Farms, historical society conclude exhaustive architectural survey

By John Minnis

Assistant Editor More than 1,100 structures in Grosse Pointe Farms have been cataloged and photographed for their historical and architectural significance by teams of professionals and volunteers.

The Grosse Pointe Farms Historical and Architectural Survey was commissioned by the Grosse Pointe Farms City Council through its Subcommittee on Historic Preservation. The $15,000 study was funded by the city, the Farms Foundation, the Grosse Pointe Historical Society and matching funds from the state of Michigan. Some federal funds were also used.

Tish Colett of the historical society said efforts leading to the architectural survey began a few years ago when a significant mansion on Lakeshore was scheduled for demolition and the property subdivided. While the society was unable to stop the project, it did convince the city that the significant historical structures in the city had to be identified and a plan for preserving the buildings had to be developed.

Colett said that while many of the significant homes have been lost, there are still some architecturally and historically important structures standing in the Farms.

"People don't realize how unique we are," Colett said. "Public awareness has to be heightened.'

According to the survey, which was directed by Elisabeth Knibbe, an architect and urban planner who specializes in historic preservation, almost all the structures associated with leading business and government officials have been lost but, nevertheless, about 16 percent of all the remaining buildings in the Farms were judged to be potentially significant based on architecture alone.

The 1.129 sites chosen for photographing and documenting were selected during a survey by Knibbe in the fall of 1988. She was assisted by historical architect Richard C. Frank and historical researcher Jean Dodenhoff, curator for the Grosse Pointe Historical Society.

Much of the interviewing and all of the photographing of the structures were done by volunteers who received special instruction from Knibbe. Volunteer teams took pictures of all the structures in December 1988 and January 1989 after the leaves had all fallen to better expose the buildings.

The preliminary report was submitted to the state for review in the spring of 1989, and the final report was completed last month. It must now be officially presented to the Farms City Council.

Not only does the survey list significant structures, but it also proposes historic districts and architecture conservation areas. See SURVEY, page 14A

Woods reduces 800 assessments

By Dan Jarvis Staff Writer

Like an old-fashioned revival meeting, the Grosse Pointe Woods Board of Review has provided an elixir for residents ailing from unusually high assessment increases.

But like any cure-all, the benefits may be short-lived.

John Pierce, president of the Board of Review, said a total of 1.207 residents have come before the board, most to protest higher-than-usual assessment increases on residential property in the Woods.

"Because of the high volume of people, it took longer than usual to review the files," Pierce said. "There was only a short time period where we were able to help the citizens. We tried to make sure that everyone had the opportunity to come before us."

When the protests were over, Pierce said about 800 residential assessments were reduced. "We are going to lower about 75 percent of what the city did," Pierce said.

"Originally it became obvious that the land values were off," Pierce said. "We are trying to get to the bottom line on what went wrong."

Pierce said he requested a meeting with Woods officials to discover what went wrong and to ensure that the same thing does not happen next year.

"I think they (Woods officials) realize that they have made mistakes and we are trying to cor-rect them," Pierce said. "We (Board of Review) want to be included in the process."

The files from the 1,207 residents have been released by Pierce and sent to Wayne County officials. The county will review the cases, record them and return the files to the Woods.

"During the entire process, the city will have to answer many questions to the county," he said. Pierce said if the city disagrees with any of the findings by the Board of Review, the city would have to appeal the case(s) to the Michigan Tax Tribunal.

"The city could attempt to overrule us, but they can't do it arbitrarily," Pierce said, "They must get a ruling from the Michigan Tax Tribunal."

When Dominic Panborn was in high school, he came to the conclusion that he was going to be a bum.

Today at the age of 37, the Shores resident is president of his own international company. Pangborn Design Ltd., and is recognized as a world-class graphics designer.

But before becoming an artistic and business success, Pangborn's story has a humble beginning.

He was born in 1952 in a small Korean town near Seoul. The son of a departing American soldier, he was named Jung Sun Hun. Nine years later, his mother turned him over to a Catholic missionary priest, who in turn found a home for the boy with relatives, the Pangborns, in Jackson, Mich.

The 10-year-old's first, biggest problem was that of the language barrier. He knew no English, and his adoptive family knew no Korean.

By John Minnis Assistant Editor There is a possibility that the confessed killers of Benjamin Gravel of Grosse Pointe Farms could walk free in a few years, but the victim's widow is calling for mandatory life sentences.

Four of the six teens involved in the attempt to steal Gravel's car as he left Bayview Yacht Club Feb. 8 and the subsequent murder of Gravel face sentencing in June before Chief Detroit Recorder's Judge Dalton A. Roberson

All six of the teens were charged as adults with first-degree murder.

Cortez Miller, 15, and Kermit Haynes, 16, have pleaded guilty to first-degree murder. Willie Hobbs and Gregory Brown, both 16, pleaded guilty to second-degree murder and assault with intent to commit armed robbery. The lower plea was accepted in exchange for agreement to testify if any of the defendants go to trial.

The two remaining defendants, Rico Searcy, 17, and Christopher Sims, 18, have not entered into any plea agreements and will be tried as adults on the first-degree murder charge, according to Marc Hart, the assistant Wayne County prosecutor handling the case.

Under the 1988 state law that allowed the four juveniles under 17 to be charged and tried as adults, the judge retains the right to decide whether they will be sentenced as adults: a difference between life in prison or just a few years under the jurisdiction of the Department of Social Services (DSS). "I just want justice," said Sue

Under the fairly new statute covering juveniles charged with violent crimes, the judge could sentence them as adults. The adult sentence for first-degree murder is mandatory life in prison without parole. Seconddegree murder carries no minimum sentence, but life in prison is possible.

If Judge Roberson decides to sentence the defendants as juveniles, they will be wards of the DSS until they turn 21. Then they are free.

According to statements made by the defendants, Miller admitted planning the attack on the night of Feb. 8 and bringing the gun that Haynes fired at Gravel as he tried to get away from an

According to police and court records, the youths needed a car to go to a party. Gravel was the youths' second intended victim to come down Clairpointe. After the incident, the youths went to buy more bullets.

While there is a possibility that the youths could be sentenced as juveniles, that seems unlikely. According to Hart, he could recall no cases in which a juvenile was convicted as an adult of first-degree murder and then sentenced as a juvenile. Hart, however, said he knew of cases where juveniles were charged, tried and sentenced as adults in first-degree murder cases.

Hart said the prosecutor's office is seeking to have the youths sentenced as adults.

There is also a possibility that the youths, if sentenced as juveniles, could be back on the streets when they turn 19. Hart said that youths sentenced as juveniles can have their cases reviewed for early release. At age 21, they must be released.

If turned over to the DSS, the youths would likely be sent to a training school run by social services.

Pierce said he and other Board of Review members have spent 120 hours in a three-week period reviewing assessment files. "We feel that we have done our job, which is to make sure the residents of the Woods are not over-

> Pierce recommended that the city hire a consultant to find the problem. "Someone who is objective, not someone who works for the city. In my 11 years of experience, I have never seen these kinds of problems," he added.

Many residents have not been told whether their assessments will be lowered. Pierce said when the Board of Review completes a file and sends it to the county assessor, the board loses jurisdiction.

'We don't know when they will get an answer, but I hope the city will get the findings out to the citizens soon," he said.

Pierce said one of the primary problems with the assessment process in the Woods is that specific information is erased each year. Information, such as whether the house is located adjacent to an alley, school or city dump, is deleted.

"Our authority is only from one year to the next," Pierce said. "Only the assessor has the authority to make those items permanent. Maybe the computer wiped that information out, but a computer is only as good as the information put into it.

"I've asked for a lot of things to be reworked and the city appears to be helpful.

"We'll have to see."

2A News Politics and perestroika South students study Hungary's woes, propose solutions

By Ronald J. Bernas Staff Writer

It was a class project, done in conjunction with the Detroit Branch of the Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago and Junior Achievement, but the students took it to heart. That was evident when one of the students referred to the Hungarian government as "we.'

Eight students in Dr. Charles Hitch's class at Grosse Pointe South High School were asked to choose one of the countries in Eastern Europe struggling to shake off communism. Students were to propose a series of reforms which would create a freemarket economy.

The students presented their ideas to the senior vice president of the Detroit Branch of the Federal Reserve Bank, as well as other members of the management staff at the bank on Monday, March 9.

The eight proposals were greeted with praise for their sweeping nature, and were questioned as to their effects on the people of Hungary.

"I was surprised that underlying each proposal was the overall sensitivity to the human factor," said the Federal Reserve Bank's Paul Ballew, who was the students' main resource for information on Hungary's economy

The students researched Hungary and its people, and discovered a handful of problems. First and foremost, at $8,600 per person, Hungary has the highest debt burden per capita in the world, and the average yearly per capita income is only $2,500.

Industry is outdated by nearly half a century, its air, water and soil are heavily polluted and treatment of sewage is poor. Hungary has zero population growth due mainly to its claim as the country with the highest abortion rate and the second highest suicide rate in the world.

Hungary's main asset is its population which boasts a 98 percent literacy rate.

Where much of the class started the eight-week project with the belief that Hungary should immediately initiate sweeping changes, the class ended up agreeing that too much change, all at once, would be too difficult for the people to handle.

The students believe now that a common-sense approach to the reforms, with education about each new step, would be the best for the government of Hungary.

A Hungarian student spoke to the class about what Hungary is like and what the people see as problems.

Among the proposals were: Sell government-owned land to the people and to qualified foreign investors. Because the communist government owns much of the national assets, there aren't any incentives for the workers to produce quality products. A system whereby workers invest a percentage of their future earnings in a labor-owned property trust should be devised. Foreign investment, though encouraged, should be limited.

• Open internal and external Hungarian markets and teach the workers that quality should become a national objective. New and better products would be made and wasteful companies would have to close their doors.

• Create a free-market price system by eliminating most, if not all, government price subsidies. A central banking system needs to be established to keep the currency of Hungary convertible.

• Encourage Hungarians to save their money in a newly established banking system. They would model the system after the United States banking system. They should ask the countries who hold their bank notes for a five-year moratorium on loan payments and use the money saved to fund the new banking system.

 Completely overhaul the infrastructure. Some 50 percent of all roads are unpaved, the sewage system is non-existent in some places and airports should be expanded to accommodate an expanding economic environment. This would create jobs, but would also be an opportunity for the country to start fresh, and create systems which are friendly to the environment.

• A controversial proposal called for the maintaining of some high-level bureaucrats most of whom are communists to make sure the government runs smoothly, and to implement management-training programs.

"The Hungarian people have to realize that the reforms that take place will be pretty much for their children," said Mike Rentz, one of the students. "It will most definitely get worse before it gets better.

The students wrote out their thoughts on the program, all of them positive.

"Through our group discussion, I developed an understanding and an appreciation of the economies of both Hungary and our country," Rob Khoenle said. "The eight weeks have been both an education and a challenge, sorting out the many difficulties in the Eastern European bloc economies.'

This activity gave me a better understanding of the economic world around me and the various problems occurring in everyday life," Liz Liebold said.

Rentz said: "It will be interesting to see how many of our ideas come into reality and will perhaps be implemented by the Hungarian people. While the project was difficult and caused many headaches, it was a worthwhile experience.'

Ballew praised the students who participated in this firsttime project.

"It exceeded all of our expectations," he said. "We saw a growth from week to week. They questioned, they challenged me, it was well-worth the time spent. In fact, I'm going to miss them next week.'

Milk River cleanup solutions presented at public hearing

Staff Writer

One way or another, the polluted Milk River drain will be cleaned up. That's the message given to local city officials by the Michigan Department of Natural Resources.

Residents living in Grosse Pointe Woods and Harper Woods can pay now or pay a lot more later if their elected officials fail to act in the coming weeks.

The ultimatum was delivered by the DNR during a public hearing Monday night at Assumption Greek Orthodox Church in St. Clair Shores.

During the meeting, residents from Grosse Pointe Woods, Harper Woods and St. Clair Shores were presented with an overall cleanup plan which is expected to take nearly five years and cost $18 million.

Cost for the project will be funded primarily by Grosse Pointe Woods and Harper Woods residents, who are expected to pay about $9 per month over the next 20 years.

Roy Schramek, of the DNR, said the project could be funded initially through a state revolving fund loan at 2 percent interest.

submitted and approved by the DNR by May 1.

Also, Grosse Pointe Woods and Harper Woods officials must issue a resolution of support for the project by the same date.

If the cities fail to do so, the 2 percent option would be lost (at least for one year) and the project would be funded through a state bond at about 8 percent.

What's the difference? About $6 per month per household over the next 20 years.

Woods officials said the issue will be discussed at the Monday, April 16 meeting of the City Council.

Mayor George Freeman said, "Before we spend millions of dollars, we want to make sure we are recommending the correct solution. We know something has to be done, but at this point we are not sure which is the best solution.'

During the past year, residents in the area served by the Milk River drain have been presented with a series of cleanup options ranging in cost from $7 million to $90 million.

The Milk River Inter-County Drainage Board, consisting of of-

The catch? A plan must be ficials from Wayne and Macomb County, is the administrative body of the cleanup plan. The board is recommending the $18 million option to local officials.

The proposed plan consists of: Construction of a $300,000 disinfection facility which will add chlorine to water entering the Milk River drain. Chlorination will reduce the amount of odor caused by waterborne bacteria.

• Improvements at the Kerby Road Pump Station in Grosse Pointe Farms. Nearly $400,000 will be required to increase the pumping capacity of the station which pumps wastewater from the Milk River system to the Detroit sewage system.

 Rerouting Harper Woods sewage from the Milk River system directly to Detroit at a cost of about $100,000.

• The disconnection of downspouts on residential and commercial structures in Grosse Pointe Woods and Harper Woods at a cost of $400,000. Downspouts, which route rainwater from gutters into the Milk River system, will be disconnected to route rainwater across lawn areas, where possible.

• River circulation systems will be installed at the open drain area at a cost of nearly $2 million to keep solid waste from settling on the bottom of the drain.

• Channel cleanout will be performed at a cost of about $600,000. Cleanout involves hiring a contractor to remove solid waste which has settled on the river bed.

· Removal of excessive infiltration of water entering the Milk River system.

All along any stormwater system, there is a certain amount of leakage of ground water into the system. If engineers can find major leaks in the system, the pipes will be sealed off to reduce the volume entering the system. Cost is estimated at about $800,000.

• The construction of a 15 million gallon water retention basin. By far the single most expensive part of the cleanup plan, it is expected to cost about $8.8 million.

The basin would collect high volumes of combined sewage and rain water, which now must dumped into Lake St. Clair after a rainstorm.

on what the expansion of City

The retention basin would reduce the amount of spills into the lake from about 45 spills per year to a projected 15 spills per year.

Vyto Kaunelis, an engineer with MacNamee, Porter & Seeley, the engineering firm studying cleanup options, said an additional $3.5 million will be required for administrative, legal and engineering costs as well as construction contingencies related to the project.

If the plan is approved by May 1, construction time estimates are as follows:

• April 30, 1990. Submission of the final project plan to the Michigan DNR for approval.

• October 1990. Completion of the disinfection facility.

• July 1991. Submission of final plans and project manual for cleanup plan.

• November 1991. Receive the contracts on construction contracts.

• March 1992. Begin construction.

• December 1993. More than 90 percent of construction is expected to be completed.

3A

• May 1994. Construction completed.

• December 1994. Project complete and performance certificate awarded by the DNR.

Tom Welsh, a member of the Inter-County Drainage Board, said at the public hearing that if Grosse Pointe Woods and Harper Woods fail to issue a resolution of support by the May 1 state revolving fund deadline, the board may seek a court order to begin the project.

The DNR's Schramek said if the two cities fail to issue resolutions of support, the DNR would seek administrative enforcement action by the state attorney general.

Schramek said he would ask the remainder of the selective for a $10,000 per day fine against both municipalities.

He added if the DNR could state revolving fund loan. Also, demonstrate that a public health advertisement of construction danger could have been avoided by approval of the cleanup plan, • December 1991. Ferry School begins recycling white paper

By Ronald J. Bernas Staff Writer

In addition to reading, 'riting and 'rithmetic, Ferry Elementary School students are learning a fourth R: recycling.

Every room at Ferry has an empty Girl Scout cookie box right next to the waste basket. As part of a pilot program, students, teachers and other faculty, and Services for Older Citizens, which has offices in the school, are filling up the boxes with used white paper.

"A member of Grosse Pointe Citizens for Recycling approached me and thought we might be able to do something with recycling in the schools," Ferry Principal Dave King said.

The suggestion came from Rosann Kovalcik, a mother of two Ferry students.

Another plus, Kovalcik said, is that the school has decided not to turn the program into a competition, thereby fostering the feeling that everyone has to work together.

At the going rate of two cents a pound for white paper brought for recycling, the program is not going to be a real money-maker for anyone, but as Kovalcik says, that's not the point.

Vicious dog threatens guests

Shores police and a veterinarian were called to the Edsel & Eleanor Ford House April 4 to capture a dog that was snapping and snarling at guests and grounds employees.

The dog first appeared on March 30, and when it wouldn't leave and continued to harass workers and visitors, Shores police called in Dr. Lawrence Herzog of the Grosse Pointe Animal Clinic. Herzog was able to sub-

Bungling burglar caught in Park

After bungling three burglaries in the Park April 3, the inept thief was bound to get caught, and he was.

The suspect first tried to burglarize a home in the 1300 block of Balfour at 12:24 a.m. He got into the house through a rear door. A resident heard a noise and surprised the burglar, who then fled without taking anything.

He then tried another house at 1:52 a.m. in the 1200 block of Nottingham, but he fled when a resident spotted him while he was trying to pry a window open.

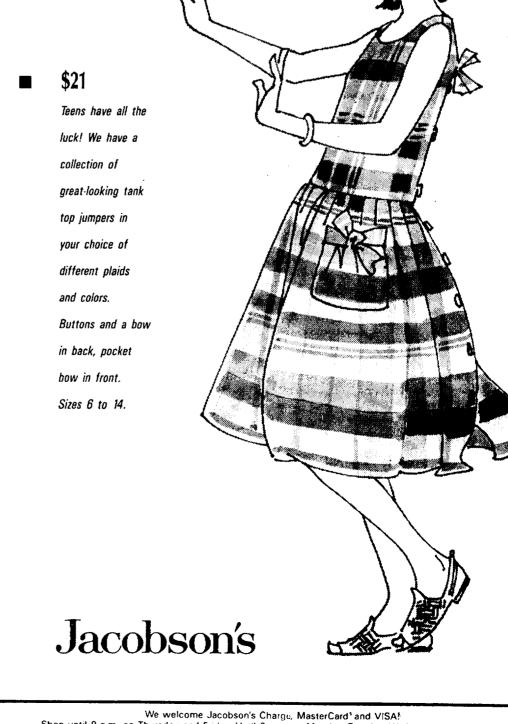

The burglar then tried a third house at 2:56 a.m., but when an alarm went off, he fled.

Officers responding to reports of the burglary attempts followed the suspect's tracks in the snow and spotted him, but he eluded the officers. For about 12 minutes, the investigating officers continued following tracks in the snow until they found the suspect at the rear of a house in the 1100 block of Devonshire and made an arrest.

The suspect refused to answer questions, but due to the officers' tracking of footprints and a plaster cast of an impression made by the suspect's tennis shoes, police were able to put together enough evidence to charge the man with one breaking-and-entering. More charges may be forthcoming.

Police believe the suspect may be responsible for a March 29 break-in of a house in the 1400 block of Berkshire and similar offenses north of Mack

The possibility that Sen. John Kelly of Grosse Pointe Woods might run for the 13th District congressional seat being vacated by Rep. George Crockett has aroused new interest in the contest in the Pointes. The district includes Grosse Pointe Park and Grosse Pointe City.

If Kelly decides to enter the race, it would be his second attempt to win an open congressional seat. He ran for the Democratic nomination in the 14th District in 1980 after Rep. Lucien Nedzi announced he would not seek re-election. Kelly lost the nomination to Dennis Hertel who has been in Congress ever since.

The 13th District overlaps a part of Kelly's 1st Senate District in Detroit, Grosse Pointe Park and Grosse Pointe City, a fact that would give him a good start on his campaign. In addition, he sees his Senate service as well as his background in the study and teaching of history, and especially Eastern European affairs, as excellent preparation for service in Congress.

Elected to the Senate in 1978, he was reelected in 1982 and 1986. Reflecting his broad interests, he has been a member of a wide variety of Senate committees. He currently serves on standing committees on public health, government operations and the judiciary as well as select committees on ethics and export and trade.

Kelly majored in political science at Michigan, won a master's in public administration from Wayne State University, received a juris doctorate from Detroit College of Law, and took graduate work in international relations at Georgetown University in Washington and in political science as a Ph.D. candidate at Wayne. He has taught at Mercy College, where he is still a staff member, and at Wayne State and University of Detroit.

As Kelly reminded the News in an interview, he would face two major risks in running for the congressional seat: First, he would have to give up his Senate seat because his four-year term expires this year, and, second, even if he won he would face a new district in 1992 because of the reapportionment that will follow the 1990 census.

But an indication of Kelly's serious consideration of the race was his effort last week in Lansing to seek the endorsement of Mayor Coleman Young of Detroit. Young made no promises but Kelly confirmed earlier press reports that the mayor had suggested: "Come on in. The water's fine."

Kelly could expect to run fairly well in the Republican Pointes because of his past service here, but feels on the basis of preliminary polling that he has good name recognition and a broad appeal to voters in the entire district.

Whatever Kelly decides, several questions have been raised about the effects of Crockett's retirement on the congressional reapportionment that will follow the 1990 census:

First, does Crockett's retirement aid or damage the Pointes' desire to be reunited in one congressional district when the Legislature gets around to redistricting next year?

Second, will the district survive the reapportionment or will it be one of the two Michigan districts that will disappear because the state has not kept pace in the national population race?

Third, if it survives, will the 13th District be expanded to include one or more of the other three Pointe municipalities or will it be enlarged in Detroit?

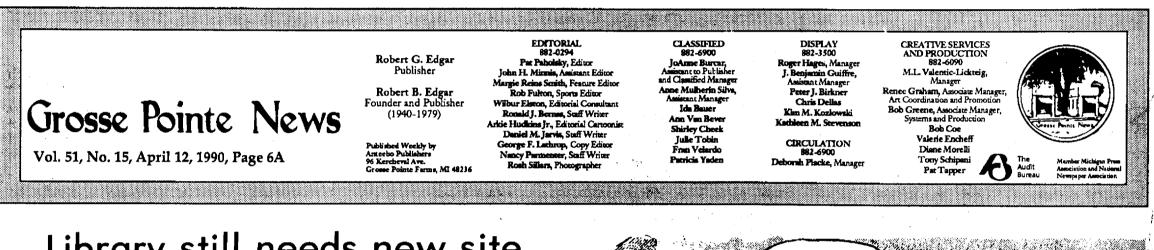

In regard to reapportionment, the 13th District will be a prime candidate for change or even elimination because it lost 23 percent of its population since the last census, more than any other Michigan district.

This year, as in the past, winning the Democratic nomination will be tantamount to election in the 13th District. That means voters in predominantly Republican Grosse Pointe Park and Grosse Pointe City again this year will play insignificant roles.

There are differences in the Pointes about where the Pointes are likely to wind up in the reapportionment, but we have heard no dissent from the frequently expressed view that the Pointes ought to be reunited in one congressional district in the next reapportionment.

We don't like the lack of political clout since the five Pointe communities were divided up. But. unfortunately. that loss is the penalty Grosse Pointe pays for being a Republican island in the Democratic sea of Wayne County.

That situation is not likely to change even with reapportionment but in 1990 Kelly, as a Democratic congressman who is himself a Pointer, surely would be more in consonance with the Pointes' views on many issues than Crockett has been.

Library still needs new site

Supporters of the proposed new public library were marking time this week after the Farms Council voted down the proposed Brownell School site plan but an alternative offered at last week's hearing still may be a viable plan.

At the hearing Mayor Joseph Fromm of the Farms, who voted against the school board's Droposed plan, said he was interested in the alternative. Two letters to the editor in today's News back the alternative and say the support it got proved that our editorial characterization of the opposition as Nimbys (not in my backyard) was "fatuous."

The alternative, according to one letter writer, attempted to resolve objections to the proposed plan "by providing off-street parking convenient to the playing fields, locating the library away from Chalfonte and close to parking at the back of the school, and eliminating the driveway between the school and the fields." If the school board and its planners and architects review this proposal and think it could be adapted to use by the library, use of the Brownell site still appears to be possible. If the protesters who persuaded the council to reject the school board plan would be willing to back the alternative, we surely would be willing to withdraw our use of the term Nimbys as a description of their opposition. In fact, we would be delighted to be proved wrong.

However, some people oppose not only the library's site plan, against which critics last week raised the issues of safety, parking and possible impact on property values, but also the library itself because they fear an expected increase in millage for operating costs. Some of those objections come from the Farms, some from elsewhere in the district.

However, since everyone in the school district will benefit from as well as help finance any new library, we think that in the interests of fairness, all of the school district's residents ought to have a voice in making the decision on the future library.

As it now stands, the defeat of the school board's site plan, orchestrated chiefly by the people who attended the Brownell School hearings, means that the rest of the school district's residents will be deprived of an opportunity to vote on the library proposal unless some alternative wins approval. The opponents obviously did not constitute a majority of even the Farms residents, let alone a majority of the school district. But if the critics now could back an alternative plan or even a compromise on the Brownell site that the Farms council and the school board would find acceptable, the entire district could have an opportunity to vote on a new library. Why not?

Is state GOP soft on crime?

Pointer who sometimes votes Democratic offers an unusual interpretation of a remark made by President George Bush during his visit to Metro Detroit last week.

Most people probably thought Bush was trying to give another boost to GOP gubernatorial candidate John Engler when he made the following comment in a brief speech to 650 Republicans in Dearborn:

"This election will decide whether Michigan supports a war on thugs and drug peddlers or whether Lansing is run by those who soft-pedal the need to be hard on crime."

But our informant pointed out that it was the state Senate headed by Majority Leader Engler that had blocked passage of the renewal of the utility tax that Detroit needs to avoid the layoff of 1,000 Detroit policemen.

"So," he concludes, "doesn't that lack of action make Engler and the GOP Senate the people who, in Bush's own words, 'softpedal the need to be hard on crime?"

Our informant has a point, even though he's putting a Democratic spin on a Republican affair.

The GOP rebuttal is that Republican senators felt a fair exchange for their support of the Detroit measure would have been Democratic agreement to reform the state's inheritance tax and reduce property taxes. When the Democrats would not accept the GOP proposal, the GOP Senate refused to budge on the utility tax renewal.

While the GOP rebuttal has some validity, we think the president was off the mark in suggesting that either party in Michigan is soft on crime.

New library

To the Editor: For the past 3-1/2 years, I have been an observer of Grosse Pointe's quest for a new library. In 1987, voters rejected the expansion on the library on the present site. After two years of work by a concerned group of more than 100 citizens, the present plan was adopted by the board of education.

There should be no question about our need for a new library facility that inclues 21st century technology. Communities considered our peers have accepted the challenge and built new libraries.

The vote April 2 by the Grosse Pointe Farms Council rejecting the site plan leaves the children of Grosse Pointe without the necessary resources to learn technologies that they will need in the upcoming century.

It might appear to some that the Grosse Pointes are in favor of the concept of a new library but are unable to implement a plan. This latest chapter in part is a vote against the need of children: children who have no recourse to the ballot box, but are pawns in a struggle over which they have no control.

Library site To the Editor:

Your editorial of April 5, "Farms Bows to Nimbys", was both sad and concerning. It's always easiest to say one's problems or failures are the result of others, in this case Nimbys, as you so rancorously refer to those who don't agree with you. The editorial was divisive, and although that tactic plays well in Detroit, I find it's use here sad.

It was also concerning because of its inaccurate reporting of the issues. The citizens at the hearing were not against Grosse Pointe, progress or the future as you profess. The majority were neither anti-library nor Brownell site. What we were against, however, was poor site planning and poor building design. It was the problems associated with the site plan that were at issue, nothing else.

Mssrs. Frey and Meintjes, homeowners in the adjacent neighborhood, presented an alternative plan on the same site which responded to the major citizen concerns of child safety and adverse impact to the neighborhood. The proposal was met with resounding applause and the library was still in our backyard.

After four years of defeat by various groups of citizens, and hundreds of thousands

The day the earth stood still

Invading aliens swoop down on New York and emit a destructive laser beam that destroys everything in sight. Godzilla swats skyscrapers, which crumble and topple onto population centers. And in a pre-dawn thermonuclear strike, it's the Russians who are responsible for the destruction.

That was the basic premise of a current television commercial promoting Earth Day. The point of the TV spot is that we, as a society, have been obsessed with the idea of someone else coming along to destroy the earth, that we have overlooked the possibility that we are the Aliens, the Godzillas and the Russians from the "evil empire."

In Walt Kelly's popular comic strip, Pogo, the character likes to repeat the phrase: "We have met the enemy and they are us."

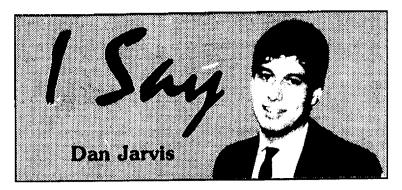

And in recent years, it has become increasingly clear that the phrase has some truth to it when applied to our systematic destruction of our earthly environment.

But rather than feel guilty, the Detroit Earth Day Action Coalition says we should stop our destruction of the earth and do something about it.

Founded 20 years ago, Earth Day will celebrate its second decade of education on Sunday, April 22.

The group's mission is to achieve an efficient and sustainable world, founded on social and environmental justice.

"Together in the next few years we will either create an undeniable force, a groundswell of popular demand for sustainable and rational resource management, or we will suffer the catastrophic consequences of our own failure to do so," is how the coalition explains the problem in its recent newsletter.

To mark its 20th birthday, the coalition has planned events thoughout April including an April 14 Earth Day Exposition at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial. The exposition is being held from 10 a.m. until 4 p.m. and is sponsored by several members of Grosse Pointe Citizens for Recycling.

Leah Vartanian, vice president for the Grosse Pointe Citizens for Recycling, said the exposition will feature about 35 informational exhibits by various environmental organizations, including the Citizens for Recycling, Greenpeace, the Sierra Club and the Audubon Society.

Featured at the exposition will be Audubon author Michael Cohen, (How Nature Lurks Reconnecting with Nature). Cohen will discuss his book and how children can get involved in environmental issues. And for the kids, the expo will feature the Easter Bunny, a clown, balloons and face painting.

Vartanian is working with local schools and hopes to feature environmental posters by Grosse Pointe students at the Expo.

"It's so important for people to understand what's going on," Vartanian said. "It's wonderful to get involved in recycling, but there is so much more to be done."

The Earth Day planners say a change is needed on a local and national level to offset toxic environmental pollution. Indeed, part of the coalition's mission statement calls on people to get involved in recycling and to voice opposition to wasteful practices and chemical contamination.

As stated, people "want and deserve clean air and water that supports life instead of making us sick; these are necessities, not luxuries."

The coalition points a finger at wasteful military spending and manufacturing-based discharge as two of the ills society must cure in the next decade.

Others are pressuring manufacturers to create new forms of biodegradable packaging to reduce the waste stream.

Local involvement, however, is the key to local benefits, according to the coalition. "Think globally and act locally," is a theme which has become a catch-phrase of the current environmental movement.

"This is our opportunity to organize a historic turning point," the coalition newsletter states.

"In the 1990s, the very survival of life as we know it on planet earth will require sweeping social change, and all change requires struggle."

As many environmentalists have noted, it is the collective "us" and not some alien monster who got us into this environmental trouble. Only through local action and national legislation can we begin to move toward a workable solution.

Tax burden?

Total tax revenue from all of Grosse Pointe Village totaled $52.27 for the year 1896, according to a ledger from that year.

The entire village, which was about the same as today's Grosse Pointe City, was officially valued at about $50,000.

Oliver Rivard, who owned a half-acre of property, paid a twocent village tax bill. George Rivard paid a six cent tax for his four acres of Grosse Pointe property. One of the biggest local landholders, Joseph H. Berry, who owned a 57-acre estate, ccughed up a whopping $2.40 for village taxes.

of dollars in design fees, it's time to take a hard look at the proposals coming from the school board and their architects, Osler-Milling; stop whining about concerned citizens and start addressing their concerns. Try as you will, we're not going away. Grosse Pointe is filled with educated, involved people. We value the safety of our children, property values, schools and quality of life. When you adversely affect any one of those, expect a reaction. Don't expect us to believe summer traffic projections based on counts done in February or give us Band-aid solutions to problems inherent in an ill- conceived design and site plan. Listen to our concerns and legitimately address them.

The library may end up on the Brownell site — that depends on what the school board proposes next. But if it does, we'll make sure it's done right, of that you may be assured.

Library is inadequate

To the Editor:

I was going to write a letter to the Grosse Pointe News giving my reaction to the meeting in which the Farms council rejected the board of education's plan to build a library on the Brownell site.

Now that I have read the editorial in which you expressed by own view of the matter, there is no need for my letter. Nevertheless, I want to register my admiration for the forthright stand which you took and also to congratulate publicly council members Danaher and Kaess for not allowing noisy local opposition to cloud the essential issue, that the current Grosse Pointe library facilities are inadequate and that four years of serious professional work on the problem have led to the conclusion that Brownell is the only available site which meets the criteria. (I differ from you in thinking that the board will start again on another plan, for it appears that there are no other possibilities.)

Let me only reiterate the fallacy of the truly remarkable opinion expressed from the floor at the meeting, that a library does not belong in a residential neighborhood. How could there be any more appropriate site for a library than next to a school — the two together offering what is most essential to education and the life of the mind.

E.H. Ferguson Grosse Pointe Farms

Library To the Editor: Community opposition to the Brownell field library site plan and the Farms council's decision against the proposal deserve careful consideration by the residents of Grosse Pointe. Certainly, your Opinion column under the headline "Farms Bows to Nimbys" misstates and trivializes the issues involved.

The Grosse Pointe Farms City Council vote was to disapprove the particular site plan put forth by the school board. It was not a vote on whether the Grosse Pointes need a new library, or even on the suitability of the Brownell location. They simply found that the proposal did not meet the requirements of the Farms zoning ordinance, which requires consideration of vehicle and pedestrian traffic patterns, parking and impact on the neighborhood.

Concerns about traffic, congestion and property values were raised by residents when details of the plan were first announced. The initial response of the school board, its architects and consultants was to deny these concerns, and in the end to respond with inadequate cosmetic changes. For example, the service entrance and dumpsters on the Chalfonte facade were to be replaced by a screen and garbage bags.

The proposed site plan includes a driveway on the south side of the school, with a small parking lot close to the library and adjacent to the playing fields. This would divide the school from the playing fields and be hazardous to pedestrians and students, and also lead to competition for parking between weekend users of the playing fields and library patrons. Spillover parking, given human nature, would use Chalfonte and other adjacent residential streets closer than the parking lot behind the school. The existing congestion problem on Chalfonte, during spring and summer weekend use of the playing fields, would be greatly compounded.

Again, the response to traffic objections was cosmetic; it involved a complicated plan to provide adult supervision of students, to channel traffic to different parking lots at different times by a system of gates and chains across driveways, and to control use of the fields by organizations like the Neighborhood Club at times of peak library use. The community, and the City Council, was unconvinced.

At the first meeting with the school board, residents questioned the impact of the library on neighborhood property values. The school board responded with a study of "all the libraries built in the tri-county area in the past two years," which showed no impact on residential property values. "All the libraries" turned out to be two, in Canton and Lake Orion townships, neither of which is situated in a location comparable to the Grosse Pointe site. The proposed library would be about 40 feet high, set back only 40 feet from Chalfonte. As such, it would visually dominate and dramatically alter the character of the street. It is reasonable to expect a negative impact on property values.

See LETTERS, page 8A

News

What you call "an alternative offered by a critic" is a plan which attempts to resolve the above objections by providing off-street parking convenient to the playing fields, locating the library away from Chalfonte and close to parking at the back of the school, and eliminating the driveway between the school and the fields. This alternative plan probably swayed the council's vote, for it clearly shows the inadequacies of the school board's proposal and cosmetic adjustments.

As reported in the Grosse Pointe News, the alternative plan "received strong support from the audience and from Farms Mayor Joseph Fromm." In this light, your characterization of the opposition as "Nimbys" is fatuous. In fact, the neighboring community should be commended for their willingness to propose and support alternatives.

The issue of a new central library for the Grosse Pointes has become surrounded by rhetoric and elevated to the status of motherhood and apple pie. However, the decision of the Farms council is only on a specific site plan, which they found inadequate. It is a disservice to the mayor and council members to say that they "bowed to the Nimby demand" when, in fact, they were acting in the best interests of the community at large and fulfilling their obligation as elected officials.

Keith Meintjes Grosse Pointe Farms

Bad rap

To the Editor:

Your front page property tax assessment story of March 22 was in error. It ment "shall not be increased or decreased more than $20,000." It would be nice if that were true. The reference to $20,000, however, was only made in the instructions for appealing to the Tax Tribunal Small Claims Division and is the commercial property limit for going to Small Claims.

My letter to the Woods resident, also, contrary to your article, did not say the assessment was illegal and did not say the Woods had reassessed only part of the city. Based on the letter to me from the resident, complaining about an 87 percent assessment increase, what I did say, in fact, was: "Your increase sounds illegal, especially if, as you say, the city has only reassessed part of the city.'

In fact, also, it appears that Grosse Pointe Woods did individually examine all properties and reassessed each property individually and did not apply factors to any property. So, it appears the Woods resident was incorrect and the Woods did not reassess only part of the city. I could have checked, so could the reporter and so could the resident. Instead, the normally efficient and responsive Grosse Pointe Woods city administration and council got an undeserved bad rap.

Service call To the Editor:

Grosse Pointe Alarm is reaping a windfall profit of at least $45,000 on the mandatory service call caused by Michigan Bell (re: story March 29). With 3,000 customers and a $30 charge, it is difficult to see this as anything other than an opportunity to "cash in," even if you assume that half of the service charge is needed to cover labor costs.

The service call will take less than 15 minutes, according to a company representative named Randy. He also told me the company wanted to "put some value in the call," so they would check my system's battery.

The company is undoubtedly entitled to reasonable compensation. However, customers are entitled to pay no more than reasonable cost for a service call they do not initiate. It is unseemly for Grosse Pointe Alarm to use this system modification as a profit opportunity. If you are concerned about service of this kind, I urge you to call Grosse Pointe Alarm at 884-3630 and speak to Robert Barnes, vice president.

Initially, dissatisfied customers were offered a reduced charge of $15 when they called. Apparently the volume of calls caused Grosse Pointe Alarm to eliminate this reduction. I think we should ask them to reinstate that $15 charge across the board. It is probably closer to the true cost of performing this system modification. In fact, if you have already paid the $30, ask for an adjustment on your next bill.

We're making more money per person than anywhere else in the USA, Lake Township residents learned last week.

Not only did the residents of the piece of Macomb County real estate at the tip of Grosse Pointe Shores learn of their exalted status in the USA, but so did the nation when the story was broke April 4 by our coast-to-coast newspaper, USA Today.

According to 1987 figures released by the U.S. Census Bu-• Lake Township had a per capita income of $155,486, the highest of any community in the USA.

• Grosse Pointe Township, which is the Wayne County portion of the Grosse Pointe Shores, makes $36,429 per person.

• Lake County in western central Lower Peninsula was the poorest in the state with $7,196 per capita.

• The USA's average per capita income was $11,923.

Following the USA Today story, the Grosse Pointe Shores village offices were bombarded by media inquiries wanting to know the who, what, when, where and why concerning the tiny-but-rich 'burb. They are:

• Who: 91 residents, including the few who live at the gate house at the Edsel & Eleanor Ford estate.

• What: They make more money per capita than anyone else.

• When: 1987.

• Where: at the northern end of Grosse Pointe Shores in Macomb County.

• Why: It's easy to have a higher-per-capita income when your community is made up of only 35 houses, less than 100 people and who are auto executives, lawyers, doctors and other professionals.

Being the smallest township with the biggest paychecks is something unique, but Supervisor Carl Hedeen doesn't know what all the fuss is about.

"We have no beer gardens or dance halls," said Hedeen, 78, who was the treasurer but be-

The experts, representing academia, industry and environmental organizations, will discuss a variety of topics including the Detroit incinerator, recycling, hazardous waste, ozone depletion, the rainforests, water quality, nuclear waste, acid rain, and the Clean Air Act.

Specific topics and speakers for the observance include a discussion of "Industry - What is the Ford Motor Company Doing?" by Peg Hopkins, environmental control, Ford Motor Co.; "Commun-ity Recycling," Fran Schonen-berg, Grosse Pointe Citizens for Recycling, and Terry Gurein, Detroit Department of Public Works; "Ozone Depletion," Brian Wicke, General Motors Physical Chemistry Labs; "Chernobyl: The Human and Environmental Impact," Dr. Felix Rogers, cardiologist and clinical professor, Michigan State University; and a panel discussion of the Detroit incinerator.

The program, which is free and open to the public, will include performances by the Michigan Opera Theater and live entertainment from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. on the Gullen Mall both days. Participants can also view a film of the Exxon Valdez cleanup and films provided by the Detroit Science Center.

He was one of four children in his original family, but with the adoptive family, he found himself one of a dozen. But he was quickly accepted as one of the Pangborns' nine boys and three girls.

He said one of the biggest adjustments was American food, primarily all the meat that's consumed here. Pangborn said that the typical Korean village family may have meat once a year, compared with the meatcentered meals he found in this country.

Language was the Korean native's biggest obstacle.

"I've always had a psychological fear of English," he said. As a high school student, he wanted to be an engineer, but his grandfather told him he would need to know English really well to be an engineer. He then decided to be a lawyer, but when he learned he'd need to know even more English to go into law, he dropped that idea.

"My conclusion was I'm going to be a bum," Pangborn recalled. He said he first told his high school art teacher that he was going to be a bum, but she wouldn't hear of it. He said he then went to approach his father his decision that he wasn't going to go to college.

When he came out of the meeting with his father, Pangborn remembers thinking that he left with the brilliant idea of going to art school. So he applied to three art schools in Chicago because, Pangborn jokes, he was impressed with the city that was home of Elliott Ness and "The Untouchables.'

He chose the Chicago Academy of Fine Arts because it was the first school to respond to his inquiries. After four years of school and a five-year apprenticeship with well-known Chicago designer Ed Jaster, he was ready to embark on his own career.

While in Chicago, Pangborn met his future wife who lived in the same apartment complex as

After the apprenticeship in Chicago, Pangborn returned to Michigan, but not intentionally. "We wanted to go to California, but we only made it as far as Detroit," he said. In 1978, Delia Pangborn, a medical technologist, was offered a job at a downriver Detroit hos-the "black plague." In addition to time spent in the Oberammergau area with first class seats at the play, the 10-day tour also includes visits to Munich, Salzburg, Innsbruck, St. Moritz, Liechtenstein, Lucerne, Interlaken, Thun, Berne, Rothenburg, Heidelberg and Ruedesheim.

pital. The stay in the Detroit area was only supposed to be for a year and the Pangborns were to go on to the West Coast.

Today, the Pangborns are active in their Grosse Pointe Shores community and run a highly respected corporate communications/graphics design business with offices in Detroit, Chicago and Tokyo.

"The irony of the whole thing," Pangborn said, "is that I was avoiding English and I end up smack dab in the middle of the communications, tisiness." Another irony is that while the Korean native, rejected, careers in engineering and law because of his perceived weakness in mastering the English language, he now finds himself working out international contracts and using high tech computer systems that could intimidate any engineering graduate.

So he returned to the Detroit area, taught for awhile at the Center for Creative Studies and formed a partnership with Rick Herman. In 1983, the partners went their own ways, and Pangborn Design Ltd. was created.

Originally located in the Marquette Building downtown, the company outgrew its accommodations. A few years ago, Pangborn made a bold decision to renovate a "war-torn" warehouse in the now-popular Rivertown district on Jefferson.

When Pangborn bought the brick building at 275 Iron St., it was vandalized and even the roof had gaping holes. Today its cream-colored exterior with glass-block windows is a jewel among the dilapidated surroundings, and the interior is flooded by sunlight.

Pangborn's client list indicates that he is among the top companies in corporate communica-tions media. He has done work for Ameritech, Chrysler, Gale Research, General Motors, MichCon, Michigan National, Rockwell International and the Taubman Co., just to name a few.

He has also done work for Children's Home of Detroit, Children's Hospital, Detroit Institute of Arts, Metropolitan Detroit Convention and Visitors Bureau and the Museum of African and American History.

Pangborn Design creates graphics and copy for promotional materials, annual reports and other business publications. The company also designs packaging

Having a Detroit company with the capability of Pangborn's can be beneficial to local firms. Michigan National, for example, dropped a New York company in favor of Pangborn for its annual report, which saved the banking company a lot of travel expenses. Although Pangborn has a $250,000 computer that can draw, paint, rotate and do miracles with graphics, most of the art work is still done by hand, said Pangborn, who would love to do more painting himself if he had the time. He said his normal day starts at 5 a.m. and ends at 1 or 1:30 a.m.

He has found time to do work for non-profit groups and for the Shores as member of the Grosse Pointe Shores Improvement Foundation. At the recent foundation fundraiser, a Pangborn print was awarded to top donors.

Woods residents who dock boats in the Lake Front Park marina gave a dry response when asked to shell out money for a St. Clair Shores marine patrol craft to watch over the marina and adjacent shoreline.

The marine patrol was proposed by Fred Marengo, an inspector with the St. Clair Shores Police Department.

Marengo claims the patrol is needed to curb a projected crime increase in shoreline areas due to the recent completion of the I-696 expressway and the resulting anticipated increase in traffic.

The inspector is asking Woods officials to charge each Woods boat owner between $15 and $20 to offset the cost to St. Clair Shores of patroling the area. The Woods Lake Front Park is located in St. Clair Shores.

So far, response from Woods officials and residents has been negative.

Following a mid-March meeting of the Woods Citizens' Recreation Commission, where the proposal was aired, several residents have expressed their dismay.

Complaints center not on the patrol, but on how the project would be funded.

Donald Hallman, director of the Woods Parks and Recreation Department, said if the plan is approved, fees would be assessed against boaters in commercial marinas in St. Clair Shores and Lake Front Park, but not against lakefront property owners in St. Clair Shores.

Hallman said the proposal, however, includes regular patrols of and responses to private properties along the shoreline.

"The proposal is totally unacceptable and should be considered as an unfair 'tax' against Grosse Pointe Woods," a group of concerned Woods residents wrote in a letter to St. Clair Shores.

The residents say the proposal should be rejected for several reasons, including:

• Lake St. Clair currently has several patrol boats including those of the U.S. Coast Guard, Macomb County Sheriff, local police, U.S. Power Squadron and the Michigan Department of Natural Resources.

• Patrol boats could be a hindrance to Woods boaters because of delays for safety checks and safety equipment.

The residents concluded that "to prevent this unneeded service and this unfair tax as well as to avoid taxation without representation, it is recommended that this proposal be put to a vote to allow all Grosse Pointe Woods Lake Front Park dock holders a voice."

The letter is signed "Concerned GPW Residents."

The Citizens' Recreation Commission minutes from the March 13 meeting state, "The general consensus of the Recreation Commission was that this activity would prove to be of little, if any, value to the residents of Grosse Pointe Woods who moor their watercraft within the Lake Front Park.'

Last summer there were 134 for tickets issued for improper breaking and enterings and larcenies from boats and 226 other crimes and calls for service at the marina areas, according to police reports.

Marengo anticipates a major increase in all categories of marine violations, including wake laws, safety violations, jet skis, operating under the influence of alcohol or drugs and violations of the public peace.

With the proposed patrol, Marengo projects a 10 percent reduction in B & E and larceny complaints during the boating season.

Total cost for the first year is estimated at about $101,000. Revenues from violations and boater fees for the same period at its April 16 meeting, Woods are estimated at about $58,000.

The proposal received several letters of support from commercial marina owners and local law enforcement officials, including Macomb County Sheriff William Hackel, who said safety concerns can best be addressed by a locally run marine patrol.

April 12, 1990

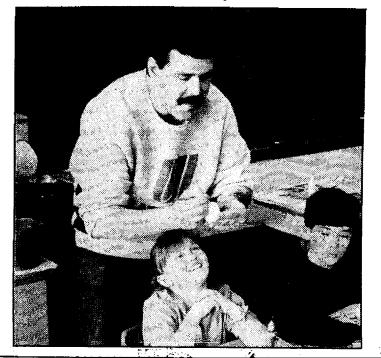

Grosse Pointe News

Hallman said the Macomb County sheriff can no longer afford to place marine patrols in the area and is therefore being subsidized by the Michigan DNR. He said that St. Clair Shores officials should approach the DNR for similar funding subsidies.

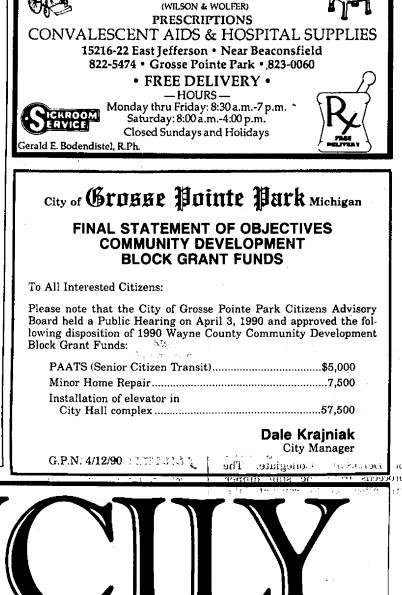

The Grosse Pointe Woods City Council may discuss the matter officials said.

One such area is the original Farms village core along Moross and Kerby roads.

Many institutional structures were deemed significant as well: St. Paul Catholic Church, Christ Church, Grosse Pointe Memorial Church, the Farms waterworks building, Cottage Hospital and the War Memorial.

For history buffs, the survey also includes histories of the economic, educational, political, architectural and social histories of the Farms from the early ribbon farms to 1940, the survey's cutoff date.

One interesting tidbit of historical trivia in the report is that on Nov. 3, 1913, the Farms council officially named "Lake Shore Road." But over the years numerous spellings have been adopted, and even today the Farms' official zoning map "incorrectly" lists the road as "Lakeshore Drive."

The survey concludes that the loss of historically and architecturally significant structures in the city of Grosse Pointe Farms has been proceeding at a steady rate, particularly along Lakeshore.

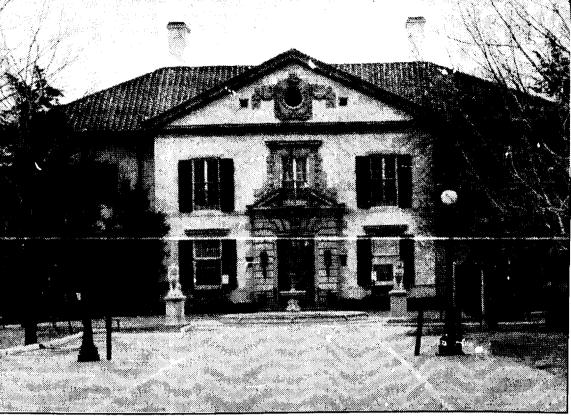

The study's authors urge two steps be immediately taken. First, new sources of historical information, primarily oral history sources, should be pursued. And, second, National Register

Woods brothers get three years in prison for cocaine trafficking

By John Minnis Assistant Editor

16A

The two Grosse Pointe Woods brothers busted for cocaine trafficking a year ago will have their mail forwarded to a state penitentiary for the next several years.

George A. Scandalis, 31, was sentenced March 30 to between 3 1/3 and 20 years in prison for possession with intent to deliver between 50 and 224 grams of cocaine. John J. Scandalis, 22, was sentenced to three years in prison for delivery of between 50 and 224 grams of cocaine.

The minimum sentence for the felony offenses against both the brothers was five years in prison.

According to John Scandalis' attorney, Stephen T. Rabaut, the sentencing judge has the authority to give less than the required minimum sentence if there are substantial and compelling reasons for doing so.

He said his client did not have a criminal record prior to last March when he was arrested, and has a promising career in auto-body design. He said it was evident that his client was unlikely to commit such a crime again.

Apparently Macomb County Circuit Judge Frederick D. Balkwill agreed and gave the lessthan-minimum sentences to both the Scandalises.

George Scandalis, who also had no prior criminal record, was sentenced to at least 40 months in prison. His attorney, John Scavone, could not be reached for comment.

On March 22, 1989, John Scandalis sold cocaine to an undercover agent of the County of Macomb Enforcement Team, a multi-jurisdiction task force known as COMET. On the following day, the home of George Scandalis on Blairmoor in the Woods was searched.

Found in the home were four ounces of cocaine (roughly 114 grams), a scale used to weigh drugs and a substance used by cocaine traffickers to increase the volume of the powder.

George Scandalis was charged with conspiracy to deliver less than 225 grams of cocaine and possession with intent to deliver less than 225 grams of cocaine both five- to 20-year felonies.

As part of a plea agreement, George Scandalis pleaded guilty to the possession charge, and the conspiracy charge was dismissed at sentencing.

John Scandalis was charged with delivering less than 50 grams of cocaine, delivering less than 225 grams of cocaine and at 7:30 p.m. to hear the following:

1. The appeal of Mr. & Mrs. Peter Wong, owners of the premises lo-cated at 334 Stephens, from the denial of the building Department to issue a Building Permit for the construction of an addition to the rear of their existing dwelling located at the foregoing address. Such permit issuance was denied for reason that:

a. The residence located on the foregoing premises is non-con-forming for reason that it is in violation of the rear yard provision of Article XIII Section 1300 of the City's Zoning Ordinance, and in accordance with the provisions of Article XV, Section 1502, Item 4-A of the City's Zoning Ordinance, no such structure may be enlarged or structurally altered unless a variance is granted.

b. The proposed addition on the rear would further infringe upon the minimum rear yard requirements of 30 feet leaving a rear yard of 28 feet thereby requiring a variance from the provisions of Article XIII, Section 1300, of the City's Zoning Ordinance.

2. The appeal of Mr. Roney, owner of the premises located at 327 McMillan, from the denial of the Building Department to issue a Building permit for the construction of an addition to the side of his existing dwelling located at the foregoing address. Such permit isconspiracy to deliver less than 225 grams of cocaine. All were maximum 20-year felonies.

He pleaded guilty to delivery of less than 225 grams of cocaine, and the other charges were dismissed.

Following the arrests, George Scandalis quickly put his Blairmoor house up for sale. The house sold for $180,000, and the Wayne County prosecutor's office sued to get the proceeds of the sale forfeited as a drug seizure case. The prosecutor was successful and Scandalis had to turn over his profit of $68,919.87 to the county.

Both the Scandalises are now serving their sentences.

'Ernest Goes to Jail' — Know what I mean?

By Michael Chapp Special Writer

His big, ugly, very distinct face shows up when you least expect. And where you least expect. One minute, you're sitting in the living room, being lulled into a daze by the television. The next, you're jarred awake by . . . ERNEST P. WORREL. Know what I mean?

This is the guy who sticks his face right up into the camera and talks to a fictitious friend named Vern. This is the guy whose entire wardrobe consists of blue jeans, T-shirt, jean vest and baseball cap. And this is the guy who thinks "normal" means bathing in an industrial strength washing machine.

Not that this isn't a guy we could grow to like. His commercials are about as pleasant as a root canal, but on the big screen, he's actually almost bearable.

This isn't Ernest's first visit to feature films, but it is surely his best. In "Ernest Goes To Jail," Ernest ... well, he goes to jail. Why? Mostly because this poor guy has worse luck than a mouse who stumbles into a cat convention.

Whatever can go wrong for this guy will. The carpet cleaning machine at work is a cunning enemy, just waiting to take janitor Ernest for the ride of his life. Jury duty becomes an exercise in stupidity, when through an unlikely series of events Ernest suddenly finds himself in prison, with the jailbird bad guy out in the free world, living Ernest's life.

Ernest, you see, bears a striking resemblance to the bad guy. And that sets up any number of amusing situations.

Consider Ernest, the quintessential simpleton, trying to explain the misunderstanding that landed him in jail. Consider him trying to play the tough guy in prison, so he doesn't get himself ĥurt.

The situations in this picture run from exceedingly hilarious.such as when a pen breaks in Ernest's mouth - to only mildly funny, like the film's overdone climactic battle scene.

The humor in the picture is mostly the type that appeals to younger viewers, especially preadolescents. But make no mistake, adults will find plenty to amuse them here. Ernest is one of the most original, physical comedians to play the big screen since Pee Wee Herman. There are a lot of similarities between them.

Viewers heading into "Jail" would do well to lower their defenses - and maybe their standards a little bit, too - and just be ready to enjoy themselves.

'Little Shop of Horrors' is offering at dinner theater

"Little Shop of Horrors," the off-Broadway musical comedy smash, is the dinner theater season finale by Dennis Wickline Productions at the Golden Lion Restaurant.

Opening Friday, April 20, and running Friday and Saturday evenings through Saturday, May 26, this successful musical was recently named one of the 10 most important theatrical productions of the '80s, by Theatre Week magazine.

The comedy is based on the Roger Corman film of the same name from the late '50s, which launched Jack Nicholson's motion picture career. The story revolves around Mushnik's flower shop on Skid Row.

Seymour Krelborn, Mr. Mushkin's stock boy, finds a "strange and unusual plant" one day, and the plant suddenly attracts customers and financial success to the little failing flower shop. Audrey II, the "strange and ungigantic proportions, and its feeding habits are the subject of most of Act II. The plant keeps exclaiming, "Feed Me!" and Sevmour obliges. What it eats, and how it eats provide for some very tense and amusing moments.

Three female singers, in the tradition of The Chiffons, The Supremes, and the Ronettes provide musical narration and entertaining asides. Appearing in the cast at the Golden Lion is Timothy P. Higgins as Seymour Krelborn. Judith Gieseking, local professional actress, will portray Audrey, another of Mr. Mushnik's flower shop employees and Seymour's lady love.

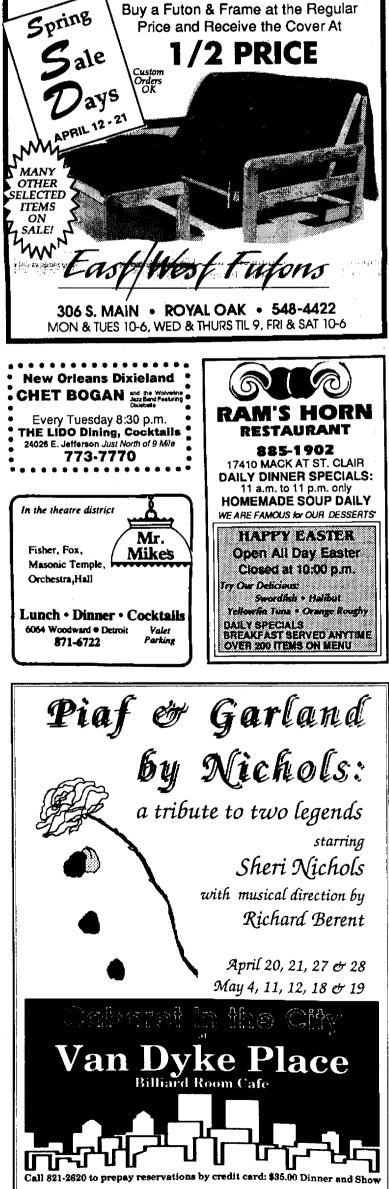

Dennis Wickline, producer of all shows at the Golden Lion, will portray Mr. Mushnik. David Clayton, a professional musician and entertainer, will portray Orin Scrivello, Audrey's motorcycle-riding dentist boyfriend.

usual plant," begins to grow to Clayton will also portray other walk-on parts throughout the production, and is the show's musical director. Joe DiCresci will provide the puppet manipulation and voice for the many growing versions of Audrey II.

The trio of female singers will be played by Holly Hellsten, Sandra Aldridge, and Suzanne Marie Hillman.

The production is under the direction of Denyse Clayton. Price for the evening is $22.95 which includes dinner, show, tax and gratuity. Cocktails begin at 7 p.m., dinner is at 7:30 p.m. with the show following dessert. The Golden Lion Restaurant is located at 22380 Moross, near Mack, in Detroit across from St. John Hospital. Group rates and performances are available. Special senior citizen group rates are available for Friday performances only. For further informaton and reservations, call 886-2420.

Musical Theater is a hit

In Room 108 at University Liggett School, if the walls could talk, they would sing. That's because the walls in the sunny, open arts wing room hold the product of months of student art work in the form of "Musical Theater," a permanent ULS art show. Under the direction of art instructor Ellen Renick Durnad, ULS art students created reproductions of posters advertising such popular musical theater as "Les Miserables," "Fiddler on the Roof," and "Phantom of the Opera." The artists include, front row from left sophomores Gary Whitaker and Fred Leisen and back row from left senior Carrie Carpenter and sophomore Cara Stackpoole. Leisen, Carpenter and Stackpoole are Grosse Pointe residents; Whitaker is from Detroit. Leisen studies at ULS on a Ross Roy and Sally Memorial Arts Scholarship, which was awarded to him on the basis of his academic record and arts talent.

Audrey II, the plant that grows, terrorizes "Little Shop of Horrors." Judith Gieseking of Grosse Pointe is inside the plant and Timothy P. Higgins as Seymour tries to help.

'Nuns on the Run' is irreverent comedy

By Marian Trainor Special Writer

"Nuns on the Run" is an outrageous farce, blatantly irreverent, definitely English in concept, with enough funny situations to make it entertaining.

At the same time that you're laughing, however, you have a rather uneasy feeling that perhaps you shouldn't be. Perhaps you should be outraged that such liberties have been taken with convent life.

However Eric Idle of the Monty Python troupe and Robbie Coltrane ("Eat the Rich") manage to dispel our qualms and accept what otherwise might have been offensive in the spirit in which it is presented.

In the film, Idle plays Brian Hope and Coltrane is Charlie McManus, a pair of small-time London hoods. When we first meet them, they are plotting how they can break loose from the tentacles of the kingpin of London bank thieves, Case Casey (Robert Patterson), who makes sure that any member of his group who defects has an appropriate funeral.

When Brian and Charlie find themselves in possession of two suitcases that contain 50,000 pounds in laundered drug money that isn't theirs, they decide to brave the odds and escape to South America. Instead, they become the two most wanted men in London – wanted that is, by two sets of thugs.

One set is led by Case, their former boss, and the other set is a group of Asian goons, both of whom are determined to terminate them and seize the loot. Concerned by both at the same time, the two seek sanctuary in the nearest building which happens to be St. Joseph's College, an institution for well-bred young women run by the Missionary Brides of Christ.

ing with knives to carve them up, and another is armed with guns ready to shoot them full of holes; or, they can grab an outfit from the clothesline, dress up as nuns and try to pass themselves off as visitors from another convent.

Charlie, who is Catholic, has no trouble with the various garments. Brian, who is not, has no idea of what the well-dressed nun wears, but with Charlie's help manages to make a credible. good-looking nun, perhaps too good-looking as it turns out.

Fully garbed, the two, clutching the two suitcases, make their way into the foyer where they are stopped by a tiny, cranky very old nun. Charlie introduces himself as Sister Inviolata of the Immaculate Conception and Brian squeaks out that he is Sister Euphemma of the Five Wounds.

Charlie fares better. He is assigned to coach the girls' basket-ball team. The girls love him. He's good-natured and a whiz on the basketball court. They even invite him to one of their midnight soirees where he again wins points dancing up a storm. One of the funnier scenes comes out of his situation as we watch him sweating in the girl's locker room, trying not to ogle the girls as they walk to and from the showers.

There are numerous twists and turns to the plot that contribute to its humor.

Cochrane is genuinely funny as the big, beefy, good-natured Sister Inviolata. Idle, who strongly resembles Gene Wilder with his mild manner and questioning air, gives his best performance since the Monty Python roles. Janet Suzman, well known in England both on stage and screen, is delightful as the Mother Superior.

It is probable that "Nuns on the Run" will be judged by two schools of thought. One will take offense at the portrayal of religious life. The other will take Not impressed, she passes the view that it's all in fun and Oversized black sport jackets reveal huge white shirts that hang to the knees of teenagers everywhere. Their kooky hats rise up to reveal a single vintage earring from the 1930s. And hanging silk scarves brush against tweed slacks that their grandfather may have saved his pennies to buy after the "war to end all wars.'

For teens, the vintage look is nothing new. But lately vintage clothiers say the wares of yesteryear are adorning free spirited dressers from 2 to 62. It all depends on where you look.

At Gypsy's on Kercheval in Grosse Pointe Park, owner Mildred Leichhardt-Oyama said the vintage clothing trend for teens has been firmly entrenched for more than a decade.

But lately, she said, eight out of 10 buyers are long past their teenage years. Most of them, she said, are there to pick up a costume for a theater play or theme party.

"I dress several entertainers," she said. "I work with all of the local universities and high schools when they need costuming.'

But it is not just a love for the stage and bright lights that brings them in. For many fabricconscious consumers, it's the natural cottons, silks and woolens that attract the post-teenage set.

"My buyers are more brave than trendy," she said. "They are individuals. In a fashion sense, they are independent dressers.

"Mostly, the people who buy vintage clothing want to look back to less hectic times," Leichhardt-Oyama said.

For the 40 and older crowd, this can mean a circa 1930s silk brocade smoking jacket or a British twill suit. For the 30 and under set, peace signs, bell bottoms, tie-dyed shirts and frayed suede jackets may do the trick.

But the largest crowds in vintage clothing shops of late are in the hat departments, Leichhardt-Ovama said

"Hats are the No. 1 seller hands down," she said.

She credits the regal Princess Diana for the comeback of the though entertainers like cap, U2's Bono and Madonna have added fuel to the hat craze.

For men, fedoras and berets are in. For women, wide-brim Gibson girl hats and cocktail hats are selling well. Many of the women, however, prefer sport hats designed for their male counterparts.

Vintage clothiers have noticed a sharp increase in demand for bridal gowns.

"The look in bridal gowns is soft and very feminine," Leich-hardt-Oyama said. "They like a traditional look with fine lace and silk. The same is true in the formal gowns. The same dress I sold 10 years ago for a '50s party, they are buying now for a high school prom.'

And with all the outfits, accessories are the rage.

'For every hat I sell," she said, "I sell a pair of dress gloves, a vintage handbag or some costume jewelry.

"Vintage brooches are the biggest seller in jewelry," she said. You hardly see a woman dressed up without one."

Accessories for the guys include suspenders and bow ties. Besides men's accessories, the hottest sellers for years have been old leather jackets and colorful bowling and Hawaiian shirts.

Summing up the adult-based vintage craze, Leichhardt-Oyama said, "In practical terms, there is a movement toward quality and longevity in fabrics and clothing. People who years ago would have been stigmatized for wearing the vintage look can now be seen every day."

For the 8-and-under set, (who generally don't go shopping by themselves) the vintage look has always been popular with buying mothers, so says Mary Parsigian, owner of Cricket's Corner on Mack in Grosse Pointe Woods.

"The trend in children's clothing is now toward dressing for special events," Parsigian said. There is a movement toward a Victorian look.'

The reason for the jump back to vintage fashions for children is because fabrics have jumped ahead, she said.

Fabrics that itched the youth of Victorian England have been thrown to the wayside and have been replaced with comfortable

Girls can be seen in a blouson top with large cream embroidered collar and full skirt accented with hunter green bows.

"I can't keep these outfits on the shelves, because people keep buying them up." Parsigian said.

Marlaine Washington, Cricket Corner's manager, said traditional boys' suits like the Eton, with short pants, no lapel and double patch pockets, is always a favorite.

"These fashions never really

"The sailor look has always been a standard fashion," Washington said. Most sailor suits are white with strong contrasting stripes or anchor designs, she added.

Other popular themes in children's clothes include English riding outfits, the Annie Hall look with print vests, and the aviatormilitary look with lots of zippers and pockets.

Classic English private school uniforms with white cardigan sweaters are all the rage, especially if they are accented with official looking crests or insignias.

Young and old, male and female, the vintage fashion craze has progressed far beyond the

"Ah, yes," he said. "Actually, my car keys seem to have come off my key ring and I'm retracing my steps. But it could be almost anywhere."

I glanced at his AMC Concord and tried a couple of GM keys I had. Sometimes almost anything will open these old AMCs, but not this time. I asked if he needed a ride home, but he said no. that he had called his wife and that good woman was on her way to campus with a spare key even as we spoke.

Helpfully, I noted that I had done numerous stupid things with car keys, like the time I lost the only key to an AMC Hornet that belonged to a friend and had to call a locksmith who turned out to be a trumpet player I had met years earlier.

Or the time I absent-mindedly parked my Plymouth Barracuda in the Automotive News parking lot, got out, locked the doors, then noticed I had not only left the keys in the ignition, I had neglected to turn the engine off. It took one of my young colleagues about 20 seconds to get into the car with a coat hanger.

Or the time I got out of a Lincoln Continental to get something out of my own car, forgot that the Lincoln automatically locked the doors when the engine was running and had to walk back to the Ford Motor Co. garage and admit I had been outwitted by the car. Luckily another key was available.

Or, I admitted, like just the night before when I got out of an Oldsmobile Touring Sedan (engine still running) to mail a letter and in one of those awful lapses that happen now and then, I hit the button to lock all the doors. I returned to a friend's house to call the Grosse Pointe police with my sad tale. An unchuckled and said a car would be by in a few minutes.

In a few minutes, Public Safety Officer Art Maes showed up, also in surprisingly good humor for a snowy Sunday evening, and worked with a "Slim of the high-line European se-Jim" tool of the sort that a few years ago would open anything in seconds, but was ineffective against the 1990 Olds with its more sophisticated locking system.

"The new cars are tougher to get into, eh?" I observed. "Are car break-ins down?'

"No, they just break the window now," the officer said. "But yes, they are a lot harder to get into." If you stupidly lock yourself out and don't want to break the window, I added mentally.

. . . and Ladies of the Club School of Government Inc. marks its golden anniversary

By Margie Reins Smith Feature Editor The School of Government Inc. is not a school; not a government.

It's a women's club. Founded in 1940 by the wife of a former Michigan governor, the club has maintained its membership - kept true to its purpose - stuffed its scrapbooks with fascinating memories - for 50 years.

The group hopes to celebrate its golden anniversary this summer with no less than Barbara Bush as its speaker.

The club's founder, Clara Brucker, could hardly be called a women's libber. But she was definitely ahead of her time, said Renee Brucker, the club's current second vice president and granddaughter-in-law of the founder. Renee Brucker has been a member of the group for three years. Her mother-inlaw, Doris Brucker of Grosse Pointe Farms, and her sister-in-law, Sandy Brucker, are also members.

"Clara was before her time in promoting the education of women. She used her position (first as wife of the governor; and later as wife of the Secretary of the Army under President Dwight D. Eisenhower) to further the education of other women."

The School of Government was created to teach women the art of politics and was devoted — still is devoted — to the study of government theory and practice. It seeks to present topical, government-oriented programs designed to inform members about current issues pertaining to local, national and world affairs.

"Clara had connections and access to all sorts of distinguished speakers," said Catharine McMullen, past president, current publicity chairman and keeper of the archives for the School of Government. Mc-Mullen has been a member of the club since 1972. She knew Clara Brucker personally and speaks of the club's founder with unabashed reverence and respect.

For the first few decades of its existence. club members funneled their energies into mock Republican conventions which they staged every four years: in 1940, 1944, 1948 and 1952. The elaborate events were designed to teach the women how real conventions were run. They were staged in elaborate detail, complete with delegates, signs, slogans, bands, noisemakers, speeches, outlandish costumes and a keynote speaker.

In 1948, they nominated Mrs. Henry Ford, (whom they referred to as the "dark horse" candidate) to run for president of the United States.

According to a 1948 newspaper article, the nominating speaker said, "It's high time a woman was elected president of the United States - to keep us out of war."

The mock conventions ceased in the '50s and the School of Government became primarily concerned with engaging prominent speakers for membership meetings. The club maintained its purpose of informing and educating its members about important local, state, national and world problems.

"Clara Brucker wanted the group to stick to its original purpose," said McMullen.

"She declined to get involved in fundraising and other issues."

McMullen is in charge of preserving and updating three scrapbooks stuffed with mementos of the School of Government's 50 years: memorabilia-like photos of board members, photos and texts from prominent speakers, invitations to teas, noisemakers from mock conventions, and pages and pages of newspaper clippings from the Detroit Free Press, the Detroit Times, the Detroit News, the Grosse Pointe News and other suburban papers. The School of Government has gotten a lot of press in the last half century.

According to McMullen, some of the most memorable speakers were: Madame Tolstoy, Madame Chiang Kai-Shek, General Maxwell Taylor, Gov. George Romney, Sen. Margaret Chase Smith, Jerry Hodak, James Bannon, Lt. Gov. James H. Brickley, Joe Stroud, Edward McNamara, L. Brooks Patterson, Diane Edgecomb, Tom Barrow, David Lawrence Jr., Dorothy Comstock Filey and Richard Austin.

Topics addressed by these speakers have included a variety of educational subjects: "Newspapers: Where are they going?" "Communicable Diseases and AIDS," "Im-portant Matters for Wayne County," "Help-ing Strangers Become Americans," "Who's Who in American Investments," "What is Going on in Education?" "Punishment to Fit the Crime," and "Mail Fraud and How Not to be a Victim" were a few.

The group is about 200 members strong. Brucker said members range in age from the late 20s to 101 years old. Most are in their 50s, 60s and 70s; a few are in their 80s, according to McMullen. "Many of the older women knew Clara," she said. Clara Brucker died in 1980.

Ninety-eight percent of the women are college educated. Although the original group, in the 1940s, was probably mostly Republicans, today the group is a mixture of Democrats and Republicans. There are no male members, but many men attend with their wives or as guests.

Renee Brucker said the School of Government is actively seeking new younger members to carry on the tradition of learning about government.

"It's with great hope and determination that we can carry on the fundamental plans that Clara had — to bring the best speakers possible and to continue the camaraderie." McMullen said. "The strength of Clara's spirit is still there. It's a great heritage that Clara left us - that of respecting the knowledge of real issues; of seeing both sides; of making a decision; and of acting upon it.

"It's important for women's voices to be heard; for letters to be written in support of issues we believe in."

The School of Government meets on the fourth Wednesday of each month, September through April. It usually meets at a private club, alternating from the east to the west side of Detroit.

"Here's the best part," said Renee Brucker. "Dues are $10 a year."

The club is planning several events to celebrate its first half century. The members have already had a luncheon. They'll have a party during the summer and they're beginning plans for a trip to Selfridge Field in September to which Barbara Bush will be invited as the speaker.

The next monthly meeting will be at noon on Wednesday, April 25, at the Country Club of Detroit.

Anyone who wishes to be a member of the School of Government should call membership chairman Sally Kinnetz at 399-1698, or come to the April 25 meeting. Call Kinnetz first to make a reservation.

Catharine McMullen is a former president of the School of Government. She is organizing and maintaining the club's half-century of memorabilia.

The Pastor's Corner The Lord has need of you

By Rev. Jack L. Mannschreck Grosse Pointe United Methodist Church

A young family went to the county fair one fine afternoon. As soon as they crossed the entry gate, the young son of the family, obviously remembering a ride from a previous visit, started to whine, "I want to go to the Jesus ride, I want to go to the Jesus ride."

The disgruntled parents finally instructed him to lead the way. The young man weaved through all the rest of the rides with their blinking lights, bells and buzzers. Eventually the boy turned a corner and stopped. His parents, upon catching up to the excited lad, smiled at each other as they looked up at a painted sign, "Pony Ride, 50 cents for a half hour.'

The young man remembered his Sunday school class when his teacher taught the lesson of Jesus' final entry into Jerusalem.

There may be peril if one pushed the comparison of Jesus' triumphant ride into Jerusalem to the pony ride going round and round in a slow moving circle. The fact is that we never seem to tire of hearing the endless cycle of stories about Christ and his followers. Each year we gather on Palm Sunday to hear again the story of Christ's humble entry into the Holy City.

I've been looking for a fresh image for the Palm Sunday processional - something to bring the story of life in this final decade of the twentieth century. With Batman, Gameboy, lap top computers, fax machines, car phones, Sega Power, and teenage mutant ninja turtles, it is difficult to make the pony ride look exciting.

What we need to realize is that Jesus' ride into Jerusalem was none other than a demonstration, a march. The point of the demonstration was God's claim on every human heart made through Jesus Christ. In commandeering the donkey and the colt, Jesus instructed the disciples to say, "The Lord has need of them."

The message for us today is that the Lord has need of us. We need to stop talking about the body of Christ and start being the body of Christ.

May God bless you in the events of this Holy Week and may we be truly thankful for the claim that Jesus makes upon each of our lives at the cost of his own life.

Soviets say 'da' to Rotary Club

Grosse Pointe Rotary President John Brooks announced that the groundwork has been laid for a Rotary Club in Russia.

Rotary International and the Soviet government have reached agreement on forming a provisional Rotary club in Moscow, the first-ever in the Soviet Union.

The decision makes Rotary the world's first service club association with a club in Russia. "Rotary is taking part in a movement of history," said Hugh Archer, president of Rotary International. "In the U.S.S.R., there is an intense interest in Rotary. We wanted the government's approval to form the first Soviet Rotary club in Moscow itself so that we are not perceived as a provocateur or a destabilizing influence."

Russia will be the 168th and largest country with a Rotary club. Other clubs are expected to be formed in Kiev, Leningrad and Irkutsk, as well as in Estonia and Latvia.

A nucleus of about 25 businesses and professional Muscovites have held regular informal meetings for the past six months, awaiting the outcome of discussions between the Soviet government and Rotary International officials.

The Russian group, aged be-tween 30 and 50, includes two lawyers, three businessmen, one of whom has business connections with a company in Arkansas, a theater manager and the head of a professional translation service.

A call for ethics education

By Marlys Dee Craig Special Writer

This article is Part I of a 3part series dealing with ethical decision-making and technology. Our technology is racing far ahead of our effort to decide how to put it to use. The pile of changes brought about by technology began a million years ago but as Louis Cabot, chairman of the Brookings Institution warns, the pile has grown into an avalanche. Gunpowder, printing, medicine, chemistry, mechanical energy, electricity, ships and cars of all kinds, the atomic bomb and the computer have pulled society along from change to change.

To astound his audience further, Cabot illuminates the serious danger of brain research and genetic engineering for a society where the resources to make ethical decisions are channeled into other avenues.

The genetic code for the fruit fly has been mapped out as well as the knowledge to alter its structure. How the brain cells work has been deciphered so that its intelligence, or any other trait can be altered.

Since we already know a lot about the human brain, how will this be used someday in the future?

Will some brain-altered people be bred to be smart leaders and others bred to be dumb followers?

The thought provokes a horror. Yet - the know-how to make it a reality is not too far away.

Citizens should value how crucial a basic science knowledge can become in guarding against decision-making by a select few. Cabot uses the example of population growth in the United States and India: If the United States has a growth rate of one percent and India has a four percent growth rate, will the difference be outstanding 50 years hence?

While the difference in the rates seems small, in 50 years the population of the United Session II, "Chronic Illnesses Fession II. "Leal tools for States would grow two-thirds and Behavioral Changes," will older adults, will discuss lead three while that of India would cover information about common tools for personal autonomy and be seven times larger, producing be seven times larger, producing an increase of four billion people for India. After each session, time will be provided for questions and

Such a question could make decision-making difficult for the unprepared citizen. How many of us need more educational experience with our quantitative thinking? To think wrong about major social issues because of inadequate science knowledge hardly prepares citizens for the next step: to apply ethical principles.

Newsweek magazine, in a recent issue, warns, with ample evidence cited, that science education is on the nation's list of unmet crises. "Without more and better technical education

... future workers will be illprepared for even the most routine jobs. The United States will lack the engineering talent to compete effectively in the now global economy. Worse yet, voters won't be able to make sensible decisions about waste management or global warming or genetic experimentation or new missile systems."

What can we do?

At the grass roots level we can stop turning our children off from science and math in the elementary school. Nobel prizewinning physicist Leon Lederman said that schools take "naturally curious, natural scientists and manage to beat the curiosity right out of them."

How is this done?

The three routes to boredom are lectures, textbooks and memorization.

Exemplary programs and demonstration projects in science and math abound over the past 30 years - yet most schools teach the old way.

Parents and other adults can show a greater interest in problems and questions dealing with science when associating with children.

Television provides informative programs in science for families. Some library books dealing with scientific topics use the questioning method in science for children. A few similar books exist for adults, such as workbooks designed by Marvin Druger at Syracuse University a Ph.D. in educational gerontology from Wayne State University.

Salmon: Flavorful main dish is easy to prepare, indoors or out

Salmon has an international reputation as a gourmet food. It is a flavorful fish and usually is simply prepared. Its flesh is firm, compact and moderate to high in fat and its orange color is a result of the fish's diet of crustaceans.

The fish is born in a river, spends its adult life at sea and returns to the river to spawn or be caught. The Atlantic salmon is found on both sides of the Atlantic and was common in waters north of the Hudson River. Today it is limited to a few rivers in eastern Maine and Canada. The Pacific subtypes of salmon include Coho, Chinook, chum and red sockeye. When fully grown, salmon can weigh 25 pounds or more and may be 32 to 36 inches long. The bulk of the salmon eaten in this country now comes from the Columbia River, Puget Sound and Alaska.

There are many interesting ways to prepare salmon. James Beard, in "New Fish Cookery," suggests cooking a whole salmon on the outdoor grill on a split. Beard says. "A whole salmon revolving on a split is a pretty

Preheat oven to hot (400 degrees F.)

Roll thawed puff pastry fairly thin and large enough to wrap salmon.

Place 1 salmon fillet in center of pastry. Spread fish with filling. Top with second fillet of salmon and press edges together. Wrap pastry neatly around salmon, tucking ends in carefully. Avoid having pastry too thick at ends, but be sure it is completely sealed. Cut a few decorative slits in top of pastry to let steam escape. Brush with a little melted butter.

Place on a baking sheet in the hot oven and reduce temperature to moderate (350 degrees F.) Bake for 40 to 45 minutes and serve hot with the herb sauce on the side.

Herb sauce

Mince 2 shallots, 6 sprigs each of parsley, chervil, and tarragon.

In a saucepan, melt 2 tablespoons butter. Stir in 2 tablespoons flour and blend over low heat. Stir in 1-1/4 cups of light cream, slowly.

Stir over moderate heat until smooth. Add 1 teaspoon Dijon mustard, 1/2 teaspoon salt, and 1/8 teaspoon pepper.

gon, chives, black pepper, lemon juice, garlic, salt, cider vinegar, oil and 1/2 cup water and let the ;mixture stand, covered, for at least 2 hours and up to 12 hours. In a ceramic or glass dish large enough to hold the salmon in one layer, combine 1/2 the tomato mixture and 1/2 cup water. Add the salmon, turning it to coat well and let it marinate, covered and chilled, for 2 hours. Grill the salmon on a rack over glowing coals or broil it on the rack of a broiler pan under a preheated broiler about 4 inches from the heat, turning it once and brushing it with the marinade for 13 to 15 minutes, or until it is just cooked through.

Serve the salmon with the remaining sun-dried tomato sauce. Serves 4.

Kelly, Jones master buggy-whip softball pitch North rides Kelly's arm Jones magical for South

Rob Fulton rts Eaitor

...stead of experimenting with rbie dolls, play houses and tea rties, Kerri-Sue Kelly became oftball junkie.

And that's not all bad. Since she was 9, Kelly, who is the pitching ace for the Grosse Pointe North softball team, has attended pitching camps at Wayne State University and Central Michigan University.

^{} Pitching became as much a part of her life as Barbie dolls did for other more danty girls.

"I've been pitching since I was either 8 or 9," said Kelly, whose high school career will end in June. "I pitched at Star of the Sea and the following summer I went to a pitching camp and haven't stopped going since. Softball is a big part of my life."

And Kelly is a big part of softball for the Lady Norsemen.

"Kerri is one of the finest pitchers — and athletes — I've coached," said Norsemen coach Bill Taylor. "She has great leadership ability and we always look to her to get us going."

Kelly leads by her overpowering fastball and floating curve. Her appearance on the mound intimidates batters, and when she lets go of a sizzling pitch there isn't much time for a hitter to react.

"I've been clocked at about 85 to 89 miles an hour," said Kelly. "I really work hard to perfect my pitches because I can't survive on just hope.

"Ever since I can remember, I wanted to be a college pitcher. I can play the other positions, but I prefer to be on the mound and be in control of the game. I believe that being a good pitcher is a great way for me to get a college scholarship; at least that's what I'm hoping for."

The operative word there is control.

"What has made Kerri so effective over the years is her ability to control her pitches," said Taylor. "Some pitchers can really throw hard, but none of them have the type of control that Kerri does. She's simply the best control pitcher I've seen in 20 years of coaching."

In her three varsity seasons, Kelly has hit only 10 batters in 304 inning mitched in the lineup as a designated hitter when she wasn't pitching, Kelly threw 622 strikes and 483 balls. Not very impressive; but her 7-3 rookie record was. In that same season, and strike out 40 batters and had a 3.35 ERA.

"Those numbers were very solid for a freshman playing on the varsity level," said Taylor. "But, she has progressed very nicely over the years."

And not by mistake either. "I have tried to learn different things about pitching and not just ride on what I've done in the past," said Kelly. "I've applied all the different things I've thing else that makes her an even better candidate to play college softball."

From the plate as a freshman, Kelly hit .362, had 17 hits in 47 at bats, and knocked in 13 runs. "I work hand on hitting too."

"I work hard on hitting, too," Kelly said. "Being third or fourth batter and trying to do the job in either one of those spots is just as exciting as throwing a good game."

As a sophomore, Kelly's arm matured and her buggy-whip style spun faster than a windmill in a wind storm. In 102 innings pitched that season, Kelly struck out 88 batters, had a 2.60 ERA and tossed 977 strikes and only 457 balls. Her record was 9-6. She hit .376, with 24 RBI and 13 extra base hits. She also led the team in slugging percentage. "Kelly has pitched as many as four games in a day during tournament play and doesn't get tired," Taylor said. "I can confidently say that Kelly was the best pitcher in North's softball history when she was a sophomore.

One look at the smiling, slender Darcy Jones and nobody would guess she could whirl a softball 54 mph – underhand.

One look at a would-be batter would convince those skeptics that Jones, whose fastball is comparable to a man's 85 mph pitch, is Grosse Pointe South's answer to Nolan Ryan.

On April 21, Jones will make her final Opening Day appearance for the Blue Devils' softball team at the Waterford Mott Tournament. As a senior, Jones is on course to break all South softball records from the mound, as well as at the plate.

Offensively, Jones, who has been a four-year varsity player for Coach John Bruce, is just as tricky as she is on the mound a place she's called home for more than 25 wins over three seasons.

Jones, who has been pitching fast-pitch softball since she was 8, is a strong, durable and vivacious athlete who has played in all 88 games since her freshman season.

As a freshman, the left-handed Jones started in center field, but soon moved into the pitching rotation because of her style and smart choices on the mound. She finished with a 5-4 record and 2.16 ERA, and the following season struggled a bit, but still won six of 15 games in which she pitched.

"When Darcy was a freshman, she felt a little uncomfortable pitching because she felt like she was stealing time from some of the older kids," said Bruce, who also coaches Jones in a summer league.

"I guess I did feel a bit uncomfortable," admitted Jones. "Right now, if a freshman were to come in and pitch, I wouldn't be rude, but I'd probably not be very nice; I'm just kidding. "I like to pitch. At first I really liked center field and had a problem making the switch, but now I'd rather keep pitching."

It didn't take Jones long to become better acquainted with pitching, a position that could carry her into a college scholarship.

pitches," said Bruce. "Darcy takes delight in fooling hitters. She's not overpowering, but sets you up with her fastball and then delivers a floating, dropping curve ball."

Bruce says that Jones' personality matches her left-handed style.

"She's got a physical talent and a personality that matches her left-handedness," said Bruce. ters," said a humble, shy Jones. "I would rather do that than have them rip one off me."

Jones' softball career began in earnest in the fourth grade in Bay City, and it's a position in which she can control what happens.

"I like to pitch because I'm not standing around — like an infielder or outfielder — waiting for something to happen," she said. "Also, if there happens to be some little, loud-mouth player on the other team I can control what happens in one pitch."

304 mmngs pitched.

"I really don't think about not hitting batters," said Kelly. "I just throw the ball where I'm supposed to and leave it at that."

Taylor's game-by-game statistics include tracking Kelly's pitches — every one of them. As a freshman, when she would be

Is it fun anymore?

Last week, in a pick-up basketball game, I couldn't believe what was transpiring.

A few fights, some exchange of adjectives and a few balls tossed at bodies reminded me of Fulton's Law: If it's not fun, don't play.

During the games, several clashes were mounted and nobody really won. There was innocent pushing, some verbal thrashing, red faces and pulsating temples. But to watch would-be adults and mature people try to throttle one another wasn't fun.

Playing sports isn't about fighting — unless you box.

The premise to compete should be based on fun and nothing else. A lot of coaches, despite their jock jargon, will tell you that they enjoy winning but most of all the game must be fun in order to go on.

Not only dominant on the mound as a young-looking freshman, Kelly was a heavy hitter at the plate. She batted .362, drove in 13 runs and had seven extra base hits.

"If the game is on the line and Kerri is at the plate, I'll intentionally walk her," said Grosse Pointe South coach John Bruce, who coaches Kelly in summer leagues. "She's a powerful hitter and never an out. She hits the ball wherever it's pitched. Her success at the plate is just some-

"Each year, Darcy became stronger and stronger," Bruce said, "but not by accident. She works very hard on her game and it shows. This season, I think she's looking forward to being the master on the mound."

Master is a fitting word because Jones dictates the tempo of the game. With at least six pitches in her bag of tricks, Jones can pull the string or make a batter look like a fool with her "fade," "drop" or change-up.

"What makes Darcy so good is her ability to mix up her

"Because of her pixiness and free-spirit, Darcy fits the mold of the true stereotype of left-handers," Bruce added. "Some pitchers like to blow it by you, but Darcy would rather fool you like most left-handers seem to enjoy."

fore, isn't everything. Losing isn't fun, but neither is the loss of a tooth, a black eye or even ruthless slang that is intended for your mother.

I understand "in the heat of the battle" that tempers flare, words are exchanged and referees or officials step in as peacemakers. I also understand that the NBA, NHL and major league baseball brawls spark a certain interest, but perhaps Rodney Dangerfield said it best: "I went to a fight and a hockey game broke out.'

Considering the source, it doesn't sound like a great piece of philosophy, but think about it. Are people more inclined --lately - to be aroused by a fight than a great slap shot, or dunk of a ball? Do people leave an arena discontent after a hockey game because "there wasn't one good fight?"

Last week I didn't have much fun wathcing grown men fight over a lousy pick-up hoop game. We had nothing to lose. Nobody was being paid to play, but it didn't matter. Competition seems to make testosterone levels increase. The macho image can't back down to a challenge, but we can't afford to leave ourselves susceptible to getting plugged in the nose because "you walked with the ball," or "you're over my back.'

Again, Fulton's Law.

With the youth baseball league just about under way in Grosse Pointe, I'd like to think there will be no fights, but today, I'm not convinced. We have to bear in mind why these kids are playing, and what they expect to get out of it. It's not to say they shouldn't be competitive or want to beat the other guy; we just can't lose sight of why sports were ever organized: because they're fun. Sports, just like a job or anything else, should be fun. If not, it's time to get out. I know sports are intended to give athletes some of the finest competition they'll ever have, but when a back is to the wall nowadays, it seems we come out with both fists in the air. exchange verbal insults, slap people with lawsuits and argue until it leads to fisticuffs.

I love to compete, and so do all athletes, but when the fun is gone it seems like the life is sucked out of sports. I love to watch a strong check, a hard slide into second, or a hoop player taking an offensive charge. Those are aspects of the game that make watching and competing — in sports FUN.

happens, people tell me to shake it off, but I can't do it that easily.

Crafty on the mound, Jones is just as deceiving at the plate, where she led the team as a junior with an average of .396.

"People don't like to pitch to Darcy because she'll either beat you with a single, or lay down a bunt and beat it out," Bruce said. "She's a very talented offensive player."

In combined freshman and sophomore seasons, Jones batted .269, stole 24 bases, had 45 hits and scored 44 runs.

Last season, however, was her finest - by far.

She now owns the single-season record for strikeouts (155), single-season record for innings pitched (179) and career mark with 134 assists.

"What makes Darcy an even stronger pitcher is her ability to field the ball," Bruce said. "She gets a lot of balls hit in front of her because a lot of hitters can't ERA. get a true piece of the ball."

At the plate last season, Jones hit .396, scored 34 runs, drove in 12 runs and had 19 stolen bases. This season she stands to add to her credentials by breaking the career hit record (she needs only seven more hits), career runs scored (needs 15), career RBI (needs 22) and career stolen bases (needs 15).

Also this season, she needs only 39 innings pitched to become the career-record holder. nine wins to break the established record of 36, and needs just 58 strikeouts to reign as the strikeout queen.

"Darcy's natural movement on the ball is down and away and that's the classic place for a pitch to go," Bruce said. "She can make the ball break or come in and jam you because she's worked very hard to get to that point. I guarantee 70 percent of the balls hit this season will go to the right side because people have a hard time getting around

"I don't pay much attention to records," said Jones, who recently made the CompuWare softball team. "I don't play softball for records or statistics; that sometimes she's got her that's not what's important. Just glove in the dirt before I even playing and having fun is what throw a bad pitch. She's just incredible.' matters.'

never a dull moment when Kelly's on the mound.

"She's exciting to watch," said Taylor.

Kelly's improvement over the years was never more evident than at the end of last season. As a junior captain, she recorded a 13-7 record, threw 1,171 strikes and only 207 balls in 133 innings pitched, and had a 1.74

But that wasn't the only part of her game she honed.

Kelly batted .539, was voted team MVP, had 50 RBI and 19 extra base hits.

Many people think she can't play college softball because of her slow speed afoot and questionable fielding skills, but Taylor disagrees.

"Kelly is an outstanding defensive player," he said. "She has an exceptional throwing arm and her coordination, agility and hustle are truly exciting.'

Jones will not pursue a colle-

This is probably it for me."

In her three seasons, Kelly has only 22 errors, a fielding average of .957, and 354 assists.

But what can she credit all these stats and potential records too?

"It's got to be my glove and bat," she said chuckling. "My mitt is old. I've had it since fifth grade when I started playing. I've had new ones, but I've left them to hang onto my old one. It's the same way with my bat."

Kelly is a threat, a dominator and an athlete destined to make it big.

"I'd like to play professional softball, but I know there aren't any leagues for females," she said. "But maybe by the time I get out of college there will be a league - I hope.

ULS springs forward

This is a preseason report on University Liggett School spring sports.

Tennis

Trying to defend the Class C-D tennis crown is not going to be as easy as some may think. ULS, under head coach Bob

Wood, is currently rated No. 2 in the polls, a place very unfamiliar to the highly successful program.

"On paper Country Day would have to be the favorite to win the state championship," said Wood, "but they don't suplay matches on paper. Country Day has its top three singles players back, plus a nationally ranked freshman to play singles. We, however, should be the favorite in doubles."

Ken Prather would be a top doubles player, or a No. 3 or 4 singles player, but he's out indefinitely with a bad back. If and when he comes back, Wood will need to shuffle his lineup.

"The No. 2 through $\overline{4}$ doubles teams are really up in the air mainly because of Ken's unknown return," Wood said. "When he comes back, who See ULS, page 3C

It also helped, that South stole 16 bases.

Soccer

After losing to Edsel Ford, 2-1, and tying Henry Ford II, 1-1, the South Lady Devils picked up their first win of the season April 7 at Seaholm, 2-0.

Katie Kolp and Kathy Gayman scored solo goals in the victory, and Ashley Moran drew the game's only assist.

"We struggled a little bit in our first two games because of the weather," said South coach Vasilios Simopoulos. "We really didn't get the girls to play their best because of poor field conditions, but now I think we're on track.'

knows what's going to happen. He can play anywhere in doubles, or possibly singles."

Sean Byrne will return to the No. 1 singles spot and Anthony Abiragi is the No. 2 player. Paul Fozo will play No. 3 singles, and either Bill Schervish or Cheo Ramsey will play No. 4.

Doug Wood, last year's state champ at No. 1 doubles with Mike Niccolini, will team with with Schervish or Fozo.

Jason Go and David Niccolini could be the No. 2 doubles tandem, while Andrew Stewart and Jon Strong may play No. 3. Lars Schneider and Sam Khatib could team up at No. 4.

"There are a lot of question marks at this point because when Ken comes back there will be significant changes," Wood said. "If he comes back soon, we'll be competitive in all flights, but right now his loss cuts into our depth."

Six of last year's top 10 players return, however.

Wood's lineup did change, when his team competed in and won the University School of Cleveland round-robin tournament April 6-7.

ULS had 19 points, and was led by Byrne, who beat topranked Western Junior players Ricky Lee and Kyle Mara. Byrne had never beaten either player before.

Abiragi (No. 2 singles), Fozo (No. 3), Ramsey and Doug Wood (No. 1 doubles), Schervish and Go (No. 2), Stewart and Strong (No. 3), and Schneider and Niccolini (No. 4) also had strong outings for the Knights.

Boys' lacrosse

Coach John Fowler has assured his team that it needs to be patient.

"We're going to learn a lot in April and be a good team in May," Fowler said. "We've got a strong team defensively, but we're going to have to work together in order to learn how to score.

Rob Petz and Gunther Lie will mind the nets, while Mike Coello, John Ellis and James Dobrzechowski anchor the defense. Larry Ayuyu and Jon Bell will also play defense.

Starting on attack will be Tom Reynolds, Duncan McMillan and Tripp Tracy. John Combs and Stefan Teitge will also play.

The midfield will be led by captains John Gordon and Jon Davis, and be complemented by Robb, Jason Robichaud, Jesse Randazzo and Sam Chung will also compete for midfield playing time.

"A lot of the guys have varsity experience from last year and they started working very hard this season," Fowler said. "We're going to have some great competition, so we've got our work cut out for us."

Girls' lacrosse

This year's team may find itself in a shoot-out more than once.

Because of graduation, Coach Nancy Dau lost an incredible number of her defenders but her scoring leaders are back.

Led by "a great senior group," the Lady Knights should be a formidable opponent even if the wins don't stack up.

'We may have a slow start without a lot of wins," said Dau, "but we're going to have to develop into a team that can work together."

Lucy Allison, Lexie Crain, Ayesha Khan, Jen Listman, Molly Shields, Sarah Stackpoole and Elizabeth Wisgerhos lead the seniors. Katrina Linthorst-Homan is a returning junior, and

"Right now we don't have a true lineup set," said Dau. "We'll have a strong attack and won't have a problem scoring, but we will have to get a lot of support from our defense."

Track

First-year head coach Bob Newvine is confident about this year's track team, but he's struggling to find the right nucleus to win.

The girls will be led by Jenny Miller (distance), Angela Walker (sprints), Ify Obianwu (sprints), Denise Mills (distance), Marie Lungberg (distance) and Melissa Simon (shot and discus).

The boys will be paced by distance runner Mike Barnes, John Dodds (mid-distance/sprints), Abimbola Afariogun (field events), Jon Sieber (distance), Jonah Smith (sprints) and Richard Berri (long jump).

Baseball

Because of the success of the hockey team and the interruption of spring break, Glynn Conely's baseball lineup has yet to gel.

"There are a lot of guys who will be playing, but I really haven't had the chance to see what I've got," he said. "It's going to be a question mark every game for us until we can get settled."

One player who is settled is all-state shortstop Kevin Crociata, who batted .490 last year. "Kevin's our leader," Conely

> Imagine you're a parent, checking on your baby in the middle of the night. You wait for the sound of breathing. A cry. A coo. Anything. When SIDS (Sudden Infant Death Syndrome) takes a victim, there is only silence.

It's commonly known as "Crib Death." The death of a seemingly healthy baby for no apparent reason.

SIDS is the number one cause of death in infants from one week to one year old . . . causing more deaths than cystic fibrosis, childhood cancer and heart disease combined. Over 7,000 babies each year.

This killer strikes quickly, quietly, with no warning. A SIDS baby dies within seconds, usually while he's sleeping. He suffers no pain. He doesn't cry out.

One of the most disturbing facts about SIDS is that there's no way to predict it. No way to prevent it. Not yet.

But there is hope. With your help we can find the cause and the cure.

Donations of your time and of your dollars will make a difference. You can help save a life. Then we can all hear the sweet sounds of a baby's cry.
