Woods has best crime record in tri-county area

By John Minnis
Assistant Editor

For at least the second time in the past few years, Grosse Pointe Woods had the fewest major crimes per capita than any city of 10,000 or more population in metro Detroit.

The Woods' top ranking is based on the FBI's 1989 Uniform Crime Report released last week.

"That's great news," said Woods Mayor George Freeman. "We've got a great public safety director. He's got to get the credit for it. We're lucky to have (Public Safety Director) Jack Paterson."

Freeman also credited the "efficient" public safety officers.

In November 1988, the Woods was rated the safest among 40 metropolitan Detroit communities by a Detroit Monthly article, which was based on the 1987 Uniform Crime Report.

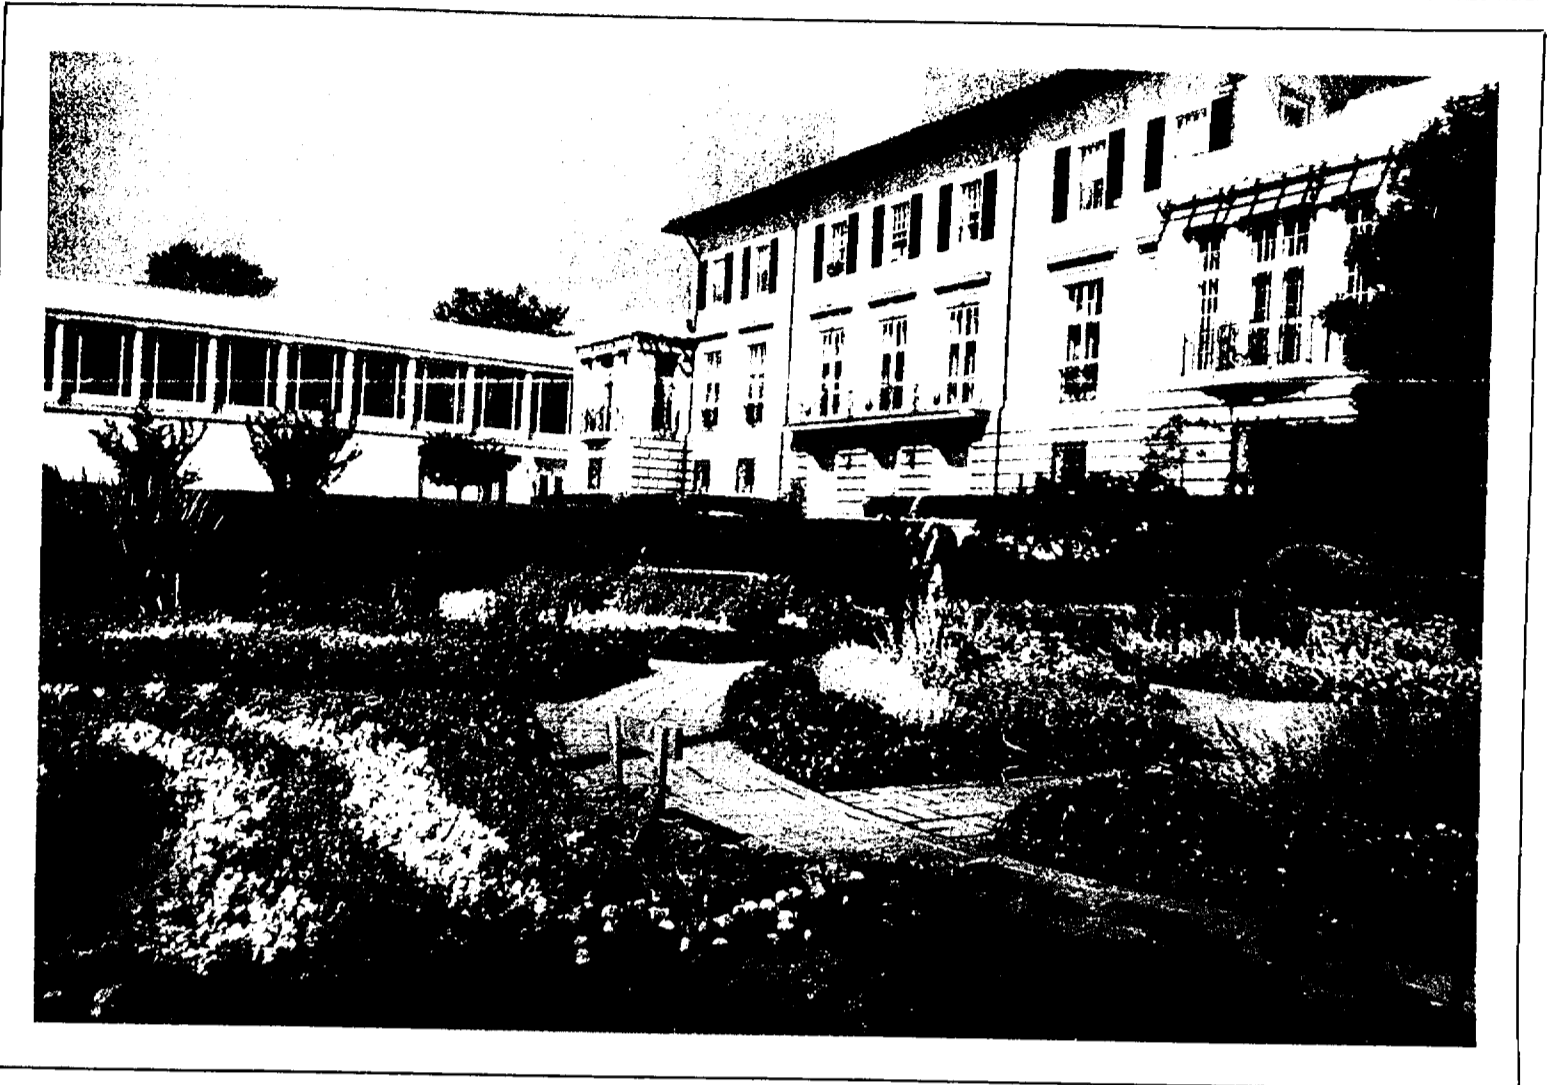

The Woods had 210.59 major crimes per 10,000 residents in 1989, according to the Uniform Crime Report and population figures compiled by The Detroit News, published Aug. 5.

The only other city in the Pointes with more than 10,000 residents — Grosse Pointe Park — ranked 18th among the 59 communities in Wayne, Oakland and Macomb counties listed in the FBI report.

The Park ranked 17th in 1987 among the 40 communities reported in the Detroit Monthly article.

According to more recent population estimates for 1989 obtained by the Grosse Pointe News, the Park actually ranked 17th with 383.67 crimes per 10,000 population. Also based on

Pointer of Interest

James H. Graves, M.D.

By Pat Paholsky
Editor

By the time he was 12 years old, James H. Graves had read everything written by Sigmund Freud that had been translated into English and he knew, at that age, that he wanted to be a psychiatrist.

Now, after 40 years of practicing psychiatry, he remains deeply involved with his profession and says he has no desire to ever retire.

But his commitment isn't all-consuming.

Graves, a Farms resident, is multi-talented with wide-ranging interests.

While he was in medical school, he heard Andres Segovia perform. It inspired him to buy a guitar for $10. He then proceeded to teach himself how to play.

Graves downplays his ability, but he has performed in public at the War Memorial.

He also sold baroque instruments for awhile in a second floor store in the Village when his office was at the corner of Notre Dame and Kercheval. Called the Klavier Baroque Institute, Graves had instruments

Trial Gardens

While August is the month of burnt, brown lawns, all was in bloom and beautiful last week at the Trial Gardens at the War Memorial in Grosse Pointe Farms. Nine garden clubs maintain their own plots at the Trial Gardens; they are Suburbia Garden Club, Grosse Pointe Shores Garden Club, Garden Society, Windmill-Pointe Garden Club, Trowel and Error Garden Club, Grosse Pointe Farm & Garden Club, Grosse Pointe Park Garden Club, Village Garden Club and Pointe Garden Club.

School board, Farms council to meet Aug. 13 re: new library

By Ronald J. Bernas
Staff Writer

On Monday, Aug. 13, at 7:30 p.m., the bell will ring signaling the second round of the Battle of the Library.

In one corner, the Grosse Pointe school board, armed with updated plans for a library on the grounds of Brownell Middle School.

In the other corner, the residents of the area around Brownell whose loud opposition swayed the Grosse Pointe Farms City Council to deny approval for the first site plan in March.

In the months since the rejection, the school board worked to answer the concerns voiced by the residents.

The new proposal calls for the 48,000 square-foot building to be placed 110 feet from the curb of Chalfonte, an additional 48 feet back from the original proposal, which residents said was too close to the street.

The access drive connecting the Brownell parking lot and the proposed library parking lot was eliminated, again because of residents' concerns. There will be 207 total parking spaces, the majority of which are behind the school.

The new plans call for the building to be turned around so what was originally the back of the building now faces Chalfonte. It contains an amphitheater-like garden which leads to the lower level. The entire building is 37 feet high.

The new building will also have more landscaping to shield it from the street.

There will still be three baseball diamonds and two soccer fields, which will be upgraded.

Also in response to the residents' concerns, the board commissioned a traffic study in May, the busiest time of the year for the school and the playfields there.

The residents didn't think the traffic predictions from the first traffic study — done in February — would hold up in May. The May study proved the predictions were within, and often below, the predicted figures, making them below the capacity of the streets.

Since the March defeat, residents have told the school board that they still feel the same way — no library at Brownell no matter what it looks like.

Monday's meeting will be at South auditorium.

Woods burglar narrowly escapes capture

A burglar was almost caught by Woods police Aug. 5 after he had broken into three homes.

The thefts and near-capture occurred in the southwest section of the city which has been plagued by burglaries since April.

The thief was almost caught when a resident of a home in the 1700 block of Stanhope saw someone walk past her bedroom window twice at about 3:18 a.m. She thought it was the paperboy, but when she walked into the adjacent bedroom, she saw a man crawling out the bedroom window.

Police responded to the burglary-in-progress report and saw the suspect running south on Eastbourne from Stanhope. All Grosse Pointe Woods cars and units from other nearby police departments joined in the search. The man was last seen running south through yards on Prestwick from Eastbourne. He was not seen again.

At the scene of the burglary on Stanhope, police found a purse on the ground outside the bedroom window the thief entered. The purse, however, did not belong to the Stanhope woman; rather, it belonged to a woman in the 1700 block of Littlestone.

A Woods officer went to the home on Littlestone and informed the resident that he had her purse and that she may have been the victim of a burglary. The resident discovered that her milk chute door had been forced open from the outside, allowing a thief to get the side door of the house open.

From the kitchen table, the burglar took the woman's purse and a wallet, watch and ring belonging to her daughter. The thief also took keys for the residents' automobiles but did not take the cars.

While checking houses in the area, an officer found a purse in some bushes in the 1700 block of Broadstone. Identification in the purse showed it belonged to a resident in the same block.

Police went to the home of the owner of the purse and found a screen had been cut and a window pushed open. The resident was awakened by police who informed her she had been burglarized. Taken from the home was the woman's purse, which was hanging on a door knob in the kitchen, and a Sony compact disc loading system.

The thief exited the house through the front door.

Homes in Pointes are blue chip

By John Minnis
Assistant Editor

Psst. Looking for a good investment? Buy in Grosse Pointe. It's better than blue chip stock.

While rising home values are the bane of property owners come tax time, they are a windfall when it comes time to sell the house.

Many owners build up equity over the years and have a nice nest egg built up for retirement. Others buy and sell within a couple of years, realizing sometimes fantastic appreciation in home values.

Take for example the home in the 1000 block of Beaconsfield in Grosse Pointe Park: After just half a month the owner sold for $32,000 more than he paid for the house, which worked out to be a 30.5 percent increase in value.

This case, taken from a computer printout of home sales in the Park during an 18-month period from March 1988 to September 1989, is a bit unusual and the circumstances of the quick resale are not known, but other examples from the Park are just as impressive.

More than 500 transactions were recorded during the 1 1/2-year period in the Park. Other interesting sales were:

- After 3 1/2 months, a house in the 1300 block of Cadieux sold for $96,300, resulting in a gain of $18,300, or 23.5 percent.

- A house in the 1200 block of Yorkshire was purchased in January 1988 for $170,000 and sold 15 1/2 months later for $239,000, a gain of 40.6 percent.

- A home in the 1300 block of Balfour was sold after a year for $180,000, an increase of $34,000, or 23.3 percent.

- After 10 1/2 months, a home in the 500 block of Pemberton realized a 31.6 percent gain when it sold for $125,000, an increase of $30,000 over the original purchase price of $95,000.

According to average home sales prices compiled by the Grosse Pointe Board of Realtors, the average home selling price in the Pointes in 1989 was $188,466, up 10.5 percent from the average price of $170,591 in 1988.

Tom Kotzian, executive officer of the Grosse Pointe Board of Realtors, cautions that while the appreciation figures, such as those experienced in the Park, are impressive, they don't indicate whether the buyer originally got an exceptionally good price on the property to begin with.

Also, many owners may have to put a lot of money into fixing up the property, so the amount of profit made on a deal is less than the difference in the buying and selling prices.

Nevertheless, money can be made. "There's probably no better market in all of Michigan," Kotzian said of investing in the Grosse Pointes. "Grosse Pointe is an excellent place to live, both for the amenities and appreciation of property values. I can't think of a better community around."

He said there is a lot of investment activity in the Pointes. Investors get a good deal on a property, fix it up and sell it. While the buying/selling figures from the Park don't indicate how much profit each seller made, the figures are indicative of the general trend of rising home values in all the Pointes.

Kotzian further said that there's a lot of Grosse Pointers who are selling and buying elsewhere in the Pointes. "We get a lot of people who are moving up, not out," he said.

Concerning value appreciation, Kotzian said, "I don't think we've peaked out yet."

Transplanted Pointer rediscovers his homeland

By Ronald J. Bernas
Staff Writer

America was always in the back of Paul Brinkman's mind when he was growing up in New Zealand.

Now, on a trip that has taken him across the country and will take him back around, Brinkman is rediscovering his roots and the country he considers his homeland.

"It's the big overseas experience all New Zealanders take when they're young," Brinkman said. "Most New Zealanders' idea of the overseas experience is to go somewhere and stay with friends or relatives and sponge for a while then go home. And most of them go to England, where their roots are. I'm doing it differently."

Indeed he is.

He is traveling by van, going where his whims take him, with no set plan. Secondly, he is not planning to stay anywhere long enough to wear out his welcome.

And lastly, he is traveling alone, in the wheelchair that has been his constant companion since a rock-climbing accident 10 years ago.

"I turned 30 and I had this big midlife crisis," he said, only half-jokingly. "I kind of wanted to get out."

Other things were falling into place. He quit his job. Then to save money he sold his flat on one of the better streets in his city and moved in with a friend as he worked as a freelance accountant.

"I thought, 'I have no ties other than family, I'm fit now, I'm healthy, I may never get a chance to do this again,'" he said. So he packed up his stuff and took off for the United States.

After a week in Hawaii, Brinkman flew to California where he bought an old Volkswagen van, specially equipped with a sink, a stove, a refrigerator — "everything but a toilet." Because Brinkman cannot use his legs, he had to have the van altered. After comparison shopping, he took the van to a garage where the mechanic — who was also in a wheelchair — refused to take any money for the parts or his labor.

"That was really nice of that guy, but my trip's been like that the whole way," he said. "Out of some of the worst situations I've met some of the nicest people."

Paul Brinkman, touring the country in his van, is realizing one of his dreams.

There was the time when he had stopped to take pictures of some picturesque abandoned buildings in the middle of the Mojave Desert. When he was done with his roadside excursion, his van wouldn't start.

Miles from anywhere, at 8:30 in the evening, Brinkman decided he would stay the night, then set off first thing in the morning to get some help.

He didn't quite make it to morning. He was awakened by a bright light, when his eyes adjusted, he noticed the man holding the light was also holding a shotgun.

After explaining his predicament, the man helped Brinkman determine what was wrong with the van, then took him into town where they had breakfast and bought the necessary part. The man gave Brinkman a 12-hour tour of the area before returning to the van which he helped fix.

Then there was the blowout in South Dakota, which was made worse when he discovered his spare was flat, too. Two couples on motorcycles — whom he had said hello to at a gas station a few miles back — pulled over when they saw him stranded at the side of the road, took the spare to the gas station where they filled it up with air and helped him change it.

"I don't think I've learned to relax yet," he said. "I'm particularly vulnerable as a tourist, because I'm aware that I'm not certain where I am. I'm either driving or I'm looking at the sights."

"I'm doing this alone because I wanted to show people — and myself — that I could. The minute I say I have a companion, people will automatically assume that he or she did everything for me. It's also a freedom of the mind thing. I can go whatever direction I want for however long I want."

Highlights of the trip so far have been the Hoover Dam, Devil's Mountain and Chicago, although he says he felt more alone in the middle of a crowded street in Chicago than he did alone on the middle of the interstate.

He has slept in his van in supermarket parking lots, campgrounds and even on the side of the road, pointing out with pride that he hasn't spent one night in a motel.

"If everything was laid out in five-star hotels, this trip wouldn't mean as much," he said. "I would not have the same sense of accomplishment."

The trip has been a dream since he read "Blue Highway," a book about William Least-Heat Moon's search for the real America in a similar trip. Moon, an American Indian, traveled through the Midwest in search of a "poetic experience," Brinkman said, and his trip was a disappointment.

Brinkman's trip is anything but a disappointment.

"I'm almost certain I never would have been able to do this trip in New Zealand," he said. "The people here are just so open and so friendly. I love that. At home people are sort of cold and don't let you get to know them. I had always remembered Americans as being really nice, but I couldn't tell if that was how I remembered it or if it was just in my mind."

Brinkman lived in Grosse Pointe until he was 10 years old when his parents decided to pack up the family and move to their native New Zealand.

He showed up at Curl and Ed Tutag's house in Grosse Pointe Farms one day last week, much to their surprise. The Tutags, his godparents, hadn't seen him in nearly 20 years, except for a short trip Curl had taken to New Zealand several years ago. They didn't even know he was in the country.

"It's very weird coming back," he said. "It's almost like a dream. The place really hasn't changed that much in 20 years. It's a lot like I remember it."

While in town he also stayed at the home of Red and Anne Browning, the parents of his best friend during childhood.

"We never had friends in New Zealand like we had in Grosse Pointe," he said.

Brinkman has been in this country since May 13 and isn't planning on going back until the end of October, when he will be the best man at his brother's wedding. By then he may decide to settle in the States.

"This is a once-in-a-lifetime trip," Brinkman says. "I'm lucky to be able to do it. I've met a lot of people on this trip who say they would like to be able to do something like this, but they always have an excuse."

"I've determined that there are two types of people in the world — the realists who chase the dollar and the dreamers. I chased the dollar for a while and I didn't do it very well. I realized I'm a dreamer. And there's nothing wrong with that."

"Some people go through life with no dreams at all, and that's sad. When I read that book, I tried to accept the Hopi Indian philosophy of life which is that people should try not to hurt each other and try to understand each other."

"That's what I'm trying to do. I was sort of down when I started, but this trip has reignited the fire in my furnace."

School board adjusts budget to meet cuts

By Ronald J. Bernas
Staff Writer

The Grosse Pointe board of education has good news and better news for its taxpayers.

The good news is that the board has found a way to readjust its 1990-91 school budget to make up for a surprise $1.625 million cut in state school aid.

The better news is that the plan, presented by Superintendent Ed Shine, balances the budget without dipping further into taxpayers' pockets.

The recommendation calls for:

- Decreasing the district's fund equity by $1 million, leaving a balance of $2 million;

- Reducing library spending by $30,000, and decreasing the library's fund equity by $35,000;

- Taking $452,000 out of the central budget, mostly from the building and site and support services funds;

- Taking $108,000 — the balance of the $1.625 million — from the sites, the exact amount reduced from each site is based on the number of pupils in the school.

Specifically what projects will suffer from the transfer of funds will be decided before the board takes final action on the plan Monday.

The administration, in coming up with the proposal, worked with a goal of limiting direct impact to the classrooms.

The board also discussed a six-point plan to discuss the impact of the cuts with staff and taxpayers.

Through "To the Pointe," the superintendent's letter to the community, Shine will discuss the cuts and urged every building administrator to address the issue in the first school newsletter of the year. The subject will also be covered in the Community Education class, "Understanding School Finance," in October.

School board pulls out of dealership deal

After soil testing revealed contamination at the former Lakepointe Oldsmobile dealership in Grosse Pointe Park, the board of education pulled out of the deal.

The board, in May, agreed to purchase the 22,000 square-foot Albert Kahn building on Jefferson for $400,000 to use for supply and vehicle storage.

The deal, however, was dependent on the results of soil testing and whether the property needed to be rezoned, according to Christian Fenton, assistant superintendent for business affairs.

Fenton said there are four underground gasoline storage tanks on the site, two of which are clean and one which has a "modest" amount of contamination. The contamination on the last one has yet to be determined.

Until the board can negotiate more arrangements to take care of the soil testing, Fenton said, the board has officially pulled out of the deal.

Additional soil testing may be done later this month.

Second Self changes moods for their second album, tour

By Dan Jarvis
Staff Writer

Did you ever create something wonderful with little effort, then stand back and wonder how the heck you did it?

If so, you've experienced what members of the musical group Second Self say is their secret to success.

Formed in 1986, Second Self, featuring two brothers from Grosse Pointe Woods, has created their own path that have defied some of the rules of the rock 'n' roll world. So far, they have not turned back.

The band consisted of the brothers Nehra: Michael, 26, a graduate Grosse Pointe South who sings and strums guitar; his brother, Andrew, 21, a North grad and bassist of the group; 24-year-old Greg Giampa on lead guitar; and drummer Jeffrey Fowlkes, 25.

"We definitely like to try a lot of new things that are just not done in the industry," said Andrew Nehra, while describing the group's approach to recording their self-styled, soulful first album, "Mood Ring."

Last year when the group ventured down to Muscle Shoals Studios in Alabama to record in one of the country's most comfortable and high technology studios, they instead chose the studio's dirty, unfinished attic which blazed with 100 degree heat and 100 percent humidity.

Why would a band choose this form of self-punishment when a walk downstairs led to an air conditioned studio that was good enough for Otis Redding, Aretha Franklin, the Rolling Stones and the Allman Brothers Band?

Second Self, featuring Pointers Michael Nehra, left, and his younger brother Andrew, right, will perform at the Ritz in Roseville this Saturday night. Their album "Mood Ring" is available at Village Records and Tapes on Kercheval and at Harmony House on Mack Avenue in Grosse Pointe Woods.

"The sound was better up there," said the younger Nehra. "We would have been better off swimming, it was so hot in the attic. We also chose to use the old vacuum tube equipment because we like the sound better than the newer equipment."

The folks at Muscle Shoals were in for more surprises when the band announced they were not going to follow the one-musician-at-a-time recording method used by most bands. Instead, they simply played live and the recording engineers tried to keep up.

Proving their sincerity in the old-fashioned approach, the singer at one point forgot a line in a song, paused, then cursed and laughed. The faux pas is now on the band's first album for all to hear.

The album showed such promise that record executives at EMI Records doubled the normal order of compact discs to 60,000 for initial distribution.

Some critics say that "Mood Ring," named for the album's changing musical moods, is more like a record label's sampler of several artists on one record album.

But this charge of a more-than-usual dose of diversity doesn't worry the group at all.

"To be a great band, you have to at some point tackle all types of music and put it into your own style," Fowlkes said. "If you play the same song all the time, who's going to listen after a while?"

Bassist Andrew Nehra agreed, adding, "You can speak one language. Why not learn to speak all of them? Diversity is really our forte. It's not a conscious effort on our part to come up with a different sound on each song."

"We sometimes write our own parts, and then we write each other's parts on other songs. The unity of the band is really what is important for us."

According to the band's four-year track record, listeners all over the United States are understanding their approach very well.

It is not surprising that fans from the Detroit area provide a solid base of support. But with their recent release, fans are buying records and concert tickets on both coasts, the Midwest and the southern states.

Nehra said the band's recent three-month tour not only doubled the sales of "Mood Ring" CDs, it also gave the band a chance to spread their musically diverse message all over the country.

"We started out on the West Coast, first in California, then up to Vancouver, then over to Denver, Kansas City and Chicago," he said. "Then we went out east to Boston, then Florida and Texas."

"Most of our support is in this area, Ohio and the two coasts. It's kind of scattered. We get good support in some places and others not so much. Lately, even our misses have been good."

The recent success of Second Self did not happen overnight.

Several years ago, both Michael and Andrew Nehra received their parents' permission to install a studio in the basement of their Grosse Pointe Woods home.

They pooled their earnings together to buy construction materials and recording equipment and they've even used the studio to record tapes which turned the ear of industry scouts at EMI Records.

"College radio really got the ball rolling, but there is still a lot of work to do," Andrew Nehra said. "We like playing the clubs, especially because you can get so close to the audience there. It's like a big party sometimes."

Right now the group is taking a three-week break from touring to work on several songs for their next album. Group members say they have more than enough material, but prefer to work on newer, fresher material just to keep things popping.

Second Self will perform at the Ritz on Gratiot in Roseville on Saturday, Aug. 11. Their recording is available on cassette or compact disc at Village Records and Tapes on Kercheval and at Harmony House on Mack Avenue.

Woods man arrested on drug charge, was subject of search

By John Minnis
Assistant Editor

The Grosse Pointe Woods man living at the home on Lochmoor that was searched as part of a Los Angeles-Detroit drug investigation in June has been charged with drug trafficking.

Lloyd D. Russette, 49, of the 900 block of Lochmoor, was arraigned in Detroit federal court Aug. 6 on one count of selling one-half ounce of heroin to an undercover officer Nov. 1 at the school where he is employed. He is reported to be a boiler operator for Detroit Public Schools.

The house in which Russette lives on Lochmoor was searched June 26 by agents from the Drug Enforcement Administration and the Internal Revenue Service, with assistance from Woods police.

As part of the same investigation, which is being conducted in Detroit and Los Angeles, a property in the 8300 block of Van Dyke was also searched. The Detroit property belongs to a man who is reported to also own several day care centers in Detroit.

The June searches resulted in the confiscation of $145,000 in cash and a mountain of documentary evidence, according to the DEA office in Detroit.

The U.S. Marshals Service issued a warrant July 31 for Russette's arrest. The charge was possession with intent to distribute heroin. He was arrested July 4 while at a Big Boy restaurant, according to a spokeswoman at the U.S. Marshals office in Detroit. She could not comment further on the case.

At his arraignment, Russette was released on $100,000 personal bond. If convicted of the charge, he could get up to 20 years in prison.

Russette is reported to be a karate expert.

17-year-old assaulted

A 17-year-old woman was assaulted by a man while she was walking in an alley Aug. 2.

The incident occurred as the woman was walking in the Maryland/Lakepointe alley in the 1400 block at 5:30 p.m. A man on a bicycle rode up behind the woman, grabbed and fondled her and made remarks.

The victim walked away from the man and into a nearby back yard. The man followed her and then rode away eastbound on Charlevoix.

Media agree 1990 primary was nasty one

The ugly portents that we saw early this year for the 1990 political season seemed to have been borne out by the performance of the state's top political leaders in the primary campaign.

The question now is whether or not the results of the primary, which weren't known as these words were written, show any measureable reaction against the low standards pursued by candidates in the campaign.

In January, the Grosse Pointe News editorially complained that the "State of the State" exchanges "between the Democratic governor and his Republican challenger" at the opening of the year "brought the state's political dialogue to a new low."

We compared Gov. James Blanchard's exaggerated "rhetoric of boosterism" with Sen. John Engler's "gloomy view of Michigan" and found them both wanting in fairness and perspective. We also accused both candidates of avoiding the hard issues of policy, including the ways to pay for some worthy new programs they proposed.

In April, a News editorial said that Engler's "opening commercials and the quick rebuttals by Blanchard's committee offer new evidence that this year's campaign will be a nasty one." We added that "the TV commercials and the paper blizzard of charges and countercharges" do not bode well for the seven months left in the campaign year.

Even though in the primary Engler had only token opposition from Pointer John Lauve, and Blanchard had none at all, the first phase of the year-long campaign ended as it had begun with nasty attacks. That opinion by political columnists for both the Detroit Free Press and the News reflects our own judgment as well.

The headline on the column by Hugh McDiarmid of the Free Press said one Blanchard attack on Engler "stinks" and then the story added this explanation:

"The best that can be said of the Blanchard-for-governor campaign's snarling attack on John Engler on Tuesday—one that claimed Engler is 'weak' on crime and has a 'dangerous' record on law enforcement—is that it's flat-out garbage."

In the Detroit News, George Weeks' column was headlined: "Nasty streak detracts from Blanchard ads." The column went on to say that "the low road is a strange place to start a bid to retain high office" and added Blanchard's "wacky TV ad asserting that Engler has a 'dangerous record on crime' deserves the knocks it has been getting."

Neither columnist excused Engler from criticism, however. McDiarmid described as "garbage" Engler's charge that under Blanchard the state civil service is "a cynical system of spoils, patronage and questionable conduct." And Weeks said that Engler "has been at least as shrill" as the governor.

We agree it is unusual for an incumbent to take the low road with the kind of attacks Blanchard has launched against Engler. Perhaps there is more personal animosity between the two men that we had realized.

We suspect, however, that the governor's attitude stems from a conscious decision to avoid becoming another Michael Dukakis who declined to answer George Bush's 1988 presidential campaign charges until it was too late. But instead of merely answering Engler's charges, Blanchard has dipped into the tar barrel himself to use data of questionable accuracy.

As election returns were awaited early this week, among those on the anxious seat were the primary pollsters. The problem with polling in any primary is that the traditional light turnout tends to distort the polling process. When too few people among those polled actually vote, the results are usually badly skewed.

At any rate, as attention now shifts to the November general election, the dismal outlook is for more nasty campaigning, especially if it proved to be successful in winning votes in specific contests in the primary. That's not a happy augury for the next three months.

A View from the Sidelines

by Wilbur Elston

Does the homing instinct that supposedly guides pigeons, cats, dogs and other birds and animals to return to their distant homes also lure men back to their early family roots?

Personally, I doubt it but when I discover unexplained links between my life and my early ancestors, I sometimes wonder if something more than mere coincidence is involved.

Let me explain. Six or seven years ago we began making annual pilgrimages to Maine to spend several weeks of vacation in an area easily accessible to children and grandchildren living in nearby Massachusetts and New Hampshire.

At first we rented a cottage in Wells but after further exploration of the Maine coastline we came across the marvelous beach at Biddeford Pool, on the outskirts of the twin cities of Saco and Biddeford, located just north of President Bush's summer home at Kennebunkport.

And so for the last three years we have rented the same beach cottage at Biddeford Pool for a two weeks of family reunion and vacation enjoyment.

Just recently, however, in re-reading parts of a genealogical study of "The Elston Family in America," I discovered that the first Elston referred to in the public prints in this country, one John Elston of Salem, Mass., also had lived for a time in the vicinity of Saco, the very area where we've been vacationing.

What brought that first Elston to public attention was a mishap that occurred when he and two companions sailed into the Boston harbor on July 26, 1631, in a "small bark of about 12 tons" which was "overset in a gust." That recorded incident became the first reference to an Elston in America, at least to the satisfaction of genealogist James Strode Elston.

John Elston was a fisherman who worked for one Matthew Cradock who hired men in Salem as well as Saco, according to the Elston book. Cradock was the first governor of the Massachusetts Bay Company in London before it was transferred to New England but apparently never came to the colonies himself.

Among the few facts known about John Elston, also called Elson and Helson in the early records, was his purchase of 100 acres of land on the west side of the Saco River "upwards unto the fresh water," according to a deed of Jan. 24, 1672.

Elston, his wife and a son, also named John, apparently lived there about four years but the family was driven from Saco by Indian fighting in King Philip's War. John Elston was listed among the refugees admitted to Salem as an inhabitant on Sept. 1, 1676, and an Oct. 12, 1676, list of soldiers who fought in that war included the name of John Elston, either the senior or junior of that name.

One of the early Elstons moved on to Woodbridge, N.J., and later Elstons moved to Newark. My paternal grandfather, born on July 4, 1837, in Hilton, N.J., near Newark, came West in 1855, first to Illinois and thence to Minnesota in 1857 or 1858, to start the Minnesota branch of the family.

But did the homing instinct have anything to do with our family vacations in the Saco-Biddeford area in which that first known Elston lived more than 300 years ago?

Not really. For on second thought, I realize my son-in-law, James Dealing of Mount Pleasant, Mich., deserves most of the credit for locating Biddeford Pool as a vacation spot. His interest was aroused not only by the marvelous beach but the nearby bird sanctuary and other environmental attractions.

But he seems to remember reading that some of his early ancestors also came from Maine. So . . .

Abortion

To the Editor:

We see in the many nations that make up this planet south of ours forces, that while they seem to be good, though not all seem that way, are going to pull mankind into total darkness.

It seems some are comfortable with darkness. They don't know the light and don't care to know it. An example of this is on the issue of abortion.

When the West, the nations of the West, was known as Christendom, it was assumed that they (the West) would act as they believed in Jesus Christ and all that He taught.

Now we see that Christendom is no longer and furthermore, no nation in the West as a whole believes in God. One nation I know of says, "In God we trust" on its legal tender. I'm not sure what that means, if anything. Legalized abortion in America came out of a Supreme Court ruling that was mainly aimed at making abortion safe for the mother at least.

Abortion became popular because sex was so popular — casual sex, casual babies, casual abortions.

The way to stop abortions is to stop having sex. I think it would be a good idea to stop all sex until the year 2000.

We have enough babies to last for 10 years at least.

This has been an essay in futility. No matter what issue you speak of these days, there is no solution. We have lost our way.

I've been reading Pascal, Kierkegaard and Simone Weil. (Be careful of translations.) Those and others are lights in the darkness — what I try to be.

Accident

To the Editor:

On Monday, June 25, I was hit head on in a car accident on Vernier Road. I want to say thank you to all the people who helped me. The man in the white shirt, and yellow tie, to you, thanks for staying with me and reassuring me through my pain that help was on its way.

To Jeff and the Grosse Pointe Woods EMTs, thanks for the kindness. To the fantastic staff, nurses aides at Cottage Hospital, especially Cheryl, who spent hours combing out my taped and matted hair, thanks for treating me like a beloved sister. (Give them a raise.)

More letters on page 7A

To Ted Atkins and Bill for explaining broken bones to me. To my co-workers, family and friends, thanks for the flowers and balloons.

This has been a rough year, losing all but the cat, car and my health. Now my car is totaled and I broke enough bones to be a living commerial for air bags (wish I had one). But thanks to everyone. I still have a sense of humor.

Tyrant imperils peace hopes

Iraq's greedy conquest of Kuwait threatens the free world's supply of oil, causes a big jump in gasoline prices and raises the possibility of a Mideast war.

In the United States, it also imperils the prospects for the success of the economic summit in Washington, endangers the hopes for a U.S. peace dividend from scheduled cuts in defense spending and prompts fears of a recession.

In short, the tyrannical Iraqi president, Saddam Hussein, has put a severe damper on the political and economic optimism raised in the Western world over the recent collapse of communism in Eastern Europe.

The prospects for agreement on federal debt reduction at the economic summit already had been dimmed by the politicking by both sides, by reaction against state tax increases in New Jersey and Massachusetts and by local and state government criticism of a GOP plan to boost federal revenues by cutting deductions for state income taxes.

Republicans, especially those running for office this year, have sharply protested the loss of their favorite campaign issue. Reactions against state tax hikes recommended by Democratic governors have tended to support GOP complaints over Bush's reversal of his pledge, "Read my lips — no new taxes."

However, unless war and new aggression are averted in the Middle East, any U.S. peace dividend from defense cuts is likely to be postponed and even the aim of the economic summit — to reduce the massive federal debt — may be put on hold.

In fact, there's even the prospect of increased tax revenues to help pay for the cost of preparations to defend Saudi Arabia or wage war against Iraq's President Hussein.

Those are just some of the possibilities raised by the Iraqi dictator's naked aggression against neighboring Kuwait and the additional threats he now poses to Saudi Arabia's contribution to the world's oil supply.

The perils of home repair

Since my wife and I recently purchased a home in the area, I couldn't wait to get to work on a long list of those "needed" home repairs. You know, the repairs that are optional, but the ones you feel will complete the house.

I began during the period while we were in a holding pattern, waiting to take possession of our new nest. I drew up a long list of tasks I wanted to complete and even devised a certain order, according to priority.

At the top of the list was a complete renovation of the second floor. 1) Tear out walls to increase room size. 2) Order a large scale skylight window. 3) Hire a plumber to install plumbing to the upstairs for a small bathroom...

Our second priority was to completely repaint the first floor in our favorite colors since the house came with several coats of dentist office glossy white, even on the ceilings.

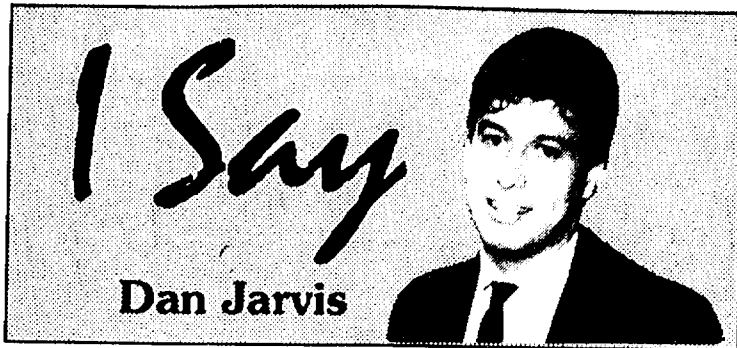

And the list went on, and on, and on.

Well, we've been in the house a few months now and guess what? Neither job has received the least bit of attention.

Instead, I've built a basement full of shelving to store truckloads of stuff that just seemed to appear when it came time to move. Where it came, from I don't know. We didn't have it the last time we moved.

Anyway, the shelves were quickly packed to capacity with half the pile still sitting on the floor. It makes for interesting navigation while reaching for the light switch in the dark. Plenty of stubbed toes, ouches and X's%&*s!

Things really became interesting when I decided to install and wire lights into the basement, which resembled a cave when we moved in.

More than once, the question became: "Is the injury serious enough to warrant emergency care?" Thank goodness for Band-aids — a great investment.

Stripping wires with a sharp utility blade is not something that should be done at home unless performed by a professional.

My hands, those delicate instruments, have been sliced, diced, rubbed, scraped and generally mangled. A couple of times, I worried whether I'd be able to type in those Monday morning stories with my hands bound in cloth and bandages.

Well, that job behind me, I decidated to tackle the really big job, removing the rotting deck that someone left in our back yard before we moved in.

I gathered a crow bar, a heavy hammer and some various other tools best left to a professional.

After a couple weekends of this self-inflicted punishment, I was nearly doubled over with severe back pain. Ah, the joys of home ownership.

Having never owned a home before this one, I was struck with the pride of ownership in a big way. As I looked around, I noticed several other jobs that I wanted to do.

Looking back a few months, I shouldn't have bothered with a to-do list before we moved in. Houses have a way of presenting one job after another, which I guarantee will take priority over any fix-up job one can imagine before moving in.

For you folks who already own your own home, you can stop reading this and move on to something else. But for those who have yet to jump headlong in the depths of the American dream through home ownership, I've put together a list of recommendations which may save some time, headaches and even fingers.

Before you start any home repairs, buy a full-length armor protective suit. You know, the kind with metal boots and a helmet.

Then make a beeline to the goggle and glove department. Don't buy the cheap ones. After all, you want to protect yourself for the decades of happy home repairs.

Next, unplug your telephone.

It never fails. You're perched atop a doorway, balancing a hammer, electric drill and a saw. You're homing in on the problem, balancing now on just one foot when, you guessed it: RRRRIIIINNNGGGGGG!!!!

You begin to reason: "If it's something important, they'll call back." But the ringing continues and you drop your tools, remove your goggles and make a mad dash for the phone when, you guessed it again: dead silence.

Next, rip out your entire lawn, install cement and paint it green, like at the auto dealerships.

Then, remove your garage. After all, it's just another room to get dirty.

When your roof leaks, remove that too. Simply wrap the entire house with a blue tarp and cut holes so you can see through the windows.

Then again, never mind. Better to be conservative. After all, you want to make a good impression on your new neighbors. Better to play it straight and use an earth-tone tarp instead.

Correction

To the Editor:

We are writing in regard to the article of July 26, by John Minnis about the juvenile disposition hearing relating to a 15-year-old who is apparently involved in some manner with the killing of Benjamin K. Gravel. This hearing is being conducted before Chief Judge Dalton A. Roberson of the Recorder's Court for the City of Detroit.

As attorneys who regularly practice in that court and as Grosse Pointe residents, we are very concerned because the article contains several inaccuracies or distortions regarding the nature of this type of hearing, the law governing these matters, and how this particular hearing is being conducted.

Although this case involves a horrible and senseless killing, and emotions are understandably running high, we feel that it is important for us to respond because we do not want the community to be left with the wrong impression regarding these proceedings.

Whenever a youngster commits specific enumerated capital offenses, such as murder, and he or she is 15 or 16 years old at the time of the offense, the prosecutor's office may elect to automatically waive him or her over for further proceedings within the adult system. The matter then proceeds essentially as a normal criminal case within the adult system. However, if there is a conviction, either by trial or by plea of guilty, the judge is then required by law to conduct a disposition hearing to determine whether the youngster should be sentenced as a juvenile or as an adult.

Mr. Minnis in his article states, "The judge bases his decisions on internal social worker's reports, arguments presented by the prosecution and defense during pre-sentencing hearings, and the youth's criminal records, if they have them." This is an incomplete short summary of what normally takes place.

At the time the conviction is entered, and prior to the actual hearing, the judge refers the juvenile to various specialists to obtain detailed background information regarding him or her. Referrals are normally made to the Recorder's Court Probation Department, the Recorder's Court Psychiatric Clinic, the Department of Social Services, and to an independent psychologist or psychiatrist.

Reports are prepared by each of these specialists and submitted to the judge, the prosecutor and the defense attorney with their recommendation of whether the youngster should be sentenced within the juvenile system or the adult system. Furthermore, these reports also contain detailed information regarding the police version of the alleged involvement of the juvenile in the criminal offense, the juvenile's version of what happened, the family background, educational background, employment background, and whether there is any prior juvenile record.

The reports also normally contain the results of the psychological clinical interviews, as well as the results from the various psychological and educational tests administered. Unless the prosecutor and the defense attorney agree to submit the matter on the basis of the reports, a disposition hearing must be conducted.

At this hearing the legal burden rests on the prosecutor to prove by a preponderance of the evidence that the juvenile should be treated as an adult. Mr. Minnis in his article states "Before the sentencing hearing began, Roberson said it is the prosecution's job to convince him that the juvenile should be sentenced as an adult — even though they were charged as adults and pleaded guilty to the charges." We think this is an unfair distortion of the requirements of the law and we feel that your readers might be left with the implication that Judge Roberson was applying an unreasona-

Grosse Pointe Park Public Safety Officer Ann Hoffman went for the gold. She got five golds — and the bronze.

Hoffman competed in the International Law Enforcement Olympics in Edmonton, Alberta, July 29 through Aug. 4.

The five gold medals were awarded for first place finishes swimming events and the bronze was awarded for a third place finish with Team USA, a team made up of law enforcement officers from all over the nation.

Hoffman is a 1977 graduate of Grosse Pointe North High School, where she was a member of the school's swimming team.

Golden anniversary

They were married the same year the Grosse Pointe News was founded.

Grosse Pointers Rose Marie and Robert C. Spies celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary recently with their daughters and two grandsons.

Both Spies are lifelong Grosse Pointers. Rose Marie Spies' father was Jack Semon, former

Best and worst

Some Grosse Pointe biznizez and some Grosse Pointers were honored and dishonored in the August issue of Detroit Monthly.

The magazine's annual Best & Worst picks included Tom's Oyster Bar in Grosse Pointe Park for Best Raw Bar; Rustic Cabins in Grosse Pointe Park for Best Bar to Pretend You're Not High Class When You Are; and Chuck Gaidica, WDIV-TV weatherman for Best Ad for Armor-All, for his lacquered noggin.

DM also allowed its poetic license to expire by awarding Worst Movie Set in Detroit to the Goldie Hawn/Mel Gibson action-packed thriller-diller-chiller, "Bird on a Wire."

Noted especially by DM were the movie's long shots of the city of Detroit with mountains in the background; a tour through Chinatown; and that miraculous ferry ride from Detroit to Racine, Wis.

ULS celebrities

Detroit Monthly also did a piece in the August issue comparing University Liggett School with Birmingham's Detroit Country Day School.

In a sidebar noting ULS' high-profile graduates there were eight notable Grosse Pointe personalities — five of 'em Fords: Eleanor Clay, Henry II, William Clay, Edsel B. II and William Clay Jr.

The others: Gilda Radner, actress, comedian, a 1964 graduate; Steven Ballmer, senior vice president of Microsoft Corp., a 1973 graduate; and Semon E. "Bunky" Knudsen, auto executive, a 1931 graduate.

Have a heart

Hey, Donna. Dave is sorry. Really, big-time-sorry.

Seen while driving east on I-94 late Friday afternoon, on the overpass: a huge banner being unfurled by (presumably) Dave.

The banner said: "Donna — I'm sorry. I love you, Dave."

Is there a story behind this? Did Donna forgive Dave?

For Pete's sake, Dave, what did you do?

Exit, laughing

Q: Why don't cannibals eat clowns?

A: They taste funny.

Dino-mites

What do you get when you take some scrap wood, some chicken wire, old newspapers and a classroom full of eager children? A Tyrannosaurus Rex, what else?

Dinosaur building is an annual project for students in Pat Moore's class at the Giving Tree Montessori School. Standing almost six feet tall, the dinosaur took a little more than a week to complete, from a basic frame of wood and chicken wire, through the papier mache process to a painted creature complete with teeth and claws.

Grosse Pointe Park's Sarah Gunther paints the claws.

A little paper, some starch and more paint turned this pile of chicken wire and wood into a dinosaur.

Painting T-Rex a brilliant shade of green are Caitlin Robson of the Farms and Molly Getz of the City.

Learning from the pros

Five years ago, a tradition was born at Defer Elementary School when art teacher Augie Tedesco invited a group of local artists to show their work to students.

Not only did these talented artists demonstrate how they created their works of art, but they allowed the students the opportunity for some hands-on experience as well. In addition, parents and students were permitted to buy some of the work, at prices starting as low as 25 cents.

Hertel to fight gas price increases

Congressman Dennis M. Hertel (D-Michigan) said he will introduce legislation to make it a federal felony for any oil company, its executives and board of directors to knowingly participate in price-gouging.

The measure would include a year imprisonment for those found guilty of such practices as well as seizure of all profits gained from the price increases.

panies with irresponsibly fueling inflation and causing panic-buying.

"Within one day of the invasion, we have seen gasoline prices increase between five and 15 cents a gallon even though the gasoline being sold was purchased and delivered several weeks before the invasion of Kuwait," Hertel said. "The public is outraged and so is the Congress."

Stolen, stripped Corvette found

An investigation by Park detectives led to the recovery of a Corvette that was stolen last year in Troy.

Park police and detectives obtained a search warrant for a garage in the 1200 block of Whittier July 27. The warrant authorized the search for stolen vehicles and parts.

When the officers searched the garage, they found the Corvette completely stripped with the engine, transmission and doors missing, among other parts.

While no arrests were made, the investigation is continuing and a Park resident may be charged.

Police believe the activity at the Park address is not part of a major auto theft and stripping operation.

ble standard when in fact he was merely stating what the law required the prosecutor to prove.

After all the evidence is presented at the disposition hearing, the law requires the judge to apply certain criteria and determine whether the juvenile is amenable to treatment within the juvenile system, whether he or she will be a disruptive influence in that system, and whether he or she is likely to be dangerous to the public if released by age 21.

The following criteria must be considered by the judge. The juvenile's past record and character, his or her physical and mental maturity, the juvenile's pattern of living, the seriousness and circumstances of the offense, and whether the offense is part of a repetitive pattern.

If sentenced within the juvenile system on this offense, this young man will be sent to a maximum security facility where he will receive therapy, both individual and group, receive an education, but still be removed from society until he is 21 years old. He will not be released for any purpose without first obtaining permission from Judge Roberson after another hearing is conducted regarding his release. Again, Mr. Minnis in his article states that "As wards of DSS, the youths can be let free any time from the date of their sentencing to their 21st birthday, when they must be let go." This is simply not true and leaves the public with the impression that youngsters sentenced on serious offenses within the juvenile system are simply going to be released back into the community before a meaningful determination has been made that that is appropriate.

Furthermore, the general tenor of Mr. Minnis' article seems to suggest that Judge Roberson unreasonably restricted the prosecutor's presentation of this case. In fact it appears that the judge was merely making appropriate rulings to prevent delay of the proceedings and not in any way interfere with the prosecution's proper presentation of evidence. Also, Mr. Minnis stated in his article that the disposition hearing had to be adjourned after only two hours, again seeming to imply that not enough time was being devoted to this matter or the judge wasn't working hard enough. This is terribly unfair and totally contrary to what we know is in fact reality.

Judge Roberson is the chief judge of Recorder's Court. He has a very extensive individual docket as well as having the responsibilities and duties of chief judge and administrator in the Recorder's Court. He is a very capable and hard-working judge. He always keeps in mind his responsibilities to the community, as well as the rights of the accused. He is committed to being fair and just. Everyone may not agree with his ultimate decision in this matter, but you can rest assured that it will be based on the evidence that is presented and the criteria that the law requires him to apply in these matters.

Crime

the newer population figures, the Woods had 213.20 crimes per 10,000, which are still the fewest reported among the tri-county communities.

The rankings are based on the number of reported major crimes: murder or non-negligent homicide, rape (criminal sexual conduct), robbery, aggravated assault, burglary, larceny, auto theft and arson.

The top 10 cities with the fewest number of major crimes per 10,000 in increasing order — following Grosse Pointe Woods — were Trenton, 235.86; West Bloomfield Township, 240.83; Riverview, 245.87; Beverly Hills, 263.55; Plymouth Township, 266.28; Sumpter Township, 284.81; Berkeley, 290.27; Clawson, 321.50; and Plymouth, 321.66.

The Park's reported major crimes were fewer than Farmington Hills and St. Clair Shores, which ranked 22nd and 23rd, respectively.

Among the five Grosse Pointes, as reported by the state police Uniform Crime Report, which lists all cities regardless of population, Grosse Pointe Shores had the fewest crimes per 10,000 residents at 128.00. The Shores also has the fewest residents of the Pointes and no commercial district.

With the Shores and Woods first and second in the Pointes, the Park came third. Grosse Pointe City was fourth with 385.71, followed by the Farms with 459.09.

The crimes per 10,000 population are not the actual number of major crimes reported. In 1989, the Shores had 32 major crimes; the City, 216; the Woods, 339; the Farms, 404; and the Park, 564.

Taken as a whole, the five Pointes had 1,555 major crimes reported in 1989, which equates to 327.37 major crimes per 10,000 population. If the Pointes were one city, they would have ranked 10th among the communities of 10,000 or more in the tri-county area.

While Grosse Pointe Woods had the least crime per capita, its neighbor, Harper Woods — which has Eastland Mall in its jurisdiction — had the highest crime rate out of the 59 tri-county communities. Harper Woods reported 1,477.30 major crimes per 10,000 residents. At the 58 spot was Hamtramck with 1,451.37, and 57th was Detroit with 1,227.00.

from 1650 up to the classical period.

"I had a great time doing that," he said. "It was like belonging to an expensive club, because I didn't make much money — in fact, I went into the hole."

He recently moved to a new office on the second floor of the Punch and Judy building. The books lining the shelves in his office are not all related to psychiatry and there are a number in different languages, another one of Graves' interests.

He said he has studied up to 40 languages on his own and he reads fiction and non-fiction in about a dozen languages.

He attributes his achievements and wide range of interests to his four older brothers and sisters. "They were an unusually bright lot and I benefited from that exposure," he said.

One sister earned a bachelor's degree when she was 17 and his brothers, who both started out to be psychiatrists, became theologians.

While they were in medical school, however, they exerted enormous influence on their younger brother and would bring home lab equipment. Graves said he worked through the first year of college chemistry when he was in the fourth grade.

"I owe much to my brothers and sisters," he said.

Graves was valedictorian of his class in his hometown of Herrin, Ill., and after graduation, he joined the U.S. Naval Reserve.

The Navy sent him to Indiana State Teachers College in Terre Haute. He completed two years of science in one year, which enabled him to apply for medical school. He was accepted at Northwestern University where he earned four degrees beginning with a bachelor of science in 1946 and ending with a medical degree in 1950.

Graves interned at the Charity Hospital of Louisiana in New Orleans and then transferred to the Air Force Reserve. He served as a captain from 1950 to 1953 in rural England "in a little village of thatched roof cottages" where he said he had some of his best times.

With his service obligation completed, Graves accepted a position as chief of women's services at Ypsilanti State Hospital, where he stayed until 1955.

From there he went to Detroit Receiving Hospital and after about a year, he was named chief of psychiatry. During this period, Graves served as mental health commissioner for the state of Michigan.

He was also chief psychiatric consultant to the regional Veterans Administration and served on a number of committees.

Graves served on a task force appointed by President John F. Kennedy to create Medicare. When it became law, Lyndon Johnson was president and Graves was invited to the signing of the bill.

"Most physicians were opposed at that time to Medicare," he said. "They saw it as a start of socialized medicine."

The concept of community mental health was forming about this time and Graves became the first director of the Detroit-Wayne Community Mental Health Services Board in 1965. After a year, Graves said he became disillusioned and left.

He continued with his private practice and taught. Since 1961, Graves has been clinical associate professor of psychiatry at Wayne State University College of Human Medicine. He is an adjunct associate professor of psychology at WSU College of Liberal Arts, adjunct professor of psychology at the University of Detroit and clinical associate professor of psychiatry at Michigan State University. He helped set up a master's program in pastoral counseling at U of D.

Graves, who has been a part of the national mental health program since the concept of getting patients out of the hospitals and into the community began, said, "Over the last 25 years, community mental health has developed very badly. It's been a disaster in terms of meeting the needs of the people."

Graves, who said he is basically an optimistic person, said, "I don't see the light at the end of the tunnel at this point."

As recent past-president of the Michigan Psychiatric Society, Graves said he will continue to pressure the governor and state Legislature to help those who depend on public sources. Graves believes that the chronically mentally ill will not be adequately served unless there is federal support.

"The pendulum will swing, but right now the needs are growing by the day and the resources are drying up," he said.

Graves most recently served as executive director of the Oakland County Community Mental Health Services Board.

Graves is proud of his three children, who attended Grosse Pointe schools. Adrienne is chief counsel to the utilities commission in Rhode Island. She and her husband, a heart surgeon, have two sons.

James is a musicologist working on his doctorate in ethnic music in Portland, Maine. He and his wife have two children.

His youngest son, John David Nicholas, is in graduate school in business administration at the University of California in San Diego. He and his wife have a daughter.

Dr. James Graves' new office on the Hill holds some of his book collection — and his guitar, which he picks up when it's "quiet time."

And Graves is proud of his wife, Sue Frederick. They met in Madrid when she was with a group of students from Grosse Pointe. They were married three years ago.

A 20-year Spanish teacher, she has started a new job as placement counselor at University Liggett School.

Graves, who describes himself as a fallen-away member of the Grosse Pointe Unitarian Church, plays tennis twice a week and sails. "I finally gave up boat ownership," he said. "I've gotten older and wiser — other people's boats are better."

Graves was in China last year a week before the crackdown at Tiananmen Square. He said he may go back to teach.

He added that he and his wife have talked about going to a Latin country to volunteer some time as teachers.

"I certainly want to continue practicing," he said. "I've no desire to leave it behind. I've always enjoyed it and I enjoy teaching. I'll probably have some connection with institutions of higher learning for the rest of my life."

Cat burglar bound over

The cat burglar caught and charged by Park police July 26 has been bound over to Wayne County Circuit Court and another charge has been added.

At a preliminary exam Aug. 2 before Park Municipal Judge Kirsten Frank, a new charge of attempted auto theft was added to the charges facing Floyd Harris Jr., 39, of Highland Park.

Harris is also charged with two counts of breaking and entering, two counts of receiving and concealing stolen goods valued at more than $100 and one count of auto theft.

Frank had set bond at $100,000 cash or surety, which was continued. Unable to pay the bond, Harris is sitting in Wayne County Jail awaiting arraignment in Circuit Court.

At the time of his arrest July 26, Harris had been on parole for less than six months for previous theft-related convictions. He is suspected of some 35 burglaries in the Pointes since April, although he is charged only with the two on July 26.

Sunday in the park

Hundreds of residents attended the concert July 22 at Farms Pier Park to hear the Renaissance Brass, above, and Night Society. The free Sunday in the Park Cottage Concert series is sponsored by Cottage Hospital as a public service to the community and in celebration of Henry Ford Health System's 75th anniversary.

On Sunday, Aug. 12, residents of Grosse Pointe City will be entertained with music ranging from baroque to jazz, offered by Renaissance Brass at Neff Memorial Park. The concert is from 6 to 8 p.m. Seating is on the lawn, so concert-goers are reminded to bring lawn chairs or blankets. Admission is limited to those with valid passes for the park.

For more information, call 884-1177.

Videos to be aired

The television production department at Grosse Pointe South High School has scheduled three student-produced videos to air on Grosse Pointe Cable during August and September.

"Art Talk," which shows fourth- and fifth-grade art students at Poupard Elementary School discussing the different styles of their favorite artists, will air Aug. 13, 15, 20, 22, 27 and 29 at 7 p.m. on Channel 19.

Following "Art Talk" at 7:30 p.m., "Local Student Video Winners" will air. The program features segments produced by students at Grosse Pointe North and South which have won both local and international awards.

Finally, on Aug. 21, 23, 28, 30 and Sept. 4, 6, 11, 13, 18 and 20, Dr. Gerald Mullan's program on various eye disorders and their treatments will air at 7 p.m.

Classic rock

The classic rock group Steve King & the Dittilies will take you on a trip down memory lane as they bring back the sounds of the '60s Thursday, Aug. 16, at 8 p.m. on the lakeside lawn of the War Memorial.

Grounds open at 6:30 p.m. Bring a lawn chair, blanket and a picnic. Tickets are $6.50 per person; $15 for a package of three tickets. Concert held indoors in the event of inclement weather. Call 881-7511.

Frank Lloyd Wright tour in Detroit area

The Detroit area designs of architectural legend Frank Lloyd Wright will be the subject of a tour and lecture series sponsored by the Detroit Historical Department Saturday, Aug. 11 and 18, at 10 a.m.

University of Windsor Professor Michael Farrell, a local architectural expert, will lead the tour. Local Wright designs, such as the Afleck House, will be featured during the tour and lecture.

Cost is $27 for Detroit Historical Society members and $30 for non-members. Tour participants will meet at the Detroit Historical Museum, 5401 Woodward at Kirby. For reservations and further information, call Lori Naples at 833-1419.

Pops concert to end summer music festival

The 33rd Grosse Pointe Summer Music Festival will end the season with the traditional pops concert by the Grosse Pointe Symphony Monday, Aug. 13 (rain date Aug. 14), at 8 p.m. on the lakeside grounds of the Grosse Pointe War Memorial.

The symphony's annual appearance has become a favorite of the community, especially the spectacular fireworks finale. Conductor Felix Resnick will lead the symphony through a program that includes selections from "Snow White," "A Chorus Line" and Sousa's "Semper Fidelis March."

Grounds open at 6:30 p.m. Tickets are $12, reserved; $7.50, lawn admission (children under 12, half price). Picnic suppers may be purchased from the War Memorial at $7.25 per person or bring your own. War Memorial picnics must be reserved by Friday, Aug. 10, at 5 p.m.

Monday's menu is a Western buffet featuring barbecued beef on a bun, German potato salad, baked beans, rotini pasta salad, fresh vegetables, apple pie and beverages.

Lawn ticket holders, bring lawn chair or blanket. Tables and chairs are provided for reserved ticket holders who have also purchased picnics from the War Memorial. Tickets are on sale at the War Memorial front desk from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. daily except Sundays. Visa/MC accepted on phone orders, Monday-Friday, 9 a.m.-5 p.m. A minimum order of $20 plus 50 cents handling required. For more information, call 881-7511.

Alcoholics Anonymous in Grosse Pointe observes 50 years

By Ronald J. Bernas
Staff Writer

Fifty years ago three men met in a room above a Mack Avenue bar to discuss their problems with alcohol. It was part of a new program called Alcoholics Anonymous.

From that ironic location and those three members came what is now one of the oldest AA groups in continuous operation, observing 50 years of meeting in Grosse Pointe Memorial Church.

One of the members, who will be referred to here as John Doe in keeping with the group's tradition of anonymity, said that AA hasn't changed much in the last 50 years, but the way society has reacted to alcoholics has.

A member for more than 30 years, Doe said the organization, which was started by alcoholics, works only because of the way the founders took their insight of alcoholic behavior to build a program around.

"There are no dogmas, you have to believe in a higher power, but you don't have to believe in any certain one," he said.

There is even a group for athiest and agnostic alcoholics.

One of the strengths which has made the group grow is the 12 traditions of AA. Different from the 12 steps of recovery, the 12 traditions relate to AA as a whole, rather than each individual member.

Among those traditions are that an AA group may never endorse, finance or lend the group's name to any related facility or enterprise that might divert the members from their primary purpose — helping each other get and stay sober.

"The beauty of AA is that they ask you to do it one day at a time," Doe said. "And if you can't do it a day at a time, you can do it an hour at a time, or five minutes at a time, whatever works for you."

The group is also to have no opinion on outside issues, assuring that the group is never drawn into public controversy.

"Anonymity is part of those 12 traditions," Doe said. "The members shouldn't get medals for getting sober and staying sober, or for helping someone else stay sober, and also, if a member falls flat, which we all do on the way to getting sober, people will point and say 'See, AA didn't help.'"

The public attitude about alcoholics has changed significantly, he said. Alcoholism is no longer commonly thought of as a moral deficiency or a weakness. It is a disease recognized by the American Medical Association.

Judges now order alcohol-abusers to go to AA meetings, but when they come, Doe said, many of them are hostile and don't get much out of the group.

A new issue facing AA is whether to allow non-alcoholics to attend. The issue is cross addiction — being hooked on more than one drug. Members are divided on it, but Doe believes they should be allowed — an addiction is an addiction.

Today there are 610 groups in southeastern Michigan and another 32 just over the border. They meet in the morning, in the afternoon, in the evening and at midnight, seven days a week. Most groups meet in hospitals or churches and exist on the donations of members.

The Rev. Frank Fitt, minister of Grosse Pointe Memorial Church during the '40s, wrote his observations about the group in a booklet titled "I Felt My Heart Strangely Warmed." Published in 1942, he praised the group and its relationship with the church.

"One of the very obvious deductions of an invited guest at the gatherings of the AAs, as they call themselves, is that their movement represents no special economic or cultural layer. It is not for the rich or the poor, the learned or the unlearned. It is for the men and women of every condition who acknowledge themselves to be the victims of alcohol and seek the Divine Strength to overcome it."

For information about times and dates of AA meetings in the area, call 541-7490.

Firefighters crash party

Boy robbed of bicycle

A bicycle was stolen from a 10-year-old Park boy July 27.

The thief approached the boy at 2 p.m. at Charlevoix and Audubon and threatened to harm the boy if he didn't turn over the bike. The boy complied.

Three garages burglarized

Three garages in Grosse Pointe Farms were broken into last weekend.

The first burglary occurred sometime between 2:30 and 4:30 p.m. Aug. 3 in the 200 block of Touraine. The thief took two bicycles from the attached garage. The resident reported the garage door was locked and that the only other way in to the garage was through a door leading from the house. There was no sign of forced entry.

Another burglary occurred at an unlocked garage in the 300 block of Hillcrest sometime between 11 p.m. Aug. 4 and 7 a.m. the following day. Taken was a Toro lawnmower.

The third burglary had two things in common with the previous one: The garage door was unlocked and a Toro was taken. In this case, the Toro was a 10- to 15-year-old snowblower.

Video yearbooks available at South

Grosse Pointe South High school's video yearbooks are available for pick up in the main office.

It isn't necessary to have a receipt, since the school has a list of students who are to receive one.

North '71 plans reunion

Grosse Pointe North High School Class of 1971 will hold its 20th reunion in 1991. The class reunion committee, chaired by Debra Wegner Ihrie, has employed Reunions to organize the event. Reunions arranges and administers high school and other reunions.

For more information, call 1-800-397-0010 or write Reunions, A Class Organization, Inc., 2155 Stonington Ave., Suite 108, Hoffman Estates, Ill. 60195.

House burglarized

A home in the 1000 block of Maryland was broken into sometime between noon and 8 p.m. July 20.

The burglar was able to crawl through a window after standing on a car parked in the driveway. Stolen were a stereo, compact disk player and 24 CDs.

Stuart Itzkowitz, right, of Grosse Pointe, is congratulated by Wayne State University President David Adamany.

Grosse Pointe resident honored for professional achievement at WSU

Stuart Itzkowitz of Grosse Pointe recently received the first professional achievement award given by Wayne State University's Academic Staff Professional Development Committee.

Counselor for the Wayne State College of Education, Itzkowitz received the award based on his outstanding record of professional accomplishments and performance.

Coordinator for the campus liaison program of the Michigan College Personnel Association, he is also an editorial board member of the Michigan Journal of Counseling and Development.

In addition, Itzkowitz is researching the psychosocial aspects of the AIDS crisis as well as adult children of dysfunctional families.

An active member of many professional organizations and university committees, Itzkowitz is past president of the Michigan Association for Specialists in Group Work and past chair of the AIDS Task Force for the Michigan Association for Counseling and Development.

He has received many honors and awards, most recently the 1990 Michigan Association for Specialists in Group Social Award.

The author of many articles and book reviews in the fields of counseling and student personnel work, Itzkowitz has also presented papers at professional conferences both locally and nationally.

Itzkowitz obtained his baccalaureate degree from Harper College, and his master's and doctorate degrees from Wayne State. He also earned a master of science degree from the University of Michigan.

35th anniversary Thunderbird is fast, luxurious, has style

A special model of the 1990 Ford Thunderbird SC carries a medallion on the front fender which proclaims this the 35th anniversary Thunderbird. And like the first '55 model, the latest T-bird is more than the sum of its parts.

The Thunderbird had gone through many quite different forms and shapes through its 35 years, sometimes enduring classic, sometimes undistinguished from lesser Fords. Of all the American models now on the market, the Thunderbird SC seems most likely to be a classic 35 years from now. Because it is more than it seems.

Its parts are impressive. The supercharged and intercooled 231-cubic-inch V-6 can put out 210 horsepower. This translates to near-muscle-car performance from a standstill despite the car's heavy luxury feel (achieved by being heavy). Zero-to 60 with automatic transmission is in the 7 to 8 second range. And because the T-bird SC is definitely a luxury car, most have automatic transmissions.

The shape of the 1990 Thunderbird is clearly derived from its predecessor, the "jellybean" Bird introduced in 1983 to a mixed reception. It was certainly different and attractive in an odd mixed way, but there was plenty of apprehension at Ford that maybe it was too different, a modern day Chrysler Airflow. The gamble paid off and Ford became a style-setter, finally shedding the reputation it had earned of building the most boring cars on the market.

The 1990 shape is sleeker, more aerodynamic-looking and more in the mainstream of the latest luxury designs out of Europe and Japan. While the T-Bird shares its body with the Mercury Cougar and the Lincoln Continental Mark VII, it is clearly distinguished by its sleeker, sportier, less formal shape.

In fact the 35th anniversary T-Bird looks positively ominous with its special black and titanium finish and bright blue accent stripe, its distinctive black road wheels and squinty-eyed no-grille front styling. This is a shape you will not tire of.

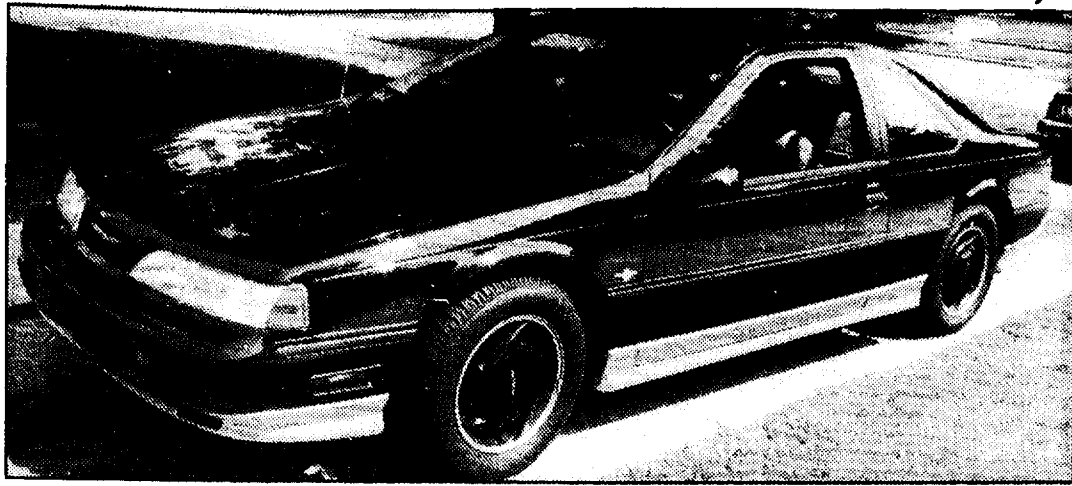

Inside, there is no doubt that while the car is fast, it is primarily a personal luxury car. Seats are suede with leather bolsters. Analog instruments are attractive and easy to read. Everything is power — windows, door locks, radio antenna, outside mirrors. Very American, very well done.

And some of the best parts can't be seen without popping the hood or crawling under the car. Standard are anti-lock braking, Traction-Loc rear axle, dual exhaust, electronically fuel-injected engine and, of course, intercooled supercharger.

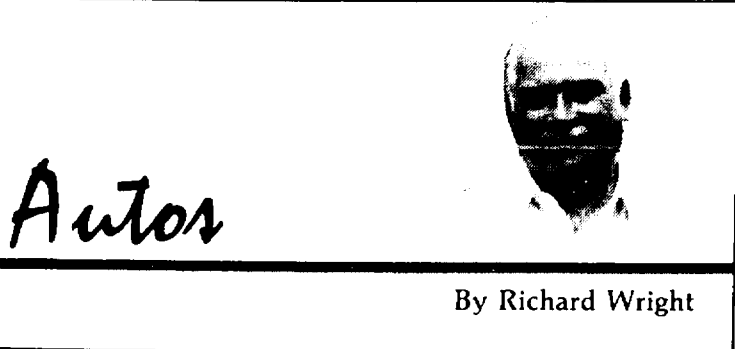

Ford decided to install a supercharger instead of the more widely used turbocharger to eliminate turbo lag. The supercharger is driven by the engine full-time and so is always immediately available. The turbocharger is driven by exhaust pressure and so there is a lag while increased exhaust flow builds up blower speed. But recent advances in turbo technology have greatly reduced the lag.

Ford's supercharger does not seem to have hurt fuel economy, which is pegged by EPA at 19 miles per gallon around the city and is just about what I experienced despite a rather leaden foot.

Independent front and rear suspension can be electronically stiffened by means of a switch on the console. With the variable power-assisted rack-and-pinion steering and the four-wheel anti-lock disk brakes, the Thunderbird will do a lot more than go — it will also stop when you need to and will go right where you aim it.

The T-bird SC goes head-to-head with such tough foreign competitors as the Saab 900 Turbo coupe, Acura Legend Coupe, the 3-series BMW and the Infiniti M30, to say nothing of domestic coupes like the Pontiac Grand Prix Turbo. It not only compares favorably, it is priced more competitively than most at $20,390 base to a shade under $25,000 for the 35th anniversary Coupe or other loaded SC.

When the first two-seater V-8 Thunderbird was introduced 35 years ago, it was — or seemed to be — a response to the Chevrolet Corvette which debuted in 1953. But in fact, the '55 T-bird created a new genre of so-called "personal" car or "specialty" cars. The '55 was an instant success and is a favorite of collectors now. (Ironically, those first Corvettes, which pleased no one with their weak-performing automatic sixes, are now the most valuable post-war collector cars. Of course, they are much rarer than the popular '55-'57 T-birds.)

In 1958, Ford brought out a four-seater Thunderbird, the so-called "Square-Bird," in hopes of snaring a larger slice of the market. Fans of the beautiful two-seater were outraged, but the T-bird market soared by 50 percent overnight.

Through the '60s, the Thunderbird got bigger and further away from the original concept. Thunderbirds got heftier and so did their prices until by the end of the decade it seemed to be going against the Lincoln with a four-door in the lineup from '67 through '70. Later in the '70s, the Thunderbird became little more than a fancy version of the intermediate LTD and Torino models.

In fact, in 1977, the T-bird carried a lower price than some LTD II models. It also achieved its highest production total of 318,140. It did not come close to that total in the '80s. Production of last year's Thunderbird SC was 137,395. And this year's production is running well behind last.

So how is this year's Thunderbird SC more than the sum of its parts? It is beautiful, it performs and handles extremely well, it is comfortable. And it has class, which has not always been standard on Thunderbirds.

Another view

The way you start the Thunderbird SC tells you something right away about this car. You have to depress the brake pedal as you turn the ignition key. It's like a kind of warning: This is a fast car.

But I'm rather proud to report that we drove this shiny black beauty for a week without a single citation, included umpteen trips back and forth across Charlevoix, a posted 25-MPH route which, many will confirm, seems to be a major source of revenue for the local constabulary. Put another way, it's Ticket City for those who dare drive over 25 MPH. Try not doing that with the Thunderbird SC. You must have your foot on or near the brake, because the SC wants to go.

So take it out on the freeway and go. The Thunderbird SC can run the 0-60 MPH test in about seven seconds.

A smart black interior may leave you breathless during the day. It will leave you helpless at night. Like many other makers, Ford has failed to provide any kind of beacon for the driver at night, short of leaving your door open while you search for controls by the dome light.

The heavy, wide doors won't stay partially open. And on an incline, they are fearsome if you are unloading items, and don't care to be separated from your lower legs and feet.

The back seats are surprisingly comfortable for a coupe that might be viewed as a large two-seater. Granted, this is not a family-style car, but once in the rear, most will find it pleasant and not claustrophobic. Automobile belts gently wrap themselves around front-seat occupants — but they are not enough. Don't forget to pull across the easy-to-use lap portion of the three-point belt system.

'Nuff said about one of the best-styled cars on the market today. Happy Anniversary, Thunderbird!

The five percent solution

Students honored by MACLD

At private ceremonies at Grosse Pointe North and South, the Grosse Pointe branch of the Michigan Association for Children and Adults with Learning Disabilities announced the winners of the 1990 MACLD Achievement Awards.

Receiving cash awards and certificates of outstanding achievement were Brian Love, Kevin Endres and Edward D'Herde. All were nominated by teachers or counselors for outstanding growth, achievement and personal qualities, in spite of being challenged by a learning disability.

Brian Love, nominated by South counselor Teresa Lloyd and teacher consultant Annette Zola, was employed by a Detroit law firm during his senior year as part of South's co-op program. His performance at that job and his high level of responsibility earned him the "Co-op Student of the Year" award.

His employer made the following statement about Love: "I have been impressed with his high levels of responsibility, diligence and curiosity. He gets along well with his co-workers and exceeds our expectations on virtually every task to which he is assigned."

Love will attend Central Michigan University in the fall.

Endres, nominated by North teacher consultant Mary Goodheart, credits his family, teachers and coaches with helping him to successfully overcome his learning disability.

Certified with a learning disability since first grade, Endres' independence and hard work resulted in him leaving special education in 1989. He has been a member of North's basketball and baseball teams for four years and is a member of the varsity club.

In addition, he has established a lawn care company which has grown to serve 70 customers in the Grosse Pointe area.

D'Herde, a junior at Grosse Pointe North, was nominated by teacher consultant Jackie Sage-Phillips. Cited for exceptional personal and academic growth, D'Herde has been actively involved both in and out of school.

He has been involved in cross country and track, was chairman of the junior class homecoming float and he started his own snow removal business last winter.

Tests scheduled

Achievement tests, required of all new students at Grosse Pointe South High School and students who have not taken the tests, are scheduled for Friday, Aug. 31.

New ninth-graders will take the tests at 8 a.m. in Room 164-166 which is air-conditioned. Following a lunch break from 11:30 until 1 p.m., they will conclude the final test at 2:30 p.m.

New 10th- and 11th-graders will begin testing at 8 a.m. in Room 184-186 which is also air conditioned. They will conclude their testing at 11:30 a.m.

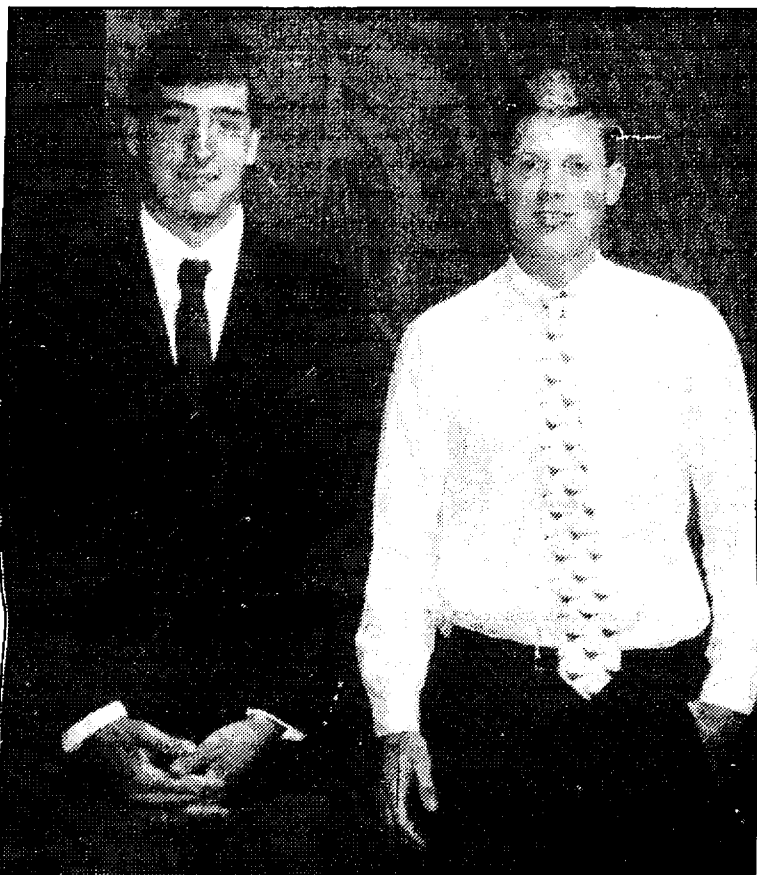

It is important that all new students and those who have missed earlier testing be on time and ready to take these required tests. The program is planned in advance of the regular school year so that no classes will be interrupted for testing.

COMPLIMENTS OF

North students urged to get class schedules

Students who will be attending Grosse Pointe North High School in September are urged to report to school prior to the official first day, which is Wednesday, Sept. 5, to obtain their new class schedule and have their school picture taken.

The schedule is as follows:
 • Tuesday, Aug. 28 — 12th grade: A-G 8:30 to 9:30 a.m., H-N 9:30 to 10:30 a.m., O-Z 10:30 to 11:30 a.m.
 11th grade: A-G 12:30 to 1:30 p.m., H-N 1:30 to 3:30 p.m., O-Z 3 to 4 p.m.
 • Wednesday, Aug. 29 — 10th grade: A-G 8:30 to 10 a.m., H-N 10 to 11:30 a.m., O-Z 11:30 to 1 p.m. Make-up and athletes practicing during their regular time from 1 to 1:30 p.m.

• Thursday, Aug. 30 — ninth grade: A-D 8:30 to 9:30 a.m., E-I 9:40 to 10:40 a.m., J-O 11 to noon, P-Z 12:15 to 1:15 p.m. All grades make up at 1:15 to 1:45 p.m.

Students should report directly to the library. Counselors will be on duty the three days to take care of any errors in scheduling that may have occurred.

New students who have not yet registered may still do so by calling Assistant Principal Tom Teetaert's office at 343-2205.

New to South?

A special three-day summer enrollment period has been established for students who are new to the Grosse Pointe South High School attendance area.

A counselor will be on duty at South from Wednesday, Aug. 15, through Friday, Aug. 17, for the purpose of assisting new students with the selection of their courses for the 1990-91 school year.

Enrollment hours will be from 8 a.m. to noon and from 1 to 4 p.m. on each day.

Students, who are new to the attendance area, should call Nancy Nordstrom at 343-2151 to schedule an enrollment conference.

Students and/or parents should bring a transcript of grades from the school attended previously, or the student's last report card if it is not possible to get a transcript in time. Health records are also needed at the time of enrollment.

Colaluca honored

Cara Colaluca, 11, of Harper Woods, a student at Parcels Middle School, received an honorable mention in the May 1990 Cricket League international writing competition.

For this contest, entrants were asked to write a story about a ladybug. Colaluca's name appears in the August 1990 issue of the award-winning children's magazine.

Student Spotlight

Brandon Schrader

Each week in this column, we will focus on the work of a student. It can be a poem, a drawing, a short story, a picture of a scientific experiment or a wood-working project, a book review.

The following poem was written by Brandon Schrader in preparation for a high school writing class. Brandon, who completed the eighth grade at Pierce Middle School, will enter Grosse Pointe South in the fall. He lives in Grosse Pointe Park with his mother, Melissa Frendo, and stepfather, Dennis Frendo.

Porch Hiking

I walk up a slope that is ever so verdant,
Staring at all the antique trees around me
Breaking through a cloud of fog that hovers above the ground like a ghost
Looking at millions of tiny things through a magnified eye

Brandon Schrader

Enjoying myself more than ever before.

Three state finalists

Three Grosse Pointe South students became state finalists by placing in the top eight at the Distributive Education Club of America (DECA) Leadership Conference held recently at the Hyatt Regency in Dearborn. Josh Henry, left, was a finalist in vehicle and petroleum marketing. Christina Zani qualified for DECA National Competition which was held April 24-29 in San Jose, Calif. She competed in advertising and display. Rob Luisell, right, placed first in all but one comprehensive event.

North enrollment scheduled

Students who expect to enroll at Grosse Pointe North High School for the first time may do so Monday, Aug. 13, or Monday, Aug. 20.

All new students, including those transferring from parochial or private schools or those who have recently moved into the Grosse Pointe School District must enroll.

Those enrolling are requested to bring a birth certificate and a copy of their previous school record, if one is available. If not, a copy of the latest report card would be helpful in making the appropriate course selections.

Call the office of Assistant Principal Tom Teetaert at 343-2205 to schedule an appointment.

Interlochen competition for young composers

Interlochen Center for the Arts will sponsor its third annual Competition for Young Composers.

The competition requires that all compositions be scored for a chamber ensemble comprised of any standard orchestral instruments, limited to eight players; the duration must be between five and 20 minutes; applicants must not have reached their 16th birthday at the time of submission; and only works that are unpublished and that have not won an award previously will be considered.

Entries must be accompanied by a biography of the composer which includes date of birth, address, title of composition, instrumentation, history of musical training, and a list of previous compositions.

A clear copy of the score, not the original, should be submitted. A cassette tape may accompany the score but is not required. Parts must be available upon request for performance of winning composition. Entrants must also send a separate, self-addressed, stamped return envelope.

All entries must be post-marked no later than Feb. 15, 1991 and sent to IAA Composition Competition, Department of Theory and Composition, Interlochen Arts Academy, P.O. Box 199, Interlochen, Mich. 49643.

One winner will be selected and a cash prize awarded March 1, 1991. The selected work will be performed by students at the Interlochen Arts Academy.

The academy, the nation's first private boarding fine arts high school, is a division of the world-renowned Interlochen Center for the Arts. The prestigious arts center is also home to the historic National Music Camp and WIAA-FM, a charter member of National Public Radio.

O'Neill's 'Ah Wilderness!': The sins of a simpler era

By Alex Suczek
Special Writer

In another late offering this season, the Stratford Festival opened "Ah, Wilderness!" last week, the only happy play of one of America's greatest dramatists, Eugene O'Neill. For a playgoing public conditioned to his complex dramas and experimental devices, "Ah, Wilderness!" was and is a big surprise.

This all-American family story set on the Fourth of July, 1906, in Connecticut, has a bittersweet flavor as it explores the foibles of a family with love and humor and leaves you with a sense of hope that all will work out in the end.

And while it appears to have its roots, as much of O'Neill's work, in his own life experience, it stands in stark contrast to the tragedy of his autobiographical last work, the monumental "Long Day's Journey Into Night."

Above all, O'Neill knew how to make good theater that could move an audience and he does it here, arousing sentiment and sadness as well as laughter and hope. The love interest is provided by Richard Miller, middle son of newspaper publisher Nat and his wife, Essie.

Richard's teenage sweetheart is Muriel McComber, the girl next door. And the way of their true love is made rough by the adults' impatience with Richard's teenage angst and his penchant for reading and quoting the "indecent" poetry of Swinburne, Oscar Wilde and Omar Khayyam, especially in letters to Muriel.

It is a touching view of another, simpler time as the performance recalls for us what it was in an earlier generation for a teenager to have his first encounter with a tart, for a father to struggle through a talk about sex with his son, and for a nice girl to grant a boy her first kiss.

There is a conflict that must have been based on an O'Neill family experience, as well, Uncle Sid, played here superbly by Douglas Rain, is a witty lovable wastrel, at his best when genially drunk.

He is loved by Aunt Lily who knows that marriage to him would be a disaster. The roundabout conventions for dealing with his drinking are a source of much of the play's humor and at the same time a sad reminder of the cost of alcoholism and people's inability to deal with it.

As Nat Miller, a role created in 1933 by Yankee Doodle Dandy George M. Cohan, Roland Hewgill is the mixture of fatherly discipline and tenderness every American teenager would have wanted and he plays the part with love. As his foil, Essie, Susan Wright is equally engaging, alternating between bossy and deferential, and when the chips are down, we see in them the same qualities we valued in our own parents, or, hopefully, in ourselves as parents.

The moon casts its spell over Vickie Papavs as Muriel and Andrew Dolha as Richard as they meet secretly at the beach in Eugene O'Neill's "Ah, Wilderness!" at the Stratford Festival.

Particularly poignant is Barbara Bryne as Lily Miller — old maid by choice but longing ever so wistfully for Sid to change his ways.

Surely older than the teenager he portrayed, Andrew Dolha as Richard was unnervingly awkward, moody and gangly and displayed all the same distressing malaise that characterizes teens of every generation. He also made Richard appear to grow up just a little as the play came to its not conclusive but hopeful ending and the youth became a little more sure of his own fate.

"Ah, Wilderness!" is a milestone of Americana and the American theater, lovingly restored to remind us of values that endure even though they may be obscure these days.

The set is also worth mentioning. It is a recreation of the gingerbread turn-of-the-century home that you can still find in unchanging areas like resorts and smaller towns. And the scene changes, from house to garden, to cocktail lounge to beach, fade in and out on the Avon's revolving stage as smoothly as if they were on film.

The production, which opened Aug. 3, will run through Nov. 10. Tickets and information are available in the Detroit area by calling 964-4668.

'Presumed Innocent': Outstanding drama

By Marian Trainor
Special Writer

Those who have read Scott Turow's galvanizing page-turner and best seller "Presumed Innocent" will be glad to hear that Director Alan Pakula has brought to the screen an intense, gripping adaptation of the novel.

Those who have not read the book won't be short-changed because they will be viewing a murder mystery of the highest caliber. It is intelligent. It conveys the story's suspense and underlying sobriety.

But "Presumed Innocent" is more than a spellbinding thriller. It delves into such weighty matters as the nature of guilt and innocence. It examines the intricate network of municipal corruption and it probes the intricacies of the legal system.

In the end it leaves the viewer with the questions that if the accused is not guilty, is he guilty of other malfeasance and if so, where is the justice if he is not punished?

In a tightly constructed plot that reaches out in many directions without breaking any of the strands of coherence, "Presumed Innocent" presents a legal, political and solidly sexual mystery gem.

The film begins, as did the book, with the main character's profound thoughts on the judicial system. Standing in the burnished glow of an empty courtroom, he is a distinguished presence, obviously a sincere and dedicated advocate of the sanctity of the law.

He is Rusty Sabich (Harrison Ford), chief deputy to the prosecuting attorney, Raymond Horgan (Brian Dennehy), who is embroiled in a hotly contested bid for re-election. Pre-election polls are not encouraging. He desperately needs an issue that will draw attention to his competence.

When Carolyn Polhemus (Greta Scacchi) is found brutally raped and murdered, Dennehy

knows that if he can solve her murder he will once more become the favorite he once was. To expedite the case, he assigns Ford to work on it. Ford with good reason tries to convince Dennehy to choose someone else.

What only the viewer and Ford's wife, Barbara (Bonnie Bedelia), know is that Ford has been passionately obsessed with the sexy, sultry Carolyn.

Dennehy is not alone in trying to grab attention by capitalizing on the murder. His political opponents seize on it and gather enough evidence to place Ford in the hands of the criminal justice system he once enforced.

It is at this point that the film begins to build in a series of cumulative revelations and interplay of characters to a crescendo climax. At no point does the narrative lag. Every scene, every word counts as it progresses to a surprising conclusion.

The film's tension does not arise from the dramatic presentation of missing clues presented at just the right time but from the interplay of personalities.

Through it all Ford registers just the right mix of outrage and weary bewilderment as he tries to unravel the strands of evidence that bind him in a struggle to defend himself. It is through him that we come to know the group of sharply defined characters that surround him.

One man stands trial, but as the trial progresses it reveals a network of municipal corruption.

Director Pakula is good at laying out an intricate, almost mathematical, series of events. It is the kind of material he does well ("Kluge," "All the President's Men"), in which individuals are slowly forced to realize that they are being victimized by other people's urges to maintain respectable order.

Besides being an outstanding film, "Presumed Innocent" has added interest for greater Detroit patrons. Ford spent two weeks in Detroit Recorder's Court getting the feel of courtroom procedure and there are sequences filmed against such familiar scenes as the Eastern Market, the skyline as seen from RenCen's glass elevator and the Frank Murphy Hall of Justice.

Stratford's 'Julius Caesar' bares human side of power politics

By Alex Suczek
Special Writer

"Julius Caesar" at Stratford exposes raw ambitions and emotions of the men and women who shape politics.

The unruliness and fickleness of the mob, the vanity of the aging demagogue, the bickering of the conspirators, and the plaintive longing of their wives to share their husbands' thoughts, are portrayed just as they occur daily in the world around us.

But rarely can we see them in action, face to face, exposed with such grim accuracy as here on Stratford's stage.

While it might be more entertaining to play this script just for the action and emphasize the road issues of politics in ancient Rome, Director Richard Monette has made this production interesting for today's audience by bringing out Shakespeare's insights into the inner workings of the figures involved — the concern of the aging Caesar with what the people will think and with his lack of an heir, the change of Mark Antony into an ambitious leader, the lofty jealousy and banal corruption of Cassius, and the self-centered, self-delusion of Brutus.

The design also emphasizes the play's modern relevance. This is flagged at once as the bohemian mob comes on in outfits ranging from jogging suits to costumes that you might see on Halloween or at a rock concert. Then the Roman Tribunes enter wearing team jackets with the legend "Tribune, SPQR" (Senatus Populus Qui Romanus) stenciled on the back, looking for all the world like the local bowling team.

This impact continues as other aspects of the set and costume design (credited on the program to "Ultz") appear in similar vein. Brilliant white neon thunderbolts simulate the storm ominously preceding Caesar's death, and yellow T-shirts silk-screened with the words "Liberty, Freedom" identify the rebel soldiers.

It is distracting until you wake up to the strong similarity of the situations on stage with the mob psychology and revolutionary politics around the world today. And it quickly fades into the background of the real substance of the performance — a look into the hearts of demagogues, conspirators, idealists and conniving politicians.

The use of contemporary-looking sports outfits achieves another effect. Worn by the central characters in private, the casual look signals the revelation of inner feelings, in contrast to the formality of the togas they wear effacing lieutenant.

This is a multi-faceted production of the play that every schoolboy once had to study as his introduction to the Bard. And the bold action of the overall story that made "Julius Caesar" a good school subject is still there to satisfy the desire just to see a good show regardless of the embellishments that have been added in bringing it to this season's Stratford stage.

The production, which opened Aug. 2, will run until Nov. 10. Tickets and information are available in the Detroit area by calling 964-4668.

in their public, political roles.

It is an interesting device to help focus on the private side of each man. It is up to the viewer, however, to decide for himself if it is really effective or a distracting gimmick to have Cassius, Brutus, Casca, et al., look like they are plotting in the locker room after a game of racquetball.

One particularly nice touch is the use of the heroic-sized bust of Caesar decorated with a gilded wreath and sash which are symbolically pulled off by rebel agitators.

In the last analysis, all these devices may not matter. The power of the acting surmounts them. While the effort to play the private scenes in a low key mood made the action in the beginning seem sometimes slow, it also created the feeling of being in on the politicians' lives behind the scenes, as we are with modern power brokers only when there is a scandal.

Nicholas Pennell makes Caesar seem disarmingly human, appearing to have put aside his larger than life charisma as he expresses his uneasiness with Cassius' lean and hungry look or rearranges the folds of his elegant ceremonial toga. The charisma we normally associate with Caesar is restored only by his murder and Antony's ironic oration and reading of the will.

From then on, as they say, it's all downhill as far as the plot goes, but the key players reveal their warts with a vengeance. Especially fine and subversive is Colm Feore as Cassius whose greed and impatience, which corrupt the rebel cause, are palpable in his war of words with his supposed ally, Brutus.

And Brian Bedford plays a different Brutus so confident of his own idealistic righteousness that he totally underestimates the effects first of Anthony's famous speech and then of Cassius' cynicism.

As Antony, Scott Wentworth achieves a remarkable transition from sycophant of the living Caesar to ambitious and manipulative power broker after Caesar is gone. You watch in fascination as a leader and future consort of Cleopatra emerges from the self-speed through important scenes later. The film seems overlong by about 15 minutes; perhaps the problem could have been cleared up with better editing.

Still, that's a small difficulty in the big picture. Washington's performance is splendid, making us feel the joy, the pain, and the wonder of jazz artistry.

Lee, as Gillingham's pathetic manager, tries valiantly to steal the show. He plays what is arguably the film's strongest character and delivers most of the best lines. He also contributes most of the comic relief, which is quite endearing in itself.

Best of all though, Lee has put aside his racial relations agenda and concentrated instead on making a movie packed with great wit, humor and insight. It's a film that will appeal to almost anybody and will offend almost nobody.

And even though no one ever said that's a prerequisite to serious art (most people say just the opposite), it is a guarantee for a good time at the movies.

'Mo Better Blues' has humor, insight and great music

By Michael Chapp
Special Writer

The thing about Spike Lee is that, too often, his politics get in the way of his filmmaking.

Or his politics become the raison d'etre of his filmmaking.

To a certain extent, that's acceptable. But after a while, it becomes irritating. That's why "Mo' Better Blues" is so refreshing. It's Spike Lee at his creative best, but it doesn't get bogged down in politics.

"Blues" is the story of Bleek Gillingham (Denzel Washington), a trumpet player who lives for his music. So much so that he begins to push aside the two women who love him. So much so that his judgment about a score of other things becomes tainted.

That's the main point of the proceedings: learning about who Gillingham is and how far his music will take him. And, oh my, the music. The spirited, moody, energizing jazz that bonds the picture together is every bit as important as any character. Maybe more.

Indeed, the soundtrack at times becomes a bit overpowering, a bit intrusive. But never so much that it causes problems. "Blues" is too strong a movie for that.

Here is a picture that communicates, as well as any movie in its genre, the artistry — and agony — behind the creative process. In this case, we're dealing with jazz, as seen through Gillingham's eyes.

On the surface, he's dealing with the little things that make life so interesting: the band members who want more money, the girlfriends who want more of his energy and attention, the manager (Lee) who can't do anything right but wants his support.

Each of these elements is developed independently and together, until they come together in the film's dramatic climax. And even though "Blues" plays in many moments like a comedy, there is no doubt that the ultimate and underlying theme is serious.

If there's a problem with "Blues," it's the picture's tendency to drag out portions of a plot development early, then

Sweet smell of success comes in colorful wrappers

By Pat Paholsky
Editor

Members of the board of directors of Garoto USA have one thing in common: They are all admitted chocoholics.

Good thing, because their business is chocolate, specifically chocolate candy from Brazil.

Formed a year ago by a group of mostly Grosse Pointe residents, the company began with a running start Jan. 1 and has been increasing sales since, or as Richard Shammass, chief executive officer, says: Tasting sweet success.

Sales the first month amounted to $100,000, he said, and the market is wide open for their product.

"There are more than 5,300 supermarket chains and partnerships that represent hundreds of thousands of stores and we know that marketing a product this way, we will never run out of customers," Shammass said.

Garoto USA's marketing approach focuses on retail and produce stores. Locally, Nino Salvaggio and Kroger's carry Garoto chocolate, selling at the rate of 1,000 pounds each month for each store, Shammass said.

That's a lot of candy, but Americans eat 12 pounds of chocolate a year, he said, compared to about 2.2 pounds a year consumed by Brazilians in whose country the main ingredient — cocoa beans — is grown.

The history of Garoto chocolate began 60 years ago when Henrique Meyerfreund immigrated from Germany to the tropics of Brazil. He looked around and saw that the area, rich in cocoa beans, had no choc-

Meyerfreund asked his parents to send him a confectionary machine and began building a company that is run today by his son, Helmut.

It's now the largest chocolate company in the southern hemisphere, employing 2,500 workers in a half-million-square-foot plant in Vitorio, Brazil. Located a few miles from a rain forest, the company's candy machines run 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

It's a modern, high-tech plant where one specialized machine costs $1 million, Shammass said. Cutting a piece of candy in half, he shows a visitor what the machine can do: The top layer is milk chocolate, a second layer is dark chocolate wrapped around a layer of wafer that encases a center of cashew butter.

Ron Cummings, president of Garoto USA and one of the company's originators, became enamored of Brazil on a visit. He approached the chocolate manufacturer for the right to sell its product in the United States.

He put together a team of owners and directors, each with a particular background, who could contribute to marketing the chocolate. The local company consists of a graphic artist, advertising people, an accountant, inventor, attorney and other business people.

There was a year of research, test marketing and package design before the first sale was made. Garoto makes 30 varieties of chocolate, some of the combinations unfamiliar to the American palate.

Research showed that 14 varieties were similar to candy bars popular with Americans. The local company decided to go with the 14 in two ways: a gift box of 28 pieces of two of each variety, weighing one pound and selling for $4.99; and bulk sales, in which a customer can buy a few pieces or a bag of one kind.

At first, Shammass said, the company was going to distribute the gourmet chocolate to specialty stores. It was determined, however, that volume selling would require places where there is heavy traffic, like supermarkets.

People shop for groceries every week or more, he said, while they may visit the gourmet section of a department store only occasionally.

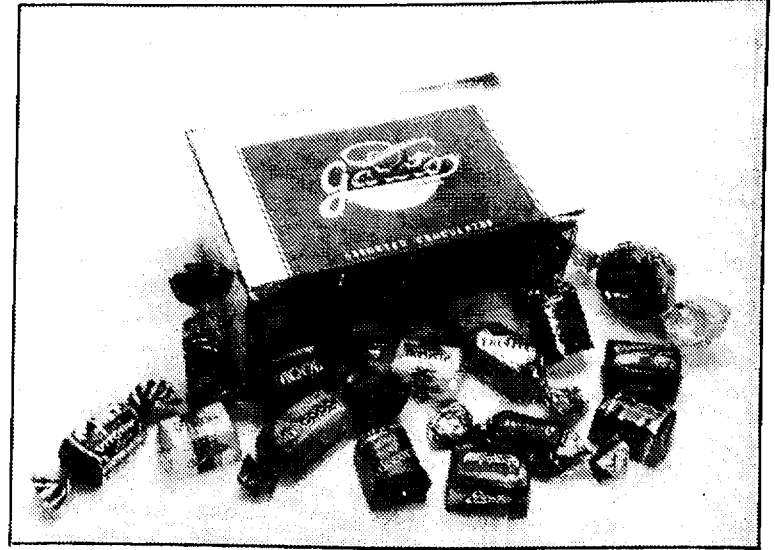

"Our goal is to give the American public a gourmet, upscale chocolate at a working man's price," said Shammass, who has a wholesale food background.

The company has brokers throughout the United States and maintains five distribution points: two on the East Coast, one on the West Coast and two in the Midwest. The main distribution center is in Taylor.

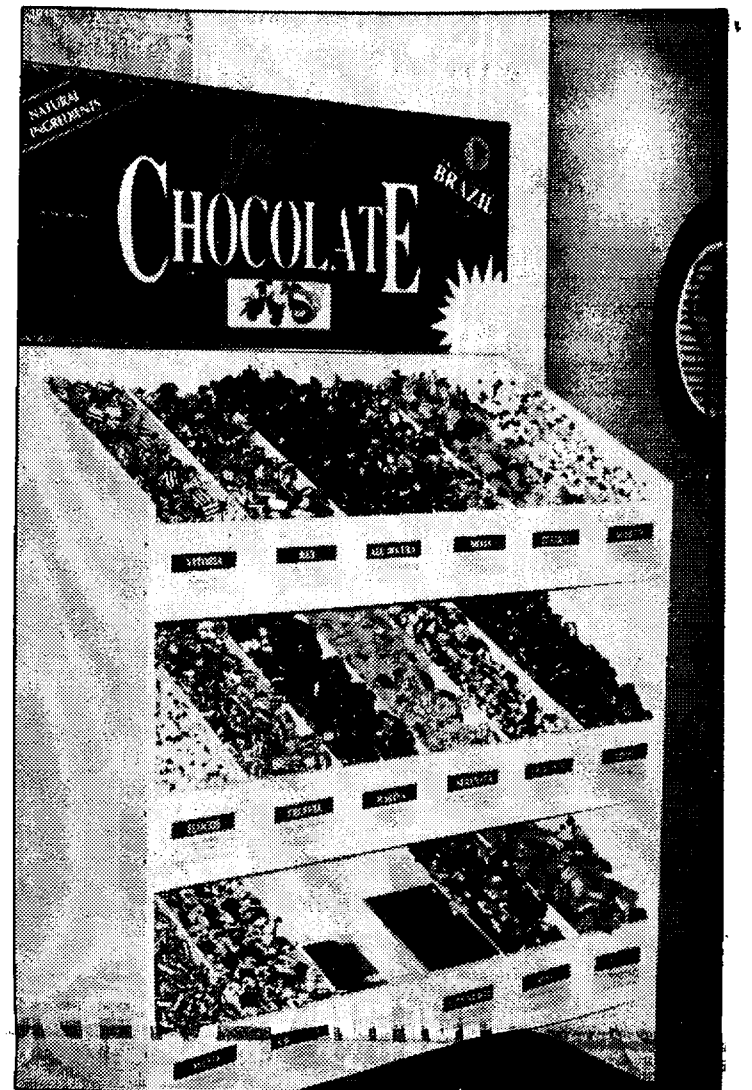

What makes the candy unique, Shammass said, is that it contains more cocoa and cocoa butter than American chocolate. "It's not loaded up with sugar or preservatives or chemicals," he said. "It's all natural."

The size of each piece is generous and, he added: "No one in America makes a good-tasting, colorfully wrapped chocolate." Besides Cummings, who travels throughout the country maintaining contact with the brokers, and Shammass, a lifelong Grosse Pointe resident, Shirley Kaspari, a director, works full time as traffic manager.

Garoto USA, headquartered in Grosse Pointe, has the exclusive rights to distribute the chocolate for all of North America. It will be introduced to Canada when company representatives travel to Toronto at the end of the month for a candy exposition.

Garoto chocolates are sold either in a gift box of 28 pieces for $4.99 or by bulk.

Mexico will be next, Shammass said.

Besides Nino Salvaggio's and Kroger which carry both gift boxes and the 14 varieties in bulk, the Farms Market carries gift boxes. Garoto USA's phone number is 882-8824.

Redford plans alumni day

Detroit Redford High School is planning its first Alumni Day. The event will be held Friday, Oct. 12, beginning at 8 a.m. and ending with an Alumni Dinner Dance.

The event could be considered the largest homecoming ever for Redford since the school plans to invite every graduating class since 1925 (Redford's first) to attend.

For more information, call Robin McCoy at 746-9202, or Redford High School, Louis Sikes, 533-1900 between 8 a.m. and 1 p.m. Registration materials will be mailed to all interested alumni.

Bon Secours Assistance League is ready for 37th Celebrity Series

By Margie Reins Smith
Feature Editor

The mind reader was a no-show. Nobody can remember his name anyway.

Some who did show — and are remembered fondly: Barbara Walters; Irma Bombeck; Zsa Zsa Gabor's mother; The Amazing Kreskin; Sally Jesse Raphael; Jimmy the Greek; Jayne Meadows; George Plimpton; Dr. Joyce Brothers; Arthur Haily; Vincent Price; and more.

All these celebrities were in Grosse Pointe because of a few hundred hard-working women, members of the Bon Secours Assistance League. The Grosse Pointe Celebrity Series is going into its 37th year this fall with four more top-notch crowd-pleasers, according to Joan Mossner, chairman.

"This is one of the few Town Hall presentations that has survived," said Pat Worrell, president.

The Bon Secours Assistance League is celebrating its 42nd birthday this year. It was founded in 1948, an offshoot of the Bon Secours Guild, which was formed to provide funding for the hospital's unbudgeted expenses. The Assistance League was also formed for the purposes of raising money and promoting good public relations for the hospital.

They still do. But according to Worrell and immediate past president Joan Bartoszewicz, friendship and fellowship are just as rewarding as fundraising.

The popular celebrity series, an annual Christmas fair and the hospital's gift shop are the League's main fundraising projects.

Bon Secours Assistance League consists of about 350 women, divided into 14 sub-groups of 25 members each. Most of the sub-groups also have a modest fundraising project. For instance, Group XI makes keepsake bonnets for the gift shop from Irish lace handkerchiefs. The bonnet may be used later for a girl as a wedding handkerchief; for a boy as a gift to his bride-to-be.

Other sub-groups plan bridge marathons, cocktail parties, or other benefits to contribute to the collective fund.

The gift shop is a quarter-of-a-million-dollar business run by volunteers, Worrell said.

"We have a large number of high-quality gifts. Unique gifts. A wide price range," she said. Buyers travel to Chicago twice a year. Customers are not only hospital visitors, she added, but also patients and members of the League. "I think we're our own best customers."

The annual Christmas Fair is held early in November and includes special purchases of lingerie, jewelry, toys, crystal, handmade craft items and Christmas decorations. This year's fair will be Saturday and Sunday, Nov. 3 and 4.

Bon Secours Assistance League recently passed along a check for $140,000 to the hospital. They earmarked $110,000 for an image intensifier and pledged an additional $35,000. A portion of the money, $15,000, is designated for the hospital's meals for the homebound program and $15,000 is to add to a nursing scholarship fund.

The women of the League decide how they'd like to spend the money they raise. "We usually ask the

Grosse Pointe Celebrity Series 1990-1991

Oct. 11 — Mario Buatta
Buatta, often called "The Prince of Chintz," is known for his livable interior designs and for his work at Blair House in Washington, D.C. His lectures are amusing as well as interesting.

Nov. 8 — The Lettermen
The Lettermen (Tony Butala, Mark Preston and Donovan Scott Tea) have a score of hits and 50 albums to their credit. For more than 20 years, they've kept the meaning of harmony alive and well with their blend of soft, romantic music.

Feb. 14 — Genevieve Smith Whitford
The author of "Readings From Queen Anne's Lace," will speak about marriage, mothering, moving, learning, aging and a variety of everyday topics. Her wise and witty comments bring audiences to laughter, tears and nods of understanding.

March 14 — Nien Cheng
The author of "Life and Death in Shanghai," a powerful book of love, changes, suffering and courage will speak about her imprisonment, her heroic resistance and her quest for justice.

All lectures will be at Parcels Middle School. The cost is $40 for the series of three daytime presentations (Buatta, Whitford and Cheng). A $56 ticket includes the evening musical review by The Lettermen.

For more information about the Grosse Pointe Celebrity Series, or to order tickets, call 882-0621 or 882-2179.

hospital for a shopping list," said Bartoszewicz, "but we make our own decisions. We're a feisty group of ladies who want to designate how we spend our money."

The League has financed a roof garden for the hospital, a day room in the Adolescent Mental Health Unit, contributions to the meals on wheels program, a variety of sophisticated medical equipment and a nursing school endowment fund.

The 37th Grosse Pointe Celebrity Series begins in October with a series of three daytime lectures and one evening concert.

"In the early years, the lectures took place at the Esquire Theater, followed by lunch at the Old Place," Worrell said. When the theater was remodeled, it wasn't big enough for the lectures. "We moved to the Eastland Theater and had lunch afterward at Stouffers. Then Eastland was divided into smaller theaters and we didn't have enough space again."

"We moved to the Woods Theater. Then they divided that theater. We've had our lectures at Parcels for about five years. It holds 880 people and it's a terrific place.

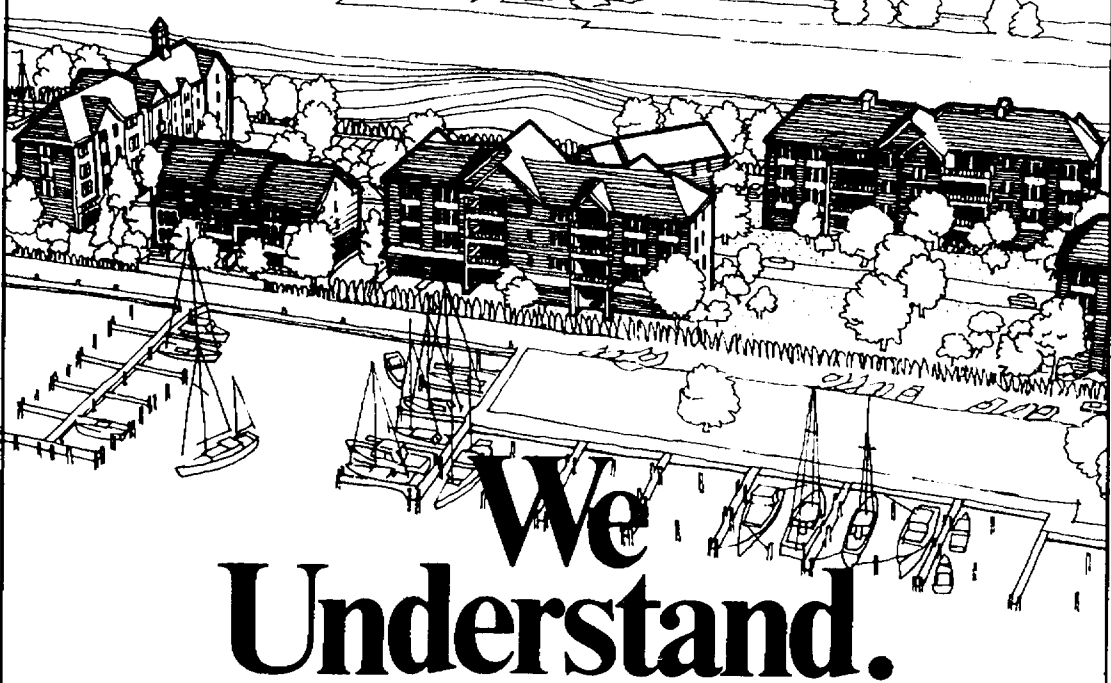

Parking is at St. Michael's Church and shuttles take people to and from Parcels."

Membership in the Bon Secours Assistance League is by invitation, and is offered to women who are committed to working. That's what makes the group such a vital, hard-working organization, Worrell said. Members are required to attend three meetings a year, work in the gift shop and at the Christmas Fair, support the Celebrity Series and pay dues of $10 a year.

A membership profile recently revealed that the group has 332 active members, 92 inactive members and 18 emeritus members. Most are college graduates. Most are professional women who are working or who anticipate returning to the workforce after raising families. Members have a wide range of talents. About 90 percent are Grosse Pointers. All are women, from about age 30 up to age 80. The average age is 45 to 55 years old.

The Lake... The Pointes...

We Understand.

The Blake Company has been members of the Grosse Pointe community for three generations. We know why people live here, and why they go to great lengths to remain here.

Over the years their homes have become too large and difficult to maintain and until now, the Grosse Pointe area has offered very few alternatives to people who want to change their homes, not their lifestyle.

We Understand.

The Blake Company has created the alternative, Harbor Place: a luxurious condominium community located on the shore of Lake St. Clair, near everything you hold dear.

Designed with traditional New England architecture with an emphasis placed on privacy, security and scenic beauty. Choose between townhouses or terrace homes each in two- and three-bedroom configurations, lavished with an endless list of amenities, including a 2 car garage, exceptional landscaping and boat slips. Call Rob MacGregor today for an appointment and experience the tradition of Harbor Place, you'll see that we really do understand.

East Pointe Chorus to attend competition

The East Pointe Chapter of Harmony International, formerly Sweet Adelines Inc., became Region 2 champions by taking first place in the regional competition held on May 5 in Flint.

The East Pointe Chorus will now compete for the title of International Chorus Champions at the 45th annual International Convention and Competition to be held Oct. 8-12, 1991 in San Antonio, Texas.

East Pointe will spend the next 16 months choreographing, practicing, raising funds and designing costumes in preparation for the competition.

The East Pointe Chapter has a membership of 104 women from the eastern suburbs of metropolitan Detroit, including Grosse Pointers Sidonie Brown, DeCoster, Karin Sweetman, Sue Dugan, Pat Friewald, Marji Gaglio, Patricia Kimel, Camille Peterson, Diane Janeski, Vleanna Leona, Marti Miller and Ardelle Spiewak.

Women over the age of 18 who would like information about the East Pointe Chapter may contact Marie Parzych, 293-4362.

Harmony International is a non-profit, women's singing organization dedicated to education and achievement through competition and performance of four-part harmony, barbershop style.

Is your organization seeking new members?

Does your organization (club, musical group, charity, assistance league, auxiliary, service organization, whatever) need a few more good people?

September is a fine time for new beginnings. Organizations and clubs are looking for new members and people are considering volunteer opportunities or thinking about joining a new club. They're not sure, however, what groups are out there or what kinds of members are needed, or what they'd be expected to contribute or how to get in touch with the organization.

Here's a way for your group to find exactly the right newcomers.

Tell us what type of person you're looking for — what he or she would be expected to do — what skills, if any, are necessary — how much of a time commitment would be typical — and so on.

We'll publish your requests early in September.

Please fill out this form and return it to Margie Smith, Grosse Pointe News, 96 Kercheval, Grosse Pointe Farms, Mich. 48236 by Aug. 30.

Wine and dine for dance; Bash for fash; Party for art

The ninth annual Detroit International Wine Auction, a benefit for the Center for Creative Studies-Institute of Music and Dance, will take place on Saturday, Sept. 22, at Stroh River Place.

The festivities will include a silent auction and wine tasting reception, gourmet hors d'oeuvres, a live auction and dinner.

Grosse Pointe Farms residents Janet and Frederick Schroeder are chairmen of this year's auction. Edsel B. Ford II will serve as master of ceremonies.

Participating restaurants include the Detroit Yacht Club, the Lark, Les Trois Petits Cochons, the Palace Grille, the Pontchartrain Wine Cellars and The Rattlesnake Club.

Last year's event netted nearly $120,000 for the Detroit-based performing arts school which traces its roots back to 1914. CCS-Institute of Music and Dance provides instruction at three locations: Detroit's Cultural Center, Southfield and Grosse Pointe. The faculty includes about 100 of Detroit's finest musicians and dancers who provide training for about 1,800 students each year.

Price for the evening's fundraiser is $150 per person. Reservations are limited and must be made by Monday, Sept. 18. Call 831-2870.

Fash Bash: The Founders Junior Council of the Detroit Institute of Arts, Hudson's and Northwest Airlines will burst forth on Tuesday, Aug. 14, at the Fox Theatre, with their 21st annual first-class fundraiser (Fash Bash) for a world-class art museum (the Detroit Institute of Arts).

Mikhail Baryshnikov is the featured guest at this year's benefit.

Dancer/actor/choreographer Baryshnikov (a.k.a. Misha) is, coincidentally, launching a new fragrance for women called Misha.

Fash Bash is again billed as a fashion show — and more. The evening will include elements of music, theater and dance as well as the latest in silk and suede and wool and fur.

The Cottage Hospital Auxiliary held a luncheon on June 28 at the Grosse Pointe Yacht Club. From left, standing, are Joyce Rock, president; Suzanne DeBruyne, second vice president; and Janice Hertel, director of volunteer services at Cottage Hospital. Janet Drolshagen is seated at the piano. Singer Margaret Ahee is standing at the right.

Fash Bash begins at 5:30 p.m. in the lobby of the Fox Theatre and includes a cash bar, buffet, entertainment by Mel Ball & Colours, raffle, fashion show, live auction by DuMouchelles Galleries and dancing.

Tickets are $30, $50 and $100. The $30 ticket guarantees reserved seats. The $50 patron ticket includes reserved main floor seats. The $100 VIP patron ticket includes a private reception too. All tickets are available at the DIA ticket office, Ticketmaster and the Fox Theatre box office.

Hudson's public affairs committee has recently awarded a $50,000 grant to the DIA Founders Society for the Youth Theatre Salute Days and for DIA operating support.

Ya gotta have archives: Members and friends of Archives of American Art will celebrate at the Van Dyke Place restaurant on Tuesday, Aug. 21, at a reception, dinner and silent auction of antiques donated by Van Dyke Place owners John McCarthy and Ronald Fox.

Mr. and Mrs. Lee Wulfmeier III of Grosse Pointe Farms are chairmen of the event.

The Archives of American Art is a national organization affiliated with the Smithsonian Institution. Since its beginning in 1954, the Archives has amassed more than 10 million items documenting the art and cultural history of the United States.

The material is available on microfilm at the Archives' regional centers and around the world through interlibrary loan. The Midwest's regional center is located in the Detroit Institute of Arts.

For more information about the fundraising dinner and about the Archives of American Art, call 226-7544.

Myron Johnson, artistic director of the dance-theater company Ballet of the Dolls, will direct and choreograph the 50-model, 15-dancer production for an expected crowd of 4,800 people.

"Johnson's vision of the integration of fashion and the arts is reflective of Hudson's philosophy of its partnership with the arts," said Dennis Toffolo, president of Hudson's.

Lunch at GPYC: The Cottage Hospital Auxiliary's general luncheon took place on June 28 at the Grosse Pointe Yacht Club. The twice-a-year get-together gives members a chance to meet the executive board and to support activities at Cottage Hospital.

Membership in the auxiliary is open to any adult who has an interest in Cottage Hospital. Currently about 400 active members are dedicated to promoting and advancing the welfare of the hospital through patient service and fundraising events.

After the luncheon and a brief meeting, soprano Margaret Ahee of Grosse Pointe Farms entertained the group.

The Pastor's Corner

Our scarcity of caring

By Rev. Jack L. Mannschreck
Grosse Pointe United Methodist Church

After returning from a week of church camp, I thought I would dial up my friends at the Family Life Education Center (FLEC) to see if there were any new developments. At a board of directors meeting in June, it was decided that FLEC would have to shut its doors because of a lack of funding. As announced in the July 12 issue of the Grosse Pointe News, it seems as if the demise of FLEC is a certainty.

Parker J. Palmer, a Quaker author, wrote about caring in his book, "The Company of Strangers." He wrote: "Within each of us there is a capacity to respond to people in need. For millennia, people have turned to each other for various sorts of aid, and as we do — and receive response — our common bond, our public life, is strengthened. But in our century caring has become increasingly professionalized and institutionalized."

Palmer concludes that caring is a human good which is becoming scarce. Our common public life is diminished by this scarcity in the same way it is diminished when individuals hoard food or fuel. The scarcity of caring caused by self-serving caring professionals is compounded by our intense consumerism — the idea that you get what you pay for and if you don't pay for it, it isn't worth much. Individuals would rather pay large amounts of money to a professional to solve a problem that could be resolved by communicating with a compassionate neighbor. I always found it interesting that FLEC was sometimes criticized because the staff was largely made up of volunteers.

Please do not think I am suggesting that all who serve in caring professions — psychologists and psychiatrists, counselors and social workers — take advantage of the less fortunate of our society. There are human hurts which run too deep for simple reflective conversation to solve and that require the knowledge and expertise of professional counselors and advisers to resolve. Indeed, I consider my calling as a Christian pastor as part of the spectrum of caring professionals.

However, my particular vocation as a caring professional does not excuse others (Christian or not) from the tasks of caring for those who are less fortunate or who suffer in any way.

For this reason, I am saddened by the loss of a volunteer organization such as FLEC that has cared for people in need for more than 20 years. It is my understanding that other caring volunteer organizations in our community and in communities around the country are in crisis and are beginning to shut their doors.

It seems as if Parker Palmer is correct when he recognizes the scarcity of caring in a world of presumable abundance.

I cannot help thinking of the words of Paul: "Above all, clothe yourself with love, which binds everything together in perfect harmony."

For the sake of our community, our state, our nation, and our world, I pray that we may be bound together in perfect harmony. May we love one another and care for each other out of the abundance God has provided.

Barbara Bartley, right, of Grosse Pointe Woods, was named St. John Hospital and Medical Center volunteer of the year at the hospital's annual volunteer banquet. She accepts congratulations for her donation of more than 7,500 hours to the hospital from Patrick Wrenn, left, St. John's executive vice president.

St. John volunteers recognized for 117,264 hours of service

Members of numerous communities were recognized recently for their contribution toward the 117,264 hours of volunteer service given at St. John Hospital and Medical Center and its affiliates during the past year.

More than 350 volunteers and their guests gathered at the Gourmet House in St. Clair Shores for SJH&MC's 20th annual volunteer awards banquet. The event recognizes all SJH&MC volunteers, including those who serve at the hospital, St. John Hospital-Macomb Center, Home Health Care and The Oxford Institute.

Receiving special recognition at the awards banquet was Barbara Bartley of Grosse Pointe Woods, who was named Volunteer of the Year for 1990. In her nearly eight years as a volunteer, Bartley has contributed almost 8,000 hours, primarily by volunteering in the hospital Gift Shop.

Also honored at the banquet were Grosse Pointers Virginia Sheehan, Betty Bertschinger, Frances Duross, Barbara Bartley, Betty Bultinck, Berniece White, James White, Edward Picard, Judith Wooldridge, Mildred Wooldridge, Irene Kokowicz, Jacqueline Jorges, Ralph Newell, Arthur Arduin, Leonard Constantine, William Peters, Joseph Vitale, Remi DeLaMeilleure, Eleanor Kiefer, Edith McLean, Anne Koenig, Sean Kelly, Lynn Sutts, Letty Grabuck, Sreedhar Samudrala and Renee Dwaihy.

Bon Secours board president celebrates 25th year of service

Sister Anne Marie Mack, president of the Bon Secours of Michigan Healthcare System board of directors, recently celebrated her silver jubilee.

The special occasion marked the 25 years of service Mack has contributed since entering the Congregation of Bon Secours in 1965.

Mack has been associated with Bon Secours Hospital, Grosse Pointe, since 1976, and has served as mission effectiveness director since 1988. She is also a member of the Sister of Bon Secours USA Provincial Council and the Bon Secours Health System board of directors, Marriottsville, Md.

Her previous roles at Bon Secours have included serving as clinical coordinator of the operating room, obstetrics and medical/surgical nursing from 1976 until 1984 and as director of nursing at the Bon Secours Nursing Care Center, St. Clair Shores, from its opening in 1984 until 1988.

Mack earned a bachelor of science degree in nursing from the University of Delaware in 1972 and completed graduate work for a master of science degree in nursing at Wayne State University. She professed her final vows in 1978 at the Sisters of Bon Secours Provincial House, Marriottsville.

Garage sale to raise funds

The Church of Messiah Housing Corp., a non-profit organization, will hold a garage sale at a Grosse Pointe Farms home Saturday, Aug. 18, to raise funds for playground equipment.

The sale, which will be at the home of Dick Beadle, 340 Kercheval, will raise funds to build a recreation area at Grand Boulevard and Jefferson to be used by 30 to 40 children.

The sale's sponsors are looking for contributions of clothing, equipment, furniture and funds. If you'd like to donate or want more information, call Beadle at 882-6503.

Arts, crafts show

Bethany Christian Church, 5901 Cadieux, Detroit, will hold its fall Arts and Crafts Show on Saturday, Nov. 10, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Dealers are needed. Call Leah Frakes, 791-4961, for information.

August: Time to enjoy Michigan-grown vegetables, flowers

The fifth month of the old Roman calendar was Quintilis. Until July of 44 B.C., that is. The name was changed to July to honor Julius Caesar who had recently been assassinated by some of his friends.

A little later, when Augustus followed his great uncle, he decided to name the following month after himself and, in order to have a month of the same number of days as Julius' month, he took a day from February.

August is the month of travelers. Many of us have our annual vacations in August and many organizations do not meet in August because most of their members are likely to be away.

It is worthy of note that Christopher Columbus started out on his famous voyage in quest of new worlds on Aug. 3, 1492. What he found, and brought back, changed the gardens and the diets of most of Europe — beans, potatoes, tomatoes, vanilla, strawberries, pineapples, chocolate and corn.

What would summer be without corn on the cob and sliced tomatoes? And what would our gardens look like about now without ageratum, dahlias, marigolds, petunias, and zinnias, the official flower of the city of Detroit?

If your travels take you to Montreal, be sure to visit the Montreal Botanical Gardens (Le Jardin Botanique) with its delightful conservatories and perennial gardens. Montreal is very French — in fact it's the second largest French city in the world.

In Montreal if you call for a cab you might get a horse-drawn fiacre. Fiacres, cabs for hire, got their name from the cab stand outside the Hotel Saint Fiacre in Paris.

Saint Fiacre, the patron saint of gardeners (especially perennial gardeners) celebrates his feast day on Aug. 30, and is usually represented carrying a spade. One story is that when the soldiers came with orders to kill him, he entertained them with a good dinner and beds for the night. While they slept he went out and dug a nice deep grave to save them the trouble in the morning.

Another French connection is that this year marks the 210th anniversary of a man named Lamarck being elected to the French Academy of Sciences. This honor and the title "Keeper of the King's Herbarium" were due to his publication the previous year of a best seller called "Flore Francaise."

Lamarck was born on Aug. 1, 1744. He was a versatile man and is famous as a soldier, a botanist, the father of invertebrate paleontology and the first scientific weather forecaster.

As you work in your garden remember that on Aug. 23, 1785, Thomas Jefferson wrote: "The cultivators of the earth are the most valuable citizens."

The Detroit Recreation Department's forestry and landscape division must subscribe to this thought. Some rather staggering statistics are available about its efforts. Did you know that this division maintains 94 city flower beds, 22 greenhouses, 3 large gardens, more than 185 parks and playgrounds, 6 golf courses and numerous playfields, marinas, athletic fields and tennis courts?

The department annually plants and tends more than 190,000 plants and flowers, including chrysanthemums, poinsettias, tulips, narcissi, hyacinth and thousands of seasonal plants. It is responsible for events such as the annual builders and garden show at Cobo Hall. It works with the Metropolitan Detroit Flower Growers Association to hold two Eastern Flower Days annually. It also maintains the Anna Scripps Whitcomb Conservatory on Belle Isle, a Detroit landmark since 1904 and the site of many major flower shows.

It isn't only in our own area of Michigan that the cultivators of the earth are valuable citizens. Did you know that Michigan ranks first in the nation in the growing of beans? And corn is Michigan's leading crop in terms of total acreage and value?

Blueberries are synonymous with August in Michigan and it's not surprising. In the 1930s, horticulturist Stanley Johnson established the first successful cultivated blueberry plantings in the world. Now Michigan produces the world's largest blueberry crop which is valued at more than $31 million annually. The state's enormous apple and cherry crops also deserve mention in this list of triumphant gardening.

Centuries ago the Indians of this region planted crops and harvested them, benefiting from the fertile soil and abundant water of this unique state.

One Michigan crop is still almost entirely an Indian monopoly. That is the annual Indian harvesting of wild rice, still done in the ancient manner in which a canoe or rowboat is guided among the rice plants and the stalks are rapped sharply on the edge of the boat so that the rice kernels fall into a container in the bottom of the boat.

Bon Secours of Michigan establishes foundation

Bon Secours of Michigan Healthcare System Inc. recently established the Bon Secours Foundation, a subsidiary corporation which will enhance private support for Bon Secours Hospital and Bon Secours Nursing Care Center.

"Incorporated in January 1990, the foundation is the product of several years of consideration and many months of active planning by staff and volunteers," said Vanu Bagchi, vice president for fund development. "Bon Secours now has a focused organization and a concise set of objectives to guide the development of private support for health care programs and projects."

"The foundation will be responsible for the investment and stewardship of philanthropic assets," said David L. Barcus, director of fund development and executive director of the foundation. "The board of directors will oversee fund-raising, grant applications, endowment fund investments and decisions on how contributed dollars will be spent."

Garden Center plans bus tour

A tour to Henry Ford's homes and gardens will be held Thursday, Aug. 23, sponsored by the Detroit Garden Center. Ford's Edison Avenue home and garden in Detroit, an Italian Renaissance Revival house recently designated a state historic site, is the first stop, followed by the Ford Fairlane estate in Dearborn. Lunch at Fairlane is included.

Departure is from the Whittier Towers parking area, 415 Burns Dr., at 8:45 a.m. with return planned for 4 p.m. Cost is $25. Reservations may be mailed to the Detroit Garden Center, 1460 E. Jefferson, Detroit, 48207; or call 259-6363 by Aug. 20.

R.O.M.P.

Recovery of Male Potency (R.O.M.P.), a support group for males who are having difficulties with impotence or incontinence, meets in St. John Hospital and Medical Center's auditorium the third Tuesday of each month from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m.

The program was developed by Grace Hospital in Detroit. The next meeting is planned for Aug. 21.

Bridge

HAVE A PLEASANT TRY AT PERFECTION
BRIDGE BY WOODY BOYD
THE PASTEBOARD PASTIME

Today's column will teach you more than you ever knew and as much as you wish to believe. You will immediately see that much of what is written here has doubtful foundation, but I am unable any longer to contain my beliefs relating to early American bridge mythology.

History tells me that the men of the west a century ago played poker, farro and dice. This has puzzled me greatly and for sometime preoccupied my logic to determine the facts. After all British aristocracy has been playing bridge (whist to be more accurate) for almost two centuries in the posh card rooms of London's environs. One wonders why hadn't cowboys, Indians and Custer's men too? Maybe they did and our research is just incomplete. Such a supposition may be absurd, paradoxically it may even be true. Today I am proceeding on the basis that western card game culture of the 1870 era included contract bridge. For sure you will never be able to accuse this columnist of letting the truth stand in the way of a good story. As Doctor Samuel Johnson once said, "Every man has the right to utter what he thinks the truth, and every other man has the right to knock him down for it!"

I believe that there was a bridge game played in places like Shawnee Stompin Pond, Oklahoma; Bustin Dust, Kansas; and Crazy Horse Haven, Wyoming. I'm within a thin thread of being somewhat sure that Preacher Deacon Demon directed the first Denver duplicate at the Old Church House on Horse Bones Blvd. and Corset Corners Causeway.

There are documents within the archives of The Early Prairie Twisted History Foundation that suggest the famous British erectionist and early world traveler Even Easily Edward Evans brought bridge to the western plains. Of course, it wasn't the sophisticated game we know today nor was any of the performers as sober as a judge. It was challenging and dangerously exciting. Card table confrontations usually ended in someone getting sawed off or shot down. Most of the newspaper clippings I've clammed on to say that Caribou Charlie Hardencarcass and the son of Sioux Chief Sitting Stiff, SippingStiff were the premiere partnership of the plains of that day. To preserve that birth they were constantly defending their honor in some of the most severe prairie stake plays ever promoted. Here is a celebrated hand from one of their challenge matches of 1871. Supposedly the winners were to be crowned the western world prairie plains champions.

Scandal Sanction, South Dakota's Cloudy Clem Lemon was by all accounts nowhere near the equal of either Caribou Charlie Hardencarcass or Sioux Chief

Son, Sippin Stuff. On this occasion, though, he had laid upon the Britisher Even Easily Edward Evans a tidy sum to purchase a partnership. The expert erectionist's presence at the table made the match a portentous bridge incident and the outcome doubtful. Here we see the foursome fiercely competing in a fantastical hand from that match.

Obviously Caribou Charlie and Sippin Stuff loved to Que Bid. Six diamonds was intriguing and seven spades incomprehensible, but they must have known what they were doing because it could be achieved with careful Hardencarcass play. Can you put yourself in Caribou Charlie's chair and do so well?

Unfortunately the outcome of this clash remains in limbo as a fire in the archives charred most of the cards. 'Tis a pity though that players so great as those in this story only enjoyed a few moments of glory as the ones that have been allotted to them here.

Now Renting: A landmark address.

Since its completion, the elegant Shore Club Apartment Tower has been a landmark for ships and boats cruising Lake St. Clair. But it's also been a landmark in luxury living.

You can choose from highrise, garden apartment or townhouse lifestyles. All provide the same convenient, luxurious, environment.

Shore Club is situated in a park-like atmosphere. Here we combine the peacefulness of the lake with stately old shade trees. Our community-by-the-lake is conveniently located near major expressways and surface routes, leading to most every part of the Metropolitan area. As well as close to Grosse Pointe Shopping districts.

What's more, because Shore Club is on the water, renters have first priority on our available boat wells.

We're now renting apartments. So come and see why Shore Club is the most prestigious address on the waterway. We're sure you'll find everything about it is of landmark quality.

ST-"ART" TIPS

PREVENTING SMUDGES

To protect your drawing from smudges and fingerprints when working with pencil, charcoal and other soft material, use a bridge or a mahlistick. Put a smooth paper, or wax paper, under your drawing hand to prevent soiling the surface.

DRAWING THE HEAD: PROFILE

By using the block method it is very simple to draw a head in profile. Using the proportion 4 units wide x 4 units high, or a square, draw in the division as on the front view. Rough in the features using the guidelines, placing the eye on the horizontal line center and the ear just behind the vertical line.

Riley sees the world aboard Maiden ship

By Rob Fulton
Sports Editor

When Dawn Riley releases the annals of her nine-month voyage around the world, Jules Verne will have met his match.

Riley has slept in some of the finest oceans, eaten cold food while battling whales, and seen more ports of call than a naval officer.

She completed a year's tour of the world May 28, when she and her 11 crew members on Maiden took second place in Division D of the Whitbread Round the World Race, the world's longest endurance yacht race.

Maiden was sponsored by England's Royal Jordanian.

Maiden is a 58-foot long Bruce Farr-designed boat, which sailed in the 1981-82 Round the World Race.

The race covered more than 33,000 miles, with 22 competing yachts from 13 countries. Riley served as watch captain, engineer, diver and helmswoman on an all-women crew. She also was the only female among seven Americans in the race.

Maiden, skippered by Tracy Edwards, also won two of the six legs and captured the hearts of many around the world. Riley said most people laughed at the all female crew before the endurance race started, but in the end she and the others had earned respect.

The six legs of the race were:

1) Portsmouth, Great Britain to Punta Del Este, Uruguay; 2) Punta Del Este to Fremantle, Australia, 3) Fremantle to Auckland, New Zealand, 4) Auckland to Punta Del Este, 5) Punta Del Este to Fort Lauderdale, 6) Fort Lauderdale to Portsmouth.

The longest leg was Punta Del Este to Fremantle, which covered 7,650 miles.

With wins in legs two and three, Maiden was a common word in national newspapers.

"The media, sorry, was just awful," said Riley, 26. "After we won the second leg there were articles quoting some people who said they'd eat their hats if we made it to England. Nobody, so it seemed, believed in us."

The race started Sept. 2, 1989, and ended May 23, 1990. In that time, Riley's voyage was not all fun. She ate freeze-dried foods, spent Christmas on the ocean, lost the only bottle of New Year's Eve champagne in rough waters, and celebrated a birthday away from home.

"When you look back on it and think of the race in respect to miles," she said, "it's a long way. But, when you're on the water you're in a different world. It was tough to not think about being homesick, but when you're competing like that you can't think of home. You need to concentrate continuously."

"I used to like mashed potatoes, but I've eaten so many of them that I don't like them anymore. I've also promised myself that instead of sailing this Christmas, I'd be home skiing."

Sailing the cold Southern Ocean in leg two was exhilarating for Riley, but because of her crew's skills there were no other boats in sight. Maiden raced to a huge lead and then began enjoying the ride.

"The Southern Ocean was a very trying ocean," she said. "It was cold and miserable, yet inspiring. In that area, there were icebergs and high winds, but you don't have time to be scared — until you're laying in your bunk and you know you have to go up and relieve someone four hours later. That, I was a little apprehensive about at times."

On Dec. 23, 1989, Maiden, with a win in the second leg under its belt, took off for Auckland.

What a weekend

Golf is a funny game.

By no stretch of the imagination, am I a golfer. Sure, I fix my divots, but I'd be better off chopping meat in a market than hacking away on the course.

Despite my woes on the greens, fairways and tees, I like to chase that white ball when I slice and dice.

Last weekend I was one of nine former college buddies who got together for a reunion of sorts. We shot a quick nine holes in the morning and I can proudly say that I was in the top eight finishers.

The guy that finished last shot a 74, just 34 shots off the pace of the winner, who should have eagled the eighth hole but settled for a birdie.

I can't understand why trees are planted on and around golf courses, and why sandtraps aren't left in back yards for little kids to play in. Water hazards are extremely hard on my buddy Rick, but Mark never found trouble because he parred the entire course.

I didn't have my set of clubs with me, so I played out of John's bag. Peter didn't have clubs, either, so he caddied for John. Dave and Dave played with Frank, and Dave No. 1 embarrassed them both with his Hale Irwin shots.

It was a great opportunity to walk the course with guys I haven't seen in years. We told tales, reminisced and chased Rick's ball out of the trees. Golf was just a start to a rather memorable weekend.

After driving 10 miles back to our cottage, we decided that the World Series of wiffle ball was on tap. So, to the Mio sporting goods store we went for a bat, which was dressed so nicely that it looked like a real aluminum bat. We jumped into a 1952 Jeep that Dave keeps on the grounds and headed for an open piece of land to lay our field.

By the way, that Jeep is an artifact synonymous with up north for the nine of us. Dave doesn't maintain it regularly, but it starts on the first crank each time. It even came in handy when we needed a relief pitcher from the bullpen.

First base was the first marker of a petroleum line. Second base was the next marker and land. A smooth race and plenty of "jokes, conversations and frustration" enabled the crew to take its second consecutive leg. All the skeptics were now turning into believers.

"When we finished in New Zealand it was about 1:30 in the morning," said Riley. "When we got into shore there were an estimated 10,000 people welcoming just us. It was like everyone suddenly knew who we were and wanted us to win the whole thing."

After completing the fifth leg and landing in the States, Riley had had enough. Because she had lived in Fort Lauderdale previously, she felt as if she were home. But after a nine-day stay, Maiden embarked on the sixth and final leg.

"It was tough to get excited to leave again," she recalled. "I was home and after almost nine months on the water, it was hard to get motivated."

But, they finished the 3,837 mile run and again came home to an aroused crowd.

"There were 25,000 people cheering for us when we finished in England," said Riley. "By that time a few people were eating their hats and we were so excited to be there. We were tired, but the crowd gave us enough energy. It was a great race, but I think everyone felt happy to have it over with."

During the sixth leg, Maiden grazed a whale and battled a tornado. Riley said that when the tornado hit, the boat was spun 360 degrees, but didn't sustain any damage. The whale caused some damage to the aluminum hull, but that was easily fixed from the deck.

During the fourth leg, Maiden took on water and sent the crew scurrying for repairs.

"We had to empty the boat and put about 15 sails on deck just to find the hole where the water was coming from," Riley said. "We hooked up pumps to the engine and it took about two days before it was all cleaned up."

Riley steers Maiden out of New Zealand on Feb. 3, just 6,255 miles away from Punta Del Este, where the fourth leg would be completed.

They did all the work while the boat was skippered by Edwards.

"The salt water shorted out our water maker and some other things," Riley added. "It was one of the most trying moments for us, because it happened with six days to go before that leg would be finished. When you look around and all you see is water, it's kind of frightening."

Even brushing a whale, taking on water, having to dive and repair the boat while it was cruising couldn't keep this Maiden voyage down. But, according to Riley, the most difficult process was trying to blend 12 personalities.

"The biggest thing we had to do was make sure all 12 girls could get along," said Riley. "We had a few crew changes before the race started in September, but it all worked out. We all kept diaries and shared them, but when the race was completed, I think everyone was relieved to be able to get away from one another."

It's difficult for Riley to recall everything she saw, but without the help of a facsimile machine she would never have traveled past Africa, the Caribbean, South America and several bodies of water.

"I wasn't even sure I wanted to do it," said Riley, who started sailing "when I was born." "I was between jobs and I knew they were looking for a helmsman. I sent over my resume and within an hour they faxed me an acceptance letter and directions on what to do next."

Before she knew it she was off to England.

"I worked my way through college by working on sailboats and I've worked in the business," she said. "Sailing for us was a family commitment. Every free minute we had we'd sail, so I knew I'd be prepared to crew on Maiden."

Riley, who graduated from Michigan State where she captained the sailing team, is hoping the around-the-world experience will help her career as a sailor.

"It's turned out all right because I've been able to make a living out of a sport or hobby," Riley said. "While on Maiden, we got paid for the time we worked on the boat and all our expenses were paid when we docked, and now I'm looking to do some other things."

And the most recent thing is putting her race on slides and a 26-minute film in preparation for her lecturing career. She's also trying to work out a deal to sail in the America's Cup with the Betsy Ross Syndicate.

"I've got a couple of options, but right now I've just got to check them all out," she said. "I'm sure I'll never get out of racing."

Riley relaxes for just a minute while she and her crew work on Maiden.

Gretchen Uznis leads DRYA women sailors

In its second year, the Detroit River Yachting Association (DRYA) Junior Women's Sailing Championship turned international.

The championship was hosted by Sarnia Yacht Club, July 11-17.

Medal winners were, 1) Gretchen Uznis (Bayview Yacht Club), 11 3/4 points; 2) Christin Feldman (Bayview) and Laurie Chappell (Sarnia), 17 3/4 points; 3) Sarah Deeds (Crescent Sail Yacht Club), 19 3/4 points; 4) Lila LaHood (Grosse Pointe Yacht Club), 20 points; 5) Bridget Murray (Grosse Pointe Yacht Club), 24 points.

International judge Lynn Steadman Jr., USYRU senior judge Mike Thompson and U.S. Women's Sailing Championship committee representative Debbie Stormes-Schoenherr felt the high level of conduct exhibited by all of the women during the event warranted giving the sportsmanship award to the entire group.

Kira Christian (Crescent Sail Yacht Club) won a duffle bag donated by Avon Sailboats Ltd.

Uznis was also awarded the Perpetual Trophy, a new silver cup given by Bayview. She and Feldman will represent DRYA at the National Finals of the U.S. Junior Women's Sailing Championship for the Nancy Leiter Claggett Trophy Aug. 18-23, in Newport, R.I. An all-day sailing clinic will be followed by three days of intense racing between young women sailors from all over the United States.

The winner of the Leiter will become a member of the 1990 USYRU/Rolex Junior Sailing Team.

Woods resident Kay Baubie represented USYRU's Junior Women's Sailing Committee.

Boat Club begins session

The Grosse Pointe Farms Boat Club started the second half of its 11th annual Thursday Summer Sailboat Series, with Paramour taking first in PHRF A.

The following lists the top finishers in each division, including boat name and skipper.

PHRF A: 1, Paramour, P. Andrepoint; 2, Wind Walker, W. Srigley; 3, Defiant, D. Schulte.

PHRF B: 1, Riddler, D. Riddell; 2, Sonset, H. Gorenflo; 3, Chasing Rainbows, J. Soltesz.

PHRF C: 1, Christmas, G. Dysert; 2, Contagious, J. Rhien and J. Fairbanks.

JAM B: 1, Houyhnhnm, G. Schumacher and W. Lee; 2, Gotcha Again, D. and G. Goschka; 3, Tyros, G. and G. Barker.

JAM C: 1, True Blue, M. Gobel; 2, Elixir, S. Momjian; 3, Puffin, G. Prieur.

Mondry has edge in Chicago race

By Rob Fulton
Sports Editor

Eugene Mondry only needed someone new, someone old and nothing borrowed to win the overall flag in the Chicago to Mackinac sailboat race July 28.

And by no means is he blue.

Mondry, a member of the Bayview Yacht Club, ran his spinnaker the entire way in the 333-mile race up Lake Michigan. Just one week before winning the race, Mondry skipped Leading Edge to a fifth-place finish in the International Offshore Rule (IOR) A division in the Port Huron to Mackinac race.

"This is an incredible win," Mondry, of Franklin, said. "I've been a class winner before, but it's always an added thrill to win the overall."

Something he's done only once before.

"We had a great crew," Mondry said. "This was only our second race of the season. We had some new guys on board, as well as some older guys. It was a nice blend that worked out for us."

Although the crew worked well together, Mondry admits it wasn't a race of quick, drastic changes or decisions.

"This wasn't a race involving a lot of decisions," said Mondry,

I've been a class winner before, but it's always an added thrill to win the overall.

third base was a load of piled up trees. Home plate was just a circle traced in the dirt by a shoe, so it was just like the ball parks we used to design as kids.

We didn't use gloves, just bare, brute hands to field the ball.

We made the Field of Dreams come alive in this bug-infested area that showed no signs of life. A strong wind to left allowed Dave to crank the ball, but he and the rest of his teammates, including me, lost. Please believe me, though, it was a small margin of victory.

It was a weekend of fun and frolic in the land of tranquility. This was truly God's country, and it gave us the chance to be college nerds all over again.

From striking out Frank on a curve ball, to lacing a tree with a tee shot, that weekend was one that allowed each of us the opportunity to "play" again.

101 PRAYERS

NOVENA TO ST. JUDE
May the Sacred Heart of Jesus be adored, glorified, loved and preserved throughout the world now and forever. Oh, Sacred Heart of Jesus, pray for us. Workers of miracles, pray for us. St. Jude helper of the hopeless, pray for us.

Say this prayer 9 times a day. By the 8th day your prayer will be answered. It has never been known to fail, never. Publication must be promised. Thanks St. Jude for prayer answered. Special thanks to our Mother of Perpetual Help. L.H.

101 PRAYERS

THANKSGIVING NOVENA TO ST. JUDE

O Holy St. Jude apostle and martyr, great in virtue and rich in miracles; dear kinsman of Jesus Christ, faithful intercessor of all who invoke your special patronage in time of need. To you I have recourse from the depth of my heart and humbly beg to whom God has given such great power to come to my assistance. Help me in my present and urgent position. In return I promise to make your name known and cause you to be invoked.

Say three Our Fathers, three Hail Mary's and three Glorias. Publication must be promised. St. Jude pray for us and all who invoke your aid. Amen. This Novena has never been known to fail. I have had my request granted, publication promised. W. H. G. . . M C

PRAYER TO ST. CLARE

Say 9 Hail Marys a day for 9 days. The 9th day publish this ad and 3 wishes will be granted. Also, thanks to St. Jude and the Holy Spirit and Infant Child of Prague. R.S.

101 PRAYERS

O SACRED HEAD

O head, all gashed and gory! O'envolved in woe and scorn; O head, the angels glory! Yet pierced by many a thorn. Far other fate should meet thee, far other be thy crown: a thousand times I greet thee, while tears of love flow down.

Thy cheeks are wan and faded, thy lips are ghastly white, thy beauty quite o'er shaded in death's obscure night. Yet tender love is lighting E'en still thy sacred face, poor sinners still inviting to undeserved grace.

Ah Lord, the thorns thou wearest should pierce my guilty brow: beneath the cross thou bearest my guilty back should bow: the cruel whips that tore thee, mine, mine alone should be: yet Jesus, I implore thee, turn not thy face from me.

When my last hour is kneeling forsake me not, I pray; but shades of death dispelling be thou my light, my stay. O face, now gashed and gory! What joy it is for me, to hope one day in glory thy gracious smile to see. Say often in great need.

SPAY or NEUTER YOUR PET TODAY!

An altered pet is a healthier and happier companion. Also, it spares you the grief and pain of having puppies and kittens destroyed when no homes can be found. Countless numbers of sweet, innocent little ones are euthanized every day in shelters across the country because a pet wasn't spayed or neutered. If we cut down on the numbers of unwanted litters being born, we will also cut down on the number of abandoned, lost and unwanted animals to destroy.
