Park woman's mother survives fiery crash at Metro

By John Minnis Assistant Editor

Blanche Shaw, 81, mother of Park resident Mary Rigdon, who is the wife of the Grosse Pointe Memorial Church pastor, miraculously escaped from the burning wreckage of the DC9 at Metro Airport last week.

Shaw of Beaver, Pa., was returning home on Northwest Flight 1482 Dec. 3 after visiting her daughter, an assistant U.S. attorney, and son-in-law, the Rev. V. Bruce Rigdon, when her plane was struck by a Boeing 727, Northwest Flight 299, that was accelerating down the runway for takeoff.

The DC9 became lost in the fog and poor weather conditions and strayed onto an active runway. The crash killed eight and injured 24 of the DC9's passengers. The passengers on the 727 safely got off the plane.

Shaw was the last passenger to get off the DC9. In fact, it was believed at the time that all the surviving passengers were already off when Shaw appeared in the doorway of the burning plane, her face reddened by the heat of the flames and her clothes blackened by smoke, according to reports.

"All of a sudden, there she was," passenger Fred Guyor of Southfield told a Detroit Free Press reporter. "I thought everybody that was coming had already come, and she appeared like a ghost in the door.'

Guyor coaxed Shaw out onto the wing of the plane and convinced her to sit down and slide off into his and another male passenger's arms. The drop was 8 to 9 feet. Guyor said Shaw's entire back and hair were burning and smoldering.

While being carried to safety, Shaw reportedly called Guyor her hero for saving her. She said the ordeal was "too much for an 82-year-old woman." Her birthday is Guyor reported being jolted by an explosion while waiting for the plane to take off. He looked back and saw a ball of flame. The windows on the right side of the plane were blown out. "I felt the heat," he said.

Friday, Pastor Rigdon said his mother-iniaw was doing well at the University of Michigan Hospital's burn unit. She received some skin grafts on her hands and back. He said it could be weeks before she is released.

"She's a woman with a very strong will and a very strong faith in God," he said, "and those things helped her get through this ordeal.'

Shaw remained conscious the entire time and remembers every detail, Rigdon said. She sat in seat 15A near the rear of the plane. She heard a horrendous noise, people screaming and the roof fell on her. She realized there was no one around to help her.

She grabbed her purse and started to work her way forward. There was a ball of fire behind her and flames ahead of her. "She said to herself, 'If you are going to survive, you're going to have to walk through fire, so just get on with it," her son-in-law

He said Shaw has pledged that she will wear slacks when traveling by plane in the future. She wore a dress on the day of the mishap, which made jumping onto the wing and to the ground difficult.

Once on the tarmac, she found all the emergency personnel were gone. She grabbed snow to but the fire out in her hair.

Tea time

Students from Defer Elementary School recently re-enacted the Boston Tea Party, the protest by the colonists over a taxon tea that led to the Revolutionary War. Students, dressed as colonists, took part in a rally, shouting: "Down with taxes." They were shown how a musket is fired and learned valuable tidbits of information (e.g., a prerequisite for being a Colonial soldier was to have three teeth that met in the front in order to be able to tear open gunpowder packets). All that was interrupted when a group of students, dressed as Indians, ran out onto the piers at Windmill Pointe Park and emptied "tea" into the lake. (The tea was actually dirt and leaves.) The reenactment was part of the students' study of the Revolution-

Pointes, Harper Woods form special police unit

By John Minnis Assistant Editor

A special police unit comprising officers from the five Grosse Pointes and Harper Woods became active last week.

The special response unit is trained to handle dangerous situations in any of the six communities, and its officers work together as a team.

"They are a unit," said Woods Public Safety Director Jack Patterson, "and the unit part is where it all is.'

Once a month the unit practices possible life-threatening scenarios and is trained on how to respond. The unit is also trained in the use of special weapons and has special equipment, such as assault-type bulletproof vests.

Each of the six departments has two officers in the unit. Along with the dozen regular members of the unit, each department has two officers trained as negotiators.

By John Minnis Assistant Editor

As a lifelong Boy Scout, J. Nicholls "Nick" Spain Jr. is still doing "good turns.

At age 43, Spain is giving back to the organization that gave him so much as a youth. A Farms resident, he is on the executive board of the Detroit Area Council of the Boy Scouts of America and has headed community service programs, such as the Scouting for Food/Can Do Kickoff, which was Nov. 17.

Through the program, 6.448 Detroit-area Scouts collected 171 tons of food, enough to feed a million people, Spain said. The Can Do food drive is sponsored by WXYZ-TV, Channel 7, and Elias Brothers Big Boys, Across the country. Boy Scout troops collect for the hungry through the Boy Scouts National Food Good Turn.

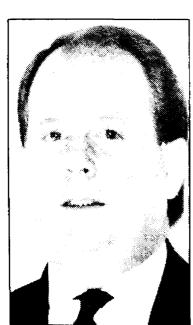

In the Boy Scouts, a good turn is doing something for someone else, something to help other people, Spain explained. And he should know: He's an Eagle

In fact, he comes from a family of Eagle Scouts. His father and two brothers also achieved the Boy Scouts' highest rank, something only 2 percent of all Scouts achieve.

'You are always an Eagle Scout. It never leaves you. Spain said. "There are not a lot of them. It's an elite group.

Spain's father was always active in Boy Scouts and still is.

Inside Farms approves development of property at 255 Lakeshore

By John Minnis

Assistant Editor The proposed subdividing of the property at 255 Lakeshore got a reluctant approval from the Grosse Pointe Farms City Council/Zoning Board of Appeals Monday night.

Developer Richard E. Russell of Russell Homes sought approval for spliting the Lakeshore property, which has one existing home, into five lots. The property is located between Carmel Lane and Winthrop Place.

Russell presented two plans, each calling for five lots. Plan No. 1 called for extending Christine Drive and adding a cul-de-sac to service several of the new lots. Under this plan, no variances are required. If Russell were to keep the existing house, he would have required a rearyard setback variance, but by tearing down the house he would need no variances. Plan No. 2 also meant the existing house would be torn down. but required a shorter extension of Christine Drive and, consequently, much less paved area in the new subdivision. Two variances were required under this plan, both resulting from the short extension of Christine

Neighbors objected to both plans and the Carmel-Winthrop Homeowners Association called four larger lots instead of five.

Mayor Joseph Fromm pointed out, however, that because the first plan required no variances, the City Council's control of the project was limited and, barring specific building or zoning restrictions, would have to approve the site plan

"If Mr. Russell tears down the house, no variances are needed," Fromm said, "and the council would be hard-pressed not to approve plan No. 1.'

Even though the second plan required variances, Russell said he preferred it over the first plan because it reduced some of the neighbors' objections, would mean less concrete and would provide larger lots.

Fromm queried the neighbors and although they still had problems with five lots on the site, many agreed that if forced to decide, they would have to settle for the second plan

The council, sitting as a Zoning Board of Appeals, approved the two variances required for the second plan by a 5-to-1 vote, with Councilman Emil Berg vot-

The variances allowed less than the required 120 feet of curb frontage on the cul-de-sac for a dogleg lot. They also allowed more than the maximum for the property to be split into lot coverage of a driveway for the lot so that it could be serviced by a long driveway instead of extending Christine Drive even farther. Reconvening as a City Council, the elected officials considered the two plans for preliminary site plan approval.

Following the earlier approval of two variances for plan No. 2, the council approved preliminary

Farms man faces felony charge in electricity theft

By John Minnis Assistant Editor

A Grosse Pointe Farms electrician faces a felony charge for allegedly stealing electricity to operate his whirlpool hot tub and several other appliances. Russell S. Zablocki, 47, stood mute at his arraignment Nov. 20 before Farms Municipal Judge Matthew Rumora. The court entered an innocent plea on his behalf. He is charged with public utility fraud or use of more than

According to Farms police reports, Detroit Edison investigators first became aware of Zablocki's alleged electricity thefts in August 1988 when they received an anonymous phone tip that Zablocki was stealing elec-

The investigators went to Zablocki's house in the 400 block of Lexington and discovered a wire attached to the main line outside the house and ahead of the meter, indicating unmetered electricity was being used inside the

The investigators disconnected the wire and reinstalled it beyond the meter.

In December 1989, a meter reader found Zablocki's meter upside down, again indicating the use of unmetered electricity. On Jan. 4, 1990, investigators confirmed the upside-down me-

On Jan. 19, Detroit Edison investigators reinstalled the meter and installed a pole-top meter, which acted independently of the house meter. The pole-top meter was set at zero and the house meter read 08049.

On Oct. 3, Edison investigators returned. The house meter read 12474 and the pole-top meter read 15489, which meant that 11,064 kilowatt hours of electricity had been used at the home but not recorded on the house meter. Investigators concluded that there must be a tap in the wire before the meter, but none could be found.

At 10 cents a kilowatt hour. the cost of the unmetered electricity was $1,106.40, according to police reports.

On Nov. 14, Farms dectectives obtained a search warrant for Zablocki's home. Police and Detroit Edison investigators searched the home. Before going in, Edison workmen pulled the meter, which should have cut all power in the house

Kids battle drugs, and alcohol is the No. 1 foe

Remember when you were 12? It was so important to fit in not-wearing braces or your mittens on a string through your coat sleeves

Unfortunately, fitting in today means dealing with much more deadly decisions. All over America kids are not just battling acne — they're battling drugs.

Alcohol is the No. 1 drug problem among youth, according to Bill Fairgrieve, executive director of the National Council on Alcoholism Inc. (NCA), a United Way agency dedicated to combating alcoholism and other drug addictions.

"The most common age kids begin to drink is 12," Fairgrieve said. "However, it's no longer unusual for 10-year-olds to have serious drinking problems.

More than one-third of fourth graders in a recent survey reported that kids their own age push each other to try beer, wine

"There are a number of reasons why kids start drinking," Fairgrieve said. "Peer pressure is obviously one of them. It's important to kids that they fit in with others.

It may begin as a way to ease the pain of growing up, and often develops into thrill-seeking. Fairgrieve adds. Kids drink to feel older and glamorous.

A 1987 "Weekly Reader" survey of fourth through sixth graders found that television and movies had the greatest influence in making drugs and alcohol attractive. Another report estimates that American children see 100,000 beer commercials by the time they're 18.

Alcohol use among underaged children is deadly. Not only does it threaten normal development. but about half of all youthful deaths in drownings, fires, suicide and homicide are alcoholrelated. Early alcohol use can also lead to more dangerous and more addictive drugs. So as a parent, what can you do?

Don't ever think that your child won't drink or take drugs. NCA reports that drug use among children is 10 times more prevalent than parents suspect. Drug use is not confined to kids in certain geographic areas or from particular economic backgrounds. Drug use affects kids verywhere, Fairgrieve said.

Kids Under the Influence," a friends, emotional highs and publication by NCA, suggests that parents should "... not ig- more secretive, abusive behavior, nore, tolerate or even approve of adolescent drinking in the mistaken belief that 'at least the kids are not on drugs." The publication states that alcohol is a drug ... and it's less likely that "teens are going to find some way to drink" if they understand that the grown-ups in their lives disapprove of alcohol use as strongly and consistently as they oppose their children using any other drug.

"It's important, as parents, that we learn everything we can about alcohol and other drugs so that we can provide our children with current and correct information." Fairgrieve said.

Listen to your children if they want to talk about drinking. More than one-third of all teenagers, according to a recent Gallup Poll, say they would like to discuss drinking with their parents more.

How can you tell if your child is involved with drugs or alcohol? A drop in grades, switching

U.S. question: To go to war soon or later

y ordering the release of all the Western hostages and thus meeting one of the UN demands, Iraq has raised American hopes for a settlement of the Middle East crisis without the necess-

True, the United States and its partners are still sticking fast to the other UN resolutions that demand Iraq's unconditional withdrawal from Kuwait and insisting there will be no negotiations on that point.

But Saddam Hussein has also accepted President Bush's proposal for Secretary of State James Baker to meet with Hussein and Iraq's foreign minister to consult with Bush in Washington. This acceptance, despite a flap over the dates of the meetings, also contributes to hopes for a peaceful solution of the crisis.

Yet in Washington there is a growing controversy between the Democratic Congress and the Republican administration over the timing of any possible assault on Saddam Hussein and his Iraqi cohorts. The public appears to be divided, not on whether to wage war if necessary but on whether the time has yet arrived.

Democratic Rep. Dennis Hertel of the 14th District told the Grosse Pointe News last week he sees no reason for any invasion of Iraq in the immediate future because intelligence sources have indicated that UN-imposed sanctions are beginning to take effect on Iraq.

That view apparently is widely shared among Washington Democrats while the administration contends it must move speedily toward war or risk the breakup of the UN coalition.

Yet the Democrats appear to have a point. They argue that what is still lacking from the U.S. and UN side is any serious discussion of the consequences of an attack on Hussein. They ask a series of questions like the following:

If the UN coalition is victorious, as expected, are there plans for a long-term occupation of Iraq? How does the coalition contemplate limiting the antagonism that will be aroused in the rest of the Arab world by the use of force against Iraq? What future for Iraq does the Bush administration see down the road if the UN coalition wins its expected victory?

And perhaps the most important question of all: Can the UN coalition tolerate leaving Hussein in power if he withdraws from Iraq or must he be removed and his arsenal and potential nuclear capability be destroyed?

Most Americans hope the direct contacts scheduled between the U.S. and Iraqi leaders will succeed in persuading Hussein to withdraw peacefully from Kuwait. But surely if the Iraqi dictator fails to bow to the UN demands, the Bush administration must have already made plans not only for the waging of war but for the treatment of a post-war Iraq.

It is true the Bush administration is using tough talk about war right after Jan. 15 in order to keep the pressure on Saddam Hussein for a peaceful withdrawal but disclosing any tough postwar plans surely would increase rather than diminish the pressure on Iraq.

Yet if the divided American public is to be persuaded to support war even at a more distant date, then we think the people and Congress should have the opportunity to debate the possible answers to these and other unanswered questions. Otherwise, the Bush administration runs the risk of lacking widespread public support if it has to use force to achieve its goals in Iraq.

Budget calls for state layoffs

Yow that state legislators have agreed to a $532 million cut in this year's state budget, the prospects are that Michigan residents will get fewer services and less aid from their state government during the fiscal year ending Oct. 1, 1991, but not the tax cut promised by Gov.-elect John Engler.

At least that was the word coming out of Lansing after the Legislature adopted cuts that will require a 9.2 percent reduction in budget for the 19 state departments.

However, Engler saw to it that the deal will spare state school aid from the cuts and thus enable him to keep his campaign pledge to increase the percentage of state funds earmarked for local schools. But the pledge is being met not by increasing state school funds but by sparing them the cuts other departments are taking.

In fact, funding for higher education, the state's 15 universities and 29 community colleges, will be cut I percent which may mean larger tuition hikes at the affected public institutions.

Revenue sharing for cities, townships and villages also will be slashed 2 percent. That means the state's economies will be telt in all parts of Michigan, regardless of the need at a time of rising unemploy-

The cuts apparently will mean the postponement until fiscal year 1992 at least of any redemption of Engler's campaign promise of a 20 percent reduction in property taxes which have been estimated to cost $1.5 billion. That was the word from Patricia Woodworth, Engler's budget direc-

But the recent cuts apparently constitute just the first round of belt-tightening at the state level. Another $440 million in savings apparently will be needed when the new legislative session begins Jan. 1. That will be required because of the estimated $1 billion deficit for the year that ends Sept. 30, 1992.

But even more cutting may be required to offset $340 million just added to the spending of three departments because their budgets were regarded as underfunded by the budget approved by the Legislature last summer.

As part of the 9.2 percent cutbacks ordered, there certainly will be major layoffs, according to Gary Olson, deputy director of the Senate Fiscal Agency. Hardest hit would be the Department of Social Services which could be forced to lay off up to 1,000 of its more than 13,000 employees at the very time that its case load will be rising because of increasing unemployment.

All of which indicates that the Republican governor-elect will have his plate full of unappetizing items when he takes office and begins his task of trying to govern Michigan during another economic down-

Isn't the fault in ourselves?

Te have long been puzzled, along with many other observers of the political scene, as to the basic cause of the continuing legislative gridlock in both Lansing and Washington.

We know, of course, that it results from divided government, with the executives held by one political party and one or both of the legislative houses in the hands of the political opposition.

But why do the people continue to vote

ecil Fielder, the Detroit Tigers' slugging first baseman, didn't win the most valuable player award in the

for Republican presidents and Democratic congressmen and in Michigan for a governor of one party and opposition lawmakers who control at least one house of the Legislature?

Nobody really knows the answer to that question but we'll speculate about one possible reply.

It is that the American people really have a kind of schizophrenia about politics. They really like most of the present list of public services and, in some cases, want expanded or additional services. But they don't really want to pay any more taxes. So what do they do?

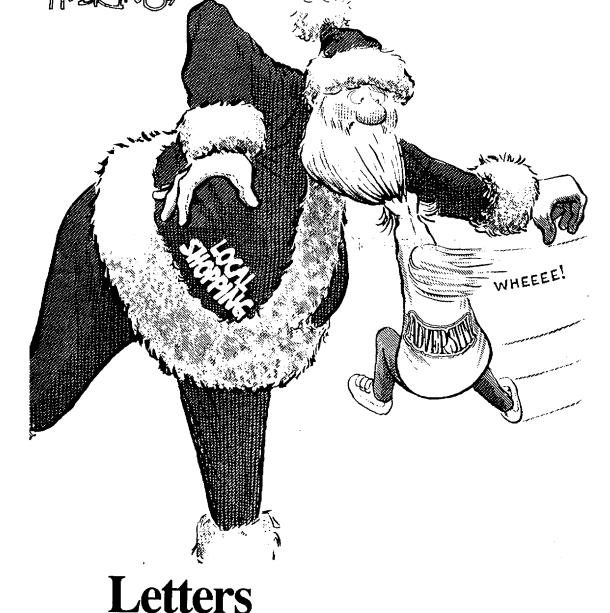

They vote for Republican presidents and in Michigan for a GOP governor who promise not to raise taxes and who, in addition, claim they'll cut spending. That satisfies one-half of the people's concerns.

They then turn around and vote for Democratic legislators, most of whom favor the maintenance of public services at their current level and even, in some cases, new and expanded services as well. And that satisfies the other half of the voters' split personality.

But those contradictory voting patterns cause the kind of legislative gridlock we recently saw in Washington on attempts to handle the budget deficit and in Lansing on efforts to solve the school funding crisis.

A letter-writer in the New York Times. expressing a similar idea in a slightly different way, suggested we the people are to blame for much of the poor performance of our legislators in Washington. Why? Be. cause, she went on, the "special interests" that run the country really are us.

As Shakespeare wrote in "Julius Cae. sar": "The fault, dear Brutus, is not in our

Good neighbors

On Friday evening, Nov. 23, at around 7:45 p.m., a car hit a tree in front of 1083 Roslyn. Our four sons (Chuck, Mark, Matt and Jay) were in the car. All four were stunned and injured.

Residents in the area responded immediately, with calls for police and ambulances, warm blankets and reassuring words.

Nothing sears the brain of a teenager's parent more than the news, "There's been an accident." The anguish eased for all of us upon discovering all four boys, although injured, will recover.

When we learned of the genuine concern shown and quick actions taken by the folks on Roslyn, we also felt a warm relief. We appreciate those kind acts toward our very traumatized young sons. Our wish to have been "with" them at their moment of need was fulfilled by these good neighbors acting as our substitutes.

We also are grateful to the Woods police and ambulance personnel who did their jobs with both professionalism and empathy.

Thanks to you all for creating a caring community.

Memory lane

To the Editor:

My daughter and son-inlaw recently visited my granddaughter at the Cranbrook Academy of Art in Bloomfield Hills.

They took a four of Grosse Pointe and were able to locate my home, the house I grew up in, on Colonial Road in Grosse Pointe Shores. They took pictures and it is still a beautiful house!

They bought a copy of the 50th anniversary edition of the Grosse Pointe News, which I have enjoyed so much - a walk down memory lane.

In 1926, my parents, two sisters and I moved from Seminole Avenue in Indian Village to Colonial Road in Grosse Pointe Shores. We attended the Convent of the Sacred Heart.

I went to Miss Foster's dancing class, went swimming at the Grosse Pointe Yacht Club every day in the summer, played tennis and golf at Lochmoor Golf Club, went sailing and danced at the Yacht Club - life was wonderful in Grosse Pointe.

We took riding lessons from old Mr. Dyer and my mother kept her horse "Magic Lady" at Dyer's sta-stars, but in ourselves."

Of dreams and plans for the future

Once again, my family stands on the threshold of change.

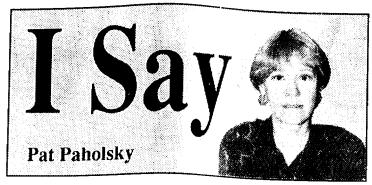

Tonight, in commencement exercises in Detroit, my youngest child graduates from Wayne State. He, with the unrelenting optimism of youth, is eager to put his imprint on the world. He can't wait to get out on his own and soar.

And we, the parents and spouses who will attend the ceremony, will be able to feel their excitement, their energy, their impatience to set the world aright. It's comforting to know that if he's going to realize his dreams, this imperfect country is the best place to do it.

I keep thinking of the young graduate student in Leningrad who was a private tour guide for my husband and me for three days when we were there in September. She was small and delicate and looked about 16. She was not only beautiful, she was intelligent. She was the only student in her Georgian mountain village to be awarded a scholarship to the University of Leningrad. Her parents were very proud of her, she acknowledged.

She was apprehensive about the future. Nobody she knew could understand why there were food and other shortages.

There was increasing talk of a site of recent demonstrations. It's civil war — soldiers deserting being said that it will be the the army, weapons disappearing place where the next civil war There was talk that the many new political groups now permitted to organize were stockpiling will begin.

The housing she lives in with other students has been without hot water for a year due to construction. She said every week She showed us the site - Pal- they are promised they will have

The thing that disturbed her the most, however, was waiting in the interminable lines. Some of the people, particularly the older women, are rude and they push and shove, she said.

Like young people everywhere, she has her dreams for the future, a very uncertain future at the moment. And that's the one thing that unites her with my son and this whole generation.

There could be a war in the Persian Gulf. There's talk of reinstituting the draft. The situation looks more hopeful this week, but it could change in a split second. We all know that.

Then there's the modern-day plague that's going to affect everyone, especially the younger generation. People are sick of hearing and reading about AIDS, but it's going to touch us all, no matter what we do.

There's the doctor infected with the AIDS virus who operated on a couple thousand people. He may have passed a death sentence on to some of his patients. How about a restaurant worker with the virus who cuts his finger while chopping on-

The landscape of the future is filled with mines.

My generation contended with the Cold War, which was at its height, and the threat of contracting polio and being confined for life to an iron lung.

And yet we dreamed and we hoped, just like the generation today and the generations to come.

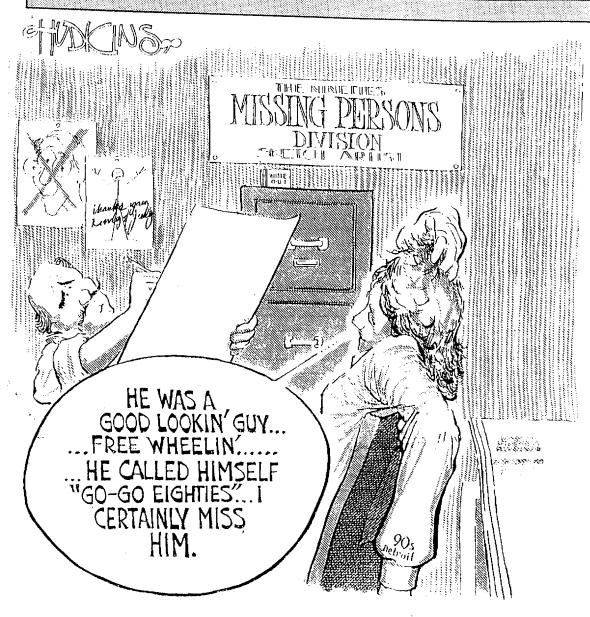

That's the beauty of life and the indomitable human spirit. It isn't easy, but it is so worthwhile.

Another way to donate

WQRS-FM, the Detroit Symphony Orchestra and the America Red Cross will join forces in a special salute to Red Cross blood donors.

Since blood collections are historically low during the holiday season, the three groups are cosponsoring a blood drive from Wednesday, Dec. 26, through Monday, Dec. 31, at nine Red Cross donor centers.

WQRS-FM personalities will make guest appearances at various centers — so donors may have an opportunity to donate blood alongside Paul Russell, Dick Wallace, Dave Wagner, Charles Greenwell or Jack Goggin.

In appreciation for all blood donations, the DSO will present a special concert at 7:30 p.m. on Sunday, Jan. 13, at Orchestra Hall. Each blood donor during the campaign will get a complimentary pair of tickets to the concert.

John and Sheri Conway of Grosse Pointe Farms and their children, Elizabeth, 6, Jenny, 4, Billy, 2, and Johnny, 3 months, have given a private holiday fundraiser for St. Jude's Research Hospital in Memphis for the last six years.

Conway said that they invite about 100 friends and their children for an old-fashioned children's Christmas party with cookies, food, balloons, decorations and Santa (a.k.a. Ted Turner of Grosse Pointe City).

At the end of the party, everyone puts a donation for the hospital into an envelope and sends it off.

Say yes to Grosse Pointe

The cover photo on Michigan Living magazine, the official publication of the Automobile Club of Michigan, is a Lakeshore scene (foggy air and twinkly tree lights reflected in puddles.) The photographer is Joseph P. Messana.

Messana said it's the first time a photograph of Grosse Pointe has appeared on the cover of the magazine.

Found: One feminist consciousness-raiser

Almost a generation of Woods lawbreakers know her as "Judge" Schneider, the one who handed down their drunk driving or shoplifting sentences and presided over the Pointes' busiest court for 13 years.

Her friends know her as

I know her as a feminist. On one of the several occasions when I interviewed her for this paper, I fretted over the impending feminization of the newsroom (it's almost all men now, to show how quickly things change). She understood my semi-articulated fears immedi-

Of course I should be concerned, she told me. Whenever women dominate a work scene. their work is less valued. Nothing to do with the quality of work or the place where they're doing it - it's just the way things are in 20th century Amer-

Not everybody is pleased nowadays to be called a feminist. So I checked.

"Oh, yes, I'm a feminist." Schneider said. "It's not a pejorative term in my mind.'

That's a relief. The way liberals are backing away from their label and lots of women are playing down any pro-woman tendencies, I was afraid we were turning into a nation of wimps. Not Schneider's interest in both the law and the plight of women was piqued when the women in the Interfaith Center for Racial Justice (as it was then called) undertook a statistical study in Detroit Recorder's Court. As court observers, they kept count of the cases, tracking wins and losses and whether the attorneys were paid privately or assigned by the state. In other words, checking whether justice was in fact equal.

"That's what gave me the idea that I could be a lawyer, too," she said.

As a law student, she and a friend formed the Women's Justice Center, which addressed some of the same issues and raised the consciousness of fellow law students about women's con-

Convinced of the need for women to network, Schneider got involved in some local efforts. As a member of the American Association of University Women, she leaped on the bandwagon (put in motion by Dorothy Crocker) and formed a sub-group for networking. To their astonishment, a year later the national AAUW declared that networking wasn't a women's issue. (They have since reversed themselves, Schneider said, but now the group isn't interested in its former parent. It continues to meet monthly for women's professional shop talk.) Once in office, she decided to apply the same thinking and, with Woods Councilwoman Jean Rice, she started a bi-monthly meeting of Grosse Pointe women elected officials.

"It's wonderful," she said. "We discuss current issues - and usually find some argument among ourselves. People feel more free to talk when it's just a women's group.'

Behind-the-scenes argumentation and discussion is one of the reasons Schneider started hosting women's teas, a couple a year starting in '77 and continuing until the last election. Simply billed as a social opportunity for informal networking, the teas attracted more and more women. and finally almost outgrew themselves.

You can call it gossip or you can call it information, but it was a way to get to know what was going on, to exchange ideas," she said. It's also a good way to gain a deeper understanding of issues. to get past the official version of things, to get to know other women in different fields, to get a sense of the community.  $N\sigma$ wonder the teas were popular. After two decades of interest in women's issues, it's still hard to tell whether women are making any progress. Feminism has fallen from fashion and in all quarters there is growing pres sure for women to remain at home with their children.

The two-job family has official social approbation only when it is described as an economic ne cessity - and even feminists find an inner emotional schism about working vs. child nurturing.

There are more women work ing," Schneider said, "I think that's true in Grosse Pointe. too. . . Grosse Pointe has a repu tation for conservatism - a deserved reputation. We also have wives who are better educated than the general population and they can choose whether to state home or not. My sense is that they are choosing more often to work (outside the home).

She believes that's good. And yet, and yet, "My daughter has two children and when she decided to go to work, I wondered and worried whether she was doing the right thing. It's deeply ingrained.'

What does a feminist judge do when she retires? Schneider and her husband, Burkhard, a retired Detroit Edison official, like to dive. They've already dived in Belize and Bonaire this year and have plans to spend a month on a live-aboard dive ship and check out sunken wrecks and reefs at Truk and Guam.

But first, she wants to offer her successor, Herbert Huson, an opportunity to learn the ropes. Huson was selected by the Woods council from among 17 candidates.

Schneider professes as much puzzlement as the next person as to why Pointe judgeships are so "I just don't know," she said. State judges are well-paid and have a good retirement after only a few years of service, but this position takes a lot of time and - if you've got a good practice - you'd lose money.

Speculation that local attorneys are vying for position in case a district court is established can't be discounted, she said, adding that most local governments are opposed, and there is no particular talk about such a district court in the legal community.

So it must be the glory. "There's prestige in being a judge, period," she said. "Of course, one of my friends reminds me that it's just a minor judgeship.

She has a sense of humor, too.

War

To the Editor:

Am I the only one up at 3 a.m., sleepless because there is a war scheduled for Jan. 15?

Earlier in the week, I wrote Christmas cards to relatives in Europe. I don't really know them and write only when one dies

This year I wrote.

I wrote that I wanted them to know that our president has virtually no support for what he is doing, or for how it is being done. I said that we were very afraid that he will start a war and that we feel helpless to stop it. I said that we are increasingly angered that U.N. permission was sought before ours, and startled when it was given so easily.

Friends were the recipients of the next set of cards. I simply could not stop. I wrote everyone.

It's time for grassroots to grow and we'd better do it quickly.

Thank you for Nancy Parmenter's column. I'm glad she speaks to a larger audience than my 20 to 30 relatives and friends.

Am I trying to start something?

Yes. Lam.

Alana Sullivan Grosse Pointe Farms

Excellent

To the Editor:

Nancy Parmenter's op-ed column last week (Dec. 6) was one of exceptional merit. She did indeed "beat a rhythm of peace on the wardrums." The mood of the country is more and more directed to peace and not to a war that would surely kill thousands and thousands.

I hope that readers who missed it will look that column up.

Library

To the Editor: A little simple arithmetic makes me very skeptical of the proposed library and the numbers. The $7.6 million bond issues at 7.5 percent interest would require a payback of $14,694,720 over 20 years.

Add a conservative $15,000 a month for maintenance, utilities, added staff, office equipment and new books, and it looks like over $18,294,720.

There's a vast difference between $7.6 million and $18.3 million. I'm sure if this project should go ahead, these numbers will prove to be very conservative. Remember that $18.3 million is on top of what we're already spending.

I suspect the school board is dying to have some super plush offices in Central Library and that's why they're pushing so hard. (I wonder how much they're going to cost?)

Some acquaintences from Farmington Hills said to us recently: "We don't know Grosse Pointe very well, but we do know your Central Library. We use it often.'

We use the library quite often and think it's great just as it is. I think they're trying to fix something that isn't broken.

Grosse Pointers are too smart not to see through this sham.

> Pete Winkler Grosse Pointe Park

The school's response to the above letter follows:

Like everything in life, there is more than one way to look at the costs of the proposed new library. The writer has chosen to add the cost of building a new library ($7.6 million) to the interest on the bond (approximately $7.1 million) and his own projected costs for operating the new facility ($3.6 million over 20 years). He then totals this to $18.3 million and points out that there is a vast difference between $7.6 million and $18.3 million. Of course there is. After all, a bond issue works much like a home mortgage. If you borrow $100,000 to buy a house and the mortgage rate is 10 percent for 20 years, you wind up paying $231,600. Even though most of us finance our houses this way, we don't say our house cost $231,600. We say it cost $100,000. Although the interest for both home and proposed library are sizable amounts, financing a building is still more equitable than imposing a staggering tax increase to pay for construction. The $7.6 million bond issue (or $14.3 million if you prefer) will cost a taxpayer with a $200,000 home approximately $40 a year. Currently that same homeowner pays $125 a year to operate the libraries.

As for increases in operating costs, we have never hidden the fact that the proposed new library will cost more to operate. A larger facility, like a larger home, is obviously more expensive to maintain, and we anticipate needing an additional fourtenths of a mill for operating costs in 1993-94.

We are happy the writer thinks the library is great, but he is wrong when he says it isn't broken. The library facility is badly outdated and daily falling behind in its ability to provide information and services to students, researchers and residents who need access to increasingly specialized material.

The comment that the board of education just wants plush new offices is totally unwarranted. Neither the present library nor the current administrative offices are plush by anyone's standards. A visit to either location would confirm this. The board is committed to keeping the building on Kercheval and Fisher as part of the school system because it was a gift from the Ferry family, and the board highly values that gift. The board also did not want the building to remain vacant and further deteriorate through

The writer must realize that is is impossible for public officials to make decisions that everyone agrees with and he should be grateful that there are still residents of this community willing to take on the task. It's patently unfair to accuse them of a sham for no other reason than that you disagree with them.

Christian Fenton Assistant Superintendent for Business and Support Services Grosse Pointe Schools Yes to library

To the Editor:

I'm writing to urge your readers to get interested and get behind the new public library for the Grosse Pointes. In February, we're going to get the chance to vote on the small millage increase that will make that long-delayed and much-needed project a reality.

My credentials: I am a systems and computing professional for a local company one of the largest payers of taxes to our community. It is my job to know something about libraries. As a life-long book-lover, it happens that my own book collection is larger than the corporate library. As a long-term Grosse Pointe resident, my five children all benefited from our excellent school and once excellent library system. I have participated in the work of the League of Women Voters -- Grosse Pointe, which has conducted local studies of library issues. The league position on the Grosse Pointe Public Library, coming out of the consensus process, is as follows:

We support expansion. The present facilities do not and cannot meet community needs. We support, for the present, the retention of the branches, and the necessary upgrading of their facilities (handicap access, restrooms, etc.). The detailed position also includes our membership's ideas about which services are necessary and which are not. The local league has not taken a position on specific sites, but we are satisfied that a thorough and competent job has been done as to analyzing the alternatives. Our community has been wrestling with library issues for a very long time. It has been an incredibly protracted project. It is fair to say that it has been clumsily managed. Things never quite settled down after the controversy over school closings. and other "old quarrels" have intruded into the handling of this project. A site has been hard to come by, because we are a mature community. Lacking organized support the school board tried to focus the issues, and to build a sort of coalition. Many citizens served on committees, which attempted to represent all of the interests.

What follows are largely my own personal views, but they are not contrary to the league consensus.

We constantly hear of the "information revolution," and this is an accurate picture as far as business libraries are concerned. This doesn't mean that books are going to "go away," or that libraries will disappear. As in every professional field, computers and other electronic technology have radically changed what is possible — and even what people have come to think of as nec-

Now, we don't want Grosse Pointe to run a world-class legal library - or a medical library either. We don't need - or want to pay for a first-class university research library. Our public library can't serve all of my own personal needs. But, we can have an excellent library, meeting real community needs, realistically determined by past studies. Our community once had an excellent library. Excellence, which I'm sure Charles Hanson strives for, does not make a convincing appearance today. According to all of the measures that are customary in the library trade, we are somewhere in the middle of the pack. The mingling of school/library management and funding helps to further obscure the matter.

The League of Women Voters-Michigan (LWV-MI) has developed a well-researched consensus on libraries in Michigan. It includes one position which the local league has not actively supported. The LWV-MI position calls for the separation of school and library functions. I will not make their case here, though it is available. Both the local league and the Grosse Pointe Board of Education have tabled any further analysis of this topic, pending the next steps in the local public library situation - now scheduled for February resolution. Should the millage fail, I do expect that we will face the issue of whether we want to restructure our system. This could well be even more divisive than the problem which the library system has struggled with in these past few years.

In the public meetings that have been held over library issues, there have been strong feelings expressed that the school administration has not always been forthcoming — or able to listen. It is well-known that school board membership is a thankless job, but it is also clear that the public library is not often at the focus of board concerns.

Our library system is making do with facilities and working arrangements which most of us would not tolerate on our jobs or in our homes. Librarians find themselves in the child-care business. Fortunately, many of the kids who spend time in libraries — often waiting for working parents - do love books, and the time is constructive for them.

What is the proper logic for these difficult decisions? It would be splendid if a few citizens would step forward with the several million dollars that we need. The school board did have a consulting firm analyze the feasibility of that. And, even though that survey concluded that it was not feasible, it's not too late. If you, dear reader, are willing to put down significant dollars for the future of our community, I'll lead the effort to get the family crest chiseled into the facade.

STEVE'S FENCE, INC

The Grosse Pointe News has taken a few shots at what editorial writers have called NIMBY (not-in-mybackyard) thinking of the opponents of the Brownell site. In my opinion, this is a bum rap. There are probably a few — maybe one in 10,000 - residents who think in those terms, but there are likely more than that who just plain resist change of any kind. Some residents would have us reduce taxes - at any cost.

Please join me in urging Grosse Pointe residents to make an informed decision about the future of the Grosse Pointe Public Library. Do visit a few of the libraries in nearby communities. Check our Roseville, St. Clair Shores or Mount Clemens. And if you haven't been in the building at Fisher and Kercheval in a while, do take a look. Then consider carefully whether we should continue to hold library expansion hostage for the wrong reasons. Richard I. Grady Grosse Pointe Shores

Giving pets as gifts not always a good idea

mas might seem like fun, all too or even death. often it is a negative experience for the animal and the recipient.

Pets need quiet time to adjust to their new surroundings. The excitement and confusion of a holiday celebration can be a frightening experience to an animal unaccustomed to its surroundings. Family members are especially busy during the holiday season and may not have the extra time to help the new pet become adjusted and give it the extra care and attention it needs.

Close surveillance of the pet may not be possible. Potential holiday dangers for the new pet include chewing on tinsel, ribbons and electric cords — all of

While giving a pet for Christ- which can cause serious illness

Owning a pet is a personal choice and responsibility. Most people prefer to choose their own pet - to select that certain one that has the qualities and temperament that matches their lifestyle. When you give someone a pet, you are making a choice that they'll have to live with for 10 to 15 years.

If a "living" gift is still the choice, however, don't introduce the pet until the excitement and confusion has subsided. This sentient being deserves its best chance at a good, loving home and the post holiday period offers the greatest likelihood of a successful match-up.

Without question

I received a call from a friend in another state the other day.

I am troubled. Maybe I'm not so troubled as somewhat puzzled and a little angry. I am having a difficult time understanding why some people appear content to be observers and not participants.

I am especially concerned about a friend who has been seriously ill. My friend does not appear to take an interest in her own recovery. I don't believe this stems from an inability to confront her own mortality, as the prognosis is not entirely pessimistic.

There have been some seriously conflicting questions concerning treatment following her illness. My friend has not questioned her medical advisers and is behaving in a careless manner that might, in the opinion of professionals consulted, exact severe consequences, a toll that may not be necessary to pay.

Of course fear must be a factor, a completely normal reaction. However, this attitude or lack of involvement would appear to be the beginning of a contagious disease that could threaten all of us in many areas of our lives.

All of this brings me to the question: Why do we blindly follow the so-called "experts" without querying and consulting, especially where the health or welfare of ourselves or loved ones is concerned? There is a difference between waiting patiently when to wait is not a lifeor-death situation, and being "put on hold" either in a hospital waiting room or on a telephone line when time

Why do we take at face value what people choose to feed us? How few of us take the time to do our homework or question those who seek our votes of confidence politically or professionally. Isn't it time to become involved in our own destinies? Won't we at least sleep better knowing that we gave it a shot?

Bon Secours featured on Japanese television

"It was more like stepping into someone's home. Soft, warm colors, carpeting, wallpaper, pretty pictures on the walls, and no hospital smell. Those were the first things we noticed," said Masako Omori. "In Japan, the hospitals are cold and sterile-looking."

Omori works for the Unicorn World Coordination, an organization based in Los Angeles that helps Japanese television stations produce stories from all over the world. On Sept. 22, Omori brought NTV, one of the biggest television stations in Japan, to Bon Secours Hospital. The subject was the hospital's birthcare unit. "The station has a weekly program called 'Business to Business'," Omori said. " On an upcoming show, they are devoting the time to special women's services from all over the world." She discovered Bon Secours' birthcare unit, the area's first licensed single room maternity care unit, when she read about it in Newsweek.

'Initially, we were intrigued by the beeper the hospital provides for fathers during the last weeks of pregnancy. We thought that was a really unique fea-ture," she said. "But, that was only the beginning. We couldn't believe what we saw on the birthcare unit." In Japan, the birthing experience is still much like it used to be in the United States 20 years ago. Fathers do not go into the delivery room. Babies are kept in a separate nursery. Mothers are moved from room to room as they go through each phase of labor, delivery, recovery and postpartum.

"Japan is still a very traditional society," Omori explained.
"It would not be considered appropriate for the husband to be in the delivery room." The women in Japan typically enter the hospital a few days preceding their delivery date. They spend this time relaxing and talking to their unborn babies.

Bon Secours Hospital's birthcare unit was featured in a Japanese TV program. Here, a film crew interviews a pregnant patient.

After delivery, they stay in the hospital for another nine days.

The Japanese were amazed to learn that at Bon Secours, the mother and the father stay in one room throughout the birthing process. According to Linda Kovtun, clinical nurse manager for the birthcare unit, "They couldn't believe it when we showed them how the special beds come apart so that the mother can deliver the baby. They actually gasped with surprise."

The empty nursery was another surprise. Kovtun explained that even though the birthcare unit was full, all the babies were in their mothers' rooms. In Japan, newborns stay in the nursery until they leave the hospital

"When I have a baby, I would love to come back to this hospital," she said. "It's more like being in a hotel. They even have room service. They will bring you a VCR, a snack, write letters and shop for you. They even have interpreters for 26 languages."

The Japanese were also amazed to learn that the hospital has 500 volunteers, some of whom staff the room service program. Volunteerism is not common in Japan.

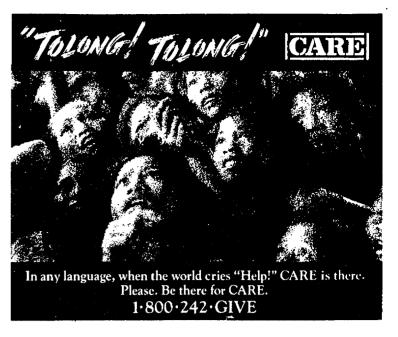

As they toured the unit, Kovtun explained that the birthcare program includes a number of educational and exercise classes, the special beeper for Dad, a sibling birthday party, counseling referral and follow-up phone calls from a nurse in the unit.

Omori said, "I wanted to know how they got the ideas for all these programs. Linda explained that the process is similar to Japanese quality circles. The birthcare staff meets regularly to discuss customer needs, then plans the best way to implement the new program."

Both the Japanese and the staff at Bon Secours enjoyed the chance to share experiences. Kovtun, who spent several hours with the film crew on her day off, even tried to learn a few Japenese words for the occasion. "I wanted to make them feel comfortable and welcome," she said. "But when the time came to greet them, I was afraid I'd mispronounce a word and end up saying something horrible.

"It's really ironic. Considering the advanced technology that the Japanese have created, particularly their strides in the automotive industry, that they would come to Detroit to learn about progress in health care. I guess we can always learn something from one another."

Pistons jacket, hat taken by gunman

A 19-year-old Detroit man was robbed of his Pistons jacket by a man with a sawed-off shotgun Nov. 30 in Grosse Pointe Farms.

The victim was standing in the alley behind a business on Mack near Moross between 1 and 1:45 p.m. when he was approached by two men in a car.

The car stopped and one man got out, pulled the shotgun from under his coat and pointed it at the victim. He demanded the man's Pistons jacket.

The man give the gunman his jacket and a Pistons cap he was wearing. The gunman got back into the car and drove away. The car is described as a clean, white Ford Mustang, possibly a 1988, with red pin stripes and red letters on the trunk lid that read "simp."

Parlor games from Christmas past to enjoy today

Smithsonian News Service Poet William Harrison was in a grim mood that winter of 1832. grieving for the old Christmas traditions, "Where is Snap-Dragon? In cunning Cupid's current coinage, kisses? Despatch'ed to Coventry to modern misses.

The Industrial Revolution was in full swing, and there was little room for merrymaking in the average laborer's 60-hour work week. "The genius of the present age requires work and no play." lamented carol-collector William Sandys. There were still celebrations, of course, but the once-glorious 12-day holiday had become a shadow of its former self, and the centuries old traditions had become a subject for antiquarian curiosity.

Harrison need not have worried. If he could, like Scrooge in Charles Dickens' "A Christmas Carol," have been spirited into Christmas future, he would have seen all his beloved traditions restored. Peering ghostlike over the shoulder of a Victorian mama searching Cassell's Family Magazine for party ideas, he would have read "the same

Fun and games

Here a few Victorian parlor games -- and one modern variation - to try.

"Consequences" -- Form a circle and give everyone paper and pen. Agree on a simple story line, such as "A boy met a girl in a certain place; he said this; she said that: he did this; she did that: the consequence was

Everyone writes boys' names on the tops of their papers, folds them to hide the writing and passes them on - and so on, through each step in the story. In the end, all the nonsensical stories are.-unfolded and read

"The Minister's Cat" -Gather in a circle. The first person repeats the phrase using an adjective beginning with the letter A: "The minister's cat is an amorous cat." Each player in turn must repeat the phrase with a new adjective, until someone hesitates too long and earns a forfeit or drops out of the game. The company then moves on to the letter B, and so on throughout the alpha-

"Dumb Crambo" - Divide the party into two groups. One side chooses a verb, and gives a clue by naming a rhyming word. The other side acts out their guess If they've guessed wrong, they are hissed. If they are right, they are applauded, and then they give a challenge. If anyone on either side speaks, except during consultation, he or she must pay a forfeit.

"Scandal" — One person writes down an elaborate story — the sillier the better. The author calls someone out of the room and reads it to that person. Then, that person calls out another, and repeats the story as best he or size can. The last one to hear the "scandal" tells it to the whole group, and there is mach laughter over the changes.

"O'Grady Says" - This game is a combination of Simon Says and Follow the Leader. The leader commands players "Do this" or "O'Grady says, do this," and performs an action. The game carries the double danger of not waiting for "O'-Grady says," or not being able to imitate the leader.

"Pizza" - A modern variation of "Sausages." People take turns asking each other questions. No matter what the question, the answer must be "Pizza." "What do you brush your teeth with?' "Pizza." The first one to laugh pays a forfeit.

"Games come and go," Cherkasky said. "Some are fads, and others seem to last forever. Blindman's Buff is one of the latter. In medievel times, the blindman was "buffeted" or struck. In the version enjoyed by the Victorians, the blindman was supposed to catch a member of the party and identify him or her without looking.

Of course, a certain amount of cheating was possible - and expected. As the narrator of "A Christmas Carol," Dickens draws a familiar picture for his readers, a : Scroom eavesdrops

with the Ghost of Christmas Present on his nephew's party:

"I no more believe Topper was really blind than I believe he had eyes in his boots . . . The way he went after that plump sister in the lace tucker ... Knocking down the fire-irons, tumbling over the chairs . . smothering himself among the curtains . . . He wouldn't catch anybody else . . . She often cried out that it wasn't fair; and it really was not. But when at last, he caught her . . . his pretending that it was necessary to touch her head-dress . . . and a certain chain about her neck; was vile, monstrous! No doubt she told him her opinion of it, when, another blindman being in office, they were so very confidential together, behind the curtains.

Romance blossomed at this time of year. As the Illustrated London News (1849) put it, "the shvest lover becomes eloquent, and the most coy fair one becomes kind; every heart dilates with good-will, love and tenderness on Christmas evening."

If an enterprising lover could not lure the lady - or ladies of his choice under the "kissing bough" of mistletoe, he simply plucked a sprig and carried it to his intended victim. If that failed, he could still hope for one or two kissing games, like Postman's Knock or Drop the Handkerchief.

Forfeits were an important and virtually inescapable part of the fun. Any number of mistakes during a game - including talking or laughing at the wrong time - demanded a forfeit. You might be told to recite a particular verse: to "kneel to the prettiest, bow to the wittiest and kiss the one you love best"; or anything else your friends might devise, including such impossibilities as "bite an inch off the

In the early 18th century, folks "too stubborn to submit" could buy their way out with a coin, but a kiss soon took the place of the silver. Whether or not the kiss was bliss depended on the ages and affections of the players.

Some games, like Musical Chairs, Statues, 20 Questions and Charades, are still played. Others, "to well-known to need a description" in the pages of Cassell's Magazine, now sound exotic: Dumb Crambo; Boz, or the Game of Seven; and I Apprenticed My Son. Some were competitive, with winners and losers; others were simply fun

A good many boisterous games, like Blindman's Buff, Puss in the Corner and Fox and Geese, come under the heading of "indoor tag." The descriptions dispel any lingering image of staid and proper Victorians seated stiffly in the parlor. Indeed, in some games, the object is simply to keep a straight face. In Poor Pussy, one person imitates a cat — the other players must reply "Poor Pussy," no matter what he or she does. Laugh, and you are out.

When energies flagged, folks could settle down to pencil-andpaper games or games that taxed the memory. Kim's Game, from the popular novel "Kim," by Rudyard Kipling, involved briefly unveiling a tray full of intriguing items. The one who best remembered the contents of the tray won. The familiar song "The 12 Days of Christmas" started out as a Christmas game. The unlucky player who confused the "pipers piping"

Class to teach French tradition

Making the Santons de Provence is a traditional French pastime handed down in families from one generation to the next.

Dorothy Newhouse will instruct "A Christmas Tradition" on Monday, Dec. 17, beginning at 7:30 p.m. at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial.

The class fee is $10 a person. Molded from clay and painted by hand, they represent shepherds, country folk and craftsmen of the villages in southern France. The evening will be enhanced by their festive Christmas tree, crackling fire and a with an A demanded quick thinking and a wide vocabulary - or some advance research in the dictionary. "The Girl's Own Book" (1876) helpfully gives examples for the more difficult letters of the alphabet: "I love my love with an X because he is Xylographer . . .

The Victorians believed in cultivating family talents, so homegrown entertainment included music and song, reading and recitations, and other more or less skillful demonstrations. Like sundry other Victorian fathers and uncles, Charles Dickens was an accomplished amateur magician. He wrote to a friend about preparations for a holiday party: ... if you could see me conjuring the company's watches into impossible tea caddies, and causing pieces of money to fly, and burning pocket handkerchiefs without hurting 'em, you would never forget it as long as you

For folk with dramatic flair, amateur theatricals added to the fun. In Louisa May Alcott's "Little Women," the March sisters entertain their friends on Christmas night with an original "operatic tragedy" replete with homemade props and costumes and the triumph of virtuous lovers over a mustached villain. Those who found acting too demanding could join in Tableaux Vivantes, "living pictures," and dress up and pose in a scene representing a famous work of art or an episode from literature, history or the Bible, which the audience was to guess. Access to a liberal supply of dressing-up clothes and odd props seems to have been assumed.

The winter darkness encouraged shadow plays, with the actors performing behind a sheet stretched between a lamp and the audience, creating eerie shadows. Surgery was a gruesome delight of this sort, in which all kinds of untoward objects were removed from the shadowy "patient" — saws,

Pigeon drop scam fizzles

A 57-year-old Grosse Pointe Park woman was the intended victim in a pigeon drop scam attempt at a Farms grocery store

The woman was shopping in the store at Mack and Moross at 1:45 p.m. when she was approached by two women who said they had found a large amount of money in the parking lot and didn't know what to do with it. One of the women opened a black purse with a lot of cash inside.

The woman asked the Park woman to go into the parking lot to discuss what to do with the money. In many so-called pigeon drop scams, the victim is asked to put her money with the "found" money. The money is then switched and the victim is given a bundle of worthless paper to hold.

In the parking lot, the women asked the Park woman to get into their car, where a third woman was waiting. When the Park woman refused, the suspects became indignant and told her to go away if she didn't want to cooperate, according to police.

The Park woman then called police to report the incident.

Common sense tips to 'cold-proof' dog

Dogs can be comfortable and happy during the cold months if their owners observe a few cold weather rules.

An indoor pet needs only a few extra precautions against cold. Outdoor trips should be of shorter duration. For extended stays outdoors such as a walk, a coat or sweater may be in order especially for a short-haired breed. Keep a towel handy to dry your pet off when it comes inside. Be sure to wipe its feet thoroughly, as rock salt can cause paw irritation.

Outdoor pets are most affected by the cold. Here are some common sense tips on care for the outdoor pet:

- Be sure that the pet's doghouse is in good repair. No leaks
- or gaps.
   Elevate the house 4-6 inches off the ground to allow the flooring to dry.
- · Have the doorway facing southeast, away from prevailing
- Have a flap over the door to keep out drafts.
- Use clean straw as an insulating material and change frequently.

Now for the dog himself. Like humans, animals expend more calories keeping themselves warm in cold weather. Therefore, increase the animal's food intake frequently and replace food if frozen. When the temperature or wind chill is "0" or below, consider bringing the pet inside for the night.

Support planned for donor families

In an effort to provide early, consistent support to donor families after the loss of a loved one and the donation of a loved one's organs and tissues, the National Kidney Foundation has developed "For Those Who Give and Grieve," a resource booklet designed specificially for donor families by donor families.

"For Those Who Give and Grieve" will provide the health care community with a tangible, comprehensive resource to give every donor family after its donation. It is available from The National Kidney Foundation of Michigan for distribution to all state organ procurement organi-

Zebra mussels are more than a nuisance for boat owners. They thrive in internal engine cooling systems, and if allowed to block these passages, severe engine damage could result.

Trailer frames, bait wells and bilges are also "safe harbors" for these stubborn crustaceans. Fortunately, a few simple cleaning and maintenance procedures can protect your boat as well as help retard the spread of the zebra mussel. Boat Owners Association of The United States (BOAT/ U.S.), a national organization of more than 375,000 recreational boat owners, has produced a handy, free guide for Great Lakes boaters on combating zebra mussels.

Berg contended that Russell failed to show adequate hardship or practical difficulties required to warrant variances

Attorney William Gilbride Jr., speaking on zoning variances for Russell, said the practical difficulties arise as a result of Russell's attempt to satisfy the neighbors and city with plan No. 2, which requires variances. If Russell did not try to meet the concerns of city officials and residents, then he could simply go with the first plan.

Gilbride pointed out that the Department of Works and Public Safety Department had no problems with plan No. 2. Also, the second plan was approved earlier by the Mayor's Advisory Planning Committee.

Guyor and another man helped her into a civilian car at the scene. She and another passenger, who was more severely burned than Shaw, were transferred to a police car and taken to Annapolis Hospital and then to the U-M burn center.

When the crash occurred, Rigdon was nearby, though he was unaware of the tragedy. He was on his way to Chicago and then on to Czechoslovakia for a church conference. His plane was delayed for 45 minutes. He and the other passengers were told a fuel truck was on fire.

While Rigdon waited to depart, his mother-in-law was fighting for her life and jumping from a burning plane.

Once in Chicago, he was told by his brother-in-law that an inbound plane from Memphis had collided with a plane to Boston. Because neither plane was scheduled to stop in Pittsburgh, Rigdon still did not know what had happened.

When he went to the KLM Royal Dutch Airline counter, there was a message waiting for him and a phone number. He learned his mother-in-law was being transferred to the Ann Arbor hospital and that his wife was on her way to Annapolis Hospital. He finally got through to a secretary at the burn unit.

Rigdon insisted on finding out whether is mother-in-law was there. While talking to the secretary, he heard Shaw speaking in a loud, strong voice, telling him she was all right, there was nothing he could do except hold her hand and he should continue his trip to Czechoslovakia.

Ignoring her advice, he arrived at the U-M burn center at about 10 p.m.

Shaw will stay with the Rigdons in Grosse Pointe while convalescing. She will be celebrating her 82nd birthday in the hospital, but is very grateful to be alive. She's also very grateful to the two men who were on the ground and helped her to safety.

Rigdon said he has a feeling that when Shaw recovers she will work to help other survivors of the crash and the families of those who died.

Adult Well-Being Services

Adult Well-Being Services is a private non-profit organization. Its purpose is to promote independence and social well-being for adults who are at risk because of age, income, mental or physical health, developmental disability, education, coping ability or environment, according to Ann R. Parker, public relations -coordinator.

The majority of AWBS clients are seniors in Detroit, Highland Park, Hamtramck and the Grosse Pointes.

The organization has four programs under its umbrella. Parker suggested wish list items for Developmental Disability Services teaches self-care skills to adults who are mentally ill. It needs watches for men and women, orthopedic shoes for men, sweaters, coats and boots.

The Pathways Program provides therapy and help with socialization and self-care skills for seniors who have been hospitalized for mental illnesses.

"The therapy classes are helping me," said a 61-year-old client in the program. "I used to fly off the handle when I spoke. They taught me here to go and discuss the problem with my social worker and that way I have learned to solve things without having to have agruments and fits. I enjoy coming here. I find it very fulfilling."

The Pathways Program needs hats, gloves, sweaters, socks, coats, toothbrushes, toothpaste. soap, combs, brushes and nonperishable canned goods.

The Well-Being Program provides in home assessments and help for seniors with problems concerning transportation or health. It needs large print books, magnifying glasses, bath rails, walkers and other medical aids to help frail people live independently.

Adult Well-Being Services operates two senior centers which provide recreational activities for seniors as well as assistance with housing, finances, health issues and other problems. The centers need tables, chairs, program supplies, an air conditioner, VCRs and TVs, bingo supplies and a 7-foot slate pool table. They also need a volunteer photographer.

Besides cash, she said the organization needs a small microwave oven, games, naugahyde furniture such as chairs, couches and love seats - and volunteers. We have a piano and an organ," she said. "We need someone to play them.

To donate time, money or items, call Stock at 365-6260.

The leisure activities program provides activities, food and friendship at the center as well as information and assistance to clients with financial, housing and health problems.

The outreach program consists of social workers and senior citizens trained as peer counselors who go out into the neighborhood to find seniors who need help. It serves about 140 additional people.

"One of our peer counselors found a woman who was wheelchair-bound," Hock said. "She was sleeping on the floor. We were able to get her some furniture, some clothing and someone to check up on her every day.'

Some items needed by the center: books printed in large type, magazines (new or second-hand), audio cassette tapes, video tapes of old movies, games, toilet articles for men and women, greeting cards and stamps, and used clothing, especially warm clothes and shoes.

The center needs a typewriter, office supplies, furniture and computer software.

Holiday season brings opportunities to donate time, cash, gifts

Just about every non-profit organization in the universe is holding a holiday fundraiser. Here's the scoop on a few:

Children's Aid Society:

A fundraiser for the Children's Aid Society will be held from 4:30 to 8 p.m. on Thursday, Dec. 13. at Club Penta in the Fisher Building, Detroit.

The Holiday Happy Hour will include drinks, hors d'oeuvres and live entertainment by R&B vocalist Sandra Feva. A $20 minimum donation at the door will help the agency's medical clinic, which provides troubled families and children with a full range of medical services.

Interim House: Interim House, a shelter for victims of domestic violence, suggests a hol iday project called "Adopt-A-Room" for those who would like to donate time or money to the YWCA-sponsored facility.

Avoid the hassle of writing and mailing those Christmas cards, they say. Instead of sending cards, greet your friends in person, then donate what you would have spent on cards and postage to Interim House. The cost of completely re-doing a room at the shelter, and maintaining it for a year, is $200 to $250. Volunteers may re-do the room themselves, if they prefer.

For more information on "Adopt-A-Room" as a holiday project, call 861-5300.

COTS: Harmony House and WQRS-FM want all homeless people to feel some warmth and spirit during the holidays. Until Friday, Dec. 21, WQRS and Harmony House are inviting listeners to donate items to the Coalition on Temporary Shelter (COTS), a shelter for the homeless in Detroit. In 1989, COTS provided shelter, food and support services to 5,007 homeless

WQRS will announce needed items on COTS' wish list and listeners may take donations to the WQRS studio or to any Harmony House location.

Those who give a donation worth $50 or more will receive a $10 gift certificate from Harmony House. Call 355-1051 for more information.

Turning Point: Turning Point has provided a safe haven for battered and homeless women and their children for more than 10 years. The facility aiso provides counseling for victims of sexual assault and educational programs about the dynamics and ramifications of domestic violence, homelessness and rape.

Last year, Turning Point sheltered 493 women and 502 children for more than 12,000 shelter

And it came to pass . . .

By Rev. Robert E. Neily St. Michael's Episcopal Church

"And it came to pass . . ." That's the way Luke begins the Christmas story (Luke 2:1).

If Christmas appears bleak this year — and you feel you cannot happily participate in it, for whatever reason, "Fear not: for, behold, I bring you tidings of great joy!" (Luke 2:10). The good tidings are these: "And it came to pass . . ." (Luke 2:15),

That phrase is scattered throughout the Bible nearly 30 times in the revised standard version and over 300 times in the King James version.

A retired pastor claims it is his favorite Bible verse. There is no other verse in the Bible that can help you more than this," he says. "I have lived long enough to know the truth of that phrase. All the miseries of life come to pass. Even the joys of life come to pass. The heartaches, the troubles, the wars, the crime. All come to pass.'

A baby is born, but that daughter or son grows up and becomes an adult. It came to pass. You have a job, your work in life. But with retirement or disability, it came to pass. You marry and live with someone who you love more than life itself, but with death or divorce, it came to pass. Good things and bad things - they all "come to pass." Everything does!

So we need to learn how to enjoy each present moment while we can - to be fully alive to each day's miracles and openings, its people and blessings - because eventually they will "come to pass."

If you are experiencing heavy burdens or heartache this holiday season - if you are carrying with you the baggage of broken dreams, missed opportunities, words that weren't said soon enough or words spoken too soon - if you feel that you do not have the resources or the strengths to make it through the holidays (or even one more day) - just remember, "It came to pass." Nothing came to stay.

Do not pretend or deny your pain or loss, but find something this Christmas (and each day of the new year) about which you can be happy or joyful. True happiness comes from within.

Yesterday is past: tomorrow is yet to come. All you have is today. So make it count.

Christmas brings with it the promise of new life, a new day, a new year, new chances, new strengths, new understandings and new opportunities. If you really believe the Christmas story, that "it came to pass," then live that way and soon you will find yourself on the other side of whatever has you feeling down.

Like the Christmas shepherds, you actually may find yourself "glorifying and praising God for all the things that you have heard and seen" (Luke 2:20) because "... it came

HAVE A PLEASANT TRY AT PERFECTION BRIDGE BY WOODY BOYD & V & &

Most of the competitive events we humans compete in are spurred by an ardent ambition to win and that success, if granted, feeds our egos and ranks our aptitudes attainment. I find no fault with this as long as it is rigidly disciplined and not the only force that motivates our taking part. The wish to play well and the joy of good fellowship should be equal incentives too.

Late last September, I enjoyed a noble moment at the card table with one of Detroit's memorable past champions who I haven't played with in thirty-two years. It was Ann Arbor in 1958 and that's a long time ago. In those days, Sanborn Brown was collecting decorations for superior performance and bridge league leadership yearly. If in doubt who I'm speaking about take note of these major medals. He won the Marcus Cup in 1949 ... The N.A.C. Life Master pairs in 1957 ... placed second in the London International Pair Championship in 1958. Member of the A.C.B.L. Board of Governors from 1944-'58 and president of the Michigan Bridge Association from 1965-'66. There were many regional and sectional victories too. Most often in participation with one of his favorite partners, Marty Cohn, Fred Robinson, Bill Mouser, Ed Hochman or Al Silber, but San played with everyone and thoroughly enjoyed his toil and the will to play well.

Time has changed nothing. San's gamesmanship, table presence are superb and only exceeded by his still great play. He's even stayed up to date with all the modern bidding gadgets, but he's somewhat reluctant to practice too many of them with this columnist. As he said, "I can remember when the standard American convention entitled, "pass" wasn't a part of your bidding card." As you can see San's shtick is indicative of his wonderful sense of levity at or away from the table. The fact remains though that there are thirty-five bids between one club and seven no trump excluding pass, double and redouble and Sanborn just doesn't want to get involved in the myriad of interpretations each convention can convey.

Note the distinguished Mr. Brown's maxiumum cum laude performance on this one from our recent play. It's characteristic of his aggressiveness, but averages never won anything and San had a lot of high card ammunition in hand.

When the dummy came down declarer was apprehensive about the outcome. Obviously this columnist still hadn't learned the value of "pass", but nevertheless there was work to be done facing a spade, a trump and possibly two diamond losers. The first two were inevitable, but diamonds might be heldto one if that suit's position could be determined. (Ed. Note ... The defenses first double had my sanction, but the last was abominable.) The lead was likely to be the top of an honor sequence, but what else did West have? Apparently East had a trump stack, but what more?

San won trick one and played the ace, king of club! Then a diamond to dummy's ace and a club ruff! At trick six declarer got out with his spade jack which West was forced to win. Further defensive play was an embarrassment, but it took a moment for it to sink in and capitulation. Either black suit gave South a sluff and the diamond play guaranteed two winners in that suit.

Children's Services at Northeast Guidance Center

Sometimes I can't make sense

Childhood should be a time of joy - exploring the world around you ... developing new skills ... excitement over new discoveries ... learning ... liking to learn ... appreciating your wonderful self ... safe, loving, nurturing relationships and environment. These shouldn't be a Pollyanna viewpoint ... they should be every child's birth-

It's so hard to accept that for many youngsters they're growing up in a difficult and sometimes threatening world. I guess that's just it ... we shouldn't accept it. We've got to do something about!

Visitors to the children's programs of Northeast Guidance Center are often struck by that very fact - so many children growing up in a difficult world. Such intense problems. Such young ages.

When little Marcus* was born in September, the odds against him were very high. His mother, Shawna* was very young. She had little income, little extended family support, few resources, felt alone. The truth was, Shawna really didn't know much about being a parent - she herself had been raised in a difficult situation. And now she had Marcus to worry about. To be honest. Marcus had many needs she was not well prepared to meet.

Now Shawna has met Jane*, Infant Mental Health Specialist of Northeast Guidance Center. Jane meets with Shawna in her home weekly or as often as needed to help Shawna, to help her form that special mother-son nurturing attachment, to help her choose appropriate parenting methods best for her child.

A good parent-child relationship is critical to the well-being of children.

Shawna learns about Marcus' normal growth and development. Maybe Shawna and Marcus need a better place to live, food, clothing, basic human needs. Jane helps find resources and helps Shawna learn how to advocate for herself. Jane helps Shawna become a successful parent and now Marcus has a much better chance of growing and developing in a safe, loving, and nurturing home.

Mary* was absent from school 33 days last year. She wasn't sick, but she just didn't get to school. Mary is only in the 2nd grade, but already things aren't sters, treatment is provided to going well, and at this rate she will be a drop-out long before graduation. Then what? That's just it ... then what? In the Detroit and Harper Woods model school success programs, 1st, 2nd and 3rd graders are assisted with self-esteem, better academics (when you miss Child and Adolescent Outpatient behind and then are even more discouraged), motivation for good attendance ... several key elements for good school success. And it's working! Not only did three school success students receive perfect attendance awards in the Spring 1990 term and others in the program showed good improvement, too, but overall attendance for the entire school improved, as well! These children all received help from Prevention Services of Northeast Guidance Center.

a lot of school you fall further

Northeast Guidance Center provides other children's services, too. It could be for threeyear-old Tamara*, seven-yearold Jamar*, or twelve-year-old Nathan* . The problem could be severe adjustment reaction to an extremely traumatic event in the child's life, attention deficit disorder, or maybe difficulty with impulse control and conduct.

Each year, hundreds of children (pre-school through adolescence) and their families receive help from Northeast Guidance Center Child and Adolescent Outpatient Services. Through traditional individual and family therapy, and innovative group therapy for some of these youngyoung people with serious emotional and mental health problems. Services, tailored to each youngster's individual needs. help overcome their difficulties and help them toward a healthier future.

Information About Northeast Guidance Center

In the early 1960's, the United States began movement away from the long-term institutional confinement and treatment of people with mental illness toward services in the community. Varying degrees of illness were treated and prevention services were important, too. Most important was the accessibility of these services — they were close to home and fees were based on the ability to pay with no one refused service because of inability

Northeast Guidance Center was part of that national trend. In 1963, the Center began as a children's outpatient clinic serving the needs of children in an area where mental health services had not been readily available. Established by a group of community leaders concerned about these children with special needs, the Center offered comprehensive therapy to children in the east side community. A few years later the needs of adults were expanded to meet these needs as well.

Northeast has been known for its commitment to providing the best possible mental health services and for its innovative approaches to addressing community needs. The Center helps children and adults with mental health needs who live in northeastern Wayne County. Services include counseling, treatment and services after psychiatric hospitalization, prevention services, and other specialized services. Northeast also provides education and consultation proAssistance League members and friends have heart

Authors trace movie music from the past to the present

the mood

Staff Writer Picture the shower scene in "Psycho" without the strident repetitive string tones setting

Or Scarlett seeing her beloved Tara without the soaring theme that identifies it.

And would it be nearly as exciting to watch Indiana Jones chase Nazis across the world without the exciting accompanying theme?

Those are subjects Grosse Pointe Park resident Jack Du Bois has spent a lot of time thinking about over the past 2.1 2 years. The culmination of his study - co-authored with William Darby of Detroit - became a 600-page tome titled "American Film Music, Major Composers, Techniques, Trends, 1915-

Filled with movie trivia, musical commentary, old publicity stills and insightful commentary. the book is not as dull as its title suggests. Instead, it's a book movie lovers and music lovers will find fascinating.

"What makes our book unique," Du Bois said, "is that it doesn't deal with the music as music, but rather how the music supports the film. Because if you actually look at the music, it's generally written in fragments and not carried out to its logical musical conclusion.

Music has always been a major part of Du Bois' life. He teaches and lectures about it at several colleges and universities in the area. His doctoral dissertation in humanities was on opera. And for 12 years, before WDET changed its format, Du-Bois hosted Detroit Opera House, a showcase of opera

He also had a fondness for movies. He teamed up with his friend Darby and for the last 2 I 2 years has been watching movies - sometimes two or three times - writing out main themes, analyzing how they fit into what is happening on the screen and writing. And re-writing. And re-writing.

"Without Bill (Darby) the book would never have been written." Du Bois said. "He provided the inspiration and kept urging me to stick with it.

Film scores have their roots in silent films — when organists would accompany the action on the screen. Du Bois said in those early days organists had a file of music from which they created film scores. There was music for lovers, music for storms, music for chase scenes. They played live as the film was shown on

The nicer movie houses used full orchestras, but that whole industry died with the invention of sound movies

With talkies, the use of music got more sophisticated and film scores were individualized for the film.

Many scores couldn't be located, but undaunted, the two authors watched the films and wrote down what notes they heard, which may or may not be the way the original composer wrote it, but it's how it was played.

Whether too many film scores were actually written down in permanent form is also up for debate, he said.

In the old days when composers were rapidly churning out film scores, they weren't able to do the time-consuming orchestration. They simply turned over their musical sketches to an orchestrator who took the themes and the motifs and decided what instrument was going to play them and how they would be supported by the other instru-

One notable exception was Bernard Herrmann, whose film scores run the gamut from "Citizen Kane" to "Taxi Driver." His most famous work, though, is the score he wrote for Alfred Hitchcock's "Psycho." Herrmann would watch the film from his piano and improvise. From those impromptu melodies, he would orchestrate the films. Together, Herrmann and Hitchcock collaborated on eight movies over a Herrmann is only one of dozens of composers mentioned and analyzed in the book.

John Williams is another great film score writer, according to Du Bois. His themes for all three "Raiders of the Lost Ark" pictures, "E.T." and "Close Encounters of the Third Kind" are staples for pops orchestras across the country.

Then there's his theme for "Jaws.

"If someone was going to tell

Jack Du Bois and William Darby combined talents on a new book about music in the movies.

me a shark was going to be represented by notes on a bass fiddle. I never would have believed it; a bass fiddle is not scary," Du Bois said, knowing he was proved wrong. The theme was so effective it became a cliche.

"And I have to give Williams points for consistency, too," Du Bois said. "There's a scene where everyone's swimming and they think the shark is back, and they all scramble out of the water and it turns out to be a false alarm. You don't hear the shark theme during that scene. It's very smart.

Several mediocre films have been saved by impressive scores, Du Bois said. One example is "Anthony Adverse.

In a very detailed analysis, Du Bois and Darby show how composer Erich Korngold defined all the principal characters with their own theme - good guys and damsels had lush themes while bad guys got menacing and dissonant themes. The themes changed as the characters changed and grew. The book says the music is what sustains any dramatic tension in the preachy and overdone movie. Korngold received an Oscar for his work.

"It's very operatic in its approach," Du Bois said. "It's a wonderful technique that has never been used to its full potential, in my opinion." It is that kind of detail that makes a successful film composer, Du Bois said. And then there's the 10minute piece of music Franz Waxman wrote for a segment of "The Bride of Frankenstein" during which no dialogue is spoken. It starts slowly, as Frankenstein begins building the woman and reaches a terrifying conclusion as the creature comes to

'You wouldn't think there's good music in a movie like that, but it is very good and very effective," Du Bois said.

Most people don't know what goes into the making of a film score, he said. "Good tunes do not a great film composer make," the book says, even though it is those themes - like "Lara's Theme," the "Theme from Lawrence of Arabia" and 'The Pink Panther" - that people remember.

"It is a very complicated art form," Du Bois said. "If you left the music out, the film would be very flat, but it shouldn't distract you either.'

In his research, he discovered that of all the movies he saw which contain a trial, not one court scene is accompanied by music: "I believe it's because the words are what's important in a court scene; music isn't necessary. Writing the book was a learning experience which will never end, he says. He now listens to movies as much as he watches them. "I gained a lot of respect for the composers and the way they fit their music into the action on the screen," Du Bois said.

"They're not on par with the old masters, but their job was differ-

Grosse Pointe authors William Darby and Jack Du Bois modestly titled their new book "American Film Music, Major Composers, Techniques, Trends, 1915-1990." The movie historian will find interest in many references to the innovations, ambitions and undertakings of the Hollywood moguls, which had major impact on the composers' work. There are also revealing references to the insensitivity of producers to musical art, the composers' aesthetic principles, and the compromises required.

It all adds up to a rich and sometimes surprisingly insightful look into life behind the silver screen.

And what fun it is to rediscover the signature melody from long forgotten background music to "Birth of a Nation" that became the theme for radio's Amos'n'Andy show. Or Jerry Goldsmith's "Amen" from "Lillies of the Field."

On the serious side, Darby and Du Bois have provided for scholars and researchers, too. There's a chronological filmography at the conclusion of each composer's chapter listing his film credits by year. There is also an exhaustive bibliography and there are ample notes to clarify and enrich reader's knowledge with such items as a definition of "Mickey Mousing" - providing musical support to emphasize gestures or movement.

For films of foreign origin that made a hit here, foreign composers have a chapter of their own. Here, too, there are interesting stories told and memorable tunes inscribed, like the Goldfinger theme from the James Bond series, and the motifs from "Out of Africa" and "Born Free."

Special plaudits go to the authors for the exceptionally clean, clear and graceful style of the writing. It greatly enhances the stature of an already impressive book and adds immeasurably to the pleasure of reading it. What is more, that experience should be repeatable. The movie scholar or researcher will return to the book regularly for the wealth of information it holds. The movie and movie music fan will also treasure the book for the insights and starry memories it brings and as a program guide to the score when watching re-

Jarvi conducts Weber and Hindemith

By Alex Suzcek Special Writer

Of the 150-plus CDs by conductor Neeme Jarvi, one of the latest features a program he repeated early this month in a Detroit Symphony Concert.

It is a combination of six overtures to operas by Carl Maria von Weber and The Symphonic Metamorphoses on Themes of Weber, by Paul Hindemith. One of the themes used by Hindemith is a very unusual melody from the Weber overture to Turandot and along with this special link, the combination of works by these two dramatically different composers provides a very meaningful musical perspective.

As we quickly learned to expect from CDs, this recording has all the magnificent presence and clarity you could expect. Adjusting the controls will expose any detail you want to discover from the Philharmonia orchestra performance under Jarvi's baton. And the Philharmonia bears up well under such close scrutiny. The technical details of orchestral performance - cutoffs, section intonation, string tone, etc. are above reproach.

In the more important areas of dynamics, phrasing and interpretation, the playing has the unmistakable stamp that has been evident at Jarvi's first three concerts of this DSO season — vigor. ous, straightforward and tasteful with a pleasing spontaneity.

In terms of special musicological interest, the Turandot Overture is worth mentioning. It contains an anonymous "air chinois" that Weber found in the "Dictionnaire de Musique" of Jean Jacques Rosseau. This was picked up and used with interesting variations by Hindemith in his Metamorphoses.

Listening repeatedly to the recording, one is struck by the remarkable skill at dramatic orchestration, emotional expression and grand stylization that Weber displays. They are qualities easily overlooked when one of his overtures is programmed as an opener or filler in a concert with bigger works and is given a superficial reading. Then to hear the treatment of one of his most important themes by one of the least sentimental modernists is an easy lesson in the changes in musical styles from the 19th to the 20th century.

For the collector and for the DSO fan, the record has a special appeal. It makes a documentary memento of the recent concert where most of these works were played - a possible Christmas gift for someone who enjoyed the concert.

The Chenilles have made musical waves all across the country with their sharp vocal harmonies, their keen wit and their low couture apparel. (They have appeared on stage in pajamas, with towels over their heads.)

Hailing from Ann Arbor where they were friends even before they started singing together in 1985, The Chenille Sisters are Grace Morand, former public radio. The Chenilles have become so successful that last year they were able to give up their day jobs and concentrate on being full-time musicians.

In addition to many tours throughout the country, they have recorded two albums (for adults) applauded by "People Magazine" and "Billboard."

Their award-winning children's album, "1.2.3 For Kids," has received praise from critics of all ages. All are recorded on the Red House label.

A new album is due in Februbeautician; Cheryl Dawdy, ary, and at their mid-December former librarian; and Connie concert they will be primarily Huber, former speech pathologist performing their new music.

The Chenilles performed at the Attic last year to sell-out crowds. It is suggested that Chenilles fans buy tickets immediately to ensure seating.

Michigan History Bureau publishes Great Lakes history book

A glimpse of what lies at the bottom of the Great Lakes was revealed recently in Lansing, when Secretary of State Richard H. Austin officially introduced "Beneath the Inland Seas: Michigan's Underwater Archaeological Heritage." The newest publication from the state Bureau of History will be an important reference on Great Lakes underwater history, according to Austin.

"The publication of this book, which coincides with the Michigan Historical Museum's current temporary exhibit 'Beneath the Inland Seas,' represents a commitment by the state of Michigan to study the artifacts of our of the Great Lakes. It begins past that lie beneath the Great Lakes," Austin said. "Not only is the book interesting to read, but it shows how sport divers and others who wish to help preserve our maritime history have made Michigan the leader in this re-with the prehistoric period, when lakes were formed by glaciers, and discusses the untapped archaeological potential of prehistoric underwater areas which were once shoreline Indian settlements.

Halsey offers an overview of Great Lakes travel as commerce increased, beginning with bateaux and early sailing vessels which were replaced by a wide variety of steam-powered sidewheel vessels, large-excursion and passenger vessels, and screw-propeller freighters.

"After the middle of the nineteenth century, the explosive growth in the types of vessels, in all states of repair, led to greatly increased numbers of sinkings, Halsey noted.

Yet little physical evidence of the early shipping era remains, Halsey wrote. Eighteenth and early nineteenth century ships were cut up and retrofitted, scrapped for valuable materials, abandoned and even burned as an event for the public to watch.

In many cases, only ships accidentally sunk in the cold freshwater of the Great Lakes provide clues about original construction and renovations, the type of cargo carried and where it was stowed, and the personal effects of passengers and crew.

"Beneath the Inland Seas" likens the study of sunken ships to finding a time capsule from another era. "Everything on board crew and passengers, their possessions and equipment, the cargo and the ship itself - went to the bottom at the same time. This circumstance rarely happens on land sites," reads a passage from the book.

Having discribed the variety and significance of underwater sites, Halsey traces the history of underwater archaeology in this region, including the legislative establishment of underwater pre-

Holiday gifts from Hollywood: Good, bad and ugly

'The Krays:' Portrait of an evil family

By Marian Trainor Staff Writer

"The Krays," a brutal British offering, is the latest in the string of gangster movies currently being shown. It is based on the true story of Ronald and Reginald Kray, twin brothers who ruled London's East End underworld during the swinging 60s.

Gary and Martin Kemp, the founders and driving force of the pop group Spandau Ballet, play the title roles; Gary plays Ronald, who is gay, psychotic and vicious and Martin plays the equally vicious Reg.

Deadly but dapper, they modeled themselves on George Raft. In England they were the closest thing to Al Capone. When it comes to graphic violence, "The Krays" equals or goes beyond its American counterparts "Goodfellas" and "Miller's Crossing" presenting such scenes as Ron carving a smile on the face of a barroom offender. But differing from the American offerings, it presents a psychological study of how Violet Kray, the twins mother, shaped their lives.

The opening scene is in sharp contrast to what follows. A beautiful white swan is shown floating in a blue sky soft with white clouds. Violet (Billie Whitelaw) is speaking: "I dreamed I was a white swan. And I had a perfect egg and in it were children's voices. And they were mine. And they were wonderful. And they were perfect."

were perfect."

Violet never lost that illusion.

Nurtured on her fierceness, the two grew up believing that it was them against the world and it was up to them to win in any way they could.

They became London's most sadistic gangsters, who even as they controlled the underworld still deferred to their mother. The mother fixation adds an emotional and psychological interest to this savage fable of the Kray brothers, handsome young men, perfectly groomed and always perfectly turned out in taifor-made suits and monogrammed white shirts, with the only real clue to their brutal nature being their piercing eyes. Reg's fiancee Frances (Kate Hardie) remarks: "I see monsters in your eyes."

Bound together since child-hood by love for their mother and her insistence that they remain close, they carry on their sadistic takeovers in perfect harmony. Once when they get into a boxing match, nearly beating each other to a pulp. Violet jumps into the ring between them screaming that they should not fight each other but should take on the world instead.

Reg's marriage to Frances proves to be terrible for all concerned and eventually brings the Krays to their knees.

Convicted of killing a fellow gangster, they have been incarcerated since 1968.

The Kemps give a haunting performance with their piercing eyes that betray an unbelievable capacity for violence. The near telepathy that bound the Krays together is eeriely protrayed.

Kate Hardie is appealingly plaintive as Frances, the sheltered girl who could not understand such smothered cruelty by a boy who loved his mother.

Billie Whitelaw gives a stellar performance as Violet Kray, a frightening force who raised her sons to be monsters. Her first gifts to them as children were toy crocodiles, a symbol that came to signify their philosophy of life.

"The Krays" is more than a gripping gangster movie; it is an in-depth, fascinating case study of two boys from their birth to their incarceration and the mother who raised them to be the monsters they became.

Reiner creates sweet 'Misery'

By Michael Chapp Special Writer

Once upon a time, Rob Reiner was known as television's "Meathead." But he's come a long way since playing second fiddle to Carroll O'Connor on "All in the Family."

"Misery" is one more example of just how far he's come.

Reiner, the director of such films as "Spinal Tap," "The Sure Thing," "The Princess Bride," "Stand By Me" and "When Harry Mct Sally," proves in this film that he's one of Hollywood's best utility men. Give him a genre and he'll re-define it.

That's what happened to comedy in "Spinal Tap," "Sure Thing," and "Princess Bride." That's what happened to drama in "Stand By Me" and "Harry."

And that's what happens to mystery/horror in "Misery."

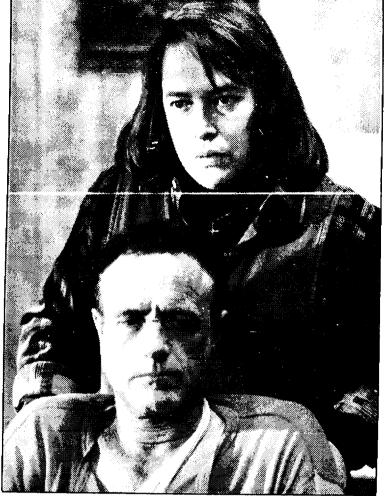

It's not easy to take a Stephen King novel and make it sing on the screen. Witness such flops as "Pet Semetary," "Children of the Corn" and television's recent "It."

"Misery," on the other hand, ranks with "Carrie" and "The Shining" as a respectable and credible film adaptation. And that puts Reiner in good company, with Brian DePalma and Stanley Kubrick.

In "Misery," we meet a romance novelist (James Caan), whose car tumbles off the road in a mountain snowstorm. Then we meet a lonely nurse (Kathy Bates), who pulls Caan from his overturned car and takes him to her house to provide medical care.

And thus begins an odyssey that seems too plausible to write off as fictional horror. Bates is Caan's No. 1 fan, which might sound like a stroke of good luck, at first

But before long, Bates begins to show a terrifying side of her personality. By the time she discovers author Caan's most recent book is about the death of his romance novel heroine, Bates has slipped out of reality. She plots to keep him in her house, as a prisoner. And since his legs are out of commission from his car accident, there's nothing he can do about it.

James Caan and Kathy Bates play a deadly game of cat and mouse in "Miserv."

To say anthing more about the plot would be to give away some of its calculated shocks and pleasures. But know this: Reiner has crafted a fine mystery here.

one which will quickly find its place among the all-time film

Not only does this film give viewers nearly two hours of unrelenting mystery, it also gives us two performances worth savoring. Caan's writer-turned victim is compelling and convincing. And Bates' psychotic "hostess" is so completely drawn that we find ourselves almost understanding why she is as evil as she is.

"Misery" is one of the year's big winners. Don't miss it.

Number two is too much of 'Three Men'

By Michael Chapp

Special Writer

If a movie sequel is going to be successful, there is one consideration that should be met above all others: It should explore some new territory

"Three Men and a Little Lady," the follow-up to the extremely popular "Three Men and a Baby," just barely fulfills that requirement.

Five years have passed since the last film, and the three men (Tom Selleck, Ted Danson and Steve Guttenberg) have taken quite a liking to the baby who was left on their doorstep during the first picture. Alas, one of the men, Selleck, has also taken a liking to the little girl's mother (Nancy Travis), who is also living with them.

She thinks he's a great guy, too, but neither one of them is able to express their feelings for the other. So Travis decides to accept another marriage proposal, and leave, along with the little girl, for London.

Thus the main conflict: Will Selleck and Travis find a way to express their feelings before it's too late? Will the little girl be taken away from the three men who have loved and cared for her since the very beginning?

This film is funny, in a limited way, and emotional, as long as a contrived plot doesn't bother you too much. But it's nowhere near as funny or emotional as its predecessor.

Travel Trends

By Phyllis Hollenbeck

Avoiding baggage blues

There are steps that you can take to ensure you and your luggage arrive at the same place at the same time. Even the most seasoned air traveler has a nagging feeling in the pit of his stomach when he sees his suitcase heaved onto the belt that transports it to the bowels of the airport, fearful he will never see it again.

I recommend everyone traveling by air take the following steps in an effort to minimize the chance of losing their lug-

1. Using indelible ink, tag your luggage to include your name, address and phone number. Do this both on the inside and outside of your luggage. Some travelers prefer to use their office address instead of their home address for se-

2. Remove all old tags from previous trips. Automated laser sorters read hundreds of bags per minute and cannot differentiate between old and new tags.

3. When checking your bags, verify your baggage claim tags (before your bags are placed on the conveyer belt) to be certain they are routed properly. Your travel agent or the airline can provide you with the correct three letter code for your destination. This code should be on the tags the airline agent puts on your luggage.

4. Try to arrive at the airport 45 minutes to an hour before your departure. If you cut it any closer, it is possible that your luggage may not make the same flight that you do. While it will be on the next available flight, that could be several hours later.

5. Prescription drugs, contact lenses, jewelry and other necessities should always be packed in your carry-on lug-

6. Always hold on to your claim checks and match them with those on the bags that you take off the baggage claim belt. Also, if your luggage is a popular brand you might consider using a colored tape or a noticeable strap to mark your bags in some way that will help you recognize them as they come off the conveyer belt in the luggage claim area.

If, after taking all these steps, your luggage is lost, you must take prompt action. Before you leave the airport, go to the baggage claim office of the airline you arrived on and complete a lost baggage report. At this point, try to remember that the agent you will be dealing with is not the person responsible for losing your bag. Have your baggage checks and airline tickets handy, since this is your only proof that the airline handled your luggage.

You will be asked to supply information regarding the color and style of the missing bag(s) along with a description of the contents. The agent will want to take information from your tickets that will help him trace the missing

Usually your bag will be located within 24 hours, you will be notified by phone and the bag will be delivered to you none the worse for wear.

If, however, your luggage is not found after ninety days you may begin negotiations with the airline much like you would negotiate with your insurance company. Each airline's procedures are a bit different. They will give you instructions about what they want you to do. Always be realistic in reporting the value of lost items as the airline can and often will reject inflated claims.

Someone's got to talk soon

Look behind the South nockey bench and you will no longer see one of the most organized and disciplined coaches Grosse Pointe has ever had.

As of Nov. 26, Tim Zimmerman was fired by the school administration. After seven years of service, and just two days before the regular season was set to open, Principal John Artis lowered the boom on Zimmerman.

Some observers said there were no previous indications Zimmerman's seat was hot, and apparently the entire process surprised Zimmerman, too.

So, what's up?

The school released a formal announcement out of public relations director Kathy Roberts' office stating Zimmerman "was released from his duties . . . in response to information obtained by the school system indicating that he had engaged in activities which the administration views as being inconsistent with the health and welfare of our students.

So what happened?

Those words leave plenty of room between the lines. A few days after his firing, I was in the school and it seemed everyone - including coaches - had question marks plastered on their foreheads.

Besides this ambiguous "official" statement, I feel the school system owes the community, hockey parents, the players and anyone else involved, an explanation of why he was fired.

What welfare? Where did Zimmerman, who has been at the helm since the hockey program was started in 1983-84.

Let's examine the verbiage. Engaged in activities. What activities? Information obtained by the school system. What information? What has the man done?

Without clear, concise answers, which nobody in the administration will provide, many tasteless rumors have surfaced.

Is Zimmerman that bad of a guy? I don't think so, but with out facts nobody will ever

Zimmerman fired; new hockey coach named McCauley takes over Devils' hockey By Rob Fulton

Sports Editor

Jim McCauley, a four-year starter (1980-85) for the University of Michigan hockey team and former Junior Red Wing forward, has been hired as the new head coach for the South hockey

McCauley, 28, takes over in the midst of a controversy created after the South administration fired seven-year head coach Tim Zimmerman in reponse "to information obtained by the school system indicating that he had engaged in activities which the administration views as being inconsistent with the health and welfare of our students.'

An official statement on Zimmerman's firing was released by the school Nov. 27, one day after his release and two days before the regular season started. Assistant coach John Biliti handled the coaching duties for the first four games and led the Blue Devils to a 3-0-1 start, but now it's time for McCauley to step in.

McCauley' credentials are impressive

He started four years for the Wolverines, and as a senior he co-captained the team and was named the team's Most Valuable Player, Most Sportsmanlike and was the leading scorer. He was an assistant coach for the 1984 state Class A champion Ann Arbor Pioneer, and was an assistant coach at Lakeview High

I never knew Mr. Zimmer- one who can put us back in a man, but I do know it wasn't my problem." McCauley said. "I'm taking over in the aftermath of it all. I give the kids a lot of credit for staying together over the last two weeks, and now it's just time to pick up the pieces and move forward.

And South principal Dr. John B. Artis likes that attitude.

From everything we've been able to gather, it appears that he 'McCauley knows the game, works well with kids and we're just thrilled to bring him on board with us," said Artis, "We feel he's the one to pull the program together and get us through the rest of the season. Jim McCauley is definitely the positive light and put this incident behind us.

McCauley reported for his first day on the job Monday, Dec. 10, and will make his coaching debut Dec. 12 when his team hosts Cabrini.

"I want to use this first two weeks to a month just to judge everything." said McCauley. "I don't want to change things right away and take a chance on disrupting the kids and what they are used to.'

He may not change things immediately, but look for some adjustments.

There will be a lot of challenges every day until we all get settled and comfortable with one another," McCauley said. "I understand that some of the kids may not be happy with a particular line they're on, or others feel they're not getting enough ice time, but those are things I'll look into and make changes where necessary. I think the first month will be a feeling out

He feels a road trip Dec. 14-15 to Midland will also help in the adjusting process.

I think the road trip comes at a good time," he said. "It'll give us a chance for some bonding and team unity from the start."

And it's also a chance for McCauley to produce.

"It's almost like I can't lose in this situation," he said. "Because of the talent that's in place and the character of the team, I think we're going to be quite successful. I'll give them all I can, but it's up to them on how far they want to go.

School officials quiet over firing By Rob Fulton

Tim Zimmerman, who had coached the Grosse Pointe South hockey team since its inception in 1983-84, has been fired by the school administration. A formal statement issued Nov. 27 said Zimmerman's release "was in response to information obtained by the school system indicating that he had engaged in activities which the administration views as being welfare of our students. Zimmerman has not returned phone calls to the Grosse Pointe News, and school adminstrators refuse to comment any further on the reasons for Zimmerman's dismissal.

School officials have been advised by their lawyer that because of the nature of Zimmerman's alleged activities, all details regarding them must remain confidential.

Zimmerman has the option of appealing, but it is not known if he will do so.

firing was due to his scheduling of an unauthorized trip by the team to Chicago over Thanksgiving weekend, but officials insist that was not the cause for removal even though the trip would have violated Michigan High School Athletic Association guidelines.

According to the MHSAA, a team can have no more than four scrimmages during the season, with no more than two of them being played prior to the regular-season opener.

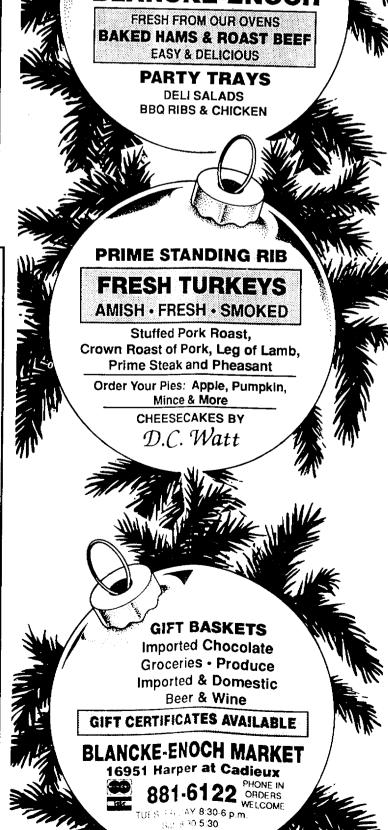

There is no deadline for Zimmerman to appeal. School officials posted the job opening for the required six working days. Assistant coach John Biliti had taken over until Dec. 7, when Jim McCauley was named head coach. McCauley officially took over Dec 10, and coached his first South game Dec. 12 (after press time) at home against Ca-

"I don't have a whole lot to say," said Biliti. "All he (Zimmerman) told me was that he used poor judgment on some things.

Jeff Giraldo, the 1990 No. 1 singles state champion, has signed a national letter of intent to play tennis at Northwestern University next year. Giraldo is a senior at South.

Giraldo signs tennis deal with Wildcats

By Rob Fulton Sports Editor

South tennis ace Jeff Giraldo has one season of high school competition remaining, but he's already found his niche in the collegiate world.

Giraldo, who won the 1990 Class A No. 1 singles championship as a junior, has signed a national letter of intent to play at Northwestern University in Evanston, Ill., next year.

"This exceeds any type of expectations I had when I started playing," said Giraldo, who took up the sport at 7. "I never really thought I'd play Big Ten tennis. but now I've got a golden opportunity.

And he's also got less pres-

"I liked signing early because now I don't have to worry at all, or open any more mail," he said, Northwestern was very interested in me and sent me more mail than any other school. Once I visited there and evaluated everything, I knew Northwestern was right for me.

And, according to coach Paul Torricelli. Northwestern is pleased to have the 17-year-old Grosse Pointer.

"We're thrilled about signing Jeff." said Torricelli. "He's an outstanding all-around player who will make an immediate impact on our program. He's a very quick, all-court player with a strong return of serve and the ability to attack.

That's because Giraldo has been refining his game for 10

The signing wasn't the only positive thing that happened to Giraldo in the past week. He was named a Prince All-Ameri-

"It's certainly a high point and I'm very honored to be chosen," he said, "but I've won some pretty big tournaments that rank up there, too. Being an All-American sounds good, but I never really knew about this award until about three days ago.

Giraldo was ranked No. 10 in the nation in the final 1989 USTA boys' 16-and-under rankings. He was also the top-ranked player in the Western Tennis Association 16-and-under division in 1989, and is expected to be the No. 1 ranked player in Western's 18-and-under Division when the 1990 rankings are announced.

At 17. Giraldo is still eligible to compete against 16-year-olds, but that's not what he wants or needs — to do.

"The college coaches are usually looking at the seniors and most of them play in the 18s." Giraldo said. "So, I had to play up (in the older division) in order to get recognized and my goal was to get into a strong college, and things couldn't have worked out any better.

Giraldo received a scholarship. but his intent is to be challenged academically, as well.

"It's very satisfying to know that I accomplished a major goal in getting a scholarship," said Giraldo, who carries a 3.6 grade point average. "But I wanted more than that, too. I wanted to go to a school where I could get a sound education in case I don't pursue a tennis career. Northwestern is definitely the school

And so was tennis.

"My dad kept coming home and talking about Aaron Krickstein all the time," Giraldo said. "So, I felt I wanted to try tennis and did. I liked it immediately, but if you had told me back then that I'd be playing tennis some 10 years later I probably wouldn't have believed it.

Krickstein is a professional tennis player from Grosse Pointe

Will Giraldo turn pro?

"Right now I don't really know," he said. "It depends on how I do in college and whether or not I keep progressing the way I should."

Giraldo's summers, except for one week, are filled with major tournaments, as is the winter. However, he's got one season to play in high school, or does he?

"I haven't thought about bypassing it or not," he said. "I did it once before, but that was for different reasons.

Giraldo passed up his sophomore season because of a log jam in the lineup.

"We had a lot of problems with the lineup and it created some problems between me and a few guys, so I decided it was best if I didn't play and let things calm down a bit," Giraldo said. "I concentrated on playing in some national tournaments. but yes, I did miss playing some high school tennis, but it was my decision.

And a good one.

"I think that gave me some great exposure," Giraldo said.

Slow 1-3 start doesn't worry North hockey coach

By Rob Fulton

Despite early season woes, the North hockey program is not in need of a complete overhaul.

Rather, it needs to get all its players back and hone the defense.

Scott Nesom and No. 1 goaltender Geoff Miller haven't back the team should begin to turn things around.

However, at 1-3, coach Mike Manzella is not concerned that the team may be headed in the same direction as last year's 10--11 team

"We are a very lean team," he said. "We've scored 15 goals in four games and won only one of those. You would think that would be enough to win, but it's played in four games this season - not, because right now we need because of a school suspension to shore up our defense. But, I'm that was imposed before the not as disappointed as the record hockey season, and with them looks because we are making and nine goals a game."

Goalie Brian Dennis picked up North's only win, a 4-1 decision over Midland Lakeland in the season opener. North has lost three straight games heading into Friday's game at the ULS Christmas Tournament.

Senior John Ferguson leads the team with five goals and four assists, and Gary Corona and Derek Smith have two goals each, as does newcomer Ryan Oliver.

"The 15 goals is still not enough offense," Manzella said. "Especially if we're giving up six

our defense just isn't doing the North has lost to Trenton and Port Huron Northern by identical 9-5 scores, and was defeated by Brother Rice, 6-1.

"It's been strange so far," Manzella said. "We have really sustained a lot of pressure and have been able to keep the puck in the opponents' zone for three to four minutes, but all of a sudden we find ourselves trying to stop the other team on a long play in which they score. We know the problems we have, we just need to bone up on them.' And the biggest one is defense, which is anchored by only one senior, Brian Michalak.

"Our goal production has been very good, but it's showing that job," said Manzella. "We've got a lot of guys with limited experience, so it's going to take us a bit longer to adjust our lines and fine tune. I't not disatisfied. We knew coming in we'd be a slow starting team, so that's why we're concentrating on the '91 season when it begins in January and February; that's when we'd like to peak. "The kids have a very positive attitude and there's great team unity. We need to position our defense instead of trying to hit guys. Once we discipline our defensive unit, look out because we'll be a solid club.

support him, while others — it seems — detest him. And, until the school officials get away from ambiguity and can stop the rumors from swirling, then we're all left to conjure up our own explanations.

Under the trauma of losing a fine coach, the team has skated on under the direction of John Biliti. Interviews were being conducted to find Zimmerman's replacement, and in the meantime, Zimmerman gathered his facts, organized them and may be set to appeal. On Dec. 7, however, South named Jim McCauley as the new coach. Does that mean McCauley would be ousted if Zimmerman wins his appeal (assuming he appeals)?

There is no deadline for Zimmerman to appeal, but the school had posted the job opening and hopes to restore continuity and order to the hockey team ASAP.

Is Zimmerman appealing to get his job back, or trying to keep his reputation? What does appeal mean? Zimmerman won't say what he's appealing

High school coaches just aren't fired. Unless, of course. they have done something outside the MHSAA guidelines. which Zimmerman almost did recently.

Zimmerman had scheduled several scrimmage games before the season started. Under MHSAA rules, a team can have a maximum of four scrimmages in the course of the season, but only two of the four may be played prior to the team's first competition.

However, it appears that Zimmerman was about to exceed that limit. The administration became aware of a trip to Wisconsin and Illinois and told Zimmerman to cancel his team's trip during the Thanksgiving weekend. He did.

Officials insisted the trip was not cause for his removal. Then, what was? How did his activities become inconsistent with the health and welfare of the students? Please, someone, speak up.

The school has not released any additional information and has been advised to follow a tight-lipped approach by its legal counsel. And, according to the statement, "all details regarding them (activities) must remain confidential.'

I understand this is a delicate situation and all the fact must be examined before the school either reinstates him, or upholds the firing.

Zimmerman has also said nothing. I can understand everyone's feelings, fears and misconceptions, but I don't comprehend why the school can't release any detailed information if it feels it had enough on Zimmerman to fire him in the first place.

Knights open hoop season with 59-50 loss at Cranbrook

Sports Editor

Coach Chuck Wright was concerned that his University Liggett School basketball team couldn't defend the inside game or beat teams on the glass. He was right.

And because the Knights couldn't out-rebound Cranbrook or keep it out of the paint, they suffered a 59-50 loss in their first game of the season.

"Exactly what I thought would happen, happened," said Wright. "It hurt to lose, but we didn't play well enough on the inside and the lack of rebounding hurt us."

Center David Darby grabbed 14 rebounds to go with eight points, but no other Knight had more than five rebounds.

"We also shot very poorly and anytime you shoot only 25 percent you're not going to win,' Wright said. "I think it was a combination of first-game jitters and the fact that we wanted to win very badly.

Senior guard Tarik Lester led ULS with 21 points, 16 coming in the second half, and also had four assists. Brent McMahon had 10 points and four rebounds.

"We had many opportunities to win up until the last two minutes, but couldn't capitalize," said Wright, whose team took a 44-41 lead with six minutes to "We were nervous and

Jennifer Miller and Jon Sieber, both runners at ULS, ran at the TAC National Finals in Omaha Dec. 8.

Miller finished 10th and was name All-American, and Sieber finished 68th overall, and was the fifth runner on the Michigan team that placed second, only three points behind champion Miami Valley of Ohio.

According to Miller, the key to her performance was being patient 150 yards into the race at the first hill.

"I held back at the first hill, knowing the adrenaline-crazed runners would run it too aggressively, tiring their legs early in the race which would prevent them from challenging the larger hills later on," she said. Behind the scoring of senior point guard Tim Gramling, the South varsity basketball team has posted a 2.0 record to start the 1990-91 campaign.

Gramling scored 15 points in South's 51-47 season-opening victory over Gallagher and hit for 13 points in a 56-52 win over Highland Park.

Tim has been very consistent and is showing some fine leadership and we needed that right away," said South coach George Petrouleas. "He's done a nice job and so has Bill Leins.

Leins has hit for eight and 12 points, respectively.

The win over Gallagher in the opener marked the first time in five seasons South hasn't lost its first game.

848,618 Bronco buyers mark car-truck's silver anniversary

If you had bought a Ford Bronco in the year it was introduced, you could get classic car plates for it the next time you register the vehicle because it will be 25 years old. But you probably won't because then you could only use it for special occasions, such as parades, and the Bronco was and is a workhorse and a sportster.

Ford introduced the Bronco. one of the earlier vehicles to combine the attributes of a carand a truck, in August 1965 as a '66 model. An immediate sales success, it led its market segment with 18,200 sales in its first year. Its best single sales year was 1978, when it peaked at 82,343. In 1989, Bronco sales totaled 62,563 to bring its 1965. 89 total to 848,618.

The Bronco has spawned some of its own toughest competition. In 1984, the Bronco II debuted in the growing compact truck market and was succeeded this year by the Explorer, an instant hit, described by Ford General Manager Thomas J. Wagner as "the ultimate expression of sporty utility fun and function.

To mark the Bronco's completion of a quarter-century of production, Ford created the Silver Anniversary Bronco model, available in any color you want as long as it's currant red. It is also marked by a number of appearance enhancements including bumper rub and step pads. special body moldings, outside tire cover, carpeting and other goodies.

The Silver Anniversary Bronco has its own special emblem, charcoal interior with currant red trim and even comes with a special leather jacket and bag. A matching fiberglass roof caps the package.

The Bronco has been the top seller among the big sports/utility units for the past decade and it is big. The driver sits up high and the hood is wide. Under that wide hood is a 5.0-liter Ford V-8 which gives the big machine all the punch it needs. The "Touch allows shifting from two- to fourwheel drive high and back while the vehicle is moving. Automatic four-speed overdrive transmission is standard.

I had the remarkable good luck to be test-driving the Bronco when the first snow of the season struck early on a Monday morning. The Bronco's four-wheel drive had no problem with the fairly deep and heavy snow, but of course nothing can do much with the snarled rushhour traffic on that first snowy morning.

This is a macho vehicle, no doubt about that, with its broad hood, high captain's seat, big deep-biting tires and powerful V-8 engine. But trucks are no longer the domain of the male. according to Joni Wilkerson, a Ford Division marketing plans analyst, and 20 percent of truck buyers are women.

Women prefer lighter trucks, such as the Ford Aerostar minivan and the Explorer compact utility vehicle, but the Bronco has its female fans also.

"It's the blending of car and truck features that attracts car buyers, men or women," she said. "They are looking for practicality in a vehicle that satisfies them aesthetically as well as functionally.

That first '66 Bronco was offered in three body styles, a fourpassenger wagon with removable full-length roof, a pickup with half roof and an open-top twodoor roadster with two or fourpassenger seating. By 1973, only the wagon version remained.

The Bronco got bigger over the years. It started with a 92-inch

The first Bronco had a 170-cubic-inch 104-horsepower in-line six cylinder engine with threespeed manual transmission and full-time four-wheel drive. The Silver Anniversary Bronco has a 5.0-liter V-8 rated at 185 horsepower and four-speed/overdrive automatic transmission, with an optional 5.7-liter 210-hp V-8 available. Two wheel or fourwheel drive is just a quick shift away.

It is not an economy vehicle. The EPA rates the Bronco with 5.0-liter V-8 and four-speed automatic at 13 miles per gallon city and 17 highway. It's not cheap either. # Depression: Don't suffer needlessly; it can be treated

From the Rand Corporation comes the disturbing discovery that more than 10 million Americans suffer from depression. Even more disturbing is that less than 25 percent seek help, even though depression is more disabling than arthritis, ulcers, diabetes or high blood pressure. It is as serious as emphysema or back problems in limiting victims' physical activities and confining them to bed. Only heart pain and advanced coronary disease more severely limit such activities as dressing, bathing, walking or playing sports.

If you had an ulcer or were disabled by arthritis, you would certainly seek medical help. Whether it is fear of social stigma or a belief that "you just need to pull yourself up by your bootstraps," too many people suffer needlessly from depression. True depression is a medical condition and more than 80 percent of all cases can be successfully treated.

Virtually all healthy people will experience the "blues" - a short-term dip in mood that lifts when a person's outlook improves - at some time in life. Oddly enough, what should be some of the happiest times of the year, the holidays, are periods when many people experience depression. This is particularly true of older people. With families scattered, friends gone or moved away, holidays are days to get through. Once the season of celebration is over, they feel

Sometimes people "over-program" themselves during the holiday season. With too much to do and not enough time or energy to accomplish it all, they become frustrated, over-tired and depressed.

Nearly everyone will experience deep and abiding grief over the death of a child or a spouse or some other tragic event which may take a long time to pass.

Clincial depression is different. It is a medical illness, without an apparent immediate cause. that does not lift when circumstances change, and can last for several months or years.

Many people do not recognize the symptoms of depression in themselves, or, if they do, they think they have a character flaw rather than an illness. Ironically, the feelings of hopelessness and lack of vitality that are the very symptoms of depression may keep people from seeking medical help.

In older people, especially, "masked" or unrecognized depression (complaints of aches and pains or listlessness) is often attributed to aging or to simple hypochondria. But it is never normal to feel unhappy all the time as you get older.

According to the Johns Hopkins Medical Letter, "Health After 50," the cause of depression is clusive and successful treatment must take into account the whole fabric of a person's life, not just a single thread. While there is speculation that a complex weaving of biology, personality and inadequate or inappropriate coping strategies • developed over the course of a lifetime lead to depression, there is no evidence that any of these factors alone can cause mood dis-

Some cases are rooted in underlying medical conditions; stroke, thyroid disorders, hepatitis, viral pneumonia or cancers. Other cases are induced by medication, including barbiturates and tranquilizers. The depression disappears when the medication is stopped. Depression can also be related to chronic alcohol use.

A recent study, published in the "Archives of General Psychiatry," found that serious symptoms of depression were completely eliminated within 16 weeks in 50 to 60 percent of 250 patients involved, where they received interpersonal psychotherapy (concentrating on the formation of personality from earliest childhood), cognitive behavioral therapy (concentrating on altering learned behavior patterns), or an antidepressant drug. Of the three treatments, the drug therapy was the cheapest and the quickest.

Some studies have suggested that exercise will help relieve mild depression. Other research has shown that sitting under extremely bright lights that simulate daylight for a few hours a day - especially during the winter doldrums - may ease a type of depression called SAD (seasonal affective disorder).

But the effectiveness of these alternatives remains uncertain, and no one suffering from depression should be lulled into using them as a medical treat-

How to recognize, deal with depression

If you have ever experienced the death of a loved one, the breakup of a marriage or the loss of a job, then you know that grief and depression are common. There is, however, a de-35,000 suicides every year.

The Mental Health Association in Michigan (MHAM) is one of several United Way member agencies that addressed longlasting or clinical depression one of the most common mental illnesses in the United States.

According to MHAM, onefourth of all women and oneeighth of all men will suffer at least one occurrence of depression during their lifetimes. Depression affects people of all ages, races, ethnic and economic Treating depression in older adults is the specialty of Carol Glidden, program director of Older Adult Counseling Services for Catholic Social Services, a United Way agency.

Glidden said that not much research exists in her field of study, and treating older adults is often difficult. When older adults become depressed, many suffer silently instead of getting help. If they do finally come to therapy, it's because a son or daughter thought they should come, Glidden said.

Depression in older adults can be divided into five categories.

Major depressive disorders affect people who are born with a tendency for major depressions because of a chemical imbalance. Treatment for all categories involves medication and/or ther-

Neurotic or long-term depression lasts longer than six months and is usually a result of a problem from childhood. Clients in this category consist of adult children of alcoholic parents or those who have experienced abuse as children or other dysfunctional family patterns.

Adjustment with depressed moods is based on personal, emotional, financial or physical

Substance abuse can cause depression. "It is estimated that in some nursing homes, 15 to 25 percent of the residents are there because of chronic alcoholism and the damage it has done to them physically, mentally and neurologically," Glidden said. Alcohol is often used as a rempression that lasts longer and edy for physical pain. When the digs deeper. It affects 10 million doctor won't prescribe more pain Americans and accounts for medication or decreases it, adults may use alcohol as a substitute. Medication misuse also may cause depression. If instructions are not followed properly or if older adults use drugs prescribed for someone else, it can cause depression.

> Organic or physical disorders cause depression. High blood pressure, diabetes, arthritis or a heart condition can cause depression in anyone, said Glidden.

> Although depression is treatable, 90 percent of the people who are depressed do not seek treatment. Why? Many do not recognize the symptoms. Some are ashamed. Some feel depression is a weakness or a character flaw.

The exact cause of long-term depression has not yet been discovered, but research strongly suggests a genetic link to depressive disorders.

Because depression is so often misunderstood, the Mental Health Association in Michigan is participating in a program called D/ART (Depression/ Awareness, Recognition, Treatment). The program is sponsored by the National Institute of Mental Health in collaboration with the private sector. Its objectives are to inform primary care physicians and mental health specialists about the latest treatments for depression, and to help the public recognize the symptoms of depression and where to get help.

Symptoms of depression are: persistent sad or empty mood; feelings of hopelessness, pessimism; feelings of guilt, worthlessness, helplessness; sleep and eating disturbances; difficulty concentrating; and thoughts of death or suicide.

Four or more of the symptoms indicate a need for help. For more information on depression, contact your United Way at Work representative, or First Call For Help at 456-8800.

Late S.S. check?

One of the most common reasons people fail to get their Social Security check when they expect it is that they did not report a change of address to Social Security," said Verlyn Rebelein, Social Security manager in Grosse Pointe. And it's important that people who have direct deposit report their address changes as well, she said.

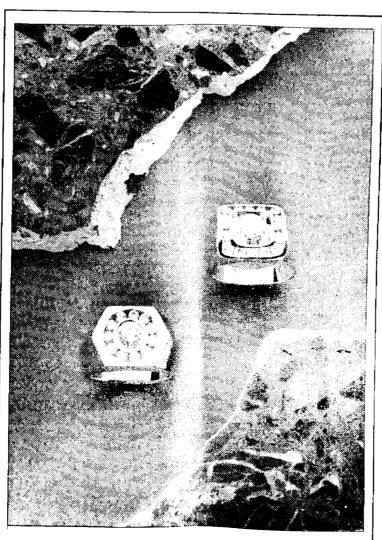

To report a change of address, call the Social Security toll-free telephone number 1-800-2345-SSA or 1-800-234-5772, 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. weekdays. You can also use the mail or visit the Social Security office to report a change.

It is not sufficient to just notify the Post Office of a change of address

If you have your benefits deposited directly into a bank and don't report your new address, you run the risk that your benefits may be interrupted. Your benefits may be stopped if letters from Social Security come back marked "undeliverable."

New survey lists 10 attributes sought in a real estate agent "Professionalism is the sec-

Lloyd E. Edwards says the real estate business isn't a business of selling, it's a business of communicating.

The product will always be available and will always be in demand; thus the real estate agent is a conduit between the buyer and the product. As long as they communicate well, both get what they want.

Edwards is director of recruiting for Coldwell Banker Schweitzer Real Estate and has been in the business for 18 years. He teaches potential real estate agents what their clients want and expect from them.

"Because you're dealing with emotions, real estate is a very different field," Edwards said. "People want to know you have their best interest at heart. They need to know you're working for

A new survey of recent home buyers and sellers conducted by the National Association of Realtors listed the top 10 attributes people look for in an agent.

• "The No. 1 thing people look for in an agent is that they keep the best interest of the buyer or the seller in mind," Edwards

If an agent pushes too much, you might want to ask him who he's working for, himself, his company or the client, Edwards suggests. He says the agent is supposed to work for the client, not the company.

ond most important thing, according to this survey," he said.

Professionalism means an agent is on time and prepared. It even extends to how clean an agent's car is. "The car doesn't have to be fancy, just clean." Edwards said.

• A Realtor must know the housing market. Buyers get turned off when an agent gets lost going to a house, or doesn't listings in the area. know the quickest way to get • An agent should keep clients

· "People want an agent who cares about them," he said. "But they don't care if they like him as long as the agent is keeping their best interest in mind.

Selling your home in

If you are a homeowner who is ready to sell, don't be worried by the current soft market. According to the Michigan Association of CPAs, you can generally sell your property no matter what the market conditions are as long as you are willing to invest the time and money necessary to give your home a competitive

First impressions count

For starters, ask yourself: "Would I buy this house in its present condition?" Common sense dictates that a home is more desirable in the eyes of a buyer if it looks neat, trim and trendy on the outside; clean, roomy and functional on the in-

Brokers will tell you that the homes that sell the fastest are those with the most curb appeal. To enhance that appeal, paint the exterior of your home if it looks drab, and repair or replace broken gutters or window shutters. Clean all the windows and replace panes that are cracked.

In addition, keep the lawn well-trimmed and think about planting colorful flowers and shrubs to enhance the property's overall appearance. If the front walkway is cracked or filled with holes, re-pave it. To enhance the first impression of your home, you may also want to install close to the ground, solar powered landscape lights to give the property a warm, inviting image at dusk.

Fixing up your home can ultimately mean more money in your pocket. Here are some reasons why. First of all, a buyer will often knock $200 off your asking price for every $100 repair that is needed. Small improvements can sometimes spell thousands of dollars in added home value. Second, there is a tax benefit to be derived from fixing up your home before you sell it. Any money you spend on repairs made during the 90-day period before you sign a contract directly reduces the amount of gain you must report to the Internal Revenue Service.

a soft market requires competitive edge Once you have the buyer inside your home, make sure that the ambience continues. Prospective buyers are sure to scrutinize the kitchen, bathrooms and bedrooms - so be sure they are spotless. Kitchen counters and cabinets should be uncluttered and neat. Appliances should be in working order. Dull-looking walls should be given a fresh coat of light-colored paint.

In the bathrooms, the faucets should be free of leaks. The grouting around the tub and sinks should be fresh. And you may want to put out a basket of colorful potpourri. Eliminate unpleasant odors such as cat litter or cigarette smoke by opening all windows to air out the entire house. And shampoo rugs and carpets that might be retaining unpleasant odors.

Remember, the comfort of buyers is of utmost importance. Therefore, the temperature in your home should be cozy when they arrive. Rooms should be well lit. During the day, expose the windows by drawing the curtains and lifting shades. At They are concerned most with turning on lights. If the basement or attic is dimly lit, bring in free-standing or table light fixtures. And, in the winter, if you have a fireplace, use it. A crackling fire creates a cozy atmosphere as well as instant proof that the fireplace, in fact,

Targeting the sale

Creating the right atmosphere is just one step in marketing your home. Another is targeting the sale to one or two of the four major segments of the buying market. First-time buyers tend to be young and restricted by tight budgets. Generally, they prefer to move into a home in good working order because the down payment requires every last penny they have.

Trade-up buyers are looking for more space and luxury. They will be impressed by remodeled kitchens and bathrooms, roomy closets and fancy entry halls.

Empty-nest buyers no longer have children living at home.

night, don't be stingy about security, convenience and low maintenance costs. They will also notice if the windows don't have working locks.

Trade-down buyers whose finances have taken a serious drop must move from more to less. They would like to maintain the illusion of space. Consider emptying rooms of excess furniture and cleaning out the closets of all but the bare necessities to create more space. Closet space, in fact, is high on the list of necessities for most buyers.

Setting the right price If you want to sell your home quickly, or sell it at all, you have to set the right asking price, taking into consideration the current market in your neighborhood. Most homeowners who decide to sell choose to work with a real estate broker. Brokers can use their expertise and contacts to hasten a sale. And many real estate agencies today right price by doing a market analysis of comparable homes in the area.

In addition, check the local newspapers to see what other homeowners are asking for similar homes. Find out the selling prices of homes in your area by looking in the registry of deeds at city hall. Set your asking price a little higher than you expect so that potential buyers can negotiate down to a price acceptable to both of you.

If you decide to sell on your own, be prepared for lots of hard work. Consider setting a time limit, say one month. If after that time, you've gotten no nibbles, it might be wise to turn your house over to a local real estate agent.

Strong emotional ties to a home should not figure in the asking price. View your home as a piece of property that must appeal to potential buyers with different tastes and needs. # Christmas plants add festive spirit to heart, home, holidays of Christmastime, we think instantly of poinsettias - latecomers to the scene having only become popular within the last 75 or 80 years.

They are showy and elegant and make a wonderful display, perhaps to assert their youthfulness in comparison to the venerable plants of Christmas, like holly, mistletoe and rosemary whose beginnings as holiday adornments go back to antiquity.

Poinsettias, native to Mexico, are members of the family of Euphorbia. They were developed to their current lavish form by a botanist named Poinsett, for whom they were named soon after the beginning of this century.

The bringing of greens into the house at Christmas is a custom which has its roots in the Roman festivals of Kalends when green branches were given to friends for good luck and to bring blessings into the house.

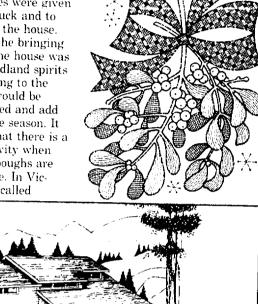

In ancient times the bringing of evergreens into the house was thought to help woodland spirits who might be clinging to the branches and who would be warmed and sheltered and add to the festivity of the season. It is true, even now, that there is a certain joy and festivity when fragrant vines and boughs are brought in the house. In Victorian times, it was called

"bringing home Christmas." At first, the church frowned upon this pagan ritual of decorating for Christmas but it was not long before churches, too, were decked with greens. In defense of this, Isaiah was quoted: The glory of Lebanon shall come unto thee, the fir tree, the pine tree and the box together, to beautify the place of my sanc-

In some of the old carols, holly and ivy are linked together and sometimes appear in antagonism to each other. In medieval times holly was considered to be a man's plant, and ivy, which clings, the woman's plant. Songs and poems debate as to which should dominate.

Under the influence of Chriscred and ivy faded from the scene, being considered pagan. Holly was a symbol of the burning bush and the Virgin.

The bright red berries of holly spoke of the drops of blood which the crown of thorns drew from the brow of Christ, as they had much earlier been the blood drops of Baldur, the ill-fated god of Valhalla. After a long time holly and ivy were again united in song but still "the holly bears the crown.

Another plant with a long association with Christmas is mistletoe, a wonderful example of purely pagan rites incorporated into Christian custom.

In ancient Britain, cutting the mistletoe was a ceremony of great importance. The Druid priest, garbed in white, cut the sacred vine with a golden sickle. Sacrifices to the gods were made and the mistletoe was distributed to the people to decorate their homes. The sprigs were hung over doors as protection and as a curative for members of the household.

In Scandinavian mythology, mistletoe is implicated in the death of the god Baldur, the favorite of Valhalla.

A comparatively modern tradition about mistletoe is that while it is delightful in the house, it would be very wicked to bring it into a church since it has a long history of pagan associations. And mistletoe is never used in church.

The proper Victorians gave mistletoe its modern kissing ceremony. This too is a throwback to ancient times when the mistletoe, because it grows only on the tops of trees, was imbued with magical powers.

Rosemary was once an impor tant part of Christmas decoration. It first made its way into England in the 14th century, and by the 16th century was a definite part of holiday decoration. The gray-green color of the branches offered a pleasant contrast to the deeper greens of other boughs, and the aromatic fragrance of this herb added much to the festive atmosphere.

Sir Thomas More, writing about rosemary, said: "Tis the herb sacred to remembrance and therefore to friendship." In earlier times people knew, as modern psychology has proved, that sweet scents will recall past memories as nothing else and, from Christmas to Christmas, happy associations were thus re-

Christmas trees are, like the glowing poinsettias, a fairly recent addition to the festive scene There are many legends about trees and their sacred associations in all countries and religions, and in ancient times, trees were worshipped in their own right.

But the Victorian Christmas tree is purely secular and an extension of the idea of recreating within the house the evergreen of the forest decked with snow and glittering icicles and providing a haven for winter birds.

Although Christmas trees were at first purely a household decoration, it was not long before they found their way into the church. In certain places in Europe the tree with its twinkling lights has been given a place in the lonely graveyard on Christmas Eve.

MADISON

The design has 1,174 square two bedrooms.

The second bedroom is open to a vaulted area, overlooking the dining room, and is up one half flight of stairs from the master bedroom, a nice room to decorate as a den/study which can be used as a guest bedroom. When you don't have guests, you can curl up with a good book (or your newspaper) and relax in your own private loft.

In your open, spacious living and dining area, you will never get that closed-in feeling. Within the open concept, the kitchen is tucked around the corner, to provide some privacy from the unexpected guests and the "yet to be cleaned" kitchen.

The kitchen has a convenient snack bar within the popular Ushape that provides an uninterrupted work triangle. The kitchen has direct access to the garage for ease of carrying groceries or additional storage.

Construction on a hillside is always more expensive, but the Madison uses the multi-levels to create distinct areas. Of the four levels in this compact home, the lowest is a garage, workshop, storage area: the second is a general living area; the third is a sleeping and bathing area; while the fourth is an opportunity space, for total retreat, while maintaining visual and sound communication with the second level, through the vaulted space.

The Madison is designed for a small hillside parcel of land. For a study kit of the Madison (200-30), send $5 to Todays Home, P.O. Box 2832-T Eugene, Oregon 97402. (Be sure to specify plan name and number when ordering.)

If you are looking for a home feet with one bath and almost with just the right amount of space for two, the Madison was designed with you in mind.

ADOPT A PET

13569 Jos Campau • Detroit, Mich. 48212

Phone: 891-7188

Pets for Presents at Christmastime:

The gift of life, one of life's most precious treasures. This is certainly what we would all like to think. But this does not always hold true. We can all picture how wonderful it would be to see the expression on our child's face. Or perhaps watching grandma smile when we surprise her with a cute new puppy or a kitten for Christmas

Introducing a new puppy or kitten or for that matter, an adult animal requires the right atmosphere and also involvement by the entire family. The holidays are certainly not the right time. There is a lot of confusion, guests coming and going, etc. Also there are a lot of dangers for young pets to get into at this time. Remember pet ownership is a commitment for a lifetime, not for a season. The holidays can be a very beautiful time for giving, if the right gift is chosen. Pets are not always the perfect choice! Yes, they do bring a happy smile and they do get a lot of attention, but they also end up becoming neglected. As an end result the new Christmas pet ends up unwanted at a shelter or even worse becomes tossed outdoors after the excitement has worn off. New pets need attention and deserve to receive proper care, coming into a calm atmosphere is ideal. Holidays prove to be extremely stressful on all of us and the voiceless are the ones that suffer. Animals no matter how small or young require a lot of attention. Getting a new pet, again, no matter of size or kind should be a family decision that everyone agrees on. Pet ownership is a big responsibility and all of the factors should be given a lot of consideration. Do we have the time to give a pet? Can we afford to give proper medical care? Besides the time you need to provide your pet, there are vet bills - proper care means providing your pet with regular vet visits for good health.

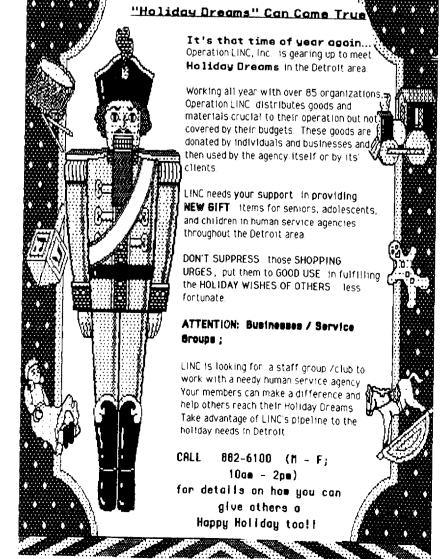

If you are considering giving a pet for the holidays, think about wrapping up a collar, toy, leash, bowl, catnip mouse, a pet bed, etc. Wait til after the confusion is over and your lifestyle gets back to a regular routine. Take time to make the right decision. Maybe a pet is not what you were after. After Christmas gifts are just as wonderful, perhaps you will find it even more fun than you anticipated. The entire family can decide what type of pet fits their lifestyle. Not always what we want to give as gifts are welcomed.

Animals have feelings and they don't deserve to be tossed away because someone is tired of them or because they were never really wanted. We are bringing this to attention because of the many pets we will see after the holidays, coming into our shelter. Many animals coming into our shelter not knowing why, what did they do to deserve this, ending up in a shelter unwanted because they were unwanted gifts to begin with.

We encourage people to come and see us after the holidays and make the right choice then. Please help us "Make It A Be Kind To Animals World." If you'd like more information please call our shelter at 891-7188 and speak to shelter manager Debbie

We look forward to seeing you after the holidays!
