

1980 South graduate gets new heart, lungs, life

By John Minnis
Assistant Editor

For the first time in her life, Donna Gagen of Grosse Pointe Farms can walk, run, ride a bike and look forward to a "normal" life.

Gagen, 27, is experiencing for the first time the simple physical activities we take for granted. On Oct. 20, she was the recipient of a successful heart and lungs transplant.

Before the operation, she couldn't take a deep breath or walk up stairs. Today she rides a stationary bicycle and walks two miles three times a week. Before the transplant, she had a two-year life expectancy, at most, now if the organs are not rejected, she can live as long as any of us.

"Before I couldn't walk up stairs, now I can do anything," Gagen said last week. She was allowed to return home Dec. 2 from Presbyterian-University Hospital, affiliated with the University of Pittsburgh. The hospital is known for neural and orthopedic surgery and transplantation, particularly liver transplants.

Gagen agrees that she is getting a second chance at life, but she has no idea what a normal life is supposed to be. Since birth she had a bad heart, which led to deteriorating lungs and other health problems. Normal to Gagen has been poor health and the inability to participate in any type of physical activity.

Gagen was born in 1962 to Sara and Donald Gagen, then of Indianapolis. As a sur-living Siamese twin, she required extensive hospital care just to survive. A while after being sent home, it was discovered she had a hole in her heart. She suffered heart failure when she was 3 months old. She had her first heart catheterization at 18 months.

Sara Gagen said that today such heart defects can be corrected in infants, but that was not the case in the '60s. Gagen was not expected to live.

City officials concerned over fate of St. Clair school property

By John Minnis
Assistant Editor

While the school district is planning a ballot proposal for a new main library, Grosse Pointe City officials are miffed that they haven't been consulted.

To meet increased demands for library space, the school district is planning to go to the voters with a bond referendum to pay for a proposed $7.7 million library at the Brownell Middle School site on Chalfonte in the Farms.

If the voters approve the bond issue and an additional half mill for operating revenue, Central Library on Kercheval will be renovated to house the school district administrative offices, which are currently at 389 St. Clair in Grosse Pointe City.

The St. Clair property would then be sold to pay for or offset the costs of the old Central Library renovation.

The selling and consequent future use of the St. Clair property are what concerns city officials. At the Jan. 15 council meeting, Councilman Dale Scrace requested that a letter be sent to the school district asking "what their intentions are."

"They can tell people whatever they want," he said, indicating that the city will have a say in the disposition of the St. Clair property if it is anything other than single-family homes as zoned.

"If they really want to do something about it," he said, "they better come to talk to us."

Mayor Lorenzo D. Browning agreed: "I'm going to be hard-nosed on that piece (of property). I'm not happy with the school board as far as that's concerned."

The property at 389 St. Clair is 200 feet wide and, depth-wise, runs through to Notre Dame. It is zoned single-family residential, which means that if it is no longer used for schools, it has to be converted to single-family homes. The site is just big enough for eight homes — four on St. Clair and four on Notre Dame.

The city is concerned that the school district will have a buyer for the property lined up only to find that the purchaser's proposed use is unacceptable to the city.

Kathy Roberts, of the school district's public relations office, said city officials haven't been consulted thus far because it's far too early in the planning process. She said the selling of the St. Clair is at least three years down the road, if ever.

"It's a moot point until the election," she said.

First the voters have to approve the new library bond issue, and a date for the vote has not even been set yet, she said. The school board is looking at conducting the vote in June of this year or February of next year.

Roberts said that if a bond vote were held in June and if it were approved, then the earliest completion date of the new library would be in September 1992. Then another 13 months would be needed to renovate the old Central Library building at Fisher and Kercheval. That means the earliest the St. Clair property could be vacated is October 1993. And that's if everything goes right on schedule and there are no delays.

The St. Clair property has not been put up for sale, Roberts said.

"It's not that the Grosse Pointe Public School System wants to try to exclude Grosse Pointe City," she said, adding that the City Council's concerns are premature.

Scrace, however, believes it's not too early to begin talking with the school administrators. He pointed out that deciding the acceptable uses for the St. Clair property may require a land-use study of the entire area, which will take time. He believes the entire process would move more smoothly if the school district and the city are working together.

Painter of Interest Clint P. Hardy

By Ronald J. Bernas
Staff Writer

Clint Hardy's life has taken many twists and turns.

He's gone from his birthplace in Adrian, Mich. to working on the railroad in Winnipeg, Alberta, to Detroit to Grosse Pointe Farms.

It's also included a 64-year marriage which produced four daughters, nine grandchildren and five great-grandchildren. On May 16 he turns 100.

Born in 1890, Hardy was one of three children born to a banker and his wife.

His father also owned the Crosswell Opera House, the theater in Adrian, where the young Hardy strapped on a concession tray that was almost as big as he was, and sold candy to the patrons to earn money. This was, incidentally, prior to the widespread showing of movies.

His childhood memories of the small rural community are fond ones.

"I was just a little kid that was hanging around," he said, remembering the times he played with the big kids. "There was this big hill nearby and we always used to go tobogganing, and since I was little, they always put me in front. I was the headlight."

Another childhood memory centers around his neighbor who was always the first on his block to have the latest invention or gadget. The neighbor, of course, had the first automobile.

There was much excitement on the street as the car was delivered. The man who delivered it offered to wash off the dust that had accumulated on the ride over. The man who washed the car was also the man who designed the car — Henry Ford.

An all-around athlete, Hardy played high school sports and he was the football team's quarterback.

He took a job with an Adrian-based fence company, installing fencing along the railroad through the rural parts of Al-

Assessment increases ordered throughout Pointes this year

By John Minnis
Assistant Editor

Residential assessments and state equalized values are going up more than 10 percent in all the Grosse Pointes this year.

The assessment increases, determined by the Wayne County Department of Equalization, range from 12 percent in the Woods to 16.25 percent in the City. The Park's assessments are up 15.75 percent; the Shores will see a 14.21 percent increase, and the Farms is up 13.7 percent.

George McEachran, director of the county equalization department, said the assessment increases are good indicators of rising home market values because they are based on actual home sales.

The 1990 assessment adjustments are based on property sales in a 24-month period ending March 31, 1989. The selling prices of the homes are compared to their locally assessed values. Because state law mandates that assessed values have to be equal to 50 percent of market values, the selling price of a property should equal twice the assessed value.

During times of rising property values, however, selling prices easily outdistance assessed values, which then have to be adjusted to keep up the higher market values.

McEachran said there are penalties for communities that let assessed values fall more than 10 percent below 50 percent of market values. Also, the local assessors could lose their certifications and, therefore, their jobs. If assessments are not raised locally, when required, then the county, by law, must raise them.

The reasoning behind the state equalization laws and State Tax Commission guidelines is to make sure people pay their fair share of property taxes, McEachran said.

For example, all Wayne County homeowners pay a 7-mill county tax. A mill represents a $1 tax for every $1,000 of state equalized assessed value (SEV). If one community is assessed at 30 percent of market value and another community at 50 percent, then the owner of a $100,000 home in the lesser assessed community would pay $210 in county taxes, whereas an owner of an equal home in the properly assessed community would pay $350 in county taxes.

In the 30 percent community, assessments would have to be increased 66 percent (30 x 1.66) to reach the 50 percent level.

To make sure all county communities keep up with market values, the equalization department constantly conducts comparison studies of home selling prices and assessed values.

Of course, the studies are at least a year old by the time local communities announce assessment increases. Therefore, assessments can go up even during a soft real estate market, which will not be reflected in assessments until a year or two later.

In the early '80s, the Grosse Pointe News was the only newspaper to publish the results of these studies. See ASSESSMENTS, page 15A

When she was in the sixth grade, Gagen, her parents and her then 7-year-old sister moved to Grosse Pointe Farms. She attended Grosse Pointe public schools, but her ailment caused her to miss classes. With the help of tutors and teachers for the homebound, she was able to graduate with her class from South in 1980.

Because the hole in her heart caused the oxygen-rich and spent blood to mix, her body was starved for oxygen. The insufficient oxygen caused her lips and fingernails to turn purple and prompted hurtful remarks from other students.

While the Grosse Pointe public school teachers for the most part dealt well with Gagen's condition, her mother said that one male teacher at South erroneously equated the girl's ailment with intelligence, and she still has some painful memories of the insensitive teacher's comments. He now teaches at North.

Following high school, her heart ailment, which caused her lungs to deteriorate, prevented her from getting a job or going to college. She did try to keep active at Grosse Pointe United Church, where she is a youth group minister.

In 1985 she suffered a stroke and in April 1987 her lungs started to bleed. At the time she was given two years to live at the longest.

On July 26, 1987, Gagen and her family were interviewed by doctors at Presbyterian-University Hospital. Following the interview, she was put on a waiting list for a heart and lungs. While it was a happy day for the Gagens, they would have to make sacrifices before Donna Gagen would get her new life. Sara Gagen did not know how many people were the waiting list for a heart, lungs or both at the Pittsburgh hospital.

Grosse Pointe Farms resident Donna Gagen, 27, is doing well following a heart and lungs transplant in October.

In 1988, the most recent year for which statistics are available, 74 heart and lungs transplants were performed in the United States, according to Kelly Straw, a spokeswoman for the United Network for Organ Sharing based in Virginia. She said there are 244 people on the waiting list for heart and lungs.

A Presbyterian-University Hospital spokeswoman said that as of Dec. 11, the hospital has performed 71 heart and lung transplants since 1982.

Straw said the odds of survival are constantly improving for heart and lung transplants, and the survival rate varies not only from patient to patient but from hospital to hospital. Gagen's success rate was pegged at 60-40, her mother said.

But 16 long months of waiting by the phone went by before a heart and lungs suitable for Gagen were available. During that time, the Gagens had to be ready at a moment's notice to get a plane immediately to Pittsburgh at any time day or night.

Sara Gagen had the flight schedules for all the airlines to Pittsburgh memorized, and she had back-up flights planned. Her precautions paid off when the call came. The Gagens left phone numbers with the Presbyterian-University Hospital staff where they could be reached. They even wore beepers when outside the home. They installed call waiting and a second phone line, and every time the phone on the special line rang, everyone jumped. Usually it was a wrong number or a solicitor.

Finally, on Oct. 20, 1989, at 3:30 a.m., the special phone rang and it wasn't a wrong number.

Sara Gagen immediately called and made ticket reservations with two airlines. The Gagens already had their suitcases packed and they were out the door. Once at the airport, the first flight on which they had reservations was canceled. Fortunately, the reservations on the second flight were good. The Gagens were at the Pittsburgh hospital at 7 a.m.

The 7 1/2-hour operation began immediately. Gagen's parents waited and waited and waited. They didn't hear anything officially until 4:30 p.m. They didn't see their daughter until 6 p.m., 11 hours after they left Donna Gagen in the hands of the surgeon, Dr. Bartley Griffith, and a team of four doctors. Throughout her stay at the hospital, the team of physicians attending her would grow to 22 doctors and an untold number of nurses, a social worker and other support personnel.

While the hospital staff treated the patients and their families professionally and sensitively, Sara Gagen said, "The only complaint is that they don't prepare you for what they look like following the operation."

She said her first sight of her daughter afterward was of a swollen patient attached to a multitude of tubes, IVs, fluid bags and assorted high-tech monitoring equipment.

The Gagens were delighted, however, to see that her complexion had already improved and her fingernails and lips were pink. They had never seen their daughter with pink fingernails. They pulled the covers up a little and saw her toenails were also pink.

Donna Gagen spent the next 15 days in intensive care and then 17 days in special care. Six weeks after the operation, on Dec. 2, she was able to go home. Sara Gagen spent the entire time with her daughter at the hospital, and her father was there off and on while trying to get time in where he works at Grand Trunk Railroad in Detroit.

One of the first things the doctors wanted Donna Gagen to do was to breathe deeply. But she had never done that before, and when she tried, it hurt because her rib cage was still healing. She had to be taught how to breathe, her mother said.

As with all transplant patients, she has to take an anti-rejection drug for the rest of her life. She's on an experimental drug, FK506, from Japan. The new drug has fewer negative side effects than other anti-rejection drugs, and so far it appears to be working well.

Periodically, Donna Gagen has to go back to Pittsburgh for lung biopsies to determine if the organs are still healthy. Once a week she goes to Harper Hospital for blood work.

With each passing day, she and her family become more optimistic. She's looking forward to going to camp with her church's youth group for the first time. She said she plans to go to college and she hopes to write children's books.

The Gagens plan to do some traveling. In October they plan to drive through Canada to Alaska and California. A couple of years ago, the Gagens went to Disney World, but Donna wasn't able to enjoy it. When they go to Florida next time, it will be an entirely new experience.

Sara Gagen said the decision to get the operation was Donna's, who waived throughout the 16-month wait for a donor. But once the call came, she never second-guessed her decision and never complained, her mother said. Her daughter's bravery has been remarkable, she said. "I always feel no matter how you feel, there's always someone worse off," Sara Gagen said. "We never talked about dying."

The operation cost nearly $500,000, she said, and she's grateful for her husband's health insurance through Grand Trunk that covered most of the expenses. She said that while at the hospital, she heard many heart-breaking stories from parents who had inadequate health insurance or none at all.

Throughout the ordeal, the Gagens have become educated in organ transplants. They urge people to take the steps now to allow their organs to be donated. If the paperwork has been processed beforehand, it will save time for the hospital and an emotional decision for family members later.

Park officials concerned by port authority plans

By John Minnis
Assistant Editor

Park officials are concerned over proposed legislation to give the Detroit/Wayne County Port Authority power to condemn private property for port use.

Monday afternoon, Park Mayor Pro Tem Vernon Ausherman and City Manager Dale Krajniak attended an informational meeting hosted by state Sen. John Kelly to discuss the provisions of House Bill 5018.

The bill will grant the authority condemnation powers in order to expand port operations. Currently, the authority's power is more along the lines of promotional activities, whereas the proposed legislation would give the authority power to affect the development of port facilities.

Critics of HB 5018, including the Greater Detroit Chamber of Commerce, say the bill will give the authority power to take private property and property belonging to upriver and downriver communities other than Detroit.

"There is an implied threat as the legislation stands," Ausherman told his fellow members on the council Monday night. He said there is a chance "by some stretch of the imagination" that property such as Windmill Pointe Park could be taken by the authority.

According to port authority Executive Director James H. Kellow, who is a Park resident, the authority has no plans or reason to take Grosse Pointe property.

Councilman Daniel Clark echoed the chamber's position that the port needs of Detroit are being met by private port terminal companies and the dynamics of free enterprise. He opposed any expansion of the port authority's power.

Kellow said the authority's role is not to take over private business, but rather to stimulate port operations in Detroit.

At the urging of downriver communities, Krajniak drafted a resolution to be adopted by the council. The resolution, designed to influence HB 5018, calls for greater representation of other Wayne County communities on the authority board and to require approval by Wayne County communities of any condemnation action in their jurisdictions.

At the request of Clark, a paragraph is going to be added to the resolution pointing out that the city opposes any expansion of the power of the port authority. The revised resolution will be considered at the council's Feb. 12 meeting.

According to Ausherman, the Park was the only Grosse Pointe city that sent representatives to Sen. Kelly's meeting.

Incoming school superintendent discusses district

By Ronald J. Bernas
Staff Writer

Ed Shine takes the reigns of the Grosse Pointe school system on March 2. It is the top position in a district he knows well and has worked to improve for the last 4 1/2 years.

Shine, 46, has been a high school administrator since 1978, first as headmaster at Roger Ludlowe High School in Fairfield, Conn., where he first came to the attention of Superintendent John Whritner, the man he replaces.

Whritner, who also was a Connecticut educator before coming to Grosse Pointe, was the head of a committee in charge of accrediting high schools in Connecticut. Whritner spent a few days in Roger Ludlowe High School studying Shine and the school's program.

Shine said he didn't see or hear from Whritner until he heard from a consultant that Whritner wanted Shine to consider a position in the Grosse Pointe school district.

The position was principal at Grosse Pointe South High School and, at the time, Shine was not interested in moving.

"But I knew the reputation of the Grosse Pointe schools so I came out for a visit," he said.

He made the trip with his wife, Madeline, and was impressed with the area and the district enough to pick up and move here.

"Grosse Pointe schools have the same reputation in the Midwest that Greenwich schools have in Connecticut," Shine said. (Whritner is leaving to take the top position in Greenwich.) "And I thought that if I had the opportunity to be associated with one of the finest school districts in the country, this would be the place to do it. And Grosse Pointe is a wonderful place for young children to grow up."

Considering that his children were young enough to handle a move well, the Shines decided it was the best time to make a move. He came to the Pointes in 1985.

In January 1989, he was promoted to deputy superintendent, a position he filled until his appointment as superintendent last week.

His knowledge of the district and its players means the schools will be able to continue the momentum they have, and major projects such as construction of a new library and implementing of site budgeting will be able to continue. Indeed, during Shine's time as deputy superintendent and as principal, he was on many of the committees that created the programs.

He was a member of the committee which formed the Curriculum Coordinating Council, the committee that created the new administrative evaluation process and he was an internal planner of the school's strategic planning effort.

He knows the district well and knows what needs to be done to keep it strong.

"First of all, Grosse Pointe has a very well-educated, involved and committed citizenry who, within reasonable financial constraints, are willing to finance the school district," he said. "I have never seen the commitment and involvement of the parents to the education of their children as I have in Grosse Pointe. They also give us very bright children."

The faculty is another of the district's strengths.

"We have been able to hire bright, hardworking and committed members of the faculty," Shine said, "which helps make Grosse Pointe a respected district."

He also knows the district's weak points.

"In our strategic planning, we want to continue to do a better job for kids in the lower quartile," he said. "We want to reach the kids who have an average level of ability but (to whom) learning doesn't come easy."

The system needs to upgrade the programming for the approximately 15 percent of Grosse Pointe graduates who do not go on to higher education.

"Our goal is that every student needs to be successful," he said.

The schools need to continue updating their curriculum, and Shine was instrumental in establishing the Curriculum Coordinating Council which reviews curriculum in all areas every five years. The CCC also involves the teachers in the decision-making process, which Shine believes is essential in maintaining good programming.

The strategic planning committee is also exploring the place technology will have in the schools of the future. Computers, instructional television, cable and satellite programming can be used to the advantage of students and faculty. The possibility of linking all the schools into one computer network is also being explored, but currently seems cost-prohibitive.

Keeping the buildings in the district in shape is another ongoing program of the strategic planning committee, and plans are being made to remove lead pipes, asbestos and other potentially harmful building materials.

He has been involved in many issues which the board of education is currently facing, and offers opinions not much different than the current superintendent.

The PACE program, which offers enrichment programming for gifted students at the elementary level, was recommended to be put on a one year hiatus and the money saved was to have been used to study the K-12 gifted and talented program. Parents of PACE students protested and an attempt at a compromise is now being made.

"I participated in the discussions that led to the recommendation," Shine said. "I believe it's a good way to accomplish a great deal in a short time and get on with a new program."

Site-budgeting is being implemented in the system this year. It is a system of budgeting that allows each school to design a program they feel best fits its needs and its budget.

It may be new to the Pointes, but Shine first worked with a site budgeting system in Connecticut in 1976. He feels it gives each school a chance to create a program unique to its needs, and that the board will have more and better information regarding what is happening at each school. The board has to develop a tolerance for ambiguity of funding, until the system becomes settled, he believes.

Shine has been involved with the library issue from the beginning when it was first suggested to add on to Central Library. After that failed the voters' test, the board approved a plan for building a new library at Brownell Middle School and converting Central Library to the board's offices and selling the current board offices.

"I know that the board of education has come fully behind the building at Brownell," Shine said. "I hope that when it comes before the voters either in June (1990) or February (1991) they will support it."

Shine has a bachelor of arts degree and a master of arts degree in secondary education from Fairfield University and has completed graduate work for his doctorate at the University of Connecticut. He never wrote his dissertation, however, after deciding it wasn't necessary.

His management style is, he describes, one of gathering all points of view before he makes a recommendation to the board. "I listen a great deal, and help people clarify their thinking," he said. "I make decisions after everyone has had input. I discover what our best thinking is and then develop a consensus."

"I have a propensity for planning and organization. I like to know what all the issues are and be planning way ahead so that we're never responding to a crisis."

The board entered into a three-year contract with Shine at a salary of $95,000 a year. But Shine expressed hope that he would be school chief for much longer than that.

"I never have accepted a position thinking I was going to another position," he said. "I have a daughter entering kindergarten this year and I would very much like to see her graduate from one of the Grosse Pointe high schools."

He and his wife have three children — Christine, Brendan and Mary Kate.

Woods man flouts police after speeding

An 18-year-old Woods man apparently attempted to asphyxiate police officers during a bizarre traffic-stop incident Jan. 22.

Police officers were monitoring traffic at 4:05 a.m. when they saw a motorist squeal the tires of his 1983 Pontiac while pulling away from the stop light at Vernier and Mack. The car continued accelerating rapidly as it traveled east on Vernier toward Jefferson. The car was clocked at 70 mph in the 35 mph zone.

The Woods officers began pursuit and followed the car when it turned north on Marter Road and then east on Hollywood. As the car turned onto Hollywood, the officers turned on their overhead lights to get the car to stop.

The driver of the car, however, refused to pull over and did not stop until it pulled into the driveway of a home in the 900 block of Hollywood where the driver lived.

According to police reports, the man was told several times to turn the car's motor off and to exit the vehicle. The man refused, stating, "Why? I'm home. I wasn't doing anything wrong" and "I don't have to. This is private property. I live here."

When police attempted to reach into the car to turn it off, the man rolled up the window. The doors were locked. The man then opened the garage door with a remote control and drove into the garage. The officers walked into the garage, and the man closed the garage door and kept the car running.

After two minutes in the closed garage, the man's mother opened a door leading from the garage to the main part of the house. At this time, the man turned off the engine and got out of the car. He was then placed under arrest for interfering with the public safety officers.

The officers explained to the man's father, who had witnessed the arrest, what was happening. The father told his son, who was offering "minor" resistance during the arrest, to cooperate with the officers.

At the station, officers learned the man was driving on a restricted license that stipulated that no one under 25 years old be in the car with him and that he not get any speeding violations. He was ticketed for speeding and violating a condition of his restricted license.

He was advised that the city attorney will be prosecuting the case.

Dr. Mary Bigler, professor of Education at Eastern Michigan University, will speak on "Reading is a Family Affair" at Kerby School Thursday, Feb. 1 at 7:30 p.m.

Bigler is an internationally known consultant and speaker in the area of motivation and reading. During her presentation, she will share ideas on how parents can help their children become better readers who like to read.

There will be a book sale at the conclusion of the speech. The public is invited.

Poetry discussion

The Poetry Resource Center of Michigan, co-sponsored by James A. Monning Books and Grub Street-A Bookery, will host a talk by Professor Murray Jackson on the poet Countee Cullen and his connection with the Harlem Renaissance.

The talk will deal with Cullen's poetry as well as the music, art and other literary contributions of this period in American cultural history.

The talk is free and will be at James A. Monning Books, Thursday, Jan. 25 at 7 p.m. There will be free refreshments and an open poetry reading on a first-come, first-read basis following the lecture.

For more information, call 331-2238 or 882-7143.

Hospice

Hospice of Southeastern Michigan, a system of care for terminally ill patients in the tri-country area, is in need of volunteers to visit patients and their families in the Grosse Pointe area.

Volunteer training is available at the St. John-Bon Secours Nursing Care Center Feb. 3, 6 and 10. Call Betty Pejakovich at 882-0677 for more information.

Cover girl

It's going to be hard to top 4-year-old Jacqueline Bernard's first concert. She and her parents and neighbors went to the Palace of Auburn Hills for a New Kids on the Block concert Jan. 11, and as they were walking to their seats, they were stopped by a representative from the group who asked if Jacqueline would like to go on stage while the New Kids sang "Cover Girl" to her. She did and the group then went backstage for some photos. Jacqueline, sitting on Jordan Knight's lap, is the daughter of Andrew and Judy Bernard, owners of Friends Hair & Nails on Mack Avenue in Grosse Pointe Woods.

'50s dance planned

The Regina High School Mothers Guild plans a '50s-'60s dance for adults Saturday, Jan. 27 from 8 p.m. to 1 a.m. at the school, 20200 Kelly Road, Harper Woods.

Cost is $10 per person and includes dancing, food, beer and wine and prizes.

Sweetheart Fete to benefit Capuchins

Pointes East, a group of local restaurants, will host a Sweetheart Fete for the second year in a row at the Roostertail, 100

Marquette. The date is Thursday, Feb. 8, from 6 p.m. to midnight.

There will be entertainment

Community band starts

The Grosse Pointe Community Band will begin its winter term on Tuesday, Feb. 6 in the South Band Room.

This term's concert season will consist of nine Tuesday rehearsals from 7:30 to 9 p.m., followed by a combined concert with the Grosse Pointe Community Chorus on April 5.

Anyone who plays a band instrument is encouraged to join the concert band, directed by Ralph Miller and sponsored by Community Education.

Interested musicians may call 343-2178 for enrollment information or Ralph Miller at 343-2240 in the evening for specific information concerning the Community Band.

Sunday concert

The Friends of Music at Wayne State University is sponsoring a concert at 3:30 p.m. Sunday, Jan. 28 at the Unitarian Church of Grosse Pointe, 17150 Maumee Road.

The program will feature the Essex Piano Trio with faculty members Doris Richards, piano, Richard Pippo, cello, and Shi-Wa Wang, violin. Also performing will be the 1989-90 Friends of Music scholarship winner, flutist Rena Urso.

Grosse Pointe composer James Hartway will discuss one of his compositions, "City Sketches," which is on the program, as are compositions by Telemann, Gluck, and contemporary composer Ellen Taaffe Zwilich.

Music students are urged to attend. Although there is no admission charge, donations to Friends of Music are expected.

NOTICE OF HEARING ZONING BOARD OF APPEALS

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that the Zoning Board of Appeals will meet in City Hall at 90 Kerby Road, Grosse Pointe Farms, MI on

at 7:30 p.m. to hear the appeal of Mr. & Mrs. Joseph Lackey owners of the premises located at 32 Harbor Hill, from the denial of the Building Department to issue a building permit for the enlargement of a family room to the rear of their existing dwelling located at the foregoing address. Such permit issuance was denied for reason that:

- The residence located on the foregoing premises is non-conforming for reason that it is in violation of the rear and side yard provisions of Article XIII, Section 1300 of the City's Zoning Ordinance, and in accordance with the provisions of Article XV, Section 1502, Item 4-A of the City's Zoning Ordinance, no such structure may be enlarged or structurally altered unless a variance is granted.
- The proposed addition on the rear would further infringe upon the minimum rear yard requirements of 40 feet leaving a rear yard of 18.7 feet thereby requiring a variance from the provisions of Article XIII, Section 1300 of the City's Zoning Ordinance.

The Hearing will be public. Interested property owners or residents of the City are invited to attend.

Shine called 'outsider' who came 'inside'

Edward J. Shine, who at 46 will become Grosse Pointe's 13th superintendent of schools in March, is an "outsider" who has become a well-informed "insider" after four and a half years of experience as principal at South High School and as deputy superintendent.

A native of Connecticut where his previous experience also had been obtained, Shine accepted the Grosse Pointe offer to become the South principal in 1985 because he knew the Grosse Pointe system compared in excellence in the Midwest with the Greenwich system in the East to which Superintendent John Whritner will go in March.

More specifically, he says he came to Grosse Pointe because he saw it as an opportunity to be associated with one of the nation's finest systems; because he regarded Grosse Pointe as a wonderful place for young children to grow up, and because his own children were 7, 5 and 1, which made it a good time to make a move.

In the school board's view, Shine qualifies as an "insider" because he has been in the system for more than four years. The point was important to the board which reviewed its own staff's capabilities to see whether it could avoid another long and costly national search. Shine obviously met the board's criteria.

Unlike some previous occupants, Shine does not see the superintendent's job as a stepping stone to another position. In fact, he told Grosse Pointe News interviewers he will have a daughter starting kindergarten next fall and "would like to see her graduate from a Grosse Pointe high school." That could be 13 years hence.

The new superintendent is impressed by the local school system for several reasons: the well-educated, involved citizenry who, within certain constraints, are so willing to support the school district; the parents who are more committed to and more involved with the education of their children than any others he has known, and the district's ability to attract bright, committed and hard-working people to teach the district's bright children. Those assets, in Shine's view, make Grosse Pointe "a somewhat special place to be in education."

Not that there aren't some problems here. For example, Shine believes the schools should do a better job for students in the lower quartile who have an average range of ability but for whom learning doesn't come easily. The high schools, too, should do a better job for students not going on to college.

In his view, the system wants every student to be successful and work to the maximum of his own potential, whether he is among the 80 to 85 percent of the graduates who go to college or the others who seek another road to success.

Yet it seems unlikely Shine will make many changes of emphasis originating in the superintendent's office. Shine approves such concepts as the curriculum coordinating council which reviews each of the curriculum areas at least once every five years and which also keeps an eye on such objectives as staff development, supervision and evaluation. In fact, he has been a part of the council since Whritner was instrumental in setting it up.

Whether the subject is site budgeting, which enables each community school to generate programs the staff and parents believe best meet its needs, or the decision to build a new library on the Brownell school site, Shine has been a participant in the decision-making process and thus is familiar with the background and the discussions about such problems.

The new superintendent has B.A. and M.A. degrees from Fairfield University and took his graduate work for a Ph.D. in education at the University of Connecticut, but did not write his dissertation. An administrator since 1974, he felt his need to obtain the doctorate had diminished and that the writing of his dissertation would not have been especially beneficial in his work. He hasn't excluded the achievement of that degree from his future educational possibilities, however.

A big, friendly man who spends his spare time walking, reading spy mysteries and driving his children to their meetings, Shine appears to be the kind of a laid-back superintendent who will wear well with students and parents as well as with the faculty and the school board. That appearance bodes well for the administration team he will head when Whritner leaves for Connecticut in March.

High marks for Bush's year

President George Bush ended his first year in office Jan. 20 with high marks from the public as well as from expert observers, even though the administration could not claim many important achievements in 1989.

Instead, the president apparently sought to consolidate the changes wrought by his predecessor, Ronald Reagan, and to broaden their acceptance. But his repetition of his 1988 battle cry, "Read my lips: No new taxes," made it almost impossible to start any new programs or expand any old ones.

With Congress in the hands of the opposition Democrats, perhaps it was not surprising that Congress voted with the president less often than it did with any other postwar president in his first year in office.

However, Bush also has shown himself to be more pragmatic than expected. For example, just last week Lee Atwater, the GOP national chairman, proposed that Republicans should support GOP candidates regardless of their stand on the controversial abortion issue.

Atwater would not have made such a statement to the Republican National Committee without advance clearance with Bush. But the comment, even though sharply criticized by the Right to Life movement, indicated that the president was willing to accommodate himself to the political reality that indicates increased public support for the pro-choice view as the 1990 election approaches.

It remains to be seen, however, whether in making future federal appointments that are sensitive to the abortion issue, the White House will follow Atwater's injunction that there is no litmus test on the issue that would be grounds for rejecting Republicans who support the president and who believe in the party's overall philosophy.

On the federal deficit, however, the administration has been put into an embarrassing position by Sen. Pat Moynihan's proposal to roll back the 1990 increase in Social Security taxes. It's one thing to be against new taxes. It's another to be opposed to any reduction in taxes, even when the reduction would worsen the deficit.

The administration also is having trouble satisfying U.S. backers of Eastern European nations that need more U.S. aid to convert to democracy and a market economy. Even the proposal by Sen. Robert Dole, the GOP Senate leader, to reduce aid to such major recipients as Israel and Egypt in order to make more funds available to the nations casting off communism doesn't seem to fill the bill.

The question is whether in the face of these and other pressing problems, the president will be able to retain his personal popularity in 1990. He does start from an 80 percent approval level, chiefly as a result of what the public regarded as the successful invasion of Panama. While even Reagan lost popularity in his second year in office, chiefly as a result of an economic slump, it obviously didn't hurt him in 1984. Bush hopes for another 1984 in 1992.

More trouble for the JOA?

Troubles seem to be mounting for the joint operating agreement (JOA) under which both Detroit daily newspapers are now published.

Both papers, to their credit, have been publishing many columns of criticisms from their readers who have complained about everything from the poor delivery service being provided by the News and the Free Press to the relocation of features and the shifting of sections which makes them difficult to find in the combined issues on Saturdays and Sundays.

Such complaints may die off when readers get accustomed to the JOA, but a more serious problem may be emerging for the News and Free Press Sunday edition with the announcement that Adams Communications Corp. will launch a new Sunday newspaper on Feb. 4.

Adams, which now publishes the Daily Tribune in Royal Oak, the Macomb Daily in Mount Clemens and 14 weeklies, plans to put out two editions of the paper with different local and sports news for Macomb County and south Oakland County. Adams expects the Sunday paper, to be known as the Sunday Suburban, to sell up to 100,000 copies, or slightly more than the combined daily circulation of the two weekday papers.

The new paper will include general news, lifestyle, sports, business, classified and world and national news sections. Ben Burns, editor and publisher for Adams and former executive editor of the Detroit News, said the paper will be sold for 35 cents at the outset and probably increase to 50 cents in three to six months. The new combined Detroit News and Free Press is $1 on Sunday.

Even before the advent of the new Sunday paper, the Detroit dailies had been reporting reduced advertising volume with the weekday papers running a smaller number of pages than they did before the JOA began. This decline also forced a cut-back in the number of sections from six to four on some weekdays.

The rise in JOA advertising rates has been blamed for the decline in volume with some advertising accounts being shifted to suburban newspapers. The recently organized Suburban Detroit Newspaper Network which combines 45 suburban daily and weekly papers is claiming some of the credit for the Detroit downturn.

The advent of a new Sunday paper tends to prove that in the capitalist world, competition seeks to fill any apparent vacuum, whether in the newspaper business or anywhere else.

Letters

Generous

To the Editor:

During our November-December 1989 "Help Feed the Hungry: Buy A Case Of Food" campaign, newspapers across the metro-Detroit area participated by printing feature articles and/or "mail in coupons" to order cases of goods, through Gleaners, to be bought for the hungry.

The readers of Grosse Pointe News played a key role in helping us achieve our goal by responding generously. In the overall campaign, well over 2,000 individuals and companies in Metro Detroit contributed $77,638.85. This translates approximately into six "18 wheeler" semi-truck loads of food which will provide 240,000 meals for the hungry. These cases of food will be distributed cost free to our 184-member non-profit feeding agencies.

Without the support of the community, Gleaners would not be able to continue to provide food to its member agencies which provide 155,000 meals weekly to the poor and less fortunate.

Thank you for helping us feed the hungry.

Errors

To the Editor:

Rob Fulton's inane column about resigned coach Bo Schembechler and current coach Gary Moeller of Michigan contains two errors and probably a third.

Coach Moeller did not coach at Indiana, he coached at Illinois. Bo's protégé Bill Mallory is at Indiana.

Coach Moeller did not fail at Illinois. He was removed because he told them his program would take five years (his contract). The university wanted results sooner and hired Mike White from California, who hired a junior college football team that led to NCAA probation. He has since been fired.

Michigan has not played Michigan State in football in 1990, so they could hardly have lost. A review of Michigan's returning team indicates that Coach Moeller will be fielding a very respectfully good team, which will play on the field, not in the press.

Other than that, one can only say - Go Blue - Allez Bleu - Avanti Blue, etc.

Cards wanted

To the Editor:

What have you done with last year's Christmas cards? If you still have them, we can certainly use them. The American public today is becoming more aware of the tragedy of child abuse and neglect.

But the public is not aware of some of the programs in operation to rescue the innocent victims of brutality.

Congrats, you've won!

There seem to be a lot of big prizes going around lately. Several television personalities, including Ed McMahon, are saying so.

But the fact is, according to a recent ABC survey, few people ever win anything.

But don't we all want to hit the Lotto or the Publisher's Clearing House multi-million dollar award?

It seems several marketing and advertising strategists are well aware of the gap between desire and reality. Just try coming out of a restaurant or auto service center without noticing the cardboard displays: "Take One, win a free membership" or "Win a free trip, all expenses paid."

I recently tried a couple of spins with Lady Luck and filled out a couple of short forms. Much to my delight, in both cases, I won. At least that's what the two people on the phone claimed.

One of the callers claimed to work for the best and fastest growing fitness centers in the country. The other was with the largest vacation/leisure clubs in the world.

Both seemed worked up and both tried to get me just as excited. "You have been selected as one of our winners," one of the callers said. "All you have to do is come in for an appointment and we'll present you with your winner's certificate." Sounded easy enough, right? Wrong!

What ensued, in both cases, sounds somewhat like a "Leave It To Beaver" episode in which the naive protagonist is placed in a marketing maze only to discover that the world is full of empty promises and well-disguised sales pitches.

Well, I'm not quite as naive as the young Beaver Cleaver, but the sales pitches of today are more sophisticated than those of the postwar generation.

"You have definitely won one of the prizes, and you now have a chance at the big prize — an all-expenses paid trip to Hawaii," the sincere voice explained. "All you have to do is come in."

The other prize was a free health club membership worth as much as several hundred dollars.

So off I went to claim my prizes.

When I got there — to the "largest vacation club in the world" — the receptionist told me that I could claim my prize, but there was a "short" presentation first. I took my seat in a room with about 150 other "prize winners."

The lights dimmed and a huge video screen lit up. For the next 40 minutes, I watched a presentation designed to sell me a $3,500, three-year vacation package. I declined.

Afterward an army of salespeople converged and one sat down at each table. Again I was told that I definitely won something. For another 30 minutes the salesman asked me things like, "Doesn't your wife deserve something like this?" and "Wouldn't you like to travel every weekend?"

"Well yes, but I..." I sure told him.

"Just think what your family and friends would think if they knew you were traveling around the world," he advanced.

They would probably think I'm stupid for dropping $3,500 on a vacation plan at this point in my life.

One after another, the salespeople stood up and announced that the people at their table had agreed to purchase the plan. The salesman at my table grew more desperate with each announcement. "Come on, don't you want to step into another class?" he begged. "I don't know what else I can say to you. The others realize that this is a one-time chance. If you don't sign up, you won't get another chance."

"I don't think so," I said, with all the backbone of a worm. "Can I have my free prize now?"

He even brought his supervisor over for some additional arm twisting, but to no avail. With great disappointment, the eager salesman admitted a bitter defeat and guided me to the "prize room" for my date with Lady Luck.

The salesman halfheartedly spun a small cylindrical basket with several cards inscribed with various vacation spots including, I presume, the one with the all-expenses-paid trip to Hawaii. The basket slowly squealed to a stop. "OK, you can reach in and claim your prize," the salesman moaned.

I winced when I read the card. "One night hotel only, in Anchorage, Alaska."

Great. All I have to do is travel the better part of 6,000 miles (round trip) and claim my free night in an Anchorage hotel.

My disappointment grew when I read the fine print. The disclaimer stated the prize was good only if the hotel had a vacancy. If it was full, my big prize would have to be rescheduled to a later date.

As I drove home, I could almost hear the young Beaver Cleaver saying, "Gee Wally, do I feel like a dope. I'll never fill out one of those dumb cards again."

For the past 17 years I have donated my time and energies as a member of the board of trustees of one such organization — St. Jude's Ranch for Children in Boulder City, Nevada, a nonsectarian facility just outside Las Vegas.

St. Jude's doubled in size this year when it purchased a closed home for girls; it is doing a good job. It could do a bigger and better job with more support. Help me help these kids by alerting your readers to St. Jude's unique fundraising project, recycling used Christmas cards.

Please send your Christmas card fronts to: St. Jude's Ranch for Children, P.O. Box 1426-LE, Boulder City, Nevada 89005-1426. For further information, call 702-293-3131.

The kids will love you for it.

Calendar

To the Editor:

Noted with interest the Free Press article about the Grosse Pointe Woods November calendar poem.

It did rhyme, but didn't make a lot of sense (peas in a turkey?).

In November of 1991 they may use my little poem:

Yes ma'm, no ma'm
Isn't this a blessing,
Open up the turkey end
And spoon out the dressing!

Dorothy Lentine
Grosse Pointe Woods

Editor's Note: The writer refers to a poem in the Grosse Pointe Woods municipal calendar for November, a

Thanksgiving grace:
Yes ma'm, no ma'm
Thank you ma'm, please.
Open up the turkey's butt
And fork out the peas.

Bad idea

To the Editor:

Imagination is a wonderful thing.

For instance, let your mind wander back to the gracious 1920s and imagine you have been invited to a gala social event hosted by the Algiers.

Your chauffeured limousine glides along the tree-lined approach to Gov. Alger's stately mansion and enters the circular driveway crowned by a sparkling fountain. A liveried footman announces "Welcome to the Alger House."

Pure fantasy, right? Not really, because we can all still enjoy a similar experience by simply turning off Jefferson and driving down the same tree-lined approach.

Thanks to the foresight and generosity of the Alger estate, we too can enjoy the ambiance of that most glorious period of Grosse Pointe history.

More letters on page 9A

Now we are asked to believe that after these many years, this cobblestone circular driveway has suddenly become a traffic hazard and must be blocked off on one side. It is proposed this can be best accomplished by building a commercial addition on the left front of the Alger House. This protrusion will effectively block the circular entry so that little old ladies, and a few granddads, will no longer represent a threat to life, limb and property by being dropped off or picked up at the front entrance.

So what if it is raining, snowing or sleeting. Let them eat cake like everyone else, right?

It certainly pays to keep current with our wonderful community newspaper, the Grosse Pointe News. For instance, in that same report

Marathon Man

Tom Coles of Grosse Pointe Woods completed the Detroit Free Press Marathon on Oct. 15. The temperature that day was in the low 80s, and Coles ran a little more slowly than he would have liked.

"It took me a bit more than five hours," he said. "I walked from mile 22 to mile 26, then ran to the finish line — to look good for the camera."

But never mind. It was worth the effort. Pledges for his 26-plus miles have raised "a lot" — more than $10,000 for brain research via the National Alliance for Research in Schizophrenia and Depression.

Coles, who is president of the Alliance for the Mentally III — Eastside, has run for the money for the last three years.

"In 1987, we raised $830," he said. "In 1988, we raised $3,025. I twisted a few more arms this year."

Coles, who is 58, said he ran six marathons from 1979 to 1984. He skipped two years. Then began running again in 1987 for brain research.

People are making good on their pledges and some additional money is still coming in.

If anyone would like to contribute to the fund, send a check (made out to NARSAD) to the Alliance for the Mentally III — Eastside, 19840 Harper, Harper Woods, 48225.

Three guesses

Q: Guess who's playing the classics?

A: A threesome, tonight, Thursday, Jan. 25, on WQRS-FM, on a program of the same name, "Guess Who's Playing the Classics?"

Not Larry, Moe and Curly; not the Andrews Sisters; not Huey, Dewey and Louie.

It's John DeNomme, George Young and Joel Stone of Village Records and Tapes. They've chosen their favorite classical stuff and will talk about it, from 9 to 10 p.m. tonight — on the air.

Tinseltown tidbits

On Jan. 4, staff writer Ronald J. Bernas wrote an article about former Grosse Pointe residents Clara Ray and her husband Charles.

Before the Rays were Grosse Pointers, they were Hollywooders: He was a silent movie star and she designed costumes for silent films.

We learned about the Rays when, just prior to her death, Clara gave some old Hollywood photos to a nurse at the Maroun Nursing Center.

Our article jiggled the memory of Bill Huntington, owner of Walton-Pierce, a clothing store in the Village. Clara Ray worked for the store during the '50s and '60s, doing exactly what she did in Hollywood: designing clothes.

Rosalie Hoffman still works at Walton-Pierce, and remembers Clara. "She was a lady," Hoffman said. "She was very, very charming, and petite and she had a flair for the dramatic. When she walked into a room, people paid attention."

Hoffman said Clara Ray had a knack for wrapping presents. "She wrapped them so beautifully — in pale blue. That was her favorite color. They had the most beautiful bows. You didn't want to open them."

And Ray's clothing designs? "Her attention to color and detail was exquisite," Huntington said.

Lose the blues

If it's been a while since you've had a good yuk, Macomb Community College wants to help you recapture your sense of humor — and possibly your health.

"The Healing Power of Laughter" is a lecture/activity session that will examine how laughter improves the quality of lives and helps people live longer.

The class will be on Tuesday, Feb. 6, from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m. at Macomb's Fraser Campus, 32101 Caroline. Fee is $20.

Here's the funny part: Participants should wear loose clothing and flat shoes and should not be in a grumpy mood.

Teaching students to think is main objective of master plan

By Ronald J. Bernas
Staff Writer

In its constant efforts to upgrade the curriculum and the education Grosse Pointe youngsters receive, the school system is studying a new way of getting students to learn.

Called "thinking skills," the method will be incorporated slowly into the curriculum system-wide in a few years, starting on a small scale with pilot programs in September.

There will not be a class called Thinking Skills; instead, it will be a method of presenting material that will help students improve the way they approach learning.

Adopting a thinking skills program is part of the system's strategic plan, and has been in the discussion and planning stages for two years.

A committee of about 20 teachers, administrators and community members originally presented a program to the board which, the board said, was too large in scope and too expensive to implement, according to Lynne Olds and Joyce Warner, co-chairs of the committee. The committee then returned with the current plan which will begin on a pilot basis in September 1990.

Olds is a teacher in the Program for Academic and Creative Education, Warner is a teacher in Grosse Pointe North's reading assistance program.

Deputy Superintendent Ed Shine and Rosalie Bryk, who heads staff development, were also involved in the development and implementation of the program.

"One of the normal questions is 'aren't we teaching kids to think?'" Shine said. "The answer is yes. But through research we've learned more about patterns of the brain and that people don't think in the same way — there are different levels of thinking."

"This is the school district's organized attempt by which we will train all our teachers and infuse thinking skills in an organized way," Bryk said.

Job markets are changing, and career choices are more limited for those students who graduate with just basic literacy. Even some factory jobs require more than a little familiarity with computers.

The committee has been studying methods of teaching thinking skills — a relatively new area of study in which there is a wealth of information — and has isolated four methods they will try in elementary schools next year. They are still looking for teacher volunteers who have a background in thinking skills to devote a school year to the program.

Teachers chosen will have a chance to meet with others in the pilot to determine what works and what doesn't out of the four models they have chosen. From those discussions, a Grosse Pointe model will be developed.

According to Bloom's Taxonomy, the recognized classification of levels of thinking, most textbook questions are focused on the three lowest levels of thinking: knowledge, comprehension and application.

The next three levels of thinking are analysis, synthesis (taking knowledge of one subject and applying it to another set of circumstances) and evaluation.

Teachers need to be taught to change the questions which involve the lower levels of thinking to questions that require students to think at higher levels.

An example would be as follows: In teaching the American Civil War, students would be asked to list the causes of the war from the North point of view, then from the South point of view, and then determine why the reasons are so different.

Teachers also need to practice wait time, the time between when they ask a question and the students response.

Because some minds work differently does not mean they work better, Shine said, and teachers need to wait until everyone gets a chance to determine the answer instead of picking the student who puts his hand up first.

"If kids don't respond right away, it doesn't mean they aren't thinking," Shine said. "It may be that they're thinking in a different way."

Bryk said there are certain verbs and ways of formulating questions which will elicit answers that need higher levels of thinking.

A major aspect of the program is how to test thinking skills, and it is a question that does not have an easy answer.

"We wrestled with that subject for a long time," Olds said, "and the answer didn't present itself".

"The evaluation is extremely important," Warner said. "There is no formal way to test. One way is informal evaluation."

Informal evaluation comes when a teacher realizes that a student is asking questions he didn't ask before or is using the phraseology of the thinking skills curriculum.

The board of education has yet to approve the pilot program, but should do so by next year when the program is to start. A thinking skills curriculum should be adopted systemwide by 1992.

Farms flag

The city of Grosse Pointe Farms has unveiled its first official city flag. Bearing the city seal in green on a white background, the flag was first displayed at the first annual Beautification Awards ceremony. Its design was developed by the Grosse Pointe Farms Advisory Beautification Commission and its production was funded by the Grosse Pointe Farms Foundation.

The flags are available for sale to residents at the League Shop, 72 Kercheval, for $35. All proceeds will be forwarded to the Farms Foundation for future beautification projects.

Case Number: FFC 02226

Superior Court of California, County of San Bernardino. The People of the State of California, to Roger Robert Scopas and to all persons claiming to be the father or mother of said minor person(s) above named.

By order of this Court you are hereby cited and advised that you may appear before the Judge Presiding in West District-Rancho Cucamonga, 8303 Haven Avenue, Rancho Cucamonga, CA 91730 of the above-entitled court on Feb. 8, 1990, 8:30 a.m. of that day, then and there to show cause, if any you have, why said person should not be declared free from the control of his parents to the petition on file herein.

If the Court finds that the interest of the minor(s) requires his or her protection, the Court shall appoint counsel to represent the minor(s). Such counsel shall be appointed whether or not the minor(s) is able to afford counsel. If you appear without counsel and are unable to afford counsel, the Court shall appoint counsel for you if you request appointed counsel.

The purpose of this action, to free the minor(s) from the custody of his parent(s), is to permit the adoption of said minor(s) to a suitable adopting parent.

The Court may continue these proceedings, not to exceed thirty (30) days, as necessary to appoint counsel and enable counsel to become familiar with these proceedings.

be irrevocably changed to its detriment.

We are not opposed to progress or change as long as it falls within certain parameters. We fail to comprehend how this needless addition of a commercial wing will improve the quality of life at the War Memorial or in any fashion enhance it. Suffice it to say this is a bad idea.

May I respectfully suggest the Grosse Pointe War Memorial Association beat a dignified retreat and the cable company look elsewhere for accommodation — any one of several Grosse Pointe Realtors will be delighted to assist.

Celebrating

Editor's Note: In honor of Catholic Schools Week, 42 seventh-grade students at St. Paul School wrote letters to the editor on the national theme this year: Parents Choice — Catholic Schools. Following is a representative sampling of the letters:

When I first came to St. Paul school in second grade, I didn't know anyone. I didn't know my way around the school, but all the experienced teachers and kind, considerate students showed me around and did their best to make me feel at home. Now I am in seventh grade and I'm still thankful for all my teachers and all my friends. I'm never scared to ask them a question because I know they'll understand. St. Paul means a lot to me and I'm glad I go there.

Heather Hogan

I like St. Paul because of the education, classes and the friends I have. If it wasn't for all these things, I wouldn't be going here. I like the teachers, especially and the principal of the school. Oh, I also like religious classes and their athletics club for the school.

Michael West

At St. Paul's school we have great teachers, but they are sometimes picky. I guess that I will be thankful for that later on in my life. The teachers are usually fair in their decisions.

Douglas Smith

To me, St. Paul School means a place to learn how to respect everyone around you. Here you can go to school without being judged by your race or color. The teachers take time out to help you. Here you learn about other cultures. If you do something wrong, you get disciplined. Not everyone might like that, but I think it's important. The people around you accept you for what you are and not for what you have or don't have.

Chris Prince

How are you? I hope you're okay. I was assigned to write a letter about how I feel about my school. This was easy. My school is like a day care center where the teachers care about you. They help you if you have a problem. My parents send me to this school because they want me to get a good education. I'm really excited about St. Paul.

Jad Fawaz

I go to St. Paul School because my parents wanted me to get a good education, and they knew it was a good school because my mom went there through high school. They also wanted me to be in a Christian environment, develop our Catholic faith, to have respect for others and freedom from racial prejudice. I think the biggest reason is because my mom went there.

Maryann L. Marantette

I'm supposed to write about St. Paul's. I have no choice, so I'll tell you: It's pretty cool, but sometimes I can't stand it. Seeing the same people every day, talking to the same people all the time. But I guess you have to look at it on the good side. I have lots of friends who are fun, outgoing and not to mention great to be with. School's hard sometimes, but I have to learn it anyway. The teachers are strict, but really cool when it comes to games and parties and stuff like that. There are the bad times, but everybody has them, that's a part of life. So always make the best of what you got, I know I do.

Loran Dosen

I like going to St. Paul School because we learn Christian moral values like learning right from wrong. Like making decisions about abortion and choosing to take drugs or not to. They also teach us about religious things that other schools just don't teach. Probably the worst thing about Catholic schools is wearing uniforms, but after seven years of wearing them you get used to it. St. Paul School prepares us for high school really well, and that's what I look for in a good Catholic school.

Katy Leins

I go to St. Paul's because it is an excellent academic school. St. Paul's has taught me to respect my elders. St. Paul's has taught me discipline and Christian moral values. I have been able to participate in many different sports. The teachers are excellent and they take an active interest in all of the students.

Andrew Smith

I like St. Paul's school for many reasons. All my teachers are nice and we do fun and interesting things in all my classes. Sometimes we go on field trips to places such as the Science Center or the art museum which I enjoy. At St. Paul's School, we also get a good Catholic education. I also enjoy some of our special classes, such as art and computers, but the best thing at my school is my friends.

Japanese car ads mislead

I've had it with TV ads for Japanese cars. The Japanese, no doubt aided by their Madison Avenue helpers and Washington hired guns, are employing "the big lie" and the "doublespeak" of the novel "1984" to try to convince Americans that, somehow, Japanese cars are "American."

Some Japanese car ads are mild. They only show western and other typically American scenes and things like cowboys twirling ropes. Others are far more blatant, saying, as Acura does, that their car is "the best car in America."

William R. Bryant Jr.
State Representative

Still another ad dares to use the Christian religion in its message, beginning "When I was a child..." etc., while showing a Mitsubishi car parked in front of a quaint, country church.

The Japanese, it seems, are still trying to win the war, any way they can, and in their disdain for all foreigners, especially Americans, use whatever methods, ruses and lies they can to get Americans to buy Japanese products.

And, in the meantime, of course, Japan won't lower its trade barriers and we pay, in scarce money and precious American lives, to provide military defense for Japan.

Wake up, America.

Lifestyles talk

Dr. Orin Gelderloos, professor of biology and environmental studies at the University of Michigan-Dearborn, will lecture at the War Memorial Wednesday, Jan. 31 at 7:30 p.m.

Gelderloos

The lecture will conclude a series on environmental issues presented by the War Memorial Council of Sponsors. The program will focus on what these issues say about lifestyles for the year 2000 and what changes should be made to maintain or improve the quality of life as we move into the 21st century.

Gelderloos is currently director of the Environmental Studies program at U of M-Dearborn and also serves as director of a National Science Foundation grant for metro Detroit teachers on using the Rouge River watershed to teach science and social studies to middle and high school students.

Tickets are $8, adults; $5 students 18 and under. Call 881-7511.

Cancun trip outlined

The War Memorial's educational travel department is sponsoring a trip to Cancun, Mexico, May 2-9. Prospective travelers are invited to a program to outline details of the trip Monday, Jan. 29 at 7 p.m.

Cost is $780 per person double occupancy; $289, single supplement, with $200 deposit per person.

berta. The fences were designed to keep farmers off the tracks. It's needless to say the farmers didn't like that.

"One time I was bringing food to the gang," he said, "and I had a quarter of beef. I was all alone on a one-man car and I came to an intersection. The farmers had stretched the wire from the fence over the tracks and I hit it full speed. I went head over heels and landed on the track."

With a disconnected shoulder, he loaded the meat back on the rack, removed the wire from the tracks and continued his trip, removing other traps the farmers had set across the tracks. "The men had to be fed," he said.

He lived with eight or 10 other Americans in a furnished home in Winnipeg. The bachelors dubbed the house Virtue Villa.

World War I brought Hardy back to the United States. He enlisted in the U.S. Air Force, planning to be a pilot. By the time he had completed the training, though, the war had ended.

As an interesting aside, Hardy lost touch with nearly all of the men he trained with, but when he joined the Grosse Pointe Senior Men's Club, he discovered two members from those training days.

Back in the states, Hardy became a lumber salesman — making $4.50 a week — met Florence, his wife at a picnic near Adrian, and came back to Detroit and built a house on Three Mile Drive — when it was still a heavily wooded street.

Warren Avenue was still a dirt road with deep ditches on either side, his wife remembers, and during the building of their house, she remembers workers talking about another body found in the ditch not far away — casualties of the war against organized labor.

"It was just a sign of the times," he said. Another sign of how things have changed is the marsh area where they took their children to catch tadpoles — the marsh is now known as Outer Drive.

"We completed our house on our first anniversary," Mrs. Hardy said. "We didn't realize it was our anniversary. Ever since then, we've always forgotten our anniversary."

The Depression made for lean years for builders and their suppliers, so Hardy had to use his imagination to feed his growing family.

Clint and Florence Hardy have been together for 64 years.

Assertive discipline is topic

On Wednesday, Jan. 31, from 7:30 to 9 p.m., the Brownell PTO and the Brownell School Team will present Sister Mary Gehringer, who will speak on "Raising Kids with Assertive Discipline." The meeting will be another in a series of meetings sponsored by the Brownell School Team in its effort to bring the Brownell community together to share concerns and ideas, as a support in their parenting. The meeting will take place in the Brownell School library.

Gehringer has been active in school administration the past 13 of her 20 years in education. She is principal of St. Joan of Arc School in St. Clair Shores, and has presented various workshops in the area, on the topic of assertive discipline. "Assertive discipline is a common-sense approach to working with children," Gehringer said. "It is not a program to change children's behavior, but to change adults' response to children's behavior."

Choir auditions

Auditions for singers interested in being a part of the Detroit Concert Choir will be held Mondays from 6 to 7 p.m. Jan. 29, Feb. 5 and Feb. 12, at Grosse Pointe Memorial Church, 16 Lakeshore.

All interested singers are encouraged to audition. For more information or for an appointment, call 882-0118.

Grads

Music legend Bob Seger and Grosse Pointe resident Susan Joy Borininski were awarded degrees from Wayne State University at the Dec. 15 commencement. Seger received an honorary doctor of human letters degree, and Borininski earned a master of education degree. While a student at Regina High School, Borininski attended dances at Notre Dame High School next door where the early Seger group often performed.

for them. Today when Hardy hears news about the plagued savings and loan industry, he shakes his head and says, "That's just what they did back then," his wife said.

And they are proud of their children. One of their four daughters worked for the U.S. Army and helped map the moon to determine the best place for the first Americans to land.

"It isn't all parents who can say that they are proud of every one in their family," Mrs. Hardy said. "I think that is because of their father and the way he raised them. He's honorable, he has integrity and he's always upheld the very highest standards for his children."

"It's the kids and the grand-kids that keep us young," she said.

The whole family gets together every July and rents a cottage in northern Michigan.

"I've never seen a family where the in-laws liked each other so well," she added.

Hardy's longevity might have something to do with his genes: He had an uncle who lived to 103 and an aunt who lived to 104.

Hardy bowled and played golf and bridge avidly until he suffered a massive stroke at 92. But he fought back with a determination that people don't have, according to the doctors, and they predict that he'll live to 115.

Businesses warned about window washer

Grosse Pointe businesses are being warned by police to be aware of the $8 window washer.

According to Woods detectives, a local business was approached Dec. 29 by a white male who offered to wash the business establishment's windows for $8. When he finished the job, he insisted on payment by check instead of cash. He said he didn't want to carry a lot of cash with him.

Later when the business owner got the cancelled check back, it was discovered that the $8 had been changed to $80 and the Eight to Eighty. The check was cashed at a Detroit bank and is being investigated by Detroit detectives.

On Dec. 29, five businesses in Detroit in the East Warren area also were stung by the window washer. A Woods detective said the window washer is very good at altering the checks and avoiding the banks' suspicions.

Business owners are cautioned to look out for the window washer and to avoid paying in checks. Business owners can also call their local police departments if they are suspicious.

Osborn student afraid of police

An Osborn High School student who was a passenger in a stopped car in Grosse Pointe Shores fled on foot Jan. 19 because he was afraid of being "hassled."

According to police reports, the car the Detroit student was riding in was stopped at 1 p.m. in the Woods at Sunningdale and Fairway by a Shores officer. When the car stopped, the 15-year-old student fled on foot.

A Woods officer caught the youth and turned him over to Shores officers. When asked why he ran, he said he was afraid of being hassled by police. The Shores had no charges against the youth, so he was transported to the Grosse Pointe Woods city limits at Vernier and Canton.

B&Es reported

Three breaking-and-enterings were reported in the Park last week and one in the Woods.

A business in the 15100 block of Mack in the Park was broken into some time between 5:30 p.m. Jan. 11 and 8:05 a.m. Jan. 12. Entry was gained by breaking out a 3-foot-square display window. A typewriter, two phones and an answering machine were taken.

A second business in the Park was broken into between 8 p.m. Jan. 15 and 9:05 a.m. the following day. A piece of concrete was thrown through a glass front door in the 15200 block of Charlevoix. Thirty cartons of cigarettes were taken from behind the counter.

A home in the 900 block of Balfour was burglarized some time between Jan. 14 and Jan. 16. Several power tools were taken from the basement.

In the Woods, a house in the 1400 block of North Renaud was broken into Jan. 20 between 5:30 and 10:30 p.m.

The resident left a hall light and a radio on when she left, but when she returned five hours later, she found all the lights on and the house ransacked, according to police reports. The entire house was searched, and jewelry and a Rolex watch were taken.

Student Spotlight

Reid Creedon

Each week in this column, we will focus on the work of a student. It can be a poem, a drawing, a short story, a picture of a scientific experiment or a wood-working project, a book review. The following was written by Reid Creedon, a third-grader at Richard Elementary School. He is the son of Gaylord and Betsy Reid Creedon of Grosse Pointe City.

Rick the Wolf

"Yawn, what a good sleep," said Rick Wolf. He went over and nipped at his father to wake him up. Rick was a pup and he wanted to play. His Dad snarled. Being the king of the pack, he did not want to be bothered.

Rick's Dad did not want to be bothered because he needed all his energy for the hunt. Later that day, he lead the pack on the hunt. While the rest of the pack attacked a large moose, Rick ventured out of his den and caught a mouse.

Rick was the strongest of his seven brothers and sisters. He also was the most curious. Someday Rick would grow up to be the king of his pack.

Plays to be performed

The Pointe Players of Grosse Pointe South High School will perform four student-directed one-act plays Feb. 1-3 at 7:30 p.m. in South's auditorium.

The plays provide an excellent opportunity for new talent to emerge on South's stage. This year there will be 28 actors who will make their debut, as well as eight veteran performers. Pointe Players is affiliated with The International Thespian Society, where students earn points based on their involvement in club activities. Students with the most points have the first opportunity to try their hand at directing.

The four student directors and their respective plays are Mike Heppner, who directs his own work, "Leave My Submarines Out of This;" Geoff Finger directs "Tall Men of Average Height;" Steve Carlin directs "This is a Test;" and Joe Fitzsimmons directs "When God Comes to Breakfast Don't Burn the Toast."

Admission will be $3 for adults and $2 for students. Tickets will be available at the door.

Prepare for SAT, ACT

"SAT-ACT Preparation," a six-week Grosse Pointe Community Education class, has been scheduled to begin at North High School, 707 Vernier Road, at 7 p.m. Monday, Feb. 5.

For current high school students, the class will familiarize them with the concepts and formats of the tests used by colleges as part of the admissions process, including the SAT (Scholastic Aptitude Test), ACT (American College Test) the Enhanced Version, and the ACH (Achievement Tests).

Elizabeth Soby, North High School teacher, will conduct the class. The fee is $35. Call 343-2178 for information.

Refresh your geometry

For adults who want a refresher in geometry, Grosse Pointe Community Education will offer two classes in the winter session.

"Geometry - A Re-Introduction," a single-session, will be held Tuesday, Jan. 30.

The class is intended as a brief review of the basics of geometry and will be taught by Bob Hansen. The fee is $6.

The second class, "Geometry - Everything You Always Wanted to Know But Were Afraid to Ask," is an eight-week offering scheduled to start at 7 p.m. Tuesday, Feb. 6.

This class will include the basic principles of high school geometry, and how they can be applied to practical problems. Fee is $36. Call 343-2178.

Transfer enrollment at North

Students from local parochial and private schools who expect to attend Grosse Pointe North High School in September are invited to a special enrollment session.

On Wednesday, Jan. 31, anyone who expects to be a freshman at Grosse Pointe North High School in the fall should report to the school cafeteria at 1:30 p.m. Students and their parents should bring with them a birth certificate and any records available from the current school, as well as any recommendations for program selection. North counselors will arrange academic testing with each of the parochial/private schools after the students register on Jan. 31.

Transfer students entering the sophomore, junior or senior year will be enrolled by appointment. They should call the office of the assistant principal administrative services at 343-2205 for an appointment.

Letters to the local schools explaining procedures were mailed several weeks ago. Included were copies of the 1990-91 program of studies. Those wanting copies of the booklet should pick one up at the school they now attend or at Grosse Pointe North.

City of Grosse Pointe Woods Michigan

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that the City Council will be considering the following proposed ordinance for second reading and final adoption at its meeting scheduled for February 5, 1990, at 7:30 p.m., in the Council Room of the Municipal Building. The proposed ordinance is available for public inspection at the Municipal Building, 20025 Mack Plaza, between 8:30 a.m. and 5:00 p.m. Monday through Friday:

King essay contest opens

The 10th annual Martin Luther King Jr. Essay Contest, sponsored by the Racial Justice Center of Grosse Pointe, has been announced to local elementary and middle schools. The primary focus this year is the immediate history of the Civil Rights movement.

This is particularly appropriate since March 14, 1990, marks the 22nd anniversary of King's visit to Grosse Pointe, when he spoke on civil rights. The speaking engagement had been arranged by the Human Relations Council of Grosse Pointe.

• Grades 3-5: Choose one topic from the following:

Topic 1: Write an essay that answers the questions: Who was Martin Luther King and how did he work for racial equality?

Topic 2: Choose a person who was involved in the work for racial equality and write an essay about him/her and his/her work.

• Grades 3-5: Show in picture form one of the freedoms King worked for. Some examples are: integration of schools, theaters, public transportation, etc.; the right to vote; the right to free speech.

• Grades 6-8: Choose one question from the following:

Question 1: In what ways did King believe blacks to be unfree in this country prior to 1970?

Question 2: Since 1970 what freedoms have blacks lost, gained and/or hope to gain in the future?

Question 3: What events led to the Civil Rights movement of the 1960's?

Criteria for judging

Essays: Basic language skills, critical or creative thinking, style and manner of expression, neatness and spelling are all evaluated. Entries may be typewritten or legibly handwritten. The length of the essays are: Grades 3-5: 100 words or more; Grades 6-8: 300 to 500 words.

Posters: Creative thinking, style and manner of expression. Poster size: 22 inches by 28 inches, any medium. Each entry must have a cover or attached index card with name, school, church, grade, teacher's name

Cooking basics

"More Basics of Cooking," a four-week class scheduled by Grosse Pointe Community Education, will begin at 7 p.m. Thursday, Feb. 8, at Barnes School, 20090 Morningside Drive.

For the beginner, this class is a basic approach to simple meal preparation with attention as well to shopping and nutritional needs. Learn to perform basic skills, including microwave techniques, to understand cooking terms, and sources of food information, from recipes to reading labels on cans.

Taught by home economist Valerie Moran, the fee is $40. Call 343-2178 for information.

and date, either typed or printed.

Deadline: All entries must be received by the Racial Justice Center no later than Thursday, Feb. 22, 4:30 p.m. If delivery of completed essays or posters becomes a problem, call the center at 882-6464 before the deadline and leave a message. The Racial Justice Center is located in the annex building behind the Grosse Pointe Unitarian Church, 17150 Maumee, corner of St.

Clair.

Awards: Cash awards: first place $25; second place $20; third place $15. All participants will receive certificates with special distinction for best essays in each grade and each school.

The Martin Luther King Jr. Essay Contest, in its 10th year, is funded by Dorothy MacKay as a memorial to her aunt, Catherine Blackhurst, who was an educator of young people.

Happy birthday

Students and staff at Mason School gathered together at noon on Nov. 30 to celebrate the 70th birthday of Laura Allemeersch, a school cafeteria worker. Allemeersch, who has been with the school for three years, is known for her smile and her caring. With "Mrs. Laura" are Mason school first-graders and Principal William Mestdagh.

Assessments

Pointes experienced a flat assessment period, according to Grosse Pointe City Treasurer-Assessor Dennis Foran.

After comparing selling prices with assessments, the county comes up with a factor for each community. The factor mandates by what percentage the total community's assessment must be increased. A factor of 1.12, for example, means the total community assessment has to be increased 12 percent.

The local assessors can either apply the factor to all properties evenly, or they can evaluate properties or neighborhoods individually, with some assessments increased more than the county-mandated average and some less.

Grosse Pointe Woods Comptroller-Treasurer Clifford Maison said the Woods will conduct its own sales study before applying the assessment increases. He said homes in some parts of the city appreciate in value more than others, so the city will be divided into districts and the assessment increases in each district will vary.

Farms Comptroller-Treasurer Carol Lock said some properties will be looked at individually, but for the most part he will apply the assessment increase across the board. He said most residential properties appreciate equally in the Farms.

Grosse Pointe's Foran said he doesn't have the manpower to evaluate each property, so he will be applying his city's assessment increase to all homeowners equally. While the City's increase is the highest among the Pointes, Foran points out that the average over two years — 12.5 percent — is comparable to the other communities.

Because the City assessments went up less than 10 percent last year, the actual 8.8 percent increase in 1989 was not applied to the assessments. So while homeowners noticed an increase in their state equalized value last year, the assessments stayed the same. This year, however, the assessments must be increased to equal SEVs, so while SEVs will go up 16.25 percent, assessments must increase 26.52 percent.

Grosse Pointe Park, like the Woods, Farms and Shores, is experiencing its second year of double-digit assessment increases. City Manager Dale Krajniak said the city is just completing an 18-month reassessment of all its properties, so the appropriate assessment increases can be broken down not only to individual neighborhoods, but to individual homes.

Grosse Pointe Shores does not have its own assessor, according to Village Manager-Treasurer Michael Kenyon, so an assessor in the county's equalization department will apply the assessment increase in Grosse Pointe Township.

Homeowners should receive notice of their new assessments and SEVs in late February or early March. At that time they will also be able to challenge their assessments before their Boards of Review. If their challenges are successful, their assessments are reduced accordingly.

The 1990 assessments will be used to calculate the summer and winter property tax bills, though the actual tax rates — mills — have to be determined by the taxing bodies, such as the cities, schools and county.

Confrontations over snow in City, Woods

Police were called in separate incidents involving snow removal in the City and Woods Dec. 21.

At 9:35 a.m., a Grosse Pointe City snow plow operator requested police assistance in plowing Lakeland south of Jefferson.

The snow plow driver reported that a resident there was refusing to allow the plow down the street. A police car was dispatched to escort the snow plow down Lakeland.

While the police were escorting the snow plow, an unidentified man stepped out into the middle of the street and refused to move, forcing the police car and snow plow to stop, according to police reports. The irate resident threatened to report the police officers to Mayor Lorenzo D. Browning.

When the man walked from in front of the police car and began yelling at the snow plow driver, one police officer told the driver to ignore the man and continue plowing the street. The man told the officer he would be sorry he said that.

According to police, the man didn't want the snow plow dumping snow in his driveway.

The Woods incident occurred at 3 p.m. when a resident in the 1500 block of Fairholme threatened to use a shotgun if his neighbor shoveled snow on his lawn.

A 21-year-old Fairholme man reported to police that his neighbor threatened him with a shotgun for shoveling snow on his lawn. The neighbor, a 47-year-old, said he told the younger man: "If this happens again, I'll take out my shotgun and take care of it," according to police reports.

The younger neighbor, who is living with his father on Fairholme, said he did not put snow on his neighbor's lawn and that he and the neighbor "have not seen eye to eye" since he and his family moved into the neighborhood four years ago. Police acknowledge that there have been repeated incidents reported between the neighbors.

The older neighbor said the younger man threatened him first by putting snow on his lawn.

Assessors don't set taxes

During times of escalating property values, assessors are, you might say, sensitive.

While assessments are factors in determining the amount of taxes homeowners pay, the assessors are quick to point out that they don't set the tax rate.

The tax rate is expressed in so many mills per $1,000 of assessed value. For example, the owner of a home assessed at $100,000 and a tax rate of 50 mills would pay $5,000 (100 x 50) in property taxes.

If the assessment is increased 10 percent to $110,000 and the tax rate remains the same, then the above homeowner's taxes would increase to $5,500 (110 x 50). The taxing bodies would enjoy a "windfall" tax gain of $500.

But the Headlee Amendment limits windfall gains from rises in property taxes to the inflation rate. Therefore, if inflation is 4.8 percent, the above total tax rate under Headlee would have to be reduced to 47.64 mills, and the homeowner would pay $5,240, which is an increase of 4.8 percent and consistent with the consumer price index.

If taxing bodies want to override Headlee and have a tax rate that exceeds the inflation rate, they have to seek voter approval.

The bottom line, assessors say, is that they aren't responsible for higher taxes. If anything they're the messengers of good news: Higher assessments mean higher property values and better investments for the homeowners.

Gordon Buehrig

A memorial service for Gordon Buehrig, 85, of Grosse Pointe Woods, will be held at 11 a.m. on Saturday, Jan. 27, at Immanuel Lutheran Church, 13031 Chandler Park Drive, corner of Dickerson, in Detroit.

Mr. Buehrig died Monday, Jan. 22, 1990, in his Grosse Pointe Woods home. He was born in Mason City, Ill. in 1904.

Known as one of the last great individual American car stylists, Mr. Buehrig began designing automobiles from drawings and clay models. One of the industry's prime architects, many of Mr. Buehrig's automobile designs have come to be known as rolling sculptures.

Mr. Buehrig began his automotive career in 1924 at Godfredson Body Co. in Wayne, Mich., which made car bodies for the Wills St. Clair, Peerless and Jewett cars.

Three years later, he was hired by General Motors, the fourth designer hired for G.M.'s Art and Color Department, the industry's first styling operation. A year later, at 24, Mr. Buehrig became the chief designer for Stutz in Indianapolis.

One year later he became the chief designer for the most legendary American nameplate, Duesenberg, also in Indianapolis. Mr. Buehrig designed such classics as the Beverly Berlina, the Torpedo Phaeton, the Derham Tourster and the Weymann Boattail Speedster.

In 1934, he was transferred to Auburn, Ind., where he designed Auburns and Cords and produced his most celebrated designs, the 1936 "coffin-nose" 810 and 812 Cords and the Auburn Boattail Speedster, said Richard Wright, automotive writer for the Grosse Pointe News.

Today, the 810 remains one of the most enduring and independent visions of the American automobile.

A poll of visitors to the New York Auto Show in 1936 where the Cord 810 made its debut revealed that twice as many rated the Cord the best of the show as the second-place choice, the Lincoln Zephyr.

In 1948, Mr. Buehrig designed the T-top roof for the TASCOCO car. The T-top was introduced commercially by G.M. on the Chevrolet Corvette. His 1971 Corvette, which he drove occasionally, had one of the split-style tops. The car's license plate bore the letters, MY TOP.

After World War II, Mr. Buehrig moved to Ford, where he designed the 1951 Ford Victoria hardtop coupe and served as chief body designer for the 1956 Continental Mark II. He retired from Ford in 1965 and taught for five years at the Art Center College of Design in Pasadena, Calif.

Commenting on inexpensive production cars with low styling, Mr. Buehrig recently told a group of automotive engineers that "too much 'engineering' is done in the purchasing department."

During the 1980s, Mr. Buehrig served as director of Franklin Mint Precision Models and directed the engineering of several replica cars.

In 1981, the Automobile Historical Society included Mr. Buehrig on a list of the 30 greatest auto men, which included such names as Henry, Edsel and Henry Ford II, William Durant, Walter P. Chrysler and Henry Leland.

The same year, he was recognized as a pioneer in the use of plastics in automobiles by the Society of Plastics Engineers.

In 1986, Mr. Buehrig received a fellow grade membership in the Society of Automotive Engineers and was granted an honorary doctorate by Aurora University.

Two years later, he was elected the 1988 Lifetime Achievement Award Winner at the Eyes on the Classics Auto Show at the Grosse Pointe Academy.

And last year, Mr. Buehrig was inducted into the Automotive Hall of Fame in Midland, Mich., for a lifetime of contribution to the automotive industry.

Mr. Buehrig was a 16-year member of the Grosse Pointe Senior Men's Club. His membership in the Society of Automotive Engineers dates back more than 50 years.

Survivors include his wife, Kathryn Lundell Buehrig, of Grosse Pointe Woods; a daughter, Barbara Orlando; grandson, Jordan; granddaughter, Logan, all of New York; two stepdaughters, Carole Totte and Joanne Harrington, of Grosse Pointe; and their six grandchildren.

Mr. Buehrig was predeceased by his first wife, Betty Whitten, in 1970.

Burial will be in Auburn, Ind.

In lieu of flowers, memorial contributions may be made in Mr. Buehrig's name to the Auburn, Cord and Duesenberg Museum General Fund, Auburn, Ind. 46706.

Local arrangements were made by the Chas. Verheyden Funeral Home, Grosse Pointe Park.

'Tremors': A funny, gory horror story

By Michael Chapp
Special Writer

"Tremors" is not your average horror movie. While it's filled with gory scenes of gruesome monsters terrorizing defenseless humans, there can be no doubt that the main objective is to make people laugh.

That's not necessarily an easy task. Consider what we're dealing with: A huge, alien-type, subterranean slug lives in the Nevada desert. It can't see anything, but it can feel the vibrations of the humans on the surface. Especially the 14 humans who live in a small town cut off from the rest of known civilization.

The giant slugs are able to chase fleeing people, grab moving vehicles, and swallow stationary station wagons. Nobody knows where they came from, and stopping them is going to be awfully tough. But that doesn't mean there isn't plenty of time for a joke or two.

It's the movie's sense of humor that makes it work. Indeed, we've seen the basic plot here many times, most notably in pictures like "Alien" and "The Thing." But never have we seen it done in such an innocent, self-deprecating way.

None of the characters are particularly smart. In this type of film they rarely are. But because the writers know that — and because they go out of their way to establish that fact from the very beginning — viewers aren't likely to feel as if they're being cheated.

Despite the laughs, viewers who have a hard time with blood spilling as easily as water and guts splattering like mosquitos on a windshield may have a difficult time watching this picture. There is nothing particularly unexpected or horrifying here, but there is plenty that could turn the stomach of a squeamish type.

"Tremors" is going to be out of local theaters pretty quickly, which is probably exactly what the producers had in mind. While it won't bring in record box office dollars, it will live forever on video cassette.

Like most horror films, it won't be quite the same on video tape. Unlike most other horror films, the reason for that is not because you won't be surrounded by a theater full of screaming people.

It's because you won't be surrounded by a theater full of laughing people.

Civil War blacks get long-overdue recognition in 'Glory'

By Marian Trainor
Special Writer

Almost buried in the annals of U.S. history is the role that Northern blacks played in winning the Civil War.

It was generally assumed that all the fighting was done by white Union soldiers, but "Glory" sets the record straight with a dramatic and powerful presentation of events that led to the storming of a South Carolina fort in 1863 by the 54th Massachusetts Volunteer Infantry Regiment, the first all-black fighting regiment. More than half of them lost their lives.

The battle was lost, the fort not taken, but the sacrifice and valor of that group of men opened the way for 180,000 blacks to join the Union. No one could ever doubt the bravery or discipline of black Americans after that charge.

Up to then black soldiers were not assigned to combat, but were kept behind the lines as laborers. In the film's opening sequence, we see Morgan Freeman working as a grave digger. The film makes clear that this was not why he or the rest of the men joined the army. They wanted to be fighting soldiers.

Colonel Robertson (Matthew Broderick), a young Boston Brahmin, is assigned to lead the unit. His first letter home to his mother includes a request for a copy of Emerson.

He approaches his assignment with some trepidation. His friends regard the idea of blacks on the firing line as a joke. He is not sure how to handle this group of untrained soldiers, most of whom are ex-slaves. Once committed, he works tirelessly to do the right thing.

Although "Glory" delivers the important message that blacks fought for their own freedom, much of the force of the film comes from its focus on the characters. We watch them come together, untrained, undisciplined, poorly equipped and we see them emerge as a valiant and courageous unit.

Certain characters stand out.

At the head of the line is Freeman, whose quiet strength attracts the attention of Broderick who raises him to the rank of master sergeant, making him the first black soldier to rise from the ranks. He is well-chosen. It is he who stresses the need for the men to be recognized and dignified by being issued uniforms and shoes. It is he who carries the case of Jenzel Washington, a runaway slave who goes AWOL.

It is not only the enlisted men who are changed by the war. Broderick is changed also. He begins his assignment with a hard-nosed determination to whip his men into shape, but gradually he becomes more conscious of them as men, not just soldiers.

The turning point in his attitude comes after he has ordered Denzel to be stripped and whipped in front of the others. He is shocked to see the boys back scarred with the marks of the many whippings endured during his slave years.

From that point on, Broderick never stops waging his own private war with army brass until his regiment has the equipment they need, including weapons. He becomes one with them when he announces that because the army has chosen to pay black soldiers less than white soldiers, neither he nor any of the officers will accept their pay.

Months go by and the 54th has not been called into battle. The man is restless and discouraged. After considerable persuasion, including blackmail, Broderick succeeds in getting them deployed.

The battle scenes are realistic without being gory. Viewers are brought face to face with the high cost paid in lives lost as soldiers from both sides march across a field toward each other, weapons being fired as they go and bodies being blown away with each foot of ground covered.

Long overdue, Producer Freddie Fields and Director Ed Swick not only have brought to the screen a moving, unforgettable tribute to those black soldiers who were active participants in their own liberation, but a film that is awesome in depth and power. Its memorable characters, relentless battle scenes, details and incidents all fuse to create an impact that explodes in our consciousness. Audiences will not soon forget this glorious account of the bloodiest war ever fought.

Majestic plans Valentine's Day heart benefit

Driving Miss Daisy' addresses issue of aging with humor

By Marian Trainor
Special Writer

In a poetic procession of powerful, poignant scenes, an eloquent panorama of 25 years in the life of an elegant, determined, aging Jewish matron and that of her equally proud and patient black chauffeur who shares those years with her, is presented in "Driving Miss Daisy," a story that embodies both the courage and fears that older people have of loss of privacy, of faculties, of independence and of being a burden.

The lovely and stately Jessica Tandy as Miss Daisy brings to the role a luminous dignity that matches the lustrous tone of the film.

Morgan Freeman as Hoke is the soul of self-possession as the chauffeur who wins Miss Daisy over from her firm, staid resistance of his help with a quiet persistence laced with humor. Audiences love them both from the beginning. Miss Daisy is difficult but never mean. Hoke is pleasant and jovial but never subservient.

In the first frame, Tandy established Miss Daisy's identity as she stands before a gilt-edged mirror dressed to go out, pausing to tilt her hat at just the right angle. We see the reflection of a Southern lady, her head held high, confident and poised.

She is 75 years old, but she walks to her car with the light step of a girl. She climbs into her post-war Chrysler New Yorker, turns on the ignition, puts her foot on the gas, ready to drive out. Instead she backs into the garage across the street, destroying it and the car. From that point on, life will never be the same for Miss Daisy.

Her car has been her contact with the outside world. We see how much she realizes that loss in her face as she peers out at the crowd gathered around from behind her lace curtains.

Her middle-age son, Boolie, played by Dan Aykroyd, who tries to please his mother without much success, buys her a snazzy 1948 Hudson, but insists on hiring a driver for her. She refuses with the excuse that her friends will think she is a rich woman, which she is.

However, when the car arrives, Hoke is at the wheel, but Miss Daisy stands firm: If she can't drive it, she won't ride in it. When Hoke tries to make himself busy with other chores — gardening, dusting light fixtures or cleaning the silver, she curtly orders him to stop. When he admires pictures of classes she taught when she was teaching, she orders him not to poke into her business. When he goes to the kitchen to help the cook, Ardella (Esther Rolle), she scolds him for keeping her from her work.

This goes on until one day, Hoke decides to ride alongside of her as she makes a display of herself walking to the Piggly Wiggly. And so begins a series of touch and go compromises by Daisy first, on the basis that it is just common sense to ride with Hoke, then later as they come to know each other better, on the realization that despite their difference in status, they both share the frailties that come with aging. Indeed at one point, Hoke, who increasingly becomes more outspoken as the association becomes closer, tells her that she needs his help as much as he needs the job and that each of them is lucky to have the other for a friend.

As they move through the years, they experience such dramatic experiences as the bombing of Miss Daisy's temple. She realizes that anti-semitism can erupt into the same violence as black discrimination.

Tandy creates an unforgettable Miss Daisy. Her every gesture, her every move and expression infuses the role with a precise and studied eloquence. Freeman, one of the screen's finest actors, is outstanding as the proud and genial Hoke.

Adapted by Alfred Ufly from his Pulitzer Prize-winning play, the film brilliantly addresses the universal truth of what it means to grow old. It is not often that members of a movie audience react with such appreciation as I saw expressed for "Driving Miss Daisy": They stood up and clapped.

Swing to the music of '30s, '40s at Henry Ford Museum

When Henry Ford Museum gets "In the Mood" Jan. 27 and 28, visitors can really strut their stuff across its polished teak floors.

"Henry Ford Museum Live! Sounds of Swing" weekend, featuring popular music and dance of the 1930s and '40s, will focus on the days when big bands, crooners and dance marathons were all the rage.

The joint starts jumping on both Saturday and Sunday at 11 a.m. with the Hotel Savarine Society Orchestra playing music from the 1930s. Later in the day, the Skyliners will have visitors bobbing to the big band sound.

Visitors can enjoy watching dance company Black Tie swivel, turn and faint to live and recorded music as they demonstrate the era's fashionable dances from the fox trot to the jitterbug. The performers will then lead novices through the dance steps before inviting all visitors to trip the light fantastic.

For those who enjoy a challenge, an Amateur Dance Contest will be held each afternoon at 3 p.m. After an opportunity to practice their swing-step, couples can compete to the sounds of swing for a pair of dinner/theater tickets to any performance of "John Loves Mary" at the Henry Ford Museum Theatre (running Feb. 2 through March 17).

The program for each day, alternating between dance performances, instruction, open dancing and competition, offers visitors a chance to trip, skip, hop, jitterbug, jive or jump to the sounds that made the dance palaces of America great!

"Henry Ford Museum Live! Sounds of Swing" is the first of many "Special Weekends" scheduled at Henry Ford Museum & Greenfield Village in 1990. These weekends reflect both the scope of the museum's collections and visitors' interests, with activities ranging from small, intimate demonstrations to major, large-scale productions. Upcoming programs include: "What We Wore: Aprons to Zoot Suits" on Feb. 24 and 25, and "Henry Ford Museum Live! Sounds of Rock 'n' Roll" on March 17 and 18.

There is no charge for special weekend activities beyond regular museum admission. Henry Ford Museum & Greenfield Village is located in Dearborn, at Oakwood Boulevard and Village Road, just west of the Southfield Freeway (M-39) and south of Michigan Avenue (U.S. 12).

Banish winter doldrums at Greenfield Village

The holidays may be just a memory, but a variety of winter activities at Henry Ford Museum & Greenfield Village in Dearborn offer an opportunity to warm up and chase away the blues.

Just as the last strings of Christmas lights are tucked away for another year, Henry Ford Museum is gearing up for the first special weekend of the year. On Jan. 27 and 28, "Henry Ford Museum Live! The Sounds of Swing" brings the music of the 1930s and 40s into the museum. Visitors will jive to the beat of a swing orchestra and the jitterbug will live again!

Museum visitors will see everything from punk rockers to sophisticated, bustled and corseted ladies on Feb. 24 and 25. "What We Wore: Aprons to Zoot Suits," will offer an in-depth look at how Americans have clothed themselves through the centuries and the lifestyles those garments might have enhanced.

From rockabilly to pop to Motown, visitors will hear it all at "Henry Ford Museum Live! The Sounds of Rock 'n' Roll" March 17 and 18. Live performances by local groups will have the museum shaking to its foundations.

For more information on winter activities at Henry Ford Museum & Greenfield Village, call 271-1976 for a recorded message or 271-1620.

Enchanted evening

Adding a kick to their songs are members of a New York-based vocal troupe who will sing the most memorable Rodgers and Hammerstein hits in their "Some Enchanted Evening" cavalcade at Macomb Center for the Performing Arts. They will appear in concert at 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday, Jan. 26-27, and at 2 p.m. Sunday, Jan. 28. Tickets at $18 for adults and $16 for students and senior citizens may be obtained at the center's box office or reserved on credit card by calling 286-2222, Monday through Friday, from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. The center is located on the Center Campus of Macomb Community College at Hall (M-59) and Garfield roads in Clinton Township.

She tests the business waters — pure spring waters, that is

By Ronald J. Bernas
Staff Writer

The facts speak for themselves.

Seventy-five percent of the earth's surface is covered with water, but 97 percent is salty, and therefore undrinkable. Most of the three percent that is fresh is in glacier form, leaving only one percent which is potable.

Recent studies show that much of that water is contaminated due to chemicals and the amount of garbage in landfills.

It's another example of "water, water everywhere and not a drop to drink."

And that's why Holly Olmsted, 23, of Grosse Pointe Shores resurrected the Harbor Springs Natural Spring Water Company Inc., an old business that had fallen by the wayside. The company bottles water from a fresh spring in Harbor Springs.

but don't ask — she won't disclose the exact location.

"You can no longer be sure that the stuff that comes out of your faucet is safe," she said. And she ought to know.

The 1989 graduate of University of Michigan-Dearborn developed an interest in drinking water when she chose water as a subject for a political science class research project.

That was a few years ago. When she had to design a marketing plan for a non-existent product for another college class she chose bottled water.

"It sort of became a hobby," she said. "I started studying everything I could about water."

All this research may have helped, but it also turned up some facts that might have daunted others. There are some 450 bottling plants in the United States that produce more than 600 different brands of water. Additionally there are 50 brands of imported bottled water.

But these facts raised her spirits: the bottled water industry is a $2 billion industry which from 1975 to 1985 increased by 300 percent.

"There was no major drought, either," she said, which might account for such an increase. "Instead, people have an increasing awareness of what their drinking water contains."

While researching, she heard of the Harbor Springs Natural Spring Water Co. Inc., and contacted the owners. Olmsted is now the president of the company, which has a Grosse Pointe Shores address.

Having spent some time in Harbor Springs, she remembered the freshness of the water and thought she had a product she could promote and support.

"My water is not treated at all," she said. She describes her product as being "pure, refreshing and smooth." It's clearer, too, than most tap waters.

Currently she has a mini-bottling facility set up in Harbor Springs and plans on going into full production in the spring. She is test marketing the water — which sells for $2.25 for a two-liter bottle — in smaller food markets and drug stores locally.

"The price is comparative to other bottled water, and will eventually go down after I go into full production," she said.

Already beverage distributors in Miami have contacted her to market the water in the Caribbean, where much of the drinking water is not safe.

If things go well, and Olmsted expects they will, she plans to expand her line to sparkling water and natural flavored waters that will taste like pop.

Locally the water is available at Jerry's Party Store, Oxford Beverage, Hollywood Pharmacy and Glen's Liquor.

Assumption offers financial classes

Assumption Cultural Center will offer several opportunities to learn more about money management, business opportunities and retirement planning.

Expert business broker Barbara Poulos will conduct a two-hour seminar, "All About Buying a Franchise," on Tuesday, Feb. 6, 7-9 p.m. Learn the advantages and disadvantages of buying a franchise. What are the "hottest" businesses today and are they affordable?

Dorothy Bond, a specialist in retirement planning, will talk about the financial needs of the elderly and what steps it takes to make oneself a financial success in retirement. She will speak Tuesday, Feb. 27, at 7:30 p.m.

In "Successful Money Management," students will be introduced to the key concepts and practices of wise money management, including how to minimize taxes, maximize investment returns and plan for the future. Certified financial planners from the America Group will teach the four-week class. A free introductory evening is set for Thursday, Feb. 1, at 7 p.m. Classes begin Feb. 8.

To register for a class, call the Assumption Cultural Center at 779-6111. The center is located at 21800 Marter Road.

NACW to meet

The National Association of Career Women-Metro Detroit Chapter will hold its second Business Connection Thursday, Feb. 8, from 5:30 to 7:30 p.m. at Contract Interiors in Southfield.

The cost of the luncheon is $8 for members and $10 for non-members. Reservations are requested by Tuesday, Feb. 2.

NACW provides a forum for the exchange of ideas and experiences, supports recognition of women, addresses women's issues and educates members and the public about opportunities available to women. For information, call 641-2732.

New lab

Bon Secours Hospital opened a new special procedures room with cardiac catheterization capabilities.

The procedure allows doctors to determine blood pressure inside the heart chamber and valves and helps detect damage or blockages in the coronary arteries.

Concept cars abound at auto show, offer look at future

One of the most interesting aspects of auto shows is the peek into the future afforded by the "concept cars" and special "show cars" displayed by various manufacturers.

Over the years, they have hinted at future technological developments and at styling trends. Sometimes they give a false signal, but sometimes they go into production, too. The last two years of Detroit's North American International Auto Show have been particularly rich in concept cars, both from abroad and from American makers.

What can we glean from this year's crop of concept cars? It is always risky to predict, but it is clear that there are sporty fun trucks, four-passenger sports cars and beautiful but practical family vehicles in our future. Aerodynamic styling is still in, but cars are going to look more distinctive. And bright colors are back.

General Motors unveiled six new concept vehicles at the show, four cars and two trucks; Chrysler displayed three cars and two trucks, while Ford Motor Co. showed two cars and two trucks.

The Pontiac Sunfire is a four-passenger sports car with a two-liter, 16-valve, four-cylinder engine rated at 190 horsepower. But the most interesting features of the car are its carbon-fiber plastic body panels and its unusual exterior lighting placement, at the base of the windshield.

The Buick Bolero, Cadillac Aurora and Oldsmobile Expression are three hints at what luxury and family cars from these divisions will look like in the '90s. All are sleek and aerodynamic and none look anything like present models.

From GMC Truck comes the Transcend, a full-size pickup with retractable hardtop and cab and bed as a single unit, and the Mahalo, a wildly painted compact show truck. GM said "Mahalo" means "hang loose" in Hawaiian, but experts say that is not what it means at all, creating a mini-flap which netted the truck far more publicity than it would have received otherwise.

The Ford Ghia Via is a four-passenger sports car which features fiberoptic headlights and instrument panel lighting and a removable photosensitive Targa roof. The Mercury Cyclone is a very sporty-looking four-door sedan with photosensitive glass in the roof and a rear view television instead of mirrors.

The Ford Surf is a concept truck in which an Explorer utility vehicle is converted to a go-to-the-beach leisure vehicle. The Ford F-150 concept truck looks just like what it is, a high-performance "dragster" truck.

Perhaps the most unique concept vehicle at the show was Chrysler Corp.'s Voyager III, a two-part vehicle with a three-seat 104-inch-long commuter car which can pull or be disengaged from a rear unit which makes it into a van. With both parts in place it is roughly the length of a stretch minivan.

Autos

By Richard Wright

The Eagle Optima is an attempt to make a four-door sedan look like a sports car and it succeeds very well with its "cab-forward" approach. It was cited as the best concept car at the show by AutoWeek magazine.

The Dodge Daytona RT is a high-performance all-wheel-drive version of the Daytona. The Dodge LRT convertible pickup looks like a very muscular version of the Dakota convertible pickup and with a V-8 under its hood it undoubtedly is. Chrysler also showed a Jeep Cherokee convertible to test public reaction in much the way it gave a glimpse of the Dakota convertible a couple years ago.

Concept cars and show cars have been a staple of Detroit since General Motors created the first one in 1937, the so-called "Y Job." Built on a Buick chassis, it didn't look much like Buicks of that era, although you would immediately recognize it as a Buick now, because Buicks of the late '40s and early '50s looked like it. The two-door convertible had such innovations as a horizontal grille, wraparound bumpers, retractable headlamps, pushbutton doors, power windows, no running boards and front fenders that ran back into the door. It was a concept car much of which made it into production.

One of the most famous concept cars was the LeSabre, built in 1951 and inspired by the P-38 fighter plane that had also moved GM top designer Harley Earl to put tailfins on the '48

Cadillac, thus touching off one of the strangest styling trends ever. The LeSabre is pure '50s, an accurate peek at what was to come with its tailfins, its wraparound windshield and its bullet-nose grille. It never went into production, but many of its features did and so did its name.

In 1954, GM built the Firebird I, a radical look at a future that has not arrived yet. It had a single stick control system that performed the functions of steering, braking and accelerating. It was powered by a gas turbine engine, it had a single big fin and twin plastic-bubble canopies for driver and passenger, and a drag brake that opened in the rear. None of these features ever got into production (except for the name), but the car created a sensation on the show circuit.

But some did get into production. The Nomad station wagon made it as part of the '55 Chevrolet lineup, the Ford Mystere became pretty much the '57 Ford and the '57 Lincoln looked a lot like a dream car called the Futura (later a model name for the top-line Ford Falcon).

The industry turned to more pressing problems of safety, emissions and fuel economy in the '70s and '80s, then started building dream cars again a couple years ago. One of them was the Pontiac Trans Sport minivan, now in production. Another was the Dodge Dakota convertible, also now in production.

How many of this year's concept car crop will make it into production? Probably a few. But certainly many of the innovations will show up. Dream cars are coming; some are already here.

Yes, it does happen in Grosse Pointe Battered women can learn to break cycle of abuse

By Margie Reins Smith
 Feature Editor

Grosse Pointer Sally Hogan Schueler said that several years ago, she and her husband were enjoying themselves at a social event with a large group of people. He took her hand in his, pulled her close, held their hands behind his back. Then he bent one of her fingers back until she winced.

"If you say it hurts, I'll really do it harder," he said.

She smiled. She said nothing. She didn't want to embarrass him.

"It was a test," Schueler says now. "Physical abuse always starts with a test."

Grosse Pointer Janet Doe had volunteered to help set up for a student talent show at her children's school. The night before the talent show, her husband beat her so severely, she couldn't leave the house the next day.

"I never told that teacher why I didn't show up," Doe said. "My face was pulverized. My lip was cut. My glasses were broken. My eyes were swollen."

"My husband was angry. He said I couldn't help at school because I had gone out too much recently."

"Afterward, he said he was sorry and he promised never to do it again and he said he loved me. He said that if he didn't care for me so much, he wouldn't beat me.

"I didn't call the police because I was so ashamed."

Schueler and Doe are two Grosse Pointe women who have been in abusive relationships. (Doe's name and some details of her situation have been changed to protect her children's privacy.) Both women have escaped from their destructive, demeaning marriages and the psychological, emotional and physical battering that they once thought was their lot in life.

It's been a tough struggle and they both have stories to tell.

Violence against women knows no economic or social boundaries, according to Ellen Hayse, resource librarian for the Michigan Coalition Against Domestic Violence.

"A Michigan State Police study found that one out of three homes in Michigan has experienced some sort of violence," she said.

Women are vulnerable to domestic violence for three reasons, according to Virginia Sargent, a licensed clinical psychologist who practices marriage and family therapy in Grosse Pointe. Sargent has been in clinical practice for 42 years and has focused on family therapy for the last 13 years.

"Being female makes her vulnerable," Sargent said. "Not just because women are smaller. Women are generally relationship-oriented. Men have trouble dealing with the power that being feminine represents."

"Women are also generally deficient in self-worth. They're accommodating. Nice. Ready to explain their behavior. Ready to help others. Ready to blame themselves."

"And women are often deficient in their sense of entitlement."

Statistics are startling. In fiscal year 1988, according to figures compiled by the Domestic Violence Prevention and Treatment Board in Michigan, there were 42 state-funded emergency shelters for battered women and about four privately run shelters. These shelters fielded 34,423 crisis calls and housed 5,526 women and 8,288 children.

The most appalling statistic, Hayse said, is that 2,294 women were denied shelter because the facility was filled to capacity.

The problem is not restricted to certain economic or social groups. It's in everyone's neighborhood. Including Grosse Pointe.

Sargent said that more than 50 percent of her women clients feel emotionally intimidated by their partners. Many of these women are also psychologically, physically or sexually abused. She said she's seen three life-threatening situations in the last 20 years.

Doe was married for about a year before the violence began.

"He was always domineering," she said of her former husband. "But he was interesting, exciting. I looked up to him. He created excitement for the moment."

He was — still is — a respected professional, a businessman, and by most standards, a wealthy man.

"About a year after we were married, he hit me in the face so hard, I flew across the kitchen floor and landed in another room. He said I had insulted his mother," Doe said.

"I was a passive partner in the marriage. Early on, I wanted to get a job, but he wouldn't allow it. He believed that he was entitled to do anything he wanted to do because he made lots of money."

Sargent said that fear of abandonment, lack of financial independence, isolation, a sense of responsibility for children, and intimidation keeps many abused women locked into destructive relationships.

"The first time he intimidates her, she explains it away. He apologizes. He's testing her. She tries to please him. Girls aren't trained to stand up for themselves. They get into a pattern: the harder she tries to please, the higher he raises the stakes," Sargent said.

Doe said that soon she had five children — no job — no money of her own.

"If I wrote a check for more than $100, he had a fit. Once, about 15 years ago, I said I was going out to lunch with some friends and he handed me $5 for lunch. It was so degrading. I think that was what started my rebellion," she said.

"One summer evening my 10-year-old son called the Grosse Pointe police and said that his mother and father were fighting and he was afraid his father would kill his mother."

Doe said she has called local police many times when her husband was being physically abusive. She's not happy with the assistance they provided.

"The police were not sympathetic to me. When I went in to file a complaint, their attitude was, like, 'Why don't you leave him?' or 'Are you here again?' or 'Stop bothering us,' she said.

"One time my husband battered down my door and the attitude of the police was, 'It's his door.'"

Sargent said that women are not adequately protected by the law. "It's so frustrating." She said that police and psychiatrists need more training about ways to deal with abused women.

She advises women who are battered to file complaints anyway — they may need to document the

Mr. and Mrs. William J.K. Broderick

McDonald-Broderick

Cynthia Ann McDonald, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R.J. McDonald of Bloomfield Hills, married William J.K. Broderick, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. William P.K. Broderick, on Sept. 30, 1989, at Lutheran Church of the Redeemer.

A reception followed at the Townsend Hotel.

The bride wore an ivory dress with a jewel neckline with a silk satin band, elongated sequined French lace bodice, floor-length silk satin bubble skirt, and shirred, puffed sleeves. Her headpiece was made of lace and her bouquet was a nosegay of pale pink and white roses.

The best man was John Peabody of Grosse Pointe Farms.

Groomsman was Dougal Hoskin of Harsens Island.

The bride's mother wore a teal cocktail-length silk dress and carried a nosegay of pink and white roses.

The bride is a graduate of Michigan State University.

The groom is a graduate of Wayne State University and is a CPA.

The couple traveled to Austria and Germany. They live in Birmingham.

Quinlan-Polhemus

Catherine Colleen Quinlan, daughter of Margaret and William Quinlan of Grosse Pointe Woods, married Mark Anthony Polhemus of Adrian, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. Arthur Polhemus of Phoenix, Ariz., on Aug. 12, 1989, at Our Lady Star of the Sea Catholic Church.

The Rev. Robert Witkowski officiated at the 5:30 p.m. ceremony, which was followed by a reception at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial.

Mr. and Mrs. Mark Anthony Polhemus

The bride wore a satin gown with a Queen Anne neckline and a cathedral train, accented with lace and sprinkled with sequins and seed pearls. The scalloped fingertip veil was held in place by a small crown of beads and lace. She carried a cascade of white orchids, tea roses and as-termarions.

The maid of honor was Susan Quinlan of Grosse Pointe Woods, the bride's sister.

Bridesmaids were Pam Wigent of Whiteford, Mich., Maureen Giroux of Royal Oak and Marcia Doyle of Atlanta.

The flowergirl was Jessica Richardson of Adrian, the groom's niece.

Attendants wore tea-length pastel flowered chintz gowns and carried cascading bouquets of pink carnations. The flowergirl carried a basket of tiny pink carnations.

Herbert Williams of Auburn Hills was the best man.

Groomsman were David Wigent of Whiteford, Dan Laren of Ann Arbor and William P. Quinlan of Harper Woods, the bride's brother. Ushers were John K. Quinlan of Rochester, the bride's brother, and Tom Polhemus of Adrian, the groom's brother.

The ringbearer was Justin Richardson of Adrian, the groom's nephew.

The mother of the bride wore a tea-length dress of pink lace and a wrist corsage of pink tea roses.

The mother of the groom wore a tea-length aqua chiffon dress and a corsage of pink tea roses.

The organist at the ceremony was Edward Higbee; soloist was Margaret Ahee.

The bride is a graduate of Oakland University where she earned a bachelor of science degree in computer science. She is employed as a computer consultant with A.G.S. Corp.

The groom is a graduate of Michigan State University, where he earned a master's degree in telecommunications. He is employed as a systems engineer with E.D.S.

The couple traveled to Crystal Mountain Resort near Traverse City. They will live in Roseville.

Riddle-Garvette

Laura Jean Riddle, daughter of Dr. Charles B. and Virginia M. Riddle of Grosse Pointe Shores, married Robert Frank Garvette, son of Charles M. Garvette of Birmingham and Dr. Irving and Myra I. Pasman of West Bloomfield, on July 23, 1989, at Excalibur Restaurant in Southfield.

The bride's gown was tea-length white organdy lace with a Queen Anne neckline, a dropped waist, V-back, and a three-tiered flounce. Her pearl headpiece held a fingertip veil and she carried a bouquet of white roses and lilies.

Leslie A. Kleinert of Grosse Pointe Farms, the bride's sister, was matron of honor. She wore an ivory linen suit with an appliqued jacket.

Katherine R. Kleinert, Lauren M. Kleinert and Lauren Montgomery were flowergirls. They wore white lace tea-length dresses with dropped waists and carried nosegays of roses and pink lilies.

The best man was Charles M. Garvette of Birmingham, the groom's father.

The mother of the bride wore a two-piece peach organdy lace top trimmed with seed pearls and a chiffon tea-length skirt.

The mother of the groom wore a three-piece tea-length pink chiffon dress with a long jacket and a satin bodice.

The bride graduated from Grosse Pointe North High School and attended Madonna College. She is a hair stylist at Billeci's of Grosse Pointe.

The groom attended Oakland University. He is an account executive for Crowley Mortgage Corp. of Farmington Hills.

Flowers are used as symbols in art, literature

As the saying goes — it's a small world. And getting smaller, as different people learn to understand each other more and find that they have more similarities than differences. A wonderful thing that is.

One of the common meeting grounds for centuries is a love of flowers.

It's amazing how similar the beautiful stylized flower shapes of Eastern Woodland Indians beadwork embroidery (especially that of the Lenni Lenape tribes) are to the flower medallions characteristic of Irish lace.

The peasant embroideries of Eastern Europe, with their flower patterns that have been handed down for centuries, find their counterparts in the embroideries of China and other Oriental countries, and in the colorful patterns of Persian carpets and rugs.

Flower shapes appear in several classic American patchwork quilt patterns, in the lovely silvercrafts of India, of Southwest American Indians and of China. All the countries of the world use flower representations in their most exquisite art, and all of them refer to flowers in poetry, song, literature and dance.

The universal language of perfume, too, relies heavily on flowers. In France, the flower fields of Grasse produce millions of blossoms for the perfume industry, their essences blended with resins and scented gums from India and Pakistan and Indonesia and other ingredients from Egypt and Mongolia and Alaska, to produce perfumes flowery and herbal and spicy for buyers all over the world.

There is an enormous amount of symbolism connected with flowers. In all ages, flowers have been used to signify such qualities as purity, love, constancy, faith and hope. Every country has its significant flowers and most cultures have a flower calendar for which certain blooms represent the different months of the year and the cycles of planting and harvest with their attendant festivals.

In art, flowers have important significance. During the Renaissance, the carnation, or the pink as it was then called, signified betrothal. In portraits of the period, many show the subject holding a single carnation, or one carnation in a vase in the foreground to indicate that the portrait was painted upon the occasion of an engagement. The lily is almost always included in pictures of the Virgin Mary, and the rose appears in many portraits with political significance. Flowers form the background designs of many medieval tapestries from all over the countries of Europe, and the lace which was made in Spain and France and Belgium and Switzerland during the 16th and 17th centuries is filled with flower motifs. In India, the lotus flower holds a prominent place in art and in sacred writings.

The Victorians developed a language of flowers which everyone understood. The recipient of a bouquet would know at a glance whether the sender was suffering from jealousy, or gratitude, or love or despair. The type of flower and its color were the key symbols. Many charming little books were published at this time depicting the flower language in watercolor or steel engravings — with equally flowery text. They are collectors' items now.

It was about this time that cities and towns began to choose particular flowers as their local identifying signature, a custom which still prevails. In fact, the Detroit Department of Recreation is now in the process of determining an official flower. It is hoped that an announcement of the chosen blossom will be made soon, and that subsequently it will bloom with profusion in public gardens, city flower displays, neighborhood gardens and on the letterheads of official offices. Most states have official flowers

Trees come in all sizes from giant redwoods to the little jewels of Bonsai. This Friday the Grosse Pointe Garden Center will host Tom Trueman, director of Takiwas Bonsai, Alexander Nursery, Mount Clemens, as speaker and demonstrator at the annual meeting, program and subscription luncheon, which will be held at 10:30 a.m. at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial.

His subject will be the culture and technique of creating Bonsai from Indoor Plant Material. It will be illustrated by some of the wonderful examples from his own collection.

1990 Show House will be Bellmor, 33-room Tudor mansion

Bellmor, a sprawling English Tudor home beside Lake St. Clair in Grosse Pointe Park, got a round of applause Sunday evening, Jan. 21, when it was named the Junior League of Detroit's 1990 Designer's Show House.

Nearly 500 guests gathered in Hudson's Eastland Home Store on Sunday in anticipation of the announcement — which was a well-kept secret until that evening.

On hand for the announcement party were Kiki and Dick Herfert, the owners of Bellmor, and Lynn and Stan Day, honorary chairmen of the 1990 Show House.

Bellmor was built in 1928 by John Bell Moran and his wife, Serena Murphy Moran. The architect was Robert O. Derick.

The home was inspired by a famous English Tudor house, Compton Wynnyates. It has 33 rooms — 16 bathrooms — 12- to 14-foot ceilings — seven fireplaces — six staircases — exquisitely carved and detailed oak paneling and elaborately pressed plaster work.

JLD chairmen for the 1990 Show House project are Marilyn Bartley, Jackie Gray and Judy Sieber. Assistant chairmen are Sheila Ingwersen, Kathleen Nesi and Carole Selmo.

Sieber shared her enthusiasm about the selection of Bellmor: "Usually when we finish a Show House, we feel there's no way we're ever going to top it. But then a house like Bellmor presents itself and it's like a dream come true."

"After the owners agreed to let us use Bellmor, it was difficult to keep the decision to ourselves. It's truly one of the most exciting homes to be featured as a Junior League of Detroit Show House."

Among those in attendance at Sunday evening's announcement party were the event's chairmen Nan Goebel and Pat West, both of Grosse Pointe.

The Designer's Show House has been a major biennial fundraiser for the Junior League of Detroit since 1976. Proceeds are returned to the city of Detroit by way of a variety of community projects.

The 1990 Show House will be open to the public in May.

Volunteer is honored:

Bon Secours Hospital volunteer Angeline Davis of Grosse Pointe was one of 10 volunteers honored recently at a "Thanks for Giving" brunch at the Fairlane Club in Dearborn.

Only 10 hospital volunteers (of the 12,000 or so in the tri-county area) were selected for this special recognition.

Red Wings Coach Jacques Demers was honorary chairman of the luncheon.

"Thanks for Giving" was developed by a group of volunteer services directors from health care facilities. It's designed to promote, recognize, strengthen and diversify volunteer opportunities and to highlight the professional status of volunteer services departments within health care organizations.

TGIF: How 'bout touring the Detroit Institute of Arts American galleries, searching for the shadow of celebrity groundhog Punxsutawney Phil? Groundhog Day, Friday, Feb. 2, is one of the Three Great Innovative Fridays (that's what TGIF stands for in this case) to be celebrated at the Detroit Institute of Arts.

Founders Junior Council, a group that's working to bring new people to the museum by planning innovative social occasions that include specific DIA collections.

The popular TGIF series is in its second year and has included such past themes as King Arthur's birthday, Oktoberfest, Chinese New Year and Photography's sesquicentennial.

Tickets for the Groundhog Day festivities are $10 in advance and are available at the DIA office Tuesdays through Sundays from 9:30 a.m. until 5:15 p.m. They're $15 at the door. Call the DIA ticket office: 832-2730.

ing for its members and special friends at the Gourmet House in St. Clair Shores on Valentine's Day, Wednesday, Feb. 14. The meeting will begin at 11 a.m.

In keeping with the holiday, Grosse Pointer Sean Hogan-Downey, certified social worker and family therapist, will speak "Heart to Heart," after the luncheon.

Heart to heart is a common phrase denoting confidential conversation. Publicity chairman Marilee Rinke said Hogan-Downey is known for her warmth and humor and her heart-to-heart talks and will share thoughts on loving and on self-care.

Rinke is urging Fontbonne members to invite friends or prospective members to the Valentine's Day event — to see first-hand how much Fontbonne Auxiliary members mean to each other.

The luncheon committee is headed by Lee Ann McCarthy assisted by Rose Regner, Betty

Reflections from my Journal

Sunday:

"Things beyond our seeing, things beyond our hearing, all prepared by God for those who love him," these it is that God has revealed to us through the Spirit.

— I Corinthians 2:9-10(NEB)

Monday:

There are things I never notice from my automobile that I see quite clearly from my bicycle; things I don't see from my bike I notice while walking; things I miss while walking that are so obvious from my rocking chair. Perhaps there are none so blind as those who will not slow down.

Tuesday:

Permanence is fleeting.

Wednesday:

An elderly lady is standing on the street corner waiting for the light to change. I wonder where the little girl she once was, has gone. Obviously, she is still right there and I could no doubt see her now — if I had my other glasses.

Thursday:

It's not that prayer is so difficult, but so intimate. To be so close to another . . . to allow another to be so close to me . . . what might we see in each other . . . in ourselves?

Friday:

Jesus could see things so clearly . . . and also see through things so clearly.

Saturday:

To see "things beyond our seeing." — nice phrase, Paul. Like the Corinthians, we get so caught up in our routines, we can't see the heavens for the stars.

Heavens?

When was the last time I saw the stars above the street lights?

Youth leadership conference to be at Westin Hotel Jan. 27-28

Often we hear and experience negative things about today's youth.

Only the positive will be accentuated by over 2,000 youths and adults who will be attending Rainbow 8, on Jan. 27-28, at the Westin Hotel, Detroit.

Rainbow is a youth conference sponsored by the Catholic Youth Organization, CYO, and planned by the members of the CYO Youth Council.

This year's conference will be

Seminar at Assumption Church

Guest speakers from several faiths will form a panel of experts for a stewardship seminar, "Grow in Grace," at the Assumption Greek Orthodox Church and Cultural Center on Saturday, Jan. 27.

The Rev. Demetrios S. Kavadas, Assumption pastor, has invited the interdenominational experts to speak with parish council officers, committee members and other parish leaders, and to share ideas about stewardship and church finances.

The leadership seminar is a first at Assumption, and seeks not only to deal with financial challenges of today, but to ensure a financially healthy future for the church.

The visiting experts at the seminar will be: Fr. Costas Sitaras, director of stewardship for the Greek Orthodox Archdiocese of North and South America; Stuart Kerr, Esq., treasurer, The Christian Communication Council of Metropolitan Detroit, American Baptist Churches; the Rev. Charles McClosky, interim pastor, Cherry Hill Presbyterian Church; Pastor Dominic Russo, Bloomfield Hills Christian Church (non-denominational); and the Rev. James Thompson, First Baptist Church.

The Assumption Greek Orthodox Church is located at 21800 Marter Road in the adjoining communities of Grosse Pointe Woods and St. Clair Shores.

the eighth annual Rainbow. The first Rainbow was held in November, 1982, with over 350 youth and adults in attendance who realized that youth leadership is important. Subsequent Rainbows built upon this realization and increased the opportunities for youth leadership in society today.

This year's theme, "One in the Promise," will explore the implications of what it is to be unique, yet one in our world.

How we are able as individuals, to bring about a positive effect in the world around us, will be intimately explored by general session speakers from all walks of life. Workshops will include topics on youth leadership, teen suicide prevention, friendship, dating, living in a single parent home, and teens within the Christian community.

Seminar on aging

Aging is inevitable but it can be easier.

A seminar on Feb. 3 can show you how to make the most of each advancing year.

"The Natural Aging Process" will focus on the physical changes that occur as we grow older, including the effects of retirement, and it will show participants how to make the most of their later years. Adapting to the changing health care system also will be discussed.

The seminar will be held on Saturday, Feb. 3, from 9:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m., at Macomb Community College's Center Campus, Hall and Garfield roads, in Clinton Township. The fee is $35.

For more information, call Macomb's Professional and Continuing Education Department at 445-7417.

Memorial church's women's groups

Grosse Pointe Memorial women's circle groups will continue on Feb. 6 with their study of 1 Peter. The lesson for this month is 1 Peter 2:11 - 3:7, dealing with the practical application of Christianity.

In this passage, Peter urged others to follow the example of Christ in the many relationships of life: as family members; as slaves; and as citizens in the wider political context of government, said Kathy Kurap, circle coordinator. "At first glance, some of Peter's directives may seem troubling, yet through discussion we can gain insight into the practical application of these words for our lives today," she said.

All are invited to attend Circles, which are held at Memorial Church on the first Tuesday of each month at either 9:30 a.m., 1 p.m. or 7:30 p.m.

Newcomers are always welcome. A noon luncheon is also available for which reservations are required. Call the church office at 882-5330 for more information.

CCS gets grant to work with elderly

The Center for Creative Studies-Institute of Music and Dance has received a grant of $44,992 from the State of Michigan's Office of Services to the Aging. The grant supports CCS-IMD's School of Performing Arts Special Education, which provides therapeutic performing arts programming for the frail elderly within the metropolitan Detroit area.

The grant will sponsor the services of CCS-IMD music and movement/dance therapists to individuals who are confined to residential nursing homes. The School of Performing Arts Special Education currently serves 11 homes in the tri-county area.

Travelogue offer for newcomers

World Adventure Series at The Detroit Institute of Arts is offering free tickets to persons who have never attended a Series program.

Beginning with the second half of the current season on Jan. 28, all ticket buyers are invited to bring a friend who has never seen a World Adventure Series program, free of charge. This offer will remain valid throughout the rest of the travelogue season.

World Adventure Series, in existence since 1933, offers a full-length motion picture travelogue, narrated live from the stage. This is a profession begun by the world traveller and author Burton Holmes just before the turn of the century. The film/lectures are not only entertaining, but contribute much to the understanding of different people and places in the world, and are invaluable in helping Americans learn how other people live, play, worship and interact with us and others.

The program of Jan. 28 is "Ceramics Are Fun," filmed and narrated live by William Stockdale. The presentation depicts humorous tombstones from all over the world, and will also show important sights in each area.

Individual tickets are $3. For further information, reservations and a free brochure, call the DIA ticket office at 833-7900 during business hours.

Ladies' Auxiliary

The Ladies' Auxiliary of the Walter F. Bruce Post No. 1146, 2840 E. Jefferson, St. Clair Shores, will hold its Cabin Fever Dance on Saturday, Jan. 27. Spirits at 7:30 p.m., food at 8 p.m., dancing from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m.

Tickets are $1 per person. For tickets call Lori Doebler at 778-1969 or Laurie Johnson at 778-4814, after 5 p.m.

of Lakeville, Minn. A May wedding is planned.

abuse later. Schueler recounted some examples of psychological abuse by her former husband: "I was treated like a child," she said. "We would receive an invitation to a party and I wanted to attend. He would say, 'You don't deserve to go. We're not going.'"

"After a social function he would criticize my behavior on the way home. Or he would be silent. Silence can be a punishment. Or he would cut me out of conversations."

"He demeaned me in front of the children. Physical abuse always starts with a test," Schueler said. She told the story about her husband bending her finger back until it hurt. "Then he'd laugh and say he was only kidding. I fed into it (by not saying anything) so I wouldn't embarrass him. My response was an unspoken one: 'I'll just give him more love and then he'll stop doing that.'"

Schueler said she later discovered that this attitude is typical of abused women.

One night, she said, in a fury, he lunged at her so forcefully and suddenly that she was pushed out of bed onto the floor. She suffered injuries to her fifth and sixth vertebrae. She was hospitalized and eventually underwent surgery for a spinal fusion. Soon afterward, she began planning to leave him.

There are several shelters for abused women and their children in the metropolitan Detroit area. To protect the safety of their clients they won't publicize their locations, but all have 24-hour crisis hotlines.

Laurie Huff, executive director of Turning Point, a shelter for abused and homeless women in Mount Clemens, said that often women with higher incomes find it harder to leave an abusive relationship than women with incomes in the low or middle range.

"Her situation may be just as violent, just as miserable," Huff said, "but a woman from Grosse Pointe may have more to lose by leaving the situation. Appearances are important. She may be married to a professional man — say, a doctor. His reputation is at stake. The children's reputations are important."

By the same token, she added, women in Grosse Pointe may have other resources to help them leave an abusive relationship — an income; a job; friends with financial resources.

Turning Point has grown to three times its original capacity during its 10-year existence. The facility has 57 beds for women and their children. "Usually 40 to 45 beds are in use," Huff said. "In summer, we're usually full. Women are more likely to leave an abuser in summer, when the kids are finished with school."

"We also offer counseling for abused women. The abuse may be emotional, sexual, economic, verbal or physical. Any woman who says she's abused is eligible."

Turning Point has ongoing support groups for victims of abuse. The free sessions meet on Mondays from 7 to 9 p.m. and Wednesdays from 12:30 to 2:30 p.m. In addition, Huff said the facility offers full services for displaced homemakers and a pre-employment program to build self-esteem and refer women to other resources for jobs, training programs or education.

According to Huff, the typical woman who seeks shelter at Turning Point is in a crisis situation. "It's usually within 24 hours of the most recent abuse."

"About 70 percent of the women go back home after the first time," she said. "She'll say she still loves the man — she just wants him to stop beating her. She feels an obligation to return."

"She'll stay with him for six or seven months. We call this the honeymoon period. Then she's back again."

"Often she'll leave him two or three or four times. She comes to us a little stronger each time."

Hayse said there is no typical abused woman, but there is a typical abuser. "His great need is for power and control. Tactics are surprisingly similar," she said. "He controls the money; he tells her she can't work; or he drives her to and from work and he takes her paycheck; he accuses her of infidelity; he uses threats of taking the children away if she doesn't do what he wants; he threatens to kill her; or to commit suicide. Probably 50 percent of abused women have also been forced to have sex with their abusers."

Janet Jones and Sally Schueler have left their abusive marriages.

For Schueler, it took several years of therapy and the help of a psychologist before she was able to leave her husband. "Before, I was wearing an invisible sign that said, 'No matter how much you demean me I will love you and do whatever you want.'"

Jones has also undergone years of therapy to strengthen her self-esteem and build her assertiveness. Schueler has written and published a book about her experience as an abused wife: "Circles in a Pool," by Sally Hogan Schueler with Ellen Probert. Schueler has also organized Safe Attitudes for Escape, Inc., (S.A.F.E.) to help victims of abuse. She's planning to offer seminars at local churches and to organize support groups patterned after other self-help programs such as Alcoholics Anonymous. S.A.F.E. also has a strong basis in Jesus Christ, Schueler said.

"These seminars are for people to see how this behavior happens. Our churches are the greatest hope for this situation," she said. Schueler is seeking funding for S.A.F.E.

Kristin Pope, community education coordinator for the Women's Justice Center, a legal information and referral service, said, "There are three stages to violence: tension; then the actual violence (the kicking, punching, stabbing); then the making up. These stages happen very fast."

"These women have so many things against them," she said. "It's surprising that so many leave (their abusers)."

Pope said that society has many misconceptions about battered women. "Many people believe these women like violence; that they're mentally ill; that they deserve it, because they're nags or bitches; for some, battering is even a romantic concept — 'he's just taking care of me.'"

Sargent said that counseling offers hope for women in abusive situations. As for their abusers — she hesitated. "Battering types are not good candidates for therapy," she said.

"Circles in a Pool," by Sally Hogan Schueler with Ellen Probert, is available at Tree of Life book store, 22317 Kelly. Schueler will autograph copies of the book on Friday and Saturday, Jan. 26 and 27, from noon until 7 p.m.

Danger signals

Laurie Huff, executive director of Turning Point, a shelter for abused and homeless women, said that women should know that if violence is occurring in a dating relationship, it will continue — and become more violent.

Grosse Pointe Virginia Sargent, licensed clinical psychologist, marriage and family therapist, agreed. "An abusive situation only gets worse."

Sargent said women should know that abuse is possible in any relationship in which the woman feels consistently intimidated; afraid; bullied; and powerless to change the situation.

Danger signals include any or all of the following:

- You feel that your partner is unable to deal with anger in an appropriate way. For instance, when he is upset, he puts his fist through a wall; or throws an object; or destroys something of value.
- Your partner has a history of abuse in his family — either he was abused as a child, or his father abuses his mother or his siblings.
- You feel that your partner always wants things his way. You are obligated to participate in his activities, see his friends, eat what he likes, dress to please him, etc.
- Your partner has been in prison. Find out why.
- Your partner was married three or four or five times. You should check out the reasons why he has had so many unsuccessful relationships.
- You feel that your partner consistently blames someone else for his shortcomings and failures.

- You feel that your partner has no friends, no good relationships with others.

- You feel that your partner shows excessive jealousy. "Jealousy is not a sign of love, but of ownership," said Ellen Hayse, resource librarian for the Michigan Coalition Against Domestic Violence.

- You feel that your partner abuses alcohol or drugs.

- You feel that your partner is trying to cut you off from your support systems — your family, friends, co-workers. You feel that he is trying to isolate you.

- You feel like a child.

Center for Jung Studies of Detroit plans programs

The Center for Jung Studies of Detroit presents lectures, films, courses, seminars, a book service and a library focusing on Jungian works or authors.

The center is located in the Village Professional Building, 17150 Kercheval, Grosse Pointe. It acts as a focal point in Southeast Michigan for the study of the teachings of Carl Jung, psychoanalyst, author and teacher.

On the center's spring calendar of events are a seminar, "A Generative Stance: Technocracy and the Creative Personality," on Jan. 26, from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. and Jan. 27 from 1 to 4 p.m. The presenter will be J. Gary Sparks. Tuition is $70.

Some February events: a lecture, "Body, Soul, and Spirit: The Self as Complex Soul"; a course, "Introduction to Jungian Dream Work, theory and method"; and a course, "Children of Divorce."

For a complete list of events or for more information, call 885-7918.

Village Garden Club

The Village Garden Club will present a program, "Flowers in Art," by Virginia Snyder on Jan. 26 at 11 a.m.

Hostess for the luncheon meeting will be Polly Fischer. She will be assisted by Ethel Behr and Myrtle Everett.

Norseman turns Wolverine

College recruits, take notice: Charlie Stumb, the most adept tight end ever to come out of North, has verbally committed to play football at the University of Michigan.

Your efforts, most of them futile, can now be put away because the 6-foot-6 inch, 220 pound, all-state player is bound for Wolverine country.

You don't have to send his mother a birthday card, you don't have to call him once a day to see how his history class went. All you've got to do is take your dog-and-pony show somewhere else. Stumb is no longer a Norseman at North, he's a blue-and-gold bleeding football player.

Stumb, who holds the North career mark with 60 receptions in two seasons, will no longer be besieged by phone calls, inundated with junk mail and exhorted to play at other schools.

Although he became North's finest tight end, Stumb was recruited as a linebacker. In his senior season, he had 90 tackles, four quarterback sacks, one interception for a touchdown and two fumble recoveries.

After visiting U of M Jan. 20, just 24 hours after he scored 11 points in a North hoop win at Roseville, Stumb shook hands with head coach Gary Moeller and calmly said, "I'm glad to be a Wolverine."

"I'm so excited," said Stumb, who became marketable after breaking the single season mark for catches and yardage as a junior. "I stood up and grabbed Mr. Moeller's hand and had such a great feeling that I did the right thing. I'm glad it's all over."

The pressure almost became too mountainous to climb, but Stumb, only 17, has risen above it all and sent a clear message: "I'm a Wolverine for the next five years. Now I can concentrate on other things and not worry about all the phone calls."

Stumb, who also visited Michigan rival Michigan State, was greatly influenced by Michigan's football and academic program.

"I think the shoe room is bigger than my home," he said. "They've got shoes for wet turf, dry turf, low turf, high turf and extra-turfy turf. Seriously, though, I realized a dream last weekend by committing."

"We toured the campus, fooled around in the football stadium and took a serious look

Grilled cheese, basketball satisfy Caldwell

By Rob Fulton
Sports Editor

If Joe Caldwell were 6 years old, his babysitter would make easy money. All the sitter would have to do is give him a grilled cheese sandwich and a basketball, and not worry about him until his parents come home.

Now, at age 17, Caldwell still chomps on the grilled cheese and he's fully acclimated to the basketball world — and he doesn't need a sitter.

From a young dribbler to a varsity player, the 5-foot-11 1/2 inch point guard for the South basketball team thrives on pressure situations.

Caldwell, who is in his senior season, is heady, solid and one of the east side's finer players — despite suffering a severe knee injury as a freshman.

Caldwell, whose cockiness is displayed only as confidence, runs the Blue Devils' show, and has for three years. Currently averaging 14 points and five assists a game, Caldwell is only unsure about one thing:

"I don't know if it's confidence that makes you do things, or things you do that make you confident."

Either way, Caldwell's natural instincts and basketball sense make him a money man in the clutch, and he rarely makes a poor decision.

"Having Joe on the court is like having another coach," said South coach George Petrouleas, who's seen Caldwell age since his first varsity season as a sophomore. "Joey keeps us all on our toes. He shows great leadership qualities on and off the floor, and he makes my job easier. I think he's so confident because he's been playing for so many years."

Caldwell's father, Jim, was instrumental in starting Joe's love for athletics back in Cleveland.

"My dad never really pushed me or my brother to do anything we didn't want to," said Caldwell, who as a junior last year led his team to the regional finals only to lose to Southwestern. "He would just lead us or present the ideas to us and we would choose for ourselves. That was important to him and us."

"My dad always told us that basketball was something he could do with us and we all could enjoy. In fact, my dad even made us dribble sitting in the dark in the basement. That was a challenge."

Caldwell's first organized season came when he was a first-grader at St. Angela. That season made more of an impression than Caldwell thought.

"It was a lot of fun and that really got me interested in basketball," he recalled. "It was fun because it was a third-grade team and we had all first or second-graders starting. I was the off guard, not the point guard."

Caldwell, however, wasn't a one-sport person.

"I was playing soccer, baseball and basketball," he said. "Sports were just something I was into and so were all my friends. Besides, it beat being a Boy Scout."

Some scouts may take exception to that, but basketball coaches didn't.

Caldwell says he has never struggled in athletics. He entered Kerby Elementary School in third grade after his father's job transfer, and quickly picked up where he left off. He played at St. Paul until he entered South as a freshman.

"I've been fortunate in sports," said Caldwell. "The only time I really remember not doing well, was when I was in seventh grade. We stunk. We had only six guys, that's how bad we were. Do you know how embarrassing it is to be the only guy on the bench?"

Now he's hardly on the bench at all, averaging 28 minutes in a 32 minute game.

"I don't like to be on the bench," he said. "I never have. I like to be a part of the game and I don't feel like I am if I'm on the bench."

Perhaps he's so successful and proficient because his socks are on the right foot.

"Last year when we were winning all the time, I could have given you a list of about 100 superstitions, but now I have only one," admitted Caldwell. "If I put on my sock and it doesn't feel quite right, I take it off and put it on the other foot."

Is that the only one?

"Well, there's also the haircut superstition," Caldwell continued. "If you get a haircut you have to practice at least once before the game. One guy got his haircut this season and didn't practice first and we lost. I'm not very superstitious, but why mess with it?"

After playing in the Junior Olympics from age 11 to 13, Caldwell played for South's jay-vee as a freshman, but after his knee blew out playing baseball, he thought he'd never play any organized sport again.

"I was on first base and was going to steal, but the pitcher tried to pick me off," he recalled. "I turned to go back to the base when I felt something tear (cartilage), but I then ran for second and slid in. When I slid, I buckled my leg under me and that's when I did further damage, stretching the ligaments."

"It was the first time I had slid into a base feet first. I usually went in head first, but I was safe."

A few days later, Caldwell had the cartilage sewn instead of removed, and was advised that his knee was susceptible to further injuries.

Remaining competitive, Caldwell couldn't stay away from sports. One day after beating East Detroit in basketball the next winter, Caldwell went back for his second arthroscopic surgery. This time the cartilage was removed.

He's now forced to wear a brace that supports the knee because the ligaments are so stretched that the knee has no side-to-side mobility.

"It's kind of a drag to wear," Caldwell said, "but you get used to it. I'd like to say I don't notice it much, but I do."

See CALDWELL, page 2C

Even after his knee surgery, Caldwell (10) didn't lose much of his quickness — especially on defense.

Joe Caldwell is currently averaging 14 points a game for the South Blue Devils.
