

Dog helps MS sufferer win her uphill battle

By Ronald J. Bernas
Staff Writer

Judy Attie needs to exercise to keep the effects of her multiple sclerosis at bay, so she rides her three-wheeled bicycle.

She lives at the top of a hill so the first part of the trip is easy, but she doesn't have enough energy to get back up the hill to home.

"I used to tell my kids 'meet me at the bottom of the hill in 15 minutes,'" Attie said. "And they'd come and push me up the hill, or my neighbors would help."

But now she has help from an unlikely source: the family dog, Mickie.

For a while Mickie would go along with Attie on the rides as a sightseer, but Attie thought perhaps the German shepherd mix could be put to use getting her back up the hill.

Grosse Pointe dog trainer Carolyn House was brought in to train Mickie to pull the bike.

For a year House has been working with the dog, using food placed on the road to motivate Mickie to pull.

"She enjoys the food and eventually she'll enjoy the pulling, too," House said.

"We've not had all successes," Attie said. "We've had some failures, but Mickie's very loving and very dedicated. And she always tries."

It's become a family affair, too.

"When my husband or my son stands at the top of the hill Mickie just — as my son would say — hauls," Attie said. "We get going pretty fast sometimes."

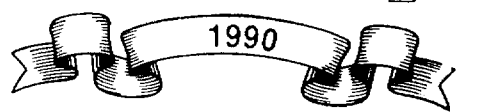

Mickie was a stray a year ago when the Atties got her from the Grosse Pointe Animal Clinic.

"She was ugly, scrawny, she had fleas and worms," Attie remembers. "My husband, Tony, absolutely did not want this Foes of the expansion of Detroit City Airport are encouraged by recent votes of the Detroit City Council and the Planning Commission which they feel reveal growing dissension over the project among city officials.

The Detroit Planning Commission recently recommended that the City Council not move forward with the project. The council however, not bound by the commission's recommendation, voted 6-3 to continue expansion plans.

But those in the Pointes who oppose the expansion are gaining confidence that they will eventually win the war.

Jack King is the head of the Grosse Pointes-Harper Woods Airport Study Committee for Detroit City Airport — the group that encouraged the cities to pool their funds and hire an attorney to study the project and find the weak spots.

The committee hired former Transportation Secretary James Burnley IV. His investigation found that not only did Detroit fail to file the documents properly, it hadn't completed all the necessary studies. Additionally, the report showed that there was no feasible way the city could pay for the proposed $501 million project.

The cities agreed to keep Burnley on and fund more work by his firm and others to fight the airport expansion. That fight will continue, King said, despite the City Council's decision to move forward.

"I was delighted that the Planning Commission voted to reject the proposed expansion plan," King said. "I was appalled that the City Council voted to approve the plan in that it did not have before it all the information."

King said the council should have waited until it had environmental impact, noise pollution and economic impact studies.

"The vote means nothing to the work we're doing in opposition," King said. "The cities voted to continue with the fight until the FAA says they (Detroit) can't build."

Burnley and his group will continue the fight at the state and local levels until that time, King said.

Grosse Pointe Shores Village President Ed Brady was named chairman of the steering group of Pointe mayors at its Nov. 21 meeting in all matters dealing with the City Airport fight.

He says a number of encouraging things have happened that will help the Pointes and other suburbs opposing the expansion.

One was the Nov. 6 passage of the bond issue for a major expansion at Detroit Metro Airport. The second was the election the same day of John Engler to the governor's seat.

"Engler is on record as being

The magic of the season

There is nothing so warming as the wonder of a child viewing a lighted tree. Here, Brian Harning of Grosse Pointe City, held by his mother Susan, looks at the lights on the city's living Christmas tree at the corner of St. Clair and Kercheval. The dedication and lighting took place Nov. 20. More photos, including some of the Santa Claus Parade in the Village, are on page 18A.

Doug Andrus has herded Herefords in Oregon and tracked narcotics for the military; he has wiped down new cars for 25 cents each and taught at the Air Force Academy in Colorado; he has traveled to more than a dozen countries under a half-dozen passports and escorted dignitaries like Bob Hope and President Gerald Ford.

And now at the ripe old age of 37, Andrus owns his own company along with his brother, whom he calls his best friend.

"The Spaniards have a beautiful saying: Life's a celebration," Andrus said. "I have that inside me. You create your own life. You create your own opportunities."

Andrus, whose father managed an auto dealership in Detroit for 40 years, spent his early years around cars and cows. The cows came from his mother's side of the family, cattle ranchers in Oregon.

He and his older brother Dennis spent their summers working for their uncles on a ranch. "It's a whole different life," he said. "We made our own buttermilk and smoked ham. Every day we'd go out to the hen house and get eggs. I learned how to hunt and I learned how to really camp."

The family lived in St. Clair Shores and the brothers attended Lakeshore schools from kindergarten through high school.

They lived across the street from the Lakepointe Country Club where his brother was a caddy. It's ironic, Andrus said, that they are now involved in the development of Lakepointe Towers condominiums located on the golf course.

After the 1967 riots in Detroit, Andrus's father went to work for Ken Meade, and Andrus, at 14,

Suspect faces possible life term in assault on elderly Park couple

By John Minnis
Assistant Editor

A 32-year-old, three-time convict faces life in prison in the Nov. 7 assault and armed robbery of an elderly Park couple.

Samuel Roberson, of Detroit, stood mute at his arraignment before Park Municipal Judge Kirsten Frank Nov. 20. Frank denied bail, and Roberson was sent to the Wayne County Jail to await his preliminary exam in Municipal Court.

Roberson is charged with first degree criminal sexual conduct and two counts of armed robbery, all felonies carrying a maximum sentence of life in prison. In a separate incident, he is charged with one count of larceny from a person.

The two were assaulted in the apartment building they manage on Maryland at Jefferson. The 86-year-old woman was assaulted and robbed in the basement of the apartment building. Roberson allegedly had a screwdriver and a knife as weapons.

As Roberson was forcing the woman upstairs, he was surprised by a delivery man, according to police. Roberson then encountered the woman's 85-year-old husband, who was also allegedly assaulted and robbed.

Police quickly identified Roberson as a prime suspect, and detectives obtained arrest warrants. On Nov. 10, when a woman's purse was snatched at St. Clair Catholic Church, police learned more regarding Roberson's whereabouts and were able to recover rings that were taken from the elderly woman and the purse that was grabbed at the church.

Park Public Safety Deputy Director William Furtaw said that while detectives were working on the case involving the elderly couple, they were also looking into the purse-snatching and learned that the suspect in both cases was the same man — Roberson.

"You can't afford to let anything slide," Furtaw said. "As a result of their tireless efforts over the past two-week period, a very dangerous individual has been taken into custody."

Detective Lt. David Hiller said the witnesses at the church deserve credit for coming forward with key information.

Furtaw said Roberson is also suspected of assaults and robberies in Detroit's 5th Precinct.

Roberson turned himself in at about 7 p.m. Nov. 19 to Detroit police on the west side. Furtaw said Roberson told police that he surrendered because he was tired, knew he was wanted and had no place to go.

According to police, Roberson has served three prison terms for robbery, burglary and assault. "He has spent 12 years of his life in prison," Furtaw said.

Woods Arbor outlet can sell beer and wine, but not liquor

By Dan Jarvis
Staff Writer

The Michigan Liquor Control Commission (LCC) has granted a license for the sale of beer and wine at the Arbor Drugs outlet on Mack in Grosse Pointe Woods, but has denied the firm's application for a liquor license at the site, said a company spokesman.

Also denied was a request for a special Sunday permit for the sale of liquor from the store.

The LCC found that the new Arbor store at 20460 Mack in Grosse Pointe Woods is too close to a nearby church and is too close to existing liquor outlets along Mack.

John Stora, deputy director of licensing for the LCC, said after an application for a liquor license is received, the commission sends an investigator to the area.

The investigator found that the Arbor store was within 500 feet of Christ the King Lutheran Church, and thus violated section 17A of the Michigan Liquor Control Act, stating that an applicant must not be within 500 feet of a church or school.

The investigator's report further revealed that the store is within 2,640 feet of three existing liquor outlets, again voiding the application. According to the report, the store is within that distance of Rokin Pharmacy, Oxford Beverage and Rosemary Hage.

Stora said if an applicant wishes to appeal a denial, the applicant must request a hearing before the Liquor Control Commission within 20 days.

The Arbor spokesman said the store and its owner, Arbor Drugs Inc. of Troy, will not appeal the LCC's denial.

The spokesman said the 11,000-square-foot store, which opened Nov. 5, has created 28 jobs in the community.

The Woods store is the company's 106th outlet in the state. Arbor says it plans to open another 44 stores in Michigan by 1993.

Pointes to get bids for curbside recycling

By Ronald J. Bernas
Staff Writer

The communities that make up the Grosse Pointes-Clinton Refuse Disposal Authority may soon be getting curbside recycling.

The authority's board recently put General Manager Ed Whedon in charge of coordinating bids for curbside pickup of recyclables in Grosse Pointe City, Shores, Park and Farms and Harper Woods. Grosse Pointe Woods already has curbside pickup.

Whedon said each city will be bid separately. Bids will be opened Dec. 12.

Whedon said 25 percent of the waste stream is made up of recyclable materials. Another 15 to 20 percent is made up of leaves and grass which will not be allowed in landfills by 1994 according to state law.

But recycling may mean higher costs for incineration of the refuse.

"The whole recycling push is going to take a bit out of the incineration," Whedon said, "which will have to be made up either by charging more per ton for incineration or by taking in outside tonnage."

Whedon said the amount of trash burned is down 1,000 tons from the same time a year ago, but Whedon says recycling may not have anything to do with that decline.

"Last year at this time we were burning leaves which we now compost," he said. "It could also be the economy."

He said when the economy is sluggish, people don't buy new things and therefore don't throw out old things.

The incinerator has operated continuously since April when it was reopened after being closed for more than a year when it failed routine testing. There have been no problems since it reopened, Whedon said.

Park discontinues grass collection

As of Thursday, Nov. 29, the city of Grosse Pointe Park will discontinue its seasonal curbside pick-up of grass clippings.

On July 30, the park began curbside pick-up of grass clippings in an effort to reduce the waste going to the incinerator at the Grosse Pointes-Clinton Disposal Authority.

The discontinuation of the pick-up service is for the winter months only and should resume in the spring or early summer.

Spend a semester in Europe this spring

Four o'clock will take on a whole new meaning for a group of students from Macomb and Oakland community colleges this spring. It's tea time in England and that's where the two colleges will be sponsoring Macomb's first semester abroad, May 15 to July 3, 1991.

"Study abroad has traditionally been the province of four-year institutions," said Susan Calkins, trip organizer and international studies professor at Macomb. "This trip is part of a broad effort to bring an international perspective to the community college curriculum."

The trip is open to any resident of Macomb or Oakland County who registers for two classes through either MCC or OCC.

For six and a half weeks, the students will make their homes in Langley, a medium-sized town about 25 miles west of London by train. College courses will be taught by professors from Macomb, Oakland, and England's nearby Langley College.

The courses sponsored by Macomb are "Selected Studies in Film - British Cinema" and "Understanding Theatre I." Oakland Community College will sponsor "Poetry and Drama," and "Contemporary World," a history course taught by a British professor.

Field trips to such places as Bath, Stratford, and Stonehenge will enhance each class, but the learning experiences on this trip won't be limited to course work.

Each student will live and learn with a British host family. Breakfast and dinner will be served daily, along with a hefty dose of British family life.

The approximate program cost is $2,742 per person, with the first payment due by Feb. 14. The price includes air fare, a private room, two meals a day, listed field trips, two theater tickets, and a travel insurance policy. Tuition, books and any personal expenses are extra. Tuition per credit hour is $38 at Macomb Community College and $37 at Oakland Community College.

An informal meeting regarding the trip is tentatively scheduled for December. If you have any questions or would like to sign up for the meeting or the trip, call Susan Calkins or Phil Barrens at 445-7281 or leave a message at 445-7286.

Hudson on Woods bench; Gilezan on council

By Dan Jarvis
Staff Writer

The Woods City Council, after a four-week search, has appointed resident Herbert C. Huson, an attorney practicing in St. Clair Shores, as municipal judge to fill the remainder of retiring Judge Patricia Schneider's term, which ends in November 1991.

Huson was named during the Nov. 19 council meeting after a special session Nov. 15 to review candidates for the job.

The City Council also named veteran planning commission member Peter R. Gilezan to serve as Woods councilman, replacing Robert Novitke who was recently elected mayor by the council after the retirement of George Freeman.

Huson, a Grosse Pointe resident for the past 17 years, earned a bachelor's and a master's degree in English and a doctor of veterinary medicine degree from Michigan State University. He earned his juris doctor degree from the Detroit College of Law.

He and his wife live in Grosse Pointe Woods.

A former associate with two major law firms in the Detroit area, Huson was co-founder of the partnership of Witkowski and Huson of St. Clair Shores. He currently runs his own private practice, Herbert Huson P.C. of St. Clair Shores.

A native of Lawrence, Mass., Huson taught law at Macomb Community College and the Detroit College of Business.

"I'm thrilled to be chosen as the Woods' municipal judge," Huson said. "I'm in awe of my predecessor, Pat Schneider, and I intend to carry out the principles she started. It is a great honor to be chosen."

Huson is a member of the Michigan and American bar associations, a director and treasurer of the Trial Lawyers Association of Michigan and a mediator with the American Arbitration Association.

A member of the Lochmoor Club, Huson was featured in the 1989 "Who's Who in Practicing Attorneys in America."

Gilezan has been a member of the planning commission for 16 years and has served on several ad-hoc committees and was instrumental in conducting the city's parking and recreation studies.

He is employed by Chrysler as director of stationary environmental affairs, a department which oversees the disposal of toxic chemicals used during manufacturing processes.

He is a member of the Detroit Chamber of Commerce, the Michigan Chamber of Commerce, a former member of St. Michael's Episcopal Church and a former regional chairman for the United Foundation.

A woods resident for the past 28 years, Gilezan is married and has a daughter and son.

"I believe concern has to have responsibility. We all have the responsibility to get involved and do something," Gilezan said. "We all have an obligation to pay our dues to the best of our ability."

"I have financial, technical and managerial qualifications which can benefit the city and the time has come to make them available. I'm quite proud of what I have been able to accomplish."

Gilezan earned a bachelor of arts degree in finance from Walsh College in Detroit (now located in Troy).

Where there's smoke...

Grosse Pointe Park public safety officers battled a garage fire in the 1200 block of Beaconsfield Nov. 11. According to Park Lt. David Hiller, the fire was accidentally started by a wood-burning stove in the garage. While the roof was destroyed, the garage's solid brick construction prevented a total loss.

Goodfellows out Monday to help needy kids

Detroit's 258 Old Newsboys, assisted by police officers, will hit uptown and downtown street corners on Monday, Dec. 3, from 11 a.m. to 1:30 p.m., selling Goodfellow editions of the Detroit News and Free Press to raise money for 39,000 packages for needy kids.

Goodfellow President Frank Dierwa said that this year's goal of $900,000 is the most ambitious in the group's 77-year history.

"Our goal is high, but we won't stop working until we make it because the Old Newsboys are determined that no child go without a Christmas," Dierwa said. "Detroit children need to know that someone cares. We've already bought the merchandise on credit and now we have to raise the money to pay for it."

Goodfellow committees have been busy since last January and months ago completed their off-season buying. The gifts are being packaged in The Detroit News warehouse according to age and sex of recipients. Three out of five school children in grades kindergarten through 8 will receive a Goodfellow box.

"Our members take great pride in the fact that every single dollar they raise is used for the children," Dierwa said. "All administrative costs are paid by the Old Newsboys. And that's what I call pure charity!"

Dierwa added that in addition to Christmas packages, the Old Newsboys' Goodfellow Fund also carries on a year-round shoe program that supplies shoes for schoolchildren on request of the attendance department of the Detroit Board of Education.

A dental program in cooperation with the U-D Dental School provides dental care for needy children between the ages of 5 and 13, while a long-time campership project sends hundreds of deprived city kids to summer camp.

Lists of children scheduled to receive Goodfellow boxes are provided by teachers and the attendance department of the Detroit Board of Education.

If you miss your Old Newsboy on Dec. 3, mail your tax-deductible contribution to the Old Newsboys' Goodfellow Fund of Detroit, Post Office Box 44444, Detroit, Mich. 48244-0444.

Park man assaulted during armed theft at Farms Kroger

A 38-year-old Park man who refused to cooperate during an armed robbery at the Farms Kroger store Nov. 24 was assaulted by one of the gunmen.

The victim told police he and another man were the last ones leaving the store at Mack and Moross at 10:05 p.m. when they came face to face with two men. One of the men pointed a shotgun at the men and ordered them back into the store.

One of the men returned to the store, but the Park man refused, and the gunman then kicked him in the side, according to police reports.

A store employee was in the store's office counting money when she heard a banging noise. As she began to run to an exit, the gunman jumped over the wall partition into the office. He told the employee to get down and keep quiet.

He opened the door for his accomplice, who went to the safe, which was open, and took the cash that was in it. The gunman grabbed cash and rolled coins from one of the tills.

The robbers escaped in a car driven by a third accomplice. The amount of cash taken was not disclosed. Police are following some leads.

City's Lt. Al Fincham to attend FBI academy

John Minnis
Assistant Editor

Seventeen years after beginning his career as a firefighter with Grosse Pointe City, Al "Skip" Fincham is receiving a top honor — as a police officer.

Fincham, now a lieutenant with the Public Safety Department, has been invited to attend the FBI National Academy in Quantico, Va.

He will be one of eight veteran law enforcement officers from Michigan and a couple hundred from around the nation and world who will attend the 10-week advanced-training program, which runs from Jan. 6 through March 22.

"It will be an opportunity to attend the best available program ever offered," Fincham said. "It's like being selected to go to West Point. It's an elite, highly recommended program, and I feel honored to be chosen."

Last year, Park Deputy Public Safety Director William Furtaw attended the program and Fincham's bosses — Director Bruce Kennedy and Deputy Director Richard Clarke — have both attended the course.

One of the most memorable parts of the FBI training is the physical fitness program, which culminates in the "Yellow Brick Road" — a three-mile obstacle course designed to test the mettle of Marine Corps officer candidates. Furtaw, 50, completed the course.

"Deputy Director Furtaw has explained it to me," Fincham said of the Yellow Brick Road, "and if he can do it, I can do it. ... Now I have to do it, if you print that."

Fincham is 39 years old.

The only way an officer can get into the academy's program

Furniture sought for needy families

The Salvation Army and Workbench Furniture have joined forces in an effort to collect hundreds of pieces of furniture for families in need throughout southeastern Michigan. The "Furniture For Families" program will run from Nov. 23 through Dec. 14.

Those interested in making a donation of usable furniture can arrange for furniture pick-up by calling The Salvation Army at (313) 965-7760 weekdays between 8 a.m. and 4:30 p.m.

As an added incentive, upon presentation of a receipt from The Salvation Army stating a donation of furniture has been made between Nov. 23 and Dec. 14, Workbench Furniture will give the bearer of the receipt a 15 percent discount off any item in its Southfield, Ann Arbor and Birmingham stores. Donors will have until Dec. 23 to use the discount.

Lt. Al Fincham of the Grosse Pointe City Public Safety Department started his career as a firefighter, but he was honored as a law enforcement officer by being invited to attend the FBI National Academy.

for law enforcement veterans is to be nominated by his or her police chief and, after an exhaustive background check, be invited by FBI Director William Sessions. Kennedy wholeheartedly endorsed Fincham's acceptance to the academy, as did the City Council.

"This invitation is an honor for both the candidate and the city of Grosse Pointe," Kennedy said. "He is an outstanding officer, one of my best. He's a good public safety officer and a fine young man."

While at the academy, officers learn the latest in law enforcement techniques, behavioral sciences, legal aspects of police work, administration, stress management, forensic science and can take several courses of the officers' choice. The 17 course credit hours are offered in conjunction with the University of Virginia.

Fincham was hired as a firefighter on July 1, 1973. He was promoted to lieutenant in 1986. In the interim, something happened that drastically changed his working life: Grosse Pointe City combined its fire and police departments into a single public safety department in 1979.

"It was a complete career change," he said of suddenly having to become a police officer and carry a gun. And at first he was resistant to the change.

"It's natural for the firefighter to feel threatened by change," Fincham said. "Nobody likes to change after doing something for a number of years. I, of course, was no exception."

But he went along with the new arrangement and completed the police academy at Macomb Community College. He also became a certified Breathalyzer operator and attended a Detroit Metropolitan Police Academy seminar on homicide prevention.

Fincham had previously graduated from Macomb's fire training academy, and he teaches at the college as a state certified instructor. He is a level II fire officer, only a couple of steps away from the highest level.

He spent a week in 1978 with the Detroit arson squad and a week in the evidence technician bureau.

During his years of service with the city, he has been awarded a medal of honor, two citations and six commendations.

Over the years, Fincham has come to realize that the public safety concept works well in communities like Grosse Pointe, and he's glad he became cross-trained.

"Now that we've been into this a number of years," he said,

"my outlook has changed drastically. I actually enjoy the work."

He said being a police and fire officer gives him more opportunity to meet the public and promote fire safety and crime prevention.

When it comes to teaching kids about fire safety, Fincham goes out of his way. To help get his message across to children, he and fellow public safety Officer Paul Onderbeke bought a 1926 fire truck. They take the old truck to schools and drive it in parades, such as the Thanksgiving Christmas Parade in the Village last week.

While playing at the steering wheel and whirling the old manual-crank siren, the kids learn about fire and have fun. Fincham seems to have fun as well.

"It's unique. I think that I am one of the few people attending the academy who started out as a firefighter," he said. "I know I'm the only one going who has his own fire truck."

But while Fincham is excited about going to the academy, he's also leery of the "ever present, ominous Yellow Brick Road," he said.

"Deputy Director Furtaw advised me months ago to start running," Fincham said, "and I have."

Pointes vow to continue to battle airport

Even though the Detroit City Council approved the Detroit City Airport master plan last week, the Grosse Pointes have vowed to continue their opposition to the huge expansion of the city facility.

Despite opposition by the City Planning Commission and criticism by both Detroit daily newspapers, the Detroit council voted by a 6 to 3 margin in favor of going ahead even though several members had sought a delay in order to get an environmental impact study, a noise abatement study and a finance plan.

The Planning Commission cast a 4-to-1 nonbinding vote against the expansion. Chairman John Slater said that "losing 2,000 jobs and spending $501 million without any guarantee of replacing those jobs was a major problem."

Opinion

A Detroit News editorial flatly urged the council to "kill the gold-plated airport" on the grounds the $501 million cost would make it the largest land acquisition scheme ever undertaken by the city.

In its editorial, the Free Press urged the council to get answers to its questions about the effects of increased noise and air pollution on residents in the city, the suburbs and nearby Canadian areas as well as the consequences of the expansion for safety, ground traffic and property values.

While the council action does not authorize the city to begin work, it apparently does enable planning for the project to continue. The expansion would quadruple the size of the airport and increase the number of flights tenfold.

Pointe foes of the expansion, representing both official and civilian committees, still can find additional support for their opposition. Gov.-elect John Engler said during his campaign that residents in the path of the expansion should be heard and indicated his own personal opposition to state expenditures for the project.

If he maintains an opposition stance, Engler as a Republican governor and a Michigan chairman for President Bush in the 1988 campaign also would be in a position to delay or halt Detroit's attempt to get the federal government to pay $343.1 million to help finance the project.

The Pointes base their opposition on their concern about further noise and environmental pollution, the increased hazards to flight safety, the possible loss of property values and, in general, the potential damage to the high quality of life in the Pointes.

Support for the expansion is reportedly highest among some Detroit homeowners in the path of the project but many other residents of the area are highly critical of the plan.

Overall, it involves destroying 3,600 occupied and 600 vacant homes, removing more than 50 industries that employ several thousand people and wiping out other commercial establishments even though many property owners do not want to move.

Mayor Coleman Young of Detroit and his staff seldom have listened to complaints about their pet development projects either from city or suburban residents, but with the governor-elect's help it is surely possible that the Pointes and their supporters still will be able to halt or delay the airport expansion plan.

Detroit 'looks like a million'

Detroit finally "looks like a million," as the Detroit Free Press headline told us last week even though the city still faces many major problems.

The reference was, of course, to the fact that the city of Detroit had been successful in its frantic search for additional residents in order to keep the city's population above that magic million number.

The figure is important because nearly two dozen state laws apply only to cities of one million people or more which is the state Legislature's way of writing laws that pertain only to the city of Detroit.

But the finding, when confirmed, will also mean that the city will lose less revenue than feared even though its total population will drop to just barely 1 million for 1990 as contrasted with 1,203,368 in 1980.

After a several weeks' campaign, Mayor Coleman Young had submitted more than 92,000 "Were You Counted?" forms to the U.S. Census Bureau and predicted an increase of about 121,000 people in the city's census rolls.

However, federal officials said last week that Detroit's population had passed 1 million in the course of the normal bureau follow-up and the gain had nothing to do with the city's campaign for registration of people previously missed.

Detroit apparently sustained the largest percentage of loss of any large American city in the last decade but many other large cities in the country also took lower census counts than they expected. And most of them are complaining as loudly as Detroit has done.

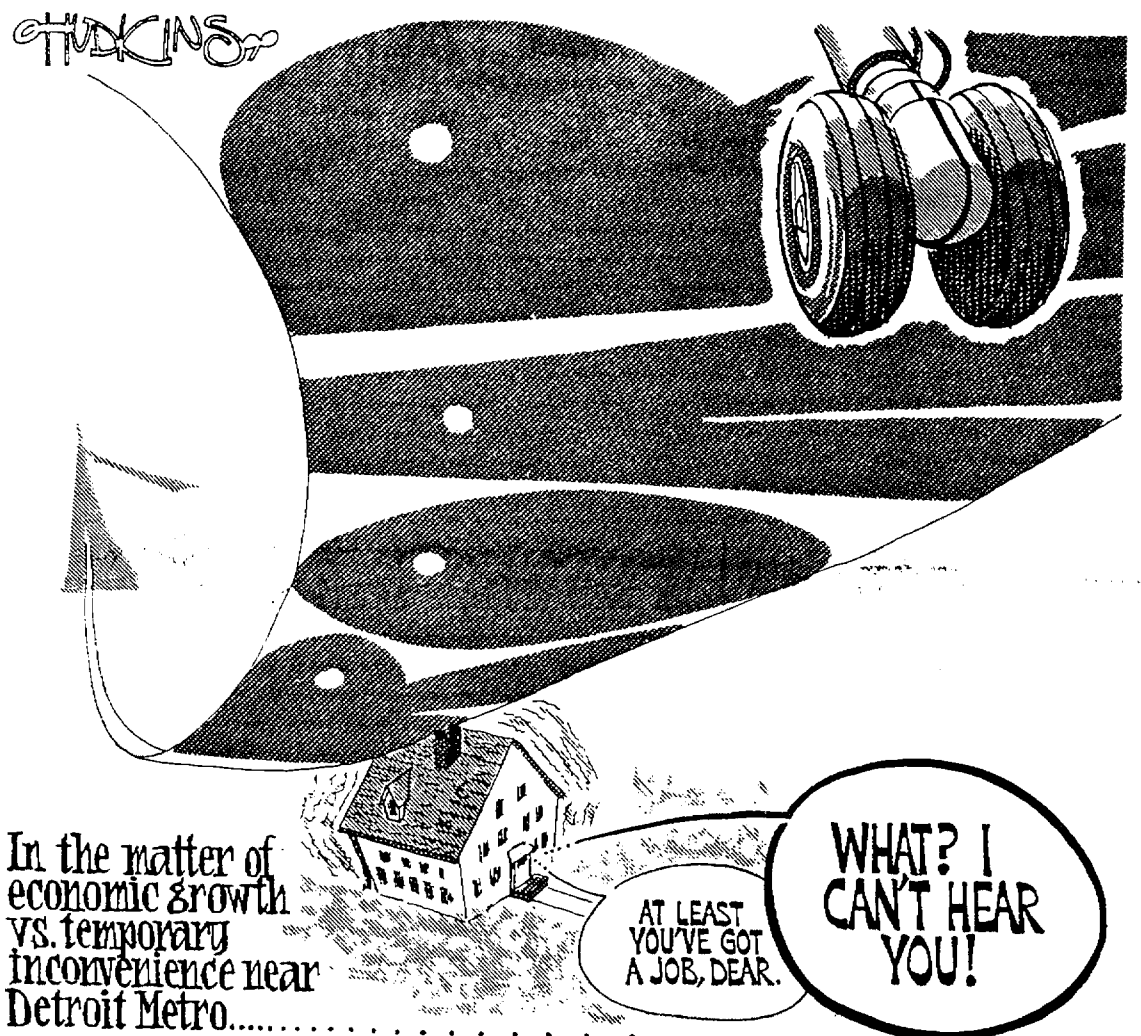

Part of the urban trouble is that while central city populations have declined in Detroit and other cities, the cost of services continues to rise. Those costs go up because many older citizens, members of minorities and underprivileged people who remain require costly public services.

In addition, the older cores of these cities also need more fire protection, increased police protection and more maintenance costs for streets and public buildings because of aging buildings, increased crime and lack of finances for proper upkeep.

The physical, educational and financial problems of inner city schools contribute to the overall sense of crisis. And it is difficult to see where hope for improvement lies without a massive regeneration program financed by federal and state sources and including private development money.

However, with both the state and federal governments now pleading poverty, it is unlikely that any massive injections of aid can be expected in the short term. In fact, some of the blame for the continuing decline of cities such as Detroit must be directed at the federal government's elimination of urban support programs and financing in recent years.

It is easy for non-residents of metro areas to say that the decline in population and economic status of America's cities is not their responsibility. Yet the needs of the big cities are so great that only a policy of broader burden-sharing will enable them to survive as something better than disaster areas.

Letters

Traffic

To the Editor:

We sympathize with Kerry Sample's complaint (Letters, Nov. 15) about the traffic problem in the area of the Hill.

As longtime residents of McMillan, we have also been concerned about the increasing traffic in the area. One thing not mentioned in Kerry's letter is the increasing development on the Hill.

The number and size of buildings has been increasing for many years. Now the Punch and Judy Theater has become an office and retail building; the last of the residences between Kercheval and Ridge on Muir have been replaced by an office and retail building; the Grosse Pointe News itself has moved to a newer, much bigger building across the street; and Cottage Hospital is about to expand its emergency facilities.

All this growth is bound to generate more traffic, and the existing streets were laid out for residential traffic. Plans to improve and expedite the flow of traffic to and from the Hill area are bound to fail with the existing roads. There simply isn't the capacity to handle more traffic.

This is not a question of which street is going to take up the heavier traffic. The question facing residents of the Farms from Fisher to Moran and beyond is whether we want to live in a residential neighborhood or a business district.

City Council seems to have decided that there will be a business district here. We would prefer a residential neighborhood. We think many of our neighbors would agree.

Poet

To the Editor:

Last week's News included a letter which asked about the poet George Cooper, who wrote "Come, Little Leaves."

Mr. Cooper has indeed written several other poems, which I found in the anthology, "One Thousand Poems for Children," edited by Elizabeth Hough Schreier, published by McCrae-Smith Company of Philadelphia in 1946.

Cooper's poems are: Baby-Land; Bob White; Come, Little Leaves; October's Party; Twenty Froggies; and The Wonderful Weaver.

But, surprise! This man wrote the lyrics of the old song, "Sweet Genevieve." I'll bet that many readers will recall the words, "The days may come, the days may go/ But still the hands of memory wave/ The blissful dreams of long ago."

There is no mention of this poet in the Biographical Dictionary. Maybe a librarian among us could tell us more.

MVP in the cards

To the Editor:

Who is the real Most Valuable Player? Just look at the (baseball) cards.

Rickey Henderson's rookie card increased in value 200 percent between the beginning and end of the 1990 season, according to Beckett Baseball Card Monthly.

Cecil Fielder's rookie card increased in value 3,500 percent between the beginning and end of the 1990 season, according to Beckett.

OK, we know the MVP decision is not based entirely on the value of baseball cards.

We rest our case anyway.

Is a 'new world order' next?

Hints from the Bush administration about the need for a "new world order" have aroused a wide range of critical responses in political and journalistic circles in this country.

Even the conservative viewpoints of the U.S. and British governments which would presumably be leaders in any "new world order" have begun to change in recent months.

Election results aroused hopes among GOP progressives that their star might be in the ascendancy once again as a result of the victory of several Republican governors who were not wedded to the right. And the president himself seems to have become a less conservative partisan than Ronald Reagan was.

In Britain, the United States lost its strongest ally with the retirement of British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher. Her successor, unknown at this writing, is expected to be more sympathetic to the European community but will lack the close ties Thatcher had to Washington.

True, the signing of the 34-nation Charter of Paris for a New Europe does signify the end of the cold war but since the treaty has no enforcement mechanism, it may become simply a forum for "permanent political discussion," as Thatcher once termed it.

Meanwhile, Eastern Europe faces ethnic divisions and the Soviet Union the possibility of disintegration. Even worse, the prospects of a bleak winter in the USSR led President Mikhail S. Gorbachev to hand

Western officials an urgent grocery list that included pork, beef, flour, butter, powdered milk and peanut oil.

The newspaper columnists, too, are worried about the wave of the future and any possible "new world order."

George Will, for example, thinks the United States "needs a more deGaulleist foreign policy, more stabilizing contact with concreteness: U.S. national sovereignty, U.S. national interests and U.S. national decisions." In short, we need to recognize, as de Gaulle did, "the political primacy of nations."

But Tom Wicker of the New York Times even questions the need for a single superpower, arguing that the United States can't manage its own affairs very well. With the nation heading into a depression, he feels the most pressing problems lie at home and that playing the superpower role abroad is increasingly hard to defend.

The cacophony about whether to go to war to oust Saddam Hussein is rising now that the Iraqi dictator apparently has been given a Jan. 1 deadline to get out of Saudi Arabia. Daily the American people are being warned that such a war would be fought chiefly by U.S. servicemen and women, even if under United Nations auspices.

Sorry, George. Development of any "new world order," if there is to be one, apparently will have to wait. The American people are not yet agreed about the need for the United States to act as a world policeman in support of the old order in the Middle East.

Pharmacists

To the Editor:

In the article printed Oct. 25 regarding the pharmacist, there was a comment made by Farms Public Safety Director Robert Ferber that "unfortunately, there are professionals, such as pharmacists, who take advantage of human suffering."

In response to that comment, fortunately, there are professionals, such as pharmacists, who try to prevent human suffering. The moral and ethical responsibility of the pharmacist is to instruct and educate the patient regarding the proper use of prescribed medications, before taking them. Pharmacists continually update their knowledge of medications already in use, as well as new releases.

In addition, a patient's pharmacist is always there to answer any questions or concerns about all medications, both prescription and over-the-counter.

A statement such as that made by Mr. Ferber lumps all pharmacists together as drug-pushers, and that is not so. In fact, the September Gallup poll rated pharmacists the most ethical profession — over clergy and physicians.

An apology for the inference and degradation of the profession of pharmacy is in order.

Carolers stroll the Hill

As part of the annual Hill Days celebration, Christmas carolers from Peace Lutheran Church strolled the area offering familiar Christmas songs. They are, from left, Claudia Conger, V.J. Minetola, Lisa Minetola, Joel Brammeir, Chris Rennison, John Townsend and Hollie Rudoni.

Pointe News writer Dan Jarvis has been very helpful, and we sincerely appreciate his interest and efforts.

We would also like to thank those from the community who have responded to our request for volunteers. The association will soon be forming a team of volunteers to assist with our Persian Gulf project.

The Persian Gulf Support Service was created for Grosse Pointe residents in the armed forces who are serving in Saudi Arabia or who have been displaced because of the conflict. The community's response to the Grosse Pointe News articles and the association's fliers is very encouraging — we have received nine names of individuals who are stationed in Saudi Arabia and two names of reservists called to active duty away from their families.

The association has responded by sending newsletters created specifically for the Persian Gulf Conflict Support project, several issues of the Grosse Pointe News, personal letters from different members of the association's staff, and several drawings and notes from the Brownies Troop at Kerby School. The association will continue to send a packet of materials to these individuals on a weekly basis.

When asked what types of items they want, the individuals in Saudi Arabia have responded with: small flashlights, AA and 9-volt batteries, Kool-Aid, Sweet-Tarts, music cassettes, books, magazines, crossword puzzles, board games, playing cards, Q-tips, Kleenex, Lifesavers, breath mints, hard candy, gum, small plastic bags — and the list goes on.

We are now seeking these types of items to send to each of the servicemen in "care packages" from the community. If you would like to participate, please bring these items to the War Memorial's drop box at the front desk or obtain a complete list of requested items by calling 881-7511.

Once again, we would like to say thanks! — to the Grosse Pointe News, to Dan Jarvis, and to the community. Please know that your generosity and interest is making a difference to the members of our community who are serving in Saudi Arabia or who have been displaced because of the Persian Gulf conflict.

Memories

To the Editor:

I have a treasure of memories as the mayor of Grosse Pointe Woods, with nearly 21 years of public service, and the past 11 years as mayor of this fine community.

It's like reaching for a star and touching it. It certainly was with mixed emotions that I resigned as mayor. I have enjoyed my memories and as I leave I must take a minute to thank all of you.

I would like to express my sincere thanks and gratitude to the residents, employees and many friends who have given me continued support during my 11 years as mayor of the city of Grosse Pointe Woods.

Being honored by your trust, I have always faithfully represented our community and strived to improve and maintain a high quality of life. It has always been my desire that Grosse Pointe Woods continually be a city alive with action and alert with vision for optimistic views for the future.

I believe if a man achieves happiness in his life, then and only then is he a success. This I accomplished 42 years ago when I married my wife Marilyn.

As tomorrow's dreams dance in my head, I must now count my blessings, be thankful for the opportunities of the future, and to all of you, thanks for your personal friendships.

The Grosse Pointe Shores Public Safety Department recently took delivery of its new 1990 ambulance. The Village Council approved the lease/purchase of the vehicle in its 1990-91 budget.

The modular-type emergency medical truck provides far more room and storage space than the ambulance van it replaces. The truck came with many amenities, including radio communication with any hospital, emergency strobes and an inverter to provide 110-volt A.C. power.

Ambulance service gets MIC unit

Universal Macomb Ambulance Inc., operating out of the Detroit-east area, recently added a new mobile intensive care (MIC) unit to its fleet of vehicles.

Universal Macomb Ambulance Service has served Macomb County for more than 20 years, operating out of facilities in Warren, Center Line and Sterling Heights. The company recently expanded its service area to the Detroit-east area.

Universal Macomb has a fleet of more than 15 ambulances, five wheelchair vans, two aid cars and two emergency disaster buses.

Farms approves site plan

By Dan Jarvis
Staff Writer

Following the September rezoning of the 40 Lakeshore property owned by the Grosse Pointe War Memorial, the Farms City Council Monday night approved the site plan for the property.

The War Memorial can now begin landscaping and fencing and making minor changes to the interior of the home.

But the site plan approval was anything but smooth.

Attorney John Lizza, speaking on behalf of nearby residents, said a 1941 deed placed several restrictions on the property including one that limited the property to residential use only.

Lizza said the deed restriction issue cannot be decided by the city and would most likely be resolved in a court of law. "The zoning decision cannot override the deed restrictions if the restrictions are valid and enforceable," Lizza said.

War Memorial Chairwoman M. Jane Kay said the center has met all of the city's requirements for the site plan and that the deed restrictions were not discovered until after the Sept. 10 rezoning approval.

"The War Memorial was not aware of the restrictions at the time of the sale or at the time of the rezoning," Kay said.

She said that the War Memorial is willing to work with neighbors to ensure privacy and is willing to construct a masonry wall between the center's auxiliary property and the residential property to the north.

Included in the site plan is the removal of an existing driveway which extends from Lakeshore to the house.

The property line along Lakeshore will be fenced and access to the house will be from the existing parking area near the War Memorial's carriage house.

The perimeter of the small lagoon area near the lake will be fenced, as will the area on the north side of the property, adjacent to the residential area.

Additional parking will be installed on the north side of the carriage house.

A water line will be installed in a loop around the center's Alger House to bring added water pressure to the area in case of fire.

War Memorial President Mark Weber said the house will be used for meetings, classes, seminars, art exhibits and offices.

The current garage, which will be used as an art studio, will have a permanent wall instead of garage doors.

The site plan was approved 4-2, with Harry Echlin and John Crowley voting to deny. Emil Berg, a partner of Lizza, abstained from voting.

Weber said the War Memorial plans to meet with its neighbor to the north before work on the property commences. Also, an architect will be brought in to bring the house up to code and design restrooms for the handicapped.

The War Memorial's main parking lot may be altered to maximize parking. An engineering plan for the new water line will be offered to the city for approval, Weber said.

A television interview with McPherson will air on Grosse Pointe Cable Channel 32 on Thursday, Nov. 29 at 1 p.m. and 5:30 p.m.; Friday, Nov. 30 at 1 p.m. and 7:30 p.m.; Saturday, Dec. 1 at 1 p.m. and 5:30 p.m.; and Sunday, Dec. 2 at 1 p.m. and 7:30 p.m.

A giant evergreen will be erected in front of the Alger Lights can be purchased from the War Memorial for $5. Before Christmas, a remembrance card will be mailed to the person specified by the donor.

In addition to paying tribute to that special person on your Christmas list, or to someone in the armed services or as a memorial to a loved one, donations will benefit the community by enabling better programming and services at the War Memorial.

For more information, call 881-7511.

Supporters have been receiving invitations to the event, which will feature delicacies from local restaurateurs. The supporters are asked to bring their donation pledge cards with them.

While the Taste of Grosse Pointe is designed to thank past supporters of the foundation, new contributors are invited to attend and fill out pledge cards.

The non-profit foundation raises funds for improvement projects in the Park. The foundation built the Tompkins Community Center at Windmill Pointe Park and plans to contribute the funds for a new gatehouse at the park. Future projects also include a boardwalk at Patterson Park and colonial lampposts along the recently completed boulevard on Jefferson.

The storms of November

Shipwrecks, sinkings and terror on the Great Lakes

By Joseph P. Wright
Special Writer

In Grosse Pointe's autumn, a "storm on the lakes" manifests itself mostly in winds howling down from Lake Huron — a last-gasp offering of a really big storm.

These are the winds that bring wild thrashings on the surface of Lake St. Clair, creating powerful waves that smash violently against Lakeshore's rocky seawall and send towering walls of water crashing across the drive.

But along the river towns of Port Huron, St. Clair, Marine City, Algonac — and all the downriver communities — autumn brings a lot of anxiety to a lot of people. The concern mounts in October and peaks as the dread month of November creeps or roars its way across the calendar.

A lot of fathers, sons, brothers, other relatives and friends are aboard the ships of the Great Lakes and, historically, the end of the shipping season has taken its fatal toll among sailors of all ranks from deckhand to captain. Brave men, they literally fought for their lives as their ships encountered storms, battled them fiercely — desperately — and then often broke up, foundered and sank with all hands lost.

Recollections of the Edmund Fitzgerald, or the great storm of Nov. 11, 1913, come to mind. They certainly are uppermost every November in the minds of wives and children of the men who sail the Great Lakes.

The storm of 1913 is the yardstick by which all other historic storms are measured.

As a kid raised in the Port Huron of the '20s, I remember tales of the "storm of November 1913," as well as stories of other great storms in Great Lakes history.

Port Huron is at the mouth of Lake Huron — half the town is on the lake's shore, half on the St. Clair River. The town sent many of its men to sailing careers, and every winter welcomed them back for their three-month, off-season stay.

During this hiatus, the older men — skippers, mates, engineers — would gather afternoons at the Lake Carriers' Hall, the Knights of Columbus, the Elks Club and other places for poker, conversation and reminiscence.

The younger seamen — deckhands and other crewmen — would meet around the pool, billiard and snooker tables and bowling alleys of Fenner's, Bill's Recreation and Peloso's. For the benefit, or envy, of their landlocked peers, they would spin tales of the wild life in such ports as Duluth, Cleveland, Buffalo, Milwaukee and Chicago.

If there had been a "big blow" that year, the sailors would tell of it — with magnifications, enhancements and exaggerations, of course — particularly concerning their parts in the storm.

Sailors generally agree that the worst storms come in November, and that four were of giant proportions. Author William Ratigan calls these four storms "Epics of violence and destruction, leaving in their wake incredible legends that are too wild for fiction and therefore must be confined to the naked bones of stark truth." They were:

(1) The Lake Huron storm of 1913; (2) The Lake Superior storm of 1905; (3) Lake Erie's Black Friday of October 1916 and (4) Lake Michigan's Armistice Day storm of November 1940.

Port Huron's wintering sailors, like sailors everywhere, boast of the ferocity of the storms they battled. It's a matter of pride. Sort of a "my-storm-was-worse-than-your-storm" sort of thing.

Veteran sailors were willing to argue the terror of storm-against-storm, but they would allow no one to speak in the same breath of any storm in comparison with any one of the "Big Four." And among the Big Four, November 1913's was by all odds rated the worst.

In his book "Great Lakes Shipwrecks and Survivals," Ratigan writes: "It is generally agreed that Lake Huron's (November) 1913 was the greatest ever to strike the Lakes. Beyond all argument it must be called the worst in loss of life and in loss of shipping. No other lake storm in modern history even begins to compare with its toll of 235 lives and 40 shipwrecks. No less than eight giant lake freighters went to the bottom of Lake Huron, disappearing with all hands. Not one survivor reached shore to tell what finally happened to any of the long, stout carriers."

Grosse Pointe's own Lake St. Clair, while not counted among the "great" lakes, still has its own small part in two of the four worst storms, connecting — as it does — the waters of Lake Huron and Lake Erie. Huron, to the north, was site of the worst storm, the fabled November 1913 disaster, and Erie, to the south, was the locale of the infamous "Black Friday" storm of October 1916. This, incidentally, was the only storm of the "four worst" to occur outside the month of November.

Most notable of recent storms were those that claimed the limestone carrier Carl D. Bradley, and the Edmund Fitzgerald. The Bradley met her doom on a wild and raging Lake Michigan in the last trip of the season on Tuesday, Nov. 18, 1958. She foundered and was lost. Of her crew of 35, a few were saved by clinging to inflatable life rafts thrown overboard.

The Fitzgerald, whose dramatic demise is memorialized in a popular Gordon Lightfoot ballad of 1976, "The Wreck of the Edmund Fitzgerald," was "christened" in 1958, the year the Bradley was lost. Seventeen years later, in a Lake Huron storm that blew up — the experts observed — "on a day like the Bradley went down," the Fitzgerald broke up and was lost "with all hands" — its full complement of 29 seamen.

The Fitz had been battling 30-foot waves in a 70 mph gale. She was being followed by the Anderson. Radio contact was lost. The Fitz literally disappeared from the lake's surface.

The fact that ships like the Bradley and Fitzgerald foundered and were lost despite being equipped with the latest navigational and safety gear attests to the almost demonic nature of the storms of November on the Great Lakes.

Grosse Pointe sailors are found mostly in summer sailboat regattas. But they know well the unpredictable furies of Lakes Huron and Michigan through sailing in the annual Port Huron-to-Mackinac and Chicago-to-Mackinac races.

There have been summers when furious storms ruined one or more races. The storms have splintered masts, torn hulls, beached boats. Just a few summers ago T.K. Lowery's Toma-hawk sank about 25 miles off Harbor Beach in a raging storm that tore its hull apart.

Lowery and his crew of seven abandoned ship and climbed aboard an inflated raft tossed from the doomed boat. They were picked up by veteran skipper Charley Bear, and his famous "Old Bear" from Bayview, in response to the Tomahawk's May Day radio distress call. All hands were safe, if shaken, by the experience.

My personal knowledge of the great storm of November 1913 came from conversations with my wife Alice's family. Her father was Capt. John C. Heaney, of Port Huron, who retired as master of the King, flagship of the Minnesota and Atlantic Transit fleet.

In 1913 he commanded an earlier ship based in Chicago. He was scheduled for a trip to Milwaukee, 85 miles north. The storm raged in both cities. In Chicago, a park project that took eight years to complete was destroyed in eight hours. And in Milwaukee a new breakwater was pounded for hours by sledgehammer waves and finally reduced to rubble.

Captain Heaney was known as "O.T." — for "on time" — Heaney. It was fully consistent that he should make his trip to Milwaukee, storm or no storm. He put out into Lake Michigan and set a due-north course in the teeth of a howling gale from the north. He took his position and entered the time in his log. He ordered the engineer to set her "full speed ahead."

For four hours he battled the gale, his ship rolling in towering waves. He took his position again. After four hours at full speed ahead into the gale, he hadn't moved forward an inch.

For one of the few times in his life he lost out to the Lakes. He ordered his ship back to port. He was totally unaware of the scope of the storm that was sending ships to the bottom on Lake Huron.

Next day he learned of the disaster's Lake Huron toll: 13 ships lost, shorelines and harbor cities battered and smashed, hundreds of thousands of dollars damage, surviving ships damaged, wrecked, beached, docks and piers destroyed up and down the lake.

In the wake of the Nov. 13 storm, the Lake Carriers Association filed a report: "No lake master can recall in all his experience a storm of such unprecedented violence with such rapid changes in the direction of the wind and its gusts of such fearful speed. Storms ordinarily of that velocity do not last over four or five hours, but this storm raged for 16 hours continuously at an average velocity of 60 miles per hour, with frequent spurts of 70 or over."

In 1957 a historical marker was erected at Port Sanilac, along the highway overlooking Lake Huron. This plaque is inscribed: "The Great Storm of 1913," and reads: "Sudden tragedy struck the Great Lakes on Nov. 9, 1913, when a storm whose equal veteran sailors could not recall, left in its wake death and destruction. The grim toll was 235 seamen drowned, 10 ships sunk, and more than 20 others driven ashore. Here on Lake Huron all 178 crewmen on the eight ships claimed by its waters were lost. For 16 terrible hours gales of cyclonic fury made man and machines helpless."

Michigan has 2,389 miles of shoreline, more than half of the total Great Lakes shoreline in the United States. And Michigan shores are washed by all but one of the Great Lakes.

One thing is certain in cities, towns and villages all along those 2,389 miles of shoreline: Throughout November, fervent prayers will be offered many a time in many a home for the safety of loved ones as weather reports are scanned. And in river towns, the phrase will be heard: "God help the poor sailors on a night like this."

Seven-mile trek on dry river bed yields surprise encounter

By Tyler M. Steben
Special Writer

It just seemed like a strange thing to do.

After a lecture on "The Importance of Experiencing New Things," however, I gave in and agreed to hike the dry river bed known as the Wadi Kelt.

After the long and bumpy ride from Jerusalem, we climbed down the steps of the old bus and looked around. The old Arab driver had told us that this was the starting point of our seven-mile trek, but there was no river bed to be seen. However, a brief search uncovered a narrow dirt pathway that led down a steep slope and into a narrow canyon with rough stone walls.

For part of the year, the river carried water downstream to the town of Jericho. When we visited, however, there was only rock. Without a word, we began to march down the deep trench.

After a few miles, we noticed a side canyon wiggling its way inward. What made the canyon interesting was the aqueduct that emerged from it, and headed downstream. We decided to explore the area.

We were not prepared for the explosion of color that met us. The narrow pass opened into an emerald pool that was being fed by a long, creamy white waterfall. Rich green foliage squatted around the pool, like animals at a watering hole. Small, colorful birds played in the branches, their high-pitched songs bounce-ing merrily off the surrounding stone.

We removed our rough hiking boots and soaked our feet while relishing the oasis; the smell of the bushes and water, the welcome coolness of the place totally cleansing us. We could have lounged in that place forever, but knew that we had many miles to go.

We retraced our steps and rejoined the relatively dead river bed and our new companion, the aqueduct. Our walk led us past Bedouin camps and their low black tents, under the noses of curious goats who peered down at us from the rim of the canyon like school children watching fish in a bowl and under ancient Roman arches that served as bridges across the canyon in biblical times.

It was growing late in the day and the sky looked like it was the color of a bruise. We rounded a corner and were met with a sight that surprised us into silence. In a narrow courtyard pines were placed very tall and thin.

It started to seem apparent why they were there. Carved into and out of the stone were several modest buildings. We had stumbled upon a monastery.

The small courtyard was contained by a black wrought iron fence, and was empty except for a small potted plant and a cat washing its paws. An old monk came rushing around the corner, muttering to himself in some foreign tongue. His bulky black robes contrasted wildly with a nest of long white hair. Upon noticing us, his face (almost as craggy as the rock of the canyon) gave birth to a wide and mostly toothless smile.

He talked very rapidly in a tongue that one of us recognized as Greek. After he completed his monologue, he whirled around and beckoned us to follow him.

The monk took out a ring of keys and opened a set of large wooden doors. The sight inside was straight out of a horror movie. In large glass cases, in stacked wooden boxes and on the shelves of this little room were human bones and skulls.

One particular case held a full skeleton with a sword laid next to it. The old monk smiled widely and motioned us into the room so that he could close the door.

It slammed shut and echoed a little bit too loudly. We took a closer look at the macabre collection, and noticed small cards with names and dates on them in Greek, Hebrew and English. We realized, with much relief, that this room was the resting place of monks from ages gone by. The skeleton with the sword was one of the founding monks, and according to the dates was several hundred years old.

A narrow passage led us into the small sanctuary where the monks (we assumed there was more than just one) worshipped. The chamber was very dark, except for the dim light issuing from scores of oil lamps of all shapes and sizes that were suspended from the ceiling of the room.

The walls were painted with a cast of biblical characters that stared at us silently. The air held the last lingerings of incense. The old man said something and motioned to a door in the rear of the chapel. His tour was not yet over.

We climbed a set of stairs that led us to the upper level of the monastery. The monk led us into a small kitchen, picked up a bucket filled with food, and led us back outside to the upper terrace.

Bucket in hand, he walked to the edge where there was a pulley and a hook. He attached his bucket to the pulley system, and sent it upward. At the top, perhaps 20 feet up, was a small window. As soon as the bucket was outside the window, a pair of arms silently unhooked the bucket and pulled it inside.

Back in Jerusalem we learned that this particular monastery had "apartments" for individuals who wanted to spend the rest of their lives in religious contemplation. They remained there until they died.

We were led back to the entrance of the complex where the monk pulled a tin cup from somewhere under his robes and spoke his only English word: "Donation?"

About the author

Tyler Steben, a Grosse Pointe Park resident, spent five months in the Middle East last year as part of his undergraduate studies. His itinerary included stops in Turkey, Greece, Egypt, Israel, Morocco and Italy.

This is the last story in a three-part series about his experiences that he is writing for the Grosse Pointe News.

Steben

It was dusk when we finally emerged from the Wadi Kelt. We walked through the streets of Jericho on the way to meet the bus that would take us back to Jerusalem. We talked about all that we had seen and done that day.

The wadi and the surrounding area seemed like a place that was untouched by the shallow currents of our own society — it was a land where things like MTV, The Simpsons, and pan pizza meant nothing. We felt sure that we could return 10 years in the future and find the area virtually unchanged.

As we stood at the bus stop we noticed a pick-up truck approaching slowly. The vehicle flicked its lights and beeped. As it drove slowly by, the old monk leaned out the window and waved.

Dreams fading? Remember, age is no barrier to success

People of all ages have dreams and hopes and aspirations. Little boys dream of growing up to be baseball, hockey or football players. Little girls once dreamed of growing up to be like their mothers, enjoying a husband, a home and children. Today that dream has been altered to include achieving in the professions.

Sometimes the dreams change as we travel down life's winding paths. After all, they were just daydreams, pleasant to contemplate but not at all suited to the talents and interests that come with maturity. The lucky ones achieve those altered aims and regret the time, when all battles won, they reach retirement age.

Many would like to continue working on their own at their chosen profession. Others would like to try something new. Both groups are too often deterred by that fear which society has subtly implanted in their minds — the fear of being too old.

Yet all around us we hear of older people achieving goals in their later years that eluded them in their younger days. Age didn't keep President Reagan

Prime Time

By Marian Trainor

from running for a second term. For most of us the dream of being president vanished along with childhood fantasies, but other aspirations remained.

Perhaps it was a long-time yen to paint, to create beautiful scenery, memorable faces, impressive groupings on canvas.

George Wexler was 60 before he won acclaim. He began his artistic career as an abstract expressionist. Dissatisfied with the results, he started working from nature. Collectors shunned his efforts, but that didn't deter him from painting what he believed was right for him. Now he is recognized for the great artist he is.

Also worth noting is opera singer Kay Fitzpatrick. She has sung leading roles with the West German State Opera in Wiesbaden and the Houston Grand Opera Company in Texas. She has played in Broadway musicals, sung in concerts, performed on television and radio.

In retirement, she turned to an entirely different field. She helped to establish a hospice in Jackson for people terminally ill with cancer. She recruited and trained volunteers who go into cancer patients' homes, help them with their medication and just talk to them.

A six-volume biography of Thomas Jefferson was termed "masterly" by the New York Times. What makes this even more exceptional is that the author, Professor Thomas Malone, is over 90 and nearly blind.

Author James Michener, in his 80s, rises at 7:30 a.m. and works until noon. He was 40 years old before he began his writing career. Michener's own story is almost as fascinating as those he writes. He was abandoned on the doorstep of a widow, Mabel Michener, who took him in and gave him the name James Michener. He lived in poverty, but learned to love literature from hearing Mabel read aloud from Dickens. He became fascinated by travel after reading the National Geographic.

While he was in the U.S. Navy assigned to the South Pacific, he wrote "Tales of the South Pacific." It won the Pulitzer Prize in 1947 and was transformed into a Broadway musical by Rodgers and Hammerstein. He was on his way.

Here's some sound sleep tips for senior citizens

Changes in sleep patterns are a natural part of aging, according to Kevin Grady, M.D., medical director of the Sleep Disorders Center at St. John Hospital and Medical Center.

After age 60, sleep becomes fragmented. People in that age group tend to wake up more often during the night and earlier in the morning.

In a survey of 21,000 people over the age of 65, the National Institute on Aging found that more than half reported sleeping badly and feeling poorly rested the next day.

"The older you get, your sleep pattern becomes different. You sleep a shorter period of time and the times that you sleep are a little bit different physiologically. We spend less time in REM sleep," says Grady.

If you're having difficulty getting a good night's sleep, Grady offers some suggestions.

"Number one, you should go to bed when you feel pleasantly tired. Going to bed when you're terribly worn out many times makes it difficult to go to sleep. Avoidance of alcohol, caffeine and other stimulants is very important to good sleep hygiene. We suggest that the sleeping environment be comfortable for people. It is difficult to fall asleep when it is very warm or when it's very cold, or in a noisy environment," he said.

Simple exercise, like a short walk in the evening, might help you relax and feel tired. Also, bedtime routines like a warm bath and a good book could help you fall asleep. Grady suggests that if chronic insomnia occurs, you should consult your doctor or a sleep disorders clinic.

It's Christmas time in the Village

Residents, above, gather for the tree-lighting in the Village. Below, Ellen Bowen leads the Pointe Singers in song.

Always a crowd-pleaser, the 1st Colonial Drum and Fife Corps have participated in the local parade for years.

The 1926 fire truck, owned by Lt. Al Fincham and Officer Paul Onderbøke of the City's public safety department, draws plenty of admiring looks.

The Village was bursting with Christmas activity last week.

On Nov. 20, city officials presided over the lighting of a living Christmas tree, dedicated to the memory of Amy Duke Harris, a longtime resident.

The City of Grosse Pointe Foundation bought and planted the tree. The Pointe Singers, 28 members of the Grosse Pointe South Choir, sang Christmas carols and the Grosse Pointe Boat Club served hot chocolate.

The tree is located at the corner of St. Clair and Kercheval.

About 200 people attended the ceremony.

On Nov. 23, the day after Thanksgiving, the annual Santa Claus Parade was held in the Village. This is the 14th year for the parade.

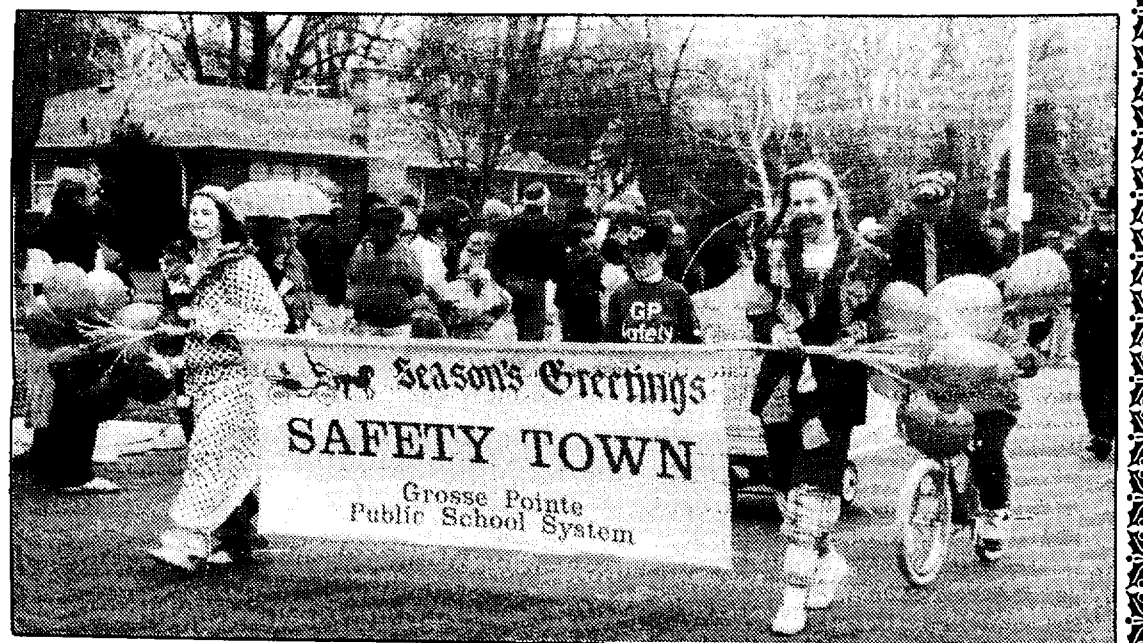

More than 12,000 people saw 90 units march down the windy and rainy streets. About 800 children participated in the parade this year.

The event is sponsored by the Village merchants.

Mayor Lorenzo Browning lights the living Christmas tree at the corner of St. Clair and Kercheval in ceremonies Nov. 20.

One of the units in the Santa Claus Parade the day after Thanksgiving was this group from the Grosse Pointe schools.

Some of the spectators included the Moale family - father Mike at the left, Roger in the wagon, mother Chris, and Hilary on the ladder.

Pointer

was rustproofing cars and cleaning up the shop.

He became interested in law enforcement and at 17, following his graduation from high school, enrolled in the public safety program at Macomb Community College. There he met Farms Police Chief Robert Ferber, an instructor, who encouraged him in the field.

Vietnam was an inferno at the time and Andrus, with a draft number of 51, decided to enlist in the Air Force. With two years of college, he was assigned to investigative police work in Colorado.

The same year, he and Jerry Anderson were married. They had known each other since they were 13.

Andrus worked under cover for the military, investigating personnel in sensitive jobs. "Part of our job was to identify people who shouldn't be in those positions," he said. "I did a lot of narcotics work and it got pretty heated at times."

In 1975, he was among a group of 40 assigned to a small town near Seville, Spain. Members of the unit traveled to other countries in Europe, sometimes in uniform and sometimes in civilian clothes, depending on the assignment.

The group monitored the activities of personnel suspected of passing information to interests outside of the U.S. government. "A lot of what I did, I'm still not supposed to talk about," he said. As a result of the work, he said he received about 200 stitches.

While the family was in Spain, a daughter, Lee, now 15, and a son, Chad, now 13, were born. After nearly three years, Andrus said he began to burn out due to the nature of the work. Up to this point, he had been decorated twice for meritorious service and promoted six times.

With a growing family, Andrus said, "You realize you have this real sense of responsibility." He asked to be reassigned.

The Air Force sent him to its academy in Colorado where he was in charge of law enforcement and training.

"It was a totally different environment," he said. "I was with the best of the best. I really loved the work and I loved being there."

The family's house faced Pike's Peak and Andrus spent five years as a non-commissioned officer in charge of police administration at the academy.

"They were after me to stay with the military and become an officer," Andrus said. "That was the fork in the road. I had been gone eight years and there was this real draw to Grosse Pointe."

"I sensed it was time for a change and my family needed some roots."

His brother was working for Schweitzer Real Estate and Dennis advised him to get his real estate license. Andrus had accumulated three months vacation from the Air Force which he used as his transitory time to study real estate and to change careers.

With his brother as his mentor and his license in hand, Andrus got a job with Schweitzer. "It took off like a rocket," he said. "It was just when the recession hit and the first year I had 27 sales."

Andrus advanced to managing four offices and he conducted 15 different training sessions.

In 1987, he and his brother bought Grosse Pointe Real Estate. Andrus became involved with the Grosse Pointe Board of Realtors and helped establish the multiple listing system in Grosse Pointe.

At 35, he was elected president of the board, the youngest to serve, and the same year, he was named Grosse Pointe Realtor of the Year. "It was one of the proudest moments of my life," he said.

"I love what I do. I never thought I would own my own company."

One of his favorite sayings is: If you're not the lead dog, the view never changes. "I've had opportunities presented to me and I've acted on them," he said. "The magic's up to you."

In 1988, The Prudential awarded Grosse Pointe Real Estate the first franchise in the state. "We were really proud," he said.

The company is diversified and can originate loans from the office. Through its special projects division, the firm is involved in the development of Lakepointe Towers in St. Clair Shores, condos; Gregory's Boat Club in Detroit, condominium boathouses; Lakeview Village in Harrison Township, condominiums; and Mallard Creek in Port Huron, a marina and condos.

Andrus is also involved in a local pasta business and in the renovation of houses.

His professional goal for the company is to open five offices specializing in lakefront property from Grosse Pointe to Port Huron by 1995. His personal goal is to become financially independent by age 50. And despite the numerous schools he attended while in the Air Force, including language school, Andrus said his long-term goal is to finish college.

Andrus, who said he has always lived on the edge, likes fast cars and fast boats. In his spare time, he listens to music and is an amateur photographer. He is health-conscious and works out regularly, but he says his wife is "the jock in the family."

A member of a ladies' softball team in St. Clair Shores, he said, opposed to the airport expansion," Brady said. "Those two things are of obvious help to the united Grosse Pointe opposition."

Brady is encouraged by the Planning Commission's vote against the expansion and the fact that the council was split.

Warren and Center Line have joined the Pointes and Harper Woods, and Brady said the group has been talking with Macomb County about entering the fight.

"I think that an organized opposition is going to be a significant group to fight," Brady said. "Mayor Young's got a tough row to hoe if we all remain committed."

Theresa Klaasen, one of the founders of the City Airport Opposition Association, a grassroots organization which opposes the expansion, is not just optimistic about the chances of successfully opposing the project; she's positive the expansion will fail.

"I was surprised but delighted by the Planning Commission's decision," she said. "But the City Council's approval was ill-advised. The plan simply is incomplete."

Klaasen said the council should have waited for more reports, but thinks the timing of the vote — before expansion supporter Barbara-Rose Collins goes off to Washington to serve in

Their children as well are involved in "everything from soccer to cross country to junior varsity cheerleading to student council." Lee is a sophomore at Grosse Pointe South and Chad is in the eighth grade at Pierce Middle School.

Congress — shows eroding support for the plan.

"Even the council believes the chances are very slim," she said. "The council knows it doesn't have the money."

Klaasen said the council should put its time and energy into rejuvenating the area around City Airport, instead of throwing money at the plan which she is sure will be rejected.

"The Burnley report revealed major flaws," she said. "We're not just grasping at reeds here, we have substantial basis for our opposition. Our local governments have responded beautifully."

The fight may get expensive, but Klaasen says, "I don't mind spending the time and the money when I know we're going to win."

Do you know where your commercial trash lid is?
Since Nov. 16, lids to large, commercial-type trash containers have been reported missing from behind businesses in the Village. The latest theft of the lids was reported Nov. 21. All the thefts occurred in the Village.
Police said it is anyone's guess as to who is taking the lids and why. They speculate that because the thefts coincide with deer hunting season, the 3-foot by 5-foot lids may be being used as roofs for blinds or as sleds.

Other communities have reported thefts of portable latrines, allegedly taken by deer hunters to use up north. Perhaps when the latrines are found, the trash lids mystery will be uncovered as well.

Blithe Spirit introduces emerging designers to Grosse Pointe

By Pat Paholsky
Editor

Business partners Audrey Platt and Sarah Hill can be called patrons of the arts, manufacturers' representatives, clothing retailers or traveling saleswomen. They are all of these and more.

The two Southern gentlewomen — one from Georgia and one from Tennessee — have combined their backgrounds in art to develop a unique business, Blithe Spirit, that is literally operated out of suitcases — or trunks, to be precise.

Platt and Hill seek out artist-designers who, in some cases, hand-dye and weave their own fabric, for a one-of-a-kind or limited collection which they then take on the road.

The two Grosse Pointe residents are at home this week and next with their most recent collection being shown at 76 Kercheval on the Hill. The collection includes dresses and suits, accessories and jewelry and even some pigs and rabbits which testify to the sense of fun they bring to their generally sophisticated line.

"It's a full store," Platt said, "with 15 to 20 designers of dresses, jewelry, fur and felt hats, jackets, funky coats and suits."

And pigs and rabbits. The women picked up the stuffed animals earlier this year as props, to serve as a counterpoint for the fashions. The animals are hand-made out of feed sacks by a farm woman in Indiana, "real American craftwork," Hill said.

The animals were an unexpected hit with customers, so

Hill and Platt ordered more of them to sell.

There are tapestry suits, a jacket that is a collage of crocheting, leather, ruching, beads and lace, a silk boucle made for travel and 300 cocktail dresses. Prices range from $200 to $400 for a dress, $400 to $500 for a suit, "below the designer range," Platt said.

The store will be open until Dec. 9 from 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Friday and Saturday; 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. on Thursday; and noon to 5 p.m. on Sunday.

Blithe Spirit will host two designers at the store: Josephine Sasso on Monday and Tuesday, Nov. 26-27, and Ellie Van Staagen on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, Nov. 29-Dec. 1.

From there, Platt and Hill will take their collection to Savannah, Atlanta, Memphis and Wilmington, Del., alternating with one of them on the road and the other at home tending to the books. They visit the cities twice a year.

It's not an easy job — the collection is packed into six large suitcases, three of which are shipped ahead and the other three taken on the plane. The cases include racks and a clothes steamer. Their set-up time in Grosse Pointe, for instance, is 1-1/2 days.

They got started in the business about six years ago when Platt, a recent transplant from Savannah, received a call from a friend who asked her to represent an international designer from Washington. She and Hill hosted a home show.

Hill's friend, Tavy Stone, former fashion editor of The Detroit News, suggested the pair promote young designers from this country and Canada.

"With the optimism of ignorance, we got on the telephone and found two other designers," Platt said. The artists-turned-fashion designers, while unknown to the public, know of each other and generally don't have an outlet for their designs, Platt said. Some of them have their own boutiques, known again only to the people in their immediate area.

It wasn't long before the word got out and designers were sending Hill and Platt their creations on consignment. Many of the clothes are expandable so they fit several sizes, Platt said.

"They're all hand-dyed and they're very transitional clothes for the most part," Platt said. "They cross over well."

"A lot of our customers are businesswomen who don't have time to shop and they don't get the service they used to receive.

So they can call us and in a couple of hours get fitted."

The home shows evolved into gallery shows and the two shows a year in Grosse Pointe have grown to three or four.

"People are more comfortable in a gallery setting," Platt said. "There's no pressure to buy."

"One of the things we have become aware of is there's so much more travel and women want clothes that are easy to maintain," Hill said.

The two admit they never imagined they would be involved in the fashion business, and their success is gratifying.

"We are very serious about the business, but we also like to make it fun," Hill said. "We have a nice relationship with the designers. We know them all personally or feel we do. We talk to them sometimes 14 times a day."

Platt was director of the Historical Savannah Foundation when she moved to Grosse Pointe nine years ago with her husband Richard. Hill, whose background is in journalism, chaired the Artists' Market in Detroit. She and her husband, Draper Hill, editorial cartoonist for The Detroit News, have been here 16 years. Both women have children living in other states. The phone number for Blithe Spirit is 881-7182.

Houses burglarized

Two houses were broken into last week — one in the Shores and the other in the Park.

An unknown person got into the Shores home on Shorecrest Circle by breaking out a bedroom window sometime between 6 and 9:57 p.m. when the resident returned. No one was in the home and nothing appeared to be moved or taken.

A house in the 700 block of Trombley in the Park was entered through a rear unlocked door sometime between 9 p.m. Nov. 15 and 5 a.m. the following day. Taken were a 35mm camera and lens, a camcorder and a purse, which was found in a rear yard across the street.

dog. But now he loves her as much as I do. Well, maybe not as much as I do."

Biking is great exercise for MS patients, Attie said, and Mickie's help allows her to continue getting her exercise. In fact, Attie's purchased a winter wardrobe so she can continue her workouts.

The jaunts have gotten longer and Mickie has pulled Attie on trips of nearly a mile.

"When you have MS you necessarily have to spend a lot of time alone. I don't have enough energy to socialize a lot and I can't talk for a long period of time because I lose my voice, so she's a great companion. I don't have to talk to her. She just wants to be with me," Attie said.

Mickie is so loyal to Attie it's at times a disadvantage.

Recently, Attie fell while making a turn on her bike. Although several people stopped to help her, Mickie wouldn't let them near her master. Eventually, Attie calmed Mickie down enough to get some help.

"I don't consider myself handicapped, but for people who are, especially people with MS, a dog can be a great help," Attie said. "Mickie has enabled me to get out of the house and allowed me to continue my exercise, which is very important to me. I'm sure dogs can even be trained to pull wheelchairs."

"Judy and Mickie are great together," House said. "Judy's an amazing woman. She's gutsy, she's determined and I think that's why they work so well together."

Grosse Pointers recall favorite gifts given, received

By Margie Feins Smith
Feature Editor

We're staring down the barrel of the gift-giving and gift-getting season again.

Retail merchants are rolling out the heavy artillery. For the next four weeks we'll be shell-shocked from all the advertising and marketing promises/pitches/lures/claims/sales/deals/bargains/loys/discounts/promotions.

We'll search for the perfect gift for each person on our Christmas list. Sometimes the perfect gift is an obvious choice. Sometimes it's a lucky strike. Sometimes it misses by a mile.

We asked a half dozen or so Grosse Pointers to tell us about the most memorable Christmas gift they ever received -- and the most memorable Christmas gift they ever gave.

Lawrence Scripps Wilkinson, treasurer of the Detroit Historical Society and a Detroit historical commissioner, probably has more toys than anybody. Wilkinson is a collector of antique toys. He recently donated a portion of his collection to the Detroit Antique Toy Museum gallery in Wrigley Hall, a new addition to the Detroit Historical Museum.

"I was fascinated with electric trains when I was a kid," Wilkinson said. "Electricity had a magic about it when I was a boy. It was mysterious. We were always wondering if it was dangerous.

"When I was about age 6 or so, Mother gave me a Lionel catalog with colorful illustrations of trains. She said that she expected to be in touch with Santa and that he would probably ask her what I wanted for Christmas.

"I liked a particular train because it had lights in front, lights in back, lights in the middle. It wasn't particularly expensive.

"The train of my dreams appeared under the Christmas tree," Wilkinson said.

Wilkinson said he no longer owns that particular electric train, but he found one just like it and purchased it for his collection.

Wilkinson said that giving a gift is most satisfying when he finds something that the person wouldn't be reckless enough to buy for himself or herself -- a work of art or a decorative object, for instance. "By knowing the person, you know their taste and you have the courage to buy the present. This gives me great satisfaction," he said.

Roger McCaig, director of research and development for the Grosse Pointe schools, also remembers an electric train.

"In the middle of the Depression, I got an electric train that went around in a circle," he said. "I don't know how my parents managed it.

"But it just went around in a circle. It took me about five minutes to get bored. Every time I wandered away, my mother wanted to know why I wasn't playing with my train."

Last year, McCaig created a memorable gift for his 4- and 10-year-old grandchildren. With the music of Saint Saens' "Carnival of the Animals," Ravel's "Mother Goose Suite" and Debussy's "Children's Corner Suite," he taped his own version of the three stories that accompany the musical works.

"I told the stories -- sort of a voice-over technique -- by matching up the words with the musical clues. I listened to the music and guessed what part of the story was happening -- like the 'Peter and the Wolf' music and story."

George Eddington, director of community education for the Grosse Pointe schools, also remembers an electric train. "I got it when I was about 7 years old, from my grandparents. It was a Lionel freight train," he said.

Virginia Thibodeau, Grosse Pointe artist and teacher, said that the best gift she ever got was about seven years ago, when she and her children went to the hospital on Christmas Day and brought her husband home.

"He had cancer and he had been ill for quite a while," Thibodeau said. "We brought him home and he lived until August."

A memorable gift, of sorts, she said, was the creche she made for St. Paul Catholic Church about 10 years ago. "It was a monumental task -- four pieces, cast stone sculpture."

Two of the pieces -- the lamb and the Christ child -- were subsequently stolen. Thibodeau replaced the Christ child. The creche will be placed in front of the church again this year.

Catharine McMullen, past president of the School of Government Inc., also has a birthday on Dec. 25.

"I remember a gold nugget ring given to me on my fifth birthday by a stranger," she said. "It was two gold nuggets on a band, right from the mines of Colorado. The man who gave it to me was living in the hotel where we lived, in Denver.

"He said it was because I was so well-behaved. I used to hold the chair for his mother."

McMullen said the most memorable gift she ever gave was a photo album containing all the family photographs that she put together for her mother and father when she was about 15 years old.

Barbara Willett, director of The Children's Center Capital Campaign, past president of the Junior League of Detroit and current vice president of the Grosse Pointe Shores Improvement Foundation, said that her most memorable Christmas gifts -- those given and those received -- were not material things.

"My husband, Howard, and I decided long ago that we would buy each other memories," she said. The whole family has embraced the idea.

"Howard and I were married for six years before our daughter Wendy was born," she said. "The Christmas of 1969 was the most memorable, because I received the gift of parenthood."

She also remembers giving an exercise slant board to her father-in-law, Papa Willett -- "for the sit-ups he did not want to do."

Some memory-gifts that stand out in Willett's mind: a trip to Stratford and a weekend on a working farm; a family reunion; daughter Wendy's 21st birthday party at 21 Club in New York City; a 25th anniversary party that she and her husband gave for all their friends; and a recent birthday party that she gave for her husband.

Sister Verence McQuade, an administrator at St. John Hospital and Medical Center who is active in the hospital's Fontbonne Auxiliary and in community affairs, said her most memorable gift was a trip to the Holy Land she received in 1974.

"I felt that this trip provided insight into biblical theology which has affected my life and deepened my faith," she said. "I've shared this insight with my patients and their families and I'm convinced many have benefited from my most memorable Christmas gift."

Jane Meade, honorary chairman of the recent Festival of Trees, a fundraiser for Children's Hospital, said that the most memorable gift she ever gave was several years ago, to 3-year-old Katey Riley.

"It was one of those globes that you shake. It had a castle inside, and when you shook it, music played and opalescent flakes swirled around. I wrapped it with paper with opalescent sparkles and dimmed the lights while she opened it.

"Katey opened the lid on the box and there was such a glow on her precious little face..."

Bridge

HAVE A PLEASANT TRY AT PERFECTION
BRIDGE BY WOODY BOYD ♠♥♦♣

It's good to have Libby and Jack Danaher back in town after their two week Bill Root bridge cruise and a weekend stop in London for an extra few days play with the European experts.

Their account of the passage was absolutely fascinating with departure from Istanbul highlighted by port calls at many of the famous eastern Mediterranean's marvelous landmarks. Of course, bridge was the on the marquee and the reason for cruising. The tall and talented world master William was a superb host, excellent lecturer and entertaining companion.

An unexpected pleasure was their memorable three day stay at the Duke and Duchess of Priddytrimwitty's country estate at Fastingsham Whist Manor northeast of the posh London suburb of Lubie. It seems that late each September, on the eve of the fall season, a cadre of the continent's most distinguished connoisseurs of contract bridge gather for three days of play and pleasantries. The Danaher's inclusion, at the cruise's conclusion, was due to their friendship with a sailing acquaintance, Sir Reginald Rexerectroyce, who's embellished etiquette was by far the best part of his game especially when in the presence of or in partnership with pretty ladies.

Fortunately for my readers Jack came home with a wonderful hand from the high stake estate play at Priddytrimwitty's; otherwise, today's column would have been a blank calamity as this space was especially reserved for him. As he related, they had a delightful time as the play was exemplary, but the price in British pounds was predatorial and they were in luck to get away with liquidity.

Libby was in great partnership demand as Sir Reginald had been promoting her play from their entry. The evening of the second day's play Jack had spent more time after dinner than usual with his brandy and some British friends in the great room of the west wing. Libby, though, had gone straight from her lady's demitasse to the playing tables as her dinner partner Major Dickson, Gravesgazer insisted upon challenging France's champions José Todydeaux and Teddy Dais Devereaux. Always the lady, Libby knew her opponents were too much of a match, but she had no intention of humiliating the famous tank commander of El Alamein and graciously accepted the challenge to participate.

In defense of the major, his game had recently been tutored by two of London's finest, Winston Flintfog and Phineous Fudfluger and he had been holding cards.

Here is the fourth hand from that quartets play and it is a corker.

As Jack later stated, it was good he wasn't present as he would have been exceptionally perplexed with the obvious set up. As one can see, the major had bid Lib to almost an unmakeable slam, but she found an unusual way to end play the champs from France. She ruffed the club lead and drew trumps in one play. Next the heart jack and when West couldn't cover, she played dummy's ace. Then she casually played a small diamond to her ace and when East didn't play the king she had him. Three more good hearts pitching a diamond and then a diamond to East's king and he was end played. The forced club return gave Libby a diamond sluff and dummy ruff. East could have beaten our heroine by dropping his diamond king under the ace and declarer would have had to lose two diamonds.

Grosse Pointe Academy dedicates Tracy Fieldhouse Nov. 14, 15

The Grosse Pointe Academy celebrated the opening of its new Tracy Fieldhouse with two special events during November.

On Nov. 14, Mr. and Mrs. E. Emmet Tracy Sr. joined more than 200 other donors and invited guests for a Mass celebrated by the Rev. Malcolm Caron and the Rev. Albert Hillebrand, followed by a dedication ceremony and a dinner.

"There would be no Grosse Pointe Academy today were it not for the efforts of Fran and Emmet Tracy," said George A. Haggarty. "Through the years, they have continuously encouraged the preservation of the school's educational philosophy, which focuses on the mental, physical and spiritual well-being of each individual child."

Haggarty and Mary Kay and Keith Crain co-chaired the Children's Athletic/Arts Resource and Endowment Campaign (CARE), which increased the academy's endowment and funded construction of the $2 million auditorium/gymnasium.

Tracy Fieldhouse has a permanent enclosed stage, a state-of-the-art sound system, four basketball courts, three volleyball courts, an oval running track, a tennis court, and boys' and girls' locker rooms for home and visiting teams.

On Nov. 15, parents, children and faculty filled the fieldhouse for a family celebration of its opening, which included dancing, a hoop shoot, doughnuts and cider.

Founded in 1885 and re-incorporated in 1969, the Grosse Pointe Academy is an independent, co-educational day school serving children from age 2 1/2 through grade 8 in the metropolitan Detroit area.

The Detroit Institute of Arts' holiday season is the stuff memories are made of.

Weekend museum visitors can "Snack with Santa" on Saturdays from noon to 3:30 p.m.; no reservations necessary. St. Nick's annual visit is made possible through the assistance of the DeRoy Testamentary Foundation and the Skillman Foundation.

Also part of the December lineup at the DIA are special Detroit Youththeatre Saturday performances. They include: "Pinocchio" on Dec. 1, a production for ages 3 and older about a puppet that becomes a real boy; "Christmas 'Round the World" on Dec. 8, a magical, international sleigh ride for ages 5 and older; "Feliz Navidad" on Dec. 15, a Latin American holiday dance and music extravaganza for ages 5 and older; and "Holly Folly Christmas" on Dec. 22, with Ken Schultz as the adorable elf who dazzles the audience with a variety-packed performance. Tickets are $5 each; show times are 11 a.m. and 2 p.m. in the DIA Auditorium.

The DIA's own Prince Street Players perform their delightful "Broadway" musical version of "The Emperor's New Clothes" from Dec. 26-30. Children must be 5 years or older to attend; all seats are $6.

Wassail Feast, another DIA holiday tradition, welcomes nearly 3,000 guests annually. The magical recreation of a holiday celebration in the court of Elizabeth I of England features strolling minstrels, mimes, jugglers, a magician, festive dancers, singers, acrobats and a Renaissance orchestra playing period instruments.

The traditional menu features a hearty Scotch broth, roast prime beef with Yorkshire pudding, roast chicken, pork-and-leek pie, marinated vegetables, flaming figgy pudding with brandy sauce and, of course, the mighty Wassail Cup, a powerful potion of modern spirits created from a secret formula. This year's Wassail dates are Dec. 18-22.

another holiday tradition in the University Cultural Center, takes place on Dec. 5. The DIA and other participating institutions open their doors from 6 to 9 p.m. for caroling and holiday merrymaking. ## Travel Trends

By Phyllis Hollenbeck

Lower fares ease pain

What a helpless feeling when there is a death or serious illness of a family member living far away. When it is impossible to get back home for a funeral or to help the other family members, because you simply cannot afford to. Historically, fares for last minute travel have been astronomical. Today, however, almost all major airlines waive their restrictions on lower fares when a sudden illness or death is involved. For obvious reasons, bereavement fares are not advertised, but they are available.

The following is an overview of emergency trip policies of several major airlines. In all instances, it will be necessary to contact your travel agent or the airline to verify the policy and to check their definition of "immediate family."

- America West: Immediate family only. Death only. Supply name and phone number of the funeral home at time of booking. Work directly with the airline and they will handle each case on an individual basis, depending on your destination and the space available.
  - Continental Airlines: Immediate family only. Death only. The bereavement fare is usually equivalent to the excursion fare but with the rules and regulations waived. Arrangements must be made directly with the airline and you must furnish them with the name and phone number of the funeral home at the time of booking.
  - Delta Airlines: Immediate family only. Critical illness or death. Travel must originate within seven days following a death. Reservations are booked at the full coach fare and may be booked and ticketed by a travel agent. After the trip has been completed, take the ticket and a copy of the death certificate or a letter from the doctor to a Delta ticket office (or the airport ticket counter) and they will refund 45 percent of the value of the ticket purchased.
  - Eastern Airlines: Immediate family only. Critical illness or death. Reservations to be booked directly with the airline. They will book the three-day advance fare and waive the rules and regulations for that fare. You must be prepared to give the reservations agent the name and address of either the hospital and doctor or the funeral home and its director.
  - Northwest Airlines: Immediate family only. Death only. Travel must begin within two days of the death. Book reservations directly with Northwest Airlines. Be prepared to supply the name and phone number of the funeral home and its director. The ticket will be issued at 50 percent of the lowest regular coach fare.
  - Trans World Airlines: Immediate family only. Death only. Book directly with TWA. Be prepared to give name and phone number of the funeral home as well as the name of the director. The discount will be 30 percent of the lowest regular coach fare.
  - US Air: Immediate family only. Death only. Travel must begin within five days after death. You may book with a travel agent, but you must have the name and phone number of the funeral home and its director available for their reservations agent. The charge will be the seven-day advance excursion fare with the rules waived.
  - United Airlines: Immediate family only. Critical illness or death. United Airlines allows you to work with a travel agent. They require the name and phone number of the hospital and doctor or of the funeral home and the director. The charge is the seven-day advance excursion fare with the rules waived.
- Since so much depends on the airline you are using, I cannot tell you the "best" way to arrange your emergency travel. Probably, if it is during the workweek, you should begin with your regular travel agent. If your agent can't help you, check with the airlines directory.
- Because cases are handled individually, check all airlines that fly to your destination. If you don't get a sympathetic airline agent with your first call, try again.

Jazz Quartet plays Nov. 30

The Legendary Modern Jazz Quartet comes to Orchestra Hall on Friday, Nov. 30 at 8 p.m. as part of DSOH's 1990-91 Michigan Bell Just Jazz Series.

The quartet originated in 1952 and is comprised of Milt Jackson, vibraharp; John Lewis, piano and musical director; Percy Heath, bass; and Connie Kay, drums.

Now in its 38th year, the Modern Jazz Quartet has been performing together as a group longer than any other existing modern jazz ensemble.

The Modern Jazz Quartet emerged from the Dizzy Gillespie orchestra and began recording together. In 1955, the quartet had its only personnel change when Connie Kay replaced Kenny Clarke on drums.

Together, they cultivated the distinctive sound that remains like no other in jazz — fusing new world jazz and blues with old world counterpoint and fugue.

Tickets for the show are available at the Orchestra Hall box office (3711 Woodward Ave., Detroit, MI 48201); by calling (313) 833-3700; at Hudson's, Harmony House and Ticketmaster outlets, or by calling the Ticketmaster Charge Line at (313) 645-6666.

Tuesday Musicales plans Christmas Festival Dec. 4

The Tuesday Musicales of Detroit, now in its 106th year of continuous operation, will usher in the holiday season with its annual Christmas Festival on Tuesday, Dec. 4 at 10:30 a.m. at Grosse Pointe Memorial Church, 16 Lakeshore Drive in Grosse Pointe Farms.

Featured artists and performers include Joan Haggard, organist; Johanna Bowers, flutist; Nadine Deleury, cellist; Tomoko Mack, pianist; and the Tuesday Musical Chorale Ensemble, directed by Mary Pardee, assisted by Jean Ground and Dorothy Ignasiak, and accompanied by Frances Wilson.

Haggard is the regional councillor for the American Guild of Organists, supervising guild activities in several midwestern states. She is organist at St. Philip's Episcopal Church in Rochester, and she will conduct the Mass Chorus at the annual Christmas concert of the Rochester Tuesday Musicales.

Bowers is a well-known flutist in the metropolitan area. She performs annually with Grosse Pointe Chamber Music, and is a soloist and member of various suburban orchestras. She is active in promoting chamber music concerts in metro Detroit.

Mack earned her degree from Oakland University, where she studied with Floavio Varani and Joyce Adelson. She has done further graduate study at the University of Michigan. This will be her first performance with the Tuesday Musicales.

Deleury is the principal cellist with the Michigan Opera Theater Orchestra, and she plays with "La Corda," a chamber music ensemble. Both she and Bowers will be accompanied by Fontaine Laing, distinguished area pianist.

The chairman of the day for this event is Mary Pardee, with Emily Mutter Austin serving as the general program director.

Following the concert, guests and performers will gather in the Crystal Ballroom of the Grosse Pointe War Memorial for a gala Christmas luncheon. They will be greeted by president Louise Dexter, social chairman Betty Cooper and committee members Justine Adam, Molly Flintermann, Elizabeth Frew, Lucile Maroon, Margaret Mortimer, and Elly Bundesen, who will be in charge of the poinsettia sales.

Concert ushers, headed by Elsa Trute, include Ann Hartmann, Schoko Matthews, Irmgard Fernholz, Waltraud Limberg and Barbara Germain. Reservations for the luncheon should be made through Theresa Cali, chairman, at 393-9268.

Hawaiian trip

The Grosse Pointe Adventure Series will take the audience on a trip to Hawaii on Monday, Dec. 3 at the War Memorial.

The evening's travel itinerary includes a four-wheel drive adventure, a sailing odyssey, snorkeling and more. A Hawaiian dinner will be served at 6:30 p.m. and the film, narrated by John Holod, begins at 8 p.m.

The menu for the evening features a luau roast of pork, sweet potatoes Mauna Kea, spinach salad with mushrooms, sesame dressing and a macadamia nut sundae. The film is $4.25 and the dinner is $13.50.

For more information, call 881-7511, Monday-Friday from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m.

Center presents ballet

Prancing reindeer, dancing elves and marching toy soldiers help Santa Claus ignite the yuletide spirit in "The Night Before Christmas," a holiday ballet for both the young and the young at heart that will play three nights at Macomb Center for the Performing Arts.

Staged by the prestigious Dayton Ballet, the music-and-dance version of Clement Moore's classic poem, "A Visit From St. Nicholas," will be presented at 7 p.m. on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, Dec. 3-5.

With the touring Dayton troupe of 18 dancers decked out in colorful holiday costumes, the full-length, two-act ballet begins in Santa's workshop where he and his helpers are preparing for that very special annual flight around the world.

Tickets for the Tuesday and Wednesday evening performances (Monday is sold out) are $10 for adults and $9 for students and senior citizens. They may be obtained at the Center's box office or reserved on credit card by calling 286-2222, Monday through Friday, from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Macomb Center is located on the Center Campus of Macomb Community College at Hall (M-59) and Garfield Roads in Clinton Township.

Don't say it

At a girls' basketball game a couple weeks ago, a fan was berating the officials and even a coach.

I couldn't understand what was being said, or why. And I was quite embarrassed for the person.

You see, there's always one turkey left over from Thanksgiving. Nobody likes a loud mouth, especially one who doesn't know the game or even what the coach's intentions are.

Yelling, screaming and raving don't solve a thing. Players continue to play, coaches continue to coach. It's just unfortunate that fans like this get louder and louder.

Satisfaction in yelling? Could be. Jerk? More than likely, but I don't like to waste time pondering the motives of loud mouth human beings who claim they know everything. This is the type of fan who drives around with a bumper sticker that reads, "I'd rather be fishing." Then go fishing — and stay away from the gymnasium.

There's no place for a person to broadcast his/her feelings toward a coach or an official in a gym. If the fan thinks he/she can do better, than why aren't they coaching or officiating? Instead, they'd rather be condescending, belligerent.

Who is this person really yelling at? Is it himself/herself? Is it a chance to get steam off? Is it because this is America and we can say what we please?

Either way, there's no room in sports for loud, obnoxious people who like to verbally abuse officials and coaches. Let the coaches do what they want. They are the ones calling the shots, and if you can't stand what happens, leave. It's that simple.

Coaches are always under a magnifying glass in the public eye. Yes, coaches make all the choices, dictate who plays and who doesn't, and also get the glory when the wins roll in. Unfortunately, the flip side is that coaches also take the fall for a loss.

Coaches can only do so much. Players need to execute, break the press, field the ground ball, or nail the slap shot. Coaches try to put athletes in the right spot, officials try to keep the game legal, and fans enjoy watching athletes perform, not listening to some upset parent who can't stand the coach or the referee, and would "change things if I were a coach."

Fine, then get yourself a gym, a couple ball players, a friend who will officiate and start your own little team. That way, your ego can be satisfied and your mouth can't be heard.

You see, the fan who is boisterous thinks it's his/her place to shout. Maybe, but not to downgrade or say malicious things to people. Generally, people who throw things on the ice, court or field are tossed from the arena, so why can't we remove loud fans who are only hurting the game and not promoting it?

Athletes, coaches and officials will always be dissected, but keep the comments to yourself and allow the game to be played. If you seek attention, don't do it in gyms. There's really no place for you.

Grosse Pointe's A.J. Dennis has graduated from the Skip Barber Racing School and will make his racing debut Dec. 1 at Sebring International Speedway.

Lady Norsemen swim to 8th at state

By Jim Moore
Special Writer

Grosse Pointe North's swim team took eighth place (56 points) at the state finals Nov. 16 and 17 at Michigan State University.

North had been seeded fifth for nearly the whole season, but Coach Mike O'Connor attributed North's decline to some exceptional swimming by Trenton.

"Trenton just swam a great meet, and out-touched us in both freestyle relays by two-tenths of a second... this cost us some points. We had girls in individual races who had to swim in these relays, and they were just tired. It was more of a burden than usual," said O'Connor.

Actually, the lady tankers swam their best meet of the season in the finals, breaking five North varsity records. Lidia Szabo, Jennifer Paloucci, Karen Dundon and Wendy Mader swam in the 200 and 400 yard freestyle relays and set new school records in both races.

In individual events, Mader had an outstanding meet as she swam to All-State honors in both the 200 freestyle and the 500 freestyle, taking fifth and fourth place respectively. Both her times set new records at North.

Dundon followed Mader's lead with a sixth-place and All-State honors in the 50 freestyle as well as an 11th place in the 200 individual medley — posting yet another school record.

Jennifer Paloucci swam to an impressive 10th place in the 100 butterfly, and O'Connor commended her for "being able to help us out in the relays when her events were squeezed so close together."

North's team, in many ways, met or exceeded O'Connor's expectations. "We were in better shape than I thought we would be in August, since we couldn't get into our pool at first. I was more pleased with times than places in this meet, and we just had some bad luck," he said.

The team must replace Mader and Dundon, who will graduate in June, but they have established a work ethic that will trickle down to the younger swimmers in the years to come.

The team's overall record was an impressive 11-1 during the regular season.

North outshot by Regina

By Jim Moore
Special Writer

Defense has long been the hallmark of Grosse Pointe North's basketball program, under the direction of coaches Gary Bennett and Ray Ritter.

That style of play was unchanged against Regina when a district championship stared North in the face once again. But the Saddletites, longstanding rivals of North for the title, were in complete control of their game, while frustrating North's opportunities in a 62-37 victory.

North kept the game close during the first quarter, but Regina opened up a 33-19 halftime lead. "One problem was failing to score off our defense," said Bennett. "We would cause a turnover, but could not get a basket from it." Indeed, North caused Regina to turn over the ball 32 times, as opposed to North's 24.

Bennett said the greatest difference between the two teams was their shooting percentages: North's 32 percent vs. the Saddletites, 73 percent. Bennett said North handled some situations better than expected. "Regina pressed us early on, but then removed it when we found we could break it; as it turned out, it wasn't a problem for us," Bennett said.

Rockets win second place

The U-10 Rockets travel league team was awarded second place in the Blue Division of the Michigan Youth Soccer League.

The team includes Michael Carroll, Anthony Ciotti, Nicholas Clark, Peter Clark, Bradley Drummy, Andrew Georgandellis, Jeff Hermann, J.K. Kraetke, Matthew Lapish, Andrew Mellos, Drew Noecker, David Smith, J.D. Spina, Nathan Steiner, Trevor Szymanski, Michael Tymrak and Stu Yingst.

The team was coached by John Clark.

But he had only praise for the Regina team. "Their program is well-coached; they have good people, depth, and a strong schedule that gives them the experience for games like this one. We were soundly beaten."

Assistant coach Ritter agrees: "Regina is a team that forces you to improve in order to win the next time."

Noelle Cormier, a senior, was North's high scorer (9 points). Katie Loehner, also a senior, dished out four assists and recovered the ball four times. Junior Stephanie Gore put 8 points on the board for North.

Both coaches appreciated the work ethic of the team, and particularly the leadership of the seniors. "Kelly (Kunkel), Noelle and Katie have all been with us for four years, and can work with the younger players every day at practice. The underclassmen have learned a lot from them this year," said Ritter.

Dennis figures the life of a racer is his

By Rob Fulton
Sports Editor

On Dec. 1, Grosse Pointe's A.J. Dennis will realize a life-long dream.

Dennis, a 1985 North graduate, will sit behind the wheel of a Formula Ford and make his racing debut at Sebring International Speedway.

Dennis, who graduated with honors from the Skip Barber Racing School in late September, will also race in the Skip Barber Formula Ford Florida Series which runs through March.

"I'm extremely excited," said Dennis, who has stayed in shape by playing hockey two to three nights a week. "It's funny, but I've really planned this whole thing. I told myself that I'd be in racing school by Oct. 1, 1990, and I was done with it by then. It's kind of surprising."

But it's not surprising that this perfectionist found his niche after years of waiting, reading and wondering what racing would be like.

"I've read a lot, have talked to a lot of people in the business and done my homework," said Dennis, "and I'm confident this is the right path for me."

That path began when Dennis was 14. He was a hydroplane race-rat who monkeyed around with engines and eventually landed a job on a crew. And ever since, he's been infatuated.

"I had been pit-crewing with limited and unlimited hydroplanes and loved it," he said. "I can remember all the kids would be down at the park or the beach during the summer, and I'd be down by the river with the crews."

It also helped that his grandmother lived in Indian Village, so Dennis had an excuse to visit.

"Every year we got involved in some fan clubs down there and there were some owners and drivers also in the clubs," he said. "I guess they could all see the stars in my eyes when it came to talking about hydroplanes, and one day I was picked up by a team."

But hydroplanes were not his only love.

Dennis tinkered with computers and now, after owning his own business for a few years, is an account manager for Data-Ease International.

"Through high school I always loved computers and I got very good at it," Dennis said. "I mostly did a lot of consulting and got paid for it on the side while I was holding down a job at a retail store."

Consulting became a burden for Dennis, so he changed directions. He attended Macomb Community College while working for a software company, and that combination gave him the chance to train himself further. He landed another job in Southfield and transferred to Lawrence Tech.

That move to Southfield took him out of hydroplane racing.

"I was at a crossroad and knew that I had better concentrate on school," he said. "I felt that someday I'd get into racing cars and if I didn't have the majority of my schooling out of the way, I could run into a conflict so I had to give up hydroplane racing. I looked at it like an investment in the future."

The 23-year-old Dennis, a self-proclaimed entrepreneur, was dabbling in many things as he worked on an engineering degree, but all the while he focused on a career in racing cars.

"It seems that I've been off in all these different directions," he said, "but I've never lost sight of my goals. I'm very goal-oriented and I'm constantly — no matter what I do — working toward racing."

And on Dec. 1 it's time to put up or shut up.

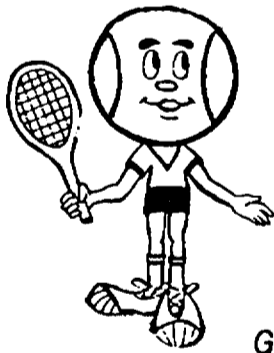

"I'd like to be a hometown hero to some extent, but more than that I want to win at a higher level," said Dennis. "I

Dennis

planned racing in six of the races in the series and maybe take some of the money I've allotted for that and do some Barber- SAAB testing and shoot for that series in 1992. Sure, I'd like to win at Indy, but not necessarily. If I can do a year of Barber- SAAB, then I'll either shoot for a second year or go to Formula Atlantic.

"With that kind of experience, I believe the ARS (American Racing Series) would be a possibility."

But that wouldn't be until 1994-95 and after that Dennis would like to sign with a team.

"I sort of regret not racing hydroplanes," he said. "I had the opportunity to do so, but didn't because I know car racing was the thing for me. I passed that chance up, but I think I've already shaped my racing career through my computer work and education."

Dennis said that because of his racing fetish, he had to sacrifice some things, including his high school sweetheart. But his mother and father won't desert him.

"My mom and dad have always said they had six librarians and then there's A.J.," he said. "My life has always been a contract to my brothers and sisters, but I prefer to think that I'm kind of unique. My father is of the typical mind set of stocks and bonds, but he knows it's not my nature to be behind a desk."

"My mom is concerned for my safety and is always saying, 'Did you hear about that racer who got hurt?' I know my parents are very supportive and that's what encourages me."

Dennis may be eccentric, but he's also the only one in his family who hasn't broken a bone. Could all that change when he gets behind the wheel?

"I guess it could, but I don't really think about it," he said. "I've had a unique opportunity to deal with death and the challenge of death. I saw four people die in my first year of hydroplanes, so I've had my fill of that and I can deal with it. I try not to think about it and I just want to go on and race."

Cars — just for the fun of it

A recent encouraging development on the automotive scene has been the emergence of a new market segment of cars that seem to have as their major purpose fun — a stunning affront to experts who warn that automobiles are fad items which should most certainly not be enjoyed.

But there seems to be a rather large slice of the population which likes to enjoy itself while commuting or running errands. How else to explain the warm sales reception accorded a new crop of tiny, odd-looking convertible "sports cars," or more accurately, perhaps, motorized "toys"?

I am not talking about cars like the Dodge Stealth, or the Nissan 300ZX or the Chevrolet Corvette ZR-1, all serious high-performance machines in the tradition of the muscle cars of the '60s (except, of course, that they can turn and stop as well as they can go).

No, these "toys" are cute cars like the Stealth they look "bad" but they don't look "cute" and are more in the tradition of '50s-era MGs and Triumphs, Volkswagen Beetles, Nash Metropolitan and Crosleys and other cars that may or may not have been good performers, but which were of no apparent use except to make getting from one place to another a lot of fun.

By Richard Wright

The Mazda Miata was greeted with a chorus of enthusiastic approval from car buffs and frowns of disapproval from safety "experts," government officials who want us to take trains, buses and people movers that do not go where we want to go; public interest practitioners who have no interest in what you are interested in; and an insurance industry spokesman who would rather you didn't drive, just pay your premiums.

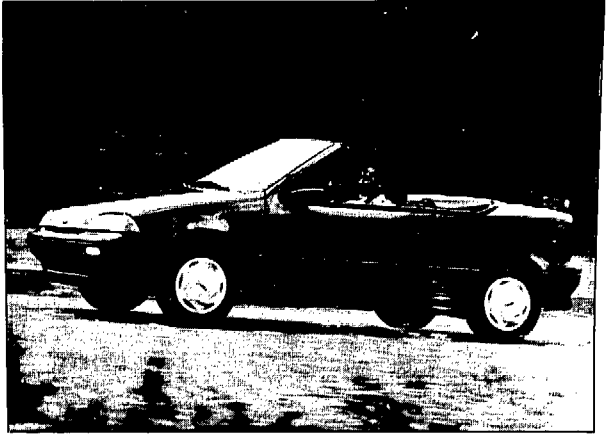

Mazda managed to capture the spirit of the early British sports cars, but with the excellent design, reliability and quality of a modern Japanese car. With its 16-valve dual overhead cam 1.6-liter fuel-injected engine, five-speed manual transmission and rear drive, the Miata has the pep and breezy feel of an MG, but without the teeth-rattling ride and sometimes eccentric behavior.

As with the early sports cars, the Miata has room only for the driver and a passenger, preferably someone he or she is intimate with anyway. It is not cheap at around $14,000, but it is not priced out of sight either.

The Miata was quickly followed by the Geo Metro convertible, a really slick soft-top version of the Suzuki Swift, and the Mercury Capri, Ford of Australia's contribution to North American civilization.

The first of these small, just-for-fun convertibles was the Suzuki Samurai. While it is a small sports-utility vehicle, it was perhaps the closest in concept to the European sports car of the post-World War II era. It is bare-bones utilitarian, you have to keep it revving high all the time, it delivers a firm (maybe that bouncy) ride, it has little room inside and it is a barrel of fun to drive, which no doubt accounts for its popularity among the younger set.

The Geo Metro LSI convertible is as much fun to drive as its looks suggest.

Suzuki advertises the Samurai as the lowest-priced convertible in America, which may also help explain its popularity among the young. Powered by a 1.3-liter four-cylinder engine driving a five-speed transmission, the Samurai has a base price of around $9,000 and you can actually buy one for less than $10,000.

If you like its looks but want something more civilized and comfortable, there is the Geo Tracker, based on the Samurai but bigger and built to General Motors specs and more attuned to American tastes and riding habits.

The Tracker bears a strong family resemblance to the Samurai, but it is a workhorse of a different color, much smoother, more refined, more user-friendly. Even someone who is not a fan of jeep-type vehicles can quickly learn to love this odd-looking little Geo.

We will report more on all these cars in upcoming weeks, but what prompted this brief survey of fun "toy" cars was a sunny Saturday in November spent in a Geo Metro with the top down and the collar up. The Metro convertible is as much fun as its looks suggest, and that's a lot. With the top down, the test vehicle looked a bit like the kind of car Donald Duck would drive and from certain angles it bore an uncanny resemblance to a Dutch wooden shoe painted bright blue.

The top, which drops below an ingenious three-piece plastic cover, can be put up or down in seconds. The centerpiece unlatches and the two side pieces swing away, then back to cover the top in the well. One can't help but wish that the folks who designed the Cadillac Allante top had taken a look at the Metro first.

Since the Samurai and the Tracker are sports-utility vehicles, the Metro convertible doesn't really have any competition in its $10,000 range (sticker on the well-equipped test car was $11,131). Standard equipment includes base coat/clear coat paint, halogen headlights, full carpeting and intermittent windshield wipers. Interior room is about the same as a Corvair Escort, but exterior size is about as small as cars get. Overall length is 146 inches, almost six feet shorter than the new Buick Roadmaster wagon.

The engine is a one-liter three-cylinder fuel-injected aluminum unit rated at 55 horsepower. Its EPA mileage figures are in the 50s. The five-speed shift is smooth, the ride is smooth, the seats are comfortable and the mere sight of the car with its top down in November makes people smile.

A Chevrolet spokesman said the principal driver of a Metro convertible is most likely a young single female. But old guys will like it, too. Take it from me.

Deer-vehicle crashes increase

Wayne County ranked 77th out of 83 Michigan counties in the number of deer-vehicle accidents last year with 193, AAA Michigan reports.

The estimated 700,000 hunters heading out Nov. 15-30 should be especially careful while driving since they are three times more likely to be injured traveling to sites than while hunting.

To avoid deer collisions, AAA Michigan recommends:

- Be extra alert in "Deer Crossing" areas, but remember deer may cross highways anywhere. Most accidents happen on paved local roads with fewer reported on interstates or unpaved roads.

- Watch at night for shining eyes. Many accidents occur within two hours after sunset.

- Motionless deer on the side of the road can be "frozen" by activating the vehicle's high beams.

- Ease to a slow speed when a deer is spotted. Assume more deer are near if one appears. Don't panic or try to dodge a moving deer.

- Report all accidents to the local police, Department of Natural Resources or the sheriff's office as well as your insurance company. A permit may be obtained to keep the deer.

- Always wear a safety belt.

North to hold conferences

Grosse Pointe North High School will conduct parent conferences the week of Dec. 10-14 from 2:15 to 3:15 p.m.

School will run on a shortened bell schedule with students dismissed at 2:15 each day. The bus companies will be notified of the change.

Parents will be notified by mail if a conference has been scheduled by a teacher. The conferences are designed to help at-risk students, their parents and teachers work together to make the school year successful.

Varzi is scholarship finalist

Jehan Varzi, a senior at Grosse Pointe South High School, has been named the school's top Shell Century Three Leader, according to Dr. John Burl Artis, principal.

The 17-year-old student is now eligible to compete with other local winners from around the state for one of two $1,500 college scholarships and an all-expense-paid trip to the Shell Century Three Leaders National Meeting March 21-25, 1991, in Colonial Williamsburg, Va. State delegates will compete for the national winner's prize of an additional $10,000 scholarship.

The Shell Century Three Leaders program is designed to recognize student leaders who show strong leadership abilities and an interest in the future of America.

Varzi was judged on the basis of leadership skills, academic success, school and community involvement and a current events examination.

Runner-up in the competition at Grosse Pointe South High School was Robert Louisell.

This is the 15th year of the Shell Century Three Leaders program, which annually awards more than $250,000 in scholarships to student leaders. The program is funded by the Shell Oil Company Foundation and administered by the National Association of Secondary School Principals.

Varzi is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Massoud Varzi of Grosse Pointe City. He spent last year in Germany through a Rotary International Student Exchange Program.

Fluent in German and Persian in addition to English, Varzi is active in Pointe Players, Key Club, BOEC, Debate, Junior Achievement and the Foreign Exchange Club.

Turkey trotters

The third annual St. Clare of Montefalco Turkey Trot was an overwhelming success as 325 students participated in grade level races, with the winners earning $10 food certificates toward buying a holiday turkey. Second through fifth place finishers also received prizes.

The races, differing in length depending on the grade level, were run on the streets adjacent to the school. Grosse Pointe Park public safety officers, parents and teachers supervised the closing of the area. The race was run under the direction of physical education teacher Pat Szczesniak.

Each division had a boy and a girl winner: first and second grade, David Trotter and Andrea Perkins; third and fourth grade, Jeff Hermann and Stephanie Wilhelm; fifth and sixth grade, Nick Provenzano and Megan McGahey; seventh and eighth grade, Julian Bonner and Lisa Wronikowski.

North students excel in math

Grosse Pointe North High School students Melissa Blumenthal, Julie Irwin, Hardy Kim, Meryl McGee, Timothy Meinig, Helene Odic, Monica Rhee, Charles Smith and Daniel Weber have qualified for the second part of the 34th annual Michigan Mathematics Prize Competition sponsored by the Michigan section of the Mathematical Association of America.

Students qualified for Part II by placing among the top 957 out of the 18,529 participants in an examination given at 475 schools across the state in October.

The qualifiers will compete by taking the Part II exam in December. The 100 students with the highest combined scores will be invited to a banquet in their honor at Eastern Michigan University in February 1991, and the top 50 will receive college scholarships ranging in value from $300 to $2,000.

Student leaders

Above are St. Clare of Montefalco's representatives to the student advisory board for the "Class of 95," Channel 2 and 56's five-year projected study of education in the metropolitan Detroit area. The study will track eighth graders as they progress through the educational system until their graduation in 1995. Several schools throughout the area were invited to send students to be part of the advisory board. From left are Marisa Louie, John Whitty, Dana Mabry and Jake Miller who were selected by the staff of the school. They have attended the first meeting which became part of a television special seen earlier this month.

Counselor honored

Jere Thomas, counselor at Oakwood Junior High in East Detroit, was recognized at the 25th anniversary celebration of the Michigan Association for Counseling and Development on Nov. 5 at the Lansing Civic Center.

Thomas, a resident of Grosse Pointe Woods, was a past president of the organization and one of only three school counselors in the state who have been president since 1965.

"This organization's 2,000 members are counselors not only from schools, but from every type of setting such as from industry and private practice, as well as college professors of counseling," Thomas said.

Thomas has been a counselor in East Detroit Public Schools since 1964.

Regina faculty members honored

Five Regina High School faculty members earned recognition recently from two organizations.

Sister Ruth Anne Kelly, OP, and Sister Constance Studer, OP, were recognized by Spectrum, an Archdiocese of Detroit organization for religious educators, for their years of service to religious education.

Florence Gore, who lives in Grosse Pointe, Mary Loewen, and Elsa Smith have been included in the first edition of Who's Who Among America's Teachers, 1990. They were named as teachers who had influenced the lives of one or more of their former students who themselves were listed in Who's Who Among American High School Students or The National Dean's List.

Collectively, these five teachers have completed 56 years of educational service to Regina High School.

Bookworms

Students at Poupard Elementary School recently celebrated National Children's Book Week, Nov. 12-18, with a "Design a Bookmark Contest." Winning bookmarks were chosen from entries by 185 aspiring young artists.

They are kindergarten student Danny Schmitt, first grader Shaun Butler, second grader Dina Lovisa, third graders Emily Armijo and Adam Zielke, fourth grader Patrick Griffith and fifth grade students Katie Hazelton and Aaron Peabody.

Other activities in the Poupard Media Center during the week included a surprise storyteller for the first graders, Poupard principal James Cooper, and a "Read to an Adult Program" with second grade students in Chris Pruett's class sharing stories with parent volunteers.

From the Board

Grosse Pointe Board of Realtors

Making your home safe for the holiday season

The Grosse Pointe Board of Realtors and its members offer home safety tips to ensure a happy and safe holiday season for you and your family.

Start by carefully checking all electrical decorations, particularly those that have been sitting in a damp basement for the past 12 months. The National Fire Protection Association reports that during the 1980s there were 560 structural fires annually involving Christmas trees. A dry tree and poorly wired lights can lead to disaster.

Make sure that all electrical cords, lights and ornaments are approved by a testing agency, such as UL (Underwriters Laboratories), and are in good condition. Check for frayed ends or loose connections. Make sure that all extension cords are placed out of the normal traffic path and that no furniture or other objects are resting on the cords.

Keep your Christmas tree moist by checking the water level daily and select decorative lights that do not generate large amounts of heat. Place the tree away from direct sources of warmth such as radiators, televisions and hot air ducts. Tree lights should be on only when an adult is present. Never leave tree lights on overnight. If you have an artificial tree, make sure it's fire retardant. Fire retardant spray is available for both artificial and live trees.

Scented holiday candles can make a home warm and festive, but never leave a candle lit when an adult is not present to monitor its burning. Make sure the base or candleholder is sufficient to contain dripping wax, and take care that there is nothing near the flame that could ignite. Extinguish the flame when leaving the room, and keep all matches and lighters out of the reach of small children.

The kitchen is often one of the busiest rooms in the house during the holidays. Make sure that stove top burners have not inadvertently been left turned on. If you have small children in the house, keep them away from the kitchen during busy meal preparations.

If there are no cigarette or pipe smokers in your household, but you anticipate entertaining guests who smoke,

New-home construction

Pointes experience 5-year boomlet

By John Minnis

Assistant Editor

Even though the five Grosse Pointes have been built up for decades, 181 new housing units were constructed over the past five years.

The new-housing figures are based on permits issued and were compiled and published by the Southeastern Michigan Council of Governments (SEMCOG).

Though not a building boom when compared to northern Oakland County, the average of 36 new units a year provided Grosse Pointe builders with steady work.

Grosse Pointe Farms led the way with 83 new detached single-family homes in the five-year period from 1985 through 1989. Grosse Pointe City was second with 48; the Park had 21; the Shores had 16; and 13 new units were added in the Woods.

Christopher Blake, president of The Blake Co. in Grosse Pointe, one of the most active builders in the Pointes, said he thought SEMCOG's numbers sounded high.

His company has built 18 houses at Dodge Place on the former Horace B. Dodge estate in the City and 16 homes in the still-growing Scherbrook subdivision in the Farms. His firm has also built many houses and condominiums on odd lots throughout the Pointes.

Blake said he does not expect the next five years to be as vigorous as the past five years in terms of new construction. There are fewer and fewer lots left, he said.

Blake expects major home renovations and additions to increase in popularity.

For example, a City resident got approval last week to tear the roof off his 1 1/2-story house on Rivard and add an entire second floor, as well as an attached two-car garage.

The Blake Co. has been in the Grosse Pointe area since Blake's father, John J. Blake, founded it in 1940. Initially engaged in residential and commercial income properties, the company, under Chris Blake's management since 1985, has branched into major developments.

The Blake Co. is currently developing a $35 million condo/marina project called Harbor Place at Nine Mile and Jefferson in St. Clair Shores.

Richard Russell, of Russell Homes in the Farms, said his company can account for 47 of the new homes listed in the SEMCOG report: 10 in the Briarwood subdivision at the foot of Muir Road; 30 at Windemere (the old Henry Ford and Richard Webber estates in the Farms); and seven at Windward, one block north of Moran off Lakeshore. He has also built many homes on single lots throughout the Pointes.

Russell said his family has been in the Pointes since the '30s, and he has been a builder here since 1978. He said he is the biggest builder in the Pointes.

Besides continued construction of large additions and major renovations, Russell thinks rebuilding may become more frequent.

"I can see that happening, especially in the older areas," he said.

Some older homes are not kept up, Russell said, and it becomes more costly to "rehab" them than they're worth. For around $15,000, a house can be torn down, he said, and then the property owner can build the house he wants.

Grosse Pointe builder Jim Mast, who continued the Walter H. Mast Co. founded by his father in 1928, is building his fourth house on Cameron in the City. He also built some homes on Sycamore Lane in the City.

Grosse Pointe builder John C. Uznis said most of the vacant lots in the Pointes have disappeared over the past five years.

He echoed the sentiment of other builders that as land gets more scarce and more expensive, more people are opting for major home renovation projects. His company has undertaken many extensive remodeling jobs in the Pointes in the $200,000 to $300,000 range.

Uznis said high land values make the major renovations economically feasible.

He said there will probably be

From Thanksgiving to Christmas

The holiday season calls for corny decorations

This is the time of year when the seasonal decorations for holidays overlap. With Christmas trimmings appearing in all directions, there are still the decorations for Thanksgiving to be seen. It is amazing how many lampposts, front doors and fences around Grosse Pointe have been festooned since early October with shaggy bunches of cornstalks and how many front doors are adorned with clusters of variegated ears of corn.

In a beautiful book called "The Fruits of the Earth," published in Italy in 1976, corn is defined as "a sturdy, annual plant of North American origin."

A thousand years before Columbus, the Indians had learned to hybridize corn and to fertilize the soil where it grew. It is generally believed that maize, or corn, originated with the pre-Incan cultures of Peru and very early pictures of maize with its stalks, ears and tassels have been discovered in ancient graves thousands of years old. From the terraced gardens of Peru, corn gradually spread northward to Mexico, where it helped to build both the Mayan and Aztec empires, and still further north along the Mississippi Valley and into the American Southwest.

Some scientists now believe that corn, even that known to early Indians, was actually a hybrid of two wild grasses. The Jemez Indians of New Mexico today will show you a canelike tasseled grass that grows in the canyons and tell you that "from this plant we got corn."

There are many legends among the Indian tribes to explain the beginnings of corn. The nomadic Navajos maintain that one day a mammoth turkey hen flew across the sky and dropped an ear of blue corn from beneath her wing, while the Iroquois tribes in New York state tell of a spirit woman who walked across the fields, corn sprouting from her footprints.

Whatever the legend, Indians everywhere hold corn sacred, a gift from the gods to be surrounded with ceremony. The Zunis of New Mexico believed it to be so sacred that a medicine man sprinkled a trail of corn across gates to prevent the conquistadores from entering.

Characteristic of rituals was the ceremony the Creeks held each summer when the corn was ready for harvest, and at this time a new year began with feasting and thanksgiving. (The Pueblo Indians know more than 40 ways to cook corn.)

To the Hopi people, corn is the symbol of life, and at the naming ceremony of a new baby, an ear of corn is set aside, dried and saved as a sacred memento for the child.

There are now hundreds of varieties of corn that come in colors ranging from white through all the shades of yellow and red to gray and blue and purple to black. In early times it was used to make colored dyes as well as for food and decoration. Popcorn, too, is an Indian discovery.

Today, corn is a staple food for more than 200 million people around the world. Dr. Richard Ford, eminent ethno-botanist and anthropologist at the University of Michigan, has made an extensive study of the evolution of corn. He discovered some of the earliest archaeological corn in the southwestern United States, collected the wild ancestor corn in Mexico, excavated dry rock areas in New Mexico where corncobs more than 3,000 years old were found, and farmed with the Zuni Indians, in his lifelong quest for information on the history of corn.

Perhaps a way to bridge the holiday use of corn from Thanksgiving to Christmas would be to remember our feathered friends who have not flown south for the winter. Dried corn kernels are used to fill bird feeders or are stuck in suet balls to hang from trees — sort of a pomander for birds.

Ever since man began to till the soil, people have looked for favorable signs in the stars, moon, native plants, colors of sunsets, bird behavior patterns, and other aspects of nature to guide them in proper planting.

There are many rules in folklore about planting corn. One is that corn should be planted when apple tree leaves are as big as mouse ears. Most Indian tribes believe that corn planted by a pregnant woman will be most productive.

One of the most popular decorations for Christmas trees in Victorian times was popcorn. It was strung in long ropes and looped around the tree with strings of red cranberries, and popcorn balls were hung from the branches with loops of satin ribbon. A popular pre-Christmas festivity was making popcorn decorations, with some of it being consumed in the process.

have an adequate number of ashtrays available, or request that guests not smoke in your home.

Following the opening of gifts, bag all excess wrapping paper and ribbons, and remove to a metal garbage can or dump site. In a household fire, excess paper will increase the speed at which the fire will spread.

If your home or apartment does not have smoke detectors, now is the time to have them installed. If you do have smoke detectors, check the batteries. If you're not sure how old the batteries are, replace them.

A small fire extinguisher is an important household item. Purchase one that will extinguish all types of fires, including electrical and grease fires. Keep it in a handy place in your home. Review its proper usage with all members of your household. You may even want to practice outside on an imaginary fire. Make sure, however, that the extinguisher is fully recharged. Discuss escape routes with all household members and overnight guests in the event of a fire. Check with your local fire department for information on escaping safely from a burning home. Is the fire department's number posted in plain site near each phone? If you have small children, help them memorize the number and instruct them on how to call the fire department in an emergency.

The preceding column is written monthly as a public service by the Grosse Pointe Board of Realtors. If you have an idea or suggestion for the column, write the Grosse Pointe Board of Realtors at 710 Notre Dame, Grosse Pointe, Mich. 48230, or call 882-8000.

Woodchopping: Don't try to cut corners

Woodchopping, an almost lost art, has emerged as a popular way of supplying fuel for the cold winter months. Selecting and using the proper tool to do the job safely is important.

Woodchoppers who believe that the single bit axe, an axe with a cutting edge on one end and a striking face on the opposite end, is the all-purpose woodchopping tool, are risking serious injury.

The single bit axe should be used only to fell or trim trees or split and cut wood. It can also be used for notching and chopping logs and timber. It's important to remember the striking face opposite the cutting edge of the axe is to drive wood stakes, and never to be struck against metal, stone or concrete. This means emphatically that it should never be used to strike steel wood-splitting wedges; serious injury could result.

The double bit axe, a cousin of the single bit axe, is limited to the splitting, cutting, trimming and shaping functions described above; it does not have a flat striking face.

Hatchets, the smaller but more versatile cousins of axes, are used for cutting and trimming. The striking face of hatchets is properly hardened for driving common nails, but should never be used to strike chisels, punches or other hardened metal tools.

If your woodchopping chores include using a steel wood-splitting wedge, then be certain to use the woodchopper's maul when striking the steel wedge. A woodchopper's maul has a round bevel edge striking face with a sharp, opposite edge. In addition to splitting wood with the sharp edge, the maul is used in conjunction with a steel wedge by first making a notch in the wood to be split with the sharp edge, placing the steel wedge in the notch, followed by driving the wedge with the maul's bevel striking face. Never use an axe or hatchet as a wedge as serious injury could result.

All striking and struck tools used for woodchopping and splitting should be sharpened as needed. A dull tool not only makes for a more difficult job, it often can be dangerous. Discard any maul, axe, hatchet or wedge if it shows dents, chips, cracks, mushrooming or excessive wear. Handles can and should be replaced when damaged.

Safety goggles must be worn when chopping to prevent eye injury from flying chips and fragments. This also means keeping onlookers away from the work area when chopping wood.

How to keep your tree fresh

The National Christmas Tree Association offers a few simple tests for checking and maintaining a tree's freshness.

First, gently grasp a branch between your thumb and forefinger and pull it gently toward you. Few needles should come off in your hand if the tree is fresh. Second, take a look around the tree. You shouldn't see an excessive amount of green needles on the ground. Some loss of brown needles is normal.

Keep your tree in a sheltered, unheated area, such as a porch or garage, until you are ready to decorate it.

Before you set up your tree, make a fresh, straight cut across the base of the trunk (about a quarter of an inch up from the original cut) and place the tree in a water-bearing stand. A tree will absorb as much as a gallon of water in the first 24 hours and one or more quarts a day thereafter. Water will prevent the needles from drying and the boughs from drooping.

Keep your tree away from heat and draft sources like a fireplace, radiator, or television set. Test your light cords and connections before hanging them on the tree to make sure they're in good working order. And be sure to unplug them before you go to bed or leave the house.

Build

more homes torn down and replaced with new ones in the future. "It's happening already," he said. "It's really an economic question."

On Lothrop near Ridge Road a small house was torn down and replaced with a larger, modern structure. As property values rise and homes become older, many homeowners in the Pointes may decide to rebuild.

When asked if there will be continued construction activity in the Pointes, Uznis said, "I think there will be a fair amount of activity, yes. I think there'll be more."

While a handful of local builders handle most of the new construction in the Pointes, other builders long for the lucrative Grosse Pointe custom-home market.

One such builder is Joe Salome, a Grosse Pointe native who has his own company, Grand View Construction, in Rochester Hills.

He is currently building his first home in the Pointes on what was a vacant lot at Whittier and Vernor in the Park. He said he has always wanted to get into his hometown market, and he hopes the custom home he's building will catch the attention of future customers.

"This job creates more phone calls than all my other jobs combined," he said of the Park home. He was surprised with the number of new housing units built in the Pointes over the past five years.

Former Grosse Pointer Joe Salome, owner of Grand View Construction of Rochester Hills, is building his first custom home in the Pointes at Whittier and Vernor in the Park. An experienced builder, he would like to get more work in the Pointes.

"As long as I've been in construction," he said, "I've always heard Grosse Pointe is built up."

Salome said he likes building in the Pointes because the property owners usually want special amenities, such as larger closets, more bathrooms and quality materials, and have the financial means to pay for top workmanship.

"This is a market I'd definitely like to break into," he said.

PLEASE DON'T DELAY!
SPAY or NEUTER YOUR PET TODAY!
An altered pet is a healthier and happier companion. Also, it spares you the grief and pain of having puppies and kittens destroyed when no homes can be found. Countless numbers of sweet, innocent little ones are euthanized every day in shelters across the country because a pet wasn't spayed or neutered. If we cut down on the numbers of unwanted litters being born, we will also cut down on the number of abandoned, lost and unwanted animals to destroy.

MAKE IT A BE KIND TO ANIMALS WORLD

ANTI-CRUELTY ASSOCIATION
13569 Joseph Campau • Detroit, MI 48212 • 891-7188

This holiday season give your companion animal the best gift of all. Be your pet's best friend and get them spayed or neutered. The benefits of an altered pet are rewarding. Your pet will be a happier and more content companion. Studies have proven females have less risk for ovarian and breast cancer. In males they have less chance for prostate cancer. Each year our shelter sees many euthanasia requests for owners pets due to cancers that could have been prevented. Animals that could of lived out their lives, instead are coming in at seven and eight years of age. Living only half of what they could be had they been altered.

Every year thousands of kittens and puppies are born into this world only to end up dying on the streets, ending up in research facilities, or fall into the hands of people that use them for bait for dog fighting. They all do not find good homes. The truth is very few do end up with quality lives. The majority are left to survive anyway they can. A lot never reach the one year old mark.

You can make a difference. The solution is with you.

The Anti Cruelty Association thanks you for helping us in "Making It A Be Kind To Animals World."

For more information please call us at 891-7188. Ask for Eileen or Debbie.
