Phone dialing changes reap unexpected furor

The planned change in dialing procedure for people living and working in the 313 area code has ramifications well beyond the additional finger exercise involved in dialing 1-313.

Residents and business people with fire and burglar alarms are now finding that the systems must be reprogrammed to respond to Michigan Bell's upcoming change.

"I see ramifications for computers, for so-called 'smart homes,' for fax machines, anything with automatic dialing," said Brad Keller, vice president of the Burglar and Fire Alarm Association of Michigan.

He's right, according to Bell.

"Anything that needs to dial a number that now uses 1 plus a local number will have to be modified to dial 1-313," said Michigan Bell spokesman Dave Ellis. That includes modems and faxes and all automatic dialing systems.

"As the changes are made, people will get a bill insert or a letter," Ellis said. "If it's a large business, they may get a personal visit."

Ellis said the dialing change will be phased in over a period of months.

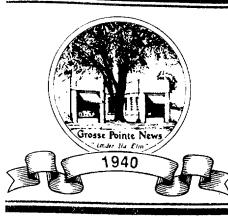

Many owners of alarm systems have already heard from their alarm company. however - and some of them aren't too happy. Some alarm companies have decided to charge for the reprogramming, which must be done at the customer's home or business.

"This should be a simple change and they're making money from it," said one irritated customer.

Whether alarm companies elect to charge or not, they're all at least as angry about the change as their customers are.

"This threw us into total confusion," said

Although the local communities were ordered to eliminate or contain the combined sewage overflows into the lake by June DNR) of seeing 1982, little if anything has been done to stop the discharges. This time around, however, the state Department of Natural Resources is taking a hard-line approach in issuing new discharge permits to communities throughout the state.

The Pointe communities seeking discharge permits are the Shores, Farms and Park. Grosse Pointe Woods and Harper Woods discharge sewage into the lake through the Milk River Pump discharge permit has been filed

The City is the only Pointe community that does not discharge sewage into the lake. Ac-Kressbach, two-thirds of the tem has separate storm and sanitary sewer lines. The other third of the city near Mack has a combined sewer system that goes directly to Detroit. The Farms, Shores, Park and Woods have combined sewer systems, which means storm water and sewage flow into the same sewer lines. The problem is that the communities are limited to how many gallons per hour they can pump to the Detroit treatment plant. Therefore, during heavy rains, the storm water creates more volume than can be pumped to Detroit. The excess storm water mixed with sanitary wastes is dumped into Lake St.

Currently, the only alternative to dumping sewage and storm water into the lake is allowing by Detroit police.

Formanczyk faces a minimum 10-year sentence for possession with intent to deliver at least 1,000 grams of heroin. Because she skipped bail, she also faces an additional five years. Economo said it is up to a federal judge in Boston whether the extra years will be served concurrently with or added to the drug sentence.

On Feb. 14, 1989, Formanczyk was arrested in a downtown Boston hotel after she purchased 1 1/2 kilograms of heroin from a Lebanese courier. The DEA had intercepted the courier and accompanied him to Logan International Airport and to the drug deal exchange with Formanczyk.

At the time, she was allowed free on $200,000 bail, for which Formanczyk and her husband, Theodore, put up their Westchester home as collateral. When Formanczyk jumped bail, U.S. Marshals seized the house and turned it over to a real estate broker for sale.

The Formanczyks also own the T&H Discount store downtown. Formanczyk was last seen Nov. 27 in Boston, the day before she was to be sentenced in U.S. District Court. When she failed to appear in court, an international lookout was posted. Federal agents suspected she either fled to Canada or her native Lebanon.

Economo said a "reliable source" gave his office reason to believe Formanczyk was staying at living quarters above Ruby's Lounge at 13837 Conant in Detroit. A stake-out of the lounge gave marshals enough evidence to obtain a search warrant, Economo said.

When marchals and DEA agents kicked in the door to the upstairs apartment, Formanczyk was busy in the kitchen, Economo said.

He said the owner of the bar only knew Formanczyk by the name "Cece." A friend of the owner said Cece needed a place to stay. Formanczyk lived above the bar for 3 1/2 weeks.

Economo said the bar's owner will not be charged with harboring a fugitive.

City incorrect on census forms? Don't worry

A number of Grosse Pointers who received their census forms last week were surprised to see that although their street address on the form was correct, the city listed was Detroit.

Cities use the census figures to obtain state and other forms of aid and it is important to get the most accurate count in each city. But because a city is listed incorrectly on the address label, it does not mean respondents will be counted incorrectly.

"The first thing to say is that they don't need to worry," said Census district office manager Janie Boblitt. "All our forms are geo-coded and are assigned specifically to that address. We know what city that address is in. Grosse Pointe will get the credit for all their questionnaires.

The cities may have been listed incorrectly to aid the post office with delivery, she added.

"What is important is the street address and the zip code," she said. "If those are correct, don't worry.'

She urged people with questions to call the toll-free number listed on each census form if they have any questions.

Park rookie faces trial in dog-shooting incident

Assistant Editor

"first series of Though his shots" were justified, the Park police rookie who shot the dog on Lakepointe faces a departmental trial for his conduct during the incident.

Park Public Safety Director Richard Caretti told the City Council Monday night that a police major incident review board investigating the March 4 incident found that the evidence suggests the officer did encounter a serious threat of great bodily harm and did act properly in the first series of shots.

He said, however, that the unnamed officer's actions following the first series of shots are being questioned and that the officer will be tried by a police department tribunal.

Caretti refused to go into further detail regarding the incident because, he said, he wanted the officer to get a fair trial. He said more information will be made public following the trial, of the three bullet wounds, the more to be completed.

"This investigation could not have been any more intensive than if an actual murder had occurred," said Caretti, who also had responded to the shooting

The officer, who joined the Park Public Safety Department last July after a five-year hitch in the Marines, was walking to work in an alley along Lakepointe shortly before the start of the 7 p.m. shift when a 2-yearold Labrador mix lunged at him.

The officer fired six shots, with three bullets hitting the dog and one puncturing the tire of a car belonging to the dog's owner, Sean Downey. According to a report by Dr. Lawrence Herzog of the Grosse Pointe Animal Clinic, the first bullet hit the dog's open mouth and the dog was in a aggressive attack posture when the first shot was fired.

which could take a month or damage was severe and the animal had to be euthanized.

The shooting outraged many neighbors who thought the young officer's actions were excessive and not justified. A few Lakepointe residents attended the Monday night council meeting to hear Caretti's report.

Caretti cited many complaints from neighbors that the dog was frequently on the loose outside its yard and in some cases threatening and growling at neighbors. The Park's animal control officer had sent letters to the home requesting that the dog be kept under control, Caretti said.

One neighbor questioned whether six shots were necessary for the officer's safety. Another resident said, "I know the dog got out, but I didn't want it killed."

Caretti said the officer will be tried by three department officials who were not involved in the investigation. He said the trial will be similar to a military court martial inquiry, with both sides having legal representation. The officer will be defended by the police officer's union.

The recently hired officer is still on probation and could be dismissed for any reason, but Caretti said an officer's career is on the line and he deserves a fair trial.

He said the officer has been taken off all police work and has been assigned to fire and ambulance duties. He has been relieved of his weapon, Caretti

Park council opposes any expansion of City Airport

Assistant Editor

Playing to a standing-roomonly crowd Monday night, the Grosse Pointe Park City Council voted unanimously to oppose any expansion of Detroit City Airport.

The council's action was met with applause by the scores of Park and Detroit residents who filled all the seats in the council chambers, stood along the walls and spilled out into the hallway.

The council's third and most recent resolution is the first in which it took an absolute stand against any increased activity at the airport at Conner and Gratiot. In the past two resolutions adopted, the Park has opposed specific aspects of the airport's expansion, such as an east-west runway, hours of operation and type of aircraft allowed.

But the residents feared that the Park is sending the message that expansion is OK as long as certain restrictions are met. The residents believed that any expansion would be harmful to the community and that restrictions would not be allowed or enforce-

Councilwoman Valerie Moran, who is a member of the six-city Grosse Pointe-Harper Woods Airport Study Committee, proposed a resolution that said no action be taken until a study by the Southeastern Michigan Council of Governments be completed.

Councilman Dan Clark, however, said he was in favor of a resolution in total opposition to any airport expansion, and he believed the council need not wait for another study to justify opposition.

Mayor Pro Tem Vern Ausherman said, "The trouble is they could be still be studying after the expansion takes place.

Clark added, "We don't want to get caught with our pants down.'

Councilman David Gaskin warned that using the shotgun approach and opposing everything may be less effective than opposing specific aspects of the expansion. Residents, however, spoke out in disagreement with Gaskin.

"I'm appalled at Councilman Gaskin's appeasement approach," said one resident.

Again, residents and council members questioned the airport study committee's role in fighting the expansion.

"So far our study commission hasn't done anything that I'm aware of," Clark said.

Moran said she can't speak for the committee because it hasn't present to defend their actions. Sensing the council's direction, City Manager Dale Krajniak drafted a resolution stating total opposition to airport expansion. Other residents in attendance pointed out that while the resolution was good, it wasn't enough. Those opposed to the airport were urged to write their elected state and federal representatives.

Woods residents appeal high assessment increases

Amid demands to have the entire city of Grosse Pointe Woods reassessed because of mistakes in the city assessor's office, the city administration last week recommended against starting

That's the message from Chester Petersen, city administrator, to the mayor and council.

In a letter dated March 21, Petersen told the council that "a reassessment of the entire city is not possible or feasible because of time constraints." In the letter, Petersen outlined an earlier meeting between the city administration and Assessor Gerald McNamara. The meeting was set "for the purpose formulating a plan to correct recognizable errors which were incorporated in the 1990 assessment roll," Petersen said.

Following the meeting, which also included city attorney George Catlin and Comptroller Clifford Maison, Petersen concluded that any adjustment of the city's faulty assessment roll would "negate the work of the Board of Review; would increase the assessed value of properties which have already been lowered; and would generate additional negative publicity.

Based on computer-generated listings of all properties in the Woods, Petersen demonstrated

- Assessments were decreased on 1,727 residential properties and 67 commercial properties.
- · Assessments were increased between 30 to 59 percent on 450 residential properties and one commercial property.
- Assessments were increased by 60 percent or more on 226 residential properties and six commercial properties.

Petersen said the above data can be compared with Board of Review petitions and the current assessment roll to find and correct errors before the next Board of Review meeting, (March 27 and April 2).

"It is our opinion that this procedure will allow us the best possibility of discovering errors and coordinating any recommendations to the Board of Review and possibly negating the number of people required to appear before the board, Petersen wrote to the council.

State Rep. Bill Bryant said the $20,000 figure has no relevance on single family residences and instead is the amount that determines which division of the Michigan Tax Tribunal will hear assessment appeals.

If the amount of the dispute is $20,000 or less, the case would be heard by the small claims division of the Tax Tribunal.

"Residents can always go to the Tax Tribunal regarding a single family residence, no matter what the amount," Bryant said. Several Woods residents have claimed that unusually high assessment increases will force them out of their homes because they cannot afford to pay the property tax.

Bryant, in a published column in the March 22 Grosse Pointe News, told readers that no one should be put out of his or her home because of property taxes.

Young men seek Amy, find trouble

Three 20-year-olds from St. Clair Shores and a 17-year-old Detroit youth came to Grosse Pointe Woods March 24 looking for Amy and left with smashed car windows and a bloody nose.

Woods police responded to a neighbor's call of a possible assault at a home in the 1600 block of Bournemouth at 12:45 a.m. The neighbor told police that the resident across the street was standing outside with no shoes on and yelling at and possibly assaulting someone in a car in the driveway. Woods assessment notices delayed

By Dan Jarvis Staff Writer

Several anxious Woods residents, upon hearing of large assessment increases from their neighbors, waited to get their assessment notices in the mail. They waited and waited.

And while they waited, a pile of bulk mail, including their 1990 assessment notices, piled up in the corner of the U.S. Postal Service's Grosse Pointe Branch, according to Woods residents. One resident, who called the post office to find out about her notice, was told to pick it up herself.

The action, or lack of, was enough to prompt a formal complaint by the city of Grosse Pointe Woods. But the blame, according to a postal service spokesman, should be shared with the city.

On March 16, the Woods treasurer's office, led by Comptroller Clifford Maison, filed a formal complaint with Detroit Postmaster John Horne regarding "a lack of cooperation" by the Grosse Pointe Branch of the post office.

The assessment notices, usually sent out first class by municipalities — guaranteeing quick delivery — were sent out bulk rate, which slows delivery but saves the city money in mailing costs.

Because the notices were delivered to the post office later than expected, a check for additional mailing costs was attatched and the city requested the notices be sent out first class.

According to a Woods city employee, postal employees said they would do their best to change the status from bulk to first class, but since the bulk permit was used, the mail had to be stamped bulk rate. Furthermore, mail carriers would see bulk rate mail, which often gets left behind for priority first-class mail, the postal employees said.

Two weeks later, a large number of Woods residents had not received their notices and then complained to the city, who in turn complained to postal work-

Errant wrecker driver faces two felonies

The Harper Woods man who has been charged with drunk driving twice so far this year by Shores police faces two felony charges resulting from his most recent arrest.

Laurence Michael Manley, 33, stood mute in St. Clair Shores 40th District Court March 23 to charges of violating controlled substances laws and his third drunk driving offense, both of which are felonies.

Manley was stopped at 3:35 a.m. March 11 while traveling northbound on Lakeshore. At the time, he registered .163 on the portable breath test but refused to take a Breathalyzer test at the station.

Police said the March 11 arrest was Manley's third for drunk driving, and therefore he is being charged with a felony.

During the arrest, Grosse Pointe Shores officers found a small brown vial laying on the floor in front of the driver's seat of Manley's vehicle. Because the vial was the type used to carry cocaine, it was sent to the Michigan State Police for analysis.

On Jan. 6, according to police reports, Manley was driving a wrecker southbound in the northbound lanes of Lakeshore at 8:51 a.m. and smashed headon into a car being driven by a St. Clair Shores man. At the time, a breath test showed Manley had an alcohol level of .15. Legally drunk is .10.

Vote proposal a power grab, not a reform

The attempt by the Wayne County Commission to grab some of the county executive's power through a proposed charter amendment revives an old dispute between the county board and the county executive.

Back in the early 1980s when the charter was being drafted to reform county government, the commission felt strongly that a sharp division between the powers and authority of the county commission and the executive should be emphasized.

As a result, the commission's recommendation was accepted and the charter made the county board the county's legislative body and the executive became the chief administrative officer. One of his duties is to appoint a deputy executive who would serve if the executive office is vacant or the executive is absent or disabled.

Now, however, the county commission has proposed a change in the method of picking the executive's successor. It would require that if the office of county executive is vacated more than a year prior to the next county election, the county commission would pick a temporary successor who would serve just 90 days until a special election could be held to select a permanent replacement.

If the vacancy occurred less than a year prior to the next vote, the county board still would pick the temporary executive who under these circumstances would serve until the next regular county elec-

Either way, the commission would pick the temporary successor. And that's where the complaint is made that the county board is attempting to usurp some of the county excecutive's power.

The old county board, prior to the adoption of the charter, served as both a legislative body and an administrative body. It was generally agreed that the board had made a mess of things and that the county had become a kind of headless horseman with nobody in charge.

In the new proposal, there is nothing to prevent the board from picking one of its own members to serve as the temporary county executive who then would be in a good position to run for the job when the election is called.

True, the county board's fact sheet says the commission "would need to select a qualified individual with the knowledge and experience to manage county government for the interim period." But all 15 commissioners no doubt would put themselves in that special category.

However, to maintain the continuity and integrity of the executive's office, we think it wise to retain the present system that enables the executive to pick his second in command. And in the event the executive vacated his office, his policies and his department heads presumably would remain under his deputy to maintain that continu-

However, the commissioners, contending they have drafted "a more reasonable method" of filling an executive vacancy, have called public hearings on their proposal on Tuesday, April 3, at the Westland Friendship Center in Westland and on Wednesday, April 4, at the City-County Building in downtown Detroit. Both meetings will run from 7 to 9 p.m.

Citizens who are opposed to the commissioners' attempted power grab would do well to show up at the hearing and to express their views. If they don't, the issue is likely to be on the Aug. 7 primary ballot, and the commissioners no doubt will do their best to sell their idea to the citizenry.

The commission's fact sheet says the ballot question is being proposed to give county voters the right to participate in a special election to fill a vacancy in the office of county executive.

That's not entirely true since the commissioners in the first instance would pick the temporary successor to the executive. And that's the factor that forces us to the conclusion that the proposal really is an attempted power grab by commissioners who want to regain some of the power the charter transferred to the county execu-

In short, it is an attempt to weaken county government reform, not to strengthen it.

Airport plan ignores suburbs

t a time when Detroit officials are concerned about the city's loss of population, Mayor Coleman Young and his cohorts are seeking a huge City Airport expansion that would cost Detroit another 3,600 homes and 180 small businesses and industries.

Even from Detroit's viewpoint, the proposal appears to be counterproductive. So it's no wonder that Rep. Dennis Hertel of the 14th District calls the plan "insanity" and contends it would "ruin the entire east side." He adds he saw red when he read in the newspapers about the plan that eventually would quadruple the airport's size.

As part of the suburban east side, the Pointes obviously would be affected, too, by the airport expansion which would boost air and motor traffic over and around the Pointes, increase noise and air pollution and even threaten property values.

Pointe municipalities have been trying to monitor airport developments but have not been kept any better informed of the extent of Detroit's plans than Congressman Hertel has been.

In fact, Detroit's official attitude is to criticize the suburbs and everyone else for "Detroit bashing" whenever anyone objects to one of the mayor's fanciful plans.

For some Pointers, the improved airline facilities at City Airport do offer convenience. But many other Pointers are disturbed by the pollution, safety and traffic problems the expansion will cause.

Under the circumstances, many Pointers, including this newspaper, will support Hertel's plan to introduce legislation to bar federal funds for expansion of the airport despite the angry response by Mayor Young's press secretary that planes have been flying out of City Airport since before Congressmen Hertel was born.

True, planes have been flying out of the airport for years but the use of the airport by Southwest Airlines has heavily increased air traffic and aroused much more criticism in recent years. In fact, many residents and small businessmen who have moved into the area have opposed the airport expansion every step of the way, but complaints from such sources appear to be of little concern to Detroit's despotic peaking to Grosse Pointe Rotarians, Clark Durant Monday declared the United States should recognize the Republic of Lithuania as an independent, sovereign nation.

In a letter to President George Bush, the Grosse Pointe candidate for the GOP nomination for U.S. senator said that the Baltic states have been forcibly occupied by the Soviet Union for nearly five decades and that it has been U.S. policy not to recog-

The last word

Tn our view, Barbara Bush has just delivered what ought to have been the last word in the raging White House family dispute over the vegetable broccoli.

The First Lady accepted a shipment of broccoli for the White House table despite George Bush's act in banning it from Air Force One and his defiant press conference comment apparently directed at his wife, whom he described as "a total totalitarian" on broccoli:

"I do not like broccoli. And I haven't liked it since I was a little kid and my mother made me eat it. And I'm president of the United States and I'm not going to eat any more broccoli.'

After agreeing that the president never would eat broccoli again, Mrs. Bush added, "I'll never eat pork rinds." The president recently was ordained "Skin Man of the Year" after he expressed a taste for pork rinds and sales jumped 11 percent.

In this contest however, Mrs. Bush wins hands down in the view of nutritionists. Broccoli is a highly regarded vegetable and pork rinds are simply junk food.

nize the Soviet occupation.

Recognition was proposed in a resolution in the U.S. Senate last week but was rejected on the grounds that U.S. pressure might make the Soviet Union less inclined to compromise to settle its dispute over Lithuanian independence.

But Durant said it is a "disgrace" that now, "when Lithuania needs us most, the country that should be the first to recognize Lithuanian independence, has fallen short of giving meaningful support.'

Earlier the Grosse Pointe candidate for the GOP nomination for U.S. senator had announced that retired Marine Corps Lt. Col. Oliver North would campaign for him in a two-day swing through the state on May 4 and 5.

North, who was convicted on three counts for his part in the contra arms scandal, is expected to talk about his work in the inner city, including his support for drug rehabilitation, which was required under terms of his sentence.

Even though people differ about North and his role, Durant believes the former Marine officer has learned much from his inner city service and, on the contra matter, deserves some of the credit for the recent vote in Nicaragua that brought down the Ortega government.

The two moves indicates that Durant is stepping up his campaign and has seized upon two newsworthy events to emphasize his support for freedom of self-determination in Lithuania and the values of family and patriotism he sees embodied in North.

It is likely that some Republicans will disagree with Durant on these two issues and perhaps on other matters, but he is winning recognition as a campaigner who says what he means and means what he

Marine patrol

To the Editor:

St. Clair Shores police are proposing to implement a seasonal patrol unit, to ensure safe waterways, enforce safety regulations and reduce criminal activity throughout St. Clair Shores' waterfront. Grosse Pointe Woods residents who dock their boats at Lakefront Park and boaters in the marinas, but excluding resident boat owners with waterfront property, would fund this special patrol by being charged $15 to $20 per boat or dock.

The idea of a patrol is great, but funding should come from those who are responsible for the problems: the marinas. There are 10 marinas with close to 6,000 commercial slips, gas docks, bars, restaurants, boat and equipment sales, all generating tens of millions of dollars in income. I believe the taxes paid by the residents, including those in Grosse Pointe Woods who pay property tax for the park, obligate the city of St. Clair Shores to provide adequate protection.

If the police are overwhelmed by the thousands of boaters generated by the marinas and their auxiliary businesses, then it should be these businesses that are as-

Millage rate

To the Editor:

In last week's Grosse Pointe News, Thomas Steen asked two questions that deserve to be answered. First, "Are either city or school/library mills going to be rolled back to compensate for increased assessments?" Second, "What will be done with the additional revenue?'

Mr. Steen's questions are valid, and I only wish I had the answers he is looking for. Unfortunately, the board of education does not set the school/library millage rate until September. Until that time, there simply are no firm figures. With all the confusion and frustration raised by increased and, in some cases, incorrect assessments, it is understandable that voters want answers now. However, the board is only beginning to review budgetary requests for the 1990-91 school year. Until all educational needs are evaluated, a rush to predict the millage at this point would be foolhardy.

Mr. Steen can take some comfort from the fact that, in the past, Headlee has rolled back the school/library millage every year since 1979.

Fun with Mother Nature

The sweat runs down between my shoulderblades. A mosquito buzzes in my ear. I fumble endlessly with my binoculars, which are never focused no matter what I do.

The bird that is so clearly marked somehow doesn't look the same in the book.

Especially the Mexican bird

When we decided to go to Belize this winter, it was a given that I would try to learn some of the birds.

Right.

They have about 50. The page of jays is so crammed with little pictures that I despair of learning even one.

A few are standouts. I can do toucans, parrots, the resplendent quetzal. But the rest are a blur of vibrant colors — and they all hide coyly in the jungle.

I decide to try something bigger and more visible.

Monkeys.

A pal of mine in Mount Clemens has been writing back and forth with a guy who is banding black howler monkeys in Belize. Bob and I can go along.

It's a typical hot February day. Humid. Rainclouds still threaten, as the rainy season didn't end on schedule.

The ranger looks at us doubtfully. "It's pretty wet out there," he says, surveying our tennis on long pants, however.

Eight people are already hard at work. Jungle undergrowth is hacked away with a machete, people are taking blood samples and weighing and measuring the dozing monkeys spread out on a plastic sheet in the mud.

In the distance, a monkey

roars, defining its territory.

We have to move camp to reach a new group of monkeys. The tranquilizer expert is already thrashing around in the jungle with the net-carrying team.

We load ourselves down with assorted equipment so we can make the move all at once, the project director leading the way.

'It's pretty wet out there," he says, looking doubtfully at our tennis shoes. It's true that everythe camera team from Belize TV got the last two pairs. We decide to go on.

We slog off along a different path. Water is standing everywhere.

At first I try to jump across, weave around. But the swampy morass is too big to avoid. I wade.

Sweat runs down. Mosquitoes are in my ears, in my hair, dancing before my eyes. I think about Marine boot camp.

Swoosh! I step on a branch, my foot sliding off its slippery bark. I flounder, and with a crash, I'm down.

Camera, lens, banding paraphernalia, my watch from high school graduation, all under water. I scramble on the muddy bottom, levering the branch so it flies up and smacks me wetly in the face.

"Hey, no problem," I say one else is wearing boots. But smartly, as two men drag me to my feet. I wipe the mud out of my hair.

We get to the camp site, but the experts have changed their minds and moved to a drier place. We hike down a perfectly dry trail to the new site. "Don't worry," the director tells me as I drip on the plastic. "I won't tell the Audubon Society."

Good - my secret is safe.

No amount of physical discomfort can dampen my exhilaration. This is great stuff. Along with all the interesting things I've learned about howler monkeys, I find out all over again that hands-on nature is fun.

Last month, monkeys. This month, tundra swans, 10,000 of them up at the Old Thedford Bog near The Pinery. They're even bigger than monkeys, and if it gets cold, you can watch them from your car.

In addition, the board has added a voluntary rollback to Headlee in eight of the last 10 years.

In 1989, for example, voters authorized the board to levy 36.90 mills. The actual levy, as Mr. Steen points out, was 31.31, a rollback of 5.59 mills. That meant the average 1989 assessment increase of 11.8 percent translated into an increase in school/library taxes of 8.5 percent.

The board of education has always adhered to a policy of responsible fiscal management, levying only those mills essential to running an excellent educational program. In September, there is no reason to think that the board will act in any other

Tribute

To the Editor:

Her name conjures images of Black Forest fairy tales an appropriate name for a magical lady. A lady named Hildegarde de Grimme who drew us into her world like a magnet.

Her world was the gallery, and we, her friends, would gather there to talk about ideas. The theme depended on which of the collective group were present. At times there were heated discussions on politics or art. Other times the focus would turn to the worrisome condition of our planet. And sometimes the words were simply freefloating and easy - like where to buy the best pumpernickel bread, or the beauty of a spring day, or the fond recollection of an afternoon spent in the Villa Bourgesie.

Those who were fortunate enough to be part of the extended family (for that is what it truly was), were always welcomed with a cup of hot tea, a special potato salad, Austrian finger sandwiches and of course those special meringue cookies, in which she tucked away surprises of chocolate or walnuts.

Her outer beauty was obvious to all, but those of us who knew and loved her saw an inner beauty that shone just as bright. We saw the woman who brought food to the hungry and tended the elderly. We saw the woman who planted every grapefruit and orange seed in sight the beautiful results evident in the lush and shining trees that grew behind the gallery. We knew the woman that could not turn away the stray cats that scratched at the gallery door. Through the years those cats ruled the gallery and passersby would often see them sprawled languidly on the red velvet, as part of the window display.

In this special world, the de Grimme gallery was our stage. Hildegarde was the protagonist, and we, her friends, who passed through, were the players. Some of the cameo performances are now only memories. But for this moment, let us all meet there one last time to bid farewell to our very special friend - a friend we could count on to inspire us and strengthen our philosophies. A friend who left us with countless splendid memories.

City Airport

To the Editor:

Most Grosse Pointers are already acutely aware that their homes are beneath the flight paths of air traffic from City Airport; and few welcome the prospect of the more frequent flights which the proposed expansion of the airport would bring. If the expansion is made, however, the 750 percent increase in the frequency of flights (from 20 per day to 150 per day) will constitute only a portion of the increased technological intrusion which Pointers must endure.

The "expanded" airport is designed to accommodate not only an increased number of planes, but also much larger planes than are handled by the current facility. The anticipated traffic for an enlarged City Airport is greater both in number of aircraft and in size, weight and type of aircraft. At present the airport has an Airport Reference Code designa-tion of C3 — the largest equipment it can handle is a 737 operating under weight and fuel restrictions. If the airport were enlarged in accordance with the proposal submitted earlier this month to the Federal Aviation Administration, it would be given an ARC of D4 and it would handle ALL planes smaller than B52's and 747's. Thus the commercial flights which would traverse the Pointes every 12 minutes, 24 hours a day (or every 6 minutes, 12 hours/ day) would be be aircraft of much greater size than those which currently intrude upon the serenity and safety of our community.

The city of Windsor, recognizing the offensiveness of giant aircraft passing overhead, with their unavoidably intrusive noise and potential for disastrous crashes, has refused to allow its airspace to be used as a flight path. This wise and warranted response by Windsor leaves the Grosse Pointes as the only community to underlie the expressway in the sky which an expanded City Airport would create. Certainly, the same logic which led Windsor to conclude that an airplane expressway over its citizens' heads was intolerable applies to the Grosse Pointes. Since Grosse Pointe cannot refuse use of its airspace (as the fortunate, foreign country Windsorites can), Pointers must find some other means to prevent the injury to their quality of life which an airborne expressway would entail. Pointers can preserve the peace and serenity of their community by preventing any further expansion of City Airport. This is a feasible aim, since at this time the grandiose plans for expansion are merely that, dreams in need of funding to make them a reality. The City of Detroit cannot pay for the "improvements" it desires; money would have to come from the Federal Aviation Administration, and the Michigan Department of Transportation would have to contribute a significant share of costs in roads, bridges and accessways. Neither of these offices has yet agreed to provide any funding or assistance and hopefully, if the voices of those who would suffer if assistance were provided is loud and clear enough, both will decline to do so.

Pointers can make their opposition to any further expansion of City Airport known to the Federal Aviation Administration by writing to: FAA, 2300 East Devon Ave., Des Plaines, Ill. 60018 and requesting that no funds be granted for that purpose. They can also request that the Michigan Department of Transportation refuse assistance by writing to James Pitz, Director of Michigan Transportation Department, Transportation Building, P.O. Box 30050, Lansing, Mich. 48909.

Senators Donald Riegle Jr. and Carl Levin (U.S. Senate, Washington, D.C. 20510) should be contacted and asked to encourage the FAA to decide against providing funds, as should representatives Dennis Hertel and George Crockett (U.S. House of Representatives. Washington, D.C. 20515). Similarly, State Sen. John Kelly (881-2822) and Rep. William R. Bryant (517-373-0154) can be urged to discourage assistance on the airport project by the Michigan Department of Transpor-

I admit that my motives for opposing airport expansion are principally selfish: I oppose airport expansion because it will result in an airborne expressway over my head. I do not want to live in a community where 757s, 767s, MD80s, DC10s and Dc9s fly over 150 times a day (every 12 minutes, round the clock, or every 6 minutes, 12 hours per day). And, as I regret to envision the degradation in the quality of life on land caused by thundering airplanes overhead, so also am I saddened to think that the serenity of the lake, that marvelous recreational resource, also will be sacrificed to this technological intrusion.

I take comfort from the fact that the vision of my community violated, and the serenity of the lake destroyed, is not reality - only a frighteningly real possibility. I am encouraged to know that the expanded airport that would so injure me and my community is now only a fancy without the fortune to finance it. I hope that Grosse Pointers will recognize their compelling interest in preventing the financing from being provided. and that they will, by a letter-writing campaign, constitute an important part of an effective opposition to airport expansion.

We would like to express our gratitude to the residents who attended the Grosse Pointe Park City Council meetings regarding opposition to further expansion of Detroit City Airport.

Due to your support, our council passed a resolution which will be filed with the City of Detroit and other necessary agencies opposing the expansion.

This is the first step in saving our communities. If you are a concerned citizen in this regard, please contact your city council to voice your opinion on this matter. Thank you, Mayor Heenan

To the Editor:

The tax laws are arbitrary and unfair. Tax revolt time is around the corner. It's time for taxpayers to communicate with lawmakers and insist on changes that are fair to all income groups, do not single out big business for tax breaks and do not levy the bulk of the tax burden on the middle to upper middle income groups. It's no wonder the savings rate in the United States is low. When tax rates are so high there is little left over to put into savings.

Here are some examples. 1) Education and higher education costs:

Families who receive financial assistance for their children's tuition room and board cost are not taxed on this income. This money is not added to their taxable

Families who do not qualify for tuition aid or tuition assistance must pay full tuition room and board cost for their children. These dollars are taxed at the same rate as the rest of family's income. For example, assuming a federal tax rate of 28 percent, and a state tax rate of 4.57 percent, and a Social Security Tax of 7.65 percent, and Detroit city tax of 1.5 percent, to pay $7,000 for university costs, this family must pay $2,870 in taxes on $9,870 to have $7,000 in cash to pay the university.

2) Child-care expenses: For two or more children, a family in the 28 percent bracket can claim a percentage of $4,800 tax credit, depending on gross income. If the family makes $55,000 or more, only 2 percent of the $4,800 can be claimed. That is a maximum of only $960 tax credit. However, you will owe the government $367.20 in Social Security payments on a salary of $4,800 you pay your child-care person if that person is not self-employed. What then is the family really getting for a tax break? The $960 tax credit received essentially reduces your taxable gross by $3,428.57. Deduct the $367.20 you must pay in Social Security and the maximum total that can be deducted from your taxable gross is $3,061.37.

Child-care payments should be treated the same as medical premiums in payroll deductions; i.e., they should be treated as beforetax deductions - deducted from taxable gross income to reduce the tax base of the employee. Using this method with the maximum child care deduction held at $4,800, the tax credit would be $1,344 instead of $960. This would be $444 less you would owe in taxes. This should be the minimum tax credit since most people pay more than $4,800 in child care for two or more child-

The current child-care tax laws seem to be designed to discourage people from taking the credit and to penalize families who hire on-site/ in-home childcare rather than taking their children out of the home for care. These families are not operating a business out of their homes and should not be required to pay Social Security tax for their childcare attendant.

3) Social Security tax: Social Security is a tax which the taxpayer is not allowed to deduct as a tax when filing returns. It is included in our taxable gross, although it is not discretionary income. Government employees are not required to contribute to Social Security. They have their own pension plans. The private sector also has pension plans, but are made to contribute to Social Security. When government employees leave their government jobs and join the private sector, they are required to contribute to the fund, but enjoy a "double dip" when they re-

Finally, if Social Security is a retirement pension fund for the nation, it should not be taxable income - it is the government's national 401k plan, and, as everyone knows, 401k funds are not taxable.

Some alternatives on Social Security:

a) Have mandatory contributions of all taxpayers, including government employees, to the Social Security fund. This should increase the coffers significantly. Multiply the number of government employees and their salaries (up to $51,300) times 7.65 percent to determine the additional revenue raised.

b) Reduce Social Security tax percentage to 3.5 percent across the board without any income ceiling; i.e., annual income at any time greater than $51,300 would not be exempt from Social Security payment. This would make the tax more equitable to all income groups.

c) Deduct total Social Security payments from taxable gross since it is a tax-deferred retirement plan for the nation.

Why haven't some of these ideas been espoused by our lawmakers. These comments are just the tip of the iceberg. Many of my professional acquaintances see the same discrepancies. Why aren't we being represented in Lansing and Washington? It's time for some dramatic changes.

Let's vote everybody in out if all they have to offer is more of the same.

Assessments

To the Editor:

We are encouraged to add supporting facts to the letter printed March 15 from the Oman family of Grosse Pointe Woods.

We refer specifically to their statements of "major inconsistencies in their (Grosse Pointe Woods) methods of assessment" and "assessor's office which obviously isn't doing an adequate job of keeping their field and fact sheets updated."

We, too, have written the Grosse Pointe Woods assessor's office, as well as appealed our assessment to the Board of Review. We know for a fact that the records keeping practices of our administrators is deplorable, which has left us with a "no confidence vote" for all our city office incumbents. In support of this, we enclose an excerpt from our letter to the assessor's office, citing actual records inaccuracies and deficiencies that affected us personally this past year. And while reviewing the tax books prior to our appeal, we noticed different assessments recorded for the same houses. There is no credibility to the purported "methods of assessment" used in Grosse Pointe Woods.

Please print this letter and the attached excerpt of our letter to the assessor's office. It is our hope this will open the eyes of others in our community to the realization that we have some "housecleaning" to do with regard to accurate records as well as a duty to find competent officials and administrators to run in future elections.

Peripheral issue: Disillusion with Grosse Pointe Woods Building and Safety Department, which adds support to our lack of confidence in the entire City Office/Assessment governing body.

I inferred the possibility of a "records error." Below are other instances of actual errors we experienced, and continue to experience regarding the accuracy of city records:

1. We continue to receive all the tax-related communications for the property we sold as well as for the property we purchased.

2. Our initial Certificate of Occupancy (C.O.O.) violations list for the home we sold bore the incorrect legal description of the property on it, which we had to have

3. The above violations list included "violations" for smoke alarms and faucet valves which we had already in place; does this mean the home isn't actually inspected - that it's become so matter of fact that generalities are automatically cited? This doesn't do much for the credibility of the system, not to mention the effect it leaves with the owner.

4. We assumed C.O.O. responsibilities for the home we purchased, necessitating permits to correct code violations. Are we now being assessed because we brought our home up to code? Are we being assessed because we removed a diseased elm tree?

5. The approved C.O.O. for the home we purchased was never signed by the building and safety department. What good is it?

6. The inspector apparently was more concerned "springs on clothes with shutes" and "ballcocks on toilets" than with actual plumbing violations that were discovered by the plumber fixing the cited violations; things like water flowing between the walls because the dishwasher/garbage disposal hook-ups were wrong; a sub pump that ran continuously because it was broken. Yes, permits were pulled to correct all violations, not just those listed by the inspector.

And I might add that toilets don't work properly after we "bring them up to code"; and that plumbers we had don't understand what the violation is even though they attend your city meetings; and that we have heard this complaint from other homeowners in Grosse Pointe Woods - is this just another "generality" rather than an actual inspection?

Summary: We take pride in our homes, as evidenced by the dwelling we sold. But you leave us and others like us no room to improve with this current assessed valuation.

We also take pride in Grosse Pointe Woods; we preferred to downsize for retirement and still reside in Grosse Pointe Woods; and we realize many homes are older, as is our current purchased property (built in 1941). We purchased that home from the original owners; and while quite livable for 1941, I would hope you recognize the desire, if not the need, to update for today's living standards.

Your assessment might eventually become a fair reality if you allowed reasonable consideration for fact now. We would hope your long-range objectives would include safe, modernized, updated, renovations of the older homes instead of degenerating dwellings. But you leave no room for conscientious maintenance when you institute inequitable "current market value" assessments based on indiscriminate, if not inaccurate, application.

Is Grosse Pointe Woods a city of the future? We urge you to become actively aware of your city, its residents, and your governing bodies and departments to ensure continued quality of life in Grosse Pointe Woods.

Oppose airport expansion

The threatened City Airport expansion should be a major concern to all of us.

I am hopeful the councils of the Pointes and Harper Woods will join with Warren in fighting any major expansion.

The dramatically increased problems of potential crashes, as well as noise, air, water and ground pollution would be serious problems for our communi-

I hope the councils will cooperate in both studying and acting to protect our legal rights.

I am reviewing what application state law has and what legislation we might pursue, and have initiated efforts to coordinate actions relative to expansion opposition with other local legislators.

For those of you who use Southwest Airlines, I suggest you let Southwest know you will cease using their airline, and will boycott City Airport generally, if they pursue airport expansion. If they seek expansion to increase ridership, it may discourage them if they come to understand that expansion may, indeed, cost them ridership.

News Manoogian collection opens at art institute

By Nancy Parmenter

Staff Writer The Detroit Institute of Arts celebrated the opening of its biggest show of American art in many years with a sneak preview for the press and a gala dinner for 600 on Saturday eve-

"American Paintings from the Manoogian Collection" gives the public an overview of one of the finest private collections of American art - that of Richard and Jane Manoogian of Grosse Pointe Farms. More than 70 paintings have been selected from their extensive collection.

"They were chosen to demonstrate the diversity of the collection," said Nancy Shaw, the DIA's curator of American art. "The combination of the familiar and the unknown is refreshing and gives a truer picture of what American painting is really

The collection has already been shown in Washington, D.C., San Francisco and New York and will remain at the DIA through May 27. Each mounting has been different in setting and grouping.

The DIA has created an intimate setting, designed to evoke the feeling of a private home. The rooms are small, often divided by trellis or terrace or fountain. This is the context the paintings were originally created

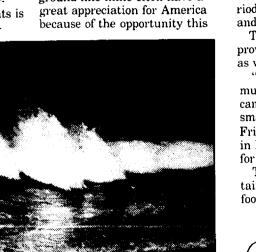

A rich red room sets off a series of portraits, the Sargents and Eakins that are at the heart of what many people think of as American art. "Miss Helen Dunham" is a less-known Sargent and one of Jane Manoogian's favorites. ("The satin shimmers

By now the rags-to-riches story of the Manoogian family's arrival in Detroit as immigrants is a familiar one. Richard Manoogian refers to it as an inspiration for his collecting:

lopes is so realistic that you feel you could pick the pieces off with your fingernail. But it's not a collage.

Manoogian began collecting seriously when he became a trustee of the DIA in the early '70s. At first, he was attracted to contemporary art. By the late '70s, however, he began putting together the current collection of 19th century art.

"He's right up there with Thomas B. Clarke (a major collector in the early part of the century)," said friend and fellow collector Edward Shein of Providence, R.I., who said he helped country has created for their families. The result is a deep love for one's country and a particular appreciation for the period in which the county grew and expanded."

That opportunity given provided the basis for the show as well:

"This community has given so much to my family; anything we can do to return that in some small way, (we will do)" he said Friday. "Having this exhibition in Detroit is a particular thrill for me and my family."

The Manoogian collection contains landscapes, genre pictures, fool-the-eye, portraits and nature studies. Worth taking a special look at are the luminous, liquid "Shore of the Turquoise Sea," (Bierstadt) and the truly jewellike "Gems of Brazil," a series of hummingbirds framed in gold "windowframes." Painted by Martin Johnson Heade, the works were discovered in a private collection in 1981.

Lovers of precision will enjoy the trompe-l'oeil works, a favorite style in early American painting. Also sure to be popular are the genre paintings like the pictorial, flat "Jolly Flatboatmen," an acknowledged masterpiece by George Caleb Bingham.

Farewell to a friend

Hildegarde R. de Grimme died March 25 in Bon Secours Hospital.

Mrs. de Grimme came to Grosse Pointe from Vienna, Austria, in 1941. With the shyness of a child and generloved her friends passionately. She willingly gave her heart to stray animals and any who sought her help.

The death of Hildegarde de Grimme leaves an enormous void both in this community and in the hearts of those who shared her life. She was a giving person who didn't know how to say no.

The exquisite gallery she shared first with her husband, Joseph, and continued to operate after his death was a source of joy to her and other patrons of the gleaming silver tea service was always prepared in readiness for drop-in guests.

Mrs. de Grimme conducted her life in a quiet, unobtrusive manner. Many sought her counsel both as friend and art connoisseur.

Her friends will miss the sweetness, the unconditional love and the gentle brushing of both cheeks as she said her goodbyes.

Goal is elimination

The goal, of course, is to eliminate combined sewage overflows, and the DNR is giving communities until July 1, 1992, to develop and submit its Final Combined Sewer Overflow Control Program.

According to the discharge permits: "The permittee shall develop an approvable Final Combined Sewer Overflow Control Program, including an implementation plan which will result in the elimination or adequate treatment of combined sewage discharges containing raw sewage.... Half the Farms affected

In the Farms, just the combined sewage from the eastern half of the city would have to be retained during heavy rain. The area along Mack flows into the Fox Creek enclosure and then to the Conner Creek Pump Station. During heavy rains, though, the combined sewage at the Conner Creek Pump Station may be diverted to the lake as well.

The half of the Farms served by the combined sewage outfalls, then, is the area that must be retained - assuming that separating the sewer system into storm and sanitary lines is unacceptable.

Farms Director of Public Services John DeFoe said he didn't know how much water would have to be retained, but it would be a lot and it would be expen-

"Even if you had the money, where would you put a retention area?" he asked, pointing out that the Farms, like the other Pointes, is built up with little vacant land.

Park: It's under review

Grosse Pointe Park has been discharging its combined sewage overflows into the Fox Creek since 1939 when the Fox Creek Pump Station was constructed. In 1961, major improvements were made to decrease volume and the number of times the system overflows, according to the Park's permit application to the

Not only must the Park consider a retention area to catch the one-hour, one-year storm, but the DNR wants it to come up with a feasibility study of moving the outfall from the Fox Creek to a point along the Detroit River or Lake St. Clair. The feasibility study is due June 1,

Park City Manager Dale Krajniak said DNR's requirements are under review as to their impact and cost to the city. He said it would be impossible at this time to estimate how much it would cost the Park to meet the DNR's combined sewage requirements.

Separation in Shores

Grosse Pointe Shores has already taken steps to eliminate combined sewage overflows along its shoreline. In 1985 the village completed a sewer system study that recommended separation of the combined sewer system. Since then, separate systems have been installed on Lochmoor, Lake Shore Lane and Renaud. Plans call for sewer separation along Colonial Court this

The cost of the complete separation of the Shores' sewer system in 1985 was estimated at $2.9 million. The entire separation of the Shores sewerage should take about 10 years, according to Village Manager Michael Kenyon.

The sewer system serving the Shores' 1,000 homes was completed in 1954. Due to the demand on the Wayne County Interceptor, the volume pumped from the Shores had to be reduced to a third of the design flow, according to a Shores discharge permit application docu-

Complete sewer separation in the Shores will allow all of its sanitary sewer wastes to be pumped to Detroit for treatment, rain or shine, and the storm water will be routed to the lake.

DNR meets reluctance

Although the DNR is insisting on the near elimination of combined sewage outfalls into the waterways, communities are reluctant to new sewer retention basin projects that will cost millions of dollars and take a decade or more to complete.

Furthermore, it is not known how tough the DNR will be in enforcing its deadlines.

"There's every intent (by the DNR) of seeing these conditions met," Fields said, adding that the number of protests and challenges to the DNR's mandates this year indicates that communities "know we mean business.".

The city of Detroit filed a lawsuit last October after it and 50 communities, including the Pointes, were ordered through the permit process to take measures to prevent sewage and chemicals from entering the Rouge and Detroit rivers.

The total cost to communities of carrying out the DNR's mandate to eliminate combined sewage outfalls is reported to be $3.5 billion. To pay for Detroit's share of the costs, the head of the Detroit water and sewerage department has said water bills could jump $2,000 a year. The state pegged the cost at more like $50 a year per water cus-

Of course, local taxpayers would have to pay for improvements to their combined sewerage systems.

The current permits being issued will expire Oct. 1, 1994. By that time, the DNR expects some progress to be made, but how much remains to be seen. A stipulation of the previous discharge permits was that the communities "shall attain control of the combined sewage overflows from the permittee's combined sewer system at outfalls on or before June 30, 1982.

As is the case with the new permits, the DNR called for the complete retention of all combined sewage from the one-year, one-hour storm and primary treatment of effluents from larger storms. But, as the current permit applications attest, little if anything was done to eliminate combined sewage discharges by the June 30, 1982, deadline.

Logical plans, progress

Fields said that although the eventual goal is complete elimination of discharges into lakes and streams, the DNR at this point is seeking logical plans from communities that will reduce and eventually eliminate sewage overflows.

She explained that now that industrial discharges have been pretty much brought under control, municipal dumping of combined sewage is the No. 1 prob-

Farms residents respond to proposed library at Brownell

By Dan Jarvis Staff Writer

Opinions concerning the proposed library at a Brownell School site were voiced by several residents at special meeting of the Farms City Council Monday, which was attended by the school board.

The purpose of the meeting was to gain approval or denial of a site plan by the City Council. But because some residents in the immediate area were not notified of the meeting, a public hearing was held to present the plan to residents and to get opinions on the proposed project.

Hertel vows to fight City Airport expansion

By Nancy Parmenter Staff Writer

A bill to bar federal funds for expansion of Detroit City Airport was submitted last week by Congressman Dennis Hertel.

Hertel said he saw red when he learned of the huge expansion plans by reading the Detroit papers.

"When I saw that master plan, I couldn't believe it," he said. "None of us had been told that they were quadrupling the size - all of a sudden, without any citizen involvement."

Hertel said there have been some preliminary plans, hearings and talks, but that the specifics never were made known until now.

"A plan like this should involve people at all levels of government," he said. "Every step of the way, there hasn't been enough expert involvement."

Hertel said he is opposed to the expansion because of the disruption of 3,600 homes and about 180 businesses and small industries. "The effect of this plan will further devastate the east side of Detroit," he said.

He said he is also concerned about the effects of noise and air pollution, traffic congestion and decreasing property values on the people who are left in the

His plan is to contact the administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration and to introduce legislation to cut federal funding for the project. The project would rely on federal money for at least half of the financing.

Hertel said he is a frequent flier out of Detroit's Metropolitan Airport and that he favors expansion there. Occasional talk about an airport in northern Macomb County or St. Clair County also makes sense because of the lower population density, he said.

(On Thursday, Macomb County commissioners voted not to pursue an airport there.)

"One of the problems in the Detroit area has always been that there isn't enough regional cooperation," Hertel said.

In 1988, there were more than 130,000 flights using City Airport. That number would increase to about 280,000 in 20 years, according to city estimates. The longer runway proposed under the master plan would also permit larger jets to use the facility.

A Grosse Pointe City woman was robbed by a man wearing a ski mask March 20.

According to police, the woman was on her way home at 11:34 p.m. when she noticed a man following her. She pulled into her driveway on Rivard and tried to make it to her front door when the masked man came up behind her and grabbed her briefcase and a plastic shopping bag.

As the thief tried to leave, the woman kept hold of the briefcase and bag and stuggled with her assailant, police said. The thief let go of the shopping bag but got away with the briefcase.

The victim was able to give police the suspect's license plate number, which the officers traced to a Detroit home. No one has been charged, but the investigation is continuing.

News Posch joins fight against child abuse

Staff Writer

When Michigan legislators were looking for a person to fill a seat on the Children's Trust Fund Board, they were looking for a dedicated and experienced volunteer who would put the welfare of the state's children above all else.

Their search ended with Peggy Posch of Grosse Pointe Shores

On March 6, Gov. James Blanchard appointed Posch to the

Although the appointment is one more in a long line of volunteer positions she has filled, she is approaching this position as if it were her first.

As the board's newest member, Posch is doing her homework with a vengeance.

Created in 1982, the Children's Trust Fund Board was formed to administer the state's child abuse and neglect trust fund to various state programs.

"More than 50,000 children in Michigan each year are abused or neglected," Posch said. "The trust fund was created to raise funds and distribute them to programs that will prevent the abuse from taking place."

But Posch will not be going door-to-door to collect money for the fund. The state has already done the legwork.

There is a small check-box on the state of Michigan tax forms indicating that if the box is checked, the taxpayer is agreeing to donate $5 to the Children's Trust Fund.

"If every taxpayer was willing to check the box and donate $5, the board would have about $21 million for child abuse prevention," she said.

Last year the board did not get the response from Michigan residents needed to combat the problem.

Posch is not joining the board at its best time. Just last year the federal government cut funding to prevent child abuse in Michigan by 68 percent.

"This drastically cuts funds that the Children's Trust Fund can distribute to local agencies and programs - about 210 percent across the board to prevention programs," Posch said. "If we could just get people to check the box, then we could raise the funding needed to fund abuse prevention programs.' Even though she is a new member of the board, she is quick to praise the body's accomplishments. Between 1983 and 1988, the 'We are very behind in our board awarded 138 grants to 81 programs and agencies for an approximate total of $2 million.

"It affects if you will come forward and report a possible problem. People who were abused will often come forth and work hard to solve the problems of others. In other cases the abuse is a chain that must be broken,"

"People are afraid to report child abuse. But it is really important to let the authorities know.'

Off-duty Farms police officer stops attempted theft of limo

The alert observations of an off-duty Grosse Pointe Farms police officer led to the arrest of a 26-year-old Mount Clemens man March 25 while he was allegedly attempting to steal a limousine.

Sgt. Clarence Reichling was in his private car when he noticed a man in a van pull into Ellis Tire on Mack near Moross. The van pulled in next to a white Cadillac limo. The van driver then leaned way out of the driver's side window and was looking into the limo. The driver then backed the van away and parked 50 feet from the limo. For several minutes the man just se' in the van, and Reichling thought the actions were suspicious. Reichling then went to a public phone to report a possible car theft in progress.

When the off-duty officer returned, he no longer saw the man inside the van. Five minutes later, Public Safety Officer Rick Good arrived and found the suspect crouched in front of a big truck. On the bumper of the truck were a screwdriver, gloves and a tool used to pull out auto body dents and - by some car thieves - auto ignitions.

The officers also found the Cadillac's passenger door ajar, the ignition's trim ring on the floor and drill holes in the igni-

Bob Barnes, who co-owns Grosse Pointe the reprogramming has split alarm dealers. Alarm. "The alarm association has held meetings with Bell, we've complained, but we've just come up against a stone wall. Their attitude is: This is what happens — if vou want to use our service, comply.'

Barnes and his partner, Tom Stong, are charging $30 for the reprogramming call, which includes general maintenance.

Keller, whose company, MultiGard/Audio Alert, is not charging for reprogramming, says Bell's upcoming change won't solve the

"Five or six years from now, they'll split the area code and that will cause further consternation in our industry, not to mention customers," he said.

He's right about that, too, according to

"Eventually we will have to change again," Ellis conceded. "The new numbers we are creating will probably be used up in the 1990s and we will have to split the area

The decision about charging customers for The statewide association has not taken a position on the matter, as many of the dealers are located outside the 313 area code.

"We haven't come to a final decision," said Dennis Dragotta of Complete Protection Alarms of Oak Park.

Dragotta said his company normally charges $35 for a service call, but may or may not charge less for the reprogramming. The overtime involved puts a heavy burden on the alarm companies, he said.

"There's no reason we should take the brunt of the loss because of a Michigan Bell decision," he said. "Is anybody doing it for Actually, Keller's Dearborn company is, although he agreed that the cost to his business will be great.

"We don't think the customer should have to pay," he said. "We do a lot of our monitoring over 800 lines, so we don't have as many systems to reprogram. We'll do about

"But even if we do 20 calls a day, we'll have trouble finishing - you can't let this project interfere with normal business."

Guardian Alarm, the biggest privately owned security company in the United States, did not return our phone call.

Grosse Pointe Alarm, a medium-sized company with about 3,000 clients who will need the change, decided to charge $30 instead of the usual $40 for a service call. Like Complete Protection, Grosse Pointe decided to sweeten the pill by offering general inspection and maintenance as part of the visit. Barnes said the project must be completed by the end of July.

"You can imagine what this did to our industry," he said. "Our industry is weighted real heavily on the use of the phone system to communicate with a computer."

Barnes said that about four years ago, Michigan Bell tried a different approach to the numbers problem, one that required him to program systems thereafter with a 1. "Now we have to take the 1 out of 2,500 homes and add the 313 to the other 500."

Barnes said he knows some customers are disgusted. The problem is that the telephone company is mandating a change that neither the phone customer nor the alarm company has any power over.

"Most customers have been understanding, but I can sympathize," he said. "But we're using a medium that the customer has authority over. We're not renting phone space. The customer pays us to react to a signal over their line.'

All the alarm dealers agreed that the reprogramming project requires an overwhelming amount of additional work, mostly in overtime on weekends and eve-

"We would have to give up our normal business and installations to accomplish this within the time frame," Barnes said. "(If we did it at no charge) it would be financial su-

It was the mid-'50s, two years before the wall was erected, and most of the city was in rubble from World War II. The night clubs were open from 8 p.m. to 8 a.m. and Johnston said he learned to drink martinis in Berlin, "of all places."

It was also where he learned to love great music since some of the world's greatest performing artists appeared in Berlin at the time. Admission was the equivalent of about 50 cents and Johnston said he attended two or three concerts a week.

There were 22 Russian divisions surrounding the occupied city at the time and people were being abducted off the streets, a letter bomb was sent to an official and the short-lived Hungarian revolution began.

"One of the things that's not understood is in those days, we never abducted anybody," Johnston said. "We fought a clean fight. We didn't carry firearms very often and if we did, we had concedes.

The way he was recruited for counter-intelligence is the stuff of movies. He had just graduated from the University of Virginia, "the Korean War was winding down and we were all subject to the draft," he said. "I wanted to be a naval flier, but I couldn't pass the eve exam."

He and his future wife were sitting in the old Al Greene's one night and a friend who had just been discharged from the service recruited him for the army intelligence corps.

After passing a battery of tests and a six-month background investigation, Johnston volunteered for the draft and was sent to Fort Knox for basic training. He had received orders to go to Korea and at the eleventh hour, his acceptance in the intelligence corps came through and he was sent to Monterey, Calif., to the Army Language School, now to fill out a form requesting it called the Defense Language Institute, where he studied French for six months.

Johnston to this day speaks fluent French and keeps up with the language through reading French books. And if he's going to Paris, as he and his wife did recently, he gets a book on modern French slang to update the only part of the language that would date him.

He and the group he lived with in Berlin have remained close over the years, standing up for each other's weddings. They all met recently in Washington, D.C., to plan a visit to Berlin in October, where they will revisit their old haunts.

After the Army, Johnston went to work for J. Walter Thompson where he spent four years in the executive training program. That was followed by a position with another advertising agency.

"I did some creative work, which I enjoyed," he said, "I like writing and I had a lot of input into the ads."

From the mid- to the late-'60s, however, the industry changed enormously, Johnston said. Creative departments became independent and Johnston said, "I didn't like the business very much any more."

He began his own advertising agency where he could be involved in all aspects of the business. He sold his share to his partners and then went with Pathfinder International, a charter travel company, where he did advertising and public relations. When the airlines were deregulated, he said the company was put out of business.

That was when Johnston entered the real estate business, a business he now says he wishes he would have gotten into earlier. "I just love houses," he said.

In 1985, five years after turning to real estate, Johnston bought Borland Associates. Last year he and sales manager Nanci Bolton formed a partnership, restructured the company and renamed it Bolton-Johnston.

'We're really so involved in building our company," he said. "It's a major thing - we just computerized.

"It's taking a lot of time making sure the company remains one of the top companies in Grosse Pointe, which it is."

in the decade that Johnston has been in the business, he has won several awards, including being named Realtor of the Year in 1989. He has also served as director, secretary, vice president and president of the Grosse Pointe Board of Realtors, which is going into its fifth year as a board. Previously, it had operated as the Grosse Pointe Real Estate Exchange under the Detroit board.

In 1983, Johnston earned a GRI (Graduate Realtor Institute) designation and in 1986, his CRB (Certified Real Estate Brokerage Manager) designation. He also serves as an instructor for specialized training of local Realtors.

Johnston has always involved himself in civic organizations, serving on the boards of University Liggett School, Grosse Pointe Academy and committees at the War Memorial. His associations now are with the Detroit Institute of Arts Founders Society and Detroit Symphony Hall as well as with the local, state and national organizations of

About five years ago, his wife, for a Christmas present, gave him scuba diving lessons. Shortly after, they spent 11 days in Micronesia aboard a diving ship which was a converted whaler.

Not trained for any serious wreck diving, Johnston nevertheless explored sunken battleships and aircraft in Truk Lagoon. The site of a two-day World War II battle, the lagoon holds the wreckage of some 60 Japanese battleships and bomber planes.

Johnston has also dived in Hawaii and recently, the Cayman Islands.

With his wife in the travel business, he'd like to do more traveling, but said the real estate business demands most of

When he's not working, Johnston is probably reading or listening to his large collection of music. An avid reader, Johnston goes through about 50 books a year, a habit he picked up in high school when a teacher challenged the students to read that number every year.

History books are high on his list; Johnston was a history and English literature major at the University of Virginia before he switched to business. He enjoys biographies of composers as well as spy novels. His favorite author of the genre is John Le Carre, who "writes beautifully and is very facile with the English language."

His role model is Winston Churchili and Johnston said he has read most of his works.

He began collecting records when he was 14, concentrating on New Orleans jazz, which he says has disappeared today. "I believe I have one of the only complete collections of records by Fats Waller anywhere," he said.

He later discovered classical music and has a collection of about 400 records. Johnston said he's now in the process of switching to compact discs and putting away the LPs and 78s that he notes wryly are probably useful only as a "convenient Frisbee."

He also has a collection of operas on video.

Johnson plays tennis two or three times a week and paddle tennis once a week. He tries to swim every day.

Besides French, he speaks German and some Russian, Italian and Spanish. "I'm fascinated by language," he said.

And as is the case with most people who enjoy and appreciate good food, Johnston likes to cook. He and his wife have two adopted daughters, Marguerite, who works at Cottage Hospital, and Carolyn, who manages a restaurant in Greektown.

Entertainment Pretty Woman': Fairy tales aren't just for kids anymore

By Michael Chapp Special Writer "Pretty Woman" is, more than anything else, a modern-day fairy tale. Its characters, like those in a fairy tale, are someimpart, just like a fairy tale. only happen in a fairy tale.

This is not particularly bad, mind you. Indeed, this picture has a definite charm. It's full of melodrama, but darn it all if it's roller businessman whose heart not the kind of sugar-coated stuff whether you want it to or not.

This is due mostly to the wonderful performance of Julia Roberts, who plays a Hollywood Boulevard prostitute clearly in what hyperbolic and larger than the wrong line of work. We learn life. It has morals and lessons to early that she's basically just walking the streets because it And, perhaps most importantly, pays the rent: she's not the type things happen here that could of morally bankrupt floozie her colleagues are. It may be de-meaning, she figures, but at least it's a living.

Enter Richard Gere, a high isn't into what he's doing, either that doesn't touch your heart - namely making multimillion companionship. Nothing more, dollar deals that are good for his wallet but not his soul. Gere picks up Roberts one evening only because he needs directions, nothing else.

Of course, one thing leads to another, and before long, the two of them have entered into a unique sort of business deal. Gere needs a female to be at his beck and call for a week because he's got a series of important dinners and parties lined up. Roberts, of course, just needs the money. So they agree on this: $3,000 for one week of constant and nothing less.

What neither of them anticipates is falling in love with the other. It doesn't take long for the no-strings-attached deal to end up in knots. The business end of their relationship becomes more and more fuzzy while the personal end becomes more and more clear.

This, of course, is the kind of stuff of which dreams are made, especially for a down-on-her-luck prostitute. Gere, at least materially, is the man of any woman's dreams. He's good-looking, rich, and sensitive.

Roberts, for her part, is a beautiful, intelligent and very thoughtful young lady. So it only makes sense for the two of them to end up together, right?

Well, yes. Especially in fairy tales. Or in the movies. Most viewers will probably fight the urge to get involved with the emotions at work here. The best advice is to put down your guard and have a good time. Gere is admittedly not the most charismatic actor on the big screen, and the dialogue is sometimes a bit hard to take.

But hey, Roberts is a joy to watch throughout the film. And what's wrong with dreaming a little bit, anyway? Fairy tales aren't just for kids, you know.

Attic's brief history

The Attic Theatre began in 1975, when nine graduates of Oakland University's Academy of Dramatic Arts founded Roadside Attractions, Inc. The group performed as an Ann Arbor-based touring company and, for 15 months, drew statewide recogniton for its inventive performances and challenging material.

Other artists, who shared their dream of building a professional theater, joined the group and the reorganized company rented a loft in Greektown, over what is now Pegasus Restaurant. Their first play, "Ex-Miss Cooper Queen on A Set Of Pills,' opened Dec. 6, 1976.

Although the group had a string of early critical successes, it wasn't until the end of its first year when a power-ful production, "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf," David Rabe's "Streamers" and two hit comedies, "You Know I Can't Hear You When the Water's Running" and Jules Feiffer's "Knock Knock" began translating the theater's promise into reality.

The Attic had to move twice in its first 2-1/2 years. However, with the March 1979 opening on Lafayette in Greektown, the Attic hoped to lay its traveling days to rest. The intimate 190-seat theater featured a thrust stage with an audience no more than 15 feet from the performers.

For the next 5-1/2 years, the Attic produced a series of memorable offerings. Within its first three years, the Attic was recognized for the quality productions and out reach programs with grants from the Michigan Council for the Arts and unprecedented grants from the National Endowment for the Arts. It received national publicity, numerous local awards, and in 1984 was one of three threaters recognized nationally by the Business Committee for the Arts in New York for its "outstanding achievement" in both business and the arts.

The Greektown theater was destroyed by fire in 1984 during the run of its hit show, 'Strider." The Attic temporarily relocated in the Fox Theatre and finished the run of "Strider" while searching for a permanent home. At the Fox, the Attic's entire set, stage, lights, risers and audience all fit on the stage behind the curtains.

In the fail of 1984, the Attic opened its doors at its current home in the New Center Pavilion. With financial help from the General Motors Foundation, the staff was able to begin transforming what had been the auditorium for Ford Hospital Nursing School into a theater. The project still is only half done, still requires renovation and has sorely strained the Attic's finances. With 300 seats, the theater may have lost some of the intimacy that the original company sought, but it has been able to produce many "large cast" shows that would have been impossible in the old days.

Now in its 14th season its sixth at the Pavilion - the Attic's programming continues to grow. In addition to its many outreach projects, the Attic has begun bringing in other high-quality performing groups to share its stage. This season, the Attic is producing seven shows of the main-stage season and sponsoring internationally known groups such as Second City. The American Traveling Jewish Theatre and The San Francisco Mime Troupe. More adventurous programming has been presented on Monday nights during the run of the main-stage

Attic Theatre may have to close doors

Attic Theatre artistic director Lavinia Moyer said Michigan's leading non-profit professional theatre will close its doors unless it can raise $550,000 in the next few months.

'The Attic had operated on the edge of financial collapse since our Greektown theater was destroyed by fire in 1984," Moyer said.

"Now we are at a turning point. Our current operations are financially sound, buy we're being dragged down by debts we've carried for years," she

"We're drowning in red ink caused by our past problems."

Only an immediate show of support from the community served by the Attic will keep the theater open, Moyer said.

Moyer said by the end of August the theater must get additional donations to cover $230,000 in overdue bills, $220,000 in loans and $100,000 in related expenses.

"We're asking everyone who knows the quality of the Attic Theatre to contribute as much as he or she can," Moyer said.

Citing the Attic's urgent financial need, Andrew Soffel, chairman of the Attic board of trustees and president of Crowley, Milner & Co., called on corporations, foundations and individuals to recognize the Attic Theatre's benefit to Detroit and Michigan by increasing their financial support.

"The management and artistic staff of the Attic have done everything that could possibly have been done to keep the theater open," Soffel said. "It's now up to the community.'

Soffel said the theater staff has operated for years with or no wage increases. Board members have made personal gifts and loans totaling $210,000 in the past three years. And a number of foundations and corporations have increased not enough, he said.

"The current condition of the Attic puts at risk a cultural institution that represents a 14year investment by individuals. foundations and corporations," Soffel said. "It makes good financial sense for the community to step forward and preserve this institution which has given so much to improve the quality of our lives."

The Attic - now located in Detroit's New Center area near the Fisher Theater - has recorded attendance of more than one million since opening in 1976, including extensive education and outreach programs that touch more than 25,000 youngsters and senior citizens statewide each year.

"If our survival depended on quality productions, our future would not be in jeopardy," Moyer said. She pointed to the current run of "Hamlet" as topquality professional theater.

Recent hits included highly acclaimed productions of "Measure for Measure," "Ten November," and Woody Guthrie's "American Song."

The nationally recognized theater, through its Writers Unit, also has brought many

"The Handmaid's Tale," adapted from Margaret Atwood's sci-fi cult novel, presents a frightening and chilling picture of a possible near-future in America.

Director Volker Schlondorff accents the horror of this feminist 1990 version of "1984" with scenes that shock. We see a handmaid who violates the sex code hanged in full view of women and children.

This bizzare tale that skirts the frightening realm of the conjecture that this could happen, given the right circumstances, is visually striking. Clean and flooded with light, large-scale scenes show off the bright red gowns of hundreds of handmaids and the royal blue raiment of the government wives.

siasm of a Frenchman or Italian. In his classes, the director explores the vernacular of the play's language in terms of the play's location and the attitudes of the characters, developing a broader base of understanding. "Students should bleed directors for all the information they can get. Students are like sponges, absorbing everything around them," MacGregor said.

He also said that an actor/actress is like a doctor; that is, on duty 24 hours a day on and off the stage. MacGregor regards a performance like a marriage; the performance is one-half and the audience is the other half.

Impressed by the "incredible encompassing area" of the Hilberry repertory program, he was amazed that students actually receive a stipend. Normally, students do not get this opportunity, he explained.

He said that government and corporate structures need to recognize the benefit of underwriting university and professional theater programs. "Theater has been subsidized since day one. William Shakespeare was supported, and he has given a literary richness to the world," MacGregor said.

Professional theaters, as well, must recognize their benefit from past subsidized programs, according to the director. Commercial successes like "Phantom of the Opera" benefit from acting and designer resources developed through subsidized programs. Scholarship dollars from such commercially successful plays should be allocated as a responsible return to the industry, he said. This was done in the past with the musical "Pygmalion" in the English theater.

On a prophetic note, Mac-Gregor said, "Events occurring in Europe now will affect theater throughout the world during the next decade, an effect like a ripple made by a stone thrown into water.'

Hard hat entrepreneur knocks heads with giant retailer

By John Minnis Assistant Editor

Like tough-guy actor Bruce Willis, Grosse Pointe Park resident William B. Harrington is something of a diehard, just ask Harrington, 45, left the corporate world five years ago to become an entrepreneur. Now as president of Genesus Marketing Inc., he has somewhat succeeded in the less-forgiving small-business world and has even backed down a giant.

In David vs. Goliath fashion. Harrington found himself up against Sears, Roebuck and Co., the world's largest retailer.

In September 1987, Harrington introduced the "Die Hardhat" for diehard sports fans. The Die Hardhats are genuine safety hats, but instead of just being white or yellow, the Die Hardhats are decorated with the colors of college sports teams and carry the colleges' logos.

Harrington started out with the Michigan State University Spartans' green and white, then University of Michigan's blue and maize, and now most of the major colleges in the country have a hardhat in their honor.

From September through December 1987, Harrington did $12,000 in Die Hardhat sales. In 1988, the volume reached $78,000, and last year Genesus Marketing did $300,000 worth of business. The goal for 1990 is company revenues of $1 million.

But Harrington's fledgling company attracted the attention of trademark attorneys at Sears. The giant retailer sued Harrington, demanding that he discontinue using the term "diehard," which Sears calls its brand of car batteries.

"I thought, 'They're going to try to muscle me out,' " Harrington recalled, "'and I'm not going to let them do this.'

At about the same time, July 1987, an article came out in Business Week magazine discussing Sears' financial ills. Also, Crain's Chicago Business and Crain's Detroit Business both ran stories on Harrington's planned battle against Sears.

Apparently fearing a public relations disaster, Sears quickly sought to settle the dispute and Harrington continues to sell the Die Hardhats.

Seeing new ways to sell something as mundane as hard hats is indicative of Harrington's unusual way of looking at things.

"Too many people are taking the me-too approach," he said. "Companies have to differentiate themselves.'

Genesus Marketing is branching out in computer-aided design and manufacturing of graphics for the hard hats and automobiles and trucks. The hard hats, which are most often purchased by companies for promotional reasons, led to making promotional films - or what Harrington calls "MacVideos."

The MacVideos are produced nearly completely on Macintosh computers and are stored on disk or standard VHS tapes. The cost of the computer videos, however, is less than half that of motion

"I wasn't foolish enough to live and die by hard hats," Harrington said.

A Grosse Pointer since 1959, Harrington has a bachelor's degree in psychology from Wayne State University, and he's one class short of a master's degree in business from the University of Detroit.

An active sailor, Harrington has crewed in 20 Port Huron to Mackinac races, though last year his business kept him from sailing. He also was the one who came up with the idea of sailing in tuxedos.

In 1987, Grosse Pointer Bob Thorsen was making his 25th

Mackinac race, which would qualify him as an "Old Goat." To celebrate the occasion, Harrington bought tuxedos for himself and the rest of the 10-member crew. Harrington's wife, Joanne, cut the pants into shorts and the crew sailed formally.

Harrington said his wife, an engineer with Chrysler Corp., deserves a lot of credit for supporting his entrepreneurial endeavors. He said he and his wife are also fortunate to have an aunt who looks after their two children - Christopher, 6, and Lauren, 5 - while the couple are at work. Son Michael, 23, is already out on his own, Harrington said.

Being an entrepreneur is something new to Harrington. Most of his working life was spent with American Motors Corp. As head of international marketing for AMC, Harrington said his home was PanAm.

In 1985, Harrington got a chance to get on the ground floor of a new automotive company, Vixen Motors of Pontiac, which built custom motor homes. However, in early 1987 a new president was named at the struggling company and Harrington didn't fit in. So in his early 40s, Harrington found himself without a job.

"At that stage, I thought, 'What the hell am I going to do with my life?'" Harrington recalled. "The entrepreneurial bug had bit me, and I wasn't going to jump back into the corporate world.'

So he sought out a niche in the hard-hat business and seems to have found an opening, and though it was scary, he doesn't regret turning his back on the corporate culture:

A lot of people don't realize how much talent and knowledge they really have until they go out and do it."

Convertibles are good investments — and they're fun, too!

On a Monday after sunny weekends, your hair hurts because you didn't notice how sunburned you were getting.

On the freeway, you can't hear the radio or converse with your companion unless you shout.

Every once in a while you have to pull to the side of the road and put the top up in a panic as rain starts pouring.

Sound like fun driving a convertible? Well, it is. The older generation knew that and now the younger folk are discovering it. As a result, convertible sales are climbing, slowly but steadily back to the levels they reached from the '40s to the '70s before being declared dead.

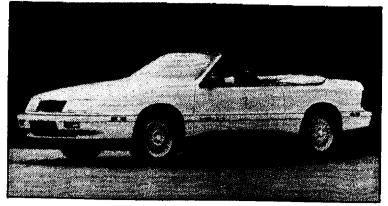

More than 176,000 convertibles were sold in the United States in 1989, according to Cars and Concepts, a leading producer of ragtops and the company that along with Chrysler Corp. revived the convertible in 1982 by cutting off the tops of Chrysler LeBaron and Dodge K-cars. The company predicts sales of 220,000 convertibles this year, about 1.7 percent of total passenger car sales

The Chrysler convertibles were so popular that the corporation moved production in-house. Cars and Concepts then started taking the tops off of Ford Mustangs and has done about 180,000 of them, making Mustang one of the most popular droptops and probably helping to lengthen that car's lifespan. Cars and Concepts is also converting

$2,115 stereo system stolen from one car

A stereo system valued at $2,115 was stolen from a car in the 200 block of Ridge Road in the Farms March 21.

The theft occurred in the early morning hours while the car was in the garage. A second car was broken into, but nothing was taken. Entry to the garage was through an unlocked side door.

A. Top-selling convertible in the United States is the Chrysler LeBaron. Engine choices for 1990 include 3.0-liter and V-6 and Variable Nozzle 2.2-liter turbo four.

B. Second in convertible sales is the Ford Mustang, the only V-8 convertible available for less than $20,000.

Chevrolet Baretta and Oldsmobile Cutlass Supreme models this year.

A decade ago, the convertible was dead and buried, after a sad decline from its golden age of the '50s and '60s. But reports of the convertible's death were, as it turns out, exaggerated.

In fact, the 1990 lineup of new models indicates that we may be entering a new golden age as more carmakers doff their roofs in respect for the surprisingly strong market demand for ragtops. Real convertibles, not sunroofs or T-tops.

The convertible seemed to be dead, at least in America, after Cadillac built its last 200 Eldorado ragtops in 1976, killed by safety standards (not rollover, but the prospect of air bags), an erroneous belief in the auto industry that there were more important things to be concerned with and a general feeling that we were having too much fun.

Custom body builders cut the tops off cars for customers who could afford such things, and the fairly wide choice of convertibles now available as part of various makers' lineups are almost all done by outside contractors. Only Chrysler builds its Le-Baron convertible in-house. Most American convertibles are done by Cars and Concepts, ASC (American Sunroof Corp.), Inc., or Hess & Eisenhardt, but there are a number of smaller firms that will cut the tops off just about anything you want, including pickup trucks.

When Chrysler Corp. revived

the convertible in 1982, it was the first Chrysler ragtop since 1971. And the '83 Ford Mustang convertible was the first open-air Ford since 1974. Despite the higher prices - from $3,500 to $5,000 more than comparable coupes in most car lines, compared with a price differential of a couple hundred dollars or less in the '50s - convertibles don't sit long in dealer showrooms. Demand is such that convertibles tend to go for full list.

The market for convertibles has grown more rapidly than expected and if Cars and Concepts is correct in its forecast for 1990, sales will top 1949's total of 201,000, a pretty good year. Sales still have a way to go to match the best year for ragtops, which was 1965, when more than a half million convertibles were built in the United States. After convertible sales peaked in 1965, American Motors phased out production in 1968, Chrysler Corp. in 1971, Ford Motor Co. in 1974 and General Motors in 1976. Production plunged from 507,000 in 1968 to 28,000 in 1974 to 0 in 1977.

The list of car lines which include convertibles has increased substantially in the last couple of years. Here are convertibles offered for 1990 (actually, Cabriolets, which refers to any open car, although the word has come to mean a droptop without a power top; convertibles have side door glass, a fixed windshield, door handles on the outside and, usually, a power top; a roadster does not have side door glass and often has a fold-down windshield), listed roughly from low-

Ferrari Mondial, Porsche 911 Turbo, Aston Martin Volante, Bentley Continental and Rolls-Royce Cor-

Despite higher price tags than those on closed cars, convertibles are good investments. If you feel such a car would be fun but too frivolous and not practical, consider this: Convertibles hold their value as used cars better than any other type. Convertibles of the '50s and '60s are often 10 times more valuable than their closed cousins.

Even a Renault Alliance convertible is worth thousands of dollars (if it's in good shape, of course), while closed sedans of that nameplate have allure only to the scrap metal dealer.

But don't buy a convertible because your accountant tells you to. Buy one because it's fun.

In Phase I, which lasts six weeks and meets three times a week, patients are evaluated. They do exercises, learn relaxation techniques and learn about physiology, med ication, breathing exercises and energy management. They learn the best ways to cope with daily living tasks things like how to breathe more effectively and how to climb stairs more easily.

In Phase II, which takes 12 weeks and meets three times a week, patients attend supervised exercise therapy sessions. Each individual is encouraged to increase his or her duration and speed and each monitors his or her pulse rate.

Phase III is a continuation of Phase II, Messing said, "It/was added because people" didn't want to slop. They wanted to keep coming."

On a recent Tuesday afternoon, seven participants in jogging suits and athletic shoes rotated among 10 different exercise machines in the pulmonary rehabilitation room in the hospital's basement. They took turns, working out with two treadmills, two arm ergometers, three exercise bikes, a rowing machine, a turbo bike and hand weights. Some were attached to oxygen tanks. Every five minutes, a bell rang and each patient moved to a different machine, alternating between arm exercises and leg exercises.

During the hour, everybody moved to six! stations and participated in a warm-up and cool-down. Each person monitored hispulse several times during the hour, and Messing measured the saturation of oxygen in their blood several times.

There was no Phase III at first, Messing said. I added Phase III because people didn't want to stop coming. And the walking to New York was devised as a motivational tool."

Mary Ann White of Warren, one of the Bon Secours Milers, said she wrote to the chamber of commerce of Horseheads, N.Y. \rightarrow just for the fun of it.

"I explained in my letter what kind of group we are." She smiled, "I told them who we are and what we're doing and that we're making this trip on paper. I asked what va the points of interest were in Horseheads. We haven't heard from them yet.

"We'd love to rent a bus and actually go to New York when we finish this," White Kiley, the group's accountant, said she's been part of the program for two years. "When I came here, I was purple. I could barely walk. Now I'm out and about. There's no comparison. This group is the best."

March 29, 1990 Grosse Pointe News Faces ξ μίας με Ars Poetica Chamber Orchestra has Grosse Pointe supporters

Detroit's newborn cultural gem, the Ars Poetica Chamber Orchestra, was founded by Russian-born violinist Anatoli Cheiniouk, former member of the Moscow Chamber Orchestra and the Moscow Virtuosi Chamber Orchestra, currently a regular performer with the Concertante di Chicago.

Cheiniouk was a member of Mischa Rachlevsky's New American Chamber Orchestra before it folded. He also taught privately in Grosse Pointe.

Cheiniouk will serve as musical director and conductor for the new group, which is comprised of about 20 hand-picked world-class musicians.

Their inaugural concert will take place at 8 p.m. on Monday, April 30, at Orchestra Hall and will serve as a benefit for the restoration of Orchestra Hall.

Tickets may be purchased from Dr. Dierdre Golden-Dutka of Grosse Pointe, vice president of the board of directors, by calling 777-8898; or write directly to the Ars Poetica Chamber Orchestra, P.O. Box 36788, Grosse Pointe, 48236. Tickets are $25 and $15. A $50 ticket includes a reception. More Grosse Pointers on the board of directors for the new venture are: Mado Lie, Douglas Dold, Don R. Berschback, David Wagner, Charles Berschback, Alexander Suczek, Helene Eagan, John Huetteman III, and Elaine Dold, secretary.

The first concert of the Ars Poetica Chamber Orchestra will feature works of Mozart, Schubert, Haydn and Rossini.

Fund the fun: The annual fundraiser at the Detroit Yacht Club for the Crawford-Armstrong Handicapped Association, will take place Saturday, April

Grosse Pointer William Springett is the president of the association and he said proceeds from the evening of dining and dancing will be used to bring a fun-filled day to about 700 mentally and physically impaired people this summer. For the last 15 years, volunteers (beab # n n n n ers, the U.S. Coast Guard, the Coast Guard Auxiliary, medical personnel from Sinai Hospital, the Detroit Police Department, the Detroit Recreation Department, and others) spend the day helping the handicapped enjoy a picnic, cruises on private yachts, and outdoor activities at the

Other Grosse Pointers who are involved in the event are Jim Brady, Bud Verbiest, Bill Williams, Mary Ann Fredericks, Mary Alexander, Paul and Regina Smith, Skip and Linda Gmeiner, Jerry and Jean Bresser and Bill and Sue Bresser. Cafe le Chat, located in the Village, is donating some confections for the dessert table on April 7.

Tickets to the fundraiser, "Night of Magic," are $40 and are available at the Detroit Yacht Club. Call 824-1200.

Accessory advice: American Association of University Women and their guests will meet on Wednesday, April 4, at 6:30 p.m., in the St. Clair Room of Jacobson's in the Village for fundraising, tips on accessorizing, light hors d'oeuvres, and shopping. Barbara Denler, sales promotion manager at Jacobson's, will discuss the imaginative use of accessories for homes - and people.

Tickets are $10 each and may be purchased by calling Ellen Chapin at 881-4818, Fran Sultzman at 881-1938, or Lesley Morawski at 885-6238.

Strummin' again: Folk guitar is on the comeback trail, according to Grosse Pointe's own folk singer, Alex Suczek. He's back too — giving folk guitar lessons at the War Memorial — just like in the '70s.

Suczek is a serious musician who performed professionally in a repertory theater company, in concerts, on stage and television. He said he has met and has learned songs and styles from Josh White, Libby Holman, Theodore Bikel and Woody Guthrie. He's even had a few lessons with Andre Segovia.

Suczek taught a popular folk guitar course at the War Memorial for more than 20 years. But interest lagged in the last few

Now there's renewed enthusiasm, evidently, for folk singing and folk guitar.

Suczek said his students only need to be able to tap a rhythm and carry a tune. Reading music or knowledge of music theory is not necessary.

Class members should bring a classical style folk guitar (that's one with nylon strings and a wide neck) and Suczek said he'll have everybody strummin' and singin' two songs on the first night.

The beginners' class starts April 5 at 7:30 p.m. Price is $44 for six weeks. Call the War Memorial for details: 881-7511.

The Pastor's Corner

To walk a mile . . .

By Rev. Gordon A. Mikoski Grosse Pointe Memorial Church

The old Native American saying about not judging our neighbor until we have walked a mile in his or her moccasins keeps coming back to me lately. This earthy image conveys a profound truth: until we can accurately imagine what another person's experience of life is like, we will be prone to make false judgments and unfair condemnations.

Churche

Perhaps, like me, you have had the experience of having to radically revise your assessment of a neighbor upon learning more of this person's life situation and story.

Jesus' command to love our neighbors as ourselves is one of the loftiest and most beautiful religious teachings ever uttered. I wish that it was easier to practice than to preach. I tend to judge my neighbor's imperfections at the drop of a hat. With hypocritical irony, I tend to explain away my own imperfections (often the very same ones that my neighbor has) with great energy and empathy.

I think the gap between what I preach and what I practice with regard to my neighbor can be traced to a lack of imagination. I can usually see clearly how my failings and shortcomings can be accounted for in some rational way. It is often, however, very difficult for me to see any good reason why my neighbor says or does certain things. On occasion, I have even caught myself saying, "I just can't imagine what would make so-and-so do such a thing!" Perhaps I need to use my God-given gift of imagination a little more in the case of my neighbor and a little less with myself.

Sometimes I ask myself why I should take the time and effort to imagine what life is really like for my neighbor. I mean, why try to walk in someone else's shoes when my own seem to fit just fine?

I suppose there are at least three good reasons to this question (being a Presbyterian minister, I like to have three points.) First, taking time to understand my neighbor's experience and point of view enables me to respond to my neighbor's suffering with genuine sensitivity. Second, an accurate mental image of my neighbor's inner world provides me with clues about how to respond in a constructive manner when my neighbor says or does something which upsets me. Last, and by no means least, taking time to develop an emphatic image of what life is like from the perspective of my neighbor's moccasins frees me from the darkness of spirit which encircles me when I judge another

It is true that I can never fully know what my neighbor experiences and sees. But I will know when I have walked an imaginative mile in my neighbor's moccasins when my impulse to judge has been replaced with a desire to love.

Christ Church looks at ways to humanize the environment

On April 3, 1990, the Episcopal Church Women of Christ Church Grosse Pointe will host a program featuring the Rev. Mary Sterrett Anderson of Gates Mills, Ohio. In her presentation, Anderson will discuss methods to humanize our high tech environment. This program is open to all interested persons.

As the chaplain of the Pediatric Intensive Care Unit at Rainbow Babies and Children's Hospital, Anderson encounters and helps others cope with difficulties due to the ever-increasing use and availability of technical advancements. Working with critically ill infants, children and adults, Anderson witnesses the dramatic and positive aspects technology provides, and assures us that the use of high tech advancements will continue to escalate in the future.

Her concern is the negative impact of the impersonal and dehumanizing environment technology creates.

She says that experience taught her many methods that can be employed to bring humanity to an uncomfortable, sterile or high tech environment. One area she stresses is the arts. Visual and audio enhancements can bring humanity to situations. Anderson serves as the vice president of the Decorative Arts Trust in Cleveland. In the Regents Circle of Mount Vernon, Va., and on the Art Advisory Council of University Hospital of Cleveland.

The program will be held on April 3, in the Undercroft of Christ Church, 61 Grosse Pointe Blvd. Coffee will be served after the 9:15 Eucharist. The program will begin at 10:30 a.m. and will be followed by a luncheon. Reservations for the optional $5 luncheon must be made by noon on Monday, April 2, by calling the church office at 885-4841.

"Covenant, Sin and Reconciliation" will begin with a prayer service at 6:30 p.m. There will be opportunities for personal reflection as well as the sacrament of reconciliation.

trip to downtown Detroit brings pleasant memories Nostalgic

The dictionary defines nostalgia as a "wistful yearning for one's home, country or city." Most of us have experienced that hold dear in memory.

Change is inevitable. Being progressive, reasonable individuals, they accept and adjust.

sad, sweet feeling, even those ashes of memory are stirred by a Every once in a while, the who still live in the city of their meeting with an old friend, an birth - probably because there's incident or a news item. Hearts so little left of the city that they are warmed as we go back in time to people and places that Not that they pine for it. were once so important.

By Marian Trainor

I'm sure this happened when older residents read of the fire at downtown Siegel's that destroyed the building. It had been closed since 1985, but the building was still there to remind us of its better days when it was billed as the "largest, finest and most complete exclusive cloak and suit store in America."

Large windows around the building's ground-floor perimeter featured some of the most elegant mannequins in Detroit and drew national attention in 1911 when they displayed copies of coronation robes, including jewels and ermine, of Britain's King George V. Siegel's once courted customers by providing each newborn baby in Detroit with his or her first pair of white baby shoes. Having a charge account at Siegel's was a prized accomplishment.

There were other fine stores. Himmelhoch's, Healy's and the Washington Boulevard shops. They were considered carriage trade shops. Kern's, Crowley's and the all-inclusive Hudson's were department stores. Siegel's was unique: a woman's store where the average shopper could find good clothes at affordable

Kitty-corner to Siegel's was another favorite store -Kresge's - often referred to as the 10-cent store. It's likely that Kresge did have some items that sold for 10 cents but no one ever went in looking for items at that price. Kresge's did, however, have any number of items for less than a dollar.

Down the street was another Kresge store. That was known as the dollar-store. It had higher priced merchandise. The dollar store could well have been the seed for K mart. The growth of a 10-cent store to the giant K mart chain is an interesting business phenomenon.

The role of these and other downtown stores in the lives of older Detroiters is important because there were no neighborhood counterparts. Shopping malls came into being much later.

Part of the problem of looking back at a certain place is that it refuses to be isolated. Soon you are calling to mind other favorite haunts.

One was Vernor's. Further down Woodward, it was a stopping off place to have a frosty, sparkling glass of ginger ale not from a bottle or a can, but straight from the fountain. It fizzed and bubbled and tickled your nose. It was sweet and tasty and has never been again equaled

And then there was Sanders, with its long counter of various chocolates. You could order one of this, and one of that, and put them in a bag, providing you hot fudge sundae instead.

Memories hold so much that is important - happy times and sad times - important events and little happenings — a day "downtown."

Most important of all, memories bestow upon us the precious power to be with those who shared those times: a mother who loved downtown Detroit and led us by the hand through all the sights and sounds of its stores and shops; a father who took us downtown to the theater, the movie houses, the library, the museums; an aunt who made it possible for a young mother to revisit favorite downtown spots.

There are memories of taking children to see Santa Claus on Hudson's 13th floor; of seeing "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" at the United Artists Theater. Fun times. Happy

Once there was no finer place to go than downtown Detroit and while most of what we knew is gone, it lives on in memory.

HAVE A PLEASANT TRY AT PERFECTION BRIDGE BY WOODY BOYD THE PASTEBOARD PASTIME

Harold Ogust of New York was a successful plastics manufacturer and travel agent. In the mid-fifties he founded Goren International which came about because of his long playing friendship with Charlie Goren. Harold was also ranked among the world's finest players and coupled with his good friend Boris Koytchou was a member of the famous Goren team.

As a member of New York's celebrated Regency Whist Club he would amble up to a modest stake game on the second floor and tan his wish to participate. It mat-tered not the participants ability, world class or other wise, he just thoroughly enjoyed playing bridge with everyone and when he found himself bridled with an undergraduate like the man who penned this one, his words were always encouraging and instructive. Many of the club's middling members remember Harold fondly for his attention to their game's development. Harold's best known legacy to the bridge world was the Ogust rebids by the weak bidder and they are still used extensively today. Many partnerships use two no trump in response to a weak two bid as the only force and that specifically asks partner to bid a feature unless he is a dead minimum. Even with this gimmick there is doubt as the six carded suit's high point hand range is 6 to 11. Harold recognized that the responder with 13 to 17 points still had a difficult determination to make. The value of Ogust's rebids eliminated much of this doubt. Two no trump by responder was still forcing and it specifically asked for an evaluation.

Such an accurate description helped the users immeasurably and is the principal reason experts prefer it. Today's fine hand from the Ogust's archives of great performances is a classic. He was partnered with Boris when this hand came up some thirty-fine years ago in a major national tournament.

HAND STRENGTH SUITS PROBABLE VALUE REBID Minimum 6-9 pts.. Maximum 10-11 pts. KJ 9XXX 3 Clubs 3 Diamonds Minimum 6-9 pts. 3 Hearts 3 Spades W 2NT 20 N/S Vul Passed Out 10 3 🛊 Q 10 9 7 ★ KQJ1098652 ♦ 8

Two diamonds was weak. Two no trump was forcing and asked for an Ogust rebid evaluation. Four spades fixed north as Harold had intended bidding three spades (maximum strength/good suit). His double seemed mystifying. Boris gave it considerable thought. Why would a weak two bidder, vulnerable be doubling? Certainly not for penalties as a preemptive hand doesn't embrace many defensive tricks. Boris concluded that his partner intended bidding three spades and this was the only device he had left to portray that fact.

All was not over as east got off to a diabolical lead that endangered five diamonds at the first stage of play. Harold was up to it and called for the jack which was ruffed. The spade king was then ruffed by east and the heart return fetched the ace. After the trump play dummy's spade ace was a resting place for a heart and plus 600.

In the closed room their partners Helen Sobel and Charlie Gorn were playing four spades doubled down one when the hand was miss defended. The Goren teams net gain was 500!

In her defense, my wife doesn't mind when I watch a sports channel, but she despises the fact that I flip between stations. A German-made liner, which the Grosse Pointe Woods park pool has in its diving well, is being heavily considered by school officials.

The liner can be applied to the existing structure and is similar to above-ground pools, but it's stronger. The liner, which would be placed over new pads on the inner walls, will be heat sealed with no seams. This solution really impresses Gauerke.

"This liner is superb," he said. "It would take a great deal of effort to really puncture or rupture this liner, but if that happens we can repair it under water and without having to drain the pool like we do now.'

The liner also comes with a 10-year guarantee.

"This is the most efficient and economical way to go," said Fenton. "A new liner makes the most sense for the facility and it will be better off for the people who now use the pool. Once the check the chemical levels at the work is completed, we'll have an even better facility."

"Our diving well is at its absolute minimum," said Gauerke. "So, if we went through the process of relining, we will definitely push the well to 12 feet because that is what's being recommended."

So, where then will the money come from?

"The money comes out of a building/site fund," said Fenton. 'We know it's a one-time expenditure to get it back into working condition because it's such a vital part of our programs. We knew this would be a planned expense and the return on our money is wise. We'll be in very good shape.

The 90's bring an exciting look to the world of fashion

Top designers turn to the East for the fashion look of the 90's

The fashion theme for spring '90 might be summed up as classic with a touch of the exotic.

The rich Eastern influences that splashed on the scene last fall are still gaining momentum. Indian prints and jewelry are cropping up in both haute couture and ready-to-wear.

Indian goldworking in particular has intrigued designers and is the inspiration for belts and shoes as well as jewelry. The ubiquitous gold body trim has an historical as well as an aesthetic explanation. Indians treasure their gold more than any other nationality: Even the most impoverished Indian citizen usually owns a little gold.

Gold is often the only wealth an Indian woman possesses. She is given gifts of gold jewelry all through her childhood, and on her wedding day, she wears every piece of it. If her husband dies or sepa-rates from her, her gold is often the sole

"insurance" she has.

Although it is forbidden by law to import gold into India, the demand is such that smuggling is rampant. With primi-tive tools and in the dim light of secret rooms, Indian jewelry makers fashion gold into intricate patterns wrought by thousands of years of skill. It is no wonder the Western fashion world admires and emulates it.

The most evident manifestations of this Eastern influence are in sarongsusually for evening—and in gold shoes, the accessory of the season.

A close second in popularity to the gold of the Far East is lace, especially black lace. At Bill Blass it adorns unexpected fabrics such as animal printed chiffon. At Betsey Johnson, red and white lace is married with spandex in a body stocking. At Caroline Roehm, lace is primarily for evening. Many other patterns are mixed unconventionally; stripes with florals and florals with houndstooth. Animal prints are combined with everything from fringe to feathers.

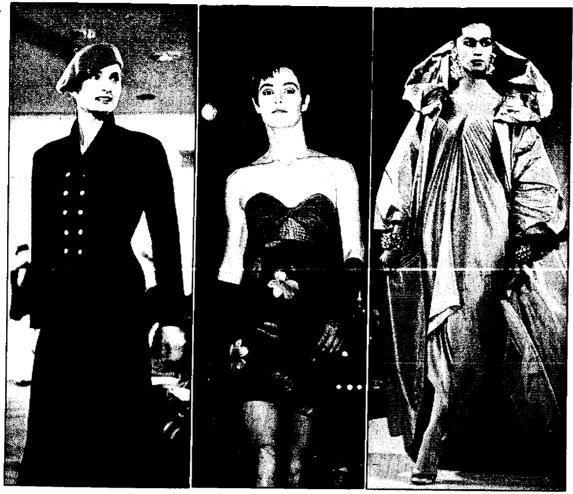

New colors

There is a significant shift in basic colors. If the eighties were dominated by black and white, the nineties will be marked by neutrals-off-white, cream-

But if the basic colors are earth tones, the accenting colors are bright and artificial. There is bubblegum pink (mixed dubiously with brown sequins at Bill Blass), bright canary yellow, light kelly green, and varying shades of melon.

Just as women were managing to get their hair to grow past their shoulder blades, it was revealed that 1990 will be a year of short hair. If it's any consolation, skirts will generally stay at the same sensible length of just above the knee. Because jewelry is richer and more intricate this year, it is kept to an absolute

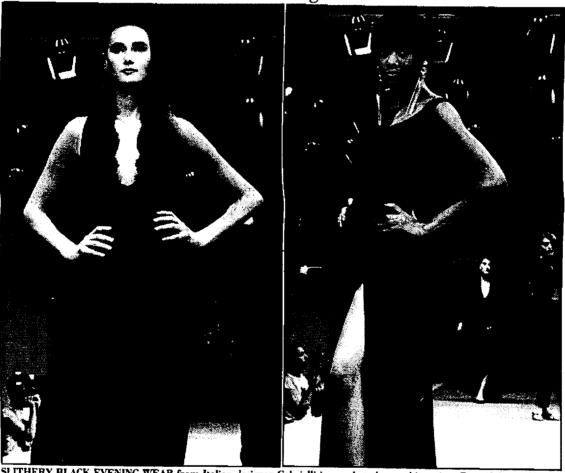

The area in which designers showed the most innovation this year was choice of fabric. The cuts themselves were very traditional and often downright conservative. The textures and flavors of other cultures will mark the richly ornamented look of the nineties.

The tailor, the shaper, the entrance maker

AMERICAN DESIGNERS OFFER MULTIPLE OPTIONS FOR SPRING, 1990. Short skirts are still popular, but long, flowing or fitted skirts are a valid alternative for women who prefer them. Ralph Lauren, turning to the French for inspiration, offers a suit with double-breasted, fitted jacket and long, shapely skirt. For evening, women can go long or short, but a cover-up of some kind is a necessity. Geoffrey Beene's frankly sexy little dress (center) has a matching jacket, while Oscar de la Renta's authorized to the property produced to the property waste and varies of silk infferts. entrance-making gown (right) takes cover under a hooded coat made from yards and yards of silk taffeta.

A DESIGNER WITH A SENSE OF HUMOR? Of course it's possible, although not all couturiers are willing to let their hair down like Italy's Mila Schon. This fan-tastic evening gown is breezy, light and feminine—perfect for flamenco dancing into the 1990s. Ole!

THE SEQUIN went from flashy to sophisticated this year at Bill Blass. Here, his white double-breasted blazer glitters from collar to cuff. Tapering at the waist makes for a feminine line over an above-the-knee skirt. For spring, 1990.

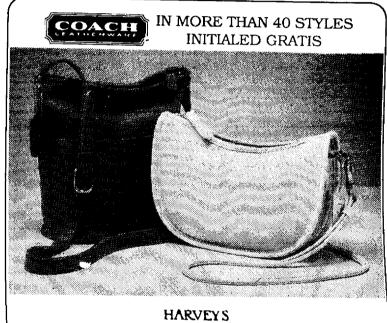

THIS OUTLANDISH BLEND of jurgle prints with a Chanel-inspired belt and Hermes-style haltertop (left) is not for the wishy-washy woman. The baring, daring outlit prowled in Italian designer Mila Schon's spring, 1990 collection. Also alive and well was ethnic-inspired, heavily adorned sportswear (right).

Both the style and shape of the diamond engagement ring are a matter of personal taste and give a woman the freedom to choose the ring of her dreams. The shape of the diamond, not to be confused with cut, is the top-view silhouette of the stone. A variety of diamond shapes are now available, the shape as well as the mounting can be a beautiful expression of your individuality, explains Gary Wachler of David Wachler & sons Jewelers in Bir-

1 The most traditional shape is also the most popular. The brilliant or round diamond is chosen by 75% of all brides who receive a diamond engagement ring, according to the Diamond Information Center. The brilliant diamond in a solitaire setting showcases the diamond to its best advantage, allowing maximum refraction of light.

The oval diamond is an oblong adaption of the round and often appears larger than a round of the same carat weight. It has a slightly elongated form with a brilliant appearance, presenting a stunning play of light.

The clean geometric styling of the emerald-cut diamond often appeals to a more style conscious bride and has been increasing in popularity. It is rectangular, with facets known as "steps" on each side and around the corners. Its symmetry makes it a symbol of discipline and order.

The pear-shaped diamond is the English name for the French "pendeloque" which is related to our word pendant. One end is rounded, while the other tapers to a point, which is worn towards the fingernail. One of the most elegant diamond shapes is the marquise. It is oblong and characterized by pinpoint flashes of light that come to a point on either end.

Other new shapes that are available include the triangular cut diamond. New technology has resulted in maximizing its brilliance. Often used as a center stone, it is also effective set on either side of a brilliant diamond solitaire which creates a fiery diamond engagement ring. Also popular is the Quadrillion or prin-cess-cut diamond. This squareshaped diamond has added facets resulting in a more brilliant appearance than its counterpart, the emerald-cut diamond.

And while women now have more diamond shapes available to them, the mounting can make the ring that much more unique. "It is important for the mounting to both flatter the stone as well as the hand of the woman who wears the ring," adds Link Wach-

Regardless of the diamond shape a woman receives for her diamond engagement ring, she can be assured that each diamond has its own individual characteristics and reflects the uniqueness of her finance's love.

Aspiring designers find success

Designing a dress for First Lady Barbara Bush or velvet jackets for the Oak-ridge Boys is all in a day's work for students enrolled in Dee Boya's Institute of Fashion in Fresno, California.

Boya, whose colorful history includes designing fashions for motion picture stars and Miss America Pageant candi-dates, decided to share her contacts with her students, many of whom have never left Fresno, a city of 317,800.

"You create yourself in this life," says Boya. "I want to show students that if I can do it, they can do it, and designing a dress for Mrs. Bush or any of the stars we work with is certainly a start."

Boya's school is one of the few nationally accredited fashion institutes in the country that offers full financial aid. Government grants are available for all courses, from professional fashion modeling to fashion design.

There is nothing dry about the curriculum, however. Because of Boya's contacts in the film industry, students' assignments can end up on the silver screen—or even on the President's wife.

For a free catalogue, phone (800) 336-6202 or write Dee Boya's Institute of Fashion, 4333 N. West Suite #A, Fresno, Today, lenses are as much a part of fashion as a designer frame collection. Lens technology offers improved vision and appearance-You don't have to settle for anything less than a perfect eyewear look. Perhaps the most notable advancement is progressive addition lenses which offer the same vision correction as a bifocal lens without the "jump" in vision, and bifocal line. An added bonus: progressives that let contact lens wearers keep their contact lenses while using eye-glasses for reading and other close-up work.

Prescription lenses that used to look like the proverbial Coke bottle are a thing of the past. High index lenses allow for a thinner, lighter lens, and processes like edge thinning and faceting also provide a lighter look and feel. Anti-reflection lens coatings are the final touch to the fashion eyewear look: They reduce the reflec-tions that bounce off your lenses to make your eyes appear clearer and more visible through the lens. The idea is to create a complete eye-wear look with the most modern

A revealing look at swimwear

For those of you who enjoy the annual Titanic.

Sports Illustrated swimsuit issue, here's Inste something else you might like.

The premier issue of the new bimonthly magazine, Vintage Fashions, takes a fascinating and amusing look at swimwear of the past, and examines how it evolved into today's revealing, oneand two-piece wonders.

Imagine a delicate and sophisticated young turn-of-the-century bathing beauty at the beach for an enjoyable day of sun and sea. The trouble is, she won't get much sun because nearly every inch of her body is covered with a heavy wool costume consisting of ankle-length bloomers and a long skirted dress. And if she dares to enter the surf, the weight of her water-logged outfit might cause her to sink to the bottom faster than the

Instead, she lies in the sand at the water's edge, allowing the waves to splash over her. Thank goodness for the sash tied around her waist, which does what the steel anchor weights sewn into her suit's hem have failed to do: keep the skirt from washing up over her head.

It was only years later, when Olympic swimming champion Johnny Weissmuller appeared in Tarzan films clad only in a leather loin cloth, that the lighter and (at the time) daring one-piece suits began to gain wide acceptance.

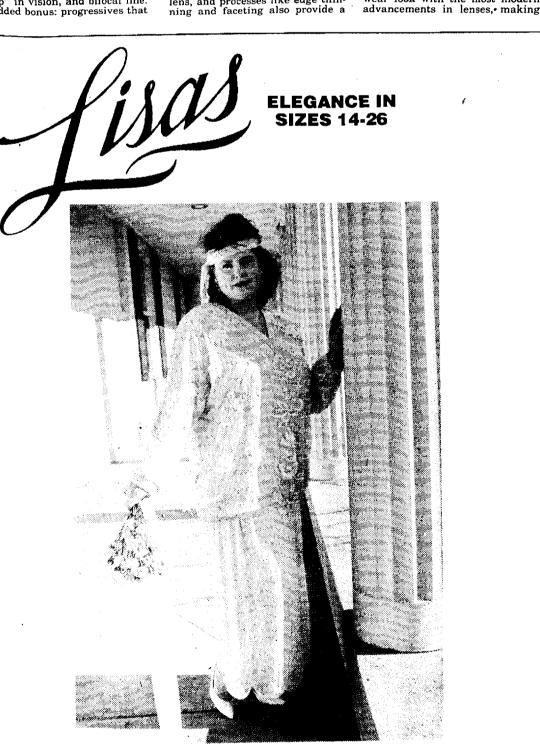

The article, researched and written by Wendy Lebing, is illustrated with photographs tracing the evolution of early swimwear and the pioneering influence of star athletes such as Weissmuller, Annette Kellermann, and Gertrude Ederle.

During the past year I've been able to help many busy women, such as yourself, put together a wardrobe that is transitional, workable and fresh. Why not let me do your leg work? I'm able to find just the right additions for your closet while you're free to focus your attention on your career, committees and children. Just call 882-7000 for an appointment.

Man in the Mirror ... Reflections on middle age

What a man sees when he looks in the mirror can color the way he faces the world. Today's middle aged man sees a different reflection than his father did. Contemporary men look at themselves with a kind but critical eye and they take action on things that they can change.

The 76 million men and women of the baby boom generation, who are now reaching their 40s and 50s, have altered the way society looks at middle age and the way they see themselves. These men and women see a future full of promise instead of a winding down of life.

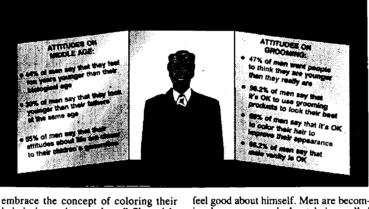

According to a recent survey conducted by Combe, Incorporated, (makers of Just For Men, the first five minute shampoo-in hair color, and Grecian Formula 16), the man in the mirror wants to see a reflection of youth and vitality. He will not willingly accept the stereotypes of middle age that existed even a decade ago, when age 40 was considered over the hill. Of the 500 men between the ages of 35 and 65 polled by Combe, over 44 percent said that they felt at least ten years younger than their chronological age. Thirty percent said that they look younger than their fathers did at the same age and 55 percent said that their attitudes about life were closer to their children's generation than to their par-

This generation is buying products to help maintain a youthful and active life-"The reason behind this desire to stay young is embedded in the youthful attitude of the baby boom generation," says Michael Farmer, co-founder of Age Wave, Inc. "An even more interesting fact is that men have begun to adopt the 'age maintenance' techniques that women have been using for several years. The focus of men's grooming products has shifted from the cosmetic to treatment systems that include moisturizers, toners, hair revitalizers and haircoloring products.

"The fact that men color their hair is no longer surprising. But the reason for coloring their hair is. According to the survey, only 19.5 percent of the men who color their hair do it to get rid of gray, while 32 percent of the men who color their hair do it to look better," says

According to Farmer, this translates into a very positive self image. Men who are entering middle age want to look their best. They take action to improve their appearance for themselves and others. They look at products such as Just For Men as quick, easy ways to feel good about themselves.

"A case in point." says Farmer, "is that in just two years we have seen men

Among men aged 40 to 61, 66.2 percent agree that male vanity is okay, versus 48 percent just two years ago, and an impressive 81 percent disagree with the statement that it is not masculine to do something about the way you look. A subtle shift in male attitudes about appearance is also apparent in the fact that 47 percent of the men questioned like people to think that they are younger than they are, which is a five percent in-

What kind of bride are you?

Wedding bells are in the air...Congratulations! You're getting married! If you're like most prospective brides. you're already dreaming of a magnificent wedding, a breathtaking gown and an unforgettable honeymoon with the most luxurious lingerie.

To help, most bridal magazines offer monthly countdowns that organize all those pesky details and keep plans running smoothly. But the big question re-mains: How do you make your wedding uniquely your own? Brides-to-be should consider the type of gown, location of the ceremony, even honeymoon lingerie that truly reflects their own style.

According to Modern Bride's Fashion Editor, Linda Weichenrieder, "When choosing lingerie, you'll want to select something that reflects your own tastes. Traditional and conservative women may feel very uncomfortable wearing a sheer or revealing gown the night of their hon-

She adds, "It's important to follow your instincts when making wedding arrangements so the day of the event you're comfortable and relaxed with the choices you've made." Here are five fantasy examples to spark your imagination.

Traditional

The traditional bride selects a longsleeved, silk Empire gown, overlaid with Alencon or Chantilly lace and encrusted with tiny pearls. The length of her train hinges somewhat on the size of the room; a six-foot train looks silly in a private chapel. Her morning wedding takes place in a Gothic-style church or cathedral, or in a dramatic synagogue.

After the ceremony, stretch limousines convey the wedding party to the reception. The setting: A rambling, Tara-like country club, perfect for dancing on the terrace to a local ensemble. Here, lunch and champagne are followed by an all-white, tiered cake covered in white sugar

For her honeymoon, she looks to sun, sea and sand in Hawaii. Paradise Island or Cancun, destined for a memorable two weeks. A long stretch of beach decorated with palm trees gleaming in the sunset is her fantasy backdrop as an Arabian tent on a New York rooftop? If so, a hot and sexy style may be right Things begin to warm up around 10:00 p.m., with the bride making her entrance in a body-hugging strapless sheath. The reception features the music of Anita Baker for slow dancing, and an enticing menu that includes oysters, creamy pates, grapes and figs followed by a dense, semi-sweet chocolate cake, with mounds of fudge frosting.

For her honeymoon in Monte Carlo, the bride packs a sheer black lace teddy with a chiffon flounce and embroidered

Romantic

The romantic bride chooses an updated fairy tale wedding held on a yacht at sunset. Her gown recalls the bows and puffs of Lady Diana's white confection. Delicate pearls capture the glow of a thousand candles lighting the reception in the great room of the yacht.

Champagne flows throughout dinner, and dessert is a lacy, tiered white cake flavored with a hint of orange. After dancing until dawn to the music of Mi-chael Feinstein, our heroine and her husband depart for Portugal, where they honeymoon in a 19th-century palace with a view of gently rolling hills leading down to the ocean. Her trousseau includes an ivory charmeuse gown covered with a flowing chiffon wrap detailed with sequins and pearls.

Sophisticated

Whether on Chestnut Street in Boston, or on Nob Hill in San Francisco, the sophisticated bride chooses a gracious townhouse for the setting of her wedding. Mixing the old and new, she wears a crystal-pleated Mary McFadden even-ing gown in spun silver or soft gold, offset by antique diamond teardrop ear-

Her reception features dancing to the music of Peter Duchin, the finest champagne, and an impressive menu including caviar in new potatoes, smoked salmon. tiny lamb chops, and vegetables stuffed with herbed cheese. Dessert is a hazelnut Genoise covered in rum icing.

For a sophisticated honeymoon, she and her husband have planned a theater week at the Savoy in London. Dining on the balcony with the Thames in the back-ground creates the perfect setting for a romantic dinner in luxurious lingerie. The bride wears a dramatic black scroll patterned charmeuse gown featuring built up straps for a look of sophistication from the Jessica Lynn Collection. The matching full-length kimono robe with a rope tie is optional to cover the slit of the

Playful

The playful bride is nothing if not spontaneous. She and her fiance invite friends and family to a country party at a winery. When the guests arrive, they find the tasting room draped in white parachute silk. When they see the bride wearing a short, slinky white dress with layers and layers of ruffles, they suspect something is afoot.

After the brief surprise ceremony, everyone celebrates to Kentucky bluegrass music. The menu is down-home: southern fried chicken wings, cornbread, mini-tacos, sliced catfish on homemade biscuits, and the winery's finest wines and champagnes. As expected, the cake is unconventional: a replication of the bride's skirt, executed in spun sugar.

In keeping with her spontaneity, this bride has packed a smashing Val Mode Lingerie red coulette teddy with delicate spaghetti straps, button down front and a slightly flared and flirtatious bottom that she discovers can appear as a chemise or a pant for a secret surprise on her honeymoon down-under in the Australian out-

Every bride-to-be dreams of a wedding that reflects her individual style. Concentrating on a single theme provides direction, and helps to organize all those details that keep your wedding running smoothly.

Once those elements are in place, a bride can enjoy putting together her trousseau, from a selection of delicate lingerie-like Val Mode or Jessica Lynn lingerie, available at major department and specialty stores nationwide-to her bridal gown and even her floral arrangements. Taking the time to plan carefully means the reward of sharing a wedding that truly has your signature. BR904959

The more things change, the more they remain the same. Today's bride may be a little more sophisticated and savvy than in years past, but when it comes to wedding gems, her tastes are steeped in the classic American tradition of pearls.

Just as a diamond ring has become synonymous with engagements, cultured pearls, the queen of gems, have been an important part of the bridal ensemble for generations. Perhaps it is the natural beauty and purity of a pearl that has earned it a place in every bride's heart over the years.

Just as no two brides are ever alike, cultured pearls are as different as the in-dividual who wears them. It is therefore important to match the right pearl jewelry for the right woman.

The main considerations for choosing the proper strand of pearls should be the style of gown to be worn and the complexion of the wearer. For gowns with scoop or boat necklines. 16 to 20 inch choker or princess length necklaces are best suited to delicately accent the neck and shoulder areas. High collar and V-neck styles call for long strands of pearls either in 24 to 32 inch matinee or opera

Women with fair skin and light colored hair are best flattered by pearls with slightly pink or rose overtones. Creamy white or slightly golden pearls look best on women with dark skin and hair.

Since cultured pearls are products of nature, they are seldom, if ever, perfect. Every pearl grown by an oyster has its own individual identity. However, when choosing a strand of cultured pearls, it is important to keep several quality points Probably the most important aspect, as far as quality is concerned, is the lustre of the pearl. Lustre is the clear shine on the surface of the pearl. It should be clear enough to reflect the images of objects near the pearl.

Another important factor is the surface of the pearl. It should be relatively free of damaging blemishes that appear as cracks, bumps or pits.

And finally, all the pearls in a strand should be closely matched in terms of color, size and shape. They should all combine together to give an appearance of uniformity within the necklace.

As the "me generation" is dead and buried, marriage makes a strong come back not always be the right answer. As we ensays Dr. Kinder. "We're all so burned The institution of marriage, which has endured so many changes and upheavals in past decades, is finally, as the nineties begin, securely back on firm footing. Only a decade ago, living together was only a decade ago, living together was proclaimed as the answer to the "marriage problem," and people asked, "What difference does a piece of paper make, anyway?" It was widely believed stable marriages. that one had not only a right, but almost an obligation to oneself, to leave a mar-riage which was not completely fulfilling.

According to Dr. Melvyn Kinder, coauthor, with Dr. Connell Cowen, of the bestsellers Smart Women/Foolish Choices, Women Men Love/Women Men Leave, and last year's Husbands and Wives: Exploding Marital Myths/Deepen-ing Love and Desire, "marriage is going to be in great shape in the '90s." out, we're casualties of the 'me genera-tion,' we're tired of self-realization, we have to find something that is more emotionally and spiritually fulfilling."

Dr. Kinder believes that "the basic problem that people have in marriage is that they don't really know what it's all about, and they have unrealistic expectations; they don't know the guidelines of how to evaluate a good marriage. Though people are committed to working on their marriages and making them last, they become disappointed because mar-riage does not live up to their fantasies and unrealistic expectations.

Unconscious or implicit beliefs, such as "Marriage will make you feel complete and whole," and "Your mate should change for you if he or she really loves you," create tension and dissatisfaction and lead people to believe that their marriages are not good.

In Husbands and Wives, Drs. Kinder and Cowen write, "We are not asking you to 'settle' or telling you that your dreams of what a husband or wife can provide are unattainable. But we are saying that it is critical to examine some of the wishes and expectations you bring to marriage.

Health department pulls North's pool plug

Sports Editor

The Grosse Pointe North pool, a generally clean and safe facility, is being shut down by the Wayne County Health Department because of its perpetual problems with a faulty liner.

The state-of-the-art pool, which has given school officials a headache each summer, is going to be drained and prepped for repairs in late April.

Despite peeling paint and the recurring pockmarks in the aluminum liner, students and swim

the water samples we take," Gauerke said. "But, there is so much flaking from the aluminum surface that we need to analyze this problem."

And analyze they have.

"The pool has been welded and fixed so many times that it has created even more pockmarks." said Chris Fenton, director of business affairs for the Grosse Pointe schools. "The paint has gone over the top of the old repairs and now it's flaking. Our plan is to redo the aluminum liner out and replace it with tile," said Gauerke. "But we're looking into a more advanced procedure that would help us cut the future cost of maintenance, as well as give us a better liner.'

A German-made liner, which the Grosse Pointe Woods park pool has in its diving well, is being heavily considered by school officials.

The liner can be applied to the existing structure and is similar to above-ground pools, but it's stronger. The liner, which would be placed over new pads on the inner walls, will be heat sealed with no seams. This solution really impresses Gauerke.

"This liner is superb," he said. "It would take a great deal of effort to really puncture or rupture this liner, but if that happens we can repair it under water and without having to drain the pool like we do now.

The liner also comes with a 10-year guarantee.

"This is the most efficient and economical way to go," said Fenton. "A new liner makes the most sense for the facility and it will be better off for the people who now use the pool. Once the work is completed, we'll have an even better facility."

Currently, the pool is used by both North and South swim

"Right now, we could tear the teams, Pointe Aquatics, Community Education classes and North physical education classes.

The repairs, which would begin in June and run for approximately six weeks, will also include upgrading the 10-foot diving well.

"Our diving well is at its absolute minimum," said Gauerke. "So, if we went through the process of relining, we will definitely push the well to 12 feet because that is what's being recommended."

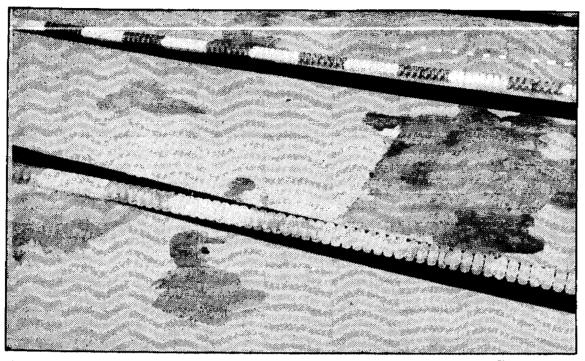

So, where then will the money come from?

"The money comes out of a building/site fund," said Fenton. 'We know it's a one-time expenditure to get it back into working condition because it's such a vital part of our programs. We knew this would be a planned expense and the return on our money is wise. We'll be in very good shape.

"Right off the bat, we're going to have a savings of $10,000 to $15,000 a year.'

Approximately Feb. 15, the health department made its weekly - unannounced - trip to check the chemical levels at the pool. After checking, a depart-

The overhaul, which would include a new liner, new pipes, filter system, diving well, and other accessories, would cost approximately $200,000 — a substantial savings when compared to the cost of a new pool.

"We've dealt with the problems for at least the last 15 "There's nothing wrong with years," Gauerke said. "About

"Building a new pool would cost an astronomical amount of money because we'd have to build within an existing building," he said. "When we decided to just patch and repair, we'd do that but then we'd also do a lot of praying."

Golf day to be held in May

The 1990 "Longest Day of Golf" to benefit multiple sclerosis (MS) is a month-long, statewide golf event that challenges registered foursomes to play an entire day of marathon golf.

During May, hundreds of Michigan golfers will get their golf season into full swing while helping more than 15,000 people in Michigan who suffer from MS.

Participants may play their longest day of golf on any one day in May on the course of their choice. Registered foursomes raise money for MS by soliciting sponsors on a pledge-perhole basis. Sponsor pledges support research into the cause and cure of MS, and services to improve the quality of life for MS persons and their families.

By collecting pledges for every hole they complete, golfers can win a variety of premium golf prizes ranging from fine gold merchandise to exciting golf getaways to Shanty Creek-Schuss Mountain, Boyne USA and Crystal Mountain Resorts.

Finess -Climbing your way to good healthThose who exercise, but the person's work rehabilitation. Those who exercise, but the person's work rehabilitation.

The health- and fitness-conscious American has been on a continuing journey through the 1980s for the most enjoyable and beneficial type of exercise.

Sometimes to the depth of Homer's odyssey, the search has been painstaking and testing all manner of motivation.

One of the more recently popular and intriguing forms of aerobic activity is that of stair climbing, or total body climbing. We're referring to the stair-climber units that can be seen at many fitness centers or health clubs these days. Another such challenge to the heart is a vertical climber unit.

There is still disagreement, however. Kenneth Cooper, M.D., called the father of aerobics, believes that walking eight to 10 flights weekly will not really help to condition the cardiovascular system. He feels that the time interval is too short. He does recommend that stair climbing can be approached as a form of exercise in itself. The individual must make repeated trips up and down the same flight of stairs.

For more optimal work, climbing up and down the same set of three steps is best. The shorter descent here gives the body less time to recover. The oxygen cost of stepping down is about one third that of stepping up.

The stair climbing devices may be useful conditioning tools, but experts caution the beginner or elderly user. John M. Formolo, M.D., cardiologist and director of the Non-Invasive Lab at St. John Hospital.

"A rapid rise in these components can put a lot of stress on the body. Most people need to start slowly and adapt to one work load before an increase is made. Because we are dealing with the work of large muscle mass, the impact on blood pressure can be significant. It is, then, important to do proper screening for hypertension in stair users. Those with weak quadriceps (front thigh muscle) or ankle problems may have difficulty, as well.

More recently, stair climbing has even entered the cardiac rehabilitation clinics in some hospital centers. However, this is on a selective basis and prescribed only for those patients who are clinically stable and moderately fit from earlier

Laddering for health

There is another device that probably comes closer to mimicking the motions of climbing a ladder. The person exercising alternates using his or her right arms and legs with his or her left limbs in a sliding pushpull action. The machine is nearly vertical and at first appears a little intimidating. This device does require the use of a great deal of muscle mass.

David B. Jordan, PhD, an exercise physiologist in Hyde Park, New York states: "Some people can't even workout for a minute when they start the VersaClimber."

Usually, one can sustain an aerobic workout five to eight minutes. Obviously, additional formats are needed to complete a healthy 30-40 minute aerobic session. This more naturally leads to what we now call cross training.

Specifically, cross training is cardiovascular exercise involving three to four different modalities in one work center. One might spend eight to 10 minutes on a rowing machine, followed by 10 minutes on a stationary bike, then another 10 minutes on a climbing apparatus. Swimming can be included, as well, as part of a total cross-training regime.

There is really no limit to this recent fitness craze as it seems to have found its own valid place in our health culture. The bottom line, as with any form of exercise, is if you enjoy it, stay with it. So, if you're going to take "flight" just be sure that it's one step at a time.

Many dangers to yo-yo dieting

It is almost impossible to pick up a magazine or tune in to a TV commercial without discovering yet another "miracle" diet

There are hundreds of ways to lose weight and thousands of dieters who do so each year, but those same dieters regain that weight because once the diet is over, most dieters fall into their old ways of eating.

The greatest challenge to most dieters is not in losing the weight, but maintaining that weight loss.

The extent of damage caused by dramatic weight fluctuations is not yet certain, but more and more research is available showing serious risks to both physical and psychological well-being.

Self-esteem is one of the greatest emotional costs of weight-cycling. No one but the dieter understands the intensity of psychological pain caused by regaining lost weight time after

Marian Fineman's testimony before the 1977 Senate hearings expressed what probably many dieters feel: "No one knows the anguish, the guilt and the shame that I feel every time I regain the weight I have lost." (Quoted from the International Obesity Newsletter, October

Although losing weight can be a boost to self-esteem, regaining that weight often plunges many dieters into greater depression and feelings of worthlessness than they felt before the dieting. The dieters that get caught up in this "yo-yo" syndrome of weight loss, experience many of the same feelings of self-loathing as that of the alcoholic.

Besides the emotional costs, weight-cycling can actually make losing weight more difficult. The February 1989 issue of the International Obesity Newsletter, cites recent research concerning the weight-cycling of high school wrestlers.

The study indicates that the long-term effects of "severe" loss/ gain cycles may cause a lower metabolic rate and increased food efficiency, thereby slowing down weight loss.

Even during non-dieting times, a decreased metabolic rate requires less food to maintain body weight, thus any excess food is stored as fat. Repeating dieters, therefore, may be setting

Not hopeless

Even though the previous information may sound rather dismal, there is hope along with proven methods to help you maintain your new weight goal for the rest of your life. But, before you start dieting, or before you embark on another "quick fix," there are certain things you should do. Ask yourself or ask the counselor if you are considering signing up for a formal pro-

7) Does this diet provide me with guidelines for nutritional, lifetime eating habits? 8) Does this diet incorporate exercise into its guidelines, according to my physical abilities and disabilities?

If any of the answers above is a no, or maybe, run, don't walk away — immediately.

Jules Hirsch of the Rockefeller University and one of the leading obesity researchers stated, "It is crucial that you select a diet and exercise program you can live with for the rest of your life ... the more radical the diet, the less likely it is to succeed."

Many weight-loss techniques, including drastic medical procedures like liquid diets, premeasured, prepackaged food, diet pills or hypnotism, ignore one of the most important aspects of long-term weight loss: making choices.

Unless you take the responsibility for your eating habits at the onset of a diet and make food choices along the way, your dieting becomes only a shortterm solution. I like to use the analogy of piano lessons: You decide to play the piano and you are recommended to see a particular teacher. Upon contacting the instructor, he/she replies,

"Yes, I will be happy to have you as a student. I will teach you piano theory, I will have you memorize the keyboard, but, my dear, you may not touch the piano for six months." Now, I ask you, how well do you think you will do at piano playing? The same holds true for the dieter who is required to follow one of the radical diet programs previously mentioned.

The real world is filled with real food and real choices. An effective program teaches you to deal with those choices wisely. An effective diet gives you practice in sensible eating, a nutritionally balanced diet which includes a variety of wholesome natural foods. A good diet also recognizes the uniqueness of each dieter and should offer a "game plan" set up for you. And selor in Grosse Pointe. The basic structure should be there, forming not only a means of losing the weight, but of maintaining the weight loss for life.

There is no miracle cure to the problem of excess weight. Individual commitment to acquire the necessary knowledge to change eating habits and to increase physical activity is the only permanent solution.

I believe that no matter how many false starts at weight loss and weight management you may have made in the past, you can still accomplish this goal now. But, be tough. Ask those eight questions, compare diets, compare programs. You can do mon in-

Bon Secours offering weight management program

Bon Secours Internal Medicine Phase III is a maintenance recently began offering Medi-Base, a weight management program medically supervised by Dr. Ralph Cushing.

"The program is designed to promote long-term weight loss maintenance, as well as healthy nutrition and exercise practices," said Robin Dungy, R.D., program director. "We use a threephase, very low-calorie diet plan tailored for moderately to severely overweight patients." Phase I, according to Dungy, involves rapid weight loss through the use of a good-tasting, nutrient-rich protein supplement - MediBase. MediBase is consumed four times a day during a 12-week fasting period accompanied by extensive behavioral group counseling. During phase II, a moderate weight loss/stabilization phase, patients make the transition from the MediBase to healthy food choices which promote weight control and good health.

gram reinforcing nutritional food choices, physical activity and behavior modification.

Counseling is provided throughout all three phases to provide patients with sufficient knowledge and skills to maintain weight loss and promote good health. In addition, support group meetings, conducted by a physician or staff member, offer a reinforcing and educational environment in which problems can be shared and solved.

Fitness is good business

The fitness revolution is in full swing and corporate America is one of its biggest targets.

Over the past decade, the fitness industry has compiled a great amount of statistical data from studies as well as corporate research which all seem to indicate that physically-fit employees are more productive, are absent less, have a much lower health-care cost and overall have better morale. Here are some of the numbers:

Prudential Insurance Company found that physically-fit employees average 3/12 sick days a year while less fit employees averaged 8 1/2.

Research from Tenneco found that female employees that do not exercise, averaged more than $1,500 in annual healthcare costs. Their exercising counterparts averaged about $600 annually. Non-exercising males averaged $1,000 a year, and those who workout consistently averaged around $560. Data collected from other corporations confirm these ratios. The University of Michigan Fitness Research Center conducted a study of 1,200 employees. Their results indicate that those who engage in a regular exercise program and follow a healthy lifestyle had greater job satisfaction, were promoted more often, received larger raises and were absent less of-

The fact is, every five years health-care costs are estimated to double. So, health promotion is becoming an important part of an employee's benefit pack-

Most fitness centers offer corporate rates at their facility and/or provide corporations with "on-site" programs in exercise, stress management, nutrition, blood pressure awareness and weight and cholesterol control.

So, wake up corporate America! We need to build a healthy work force that is fit for the future. It's much less expensive to promote health than to treat

LIMITED OPPORTUNITY

There are common stock brokers. And there are exceptional ones.

We don't fret so much about what the market did today. Or yesterday. What we really care about is what the market has done over months and years at a time. Investing money for our clients is pretty serious business to us. And while some brokers may be great at investing in securities with a higher degree of risk, that's not us.

For 65 years we've built a reputation of solid performance by investing for the long term... taking the time to build portfolios that deliver a good return to our clients. As a result, our account executives are proud of their performance today... and tomorrow.

And while some brokerage firms may be downsizing, we're growing. So, if you have strong oral communications skills, at least five years of experience in the business world, impeccable business ethics and a good personal credit history, we would like to talk about a career in securities brokerage. If selected to enter our thorough four-month training program, you'll receive a salary en route to your position with The Ohio Company, a member of the New York Stock Exchange. As an account executive, we'll help you succeed with a proven track record and the technical support as one of the nation's leading regional investment and brokerage firms with 48 offices in six states.

Send a copy of this ad with your resume to:

How about some pretty SHEETS or BATH TOW-ELS for the folks at New Life Home for Recovering Alcoholic Women. If you have some just 'hanging' around, get them over to LINC; it would be a great way to show you care.

"There's nothing to do!" is a familiar cry this time of the year. Our member agencies could use GAMES, TOYS and CRAFT SUPPLIES to help keep idle hands busy. And if you have been having bouts of cabin fever LINC might have a cure. Think about becoming a LINC VOLUNTEER. Call LINC between 10-2 for more information. WE NEED YOU.
