Teachers, administrators, president among retiring class of 1990

Not only seniors leave school this June never to return again. Teachers, administrators and even school board members leave fond memories behind.

The retiring class of 1990 consists of 21 people, one of whom is the school board president, who while not technically retiring, has spent the last 12 years serving on the board.

Retirees, in alphabetical order, are Diane and Bob Barnard, Richard Barshaw, Bill and Darlene Christofferson, Jack Coury, Jean and George Goodwin, Nancy Hogan, Claire Hunt, Lillian Hynan, Virginia Kuhr, Robert LaVacque, Irene Lowther, Mary Markel, Dick Markel, Bill Mestdagh, Mary Jane Naz, Bob Shover and Neil Suomela.

Some of them sat down recently and discussed their careers with the school district.

After 25 years with Grosse Pointe Schools, 19 as principal at Brownell Middle School, and the last six as principal at Parcells Middle School, and a total of 34 years in education, Bill Christofferson says retiring is a mixed bag of feelings.

"It's hard to leave," he said, "especially if you've had a good career, one you've enjoyed for all these years. It is tough to walk away.'

After he walks away from the school, he will also walk away from the area.

He and his wife Darlene will move to Minnesota, where they will live in a cabin on a lake where Christofferson grew up. The two will winter in Florida. Mrs. Christofferson, who has worked as a classroom assistant in the Reading/Writing Resource Center for 16 years, is also retiring this year.

With 25 years spent in middle schools, Christofferson has developed a special affection for students in that age group.

"It is a special challenge," he said. "But they're also the most fun. It's my favorite age group. They're dealing with all kinds of changes, and the challenge is not to fire them up, but to channel their energies into education. We have to keep school as a priority for them."

At the school's recent awards night, he received a standing ovation from parents, students and teachers.

But he knows he didn't do it all himself, he said, indicating that the people who do the work are the teachers. His job is to guide and facilitate and to lead by example.

Park considers using trash to trash airport expansion

'There's a certain

Assistant Editor ting its trash where its opposition is in If grass and papers were also diverted regards to the proposed Detroit City Air- from being burned and ultimately buried port expansion.

Councilman Daniel Clark at the council's meeting Monday night proposed recycling municipal wastes, such as grass and paper, and using the money saved to finance the fight to block the proposed expansion of City Airport.

Clark said he couldn't take credit for the idea, which was first proposed last month by a resident during a hearing on the 1990-91 city budget, which was approved Monday.

The Park currently has a recycling drop off site at the old Unocal station on Jefferson, but it isn't the sale of recyclables, such as glass and aluminum, that Clark had in mind in raising anti-airport funds. Rather, big cost savings could be utilized merely by diverting large quantities of waste from going to the Grosse Pointe-Clinton incinerator.

According to City Manager Dale Krainiak, a study by the incinerator authority showed that of the Park's annual 3,500 tons in municipal waste, 80 percent is made up of grass and paper waste, including newspapers.

If all grass, leaves and newspapers were eliminated from the waste stream, the Park would have to pay for disposing of far less in tonnage going to the incinerator. Also, the cost of disposing of the ash at specially designed landfills has skyrocketed and has reached $55 per ton. The increased ash disposal costs are expected to increase the Park's refuse disposal budget by nearly $250,000 in the coming fiscal year.

The savings, which Krajniak termed "cost avoidance," could then be saved for legal and other costs to battle the proposed expansion of city airport.

Park councilman Already all the Pointes and Harper Woods have kicked in $5,000 apiece to hire a consultant to help in the fight against the airport. Also, the Park has designated $100,000 of its emergency Clark said he expected no action on his suggestion Monday night. The idea definitely needs more study to see if it makes sense, he said.

Woods' day care suit settled out of court

By Dan Jarvis Staff Writer

A lawsuit filed against Grosse Pointe Woods by a resident claiming the city discriminated against both her and her babysitting business has come to an end after two years.

The suit was filed in June 1988 after Woods resident Mary Roose, who babysat children in her home, was issued a ceaseand-desist order by the city.

Roose, who felt the city was selectively enforcing a zoning ordinance prohibiting homes from being used as commercial businesses, sued the city for discrimi-

Last week attorneys for Roose said the city offered to settle out of court for an undisclosed amount. Roose accepted, agreeing not to babysit for pay any more in the Woods.

The settlement amount was less than $25,000 and will be paid to Roose and her attorneys by the city's lawsuit insurance carrier, Scottsdale Insurance Co.

Roose's co-counsels, Mary Ann Arsenault and Mary O'Donnell. said the city's zoning ordinance said. restricts the use of residential homes to residential uses.

But an exception in the ordinance allows a certain amount of business activity as long as the character of the home is not changed and as long as there are no paid employees working on the premises.

The problem, said Arsenault, is that the city enforces some activity while allowing others to continue. She said a local telephone directory reveals that numerous businesses are listed to Woods residential addresses.

The Woods has systematically clamped down on babysitting operations, while allowing homebased plumbers and construction outfits to continue operating, Arsenault said. As an example, she cited an earlier babysitting operation that was shut down by the

O'Donnell said she and her husband bought her wedding ring from a legitimate jewelry outlet in the basement of a Woods home and had to wait in

"The fact that the city has singled out day care and turned a blind eye to other businesses is just not consistent," O'Donnell

Arsenault pointed to the city's motivation as a backlash against working women who leave their children with day care providers. "We feel the city is saying that women should be at home taking care of their children," Arsenault said. "This way it discourages women from going out to work. No matter what your feeling is on whether women should be working or not, daytime care benefits all of us in the long run when children have good care during the day either by a parent or by a day care provider."

Roose's attorneys said the case was scheduled for May 15, but prior to the trial date, they were approached by the city's insurance company attorney who offered to settle out of court.

Roose's attorneys issued a list of demands, including one asking that Roose be compensated for loss of full use of her home as well as embarrassment, grief and humiliation.

They also wanted the city to pay attorneys' fees and agree that babysitting is not against the city's zoning ordinance.

Though the city was not willing to admit liability, it did agree to pay Roose and her attorneys an amount less than

She and O'Donnell said many attorneys feel that the Federal Fair Housing Act, which prohibits discrimination in housing, has an application to this case.

"The act allows you to use your home in a broad manner of ways as long as it is primarily used for residential purposes, Arsenault added.

"The settlement sends out the message that Roose has been vindicated," she said.

Patricia Irving, the attorney with Scottsdale Insurance acting on behalf of the city, said the settlement sends no message at "The lawsuit says nothing," Irving said, "and it leaves the issue in an ambiguous fashion. No side admitted right or wrong."

Irving added that the city needs to add definition to the zoning ordinance regarding day care so that the city would have

Wisconsin, Michigan tribes face threats to treaty fishing rights

Cries of "red nigger" and "Injun, go home" fill the night. Signs proclaiming "Save a walleye, spear a pregnant squaw" wave about a crowd of flagdraped protesters. Rocks hurled from sling shots arch into the darkness. State police in full riot gear and billy clubs nervously form a human barrier between hundreds of angry citizens and a small group of Indians.

The Deep South in the 1960s? No. it's Northern Wisconsin in the spring of 1989. Last April, 200 protesters were arrested at the boat landings during the 15 day Chippewa spearfishing season. With the 1990 season only days away, Northern Wisconsin is buckling down for another round of possible violence and confrontation at the landings.

Why are our neighbors in Wisconsin so angry at the Indians? At the heart of the problem lies the treaties that the U.S. government made with the Chippewas about 150 years ago. Contrary to popular belief, these treaties were not made a result of war between the white settlers and the Indians. Rather, they were created to avoid war with the Indian nations. At that time, the various Indian tribes (estimated to be about 300 at the time of Columbus) were treated by our government as sovereign, selfregulating nations with governments of their own. Just as the federal government today makes treaties with the Soviet Union, so too did they make treaties with the Indian nations in the 1800s.

The U.S. government, in an effort to avoid conflict with the Chippewas in the Great Lakes region, signed treaties with them in 1837, 1842, and 1854. The Indians agreed to sell their land in the northern third of Wisconsin, the western half of Michigan's Upper Peninsula, and part of Minnesota (known collectively as the "ceded territory"). In return, the Chippewas were to receive good, guns, health services, and money. In the treaties, they also "reserved" some of the land they sold for permanent settlement (reservations). Although the original land base has been diminished greatly by subsequent federal government policy, there are still six Chippewa reservations in Wisconsin, six in Michigan, and seven in Minnesota.

More importantly, the Lake Superior Chippewa (the name designated in the treaties; they call themselves Ojibwa) specifi-

The story on airport expansion in the May 31 issue should have made clear that the amendment to the state transportation budget and the bill that would allow adjacent cities to vote on expansion of airports are separate items.

Last week's story on Buzz" Van Almen should, have said that Pierce Middle School is in Grosse Pointe

... in the territory ceded." These

"treaty rights," as they are called, are usufructary rights, which are property rights or interests that a seller of land may choose to retain in that land (such as mineral or easement rights).

In recent years, the federal courts have upheld the treaty rights of the Chippewa to hunt. fish, and gather off the reservations within the ceded territory. Prior to the 1970s, it was not known by tribal members (or acknowledged by the legal community) that they could do this.

Here's where the trouble begins. The traditional method of harvesting fish for the Chippewa in Northern Wisconsin is spearing at night by the light of torches. The light attracts their favorite fish, the walleye (Lac du Flambeau is French for "Lake of cally reserved the "privilege of the Torches"). According to state hunting, fishing, and gathering and local regulatory agencies, the six Chippewa bands in Wisconsin collectively took 16,000 walleyes during 1989. The non-Indian angler took an estimated 672,000 walleyes last year.

Anti-treaty organizations, such as STA (Stop Treaty Abuse) and PARR (Protect American Rights and Resources) are opposed to Chippewa spearfishing of spawning walleyes for several reasons.

First, these groups claim that spearfishing depletes the resource, and that it results in lower "bag limits" for the non-Indian angler. They believe that fewer fish in the lakes, in turn, result in less tourism, on which the Northern Wisconsin economy relies heavily.

Second, these groups claim that spearfishing, which is not permitted for non-tribal members, is unfair to those people who must use the less efficient

"hook and line" method of catching fish. They say that the Indians should be required to observe the same seasons and methods of fishing as all citizens of Wisconsin.

Third, some members of these groups do not even recognize the validity of the treaties made with the Indians. The belief that the treaties are old and in need of "modernization" is common

There is no single reason for the incidents at the boat landings. However, misunderstanding of each others' culture clearly fans the flames of discontent in Northern Wisconsin.

Stereotypes and misconceptions abound. The lazy, drunk Indian on welfare. The materialistic, racist white man motivated by greed. Too few people have chosen to prove these stereotypes wrong.

Since last season, positive steps have been taken and much discussion has focused on breaking down the barriers to communication and understanding. But change will come slowly, primarily through the inevitable realization that the economic survival of Northern Wisconsin requires that both the Indian and white communities put their self-interest aside. Until then, Chippewa tribal members in Michigan, Minnesota, Canada, and elsewhere will anxiously watch as Wisconsin struggles through another painful episode of racial conflict.

Howlett elected to school board

By Ronald J. Bernas Staff Writer

In extremely light voter turnout, Timothy Howlett was elected to fill the school board seat vacated by board President Jon Gandelot.

Howlett tallied 1,206 of the votes cast. His opponent, Linda Schneider, had 843.

"I feel great," Howlett said. "I knew I had a lot of terrific people helping me throughout the district, and that's what made the difference."

With only 2,049 of the approx. imately 45,000 registered voters in the Grosse Pointe School district going to the polls, the turnout was less than 5 percent. Park resident Howlett won in Danielian's younger sister, Ashley, 5, recently won a similar art contest by offering window painting artworks in the Village.

State school reform awaits 1990 miracle

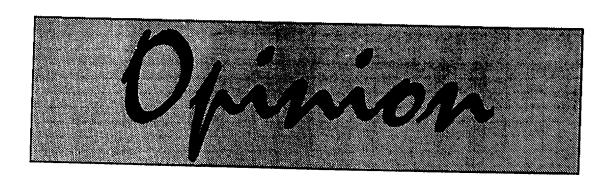

It would be a miracle, no less, if the state finally adopts a new school financing plan this year.

But if the state doesn't act, there is a strong possibility that legal action could force Michigan to adopt a new financing plan to guarantee that poor districts will be able to offer the same quality of education as wealthier districts now do.

Even this additional incentive, reinforced by a decision last week by the state Supreme Court of New Jersey, seems unlikely to spark action in Michigan this year because the education issue is so closely tied to the race for governor between the incumbent, Democrat James Blanchard, and the GOP challenger, Senate Majority Leader John Engler.

Just as the governor's views influence the Democratic House, so the Senate leader's positions are reflected in the GOP Senate. As a consequence, it is difficult to believe any compromise can be voted into law although several initiative proposals may make it to the ballot in November.

From Grosse Pointe's viewpoint, any change is apt to be costly to the support of the Grosse Pointe school system. Several proposals would cap local spending on the schools and others would cut even the limited amount of state aid now coming to Grosse Pointe and similar well-financed districts.

Most of the legislative proposals as well as several initiated proposals offer a mix of a reduction in property taxes and an increase in state school aid to needy districts. Unfortunately, none of them propose realistic ways to raise new revenue to offset the property tax cuts.

For example, the Senate Republican plan backed by Engler would increase state aid to schools over a five-year period until aid matches, 50-to-50, all local school property taxes statewide with property tax credits at an estimated increase over current levels of $1.75 billion by 1996.

The measure would limit state aid to wealthiest districts to the 1990-91 school year level, except for state reimbursement for Social Security and school pension payments for school employees and for courtordered payments.

Replacement funds, under Engler's plans, would come from a hiring freeze, a 5 percent or 6 percent cut across the board in state spending for state services other than education and other savings. But the beneficiaries of state aid hotly challenge such proposals, of course.

The House plan would reduce state reimbursements to districts for employee Social Security and retirement payments, with the deepest cuts in wealthier districts such as the Grosse Pointes and the money redistributed to moderate and low-income districts.

The bill, already passed by the House, would also reduce aid to affluent districts for programs such as classes for gifted students and dropout prevention. In addition, it would within three years shift about $200 million in aid from wealthy to lower-income districts, taking into consideration such factors as personal income, property wealth and tax rates.

This measure, passed by the Democratic House, would have to go to a Senate-House conference committee along with the Republican Senate-approved bill, a situation which offers little prospect of agreement between the rival camps, in the view of most observers.

With the Legislature about to go into summer recess, the current prospects appear to justify the earlier forecast that it would take a miracle to achieve success at this stage. Yet in politics, they say, wonders never cease.

And the New Jersey decision, coming after similar state high court decisions in Montana, Texas and Kentucky and pending actions in eight other states, does indicate that Michigan also may be called to account for not providing equality of education in its public schools.

There have been no court decisions on the issue in Michigan but at least one court case is still pending. The Michigan constitutional requirement that the Legislature in required to "maintain and support a system of free elementary and secondary schools" might be interpreted to require that such support provide for equality of educational opportunities.

If that interpretation is a possibility, surely it would be better to have the Legislature draft a workable plan than to have the state face a court-imposed solution.

The Audit As Bureau No

Durant survives 1st challenge

o the relief of his friends and supporters, Grosse Pointe's Senate hopeful Clark Durant survived his first test last week when the state Board of Canvassers unanimously upheld the validity of his petition signatures.

Durant's victory means that his name will be on the Aug. 7 GOP primary ballot where he will contest Rep. William Schuette for the right to run against Democratic incumbent Carl Levin for the U.S. Senate in November.

A similar state board action also kept on the ballot the name of a second Grosse Pointer, John Lauve, a long-shot candidate for governor who faces state Senate Majority Leader John Engler in the Republican primary.

The actions, pleasing to the supporters of both men in the Pointes and elsewhere around the state, surely seemed to have been justified on the basis of practicality if not specific law.

The state requirement that at least 100 signatures from each of 20 counties accompany each candidate's filing petitions appears to be excessively limiting, even if its intention is to discourage frivolous candidacies.

Durant's campaign had collected 9,582 signatures, almost 3,000 more than required, with 61 counties represented. But only 16 counties rather than the 20 required by the law were represented by as many as 100 signatures. Lauve's petitions had the same failings as Durant's.

Since the state elections director has proposed repeal of the law and even a Michigan state attorney general's opinion said it was probably unconstitutional, the requirement ought to be removed the next time the Legislature brings the election laws up to date.

The flap over the sources of the names on candidates' petitions illustrates that election laws are surrounded by too much red tape of questionable value even though of laudable intent.

Light vote in school election

In advance, Monday's school election had been billed as a contest between a representative of the private sector and a representative of PTOs and their council with both people regarded as highly qualified candidates.

Perhaps the voting split along those lines because no major issues emerged during the campaign. And perhaps for that reason, fewer than 5 percent of the district's registered voters turned out to elect Tim Howlett over Linda Schneider in his second race for the board.

In his advertising, lawyer Howlett had made the point that with the retirement of Chairman Jon Gandelot the board of edupinions differ on whether the legislative deal that restored Detroit's controversial utility tax in return for a 50 percent cut in the state inheritance tax was beneficial to the parties concerned but politics often relies on the art of compromise to obtain action.

In this case, the results were good both from the viewpoint of the city of Detroit which faced economic starvation without the utility tax revenue and the Republicans and other Michiganians who believe the state's high inheritance tax rates are a detriment to the state's economic progress.

Gov. James Blanchard has said he'll sign the Detroit bill and the inheritance tax cut as well "if it makes sense." But state Treasurer Robert Bowman was cool to the inheritance tax cut because of the revenue loss.

To us, it looks like a fair tradeoff, however. The city would get get another chance to avoid fiscal ruin and the state would win a new economic selling point even though it would cost up to $40 million a year.

cation would have only one remaining member employed in the private sector. That was Howlett's way of emphasizing that if elected, he would provide the professional and business leadership necessary to balance the board's membership.

Schneider, on the other hand, had stressed her leadership and involvement with the PTOs and their council, which she has headed, and with other school support committees and activities. However, she also had met Howlett's "private sector" argument by pointing to her 11 years of experience as an executive assistant with GM.

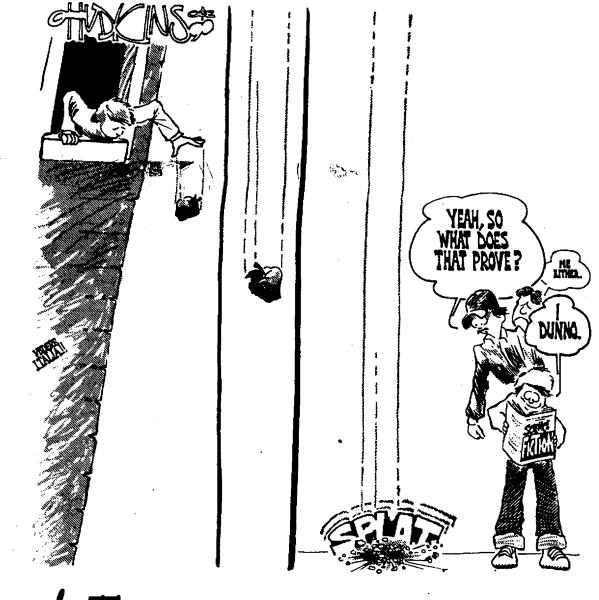

Aside from these appeals, the Grosse Pointe News' found no major differences between the two candidates. Both were generally supportive of the board of education and its superintendent.

Thus, they seemed to agree over the promotion system which in recent appointments gave an advantage to incumbent staff members. Both approved the new site-budgeting effort after their own experience with it. And both backed expansion of the public library's facilities and possible use of the Brownell School site.

Whether or not the election turned on the issue that Howlett cited, the board now has a second representative of the private sector along with holdover board member Vincent F. LoCicero, although Fred W. Adams, another holdover, also has had experience in the private sector as well as in public service.

The small turnout disappointed both candidates but a light vote in the Pointes often reflects, as we think it does this year, the lack of any major criticism of the board as well as the realization that either candidate would have made an excellent new member.

At any rate, we offer our congratulations to the winner, Tim Howlett.

Support airport

To the Editor:

bill

The bad news about the proposed expansion at Detroit City Airport is that if the plan were put into effect, the quality of life in the communities that lie under the aircraft expressways would be destroyed.

The good news about expansion is that we, the people, are performing our essential part in preventing the proposed plan from becoming a reality and that our efforts have already had a significant effect.

Reps. Hertel and Bryant and Sen. Kelly have responded to the avalanche of letters which they have received from concerned citizens by introducing legislation. Pending legislation includes a bill to prevent funding.

Other pending legislation sets up obstacles to the granting of assistance, such as requiring comprehensive environmental impact statements in affected communities, or public hearings and findings of no significant impact, or advance written approval by the National Resources Commission, regional planning agencies and county boards of commissioners.

These legislative efforts on the part of our elected representatives are an accurate reflection of the opposition which private citizens have voiced to this plan.

voiced to this plan.

We have actively opposed this project by communicating with our representatives, and they have done what we, as citizens in a representative governmental system, properly expect them to do — take action on our behalf to protect our interests by working to prevent our federal and state tax money from being spent to construct a facility which would destroy the quality of life in our communities.

Since the proposed expansion cannot proceed without funding from the Federal Aviation Administration and infrastructure assistance (the building of roads, bridges and accessways) from the Michigan Department of Transportation, the plan is exceedingly vulnerable to opposition from the people who pay the taxes that fund these agencies.

Neither of these agencies has yet agreed to provide their essential aid. Both of these agencies dispense our tax dollars.

Those who favor expansion at Detroit City Airport know how vulnerable their plan is to a determined, sustained grassroots opposition. They are pleased when potential opponents perceive the expansion as a done deed and therefore put up no defense. They know, far better than most of us who oppose expansion, that their plan will fail if it is vigorously opposed.

Their best hope for success was that those who opposed

Here's to you, dad

With Father's Day coming up Sunday, I began to think about what I could get dad that could possibly begin to repay what he's given me throughout the years. But I realized there is no way to compensate for what fathers do day in and day out, year after year, decade after decade.

Sure, fathers couldn't do the job without mothers, but moms have a day of their own, too.

First off, how do you repay dad just for putting a roof over our heads and food on the table. And he did this not just for me, but for my six brothers and sister as well. Just think of the money he could have spent on himself instead of us.

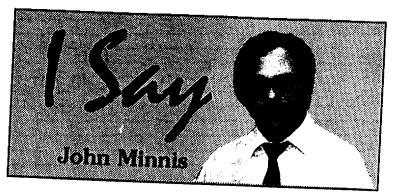

Dad could have been driving around in luxury cars instead of Volkswagen Beetles. He could have lived in grandeur on the waterfront instead of in an old farmhouse in rural, not-tooglamorous St. Clair County. He could have vacationed abroad instead of spending a couple weeks a year at home or in a small, inexpensive cabin up north.

Sure, now that all the kids have their own homes, dad finally has his waterfront home and nice cars, and he does get to travel some. But just think of all the years he had to scrimp and do without just to make sure we had new shoes, jeans and ice

And what about all the things dad taught me that I didn't realize I was being taught, the things that made it possible to become a productive member of society? Sociologists have names and in-depth explanations for what dad did, but he didn't think about all that. He was just being dad.

It was dad who always insisted that if a project was worth doing, it was worth doing right.

And, somewhat of a perfectionist, he carried this belief to what dad at the same company, but I Now I strive to be at least a little like him.

And what about the neat little things dad taught us, though reluctantly on our part, such as masonry, carpentry, farming, forestry, chemistry and technology?

How can I thank dad for putting his own reputation on the line and getting me my first job out of high school? I was more considered at times extreme. also worked for him. The experience made me realize just how smart dad is and why he's such a successful engineer. The technological revolution in this country, I realized, is due to the engineering genius of men like my father. Few children get such an insight into their fathers' professional lives.

Dad also influenced me in the of journalism, though I field didn't know it at the time.

In 1969 "Midnight Cowboy" fortunate than my brothers in came to the little theater in our small town, and some of the residents were offended and called for the movie to be pulled from the theater. My father wrote a stinging letter to the editor of the small weekly paper insisting the theater had a right to show the film and the residents had the right to see it if they wished. If you don't like the show, don't go see it, he argued.

Dad's letter set off a writing war in the local paper and had residents taking sides. The matter was resolved, however, when the theater owner not only pulled the film, but he closed the old theater, which never reopened and today is a party store.

The episode was my first exposure to the workings and value of a local paper.

I also remember when the Detroit Water Board constructed a 12-foot diameter water line from Port Huron to Flint and right through the middle of our farm. Of course, the water company wanted to obtain the use of the property as cheaply as possible.

Dad, however, got the farmers together along the route to join together, hire a lawyer and get the best price for their property.

Well, the water company went to every other farmer and offered a little better deal if the neighbors weren't told about it. Before long, my father was one of an isolated few holdouts and was viewed as an unreasonable troublemaker. Dad was forced to settle, and I think he also got stuck with the lawyer's fee.

All these things dad did throughout the years enriched all our lives. His experiences were also the family's experiences. And we were, and are, proud of of him. Sure, he made mistakes, but what father doesn't. After all, it's not like you learn to be a father first and then have kids. Fatherhood is all on-the-job experience.

For all these things, I am grateful to dad. And perhaps the best thing I can do for him on Father's Day is to let him know he's appreciated.

Thanks dad.

Cable woes

To the Editor:

One of the major frustrations of this community is dealing with the television company, Grosse Pointe Cable

They (cable operators) often black out sports events that need not be blacked out. Sometimes, the automatic timer cuts off programming before completion.

Many channels, from time to time, are plagued with poor reception. If you call Grosse Pointe Cable to tell them of a problem between 5 p.m. and 9 a.m. - or at any time on a weekend or holiday — you get an answering service that tells you nothing can be done. If you press the point by calling during business hours, you get a condescending office worker who talks to you in the tone of voice a teacher uses on a slow-witted pupil.

Grosse Pointe Cable periodically raises its rates and we have no choice but to pay. They are a monopoly. In other communities, many systems offer more channels and better service for less money.

Why do we continue to put up with the shoddy service and high-handed attitude of Grosse Pointe Cable?

Will be missed

To the Editor:

As Trombly parents, we would like to express our gratitude to Sheila Turney, our principal, for the outstanding dedication she has demonstrated toward her responsibilities at Trombly Elementary School.

Over the past six years, she has worked enthusiastically to meet the needs of the parents, the teachers and the community while always placing the welfare of the children first.

During the past 11 years, all four of our children have attended Trombly. It has always been a great school, but under Miss Turney's energetic leadership it has truly come alive. She has accepted new ideas, searched for innovative programs and strived for academic excellence.

We will truly miss her, but wish her the best. Mike and Sarah Verlinden

Consider all aspects

To the Editor:

The debate about the proposed expansion of Detroit City Airport intrigues me. Recognizing that every decision we make involves consideration of trade-offs, I have several questions.

• Do many of the opponents travel by air? If they do, how many use City Airport and how many use Metropolitan Airport?

• Do the opponents have concerns about the expansion of Metropolitan Airport and its effect on the people of Romulus, Taylor, Inkster, Wayne, etc.?

• Do the opponents believe we should cut back in our air travel, or at least limit it?

I live closer to City than most Grosse Pointers, and I have hardly noticed the Southwest Airline flights. Perhaps more flights would be more noticeable, but the planes I have noticed seem very quiet. However, if we are going to continue to fly as much as we do now, or more, it might be neighborly to spread the air traffic around a bit, and take some of the pressure off the communities around Metro. Why should we do to them what we are not willing to do to

Granted that this would have certain negative impacts on our community, but there are benefits, as well. Last fall, I used City for a business trip. Approximately 20 minutes after I left home, I was checking in the terminal, I had parked my car in the lot east of Gratiot and had been able to catch a shuttle immediately, which may not always be possible. Also, if the expansion takes? place, there may be more traffic congestion. Nevertheless, my rather limited experience tells me that City is far more convenient than Metro, and I intend to use City as often as possible when I need to fly. By doing so I will waste less time and less fuel, and produce less air pollution by doing so.

We should be careful that our NIMBY attitudes and whatever else might be motivating the opposition do not cause us to cut off our nose to spite our face. We should also remember the Golden Rule. Let us carefully consider all aspects of this issue.

Favors library

To the Editor:

I have been following your articles on the Brownell Middle School site for the new central library, and I feel totally in favor of the changes made to the plan. It will be a much larger facility to accommodate more people, more books, and more studying space.

The outside of the proposed building is now much improved. With the garden now in front, and more trees, people might like to sit outside and read during the summer months.

For those worried about traffic onto Williams Street, a driveway could be placed between Brownell and the neighboring church, resulting in much less traffic.

I urge the school board to take action and call for a referendum.

Insensitive?

To the Editor:

I am writing in response to Margie Reins Smith's column titled "Grow up, girls" in the May 31 issue.

I am appalled at Ms. Smith's lack of sensitivity to the issue faced by the Mills students. She questions the validity of an education at a women's college, sarcastically jabbing at the Mills women's complaints that, as Ms. Smith describes it, "The brute would certainly tromp on their rights, eloow them out of their front row positions and monopolize all the prestigious opportunities."

The fact is, research has proven these concerns as valid. I'd like to draw Ms. Smith's and her readers' attention to an article by John Leo in the June 11 issue of US News and World Report, stating that, "A fairly large body of evidence now indicates that women learn more, learn faster, and emerge more confident at women's colleges than at coed colleges."

Ms. Smith, however, actually devotes very little of her column to the real issue for Mills College. Instead, she turns to the scene the following way: "They produced tears. They wailed. The looked anguished. The whole demonstration looked like a Midol commercial." She then goes on to explain what the women should have done: write letters, explore solutions, and make speeches.

The fact is, the Mills women did all of this; the press simply didn't cover it. They instead showed "throngs of young women as they bawled hysterically and clutched each other."

As a student at Wellesley College, I have well been made aware of the biased, sensationalized coverage typical of the national news networks this past semester. I also witnessed first-hand the Mills women's efforts. As a student at their sister school, I saw their requests for our support and their petitions, letters, and demonstrations.

Ms. Smith chastises the Mills women for fitting the stereotypes that, "We women (have) been working overtime to distance our-selves from." The truth is, Ms. Smith is the one stereotyping the women by implying that their reactions were forced or conjured, by calling them manipulative, and by failing to realize or acknowledge that they did much more than cry. She asks the women not to show their emotions, but instead to be more like the men of Harvard or West Point. Obviously in saying this Ms. Smith has missed the point of the feminist movement - to recognize and celebrate the individual strengths and abilities of women into to make them more like men. Ms. Smith is the one who has "set feminists' clocks back about 10 years."

It is obvious to me that Ms. Smith is treading where she doesn't belong when she addresses this issue. As a student at a women's college, I am well aware of its advantages, and can only account for Ms. Smith's harsh, insensitive evaluation by her obvious lack of experience with women's colleges. She also fails to realize that while life is the same for the Harvard and West Point men now with the addition of women to the student body, men would drastically change Mills.

Please give the Mills women a little credit. They had the intelligence and insight to recognize the advantages offered by a women's education, and the perseverence to preserve them through letters, speeches, and logical arguments, not the tears that the press chose to showcase. When Ms. Smith asks, "What have (they) done to help other women assume leadership roles ... ?" These women have done much more than Ms. Smith has acknowledged. They have helped to retain a place where these valuable attitudes are formed.

News Illusion is key to creating bits of reality in miniature

By Nancy Parmenter
Staff Writer
Liz Lubera is knitting tiny things. Tiny mittens, too small even for kittens. Wall hangings as small as a postage stamp. Lubera is a miniaturist.

The Grosse Pointe Shores woman has been crafting infinitesimal rooms and practically microscopic furnishings since 1977 and is president of Wee Bees, a miniaturist group devoted to promoting the hobby.

"It's just so much fun," she says, gesturing at shelves full of small versions of life.

The hobby requires enormous attention to detail and a creative approach. Almost everything \andirons. And a real-looking fire Lubera makes is from scratch. The items that start from storebought are so changed and em- member is the illusion," she bellished by the time she uses them, that the manufacturer wouldn't recognize them.

scratch, but it's what Lubera likes to do.

"Buying things isn't as satisfying," she says. "If something has that special touch, something you couldn't find in a store, it's more satisfying.

She doesn't work with metal. so if there are metal pots and pans in her miniature kitchen, she bought them. But not all that looks like metal, is metal. Andirons, for instance.

In a re-creation of the keeping room of her ancestor John Coe, a Rhode Island surveyor, Lubera constructed a brick fireplace, brick by wooden brick, with tiny black wooden "wrought-iron" of plastic resin.

The important thing to re-

If you cover a tiny table with a 2-inch square tablecloth, the Not all miniaturists work from cloth will stick straight out from the table, quite unaffected by gravity. So the miniaturist must create natural-looking little flounces and folds to hang down over the edges, and glue them in

Coming up with the ideas for making miniatures sounds hard, but Lubera says it comes naturally. She finds ideas everywhere she looks, in magazines, in catalogs, and in real life. She also creates imaginary scenarios for the people who live in her miniature houses, as part of her visualization process.

"Almost anything you can think of in the world can be done in miniature," she said.
"The challenge is to figure out how to do it.'

Lubera starts with knowledge she has about how to make things on a real-life scale, then

She pegs floors with toothpicks and knits with tiny wire-like needles. She weaves tiny chair seats with thin threads and braids rugs with embroidery thread. She "turns" wooden rungs and carves knobs and spindles with a nail file.

Authenticity is only one key to a perfect illusion. The illusionist must also wield his or her imagination to find details that further the story: In Lubera's recreation of the Coe house, for instance, the door stands ajar and tiny, colorful autumn leaves of cereal flakes have blown in on the hall rug.

"It's a romantic vision," she said. "It's a loving rendition of historical time."

Food. Haven't we all drooled over the half-inch-long platters of brown roasted turkey, the tiny bowls of bright-colored fruit, the trays of sliced meats and breads fit for a family of elves?

They're all made of clay fimo, to be exact. With its doughy consistency, it can be molded and colored and blended, baked and sliced, so that pinkish-brown meat slices are rimmed with white fat, looking ready to eat (or trim, if elves need be concerned with cholesterol)

For miniaturists who choose to buy some of their special effects, hobby stores for train enthusiasts are a good source, as are October.

Lubera's favorite miniature focus is knitting. Here she displays some tiny sweaters, caps and stores that cater to the dollhouse

Lubera says the whole process, from hatching the idea through its painstaking realization, is engrossing.

Sometimes the years go by and you're still working," she said with a laugh.

It's the process as much as the results that miniaturists cherish, she said. Although a fine job will garner great admiration, there is no competition, no awards, no sense that one's work will or will not measure up.

"We make things for our own satisfaction," she said. "The (National Association of Miniature Enthusiasts) is founded on the idea that sharing is good. Just the fact that you make things. We accept things that a child might make and give them as much respect."

The Wee Bees miniaturist group meets once a month to talk and do a project or workshop. Together, the members have made a Tudor dollhouse that tours the metropolitan area, showing mostly in children's libraries, promoting the love of miniatures. They also put on a miniature show every two years, with one planned for Livonia in

Filter brings out the stars

Become a photographer of the stars. Not movie stars or constellations, but stars added to your photographs by means of a "star" filter.

A star filter is an inexpensive addition to your photo equipment that adds a special touch of impact, a burst of excitement to your shots whether you use color or black and white.

A close inspection of a star filter will reveal a miniature "window screen" imbedded in the glass. This screen acts on any light highlight to produce a starburst effect in your finished picture. And because you always see directly through the lens on your single lens reflex camera, you'll be able to preview and adjust the starburst before you snap the shutter.

Star filters come in four, six, and eight point designs depending on how much of a burst you desire. I prefer the simplicity of the four point star which is easily adjustable to any angle you caused by a descending sun will produce dazzling photos with a star filter especially if you place a silhouetted subject in the foreground such as a seagull perched on a piling or some scraggly tree branches. Reflections in shiny objects such as chrome will give that added "flare" to your pictures. Street lamps at night will generate a certain ambiance just not obtainable in any other way. And, of course, the sun itself photographed through a star will filled with impact.

Here are some subject ideas result in a breathtaking shot that work well with a star filter: Sparkles in the lake or ocean

Remember, a star filter can be used in combination with other filters if, for example, you want to darken a blue sky with a polarizer or use many of the filters designed for black-and-white film. Just attach the star filter directly over the other filter you're using and a winning shot

Always reach for the stars in your photographic growth. And to help along the way, use a starburst filter!

Maplegrove Community Education graduates

Maplegrove Community Education added 38 (including three Grosse Pointers) volunteers to its drug and alcohol awareness speakers corps at a May graduation at the Maplegrove Center for Chemical Dependency. Keynote speaker was Philip Oliver-Diaz, lead drug prevention policy maker for national "drug czar," William Bennett. Graduates come from 20 southeast Michigan communities. They join the ranks of some 300 earlier graduates, who, since Maplegrove began in 1980, have brought the drug and alcohol awareness message to over 275,000 people. The Grosse Pointe graduates are Karen DePaw, Elizabeth Elie and Brian Fossee.

The 80-hour course is given at Henry Ford's Maplegrove in West Bloomfield, with the center's chemical dependency treatment staff among the instructors. Graduates may receive three college credits through Orchard Lake St. Mary's College. The three phase course includes: intensive instruction, workshops, and practice teaching.

Jewelry was missing from a cash box on the second floor of a house on Westchester June 1. The owner told police he suspected painters who were working at the house.

EQUAL HOUSING OPPORTUNITY

Retire

Claire Hunt is so prepared for retirement that she has removed everything that has made her office bright and cheery and a reflection of her.

The walls are bare and the only things on her desk are the absolute necessities.

Is she looking forward to retirement?

"Are you kidding?" she said. Her house, however, is even more barren than her office she said only her clothes are there now.

Hunt and her husband Bill are moving to Maine to open a bed and breakfast inn. Her pleasant smile grows as she tells how the seals frolic in the cove nearby.

"We're doing this for fun," she said. "As long as it's fun we'll keep on doing it. If it gets to be too much, we'll just say there's no vacancy.

Regardless of how much she is looking forward to retiring, Hunt doesn't regret her 21 years in the school district, the last six in her present position.

'Special education has really changed in the last 10 years, she said. "It changed from what I call the 'Statue of Liberty' idea of 'give us your learning impaired, your hearing impaired and we will make it all right.' We had a zealot attitude that we could fix a lot of things.'

But now, through innovative resources and a staff that is academically trained in several areas, the children in special education are being served in the

She is proud of the way the district meets the needs of all of the students.

"With the exception of three autistic children (who are served outside of the district), Grosse Pointe serves every student in its district, and that is unparalleled in the state," she said.

As director of special education, Hunt is responsible for the needs of all learning and emotionally impaired students from the moment they're born to age 26. She presides over a staff of 95 people.

Innovations in special education programming, such as the program for at-risk 4-year-olds who need a boost prior to entering kindergarten, and Kindertalk for those with language handicaps, have kept Grosse Pointe in the vanguard of special education.

Co-operative teaching, a new idea in teaching in which a special education student is taught a subject along with the rest of the class by the regular classroom teacher and a special education teacher at the same time, has proven to work successfully in the schools.

Not only do the special education students learn better, but the other students do too, and so does their behavior.

She is pleased that the district has approved the hiring of a physical therapist for the handicapped students in this past year. Where the district used to farm out the work through hospitals, it can now has some governance over the time the therapist gives the students.

"I think I'll miss some of the things around here," Hunt said. "But I try to look forward to the various stages of life and go gracefully. I'm looking forward

Bill Mestdagh

Bill Mestdagh spent all 32 years of his education career in the Grosse Pointes, with the last 24 years as principal of Mason Elementary School.

With the life of a school principal in one place about equal to the life of a baseball manager with the same team, Mestdagh has set a record and carved out a niche for himself that's hard to give up.

"The kids aren't making it easy on me," he said, indicating drawings and notes from students displayed prominently on his office door. The latest addition is a painted poster: "We don't want you to get retired."

The students have asked him said. if they could vote on whether he can retire or not.

And that's what he'll miss. When he went to college - the University of Michigan - he studied aeronautical engineering, because it was the field aptitude tests told him would suit him best.

But two roommates in education sparked his interest and after two years of studying engineering, he switched to education.

He was hired in 1958 at Maire Elementary School. He added assistant principal duties to his teaching in 1963. Knowing he wanted to move into administration, he applied for the principal position at Mason School to see what the interview procedure was like.

"It was like a test run, but I got it," he said, and at 29 was the youngest principal ever in the Grosse Pointe schools, a record which stands today. He describes his school as one would describe a home, detailing the mahogany paneling and the fireplaces in glowing terms.

"This is my home, my home away from home," Mestdagh

He has put as much care into that school as anyone would into a home

"We have a real strong family atmosphere out here," he said. "I told me that, and they say they don't want me to leave. We have a school where there's a great relationship between the teachers and the parents and the students."

That is in keeping with the school motto he developed his first year at Mason: Teachers and parents equals strong educa-

Mestdagh watches over his students like a father, noting to himself the top athletes, and he keeps an eye on their career as student athletes, and feels he has succeeded when former students come back to visit — with their children.

"I've touched on four decades as principal," he said. "I feel that I have an important role in the development of youngsters. My job has made me emotionally rich because of the very fact that I've been able to touch on the lives of so many children. That's probably what it's all about."

His new life will continue in Grosse Pointe catching up on his life. He looks at it as a new adventure, and will fill his days with golfing, tennis, swimming, gardening and reading the "500 know that because people have or so books and magazines I have laying around.'

He and his wife Ruth will also be visiting their three children and their new grandchild.

Jack Coury

After 31 years as an educator, and 22 years of teaching civics to Grosse Pointe South students, Jack Coury is retiring. But it wasn't an easy decision.

"People always told me 'you'll know when it's time to retire," he said. "I didn't know, but I have two exciting prospects of what I'm going to do now.

The factors which helped him make his decision were opportunities to go into business with his children. Although he isn't quite sure he wants to leave, the decision has been made and he is looking forward to his new freedom.

"The hardest decisions in my life were to get married, to join the Navy, to pick a career and to leave Detroit, but all together those decisions were not half as difficult as this decision was," he

He got into education for the kids and he'll miss the contact. See RETIRE, page 15A

"I love kids at this age," he said. "Especially the ninth graders. It's their enthusiasm, their spark. They're exciting, anxious and energetic."

He ought to know about the temperaments of ninth-graders - he's been the freshman class adviser for several years.

More than teaching facts on the inner workings of the American government, he preaches self-esteem, and praises students for any accomplishments.

"The last line in the Nat King Cole song 'Nature Boy' is 'The greatest thing you'll ever learn is to love and be loved in return,' and that's what I try to get across to my students," he said.

"Having a good self-image is much more important than learning the term of a president or what's in Article 3 of the Constitution," he said. "But we teach them those things, too."

In 31 years, he's seen changes in the students, but only superficially.

"They let it all hang out now," he said, pointing to the media as a major influence in those changes. "But basically what's inside them and what makes them tick as a human being is still the same."

He's been asked to move up the ladder and become an administrator, but he turned it down. "I had no interest in that at all. I did not become a teacher to work with adults, I became a teacher to work with children."

When he studied to be a teacher, he planned on following the school of thought that the subject must always come first, and he believed that "until I got into the classroom. Now I get as close as I can with as many as I lot more than they'll miss me," he said without modesty. "No one's irreplaceable, but then able either."

He says he's the happiest person he knows, thanks to a "wonderful marriage," four sons and a career he loved.

Jon Gandelot

After 12 years on the board of education, Jon Gandelot says it's time to move on.

The five-time board president, as one of his last official acts, will hand a diploma to his daughter, Nancy, Grosse Pointe South's senior class president the same position Gandelot held when he attended the same

He first ran for the school board when that daughter was starting kindergarten. At the time, the board was trying to build an addition to Grosse Pointe South High School without going to the public for a vote, there were too many administrators for the number of students and too many students per class.

In those 12 years the board has reduced the number of administrators by 10 and the class size is much lower. The Headlee Amendment took care of public bodies bonding for construction without a vote of the people.

"I don't think I'll look back," he said. "But I haven't really thought too much about it. I don't know how I'll react when I read what the board does in the paper. But I think it's time to move on.'

Newer movements in the district have changed the top-down way of administrating and with site budgeting, teachers and parents have a bigger say in how the money is spent, improving morale and boosting knowledge in the community of the board's activities.

Knowledge of what the board does and how it works is imperative to maintaining the quality of Grosse Pointe schools. Another set of eyes is always helpful when looking at the size of the budget which has doubled "I'm sure I'll miss this place" a" Trom $30° million to nearly $60 million today in the time Gandelot has been on the board.

Although most of the years again no one's totally replace- served on the board have been good ones, 1983 would not rank as one of them. Then Superintendent Ken Brummel's recommendation to close four elementary schools divided the community and the board.

The board voted 6-1 to close only one school, and when it did. three members were chosen for a

"It was an interesting time," he says with a little humor. People who once were friends were out campaigning to recall him, and others refused to acknowledge Gandelot or his wife, Lisa, when they met in public. In the end, by a margin of more than 2-1, the three retained their positions.

"Looking back, from a personal standpoint, and I'm sure my wife would disagree, it was an extremely beneficial thing for our family to go through," he said. "Steel has to go through a firing process before it becomes hard, and that's what the recall did. It also showed us we had a lot of really good friends who were willing to support us.'

Since then Gandelot has become friends with some of the people leading the recall effort. and some of the others still won't talk to him. "But that's not my problem. We've made it seven years without them.'

This year was not a particularly good one either, he said, referring to the defeat of the proposed library. He calls the failure to get the library plan approved his biggest disappointment while on the board.

Today the school district is headed in the right direction, he said, praising the new superintendent.

"In (Superintendent) Ed Shine we have as much of a continuation of the course as possible," Gandelot said. "He worked with John (Whritner, previous superintendent) and they have similar styles. They're both calming influences."

He believes Shine will be an influence for a long time to come, because of Shine's expressed statement that he would like to see his children graduate ... from Grosse Pointe schools.

In the last 12 years he has seen a marked improvement in how staff and management get along, which helps with union negotiations. He says there is a great trust between the board, central office and the staff.

Other victories he's tasted while on the board have been an increased awareness of substance abuse problems and the hiring of substance abuse counselors, the implementation of strategic planning and site budgeting.

"I don't take the credit for those," he said. "The board's job has always been to hire the right superintendent, and then to support him."

His time on the board has been a way for him to give back to the community what he received growing up.

"What more noble thing can a person who wants to serve his community do than serve on the school board?" he asked.

The $800 to $900 he receives as a member of the board, and more, goes back to the school district. His most recent check half of the total — was donated to Grosse Pointe South's senior class which is installing a set of lights on the school.

He plans on spending more time with his family and with the law firm that bears his name - Gandelot and Dickson.

"I know there's been sacrifices my family and my business have made, but I think my children learned from those sacrifices," he said. "If there's anything I regret it's not being home on Monday evenings (when the board meets) to help with homework, or the other little things I may have missed. I haven't missed too many of my son Michael's Little League games. I think my priorities have always been in the right place.'

Jean and George Goodwin

George Goodwin always said he would retire when he turned 62. That happens in July, after 31 years with the school district. His wife Jean, who has spent 20 years in the district; is going along for the ride.

"The decision was a little harder for me," she said, "I haven't been teaching as long as he has because I stayed home with our daughters for a while."

The two are moving on Monday to a new home in Florida. They're packed and ready, and have been eating off paper plates for a while now.

But they'll miss Grosse Pointe and their teaching.

"There've been just so many wonderful kids that I've met and taught," said the Trombly Elementary fifth-grade teacher. He came here never having heard of Grosse Pointe, but liking the pay rate he read on an application

Mrs. Goodwin, who teaches United States history to eighthgraders at Parcells, has seen a change in the level of awareness of middle school students over her career.

"Kids today are very aware," she said. "Particularly this age group. I like them because they're quite independent.'

But George Goodwin likes elementary students because they're anxious and willing to learn and improve.

Many years ago the pair agreed to not talk shop at home. They share ideas, but decided for their own sakes to leave school at school.

"Plus, it was really great to have the same time off," she

After they retire, they won't totally give up education, they say. She hopes to substitute teach and he hopes to volunteer in the school district in Florida. He also intends on playing more golf and doing n:ore gardening and she plans on renewing her interest in handicrafts.

If they had it to do all over again, only Jean would try something different. She would still be a teacher, but at the high school or college level.

"The only thing that is keeping us from rejoicing 100 percent is that we're leaving our two married daughters and our two grandchildren," they said. We're leaving so many wonderful people, and that's what we'll

Four seniors awarded John Lake Scholarships

This year the John Lake Scholarship committee awarded 1.500 scholarships to four Grosse Pointe high school senors, with the money to be used for tuition at the universities of their choice. The recipients are, from North, Keith Rader and Nicole Ramberger and, from South, Katherine Zachary and Initially, there was a single James Mello.

Zachary plans to study journalism as well as French and political science, at the University of Missouri this fall, while the other students will attend the University of Michigan. Science is Ramberger's career interest, and she hopes to earn a degree in either chemistry or biology. Mello has been accepted in the College of Engineering and Rader, who will major in biology, intends to enter medical school later.

The John Lake Scholarship, now in its 10th year, was established by friends and community leaders as an ongoing tribute to the late John Lake, director of the Grosse Pointe War Memorial

Byrne, Wisgerhof named scholars

Two University Liggett School students were named National Merit Scholars. They are Sean Byrne and Elizabeth Wisgerhof.

Byrne, son of Robert and Linda Byrne of Grosse Pointe, will attend the University of Richmond, where he has been or fered an Honors Scholarship, a partial athletic scholarship and has been named a university scholar.

Wisgerhof, daughter of Mary and Dr. Max V. Wisgerhof II of Grosse Pointe, will attend Washington University.

Of the more than 1 million American students who entered this year's National Merit Scholarship competition, there were 14,000 distinguished finalists nationwide, and only 6.000 ac tual scholarship winners.

Student honored

Paul Dykstra, 12, of Grosse Pointe Woods, a student at Brownell Middle School, received first prize in the March 1990 Cricket League international poetry competition.

For this contest, entrants were asked to write a poem about their own "dreams of glory."

Dykstra's poem appears in the June 1990 issue of the awardwinning children's magazine.

Bill Drummy, 12, of Grosse Pointe Farms, also a student at Brownell Middle School, received honorable mention in the same competition. His name appears in the same issue.

from 1952 until his retirement in 1982. Since Lake originally came to the Pointes after World War II as a high school history teacher, the scholarship program seems a particularly fitting way to honor his memory. The funds were raised through benefit events and individual donations.

$1,000 annual scholarship, given alternately to a North or South senior, then the awards were increased to two and later to four each year, and now in 1990, for the first time, the scholarship amount is $1,500 per student.

"Leadership. . . is an essentially moral act, not - as in most management - an essentially protective act. It is the assertion of a vision, not simply the exercise of a style: the moral courage to assert a vision of the institution in the future and the intellectual energy to persuade the community or the culture of the wisdom and the validity of the vision. It is to make the vision practicable and compelling.'

With the exception of the three doctors, all the principals hold master's degrees.

Summer films high on action

By Marian Trainor Special Writer

The lazy, hazy days of summer are anything but in your local movie theaters. There you will find adventure and enough excitement to keep the adrenalin high.

Along with action-packed, starstudded offerings are sequels of is an appropriate introduction to proven success stories from pre-

Among them is Eddie Murphy's and Nick Nolte's "Another 48 Hours." They bring their own ernments who own the land unbrand of humor to chasing down a wild group of bikers (June 8); "Die Hard II," where Bruce Willis single-handedly fights off a group of terrorists at an airport July - April Debecop Hilliaine which Robocop returns to deadly Detroit of the future to do battle with a drug-crazed behemoth robot who is after his job (June 22); "Gremlins II: The New Batch, in in which creatures attack New York (June 15); "Young Guns II," where Pat Garrett hunts down Billy the Kid (Aug 1); "Exorcist III Legion," where Satan's victims are now priests (Aug. 10); and the leader of the pack now showing, "Back to the Future III," a rip-snorting combination of science and shoot-emdead Western. And would you believe a new "Snow White," (June 8), in which she is separated from her prince and undergoes all sorts of adventures.

All won't be new versions of proven favorites. There are new ones in the running too, such as Steve Martin in "My Blue Heaven," in which he plays a gangland informant who makes trouble for the FBI (June 29);
"Quick Change," starring Bill
Murray, Geena Davis and Randy Quaid as bank robbers (July 13); and "Problem Child," who turns his adopted parents' lives upside down with his antics (July 29); and a film that has been promoted to a fever pitch, "Dick Tracy," starring Warren Beatty (June 15). It is reported that it stavs close to the comic book.

Early at the starting gate but one that will probably be left behind at the post is the actionromance, "Fire Birds," a film about the U.S. Army's attack helicopters known as Apaches and the heroic men who fly them in peace and war. The air combat scenes are spectacular and the film glorifies the two-fisted Army helicopter pilots who engage in sensational war games in the air, but it suffers from a weak script, notably the dialogue. The men are dedicated and fearless. When Brad Little, (Tommy Lee Jones), flight instructor, informs the men, "I joined the army for the same reason you did - to have my heart and mind wired together, cookin' full-tilt boogie for freedom and justice," he means it.

In the opening sequence, chopper pilot Jake Preston (Nicholas Cage) goes up against a vicious mercenary pilot in a chilling dogfight over South America. Two of his friends are killed. It what will follow, the dynamics between South American drug traffickers, the U.S. Government, the U.S. military and the govderneath the helicopter dogfights.

Tommy Lee Jones gives a good performance as the tough-asnails dedicated instructor; Sean Young is a vibrant and attractive Billie Lee Guthrie; Nicholas Cage as laconic Jake falls short of his performances in "Raising Arizona," "Moonstruck" and "Kiss of the Spider Woman."

The real stars of the film are the $10 million Apache helicopter and the excitement it generates when it goes into action.

'Future III' maintains standards

By Marian Trainor Special Writer

Good Westerns are rare these days. When you get an opportunity to return to the authentic Wild West, it's not to be missed, particularly if you are transported there in the company of a manic scientist, Doc Brown (Christopher Lloyd), and his pal, Marty McFly (Michael Fox).

Those of you who have made the journey back and forth in time in Doc Brown's DeLorean with these two characters know how much fun it can be crisscrossing the centuries.

In the first "Future," traveled back to 1950. In "Future II" they zoomed through time to high-tech 2015. In the third film, Marty goes looking for his friend who somehow got left in the time span 1885.

Marty finds a newspaper clipping reporting Doc's death on Sept. 7, 1885. Without a second thought, Marty prepares to follow Doc back to that time slot and try to prevent him from being shot.

If he doesn't stop the shooting, everything that occurred in the first and second films would be impossible. Marty is not only fighting for Doc, but also for his own future which now lies in our movie past.

Following Doc's direction. Marty fires up the DeLorean and makes his perilous trip back to the Old West. His arrival is not an auspicious one. He lands smack dab in Indian country where Indians immediately take after him, shooting well-aimed arrows as they advance.

cave where Doc told him to stash of the household. the time machine. Watching furtively from his hiding place, he sees hordes of Indians gallop past followed by the Cavalry.

When the air is clear of horses hooves, he ventures out on the plain. Close on his heels is a huge bear. Trying to put distance between himself and the bear, he loses his boot which seems to satisfy the bear who sits down on his haunches to gnaw at it.

Still running, Marty looks behind to be sure the bear has given up and runs headlong into a fence and passes out. When he wakes up, he is in the cabin of Seamus McFly, his great-great grandfather (played by Fox) and his great-grandfather, the baby

There is suspense galore as the fatal day and time approach. To add to the confusion, Doc's name is no longer on the tombstone marking his grave. It is blank. He is no longer the target Marty is.

There are several questions left in the film to be answered. How will Marty fare? Will he and Doc return to 1985? How about Clara, the local schoolmarm played by Mary Steenburgen, who provides a love interest for Doc Brown? And will there be another "Future" film?

"Future III," like I and II, is beautifully crafted, photographed and edited and the special effects are special. It should not be movie theater, the Fox Theatre, proudly announces its schedule of classic films this summer. The romantic epic "Doctor Zhivago" will open Tuesday, June 19, and run through Sunday, July 1. To follow later in July is the mammoth "Ben-Hur," winner of 11 Academy Awards. Advance tickets for "Doctor Zhivago" go on sale Wednesday, June 6.

This summer movies at The Fox will be presented on newly improved 70 mm projectors featuring brand new lenses, bulbs, lamp houses, and a platter system to ensure state-of-the-art. uninterrupted viewing on the giant screen.

"Doctor Zhivago," starring Omar Sharif and Julie Christie premiered in 1965. The film evokes the tumultous account of Russian history in the 50 years prior to its release, presented through many characters whose destinies are interwoven. The story is based on Boris Pasternak's novel by the same name, which was suppressed in the auhim the Nobel Prize for Literature in 1958. His "voluntary" renuniciation of the prize as an alternative to explusion from the Soviet Union attracted world wide attention.

In many respects "Doctor Zhivago" is unique in motion picture history. The fascinating characters and the towering historic events against which their story is etched made the perfect combination for a film of magnificent proportions. Many companies sought screen rights to the novel following its publication, but Metro-Golden-Mayer acquired the coveted production rights and named David Lean as Lean, whose previous films included mega-hits "Bridge on the River Kwai," and "Lawrence of Arabia," immediately contracted Robert Bolt to discuss the screenplay. Bolt, whose play, "A Man For all Seasons," was an international success, wrote the script for "Lawrence of Arabia" for Lean.

Motor Muster coming to Greenfield Village

America's romance with the automobile will be fueled once again when the fifth annual Motor Muster convenes at Greenfield Village June 16 and 17.

Car fans of all ages will enjoy seeing more than 200 gleaming dream machines of the 1930s, '40s and '50s cruise through the village in scheduled parades. Visitors can get a closer look at the remarkable cars, trucks and motorcycles when the vehicles park at numerous sites around the village.

Among the stars of this year's event will be a 1940 LaSalle sedan that rolled off the line during the last year of production, and an extremely rare 1949 Volkswagen Hebmuller — a twopassenger, custom-bodied convertible. Also on display will be a luxurious 1940 Mercury sedan, top-of-the-line 1947 Frazer Manhattan, a 1950 Ford "wood-y station wagon, and a sporty 1958 Triumph TR-3.

In addition to admiring the vehicles, visitors can investigate aspects of car culture through special presentations. Bill Robinson of the Center for Creative Studies will conduct informal auto design workshops for dreamers who would like to become doers. Other experts will discuss "Partners in Pleasure: The Autogan Avenue (U.S. 12).

mobile, the Radio, and the Phonograph" and "The Automatic Transmission: Fifty Years of Shiftlessness.

For the youngsters there will be fun with hula hoops and special games and activities reflecting the three decades.

Visitors will be asked to vote for their favorite automobile, two-wheeled vehicle, and favorite commercial vehicle (a new category this year). Presentations of Popular Choice Awards will be made each day.

Music's role in motoring pleasure will be evident as songs from the '30s, '40s and '50s will provide the proper ambience for viewing the automobiles representing each decade.

Families are invited to bring photos of themselves with favorite vehicles which may become part of the museum archives. Scenes of everyday life with family vehicles that were photographed between 1930 and 1959 are of particular interest.

Admission to special weekend programs is free with general village admission. Henry Ford Museum & Greenfield Village is located at Oakwood Boulevard and Village Road in Dearborn just west of the Southfield Freeway (M-39) and south of Michi-

Together Lean and Box traveled thousands of miles through Italy, Yugoslavia, the Scandinavian countries and even Canada, seeking the most suitable place for filming. They eventually settled on Spain for most of the photography, with additional scenes to be made in Finland and Canada. On a ten-acre site outside Madrid, Lean constructed one of the most authentic sets in many years, built to represent the Kremlin-dominated streets of Moscow of the early 1900's. The set was complete with streets, 50 shops and a tram line with trolley cars. Six months in construction, the massive set required 800 workmen to build.

Determined to have actors and actresses who fit the parts rather than tailoring the roles to suit the performers, Lean did not give serious thought to casting until the screenplay was completed. Omar Sharif, whose performance in "Lawrence of Arabia" won him an Acadmey

Cruises

Many people don't think of cruises as a family vacation, but there are some cruise lines which cater to families.

Take, for instance, the Disney Cruise on Premiere Cruise Line which not only includes a few days aboard an ocean liner, but passes to Disneyworld. Some of Disney's favorite characters are passengers on the cruise, too, said Mary Ann Smith, a travel agent for Mr. Q Travel.

Cruises for the Northeast, which travel from Maine on down, are great ways to visit that part of the country, said Judi Orhan, owner of Pointe Travel. She adds that cruise ships are returning to the Mediterranean — a place that has been shunned since terrorism hit its peak there in 1986.

'Cruises are a great economical way to travel," she said. "You've paid up front for meals, lodging and sometimes airfare. All you need is money for tipping and personal expenditures. The shore excursions are extra, but it doesn't amount to that much.'

Cruises run anywhere from one-day - to Nassau and back to 100 days around the world, and any number of days in be-

Eastern Europe

"Travel is up in Europe," said Gerry Connolly-Conway of Connolly Travel. "But if you want to go there this summer, you should have already booked it. With all that's been happening over there people want to go there, but they've been so barraged, I would put it off until next spring. They're not ready for all of us yet.' The Travel Key's Kathy Redmond-Stevens agrees.

"There's been a lot of interest in Eastern Europe, and it would be an exciting time to go, but they're not as equipped to handle us as they will be," she said. Additionally, airfares to Europe will drop in the fall.

Hotel space is limited in Eastern Europe, but bed and breakfast inns can cut costs tremendously.

Eurail passes are the way to travel through Spain and France, Connolly-Conway said, because not only are they inexpensive, but are also efficient.

And then there's. . .

Disneyworld is still popular, but with the opening of the Universal Studios Theme Park in Florida, that state is expecting a ton of people this year. Disneyland is also popular, however, as is all of California from the redwood forests to the San Francisco wine country to Hollywood.

Mexico, Hawaii, Denver and its river rafting, jazz festivals and mountains, are also popular summertime excursions.

'Mexico's a bargain right now, but it's real hot and humid. which is probably what makes it such a bargain," Smith said.

And don't forget the Michigan sites from Ludington to Interlochen to Traverse City to Mackinac Island to the Soo locks to Alpena to Marshall.

A lost weekend

Weekend trips are one way to get some traveling in this summer if you can't afford to take a long trip.

Popular spots are Washington. D.C., Nashville and Niagara Falls. Toronto has, among other things, Andrew Lloyd Webber's

Dave Doyle, of Calty Design, explained that the objectives for the new mini-van included distinctive styling, maximum use of interior space, sedan-like ride and handling, superior serviceability and good performance. Toyota has achieved all these goals.

Koenig said some were achieved despite top management, when Toyota engineers convinced them to go along with an unusual mid-engine arrangement in which a four-cylinder engine was laid on its side under the floor of the vehicle with a remote accessory drive system that allows radiator, fan belts, alternator, air conditioning compressor, power steering pump, battery and engine oil reservoir to be located under the front hood for easy servicing.

With twin overhead cams and four valves per cylinder, the 2.4liter four gives performance equal to a V-6. The Previa is a striking looking van, not as radical as the Chevy Lumina, but more radical than the top-selling Dodge Caravan and Plymouth Voyager. The Previa, available in rear-drive or full-time fourwheel-drive versions, is probably the strongest challenger yet.

The new MR2 looks terrific and performs just as well as it looks like it will. Maybe better. The mid-engined two-seater was probably the best of its kind before, but it is better yet for 1991. With 200-horsepower turbocharged intercooled 2.0-liter fourcylinder engine, the MR2 challenges more expensive sportsters with 38 percent more power and 43 percent more torque than the previous supercharged MR2.

Full-time four-wheel drive allows more responsive steering at lower speeds and a center différential lock gives extra traction when needed. Goatlike off the road, it behaves like a civilized sedan on the highway, stable and sure-footed in any terrain.

The new Land Cruiser boasts a longer wheelbase (112.2 inches) and wider track (60.6 inches) than Range Rover or Jeep Grand Wagoneer. The Land Cruiser holds its own against very tough company indeed.

Grosse Pointe News

By Margie Reins Smith
Feature Editor
Frank Newman of Grosse Pointe Farms, president and CEO of F & M Distributors Inc., is uncomfortable talking about volunteerism. But he said his secretary, Vickie Mc-Gavin, spends 50 percent of her working hours handling requests for charitable contributions.

'We've been doing a lot of little things on a first-come-first-serve basis," Newman said. "But we realized these were not qualitative decisions." The company was helping out all kinds of organizations from high school graduation parties to AARP chapters, youth assistance programs, churches, hospitals, PTA groups, the Salvation Army, senior citizens' groups and dozens more.

The company began to consciously search for a charitable activity that would make best use of the company's financial resources and also involve its human re-

The Make-A-Wish Foundation of Michigan grants wishes to children with life-threatening illnesses.

"We discovered that the Make-A-Wish Foundation of Michigan had never turned down a child's wish because of lack of money, but that it was often short of people to help implement the wishes," he said.

"Our greatest asset is our people. The company handles the money (for granting wishes) and associates in our stores handle the human bonding that makes it a special relationship."

Newman recently received the Humanitarian of the Year award from Variety-Charity for Children (formerly called Variety Club), which he accepted on behalf of F & M Distributors Inc. and the employees who have been involved in the project.

"Frank is a wonderful person," said a Variety-Charity for Children spokesperson. "And F & M has been involved in the community in a low key way for a while. Variety has many fundraisers. We select one local person each year who has Farms resident is committed to corporate volunteerism in the community."

F & M has about 3,600 employees in its stores in Michigan, Ohio, Illinois, Maryland, Washington, D.C., Wisconsin, Indiana and Minnesota.

F & M was the first corporate sponsor of the Make-A-Wish Foundation of Michigan. Newman said that close to 100 percent of the employees are involved in some way in the Make-A-Wish projects. So far they've granted 17 wishes.

"The most popular wishes are trips to Disneyworld and Disneyland. We've also arranged for two trips to California to visit celebrities - one to meet Alf and one to meet Mork and Mindy. One wish was for a waterbed. Another was for an above-the-ground swimming pool. Another was a shopping spree for a teenage girl at Fairlane, for back-to-school clothes. Another, for a Nintendo game.

"Apparently, F & M wishes have a therapeutic effect," he added with a hopeful gesture. "We've only lost

'My secretary spends 50 percent of her time working on charitable requests.'

The unique aspect of Newman's and F & M's involvement, he said, is that company employees maintain contact with each child and that child's family to provide more support, as needed. "They babysit; watch houses; plan parties for the wish kids; plan send-offs and welcomes at airports; take the children to ball games; plan birthday parties; and more.

"We maintain a relationship with each child after the wish is fulfilled. by creating a support network of friends for these children, who, because they are so ill, have often lost the support groups and normal relationships that are available for healthy children."

One of these children wished for a Nintendo game. "We couldn't find the game anywhere." This was three years ago at Christmas time, when Nintendo was on every child's wish list.

'Our greatest asset is our people.'

'We finally found one in a K mart warehouse and flew it on a private plane to Grand Rapids." It arrived just before the child went to the hospital for a bone marrow transplant.

"We granted his wish. But because of our continuing relationship, we discovered that the family had only one TV set. This kid was playing Nintendo all the time and the rest of the family wasn't able to watch TV." Newman smiled. "We were able to provide a second TV set."

Newman was born in England. He grew up living in England, Europe and Africa. His family moved to Washington, D.C., when he was 14 years old.

He said his first experience as a volunteer was when he was about 9 years old and helped serve breakfast in the priest's rectory. He grew up learning the value of volunteerism and helping others.

"My mother and father taught us to respect human dignity and to do whatever we could to enhance it. When we lived in Rhodesia - when it was a British colony — help was cheap. My mother thought that wages were too low. According to our neighbors, she grossly overpaid our houseboy and garden boy (who actually were men, not boys at all.)" Newman said that his wife shares his enthusiasm for volunteerism. She's a hospice volunteer. "And my daughter, Jennifer, has her mother's predilection for taking care of others who are less fortunate. My son Noah works as a volunteer for hospice and has worked on Detroit's Ravendale Development project."

There are rewards for the giver and the givee.

Ravendale is another of of F & M's charitable involvements. It is a community-wide effort to enhance a 38-block area on Detroit's east side that had been dominated by crack houses. President George Bush visited the project during a recent visit to Detroit.

Newman admitted that his motives are not totally altruistic.

"There's also an enlightened selfinterest here. (Charitable deeds and donations) make a more vibrant community in which to do business."

He added that the company believes that as a member of a community, it should support and participate in the community - should help to improve the quality of life in the community - just as an individual should.

F & M's financial support of the Make-A-Wish Foundation of Michigan was begun with an initial grant from the Randolph J. and Judith A. Agley Foundation, as well as from funds from F & M, its associates, customers and suppliers. Grosse Pointer Randolph Agley is one of the owners of F & M.

The heartwarming part of the Make-A-Wish project, Newman said, is the intangible rewards that people in the stores get in return for their involvement.

"There are rewards for the giver and the givee."

HAVE A PLEASANT TRY AT PERFECTION BRIDGE BY WOODY BOYD THE PASTEBOARD PASTIME

My dear friend and patron of the game of bridge, Opulent Emily Circumstance, tells many amusing tales about her Great Aunt Mary of Mutation Mink Minnesota who thoroughly enjoyed entertaining privileged people and playing estate stake bridge. Aunt Mary, it seems, was a pillar of prominence and a celebrated cosmopolitan whose elated weekend assemblages at her luxurious Lake Favourable lodging was the pinnacle vintage in gracious social living. Added to these envied blandishments of tenor was her eminent reputation as on of America's premiere bridge playing ladies.

One early October week-end some forty years ago, Aunt Mary was entertaining a gracious group of Europe's first personages, parliamentarians and people of peacock breeding who came to play her daytime games and partake in her evenings of extravagant epicuristic excesses. Carefully blended into this posh party of socially chosen achievers were a prudently picked litter of her favourite bridge playing mates, for the feasting and fun were nothing but a clever cover for her passion to play.

Leading the list of prodigious card craftsmen were Germany's Duke of Ludenburg whose various coups were legendary; the Scottish castle chapel pastor, Letum Saviour Skinner, whose play was prayerful and sometimes penitent; the brilliant Jewish Benny Blue whose double dummy play was forsigntful; two of London's youngest, the daring Phineous Fudflugger and Winston Flint Fog. The mischievous, but amusing Docky Obnoxious; Daddy "every hand a slam" Mankind, who had bid more marginal twelve-trick contracts successfully than any player on earth. Nathan Detroit and Provo's famous psychoanalyst, Dr. Mendaway Brainbender were also there. Austria's grand master Baron Ruether Judasklueger arrived with the Potomac's most powerful player, the chairman of the Senate Banking Committee, Senator Shifty M. Nicklesnitcher. No one could remember Aunt Mary mustering a stronger contingent of grand masters.

To add some pizazz to the four days of ferocious play, the hostess introduced a new one... pari-mutuel betting which was enthusiastically

With one hand remaining to play the leader board showed: 1st: Daddy Mankind 10,240 4th: Winston Flint Fog 8,770 2nd: Mendaway Brainbender 9,580 5th: Jewish Benny Blue 8,620 3rd: Aunt Mary 8,890 6th: Honeyhips Hehoohader 7,340 No one else was even close. As chance would have it, the final deal was pivotal. Brainbender was set 500 points and Honey Hips lost 140 points defending a partial. The four remaining leaders were paired in a magnificent match of mentality. Here was that hand:

Aunt Mary ★ AKQJ109 Both Vul. Aunt Man Winston Benny W. Leads H7

If Aunt Mary could manage this monster, it would be a miracle. The 1430 point plus would clinch a first and second for she and Benny Blue, but as one can see, as the cards are, it looked hopeless. Declarer won the heart lead and counted eleven winners. No chance of ruffing a heart as the lead was obviously a singleton. Was the road to glory limited to only the 50-50 diamond finesse? Best to postpone that decision until a better reading of the opponent's cards was attainable. So, Aunt Mary played three trumps and the club ace. She now knew west had to be 3-1-3-6 or 3-1-4-5 which therefore suggested east was 2-7-3-1 or 2-7-2-2. On the assumption that the out diamonds were 3-3 and the clubs were 6-1, Aunt Mary struck upon a fantastic line of play that mattered not the location of the diamond lady, but only upon the club one which had to be with west was probable. Aunt Mary ran all of her trumps but one, leaving dummy with the A-K-J-10 of diamonds and J-3 of clubs. She then cashed dummy's two high diamonds, pitching her club king! Next she ruffed the diamond jack and led her club 4 towards dummy's J-3. Voila! West was ended for a brilliant coup and a ticklish to succeed at slam.

Oh, my dear friend, Êmily, if you could play the game like your dear Aunt Mary!

Grosse Pointe News Faces ξ μίας Polo match and auction will benefit JLD's Sibley House forthcoming fundraiser, the Lexus Gold Cup Polo Match and Auction, will benefit the continued restoration of historic Sibley House in downtown Detroit.

The day-long event, sponsored by Lexus of Lakeside, will be on Sunday, June 24, on the grounds of the Detroit Polo Club in Milford. This is its second year.

A champagne brunch begins at noon, followed by polo and a silent auction. Tailgaters are welcome (bring picnic lunch and lawn chairs) and are encouraged to attend the silent auction.

Included in the afternoon's events is a dressage exhibition.

General chairman is Mary Lamparter. Auction chairs are Alexis Glendening and Laurie Strachan, all of Grosse Pointe. Honorary chairman is Michael Farrell of Detroit.

Sibley House, a Detroit landmark, was built in 1848 for Judge Solomon Sibley, mayor of Detroit and the first chief justice of the Michigan Supreme Court. It's a splendid example of Greek Revival architecture and is the oldest wood frame residence in the city. The restoration of the house is one of the Junior League of Detroit's major ongoing projects.

Tickets are $75 per person for the brunch, polo match and auction; $25 for children. Tailgate tickets are $15 per person; $7 for children.

A pre-polo party will be held on Saturday, June 22, from 7 to 9 p.m., co-sponsored by the Junior League and Riverfront Apartments. The evening will feature an art exhibit and sale by Circle Fine Arts Corp. A portion of the proceeds from art sales will benefit Sibley House. Lexus of Lakeside will exhibit the ES 250 and the LS 400 - and will make the cars available for test drives. Hors d'oeuvres too.

Tickets are $20 per person. For more information, call 881-0400 or 726-7900.

Graduation destination

By Bryce D. Gray FOCUS - Grosse Pointe

Graduation. Sailing on. Blasting off. I recently interacted with a college friend at a wedding. He graduates this week from the Kellogg Business School. He has secured a great job with Ernst & Young and plans to travel in Europe and India this summer.

With deep sadness in his eyes and pain in his heart he commented: "My Dad's great at answering finance and business questions. He knows how to get me a job and make money, but he's lousy at telling me about life - how to be happy and peaceful."

My friend, an outward success - even an object of my envy at times - yet grappling inside with piercing pain and fear. "Will I make it? Will I get a good boss or a jerk? What happens if I don't cut it? Will I ever be married?"_

He told how little compromises had led to large ones. The closeness and comfort of a loving Father who sent his son to die for him disappeared. The assurance of his God's love and plan for his life dwindled. Where do you think he then turned for peace and comfort? Alcohol of course. Soon it was a half a bottle of scotch a night to get to sleep.

It's very sad to watch people you care about search for life in dead-end places: sex, drugs, alcohol and success. Strategies familiar to most of our young people.

I wonder how many of our young people will someday echo my friend's bewilderment. Their discipline and attention to school and success will provide them with nice houses and sports cars. Yet internally, many may be plagued by fear, guilt and emptiness.

It is such a privilege to point people to the possibility of a living, trustworthy relationship with Jesus. It is a comfort to know that my life is in God's hands. That he will provide, even if I fall in my profession. It is wonderful to feel that my life has a purpose beyond accumulating toys. Wouldn't it be great if each year we could send off hundreds of students from this community who learned from home more than how to get ahead in life? Wouldn't it be great if the reality of Christ's personal love for each of us freed us to find peace in his trustworthiness and to, in turn, love God with all that we are?

Dads: We need you to teach us what makes life worthwhile. Where should we sail to? To what destination are we blasting off? We're longing for models of balanced lives. I'm grateful that my dad taught me the value of knowing a God who really exists, who really answers prayer, and who can really provide for my needs.

Public hearing to gather information for older adults

Services to the Aging invites all senior citizens, service providers and other interested parties to attend the 1990-91 State Plan on Aging Public Hearing to comment on proposed services for older adults for the fiscal year beginning October, 1990.

The hearing is scheduled on Friday, June 15, at the Inkster Recreational Center, 2025 Middlebelt Road, from 9:30 a.m. to

The importance of public input to the delivery of services cannot be overestimated, says OSA Director Olivia P. Maynard. "We need to know if we are going in the right direction with the services we have planned to fund during the next year.'

Maynard says they need to know what services older adults want, and need to hear from those served to make sure they are on target. "One of the best ways for us to get this information is to hold a public hearing and invite people to come and talk to us about it," she says.

"We are very receptive to people's ideas. As a result of comments made at one of last year's hearings, for example, we started to work with mobile home park managers to address disputes regarding increased lot rents and utility rates charged mobile home park residents. We learned that these cost increases were a real hardship for some older adults.

New to the proposed state plan, and up for discussion, are: · Objectives for older workers, including a statewide conference to bring employers, job developers, service providers, older workers and the aging network

The Commission and Office of together to discuss ways to coordinate resources.

Objectives to expand the number of people who can re-ceive Care Management by charging client fees through Medicaid reimbursement and through coordination with other human service programs. Care Management is a program that coordinates a variety of home care and other services needed by frail elderly persons at risk of entering a nursing home.

• An objective plan on how to meet the needs of the growing population of older prisoners in penal institutions, ex-offenders

 An objective which included the development of a Native American Elders Advisory Committee to conduct legislative advocacy and assist OSA in deciding how best to develop and deliver culturally sensitive ser-draft State Plan for 1991 should contact the Michigan Office of Services to the Aging by calling 373-8230 or by writing OSA, P.O. Box 30026, Lansing, 48909. Those who cannot attend the hearing are welcome to mail their written comments or ideas about next year's services and programs to the above address.

Physicians will discuss medical ethics at conference June 27 tific aspects of medicine have provided knowledge that enables us to overcome health challenges thought insurmountable just a few short years ago, from birth defects to the ravages of old age.

These answers have, themselves, raised new, difficult questions. Will knowledge outpace understanding in the final decade of the millennium? Do we need new rules of ethics to guide us as we struggle to keep up with technology? Can healing go too far?

Three nationally-known experts will address these concerns

Joseph A. Grady Medical Ethics Humanities in the Life Sciences in Detroit. Conference, sponsored by the Medical Ethics and Human Values Committee of St. John Hospital and Medical Center.

Daniel Callahan, Ph.D., director of the Hastings Center in Briarcliff, N.Y., will present an overview with his discussion: "National Perspective for the Next Decade." Callahan was cofounder of the Hastings Center in 1969. It has become the premier research and education organization in the nation for the examination of ethical issues of medicine and biology.

Howard Broad, M.D., director on June 27 at the second annual of the Center for Ethics and at Michigan State University, will speak on physicians' perspectives. Mila Ann Aroskar, Ph.D., will articulate the concerns of the nursing segment of the health care community. She is associate professor in the School of Public Health at the University of Minnesota, senior research associate at the Center for Biomedical Ethics and a public health nurse.

"Ethical Decision-Making for the 1990s" will conclude with a panel discussion moderated by Mort Crim, senior news editor and evening anchor at WDIV-TV

Funding for the conference comes from the Joseph A. Grady, M.D. Endowment Fund, established through the contributions of Grady's friends and former colleagues, with matching funds from Št. John Hospital and Medical Center.

Grady, a surgeon who retired in 1986 after 31 years as a member of the St. John medical staff, was instrumental in the formation of the Medical Ethics and Human Values Committee, and interdisciplinary group whose purpose is to forster awareness of ethical principles and issues within the St. John environment.

The speakers will take up any issues they consider significant, said John H. Burrows, M.D., who chairs the committee, but allocations of health care resources in the 1990's is sure to be among them.

Burrows cited as an example, the question of whether society should continue indefinitely to supply extensive and expensive care to the elderly or whether some of these resources might be better used in other areas.

Other concerns that are likely to be discussed, Burrows said, include the quality of life in an age in which we are able to keep people alive longer than ever before, the impact of the AIDS epidemic, the ethics of transplantation and issues that revolve around procreation and abortion.

"We want to make sure everyone is thinking in these terms so that rapidly advancing technology does not outstrip the ethical concerns involved," Burrows

The conference is intended for the community at-large as well as for health care professionals. Events will begin at 5 p.m. in the Grosse Pointe War Memorial, 32 Lakeshore Road, Grosse Pointe Farms, and will conclude at 9:30 p.m. Refreshments and hors d'oeuvres will be served.

The registration fee is $25. For details, call 343-3877.

Ethics are important in health care decisions

This is the last of a three-part · ing problems in a way that demseries dealing with ethical decision-making and technology.

By Marlys Dee Craig Special Writer

Edna feels as if her life has been placed on hold. Never since she and her husband, Joe, bought and paid for their home near the Grosse Pointe area has she felt so unsure of her future. Over a period of ten years her husband has sustained a series of small strokes along with symptoms of increasing dementia. She does not dare to leave Joe alone.

Edna is almost 70 and her husband is 74. (Their names have been changed to protect their privacy.) Together they receive an income from Social Security and a small pension which pays for their living expenses. Joe is physically unable to continue a part time job in carpentry which supplemented their income. Their only son who lives in California has his own family to support.

Edna says she can't afford private payments in a nursing home, and really would prefer to keep Joe at home. She believes there are some services in the community, but she is unable to afford the kind of help she needs, such as day care,

She is more than fulfilling her family responsibility, but is in need of some form of public support to ease her caregiving burden. The health care she is providing in her home is saving thousands of dollars in Medicaid money because Joe is not housed in a nursing home at state expense.

While Edna's story is one of hardship, it illustrates the delayed advance of ethical decisions into untouched areas of health care provision.

The federal government has backed off from anything but proposals to provide comprehensive long term care for impaired elderly and disabled persons. The yearly cost to put a national program into place is estimated to build to an annual level of $43 billion. The stumbling block is how to pay the bill. A few decades ago it was common practice to discuss the ethics of health care, but not speak about financing. Our economy was good and health care was expanding. A high value was placed upon saving a human life regardless of the future capacity of the person to function and the cost involved.

Our total national health care expenditures have mounted to an annual compounded rate of 12 percent since the 1960s. This was stimulated by an astounding increase in medical procedures of all kinds, and how we chose to use them. Where has a major portion of expensive care been spent? Health care cost is at its highest in intensive care, trauma and premature units in hospitals, or organ transplants, dialysis and bypass surgery. "We knew these things were expensive, but given the incomparable value of human life, we did not count the costs ... We knew we were buying more and what we were paying for were miracles," said Dr. Alyce Vrolyk, director of the Bioethics Institute in North Ridge, Calif. We were driven by a health care ethic to save lives at all cost. This ate up an increasing chunk of the resources. Now, the crucial question is: Can we, as a nation, afford to offer all the health care we know how to pro-

If not, the task at hand is to shoulder the health care financ-responsibility. What really counts in this matter is obtaining an appropriate balance between ethical considerations and cost restrictions.

A free lunch will be increasingly hard to find. Health care provisions will involve higher copays and deductibles, restraints on benefits offered, and an increase in premiums or taxes supporting the care.

A second health care issue receiving serious ethical scrutiny involves who gets access to care. A startling 37 million people in the United States are estimated to have no health care coverage, and 17 million have inadequate coverage. The Wall Street Journal reported that many in Congress feel that finding a way to provide health care for the millions who lack insurance is more critically urgent than improving benefits for the elderly.

Dr. C. Everett Koop, retired surgeon general, advised: "We have to acknowledge that there is something wrong with a system of health care that spends more and more money but seems to serve fewer and fewer people."

While ethical consensus is beginning to gather around this issue, the cost of providing such care is a major factor in the planning stage. Lawmakers face three means for constructing a safety net for those with inadequate or no care: mandate health coverage by employers with cost-sharing by employees; or expand Medicaid to cover all those below the federal poverty level; or create a subsidized program for those not eligible for employer-based insurance or Medicaid.

Restricting health care according to age is being proposed as a way to reduce cost. Is it justifiable to use age as a basis for limiting access? Some think of it as a threat; others such as Daniel Callahan, Director of the Hastings Institute, view it as an appropriate way to avoid extending life beyond the point where quality is sacrificed. Medical expense for older adults in the 80s and 90s are excessively high. Often, the quality of the time bought is unfavorable.

Adults who have lived this long frequently are more concerned about such conditions as loss of control over their lives and painful prolonging of their death than putting a limit on extraordinary life-extending treatment.

These older adults can provide valuable first-hand experience before committees in medicine and government who are trying to work out guidelines for limiting care.

The many Ednas who are devoting their lives without remuneration and recogniton for a family member or friend have an important story to tell before committee hearings.

Their input is decisive if they will live by the restrictions.

ST-"ART" TIPS

DRAWING THE HEAD: THE EYE

WORLD®

An oval within a circle is the simplest form used to CREATIVE suggest an eye. Since there are so many possible views of the eye, only careful observations and execution of the drawing will make it look correct.

FLOOR PLAN FOR A STILL LIFE

When drawing a still life, it is important that the objects have enough floor space to stand on. Draw in all the lines, circles, and ellipses in your forms so you can better judge the amount of space they will need. This will also give your drawing or painting a more convincing look.

Stop by and see us at CREATIVE WORLD 20507 Mack Avenue, 881-6305

CUSTOM PICTURE FRAMING

Choosing the proper framing for your art is very important. The mat and frame should never detract from the art, it should only enhance it. Attention should be concentrated on the art first, the framing second!

Let a professional artist/designer help you with your framing needs. Casey Wise, by appointment only, 882-5480, Grosse Pointe.

Down the road

About 10 months ago we began researching ways to celebrate the Grosse Pointe News' 50th anniversary, and I can't believe some of the things I've learned about this community.

I never knew the Neighborhood Club used to host Golden Gloves tournaments, or that Ed Wernet was the godfather of Grosse Pointe High football.

All the talk about the 50th anniversary made me wonder about things in the 1940s, 50s and 60s. The list of people and decisions that shaped this community is endless, but what about the next 50 years?

Here's a glimpse of Grosse Pointe in 2040.

- Lakeshore Drive is washed away because more water is needed than land to house all the sailboats.
- There will be a school that will admit only aspiring sailors and rowers.
- Guys like Adam Bramlage, Dan Sylvester, Dan Griesbaum, Matt Shirilla, Troy Bergman and others will be coaching in the Grosse Pointe Little League and not playing.
- Pink and green will no longer be associated with Grosse Pointe.
- I will not be the sports editor in Grosse Pointe.
- North and South will still feud over newspaper copy and bragging rights.
- Meters on Kercheval will cost $10 a half hour.
- City airport will be bigger than Metro.
- The Grosse Pointe Soccer Association will be so big it will need fields in St. Clair Shores.
- fields WILL have lights.
- University Liggett School will change its name again.
- It will cost 15 bucks to watch a high school baseball
- ESPN, NBC or ABC will own the rights to cover high school softball games.
- Rollerblades will still be around.
- People who jog will no longer be forced off of the streets.
- There will be a new community ice rink.
- Dean Balcirak Jr., who sails nationally now, will win the overall flag for the Port Huron to Mackinac race.
- · There will be co-ed varsity
- Neon colors will not be in vogue.
- Chuck Taylor high tops will still be a hot item.
- Local cable will cover high school games.
- Aaron Krickstein will be the color analyst for NBC during Wimbledon.
- Grosse Pointe will be an Olympic training site for sailing teams.
- There will be an island in the lake, made from composting, and it will be called Gross(e) Compote.
- The Detroit Grand Prix will come through the Park.
- Lawn jarts will be a Sunday afternoon affair.

Sumbera to be inducted into Hall of Fame

Sports Editor

Frank Sumbera is only 42 years old, but after learning he'd be inducted into the Michigan High School Baseball Coaches Association Hall of Fame, he felt as if he had aged.

"I'm too young to be honored," chuckled Sumbera, who has been coaching for 19 years. "It makes me feel old, but I finally reached the conclusion that I'm not too

Generally speaking, coaches are usually inducted at an "older" age. But, because he started out as a young coach, Sumbera has served as many years - and succeeded - as most famed coaches do.

Coaches are considered for the Hall of Fame if they have coached baseball at a secondary school for 20 years, Sumbera has 21, or if they have won at least 250 games.

"I really haven't thought about it (the induction), but I'm sure I will on that night," Sumbera said. "I was very surprised when I first heard that I was being inducted. It came as a surprise and I'm very excited."

Sumbera and the others in his class will be honored on June 21 at Zuccaro's Holiday House. "It's a situation that you're given a few moments to reflect on what you've done, but I'm still very active and plan to be for some time. I'm still very ment.

Sumbera has compiled a 398-160 record spanning 18 varsity baseball seasons, has won a state championship in 1980, and has won 10 Bi-County League titles, including six straight. Also, 13 of his 18 varsity teams have won more than 20 games, giving him an average of 22 wins a season.

"This thing evolved because of the great players I've been fortunate to coach," Sumbera said. "I've got so many players to thank, that I'd be afraid to start listing them because I'd probably leave someone out."

Sumbera has also worked with some fantastic coaches like Joe Schneider, Scott Burns, Bill Mitchell, Eric Fredlund, Dan Griesbaum, who now coaches South, Mike Kras, Bill Babcock and Dick Grammatico.

"With guys like that in the system, anybody could have gotten into the Hall," Sumbera said smiling. "Seriously, though, without guys like that in the system, nobody, including me, would have benefitted from baseball at North. Those coaches have put in just as much time as I have and they are to be thanked as well."

Ironically, the 1980 state championship team will be celebrating its 10th anniversary the same year that Sumbera is being inducted.

The June 21 celebration will be an ultimate step for Sumbera, but looking back on some of his achievements, it's no wonder the former Chesaning High and Central Michigan University athlete is an honored guest.

Also in 1981, Sumbera and the Norsemen had a 44-game winning streak snapped in the district playoffs by Bishop Gallagher.

"Baseball, especially in Michigan, doesn't have great longevity in coaching," he said. "I've stayed in it because I'm in a great school, community and have been supported by everyone. In fact, the kids I've had love the sport just as much as I do and that's what has made my job easy."

From 1980-85, the lowest ranking his teams had was No. 9 in Class A in 1985. The previous years, Sumbera built a dynasty that included two No. 1 rankings, and a No. 2 spot in 1983.

"I've got every scorebook and all the stats of any baseball game played at North," said Sumbera, who serves on the baseball coaches association board as clinic chairman. "It's great to look back in those books

> Sumbera, who also coaches football, is backed by a loving family.

His mother, Annie, and sisters Sharon and Marlene, all out of town residents, manage to make just about every game. Sumbera's wife, Mary Ellen, and children Frank, William and Natalie are also in attendance whenever possible. In fact, William and Frank have helped Sumbera out as waterboys.

"It's always a nice feeling when the family is around, Sumbera said. "I've been more than lucky to have a family like

Norsemen softball team tripped up in regional tournament

Sports Editor

The Grosse Pointe North softball team had been cruising a rather successful road of late, but the Fraser Ramblers put a pot-hole in the Lady Norsemen's path.

North, which advanced to the Sweet 16 in the Class A tournament after winning its first district championship since 1981, lost, 1-0, to Fraser, June 9, at Royal Oak Memorial Field.

The Lady Norsemen, who finished the season with a 19-6 mark - a school record for highest winning percentage - created their own opportunities, but failed miserably to get home a

"We had been executing and producing the runs we needed in order to win some big games," said Lady Norsemen coach Bill Taylor. "But suddenly we came up empty. We didn't get our clutch hits when we needed

North mounted a first-inning threat, but fell short after leaving the bases loaded. Another wasted opportunity came in the sixth inning when North had runners on second and third with one out, but couldn't push home the tying run. And in the seventh, North stranded two more runners.

"We eventually left eight runners on base and that was another thing that hurt us," said Taylor. "We got plenty of runners into scoring position, but didn't get them past the plate. We squandered some key oppor-

Erica Barr, who led North's four-hit attack with two hits, started the seventh with a single on the first pitch. Stephanie Gore then ripped a line drive to right center, but the outstretched fielder snagged the ball. Then, with Barr on second base, Pam Thomas lofted a ball behind shortstop, but that catch was also made.

"The line drive of Stephanie's that was caught was the backbreaker for us," said Taylor. "You could look back on it and say the first inning hurt us, but even at that point I wasn't worried about getting the hits or people on base.

"If the line drive would have fallen, I'm sure we would have

Especially with the way North right-hander Kerri-Sue Kelly was pitching.

"Kerri threw another exceptional game," Taylor said of his senior ace, who tossed a no-hitter against East Detroit in the disknows she doesn't need to strike every hitter out because she's got a great defense behind her."

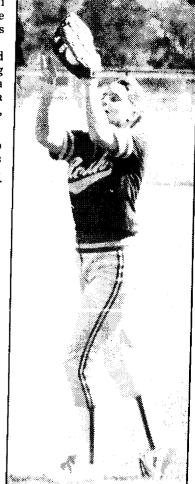

Kelly Kunkel, who finished the season with a .382 batting average, Barr (.340), Melissa Champine, Gore and Melissa Drouillard anchored the defense, as Kelly fanned only one batter.

The only hit Kelly gave up came in the sixth. Fraser's Cheryl Beaman smacked a triple, just out of the reach of Thomas (.345) in right field. North almost held Fraser, but Beaman eventually scored on a fielder's choice. "We knew going in we had to stop Beaman from reaching base," said Taylor. "In the past she has been our biggest nemesis, so we didn't want her to hurt us again. Unfortunately, she did."

On the board North wasn't the better team, but in the hearts of many it was.

"We still feel we were the better team," Taylor said. "This loss hurt, but it wasn't a bad one from the perspective that the run was an earned one. I'm proud of the team. I'm sure others were picking us to win because we had the momentum, but it was one of those losses we nk on a day when we were the who just won his first individual state championship at No. 1 singles last week. "I looked into a lot of schools who looked at tennis about 80 percent of the time and academics 20 percent. I wanted just the opposite and found it in Richmond.

He also found a Division I tennis program that he can help immediately.

"I wanted to go somewhere I could compete at right away," said Byrne, who was part of three Class C-D team champion-ships at ULS Richmond has a very team-oriented program and that's what impressed me the most. It's a strong team atmosphere and I should be able to play high up in singles."

Singles is where he's had most of his experience.

As a freshman, Byrne played No. 3 singles, winning 22 of 30 matches, including a regional championship and a state runner-up finish. In 1988, he split the season between No. 2 and 3 singles, winning the regional championship at No. 2, and finishing second in the state finals. He finished 28-8 that season.

At No. 1 singles a year ago, Byrne took his third straight runner-up trophy at the state meet and the regional meet. He struggled somewhat, finishing 18-16.

Again at No. 1 singles as a senior, Byrne, whose career mark is 89-40, finished second at the regional tournament, but beat Scooter Place of Country Day for the first time in outdoor tennis to claim his only state

"Because of the high standards of academics, I found that Richmond would be the ideal school for me," Byrne said. "To me, tennis and academics are not synonymous. I didn't want to go to a school just to play tennis. I'm looking forward to getting a great education."

Byrne, who received a Special Faculty Award, and departmental awards in history and French from ULS, was accepted into Richmond's academic and honors

Scott Collins, a junior at was a little concerned that he Grosse Pointe North, dropped couldn't run with some of those three seconds off his time to fin-guys this year, but he went out ish 10th in the 1600 race at the Class A track meet.

Collins, who along with Juan Ganum competed in the finals, ran a 4:26.8.

"Scott had a great run," said North coach Pat Wilson. "He Ganum, who lost only one race in the 200 dash all season, ran a 22.9 in the semifinals.

"It was nice that we had two guys get to the state and do as well as they did," Wilson said.

Buhl finishes 2nd in Milwaukee

That "old familiar feeling" returned for Grosse Pointe's Robbie Buhl as he took the pole position and an impressive secondplace finish in the ARS race at the Milwaukee Mile, Sunday,

It was Buhl's best finish and first points this year after three of 14 races in the series.

"We had the car dialed in well for this race," Buhl explained. "I felt really comfortable with the car for the first time all year. We tried some things Saturday with the set-up which worked well, so I was able to pick up about a second and a half in speed from Friday to Saturday."

That improvement put Buhl, the reigning Barber-SAAB Pro Series champion, on the pole position for the first time this season with a speed of 126.895. four-tenths of a second faster than second place.

The pole position was a familiar spot for Buhl last year as he set records for pole positions and consecutive pole positions, six each, in the Barber-SAAB series.

Rainy, windy weather raised havoc at the Milwaukee track as it played a major role in several mishaps which produced five yellow (caution) flags during the ARS race.

"It was a struggle during the race and all weekend with the wind," Buhl explained. "Friday was the toughest day I have ever had in a race car."

Buhl savored his performance. 'We had car troubles for the first two races, but now we know what we are capable of doing. The crew did a great job. I'm getting a better feel for the car. We are exactly where we want to be right now and looking forward to racing before the hometown fans in the Valvoline Detroit Grand Prix," he said.

The Detroit Grand Prix will be June 15-17.

Buhl's pole position and second place finish behind the season's leader, Canadian Paul Tracy, gave him $10,000 and 17 points. He jumped from last to sixth place in total points.

The Missing LINC

LINC is a non-profit organization whose purpose is to place goods no longer needed by individuals and businesses into the hands of metropolitan Detroit charitable agencies. If you have any items no longer of use to you, Operation LINC knows who can and will use them. Please call LINC at 882-6100

Spring has sprung and that signals cleaning season. After you have shuffled and sorted through your closets, drawers and attics, spring over to the LINC warehouse with some donations.

CHRISTLAND Prevention Outreach Program Center which provides community outreach, substance abuse and educational programs would like an OVERHEAD PROJECTOR. EVEN though the seasons change some of the requests for goods never do. One ongoing need for many of our member organizations is CLOTHING for INFANTS and CHILDREN. Those hard working women at United Sisters of Charity would like a TWIN BED for victims of a home burnout. FURNITURE, LINENS, and HOUSEHOLD ITEMS seem to be things that are in great demand presently.

When your garage sale is over, bring the unsold items, to LINC. Just make a list of the things you plan to donate and fill out the tax deductible slip at the warehouse. Your generosity will profit you in more ways than one! Do us a favor: mention LINC to a friend!
