some 146 tons of plastics, newspapers, metal and glass. Each collection day lasted three hours, making an average of just under one ton collected each hour.

Grosse Pointers who participated in a pilot curbside recycling program last summer said recycling was not too difficult, and that they would even be willing to pay a small fee for curbside recycling. More than half of those in the study put recyclables on the curb for pickup each week.

Additionally, Grosse Pointe Park has opened a recycling drop-off center and Grosse Pointe Woods is studying bids to implement curbside recycling. Many local stores are accepting used batteries which they then recycle, and the Grosse Pointes-Clinton Refuse Authority has started a composting program and commissioned a study on recycling.

Walking into Marty Bufalini's Grosse Pointe City home is like taking a step back in time.

A stereoptican with cards sits on a lace-covered table. Antique furniture fills every room, and in the corners are antique phonographs and music boxes. The horns from the phonographs sound the tinny music as Bufalini proudly plays them.

The family stove in the kitchen dates back to the teens and he is still trying to determine exactly what year, even as he looks for a larger one, but of the same vintage.

On the kitchen shelves are original Morton salt containers and other pieces of yesterday.

"I've always been interested in history," Bufalini said. "Not the historical events, but how the events affected people like you and me."

Bufalini, with his quick smile and easy laugh, gets excited when talking about the changes man has seen.

"Stop and think about the impact of the phonograph," he said. "A lot of people used to play instruments, but now there was a machine that would play instruments for you. People used to go to vaudeville shows, and now they had records of vaudeville shows.'

Woods joins county, state in Milk River clean-up effort By Dan Jarvis of the Milk River Inter-County Staff Writer Drainage Board. Church.

Like the filing of last-minute tax forms, the Woods City Council waited until the 11th hour to approve a resolution supporting the clean up of the Milk River drain.

The approval was made during Monday night's council meeting, the last scheduled chance to approve clean-up efforts and avoid stiff fines by state officials.

A deadline of May 1 was set by the Michigan Department of Natural Resources to qualify for a state revolving fund loan, where money is loaned at just 2 percent for large scale environmental clean up.

If the Woods had failed to approve a Milk River clean-up resolution, the city could have faced state imposed fines of up to $25,000 per day, which would have been passed on to Woods residents.

The resolution, which received unanimous support from the council, does not outline specific Ann Arbor, call for the construcoptions, but instead offers general support for clean up of the polluted drain.

The document also urges the drain board to file the project plan and several clean-up options to the DNR so that the project plan will appear on the state priority list for funding through the revolving loan fund.

Included in the resolution is a statement that Woods city officials must be kept fully informed of any decisions on specific plans for solving the pollution problem caused by combined sewage overflow after rainstorms.

At a public hearing April 9, Woods officials said a plan is needed, though they disagreed with specific options.

Councilman Thomas J. Fahr

ner said he favors enclosing the Milk River with a concrete cap to control odors and to avoid the construction of a 15 million gallon retention tank.

The cleanup plans, drawn up by the engineering firm of MacNamee, Porter and Seeley of tion of the retention tank either on the grounds of the Woods Department of Public Works at The resolution states that the Marter Road and Parkway or on City Council supports the efforts the grounds of the adjacent Assumption Greek Orthodox Church officials oppose the tank being built on the back of the property and said they would fight the project if necessary.

Paul D. Zugger, chief of surface water quality division, recently said that that the current facilities are not adequate and are causing serious environmental and public health concerns.

'It is critical that the Inter-County Drain Board and local units of government move forward with necessary corrective actions at this site," Zugger said.

Though an informal plan has been submitted to the DNR, no specific plan has been endorsed.

Now that the Woods has approved the resolution supporting cleanup at the site, a formal plan can be submitted and the DNR is expected to approve one of several options.

Zugger, in a letter to County Department of Public Works Director James Murray, cautioned the county that DNR approval may be made on a plan not yet considered or discussed at the local level.

Shores has surprise for speeders

By John Minnis Assistant Editor

Watch your speed in Grosse Shores because you may blow right by a police car with radar without even noticing it.

Since the beginning of March, many motorists have been caught unaware as they surpassed the speed limit on Shores roads only to see a little maroon sports car behind them "lit up like a Christmas tree."

The little police car is the Shores' new 1990 Mustang that was purchased by the Village Council. While the car has been used for traffic duty since March, it will serve many other pur-poses, said Public Safety Chief Daniel Healy.

"A lot of people think we're just out to get tickets," he said, "but we're responding to changing needs in the community."

Besides traffic duty, the sporty squad car will be used for surveillance, especially if a rash of larcenies or malicious destruction of property incidents occur.

"Things change," Healy said. "We have to face needs as they come up.' One need that came up was speeding on side roads in the Shores. The speeding became especially prevalent on the long side roads such as Roslyn, Hampton and Lochmoor that run through from Mack to Lakeshore. In fact, the residents of one of the through streets presented the city with a petition requesting that something be done to stop the speeding.

The little Mustang with the word "Police" on the front quarter panels is just the ticket, so to speak.

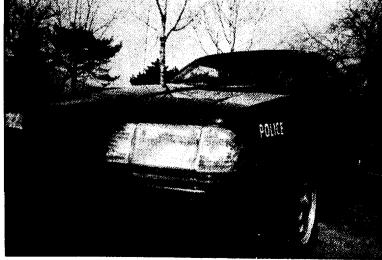

Some of the motorists stopped by the officers in the Mustang complain that they were not sure if it was really a policeman pulling them over, Healy said, but with the car's special police package, it's obvious the car doesn't belong to someone playing cops and robbers.

The car and the two officers assigned to it are part of the department's tactical services operations. Public Safety Officers Gary Boudreau and Robert Bensinger take turns in the car during shifts.

Both officers are highly qualified for the special duty, Healy said. They are experienced officers and have received training in radar operation and have taken criminal investigation and crime scene management courses.

With a V-8 engine the Mustang has the muscle to fly, but Healy said he would have preferred a smaller engine. The police package, however, comes only with the big engine.

If you see this car in your rear-view mirror and it's "lit up like a Christmas tree" and you're in Grosse Pointe Shores, then you've probably been caught speeding. The Shores Public Safety Department put its new 1990 Mustang into service at the beginning of March and has already caught a few people by

The cities of Grosse Pointe and Grosse Pointe Woods passed resolutions Monday night opposing any expansion of Detroit City Airport and its activity.

The City and Woods' actions follow the March 26 adoption by the Park council of a resolution opposing any expansion of the airport at Conner between Gratiot and McNichols.

The Country Day Lower School has a Robert Leathers-designed playscape similar to what a group of Park parents are proposing for Patterson Park. The matter has been referred to the Planning Commission for a public hearing and to determine if the structure and its use could be described as passive.

Parents propose to construct play equipment at Patterson

By John Minnis Assistant Editor

Parents in Grosse Pointe Park are proposing a $50,000, 10,000. square-foot playscape for Patterson Park - at no cost to the city.

The Park City Council, however, is concerned that the wooden play structure may not be "passive" enough for the park at the foot of Three Mile Drive.

Resident Gigi Wyman was one of several parents who presented plans to the council April 9. Though the project has been recommended for approval by the Parks and Recreation Commission, the council referred it to the Planning Commission for further review.

"This would represent a significant change for the park," said Councilman David M. Gaskin, "and we should take into account the input of the citizens."

His fellow council members agreed and referred the playscape proposal to the Planning Commission for review and a public hearing. The commission will set a special hearing date later this month.

Gaskin further feared that the "massiveness" of the playscape will block the view of the lake. Wyman said the existing play equipment covers an area of 10,000 square feet, though there is a lot of space between each play item.

What Wyman and her group of parents have in mind is a wooden play structure designed by Robert Leathers and Associates of Ithaca, N.Y. Typical ramps, turrets, ramparts, rooms and other delights of childrens' imaginations.

design a playscape that best incorporates their ideas. Of course, Leathers will take into account safety, the area available and the cost.

After the design is completed, various parent committees go about raising funds, getting the materials, recruiting volunteers and borrowing tools.

Wyman said Leathers instructs the organizers how to raise funds and set up volunteer committees so that the project Leathers playscapes include all comes together over a long weekend.

The ballpark cost of a 10.000square-foot playscape is $50,000, Wyman said, but costs can be ers of the structure are the child- cut considerably with donated ren who will be using it. There would be no cost to the city except for maintenance after the play structure is built. According to parents proposing the project, the Park is getting a good deal: Its existing 30-yearold play equipment at Patterson Park is being replaced at no cost to the city except for maintenance, which was reported to be Detroit Country Day Lower School in Birmingham has a 10,000-square-foot Leathers playscape that was built by volunteers the way Wyman described for the proposed Park structure.

The Country Day playscape includes interconnecting tunnels, turrets, slides, bridges and mazes. It also includes a pirate ship, a rocket ship and space tunnel, a bouncing bunny, bouncing horse, robot and dinosaur, a tree fort, tire swing, a maze and an amphitheater.

Councilwoman Valerie Moran said she talked to someone at Country Day and was told that the playscape requires little, if any, maintenance.

Some members of the Park council expressed concern over city liability for children getting hurt on the play structure, but parents pointed out that the structure would be more safe than the 1950s' vintage equipment now at Patterson Park. Also the ground beneath the playscape will be of sand or another cushioning material such as ground up tires. Wyman said the tire bits work better than wood chips because they don't hold moisture, rot or attract bugs.

The parents chose Patterson Park because it has the most open space. Windmill Pointe Park was ruled out because it's already used heavily and has less available space. The schools were considered, but the parents would rather have the play structure on city property.

But before the parents can continue with the project, they have to convince the council and residents within 1,000 feet of the park that the playscape is a good idea and is passive enough.

While Patterson Park is called a passive park, no one has a definition of what passive is or what passive activities are.

One resident questioned the existence of tennis courts at Patterson Park and asked how they could be described as passive. Mayor Palmer T. Heenan said tennis is a passive sport.

Trying to fathom the council's definition of passive, on resident said, "You would have to put a sign there saying: 'No running, jumping or playing. This is a passive park.

"You should want kids playing in the park. What's the definition of passive?"

By Ronald J. Bernas Staff Writer

The Grosse Pointes-Clinton Refuse Disposal Authority will be burning garbage again after being closed for 15 months.

Workers at the incinerator began preparing the chambers Monday and General Manager Edwin E. Whedon said he expected to be burning garbage today. The incinerator will be operating at capacity early next week, he added.

A new five-year contract with City Disposal, located in Detroit, was signed last week. The ash will go to a special landfill known as a monofill in Sump ter Township.

"The problem was never in the burning process," Whedon said. "It was in the disposal."

Last summer new state laws classified ash from municipal incinerators as "special" waste and could only be disposed into the specially lined monofill.

The incinerator was closed in December 1988 after routine testing of the ash showed levels

Woods considers contractor to recycle and remove trash

Staff Writer

If Grosse Pointe Woods administrators get their way, the city won't be taking garbage from anyone anymore.

The Woods City Council Monday night discussed a plan to hire a commercial hauler to remove recycling materials and rubbish from curbsides.

The proposal for rubbish removal is similar to Grosse Pointe Park, which now employs a private contractor, but the proposal to hire a private contractor for pickup of curbside recyclable materials is unique to the Pointes.

Chester Petersen, Woods city administrator, said hiring a commercial refuse hauler and recycling handler would benefit the city in many ways, including:

 Avoiding financial penalties by the Grosse Pointes-Clinton Refuse Disposal Authority. If the city continues to collect rubbish and institute a curbside recycling program, it could be fined by the authority for not delivering all waste to the facility in Clinton Township.

The privatization of waste hauling will negate the additional annual penalty that will increase the city's waste-disposal costs considerably.

- Saving the city money in total liability insurance and workmen's compensation insurance
- Reducing the annual expense for the city's quarterly pickup of household appliances or other bulky items. These costs would be totally eliminated and the contractor would pick up larger items on a weekly basis.

• Eliminating possible lastminute scrambling should curbside recycling may be mandated by the state legislature within the next two to four years. By acting now, the city can save money because when recycling is mandated, pickup costs are expected to rise because of high demand by local municipalities.

Last week, another recycling bill was introduced by state Sen. Mitch Irwin, D Sault St. Marie. The bill would require county governments develop a countywide recycling plan for designated recyclable materials.

At Monday's meeting, Robert Novitke, mayor pro tem, said the actual savings would be more in the range of $100,000 to $300,000 and should be discussed further before the city gets out of the rubbish hauling business.

"Once we no longer have the equipment and manpower to remove refuse, we may find that the savings are not as much as we thought," Novitke said. A nasty start seen in race for governor tate Sen. John Engler's opening commercials and the quick rebuttals by Gov. James Blanchard's committee offer new evidence that this year's campaign will be a nasty one.

The Blanchard forces came out firing at Engler's commercials that attacked Blanchard for a 40 percent increase in the welfare program and a rise in crime and drug use in Michigan.

"Engler has started what will be a vicious, negative assault on Gov. Blanchard," the statement said, adding that instead of talking about issues, Engler "is attempting to posture and pander his way to victory.'

The Republicans immediately counterattacked with new claims about the truth of their charges, but the Democrats added new charges to their hard-hitting rebuttals to offer further evidence that the nastiness will continue as the campaign progresses.

In its rebuttal, the Blanchard for Governor Committee listed chapter and verse in denying Engler's claims, charged that both Engler commercials "play fast and loose with the truth" and added that "Roger Ailes would be proud of John Engler."

Ailes, one of President George Bush's campaign advisers in 1988, was widely credited with the tough tactics that the GOP nominee used in defeating Michael Dukakis, the Democratic presidential nom-

From the tone of the rebuttals offered, it appears that the Blanchard camp is going to respond immediately to Engler charges that it regards as unfounded or unfair, thus avoiding any repetition of what many Democrats regarded as Dukakis' error in failing to respond to Bush's attacks until late in the campaign.

At any rate, the rebuttals include a list-ing of "the truth" under each of Engler's charges with "documented facts" showing the numbers to support the contention that one Engler ad is a "misleading, welfarebaiting" commercial and the other "distorts the governor's record on crime as well as his own record."

For example, the document says the number of people receiving payments from the Department of Social Services dropped by $19.\overline{1}$ percent from 1983 to 1989; there were 226,943 fewer people receiving some kind of public assistance in 1989 than in 1983; the number of people who received Aid to Families with Dependent Children is down by 14.9 percent, and the number receiving general assistance has declined by 27.1 percent.

However, the Blanchard rebuttal admitted that by including all DSS spending, which includes medical care and other programs not usually described as welfare, the total appropriations will have gone up nearly 40 percent from 1983 to fiscal 1991, next year's budget. But the document contends that Engler's lumping of all of these programs together to achieve his 40 percent figure "is distortion of the truth."

The rebuttal shows, however, that even broad charges, such as Engler's about the 40 percent boost in the welfare program, often contain at least a grain of truth, as the comparison above shows. But the exchange also shows that it is difficult to pin down the facts without a detailed listing of specific data.

For example, the Blanchard committee offered, in addition to the figures, a listing of the senator's votes on 29 Department of Social Service budget issues from 1983 to 1989. That shows Engler voted yes 24 times, missed 4 votes and voted no only once on the 29 votes. Those figures prompted this further blast at Engler:

"The ultimate hypocrisy of Engler's TV ads is that he criticizes welfare spending when he in fact has voted for DSS appropriations bills exceeding the governor's proposals every single year for the past seven years."

The TV commercials and the paper blizzard of charges and countercharges that have marked the nasty start do not bode well for the seven months left in the campaign year. Both sides could replace the early heat with more light for the Michigan voters if they would deal factually with the real issues facing the state and avoid personal attacks on each other.

But don't expect that to happen.

People lead the politicians

7ith the Grosse Pointes joining in the international celebration of Earth Day, it is significant to note that the American people now tend to be ahead of the politicians in their concern for environmental problems such as polluted air, water and the earth itself.

That is one of the conclusions reached by an analysis of a New York Times/CBS News public opinion poll that finds 84 percent of the respondents agreeing that pollution is a serious national problem that is getting worse."

In answer to another question, the poll finds that 74 percent say that protection of the environment is so important that standards cannot be set too high and environmental improvements must be made regardless of cost.

In perhaps its most significant findings, the poll reports that 71 percent of the people say we must protect the environment even if it means increased government spending and higher taxes. A smaller majority of 56 percent agrees that we must protect the environment even if it means loss of jobs in the local community.

As a result of the strong pro-environment opinions of the people, the Times concludes that many politicians now are proclaiming themselves environmentalists and switching their positions on such environmental issues as hazardous waste, acid rain and the stratospheric ozone layer.

In the Pointes, too, environmental issues are now being retrieved from the back burners, as we've noted in recent elections. The work of the Grosse Pointe Citizens for Recycling and other citizens worried about pollution coming from its many sources has aroused increasing public concern about our local environmental problems including the continuing pollution of Lake St. Clair, the Pointes' greatest natural re-

It seems appropriate that as we enter the final decade of the 20th century, concern and care for the environment are becoming major worries at the local, state and national levels for both the public and the politicians who represent the people.

Sunday of the first Earth Day observance should be meaningful not only for for the citizenry as a whole but especially for politicians who will have an opportunity to catch up on environmental issues as they prepare to face the voters in this election year of 1990.

That means that the 20th anniversary

Township loses its obscurity ost of the 91 residents of tiny Lake Township probably appreciated their obscurity until the national newspaper USA Today blew their cover on

As John Minnis reported in last week's issue of the Grosse Pointe News, the USA Today story cited census figures showing that Lake Township's $155,486 per capita income was the highest of any community in the United States on the basis of 1987 calculations.

Lake Township is a part of Grosse Pointe Shores but is also a separate township because it is located in Macomb County. The other part of the Shores, Grosse Pointe Township in Wayne County, reported an income of $36,429 per person.

Those facts and the others reported by the census made Grosse Pointe Shores a media mecca for a few days as the village office was bombarded with queries seeking more information about the wealthy town-

The Shores long has been known as the wealthiest Pointe but the extent of Lake Township's lead over the other communities had not been appreciated. The 1987 per capita figures in the other Pointes ranged from $22,837 in the Park to $34,996 in the Farms.

As most other Grosse Pointe residents know, neither the township nor the Shores has any business district and rarely get into the news except when someone, usually from outside the community, violates a law or an ordinance.

After their brief moment in the sun, however, Lake Township residents no doubt hoped to drift back into relative obscurity last week. But it may not be quite the same. Now people know that the township had only an $11,900 budget for the year but that each of its individual residents had an income of more than 13 times that figure.

In fact, the township's two streets could become a mecca for sightseers. Kelly ducks on airport issue

t is disappointing that Sen. John Kelly of Grosse Pointe Woods has ducked tak-Ling a position on the Detroit City Airport expansion that is being opposed by many Grosse Pointe residents.

Kelly said his "gut reaction" is to oppose the plan but said he wouldn't take a formal stand until he has seen a completed master plan, now in the draft stages. Furthermore, he doesn't expect the plan will be ready in time to become an issue in the election campaign.

That would be convenient for Kelly. He currently represents the First Senate District which includes all the Pointes and a portion of Detroit but is also considering a race for the 13th District congressional seat being vacated by Rep. George Crockett. Grosse Pointe Park and Grosse Pointe City are in the 13th District along with a big chunk of Detroit.

We think residents of both districts deserve more than a "gut reaction" from candidates about the proposed airport expansion, whether the master plan is ready or not. Why? Because such proposals often are suddenly approved without giving the public sufficient advance notice to make their objections known.

The more times chanse...
the more things stay the same.

Library vote

To the Editor:

(The following letter was sent to Farms Mayor Joseph Fromm and is printed here at the request of the commission.)

Your vote on Monday evening, April 2, against the proposed library site plan on the Brownell Middle School site came as a shock and a disappointment. The site plan represents the work of many Grosse Pointe citizens and met the requirements of use for the zoning of the property: community service.

Your vote can only be interpreted as shortsighted, misinformed and anti-library.

After years of work, the Board of Education presented a plan for approval that represents the best work of many staff, citizens and concerned individuals.

Your leadership could have provided the opportunity for this community to move forward with improved library service. It is unfortunate that negativity was your guiding light rather than the reasoned judgment which your position demands.

Volunteer

To the Editor:

National Volunteer Week April 22-28 — is a time set aside to recognize those people who contribute their time, energies and resources to building a better America. Most of them go about their work within church groups, civic or other organizations quietly, seeking no recognition, but reaping the rewards of having done something positive to improve our quality of life.

If you know of any volunteers, take time during this week to thank them for lending a helping hand. It will make their day.

If you know of anyone who would like to become a volunteer, but doesn't know how to get started, have them call Volunteer Connect (266-9430). The organization will serve as a valuable link to volunteer work that is tailored to the caller.

Milk River To the Editor:

I attended the Milk River Inter-County Drainage Board public hearing April 9. I know that reporters cannot include everything in their reports (articles that they write). I would like to comment on two omissions:

(a) The Assumption Greek Orthodox Church made it very clear that they objected to a plan that suggested placing a retention tank under their property. This church is such an asset to the Grosse Pointe Woods and St. Clair Shores communities. They don't deserve to be "dumped on." I say this as a member of St. Lucy Roman Catholic Church. (b) One of the speakers suggested that the Milk River become a retention tank - the old don't put the solution to my problem in my backyard. I live on the Milk River and object to the

See LETTERS, page 7A

They say, but must listen?

Because I'm a nosy, er, an aware person, or because I have satellite dishes for ears, I hear lots of things. What I hear tells me the world around us is changing too rapidly.

In journalism school, I was taught to listen attentively. With each question answered, we were to think of a natural follow-up question. To do that, one must listen and think.

But recently, without trying to, I've heard things that would make a priest in a confessional

Trapped in a chair at a Bo Rics while this girl with ghastly hair was shaping mine, I heard another customer discussing her love life. It was more than even her closest friends needed to

"So while he's telling me he wants to get back together, he's still cheating on me," she said.

Another woman was getting advice on what she should sue someone for, I wasn't quite sure why she was suing them - my head was in the sink during that part of the story - but she was advised to "get them for mental anguish and loss of wages, too."

While legal and marital advice was bandied about, I buried my face into an 8-month old, dogeared copy of "Us" and prayed for her to hurry. I guess for a $6 haircut I should have to put up with a little discomfort.

I was nearly at the breaking point when the girl brushed the cut hair off my neck and told me Say Ronald J. Bernas ready to yell, "Get some shame, people."

I mean, really. I learned more about those women during the course of a 20-minute haircut than I did about six women during the course of 90-minutes worth of "Steel Magnolias." Any thoughts I had about how contrived that play was were erased as I left.

Then while paying for a pair

she was done. I was getting of blue jeans, I found out who one of the salesgirls had slept with recently and that her friend thought it was stupid of her: "I mean after all the other people he's slept with. I hope you took precautions." She looked at me and smiled politely: "Will this be cash or charge?"

> And people say men talk. Then I was in a restaurant trying to ignore a group of businesswomen discussing physical concerns that should be mentioned only in a doctor's office or Oprah Winfrey's show.

And men are getting just as annoying, but for a totally different reason.

A nearly 30 man was in a bar hitting on a barely legal young woman. He was telling her how he and his father were always fighting because although he had recently finished college taking six years to get a fouryear degree - he didn't have a

"He says I go out too much, and that if I spent half the time spend at the gym looking for a job, I would be rich by now." He paused for effect. "But you know, it's my life. I'm not ready to make a decision about what I want to do with the rest of my life. And, you know, that's just the point - it's my life. I have to do what makes me happy. I can't live for him."

It seemed to me that if he spent half the time he spends rationalizing his laziness looking for a job, perhaps he would have a purpose.

Another guy, in a restaurant, was talking loudly and proudly that he needed assurance about what direction the relationship with the woman he was seated with was going. "I need to know where I stand," he said, "before we move forward with this."

I nearly told him what direction he should go.

It got me to thinking, though. What happened to the good old days when women didn't discuss their bodies in public and men hid their feelings? And people didn't feel their business should be everybody's.

And aren't personal problems the reason God made whispers?

What a headache

It's tough sorting out the conflicting claims these days. Cholesterol, biodegradability...it's enough to give you a headache.

The latest confusion is about diapers. On the one hand, the disposables are the very devil's handiwork. Now come the debunkers, who agree that disposables are indeed a big problem, but tell us that washable diapers use an awful lot of energy in the form of hot water, electricity and petrol (if you have the deliverable kind).

What's a conscientious environmentalist to do?

Would it help to know that cotton diapers are cheaper? Facts found by the Grosse Pointe Recyclers show that disposables cost $1,716 over the diapering life of a child, delivery service costs $1,170, but do-it-yourself is only $299 meldory is minimo.

And I guess it gets cheaper if you potty-train early.

Don't do it

Out in Clinton Township, the kids are celebrating Earth Day by NOT doing something. On April 23, Miami Elementary School is NOT going to have a balloon launch.

Because, folks, that innocentseeming fun turns out to be harmful to some of our finned and feathered friends. All we wanted to do was cheer ourselves with bright-colored balloons, and all the while, birds and fish and turtles were getting tangled and choking in the stuff. Last spring, the organizers of the Spoleto Festival in Charleston recognized the dangers to the nearby sea life and canceled the traditional opening balloon launch. So the word is getting around.

Happy Unballoon launch, kids! May many more follow your ex-

For the moment, the fight against drugs has been all but forgotten in the Earth Day hoopla. But this weekend will feature at least one non-environmental event.

Amazing ways to save the earth

Some tongue-in-cheek ways to improve our environment and celebrate Earth Day on April 22:

· Save gasoline by only driving downhill and with the wind. Knit six-pack rings together to make shopping bags. Compost your road kills. Reuse diapers. Turn them over and use the other sides. Recycle fruitcake. Use it as slug repellant in your garden.

Suicide

To the Editor:

Something was bothering Kristin Skotarczyk. Something was disturbing him to the extent that he made a final decision to take his own life, at 15 years old.

What makes a boy who "looked like he really loved life," as quoted by his school principal, kill himself in the presence of schoolmates? I did not know Kristin or his parents. I can only feel very sad and heart-sick for their loss. I cannot begin to guess what might have been bothering Kristin nor would it be fair to him or his family to speculate. I don't know them.

But as a parent of three children, one high school and two middle school, I must sit down and ask myself: "What if this were my son or daughter. Would I after the initial shock and grief be able to piece together the reasons for a suicide? Would any of us as parents want to know the reasons? Would we be afraid to find out that it was something we should have seen or paid more attention to?"

Every day, a child or teenager may come home from school with a complaint. One day it could be that a teacher is picking on them, humiliating them, singling them out to hassle.

More letters on page 8A

Maybe we follow up the complaint and are told that our child needs to have thicker skin, needs to ignore it, be mature. Someone is repeatedly teasing our child because of looks, clothing, or personality. We tell them they have to get along with all kinds of people, be brave, learn to let it roll off of them.

Sometimes we are hesitant to fight our kids' battles because they will have to learn "someday" that we can't, and other adults will suggest that our children will be weak. Many times these quick solutions work. Sometimes they don't.

I believe as a parent, I have every right to follow up on an on-going complaint at school or anywhere my children are involved. If someone or a group of kids are maliciously teasing my child, I believe that I have a right to try and help solve it by contacting families involved, I also will fight battles for my children when it is apparent that it is necessary for their well-being.

Sometimes the quick solutions do work. We all know that kids may exaggerate, have a bad day, be a wreck about something only to forget about it an hour later. But when the quick solutions don't seem to be working, we as parents must not be afraid to go to battle for our children. The love and concern they will feel from our support will not make them weak, will not stunt their growth. We must stand up for our rights as parents.

I don't mean to suggest that the things I mentioned happening to our kids will lead them all to suicide, or that all pressures come from outside. But I do not have to ask myself, if Kristin were one of my children, would I be able to piece it all together? Would you?

Food drive

To the Editor:

Once again, the residents of Grosse Pointe have generously opened their hearts in helping to feed the area's hungry. This year's canned food drive generated a total of 22,902 pounds of food for the hungry. This exceeds last year's total of 17,186 pounds.

The students and faculty throughout the Grosse

Pointe school system donated 16,102 lbs. of canned and dried goods. Instead of donating cans of food, some individuals donated funds to buy cases of food for the needy. The grocery bags that you were kind enough to insert in the March 15 Grosse Pointe News generated $2,726. Gleaners will use the monetary donations to purchase and distribute 6,800 pounds of food to the area's needy.

All foods received from the drive will be distributed at no cost to our member feeding agencies. On behalf of our 184 member agencies who serve 155,000 meals a week, thank you for all your efforts in making this year's drive such a success. We hope that next year we will do even more for those in our community who are struggling to provide a steady nutritious diet for themselves and their fami-

Friends of the Grosse Pointe Public Library, I've been given the opportunity to review several studies evidencing the need for a new library facility. I believe the need has been demonstrated clearly and convincingly.

Grosse Pointe has no ideal site for a new library; we simply don't have much open space. Confronted with this fundamental fact, community committees - which included representatives of the Farms Council — worked diligently to identify the most feasible location. It was Brownell. Architects and other technical advisers found the site workable.

Now we all understand that meeting this need has a price associated with it; and this cost-benefit balancing is what would have been decided by the voters of the school district this June. If the district's voters, being reasonably informed of both the benefits and the costs, turned down the project, so be it. That's the essence of our democratic process.

This library project was to be built by the school board on its own land. The interest of the Farms Council in the project relates to parking, traffic and like matters. Parking as proposed clearly was adequate, leaving only the traffic aspect which both the police chief and the independent traffic expert said was adequately addressed.

Based largely if not entirely on emotional objections of homeowners living near Brownell, the Farms Council determined to scuttle the library project. All other potential Grosse Pointe sites are vulnerable to this kind of attack.

The five Grosse Pointe municipalities and the school district out of necessity have operated cooperatively and worked in harmony for a number of years; we are all so close together that the actions of one touch all the others. This calls for a little broader vision of community and a broader view of the interests involved when considering this kind of project.

We did not see that broader vision evidenced in the Farms Council's action last Monday night. As a fellow Farms resident with the council members and a long time friend of several, I expected more of them. This was not enlightened action.

To the Editor:

Eight sponsoring national victim organizations will recognize April 22-28 as National Victim Rights Week. Observed in 48 states last year, the week is designed to acknowledge the devastation that crime has created across our nation and to underscore our determination to assist its casualties.

By any measure, Americans suffer inordinately from criminal violation - posting two, three, even four times the violent crime rate of other industrial democracies. Victims of crime face pain, loss and heartache. Their anguish and suffering often continue for years and, unfortunately, that experience is often compounded by the way they are treated within the criminal justice system. In 1988, citizens in Michigan and Florida voted overwhelmingly to establish constitutional amendments for victims. This proposed constitutional change would give victims a voice not a veto in the way their cases are handled in the criminal justice process. It represents a simple and straightforward attempt to balance the scales of justice. These amendments would not interfere with the constitutional rights of the accused. What they would do is restore some dignity, some respect and some participatory rights to those who become victims.

Mothers Against Drunk Driving supports victims advocacy through promoting change in public policy, public awareness programs such as the Red Ribbon campaign during the holidays, Drive for Life, KISS (Keep It a Safe Summer), speakers bureau, and preventive measures such as an annual poster - essay contest, designated driver program, and Drunk Driving Victim Impact Panels.

MADD at the national, state and local level has worked hard for the passage of several important pieces of federal legislation such as the national 21-year-old drinking age and the Drunk Driving Prevention Acts of 1988. MADD's toll free victim number is 1-800-323-MADD.

Please join us to help honor National Victim Rights Week, and in the process strengthen our national heritage of justice to all!

To the Editor:

The children born in 1970, the year of the first Earth Day, are now college-aged. In their short lifetimes, they have seen the creation of the Environmental Protection Agency and passage of the Endangered Species Act, Clean Water Act and Clean Air Act. These are positive things.

But these same children have also witnessed the tragic death of thousands of birds coated in oil spilled by the tanker Exxon Valdez in Alaska last March. They have seen Love Canal, Bhopal and the gradual eating away of our forests by acid rain.

As we stand on the threshold of the 1990s, we must ask ourselves what children born in 1990 will behold in 20 years.

Think about this: We Americans throw away 18 billion disposable diapers, 2 billion plastic razors and 220 million tires every year!

The top 500 industrial polluters, combined, legally spew billions of pounds of chemicals into our streams, air and ground each year.

Worldwide, we're losing about 100 species a day to habitat destruction.

Scientists estimate that by the year 2000:

• Nearly 70 percent of the world's tropical rainforests will be gone.

• 50 percent of the landfills now operating in the United States will be closed.

 As much as one-fourth of the world's reliable water supply could be rendered unsafe for use.

As a nation, we need to set new priorities. Arms control and reduction can save up to $500 billion each year for expenditures on sustainable development, the environment, health, population control and human welfare.

I'd like to see President Bush go beyond token promises of environmental reform, and reauthorize the Clean Air Act with tough new provisions to control acid rain.

I'd like to see a ban on any development of the coastal plain of the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge, and all-out development of a national energy policy.

I'd like to see a constitutional amendment, guaranteeing our inalienable right to a clean, healthy environment.

And I would especially like to see every school include environmental sciences at every grade level and ensure that all students demonstrate competency in these and other areas before graduating from high school.

But remember, the place to start is at home. Recycle your garbage. Buy biodegradable products. Pay more attention to water and energy conservation. Buy fuelefficient cars. Then write letters to members of Congress, administrative officials, local governments - whoever needs to hear your voice.

As we step forward from the threshold of the 1990s. remember, whatever each of you decides to do, we are all united in the challenge to paint a brighter picture for our children.

State budget full of holes

The House has been working on the state budget for the next fiscal year. The governor proposes a budget, then the Legislature enacts budget bills sending back to the governor the Legislature's version of the budget. In the process there is supposed to be consultation between the Legislature and governor so agreement can be reached. And there is supposed to be a balanced budget.

The process is not going well. The governor proposed a budget full of holes and distortions, proposing vague new programs with no detail, no enacting legislation and no way to pay for the proposed new initiatives. New is good. We need to experiment. We do so much that needs improvement and so many new problems come along, we need new programs. But we need to know how a proposed program is to work and how it can be paid

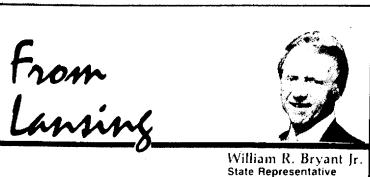

Even House Democrats are angry with the governor for his "magic mirrors" proposals, so much so that many of them have joined House Republicans to strip the budget bills of all new programs.

Beyond proposals for new programs, the governor submitted a budget that cannot even pay for existing programs at the levels he calls for. He has proposed, for example, gross underfunding of

Interviews on cable

Richard Kughn, owner of Lionell Trains, Isabell Smith, certified financial planner featured in Money Magazine, and Joseph L. Husdon Jr. and Joseph Bianco, executive vice president of the Detroit Institute of Arts Founders Society, were interviewed recently for Grosse Pointe Cable by John C. Prost. The show, "Pointers With Prost," appears at 7 p.m. Monday, Wednesday, Friday and Sunday on Channel 32. Cable subscribers in Grosse Pointe and Harper Woods will find many local access shows available to them.

Medicaid services. This is not a new situation but it is worsening. We are losing doctors, hospitals, nursing homes and other service providers. Some providers of Medicaid services get only half as much from the state as they get from Blue Cross-Blue Shield for the same services. Others are paid at rates as low as 40 percent of billings.

The governor also provided no recognition of the need to pay civil service employees the raises which have been set for next year. This item, by itself, makes the governor's budget $180 million out of balance.

The House last week passed budget bills with most of the governor's shortfalls still in the bills, except for the new programs. The bills do not present a balanced budget. For the first time in 20 years, I voted against every one of the budget bills.

Park man dies in submarine

By John Minnis Assistant Editor

A Grosse Pointe Park man whose dreams were well on their way to being fulfilled died accidentally April 10 while putting his dream to the test.

Carl Hardwicke, 29, died near Interlochen while 40 feet under water in Green Lake in his dream machine: an 8-foot long, 3 1/2-ton three-person submarine he and partner Gregory Hansen of Warren had built.

During the mishap, Hansen, 27, was badly cut on his head, face and body and was rushed to a Traverse City hospital and then to a hospital in Kalamazoo, where he was put in a decompression chamber. He was released from the hospital April

Hardwicke's body was recovered by divers at about 11:15

"I am grieved about the loss of my friend and partner," Hansen said in a written statement. "Naturally, my concerns at this time are with our families and our friends.'

Hardwicke is survived by his parents, Roger and Jane Hardwicke; a sister, Mary Beth; a

Drunk driver uproots tree on Lakeshore

A drunk driver traveling eastbound on Lakeshore in the Farms April 14 drove up on the median and struck and uprooted

When police arrived at the scene at Provencal and Lakeshore a little before midnight, the 25-year-old man was standing next to the car on the median. The driver smelled of alcohol, his eyes were bloodshot and glassy, he appeared disheveled, and he stumbled over to the police car when the officer arrived, according to police reports.

When asked if he had been drinking, the man said he had drank a lot of beer. He failed two field sobriety tests. He refused to take a Breathalyzer test at the police station.

The man was also discovered to have suspected marijuana in his possession, and suspected marijuana butts and seeds were found in his car, according to po-

Minor attempts buy at bar

A minor who attempted to purchase alcohol with false identilication at a local bar was turned in and cited by Woods police April 15.

According to police reports, the 20-year-old Woods man presented a driver's license belonging to a 22-year-old man under a different name.

The bar apparently reported the incident to police, who then ticketed the man for attempting to purchase alcohol.

Shooting accident reported in Woods

A 67-year-old Woods man accidentally shot himself in the hand while attempting to unload a .25 caliber handgun April 15.

The incident occurred at 2 p.m. when the gun went off and a bullet struck the man's left small finger. The man's family took him to the St. John Hospital emergency room and the Grosse Pointe Woods police were notified.

According to the police report, no handgun is registered at the accident victim's address.

Hot tub party cooled in Shores

Shores police responded twice to reports of a loud hot tub party April 7.

According to police reports, an unidentified caller at 11:30 p.m. said a neighbor was having a hot tub party in the back yard and creating a lot of noise.

The officers responded and spoke with a 16-year-old who said she would move the party indoors.

At 12:30 a.m., the Shores police again got a call about the hot tub party, and the officers again spoke to the teenager at the home. This time she agreed to pull the plug on the party.

brother, Scott; a grandmother, Bernice Hardwicke Baad; and a grandfather, Leslie Croswell.

The funeral was held April 13 in Traverse City. The body was cremated. The family has asked that memorial contributions be directed to either the Nature Conservancy, 2840 E. Grand River, East Lansing 48223, or to the Michigan Loon Preservation Association, c/o Michigan Audubon Society, 409 E. Avenue, Kalamazoo 49007.

Hansen, who is married and has two children, graduated with Hardwicke from Michigan Technological University in 1984. Hardwicke had a degree in mechanical engineering, and Hansen earned an electrical engineering degree.

Hardwicke and Hansen's dream was to build and market a small submersible that could be used for recreation, tourism, research, salvage, search and rescue and underwater inspection and maintenance. The two men succeeded in building their dream by introducing the Seaker 100 minisub at the Detroit Boat and Fishing Show at Cobo Hall in January.

The small sub appeared to be an immediate success. According to reports, the partners started their own company called H2O Submersibles and had orders for 28 of the submarines at a cost of

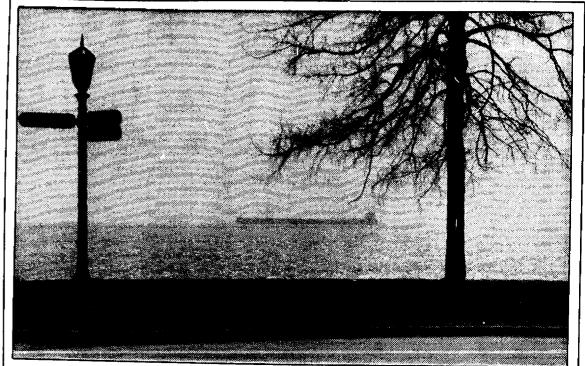

One of the first jobs for the Seaker sub was to retrieve War of 1812 cannons from the Detroit River in conjunction with the Dossin Great Lakes Museum on Belle Isle and the Detroit Science Center. The Detroit River dive was to take place this week.

Hardwicke and Hansen had been testing the prototype submarine in Green Lake throughout the day while Hardwicke's father remained on the surface in radio contact with the sub. He told Grand Traverse County sheriff's deputies that the sub had successfully surfaced and gone down several times before the tragedy occurred.

As Hardwicke's father watched, a huge air bubble hit the surface and Hansen's body came up as well. In a small boat, the elder Hardwicke pulled Hansen to safety, but his son's body never surfaced. Rescue personnel later found the sub using underwater video cameras, and Hardwicke's body was recovered.

Following the accident, reports speculated that the sub's clearplastic front nose cone collapsed or broke loose. The accident happened so quickly that investigators doubted if even Hansen knew exactly what happened.

On Tuesday divers planned to try to refloat the submarine using air bags.

Recycling is something that everyone can do to help with the environment. Grosse Pointe recyclers share their tips on this environmental activity the whole family can participate in.

In addition, you can compost leaves and grass from your yard.

Local families who recycle say it's not too difficult a task, especially if you stay prepared, aware and get others interested.

Three recycling families reported the same system: three bags - for glass, plastics and cans and, of course, the stack of newspapers in the garage. When the bags are full — usually about once a month — they are left at one of the many local drop-off points. In addition to the regulars, Ann Nicholson of Grosse Pointe Farms collects white office paper. "It's amazing what comes in through the mail," Nicholson said. "Think about all your junk

The other high-volume recyclable in the Nicholson house is cat food cans. Of course, all food containers are washed out, and those cans that can be are crushed.

Nicholson has been recycling for about a year, because "it was real hard to recycle before we had a place to take them." She has gotten her family into the act, too. Her oldest son is ready to present an office paper recycling program for the 30story office building in which he works in Chicago, and another son instituted a recycling program in his college dorm.

State goal: 50 percent recycling by 2010

Acid rain: Illegally exporting pollution

Our good neighbors to the north - and south of Detroit are feeling a bit put upon. Half the acid rain now falling in Canada is caused by emissions from coal-burning plants in the United States, and Ottawa would like to see the U.S. emis-

lassic car auction in Cleveland attracts deep pockets

Maybe it's the influence of Al Taubman, Detroit-area owner of Sotheby's of London, New York and Palm Beach, but that venerable auction house held its first American auction of classic cars a couple weeks ago in Cleveland.

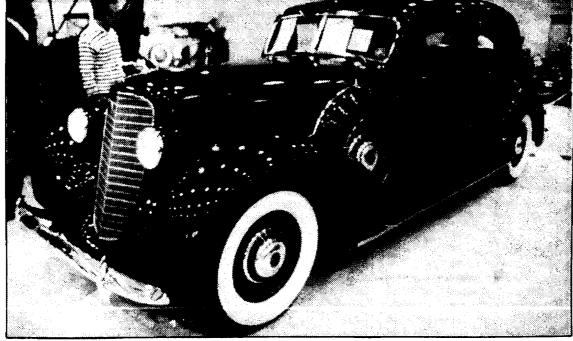

The Sotheby's name seems to have a magic about it, because the auction in Cleveland's Convention Center brought out plenty of high rollers who bid prices up to high levels and who bought 62 of the 69 cars offered.

And in a reversal of the current strong trend toward the gaudy, finned and chromed chariots of the '50s and the muscle cars of the '60s and early '70s, over two-thirds of the cars sold were pre-World War II vintage classics. And some were even brass-era pre-World War I an-

The buyers clearly included a number of collectors and investors who were attracted by the fact that 56 of the cars sold were from the collection of the Frederick C. Crawford Auto-Aviation Museum of the Western Reserve Historical Society in Cleveland.

Highest price of the day was brought by a magnificent 1934 Mercedes-Benz 500K Cabriolet "A," which sold for $660,000. By contrast, a '65 Ferrari 275 GTS Spyder brought $341,000, which ain't hay, but fell short of the hyped predictions of over a million dollars for the musclar Italian.

There has been a lot of discussion recently in collector car journals about the decline of interest at shows and auctions in the pre-war classics, "brassies" and just plain old automobiles. People in search of nostalgia now favor cars of the '50s and '60s because those are the cars the babyboomers grew up with. But the crowd attracted to the Sotheby auction was there in search of classics.

Dean Kruse, leading classic car auctioneer based in Auburn, Ind., said there are four distinct types of people who attend car auctions - hobbyists, investors, collectors and dealers.

"The hobbyist buys a car for the challenge of making it run and the fun of driving it and showing it off," Kruse said. "He wants to buy cheap and he wants to use the car.

"The investor is analytical and buys a car as a hedge against inflation. The investor usually buys a convertible and he's usually gutsy.

"The collector usually wants a particular car or cars. He may specialize in certain makes or types of cars. He will usually outbid the hobbyist and investor for the cars he wants. The dealer usually buys on order and may be limited on how much to spend.'

The Sotheby's crowd apparently included a number of serious collectors. While the most spirited bidding involved '30s classics, the few post-war cars on sale brought surprisingly high prices. A '43 DeSoto four-door sedan sold for $8,800 and a '55 Ford Fairlane V-8 station wagon (not even a fake woodie) brought Lowest prices of the day included $3,850 for a '54 Chrysler New Yorker four-door and $2,750 for a handsome '61 Rover, but the lowest was $2,640 for a '54 Messerschmidt "bubble

My own favorite was a black '36 Lincoln K300 four-door sedan with body by Willoughby which looked like it had just come out of a ganster movie. Sitting in it and rolling the window up and down would eliminate any doubt about whether Americans can build high-quality cars. The quality of this car, Edsel Ford's answer to the Packard and Cadillac, is incredible.

Also arousing lust were a diesel-powered '52 Mercedes-Benz four-door convertible which sold for $51,700, and a '41 Ford convertible that went for $16,500.

One of the most interesting cars at the auction did not sell, an extremely rare French car, a 1929 Avions-Voisin. One of only 90 Voisins known to exist, this one was discovered in a barn in Switzerland in 1968. What makes it unusual is that its body from the windshield back is made of wicker.

It was built in a suburb of Paris by Gabriel Voisin, who claims he invented the airplane before the Wright brothers did.

About 20,000 Voisins were built from 1919 to 1939. There are only five or six in the United States, including one that was Autos originally owned by Rudolph Valentino.

There is a lot of history at this kind of auction and that's more fun than the nostalgia. Sotheby's next auction will be Saturday, May 12, in Palm Beach, Fla. If you go, take plenty of money. The auction will feature Duesenbergs and Rolls-Royces from the Rick Carroll collection.

His voice has also been heard on the radio and in television commercials for everything from Elias Brothers Big Boy Restaurants to ABC Appliance Warehouse, and his face can now be seen in a commercial for Arbor Drugstores. Later this year he will be in national commercial for Lincoln Mercury.

Filming the Lincoln Mercury commercial was interesting, he said. In the commercial, he plays a police officer. "They paid me handsomely to say, 'Need a lift, pal?"

Although he doesn't consider his role in commercials as acting, he has recreated many roles in various community theater productions. He also has portrayed Mark Twain, Theodore Roosevelt and Edgar Allen Poe in cne-man plays.

"I've always loved acting," Bufalini said. "I guess I started because I was so shy. When I was young, I was very fat. I grew up in an Italian household and that's what you do, is eat. You eat when you're happy, you eat when you're sad, and I got Although he's been doing more work in front of the camera, he says he still prefers theater for its continuity and radio for its immediacy.

But Bufalini speaks most proudly of his family. He married Judi, a childhood friend who shares his love of old cars, 13 years ago and today they have four children - Angelina, Giulia, Marty III and Dante. He tries to pass on the Italian traditions taught by his family. He believes preserving one's heritage is of utmost importance.

'I guess part of it is because I'm a first generation Italian," he said. "My parents came over here with literally nothing, except the clothes on their backs. Like most people, they tend to compensate for what they don't have by focusing on what they do have. They had a fierce pride in themselves and in their morals and their heritage.

It was that pride in themselves that kept the family intact despite taunts and discrimination while growing up. He remembers that residents of the east side neighborhood his family moved to circulated a petition

The plan currently being recommended by the drain board calls for $18 million in cleanup efforts including the construction of the retention tank, which would cost nearly $9 million.

Engineers say the project could be started by March 1992 and be completed by late 1994.

At the public hearing April 9, Woods Mayor George Freeman said, "Before we spend millions of dollars, we want to make sure we are recommending the correct solution. We know something has to be done, but at this point we are not sure which is the best solution.

For years, Volvo has led you to believe they make the safest cars you can buy. All they're missing are the facts to back it up.

For years, Saab has been building safe cars. But unlike some of our competition, we have the facts to back up the claims:

Fact #1: In a recent study of over 900,000 accidents by Sweden's largest insurance company, Folksam", the Saab 9000 was one third safer than the Volvo 700 series, twice as safe as the average car in its class and three times as safe as the average car in all classes.

Fact #2: For the past five years, the U.S. Highway Loss Data Institute (HLDI), comprised of over 250 major insurance companies, rated the Saab 9000

Fact #3: For 1990, each and every Saab sold in America has anti-lock brakes and driver's air bag as standard equipment.

Academy students win at science

Grosse Pointe Academy claimed 71 awards at the 33rd Annual Science and Engineering Fair of Metropolitan Detroit, held April 3-7 in the Cobo Conference/Exhibition Center.

"Do Plants Have Ears?" "The Trouble With Trash," "The Dimples of Golf Balls," "Big Cholesterol — Little Children," "Sludge Busters," "pH Changes in Acid Solutions Containing Elodea Canadensis" and "Bubble Juice" were just some of the eclectic subjects covered by middle school students.

"We are very proud of our students," said Headmaster Sidney I. DuPont. "It is very exciting when 98 percent of our entrants receive a ribbon. We realize that this kind of excellence is evidence of a middle school science program that stresses the biological and physical sciences as well as the team effort between the students, teachers and parents."

A grand prize in the Junior Division was awarded to eighthgrader Michael Verb for his project titled "Garlic — The Vampire of Bacteria."

Stander wins Earth Day essay contest

Taryn Stander, a fifth-grader at Ferry Elementary School, won first place in the Huron-Clinton Metropark Earth Day 1990 Writing and Art Contest.

More than 500 fifth-graders from Wayne, Washtenaw, Livingston, Oakland and Macomb counties entered the contest. Stander received a $500 savings bond for her efforts.

Additionally, Albert Duzzie, another fifth-grader at Ferry received an honorable mention for his essay about recycling.

College fair

Representatives from more than 125 colleges and universities from throughout the United States will participate in the University Liggett School College Fair on Wednesday, April 25, at the school, 1045 Cook Road, Grosse Pointe Woods.

The program begins at 7 p.m. in the school's gymnasium. The event is being held in an arenatype setting, so all college representatives will be available at once to discuss their schools and answer individual questions from students and parents about any aspects of the college admissions process.

All 10th- and 11th-graders and their parents are strongly encouraged to attend, and younger students are welcome. The event is open to the public; there is no charge. For more information, call Director of College Guidance Kim DeMeulemeester at 884of an eagle you could see the dangers that threaten every living thing on earth.

Come follow me and try to picture what I see and tell you. Now, just yesterday a freighter got stuck in a reef and the oil in it spilled. That poisoned all the fish. My cousin, the osprey, died today choking to death on a deflated balloon. He thought it was food and ate it. Lately I've been very hungry, too. I can't eat fish nearby because every day I watch kids and adults dump garbage into the water and ground. The fish and animals eat that garbage. When I eat fish, I get the garbage in my system. The garbage affects the shell of the eggs I lay. Then the eaglets are very sick or deformed. They usually die.

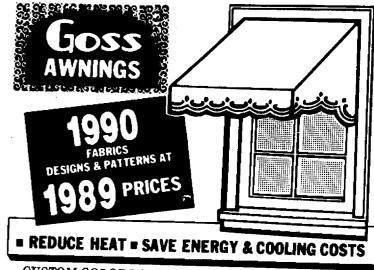

Notice the chemical plant below. It is polluting our air with chemicals and creating smog. Adding to this problem are land developers that destroy my nesting grounds or the hunters that try to kill me. We, the American symbol, have now become endangered.

This happened because of litter and contaminated things. Because my fellow eagles and I are only a portion of this living nightmare, not many people worry about our decreasing population. Within 130 years Americans could lose the bald eagles forever.

I'm worried about my future. Isn't it time you started to worry more about yours?

Three teams of Grosse Pointe students will represent the city in Ann Arbor at the annual Michigan Future Problem Solving State Bowl championship to be held later this month.

Tiffany Battle, Ryan Gravilla, Jim Dailey and Mike Franzinger will represent St. Clare of Montefalco. It is only the second time a Catholic school has moved to state competition.

Prepare for SAT/ACT

"SAT/ACT Preparation" will be offered this spring by the Department of Community Education beginning at 7 p.m. on Tuesday, April 24, and on Thursday, April 26.

The classes, taught by Elizabeth Soby, will be at Grosse Pointe North High School, 707 Vernier Road, Grosse Pointe Woods. Fee for the six-week class is $35, payable in advance.

For current high school students, the class will familiarize them with the concepts and formats of the tests used by colleges as part of the admissions process, including the Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT), the American College Test (ACT) and the Achievement Tests (ACH).

Students will complete a grammar review, practice verbal strategies, review roots and prefixes and have the opportunity to complete several practice tests. Students who complete the work assigned will feel more comfortable in the testing situation. A $15 materials fee is payable in class.

Student Spotlight Meagan Lamberti

Each week in this column, we will focus on the work of a student. It can be a poem, a drawing, a short story, a picture of a scientific experiment or a woodworking project, a book review.

Meagan Lamberti, a third-grader at Richard Elementary School, has written this story. She is the daughter of Leo and Nadra Lamberti of Grosse Pointe Farms.

My Visit to Neptune

"Three, two, one, blast off." the voice came from mission control. I started to leave Earth's atmosphere. I was on my way to Neptune. I was 8-1/2 and had won an essay contest titled "Neptune Just Another Planet?" I was the only one going.

"Ahh." It had been a long five years but I made it. I checked my air supplies before my spaceship "Savage" landed on Neptune. By this time I was 13-1/2. I put on my spacesuit, opened the heavy door and grabbed my camera. Then 10 little aliens ran toward me. "Ahh." I yelled, managing to take six snapshots. I ran back into "Savage."

Two days later I found out the little things were harmless, so I went out again. "Hi," I said.

"Hi," they said shyly. I looked at my feet.

"Gross," I screamed.

"Gross," they screamed, running into a crater. I screamed like that because I was up to my knees in ice cream. I put some on my finger and licked it. 'Yum, raspberry," I said.

Quietly the 10 little aliens came out of the crater, got in a circle, and sang "Berry, Berry." I got an idea...I ran into my spaceship, got a box of sugar cones, and a scoop. I ran back out and started scooping the ground into the cones.

'Come here," I called. Ten little feet ran toward me. "Here," I said, pushing a cone near one. "Gross," he called with a

"Not gross, good," I said. Then I got a brainstorm, "Do you want some more?" I asked. They nodded their heads. I lured them into my ship. I gave each one a cone and blasted off.

And if you want to know what happened after that...the aliens found a nice condo in Las Vegas. Now there are a lot more. So if you see one walking down the street, which you more than likely will, tell it I said "Hi."

On my trip to Neptune, I also learned that it has two moons, is larger than the Earth and days are 22 hours long.

Accreditations renewed

The North Central Association accreditations for Grosse Pointe North and Grosse Pointe South have been extended through the 1989-90-school-year----

Once every seven years a school must undergo a comprehensive self-study followed by an NCA team visit. Both schools were last evaluated in 1985. In the interim years, a school is accredited on the basis of its report on conditions in the school and on such supplementary information as the North Central Association requests.

The NCA is the largest of the country's regional accrediting agencies. It is a voluntary-membership league of 6,000 schools and 900 colleges and universities within a 19-state region. The association works with schools to strengthen education through evaluation and accreditation.

Shot "from the hip." Monte Nagler grabbed this shot showing the strong military presence in Beijing's Tiananmen Square.

Tiananmen Square today

Monte Nagler just returned from a trip to China courtesy of the Chinese government, Northwest Airlines and the Sheraton Hotel chain, all expertly coordinated by Travel Key/U.S. Exchange of Grosse Pointe. Nagler discusses his feelings during a visit to Tiananmen Square. In his next column, he'll write about some of his photography experiences while in China.

I remember last summer watching television and reading newspaper accounts as the tumultuous events unfolded in Tiananmen Square. I was, like everyone else, deeply moved by what was happening there. I was also unaware at that time that in less than a year I would be in Beijing in Tiananmen Square.

Even though the "incident" (as it has come to be called) is over, it was nevertheless a pensive experience as I walked through the square reflecting on what had occurred. I saw chips in the cement where tanks unmercifully had crushed student protesters. Perhaps, I thought, I where blood had been spilled and later cleaned up.

I was aware that before June 1989, Tiananmen, at 100 acres the largest public square in the world, was always jam-packed with people. In fact, past ceremomore than one million people to the square at a given time. Yet, when I was there, the square was not crowded. The people who were there seemed ill at ease and not relaxed as if they were remembering the sad events that had happened.

There was a very heavy military presence and I was surprised at the youth of the soldiers. Every few yards a guard stood at rigid attention and as I glanced in all directions, units of soldiers were marching through the square as if to underscore the military strength.

In a way I felt sorry for these young soldiers as I studied faces I was not allowed to photograph. They possessed an artificial look. stripped of individuality and mo-

And I believe these words are also sound advice for our country's dealings with the Chinese government and people. Throughout the past decades, Chinese governmental policies fluctuated between periods of a relaxation in structure followed by sudden and severe crackdowns. Hopefully, things will soon ease and with patience and persistence a new period of calm will be restored.

School project is lesson in international politics for 'Yankee Bird'

By Ronald J. Bernas Staff Writer

As part of her senior project for Kalamazoo College, Rebecca Wolfe was supposed to do an intensive three-month project in her chosen field - political sci-

"I wanted to go to Australia because I was there a few years ago and I was intrigued by their system of government," Wolfe said. "I was particularly interested in their compulsory voting. They require each of their citizens to vote or they are fined $50."

So she sent her resume to people at various levels in the government, hoping that she would be able to get a job when she arrived. She left in December.

Wolfe was met at the Australian airport by some friends. Wiped out from the 24-hour plane trip, all she wanted was sleep.

But her friends told her: "You have a job interview downtown in an hour. Let's go.'

A man named John Howard interviewed her. He told her he would get back to her in a few weeks.

"It wasn't until I got into the cab that I realized who he was," Wolfe said.

Howard was one of the top leaders in the Australian Liberal party - a misnomer because it is closer in ideology to our Republican Party - and for six years he was the federal treas-

Up until a few weeks before Wolfe arrived, he was the shadow minister, the top Liberal who would run against the prime minister, should an election be called. He was replaced with a shadow minister the Liberals thought would be more likely to win.

Rebecca Wolfe stands in front of the famed Sydney Opera House in Australia.

After a few weeks - during up meetings for Howard with which Howard and his staff ran background checks on her, she was later told - she was offered a position in his office.

As in England, elections are not held at regular intervals. Once a prime minister is elected, he or she has three years from that date to hold another election, but it can be held anytime during those three years, usually when the prime minister's popularity is running high.

The election is held within weeks of being called.

While Wolfe was working in Howard's office, an election was called and she was pressed into service in the media relations department. She answered press inquiries, was in on intense policy discussions, and set up national press conferences. She set the Australian version of "60 Minutes."

She was amazed that Howard seemed to be getting more press than the Liberal candidate for prime minister.

She became known by the press corps as the "Yankee Bird" - bird being Aussie slang

"I would turn on the news every night and see him on television - everyone wanted to interview him," she said. "I kept thinking 'I can't believe I'm here, I'm just a stupid college

"In essence it was like I was mean this man (Howard) knows and really admires George Bush. he's had dinner with Margaret Thatcher, he was a powerful man. I sort of hero-worshipped him. He's the most brilliant man I have ever met."

He was on the cover of Australian Newsweek, and whenever they went for lunch or walked down the street, he was besieged with requests for autographs.

"Elections down there are just vicious," she said. "The government is under much more scrutiny than anyone here can imagine.'

The election was held the day she was to return home. Howard's party lost in the closest election in Australian history. Much of the press coverage now says that the Liberal party lost because it had replaced Howard as the head. If he had still been the party leader, much of the press is saying, Howard would be the country's leader.

In her 200-page dissertation on the experience for her college, Wolfe describes her views on mandatory voting: "I hate it. I think it's terrible to force your citizens to vote." And Aussie life: "It's much slower paced. They think Americans work 24 hours a day, drink too much coffee and don't ever rest."

The experience also made her re-think her plans.

"As long as I can remember I've wanted to go to law school," said the 21-year old Wolfe. "Now, I'm not so sure. This was fascinating work. I'd like to go to Lansing and see if there's a place for me there.'

Class fee is $155 per person.

After a long day of work. Wolfe and John Howard attend an election function.

Hundreds of people packed the Grosse Pointe War Memorial on Saturday to make sure the Earth's future isn't as gray as the day was.

Sponsored by several members of Grosse Pointe Citizens for Recycling, Earth Day Expo provided people with facts, figures and fliers from organizations like Greenpeace, the Sierra Club and the Audubon Society, informing those who attended that the world is in a precarious state, and that something must be done now.

It was such a tremendous success, people have already encouraged chairperson Deva Ludwig to make this an annual event, she

Leon sisters live, perform in Paris

By Mary Jane Doerr Special Writer

Jovce Leon of Grosse Pointe Farms believes in the Suzuki philosophy of teaching music every child is a musical prodigy if instruction is begun early enough for the child to reach his or her potential.

If that philosophy is true, then her three daughters are prime examples. Stephanie, Suzanne and Kelly began their musical studies between the ages of 2-1/2

Today Kelly is a violinist with the San Francisco Symphony. Suzanne and Stephanie have formed a chamber ensemble in Paris, where they are known as Le Duo Leon. They are booked until 1992 throughout Europe.

A few months ago Suzanne and Stephanie recorded their first cassette consisting of Dvorak's works for violin and piano and their first compact disk of Faure's music.

For each daughter there has been a long list of awards and recognition: at the University of Michigan, where Stephanie has part of her doctoral work completed; at Juilliard School, where Kelly completed her master's degree; and at Curtis Institute, where Suzanne obtained her master's degree.

Five years ago, Suzanne and Stephanie decided to take some time off from their studies to travel in Europe. They found a demand for their musical talents in Paris and decided to stay.

"Of course, soloing is the ultimate, but the girls are so used to performing with each other," Leon said. "They like getting together with each other and their friends to play chamber music."

Last year, the owner of a French record company, Cassiopee Disques, approached Suzanne and Stephanie and asked them if they would make some recordings for the company.

The Leon sisters picked three well-known Dvorak pieces from the mainstream of chamber music literature: "Sonatina" (Opus 100), "Four Romantic Pieces" (Opus 75), and "Romance" (Opus

In the recording, they capture Dvorak's riveting folk melodies in an alluring style. The manner in which the two musicians follow each other interpretively is probably the most striking feature of the recording. Violinist Suzanne is dominant where the melody calls for it. Pianist Stephanie knows when to follow and when to blend in.

The three pieces, composed during some of the happiest times in Dvorak's life, provide a musical consistency in the recording. The artists' forthright style reflects that happiness in the music.

All three sisters were recognized in Detroit as talented children. Kelly soloed often with local symphonies, appeared on TV, and was a grand finalist in the "Quest for Excellence."

"She saved us a lot of money when she finished two degrees in four years at Juilliard School," Leon said with a laugh.

In Paris, Stephanie has been the official accompanist for the Rostropovitch Cello Competition, the Jacques Thibaud Violin Competition and the Lionel Tertis Viola Competition as well as the rehearsal pianist for the Sorbonne Choir.

Suzanne is currently on the faculty of the Conservatoire de Chatenay-Malabry. She was on the faculty of the Sorbonne.

'Crazy People' hits ad industry

By Michael Chapp Special Writer

'Crazy People" is basically a one-gag movie, which sets up one of three options.

Number one: You don't like the gag, so you automatically hate the movie.

Number two: You like the gag, but not enough to let it carry the whole movie.

Number three: You like the gag a lot. So much, in fact, that it makes the movie an unqualified winner.

Chances are, most viewers will fall somewhere between options two and three. This film has only one thing going for it - a truth in advertising gimmick that becomes the tie that binds the narrative. It's good, but not good enough to earn the movie a place of distinction.

Here's the scenario: Dudley Moore is an overworked advertising executive whose creative juices have stopped flowing. Then he gets an idea: Why not tell people the truth. Honesty, he figures, is an approach none of his colleagues on Madison Avenue have tried yet.

For example: "Try Metamucil It will help you go to the toilet. And if you don't use it, you'll get cancer and die."

This is an approach his superiors think is crazy, so they lock him up in a mental institution.

They think he's crazy, that is, until the ads become a huge success. They then want him back.

The ads — and there's a bundle of them, are the gimmick. Everything else, I'm afraid, is just background material. Filler, at best. That includes Moore's attempts to get his institutionalized friends a crack at the advertising biz. It includes Moore's romantic interest in fellow patient Darryl Hannah. And it includes the film's hackneyed attempts to make moral statements about the value of truth and the intrinsic worth of people that society would otherwise write off as worthless.

Billed as the most suspensefilled shocker in theater history, "Wait Until Dark" lives up to the claim. From the time the play begins on an ominous note until the chilling end, the audience is kept in a constant state of tension.

Tightly written by Frederick Knott who also authored "Dial M For Murder," "Wait Until Dark" was first produced in 1966 and over the years has become a classic example of suspense. It has never lost its power as a killer-diller-thriller play.

Modern technical devices in today's movies designed to hold the attention of audiences fall short when compared with the nightmare tension achieved by the skillful architecture of this play built with interlocking blocks of terror.

Recognizing that uncanny skill, Hollywood adapted the play in two films; one starring Lee Remick and Robert Duvall and the other, Audrey Hepburn and Alan Arkin.

In the Birmingham Theatre production of "Wait Until Dark; Bonnie Franklin, last seen in Detroit when she sang the title song as a chorus gypsy in "Applause, Applause," and best known for her role as Ann Romano in "One Day at A Time," plays the blind young housewife who is terrorized by a trio of ruthless killers intent on retrieving a doll that was given to her husband for safekeeping.

The play opens on a set showing a Greenwich Village apartment. Almost every item on the set has relevance to the play's action - the refrigerator, the fuse box, the blinds, the sink, the washing machine.

The door to the apartment opens and a suspicious-looking character enters. He is obviously looking for something. His search is interrupted when the door opens and another, equally suspicious character arrives.

They are both out on parole and they both have been sumbossy ads that assault us on a moned there by a woman who ran out on them and left them to do time in jail. She never appears but Henry Roat Jr. does.

> He is now in charge of the project they are to carry out: namely to find the doll that is more than a toy. It is stuffed with heroin.

While they are conferring, the door opens. They quickly turn off the lights and hide in corners. Franklin enters. She doesn't bother to turn on the lights, but she pauses in uncertainty and then goes out again.

After considerable verbal byplay that involves the disposal of a corpse hidden in a bedroom closet, the three leave with a body wrapped in a rug.

In the next scene, Franklin's husband Sam is about to leave to meet the same woman who gave him the doll. As he leaves, he warns Susy to keep the door locked because a woman's body was found in the neighborhood and the killer has not been found. He tells her to call Gloria Gloria has problems. A plain. overweight, sloppy teenager, she is sensitive about her appearance and goes into rages and throws everything she can get her hands on — but only un-breakables — "I never throw anything that breaks." Flighty and eccentric, Gloria, plays an important role in the drama.

Harry Roat Jr., who is masterminding the plot to retrieve the doll, assumes various disguises, to fool a blind woman who can't see him. The two ex-cons arrive, also under other identities.

Franklin, however, is not so easily fooled. She picks up clues from the differences in footsteps and begins to realize that while she is talking to one con, there are others searching the apart-plots to outwit the three. She knows where the doll is, and as a blind woman, she realizes that her best defense is total darkness. With the help of Gloria, she removes all the fuses, hides the doll, arms herself with a knife and waits. She is convinced that she is well hidden, but she has overlooked one detail.

What follows keeps the audience on the edge of their seats until the chilling end and the lights go on in the apartment.

This classic thriller gets the outstanding cast it deserves in the Birmingham production. Bonnie Franklin is appealing, vulnerable, courageous.

Tony Musante is both funny in his various poses and totally merciless in his determination to get the doll. Peter Jay Fernandez gives an excellent performance as the soft-hearted crook and Edward James Hyland provides comic relief as his dimwitted accomplice. Jacqueline Cohen as Gloria stands out as a mixed-up teenager.

It is likely that theater buffs may have seen other productions of "Wait Until Dark," but the Birmingham version rates with the best. It plays through May 6. Call 694-3533 for times of perfor-

The monthly tabloid has a circulation throughout all the Points, Harper Woods, St. Clair Shores, East Detroit, Roseville and parts of Detroit and Mount Clemens. She mailed her first five issues to 60,000 east side homes. The forgiveness of debt results in taxable income, so the gambler owed tax on the $2.9 million of 'income.'

Matthias H. was charged with tax fraud. At his trial, he requested that the judge instruct the jury that if the defendant believed he didn't have to file a tax return, they should acquit him. The judge refused Matthias' request and the jury convicted him. But the Court of Appeals overturned the decision. In the Court's opinion, since Matthias was accused of criminal nonfiling, the question of his intention was a key element. The judge should have instructed the jury as requested.

By Margie Reins Smith Feature Editor In April 1929, J. Bell Moran and

Serena Murphy Moran moved into their new Tudor mansion, "Bellmor," 15420 Windmill Pointe Drive. They were young, wealthy, educated. Their family of four lively youngsters included Charles, 11; Bill, 9; Serena, 7; and baby John, 4.

The family lived in Bellmor for 24 years.

Bellmor is in the midst of a massive redecoration project by 28 different interior designers - as the Junior League of Detroit's Show House 1990. During the month of May an estimated 26,000 people home's 33 rooms, 16 bathrooms, sixcar garage, grounds and basement - even the boiler room of the 62year-old mansion. The Junior League of Detroit expects to raise more than $225,000 from this biennial fundraiser.

The reminiscences of the children who grew up in Bellmor offer a fascinating look into what life was like on Windmill Pointe Drive in the 1930s.

J. Bell Moran, the youngest son, remembers his introduction to living beside Lake St. Clair. He was 4 years old.

"I was born in a house on Iroquois in Indian Village that was next to the streetcar line on Kercheval. The streetcar bells, which could be heard all night, must have been comforting to me. I slept like a bomb.

"When we moved to Windmill Pointe, the only noise I could hear was of the freighters. It was disturbing to me. I wanted the bells." Moran looks back on his childhood in Bellmor with affection. "I loved the garage. It had a turntable in it, which, if properly balanced, could be turned with one finger. The turntable is gone now.'

Moran remembers climbing trees with next-door neighbor (now wellknown actress) Julie Harris, playing Monopoly in the basement playroom on rainy days, and sneaking away to attend Sunday movie matinees at the Punch & Judy Theater with the Harrises. John Bell Moran Sr. considered movie viewing to be an inappropriate activity for the Sabbath.

"Bellmor represents a way of life that's gone because nobody has help anymore," Moran said.

Before the Depression, the Moran family kept Bellmor running smoothly with the help of a butler, a chauffeur, a governess, a cook, three maids, two laundresses and a gardener.

Serena Moran Schmidt also has fond childhood memories of Bellmor. She remembers a chauffeur named Albert who let the children tie their toboggans to the back of his snow plow and helped them build a toboggan slide on the front

"We had a very correct butler named Dillon," she said recently in a history she wrote for the Junior League of Detroit when she heard that Bellmor would be its Show House for 1990.

"Every other Sunday my parents let Dillon and our (governess) Anne take the same Sunday afternoon off. We were left in charge of some hapless or helpless underling. As my parents went calling, we gathered some pals and played sardines.

"We had another game. You had to get around a room without stepping on the floor. You may imagine the foot marks on the tables and in odd places . . . Once, on a dare, one of the boys climbed up the inside of the clothes chute.'

She said that the living room of Bellmor had green velvet drapes trimmed with small tassels. One Sunday when the butler and governess were off, the children played train. They curled up on the radiators under each of the windows and used the green velvet curtains to pretend they were in the berths of a Pullman car.

Schmidt has vivid recall of the interior furnishings of Bellmor. It was decorated by G. Macstay Jackson, she said. The house was filled with English antiques, silk brocade and velvet fabrics, and an occasional Italian chair or French wig stand for variety.

Family portraits decorated the walls. One was painted by Gilbert Stuart and was later given to the Detroit Institute of Arts.

"Both my parents loved Oriental rugs," she said. "Aside from a thick green carpet in the living room, Oriental rugs covered most of the first floor, the wide staircase, the second story hall and my father's bedroom.'

Schmidt described her parents' separate bedroom suites. "Mother had the large room looking out on her suggestion of a garden. She had French furniture . . . a Napoleonicstyle French bed which was covered with soft green taffeta ... a chaise longue ... French prints on the wall."

Her father's room was called the monk's cell, she said. "It was English, right down to the last chair. His furniture was carved with linen fold panels in a sand colored wood, a narrow bed, desk and long chest like a sideboard."

Schmidt's Bedroom faced the lake and had a bay window. She remembers the wallpaper: "a pale yellow paper with a pattern in gray blue of a little girl in period clothes and bonnet, walking with her father and a dog.

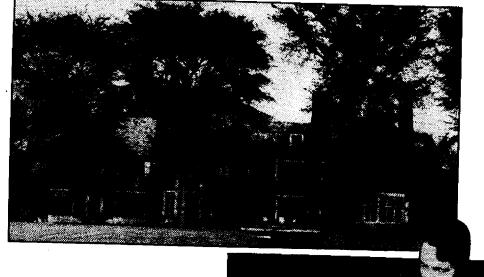

"My two elder brothers shared the middle bedroom. They had large twin spool beds in mahogony. They used the next bedroom with smaller bay window facing the lake as a playroom; then as a study. It had a giant-sized double desk inherited from some family office.

"My youngest brother's room turned the corner, as it were. As a little boy he roomed with our governess as he was delicate; always had earaches.'

Schmidt explained why all of the bedrooms open into each other. "In case of fire. My father was a deputy fire marshall and my uncle Hayward Murphy was fire chief of Detroit until 1940. My parents were always conscious of fire ... You could close all hall doors and travel from one bedroom to the next.

"From the attic windows, one could step out onto a small balcony fabric was removed and replaced with paneling to match the other three sides of the room. At the same time, my parents decided to add a bay window large enough for a breakfast nook.

'It was just another house in its heyday," said John Moran. "There were three miles of estates from the Grosse Pointe city limits to the Ford House. Most of them were on much larger pieces of land." One by one they were torn down, he said, because it was profitable to divide the land and sell it as six or seven separate lots. "The houses on Windmill Pointe are left because they are only on small plots. Ours was on one and a half acres. Now it's significant only because it's one of few that's left.'

Serena said her parents usually gave dinner parties for 10 or 12 people. They gave one huge party.

According to articles in the society sections of The Detroit News and the Detroit Free Press on June 29, 1940, Serena Moran's deb party was a magnificent success. The ball took place in the gardens of Bellmor, beside the lake. Guests danced on a hedgebordered out-of-doors ballroom built on the lawn, but a crew was ready to move the entire party into the huge recreation room should the weather

One article said that 300 young people came to the dance, the festivities lasted for nearly 24 hours, and that Mr. and Mrs. Moran received before the big bay window in the drawing room.

"The Books (next-door neighbors) gave a dinner for young friends of my brothers and other debutantes," said Schmidt. "Our channel was shallow, but the Frank Cousins managed to bring their yacht right up to the breakwater in front of the Books'. There was always a gate between our houses, so everyone trooped back to Bellmor for the ball. . . . The orchestra was under a shell beside the dance floor. Fountains at the water's edge twirled around to spray water in rainbow colors. We danced until dawn."

Bellmor was designed by Robert O. Derrick and was inspired by an English manor house, Compton Wynates, near London.

"My husband and I were able to tour the house in London a few years ago,' Schmidt said. She added that Compton Wynates had been one of her parents' favorites among the great houses and castles they visited during the early 1920s.

The ceilings of Bellmor are 12 to 15 feet high and feature elaborate plaster work with fleur-de-lis and Irish rose patterns representing the blend of the two families of J. Bell Moran and Serena Murphy Moran. The Morans were one of the early French families who settled in Detroit in the early 1700s. The Murphys landed in Plymouth, Mass., in

Throughout the house, the fleur-de-lis and Irish rose patterns turn up in ceiling details, stained glass, wood and brickwork.

Moran pointed out that the two family coats of arms are inset in the large stairwell windows. Morand is spelled with a D, as it was originally. The other coat of arms is from the Lesley side of his mother's family which came from Scotland.

HAVE A PLEASANT TRY AT PERFECTION BRIDGE BY WOODY BOYD THE PASTEBOARD PASTIME

I would nominate today's cunning play by east and south's counter as two of the best examples of exceptional bridge I've witnessed this year. As I reconstruct this adventure you're going to conclude that it's another one of my narratives from world class play. Not so, even though it may seem to be. Actually I was window shopping for good copy for this column, sitting west, when this hand came up at Joyce Krouts'

Saturday afternoon Southfield game. The first star of this scenario was my partner, Chip Doyle, sitting east, one of the bright young students of the game who initiated this "Best Seller" with a fantastic false card. The other, George Alderton, III, the son of one of Michigan's Bridge legends, sitting south, decoded the dupery that east had deployed and neutralized its devastating intent with an exhibition in sound judgement and perfect play. A performance such as they manufactured is a thrill to behold as it's the kind of ingenious strategy that makes bridge the magnificient game that it is. I dutifully led the ace of partner's suit with the intention of echoing with my continuation. On my deuce dummy's ten forced east king. Yes The King! I was quite surprised as it seemed partner would at least have had the king-jack five or six times for his over call. But now I knew I could successfully ruff Chip's third heart as south obviously had the jack. On east's heart, eight declarer invested in a concentrated prognostication of where the cards were. "Tout Le Monde Sen Christ," he didn't have the jack! East had cast a giant shadow of chicanery. He held it and was trying to fabricate an illusion that the jack was with me. The king by east on the second trick was breathtaking, but he had a count on the suit and hoped the miracle play would lull Geoge into a complacent play of ruffing low.

Now declarer wasn't an incautious player and he knew no Jacoby was on his right. Could this student be so stupid to over call a strong no trump with a five card suit and then give him a free discard in a touchy contract? Probably not, but? East must have the club ace . . . why hadn't he played it? Where was the trump king? Could an inexperienced player be so clever as to false card the heart suit? The problem was mind boggling? Finally south ruffed with the queen having concluded that east's play was intended to win for himself this year's A.C.B.L. Academy Award.

George's verdict was worthy for east had made the winning play almost not possible. When I failed to over ruff with the king south's last desperate chance was to drop east's spade king singleton with dummy's ace. If guarded he was down. The casual kibitzer might be startled with this play knowing south didn't have the benefit of viewing fifty-two, but George had everything to gain and nothing to lose.

Holding the trump king, was it judicious for east to play a third heart recognizing that it was unlikely I could over ruff south and that would obviously reveal the missing honors location and subsequent play? If Chip had switched to another suit, south, a fine player, would have wondered why east didn't try and give his partner a heart ruff? The switch you see also sends declarer a message that east knows west's trumps are impotent and by inference is admitting to possession of the missing king. You say rubbish! Nobody, not even the expert can be that clairvoyant! I say they are and daily they reach unbelievable conclusions about card combinations and then make the winning play.

Yes, Chip Doyle made a fantastic play at trick two, the best play possible to achieve a defenders plus.

Schools may not pay for hockey ice time By Rob Fulton

Sports Editor Even though the Grosse Pointe high school athletic pro-

I, like many others, have waited for the Tigers' home opener since last October.

'hat an opener

Even though the roar was more of a purr to start the sea son, I still wasn't going to miss Sparky and the boys on Opening Day.

With a fresh 0-3 start in Boston, the Tigers weren't looking too sharp, but even a winless team shouldn't be missed at its home opener.

Under bright skies, glorious sunshine and a crisp breeze. baseball was back in Detroit and I was willing to pay the price to get a cozy, near the field seat to see and hear Frank Tanana toss at Opening

The sound of vendors competing for fans' hard-earned money was musical, as was the sound of Bob Taylor's voice as he sang the National Anthem. Sparky at the plate with the lineup card, fans screaming and looking for autographs. That's baseball, and what's better is that it was finally taking place at Tiger Stadium.

I began to settle down, but suddenly realized I wasn't quite prepared. I paced aimlessly and watched people scurry to seats. I heard questions of how well the Tigers will do this year, and I heard others say they don't care about the Tigers but just attend the home opener.

Opening Day is just like Easter mass, everyone's there just once a year.

This was the time I had waited for. I listened to Boston's lineup, then heard Lou, Alan, Cecil, Lloyd and Mike ring out for the Tigers. The attention was now turned to the Tigers, dressed in pure white uniforms with the old English D, as they took the field.

The sun wasn't beating down on me where I was seated, but it didn't matter. I was warm enough knowing baseball was back where it belonged. The first three games in Boston didn't do much for me, but n the boys were back in town and that's the official sign of spring and summer.

I picked up a hot dog, some chips, and a pop and settled in for nine innings of pure enjoyment, win or lose.

The aroma of hot dogs, roasted peanuts and jumbo pretzels didn't really filter through my nose, but that didn't matter. What was impor tant was that I could hear what was going on, and I had a seat I could relax in without anybody asking me to move so they could get to the concession stand.

Vendors continued to scream, tunes were played between innings and everyone seemed mesmerized by what was taking place at the corner of Michigan and Trumbull.

Innings went by quickly, which made me wish it was a doubleheader. Not working a full day and being acquainted with the Tigers passed the time away, and since baseball is our pastime, it was only fitting that I do just that - pass time.

Life was rough, let me tell you. No waiting in line for the bathroom, nobody to spill my hot chocolate and best of all, nobody cheering obnoxiously behind me. This was a magical day. A day to recognize the boys of summer and enjoy being a baseball fan.

I really enjoyed my 20th straight home-opener, but instead of listening to Paul Carey and Ernie Harwell do the playby-play, eating hot dogs at my desk, cheering loudly in the office, and watching co-workers tune in the radio, I'll have to buy a ticket next season.

PAC recognized the "ice time cost" to finance hockey at North and South was excessive. It also felt the money could be used to improve other programs. North rented the St. Clair Shores Civic Arena for approximately $8,000 to $9,000, and South rented the (GPCR) for close to $9,000. PAC feels the excessive money for ice time could be appropriated elsewhere, and also looked at - and recommended - ways the schools could defray some of that ice time cost.

Grosse Pointe Community Rink

The bulk of the cost to continue to operate hockey programs at North and South could potentially fall on parents of

A legitimate argument by hockey parents may be, "Why would we have to pay for ice time, when the football players' parents don't have to pay for use of the football field?'

Valid, but North athletic director Tom Gauerke clears that up.

"Hockey parents may say that it's not comparing apples to aphe said, "and that is a true statement. However, the cost of a field is not charged to the athletic budget. I don't have to take the per-pupil funds out of the athletic budget for the field, because we don't rent that. We do, however, rent the Civic cilities," Gauerke said. "They

The costs to chalk, cut and maintain fields, as well as basketball courts, come out of the building budget and not the ath-

For the 1989-90 school year, exceeded that by almost $1,200.

"The PAC has recommended that the $8,800 be allotted for the 1990-91 school year, but next year the budget is to be looked at again," said Jo Lake, South's director of athletics. "PAC right now is only offering recommendations. The things it recommends are not to be implemented until every possible South was allotted $8,800 but avenue is pursued to defray the

Heidi Mader prepares for work as a Pioneer

Heidi Mader will be doing the backstroke at Oakland Univer-

By Rob Fulton

Heidi Mader, a four-time record holder at Grosse Pointe North, has become the newest member to join the Pioneers of Oakland University.

Mader, who has been an inte-gral part of the North girls' swim program for four years, signed an 80 percent scholarship to swim next fall for coach Tracy Mader will graduate from North in June with records in the 100 backstroke (59.5), 100 butterfly (58.7) and 200 individual medley (2:14.4.). She also swam a leg on the 200 medleyrelay team that broke a record when she was a freshman.

"I know it's a Division II school," Mader said just a week after returning from the Junior Nationals at Cleveland State University. "But they won the Division II championship this year and the program is very

In November, Mader didn't even harbor any thoughts of attending Oakland, but did talk with Huth.

"He came to a lot of my meets when I was a junior and he saw a lot of them this year," she said. "After the season, I talked to him and at that time I wasn't even considering Oakland."

Until she visited the campus. 'I went for a visit and met the team and was really impressed," said Mader, whose sister Wendy is also a quality swimmer. "After my visit in February, I knew wanted to go there. I like the whole program and the atmosphere of swimming really made the difference.' Mader, who began swimming at the age of 7 at the Grosse Pointe Woods pool, visited Iowa and also drew attention from Michigan State University.

"I went to Iowa and was impressed, but I didn't want to go to school that far from home." Mader said. "Then it was between State and Oakland."

And Huth was glad he could land the two-time junior national

"Obviously we're very pleased to get someone like Heidi," he said. "She's got the talent to be a Division I caliber athlete, but having her in Division II will allow us to give her more attention because she's potentially the best backstroker in Division II."

High accolades for an incoming freshman.

"Heidi will be a solid contributor right off the bat," Huth said. "Her background is very solid, and from watching her swim and perform I can see that she's got the potential to be an individual champion as well as be a part of a championship team.

Huth returns all but his top diver from last year's national championship team.

"I'd have to say our chances to repeat are very good based on what we have coming back for us," he said. "Plus the addition of Heidi will really help us."

Hockey

Hockey is not the only thing being analyzed.

PAC disperses money upon the recommendations from all department heads. After all the proposals are worked out, PAC submits its recommendations to the school principal, who creates the budget and is responsible for matching up the money so it flows where he thinks it should.

After careful consideration, the principal then shows his work to everyone involved and considers further recommendations before the paper work leaves the building.

After that, the principal presents his recommendations to the superintendent at the central office, and the next step is to present it to the school board for approval. Throughout the process, the proposals can be refined at any time.

"The two options that have been presented," said South principal John Burl Artis, "would be: 1) to request parents pay for the ice time, or 2) we try and work out some mutual arrangements with other facilities like University Liggett School or community education."

ULS has an interest in using the South pool, so the money South would charge for the pool use could be cut from South's bill for the use of McCann Rink.

'That's certainly a viable solution," said Artis.

If the cost of ice time continues to rise, Artis foresees the hockey programs going belly up.

'We've got to realistically appraise the cost of the hockey program and right now we're looking for some guidance," he said. 'If it's recommended that it's in our best interest to continue to fund the ice time, then we will. However, in order to continue the program, the cost of ice time should be shared."

Because South exceeded its budget, other programs had to be cut in order to compensate, according to Artis. That trend could continue.

"What we are saying is that hockey is a very, very expensive program," said Artis. "It's a cost program is to continue, and it's a hockey vs. other sports.'

Eighteen athletes played hockey at South this season, and are studying how other school football, cost less per pupil and cost of ice hockey. Letters and there's enough money to outfit questionnaires are being drafted and support freshman, jayvee and varsity teams at both schools. That's approximately 120 kids playing football at one school.

Because athletics are highly visible, it seems that a lot of money is expended to support the programs. However, North's athletic program accounts for only 5 percent of the total building budget, and South's program survives on $211,000 out of an appropriated $7,240,000.

Built into those costs are coaches' salaries, officials' pay, transportation, equipment and supplies, state costs/entry fees, pay for workers at home games, and coaches' services (education and training of coaches).

"I really believe we are getting a tremendous bargain on education and instruction for the money we are spending," said Gauerke. "I want to support our that needs to be shared if the programs because they serve a great need in education for the real concern as we look at the money we are spending, but I'm total number of participants in also supportive of ways we can improve our programs.

Ehresman breaks record

Grosse Pointe South's girls' track team opened the season on a positive note April 12, with an 84-44 win over Regina.

South took first place in 12 of the 16 events.

Junior Karen Ehresman broke the school record in the 100-meter hurdles with a time of 15.7. The old record (15.8) was set by Ehresman last year. Ehresman also won the long jump (15 feet 2 inches), the 300 hurdles (51.9) and anchored the winning 400 relay to claim four first-place finishes.

Freshman Angela Drake also had a banner day, winning the high jump (5 feet), 200 dash (28.5) and running on the winning 800 and 1600 relays.

In the distance races, sophomores Erica Mondro and Michele Evans gave the Lady Devils first places in the 1600 and 800 runs, respectively, and ran on the winning 3200 relay with teammates Jenny Barber and Amy Balok.

Susan Llewellyn claimed second place in the 3200 run, with Ann Llewellyn placing second in the 1600 run.

Suellen Garr won the 400 dash and placed second in the long jump. Susan Blean and Balok completed a South sweep in the 800 run.

In the field events, five South girls cleared 4 feet, 6 inches or better in the high jump. Angela Drake and Jenny Williams took first and second place, respectively. Elaine Ford and Jenny Mangol finished first and third in the shot put, with Ford also placing in the discus.

The sprint relay teams of Tere Gavin, Cheri Andre, Drake, Leslie Arbaugh, Lee Andrus and Katrina Kuntz all took first places, and Gavin added a second place in the 100 dash.

'Angelo cools off Dragons with striking performance

By Rob Fulton

Remember, there are only 21 outs in a seven-inning baseball

And on April 9, North senior left-hander Lou D'Angelo fanned 20 would-be Clintondale hitters en route to his first win of the season, 12-7.

D'Angelo broke Bill Babcock's 10-year old record for strike outs in a game, which stood at 18. Babcock is now the Norsemen's freshman coach.

Under wet and cold conditions, D'Angelo heated up the Dragons' field with fireball fastballs and curve balls that were falling off the table.

He gave up only four hits, but three of them were two-run homers with the help of the wind.

"Lou was outstanding," said North coach Frank Sumbera.

"He threw very well and was impressive from start to finish."

D'Angelo fanned the first seven Clintondale batters he North got on the board in the first when Steve Craparotta doubled home Eric Merte, then rode home on consecutive walks.

North struck for five runs in the fourth inning to give D'-Angelo a 7-3 lead. The big blow in that rally was Marc Adams' run-scoring double. Mike Van-Syckle knocked in Dave Senter, who singled to start the inning, and Paul Straske and Merte also had RBI singles.

Craparotta extended North's lead to 10-3 in the fifth when he hopped aboard on an error and two runs scored. Those runs scored just after Straske drove in Adams, who singled. D'Angelo then served up a two-run homer season," he said, "but I wasn't so in the seventh on Craparotta's two-run homer.

Craparotta finished the day with two hits in four trips, and Senter, Adams and Straske each had two hits, and combined for four RBI. Merte had four stolen bases and scored four runs.

North took it on the chin three days later at home, losing a doubleheader to Lakeview, 12-7,

In the first game, Paul Straske took the loss on the mound after giving up seven runs in three innings. Dave Senter relieved Straske, and gave up two runs in two innings. Jason Gaca tossed two innings, giving up three runs on four walks.

'We didn't play very well and we had a few errors and too many walks," said Sumbera. "You don't win ball games like that.'

Dan Watkins' RBI single in the first inning gave North a 1-0 lead, but one inning later Lakeview took the lead with a grandslam.

Tim Sacka, starting his first game in center field, cranked a three-run homer in the sixth inning to finish with four RBI. Steve Craparotta had two RBI on two sacrifices.

Marc Adams pitched the distance in the nightcap, but the only run he got from the Norsemen offense was in the first inning, when Craparotta got Straske, who doubled and stole third base, home on a sacrifice

The momentum began with Jon Seagram, the No. 1 singles player who was a pitcher on last year's baseball team.

Seagram's return has been quite successful, as he's beaten two ranked players in three matches. In North's win in the Troy tournament, Seagram beat a nationally ranked player in three sets to take the No. 1 singles championship.

Fire Oh, my aching headThese are headaches the Headaches represent one of the three most common neurological symptoms which affect Americans.

There are a variety of headaches and depending on the type involved, the problems that cause the headaches may be serious enough to warrant medical atten-

Dr. Fernando Diaz

Headaches can develop from problems outside they head or inside the head. The problems outside the head most commonly resulting in headaches include muscle spasms in the neck, which are most commonly referred to as tension headaches.

Patients with arthritis in the neck, especially in their 50s and 60s, frequently will complain of headaches instead of neck pain. Other problems outside the head such as problems with the joint that holds the mandible to the skull, known as temporomandibular joint syndrome, or TMJ syndrome, can cause pain generally on one side of the head.

Patients with poorly refracted vision who need replacement of eyeglasses, and who are straining their vision, will frequently get headaches in the front part of the head. A common problem often seen in patients with poorly controlled hypertension is the development of headaches, which are generally located throughout the

The most common problem located inside the head is migraine headaches.

These patients are generally young, mostly women, who experience headaches which frequently are preceded by what we call an aura. This is a warning symptom that can cause nausea, vomiting, tingling on one side of the head, sometimes numbness or tingling on one side of the body, or the development of flashing lights on one side of the visual field. These headaches, which usually start in a specific part of the head, are frequently intense. Also, they cause the patient to frequently become extremely nauseous and vomit. These headaches are usually short in duration and are totally relieved after brief periods of

Other headaches that develop inside the head can have a more serious cause.

The ones we would be most concerned with are what we would term the "worst headache of your life." These are headaches which occur usually without warning. They are extremely severe from the onset, are located in one specific place in the head, and frequently cause the patient to lose consciousness or can be followed by the development of loss of vision, loss of speech or paralysis on one side of the body.

These types of headaches are most commonly caused by the rupture of a blood vessel within the head. This could be the result of a small thinning of a blood vessel causing a blood blister on the vessel wall, which is known as an aneurysm.

Other causes of bleeding inside the head include the rupture of a blood vessel tuft, which is usually a congenital abnormality, known as arteriovenous malformation. Aneurysms occur most commonly in women in their 50s, whereas arteriovenous malformations occur without sex preference and generally any time after age 20.

Other causes of bleeding inside the head may include the rupture of tiny blood vessels within the brain, which occur most commonly in patients with poorly controlled high blood pressure. This type of a hemorrhage occurs most commonly in women, generally in the black population, but they can also be seen in the general popula-

Another serious cause of headaches is the development of a tumor growth in the head.

This patient frequently has a headache, which is usually dull in nature, and located very specifically in a pinpoint area of the head. The headache is fairly constant, it is unchanged by activity or position, it occurs mostly at night and is, for the most part, unrelieved by medication. This headache is extremely worrisome because it is often the hallmark of a tumor in the head, which would require prompt medical attention.

Some patients with tumors in the head may have headaches for a long time, but may not complain about them because they frequently have changes in their thinking and level of concern.

In general, people who have headaches which are extremely severe and uncommon should be evaluated promptly if they have the following symptoms:

Loss of speech, vision or consciousness; experience headaches which are located in a very specific part of the head, or are associated with memory changes, weakness or paralysis of an extremity.

Individuals who experience these symptoms should be seen by a physician so the possibility of a serious medical problem can be ruled out.

Keeping the good life

Older American's Month.

This is our country's fastest growing population group. In the next 50 years, the number of people over 65 will increase from today's 12 percent of the population to more than 30 percent.

The health of older Americans is very important to the overall health of the country. Although the elderly definitely have additional challenges in their lives, life can continue to be productive and filled with choices.

Many conditions that were once simply attributed to the process of aging can now be averted or controlled, and the majority of people can determine the quality of their golden years.

Good health, both mental and a purposeful, active life. Ade quate nutrition has been singled out by many medical doctors as the most influential factor toward maintaining good health in later years.

In Senate hearings on aging, needs. held in 1985, Robert F. Thompson, M.D., director of geriatrics

May has been designated the influence of nutrition that was far reaching in its impact on the aging process:

> "Overall strength, immune function, mental function and disease management are commonly impaired - at least in part - due to the inability to maintain nutrition ...'

Also, Jeffrey Blumberg, Ph.D., of Tufts University's Human Nutrition Research Center on Aging (Boston), observed that, "Poor nutrition status has been found to lengthen a patient's recovery time and may result in secondary complications such as poor wound healing, impaired immunity, anemia, muscle and organ degeneration, prolonged hospitalization or even death.

Evidence also shows that nuphysical, is a major influence to trition is linked to many of the chronic diseases which afflict older adults and the elderly.

Although nutrition is an important component of preventive health care, many older Americans don't meet their nutritional participants don't meet the recommended level of calories, and two thirds have inadequate calcium consumption. Studies indicate that the requirement for some nutrients may need to be increased in the elderly because of a decline in the body's ability to absorb them. Vitamin D, vitamin B6, vitamin C and calcium are the most common examples. Calcium, for instance, has been shown to decrease as much as 50 percent with age.

Obesity, a major problem among Americans, takes on added dangers for older citizens because they are at higher risk of developing heart disease, hypertension, cancer and diabetes. Therefore, they tend to worry more about the possibility of de-

When deciding on a diet, make sure it is not one-sided; it should contain food choices from all four food groups.

Many older individuals have a tendency to choose pre-packaged foods; they and the single 20's group have this in common. Instead, it is recommended that they choose from whole grains, fresh fruits and vegetables, and other natural foods that have little or no preservatives. Even though many of the older Americans choose to eat out many selection, this no longer presents the problem it did a few years

The older individual living alone presents one more factor leading to poor nutrition.

In January 1985, the results of a study were presented in San Antonio, to the Society of Teachers of Family Medicine. The results showed that those who ate alone had the poorest eating habits of any group; those who had someone else fix their meals ate a little better; but those who went out to eat with others had the best nutritional intake. This would indicate the importance of maintaining an active social life, enjoying friends and family whenever possible and kany

Gertrude Reynolds, from the Office of Senior Affairs in Albuquerque, New Mexico, gave some advice - directed to the elderly but beneficial for us all:

"A very important aspect of reaching the maximum in good health is in making the decision to take responsibility for your own well-being. This would mean each of us seeking correct key is finding out what works best for you; what we need to avoid and what we need to change in the way of diet.

"There is no set formula for proper or correct eating. Each person has his or her own particular needs. It is a very individual thing ... Older people, particularly, need to be aware of the attitude of resignation: giving up. Don't give up on any part of your body. The love you give yourself makes a difference in the way your body functions."

American's life expectancy is higher than it has ever been. But, a longer life should also mean a healthy, productive life. Choosing of to a eat nutritiously, staying socially active and deciding to take charge are all important steps toward that goal.

Life does not come with a guarantee for you to live a certain number of years. So, whatever years you may have left, start now to use them to your best ability.

LINC is a non-profit organization whose purpose is to place goods no longer needed by individuals and businesses into the hands of metropolitan Detroit charitable agencies. If you have any items no longer of use to you, Operation LINC knows who can and will use them. Please call LINC at 882-6100

Spring has sprung and that signals cleaning season. After you have shuffled and sorted through your closets, drawers and attics, spring over to the LINC warehouse with some donations.

CHRISTLAND Prevention Outreach Program Center which provides community outreach, substance abuse and educational programs would like an OVERHEAD PROJECTOR.

EVEN though the seasons change some of the requests for goods never do. One ongoing need for many of our member organizations is CLOTHING for INFANTS and CHILDREN

Those hard working women at United Sisters of Charity would like a TWIN BED for victims of a home

FURNITURE, LINENS, and HOUSEHOLD ITEMS seem to be things that are in great demand pres-
