Congress seeks to limit advertising on children's programs

Congress is talking again about regulating children's advertising on television.

To limit children's exposure to ads that might mislead or confuse them, the Children's Television Act of 1989 (now on its way out of committee) would limit the number of minutes of advertising to 12 an hour on weekdays and 10.5 an hour on weekends. The limits, which could still change as the bill works its way along, would apply only to children's program-

That's the rub, as far as Michael Bernacchi is concerned. The real problem with children and television isn't even children's programming, says Bernacchi, a professor of marketing at the University of Detroit. The problem is ads aimed at adults, but aired when kids can see them.

"My major concern - without being puritanical — is that there are a lot of ads for products that wouldn't have been acceptable in another age," he said. "It fosters the disease of 'adultism,' a desire to act like an adult.'

What Bernacchi is talking about is beer ads, perfume ads, clothing ads that project inappropriate adult values. For that matter, some people question the appropriateness for adults.

"The kid sits there wistfully and hopes for progress toward that (adult) goal," Bernacchi said.

In a study he did about 18 months ago, Bernacchi found that most of the young high school students interviewed wished that they could act like kids, but that pressure from their friends wouldn't allow it.

Short of an unlikely revolution in the advertising industry, however, the only solution to the problem he sees is not to watch television.

The National Parent-Teacher Association has been active in lobbying for the latest attempt to regulate children's advertising. But the current legislative result doesn't represent the group's ideals, either.

"Our ideal would be no commercials aimed at kids who are too young to differ-

Proposed overhaul of gifted program meets resistance

By Ronald J. Bernas Staff Writer

A proposal by Superintendent John Whritner to put PACE _ the Program for Academic and Creative Education - on a oneyear hiatus met with concern and disapproval from parents and board members.

Part of the $250,000 that is normally budgeted for PACE would be used to fund a study to create a "coordinated, articulated, continuous grade-to-grade program in education" in all grades, K-12.

A full-time coordinator would be hired to oversee the study, conduct surveys and bring in nationally recognized consultants and to present staff development

The five PACE teachers would be absorbed by the system in positions for which they are quali-

In the memo to the board, Whritner wrote: "I recognize that we seldom 'stop' a program in order to improve/modify or renew. Because we can't or won't stop a program, change is that much more difficult. In this case the risk seems small ... and the impact on students is relatively minor."

Currently only 6 percent of a PACE student's time is spent in gifted instruction, time that would be offset by re-entering the regular instructional time.

The hiatus would be needed, Whritner said, "because it's easier to change a train that's stopped, than it is to change a moving one.'

Whritner's proposal was prompted by three reports recently presented to the Curriculum Coordinating Council which were conducted separately and came to the same conclusion: The system needs a coordinated K-12 gifted program which it does not have.

Whritner said the studies confirmed some of his own thoughts on the system-wide program for gifted students. He also feels that if left alone, the current program would die in a few years.

In the site budgeting process, which is being done system-wide, many schools have placed a low priority on gifted and talented programming, Whritner said, and if this trend continues, the program would be whittled away and eventually eliminated.

Currently PACE - offered only in grades 2 through 5 serves 377 of the nearly 3,300 students enrolled in elementary school in the Pointes.

The Grosse Pointe Farms City Council granted permission Monday night to the War Memorial Association and Grosse Pointe Cable to build new cable studios at the War Memorial.

The council unanimously approved a site plan for a 2,800 square foot addition to the War

Memorial's art wing addition. It will house cable studios for filming interviews with local officials and editing community-oriented programming.

"The idea represents three areas of concern," Weber said. In his request to the council, "First, there will be no cable installed since Grosse Pointe Cable will be leasing its signal from St. Clair Shores Comcast. Second, the company is that in a normal day about 12 to 14 people would come and go from the studio.

Schultz added that since the cable studio hours of operation would be from 8 a.m. until 5 p.m., there would be no late night noise to bother neighbors.

Weber added that an addition to the art wing would solve one traffic safety problem since drivers would be discouraged from pulling up to the front door. A studio addition would block the northern side of the circle drive.

War Memorial continues restoration of 80-year-old Alger House

As part of an ongoing effort to restore the War Memorial's Alger House, workers are busy replacing plaster, polishing silver fixtures and putting finishing touches on the house which has long been the heart of community activities in the Grosse

The restoration is being performed as part of a capital campaign to restore the 80-year-old Russell Alger House, which for more the 40 years has served as the center for honoring those who served in our nation's wars and as the hub of community enrichment.

Given as a gift to the community in 1949 by the family of Russell A. Alger Jr., the house was deeded "entirely forever" to the War Memorial for its original purpose, a central library to serve the Grosse Pointes.

Rejected by the Grosse Pointe school board as a library site, advocates quickly changed their mission from a potential library to a community center honoring those who served and those who died fighting in America's wars.

Mark Weber, War Memorial president, said the capital campaign was initiated during the early 1980s to raise funds to restore the Alger House.

"About 200,000 people every year come here to learn about music, dance, theater, art and education," Weber said. "They also come to attend service club meetings or to attend another community activity. No house can take that kind of wear and tear without some kind of renovation.'

While the center has expanded over the years, there has never been a major renovation effort until the capital campaign began. A recent study detailed the need for significant renovation. A goal of $1,850,000 was recommended and endorsed by the War Memorial Board and a vigorous funding campaign began. Janet Hooper, director of development at the War Memorial, said because of construction costs, the campaign goal was raised to $2.6 million. The goal included nearly $1 million in renovation costs and another $1.6 million in new equipment and community program endowments.

Hooper said the campaign, which included several grants from enrichment foundations and individual donations, raised $2.8 million — topping the original goal by about $200,000.

Weber said the actual renovation effort includes an ongoing effort to restore many of the rooms in Alger House to their original condition and to update others for use as offices and activity centers.

In 1983, the kitchen was renovated. Weber said the original kitchen had wooden floors and countertops. Because the kitchen is the primary food source for the center, it was updated with ceramic tile floors and stainless steel countertops and sinks to meet recent health department codes.

The center's president stressed the fact that before much of the restoration was undertaken, much of the Alger House's plumbing, electrical and sewage lines were replaced.

"We had to update because it is a public building," Weber said. "It gets lots of use. We had to start with solving the water leaks, fixing the roof and tuckpointing the exterior. We had to make the building structurally sound before the renovating and decorating could begin.'

While cleaning the attic in recent years, Weber and staff members accidentally found a painting titled "Entrance Hall." The painting revealed a detailed design which boasted colorful fish, birds and flora, but which bore no resemblance to the Alger House entrance hall.

A closer look at the entrance hall ceiling revealed the same textural design under numerous coats of paint applied over the years. "You couldn't even tell it was a detail of the same thing," Weber said. "The ceiling looked almost flat and was painted white.

It didn't take the War Memorial board long to approve a restoration of the entrance hall ceiling, which now resembles a colorful museum piece of art, he added.,

The entrance hall was not the only hidden gem in Alger House. While cleaning several black light fixtures, the staff found the ornate lamps were made of sterling silver. After years of tarnish had been removed, numerous Victorian silver light fixtures were discovered in other parts of the house.

The discoveries continued when several wooden book were cleaning the large silver chandelier in the dining room they used the "stand and spin" method. As Hooper explained, a staff member would pull a ladder up to the chandelier and begin cleaning. When a portion was cleaned, the worker would spin the chandelier to the next section, and so on. The fixture was spun so many times over the years that one day it came crashing down and shattered into several pieces. It has since been restored to its original condition. Weber said a safety chain was added to avoid a similar mishap in the future.

Another restoration project was recently completed in the carriage house located near Alger House.

For many years the carriage house was used for storage of theater props by the Grosse Pointe Theater and Grosse Pointe Children's Theatre. A recent renovation of both the interior and exterior of the carriage house was carried out at a cost of nearly $120,000. Hooper said the building is now being used as an office and meeting room for the Junior League of Detroit.

A recent renovation of the adjacent Fries Auditorium and Ballroom was completed for more than $220,000.

Hooper said the entire renovation project to date has cost the War Memorial about $925,000.

"The renovations will continue into the future," Hooper said. "It's an old house and there is a lot to do."

Woods official visits USSR to exchange information, goodwill

Staff Writer When Woods City Administrator Chester Petersen and his wife Roberta visited the Soviet Union recently for the third time on an information exchange program, they said a little prayer before they left.

Both devout Christians, the Petersens said the most noticeable difference between this and other visits was the reopening of churches across the Soviet

While religion played a role, the purpose of the trip was to share information with Soviet municipal administrators.

Under the auspices of the Citizen Ambassador Program established by then-President Dwight D. Eisenhower, the trip joined several city administrators from both nations with an emphasis on goodwill and open exchange of information.

The Citizen Ambassador Program is designed to promote friendly relations among all countries through the medium of scientific, technical and professional exchange. Face-to-face communication allows colleagues from different countries to discuss common problems, compare recent findings and evaluate problems and solutions for further study.

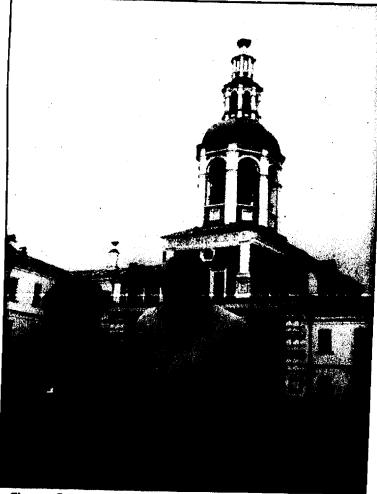

But most of all, Petersen said, the program enables professionals to bridge political and cultural differences and gain an understanding of each other's perspectives.

The American visit consisted of public works resource specialists who assessed the massive

While in Moscow, the Petersens stayed in what was termed a luxury hotel built for the 1981 Olympic Games.

"It looked good from the outside," he said. "But when you got inside you could see that the construction techniques were lagging.'

Once in the room, the Petersens noticed that bathroom fixtures were not attached properly and the bathtub was unattached to the floor and walls.

On a more positive note, they noticed the transportation system in the nation's largest city was modern.

"The transportation can't be beat," he said. "For about a nickel you can go anywhere in the city.'

Oddly enough, a bus driver in the Soviet Union gets paid about $700 per month, the same as a top medical surgeon with 20 years experience. Petersen added that bus drivers make more than the manager of the entire transportation operation.

"We found that the transportation and public works officials were very open," Petersen said. "They wanted to find out how to do a better job."

Besides meeting with their Soviet counterparts, the Americans traveled within 100 miles of Chernobyl, the site of the nuclear power plant meltdown in

Also on the agenda was a visit to KGB headquarters, which Petersen said would not have been possible a few years ago, and visit to Minsk, Detroit's sister city. Visits to the cities of Tbilisi and Odessa were cancelled because of demonstrations for freedom by Soviet citizens,

On the trip, Mrs. Petersen was approached by a group of children. She gave a young girl a stick of gum.

"She began crying," Mrs. Petersen said. "I asked the interpreter why she was crying and he said the girl never saw an American before. The girl felt unworthy of the gum because she didn't have a gift for us."

Among the most noticeable aspects of the visit for the Petersens was the housing.

The largest unit available for six people is about 600 square feet, about the size of a one-bed-room apartment," he said. "Though the price is based on affordability - about $20 per month - many families are placed on a waiting list and must wait years before they are placed into an apartment. Redistricting to cost state and Midwest political clout ew Census Bureau estimates for the nation's population as of July 1, 1989, make it abundantly clear that Michigan will lose two congressional seats in the reapportionment that will follow the 1990 U.S. Census.

Even worse, from the Midwest's point of view, the estimates indicate that as many as 18 House seats could shift from the Snow Belt to the Sun Belt in the reapportionment after the 1990 national head count.

That would mean loss of political clout and influence by the North Central states and the Northeast to the faster growing states in the South and Southwest. Besides Michigan, states losing seats are expected to be Iowa, Kansas, Ohio, Illinois, Montana, New York, Pennsylvania, Massachusetts and West Virginia.

Those gaining population and congressional power in the reapportionment after the 1990 census are expected to be Florida. California, Texas, Arizona, New Hampshire and Nevada with the latter state setting the record for the biggest growth, up 39 percent.

The Census Bureau indicates that Michigan was one of the slowest growing states in the entire country during the 1980s. Early in the decade, Michigan's population at first declined in the face of a recession that was severe enough to be described locally as a depression, and then came back to gain population that gave the state an increase of only one-tenth of one percent up to July 1, 1989.

However, two of the 50 states, Iowa and West Virginia, showed actual losses during the '80s. Iowa dropped 2.6 percent or about 74,000 people while West Virginia's population went down 5 percent, an estimated loss of 93,000 residents.

Since Detroit actually lost population during the 1980s, the city's congressional seats are expected to be affected. That raises the possibility that either the 13th District or the 14th District, the two districts in which the Pointes are located, could be wiped out and the borders of the surviving district could be rearranged.

In that connection, we once more recommend that Pointers seek to convince the state's politicians to put the five Pointes back together in one district as they were prior to the reapportionment following the 1980 census.

Interested Pointers should center their attention on the Legislature which will have the responsibility of making the new congressional reapportionment. If the Legislature remains divided as a result of the 1990 election, with the House in Democratic hands and the Senate under Republican control, the governor would have the power of veto over a reapportionment plan he did not like.

Democratic Gov. James Blanchard will be seeking re-election this year, but already faces a serious challenge from GOP Senate Majority Leader John Engler. It is clear that the battle for the governorship as well as the contests for control of the two houses of the Legislature will take on more than usual significance this year.

At stake will be the shape of the state's congressional districts for the next 10 years. The way the districts are reapportioned will play an important part in determining whether the Democrats or Republicans control the state's congressional districts during the decade.

In this community, the question will be whether the Republican Pointes will be combined into one district in which they will have the opportunity to exert more political leverage than they have been able to wield in the last decade.

In short, the 1990s at the very start will set the tone for a highly political decade in Michigan.

Secrecy vs. glasnost in U.S.

here appears to be competition between secrecy and glasnost in President Bush's approach to the news of his office.

On the one hand, reporters claim that the president keeps such a tight control over his staff it is increasingly difficult to learn what is going on, let alone to discover leaks about what is being planned for the future.

At the same time, however, the president himself held 32 press conferences in his first year, 27 more than President Reagan did in his first year and five more than Reagan held in his first four-year

Bush, of course, is no match for President Franklin D. Roosevelt, the U.S. champion, who held 337 news conferences in his first term, 374 in his second and 279 in his third.

The current president, however, wants most of the news to emanate from the White House, apparently on the theory that no news is good news until he is ready to release it.

True, the totality of news coverage of the U.S. administration is still far greater than it is of governments in the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe, even under Gorbachev's celebrated glasnost or openness policies.

But the revelations about government corruption and even criminality in Eastern Europe's Communist regimes offer evidence of what happens when the public is not informed and there is no spotlight on government activities.

From a short-term political viewpoint, Bush's attitudes may make sense, but they hardly square with the responsibility of the president, and other officials in policymaking positions, to keep the public informed about what is going on.

Unless the public has access to the information on which policies are based, it has difficulty in understanding the issues and, more important, in making accurate assessments of the public records of presidents and administrations at election time.

So while we applaud the frequency of presidential press conferences in Bush's first year in office, we doubt that he is as forthcoming on major issues as a responsible president ought to be.

True, his popularity remains high but the question is whether that approval rating will be sustained when he has to seek public support for policies about which the public has not been well informed.

Imports come home to roost

f you need any further proof of the decline in American manufacturing, all you have to do is examine the national origins of the gifts Santa left under your 1989 Christmas tree.

If your experience was similar to that of another Grosse Pointe family, you would find that the vast majority of the gifts were imports. And this year, as in other recent years in which we have examined the origins of this family's gifts, the majority came from the Far East.

From Hong Kong, for example, came a woman's cashmere sweater, a man's Peruvian alpaca sweater (knitted in Hong Kong) and a man's cotton shirt. Korea supplied a woman's vest of mohair and acrylic and a brass picture frame. China was the source of a man's cotton and polyester shirt.

From China as well came a miniature rubber caricature of President Reagan made by Spitting Image Productions, Ltd., apparently as part of the promotion for the British TV company by the same name.

From India came an example of its handicraft, a set of "camel" bells of Sarna, while Thailand supplied a rawhide dog chew.

Western Europe, which supplied many more Christmas gifts to American homes in earlier post-war years, did still provide some in 1989. A magnifying glass was imported from England and a man's lambswool scarf, a girl's silk scarf and a bottle of Sartori's dry white wine all came from Italy.

Some gifts combined imported material and U.S. production genius. Thus a pair of slacks and two ties that bore the "Made in the USA" label were advertised as using imported fabrics.

And probably the most highly prized gift, one that combined European creativity and American salesmanship, was "Paintings in the Musee D'Orsay." The book contains 827 reproductions of paintings and 22 large details from the French repository of 19th century art. It is truly international in scope, representing a Parisian collection, printed in Italy, published in New York and distributed by the Bookof-the-Month Club.

Oh, yes, some gifts were made in the United States. They included a box of Spalding golf balls made in Chicopee, Mass., a woman's jewel case made somewhere in this country and an electric wok made in West Bend, Wis.

All of the half dozen or so books were made in the United States and one, an illustrated history of Michigan, was written by Michiganians but printed in California with the cooperation of the Historical Society of Michigan.

The experts tell us we've become a society in which most new jobs come from the service industries with a smaller number now provided by the auto industry and other manufacturing plants. Those trends have cost Michigan heavily in two ways: in total number of jobs and in average pay, which tends to be lower in service industries than in manufacturing.

True, one of the offsets is that the consumer has a wider choice of Christmas items than in the days he had to rely chiefly on American and European products. The prices no doubt are also lower for some imported products than they would have been if made in this country.

But sometimes we wonder where this will all end for this country. Despite our past achievements and inventiveness, our nation cannot keep pace unless we can compete in today's world. The question is whether in the long run we can afford even our present standard of living unless we tighten our own belts and improve our own national productivity.

To the Editor:

Leon Sehoyan is very correct regarding the recent article on parking.

Many mornings at 9 a.m., I have encountered parking problems.

Hopefully a solution will take place soon!

Joan V. Towar Grosse Pointe Farms

Hill parking To the Editor:

I hope Mr. Leon Sehoyan and other similiarly motivated members of the Hill Merchants Association are effective in their plight to improve parking conditions on the Hill.

I experienced first-hand some of the frustrations described by Mr. Sehoyan in your Dec. 21 issue. On a cold November Saturday evening at approximatly 6 p.m., I attempted to park in front of the electronics store. A car in front of me took the parking spot. No others were available in the immediate vicinity, so I parked farther south on Kercheval and walked back to the store only to find that the young man who beat me to the premier parking spot was an employee. Needless to say, I was furious.

My experience raises additional questions. Why were all the parking spots on both the east and west side of Kercheval taken on a Saturday evening at 6 p.m. with the exception of a few located farther south near an ice cream parlor? How many merchants on the Hill have hours that extend beyond 5 p.m.? I suspect valet service at ONE23 is contributing to our parking problems as well. And we need an effective method to monitor their actions.

I would like to see improvements made to Hill parking conditions. Until this can be accomplished, I will continue to make my purchases elsewhere.

Justice

To the Editor:

We are all inundated with appeals for help by countless worthy causes. But this particular appeal merits your attention and, hopefully, your generous responses in a speical way. Let me explain.

A rising tide of racism is widening gaps among people in this country, even in this community. We have only to watch the evening news, listen to talk shows, or pay attention to the lyrics of the latest rock music to realize how serious this problem is. Although we never succeeded in eliminating racism, for a time it seemed we had made some progress. Now that progress is threat-

For 20 years, the Racial Justice Center of Grosse Pointe has worked for racial justice and harmony in this community. It has been a long, and often lonely, struggle at times, but the Center, has endured. That is why this 20th year is so special.

To ensure that the Center is able to continue to bring educational programs into the classroom, sponsor the Martin Luther King Essay Contest, work with law enforcement officials to solve racial problems, and serve as advocates for racial justice, I urge you to support its work as generously as you can. If you have never contributed, please consider joining now. If you are presently a member, please consider giving the Center a special birthday gift by increasing your contribution by 20 percent.

Let's all join together in making Grosse Pointe a community where equal rights and equal justice are not just dreams but reality. With your help, we can make that happen!

The best of times

When I was young and all my knowledge came from books, I longed to live in other places, in other times.

The roaring '20s held a special fascination for me with its speakeasies, gangsters and flappers. The idea of living life on the fringe was like forbidden fruit - tempting and wondrous.

I thought it would be romantic to be an expatriate, writing great literature, and on Sundays, discussing it with other writers in a Parisian walk-up. Or to walk among the impressionists and post-impressionists who drank absinthe in little sidewalk cafes at night.

But with the passage of time, I well as the worst of times. And there is no other time or place I would rather be than here and

As a child, I sat with members of my family in the living room, listening to the radio. A few blinks of an eye later, I was watching the live, televised account of a man walking on the moon. It's old news, certainly, but the very idea of a human being rocketing off to the moon and kicking up some moon dust is still beyond my ken.

And more than 25 years later, many of us have vivid memories of the day a president was assassinated. Then we saw - on TV the moment it happened - his accused killer murdered in a police station. It was too much to

One raucous intrusion in the lethargic '50s was Elvis whose shaking shook up a lot of adults. This was a time when segregation was part of every aspect of our society, and black music, like rhythm and blues, was not played on white radio stations. The idea that a white man would deliberately sing like a black man was abhorrent to some people.

Today just the names of some groups - never mind the lyrics to their songs - are chosen for their shock value. There have been a lot of changes in our society in this regard. It hasn't been that long ago that Clark Gable shocked audiences with a single

My gender has made a quantum leap from the days of choosing to be a nurse, teacher or secretary, and ultimately, a wife and mother. The choices were few and life was simple.

Those days are gone - praise the Lord and pass your business card. Life is not so simple anymore, but it sure is exciting and good when the heartburn has subsided.

In the medical world, a vaccine was discovered for the dreaded polio and a living, pulsating human heart was transferred from one person to another.

In the truth-is-stranger-thanfiction category, a president told a nation he was not a crook and then resigned, a movie actor was elected president and the first non-Italian - a man from Poland - became a pope.

Some TV preachers got caught literally with their pants down and an astounding cache of shoes was discovered in the palatial private quarters of a dictator our government supported, while the people there lived in misery and sometimes died under inhumane conditions.

Could a writer of fiction come up with anything better?

And consider this: In 1959 Alaska and Hawaii joined up with the U.S. of A., making the number of states united a nice, even 50.

So many wonderful and dismal things have happened in a relatively short span of time that it's hard to think of any other period of history with a tapestry so intricate. Technology is changing so fast that the moment something new is produced for the mass market, it's already outdated.

Three years ago my husband and I visited Poland and Czechoslovakia, the land of our grandparents and their parents, and we traveled through East Berlin and Hungary. It was a trip far more emotional than I could have imagined and it changed forever the way I think about things like freedom of speech and religion.

As a result, my interest in the region intensified and when the people there began taking charge of their destiny, I was there in spirit - thrilled and proud and afraid for them.

These past decades have been most incredible. I can't wait to see what's next.

Pig news

The United States Department of Agriculture and the Michigan Department of Agriculture are right on top of things, as usual. Editor Pat Paholsky gets all the agricultural scoops firsthand, via U.S. mail, addressed to the Farm Editor in Grosse Pointe Farms.

For those Grosse Pointe Farms residents who need to know, the state statistician says that hog numbers are up slightly. The hog and pig inventory on Michigan farms showed a marginal increase over a year ago and is estimated at 1.26 million head. The breeding hog inventory of 175,000 head was up 5,000 from Dec. 1, 1988. The average litter rate of 7.8 pigs per sow was lanchanged from last December.

That means, I guess, that more pigs are having babies, but they're having about the same number of babies that they've always had.

File that for future reference.

Season's greetings

Grosse Pointe City so Mayor Lorenzo D. Browning, a.k.a. 'Red' Browning, hasn't let his re-election as mayor, his victory over challenger Myrna Smith last November, influence his Christmas card list.

Or has he? Smith received a photo of the mayor wearing a sweatshirt with the message "Good Old Boy" lettered on his chest. "Season's Greetings," it said, "Red." Smith, if you remember, was involved in a major mishmash with the mayor last spring concerning the date of the City's 100th anniversary. Smith contended that the cen-

Smith said that the mayor didn't want her to give a party because it might get her some good publicity - and some votes. The mayor said phooey.

Nancy Parmenter

The council researched the date of the founding of Grosse Pointe City, which is muddled because the present boundaries were established in one year, whereas the whole thing was established in another year. City attorney Richard Hinks examined the issue, and the council decided that 1993 was it.

Smith gave the party anyway. She accused the mayor of being part of the good old boys network, dead set against letting a pushy woman — a relative newcomer to the city council at that - get ahead.

Auto design contest open to students

The annual Detroit Autorama ity, students gain insights into Student Design Competition allows students from all over the metro Detroit area to match their automotive design skills with other students, and offers them a chance to win a $1,000 industrial design scholarship to Detroit's Center for Creative Studies.

In addition, $500 cash will be awarded to the overall winner: $100 cash will be awarded to one winner from the grad 10-12 division; and $50 cash will be awarded to one winner from the grade 7-9 division.

"We chose to restore the seats rather than replace them," Principal C. Suzanne Klein said. The upholstry and the placement of the original seating made the most of the auditorium's acoustics.'

New wall and ceiling tiles and new interior stage curtains have improved acoustics as well. New carpeting, an outer stage curtain, new sound and lighting systems will be requested in the school's budget over the next several years.

To commemorate Pierce Auditorium's first 50 years of service to the community, and to preserve the auditorium for future Grosse Pointers, a Pierce Auditorium Restoration Committee has been formed. The committee's purpose is to raise money to augment funds allocated by the school system to restore the auditorium.

"The school system is taking the responsibility for basic maintenance and renovation," said Mark Fruehan, committee cochairman. "The Pierce Auditorium Restoration Committee is concentrating on embellishments. We want to add some artwork, banners, a new podium, upgrade the lighting and sound systems and help to purchase a striking outer curtain for the stage.

Those who wish to contribute to the restoration of the auditorium should call 343-2094.

Galvin honored

On Dec. 13, the Wayne County Intermediate School District Board of Education recognized Jennifer Galvin, a Grosse Pointe North High School senior who is one of two Michigan delegates to the 1990 United States Senate Youth Program in Washington, D.C.

Galvin is a resident of Grosse Pointe Shores. Vice president of her class, she has provided leadership in programs which promote awareness of substance abuse in high schools.

She helped start Myself and Students Against Drugs and Alcohol (MASADA), the first substance awareness group of its kind in the metropolitan area, where members declare themselves chemically free.

In addition, she has been involved in her community through the Village of Grosse Pointe Shores Foundation and St. Paul's Catholic Church. She has received numerous academic, leadership and athletic awards.

Service to the community is important to Galvin who has involved her entire family in the Special Needs Swim Program on Saturdays. Her future plans include obtaining a degree in medicine. She is the daughter of attorney Patricia Galvin.

Service academy nominations announced

Three Grosse Pointers are among the 43 young men and woman from Michigan who were nominated by U.S. Sen. Donald W. Riegle Jr. to the nation's armed service academies: the Military Academy (West Point), the Naval Academy, (Annapolis), the Air Force Academy and the Merchant Marine Academy.

Michael J. Spanich of Grosse Pointe Park was nominated for the Air Force Academy; Elizabeth Cleary Johnston of Grosse Pointe was nominated for Annapolis and Matthew Robert Snyder of Grosse Pointe was nominated for the Merchant Ma-

Admission to U.S. service academies is based on scholastic examination scores, physical aptitude scores, high school class standing, leadership potential, medical examinations, and is determined on an individual basis through evaluation of the whole person. The total cost of educating each cadet for four years is approximately $100,000.

This year, Grosse Pointe is paired with St. Cloud, a suburb on the western edge of Paris. Local students have been assigned French friends, and correspondence has begun between the American families and their French counterparts. The French children will be arriving in Grosse Pointe in early March for a three-week visit, and the American children will travel to France for three weeks in late April.

The Grosse Pointe French-American Back-to-Back Cultural Exchange Program is funded through tuition paid by participants. In addition, money-raising events are planned during the year to cover the cost of field trips by the French students during their visit, and to support a scholarship fund established to make the program available to all interested Grosse Pointe fifthgraders in future years.

Symphony to present

'La Traviata'

The Lake St. Clair Symphony Orchestra and guest artists from the Michigan Opera Theatre will present a full-length concert version of Guiseppe Verdi's immortal opera "La Traviata."

The performance will be presented at the Schaublin Auditorium, Lakeview High School, St. Clair Shores, Saturday, Jan. 27, at 8 p.m.

The trials and tribulation of the Violetta and Alfredo the opera's leading characters, have thrilled and touched opera buffs for generations. In this fulllength concert version, the complete libretto (musical book) will be performed without theatrical props.

The Lake St. Clair Symphony, under music director James Hohmeyer, is celebrating its 29th year of bringing live classical music to the area. The Michigan Opera Theatre is rated as one of the top five regional companies in the country.

Arizona on film

The first Grosse Pointe Adventure Series film presentation of 1990 is Monday, Jan. 15, at the War Memorial.

Filmmaker Curt Matson will be on hand to narrate his colorful travel adventure, "Arizona Suite," at 8 p.m. in the Fries Auditorium.

Matson, who has more than 25 years' experience as an actor, director, narrator and filmmaker, has captured the full story of the Arizona phenomenon on film; from the antiquity of the Indian civilizations and Spanish heritage to Arizona today with its booming metropolitan areas.

Film tickets are $4.25 per person. An optional dinner will precede the film at 6:30 p.m. Served in the Fries Ballroom, the dinner features a menu of breast of turkey with chocolate orange sauce, zucchini with corn and peppers, Christmas vegetable and fruit salad, cilantro dressing and Tucson bread pudding.

Tickets for the complete evening, dinner, service and film are $17.75. Dinner only is $13.50. Dinner reservations are due by Friday, Jan. 12. For additional information, call 881-7511.

Tour Portugal

An early spring awaits travelers participating in the War Memorial's March 10-17 trip to Portugal. Those interested should plan on attending a travel information program at the Center Tuesday, Jan. 16, at 7 p.m.

The trip features a five-day stay in Lisbon, providing ample time to tour the city's many historic and architecturally significant sites, as well as an opportunity to visit such famed areas as Estoril, Sintra, Alcobaca and Fatima.

Trip cost is $999 per person double occupancy; $150 single supplement. A $300 deposit per person is due at time of reservation.

In addition to five nights at the Hotel Lisbon Plaza, the tour includes one night in Brussels, roundtrip air from Detroit, buffet breakfast daily and half-day sightseeing tour of Lisbon. A variety of optional half-day and full-day excursions available.

Recently, Johnson came to the aid of an older woman who had fallen outside her home on Cambridge and broken her hip. She crawled to the side door of the house but couldn't get in. When Johnson appeared, the woman yelled, "Bob, is that you?" and he was able to get her medical assistance.

Last Thursday, his postal customers honored him with a party at the home of Lisa Gandelot on Muskoka. The neighbors even passed the hat around and collected a sizable sum to help Johnson launch his retirement.

He said he plans on doing some traveling and visiting his six daughters and dozen grandchildren. He said he may purchase a motor home to head south during the winter months.

A rather shy and modest man, Johnson seemed embarrassed by the attention lavished by the many people he served over the years. While he probably felt he knew each of them well, at least through knowledge of the mail he delivers, he still referred to them as "Mr. and Mrs.'

He assured the residents that he will be replaced by an experienced person. The Farms route is highly desired, and those with the most seniority get first crack at bidding for the route.

recycling markets and community education.

Amy Houghtalin will report on commercial and institutional recycling and on economic analyses of recycling programs.

Leah Vartanian will talk about the latest findings in plastics recycling and about Earth Day 1990 (April 22).

President Frances Schonenberg will give the latest information on battery recycling and on the role of the Federal Environmental Protection Agency in community recycling.

For more information, call 882-6439.

The efforts of this all-volunteer group have resulted in the participation of thousands of residents of the Grosse Pointes, Harper Woods and others in its once-amonth recycling days which the group organized from May to December 1989.

The recycling group is now directing its efforts at encouraging local city governments to provide interim recycling sites until curbside recycling can be established.

Thus far the group's petition drive, together with talks between the group and the municipalities, has resulted in steppedup efforts by the cities to encourage recycling.

In December, Grosse Pointe Park announced it would provide a recycling site at Jefferson and Barrington for residents.

Young inventors

Christmas play

For the first time in the history of the Gabriel Richard Council, the east area Knights of Columbus District spelling bee champs and runners up came from the same school -St. Clare of Montefalco. In the junior high division, Mike Franzinger, an eighth grader, was the champion, and Marisa Louie, a seventh grader, was the runner-up. In the fifthsixth division Rose Quijano took the championship while Patricia Casaceli was runner-up. Both are sixth graders. At the regional meet, Franzinger earned the runner-up spot for the archdiocese and Rose Quijano placed sixth. Franzinger will be competing in the state competition later this month. The students are, shown here, back row Mike Franzinger and Marisa Louie, and front row, Patricia Casaceli and Rose Quijano.

To finish off the Christmas season and the end of the year, these photos show what the schools did during the holidays.

Giving Tree bears fruit

Caring

The sophomore class at University Liggett School helped make the holidays a little nicer this year for those less fortunate. The class collected $325 to buy disposable diapers for indigent mothers. Students throughout the school also collected $2,000 worth of children's clothes. The items were donated to COTS, the Coalition On Temporary Shelter. Taking a break from loading the items for the trip to COTS are, from left, Reginald Burks of Detroit, Peter Harik of Grosse Pointe, P-R Stark of Detroit and Arthur Sandel of Mount Clemens. Teacher Sue Frederick served as the sophomores' adviser on the project.

entiate between programs and commercials," said Washington representative Arnold Fege. "But we had to compromise."

The major bugaboo as far as the PTA is concerned is the program-length commercial. The vehicle, which isn't as popular now as it was a couple of years ago, features products like GI Joe or the Cabbage Patch Kids in a plotted story. The PTA and other child advocates charge that the shows are nothing but advertising thinly disguised as a story.

"Those ratings have gone down, but they're still a possibility and it'll be just a matter of time before they come back,' Fege said. "The Children's Television Act of 1979 never would have permitted them.'

That act expired in the Reagan era of federal deregulation. When attempts were made to beef up the regulations in 1988, Reagan pocket-vetoed them, Fege said.

The PTA is not trying to regulate content of ads, although Fege said some of them are unfair. "We must balance the responsibility of the product marketers and be careful about treading on free speech," he said. "We are not a hysterical organiza-

The battle for children's advertising is really for the $2 billion in discretionary spending in the kids' market - and that doesn't include the "psychological yearnings fostered by television" that lead kids to pester their parents for products, Fege said. It just counts allowances and earnings spendable by children and adolescents.

Not that the market is entirely without rules.

"I would think the networks are stricter than the government," said Bill Ludwig, a creative director for Lintas:Campbell-Ewald. Ludwig usually handles the firm's Chevy account, but did a campaign for Lionel recently.

"It was an education," he said.

The Better Business Bureau has issued a set of guidelines for children's advertising. According to Ludwig, most ad campaigns are submitted to the Children's Advertising Review Unit. Additionally, a "significant portion" of ads are sent back by the networks for changes before they can be aired.

What the networks and BBB are looking for are misleading ads.

As a result of former abuses of deregulation, advertisers are now asked to state clearly if batteries or assembly is required. They are asked to show toys without any animation at some point during the ad so that children can understand that the toys don't move. A child's hand should be shown with the toy for a size comparison.

All of this still doesn't help the segment of children who for reasons that aren't understood, have more trouble than most in separating ad fact from fantasy. But for the rest, limiting their exposure to ads may be the best child advocates can hope

"We want to give manufacturers a chance to sell their stuff," Fege said. "We just don't want them to sell it all program

Bernacchi thinks kids are fairly sophisticated about ads, in that they remember ads and brands. But they have trouble evaluating claims.

"Even kindergartners have a sense of what advertising is," he said, "although they still feel that advertising enhances the value of a product."

One of Bernacchi's favorite demonstrations is the blind taste test. He takes generic and brand name versions of crisped rice cereal to school and invites opinions.

"In the blind taste test, the results were even-steven," he said. "But when they are asked, they pick the brand name overwhelmingly.'

Fege would agree. "Kids know more beer brands than presidents of the United States.'

Bernacchi still worries more about adult ads than kids'. Children can be taught to be more discriminating about claims, he says, but it's hard to resist the subtle influences of the adult ads.

The PTA believes too that children can be educated on the subject. Tari Marshall of the Chicago headquarters said the group publishes a brochure telling what parents can do.

"Parents can point out that commercials are separate from programs," she said. "They can teach their children that commercials are to sell products.

They can take them to the store to look at products and ask them if they look as fast and flashy and exciting as they do on television.'

Free copies of the brochure, "Children and Television: What Parents Can Do," are available by sending a long, addressed and stamped envelope to:

Children and TV brochure, National PTA, 700 N. Rush St., Chicago Ill. 60611. Groups wanting large numbers of the brochure may send $4 per 100 to the same address.

who has three children of his own. "Any long-term disease will interfere with the important tasks of childhood.'

Children's jobs are to grow, learn, go to school, become part of their society. A disease such as rheumatoid arthritis interferes with the business of being a kid, and Jarvis is one of a few pediatrician researchers searching for the cause of the disease.

"We have no idea what causes rheumatoid arthritis," he said. "We're in the 19th century as far as knowledge of rheumatoid arthritis.

For example, he said, we don't know what causes the disease,

Jarvis especially likes the location of Grosse Pointe Park because it provides a short ride to downtown. He said that he has never been a commuter, so he didn't look forward to wasting time in rush-hour traffic.

Besides talking about his family and work, Jarvis can talk baseball with the most avid fans. As a native New Englander, he has an inherited dislike for the Yankees and has always respected the Detroit Tigers organization. He said he is looking forward to his first game at Tiger Stadium.

Jarvis said he could have moved to other cities, but coming to Detroit was a plus, despite the negative press it receives elsewhere. He believes Detroit will experience a rediscovery as a great place to live. Already Chicago and Cleveland are looked upon favorably, Jarvis said.

"Why must we take one step back to take two steps forward? one parent asked the board.

Other parents told the board that PACE is not only a program for gifted students, but is also a support group for students who are more advanced intellectually than they are emotionally.

The alternative peer group PACE provides is, as one parent described it, "an oasis" for her daughter.

Other parents expressed concerns that dropping the program for a year might be interpreted by the community as a lack of support for a gifted and talented program by the board. Many felt a comprehensive K-12 gifted program study could not be completed and ready to start by September 1991.

All of those who spoke suggested that parents and PACE teachers be involved in the study and development of the new pro-

Board members were nearly unanimous in their disapproval of the proposal.

"Why do we have to create a blank slate?" Vincent LoCicero asked.

"This board made a commitment and I would be very reluctant to break that commitment," Carl D. Anderson said. "Can't we find a way to make the necessary changes to make the program what it ought to be."

"If I didn't believe strongly in a gifted and talented program,' Whritner said, "the easiest thing in the world would be for me to sit back and watch it die 200 od!

Carol Marr supported Whritner by telling parents not to view him as the "evil guy trying to kill a program," but rather as the man who is trying to rescue it. She disagreed with Whritner's proposal, however.

No action was taken by the board, but it asked Whritner to find out how much a study of the intire program would cost and report his findings to the board at its next meeting.

The board will meet at Trombly Elementary School Monday, Jan. 15 at 8 p.m.

What is PACE?

The Program for Academic and Creative Education in the elementary schools is designed to provide students with a year-long pull-out interdisciplinary program of study involving higher order thinking skills and directed independent and small group study opportunities related to a broad-based theme, unit, problem or issue. The focus of the program will be on the academic areas of study. The content will include instruction in higher order thinking skills consisting of study techniques, selection and organization processes, reporting and communicating skills, group process and leadership skills. .

Weber said the item has been discussed by the boards of the War Memorial, the cable company and by the cable advisory board, which consists of councilmen from four of the five Grosse Pointes and Harper Woods.

Councilmen John Crowley and John Danaher said they would have no problem with granting approval as long as the studio addition conforms to the purpose of the property and as long as

"This project would not please the majority of neighbors in the area," Griffin said. "Many are already talking about legal action.'

Shortly before a vote was taken, Weber pointed out that an addition would not effect the historical status of the Alger House since the site is listed as one of Michigan's historical sites.

The War Memorial Association currently ownes 37.5 percent of Grosse Pointe Cable.

Comcast owns 25 percent. Grosse Pointe City, Farms, Park and Woods own the remainder of the 10-year-old, self funded company.

The studio addition is expected to be designed by the architectural firm of Harley, Ellington, Pierce, Yee and Associates of Southfield, the firm that designed the War Memorial's Fries Auditorium and Ballroom.

No construction date has been set since actual architectural plan have yet to be drawn. Weber said there are no cost estimates for the project.

Gentle, moving, yet exciting and oftentimes witty, "Always" is also a love story with sweetness and charm enough to move the audience to laughter and

It is the story of a daredevil flyer who dies, the girl who loves him and the magical way fate gives them a second chance. A remake of a 1943 release, "A Guy Named Joe," starring Spencer Tracy as a daredevil flyer, Irene Dunne as his girl and Van Johnson as the student flyer whose courtship of Dunne is coached by Tracy's sometimes cantankerous ghost, it retains all the delight of that movie without following it scene by scene.

In this 1989 version, Richard Dreyfuss takes on the role of Tracy's Peter Sandon, Holly Hunter is Dorina Durston, the role played by Irenc Dunne, and Ted Baker is Brad Johnson, formerly played by Van Johnson. The cast is enhanced by John Goodman as Pete's flyer-friend and Audrey Hepburn as Hap, who guides and counsels Dreyfuss in his after-life, helping him to become a guardian angel to Hunter and the shy handsome pilot who courts her.

Although the story and the characters coincide, there is a difference in the setting. Tracy was a wartime pilot. Dreyfuss is a firefighter. Tracy fought to save the lives of people, Dreyfuss fights to save the environment, and while both involve risks, sacrifice and enormous courage, dying for the lives of your countrymen has an emotional pull.

Educator's autobiography recalls Detroit

Florence Cushman Milner (1855-1950) titled her autobiography "The Story of An Ordinary Woman." But she was far from ordinary.

Born in Vermont, raised in New Hampshire, educated in Michigan and Indiana, her remarkable career in education began as a 16-year-old teacher in a 1870s' Dowagiac one-room schoolhouse, continued through appointments to high schools in Niles, Marshall, Grand Rapids, Ann Arbor and Detroit, and culminated in the 1930s at Harvard University's Widener Library.

Her life story has been recently published by the Historical Society of Michigan.

That Mrs. Milner entitled her book 'Story of an Ordinary Woman' reflects her own personal modesty," says Thomas L. Jones, the society's executive director. "But for the late 19th and early 20th century, she was extraordinary. Her career bridged an era of profound changes in pedogogy and in women's history. Although she never considered herself a pioneer, readers of her autobiography will know o' herwise.'

'What Fresh Hell is This" is a series of fast-paced sketches based on the short stories of Dorothy Parker. Parker was a well-known writer, editor and theater music critic during the '20s and '30s, and one of the early editors of the "Vanity Fair" and "The New Yorker" magazines. Known for her sharp wit and honest introspection, she was in the avante garde of the New York jazz age.

The Second City Touring Company returns to the Attic for the third year. Second City is the leading group doing improvisational comedy, and has spawned some of the greatest names in comedy since its beginnings in 1959 in Chicago.

"The Meeting" is Jeff Stetson's visionary play about a meeting between Martin Luther King Jr. and Malcolm X two weeks before Malcolm was killed. Performed at 1515 Broadway last year, and throughout the country, "The Meeting" has been the recipient of many awards and has also toured the Netherlands.

"The Amen Corner," James Baldwin's drama of conflict and compassion, opens at the Bonstelle Theatre Friday, Jan. 19, for a two-weekend run. Performances begin at 8 p.m. Fridays and Saturdays and 2 p.m. Sun-

Baldwin wrote the play, his first, early in his career, after he had completed his first novel, "Go Tell It on the Mountain." The play tells the story of Sister Margaret Alexander, a model of purity in her store-front Harlem church, and her conflicts with her husband, an alcoholic jazz musician, and her son, who refuses to follow in her footsteps.

'The Amen Corner" was inspired by Baldwin's relationship with his father and the battle of

Cruise shows talent in Stone film

By Michael Chapp Special Writer

An urgent message to fans of Tom Cruise: It's a good bet your boy isn't going to take nearly as much bunk as he used to from people who think that what he has in looks he lacks in talent.

An urgent message to skeptics of Tom Cruise: You folks who thought all this guy could do was look good are going to be very surprised by "Born on the Fourth of July," a Vietnam film from Oliver Stone, the same writer and director who brought "Platoon" to the screen.

Indeed, Cruise is so good in this picture - his performance is so riveting - that talk about his accomplishments will almost surely overshadow discussions about the social value of the picture itself. It wouldn't be at all surprising to see Cruise's name on the list of nominations for best actor of the year by the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences. He may very well deserve that honor

But let's not forget about the

"July" is the flip side of the "Platoon" coin. Where the earlier film focused its efforts on the events half a world away in southeast Asia, this picture spends most of its time on the homefront. Its theme is every bit as much about war as "Platoon," but the battlefield is different.

The picture opens innocently enough - Cruise in his formative years in small town America. Everything is in order: family, morals, values, friends, future. Little League baseball. High school jock. First kiss. Prom night. If there is a quintessential patriotic boy in a quintessential small town, this film cap-

But Cruise's desire to fight for his country - his incredibly intense patriotism - is challenged quickly. The moral and physical ambiguity of Vietnam form the roots of a problem that will stay with him for years. In a nameless battle, Cruise is shot and paralyzed. He's sent home to a veterans' hospital, where he spends months in bleak solitude.

It doesn't take long for him to realize that most of the people back home neither understand nor care what happened in Vietnam. A hospital orderly says the real war is the Civil Rights war within our own borders. An old high school buddy who's getting a business off the ground is more interested in how much money he can make. Even his parents, supportive through most of his childhood years, can't tolerate the changes in his personality.

Cruise, who can't escape his thoughts and his conflicts even by running away to Mexico for a time, eventually comes back home and begins a new kind of battle - an antiwar protest rooted in patriotism but tainted with a distrust of and distaste for the American government.

Whether or not "July" is intended to be taken as a companion piece to "Platoon" is up for debate. It certainly is just as disturbing, in its own way, as its predecessor. The hospital scenes, especially, may affect viewers in a visceral way. More sensitive viewers may find themselves feeling almost nauseous at the sight of what's going on.

"July" is a monumental picture. It forces viewers to look in a completely different way at a situation they may have thought they understood. In that sense, it is far from what you'd be likely to describe as entertainment.

It is, however, what you'd call a socially important, relevant, solid piece of movie-making. In an age of lame-brained sequels and go-nowhere duds, "July" is about as refreshing as the mov-

'The Wizard' will delight video-addicted kids

By Marian Trainor Special Writer

Obviously aimed at a young audience, "The Wizard" is the story of three precocious kids who run away from problems arising out of divorce and conflicts caused by an unsympathetic stepfather. It is the sort of a story that has a universal appeal for young people with courage enough to take charge of their own lives when parents fail them.

Young audiences won't mind at all that the story has been told before under different circumstances and related much better. They may not have seen "Rain Man," a film in which an older brother (Tom Cruise) pilots his younger autistic brother (Dustin Hoffman) across the country and en route discovers the boy is a math genius and cashes in on it.

Fred Savage is his usual charismatic self as Corey who wants to keep his brother from being institutionalized. Luke Edwards is an appealing Jimmy with his solemn little face intently working the video machines and Jenny Lewis gives a good performance as she prods, scolds, threatens and cajoles the boys into keeping the goal of $50,000 in mind.

There are flaws in the movie which probably won't disturb young fans, such as the blatant exploitation of Nintendo products. Having the boys hitch a ride in a Hostess truck is not too subtle either. All this aside, videaddicted kids and others, will find "The Wizard" exciting.

Pointers in law firm seek to open international markets

By John Minnis Assistant Editor

The liberation of Eastern Europe means more than political freedom; it means millions of new customers thirsting for all types of consumer goods.

And to bring Western manufacturers and investors in contact with the potentially awesome Eastern European market, Michigan's oldest law firm, Moll, Desemberg & Bayer, has created an International Trade Section.

Two Grosse Pointers are heading the new section, which lege of Law. was prophetically established a couple of weeks before the Berlin Wall fell in November. The addition of the section makes Moll, international law on a major

Heading the new section are United States. Timothy M. Mucciante of Grosse Pointe City, Roman Rewald of the Park and Donald M. Aubrey of Warren. Also part of the team are China expert Sebastian V. Grassi Jr. of Troy and Li Qian and his wife, Na Ren, who may could be the first Chinese national husband-wife team to be part of a U.S. law firm, Mucciante said

The goal of the International Trade Section is to provide more than legal advice. Its staff members are also trade experts who are striving to encourage trade between American businesses and foreign markets.

Before joining Plunkett & Cooney, Mucciante was an attorney with the international/antitrust section for K mart Corp. Before that, he attended law school at

The International Trade Section is able to work with both the large and small investor or business. Mucciante said the section's clients vary from the small entrepreneur to Fortune 500 companies, from a former rock star to Soviet officials.

And sometimes the goods being traded are unusual. Mucciante said that recently he was faced with trying to fill an order for 75,000 kilograms of chicken to sell to Cyprus.

The International Trade Section at Moll, Desenberg & Bayer is designed to educate investors about the unknown - about wire transfers, international letters of credit, etc. - so that they do not have needless fears.

"Don't be afraid," Mucciante advises. "Just make sure the "t's are crossed and the i's dotted. Make sure you're doing it the right way."

Rewald added, "There's money to be made there."

Metro East Chamber to meet

The Metro East Chamber of Commerce, which serves the business communities of St. Clair Shores, Roseville, Fraser, Harper Woods and the Grosse Pointes, will meet for lunch Thursday, Jan. 18, at the Grosse Pointe Hunt Club, 655 Cook Road, Grosse Pointe Woods.

The prevailing theory is no. Henry put the world on wheels, building a car (the Model T) for everyman. of the state of automotive art, but it is clear that the world's automakers are much more interested in building playthings for the rich (or at least semi-rich) than in building a simple, serviceable modern-day Model T.

By Richard Wright

This is not to say that there are no low-priced cars on the market, but none are interesting enough to put on display. Sure, if you cut the top off and add enough trim to make it a flashy little cabriolet, people will look at a Yugo. But this does not make it a Model T. (T fans are still grousing about the introductory ads a few years ago by Yugo comparing it to the legendary Tin Lizzie.)

The Model T put the world on wheels not because it was cheap but because it was a good value. As Henry sold more and more Model Ts, he cut the price until it was indeed the cheapest new car on the market, but the quality, the simplicity of design, the value was still there. Henry Ford was a great believer in simplicity of design, but that is clearly not the vogue any more.

There have been surprisingly few efforts to build a true "car of the people." After the Model T came the Model A and then through the '30s and '40s, there was the "low-price three," Ford and Chevrolet and Plymouth.

And, of course, in the '30s Adolph Hitler ordered Ferdinand Porsche to design a "people's car" and the Volkswagen Beetle was the result. It was elegant in its simplicity and eventually outsold even the Model T in more than 40 years of production.

Gordon Buehrig, designer of the great Auburn, Cord and Duesenberg classics, says the Honda Civic is the closest thing today to the Model T concept simple, well-designed, a good value. Not cheap.

It's a good show. The new models are fascinating. But they are aimed at an affluent middle class, the American baby boomers moving through their peak earning years. Don't look for any Model Ts or VW Beetles. You can see them next summer at shows every weekend.

This Prophit uses her artistic talent to create classic icons

By Ronald J. Bernas Staff Writer

In Greek, the word icon means image. But to Christians, especially the Greek Orthodox, it is a symbol of spiritual force.

A new icon, painted by Grosse Pointe City native Nancy Prophit, adorns the wall of the sanctuary at St. Paul on the Lake Catholic Church.

Prophit, who is a member of the church, had her interest in icons sparked by a student.

When the student heard that Our Lady of Redemption, Melkite Greek Catholic Church in Warren wanted two large Byzantine-style icons for its altar, she recommended Prophit for the Prophit, up to a challenge, accepted.

"I thought this was an art form I could emulate," she said. "But I did a lot of research first. I studied icons and found out that there is a real science to it."

Icons date back to the 10th century and were painted by men. The men chosen were only those of the highest moral char-

They meditated and prayed before starting and during their work. They felt they were merely vehicles for God, and, therefore, usually didn't sign the completed icon.

Particular saints are always depicted in the same colors, she said, and with the same items. Jesus is usually in shades of blues and whites, St. Peter is always shown with the keys to the gates of heaven and St. Paul is depicted as a slightly balding man with a beard, in reddishpurple, with a book, which signifies his writings.

icon, but what the icon stood for," Prophit said.

Just as the church teachings have changed, so have icons.

"As the church changed its view from a forboding God to a forgiving and loving God the icons have gotten nicer looking," she said. "They're not so scary."

Primarily a portrait painter who works from commissions, Prophit said the stylized, symmetrical work in an icon took some effort to attain, but it became easier the more she worked with it.

Her first icons, done for the Greek Melkite church, were 8 feet by 12 feet, Madonna and child titled Our Lady of the Sign. It hangs above the altar.

One of the hardest parts of the icon was not the painting itself, but applying the gold leaf on the 3-foot halo for the madonna.

Never having worked with gold leaf, Prophit undertook another research project on how to apply it to canvas.

Monsignor Francis X. Canfield examines the icon of St. Paul "People didn't worship the done by local artist Nancy Prophit and donated to the church.

Artist Nancy Prophit shows her icon, "Christ the Pantocrator."

Gold leaf is gold hammered to a thickness of 1/100,000 of an inch. Working with it takes care and patience.

The adhesive took time to find, and an employee gave her instructions.

To get an idea of how much care is needed, the adhesive must be applied and allowed to dry until, as Prophit was told, "it's tacky enough to pull the hairs of your little finger when touched.'

One day while at St. Paul, Prophit noticed an icon of Our Mother of Perpetual Help on one side of the sanctuary. The opposite wall, which Prophit said "has a wonderful light shining on it," was empty.

She painted the icon of St. Paul and presented it in a show. Then she approached Monsignor Francis X. Canfield, pastor at St.

Canfield, who is careful when accepting donated work, loved it. The Altar Society purchased a frame and it was hung in the church Dec. 1. "It's quite lovely," Canfield said. "It has a tone, a spirit to it that matches Our Lady of Perpetual Help. It's a very meaningful addition to our church.'

Prophit is pleased that it was accepted. "The idea that my work would be going in a church is very flattering," she said. Unlike icon artists of old, Prophit signed her work. "I know God helps me with my work," she said. "I think He'll understand."

Retirement from a woman's point of view

Mary Cay Sengstock will explore "Retirement - For Women Only" on Tuesday, Jan. 16, from 10 to 11:30 a.m. at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial.

Of the hundreds of books and articles written about retirement, few are written with women in mind. What do the retirement years hold for women? Are the golden years the same for women as men?

Sengstock is professor and former chair of Wayne State University's Department of Sociology. A certified clinical sociologist, she holds a Ph.D. in sociology from Washington University in St. Louis, Mo.

A lifelong resident of the Detroit area and a member of Wayn'e faculty for 24 years, Sengstock draws upon her review of the extensive literature on retirement, as well as her own research in gerontology, for this presentation.

Tickets are $6 per person. Advance purchase is suggested. For additional information, call 881-

Did Jesus have a curfew?

By the Rev. Gregory P. Sammons Christ Church Grosse Pointe

We recently passed through the season in which we thought of Jesus as a baby. Shortly, Christians will be thinking of an adult Jesus, suffering, dying and rising

But I wonder how often we imagine Jesus as a teenager? He was a child - and he passed through adolescence as well.

The Gospel writers are uniformly silent about these years, with one remarkable exception. In Luke 2:41-52, there is a startling portrait of the boy Jesus, just approaching his teen years. And, you guessed it! It's a story about a conflict with his parents.

Mary and Joseph went to Jerusalem every year for the festival of Passover. When Jesus was 12, they went, as usual. After a few days, they left. They assumed that Jesus was somewhere in their large company of travelers.

They were a whole day's journey from Jerusalem when they noticed that he was not among them. Racing back, they looked every place they'd visited, and finally wound up at the Temple. There Jesus was, sitting among the teachers, asking them questions, and amazing everyone with his spiritual insight.

Mary said to him, "Son, why have you treated us so? Behold, your father and I have been looking for you anxiously." (As a parent, I really identify with what Mary says. Worry over a child's welfare so easily turns to anger once we find out a child is safe and sound.)

Jesus answered, "Why is it that you sought me? Did you not know that I must be in my Father's house?" This may make perfect sense to us. But, perhaps because they are so close to the situation, his parents can't figure out what he is driving at.

Nevertheless, they work it out and return home together. Here is the stuff of real family life: a child passing the boundaries of his independence, an angry rebuke from worried parents, and a communication problem. What could strike us closer to home?

There is something freeing when we realize that Jesus and his earthy parents went through some growing pains. It means that even the Holy Family was a real family, like

Church women to explore life's turning points

How do we respond to crises and changes? To illness, aging and separations? To new relationships, historical events and social problems?

Grosse Pointe Memorial Church women will focus on turning points, a broad scope of events and experiences that are pivotal in personal and spiritual development.

The leaders will be an inspiring mother-and-daughter team from Lansing. Both are ordained United Church of Christ ministers whose activities beyond congregational service reflect many interests and concerns.

Eleanor Morrison has taught at the Chicago Theological Seminary and in the Departments of family and child sciences and community medicine at Michigan State University. Books she has written include "Creative Teaching in the Church" and "Human Sexuality: Contemporary Perspectives."

Melanie Morrison also has many writing credits and has been active in movements committed to social justice and peacemaking in southwest Georgia, Chicago and the Netherlands.

Meet in the church parking lot at 9:15 a.m. Bring a Bible and $10 for registration. Car pools will go to Jan Harness's home.

Reservation deadline is Jan. 15. at noon; Jan. 12 for nursery care.

Grosse Pointe Questers

Trudy Schmidt will host the meeting of the Grosse Pointe Questers Chapter No. 147 on Jan. 12. Assisting her in hostessing duties will be Past President Rosemary Bay, and Chapter President Bonnie Manle.

Pat Martin will present a program on "The Presidents' Residence — A History of the White House."

Did Mary and Joseph consider a curfew for Jesus after this incident?

The encouraging news to me is that God believes in families enough so that He deliberately chose to be born and raised in one. He experienced the goodness of belonging to a clan with the same last name. He didn't require Joseph and Mary to be perfect parents before He came to them. He only required them to be committed parents.

Because Jesus was raised in a family, God's heart is open wide to every family. He believes in the great potential for good in each family, even when there is tension and con-

We can be confident that he hears us and will help us as we pray about the pains of growing up or about the tasks of being a parent.

Bridge

HAVE A PLEASANT TRY AT PERFECTION BRIDGE BY WOODY BOYD THE PASTEBOARD PASTIME

For years many of the great names in bridge have strongly supported duplicate events that offered cash prizes coupled with or independent of master point awards. The first successful step in that direction was The Cavendish Invitational which this coming May celebrates its 16th anniversary. This event is unquestionably the most prestigious duplicate pair game in the world. An invitation to play is recognition of exceptional talent. The few who have won are elevated to a reverenced pedestal for it is the most challenging ninety-six board test of skill yet conceived in bridge.

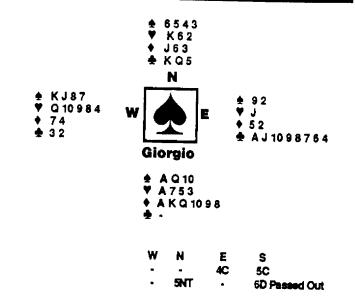

Private bridge clubs the world over have emulated Cavendish's classic example with their own calcutta or parimutual events that have on a lesser scale proven to be most successful.

Through all of this the American Contract Bridge League has observed with an open mind and thoughtful contemplation. While they haven't totally endorsed this variation their unofficial position has been supportive with qualifications that have been protective and worthwhile.

During this incubation stage of stake duplicate play the illustrious star of his own 1970 Bridge Circus, Omar Sharif, has been reflecting upon a second world class event. A year ago in concert with the exceptional organizational talents of Goren International's President, Tannah Hirsch, they blue printed a plan for "The Omar Sharif World Individual."

So it will be this coming May at Atlantic City's Showboat Hotel Casino. Between May 6-10 the worlds richest bridge tournament, sanctioned by the A.C.B.L. will be staged with cash prizes of some $200,000. This puts bridge on a par with professional golf and tennis. Entry into the championship flight will be controlled and consequential for you will be competing with the finest players in the world for a great deal of money. There will also be an extremely rewarding open event that is expected to draw a marvelous contingent of players from all over North America.

One of the many Europeans who is expected to attend his good friends classic event is the applaudable world master Giorgio Belladona of Italy's famed Blue Team. Omar and he have been an exciting pair to watch these past twenty odd years. Their presence will top a distinguished list of the worlds finest.

The following demonstration of Belladonna's technique is a masterpiece that ranks with the most famous hands played in bridge history. As you can see after east preempt Giorgio arrived in an adventuresome slam. When this hand was later shown (N/S cards only) to a number of experts they all went down yet he made the contract against any defense. After west's three of clubs lead ten tricks were apparent. Where did the master find eleven and twelve?

Belladonna visualized that west most likely held most of the missing major face cards. Here was his, not easy to perceive, solution after ruffing east club ace. Ace, king and small diamond to the jack. At trick five dummy's club king pitching the spade ten! Next a club ruff. At trick seven west was squeezed on declarer's diamond queen as his remaining cards were K, J, 8 of spades and the Q, 10, 9, 8 of hearts. West actually threw the heart 8 so declarer played the A, K and another heart. On the forced spade return Giorgio won the A, Q and his fourth heart. Losing only the heart Q. If west on the last diamond had pitched a spade declarer would have played A, Q. His last four tricks would have been the A, K of hearts and two little spades in dummy.

The Tradition

Imagine a new lakefront development that combines the lifestyle you expect with views of Lake St. Clair never before experienced. Think of sea gulls, sailboats, wind off the lake...viewed from traditional architecture and plush gardens. Think of Harbor Place. The Blake Company has continued the Grosse Pointe tradition with this new luxury condominium development. Choose your lifestyle: town houses, terrace homes, each in two- and three-bedroom variations that provide the depth of living that you require. And the amenities are virtually endless: boat slips, interior parking, landscaped views, and timeless quality construction. The Blake Company, the developer with generations invested in the east side and metropolitan area, proudly presents Harbor Place. Continue the tradition that you have lived all your life. Call the Blake Company today, and see for yourself the new tradition called Harbor Place.

Bo and Mo talk turkey

Big deal! Bo Schembechler has exited from college coaching a loser.

It's over, completed, done and we can't bring him back. Surely the finest coach in Michigan football, Bo Schembechler leaves a 17-10, bad fake-punt call loser to USC in his final Rose Bowl.

Losing the big game is nothing new. I could dwell on that, but I won't. Winning only two Rose Bowls is nothing new. I could dwell ...

I like Bo and I always will. For 20 years I spoke Bo's name when I referred to Michigan football. But, now I have to say Mo. After Bo's fake-punt call that Bobby Abrams was caught for holding on, I couldn't help but make up my own words for the conversation that Bo and Gary Moeller, who is now the new Meeeeeeechigan coach, had through the headsets as they watched the final seconds of Bo's last game tick away.

Mo: Bo, this is Mo. Bo: Yeah, Mo. Mo: Why did we go, Bo? Bo: I don't know, Mo. With me being, Bo, Mo, I just thought I would dispell those thoughts of me being conservative and go for it on fourth down. Bad call, eh Mo?

Mo: Bo, I don't know if I would have called it, but you know, Bo, it was your call and not mine. I'm just the one that will have to take on the team next fall and rid the players' minds of that play.

Bo: Well, Mo. You know, you didn't have to take the job. Mo: Yes, Bo, but you groomed me. Besides, if it wasn't for you, Bo, Michigan football wouldn't be what it is today. So, I forgive you for that bad call, Bo.

Bo: Mo, it wouldn't have See FULTON, page 2C

Time to face off North and South set to battle for second time this season By Rob Fulton

Sports Editor

The hockey teams of Grosse Pointe North and Grosse Pointe South will face off at the St. Clair Shores Civic Arena Jan. 11, and one can only guess what type of personality each team will have. Will it be the inconsistent or aggressive North Norsemen, or will it be the confident and refined Blue Devils of

"It's hard to tell in this type of game," said South coach Tim tired late in the second or third Zimmerman, whose team is 6-2-2 overall. "We've never done well in our first meeting with them at the St. Clair Shores Civic Arens, both teams will be battling for pride. North will wear the white attentions and South will be in blue. The following should give you an idea of who to look for in this much heralded crosstown rivel:

Players to watch

When North and South take to the ice, Jan. 11 at 7:50 p.m.

right after the holidays, but I hope that's not the case again."

South has played two games since Christmas, both wins over Midland and Arthur Hill, but North hasn't played since losing to top-ranked Southgate Anderson Dec. 19.

"We may have only one advantage," claimed Zimmerman. "We've played a couple games and therefore we should have our game legs back. But, the disadvantage is that we may get period. In the past years, it's been a disadvantage for us.'

North beat South, 64, in the University Liggett School Christmas Tournament finals.

At 5-4, North is off to its worst start since the sport was incorporated in 1983-84. Coach Mike Manzella blames his team's sluggish start to inconsistent play, but he's hoping this game will be a springboard to the rest of the season.

'We haven't practiced hard all season and it's showed in the games," said Manzella. "Our intensity has been down, so we're going back to a little more physical play.

"This has been a strange season. I wish I would have started keeping a journal because we've had so many crazy things happen. From suspensions to injuries to illnesses, we've had it

The South game will be the first time North, which is led in scoring by Bob Beltz (9 goals, 9 assists), will have its full squad this season.

"We've got to get up for this game," said Manzella, whose team averages 3.6 goals a game and yields 5.2. "If we can't get up for the South game, then we'll have trouble doing it the rest of the season.'

So how important is this game? Reports vary.

"I don't know if you can emphasize this game more than any other game," said Zimmerman, whose team scores 4.9 goals per game and gives up four. "No doubt about it, though, this is a big game, just as all the other games are."

South hasn't beaten North since January of 1987.

"This game is clearly a major part of our season," said Manzella. "That's not to say we need

Struggling Norsemen lose fourth straight at Utica

By Rob Fulton Sports Editor

After opening the season with a narrow 56-50 win over Lakeview, the Grosse Pointe North basketball team has now lost four straight games.

North, which hasn't played Dec. 19, lost 48-38 at Utica Jan.

"We wanted to win this first league game to get things going in the right direction," said North coach George Olman. "We've got to quit stubbing our toe and get going.'

Brian Sheehy led the Norsemen with 13 points.

In its three losses before the holidays, according to Olman, North was in the game but for one reason or another couldn't pull out the win.

"In our first three losses, we were in the game the whole way," he said. "In the losses to Lake Shore and Eisenhower, I win because we are so young."

The Utica loss, however, was entirely different.

"I'm befuddled," said Olman. "We had two great weeks of practice and I thought it would since losing to South 59-56 on roll right over, but the same team I've seen for the past two weeks didn't show up at Utica."

> North, which trailed 22-16 at the half, couldn't control the ball or break the Chieftans full-court pressure.

"We didn't handle their pressure well at all," said Olman.

Proof positive was in the stats: 45 turnovers.

Despite the inept offense. though, North took a 29-24 lead late in the third quarter and clung to a two-point advantage, 32-30, early in the fourth.

"Utica beat our offense, not our defense," Olman said. "We self-destructed offensively when just think we didn't know how to we couldn't handle their pressure.

North trailed by six with 2:30 to play, but never got closer.

"I'm disappointed because we didn't play half as well as we did during the two weeks layoff," said Olman. "We've got to bounce back and see what kind of character we really have."

Wrestling

Joe Ament (130 pounds) and Dan Collins (145) took the top prize in their respective weight classes at the Madison Invitational, helping the Norsemen to a fourth-place finish.

Coach Art Roberts, who continues to struggle with a depleted squad, took only eight wrestlers with him, but five of them made it to the finals. Finishing as runners-up were Keith Giannico (125), Reid O'Brien (119) and Bryan Fleming (112).

Blue Devils fall in league. opener; loss is 2nd straight

By Rob Fulton Sports Editor

In its first chance to defend the 1988-89 Eastern Michigan League crown, the Grosse Pointe South Blue Devils' basketball team failed.

It didn't fail miserably, but Port Huron Northern upended the Devils, 78-67, Jan. 5 at Northern. The 78 Northern points were the most given up by South in three seasons.

"You're bound to give up that many points when you give up 21 layups," said Devils' coach George Petrouleas. "We gave up a lot of easy buckets on their transition game.'

Were the Huskies really 11 points better than the Devils?

"They were that night," said Petrouleas. "We were as bad as they were good. Taking nothing away from Northern, though. It played a solid game and came after us."

South, which hasn't played since losing to DeLaSalle on Dec. 21, is 4-3 overall and 0-1 in the league.

Guard Tim Gramling left South short-handed early in the first quarter, taking a seat with three fouls. He did, however, finish with 12 points. Gramling's vacancy left South without an extra ball-handler.

"We were up by a couple of points in the first quarter," explained Petrouleas. "But they converted on their transition game and we found ourselves fighting to stay in the game."

Four consecutive turnovers didn't help either. "We had a difficult time recogbeen a bad call if we didn't get caught holding on the play. But, now I, Bo that is, have to live with the afterthoughts of why I called the fake punt, Mo.

Mo: Bo, again, this is your buddy Mo. I won't know why we didn't punt, but you know, Bo, if we didn't go for it we'd second guess that move too.

Bo: Yeah, I guess so, Mo. If I would have decided to punt all those reporters would ask me why I was so conservative in my final game. And you know, Mo, I wouldn't have had an answer for them. Mo: Bo, I realize that you were upset with the call. I was, too. But, you didn't have to throw your clipboard and notes. You looked silly, besides you almost fell flat on your face.

Bo: Mo, don't hand me that line. You would have done the same thing. In fact, next season, Mo, when you lose to Michigan State in Ann Arbor, you're going to find out just how tough this job is on your ol' ticker.

Mo: Bo, let's forget about what was and concentrate on what is. You were the greatest influence in my coaching career -- even though I failed at Indiana. You turn your program over to me, even though it has to live with the loss to USC

Knights redeem themselves after loss to Lutheran East

By Rob Fulton Sports Editor

After a heart-breaking 58-57 loss to Lutheran East Jan. 3, University Liggett School basketball coach Chuck Wright rallied his troops to take a 79.53 win from Oakland Christian.

In its first game since Dec. 12, ULS continually fought off Lutheran East, but couldn't stop Chris Williams from hitting a desperation, three-point bucket at the buzzer.

"It was a tough loss for us," said Wright, "but we came right back. The kids took the loss well, because they knew they didn't play very well, and that pleased me. We were a bit sluggish after our layoff, but we showed a lot of courage in the way we fought back. The kids also handled this bitter defeat with class and dignity. I'm proud of them.'

Tarik Lester paced the Knights with 15 points. Kandia Milton had 13 points and 13 rebounds, while Brent McMahon had 11 points.

"The loss to Lutheran East was a great wake-up call for us," said Wright, whose team was recently ranked in the top 10 of Class C. "We now know that any team can come in here and beat us, even though we're a good basketball team. I don't think we were ready for the game.

With the game tied 55-55, McMahon sank two foul shots with six seconds to play, giving ULS a 57-55 lead. Lutheran East center Williams took an inbounds pass 22 feet from the basket and threw up a shot and buried it as time ran out.

"We definitely didn't play our best game, but it was still a terrific game by two fine Class C teams," said Wright.

Using a tenacious press at Oakland Christian, the Knights stormed out to a 29-10 firstquarter lead. Never being threatened the rest of the way, ULS scooted to its third victory in five

The second line was impressive in the win, with scoring coming from John Maycock (1 goal, 3 assists), Stefan Teitge, (2 goals, 1 assist) and Alex Crenshaw (one assist). Goalie Jon Bell turned back 17 shots to earn the win. Defenseman Jesse Kasom scored once and added three assists, and co-captain Mike Coello registered one goal and an assist. Also on defense, Bill Robb had two assists and freshman Nick Giorgio recorded his first two varsity points with a pair of assists.

Wood scored twice to lead the Knights past highly-ranked East Kentwood, 4-3. Tripp Tracy was solid in goal, making 26 saves.

After trailing 3.1 in the first period, the Knights rallied witih three straight second-period goals to take a 4-3 lead: Coello converted a pass from Davis at the 14:14 mark; VanDeweghe scored from Kasom to tie it with 3:26 to play in the second period, and with 29 seconds to play in

The win over Kentwood ranks as one of ULS' finest because Kentwood was ranked in the top five of Class A.

Swimming

In its first home meet of the season, the Knights were thrashed, 114-38, by the University of Detroit High School.

Jon Sieber swam to a third in the 500 freestyle to pace ULS. Neil Weyhing, Abby McIntyre, Rob Petz and Sieber swam a 4:04 400-freestyle relay to place also. Petz, Katy Tompkins and Autwan Fuller all swam the 50 freestyle, which gave ULS five team points.

Erika Teitge scored points in each of her three events, and Beth Weyhing won the 200 individual medley with a come-frombehind performance.

Nutrition and pregnancy-

Pregnancy is a normal state of life which does not necessitate major dietary changes if women are already on a regular balanced

The old motto "eat for two" is an exaggeration. Pregnant women require an average of 75,000 added calories over the course of pregnancy, which amounts to 300 added calories per day. Hence, an expectant mother needs to increase her diet by an equivalent of a candy bar daily. The mother definitely does not need to double or triple the amount she ate before becoming pregnant.

What about weight gain, pregnancy?

Average weight gain in pregnancy is 25 pounds with a range between 20 and 40 pounds. The majority of the weight gain occurs in the second half of pregnancy. Some women panic if they have a weight gain that is less than 10 pounds or more than 30 pounds. It is important to consider weight gain as a part of pregnancy.

The mother's weight before pregnancy is related to how much weight is gained and needs to be gained during pregnancy. Women who weigh less than 110 pounds before pregnancy may need to gain 30 to 40 pounds, while women who weigh 200 pounds or more may gain only five pounds and still have a normal-weight infant.

If a normal-weight woman does not gain adequate weight during pregnancy for any reason, there is a good chance that the baby will be delivered prematurely or at term with less than adequate weight (a growth retarded infant or small for gestational age infant). These babies may have several problems, including failure to thrive and mental retardation.

An expectant mother should take into consideration that a significant portion of her weight gain during pregnancy may stay with her after delivery. This should not discourage pregnant women from eating the right diet. Even if a woman is obese, pregnancy is not the time to go on a diet. On the other hand, pregnancy is not the time to over-eat, either. Obesity and pregnancy may be associated with some complications such as high blood pressure, diabetes, and a high rate of Caesarean births.

It is important for women who nurse after delivery to increase their diet more than when they were pregnant. At least 500 more calories per day are needed to produce the breast milk that the mother will give the infant after delivery.

Are vitamins needed?

Most doctors in the United States prescribe pre-natal vitamins for their pregnant Women that are not on vitamins should not panic. As long as an expectant mother eats a balanced diet which contains dairy products, meat, carbohydrates and fruits and vegetables which contain the vitamins and nutrients, there is little need for vitamin supplementation. The only supplement that may be needed in pregnancy is iron. This is due to several changes during pregnancy and the demands that are added by the baby which deplete iron stores in the mother. Any supplementation of iron or pre-natal vitamins should occur after consultation with the obstetrician.

Expectant mothers should be very cautious where they store iron pills at home if they have children because the iron can be toxic to child-

Conditions of concern

Morning sickness: is a relatively common complaint. It may be related to the amount of pregnancy hormones generated by the mother. Dietary consultation is definitely needed.

Frequent small meals, solid or liquid, whichever is tolerated by the expectant mother, are recommended.

foods should be avoided during that period. Heartburn: is also one of the regular complaints during pregnancy. Again, spicy, fatty foods and heavy meals should be avoided. Over-thecounter antacids such as Tums, Maalox and others are safe.

In general, greasy and spicy

Smoking and alcohol: should be completely given up during pregnancy. If this is impossible, they definitely should be decreased because both are known to have a significant adverse affect on the pregnancy outcome.

Expectant mothers should be aware that whatever they eat may affect their unborn babies. There is a benefit from consulting an obstetrician and nutritionist before getting pregnant and during pregnancy.

Key word for the 90s: Balance

If the decade of the 80s had to be described in one word, that word could very well be extremes.

We saw and experienced this pendulum swing, whether it was in the area of politics, the stock market, religious practices, sports or fashion. And, we can't forget about one of man's basic instincts, eating.

With the skyrocketing surge in fast food places, nouvelle cuisine, Tex-Mex food, sushi bars, et al., we also learned a new word: cholesterol - not only what it is, but what it could do to our bod-

A couple of years ago, you may have had trouble remembering someone's phone number, but by the close of the decade many of us could spout off our cholesterol number with ease.

We began the 80s charged to change our bodies and made fast promises to not only exercise more, but to go for the "burn." We invested thousands of dollars in exercise equipment, health club memberships and diet programs. But, we lost our steam somewhere along the way.

The exercise equipment gathered dust, the health club memberships were seldom used, the diet program has been thrown aside, if not forgotten. We were a people of extremes. It was all or nothing.

The pendulum swung from one erratic point to another, and we were looking for the quick fix and found disappointment. As we leave the 80s behind, there is good news. Through all the swings we were learning, and some of it was painful.

As we begin these first steps into the 1990s, we have learned one lesson: we must return to balance in our lives. That balance encompasses our home life, the workplace and our eating behavior.

Working 60 to 70 hours a week, skipping breakfast, and or lunch, getting little or no exercise, sailing past the spouse and kids for quick hellos and goodbyes doesn't suggest balance. Maintaining balance may seem like a hopeless situation, but with a little thought and planning you can experience a balanced life.

When it comes to your overall health, it is vital that you start with an honest evaluation. Recognize where you are now, then you can make the necessary changes. The following guidelines may help get you started and off the pendulum.

Self-care principles

1) I take responsibility for my current level of health. 2) I know that I am a unique person with many talents that are special to my life plan.

3) I recognize my need for rest and am able to rest without feel-

4) I know that I learn life's lessons through my successes and also my failures.

5) I allow time to experience the presence of a great life force guiding my life.

Stress perception

1) I am aware of at/least five clues which signify stress in my body. Stress may manifest itself in many forms, i.e.: headaches, heart palpitations, insomnia, indigestion. What are my symp-

2) I regularly take 10 to 15 day that includes vegetables, minutes each day for quiet time - to relax, and to practice some form of visualization technique.

3) I recognize feelings in me of depression or anxiety. I know that there are reading materials or tapes that I can listen to that help to re-motivate me. I also have no qualms about seeking professional help if need be.

Work/play exercise

1) I can approach my work in a way that allows me free time away from work as well. This free time is for my thoughts as well as my body.

2) I make time for and enjoy my leisure activities without a need to direct or over-structure

3) I believe in the "15-minute exercise" philosophy. I practice some form of exercise for a minimum of 15 minutes each and every day. I may simply go for a brisk walk. It's like brushing your teeth; I don't think about it. I just do it. If I can do more, that's fine.

Nutrition

1) I eat a variety of foods each fruits, whole grains, lean meats, dairy products. I know that fresh foods are often the best choice.

2) I drink at last eight 8 oz. glasses of water every day. 3) I know that the body requires six basic nutrients to help me thrive, not just survive: water, complex carbohydrates, protein, vitamins and minerals, and small amounts of fat. 4) If I need help to attain a healthy body weight, I will seek a program that does not short change me of any of these nutrients, and also teaches me how to maintain my goal weight.

5) I make a concerted effort to eat sitting down and enjoy my meals. I avoid eating on the run with a sense of being rushed.

As you go over each of these guidelines, you see a common thread that ties each of them together like a well-knit sweater: the balance. No huge swings from one bizarre point to the other. Think of the old teetertotter; when you achieve balance you are right in the middle. All is equal. Welcome to the 90s.

Hold on to those fitness resolutions Another year is behind us (and your part, but the trick is to find ever you choose, just do it!

no doubt on our behinds), and as activities within your level of fitusual you've probably promised yourself to get in shape, right?

I applaud your good intentions, but as we are all well aware, starting an exercise program and maintaining the commitment to stick to it are usually worlds apart.

So, what can you do now to increase the probability that later this year or next year, you'll still be motivated to continue your fitness program?

I suggest you think positive and be realistic. Those who expect instant improvement are usually disappointed. Being a fitness fanatic, I'd be the first to tell you that exercise will definitely lead to loads of positive changes, but many of these benefits take months of constant training.

So, be realistic about the changes you expect. Weight training is a great way to strengthen and tone your muscles, and over time you get the added bonus of an increased metabolism to help your body burn calories more efficiently.

If weight is a concern, a combination of aerobic exercise and a healthy diet will net you a loss of one to two pounds a week. along with an increased energy level and strong heart and lungs. Do these scenarios sound reasonable? If so, you're on the right track. But, if you begin a weight lifting program with the idea that inside a month you will begin to resemble Arnold Schwarzenegger, or that you intend to lose 20 pounds in two weeks, frustration and inevitably becom-

Chiropractic tips for preventing injuries while shoveling snow

If you feel the urge to heave the next snow on your driveway as far as your muscle power will allow, think again.

The International Chiropractors Association advises would-be snow shovelers to be careful. People have hurt themselves while shoveling because of improper lifting, throwing too much snow, or simply overexert-

To help prevent pain and injury, Dr. Bryan A. Baetens of Baetens Chiropractic Center recommends following these common sense rules: Do warm-up stretches; handle moderate amounts of snow at a time; rest frequently; don't shovel if you have heart, lung or back prob-

Most lower-back injuries, Baetens warns, occur when a person bends forward and then turns strenuously to one side. Instead, Baetens advises you make one long path on one side of the driveway. This will prevent constant turning of the body's held in front of the body, the pressure of the lumbar disc can weight lifted, or up to 300 stressful pounds. There is pressure on the spine and heart while shoveling. In addition, exertion and the frigid air can create a double burden on the cardiovascular system.

A survey by the International Chiropractors Association in 13 states revealed that snow shoveling incidents accounted for about 10 percent of chiropractors' patient volume in the winter months. Heading the complaints were low and upper-back pain, sciatica (a shooting, burning pain usually down the back of the leg) and brachialneuralgia (a burning, tingling numbness or pain down the neck, shoulder and > 2) Always stand erect and bend from the knees, not from the waist. Try to keep an arch in your lower back. When scooping the snow, deposit it in front of you instead of twisting and throwing it to one side.

3) Use a long-handled shovel for pushing snow to make it easier to stand upright; use a shorthandled shovel for throwing snow to keep the weight closer to the body.

4) Push rather than lift snow whenever possible.

5) Alternate your shoveling stance. First with one hand doing the lifting and then the other. This procedure will prevent overloading the stronger side of your body, thereby equalizing stress on your spine.

6) If you are in poor health, don't take a chance on shoveling.

The Missing LINC

LINC is a non-profit organization whose purpose is to place goods no longer needed by individuals and businesses into the hands of metropolitan Detroit charitable agencies. If you have any items no longer of use to you, Operation LINC knows who can and will use them. Please call LINC at 882-6100.

Need to make room for all those new presents? Think of LINC and donate those useful but no longer needed items to LINC instead of throwing them away or shoving them into some dark corner.

Pregancy Aid, Inc. would like to collect some BLANKETS and MATERNITY CLOTHES. They also need either wall or desk type CLOCKS. A Better, Life, Inc. has asked for IRONS, IRONING BOARDS and PADS.

Detroit Area Agency On Aging assists senior citizens in maintaining homes, and provides for safety and well-being. Donations of REFRIGERATORS, GAS STOVES, and GAS DRYERS would be put to good use by these folks.

CLOTHING of all kinds are always needed: infants' through teens', and particularly, men's. Child Family Center, Lula Bell Stewart Center, Inc., El Buen Pastor United Methodist Church and Coalition on Temporary Shelter are just a few of the organizations among which the clothes would be distributed.

Groups which give much helpful service to people in our metro community are always in great need of OFFICE EQUIPMENT, FURNITURE and SUPPLIES. Computers, typewriters, desks, filing units, copy machines and paper supplies are a sample of the requests made by a majority of these charitable organizations. If you have something that is CLEAN, USABLE and in WORKING CONDITION but you aren't using it — think of LINC and KEEP IT MOVING!

DESPERATE SITUATION! BEAGLE/TERRIER MIX

LAB/RETRIEVER MIX A kind lady who has spent a lifetime taking in strays is losing her home and can no longer keep her own dogs. She would like to find loving homes for her friends and only has two weeks to do so before she has to take them to a shelter, possibly to face extermination. One is a delightful, sweet, pure white Beagle/Terrier mix. 4 years old, female, about 22 lbs. She has a wonderful disposition, would be great with kids or older people, is well behaved and housebroken. The other is a gentle, loving Yellow Lab/Retriever mix and her two pups. She and the pups would be wonderful with children.
