theater tickets;

 Museum memberships;
- Magazine subscriptions
- Local theater memberships
- Membership to a professional organization (only if the person is new to the industry or if you know be or she wants
- to join);
 Tickets to a sporting event or con-

Here are some guidelines:

• If possible, give recipients the flexibility to choose the date on which they will attend a performance.

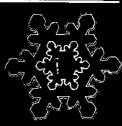

• Do not get a ticket for yourself also. Unless the gift is between husband and wife or from parent to child, let the re-cipient invite you along. Otherwise it appears to be a gift for yourself, rather than for the other person.

The gift of learning will be appreciated

Selecting an appropriate gift can be anything but merry. The barrage of advertising and the vast sea of products flooding the market can overwhelm even the most "seasoned shopper."

Take cheer! One gift that every family will cherish for generations is the gift of learning.

learning.

"A book is that rare type of gift that teaches as it entertains," said nationally-known reading expert, author and consultant Dr. Alvin Granowsky, World Book vice president, school and library

Listening to books read aloud reinforces the bond between parents and children, encourages the development of an attention span needed for learning, and fosters the active use of the imagina-

This holiday season, why not intro-duce your family to a whole new world of learning by presenting them with a library of books?

To help people select the appropriate books for their library, World Book, Inc., one of the world's leading publishers of educational reference materials, has put together these guidelines for selecting an encyclopedia and related reference

SOME REFERENCE BOOKS, such as the world's best-selling World Book Encyclopedia, can aid students with schoolwork and help adults satisfy their curiosity diverse subjects. In order to select the appropriate encyclopedia, browse and com-pare major articles in different sets at the local library and keep these questions in mind: Is the article accurate, comprehensive, authoritative, up-to-date, easy to read and easy to use?

• First, what are your family's needs? Do you have children who need help with homework and preparing reports? Or do you and your family just want to satisfy your curiosity on diverse subjects? Or both? Your encyclopedia should satisfy the needs of every family member—and the needs of every family member—and spark their interest to learn more.

· Is the encyclopedia appropriate for the age(s) of the user(s)? Is the encyclopedia written on a level that the user will understand now and that will still be useful in five to 10 years? If not, chances are your children won't use the books now, and your family will outgrow them.

Consider a school-readiness program for young children; a children's resource library as youngsters approach and enter school; and a comprehensive, easy-to-use encyclopedia that will help parents answer children's many questions (and their own) and fulfill children's reference needs as they continue through school.

• Is the encyclopedia easy to read? If the user can't understand the material, the books will quickly gather dust. For instance, research shows that young stu-dents are more likely to look up "dog," dents are more likely to look up "dog," while older users are more likely to look up "compact disc." Consequently, the articles should be written in clear, concise language that recognizes the users' different reading levels.

The best encyclopedias also feature lots of colorful "teaching visuals"—photographs, maps, charts, diagrams, illustrations—that provide additional information and interestingly reinforce key

 Is the encyclopedia accurate and upto-date? Only a few years ago, pit bulls, Lyme disease and compact discs were unfamiliar to many people. Science, technology, international politics and entertainment often change overnight.

A first-rate encyclopedia keeps pace with the emerging world, both by continuously updating the information and by publishing yearbooks that chronicle the year's significant developments and events.

• Is the encyclopedia easy to use? An ideal encyclopedia should feature extensive cross-references at the end of articles to direct the user to related articles. The index also should be clear and comprehensive. Superior sets offer study questions and subject outlines to help students learn the most from each arti-

• Is the encyclopedia comprehensive and authoritative? Check the authorship of major articles; the best encyclopedias hire thousands of recognized experts to research and write entries. Top encyclopedias also check typical school courses of study to be sure the subjects students are learning are covered.

• How do the critics rate the encyclope

• How do the critics rate the encyclopedia? Consult the experts. In his book Best Encyclopedias: A Guide to General and Specialized Encyclopedias. Kenneth F. Kister, the country's leading encyclopedia reviewer, rates the top choices. Or ask your child's teacher or school librarian for a recommendation—they've seen most of the best books and can give you most of the best books and can give you educated advice.

• Browse and compare. Never buy an encyclopedia you haven't seen yourself. Visit your local library or school and browse through major articles in different sets. Check content, graphics and ease of use. Take along your child and see which set he or she finds easiest to use and likes the most.

For more information, telephone World Book Customer Service at (312) 621-8202 or write World Book Customer Service, Merchandise Mart Plaza, Chicago, IL 60654. Look for a World Book representative in your area under "Encyclopedias" in the telephone book.

Sparkling suggestions for the holidays

CELEBRATE THE SEASON with a sparkler from Le Domaine suited to every taste. For dry tastes, choose Cuvee Brut, while semi-dry tastes will prefer Extra Dry. Better FM reception is as American as "Pi"

THE BEST-PERFORMING COMPACT FM ANTENNA on the market today may be Terk Technologies' "Pi" FM antenna (pronounced "PIE"). This unusual, disc-shaped antenna is about the size of a compact disc and rests in the horizontal position for omni-directional reception or vertically to tune in weaker-powered FM stations.

America moves and relaxes, contemplates and makes its decisions, all to the sound of FM stereo. Millions of dollars are spent on FM radios, FM stereo receivers, tuners and related hi-fi equipment. Yet the fact is most FM stereo is received over a cheap piece of wire thrown in a heap behind the stereo.

Commonly called a dipole antenna,

Commonly called a dipole antenna, this villain is probably the number one reason why many stations sound so bad or can't be picked up at all. And if you're hooked up to most cable TV systems for your FM, you should know that the FCC does nothing to regulate the quality on cable.

Enter a company called Terk Technologies of New Rochelle, New York, a manufacturer of quality FM antennas that look great and reduce FM hiss, while also increasing the number of FM stations that can be enjoyed.

stations that can be enjoyed.

Their latest FM antenna is nicknamed "Pi" and is perhaps the best effort to date in providing outstanding FM reception in a compact, high design, say experts.

This disc-shaped antenna is the same diameter as a compact disc, which allows "Pi" to fit easily into any shelving configuration. The disc-shaped portion of the antenna rests on a non-skid rubber "boot," and is available in white or gray matte finish.

Larry Schotz, noted digital FM tuner designer/inventor, is responsible for the electronics in "Pi." After all, who better to design an FM antenna than the man responsible for FM digital tuners by such companies as Nakamichi, Proton, NAD, Crown, Sherwood and Tandberg?

A new radical design, along with an exciting low-noise, state-of-the-art amplifier by Schotz, provides 30 dB gain. Use the antenna horizontally for omnidirectional reception or vertically to tune in weaker-powered FM stations.

"Pi" is easy to use. Just plug it into a stereo antenna input and a 110 volt wall outlet. "Pi" comes with its own matching transformer to accommodate hookup to any receiver. Terk has eliminated a gain control from "Pi," so you can listen instead of fiddling with controls.

"Pi" is available at audio video specialty stores at a suggested retail of $79.95.

Give the gifts of fitness and health

If you want to give a gift that will be appreciated and remembered for years to come, consider a piece of in-home exercise equipment, suggests NordicTrack, manufacturer of the nation's top cross-country ski exercise machine.

"Giving a friend or family member a piece of quality in-home exercise equipment is a way of telling the person that you really care about his or her total health," says Ed Pauls, founder and CEO of the Chaska, Minnesota-based company.

In the past, there's been a focus on exercise as a way of staying trim and looking good. But evidence is mounting that regular aerobic exercise is vital to a person's overall health.

Regular exercise can help prevent America's number one health threat—heart disease—as well as the conditions that contribute to it, such as high blood pressure and high cholesterol. Exercise can also reduce the affects of rheumatoid arthritis and osteoporosis, relieve chronic lower back pain, help people manage stress and alleviate depression.

"In-home exercise equipment has be-

"In-home exercise equipment has become popular because, with today's busy lifestyles, people often don't have time to go to a club to work out, and uncertain winter weather conditions make it difficult to count on outdoor exercise activities," says Pauls.

When you're looking for the best exercise to squeeze into your crowded days, remember that the most efficient form of exercise is cross-country skiing. Cross-country skiing uses all of the major muscles of the body—including those in the arms, shoulders, abdomen, hips, buttocks and legs.

In research at the Human Performance Laboratory, Oregon Health Sciences University, test participants burned 1,100 calories per hour using Nordic-Track, the original cross-country ski exercise machine. However, people can tone their entire body, achieve cardiovas-cular fitness and help maintain their weight, using NordicTrack as little as 20 minutes per day, three times a week.

That's especially helpful during the holiday season, when schedules are even tighter than usual, and it's easy to over-indulge on rich foods.

Four models to meet your needs

NordicTrack offers four models to fit the needs and budgets of Christmas shoppers: The Elite, the newest luxury model, ideal for someone who likes that extra touch of class; the Achiever, which allows you to calculate the number of calories burned during any given workout; the tough, all-purpose Pro; and the economical 505. NordicTrack offers a two-year warranty and a 30-day return privilege.

NordicTrack, a CML company, sells its machines throughout the country and the world.
