City may limit political signs

How do you

extremes?'

Assistant Editor

Grosse Pointe City officials are looking at an ordinance to limit political signs on lawns - before their proliferation gets out of hand.

City Manager Thomas Kressbach said at the City Council's meeting Monday night that no abuses concerning political signs have been reported.

Some council members expressed concern over the ordi-First Amendment's guarantee of free speech. Councilman Peter Waldmeir said he had "fundamental" difficulties with the ordinance.

Alluding to the fact that political signs have not been abused in the city, Waldmeir said, "If it isn't broke, don't fix it." He said he was concerned about the First Amendment aspect of the ordinance. Under the city's current sign ordinance, political signs are not specifically mentioned. Currently, the only signs allowed in the city without a permit are signs advertising buildings for sale or rent, and the signs cannot be more than 6 square feet

Technically, any other types of signs, including political signs, would need a permit from the city before posting. To get a permit, an application must be filed with the city clerk and a $5 fee paid. The city has not been enforcing the permit procedure regarding political signs.

The proposed ordinance, which was tabled Monday so the council could have time to review and discuss it with the city attorney, would exclude political signs from requiring permits and would place time, place and nanner restrictions on political

1) A political sign may not exceed 6 square feet in area.

2) A political sign may not be erected or maintained so as to obstruct the view of any pedestrian, bicyclist or driver of any motor vehicle.

3) A political sign may not be erected or maintained in any public place (including any street right of way)

4) More than one political sign may be erected or maintained on any one lot; but no more than one sign for any one candidate or issue may be erected or maintained on any one lot unless the lot abuts two streets, then one sign for each candidate or issue may be erected or maintained facing each of the two streets.

5) All political signs relating to a candidate or issue in an election shall be removed within 10 days after the election.

According to the proposed ordinance, a political sign is defined as any banner or sign which pronance and its limitation on the motes or opposes a candidate for - public office or a position on a political is-

Waldmeir questioned the definitions of a banner and a political is-

The ordi-

Dale Scrace councilman

nance defines a banner as all signs produced on cloth, paper, fabric or other materials of any kind, with or without frames. Waldmeir asked if flags were included as banners under the ordinance.

He also wondered what is considered a political statement. Who would decide what's political or not?

Also, while signs concerning election candidates or proposals must be removed 10 days after the election, what about political signs not related to an election. Can they be posted forever? An example mentioned at the meeting were the "Just Say No to Detroit City Airport Expansion" signs sprouting on lawns throughout the Pointes.

Councilwoman Lisa Bradley pointed out that if only one sign per candidate is allowed on a lot, then what about lots containing more than one family, such as duplexes or condominiums? Can only one resident at a duplex, for example, practice free speech?

Councilman Dale Scrace said he intent of the ordinance is not to limit free speech but rather to prevent abuses, such as a dozen signs for one or two candidates on a single lot, which does occur in some suburban communities.

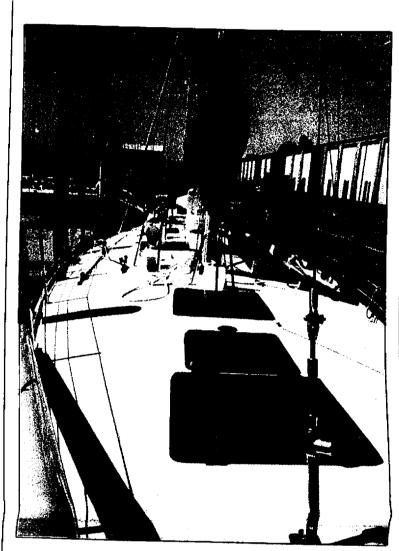

"How do you allow freedom of speech but prevent extremes? Scrace asked.

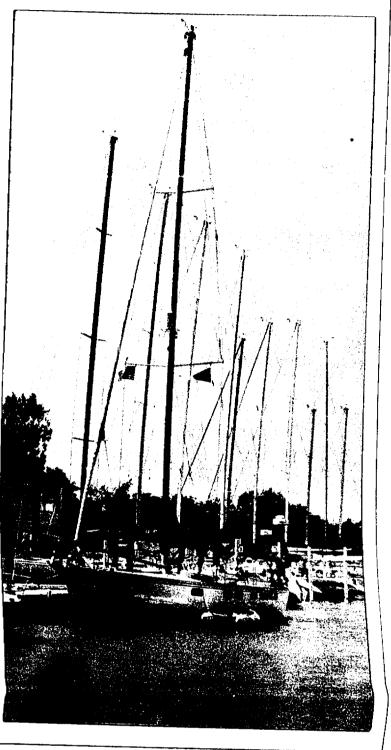

Because the ordinance was tabled for further study, it cannot be put in place in time to limit signs for the Aug. 7 primary election, but it could be enacted before the November general election.

Petition drive against drug store dies

A petition drive to stop the construction of a proposed Arbor Drug store on Mack Avenue at Fleetwood has all but died.

Woods resident Kathy Flemion, at Monday's meeting of the Woods City Council, said, "We have not had a fair hearing on the matter. In fact, we have not been heard at all.'

What Flemion and about 600 other Woods residents and Mack Avenue merchants, who she said signed petitions to stop construction of the store, wanted to tell council members is that the proposed store is likely to pose a safety problem to students at nearby Parcells Middle School and Mason Elementary School.

Others at the meeting expressed concerns that the store will not meet the city's colonial style and color requirement, but were told that the building design met the requirements before approval was granted.

By now this is a done deal," Flemion said, "But do we really want our children going over there during the day like they do at other retailers in the

When Flemion began her petition drive at the beginning of July, the store's site plan had already been appproved by the Woods Planning Commission and the City Council. The building permit, however, was yet to be issued by the city's building department.

At Monday's meeting, city attorney George Catlin said the building permit was recently issued and construction at the site was already under way.

"Now I'm here for answers,"

Flemion said. Flemion asked the City Council if the store would be open 24 hours since the city does not have an ordinance limiting businesses' hours of operation.

Mayor George Freeman said store representatives told him that the store would most likely not be open for 24 hours and is onto Mack. expected to close at 10 p.m.

that no liquor license would be "If the city tried, it would be up sought for the store, but stopped short of a guarantee for residents, who were concerned about late-night liquor sales at the out-

Catlin said that a memo from City Administrator Chester Petersen to the council explained that plans for the store met the city's building and setback requirements and that the public safety department approved the Catlin added that a federal law states that if any unit of government violates the constitutional rights of an individual or business, that it can be subject to punitive damages through fines, on top of actual damages.

He told of a similar case in Florida where a municipality automobile entrances and exits lost a case filed by a developer, resulting in a $98 million settlement, "which came out of the taxpayers' pockets," Catlin said.

Councilman Paul Beaupre urged Catlin and council members to form an ordinance limiting hours of operation for busi-

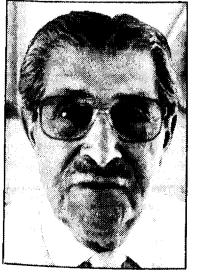

Catlin said for the city to form such an ordinance, it would have to show reasonable cause, such as crowds of people creating a public safety problem at a particular location.

"In the absence of an ordinance prohibiting 24-hours operation, it may be prudent to research appropriate action to control this in the future,' Beaupre warned.

Deputy superintendent discusses his job, ideas

By Ronald J. Bernas Staff Writer

Harrison E. Cass Jr. officially started his new job as deputy superintendent for Grosse Pointe Public Schools two weeks ago.

The shelves in his office are barren. He's mildly embarrassed that his desk isn't covered with reports and papers and memos.

And he's confused about the mid-60s weather in Michigan in July.

But Cass, 41, is sure he'll soon have all those things under control. Except of course the weather, which would take days of explaining to the transplanted Iowan.

He fills the position previously held by Ed Shine who was promoted to superintendent last year. The job was filled temporarily by Marjorie Parsons.

As deputy superintendent, Cass will be making $74,227 a

Cass, a native of Michigan, was born in Trenton and spent his first two years in Grosse Ile. His family moved to Washington, D.C., where he grew up, then to Des Moines, Iowa where he lived during high school.

He attended Iowa State University intent on becoming a teacher.

"I guess I was drawn into teaching because I enjoy social studies - history in particular," Cass said. "And I had a great teacher in high school and I thought 'Gosh, I'd like to do that. I also wanted to coach, because I like sports and I like kids.

After graduating from college, he spent two years in the U.S. Navy as a reserve officer on active duty, but decided that a career in school administration might suit him better.

Immediately upon returning he started a substitute teaching job, and began working on his master's degree at Drake University. In 1975, he completed his master's in educational administration with emphasis on the role of the elementary principal as instructional leader.

During this time he served as a teacher at the elementary and high school levels, then as an elementary school principal.

News Impulse 4 years ago leads to job in Japan

By John Minnis Assistant Editor

Career paths sometimes begin in a happenstance way and often turn out better than if they were planned.

Such is the case with Park resident Susan Saad, who leaves July 28 for Japan for a one-year job with the city of Hiroshima.

A 1990 graduate in Japanese studies from the University of Michigan, Saad, 22, said she took her first Japanese language class on an impulse. After completing three years of the language, she is considered fluent.

Saad said she has always been interested in international business and intended on getting a four-year degree in business at U of M.

But she found that the bachelor's degree business program prevented her from taking classes in other areas, so she opted for a liberal arts degree and will go for her master's in business when she gets back from her year stint in Hiroshima.

She will actually be employed by the Japanese city as a coordinator for international relations. In that capacity, she will help organize international symposiums and events, assist in welcoming VIPs and do some interpreting and translating.

She will receive a salary while in Japan and her travel expenses are being picked up by the Japanese government.

Saad is one of some 1,000 Americans who are taking part in the Japanese Exchange Teaching Program. Most of the participants will be teaching English classes in Japan, while a few like Saad will have more diversified assignments. Saad said she applied for acceptance into the program and submitted to interviews. The final selections are made by Japanese embassy officials.

She is looking forward to continuing a firsthand lesson in Japanese life that she began last year. Then she spent four months living with a family in Osaka and attended a Japanese university.

Last year's trip helped her become more fluent with the language and taught her a lot about Japanese family life and the culture's socialization process.

Saad is a 1986 graduate of Grosse Pointe South High School and is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Saad. She is applying for acceptance to graduate business schools and plans to begin her MBA work in fall 1991.

Those conducting the scams usually travel in groups and quickly work an area and leave. They are very mobile, which makes them difficult to catch.

The scam artists use a variety of pretexts to get into victims' homes. Police say the number of scams are limited only to the con artists' imaginations. Often, they prey on older residents.

Flag burning: Political issue in November?

fter both houses of Congress had decisively rejected a proposed constitutional amendment to prohibit flag burning, the public had the right to expect it had heard the last of the issue for this

But no. Some Republicans are chortling that the strong Democratic vote against the amendment will make flag burning a fine issue in the 1990 congressional elections. If they're right, then we'll be hearing a good deal more about the subject before next November.

In fact, we began hearing about it immediately as Edward Rollins, the National Thinon

Republican Committee's co-chairman, said: "Democrats who oppose a constitutional amendment will have to explain why, especially when almost 70 percent of the American people support the amendment."

In Michigan, the flag issue has been seized upon by Republican Jim Dingeman, a Port Huron businessman and former Grosse Pointer, who is running for the seat of Rep. David Bonior, one of the Democratic leaders of the opposition to the amendment.

Dingeman is distributing small American flags, each bearing the message: "Protecting our flag. Jim Dingeman for U.S. Congress," to help him win name recognition and conservative support.

Some people back the amendment for sincere and patriotic reasons stemming from their own reverence for the American flag. But surely if that is so, such supporters overlook the threat that the proposed amendment would have posed to the Bill of Rights.

In effect, flag burning is a form of political expression protected by the First Amendment to the Constitution, as the American Society of Newspaper Editors has said. Thus any enactment by Congress of a statute or a constitutional amendment prohibiting such conduct, or permitting the states to ban such conduct, would violate the First Amendment.

True, some observers believe the news media simply are serving their own interests when they defend the First Amendment. But when they do so, the media are defending the right of all Americans to express themselves freely, fully and in their own way, including the burning of our revered flag, despicable as that act may appear to be to many Americans.

Both of Michigan's U.S. senators opposed the amendment while in the House the 13th and 14th District congressmen, Rep. George Crockett and Rep. Dennis Hertel, who represent the five Pointe communities, were among the 10 Democrats and one Republican, Rep. Paul Henry, who voted against a proposed change in the Bill of Rights that would have imposed a government restriction on free expression.

They deserve praise, not the raising of a campaign issue, for their support for free

The savings and loan fiasco

Douglas A. Jeffrey, who wrote the following editorial, is director of scholarship at the Claremont Institute and a contributor to "The Imperial Congress: Crisis in the Separation of Powers" (Pharos Books, 1989).

osts to the American taxpayer of the widespread collapse of the thrift industry will exceed $250 billion, or about $1,000 for every man, woman and child among us. And this was no simple matter of high-risk unscrupulous desperados in the private sector. Members of Congress often and repeatedly intervened with officials of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, to prevent them from taking what would have been preventive action.

Yet according to one of a number of senators who personally intervened on behalf of Lincoln Savings and Loan in Irvine, Calif. - which subsequently failed to the tune in tax dollars of more than $2 billion - this was "just another example of elected officials going to bat for a constituent who appeared to be getting pushed around by bureaucrats." Business as usual.

Now even leaving aside the fact that these officials received enormous campaign contributions from the very "constituents" namely the thrift executives — who stood to gain from this intervention, their across-the-board lack of remorse seems remarkable, given the calamitous outcome of their policy. But this chutzpah is only the most recent sign of what has amounted to a revolution in Washington over the past 25 years.

In short, the savings and loan fiasco illustrates how the spirit of faction has been institutionalized in and by the bureaucratic or welfare state, fundamentally changing the way in which our government operates.

In his celebrated Federalist 10, James Madison defines a faction as "a number of citizens, whether amounting to a majority or a minority of the whole, who are united and actuated by some common impulse or passion, adverse to the rights of other citizens, or to the permanent and aggregate interests of the community."

In today's parlance it is an interest group angling for special treatment or privileges - which is also to say, a foot up on other groups - as opposed to equal treatment under the law. Factionalism had proved the premature death of previous democracies, so the framers brought all their innovative genius to bear against it. The enlarged republic, representation, life tenure for judges, checks and balances, and above all the separation of powers - all these were intended to stem to the factious tide.

Indeed, one way to characterize American constitutionalism is as a bulwark against the effects of faction, allowing (in Madison's words again, this time from Federalist 49) "the reason, alone, of the public," rather than the passions, to "control and regulate the government." And no other chacterization, places it in starker contrast to how our government works to-

Špecial interest legislation, such as in former times was looked down on as an aberration — pork barrel, it was called has now become the rule in Washington. Regulations and laws are routinely aimed to benefit one or another of countless special interest groups who lobby there blacks, Hispanics, Indians, retired people, college students, unwed mothers, farmers, small businessmen, and so on. Not to mention thrift executives.

Insofar as any remnant of any notion of a common good remains, it seems only to point to increasing the size of the public trough which makes all such lobbying lucrative. That is, it points to higher taxes and increased deficit spending. Paradoxically, these have proved uncommonly bad for the nation.

Specific exceptions within the law, hitherto anathema, represent the flip-side of "affirmative action" legislation. Consider the provision, one of hundreds like it in the 1986 Tax Act, exempting "A mixed use project, containing a 300 unit, 12-story hotel, garage, two multi-rise office buildings, and also included a port, renovated riverboat, and barge with festival marketplace, the capital outlays for which approximate $68,000,000." Such exceptions are written to mask the identity of the beneficiaries, as well as of the congressmen responsible for inserting them.

From the point of view of James Madison, this manner of lawmaking cuts to the very quick of American democracy. It is fully as arbitrary and capricious as the rule against which Americans revolted in 1776, in the name of equal rights. This fact should inform our thinking about the meaning of the thrift debacle, and raise fundamental doubts about the principles of the bureaucratic or welfare state.

The welfare state was erected 25 years ago on the idea of striving for equality of condition in American society, rather than for equality of opportunity as in the past. It followed that government would have to get into the business of redistributing wealth and rationing out opportunities and privileges unequally, according to everchanging social circumstances and criteria.

What we now observe is the predictable evolution of this paternalistic system into a corrupt arrangement of backroom dealmaking by congressmen, bureaucrats (like those at the Federal Home Loan Bank Board), and special interests (like S&L executives).

As more emerges about the link between the current, unprecedented 99 percent congressional incumbency rates and the campaign contributions congressmen garner from the special interests they serve, we will come to realize the extent to which new principles have upended the Constitution.

Far from transcending factionalism, those who are most powerful in our government today are themselves become a special interest or a faction. That is, to repeat - as reflected in the actions of numerous congressmen on behalf of the thrift industry - they are "united and actuated" by interests "adverse to the rights of other citizens, or of the permanent and aggregate interests of the community."

Ape Gang

To the Editor:

I am compiling a history of the "Ape Gang," a Grosse Pointe High School tradition that lasted until the mid-fifties. I plan to present a summary of this history at one of the future class reunions. Former Gang members are urged to get in touch; the statutes of limitations have long run out. Perhaps your readers would care to send me any recollections, anecdotes and other artifacts regarding this august group. I will be happy to share the materials I have already collected and, after photocopying, will promptly return anything you send along. Of course, confidentiality is always a problem with a project of this nature but I will do my best to protect the innocent and handicapped in the best tradition of the Gang.

Splendid

To the Editor:

I wish to compliment you and your staff on your splendid 50th anniversary issue. It was well-written, informative and interesting.

I especially enjoyed the historical aspects of the issue. It made me realize what a splendid, soul-satisfying and beautiful area we live

I've traveled through many beautiful areas but none has pleased me more than Grosse Pointe, and I'm always in a hurry to get back. I hope our people realize the beauty and serenity of Grosse Pointe and fight to defend it against those who would destroy the area.

I have one complaint. On page 18C you mispelled my name several times. It should be Torina, not Torino. This happens all the time in spite of the fact that the name is one of the oldest in history. Only Nero knew how to spell it. He had a Senator Torina executed.

Please thank Nancy Parmenter for her splendid articles. I did what should please every editor — I bought six copies to distribute to my nieces and nephews who grew up in Grosse Pointe but are now scattered everywhere.

Nightmare

To the Editor:

I did not appreciate opening my Grosse Pointe News to an article about my stolen car on the front page (July 5). Not only is the article's information inaccurate, but you gave a Disneyland-like veneer to the business of stealing cars.

My car was damaged. The "renters" destroyed my transmission and confiscated personal items and parts of the car. They also confiscated papers with both my and my parents' addresses on them, as well as the accompanying housekeys, title to another car and its keys.

I have since heard from several of my neighbors that men have been asking around the neighborhood for the "woman whose car was stolen," and that they have been scouting my house and front porch in search of me.

I do not think your readers should be led on by an apparent "happy-ending" robbery. One cannot even park one's car in a paid, attended lot and feel free from the pressure of drug-related crime.

In this situation, there is very little legal recourse for me. I am forced to cover the repair expenses out of my personal education fund with little hope of being reimbursed by the thieves or parking lot. The entire ordeal has been a nightmare that has endangered both me and my parents. I do not believe that this incident is

Southern beer isn't alcohol

In areas throughout the South, you can't buy a drink, but you can get a beer at a fast-food restaurant, as ridiculous as that

At first we thought the idea was too preposterous to be accepted practice. We couldn't imagine an elegantly dressed couple strolling in with a paper bag under one arm.

It was all very dignified, de-

It seems so much easier to just drink beer down South - or iced tea, which is the official Southern thirst quencher.

I'm sure the station owners will say the intent is for the single beers to be consumed at home, but everybody knows why the singles are so close to the register and conveniently on ice.

Although I've been to Tennessee more times than I can recall over the last six months, I still haven't gotten to the bottom of the liquor laws in Maury missing from gas stations and restaurants. I'm sure I'll get to the bottom of the beer and liquor law differences on one of the trips down South. I have no problem with a community voting to be dry or wet; that's the community's preference. But to discriminate between beer and wine and liquor seems silly. After all, beer, wine and liquor are all alcoholic and need to be regulated. Having a lopsided approach to alcohol enforcement doesn't make sense.

Sounds of summer

To the Editor:

Is impaired hearing one of the necessities to live in Grosse Pointe, which has become an industrial park? The sounds of summer at one time were birds singing, insects chirping and children laughing. Today in the Pointes the sounds of summer are the mega-hums of horsepower lawnmowers, edgers and blowers.

We residents of Grosse Pointe have become willing victims of the multitudinous lawn services that dictate our life style.

The other morning I was ill but was thrashed out of bed at 8:30. My neighbor's lawn service told me it was his right to start work at that hour.

Friday night I was entertaining with cocktails and hors d'oeuvres in the yard when a volume of dust that resembled the Oklahoma dust storms covered the area. The lawn service was trimming weeds in a bonedry garden bed with a weed whacker. It was 6:30 in the evening. I asked that he cease but angrily he retorted that that's his job and right. What has happened to the quiet, genteel way of living that other communities conjecture is a Grosse Pointe lifestyle? Are the lawn services our dictators?

I believe enough is enough. And some one community must put a stop to this insidious service by limiting the decibels that are acceptable. Maybe we should return to push mowers. I know that is all that I use because I'm concerned about noise and the contented wellbeing of others.

The services are unaware of the mega-sounds because they wear earphones and hum along to themselves as they blast each resident who may have perceptive hearing indoors to escape the cacoph-

When a community stands tall and says there must be mufflers on the motors, it is only then that manufacturers will perfect a quiet machine. Until that time we shall remain victims.

Perhaps the Japanese will come to our rescue!

When an automobile with a defective muffler is driven by, I'm sure the driver is concerned about a ticket, yet we buy 20- to 30-minute periods of loud horrendous sounds and say nothing.

God, we sure have funny acceptances. Name withheld by request better.

To the Editor:

As a long-time supporter of the Family Life Education Council and a former board member, I note the closing of the organization as an important milestone for our community.

FLEC was originally conceived as a grassroots organization with a goal of addressing the immediate concerns of families and individuals. Such issues as drug abuse, sexually transmitted diseases, alcohol abuse, teenage pregnancy, and need for short-term counseling and drop-in centers, among others, were addressed in a timely manner by FLEC. This happened often long before other organizations or Grosse Pointe families were willing to take up such concerns. For 24 years, FLEC, with dedicated board members, staff and professional advisers, carried the responsibility of helping make life better for those whose lives were unmanageable. This organization raised money not through federal or state funds, but by local solicitation and community support. What a great tribute to a fine organization.

As programs were then incorporated into other larger community organizations, FLEC was able to address new needs. Perhaps it was never meant to go on forever. It did what it set out to do, to address immediate needs, and then have larger medical, educational or social organizations pick up the challenge.

FLEC admirably showed the way. We are grateful that it existed when it did.

For the environment

To the Editor:

Two weeks ago the Michigan Senate held an important vote on S.B. 375, a bill that would force polluters to pay for cleanup of contaminated sites.

There were votes on two versions of the bill. One was a strong bill, backed by the environmental community, that would make polluters pay their fair share for the toxic waste cleanup and would have resulted in faster cleanups

The other had been so severely weakened that it was worse than no bill at all. Both were defeated. The Senate will have a chance to consider these and similar bills again.

On behalf of our members and his other constituents, we would like to thank Sen. John Kelly for showing his true commitment to the environment. Senator Kelly voted for the strong bill and against the weakened version.

News Grosse Pointe Ne Tinsley-Williams relies on record for 13th District seat

Assistant Editor

This is fifth in a series of profiles of candidates squaring off in the Aug. 7 Democratic primary for the 13th Congressional District, which includes Grosse Pointe Park and City.

Wayne County Commissioner Alberta Tinsley-Williams is a congressional candidate who has made a difference in Detroit.

Her name became well-known for her actions to combat alcohol and tobacco advertisements on billboards throughout Detroit.

She founded the Coalition Against Billboard Advertising of Alcohol and Tobacco, and her efforts have been effective because outdoor advertising companies have begun to police themselves, and one company is eliminating alcohol and tobacco advertising from billboards within 500 feet of churches and schools.

Williams is also known for her Buddies in Business program, which teaches Detroit youths about the stock market, real estate and owning a small busi-

"What is amazing is you can make a difference," she said. "I got in here and found we can make a change. I know what the needs are and I'm responding go to as many doors as possible.

Williams, 35, has been on the county board since 1987. She ran for the 2nd county district in 1984 and 1986, but came in second. In '87 she won in a special election.

She is being endorsed by Wayne County Executive Edward McNamara.

Williams said she is campaigning on her own without financial support from for any special interests.

"We won past elections without the support of the powers that be," she said. "We got there the old-fashioned way: We earned it. Let's face it, there are groups that would like to own you. ...I don't come in here owing anyone.'

The old-fashioned way, according to Williams, is hard work: going door to door and meeting the residents.

"We're taking it to the people," she said. "We're going to win this race because we're taking our record to the people.'

She said her staff is working 20 hours a day, seven days a week on the campaign, and she is personally out there campaigning much of the time.

Williams said she is opposed to the proposed expansion of Detroit City Airport. She said modifications at the airport for safety or functional reasons may be necessary, but she objects to any major restructuring at the airport at Gratiot and Conner.

"This is insanity. It's not even reasonable," she said of the proposed airport expansion that would cause the relocation of thousands of homes and more than 100 businesses.

Her major issues in the campaign are health care, crime, education, unemployment, economic development and neighborhood revival and protecting Social Security.

Williams is in favor of national health care. She said the United States has to have a system that treats people when they're sick, and she objects to seniors having to pay a substantial percentage of their fixed incomes on supplemental medical insurance. She also believes national health care should stress preventive medicine.

Concerning crime, she said, "It jobs. affects all of us. We pay a tremendous cost."

She said that crime is closely linked to education and economic opportunity. She points out that it costs $25,000 year to house a prisoner, but with the same cost placed. we could put young people through college, thus increasing their chances of getting a job and becoming productive members of society.

"There are so many people out there who are hurting," Williams said. "All of us should be competing to see how many we can get employed."

She argues that the negative campaign issue with her. elements of crime and drugs are putting much more effort into is chairwoman of the Economic pulling others down than we are trying to pull others up into positive lifestyles.

In an effort to influence young people in productive directions, Williams formed an Optimist Club at Southeastern High School, where she is an alum-

She is also a graduate of Eastern Michigan University and has taken graduate courses at Wayne State University.

She said that if elected to Congress, she will make the needs of the 13th District her top priority.

Her activist role has led to a national reputation. Recently Williams testified before a U.S. Senate hearing on trade school abuse. Her research showed that many of the private job training programs were actually preying on the unemployed, putting them thousands of dollars in debt with no realistic chance of getting a job.

Williams' efforts led to a local newspaper series exposing the questionable trade school programs.

As a county commissioner, Williams set up a six-week program in her district to help unemployed people assess their strengths and weaknesses, set goals, write resumes and increase their chances of getting candidate plans to offer choice for 13th District

By John Minnis Assistant Editor

Republican candidate Carl R. Edwards Sr. is looking beyond the Aug. 7 primary and plans to offer voters a second viable choice in November for the 13th Congressional District.

Edwards, 33, is one of three Republicans who filed for the GOP primary for the U.S. representative seat being vacated by George Crockett.

Also on the GOP ballot for the district will be Phillip M. Lenud and perennial candidate John W. Savage II. Edwards, however, is confident he will easily win the

"I'm the only Republican candidate who's doing anything," he said. "The only way I would not win is to not run, and I'm running."

He said he's been attending candidate forums, sending out mailings and he will be going door to door in Grosse Pointe Park and City, the only two Pointes in the 13th District.

On the key issue facing Grosse Pointers, Edwards said he is not opposed to the proposed expansion of Detroit City Airport, though he said he would take a hard look at the plans. He believes a scaled-down version of the planned expansion will eventually be approved.

"It's nothing unusual we're doing here," he said. He pointed to the current expansion of Chicago's Midway Airport as an example of large airports in urban areas. He said many major cities have airports close to downtown. And he said the main users of and other eastside suburbanites.

He said the proposed airport expansion, if approved, would stimulate development, attracting restaurants, hotels and other services that provide jobs.

Key issues in his campaign for the 13th District are education, drugs and crime and economic development.

As a congressman, he said he would fight to get more money for schools.

Concerning drugs, he favors stiff penalties — "hard time" for drug pushers.

To promote economic development, Edwards suggests tax abatements, utility credits, subsidies and the sale of bonds to help finance development. He also would like to see pension funds invested in Detroit and corporate investment.

A merchandising manager for K mart, Edwards has a bachelor of science degree in biology from the University of Mississippi. He is a recipient of the Minority Achievers Award of Metropolitan Detroit and an assistant minister at New Heaven Baptist Church.

Lake level below year ago

June was at elevation 574.24 feet above the mean water level at Father Point, Quebec, or 30 inches above chart datum.

This was about 6 inches below what it was a year ago, and about the same as one month

The June monthly mean level of 574.19 feet was about 2 inches above the long-term average for June. The lake, however, remained about 28 inches below

Lake St. Clair at the end of the all-time high monthly mean level for June, which was recorded in 1986.

The forecast shows that at the end of July, the level of Lake St. Clair will be about 1 inch below what it was at the end of June. The lake level is expected to begin its seasonal decline in July.

The water level in December 1990, is expected to be about the same as the long-term average for that month, or about 3 inches below what it was in 1989.

Summer school enrollment drops

By Ronald J. Bernas Staff Writer

Enrollment in the Grosse Pointe summer school program this year has dropped substantially, to its lowest point in the last five years. But Kathleen Herschelmann, director of the program, isn't too worried.

She chalks up most of the drop in enrollment to a $30 increase in tuition. The increase was necessary because in the move to the airport are Grosse Pointers site-based budgeting, programs like summer school were made self-sufficient.

This year the program was responsible for secretaries' salaries and other expenses normally picked up by the school district.

Herschelmann said tuition was waived this year for 11 students who were unable to pay.

This year there are 621 students enrolled in 677 classes. That figure is down by 194 from last year. The biggest drop this year was at the high school level where attendance was down 32

Herschelmann said several classes, including former favorites like the Youth Theatre Workshop and Sewing, were cancelled due to insufficient enrollment. Algebra had the highest enrollment with a total of 56 students in three classes.

A new class on social skills for the learning disabled was added this year and Herschelmann says "the kids are just blooming." The class is a self-concept course designed to raise self-esteem of LD students.

Herschelmann said that each year's enrollment dictates what will be offered the following year summer. She plans on working this year with other educators in the district to bolster the math programming for next year.

"The drop in enrollment is just a lull," Herschelmann said. "It wasn't that we weren't meeting a need, we just have to readjust the schedule for next year."

Mini-courses will be offered Aug. 14-17 and 21-24. Classes still open are elementary language arts/reading, mathematics and first-grade readiness. Study Skills and an evening session in preparing for the SAT and ACT are the secondary classes in which students may still enroll. Call 343-2248 for information.

The annual Summer Experience Open House will be held at Grosse Pointe North High School from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. on Wednesday, July 25.

Student work will be on display in the halls, and students' parents are invited to visit classes. Elementary On Stage will present music from "Annie," poetry from "If I Were in Charge of the World," and the production "Speeches" at 8:30 a.m.

Refreshments will be catered by the developmental learning program.

On Thursday, July 26, elementary and middle school instrumental music students will perform solo and in concert from 8 a.m. to 12:30 p.m.

At the time he was named principal, at 27, he was the youngest person to hold such a job in Iowa's history.

"Looking back now, I realize that my Navy background probably helped me move up quicker than some people," he said.

Cass served as an adjunct professor at Iowa State University and Upper Iowa University before being named associate executive director of educational services of the West Des Moines Community School District in West Des Moines is an affluent suburb of Des Moines. It is newer than Grosse Pointe, and even though it is the largest suburban district in Iowa, it is still growing rapidly. It has the same socio-economic base and support for education Grosse Pointe does, Cass said.

He also earned a doctorate in educational administration in May 1987 from Iowa State University.

The position he left in Iowa is, he said, basically a step below what his position is here. He directed the math, social studies, physical education and gifted and talented programs.

Thinking skills, a new way of presenting information to students that Grosse Pointe is working into its curriculum over the next few years, was started in West Des Moines under Cass' leadership.

Cass sees his position here as a way to work with principals, who he says have the toughest job in the school district.

"The most important thing I'll have the opportunity to do is to work with the principals," he said. "I don't mean straightening them out, but exchanging ideas with them and interacting with them. This year the district will have four brand new principals and they will need all the help they can get. I'm here to help them grow professionally through staff development."

He first noticed the importance of the principal in the educational process while working amined the culture of successful multi-national corporations, Cass studied a junior high school which had been named an exemplary school by the secretary of education. The school's scores on standardized tests were among the highest in the state.

What he found was much the same as what "In Search of Excellence" discovered — that the leader sets the tone for the place.

The principal can help teachers by being supportive of creative efforts and when teachers feel they have support, they are more willing to try innovative programs, Cass said. That support creates a feeling of family among teachers, students and administrators at the school.

Parental support is another factor in making a school suc-

"People should know you care about them and it's important to listen," he said. "Obviously the superintendent can't meet with everybody, so that's where I come in.

Cass and Mary, his wife of four years, recently moved into Grosse Pointe Farms with her two daughters from a previous marriage. He has two daughters from his first marriage living out of state.

In his off-time, Cass likes to jog, walk with his wife and 'marvel at the architecture of the community" and read.

He says he likes what he's seen of Grosse Pointe so far its folksy, small town atmosphere and its old-time flavor.

Armed robbery at supermarket with an undisclosed amount of money July 14 from the Farmer Jack supermarket on Mack in Grosse Pointe Woods.

The suspect entered the store at 10:45 a.m., did some shopping, paid cash for the items and then left. According to witnesses, he then drove behind the store, turned around and pulled back into his original parking space.

The man then went back into the store, went to the express checkout register, bought two packs of gum, and then a third and fourth pack. He then pulled

An armed robber made off a nickle-plated revolver from his waist and pointed toward the cashier, according to witness statements to police.

> The cashier told police the suspect then said, "Gimme the money." When the cashier handed the man some $20s, the suspect said, "all of it." When the cashier had handed over all the money in the cash tray, the suspect calmly walked out of the store, got into his car and left.

> A search of the area failed to locate the suspect.

Resident surprises burglar

Two burglaries were reported in Grosse Pointe Park last week. A resident at a home in the 900 block of Bishop surprised a burglar July 7, but not before several pieces of jewelry were taken.

At 1 p.m. the resident walked in from the patio and heard a noise at the front door. When he went to investigate, he found a strange woman standing there.

When she was surprised by the resident, she asked if a certain person lived there. She then walked out of the house and got into a waiting car, which quickly left the area.

Later, the resident discovered jewelry missing from a bathroom off the master bedroom.

Harper Woods police investigated an incident at 10:30 a.m. July 9 where the suspect had a description similar to the Park

In a second incident, a home was broken into in the 1400 block of Wayburn. The perpetrator got in through a basement window and poured salad dressing on some clothes and inside a washing machine. Police believe the incident is a case of malicious mischief, possibly by someone who knows the victim.

Student Spotlight Richard Sudney

Each week in this column, we will focus on the work of a student. It can be a poem, a drawing, a short story, a picture of a scientific experiment or a woodworking project, a book review.

The following pencil drawing was done by 12-year-old Richard Sudney, who was a student at Kerby School. He is the son of Anthony and Josephine Sudney of Grosse Pointe Farms.

Richard's drawings of Beethoven and Bach have adorned the covers of programs for school shows. His artistic abilities stem from both sides of the family. His maternal grandfather, Richard Debo, is a Grosse Pointe portrait artist, and his paternal grandfather, the late Anthony Sudney, was a pictorial sign painter who painted landscapes in his spare dark. However, the light snow that fell could hardly pass for

But this is a story about automotive service, a subject that demands a lead that keeps the reader from doing what comes naturally - quickly turning the

The scene was Roseville Chrysler-Plymouth, where the lights were burning late in a second-story room one Tuesday evening in December. There, a dozen or so people were gathered for one of the Macomb County dealership's monthly "Right From the Start" get-acquainted sessions.

The new-car buyers sat on folding chairs, sipped coffee or sodas and cradled Christmas cookies in their laps as they listened to members of the Roseville staff talk about properly driving and maintaining their recent investments.

They learned about the importance of regular service and its effects on the factory warranty. They were introduced to the service director, who invited them to call him personally if the need adviser replied, "I thought you arose. They were told about the drop box for after-hours service registration. They learned about the dealership's shuttle that would take them out to the Macomb Mall or back home until their vehicles were ready. They had a tour of the service depart-

"We're still running our monthly classes," says Roy Melvin, Roseville Chrysler-Plymouth service director and the manager responsible for the sessions. "This month (July) we expect between 45 and 55 people. Attendance is lighter in the summer we've had as many as 80 customers other times of the year."

"Right From the Start" is a new-customer program for Chrysler Motors dealers. Its purpose is to inform buyers about their products and about the services the dealership provides. Other manufacturers have similar programs. Since they aren't

"It helps us as much as it helps the customer," Melvin says. New-vehicle buyers are advised on the next class when they take delivery, he says. The cashier will telephone those who haven't made a reservation.

Owners who attend gain a better understanding of how to take care of their new vehicles. This results in fewer unnecessary trips back to the dealership and in better attention to regular maintenance.

The franchised dealer offers factory-trained technicians familiar with your car, the latest diagnostic equipment and parts protected by warranty.

Following are things to look for in a service department.

• The service adviser is the person who writes up your repair order. The adviser should repeat your descriptions of problems aloud, so you are certain they have been properly noted. For instance, one customer went to a dealership to check a faulty bright switch. When she picked up the car and the switch was no better, she asked why not. The said the 'light switch.' And of course there was nothing wrong with it.

• The adviser should be familiar with service needs of your car based on the odometer reading and age. The adviser should ask you if you have had various regular maintenance items attended to. Tires rotated on schedule? Time for new transmission fluid? Last tuneup?

 Many dealerships have a drop box for service customers' ignition keys. This allows you to bring your car in at your convenience - not theirs. You will probably fill out a special envelope, including instructions on what you'd like done to your car. You will have to sign it to authorize the dealership to begin work, and of course leave a telephone number where you can be reached. Your keys are sealed in the envelope and it is dropped department staff during business

Customer-oriented service departments help you with your transportation while your car or truck is being repaired. Some have regular shuttle service in a van. Others make porters available to drive individuals to their destinations. Dealerships that have rental cars often make them available to service customers. Individuals with extended service contracts may get first choice, plus a reduced daily rate. Otherwise, it will be on a first-come, first-served basis, and you likely will have to pay the going rate.

• Part of the service adviser's job is to keep you up-to-date while your vehicle is begin serviced. The adviser calls each customer to let the owner know when the vehicle will be ready, what the charges will be, if more work is required or there is an unforseen delay. The adviser can answer your questions before you come to retrieve your transportation. There shouldn't be any last-minute surprises.

· Picking up and paying for your car or truck can be a lessthan-pleasant experience. Good service operations will make this as painless as possible by having extra cashiers on hand during peak business hours; by extending those hours into the evening; by helping you arrange your method of payment in advance, and by bringing your vehicle to you or seeing that you find it quickly.

Ever have someone say, "Just into a slot for pickup by service go out that door (100 yards across the service area) and it's out on the back lot (that's a couple of acres in size and parked solid with cars)" The least you should expect is to be shown out into the lot; the best is to have your car brought around to you, especially if you are a senior.

• Attentive service operations will test drive each car that has been in for repairs or extensive maintenance. After you pick up your vehicle, you may be asked to fill out a brief satisfaction survey, answering questions about how effective repairs were and how you were treated by the staff. Some dealerships get the same results through a telephone interview. Many spend a lot of time, money and effort on these surveys. So do the manufacturers, who may survey you separately, especially if your vehicle is still under warranty. And the results are taken seriously, so do take time to complete the survey.

• Here are a couple of other things to look for. Did the technician take time to put paper protectors on your floor, seats and steering wheeel? Did someone change your radio station and use your ashtray? Some operations will even return your car freshly washed. Many provide you with a check list of regular maintenance items for your future reference. The list should include days and hours of service if available and, if possible, prices, labor rates and upcoming service specials, e.g., discounts on oil changes, alignments, brake inspections.

Some dealerships make ser-presumably because customers don't show up on time, and rigid appointments affect service-ondemand. If you're super-organized, try the appointment route. For some types of non-emergency jobs, dealerships prefer appointments so they can order the necessary parts and you can make arrangements for a loaner or rental car, if needed.

· Another indication of customer concern is the customer waiting room. A number of dealerships have come a long way in this area in recent years. Waiting rooms are being expanded and decorated. A staff member may be put in charge of seeing that there are current magazines and newspapers to read, that lighting is adequate and the temperature is comfortable, that there is complimentary coffee,

Chevrolet, a suburban Chicago dealership that saw the customer satisfaction light a year ago, has three specialists on its staff who do just this kind of thing from 7 a.m. until evening closing. They even are responsible for seeing that there are fresh donuts available each morning and that coffee is palatable, no matter what the hour.

• There are dealerships which give preferential service treat. ment to owners who bought from them and may turn away those whose license plate holders bear a competitor's name. On the face of it, that's understandable. But service customers, no matter where they bought, are potential new-vehicle customers and all should be treated like royalty, say high customer-satisfaction dealers.

Woods man indicted

U.S. Attorney Stephen J. Markman announced that John Bruce Hubbard, 45, of Grosse Pointe Woods, was indicted by a federal grand jury in Detroit, July 5 on charges of bankruptcy fraud, mail fraud and causing false statements in a matter within a department of the United States.

"The indictment charges Mr. Hubbard with four counts of testifying falsely under oath with regards to four separate creditor hearings concerning his bankruptcy petition," Markman said, "Furthermore, the indictment charged Mr. Hubbard with three counts of causing false answers to be submitted in certain pleadings regarding his bankruptcy case. Finally, the indictment charges Mr. Hubard with three counts of mail fraud regarding a fradulent insurance theft claim related to his boat, and the submission of fradulent documents to obtain a bank loan."

If convicted on all counts, Hubbard could receive a sentence of up to 50 years in prison or fines totaling $53,000, or both, Markman said.

Wallet taken

A wallet was taken from a car parked in a garage at a home in the 400 block of Lakeshore in Grosse Pointe Shores July 11.

According to police reports, the thief got into the garage through an unlocked door. Three cars in the garage were searched, but only the wallet was taken.

"It was then I decided I would devote some of my time on building fund drives for U of D, which include the student union building and the memorial building, now Calihan Hall," Perrone said. "I felt I owed them something. Even now, in my fundraising efforts, I run across U of D grads who say 'I paid the school off when I went there.' But they should realize that if it wasn't for the school, they would not be where they are today.'

Perrone has parlayed that philosophy into a lifetime fundraising effort.

With equal fervor, Perrone has raised funds for Mount Carmel Mercy Hospital. He has done so much for the hospital in terms of fundraising that he has been dubbed "Mr. Mount Carmel."

He was a charter member and general chairman of Mount Carmel's annual golf outing. He's still active as the event's chairman of registration, a member of the hospital's steering committee and a planner for the Sisters of Mercy Functions.

But raising funds for the two institutions is not enough for Perrone. He is active in Hutzel Hospital's annual golf outing and several other fundraising projects including the recent gin rummy tournament at Hutzel, which he won.

Perrone in the past worked with Harper Hospital on funding for cancer research and has donated funds to Bon Secours and Cottage hospitals at various

As Perrone was helping several institutions build their futures, he and his late wife Jean had their home built on Pemberton in the Park in 1954.

The couple raised two sons, Jack and Jim, and in a pattern familiar to many Park families, the two went to Trombly Elementary, Pierce Middle and South High School. Jack went to Eastern Michigan University while Jim went to Western.

The senior Perrone, who likes to talk about his sons, said both were active in Little League and Babe Ruth baseball. "I managed and coached both their teams."

To further his involvement with his sons, Perrone served as a board member in the Grosse Pointe League football program while his sons were running the

Besides his family, Perrone's next love in life is restoring old homes in the area. For more than 65 years, Perrone was in the lumber business either in sales or as an owner of his own company, Perrone Lumber and Millwork Co. He was with the Brooks Lumber Co., across from Tiger Stadium, for many years.

Among his projects, his company supplied materials and expertise in the renovation of the Moross House on East Jefferson in Detroit, the oldest brick house in the state, he said

He was also involved in the renovations of homes belonging to the Palmers, Fishers and Fords.

'These old homes were labors of love," he said. "You don't see very many like that going up anymore.

"I love to fish for the big ones," Perrone said, "But with all the great fishing in Acapulco, I still like to fish down at Wndmill Pointe Park the most."

Perrone said he practices the "Palm Beach method" which is sitting in a chair on the pier and taking his time. There must be something to it because he recently caught 16 walleyes in the course of an afternoon.

He's had equal success in joining organizations, or with organizations seeking his membership.

He is a participating member of Mount Carmel's Neuro-Muscular Institute, a member of the Grosse Pointe Park Association, the Park Civic Association, the Grosse Pointe War Memorial, St. Ambrose Catholic Church, the St. Clair Yacht Club, a former member of the Riverview Yacht Club besides others.

Residents reap honors, awards for their teaching

By Ronald J. Bernas Staff Writer

Teaching is often a thankless profession. In trying to teach students and deal with parents, administrators, their peers and themselves, they are always in a tough position. While the area boasts some of the best teachers around, several public and private school teachers have risen above the ranks and were honored for their work by different organizations.

Ardis Maciolek

Ardis Maciolek was named Science Teacher of the Year in Detroit by the Metropolitan Detroit Science Teachers Association.

Maciolek, who teaches earth science at Grosse Pointe South High School, has taught for 11 years, with stints in Hamtramck and Ann Arbor. The last three have been at South.

"I have no idea why I won," she said. "I don't even know who nominated me."

Maciolek finds that in addition to the difficult nature of the topic of science, she must also overcome a stigma in the minds of high school students.

Ardis Maciolek

"Students are interested in science until they're in the fourth grade or so," Maciolek said. Then they have problems with it. They think people who like science are anti-social, freakish nerds.'

Maciolek believes quite the

She also must fight the perception that in order to be a good science student, one must also be extremely intelligent.

"I can't tell you how many times I've heard 'I'm too stupid to go into science," she said. "All you have to have is an interest, and be willing to work

Once they get to high school, students have a set idea about science - much of the time based on experiences at the lower levels, much of the time with teachers who aren't qualified to teach science, Maciolek said.

"But for me it's just natural that I teach science because I love it so much," she said.

Hands-on work is what makes her classes interesting, she believes. For example, one of her classes did an orienteering project through the halls at South, using a compass to find their destination.

"There's some things you just can't make interesting," she said, "no matter how hard you try, but I think my natural enthusiasm for science is what helps me.'

Is she helping reverse the stereotype?

"Well," she says, "everytime you go out in the boat, you get some fish.'

Maciolek is also the adviser of the Earth Science Club, an afterschool group which presents science-related topics in a fun way. A radio telescope was designed and built by students under her guidance and installed on the roof of the school.

Next year Maciolek will be at Grosse Pointe North High School, splitting her time between teaching and running the planetarium there.

The Metropolitan Detroit Science Teachers Association also awarded the Outstanding Educator Award to Peggy Miller, a junior high science teacher at

Our Lady Star of the Sea School. She has been a teacher at Star for seven years. In addition to her teaching duties, Miller has been an important resource for the staff, developing the science curriculum. She is also the moderator of the Junior High Science Olympiad Team which competes each year with other regional schools.

Nancy Pilorget

Grosse Pointe Park's Nancy Pilorget was selected Teacher of the Year by Detroit and Southeastern Michigan Junior Achievement for her work at Denby High School in Detroit.

A Detroit teacher for 19 years, Pilorget has a master's degree in education from the University of Michigan and taught in India on a fellowship through the University of California in Berkley.

A teacher of government and applied economics, Pilorget was honored for the latter class, which teaches students not simply economic theory, but also how to apply it in practical situations.

The class was designed through JA several years ago when participation dropped because students didn't want to sell items door-to-door in the after-school hours. Each class creates a business, complete with a board of directors, and works to make a profit. Pilorget proudly says that every year her students have turned a profit.

Working to develop a community feeling, the profits have been donated to non-profit organizations such as Save Our Sons and Daughters (SOSAD), the school, and have made the holidays merrier for local needy families by giving food baskets. "I'm very proud of that, too."

"I think this is a fundlass and it's a very interesting way to make economics fun," said Pilorget, who was one of the first in the state to teach the program. "There are so many theories, and a lot of people can't understand the theories until they're put into work. They can see the connection much clearer."

She says she likes to bring as much of the "the real world to the classroom," and invites entrepreneurs and small-business people into the school to address her students.

they don't have to be the worker, they can be the boss," of them to achieve their own dreams."

sponse, that her work has been successful, and indeed two former students have started businesses of their own.

JA also honored Grosse Pointe South High School teacher Dr. Charles Hitch with an award for his innovation in teaching economics.

One of Hitch's class worked with JA and the Detroit Branch of the Federal Reserve Bank and presented ideas, based on sound economic theories, on how Hungary can successfully convert from Communism to capitalism.

Two teachers, Pandora Buterakos and Jan Morrison, were honored by their principals by being nominated for the Golden Apple teaching award sponsored by WDIV-TV Channel 4 and Newsweek. The district can only nominate two teachers a year. They did not receive the award, but being chosen to be the only two nominated this year is enough for them.

Pandora Buterakos

For 20 years, Pandora Buterakos has been a teacher in Grosse Pointe schools, teaching at Trom-

Pandora Buterakos

She believes learning should be fun for children, and that when her students leave her class each day, they should be so excited about what they learned, they go home and tell their family and their friends.

She was nominated by Richard Principal Jack McMahon.

"I think he nominated me because he likes the way I relate to the students, the teachers and their parents," she said.

When children enter her classroom they are entering "the learning zone," she says, and everything is geared to make learning as pleasant an experience as possible.

"I keep a calm, comfortable classroom and provide students with a sense of safety and secu-"I try to show students that rity," she said. "I guess I have a gentle, but a firm approach."

From the feedback she gets from parents and other students, her approach is working.

"I always ask myself while teaching if I would be embarrassed if a personal friend or relative came into the room and saw how I am with my students. I don't think I would be," she said. "I really love teaching."

Ian Morrison

Jan Morrison's teaching position is an interesting one. She doesn't have a steady classroom and she works at four different schools, yet teaches four to six classes a day

Jan Morrison

She is one of two elementary science consultants, overseeing the hands-on labwork, assisting the teachers by creating kits for each experiment and writing the elementary science curriculum.

'I love this job because I'm still with the kids, but I also get to create and write my own curriculum, which should be the dream of every teacher," she said.

"I think I was nominated because what I'm doing is really quite new," she said. "It's a different approach to science and it's never been done before. I think it's turning students around."

Morrison, who has a master's degree in science education, says she feels like a magician when her students glow when one of their experiments works.

"I like seeing them get excited about science, and it's great that even when it's time for me to leave, the students are still standing there asking me questions," she said.

She says teaching in Grosse Pointe is nice, due to the support, both monetarily and emotionally, from the community.

All eyes were on classic auto design

Bigger and better than ever, the 1990 Eyes on the Classics, sponsored by Detroit Institute of Ophthalmology and underwritten by more than 100 corporations, brought out the best in past, present and future automotive design.

The annual event, held this year at the Edsel & Eleanor Ford House in Grosse Pointe Shores, was seen as a success by patrons and planners of the automotive display.

Below, right center, the 1941 Lincoln Continental served as the visual centerpiece for the show, both on the grounds and on the show's 1990 poster by Balthazar Korab.

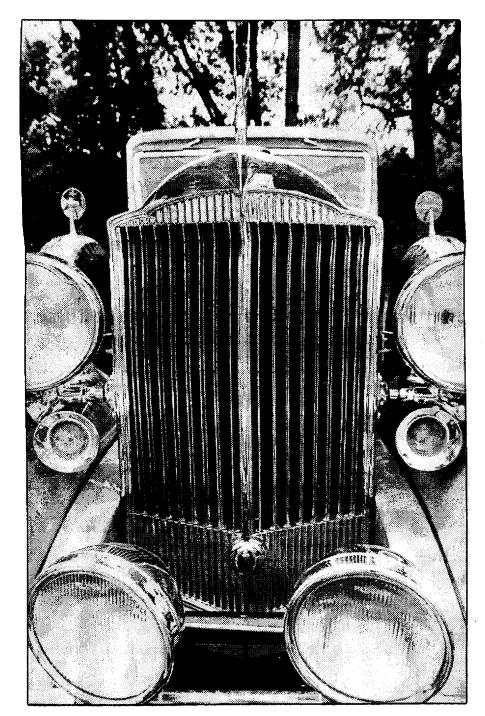

Lower right, two views of the automotive future, represented here by the aerodynamic Oldsmobile Aerotech concept racing car.

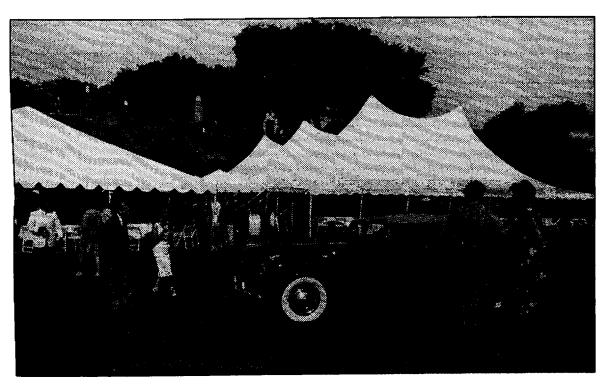

Lower left is the 1937 coffin-nose Cord designed by the late Gordon Buehrig, a Grosse Pointe Woods resident and winner of the 1988 Eyes on the Classics Lifetime Achievement Award for superior automotive design.

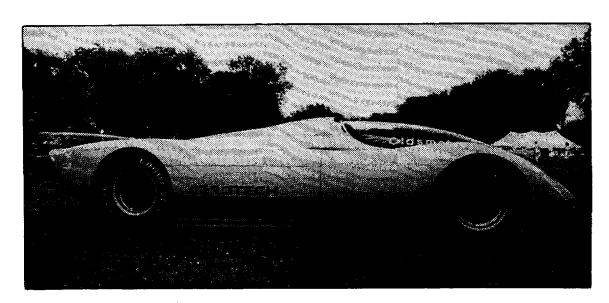

And last, center left, they just don't make them like they used to, witnessed here by a close look at the chrome on a regal 1934 Packard V-12 Sedan.

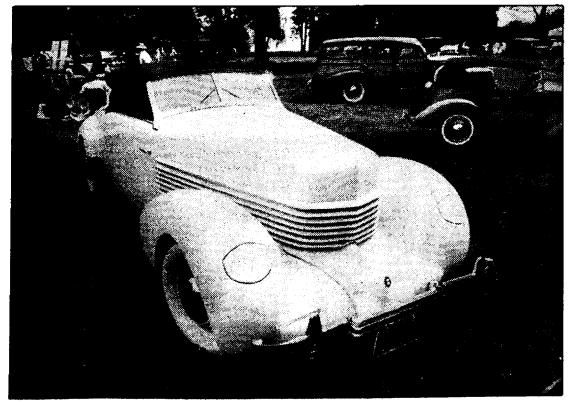

Attendance at the event was 5,000 people, an increase from last year's 3,300 patrons. The poster for the fundraiser is available by calling 824-4710.

Bill Murray and cast keep 'Quick Change' entertaining

Special Writer In "Quick Change," Bill Murray proves that what he does, he does better than anyone else. His timing is perfect and he remains one of the most inventive actors on screen.

Without changing expression and in a laid-back manner, he delivers one-liners with the quiet demeanor of someone reading a report. He can be smart, sarcasonce. He can assume the most showing a pushing, shoving, serious expressions and still crack an audience up with what follows.

Lucky for him, because "Quick Change," adapted from a novel by Jay Cronley, and co-directed by Murray and Howard Franklin, needs all the help it can get story-wise. It is not particularly original and leans heavily on trashing New York. Thus we hear Murray frequently intoning: "I hate this place. I can't wait to get out of it." Never mind that he works in the city planner's office and could have helped make the city better.

Ironically, the city he hates turns out to be both the inspiration and obstacle to his better

Appropriately the film opens tic, appealing and hilarious at on the sidewalks of New York somewhere. In their midst is a ray. circus clown carrying an enormous bunch of balloons trying to get through the hurdles. It's Murray. He is on his way to a

When he gets there, a snarling bank guard informs him it is closed. But Murray has not come as a customer - he plans to leave with a million dollars.

Murray is an exceedingly polite robber. He herds the group into a security vault area, locks the door and waits - but not for long. The area outside is surrounded with a police detail including the police chief himself (Jason Robards). A phone system rude mob of people rushing to is set up between him and Mur-

Murray's demands, are outrageous and at the same time a comment on how ridiculous the demands of international kidnappers can be and how far authorities will go to satisfy those demands, Murray's list is not a modest one. He demands a specially built motorcycle, not easily obtained, a city bus, an armored tank and a helicopter. As each one is brought in, one hostage will be released.

Robards complies and soon the street is clogged with various machines and sidewalks are roped off to keep back the curious crowds.

Inside, Murray is deciding which hostage will be freed. One young, self-important obnoxious yuppie (Jack Gilpin) assumes it will be him. When he is turned down, he offers Murray what he thinks is a Rolex. "Can I bite it?" Murray asks. He does and that ends that.

Murray is aided from afar in this crime by Geena Davis and his not-too-bright high school pal, Randy Quaid.

A perfect crime - but not quite. Something happens that sends them scurrying from one place to another trying to escape detection before they get to the

Before the adventure ends, Murray realizes that it was easier to get the money than to escape with it. In between hurdles, however, Murray keeps the viewer entertained with his barbs and quips.

The film's strength is in its actors, notably Murray. Davis is decorative and Quaid puts on a good show of cornball humor. Robards brings a certain dignity to his role as police chief.

Street Project on Detroit's east side, artist Tyree Guyton temporarily will move indoors to create an ongoing installation at the Detroit Institute of Arts.

His solo exhibition opened June 30.

The 11th show in the Ongoing Michigan Artists Project (OMAP) promises an installation which Guyton will continue to develop during the exhibition. Guyton's mixed-media constructions, made of painted objects salvaged from city streets, also will be shown.

Another feature of the exhibition will be "The Voodoo Man of Heidelberg Street" (30 minutes, color) produced by Harvey Ovshinsky, co-produced by WTVS/ Channel 56 and WDIV/Channel 4. The video will be shown continuously in the OMAP gallery.

Beginning some four years ago, Guyton, 34, his wife, Karen Departing from his Heidelberg and his 92-year-old grandfather, Sam Mackey, joined energies to transform their declining neighborhood. They still work on the process of applying paint and urban discards - tires, bedsprings, broken toys, et al - to abandoned houses on Heidelberg Street. The Heidelberg Project now spread over several blocks - has lured visitors from as far away as Pakistan and Japan as well as local and national media attention.

DIA Director Samuel Sachs II praised Guyton for "using his art to bring about such remarkable changes on Heidelberg Street, making the abandoned houses objects of delight and wonder. His sense of humor, his spirit of optimism, and his inventive approach to making art suggest ways in which art can function as a catalyst for social Passalacqua was born in Sicily and was 11 years old before he came to the United States to reioin his American-born father. He said the outbreak of World War II had separated the family. His father sold pizzas and Passalacqua continued the family business.

What generation gap?

Little sprouts learn gardening from seasoned pros

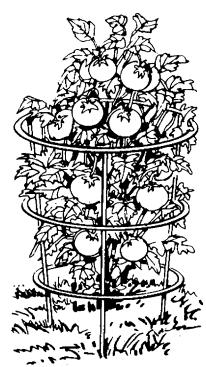

By Margie Reins Smith

Youthful gardeners - first graders at Defer and Kerby Elementary Schools and St. Paul School - got some hands-on tips from the experts about growing vegetables recently.

Many of the youngsters are waiting patiently to harvest the first juicy tomato or crunchy green pepper, the end-products of their learning experiences.

The Men's Garden Club of Grosse Pointe has been helping first graders get enthusiastic about growing things for the last five years, according to Harold Lee, past president of the club. Lee has been a member of the Men's Garden Club for 28 years.

On a fine morning last March, when spring was in the air, about two dozen men from the 115-member club took topsoil, seeds, fertilizer, tools and disposable containers to the three elementary schools. They helped the youngsters prepare soil and plant tomato and pepper seeds in empty milk cartons and yogurt containers.

The men returned a few weeks later. They taught the children how to transplant the tender seedlings and how to care for the young plants.

During the week-long spring break, volunteers from the men's group went to the schools to water the tiny plants.

In mid-June, at the end of the school year, children took their plants home and transplanted them into their yards.

Don Bangs of the Garden Club said the project is satisfying for the men and the children as well.

"One little girl was working with seeds," he said. "In the faintest whisper, she turned to me and said 'My sister and I' planted seeds at our house. They're all growing. It was fun.'

She was so pleased." Defer students prepared a booklet of thank you notes and pictures for the Men's Club.

From Holly: Dear Mr. Lee,

Thank you for the pepper plants and teaching us how to plant. We are taking the tomato plants home today to plant in my back yard. I will give them

The club is an affiliate of the Men's Garden Club of America Inc. which has nearly 3,000 chapters.

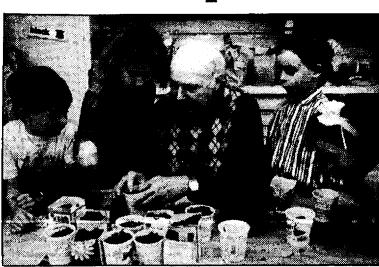

The Grosse Pointe chapter of the club meets the third Thursday of each month, usually at the Grosse Pointe Library.

DRAWING IN VALUE

After exploring the use of line to create form and direction in your drawing, try the use of value. In drawing with value (lightness and darkness) eliminate the use of line and portray from through the use of light

In planning a path of vision, the eye will follow certain shapes and will form directional signals. They may focus attention where you want it, but they can also lead the eye out of the picture. A blocking device, such as a tree or a rock, may stop the eye from wandering and hold it within the picture.

Mischa and DIA's Fash Bash will dance pas de deux

Sponsors of the annual Fash Bash, a Detroit Institute of Arts fundraiser, announced that Mikhail Baryshnikov will appear at the 21st annual fashionable bash. The announcement was made at a July 11 press preview party at DuMouchelle Galleries.

The Russian-born ballet dancer, actor, choreographer, director and performer will make a special appearance at the Aug. 14 benefit at the Fox Theatre.

Fash Bash '90 will combine the best elements of a spectacular fashion show for men and women with a staged theatrical production, music and dance. In addition, visitors will find food, drink, a raffle, a live auction and some heavy-duty celebritywatching opportunities.

Myron Johnson, artistic director of Ballet of the Dolls, a dance-theater company, will direct and choreograph 50 models and 15 dancers for the fashion show portion of the evening.

All seats for Fash Bash are reserved, said co-chairman Susan Reck of Grosse Pointe Farms. She said the sponsors expect to fill the Fox Theatre's 4,800 seats and that their goal for the fundraiser is $200,000.

Other co-chairs are Bettye Arrington Martin of Bloomfield Hills and Colleen Robar of Detroit.

Tickets are $30 for sponsors; $50 for patrons, which includes premium main floor seating; and $100 for VIP patron tickets, which include a private reception AND premium main floor seating. Tickets are available at the DIA's ticket office, Ticketmaster outlets and the Fox Theatre box office.

Sponsors of Fash Bash '90 are the Founders Junior Council, Hudson's and Northwest Air-

The club sponsors the Port Huron to Mackinac Race annually, as well as three or four more major regattas and a few national and international events each year.

The 66th annual Mackinac Race will begin this year on Saturday, July 21.

The Pastor's Corner

To believe or not believe

By Rev. Jack L. Mannschreck Grosse Pointe United Methodist Church

While working on program planning for the fall and winter, I heard a faint knock on my office door. I opened it to find the same roly-poly little man who visited me during

"Satan," I exclaimed, "to what do I owe the dubious pleasure of a visit from you? How's business?'

"Great," he mumbled as he lumbered in and slumped onto the couch. "Business is great . . . just great. How's tricks with you?"

"In Christ's ministry, we do not refer to our work in the vineyard as tricks," I reminded him with a tone of indigna-

"If business is so good, why are you so glum?" Satan leaned back on the couch with his head tilted back and his hands over his face.

"Business is great." He removed his hands from his face. 'We've had 300,000 converts just this past week." Satan smiled slightly.

"Is that right?" I said, feeling a little envious.

"No," Satan replied. "That's a lie. Oh, we've had converts. But only 150,000. Remember kid, most of what I say is half truth.'

"Yeah. Still, why so glum?"

"It's not because business is bad. It's . . . uh, the reason why business is so good." The puzzled look on my face must have prompted him to continue. "No one believes in me anymore. They don't take the threat of sin and eternal damnation seriously anymore.

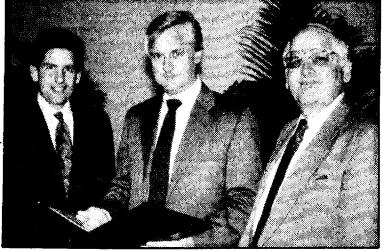

"Ironically, that's why business is good. I used to have to sneak around. Now folks just open their doors to me. People have their fortunes read. They dabble in magic spells. My books sit on people's shelves along with the classics. Violence is on the rise, both in the media and in reality. Pornography is selling better than ever. The list goes on.

"Nobody is watching out for my tricks, since nobody believes in me anymore. Things are much easier."

My patience with this braggart was wearing thin and I wanted him to leave. "So what do you want me to do?"

"I want you to tell people about me. You know, kind of spread the bad news that Satan's around. You liberal Protestants are part of the reason why things are so good for me. I'm not just some relic of prescientific mentality. I'm real. I need attention so that ...

Eton grant: Eton Academy in Birmingham, the only accredited K-12 school in Michigan devoted to students with learning disabilities, has been awarded a $100,000 grant by the Karla Scherer Foundation. The grant is one of the largest the school has received and is the nrst by the newly created Scherer Foundation. The money has been earmarked for the school's capital campaign.

Grosse Pointe resident Karla Scherer, who established the foundation, praised Eton for its work with children who are often labeled as "school failures" even though many of them are gifted.

"Society must recognize that there are many learning disabilities, including dyslexia, attention deficit disorder, language and spatial disorientation, lack of fine motor control and other impediments which affect children's abilities to function effectively in their schools," Scherer said. "If we don't identify these children and give them special care, they'll be treated as substandard and we'll lose them as potentially highly productive adults."

The school has already raised $1,862,119 of its $2.3 million goal for renovating its facilities.

Award: Robert and Mary Lou LeFevre of Grosse Pointe Woods have been honored as two of the Outstanding Volunteers of Michigan by the National Society of Fund Raising Executives, Michigan chapter.

NSFRE is a professional organization of more than 10,000 fundraising executives. The Le-Fevres received certificates of honor for outstanding volunteer service at a recent NSFRE state meeting.

Bop 'till ya drop: A '50s and '60s dance party on Saturday, July 21, will benefit Detroit Symphony Orchestra Hall. The theme of the dance is "Flashback" and it will take place at the new Troy Marriott Hotel.

Festivities will include a hula hoop contest, a swing contest, a feast featuring classic food of the era, rock 'n' roll dance favorites and a raffle.

"Everyone is invited to dress in a costume representing his or her favorite time in rock 'n' roll history," said John Stroh III, Flashback co-chairman. He added that the party will serve to introduce a new group of people to Detroit Symphony Orchestra Hall. All proceeds will be donated to DSOH.

His efforts on behalf of all bridge programs and especially those sponsored by the American Contract Bridge League were enthusiastic and effective. Some years back in a chance acquaintance in New York, Harold Ogust, the founder of Goren Travel was so impressed with his personality and demeanor that he invited Al to direct on Goren bridge cruises. That, my dear readers, was an envied honor. Tannah Hirsh, who subsequently purchased Goren upon Ogust's death and Ruth Poulus who schedules all of their directors remember him well. As

Al never made much of the many celebrities and great performers he came

Ron Vonder Porten, Exec. V.P. of Goren and a world class performer had asked

Al to help with the daily class on board preceding the afternoon duplicate game on one of Goren's marvelous junkets. On this occasion, Ron had changed the format a little by placing today's difficult hand on the blackboard and then turned to Al to supervise the scenario which followed. Al's personality was perfect for these impromptu fun moments, but unfortunately Ron hadn't remembered to show Al the hand in advance of the class and this put him a little in limbo. "My guest conductor," was Ron's introduction as Al rose to the occa-

Some common issues that are discussed include how to select the best nursing home to meet the individual's needs and how to pay for those services; what are Medicare and Medicaid and how might they be used to pay for nursing home care; and what does one do if he or she is at home now and needs more extensive care to meet physical, social or emotional needs?

The center's experienced counselors address these concerns. and others, with callers to help them make educated decisions about their immediate and future needs.

The service started in September 1989 and has received nearly 2,000 calls. Seniors, preschoolers could get together for mutual benefit

Two House bills, 5582 and 5583, presently before the Legislature in Lansing could bring together two age groups - the old and the young. Both would benfit. These bills would require the Department of Commerce to establish an intergenerational day care program.

Child care is one of the major problems in today's society. Many working mothers cannot afford the cost. The lucky ones are those who have mothers or other relatives who will give the special care they would like their child to have while they are at work.

At the other end of the time line, there are older women and men who are lonely, who love children, who miss their own families, and who would enjoy sharing their time, talents, experiences and reminiscences with children.

vide for the needs of working mothers and the needs of older retirees.

The Commerce Department would cooperate with the Offices of Services to the Aging in encouraging businesses and older persons to join in providing child care. The department would distribute information about the availability of older persons as child care workers or volundoes deserve attention.

teeers, as well as information about the availability of grants and develop a grant program to encourage business to furnish space for such centers for their employees.

Bill 5583 amends the Older Michiganians Act to require the Office of Services to the Aging to establish an intergenerational day care program, by requiring the office to encourage older persons to volunteer to do child care work, to encourage senior centers to offer space for child care centers, and to explore with nursing homes the possibility of locating centers in nursing homes. Having two centers in close proximity - one caring for children and the other for adults - could fulfill the goals of the program.

It would ensure that older adults who become involved in child care receive the necessary training, and that if they receive pay, it be less than the regular staff, since they would not be expected to fulfill all the duties of full-tine staff. This would prevent centers from looking upon older adults as cheap labor and using them to displace regular staff.

It is an interesting proposal. While it is not for everyone, it

By Marian Trainor

The concept of older adults working with children is not a new one. We have the Foster Grandparents' program and a modification of the proposed program provided by Bills 5582 and 5583 was implemented by an art teacher in Ann Arbor when she found that three-generation families were rare. The days when Grandma or Grandpa were part of a household were gone. Houses were too small to accommodate them or grandparents preferred to live on their own.

She decided to contact a nursing home and the response was gratifying. The residents were more than willing to share their skill with children. Some of them were far removed from their own granchildren and welcomed the opportunity for contact with the young. The bus ride to the school gave them a chance to share an outing together and after the first trip, they found much to talk and laugh over as they shared experviously been absent, never iences with "their" children. At first the children were a little unsure of how to react to their new teachers, but as they became interested in what they were doing, they relaxed and enjoyed learning how to weave, build bird houses, paint pictures

As both groups, old and young, became involved, it became more than a learning situation. A relationship developed. The children, some of whom had no grandparents, came to think of their teachers as family members, and call them Grandma or Grandpa. Children who had pre-missed teacher-learning day. Teachers basked in the joy of being needed and in the devotion of the children.

Ferry Elementary School and other Grosse Pointe Schools have a teacher-learning program where older residents volunteer to help children who have special problems.

These programs involve school age children, but the same generosity that inspires older people to share their skills and memories with older children will also inspire them to give tender, loving care to youngsters who need of their communities.

In celebration of this important legislation, and to meet challenges of the future, the Administration on Aging has issued The Older Americans Act-Goals for 1990 and Beyond. The goals encompass eight areas of activities currently being addressed by Michigan's State Platn on Aging:

1. Stimulating the growth of services and resources for older persons by promoting public-private sector partnerships;

2. Recognizing older persons as valuable resources to themselves, their communities, and the nation:

3. Strengthening the family and the interdependence of the generations; 4. Promoting preventive in-portive services as vital components of long-term care; 5. Enhancing effective com-home and community based sup-munity-based service systems that are available, accessible and acceptable to older persons; 6. Targeting resources and programs to the needs of the most vulnerable older persons; 7. Developing the trained manpower needed to care for older persons at home, in the community and in nursing homes: 8. Promoting public information and technical assistance to ensure that public, voluntary, and private sector organizations respond to the resources and needs of the increasing number of older Americans in the first decades of the 21st century.

The Office of Services to the Aging joins with the Administration on Aging in its intent to respond substantively and relevantly to the needs of older. persons and to the aging network which was established to ensure that their needs are met.

The Blake Company has been members of the Grosse Pointe community for three generations. We know why people live here, and why they go to great lengths to remain here.

Over the years their homes have become too large and difficult to maintain and until now, the Grosse Pointe area has offered very few alternatives to people who want to change their homes, not their lifestyle.

The Blake Company has created the alternative, Harbor Place: a luxurious condominium community located on the shore of Lake St. Clair, near everything you hold dear.

Designed with traditional New England architecture with an emphasis placed on privacy, security and scenic beauty. Choose between townhouses or terrace homes each in two- and three-bedroom configurations, lavished with an endless list of amenities, including a 2 car garage, exceptional landscaping and boat slips. Call Rob MacGregor today for an appointment and experience the tradition of Harbor Place, you'll see that we really do understand.

The Harbor Place site will be open from 1-5 PM, Friday, Saturday and Sunday. To visit the site enter through Riviera Terrace, 100 yds. North of Nine Mile Road, just off Jefferson.

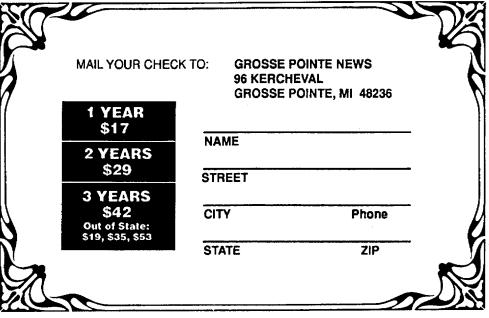

Developers of Dodge Place, Windwood Pointe, Scherbrook and Harbor Place.

The Blake Company ... the new Grosse Pointe tradition.

You can't match this

On Lake St. Clair Saturday, July 14, there were a combined 132 feet of beautiful, playful and expensive toys.

Pied Piper and Stripes, two of the largest boats to hit the waterways, locked horns in a match race that kicked off the official Port Huron to Mackinac race week.

Pied Piper, skippered by Dick Jennings of Chicago, and Stripes, owned and operated by Bayview's Bill Martin, were the two showpieces for the first ever Corona Cup, which was presented and sponsored by WNIC 100.3.

The proceeds from the race were forwarded to the Junior Sailing Program of the United States Yacht Racing Association. A nice gesture.

So, on a cool and rainy morning both boats headed for the southern end of Lake St. Clair to show their muscle.

Here were two skippers, and crews, challenging one another aboard boats that wouldn't fit in most standard back yards. One thing I've noticed in my years close to the lake is how sailing is becoming a HUGE business. I'm not talking about operating a raft, a dinghy or a jet ski, I'm talking about funding - year round - something that is a lifeline for more people each year.

Sailing is destined to be absorbed by major corporations. From the Junior Sailing Program, to the Mackinac to America's Cup, affording sailboats — and everything that goes with them - is a financial burden.

The statement, "If you've got to ask what it costs to maintain a boat, you can't afford it," is becoming truer than ever. Mackinac races are sponsored by car companies, the Meade Group and several "beverage" companies. Without that financial support the greatest water sport would not stay affoat. These sailors are frugal in a way, but when it comes to upgrading, maintaining and persevering during a race, there is not a thought of money. If you need it, get it. A great attitude.

Sailing is in the blood. You inherit it or you spend quite a bit of time trying to acquire a taste for it. The people you see sailing have committed themselves to a life on the water.

The sailors you see are the people that didn't fall through the cracks when just "experimenting" with sailing. They are hard-core sailors, whether they race in long-distance, singlehanded, double-handed or weekend races.

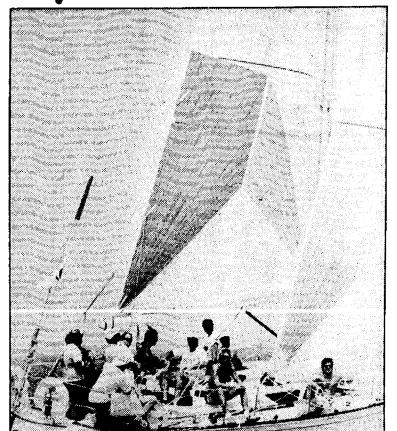

Most people look at the 66foot Stripes and Pied Piper (also 66 feet) as the ultimate racing yachts, and rightly so, but even the 30-, 35- and 40foot boats are superior machines.

Sailing is too big to fight now and there was proof of how the shores of Grosse Pointe always act as a great place to race. With a spectacular backdrop of mansions, a zest for sailing and a fresh welcome mat, Grosse Pointe has become a favorite among sailors.

Pied Piper and Stripes represented only a small portion of this game, but what a spectacle it was. This was just a preliminary bashing they laid on one another because they challenge in just two days in the 259nautical mile Port Huron to Mackinac race. But don't forget about the "smaller" boats that will also head for Mackinac.

Sailing has been around for longer than any of us can imagine, but right in our own back yards the tradition continues thanks to Mother Nature and most of all, Grosse Pointe sail-

By the way, Stripes won the Corona Cup.

Mackinac committee steers boats in right direction

Sports Editor

Sure the more than 260 boats entered in the July 21 running of the Port Huron to Mackinac Race will know the course, but it's actually the more than 100 volunteers who have set the pace this year.

Skippers and crews in the IOR, PHRF and IMS divisions will finish the 259-nautical mile race, but until all of them are safely in port, collect their flags and return home, the committee will not rest.

Since last August, just three weeks after the 65th Port Huron to Mackinac race, which is sponsored by the Bayview Yacht Club, Richard Bridge began laying the support systems he would need to pull off this year's 66th running.

"Toward the end of August each year, we have a debriefing meeting with all the chairmen of each committee and cover what was good and bad about the previous year's race," said Bridge, this year's race chairman, who will oversee some 19 committees. "I found a lot of things I wanted to upgrade and that's when we got rolling on this year's plans."

After acting as the race registrar for 14 years, Bridge gladly accepted the appointment of race chairman.

'Having a racing background helps and I guess that's how you get to be a head chairman," said Bridge, who passed up celebrat-ing his "Old Goat" year in order to head the committees. "They must think I'm smart enough and can get things done by delegating properly."

Delegation was Bridge's foremost thought when he took over. He had to name committee heads and allow each of them to select their respective members. "Asking me what my responsibilities are is a tough question," Bridge said. "The most important thing was to organize the committees and appoint the chairmen. I don't get involved in appointing their committees, however. That's their job."

Actually it's a year-round job and of the more than 100 volunteers, only Mary Cunningham is paid, according to Bridge.

"Mary is really the only 'professional' we have on staff," said Bridge. "I consider all the chairmen the building blocks of the race, and Mary is the mortar. She's really our stronghold on the entire race.

Obviously, Cunningham is not the only member.

These people are so dedicated and deserve to be recognized." said Bridge. "Obviously, without them this race would not be run. Fortunately, we've got some very dedicated individuals who will do anything for these competi-

What wasn't, but is now, part of the program is the Old Forts designation.

An Old Fort, much like an Old Goat, is a committee member who has served 15 years of more on the committee. On Old Goat is a sailor who has sailed in 25 Mackinac races or more.

"I wanted a way to honor the people who may not have sailed, but were active in the race,' Bridge said.

Plenty of people with plenty of things to keep them busy.

'We've had only one meeting back in April, and haven't had one since," said Bridge. "In that meeting we discussed what we needed to get done and people

"We've had to meet with more people than I ever thought," Bridge said, "but when you've got all those different organizations controlling different aspects of the race, it's your responsibility to get them all in sync." What happens to the committee after the race.

"Hopefully most of them will get some time to relax," Bridge said. "It's been a year of fun and headaches, and everyone deserves some time off. I'm hoping to get some when I get to the Island, but you never know. Hopefully there will be good winds and it'll be a quick race.

"I'm confident this year's race, because the committee is going so well, will be one of the finest it's ever been."

The race will probably go off without a hitch, but the committee is still trying to work out its

"We're still struggling because race is completed," Bridge admitted, "but we are a committee for the sailors. We're here to do everything we can to get them out there and make it as easy and as fun as possible."

After gathering his lineup, Bridge went to work on the invitation. After more than 100 hours gathering advice, he sat down with Dr. J.E. "Mike" Taperet, and revised the invitation.

"It seems like such a trivial thing," Bridge said, "but we felt we were asking the skippers to read too much. The old invitation was 21 pages long, and that was too much. We cut it down to Bridge and others have had to work out details on scoring, registration, a new computer system, who's selling T-shirts, who will head the social functions,

"I think the biggest headache we have is to work out all the details," said Bridge. "Not everything we do is being written down and filed - unfortunately and the current chairmen have to always make changes. Everything varies from skipper to skipper and class to class. What's in a label?

Whether watching waistlines or pursuing more beautiful healthful lifestyles, Americans are experiencing a growing wave of nutrition consciousness.

Americans are making a deliberate effort to avoid or limit sodium, fat, cholesterol, sugar and additives in their diets, and many are taking the time to read labels before purchasing products to ensure nutrition.

Unfortunately, food labeling is not yet an exact science, and in fact, can often be more misleading than helpful. The following explanations of common listings and claims may help you in your selection of wise food choices.

Cholesterol free

As a result of the cholesterol concern over the last many years, food manufacturers have found it to be in their best interest to decrease cholesterol in many products. However, the term "cholesterol free" can be a meaningless claim.

For instance, plant products such as peanut butter, most salad dressings and vegetable oils have never had cholesterol in them because cholesterol comes only from animal products.

Furthermore, although a product may be "cholesterol free" it can still be high in saturated fat; a fat known to raise blood cholesterol. Some vegetable oils (palm kernel oil and coconut oil) contain more than 80 percent

If you want to cut down your sodium intake, check labels care-

Sodium is found in at least 70 compounds used in foods besides table salt. Two such examples are baking soda (sodium bicarbonate) and MSG (monosodium glutamate), a flavor enhancer.

Sugar

When assessing the amount of sugar in a product, make sure you spot all the sugars listed because they come in forms. Sucrose indicates table sugar, but glucose, fructose, brown sugar, corn syrup and honey are also forms of sugar and are listed separately from sucrose on labels.

Added together, sugars may be ore abundant than you think.

If a product is labeled "sugar free" or "sugarless" it cannot, by FDA standards, contain either sucrose or any other form of sugar. Only low-calorie sweeteners such as saccharin and aspartame are allowed. Chewing gum is the exception. It can be called "sugarless" even though it may contain sorbitol, a sugar alcohol that has as many calories as sucrose, but does not promote tooth decay.

However, the FDA requires that these "sugar free" labels also include such disclaimers as, "not for weight control" or "useful only in not promoting tooth decay.

Low calorie

For a food to qualify as "low calorie" it must have less than 40 calories per serving and less than 0.4 calories per gram.

Reduced calorie

These products must have at least one-third fewer calories than the standard recipes; the label must also show a nutritional comparison.

Lite or light

If "light" refers to reduced calories, it must be accompanied by a complete nutrition breakdown. When "light" refers to processed meats, the product must have a least 25 percent less fat than usual.

But "light" can also have more vague meanings. It can refer to low sodium, reduced alcohol, airy texture or milder taste, so read the label carefully to make sure you are receiving the benefits you intend.

Natural

All fresh meat is considered natural.

According to USDA guidelines, natural means that a meat product has been minimally processed and contains no artificial ingredients. It does not guarantee the absence of antibiotic residues or growth stimulants, and currently, most beef producers cannot make that guarantee.

Legally speaking, natural means very little for other foods. Many natural foods are sugarladen, over processed and packed with preservatives.

Even a food with "all natural flavor" (flavor which must come from a juice, oil, leaf, herb or spice) may still contain artificial color and preservatives.

Food labels can be either a help or a hinderance to good health. To get a true picture from food labels, read the entire label. Don't settle for part

Fat breakdown of vegetable oils

If you are trying to reduce your intake of saturated fat, food labels don't make your job easy.

Food products labeled "made with pure vegetable oil" often give consumers a false sense of security. Such vague labeling is often designed by manufacturers to avoid admitting to the use of products that have excessive saturated fat, such as coconut and palm oils. These oils tend to be cheaper and have a longer shelf

Although various consumer groups and some members of Congress have proposed changes in current laws to require all nutrition labels to list specific fats or oils and to specify whether they are saturated or not, no legal action has yet been taken.

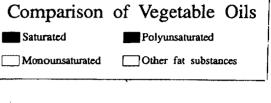

In the meantime, select oils that are highly polyunsaturated such as corn, safflower and sunflower oils, or highly monosaturated such as olive and canola oils. Limit your intake of highly saturated vegetable oils. They have no cholesterol, but like animal fats they raise blood cholesterol levels.

Also, beware of foods containing hydrogenated oils; hydrogenation makes fats more saturated and even partial hydrogenation can result in five to about 60 percent saturation.

Refer to the chart for further help in your selection.

Am I overweight or just too fat?

What's the difference between of fat you need to lose that being overweight and being too

You could well be at "normal weight" but still have too much fat. In health and fitness, fat, not weight, is the crucial issue. It's the excess fat which is the culprit in high blood pressure, heart disease, diabetes and certain types of cancer.

When striving for health and fitness, ideal body fat percentage should be the goal rather than ideal weight.

Ideal body fat

The range of normal percentage fat composition for men is 12 to 16 percent. For women, 15-20 ercent is ideal

Fat is not all bad. We must all have some fat to fuel our bodies. If we have too little fat, other body tissues such as muscle will be broken down to meet our body's energy requirements.

Some fine tuned athletes such as Bo Jackson and Walter Payton have body fat compositions of about five percent. For instance, a 200-pound male should have between 24 and 32 lbs. of fat to be considered in the ideal range.

Measuring body fat

Prior to instituting a fitness plan, a measurement of body fat percentage is vital.

There are a number of ways to measure body fat; underwater weighing is the most accurate, but not practical in most settings; measurements of skin folds, although less accurate, is much more practical and suffi-

Many health clubs, clinics and physical therapy facilities can provide this service. A good body fat estimate can assist in setting realistic goals in an individualized fitness program.

Exercise as well as diet are body fat. It takes approximately 3,500 calories to create one pound of fat. To lose one pound

"Nobody said it would be easy. I drove my butt off out there today," said Robbie Buhl after taking sixth place in the American Racing Series race at Cleveland. There is a hint of optimism amid a trouble-plagued season for Buhl and his Copper and Brass Sales/Failsafe Magnetics Special. It comes from Buhl's feeling that he and his Leading Edge Motorsports crew are getting close to setting up his car properly to handle the diverse courses in the ARS program.

ercise, your body uses readily available carbohydrates for en-This is called anaerobic metabolism. In sustained exercise your body uses oxygen to release stored fat for fuel. This is called aerobic metabolism and is the type of exercise which is most effective in trimming body

Aerobic exercise (walking, running, swimming, cycling) should be intensive enough to raise your heart rate to your target heart rate. This is about 60-80 percent of maximum.

This range can be estimated by taking 60-80 percent of 220 minus your age. For example, the target rate for a 20-year-old male is 60-80 percent of 220-20, or 120-160 beats a minute. Achieving this heart rate for 20-30 minutes will use up all available carbohydrates and begin breaking down body fat stores to supply energy.

Regular aerobic exercise coupled with a low fat, high complex carbohydrate diet will allow one to attain his or her ideal body fat percentage. So, even though you may be overweight, you may not be too fat.

Hints to avoid spoiling the summer

The summer season has brought flowers, fishing and fun, along with family gatherings and outside parties which can include a variety of foods.

The public needs to keep in mind that careless preparation and handling of food can transform summer fun into a medical emergency.

Kitchen and warm outside temperatures are well known as the perfect climate for bacterial growth, which can encourage speedy spoilage of many perishable foods. Taking time to use safe techniques in the preparation, transportation and storage of food can prevent the three most common forms of food poi-

To prevent food poisoning in the summer, follow these simple "always" rules. 1) Always use clean utensils.

Bacteria is commonly spread by using one utensil or more than one food without washing the utensil with warm soapy water in between. 2) Always wash your hands before preparing foods.

3) Always follow roasting instructions carefully when cooking meats. This will allow the meat to be cooked at an adequate temperature, thus preventing growth of harmful bacteria.

Summer is in full swing, and so are the summer programs for our member agencies. Several have special needs to help make their activities complete. Take a peek at the following and see if you might be able to make a contribution

COOL IT with beverage coolers. Northeast Guidance Center has a lot going on, but they need a few more things to ice it! An OUTDOOR ICE CHEST or COOLER, 2 large BEVERAGE COOLERS (5-8 gallon capacity), and an AM-FM PHONOGRAPH or TAPE PLAYER (one that is simple to operate would do nicely). The center would like to acquire a free standing CLOTHING RACK with wheels.

More Summer fun going on over at Antonio Santos Elk Lodge. They need things for their childrens summer program like EDUCATIONAL GAMES, educational COLORING BOOKS, CRAYONS and WASHABLE MARKERS.

C.O.T.S. would like a DOUBLE STROLLER. Many other agencies are always in need of childrens items from GAMES to GALOSHES, CRIBS to CLOTHES, and SOCKS to SWINGS.

Detroit Public Schools has asked for a 5' x 7' area

LINC wants your clean, usable odds and ends. There are many organizations who can put these things to a creative use. Uses have been found for misprinted calendars and drapery fabric scraps. Be inventive and call LINC.

STUD SERVICE- for Yorkshire and poodle. 296-

We're sure glad we did!

Megan is a gentle little cat that would not be around today if it were not for a caring individual that took notice to a small taped cardboard box in the path of traffic.

We are convinced that whoever put this innocent creature in this box had full intention to see her life taken away in a very cruel and inhumane way. Can you imagine being put inside a tiny box that your body can barely fit inside and be taped shut? Then be thrown out into the street? What kind of person could be so insensitive to this trusting cat? Megan is one of the lucky ones because she is here under our care today and up for adoption.

But, there are so many that are not so lucky - many that we never even hear about and many more that we hear about too late. What did Megan and other poor animals ever do to deserve this dreadful act of unkindness? All animals, like humans, have feelings ... they feel pain, fear, hunger, and loneliness.

Our domestic pets depend on us ... it is our responsibility to look out for them. Kindness goes a long way, it does not take much to be an animal's friend. We sometimes forget that these very loving animals, that we sometimes take for granted, provide us with fulfillment, joy and loyalty.

Animals accept us no matter what ... they trust us. Please, please, make it be a kind-to-animals world!

Megan is a gray longhair female Tabby about 2 years old, with a very gentle manner and is looking for an affectionate and loving home.

Please come see her at: The Anti-Cruelty Association, 13569 Jos Campau, Detroit, MI 48212 ... 891-7188. Adoption hours are Monday through Saturday, 10:30 to 3:00.
