After four decades, Park fire chief still on the run

By John Minnis Assistant Editor

After 41 years as a firefighter for Grosse Pointe Park, Phillip Costa, 68, still responds to all significant fires in the city.

Though he is nearing retirement age, and certainly deserves to rest on his accomplishments, he said he knows he will have to retire eventually, but he hasn't given it serious thought.

As the fire chief since 1972 and deputy director of the combined police and fire Public Safety Department since 1986, Costa is in charge of the city's fire-fighting capability - including equipment and men. He was hired into the Fire Department April 1, 1949. Though he was giving up a good job as a service representative for Excello's packaging machines, Costa was no April fool. "Nine months out of the year I was on the road," he said. "I wasn't with the family enough. I'm family-oriented.

Then a Park resident living on Lakepointe, the 27-year-old Costa applied for a job with the Park Fire Department and was hired.

"I had no idea what fire fighting was about," he recalls. He quickly learned.

Less than a month on the job, he went on his first fire, which he remembers vividly.

"I can remember it because you always remember your first one and probably your last one," he said. He recalls it was pouring rain that day and the fire chief remarked that there couldn't be any roof fires because it was raining too hard. Then an alarm came in, and the firefighters thought it was a false alarm triggered by the rain. But when they got to the scene in the 1300 block of Buckingham, they were confronted with a huge home already ablaze.

While the experienced firefighters set about their duties, Costa recalls, the fire chief yelled, "Hey, rookie, come with me.'

A firefighter then was not equipped with a self-contained breathing apparatus, Costa said, so they had to crawl on their bellies into a burning home. Costa, the 27-year-old rookie, and the 45-year-old chief crawled into the ### home.

"I thought, 'If this old guy can take it, so can I,' " Costa recalled. "I thought I was going to die from the smoke. I thought, 'What am I doing here? I left a good job and company.

"I've never regretted becoming a firefighter."

He said that after he crawled through the house with the chief, he was accepted by his peers and the chief told his family not to worry: "The kid will be all right."

Along with his first fire, Costa remembers his biggest fire: the March 18, 1978, blaze that destroyed the Windmill Pointe Drive mansion of fishing tackle magnate Charles Helin. All five Grosse Pointe fire departments responded as well as Harper Woods. As Park fire chief, Costa had to coordinate the efforts.

He said the fire was suspected as arson involving kids who allegedly started the blaze to cover up a burglary attempt. Grosse Pointe City firefighter Richard Tucker died when a wall collapsed on him, Costa said.

Barrow gets local support on wings of airport issue building store......2A By Ronald J. Bernas

Staff Writer

A new anti-Detroit City Airport expansion group has formed to become a minor political action group working for Congressional candidate Tom Barrow because of his stand against expansion of the airport. The new group, Citizens Against Airport Expansion, is an offshoot of the City Airport Opposition Association, the grassroots organization formed recently to stir up public opposition to City Airport expansion.

The purpose of the group is to work for Democrat Tom Barrow who is running for the 13th Congressional District seat which will be vacated by George Crockett who has held it since 1970. The 13th District consists of a wide area of Detroit and Grosse Pointe Park and City.

"Our primary reason for supporting Barrow is because of his stand on the airport issue," said member Theresa Klaasen. "But he has other ideas which should revitalize the east side of Detroit which we support, too.'

Barrow, who has run for mayor of Detroit several times, has expressed his opposition to expanding City Airport for a number of years.

Because no Republican has held the 13th District seat since Howard Coffin in 1947-48, the group believes the Aug. 7 primary - the election which determines the Democratic candidate is the one which will determine who will go to Washington, D.C., in January.

Barrow's strongest opponent is city Councilwoman Barbara Rose Collins, who supports the expansion.

We have no money," Klaasen said. "What we have is a large number of people who are going out to work for Mr. Barrow.

Jan Skinner, also a member of the group, said that while the 13th District representative cannot stop City Airport expansion alone, he or she can be influential in stopping federal dollars going to the expansion.

She said Barrow's views in relation to bringing jobs and economic growth to the east side of Detroit and his ideas for revitalizing the neighborhoods without the airport are worth supporting.

"If he does something about Detroit, he does something about Grosse Pointe," Skinner said. "After all, they're our neighbors.

Staunch Republicans in the Pointes will have to cross over in the primary election, Klaasen said. They can vote Republican in the November general election, she said; the primary vote is not binding in any way.

In the 1988 primary, Crockett took 88 percent of the vote to the Republican challenger's 12 percent Arbor Drugs plans to build a new store on Mack Avenue on the site where Bonanza Steakhouse was located until recently when it was razed.

Arbor submitted and received approval for a site plan and elevation for the new store last month, but has yet to submit a final plan to the Woods Planning Commission, according to Chester Petersen, city administrator.

Petersen said Arbor Drug's entrance will face north toward Vernier, with the back of the store abutting the vacant part of Red Lobster to the south.

Bonanza formerly housed a Howard Johnson's restaurant, built before 1951 when the Village of Lochmoor became the City of Grosse Pointe Woods.

School board updates library plans

By Ronald J. Bernas Staff Writer

The board of education approved funding new site plans for the proposed library on the grounds of Brownell Middle School.

The new plans should cost no more than $4,000 and will be used when the board asks the Farms City Council to approve a new library site plan.

Besides site plans, the $4,000 will pay for new lighting plans, elevations and changes in the building model.

Superintendent Ed Shine said the new proposal has been changed to answer the concerns of the neighbors of Brownell Middle School whose opposition to the project persuaded the Farms council to vote against the site plan.

In the new proposal, the building is moved another 48 feet back, placing it 110 feet from the curb. Extensive landscaping will soften the look of the building.

The access drive connecting the Brownell parking lot and the proposed library parking lot has been eliminated and more parking spaces added to eliminate the safety concerns of residents.

The building will be turned so what was originally the back will face Chalfonte.

The board also commissioned another traffic study done in May, which, due to school and playfield traffic, is the busiest time around the school.

One study was done in February, but was discounted by members of the council because of the light traffic volume during that month.

The figures gathered in the May traffic study were very close, however, if not lower than the counts obtained in the February study with the exception of the side streets of Touraine, Cloverly, Manor and Madison which increased significantly.

The report to the board explains the increases due to residents of the area who drove over the pneumatic tubes repeatedly after finding out they were used for the traffic study. The report backs that up by pointing to the fact that the Chalfonte Avenue count did not increase significantly, while only a few side streets did.

In fact, the weekend counts on Chalfonte around the proposed library site are lower than the weekday counts and are, therefore, below the capacity fo the streets, according to Tapan Datta who did the study.

The report shows, as did the February study, that the streets around the area have the capacity to handle any increase in traffic a new library would cause.

Shine said the board hopes the new site plans coupled with the new traffic study will be enough for council approval when the board asks for its approval again, which he hopes will be in August.

Board approves 1990-91 budget for district By Ronald J. Bernas

Staff Writer

In a 6-1 vote, the board of education approved the new school budget on June 12.

The $57,325,000 document includes a hefty $1.5 million for building and site improvement and a large sum for new computers for the schools, according to Christian Fenton, assistant superintendent for business affairs.

Fenton said the sum is equal to the total amount spent in the two previous years, but there is a reason for the increase.

"What we're trying to avoid is a massive bond issue to improve the Curriculum Coordinating the buildings," he said. "We're Committee. trying to do a little at a time so This is th we don't have any major prob has been funded. The money will lems. The big thing is to keep be used for visits to other school the roofs in good shape, which districts as part of its five-year eliminates other problems like curriculum reviews, to hire conwater damage."

Also included in the infrastructure projects is the renovation of North High's pool and new bleachers at the school.

"All these projects are in accordance with the five-year master plan the board adopted," Fenton said.

Due to an increase of 167 students, approximately 110 at the elementary level, there will be five or six new teaching positions added to the budget.

There is more money going toward staff development, counseling for at-risk students and

This is the first year the CCC sultants and begin a curriculum audit.

Some $10,000 will be given for changes in the middle school program. The changes are part of a report given to the board by a committee that studied the middle schools and suggested ways to make the program better.

The sum of $25,000 is budgeted to continue the High School of the Future project, meant to update the high school program.

Although the average taxpayer will feel a 9.5 percent increase in school taxes this year, the millage rate levied actually dropped from 31.31 last year to 30.31 this year, Fenton said.

Because assessments in the Pointes increased, the district gets more money per mill. The district has the authority to level 37.58 mills, but can only levy 33.88 due to the Headlee privacy for emergency patients.

Amendment, Fenton said.

Trustee Carol Marr was the one dissenting vote, although President Jon Gandelot had spoken out against a 9.5 percent increase at previous board meetings.

"I just felt at this time that going to a 9.5 (percent increase) would be excessive," Marr said. "There is a lot of unrest on the issue of property taxes and it is my sense that we be prudent in how we respond to that unrest."

She said she feels the needs in the district, but that a smaller increase would be better politically.

According to figures given the board, the average homeowner with a 1990 SEV of $75,000 will pay $200 more in taxes to the district this year under the new budget.

A News 13th Congressional race heating up; airport an issue

Assistant Editor

This is the second in a series of profiles of candidates squaring off in the August primary for the 13th Congressional District, which includes Grosse Pointe Park and City.

With the August primary approaching, the eight Democractic candidates for the 13th Congressional District are being asked the key question - at least as far as Grosse Pointers are concerned - What is your position on the proposed expansion of Detroit City Airport?

So far, candidates Tom Barrow, Michael Hartt, Henry Edward Stallings II and Dr. Charles Vincent are opposed to the air por perpansion."

Lawyer Mike Patterson and state Rep. Juanita Watkins are undecided, and county Commissioner Alberta Tinsley-Williams is leaning against the airport, according to published reports.

Barbara-Rose Collins, who has been endorsed by Mayor Coleman Young, is in favor of expanding the airport.

Candidate Watkins has already been interviewed by the Grosse Pointe News. Last week. candidates Hartt and Patterson were interviewed

Michael Hartt

Hartt, 33, is a human resources manager for Lear Siegler Seating Corp. Previously, he was with General Motors and Chrysler Corp.

This is the second time he has run for the congressional seat in a Democratic primary. In 1988, he came in third and was the top vote-getter in the Grosse Pointes. He is continuing his heavy campaigning in the Pointes, in the riverfront area on Detroit's east side, in selected other neighborhoods in Detroit and in his Indian Village community.

With the Detroit vote being challenged by several big-name candidates, Hartt expects to again carry the Pointes, which he believes may push him over the top as the Democratic winner.

From the beginning, he has been and airport expansion.

"I may the mayor His lost his mind to (want to) sell $650 million in bonds to buy housing and real estate for the expansion," he said. He believes Selfridge Air National Guard base near Mount Clemens would make a far better expanded airport site than Detroit City Airport.

Other major issues for Hartt are Social Security, Medicare and Medicaid. He is opposed to using Social Security funds to offset the federal deficit, and he objects to what he said are the large out-of-pocket expenses incurred by Medicare recipients.

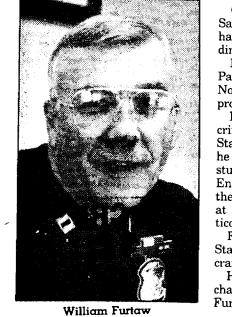

He also said he wants to see more federal spending for education. Hartt seems well-informed on several issues and has position papers on a multitude of issues

He believes the federal government can't solve Detroit's problems. He said local initiatives have to be taken, especially by corporate residents. He thinks one way corporations could help Detroit is by investing their huge pension funds into improvement projects.

Concerning the drawing up of new congressional boundaries due to the expected loss of two U.S. representatives because of declining state population, Hartt believes the other Grosse Pointes, Harper Woods and possibly some of East Detroit would be brought into the 13th District to add population.

Detroit's 13th District is reported to have lost more population since the last census than any other district in the state. Hartt firmly believes the Grosse Pointes will have a deciding voice in the Aug. 7 Democratic primary. "I firmly believe the Grosse Pointes will make the difference," he said.

Michael Patterson

Lawyer Michael Patterson vows that if elected to Congress he "will bring home the bacon."

He said the 13th District is 10th in the country as far as its share of dollars going to the federal government but is 47th in its rate of return. He said he will remedy the lopsided situation.

Patterson, 40, is a Mumford High School graduate. He attended Ferris State and Western Michigan University, where he earned a bachelor's degree with a double major in history/political science and secondary education. He served a fellowship with the Joint Center for Political Studies in Washington, D.C., and was accepted to the National Law Center of George Washington University, where he earned his law degree.

While in Washington, he worked as a part-time assistant to Michigan Sen. Philip Hart, whom he learned to respect and admire.

Back in Detroit, he worked for five years for the law firm of Stone, Richardson, Grier and Allen. In December 1980 he and Randolph D. Phifer formed their own law firm. In 1981 a third partner was added, and the firm is now called Patterson, Phifer and Phillips.

Confronted with the City Airport issue, Patterson said he cannot be for or against the proposed expansion until he has been presented with all the facts. He said all aspects have to be considered, including the economic impact as far as jobs created and whether uprooted residents and businesses relocate within Detroit.

He said many of the residents who would be displaced by the airport expansion would be happy to be able to sell and get away from the airport.

"I'm convinced a lot of people would want to get the hell out of there," he said. "You have to weigh that concern against those in the Pointes and elsewhere in Detroit.

'What they would get from me is a vote of integrity," he said concerning his stance on the airport if elected to Congress. "My vote is not for sale or (subject to) pressure.'

Concerning the reshaping of the 13th District in future redistricting, he agreed with Hartt, saying, "I think the other three Pointes will go kicking and screaming into the 13th District."

And he said if all the Pointes are together in the 13th, it will be in the Pointes' best interest as far as the airport expansion is concerned. The Pointes would have more influence if they are in the same district as the airport, he believes.

He also warns that pinning all one's hopes on a single anti-airport candidate could backfire in that after elected, the candidate could change his or her mind. And once running as an incumbent, he or she would be hard to unseat.

Patterson, who claims a strong support base through the 13th District's churches, said Detroit cannot look to the federal government for job creation. He said banks and corporations have to invest in the district. They have to learn to understand and support the black businessman, he said.

Corporations could, for example, provide matching funds for businesses and development, he said, and an endowment fund could be created to provide venture capital.

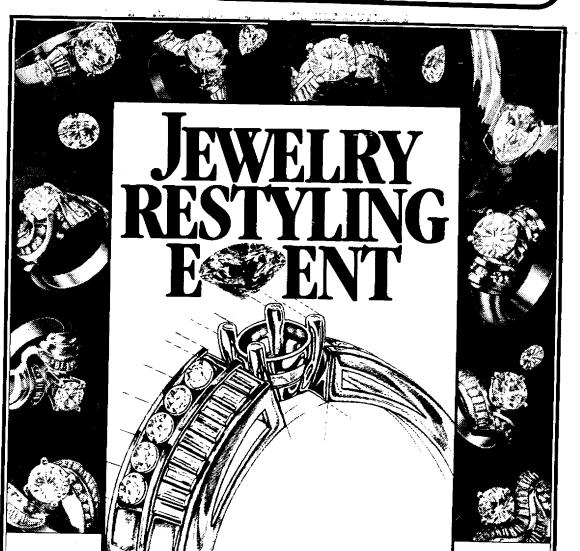

He favors forming a leadership council of church, business, labor and political leaders to set and achieve goals. Getting the black community on its own feet is the only way to help Detroit, Patterson said.

He said the federal government can be helpful in providing job training and educational funds and programs. He believes education initiatives have to begin at the preschool level to have impact.

Again on the airport issue, he reiterated that far more details need to be known before he can take a position. "I like being undecided on this issue," he said.

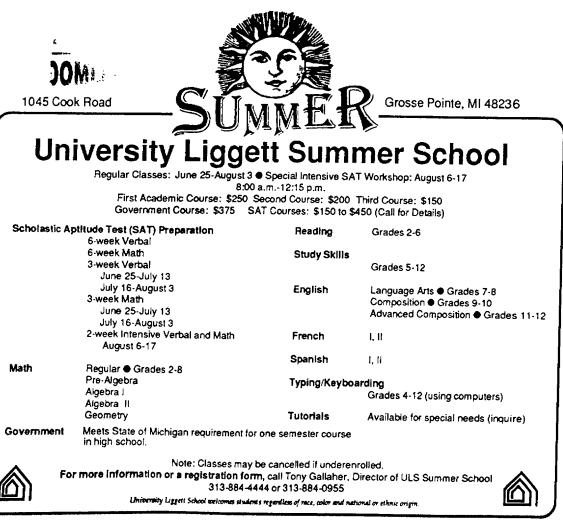

He has a master's degree in criminal justice from Michigan State University, through which he also participated in a foreign study program in Staffordshire, England. He recently completed the prestigious 10-week program at the FBI Academy in Quantico, Va.

Furtaw also teaches at Wayne State University and at Schoolcraft College's police academy.

He said his duties will not change due to the promotion. Furtaw is a Park resident.

Tax revolts still threaten our politicians

id Californians herald an end to the tax revolt era by voting to double their gasoline tax? Maybe not when other evidence of citizens' reactions to taxes is considered.

Even the California evidence is not clearcut. The people voted by a narrow 52 to 48 margin to increase their gasoline tax from 9 cents a gallon to 18 cents over a fiveyear period but the revenues are carefully earmarked for expansion of gridlocked roads and rail lines.

In other words, the funds raised by these new taxes are being regarded as user fees to benefit Californians stuck in bumper-tobumper traffic on their state's freeways. It seems people are willing to try even more taxes to relieve traffic tie-ups.

In Michigan, if the tax revolts are dead, a good many school district haven't heard about their demise. In last week's votes, districts in the Detroit metropolitan area won some but also lost some millage elections and proposals to raise taxes through Headlee law overrides.

Even in the Pointes, it took two elections in 1989 to win approval of a school millage renewal and an increase. Some of the opposition to plans for a new library in the Pointes also is believed to stem from the expectations that a higher millage will be required to run an expanded library facility.

Around the country, however, local and state taxes have continued to rise, in part because of the decline in federal aid. In the 1980s, according to Newsweek, local taxes increased by 18 percent, from 11.4 percent of Gross National Product to 13.5 percent.

The overall federal tax load also inched up for many people even during the Reagan revolution because income-tax cuts were offset by increased Social Security payroll taxes and higher excise taxes. And the Reagan administration's tax relief benefitted upper income earners and corporations more than it did average income people.

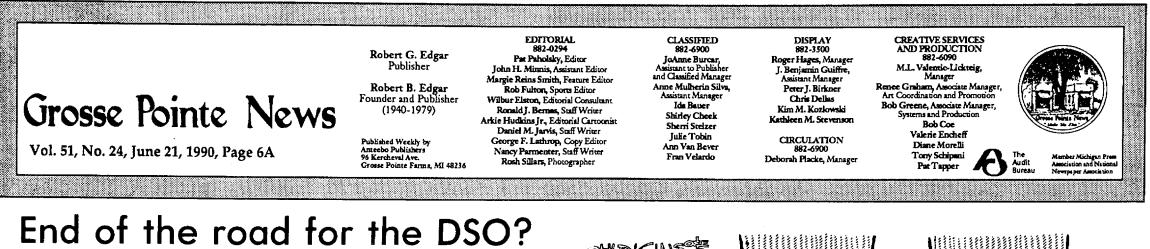

California's approval of the gasoline tax hike was not the only tax boost at the state level. Other states have increased taxes to equalize funding of poor and rich school districts; finance new roads, bridges and repairs; fix leaky underground gas tanks; fund recycling efforts and build wildlife preserves.

Public opinion polls and election results such as those from California often indicate that people are willing to pay more taxes for specific services. That is often true at the local level where it is easier for taxpayers to see what they get for their money. However, people tend to oppose general tax increases, especially when imposed by a distant Washington regarded as guilty of waste and fraud.

Political leaders have two recent examples to ponder when they consider raising taxes: Walter Mondale's crushing defeat for the presidency after he advocated higher taxes and Michigan Gov. James Blanchard's loss of Senate control after he persuaded his Democratic Legislature to pass a tax hike shortly after he took office. It's no wonder politicians still run scared nce again the Detroit Symphony Orchestra is facing financial disaster and the strong possibility that it may have to cease operations on July 1 if the state does not agree to an $8 million bailout.

What the DSO says it needs is a state commitment of about $8 million to be paid over a period of several years on condition that private matching funds are available and the orchestra shows fiscal responsibility.

The question now is whether the state, itself faced with fiscal problems that have required cutbacks in current services, will still act to save the DSO but if it doesn't and no other savior appears, it could be the end of the DSO. What a terrible loss that would be not only to Detroit but to music lovers in the entire state.

This has been a year of setbacks for the DSO. First, the city made a deal for the sale of the Ford Auditorium and its demolition even before the DSO was willing to move out. Then the DSO's manager resigned and then the city of Detroit allocated only $150,000 to help support the orchestra.

In addition, the sale of the Ford Auditorium, home of the orchestra for many controversy. The testimony by William Clay Ford, whose family's donations helped build the auditorium, showed his opposition in no uncertain terms.

He said he was "disturbed" by the plan to demolish the building to make way for Comerica Inc. headquarters and even warned that "any possible future gifts by the Ford family will be influenced by the fate of the auditorium."

It appears that if there was advance notice to the Ford family of the proposed sale of the property, it didn't reach Ford himself. Whatever the circumstances, however, the negotiations for the proposed sale appear to have been typical of the highhanded way in which the city administration goes after what it wants.

It must have been deeply embarrassing to the entire cultural community, in view of the Ford family's long record of support for the Symphony Orchestra, the Ford Auditorium and other civic enterprises, that the city did not make completely certain before it went ahead that it had the full support of the Ford family.

The mayor apparently has not yet learned that man does not live by bread alone and that Detroit's cultural assets are important not only to the citizens of the area but to the image the city projects to

Protecting the Hatch Act

President Bush has just vetoed a series of amendments to the Hatch Act that would have allowed federal employees to take part in many partisan activities from which they had long been barred.

The amendments had become another of the issues on which the Democratic Congress differs from the Republican president. In fact, in vetoing the measure, Bush said easing the restrictions on political involvement would lead to "political exploitation and abuse" of civil servants and government programs.

Congress acted in response to the complaint by some federal workers that the Hatch Act deprived them of political rights and civil liberties. As originally drafted in the House, the measure would have expanded employees rights more than the Senate version which the House later accepted.

As finally approved, the bill would not have allowed federal employees to run in partisan elections for public office but it would have permitted them to organize voter registration drives and to serve as delegates to presidential nominating conventions.

They also could have held office in local, state and national political organizations, publicly endorsed candidates, distributed campaign literature, organized telephone banks and political meetings and asked coworkers to donate money to a political action committee representing the interests of federal employees.

In effect, the merit system protections and benefits in the federal service tend to be greater than in private employment but, in return, federal employees are asked to give up some of the political rights and civil liberties other citizens enjoy.

It's a tradeoff but one that still appears to be fair to federal employees without the adoption of amendments that might have led to deterioration of the federal merit system.

Calm after the Pistons' storm

Now that peace has been restored and the celebrations have ended, we think it is fair to say that the champion Pistons deserved better from some of their fans and from the daily press than they got in recent days.

The excesses of the fans that led to eight deaths have been blamed on everything from poverty to media exaggeration but it is some slight consolation to realize that sports fan violence is not limited to Detroit or even the United States.

Shelby Strother of The Detroit News, covering the international soccer matches in Cagliari, Italy, is authority for that comment. He became part of the story he was reporting when the Italian police attacked an unruly mob of English soccer fans and used their clubs against Strother himself.

In Detroit, the media's worst offense probably was the reporting of a federal investigation of sports betting that supposedly involved Pistons captain Isiah Thomas, an accusation that Thomas immediately denounced.

To his credit, Detroit News editorial page editor Tom Bray criticized the news media's lack of priorities and even asked this sensible question of his brethren:

"But doesn't the Fourth Estate bear some of the blame itself for conspiring with the city's boosters to elevate sports to a level of importance it shouldn't rationally occupy?"

In fact, there's plenty of blame to go around but the team itself should be spared unless there's more hard evidence than has been reported of a federal investigation into a sports betting ring.

Life, death To the Editor:

It appears to me that if heaven is the ultimate goal of humanity and life is really spirit — and spirit cannot die — why is the world upset about one who chooses the path to glorious eternity at his own timing if the mind and the body cannot function any more as God intended?

Would a loving God prefer one to suffer the living hell of pain rather than choose the path to eternal bliss?

Gratified

To the Editor:

It was very gratifying to attend the June 12 Board of Education meeting and witness their unanimous endorsement of the revised plan for a new central library facility on the Brownell Middle School site.

This revised plan seeks to address the various concerns expressed by the residents living in proximity to the site as well as the objections and concerns previously raised by the Grosse Pointe Farms Council.

It has been documented numerous times that Grosse Pointers love their libraries. Unfortunately our current library system fails to adequately and appropriately meet the ever-expanding needs of our patrons. It is imperative that we unite as a community of concerned citizens and dedicate ourselves to the development of a library system of the 21st century. Our community and our children deserve nothing less.

Animal rights To the Editor:

On Sunday, June 10, 1990, I had the opportunity to speak for those who are speechless; the march for the rights of those who have no rights — with 55,000 others, I marched from the Washington Monument down Pennsylvania Avenue to the steps of the Capital in Washington, D.C., for Animal Rights.

We were all there together, Americans, Non-Americans, Yuppies, Radicals, Punks, Old People, Young People and those inbetween, all supporting each other to end the suffering of our animal friends. We carried signs and wore T-shirts; we listened to celebrities, congressmen and authors who brought us to tears with horrifying stories of the injustices brought upon animals.

I can't fully describe the energy or love that radiated from these 55,000 people, nor the change it caused in me. A change which can best be said that it restored my faith in the people of America. I witnessed a phenomenon that no matter who we are, where we come from or how much money we make, we can still come together to legally and peacefully right a cruel and inhumane wrong.

When it was all said and done, we 55,000 people were reminded that each one of us can make a difference. Each one of us can speak for those who can only whine and cry in pain, for they do not have the power of speech. That by buying a different product or writing our congressman or adopting a homeless animal we can each make a small difference, and together we can make a change.

Next week's coming attraction

Back in September, a small group representing the various departments of the Grosse Pointe News met to explore the idea of putting out a special issue to commemorate our 50th anniversary.

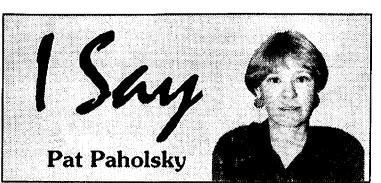

As with any gestation period, not much happened outwardly in those early months other than setting a target date and deciding what form it would take tabloid size or broadsheet, separate from or in addition to the regular paper, and all those details that are not done easily by couldn't have done any of it juscommittee.

And then this date, which seemed so far off, began closing in and it was eat, sleep and breathe 50th. There was moaning and gnashing of teeth and cries of "We need more time" and "A project like this, to be properly done, should take a year.

But like a speeding train with no brakes, there was no stopping or getting off or changing direc-tion. And guess what. We got it done on deadline - well, one day off - and to the printers and next week at this time, you will be looking over something of which we are immensely proud.

It was an ambitious project — to relate the history of Grosse Pointe with an emphasis on the last 50 years and to bring it to life in a way that you could feel its pulse and see its color and hear its sounds.

That was the easy part. The material was there. In fact, there was so much material, we tice if we had tried to include it all. So we selected slices of life to research and relate.

Some of it was done at random. A writer would say, "That sounds interesting; I'd like to do that story." One writer, through researching old Detroit daily newspapers, stumbled across an item unrelated to his topic, and wrote a nice piece about a group of Grosse Pointe men who were stranded on an island.

What emerged from the stories coming in was a Grosse Pointe past that was like a tapestry intricate and colorful. One writer made the comment: They sure had fun in those days. The newsroom was aided by two additional people who worked full time to give the project its foundation and structure - I've written about them in an introduction in the special issue. The staff writers filled in and fleshed out the structure with their stories.

And of course, if it weren't for the advertising and production have gotten off the ground. It was, as it should be, a team effort.

But the most amazing thing happened on our way to this commemorative issue: your response to our request for your reflections of the past. We were astounded at the number of replies that came in from all over the country.

We had enough forms printed up asking for your recollections to be inserted with two issues. After the first insertion, I didn't want the second one to go out, because I didn't know what we were going to do with all those responses. My heart said: Print them all. My head said: There won't be room.

In the end, I decided to go with my heart for two reasons: This is your community newspaper and what better way to be a part of this anniversary observance. The second reason was even though many of you remembered the same things, you departments, none of this would remembered them in your own way which was unique to anyone else's.

There was also a third reason: Your stuff was extremely well written. You'll see what I mean next week. The only editing that was done was to pare down some of the longer responses.

We are accustomed to people telling us they don't know how to word something - a coming event, an honor that was received, etc. And they're usually right, but that's all right - it's our business to rewrite releases according to our style.

These recollections, however, are good writing and it proves what all writers know: Write about what you know. And you know what it was like to live in Grosse Pointe many or not-somany years ago.

And so this team effort of our special 50th anniversary issue includes all of you who responded. You're going to like it a lot. I think it's the best thing we've ever done.

Flag waving

Grosse Pointe Woods was under the flutter of red, white and blue on Memorial Day as the nine American flags flew high above the city's Circle of Honor on Vernier near Mack Avenue.

City administrator Chester Petersen and his wife, Roberta, conceived and funded the Circle of Honor. During the last 10 years, they've planted hundreds of red, white and blue flowers in the patriotic circle which honors those who've died in American wars.

Going above and beyond the call of duty again, the Petersens have kicked in more of their own money by ordering 18 authentic U.S. flags, two from each of our nation's wars, from the days of Paul Revere to Vietnam. Here's a salute to the Petersens' generous efforts to honor our country's brave soldiers.

From page 6A Feeding squirrels To the Editor:

I am very much saddened by the ecological situation in this area that grievously affects our tiny funny creatures, our little squirrels. They are creatures of God and as such have a very hard time seeking food and shelter and now our apartment manager has sent each of us a form letter warning us against feeding these adorable creatures, which says as follows: "Over the past three or four weeks we have received several complaints that some of you have been feeding the squirrels at Vernier Terraces.

"We must insist that this practice be discontinued immediately as the squirrels could bite someone, causing serious injury; dig up the flower beds or they could do physical damage to the apartment while trying to get in to get food. We cannot allow any conditions that pose a threat to the safety of our tenants or a potential damage to the property.

"I trust that you will respect our request in this regard and, as always, we appreciate your cooperation. Thank you."

I responded to the above letter and I am wondering, since none of us are real authorities on the subject, whether you could allay the fears of all concerned that they are in absolutely no danger from these adorable little creatures of God.

But, of course, I would never recommend feeding them by hand or petting them mainly because they are too timid to permit such. As more and more trees are being removed and trimmed back, their food chain is drastically eliminated and they welcome any little bit of food proffered as a Godgiven survival instinct.

And I repeat, they would never beg if their own food were available. Also, they would not be so highly visible in the streets if they had a large tree with food (seed pods) and shelter from the storms and would remain in their own back yard so to speak.

Keep it residential To the Editor:

While Dr. Mark Weber has written to your paper stating that he has received much community support for the recent purchase of Mr. Griffin's home, I must go on record to state my overwhelming opposition.

I was expecting a new neighbor when three representatives of the War Memorial descended on my home to tell me that they were my new "neighbor." I was shocked, concerned and scared. I still am and there is nothing that the War Memorial can say or do that will change my feelings.

I firmly believe the War Memorial purchased the property in a most deceitful way and I am not at all pleased that they will be my immediate neighbor. Expansion into the residential neighborhood is wrong! I would urge the citizens of Grosse Pointe Farms to oppose this and ask the Farms council to keep this property as a tax-paying residential property.

Woods thanked To the Editor:

As residents of Grosse Pointe Woods (26 years), we are extremely happy to learn that curbside pickup of recyclable resources has finally been approved. It is encouraging to know that our city is taking steps to reduce the negative impact of our waste. Our gratitude to Chester Petersen, city administrator, Grosse Pointe Woods, and council members who voted in favor of curbside pickup.

We have been taking our recyclables to a drop-off center and have reduced our own trash from three bags to one bag. Through this experience, it is obvious to us that recyling works. Hopefully with the convenience of curbside pickup more citizens will participate in providing a more healthful planet for their children to inherit. We hope material will be distributed to enlighten and instruct citizens how they should separate their valuable resources from their trash. The Grosse Pointe News coverage has been excellent; however, all residents are not subscribers.

Let's continue on this path for a better environment and sincere thanks to Fran Schonenberg, president, Grosse Pointe Citizens for Recyling, for all the work and tremendous dedication to this necessary project.

Latchkey To the Editor:

We are writing this letter so that parents who utilize the Latchkey Program of the Grosse Pointe Public School System will be aware of the unreasonable differentiation in costs under the proposed fee schedule for the 1990-1991 school year.

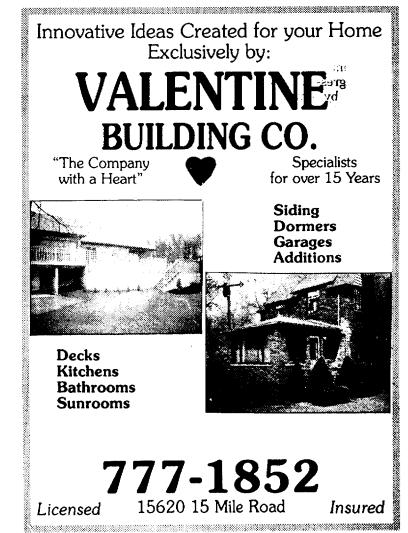

We have no problem with paying the proposed $25 nonrefundable supply fee per child each year. Also, we have no disagreement with raising the hourly fee to $2.50, the monthly pre-payment for the special rate is also acceptable.

What we object to is the fact that there is a special flat rate for pre-paid afternoon only, three hours per day, monthly usage. This rate is not allowed for children who utilize the Latchkey

Program three hours per day, a portion of which is in the morning, but not more than three hours per day total. Under this system, two children who take advantage of this program for the same number of hours will pay different amounts because one uses it in the afternoon only. Interestingly, it costs less for the district to operate the program in the morning as there are tless supervisors and no snack. So, the result is that the child who is in the program for one hour in the morning and two hours in the afternoon, costs less to the program than the afternoon-only child, who is there for three hours. Under the new fee schedule, this child would pay more.

When we called Cheryl Dorman, Latchkey coordinator, she told us the program was offered as in incentive so parents would not let children come home to an unsupervised home and would be in a protected environment. While her motive is admirable, we disagree with subsidizing this altruism. It does not equally protect all children who utilize the program for the same number of hours at different times of the day. This unreasonableness results in a difference in costs of more than $250 per year. Families who require the Latchkey Program in the morning should receive the same reduced fee schedule as those who use the program for the same number of hours in the afternoon. At the present time, no other incentives for the morning session are offered Balderdash!

Sage advice on what kind of car to buy — and why

When Lynn Bliss, learned and winsome professor of communication disorders at Wayne State University, said she needed some advice from me, I suspected it had nothing to with academic matters, as I am only rarely consulted on such things by my colleagues (or knowledgeable students, for that matter). It must, I thought, have to do with cars.

"I have to buy a new car," she said, and referred to a piece of advice I had given her about a year earlier when she first started considering the possibility of a new car, which was "buy a Honda or a Mazda."

"That was good advice indeed," I affirmed, "unless you have been reborn automotivewise and have need of some interesting Detroit iron."

The winsome professor ignored my disordered communication and said she was on the verge of buying a Honda Civic. "Excellent choice," I said, a fine car and a good value among Japanese cars, which tend to be a bit pricey.

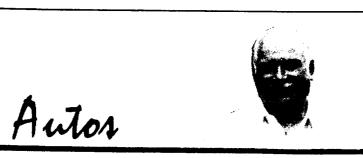

Later in the day I got a mes-sage from George Eddington, head of Grosse Pointe Schools Community Education, inquiring as to whether I would be interested in repeating a one-night program on "How to Buy a Car."

I had done such a program last fall and had enjoyed it. To my surprise, the participants also seemed to enjoy it and felt they had learned something of value. So we tentatively scheduled another such one-nighter for Oct. 16.

One bit of advice I had given that class last fall was that if you are not a buff, if you view a car as just transportation and not the object of some perverse love affair, then you should probably buy a Honda or a Mazda, because these cars will deliver you about and will not be intrusive in your life. Or a Toyota or a Mitsubishi.

If you really love cars and want something interesting, consider General Motors, I told them. But be careful, because GM regularly builds some of the best cars in the world and some of the worst, often at the same time, often sold out of the same showroom with the same namplates on them.

Anyway, I pegged Dr. Bliss as one who was not enthralled with automobiles - after all, she has owned some kind of a Nissan for more than a decade of workmanlike if not thrilling service - so I suggested a Honda Civic or

'39 Buick coupe with a modern engine and transmission, the latest in good suspension, tires and brakes

Excitedly, I shared this revelation with her, that she could have whatever she wanted, an automobile to reflect her uniqueness, a modern machine which looks as if it were from a more golden era, an automobile that would never depreciate, that would only grow in value over the years. And it would run like new.

"I decided I want a Honda Civic, so I ordered one," she said, cooling my automotive ardor with her impeccable logic. "Ex-cellent choice," I said, figuring that this Honda would keep my reputation among friends and family for giving good automotive advice intact.

My sister, Barbara Pegg, for example, asked me recently what car she should buy, because I had always steered her right before.

"I told you to buy a Plymouth Turismo?" I asked. "Yes," she said, "and I loved it."

"Yes you did," she insisted. "Did you like it?" I asked. "I loved it," she stated.

She was a bit puzzled when I prescribed for her next purchase a Dodge Shadow convertible. She was dubious about a convertible and said she would probably not put the top down much, but I assured her it was the wisest buy. I don't know what she may have purchased, since Chrysler has not yet introduced such a car.

While my car-buying advice has kept her happy through the years, I must admit that her husband, Gene, has also been happy with his cars over the years, although he has neither sought out nor paid the least bit of attention to my thoughts on the subject, by the simple expedient of buying one Lincoln after another.

My brother, Larry, seems to have paid little heed to my sage counsel over the years. I warned him he probably wouldn't like a Chevrolet Camaro, which he bought and loves. He conveniently forgets I touted the Ford white racing stripes and vinyl roof, not purple and orange.

During 30 years of reporting on auto manufacturing, product design, engineering and service, marketing and retailing, I naturally have formulated a number of thoughts on buying cars.

Some people are surprised when I suggest an older car instead of a new one, but I can cite no less an authority than Roger B. Smith, chairman of GM, who counseled against buying a cheap new car, stating that you would be better off with a used Buick than a new Yugo. I quite agree.

I think convertibles are good values, even if you are not a sun worshipper. They hold their value so much better than sedans and coupes that even if you replace the top every few years, you may come out ahead. And you may learn the joys of droptop motoring.

I am personally a fan of '60s and '70s Detroit iron, but do not hesitate to recommend a foreign make if that seems the best choice for a person. In fact, I have owned a couple of Volkswagens and an amazing Volvo station wagon over the years. I also believe that if you want to buy American, go ahead. High quality is there, you just may have to look a little more carefully than you do in a Toyota dealership.

I like buying used cars, I think its more adventurous and

I also like used cars that run

Draper specializes in Pontiac Firebirds and Grand Prixs and Buick Regals of the '70s and '80s, a period in which he believes American carmakers peaked, building some of the finest cars ever built anywhere. I agree.

It is important to remember that no one choice is best for everyone. People do all kinds of one to blame.

different things with their cars and need all kinds of different things from them.

Perhaps the most important thing is that, unlike buying a new washing machine or refrigerator, buying a car is exciting and it should be fun. It's not fun if you're afraid, so learn more about buying a car and you'll find it's not so scary.

Or ask someone else what you should buy. Then if you don't like it, at least you have some-

But after gathering my thoughts in response to Dr. Eddington's call, I reconsidered. Maybe Dr. Bliss would like something special, something unique, like a

Ring day

The 68-year tradition of Ring Day, when the girls in the junior class are presented with their class rings by members of the senior class, continued at University Liggett School in May, when the juniors received their rings from the 71-member graduating class of the Grosse Pointe Woods school. The presentation of the rings by senior girls to the junior girls symbolizes the official transfer of leadership from one class to the next, in hopes that they, too, will be successful in their endeavors. Guest speaker for the event was WDIV-TV news anchor Carmen Harlan, above of Detroit.

Scholarship recipients

The Grosse Pointe Academy recently announced the recipients of the school's two major scholarships.

Kindergarten student Megan Jolly, daughter of Gregory Jolly of Detroit, received the Eleanor Wagner Brock Scholarship to continue her education at the Academy. The scholarship is awarded annually to a girl in the 5-year-old program of the Academy's Montessori Early Schooi.

The scholarship is sponsored Winner by James E. Brock Jr. of Grosse Pointe and Jennifer S. Brock of daughter, the late Eleanor Wagner Brock, who attended the Academy Early School.

Daniel A. Dennehy of Grosse Pointe, and Yvonne Zola, daugh-Thelma Fox Murray Scholarship. This annual award is given to a qualified seventh-grade girl to aid completion of her Academy education through the eighth grade.

The scholarship was provided by the late Thelma Fox Murray, an alumna of Academy of the Sacred Heart, Grosse Pointe, now the Grosse Pointe Academy.

2nd-graders in smoke-free project

Second-graders across the State of Michigan are celebrating their graduation again this spring as the first class to participate in the Smoke-Free Class of 2000.

The project is sponsored by the American Cancer Society, Michigan Division, Inc., American Heart Association of Michigan, and the American Lung Association of Michigan, the lead organizations in the Michigan Coalition on Smoking OR Health.

More than 9,000 students received certificates and bright neon painters' hats proclaiming them as the Smoke-Free Class of 2000. The hats were provided by the Michigan Education Special Services Association, which is affiliated with the Michigan Education Association.

More than 700 elementary schools are participating in the Smoke-Free Class of 2000 Project, according to Harry Perlstadt, Ph.D., M.P.H., chairman of the coalition. Second graders, their teachers, and parents received anti-smoking education materials designed especially for them.

"These children are now the symbolic ambassadors of the first smoke-free generation," said Perlstadt. "Each year the smokefree challenge will be passed to a new class so that thousands of Michigan children can join their older brothers, sisters, and

U.S. Surgeon General C. Everett

"Nearly 20 percent of teenagers in the state of Michigan smoke cigarettes," said Perlstadt, "and most began smoking before the age of 15."

More than a dozen national organizations concerned with the health and welfare of young Americans have endorsed the Smoke-Free Class of 2000 Project, including the National School Boards Association, the National PTA, the American Academy of Family Physicians, and the National Association of School Nurses. Disney Education Productions will prepare new educational materials for the third grade.

12A News Grosse Po Cottage Hospital to begin delivering babies again

By Dan Jarvis Staff Writer

After a decade, Cottage Hospital will soon get back into the baby business.

The hospital will join a nationwide trend toward updated obstetrics by offering labor, delivery, recovery and postpartum (LDRP) in one location.

Greg Vasse, chief executive officer, said plans are being made to renovate an existing nine- the 1990s will be regionally room unit to an ultra-modern based and will offer a full range LDRP unit.

sery, labor lounge, a full-service Cesarean section room and whirlpools. In keeping with the nationwide trend, the emphasis will be on comfort and high technology.

"What's happening here at Cottage is a reflection of what's happening in the health care field as a whole," Vasse said.

"The health care systems of of services," he said. "The thrust The unit will include a nur will be on multi-facility operations serving defined regional populations. We have to have the basics of primary care.'

In 1981, the Michigan Public Health Department mandated that hospitals formulate plans to offer a full range of services while reducing the overall number of beds.

Coco Kotila, marketing director for Bon Secours Hospital, said both Cottage and Bon Secours worked closely to formulate a plan to improve local hospital services and meet the state mandated bed reductions.

At that time, Kotila said, Bon Secours stepped up birthing while Cottage ceased the practice. Also all adult psychiatric care was handled by Cottage.

Both Vasse and Kotila said there was no agreement between the two hospitals in meeting the state mandate. Kotila added that both medical facilities were commended by state officials for working together to successfully reduce the number of beds.

Vasse said the trend toward LDRPs and regional-based care as a whole is growing quickly and represents a big step in the health care field.

"These are changes that were not present over the past two now," Vasse said.

In a traditional hospital setup, women go through labor with the assistance of labor and delivery nurses in a room with two or more beds.

Just before giving birth, the mother is moved to the delivery room.

After the baby is born, the mother is moved to the recovery room, where a separate staff cares for her. The baby is taken to the nursery to be cared for by the nursery staff. Following recovery, the new mother is then

Channel lights on national register By Ronald J. Bernas

Staff Writer East Detroit resident Charles Brockman is pleased with the work U.S. Sen. Donald Riegle has done in getting the two South Channel lights on Lake St. Clair near Harsens Island on the National Historic Register.

Brockman took the two lights - which have led sailors safely through the channel for more than 130 years - under his wing almost two years ago when he saw the condition that time, weather and vandals had left them in.

He formed Save Our South Channel Lights, an organization dedicated to not just preserving the lights, but to restoring them. The group meets periodically

Fleeing motorist throws sparks

A 45-year-old Roseville man was creating sparks eastbound on Lakeshore in the Pointes at 8 p.m. June 12 before Shores and Farms police were able to stop him.

According to Farms police reports, the man was fleeing an accident scene at Lakeshore and Warner Road. The car's front, right wheel had blown out, and the officers followed the fragments of tire up Lakeshore until they spotted the fleeing man.

The Roseville man reached speeds up to 60 mph and was throwing sparks from the rim on the pavement. When the car was finally stopped, police said the rim was worn down and smoking.

The car with one wheel nearly struck a white limousine and the rear end of another car.

With the assistance of Shores police, the Farms officers were finally able to stop the man.

When Farms police questioned the man, his speech was slurred and he smelled strongly of alcohol, according to police. He failed to discuss ways of raising money to restore them. Their new placement on the National Historic Register makes them eligible for federal funding under the Bicentennial Lighthouse Fund, and last week Riegle said that Secretary of State James Baker announced the two lighthouses will receive $10,000 from the fund.

Last June Brockman's group took Riegle out to the lighthouses so he could see their condition. The front light, built on a wooden base, was taken down and rebuilt in 1875 and has remained virtually untouched since then. It is leaning badly and the light booth on top is missing.

The rear light, built on a stone base, has weathered the years better, but is slowly falling apart.

Brockman expects it will take approximately $50,000 to fix the

Paper drop-off at ULS closed

University Liggett School has announced it has closed the Community Newspaper Recycling Center on the school's campus, 1045 Cook Road in Grosse Pointe Woods.

The closing was necessary because of the rising cost of disposing of collected newspapers, as well as the decline in the demand for recycled newspapers.

The Community Newspaper Recycling Center opened on the ULS campus in October 1987 and since then, local recyclers have delivered thousands of tons of old newspapers to the center.

Newspapers can still be dropped off at the St. Clair Shores Civic Arena on Stephens, west of Little Mack, on the first Saturday of each month from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. and at St. Matthew Church at Harper and Whittier.

front light by building a sea wall Register is required to qualify around it, straighten and secure it. It is a project he hopes will begin this summer.

Riegle co-authored the $3 million Bicentennial Lighthouse Fund which was created last year to mark the bicentennial of the nation's first public works law. In 1789, Congress authorized a series of lighthouses along coastal waters to serve as safety and navigational aides.

Money from the Bicentennial Lighthouse Fund goes to the state and is distributed by the Michigan Bureau of History. Funds are used to restore and preserve historical lighthouses. The designation to the Historical man at 777-0543.

for the Bicentennial Lighthouse Fund.

Brockman looks forward to more support from politicians in this election year and is pleased to see his work come closer to completion.

"I've been working a long time in one direction," he said. "I get a little tired sometimes and I wonder if it's worth all the trouble, but all it takes is one person to come up with a good idea and I'm fired up again.'

The group has some 365 members but can always use more support, he said. Those interested in helping can call Brock-

Services for Ralph T. Mc-Elvenny Sr. will be held at 4 p.m. today, June 21, at Christ Church of Grosse Pointe. Mr. McElvenny, 83, of Grosse Pointe Farms, died Monday, June 18, 1990.

Mr. McElvenny, former chief executive officer of the American Natural Gas Co., was a strong supporter of Detroit and built his company's 32-story building on Jefferson and Woodward in the '60s when people were saying Detroit was dead.

He also worked for several organizations to promote and reenergize the city, including the New Detroit Committee, precursor to the Detroit Renaissance. He was past president of the International Freedom Festival and chairman of the Executive Committee of the United Foundation and the United Foundation's Capital Fund Division.

Involved in Detroit's civil rights movement, Mr. Mc-Elvenny was appointed by President Lyndon Johnson to the Committee on Equal Employment Opportunity and the National Citizens Committee for Community Relations, which were created under the Civil Rights Act.

Mr. McElvenny was also a member of the Detroit Arts Commission and the Community Arts Council. He was past president of the Founders Society of the Detroit Institute of Arts.

He was a trustee for, among others, Kalamazoo College, the University of Detroit, the Detroit Institute of Arts, the Detroit Arts Commission and the Kresge Foundation.

He was a former board member for the Port of Detroit Authority and was a member of the executive committee for the Detroit Symphony Orchestra.

A graduate of Stanford University, Mr. McElvenny was a member of Stanford's Athletic Hall of Fame, having won a national collegiate doubles tennis championship.

He is survived by his wife of 55 years, Elizabeth; a son, Ralph T. Jr.; daughters, Elizabeth Nardine and Alice Oldham; and six grandchildren.

Memorial contributions may be made to Christ Church of Grosse Pointe, 61 Grosse Pointe Blvd., Grosse Pointe Farms, or to the Detroit Institute of Arts.

1BA Entertinent 'Dick Tracy' will fill your senses

By Michael Chapp Special Writer

The first thing one notices about "Dick Tracy" is the way it looks. Bright, contrasting colors and inventive set designs immediately put viewers into a time and place they've never seen before.

Watching Dick Tracy on the screen is very much like seeing Dick Tracy in the comic section of the newspaper. The lanternjawed hero detective of the 1930's and 40s is a natural for the big screen, especially after last year's "Batman" paved the way for such material.

In that sense, director and star including Tracy himself, are one-Warren Beatty succeeds admirably. If nothing else, "Tracy" is the most visually stimulating and viscerally engaging film we've come across in a long time.

Charles the states of the stat

The best thing we notice is the music. Danny Elfman, who scored the picture, and Stephen Sondheim, who wrote original songs, capture the campy and free-spirited essence of the proceedings.

Beyond that, viewer reaction to "Tracy" will be largely a matter of taste. Lighthearted humor and good-natured action are the main course here, with some noteworthy character acting thrown in for good measure.

But if Beatty has captured the look and feel of a comic strip, which was clearly his intention - he's also fallen into a trap he would probably have rather avoided. Most of the characters, dimensional and almost embarrassingly simple. Viewers who can overlook such things will be more than satisfied. Viewers who like to use their heads and hearts along with their guts will probably be somewhat disappointed.

Most will likely fall into the first category. At its core, this is a very uncomplicated movie: good vs. evil, right vs. wrong, the morally upright vs. the morally bankrupt.

Tracy, of course, is the quintessence of good. He's got a great girl, he takes in an orphan, he's got a big heart, and he's always on call, via his wristwatch walkie-talkie - and ready to stamp out a bad guy.

And there are plenty of them, led by Big Boy Caprice (Al Pacino) and rounded out with an amusing array of very ugly and very bad - hoodlums.

The plot follows Tracy's efforts to clean up the town while he's working up the nerve to propose to girlfriend Tess Trueheart (Glenna Headly) and fighting off the advances of nightclub singer Breathless Mahoney (Madonna). While most of the proceedings are engaging enough, "Tracy' really is about plot as much as atmosphere.

Viewers will long remember the green streets, red walls, purple roof tops and yellow jacket of Tracy. Too, they will remember excellent bits of work by Pacino, who almost runs off with the show the way Jack Nicholson did in "Batman," and Dustin Hoffman, who does an amusing turn as Mumbles, a character who lives up to his name.

"Dick Tracy" is certainly not the best adaptation of a character from the page to the screen, but it is one of the best to look at - the movie is worth checking out for that, if nothing else.

Machines at Greenfield Village The amazing machines that self-guided tour and take-home

revolutionized American farms and factories during the late 19th and early 20th centuries will be up and running again June 30 and July 1 for the eighth annual Pageant of Power at Greenfield Village.

Two days of power-packed events, including an antique tractor pull and a demonstration pitting human muscle against a 25-ton locomotive, will show visitors how harnessing energy has made working life easier for both urban and rural Americans.

Engines that have been preserved and restored by enthusiasts from across the nation will function alongside village artifacts in demonstrations of steam, gas, electrical, wind and water power. Miniature machines and models will be displayed throughout the weekend, too.

Special guided tours and demonstrations of enormous engines that changed the lives of farmers and factory workers will be offered several times each day.

Children will enjoy hands-on activities that show how gears and rubber-band "motors" make things go. A newly developed puzzle will help them discover how power helps in producing food, clothing, light, heat, and more.

Tractor operators will tear up the turf Saturday as steel wheelers and rubber-treaded tyrants measure their muscle in the antique tractor pull. Vintage tractors (1938 and older) that can still pull up to five times their own weight will be demonstrated by collectors in this national meet.

An exhibition of muscle power and maneuverability will be offered Sunday with a mammoth 1916 Port Huron steam traction engine from the village's collection. This portable powerhouse is mighty enough to bend steel, but it can also traverse an obstacle course with ease.

Admission to Pageant of Power and other special weekend programs is free with general village admission.

Henry Ford Museum & Greenfield Village is located at Oakwood Boulevard and Village Road in Dearborn just west of the Southfield Freeway (M-39) and south of Michigan Avenue (U.S. 12).

The sequel lacks the inventive comedy of the original, and walks in while the first "48 Hours" bal. anced humor and actions. "Another 48 Hours" relies more on violence. However, it is spread out over a story that makes room for a good bit of Murphy's clowning and Nolte's comic outbursts.

Violence is introduced in the first sequence set in a barren desert bar where Nolte has stopped trast – Murphy, the fast-talking The two work well together for a drink. It is an eerie scene con man with perfectly tailored and if the second "48 Hours" is out over a hill. His face is distorted by sand whipping against the window. A group of bikers suddenly appear over the hill as though they were dropped from the sky.

The camera shifts to one rider's boots, marking every ominous step in the shifting sand. It rises to show the tattoo on his companion's face. Their movements and expressions threaten like thunder before a storm.

Before they disappear over the hills again, the bar is shot up, the bartender is murdered and Nolte has shot one of the bikers. Although he shot in self defense, the dead man's gun can't be found and he is accused of manslaughter.

In the meantime, Murphy, who has been in prison for seven years, is spending his last day shooting baskets when Nolte Nolte is convinced that the desert incident was set up by a drug kingpin, the Iceman, who he has been trying to nail. He wants Murphy to help him.

It's hard to put down this combination of the smart-mouthed con man and the plodding cop. They are a comic study of con- in the original film.

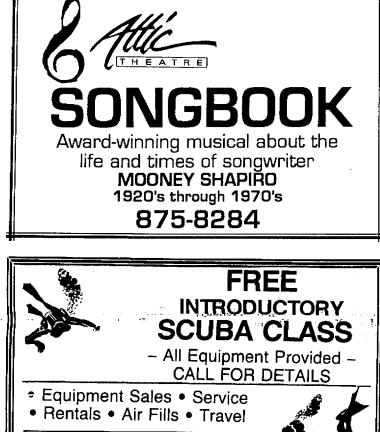

They generate laughs as they bounce put-downs off each other and engage in slugging matches. But they hang together when the going gets rough, and it does.

If it were not for the multiple shootouts, an alley tussle and a couple of car chases, the viewer might even think that the Iceman is a figment of Nolte's imagination. We never see him nor do we ever suspect the person

Close to the end, Nolte picks up a clue that leads him and Murphy to a nightclub and a kaleidescope of violence that fills the screen with shattered bodies and exploding glass. The gun play is so choreographed that it is almost like watching a dream nightmare sequence rather than an actual happening.

Murphy is not the Murphy he was in the first "48 Hours." The humor is less ad-libbed and the put-downs meaner, but then perhaps that's the way he's supposed to be. After all, he spent seven years in the slammer and that could account for the change. Nolte is recognizable as the same rough, sloppy, foulmouthed intense Cates we met

Grosse Pointe News Entertainment (Total Recall': Brainy sci-fi film for Schwarzenegger

By Michael Chapp Special Writer

"There are any number of adjectives that could be used to describe "Total Recall": complex, action-packed, funny, mysterious, fast-moving, unique.

But nobody - nobody - would call this picture a "no-brainer" that's easy to understand. "Recall" sends Arnold Schwarzenegger, its center of interest, through a grueling series of adventures in a futuristic setting. The audience, of course, goes along for the ride.

That's the easy part.

Things quickly get a whole lot more complicated. One of the perks of life in Schwarzenegger's society is a new kind of vacation package. Travelers don't actually go anywhere. But for a modest fee, all of the memories of the vacation can be planted in their minds. Down to the last detail.

It's an interesting concept, especially when one considers the ways devious minds could put such technology to use for their own benefit.

Schwarzenegger, whose onscreen IQ still doesn't match the measurement of his biceps, likes the idea of taking a vacation on Mars, which has been colonized.

Actually, he likes the idea of receiving the memory implant of a Mars vacation, since his wife won't agree to go there for real. And for a few extra bucks, he's crazy about the idea of taking that trip as a secret agent. All of this is arranged by the friendly neighborhood memory man, who doesn't warn our hero about the dangerous side effects of the memory implant process.

And that's where things get really complicated.

Schwarzenegger has a violent one of them, and getting chased all the way to Mars. There, he's asked to help release the planet's residents from the clutches of a crooked gangster (is there any other kind?) who keeps the minions in line by withholding oxygen. The question, of course, is whether all of this is actually taking place or if it's just the memories being implanted. The reaction to the memory implant process. the implant people, worried about the possible trouble they could get into, decide to stop the process immediately and dump him in the street somewhere. Then the adventure begins. He's assaulted by a group of bad guys. He ends up killing answer is a lot harder to come by than you might expect.

"Recall" is quality entertainment, though it's a bit on the violent side. The action and narrative are well mixed, keeping things interesting throughout the nearly two hours running time. Too, Schwarzenegger does a respectable job holding things together.

But when you leave the theater, do not expect to understand in detail all that has transpired. This picture reportedly took about 16 years to bring to the screen. It would take at least that long to figure it out.

'A Fort Night' at Fort Wayne

Historic Fort Wayne will be the setting of a patriotic tribute to U.S. Indepence Day at the fifth annual "A Fort Night" cele-bration, held in conjunction with the International Freedom Festival on Monday, July 2.

The free evening includes performances by four military bands, a scenic riverfront picnic area and a unique view of the Freedom Festival fireworks display.

Sponsored by AAA Michigan, Detroit Renaissance and Historic Fort Wayne, "A Fort Night" will feature the U.S. Army Field Band and Soldiers' Chorus, known as the "Musical Ambassadors of the Army" and considered one of America's most distinctive concert ensembles.

The Michigan Colonial Fife & Drum Corps, the Fifth Michigan Regimental Band and the Windsor Police Pipe Band are also scheduled to entertain.

The Hudson's Freedom Festival Fireworks over Detroit's skyline at 10 p.m. will highlight the international observance.

Historic Fort Wayne is located on West Jefferson at the foot of Livernois in Detroit, near the I-75 Freeway. Gates open at 6 p.m. and the program begins at 7 p.m. Free parking is available.

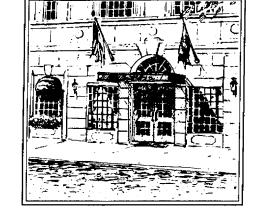

Food and refreshments can be purchased on the grounds or spectators can bring their own picnic baskets.

A total of 15,000 free tickets for "A Fort Night" are available at Detroit-area AAA Michigan offices and Historic Fort Wayne. For details, call "A Fort Night" hotline at 336-1610.

Pointes investors, contractors near completion of The Lofts

By John Minnis Assistant Editor

If you're a purist and want to live in a loft devoid of amenities, then find an old factory and good luck. But if you'd like to live in a loft apartment and still want to be civilized, The Lofts of Rivertown may be for you.

The Lofts, now 95 percent complete, is actually an adaptive reuse of the historic Stearns Building on East Jefferson near Grand River. The building was purchased by a group of investors/developers form the Grosse Pointes and east side known as the Stearns Building Limited Partnership.

Included in the partnership are SVM (Schervish Vogel Merz) Development Corp., J & J Slavik Inc. and City Management Corp.

SVM Development Corp. is the managing general partner of The Lofts and has been responsible for directing the development aspects of the project. David Schervish, president of SVM Development, has directed the re-Building and is also a principal the wing facing Jefferson. in Schervish Vogel and Merz, an architecture, urban design and planning firm.

J & J Slavik is a diversified real estate development and investment company and is the cogeneral partner in The Lofts. City Management is the major component of Soave Enterprises, a group of companies owned and controlled by eastside businessman Anthony Soave.

Principal architect for the project, Charles A. Merz of Grosse Pointe, said the project is looking good and that it was 10 times more difficult than it appears. The historic building was one step from the wrecking ball.

"The building would be gone," said Merz, if it weren't for his and his partners' efforts. "We would have lost some of Detroit's history."

Though not a historical resto-The general contractor of the ration, The Lofts nevertheless mammoth project is Edward V. has obtained the blessings of the state and national historical societies, Merz said, and is listed on Shores is chairman and his the National Registry of Historic

The paneling in the lobby has been painstakingly restored to its original beauty. While the wings and tower were once open about 1910, Stearns added a spaces for warehouse use, they nine-story tower between the are now divided into apartments.

But most, if not all, of the 172 units have exposed brick, massive wooden beams or huge, mushroom-shaped concrete pillars as part of the living space.

Not only is the true loft-living experience made possible by the brick interior walls and exposed wood and duct ceilings, but also many apartments have the huge factory windows that made lofts popular with artists due to the natural light available.

John Monahan said 950 windows, including many arched windows and some perhaps 12 feet tall, were replaced with thermal windows. All the exposed brick and wood were sandblasted to their original color.

One of the contractor's major jobs was to cut in a rectangular opening through the middle of the tower for an elevator. Nine floors, each more than a foot thick, had to be sawed through. It was a gigantic task, Monahan said.

Now with the job nearly complete, The Lofts has been leasing out apartments as they are completed, and it appears the units won't be hard to fill.

Kristina J. Walker, of The FourMidAble Group, which is managing The Lofts and handling leasing, said the apartment building is already more than a third leased. Rents range from $680 to $2,200 a month.

Obviously, with the large range in rents, there is also a big choice in apartments — from studios to three-story penthouses. There are 44 foor plans to choose from.

Many apartments are twostory units with spiral staircases and balconies or rooftop terraces. There are some three-level units as well.

The view of Belle Isle, the Detroit River and the Windsor and downtown skylines is fantastic. Apartments without a view of the river or downtown, have windows opening to one of two courtyards. The south courtyard is enclosed on four sides by the three wings and the tower. It has been lushly landscaped and provides peaceful sitting areas.

The north courtyard has a swimming pool and a jacuzzi. Some apartments have balconies overlooking the south court yard. The Lofts also has a health club complete with spa, sauna and professional weight and cardiovascular equipment.

Each apartment comes with all appliances: stove, refrigerator, dishwasher, garbage disposal and a washer and dryer.

The gourmet-style kitchens are small but not claustrophobic and are ideal for informal entertaining.

Also, each unit has its own heat pump for year-round heating and cooling. The heat pumps feed off a closed-loop system that runs through heating and cooling plants on the roof. The heat pumps take or give heat, depending on the individual apartment's needs.

Merz said the heat pump system is rated very high in efficiency, resulting in lower costs year-round and more comfort to the renter.

Each apartment has large, walk-in closets.

And parking is safe and easy. Each of The Lofts' parking lots is fenced in for security and has a gatehouse, a guard around the clock and gates requiring residents to use pass cards. Valet parking is also available.

As part of the booming Rivertown District, The Lofts are just across the street from the Harbortown townhouses and the retail area there, which provides gourmet shopping at the Harbortown Market and browsing at the many boutiques.

The Stroh's River Place developments are a little farther west. And downtown is just five minutes away.

Sure, many professionals, such as entertainers and business people with close ties to downtown Detroit will want to live in The Lofts, but Merz said another type of person will want to live there as well. He described the new, growing number of urban Detroit dwellers as "pioneers."

The hallmark of the museum is the Blue Riband Trophy, comparable to tennis' Davis Cup. The trophy last changed hands in 1952, when it was wrested from England's pride, the Queen Elizabeth, by the SS United States for the fastest trans-Atlantic crossing ever, a record which still stands.

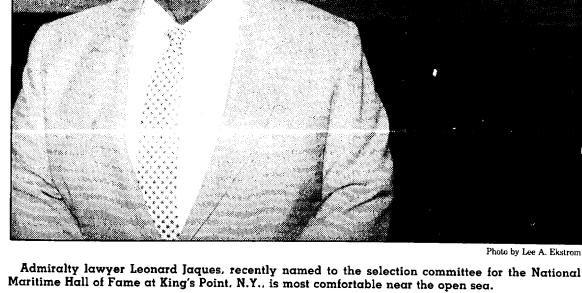

Jaques was a crew member aboard the SS United States during that record crossing, one of 45 trans-Atlantic crossings he made

He said the trophy "looks like the crown jewels, with gold and blue.'

Woods Cpl. Thomas DaDeppo received a minor injury to his head and neck when his scout car was hit from behind June 7. DaDeppo was parked on Vernier with his emergency lights flashing while he was writing a ticket when a Harper Woods man drove into the scout car. The man said he saw the scout car, but couldn't get over into the left lane.

DaDeppo was examined at St. John Hospital, where X-rays showed no skeletal damage. He was told to wear a cervical collar, according to police reports.

"We even topped our own record coming home," he said.

"The celebration was like the Fourth of July, with water cannons shooting into the air and all the ships blowing their whistles."

The former junior engineer said the journey was joined by a group of VIPs, including Margaret Truman and Bob Hope.

The museum protrays American shipping as it evolved from the Civil War to the modern merchant marine industry.

As far as several recent oil spills on the high seas and near port, Jaques advocates the use of double bottom tankers as a safety measure. "Double bottoms would certainly help," Jaques said, "but the ships need double sides as well.

"If the Titanic had these safety measures, it would not have gone down," he said.

"The problem with the added safety is that they would slow the vessels down, cost more to build and to run the boats and would deplete the cargo space.

"Clearly the vessels need to be redesigned," Jaques said. "It would be as a prevention rather than a cure for the problem. There will always be accidents on the seas, but we can certainly reduce the chances.'

Comparing Churches 4B Grosse Pointe Board of Realtors 10-17B Grosse Pointe News Grosse Pointe Garden Council tour is June 29- July 1 Eight of community's best-dressed gardens will be decked out in summer colors, ready for guests

By Margie Reins Smith eature Editor

Seven of Grosse Pointe's most carefully tended gardens — and the Grosse Pointe War Memorial's Trial Gardens – will be ready for visitors from 1 to 5 p.m. on Friday, Saturday and Sunday, June 29, 30 and July 1.

Seasoned green-thumb types and gardener wanna-bes should be ready to admire, exclaim over and examine a selection of gardens with distinctly different personalities.

Different styles on the tour include a walled garden, a garden dominated by shade, several vegetable and fruit gardens (featuring such delectables as raspberries, grapes, kale, strawberries, asparagus, lettuce and rhubarb), at least two do-it-all-yourself gardens, some examples of composting, and lots of garden-decorating ideas: patios and decks made of brick and flagstone and redwood, lots of planters and hanging baskets and bird feeders, even a spa and a miniature log cabin.

Popular this year: roses of every hue and variety; impatiens in mixed colors, pachysandra, herbs mixed in with annuals and geraniums in pots.

The Detroit Garden Center's Upstairs Shop will offer craft items for sale at one of the gardens. Complimentary refreshments will be available at another garden.

The owner of the Gies garden, 821 Harcourt, does all her own garden work and the result is an exquisite example of a small, manageable gem filled with surprises. A natural wood fence along the side driveway provides the backdrop for a mixture of roses, chrysanthemums, lithrium, ground cover (ajuga and alyssum) and a hanging iron planter stocked with pink genaniums, asparagus fern and blue violas.

Other planters and hanging baskets feature mixtures of parsley and other herbs and colorful begonias and johnny jump-ups. In the back yard are two small Kousa dogwoods, evergreens and Ginkgo tree. Raised beds are filled with the a variety of annuals and perennials: purple clematis, Peter Pan zinnias, foxgloves and more.

Behind the garage, the owner has planted a small vegetable garden.

The Donovan garden, 8 Donovan Place, features a small walled garden with roses climbing on the walls, row-by-row processions of daylilies, marigolds, asters, zinnias and daisies, a row of tomatoes, and a border of St. Charles strawberries.

Masses of color in the shady area between evergreens and maples are achieved with pink impatiens and tuberous begonias. The two lions on the terrace are antique Thai.

The front yard of the Kennedy garden, 841 Three Mile Drive, features borders of impatiens in an unusual mixture of colors: lavender, salmon, pale pink and red. The masses of color surround trees and stretch across the beds in front of the house.

In the rear yard, a huge expanse of lawn is surrounded by a Chippendale-style fence. The yard features an elevated patio made of brick and flagstones which includes a large spa. An adjoining rose garden provides specimens of exquisite color.

Before the Kennedys moved in, the expansive rear yard had been neglected, causing an accumulation of water during heavy rains – even attracting a few transient ducks. A new system of drains and catch basins was installed.

A miniature log cabin is tucked far back on the property, surrounded by white pine trees and plantings of viburnum, spirea, forsythia, canoe birch and dogwood. Splashes of color provide interesting diversions around the edges of the clipped lawn.

The Jagger garden, 1 Donovan Place, stretches down to the waters of Lake St. Clair. Beds are begun composting.

The Starnes garden, 1109 Lochmoor, is mostly perennials and includes lots of raspberries, plenty of blue delphinium, tansey, pink lisianthus, blue campanula, purple foxgloves and spiderwort.

Pear, apple and peach trees provide fresh fruit. Baskets of fuchsia hang from trees, as do several bird feeders, including one especially for hummingbirds.

A small circle of flowering kale is centered by pink nicotiana, and ground cover includes pachysandra, ferns and impatiens. Several varieties of euonymus are included in the back yard. The owner also has a compost heap.

The Gilbert garden, 488 University Place, has been, at times, a baseball field, a hockey rink, and a playground for six children and a dog. It has recently been transformed into a shady retreat for an active family.

The transformation itself was a family project, according to Johanna Gilbert. The whole family worked hauling dirt, peat and sand and setting 2,300 bricks into the ground to form a new patio and walkways.

The yard is dominated by a huge (healthy!) elm tree and is an excellent example of a charming garden in a shady area.

The owners planted hawthorne trees, weeping cherry trees, hemlocks, azalea and rhododendrons. English ivy, myrtle and pachysandra flourish under the tree, and splashes of color are provided by begonias, impatiens, geraniums and zinnias.

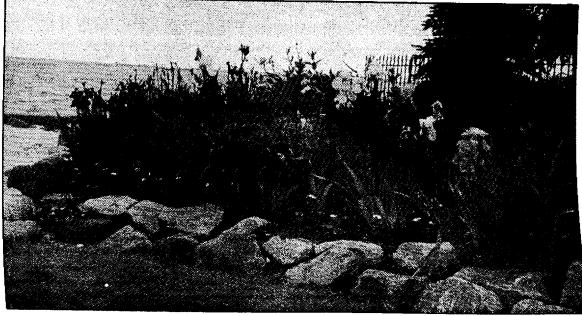

This is a fine example of a doit-yourself family garden. Also on the tour is the Trial Gardens at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial. This year, they've followed an international theme. Also included is an herb garden planted and maintained by the Grosse Pointe unit of the Herb Society of America.

The Garden Club Council consists of 17 local garden clubs. It's been around for 42 years. Proceeds from the annual tour are used for beautification projects in all five Grosse Pointes.

Pre-sale tickets are $6 and may be ordered by calling 884-0966 or 882-8078; or they may be purchased at Grosse Pointe Florists, Hollywood Pharmacy, Maskell Hardware, or the Garden Center Room at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial.

Tickets are $7.50 on the days of the tour and may be purchased at any of the garden locations.

planted with a variety of perennials and annuals along each side of the lawn. Raised beds surrounded by rocks feature light blue, dark blue and white iris, fuzzy lamb's ears, pink impatiens, sedem and astilbe. Close to the house is a bod of alium, peonies, hydrangia and phlox.

A rare dawn redwood, which is native to the mountains of China, is one of the garden's most unusual specimens. The rhododendrons in the courtyard are larger than most of the varieties common to this area.

Complimentary refreshments will be served at the Jagger garden.

The McLaughlin garden, 218 Lakeview, is an inspiration for do-it-yourself gardeners. The owner, Phyllis McLaughlin, grows everything from seed. McLaughlin said she's gotten a bit behind with the weeding. She invited 15 garden club friends over for a weed-in last Tuesday.

The narrow lot is private, screened by yews, helmocks, arborvitaes and junipers and features two distinct garden areas.

The focal point of the garden nearest the house is a fountain designed by Grosse Pointer Greg Tisdale. Water cascades through several levels of metal leaves.

Color is maintained by a succession of spring bulbs, summer perennials and fall chrysanthemums.

The redwood deck is flanked by a rose garden and enhanced by pots of geraniums.

Behind this garden is what McLaughlin calls "the farm." Enclosed vegetable beds include asparagus, rhubarb, beets, lettuce, beans, cauliflower, raspberries, a grape arbor, apple and pear trees, even a mulberry tree which provides the berries for homemade jam.

Behind the farm is the compost pile. Of the seven garden owners on the tour, three have

There is always something new to be learned about gardens and gardening. Garden books abound, from scholarly tomes about the technical aspects of planting and growing, to frivolous books of cartoons about the comic aspects of battling the forces of nature, with a lot of wonderful and colorful volumes in between.

At the Grosse Pointe Garden Center, the library is a source of much information for gardeners. The collection of reference books on all aspects of gardening includes beautifully illustrated books on flower arranging, national parks, landscape design, topiary and bonsai, vegetable and fruit growing, and much more, and is available to anyone who wishes to research a garden project.

This elongated root vegetable originated in Afghanistan and made its way many centuries ago to Europe, and to this continent. Carrots were growing on this continent long before the Mayflower and have been credited with saving the colonists at Jamestown from starvation.

Botanically, carrots are related to parsnips, caraway and parsley, all foods to which they have a natural affinity. The Queen Anne's lace you see along the roadsides and in the woods are carrots in their wild state.

May you always have horseradish to eat with your roast beef; and may you spend the rest of your days trying to eradicate horseradish from the carrot bed, and everywhere else.

Were those missing honors divided?

In 1951, Italy fielded their first great world class team and Mario, along with Forquet, Siniscalco, Chiaradia and Baroni, successfully competed in the inaugural Bermuda Bowl. Surprisingly, they finished second only 116 IMPS behind the star-studded U.S. Team comprised of Schenken, Crawford, Becker, Stayman and Rapée.

About that time, Mario also co-authored "The Marmic System" which was probably the most unusual bidding creation ever played in serious international competition. Today it is obsolete, but in many respects, it was the forerunner of the famous Roman System and can even be seen as a part of the Australians unusual present methods. Even though Mario was successful in European duplicate play, that type of competition didn't motivate him. His bridge world was the stake play of the Riviera, Geneva, London and New York. At the two-day rubber championship, "The Tournament of the Billionaires" played at Monte Carlo in 1956, Mario finished up in the money, but his penchant for bidding even the most marginal slams cost him the grand cash prize. Here we see him at that tournament with one of his favorite partners, Pierre Albarran who, at that time, was one of the most celebrated players in the world. It shows his style of aggressiveness and partnership confidence which is so important for success,

Grosse Pointe News Faces ξ μlaces Music Hall Center gets checkered flag at Grand Prix Ball 3B

Ball, Music Hall Center's major annual fundraiser, attracted about 850 people on the evening of June 14 at the Renaissance Ballroom.

An evening of cocktails, dinner (with a Music Hall Chocolate Racer for dessert), dancing to Mel Ball and Colours, an audiovisual show, and the introduction of race drivers was presided over by Barbara and Roger B. Smith, co-chairmen of the annual event.

All proceeds from the ball will benefit Music Hall Center, a non-profit institution which is supported by individuals, corporations and foundations as well as the Michigan Council for the Arts, Arts Midwest and the National Endowment for the Arts.

The historic theater, which is listed on the National Register of Historic Places, has embarked on an ambitious $5 million restoration program which includes roof, plumbing, heating and electrical systems and restoration of the building's exterior and interior. It was built in 1928 by Matilda Dodge Wilson.

Grosse Pointe residents who serve on the executive committee of the board of trustees include Henrietta Fridholm, Diane Schoenith, Peter Spivak and Dale Austin.

The organizing committee chairmen for the ball also included Grosse Pointers Beverly Beltaire, Mary Kay Crain, Barbara Fisher, Cynthia Ford, Linda Drook, Ann Mc-Cormick, William Chapin, Peggy Shine, John Gray and James Williams.

Award time: The Junior League of Detroit Inc. presented a slew of awards at its annual meeting on June 6 at the Detroit Athletic Club.

Community Participation awards went to Kenneth G. Meade, president, Lexus of Lakeside; Kitty Burch, program coordinator, Maplegrove Community Education; Sharon Stein, consumer affairs director, Great Scott; and Mary Ellen Finch, program director, AIDS Consortium of Southeastern Michigan. Community participation awards are given to individuals, businesses or organizations that have provided consistent and substantial support to the JLD.

The President's Award went to Mary Lamparter, for initiating and making the Lexus Polo Benefit a viable fundraiser for the League. The President's award honors League members who have given extraordinary service to League programs and projects. The Placement Award went to Ellen Krease, Mary Ellen Kelly, Beth Klein, Pat West and Sue Webb. Placement awards are given to active members of the Junior League for excellence in sustained, high quality service in the League and the community.

The Pastor's Corner Two squares:

Tiananmen, Thessoloniki

Grosse Pointe Memorial Church

In late May, 1989, we were in Beijing where its Tiananmen Square was filled with upwards of a million people led by brave university students. In early June, 1990, we were in Thessaloniki, Greece, which has a small, unimaginative square, called Aristotelous Square where Aristotle the thinker sits alone as a large bronze statue, meditating near the port on the Aegean Sea in the Capital of Macedonia.

Let me comment on these two different, but not-so-different. squares:

Tiananmen, Gate of Heavenly Peace, since June 4, 1989, symbolizes China and all civilizations' willingness to pay the cost for democracy and freedom. All year long I have worn a simple cross made of two square nails as a reminder to pray constantly for China to have a new birth of freedom for its one billion-plus people. I can still see the banner carried by Chinese seminary students just before June 4. The words are our Lord Jesus Christ's: "You shall know the truth and the truth will set you free!"

This year China has seen an unparalleled continuing growth of the brave Chinese Church. A new local church is 'birthed" every 36 hours. The largest new element is university students.

Thessaloniki Square was empty in the early morning on Pentecost Sunday, June 3, 1990. Alone on the square, I sat down next to the large bronze seated statue of Artistotle, the great thinker. Some two other creatures were on the Square - a pigeon (which decided to sit on Aristotle's head, forming a cooing crown) and a Greek Orthodox Church priest (all in black, including his black brief case), who was waiting for a bus. I chose to focus on the priest.

He was obviously up early, enroute to his church (one of 26 Greek Orthodox Churches in the city) where Christians would gather in overflowing services, for it was Pentecost.

Thessaloniki's Square represents the meditative, philosophical-psychological sophistication of logical, critical thinking symbolized in the overpowering presence of a great world-renowned philosopher who is known and revered by Beijing University faculty and students. Beijing's square represents the spontaneous, youthful, even non-logical thinking of China's youth, aspiring for freedom and opportunity. In China, on June 4, 1989, many youths died, but now Tiananmen Square is a household word even in Thessaloniki, Greece.

In a sense, these two squares are similar. Tiananmen had See PASTOR, page 5B Rev. Russell Stevens

Charges were dropped in two recent cases against Christian Science parents. A third case is under way now in Boston where The First Church of Christ, Scientist, has its headquarters and held its 95th annual meeting on June 4.

At that meeting, members heard reports on how their church is responding to public interest in the prosecutions. Church officials pointed out that at the same time as Christian Scientists are being prosecuted, state legislatures have broadened their recognition of spiritual healing. Many laws that would require medical treatment for individuals include allowances for those who prefer spiritual healing.

"In this advancing era, spirituality can no longer be dismissed as incompatible with civilization or with individual and collective progress," the Christian Science board of directors wrote in a statement prepared for the meeting. # William De Turk to perform at Cranbrook carillon recital

A patriotic concert will open Christ Church Cranbrook's 62nd annual carillon recital series at 4 p.m. on Wednesday, July 4. The recital will feature guest carillonneur William De Turk, director of music at Grosse Pointe Memorial Church. De Turk will play familiar American songs, marches and hymns on the 50bell instrument.

Admission is free. The public is invited to bring lawn chairs or blankets and enjoy the concert on church grounds or in the Cranbrook Gardens across Lone Pine Road. Patrons may also sit inside the church, where a video monitor will enable them to see the performance.

From 1981 to 1987, De Turk was University Carillonneur and Assistant Professor of Music at the University of Michigan. a white statue of liberty. Thessaloniki has a White Tower nearby. The students in China paid a huge price - death, maiming, imprisonment for the sake of the world's most populous nation. And Aristotle, Greece's tallest thinker, provides for students everywhere, through 22 centuries, the robust challenges of good thinking, centering on responsible politics where politicians are the servants of the people.

I'm glad I was at or near both squares. They have impacted my life forever. In a sense every reader of this Pastor's Corner must also travel onto these two Squares. Why?

1. At dawn, June 14, I bicycled past the Grosse Pointe War Memorial as graduates of one of our high schools were starting to go home after spending the night together with their chaperones and fellow graduates. These youths are our precious legacy toward a better tomorrow.

2. Whether it be Beijing or Thessaloniki, China or Greece, Canada or Grosse Pointe, wherever your turf is, ecologically and ethically, religiously and redemptively, it needs to be re-claimed as a place to meditate and mediate new birthings of democracy and freedom.

3. The Apostle Paul, also a great thinker and student, visited Thessaloniki for three weeks. His visit brought these descriptions: "They (Paul, Silas and Timothy) gathered a crowd, set the city in an uproar . . . They (others) dragged Jason and some of the brethren before the city authorities, crying: 'These men who have turned the world upside down have come here also ...." (Acts 17). And in Paul's writing's of I and II Thessalonians, there is this: "We were ready to share with you not only the Gospel of God, but also our own selves, because you had become very dear to us" (I Thess. 2:8).

4. And finally, after all, Canada's July 1st and America's July 4th are just around the corner, or square.

Where are we in commitment to great causes, whether religious or cosmic, redemptive or courageous? Challenge? Yes! And you travel on to these squares not alone, for Paul says in Thessalonians: "The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you." (I Thess. 5:28).

Drying preserves Michigan's tart cherries

Michigan's dried tart cherries are now a year-round treat.

A special drying process naturally preserves the flavor of the Montmorency cherry, a tart cherry which is grown largely in this county, but began life in the Montmorency Valley of France.

These dried cherries may be eaten by the handful, sprinkled in salads, baked into breads of muffins, and used in sauces for entrees or desserts. After the cherry crop is harvested, washed, de-stemmed and pitted by machine and frozen with a little sugar, the cherries are thawed and put into an oven dryer for 12 hours. There are eight pounds of fresh tart cherries in each dried pound.

Michigan dried cherries contain no artificial color or preservatives. One half cup contains 200 calories, 2 grams of protein, 48 grams of carbohydrates, 2.8 grams of dietary fiber.

They have a shelf life of 90 days and it is not necessary to refrigerate until the package is open.

Here's two recipes using these unique, tasty fruits:

Fruit salad with dried cherry vinaigrette 3 Tblsp. dried cherry vinegar 4 Thisp. vegetable oil

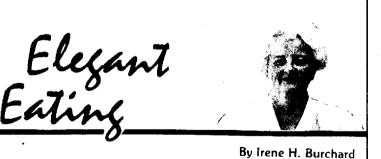

1/4 tsp. salt

1/4 tsp. ground black pepper 1 cup dried cherries

1 small Granny Smith apple, thinly sliced

1 small orange, peeled and cut into sections

1/4 cup whole salted cashews 1-1/2 cups each: Belgian endive, spinach and Boston lettuce salad greens

For dressing, whisk together vinegar, oil, salt and pepper. Arrange greens on serving plate. Add cherries, fruits and cashews. Serve with vinaigrette dressing. Serves 4-5.

Warm duck and dried cherry salad 4 Tblsp. minced shallots 1 minced garlic clove 2 tsp. butter 1/2 cup orange juice

4 Tblsp. dried cherry vinegar 2 Tblsp. vegetable oil 2 tsp. sugar

- 2 tsp. chopped fresh tarragon 1 tsp. orange zest 1/8 tsp. salt
- 1/8 tsp. ground black pepper 8 cups Boston lettuce, torn
- 1/3 cup red onion, thinly sliced into rings
- 3/4 cup dried cherries
- 2 (6 oz. each) duck breasts, bonded. skinned, broiled and cut into strips 4 leaves leaf lettuce

For dressing, saute shallots and garlic in butter. Whisk together orange juice, vinegar oil, sugar, tarragon, zest, salt and pepper; add to shallots and garlic. Heat dressing and serve warm

For salad, arrange Boston lettuce, red onions, cherries and broiled duck on a bed of leaf lettuce. Serve with warm dressing. Serves 4.

Dried cherry vinegar

Combine 1 cup of dried cherries with 2 cups of white wine vinegar in a glass container. Cover and allow to steep for 2 days at room temperature. Heat just to boiling; strain through cheesecloth. Cool and store in tightly sealed container. Makes 2 cups.

MAKING CORRECTIONS

Most media can be corrected if you know which tool to use. Pencil can be erased easily with a plastic eraser. Cut the eraser into two triangular pieces to get a sharper edge. Charcoal can be removed with a kneaded eraser or a little ball of fresh white bread. Cut a shield of paper or acetate to protect the rest of the drawing while erasing.

BLOCKPRINTING BASICS

In relief, or blockprinting, the artist cuts away the areas of a linoleum block so that all that remains is the actual design he wishes to print. Linoleum ink is then rolled on the design. The linoleum block is then impressed on a piece of paper.

A death of sorts

John Bruce is alive, vibrant and jolly, but he has recently divorced himself from Grosse Pointe South athletics. Bruce, who has had four children go through South and the athletic programs, retired

South softball programs, retired South softball program. When I heard Bruce turned in his resignation, I was somewhat shocked. I couldn't understand why he would sever his lifeline. Why would someone with so much to give suddenly coach his final season?

Rest assured, however, Bruce's decision was not an arbitrary one. He had contemplated resigning for at least a year, but felt an allegiance to four seniors who he's groomed. He couldn't turn his back on promises, friendships and coaching — until the season ended and those seniors walked off the field.

With the season's end came a death of sorts in coaching. Bruce leaves a contented man, with thoughts of getting a library built in this community. Something of a politician, Bruce, the executive director of the Neighborhood Club, can't stand to leave softball, but he's got to in order to follow some other dreams.

Sure the program will survive without him, but the vacancy Bruce created has left the program in somewhat of a tailspin. Who will be the coach? Who will take over what Bruce started, and can that person maintain the integrity and success the Lady Devils have had?

Bruce compiled a 110-105 record over eight varsity seasons. Not great, but not bad, either. He has devoted more than 21 years to South, 17 of them as a coach, but he is not abandoning his team. He will now focus his attention on some personal and professional things that he has neglected because of the overwhelming commitment to the softball team.

Bruce is a tough man not to find when he's on the softball field. A rather large character, he portrays the stern face of a Patton-type, yet he's as soft as your daughter's teddy bear. He doesn't fill his ball players' minds with false ideas, he tells it like it is and you either accept it, or he tries a different approach. Bruce submitted his resignation his way. He wanted it to be a quiet, "don't say anything" approach, but when a man of his caliber leaves the coaching ranks there's got to be something said. His players gave him the one thing coaches die for: respect. He got it because he deserved it, and earned it. He is a jovial man. A man of distinguished character who will still romp around the fields, but only as a spectator for the first time in 21 years. One of the finest things about this man is his love for Grosse Pointe. He is a homegrown athlete who is giving back as much as he got out of this community as a gym rat. He spent endless hours at the Neighborhood Club as a kid, and now he just does it as an adult. Just because he coaches for South, Bruce does not separate himself from North. He follows North athletics closer than sports enthusiasts scan the box scores. He has immersed himself in sports, whether the team is wearing green and gold (North) or blue and gold (South).

By Rob Fulton Sports Editor

Grosse Pointe's Robbie Buhl made his Detroit debut in the American Racing Series during the ninth running of the Detroit Valvoline Grand Prix June 15-17, and I was on hand to cover his every move on June 15.

Buhl, who handles more media people than one could imagine, had very little time for himself during the day. In fact, the only time he spent alone was when he was on board his Copper & Brass Sales/Failsafe Magnetics/Infinity Special vehicle.

Buhl, the 1989 Barber-SAAB Pro Series champion, has been living out of a suitcase since the ARS series began in Phoenix April 8, but he said it was nice to get home for a few days, even if he was swamped by reporters, crowds and autograph hounds.

Buhl, the official racing spokesman for Children's Hospital's "Racing for Kids," had some brake problems in the practice session, but bounced back to qualify sixth on the first day with a speed of 79.38 mph.

On Sunday, he was ninth on the grid, but ran into some mechanical problems to finish 18th for his Leading Edge team. The following is a time capsule story on a day in the life of Robbie Buhl.

A day in the life of race

Back in the garage under Cobo Hall, Buhl and chief mechanic Scott Miller debrief the car and make sure all the specs are proper. For about an hour, Buhl converses with team owners and mechanics, while trying to get in a few moments to say hello to sponsors, media people and friends.

8:15 a.m.

Buhl's car is wheeled just outside the garage. The course, which hasn't had any cars on it in almost a year, is "green," but Buhl will soon get his first taste of the Grand Prix course in the ARS series.

8:30 a.m.

All of the ARS cars are now set to go in the pits. Buhl, who is completely focused on the task at hand, scoots into the cockpit ready for action. With half an hour to practice, Buhl's main objective is to feel out the car and track — nothing more. He's not racing against time or other racers, but he is trying to establish an early edge. Buhl has a few "helpers" positioned around the track timing and scouting some of the competition. Later, those helpers, which include Dr. William Pinsky, Wright and Greg Buchel, report their findings and Buhl uses those statistics to maneuver and run the course.

After the practice session, Buhl stays just outside the garage and talks with his mechanic.

Buhl "cooked" the brakes in the practice session, and must now aid his mechanic in figuring out why. Knowing he had cooked the brakes, Buhl took a pit stop but moved out later to get in a few more laps before the session ended.

In that session, he was sixth before the brakes went.

At the garage, Buhl tells his team that the course is bumpy and does some funny things. He also recommends that two of his gears be switched for the qualifying race at 4:15 p.m.

Grosse Pointe's Robbie Buhl had his shot at many of the other American Racing Series drivers, but mechanical failures in Saturday's qualifier and Sunday's Buick race kept him from performing well in front of the hometown crowd.

Robbie Buhl leaves Detroit with unfinished business

By Rob Fulton Sports Editor

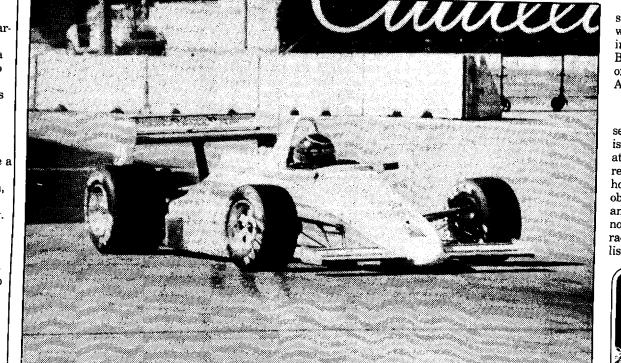

It was unfortunate that Grosse Pointe's Robbie Buhl had nothing to show for his hometown debut.

Buhl, who races in the American Racing Series, suffered miserably from car problems all weekend and didn't even finish the race during the Valvoline Detroit Grand Prix June 15-17. kee after taking the pole position. "Everything was going well, but we went from one end of the spectrum to the other. This business is funny because one moment you can be at such a high, and the next you can be

"But, it didn't happen because we had some suspension problems. It's very tough to watch qualifying knowing full well you should be out there."

The race was won by Ireland's Tommy Byrne.

John Bruce will be sorely missed in the coaching world. However, don't think for a minute that he's burned his bridge. This man will itch to get back into coaching, and the only way to soothe that irritation will be to re-enlist. He may, he may not, but I for one think high school athletics has lost a fine coach, educator and gentleman. Buhl, who qualified ninth with a speed of 79.38 mph on June 16, had engine problems midway through the Buick Dealers ARS 125K race, and Buhl never finished the June 17 race.

"It's disappointing because we were running hot and all of a sudden the race for us was over," said Buhl, who two weeks ago finished second in Milwauat such a low. It's terribly frustrating."

Buhls' frustrations began in the first practice session Saturday, June 16.

Buhl, who finished sixth on Friday in a qualifying round, missed Saturday's qualifier while his car was being repaired from damage incurred in the morning practice.

"We were the fourth fastest in practice that morning so we knew going into the qualifying round we could get at least one of the top five spots," Buhl said. Within the first four laps of the race Sunday, Buhl moved from ninth to fifth place. He later found his rhythm and jumped into fourth place before the engine caught fire.

"This isn't going to keep me down," said Buhl, who also didn't finish the Phoenix race April 8 after suffering from mechanical failure. "It's behind us now and we'll move on to Portland and it all starts over for us on Friday."

Buhl will race in Portland June 22-24.

will now take about two hours to meet with sponsors, Leading Edge owner Mark Wiedla, and make some phone calls.

He's always looking for sponsors, yet has to make sure his current sponsors are taken care of. He meets numerous people, balances hellos and tries not to leave anyone out.

Because he is still in the fetal stages of racing, he must push and promote himself. Hence, the phone calls to set-up appointments and other meetings during the week.

Noon

Time for some grub.

Buhl and the other ARS racers attend the Buick luncheon in the Marquette Room of the Westin Hotel. Buhl doesn't eat a lot, nor do the other racers, but he's still on hand to answer questions and be recognized.

Shortly after lunch, Buhl finds himself just hanging out waiting for Wright to finish some work. Buhl and I steal about 20 minutes to talk about everything but racing.

Buhl would like to live up north somewhere. He'd like to be able to find the right lady, get married and have a few kids, but right now that's not possible because he's married and dedicated to the sport of racing.

He likes to spend time with the crew members after race day, and treat them to a fine dinner. He also likes to escape from racing every so often, but that seems impossible.

1:30 p.m.

Buhl and Wright head upstairs to Buhl's room to prepare for an interview with Jerry Stanecki from WJBK TV2. Stanecki is late, and Buhl becomes a little anxious. However, as Wright contacts the station, he finds that Stanecki is on his way and should be there shortly. 2:10 p.m.

Within 10 minutes Stanecki and the crew arrive, and rifle questions at Buhl for 40 minutes.

Upon conclusion of the interview, Buhl has to leave immediately for the garage because the pre-qualifying conversation with the mechanics is vital. It's just as important as making sure the car is prepared. If the car defaults, the race is not successful. 3:30 p.m.

Because of a mishap during the Indy car practices, the ARS qualifying run will be delayed. This doesn't seem to rattle Buhl, because it gives him more time to talk with the mechanic. However, Stanecki also steals a few more minutes to talk with and interview Buhl on the track.

Buhl then gets back to the garage and does some more fine tuning.

4:30 p.m.

Some 15 minutes after the scheduled starting time, Buhl and the rest of the team focus again on qualifying. Interviews are completed - for now - and it's time to make a strong showing.

4:40 p.m.

During qualifying, Buhl takes a pit stop and heads back onto the track. The brakes (it wasn't known at that time) were not working properly again, but Buhl still went all out to post a good speed.

Buhl brushed the wall once, but had no damage. He topped out at 79.38 mph and finished sixth on the first day of qualify-

Content with that, Buhl again talks with the mechanics and finds out that teammate Mark Rodrigues had brake trouble as well in the qualifying round.

Buhl talks with several people and reiterates how content he was with the round. In fact, four of the top five finishers in that qualifier have more track experience, and that's why he was so satisfied.

6 p.m.

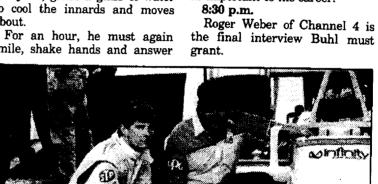

Cheery and smiling, Buhl heads back to his hotel room.

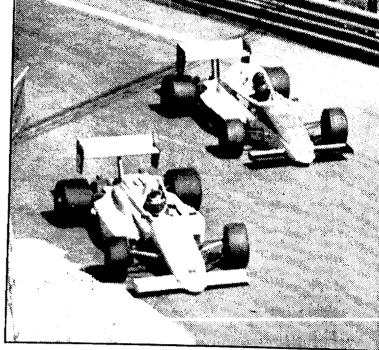

There, he watches some TV and snacks on a cracker or two before taking a shower. Buhl's got to get dressed for the Auto Week party down on the paddock, where he'll be one of several racers in attendance.

Dressed in beige pants, a white racing shirt and a blue sportscoat, Buhl doesn't even get into the party before he's approached by other racing enthusiasts and a potential sponsor. 7:15 p.m.

There's nothing that will keep Buhl down. He still holds his cheery smile, doesn't look tired, but you know on the inside he's dying to hit the sack. He moves around talking with anyone and everyone, grabs a glass of water to cool the innards and moves about.

the same questions over and over. He doesn't mind, however, because this part of racing is just as important to his career.

Behind the transport vehicles of the Indy cars, Weber jots down some quick notes on Buhl's career before airing live (Channel 4 was on hand to cover the Auto Week party). Buhl's oncamera personality matches his off-camera style. He smiles boyishly at Weber, answers the questions and then watches Weber interview another driver.

Buhl then moves through the crowd and discusses the interview with Wright. Both agree that the piece was well done. Buhl grabs another glass of water and receives an autographed editorial cartoon from Grosse Pointe News cartoonist Arkie Hudkins. After a few more hellos and goodbyes, Buhl leaves the party and heads for his hotel room.

There, he calls his home and talks with his brother, who saw the piece on Channel 4. Buhl quips, "Did I look short, how'd I look, and was I OK?"

ULS' Gordon just a flash on the lacrosse field

Sports Editor

John Gordon has been called Mr. Lacrosse and Flash Gordon, but now everyone can call him an All-American.

Gordon, who just graduated from University Liggett School, has been named to the All-American Lacrosse Team for Secondary Schools.

Gordon, a four-year starter and two-year captain, has scored more goals than any lacrosse player for the Knights, and was the first player ever at ULS to be named to an All-American team.

"This is a dream come true for me," said Gordon, who averaged 25 goals a season and finished his prep career with 100 goals and 108 assists. "It's a great honor and I was shocked to receive it, but I also would not have gotten it without the great support from my teammates.

As a senior, Gordon led ULS with 45 goals and 52 assists.

"John has earned his status because he's worked hard," said ULS coach John Fowler. "Ever since sixth grade he's had a racket in his hand. He's a very strong open-field runner who sees the field well.

"John spent a lot of this season being double-teamed, but his diversity and talent really prevailed, and he left a great impression upon the other coaches.

And being recognized by area coaches is quite an honor for an athlete who devotes all of his time to the sport.

"Lacrosse is something I've always liked more than any other sport," he said. "I can remember wanting to play the other sports, but lacrosse was just the most important to me."

That's because his sister Amy got him started when he was 12 years old.

"My sister had a stick and I learned to play with it," Gordon, 18, recalled. "I had to learn on a girl's stick and it was tough because it has no pocket (it's flat like a tennis racket), but I managed.

He managed so much that his mother bought him his own racket one year later. Little did she know, however, what doors that would open.

"I wanted to play football but I was too small," Gordon said. "I also asked if I could play hockey, but my mom suggested I don't because she thought I'd get my teeth knocked out. Today, well, I've still got my teeth.'

And that's a feat in itself because lacrosse is a form of hockey played on a field and not a rink.

After one year of learning the game, Gordon took off for a ULS camp, where he began to master the game. He quickly moved into the starting lineup as a freshman - and that's what changed his lacrosse career.

"I was just a freshman and there were about 12 seniors on the team," he said. "I was warming up before our first game and nobody knew the starting lineup that Coach (John) Fowler had in mind. When he said I'd be starting, I couldn't believe it."

Neither could his mother. "I convinced my mom I wanted to play," Gordon said. "She had seen some of the girls' games and those weren't too rough, so she thought I'd be OK until she saw that first game.'

But it inspired Gordon to take a more serious approach to the game that he'll take to the campus of Ohio Wesleyan next fall.

"I was really motivated to do well and play on the level of the seniors," he said. "That really was my wake-up call. It moti-

After completing the softball season, several Grosse Pointe North and South softball players earned some postseason honors.

South players on the all-district team were Becky Wysocki (catcher) and Jenny Kalmink (first base). Kerri-Sue Kelly (pitcher), Pam Thomas (outfield) and Erica Barr (outfield) headed the North team.

THANKSGIVING NOVENA

TO ST. JUDE O Holy St. Jude apostle and martyr, great in virtue and rich in miracles; near kinsman of Jesus Christ, faithful intercessor of all who invoke your special patronage in time of need. To you I have recourse from the depth of my heart and humbly beg to whom God has given such great power to come to my assistance. Help me in my present and urgent position. In return I

PRAYER TO THE HOLY SPIRIT Holy Spirit, you who make me see everything and who shows me the way to reach my ideal. You who give me the Divine Gift to forgive and forget the wrong that is done to me and you who are in all instances of my life with me. I, in this short dialogue want to thank you for everything and confirm once more that I never want to be separated from you no matter how great the material desires
