

Residents make the news in the Pointes in 1990

By Ronald J. Bernas
Staff Writer

The past year could be called the year of grass roots. Resident concerns and complaints caused boards and city councils to re-think their actions and bow to the will of the people. A short recap of the year's events follows.

January

It started off with a freeze — on new construction in Grosse Pointe Shores, prohibiting the issuance of all permits for construction throughout the village. The moratorium also prevented property owners and developers from subdividing properties into lots. Building was stopped so the Shores council could revise its master plan which was last updated in 1956.

The Grosse Pointe War Memorial Association announced plans to build a new cable studio on the grounds of the War Memorial. The Grosse Pointe Farms council approved it, then residents started complaining.

PACE — the Program for Academic and Creative Education — was to be given a one-year overhaul, because then-Superintendent John Whritner said it wasn't working. Parents complained, saying Whritner's proposal came because he was leaving for a new job in a few months. Eventually, the school board approved leaving it in place, but at the same time work toward developing a new program. Shortly afterward, the board named Edward Shine, former deputy superintendent, to fill Whritner's spot.

In other school news, the board decided to ask the people of the Pointes to fund a proposed $7.1 million library on the grounds of Brownell Middle School. The library and its ups and downs were a story that dominated the news all year.

The plan called for a new library, and for the administration to move its offices to the current Central Library, and then for the current administration building to be sold. Grosse Pointe City officials complained about the plan, because they were concerned over its possible future uses, and wanted the land to be restricted to single-family homes.

After many more twists and turns, the story will end, for good or for bad, on Feb. 4 — the date set by the board for a bond issue election.

The city of Detroit began replacing the bridge spanning Fox Creek. The new bridge closed Windmill Pointe Drive at Alter Road.

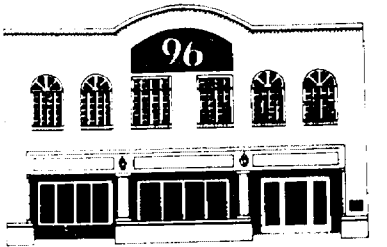

February

The schools once again took top billing when a study proposed a major restructuring of the middle school program. The proposal included moving to a seven-hour

Ted Zberanowsky, who lives at 1350 Yorkshire, transformed his house into this delectable confection. It took him three weeks of working in his basement to create the display and he said that before he was finished, the entire basement floor was covered with material. Middle school changes approved

By Ronald J. Bernas
Staff Writer

Sweeping changes intended not only to educate middle school students but also to make them more well rounded were approved by the school board on Dec. 10.

The changes were approved after nearly two years of study and discussion by middle school teachers, administrators, parents and district officials.

The biggest change is going from a six-period day to a seven-period day, according to Dr. Alfreda Frost, assistant superintendent for curriculum.

"The seven-period day will benefit the students because they will have more opportunity to take more classes in more varied subjects," Frost said.

Hand in hand with the seven-period day is an increase in several middle-school requirements:

- In the sixth grade, a year of science will be required instead of the current semester; exploratory courses in art and keyboarding will be added to the current list of required exploratory courses in lifeskills, technology and foreign languages; and students will have to take either a general music class or an instrumental class.

- In the seventh grade, Skills for Adolescents, a course which deals with teen issues of coping, decision-making and family relationships, will be required, and the musical strings course will be increased from a semester to a year.

- In the eighth grade, a health course will be added to the list of required courses and the strings, band and choir courses will be lengthened from a semester to a year.

Board members expressed concern that the new requirements weren't focused enough on academics, but Frost disagrees.

"Science is academic, and I think I would support the premise that art and music are academic," she said. "The whole concept of the adolescent in the middle school is that he be exposed to all areas."

Another change includes adding a 22-minute period every day known as the adviser-advisee program. Each student will be assigned one teacher with whom he or she will meet every day for at least a year, perhaps for all three years.

"This will not be a 22-minute study hall," Frost said. She is currently developing a curriculum which includes skills such as building relationships and knowing oneself.

Teaching teams will be formed to foster better teacher-student relationships, Frost said.

Pointer of Interest

Kenneth J. Van Dellen

By Laura Phillips
Special Writer

Perhaps Kenneth J. Van Dellen got his inner spirit and energy from his father, a country doctor who at 83 still made house calls.

Perhaps it came from his wife Pearl, who teaches students with learning disabilities at Lakeview public schools in St. Clair Shores.

Or maybe it's his faith in Christ, his commitment to education, his two daughters.

Van Dellen, 53, finds a way to use his individuality — his interest in geology, education, the pro-life movement and his faith — to better others as well as himself.

The Grosse Pointe Park resident credits some of his traits to genes.

"I guess they run in the family a little bit," he says. "I'm kind of people-oriented. I guess, I enjoy working with people, helping people."

Van Dellen is in his 26th year of teaching at Macomb Community College, where he says he is "the whole geology department." He earned a bachelor's degree in biology at Calvin College in 1958.

Later, he completed a master's degree at Michigan State University in invertebrate zoology. That's the study of animals with no backbones, "which is maybe why I don't eat that stuff," he said, laughing. "I prefer to eat vertebrates."

After he began teaching at MCC he earned a second master's degree in geology at the University of Michigan in 1978.

Van Dellen's interests outside teaching reflect his strong religious faith. Organizations with which he is involved include the Affiliation of Christian Geologists, Right to Life and the First Christian Reformed Church of Detroit, where he is an elder.

Grosse Pointe Cable pays its first dividends to cities

By John Minnis
Assistant Editor

For the first time in a decade of operation, Grosse Pointe Cable is paying dividends this year.

The announcement of the payments comes after Comcast Cable, the company's technical operator and a shareholder, backed out of a $25 million offer to buy the other three outstanding shares of Grosse Pointe Cable.

The dividend amounts to $66,750 per share.

Grosse Pointe Cable is unique in that it is 75 percent owned by the communities it serves.

Of the company's four common shares, one is owned by Comcast, and three are controlled by the War Memorial Association. Of the non-profit association's three shares, 1 1/2 are split among the cities of Grosse Pointe City, Farms, Park and Woods and Harper Woods.

The equity each city has in the 1 1/2 shares is determined by the amount of revenue generated over the years by each of the cities.

The War Memorial received $100,125 in dividends for its 1 1/2 shares. The cities' dividends came to: City, $10,012.50; Farms, $18,022.50; Park, $20,025; Woods, $30,037.50; and Harper Woods, $22,027.50.

Last year, John M. Rickel, chairman, president and treasurer of Grosse Pointe Cable, said he expected to pay the firm's first dividend, but the payment was contingent on the inter-company debt being paid off.

He said now it is possible that with the next principal payment, the inter-company debt, which was as high as $2.4 million, will be close to zero. The inter-company debt was owed to Comcast.

"It appears we are now in a positive position," he said.

Rickel founded Grosse Pointe Cable some 10 years ago when he was president of the War Memorial. At the time, he proposed that the non-profit community center manage the cable system for the five member cities. In fact, he took three dollar bills out of his pocket to purchase the three shares for the War Memorial.

Grosse Pointe Cable is also under an obligation to pay off its long-term debt by 1994. Rickel said $2 million of the $10 million debt remains to be paid.

In October, Vernon K. Ausherman, a member of the Grosse Pointe Cable advisory board and the Park's mayor pro-tem, reported that Comcast withdrew an offer to pay $25 million for the three shares controlled by the War Memorial.

Rickel said Comcast initiated the offer to buy out the War Memorial and member cities' interest in Grosse Pointe Cable.

Ausherman reported that Comcast was unable to come up with the $25 million, which represented what Comcast believed was the value of 75 percent of the company. That means Comcast pegged Grosse Pointe Cable's overall worth at $33.3 million.

Grosse Pointe Cable is also in the process of moving its offices to Wayburn and Charlevoix.

of Christian Geologists, an international group with roughly 150 members, he helps mediate conflicts over issues such as the age of Earth.

"We're trying to build bridges between the geological community and the church," he said. "I guess you could say we're trying to communicate between geologists who aren't Christians and Christians who aren't geologists."

The Affiliation does not disagree with conventional geology on such hot issues, said Van Dellen, who considers himself a "conventional geologist."

Members participate in discussions, and some recently "exchanged views" with students at the Dallas Theological Seminary, he said.

Van Dellen also puts pen to paper in pursuit of his interest in geology. He reviews science books for publishers, and will write a chapter on geology to add to a new environmental science textbook.

Although he initially was interested in biology, Van Dellen says the leap to geology wasn't that large. But he says he can't pinpoint what spurred his interest in the subject.

"I used to go to the gravel pit a lot and pick up interesting stones," he said. "But I also collected birds' nests and seashells."

"When I was little, my parents would take us places. We'd go out in the woods and look at the wildflowers... that was part of it. They did things to get us interested in nature."

Van Dellen grew up in Ellsworth, just south of Charlevoix. His father, Jerrian Van Dellen, was a country doctor in the town of 350.

"We finally made him take his shingle down a few years ago," he said. The 86-year-old widower is getting married Dec. 31, and Van Dellen will be his father's best man.

"Being raised in his house and seeing him go out to help people on holidays and all hours of the night... I think it set an example for me," he said. "Some of the things I have done to be of service to people have set an example for my daughters."

His two children, Lisa and Kara, both graduated with degrees in exercise physiology from Calvin College and now live together in Grand Rapids, following their father's example.

Lisa works for a community services program, helping adults with handicaps; Kara volunteers for Young Life, a Christian group for teenagers.

With the nest empty, Van Dellen says he is planning ahead.

"I'm starting to think of what I want to do with the second half of my life," he said. "I've thought of several things."

Among them are teaching English or geology in China or a developing country.

"When I retire I don't want to just sit around," Van Dellen said. "I'd like to do some things where I could use my talents to help people."

Van Dellen tells of the time he helped his "African son," a Ma-comb student from Sierra Leone who studied agriculture in hopes of returning to his country and helping people raise crops.

Van Dellen spearheaded a fundraising drive to help the young man continue his education when he ran out of money.

Quietly, with a smile, he says, "Maybe I'll visit him in Sierra Leone and teach there."

teacher, a mathematics teacher, a social studies teacher and a language arts teacher will all work with the same group of students. The students will move among the four teachers throughout the day. The teaching team will have the same planning period and will be able to discuss any problems or plan common units.

Frost says if the science class is studying machines, the history class could be studying the industrial revolution, the math class could study metrics and the language arts class could assign a research paper.

That type of total immersion should help students grasp concepts and apply them better, Frost said.

"I think kids today want to see a relevance," she said. "They ask more questions and the teaching methods need to change to meet these needs."

Of course, these changes will cost money. The most expensive change will be the addition of 12 new teachers who will be needed to accommodate the seven-period day. An exact cost figure was not available.

"It's important to know we're not trying to fix the the middle school — because it's working," Frost said. "But we need to start meeting some other types of needs."

Frost said she has been meeting weekly with the middle school administration getting the plans set for September 1991 implementation. Staff development to prepare the teachers for what will be expected of them has already started, and will continue throughout the first year of the program as problems and needs arise.

McNamara to county commissioners: I'll give up pay increase if you will

By John Minnis
Assistant Editor

Embroidered in a battle over the 1991 budget, County Executive Edward McNamara challenged the county commissioners to give up their salary increases and he will forgo his.

McNamara threw down the gauntlet last week while still smarting from the commissioners' overwhelming override Dec. 11 of his line-item vetoes in the proposed budget.

The override restored some $1.7 million worth of spending to the $1.8 billion budget. The restored budget line items included $1 million for the county board's office and $700,000 for County Clerk James Killeen's office.

McNamara charged that the commissioners were spending money that the county didn't have, and commissioners labeled the county executive a cry baby.

McNamara retaliated by vowing to refuse to pay the commissioners their $350 a month in auto allowances and requested that five of the commissioners, including David Cavanagh of Grosse Pointe Woods, return their new county-owned Ford Crown Victorias.

By McNamara's reckoning, the commissioners' proposed 1991 budget reflects a $1.2 million deficit.

To be responsible and cut county expenses, McNamara told the Grosse Pointe News that he will give up his pay raise if the county commissioners give up their 38 percent salary increase that goes into effect Jan. 1.

Currently, the commissioners' salary is $29,970, and in 1991 it jumps to $41,396. Committee chairmen, like Cavanagh, who is head of the roads and airports committee, earn $31,470 now and $43,896 next year.

County board Chairman Arthur Blackwell makes $38,970 a year, and in 1991 his salary will be $53,396.

The county executive's pay is established by the charter and is set at 97 percent of the governor's pay. McNamara currently earns $103,940. On Oct. 1, when the governor's salary is adjusted, the county executive's pay will go to $106,716.

Cavanagh was skeptical but not opposed to McNamara's proposal to freeze salaries.

"I would have an open mind to that," he said, "but there's a lot of things to be worked out. Ordinances and the charter may need to be changed."

"I don't know if we can do this legally."

He pointed out that the executive's pay is set by the charter and commissioners' pay was based on a percentage of the county executive's salary and was adopted by the previous county board, which included the incumbents who were re-elected in November.

Cavanagh also pointed out that it wouldn't be fair for the commissioners to take a pay freeze on Jan. 1, when McNamara wouldn't be affected until Oct. 1.

The 1st District commissioner also pointed out that on Jan. 1 of this year, McNamara received a 23 percent pay hike. In 1989 the county executive's salary was $84,770.

Another point of contention between the county executive and the commissioners is McNamara's belief that a seat on the board of commissioners is a part-time job. Commissioners, particularly committee chairman, put in a lot of hours, including night work, according to one employee in the county board's office who asked not to be identified.

McNamara also contends that the commissioners' salaries are out of line for what he considers part-time legislators.

A comparison of commissioner salaries in Macomb, Wayne and Oakland counties (see accompanying chart) shows that Wayne County commissioners earn twice as much as their peers in Oakland County and more than double that paid to Macomb commissioners.

The Oakland County executive earns $6,648 less than McNamara. When McNamara gets his raise Oct. 1, he will be making $5,046 more than his Oakland County counterpart.

Volunteers spread good will

Between lunch at Jacobson's in Grosse Pointe, gifts from Goodwill and a call from a member of Detroit's Blue Pigs band, Mariann Simone says she can celebrate her birthday, Dec. 25, happily.

Simone and two of her roommates, residents of a group home in Detroit for women with physical and mental disabilities, had lunch and gifts last week, courtesy of Jolly Cheers.

In the Junior Goodwill program, volunteers help clients maintain and develop their physical and social skills. Volunteers organize arts and crafts, lunches and social outings.

Barbara Miller of Grosse Pointe Park and Mary Meretski of Grosse Pointe co-chair the program. Last week, they escorted Simone, Patricia Grant and Peggy Ruska on an outing at Jacobson's.

"This is the best Christmas I ever had," Ruska said. "The best."

Meretski and Miller, a Park councilwoman, are members of Junior Goodwill, an auxiliary organization that raises money for Goodwill.

Meretski said clients are so enthusiastic about the events, they sometimes show up hours early.

"It's really wonderful because it's the highlight of their lives," Meretski said. "They really wait for this from one meeting to the next."

Miller said when clients first join the program, lunch outings sometimes are an impossibility. But after a few years of growth, they become possible, she said.

Miller, who also founded an adult literacy program in Detroit, said her involvement in the program is natural.

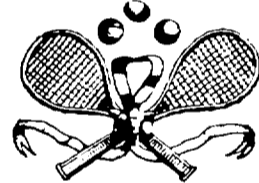

"I come from a strong family tradition of serving and giving to my community," she said. "It's nice to know you make a difference."

Child in car when stolen

An 8-year-old boy was in a car that was stolen from a restaurant in the 18400 block of Mack in the Farms Dec. 20.

A Detroit woman was sitting in her car at the restaurant at 11:50 p.m. when a man came up and stuck a gun through the open car window. He held a semi-automatic handgun to the woman's head and told her to get out of the car.

She told the gunman that her grandchild was in the car, but the man opened the door, pulled the woman out and took off with the car.

He fled east on Mack and then north on Opal Street into Detroit. On Opal Street, the armed thief stopped the car and told the boy to get out. The boy then walked back to the restaurant.

Door kicked in; house ransacked

A home in the 500 block of Rivard in Grosse Pointe City was burglarized Dec. 17 by a suspect who entered by kicking in the front door.

The break-in is similar to two recent burglaries in the Park and one in the Farms. City Detective Dennis Van Dale said the burglaries are believed to have been committed by the same suspect.

The Rivard burglary occurred sometime before 6:20 p.m. The house was ransacked and the full extent of the loss was not known. Among the items taken were three televisions, a microwave oven and jewelry.

Van Dale advised residents to make sure lights are on in their house when it begins to get dark. With it getting dark early, many residents don't get home until after dark. In the early evening hours, it is easy for a burglar to pick out houses without lights, indicating no one is home.

Purse snatched

A purse belonging to a 74-year-old Utica woman was snatched by a suspect at Mack and Lochmoor in Grosse Pointe Woods Dec. 19.

The woman had just put money in a parking meter on Lochmoor at 11:50 a.m. and was walking to Mack when a man walked up behind her and grabbed her purse.

He fled to the alley and jumped through a hedge. The woman was yelling for the man to return her purse, and when the purse strap became entangled in the hedge, the suspect said, "Here, you can have it back."

He then fled east in the Mack alley. When police responded, they found two men were chasing the suspect and an accomplice, who were now in a 1988 Cadillac Seville. The officer took up the chase along with Harper Woods police.

The chase proceeded up and down Harper and in Detroit north of I-94, where the suspects got away.

Burglary reported

A home in the 600 block of Hampton was burglarized sometime between 5:15 and 6 a.m. Dec. 19.

1900s feature rise and fall of communism

If 1917 stands as a critical year in the first half of the 20th century because of the Russian Revolution, then certainly 1990 stands as a critical year in the last half of the century because of the fall of communism.

However, it is true that the editors of "Year," a picture-history of the first five decades of the century published in the early 1950s, also identified the U.S. entry into World War I as a second critical event in 1917 along with the Russian Revolution.

As the world approaches the beginning of the final decade of the 20th century, we can see how those two events linked the world's greatest military powers for most of the subsequent years up to the present.

It wasn't until the 1930s, after Franklin Delano Roosevelt became president, that the United States recognized the USSR. But this country maintained a fairly distant relationship with the Soviet Union until Hitler turned on Stalin and made the enemy of our more immediate enemy our ally, if not our friend, in World War II.

Opinion

Now, by a curious twist of fate, the United States is aiding the USSR again, this time not only with food and other necessities, but also with political and economic support in its transition to a market economy.

It surely has been a strange century in world affairs.

Among the curious developments that have not been welcomed by all Americans is the rise of the two defeated powers of World War II, Germany and Japan, to become two of the world's leading industrial and commercial nations.

They, too, now provide food and economic aid to the Soviet Union, as do our other allies in Western Europe, on the grounds that a breakup in that huge nation would cause more international turmoil than the world is prepared to withstand as the 20th century winds down.

It seems clear to Americans that communism is dying, if not already dead, in the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe, although it still survives in China, Cuba and a few other isolated nations around the world.

But surely it no longer is seen as any wave of the future and the success that it was called by a befuddled forecaster, Lincoln Steffens, the muckraking journalist who said, after one of his trips to the USSR in 1919, "I have been over to the future and it works."

It is worth noting that "Year" selected 1945 as the second year in the first half of the century that warranted special mention, principally because of the development and first use of an atomic bomb, but also because the year marked the end of World War II and the death of three of the national war leaders: Roosevelt, Hitler and Mussolini.

The United Nations also came into being that year, but 1945 also witnessed Yalta and Potsdam which, as "Year" said, were

"two of the conferences at which Russia forged its claim to empire."

"Year" closed its discussion of the first half of the 20th century with the view that the development of atomic energy "had opened prospects more vast than any envisioned by Columbus," but then added that because of the Cold War "there were two worlds, the Communists and the free, and the outlook from the mid-'50s was for conflict."

That forecast was surely right on target until recent years when the Communist world began breaking up before our eyes. But now what is the outlook for the rest of the century?

With the world again trembling on the brink of war, nobody really knows the answer to that question. Once again, however, the answer is to some extent in the hands of a mad dictator, Saddam Hussein, whose unprincipled behavior may require the U.S.-led UN forces to go to war just as the allies did to halt another mad dictator, Adolf Hitler, in World War II.

That is not a happy prospect for the New Year, especially after the hopes raised by the end of the cold war and the demise of communism in Eastern Europe. Yet there are still men of good will in many nations, and in the United Nations, whose plans for peace still may prevail and prevent another world holocaust in the closing days of the 20th century.

A new leader for Detroit?

As 1990 draws to a close, a new and exciting prospect suddenly has appeared on the political horizon in Detroit.

It comes from the decision of state Supreme Court Justice Dennis Archer to resign from the high court in order to consider running for mayor of Detroit when Mayor Coleman Young's current term expires in 1993.

Archer told a press conference it would be premature to say he plans to run but said he had resigned from the court to "do some information gathering and some problem solving with the possibility" that he "might consider being a candidate."

As he investigates that possibility,

Archer will serve as a member of the prestigious law firm of Dickinson, Wright, Moon, Van Dusen and Freeman. If he does as well there as expected, he might have to face the choice in two years of whether to give up a lucrative practice of law to take on the manifold problems of the mayor's office.

But Archer in private practice and on the high court has made an impressive record that surely raises hope that he could provide the kind of new leadership that Detroiters have been seeking since Mayor Young's troubles began to mount.

In fact, in September, Richard Van Dusen, a member of the law firm Archer is joining, spelled out that hope in an address to the Grosse Pointe Senior Men's Club in which he called for "a new generation of black leadership — men and women whose experience has occurred for the most part in an integrated society."

Democratic politicians applauded Archer for resigning before the end of the year, which means that defeated Democratic Gov. James Blanchard rather than GOP Gov.-elect John Engler will appoint a successor. State law also requires judges to step down more than a year before running for another elective office.

Just what Mayor Young thinks of the new man on the horizon is not known at this writing even though he and Archer are old friends and Archer served as his campaign manager back in 1977. However, most observers welcomed Archer and Hugh McDiarmid, political columnist for the Free Press who attended Archer's press conference, probably put it best:

"It sure felt good to be there and to hear somebody fresh and new and, importantly, viable talking about Detroit's problems and its future."

As one voice from suburbia intensely aware of Detroit's importance to the entire metropolitan area, we say "amen" to that comment.

No, no, say it isn't so, Bo

Bo Schembechler and the Detroit Tigers' management have sharply diminished their own stature in all Tigerland by the ham-handed way in which they forced the retirement of Ernie Harwell, the voice of the team for 31 years and a former Grosse Pointer.

True, Ernie is like many veterans in sports as well as in private business who get an undeserved thumb from their employers when they reach retirement age even though they are still capable of doing their jobs.

But Ernie is in a different category. He is a tradition and to baseball fans in this area he is part of the Tigers. So he deserved better treatment than being casually shelved at the end of the 1991 season. Instead, he should have been permitted to step down at a time of his own choosing.

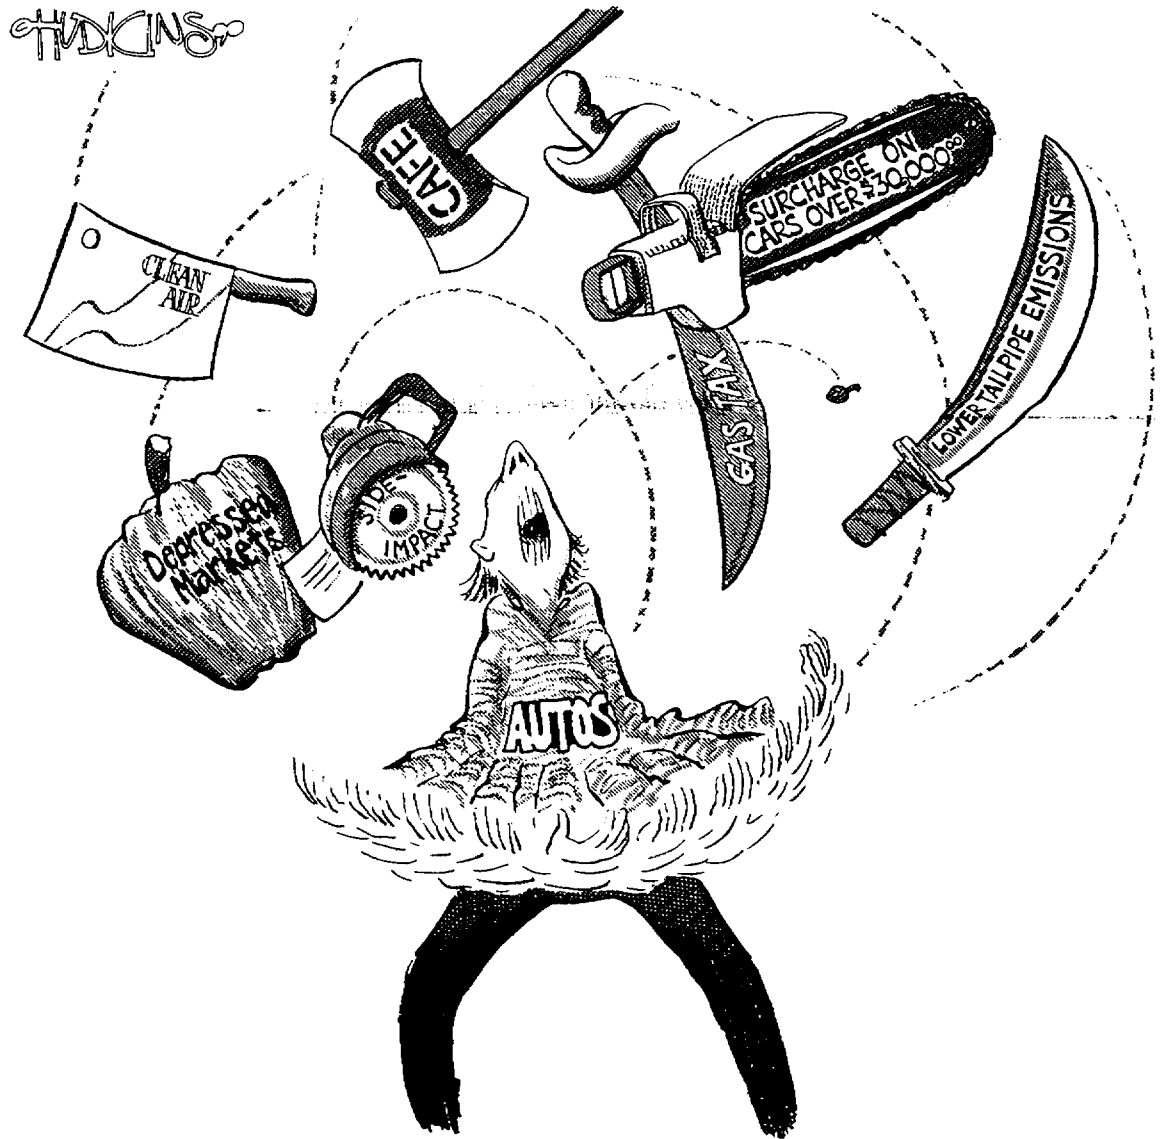

We do not recall a forced retirement of any individual in recent Michigan history, not even Gov. James Blanchard's booting of Lt. Gov. Martha Griffiths off the Democratic ticket last fall, that has aroused as much anger and resentment as the Tigers' move in ending Harwell's Detroit career.

In fact, Bo's own reputation is suffering a substantial loss. The once-popular football coach at Michigan is a friend of Tiger owner Tom Monaghan but he is a late convert to baseball who has shown little respect for the game's traditions.

Earlier, he had supported a proposal to build a new stadium outside of Detroit, despite strong public support for retaining Tiger Stadium. In fact, some people believe Bo sacked Harwell because the announcer had the temerity to express his views about the old stadium to some friends.

Whatever the reason, and the explanation that "the Tigers wanted to go in a new direction" is no excuse for the Harwell firing, we say shame on Bo. He ought to have known he couldn't treat a respected tradition as if he were just a prospective college football player who hasn't got the right stuff.

Support

To the Editor:

The Grosse Pointe War Memorial Association would like to thank the community for donating items to us which we have sent to the Persian Gulf — the response from the community has been overwhelming and heartfelt. In addition to thanking everyone who has dropped something off or volunteered their time, we wish to thank the following local stores and organizations for supporting our servicemen and women serving in the Persian Gulf:

Damman Hardware, Perry Drug Store, Sports On The Hill, Banana Republic, Kroger's, Schummer's Ski Shop, the Detroit Red Wings, Village Toy Company, and several community Brownie and Girl Scout troops.

The donated items will be included in the weekly Care Packages the association sends to those from the community stationed in the Persian Gulf. Although the items we have received are sent to Grosse Pointers, we have no doubt that they are enjoyed by many. Several of the items require at least one other person and a few require team participation.

In addition to the donated items, the Care Packages include a newsletter titled "Pointes of Light," created by the association for this effort, weekly issues of the Grosse Pointe News, personal letters from the association's staff, homemade cookies and most recently, Christmas cards created by our children's art classes for the community to sign.

Please know that we are very proud to provide support for the Persian Gulf crisis, and we will continue to serve as the link that connects the Grosse Pointes to our community members who answered when their country called.

Fisher Road

To the Editor:

As a resident of the city of Grosse Pointe Farms who lives on Fisher Road, I am concerned about changing the east/west traffic pattern in this residential area. A plan to "improve and expedite the flow of the through traffic" in the east/west directions has been under evaluation since July 1. Currently Grosse Pointe Farms proposes to make it permanent.

I am concerned because the plan "targets" as a "major road" Fisher Road, a street so narrow that it already has to be one-way.

The basic premise of the plan is that one can expedite car travel through a residential area by merely funneling more of the traffic through two streets currently carrying a high load of residential traffic.

Logically, the traffic problem would be better eased not by further overloading two of the residential streets, but by diverting some traffic off them and onto others.

Faith and the homeless

It seems to take all day to be homeless in New York.

You wait in line for two hours to get a free breakfast. Spend an hour panhandling. Another couple hours in line for lunch.

If you plan to sleep at the National Guard Armory, you're brave, for one thing, but you're also waiting hours for a numbered stub that will get you admitted when it's dark.

At least that's what I saw when I visited New York last Christmas. With six other students from Central Michigan University, I climbed in a church van and rode to New York to spend two weeks working in soup kitchens in Manhattan and the Bronx.

The Methodist pastor who organized the trip had been making the trek for more than a dozen years. He was an activist who talked of agape and universal love.

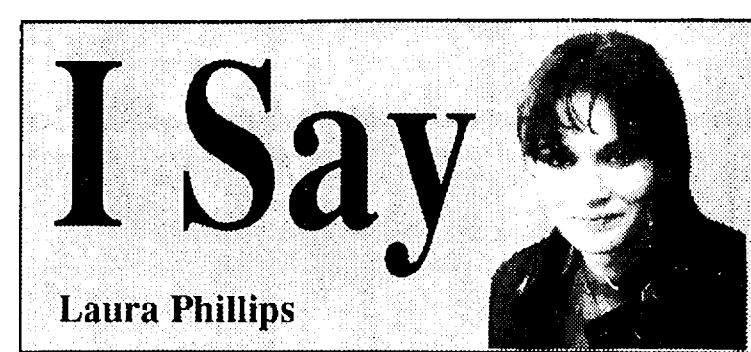

With the other volunteers, I was carefully screened. Why did I want to go? What did I hope to get out of it? Did I object to daily Bible studies?

He left behind anyone planning a 14-day shopping spree in the Big Apple, which had soured the spirit of past trips. The pastor was not materialistic. Even anti-materialistic, if that's the proper adjective.

To him, limousines were the epitome of the immorality often embodied in wealth. He'd never ridden in one and declared he never would, but talked of them often.

I worked in two soup kitchens those two weeks. The first, a Catholic Worker kitchen in lower Manhattan, served lunch to about 400 of the very poorest men in the city.

They spooned up the lime green gruel we served and crunched the hardened rolls with a touch of margarine.

I Say

Laura Phillips

Just looking at the food made my stomach squirm. But I tried my best to serve it with a cheery smile. The men made no eye contact at all; they said thank you, put on their hats, left their place for the next one in line.

The Catholic Worker was too much for a small-town girl from Michigan to deal with. I asked to work somewhere else, so I went to the Bronx. The homeless I saw there are in rough shape, but not yet hungry or desperate enough to eat at the Catholic Worker.

At this place, run by Presbyterians, I was more of a waitress than busboy. When I saw women and children there, I felt flushed and tense. But I can't put words on the emotions.

The people were open, talkative, teasing me about my Midwestern accent, asking me out for a date. But if the pity and guilt I felt somehow appeared on my face, they looked away and were silent.

The highlight of the trip was my appearance on the CBS "This Morning" show, Faith Daniels, interviewer. Or the low point, perhaps.

Host Harry Smith had heard of the pastor's annual trip through his wife, and asked him to appear on the show. The pastor chose me and another woman to go on with him.

The night before, the three of us sat with the rest of the group and thought out answers to the obvious questions we anticipated from Daniels.

The next morning, the network sent a limousine to pick us up at the church where we were staying. We were nervous, particularly the pastor, but we enjoyed the ride, the TV, magazines, stereo, pop, cushioned comfort.

We had our makeup and hair done, then took our places on the quiet set. The hot lights came on, and we considered our answers one last time.

When Daniels asked me why I came all the way from Michigan to work in soup kitchens, I was going to tell her I did it because I wanted the people to know I cared. When she asked me what the people were like, I would tell her they are like anyone else: moody, nice, boring, interesting, dejected, even happy at times.

Her first question: "So, what do you think of New York?" Then, "Did you have trouble convincing your parents to let you come here?"

We got in a few worthwhile statements, despite the inane questions. But I was disappointed, and I believe the others were, too.

A few days later the pastor announced that this would be his last trip to New York. He said he was getting old, and the appearance on national TV would be a nice way to end the traditional trek.

But he enjoyed that limo ride. And I think I saw disappointment on his face during the ride home.

I hear this year more homeless people will go hungry, even die because donations are down.

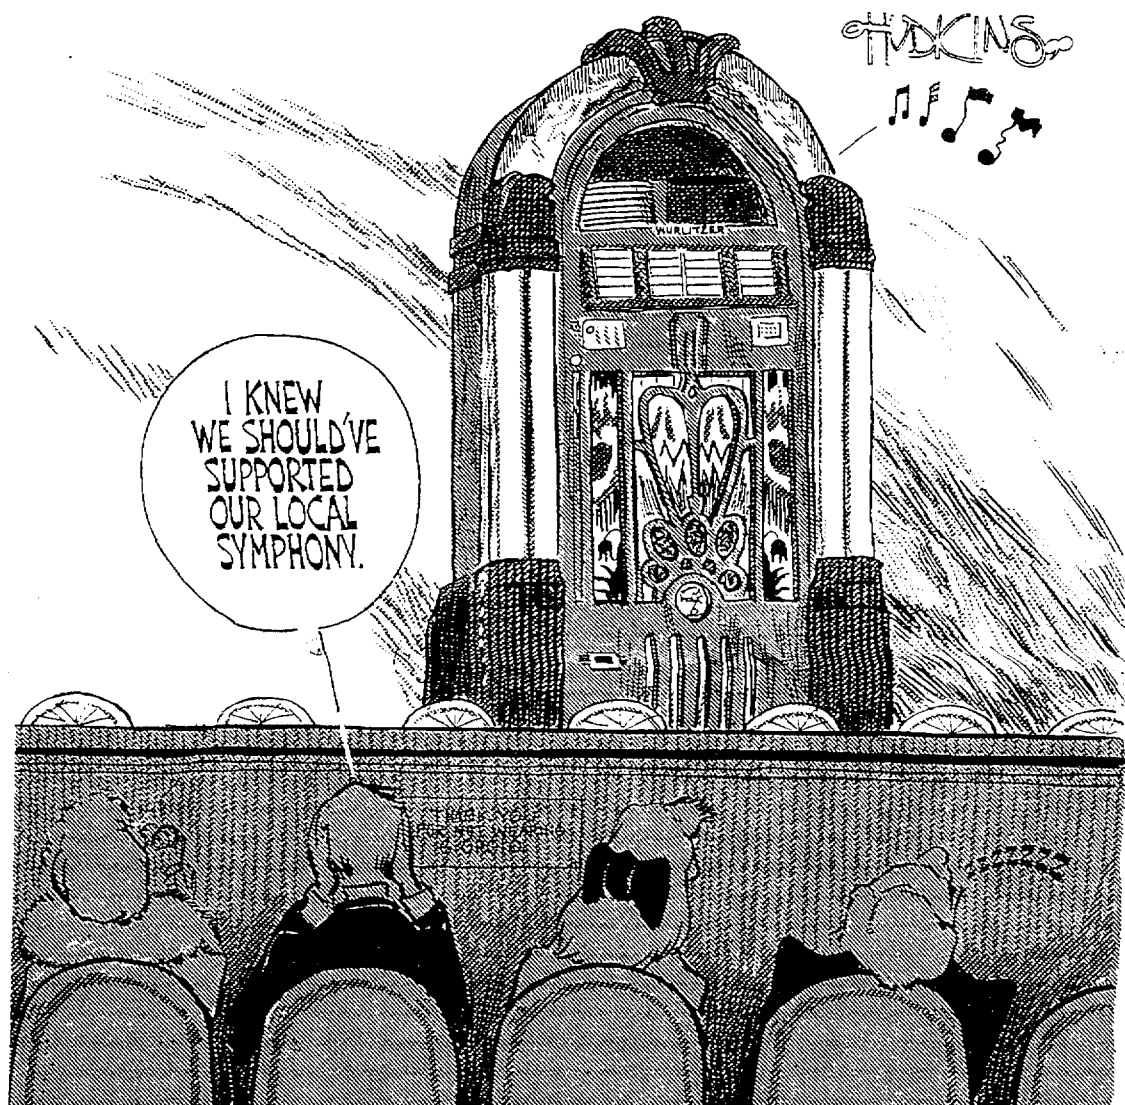

And when I see a limousine, I think of them.

Inquiring minds want to know

When mail addressed to Neal Shine, Publisher, Grosse Pointe News, was delivered to our office, our editor, Pat Paholsky, forwarded it to him at the Detroit Free Press. She added a note: "Seems like someone is taking this JOA business too literally." Shine, of course, is publisher of the friendly Freep.

Shine said it was a Christmas card from the Grosse Pointe Board of Education. "Do you think they know something I don't?" he asked.

Fore

Attorney Bill Mazer of Grosse Pointe City invented a miniature indoor golf course game called Mazer Golf. We wrote a feature story about the game for the Dec. 21 issue of the Grosse Pointe News last year.

On a whim, Mazer sent one of the games to entertainer Bob Hope.

Last Thursday, Mazer said that Hope's office called. Hope loved the game; he has it in his Palm Springs home; he wanted to take a few games to the Persian Gulf when he goes to entertain the troops at Christmas time.

Mazer rustled up about four games, pronto, and shipped them out.

Romance is alive

Dean Stevenson of St. Clair Shores, formerly of Grosse Pointe, proposed to Sarah Parvel of Grosse Pointe City on J.P. McCarthy's morning radio program last Thursday.

He asked Parvel to marry him via phone on WJR-AM. She heard him while in her car, driving to work.

Stevenson said she should look in the glove compartment for a ring.

She stopped the car; found the ring; drove to a phone; called Stevenson.

Stevenson called J.P. back with the answer. "She said yes," he reported.

J.P.'s comment to Stevenson: "You're a romantic devil."

Progress a mixed blessing in Third World

When I went to Europe in the '60s, Arthur Frommer's "Europe on Five Dollars a Day" was my dependable guide. It took me to cheap but authentic hotels and cafes and showed me the real Europe.

Nancy Parmenter

Sharing my view of the real thing were thousands of T-shirted, tennis-shoed, crew-cutted American collegians, also relying on Arthur Frommer. Everywhere we went, it was in an American pack.

Things have only gotten worse.

In those days, a few Frenchmen or Italians were still frequenting the tourist spots, not having yet realized that what was about to be unleashed from the New World would become even more overwhelming than the already legendary horde of Germans.

What's a traveler to do?

Some Americans, in their thirst for something different, have taken to the byways of the globe's poorest countries. After all, England, France, Germany, and the Scandinavian countries are all modern, industrialized nations that seem little different from our own homes. Even Singapore is now a New York clone (only newer).

Jim and Martha Mast of the Farms have been going to Central America since 1974. Originally attracted by archeological sites, they ended up working at digs in Belize and owning a house in Guatemala.

Their experiences there are full of contradictions. They can live like royalty in a walled compound, but have to shop for food every day. A cornucopia of fruits and vegetables adorns the open-air markets, but it all must be washed and peeled.

"We live life slower when we're down there," says Martha Mast. "Everything takes longer."

"We have to shop at several different places. We take the lettuce apart leaf by leaf and soak it in an iodine solution. And we don't have a phone."

They're on a list for a phone, though. Have been ever since they moved in several years ago. They know they're getting closer because a neighbor a few names higher on the list has been assigned a phone number. But he doesn't have a phone yet, either.

It's easy to chuckle at such inefficiencies, but they are also part of what makes a Third World country interesting. And one wonders if modernizing provides the whole answer in any case.

In Belize last year, our hosts at a small guest house expressed their pleasure at the building of a Ramada Inn near their house on the waterfront. They were so glad that their country is modernizing that we didn't have the heart to point out that it will be the rare tourist who will choose their guest house over the big hotel once it's completed.

And it will be the tourists' loss, in my view. The hotel will certainly be more comfortable, but travelers will lose the opportunity to see what Belize is really like — and our hosts and others like them will have their income permanently reduced.

Some of my family have lived in Greece for extended periods. In an effort to understand local ways out in the countryside, they skipped Athens and lived in small villages in Crete.

They raked their dirt floor to keep it clean and kept the table legs in bowls of water against the ants. They sat outdoors on the main street on warm evenings, joining the villagers in watching the movies. One day a flock of sheep strayed across their roof, legs crashing through the stick-and-daub.

It's one of the high points of their life — a genuinely authentic experience, utterly unlike anything that could be encountered in the developed world, no matter how much one travels.

Life isn't quite that earthy for the Masts. Their view is of volcanoes and bougainvillea, and their friends and neighbors are Americans, Europeans and wealthy Guatemalans.

They find Guatemala a country of beauty: cultural, natural, and architectural. An interest in architecture drew them, but colorful crafts and festivals and outdoor markets, historic sites, friends, and new experiences keep them there.

"Other places seem predict-ble," Martha says. "In a Third World country, you never know when you go around a corner what you'll see."

You might see a procession or a religious festival; Guatemala, as a Catholic country, holds frequent celebrations, usually with parades. In small villages, local families are responsible for sponsoring them.

"The men in the village take turns underwriting the annual festival," says Jim. "Often they end up bankrupting themselves."

It's all part of the local custom of keeping one's social standing by living up to expectations. The Masts tell of their friend and employee, a cement and tile worker, who put on an elaborate wedding for his son, with a series of dinners and live music — because it was expected.

"He had to do it because his father did it for him," Jim explained. "It cost as much as a pickup truck, which is another social distinction. He spent twice his annual income and depleted his savings."

One time the Masts packed their car full of tents and dig equipment in preparation for a six-week stint in Belize. As they drove toward the border, they were stopped by two neatly groomed men with rifles, who demanded their money.

"We never did decide if they were soldiers or guerrillas," said Martha, "but when they found we had no money, they shook our hands and took the cookies we had in the front seat."

The Tradition Lives On!

Thoughts of Christmas past, present and future

'Twas the night before Christmas...

As traditional as the day itself is this familiar, well-loved verse that encompassed the delight and wonder of Christmas in young and old alike.

It conjures up visions of a tree freshly cut, symmetrical as a geometric design, filling the house with the fragrance of pine.

In our mind's eye, we behold with wonder the myriad colored lights blinking through branches, ornaments which have been collected over the span of Christmases past, hanging from slightly bowed branches, all of them with a special significance.

Some of them made by loving little hands from years past are faded now, but still precious and irreplaceable.

Some of them, acquired to mark each passing year, bring back memories of Christmases that was very special — our first Christmas together, baby's first Christmas, the last year we were all together as a family.

And the star that shines from the top! It was so special! We bought it Christmas Eve and what a time we had getting it in place. We treasure it because it has shone its significant light throughout all our years as a family.

We see presents around the tree. Brightly wrapped, they create a kaleidoscope of memories. The picture changes from the self-indulgent small luxurious gifts for two, to hoped-for toys. Through the years the toys became clothes and stereos and cameras and sports equipment and finally back to small luxurious gifts again.

We remember Christmas breakfast with warm, fruited coffee cake, the flurry of gathering up Christmas wrappings and getting ready to greet guests for dinner.

It was a wonderful time. Everyone came — grandma and grandpa, cousins, aunts and uncles, each one dressed in Christmas finery, everyone smiling and talking, excited over being together and appreciative of whatever gifts received.

It was a day we felt should never end, and yet, tired and happy, we welcomed the peace and quiet that came with night. Children, whom we thought were too excited to sleep, fell into their bed clutching the gift they treasured most.

Now was a very special time when we sat together, with only the light on the tree and the glow of the fireplace to lighten the darkness and soft, gentle Christmas music to break the silence.

As we listened, our thoughts drifted beyond the wreathed door and the comfort and joy a family Christmas brings to another scene that denotes the true spirit of Christmas.

We remember the beauty and solemnity of the Christmas Eve service. We hear the church chimes pealing and echoing in the cold winter air and see stars glittering and bright in a midnight sky. We feel the crunching of snow under our feet and thrill again to the wondrous sight that greeted our eyes when we opened the church door. The church was bathed in a golden light, the pillars decked in green, the altar brilliant with poinsettias and the manger scene the center of it all.

Our hearts thrilled with emotion with the glory of the Alleluia chorus and the beauty of the most beloved hymn — "Silent Night."

We remember going out into the frosty night again, greeting neighbors, our voices echoing and crackling in the chillness and coming home to the exhausting and yet exhilarating task of getting ready for Christmas morning.

Prime Time

By Marian Trainor

As we sit, we wonder where it all began. Was Christmas always this long ago and far away?

Historians say no. We associate the beginnings of Christmas with the birth of Christ who came 2,000 years ago to bring new hope to mankind.

The familiar Christmas story has for its theme the message: "Glory to God in the highest and on earth, peace, goodwill toward men."

It's a message that pervades the deepest hopes of all who have and will ever celebrate Christmas.

We are told that before the birth of Christ, the Normans had a feast called Saturnalia. It was a day set aside to give glory to Saturn. They had feasting and games. They gave presents to the poor. They lit torches and candles. There was no fighting. There was peace and goodwill toward all.

Even after the beginnings of Christianity, the birth of Christ was not celebrated in any special way. It was much later that the churches began to celebrate the event.

Christmas first came to England at the end of the 16th century. Puritans tried hard to do away with Christmas celebrations. They were not wholly revived until early in the 19th century. One who did much to revive the spirit of Christmas was Charles Dickens. Prince Albert, husband of Queen Victoria, was influential also in reviving the Christmas holiday. He brought with him customs from his native Germany. It is to him that we owe the outcome of selting up the Christmas tree and adorning it with lights and ornaments.

One of the oldest Christmas traditions is exchanging presents. That dates back to the Roman Saturnalia.

Christmas cards are a comparatively new custom that came into being with the Penny Post in 1840.

Saint Nicholas, now Santa Claus, was the patron saint of children. In Europe he traveled on a donkey. It took the Americans to put him in an airborne sled drawn by reindeer.

There are those who say that in America we have over-commercialized Christmas. As we read the histories of how various countries celebrated Christmas, we wonder what future generations will say about our priorities and what customs they will change.

We hope they note that while we did put great emphasis on gift-giving, we also held close to our hearts the enduring and never-changing spirit of the day — love, family, peace and glory to God.

And so, Merry Christmas to all and God bless you, everyone.

The gift of friendship

Funny word, friendship... how do we relate to friends and they to us?

When we are hurting we wrap our friends around us like a favorite old bathrobe, warm and comforting

We feel their embraces through unspoken words, acts of kindness, flowers, a meal prepared, phone calls — all serve to dilute pain

Hugs soothe the aches simmering near the surface

Friends can be buttresses and strong anchors when storms rage within

Acts of friendship are all tributes of love, serving as a compass steering us on a steady course

Friends are like a safe harbor or a loving nanny guiding a child through a dark and frightening corridor

And there are the good times with our friends

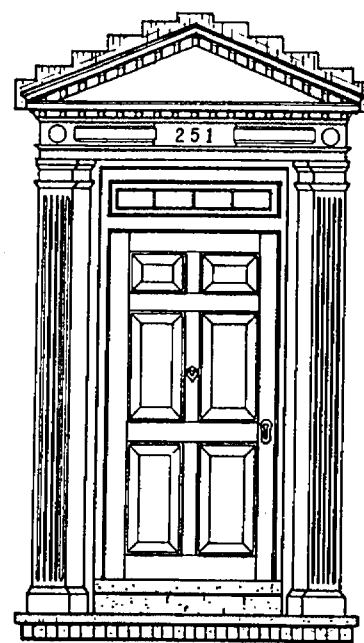

The times we share and laugh and celebrate our joys and victories and immerse ourselves in circles of friends drowning in each other's happiness and resurfacing to experience the sheer pleasure of feelings shared

We are grateful to be blessed with so many dear friends, each unique, providing us with balance in our lives, a treasure trove of personalities always there to refuel and energize us, and hopefully, to occasionally be recharged by us in return

This Christmas season we are especially grateful and hope that you share a similar bounty of love.

Prayer

To the Editor:

The unthinkable blood-bath is so near at hand and what have we done to make a stand?

No matter of what faith you are, prayer has always been a powerful intercession. Treasured are the words of the heart in communication with God... from anyone.

For once I would like to pray and give thanks for the war that was never begun; for the blood that wasn't spilled; for the lives that weren't maimed; for the families that weren't destroyed; and for the love that was not terminated by war.

I fly my flag every day for our troops. I pray my rosary for their precious care.

Right now, you can lease a new '91 Town Car with its new V-8, standard driver's-side air bag Supplemental Restraint System, standard 4-wheel disc anti-lock brakes, plus loads of room, comfort and style. And most likely it will cost you less than a '90 Town Car lease. Plus right now you get an additional $1,300 cash back from Lincoln-Mercury when you lease. Now that's what a luxury car...and a luxury lease...should be.

school day, which would allow for curriculum changes and changes in teaching methods. The plan, which was approved in December 1990, will go into effect in the 1991-92 school year.

School board President Jon Gandelot announced that he would not seek re-election for the school board. He had served on the board for 12 years.

Edgar Louis Yaeger, the artist who was commissioned by the Works Progress Administration to paint three murals for Cleminson Hall at Grosse Pointe South High School, returned to sign the paintings, 51 years after they were completed.

Benjamin Gravel, a Grosse Pointe Farms businessman on his way home from the Bayview Yacht Club, stopped his car to remove a branch from the road. When he got out, he was shot and killed. Six teens were arrested — they said they needed a ride to a party, and Gravel came by at the wrong time. Of the six, two pleaded guilty to first degree murder; two pleaded guilty to second degree murder and no trial date has been set for the two remaining defendants. The court has yet to decide whether the four who pleaded guilty will be sentenced as adults.

March

Residents complained and slapped a restraining order on developers halting the proposed conversion of the Cadieux farmhouse into condominiums. The Grosse Pointe City Council had recently rezoned the property to multiple-family on a vote of 4-2 with one abstention. Residents didn't believe that met the two-thirds majority required by charter to rezone property. In May, the residents, the property owner, the developer and the council agreed on a plan to split the lot and renovate the farmhouse and build a new house. All that was made moot later in the year when exterminators discovered extensive damage by carpenter ants to the farmhouse structure. As of the end of the year, the fate of the farmhouse was still being discussed.

The Edsel & Eleanor Ford House Activities Center was completed on the grounds of the estate after two years of construction.

"Wait just a minute," hundreds of Grosse Pointe Woods residents told their assessor after receiving notification that their home assessments had doubled and tripled. After complaints were registered and a suit against the assessor and a recall petition were discussed, it turned out that due to a computer error, many assessments were, indeed, incorrect.

As if all that weren't enough, a bunch of 1990 assessment notices, sent out bulk mail, sat in the corner of the U.S. Postal Service's Grosse Pointe Branch. Bulk rate mail is delivered at the postal workers' leisure.

A Grosse Pointe Park police officer was under investigation after killing a dog which was attacking him. The investigation determined the rookie officer was justified in killing the dog.

April

The Grosse Pointe Farms City Council voted 5-2 against the library site plan proposed by the Grosse Pointe school board. Hundreds of people complained to the council that the building was too big, too ugly and too unsafe for cars and students. The school board regrouped and took under advisement the residents' concerns and ideas — except those to scrap the project — and asked its architect to redo the plan.

The Grosse Pointe Woods Board of Review reduced 800 residential assessments. Officials were still trying to get to the bottom of what went wrong so the same thing wouldn't happen again. An assessment troubleshooter was hired and he blamed incomplete record-keeping for the problem.

Earth Day 1990, the 20th anniversary of the first Earth Day, focused attention on the grassroots efforts aimed at saving the planet. Elementary schools, residents and even a few businesses banged the recycling drum, and were starting to be heard.

The Grosse Pointe Woods City Council approved a resolution supporting the $18 million clean-up of the Milk River Drain. If it hadn't taken action, the council could have faced state-imposed fines of up to $25,000 a day.

The Grosse Pointes-Clinton Refuse Disposal Authority's incinerator fired up again after being closed for 15 months. The ash was now to be disposed of in a mono-fill, a specially designed and lined landfill which accepts only municipal waste.

The Airport Study Committee asked the councils of all five Pointes and Harper Woods to hire an expert to study the proposed expansion at Detroit City Airport. The committee wanted a total of $25,000 for a detailed examination of the master plan.

The committee hired former Secretary of Transportation James Burnley IV to conduct the study.

May

Opposition to City Airport expansion continued to grow as more than 300 people attended an informational session on the expansion. Later that month, another couple hundred people aired their views on the matter. Most views were negative.

Grosse Pointe Woods was the first city to establish curbside recycling. The city wanted to be able to decide early on what type of plan it wanted instead of scrambling at the last minute when — and if — the state mandates recycling.

In a move that caused so many complaints it's still in court, the War Memorial Association purchased the house next door. The 15-room house and 50,000 square feet of property cost more than $1 million and will be restored and used as an additional site for art exhibits, classes, meetings and conferences.

The Grosse Pointes and Harper Woods agreed to participate in a plan by the Grosse Pointe Shade Tree Council to put up 62 gypsy moth traps to determine the population of the tree killer.

June

In the first real show of opposition, Grosse Pointe Park designated $100,000 for battling City Airport expansion. In making the proposal, Park Mayor Palmer T. Heenan said, "If the other communities don't get on board, all the Grosse Pointes are going to lose. I'm willing to throw down the gauntlet on this." The Farms, Woods and City didn't accept the challenge and rejected requests to follow the leader.

A two-year-old lawsuit filed against Grosse Pointe Woods by a resident claiming the city discriminated against both her and her home day care business was settled out of court. The city was ordered to pay the woman an undisclosed amount less than $25,000.

The Grosse Pointe News celebrated its 50th anniversary with a special keepsake edition honoring the community.

Next week: More on recycling, the airport, the library and the War Memorial.

Farms couple donates wetlands to state park

By Laura Phillips
Special Writer

A Grosse Pointe Farms couple's donation of 13.6 acres of wetlands will expand a state park along the Lake Huron shoreline.

Alfred B. and Ruth Moran's gift to the state will be added to the 95-acre Harrisville State Park, just south of Harrisville along US-23.

Alfred Moran had inherited the property from his grandfather, Carl E. Schmidt, a former Detroit police commissioner and Grosse Pointe Farms resident.

Moran said his grandfather moved north of Oscoda at the turn of the century and acquired 6,000 acres of land, which he developed into a large dairy show operation, Saradella Farm.

Schmidt also developed two resort inns in Oscoda, the Greenbush Inn and the Oscoda Inn. When Schmidt died in the '30s Moran inherited the wetlands parcel, valued at $38,000.

Moran said giving the land to the state was appropriate. His grandfather had also donated a small strip of land in the area for construction of US-23.

"From a mercenary standpoint, I'd been paying taxes for 40 years and couldn't sell it," he said. "It's mostly wetlands and couldn't be developed. I thought it would be a wonderful thing ... to donate it."

Moran said the Department of Natural Resources plans to keep the wetlands as they are. He said they also will construct nature trails and name them after Schmidt.

If you had walked by a certain yard on the afternoon of August 25th, you might have heard the ground crying. That was the day a man walked into his backyard, dug a hole, and buried six puppies alive. Unable to stop him, a young neighbor girl looked on in horror. Luckily, her mother was also looking on.

She quickly called a Michigan Humane Society Investigator.

When he arrived, the cruelty investigator found the mother of the puppies chained and lying protectively on a fresh patch of soil. Her sensitive ears could easily hear the cries of her puppies eighteen inches below her. What she couldn't figure out was how to help them. The MHS cruelty investigator got into the dog pen and dug the puppies out with his bare hands.

Today five of those puppies are alive. And there's no clearer picture than this photo of what your contributions to the Michigan Humane Society accomplish. Your contributions help us feed and shelter the victims of animal abuse. Your contributions find them homes. And your contributions allow us to keep cruelty investigators on staff, so caring neighbors have someone to call.

In this season of giving, please find it in your heart to give what you can, large or small to the Michigan Humane Society. Because your contributions are the only reason stories like this have happy endings.

We take cookies and cake,
That took long to bake.

As well as the treats,
There are good things to eat.

Grandma's gone through so

She'll make us all eat double.

Aunts, uncles and cousins,
Come in by the dozens.

We indulge,
Till we bulge.

Then come the presents,
Oh, the glorious presents!!!

The wrapping does fly, with

Until even the dog gets a scare.

We play with our gifts, the kids
watch TV,

Waiting for Santa so happily.

Then we leave, but we had a

Wishful thinking

Dear Mr. Claus:
I'm writing on behalf of the Grosse Pointers who are too shy to admit they still believe in you.

You see, there's been a large request for championships this season and I'm concerned you won't be able to fill all the orders. But now that Christmas has passed, I'd like to think you could get busy on some of these belated gift ideas.

The following wishes can be put off until February, March or April. However, the sooner you can fill these orders, the better off Grosse Pointe sports will be.

- South basketball coach George Petrouleas could use a new Rolex.
- University Liggett School basketball coach Chuck Wright wants his first win in district play.
- The South swim team could use its own pool.
- Please, please, please get some lights so high school football can be played on Friday nights.
- Help ULS fullback/linebacker Kevin Whitfield get a scholarship to a Division I college.
- Give Nancy Pelleman (South athletic director's secretary) and Toni Morgan (North athletic director's secretary) raises because they not only work hard for their bosses, but they are constantly helping me out, too.
- Find a way to organize a cheerleading crew at University Liggett School.
- Restore marching bands at North and South.
- Let South use its Devil mascot more frequently without people being offended or thinking there is some satanic connection.
- Give South volleyball coach Cindy Sharpe a new sweat suit so she doesn't have to buy one again this year when the district tournament rolls around.
- North hockey coach Mike Manzella doesn't want his team to peak until February, but Santa, allow the team to progress gradually until then.
- Dig deep for this one, pal. Give me a present by finding out the truth behind why Tim Zimmerman, South's hockey coach since 1983-84, was fired in late November.
- Give North cross country coach Charles Buhagiar, who commutes from Port Huron to Grosse Pointe, a twin-engine plane for a faster ride.
- Put bathrooms closer to the football fields at North and South instead of making people walk to the school.
- Give University Liggett School some nicer bleachers and scoreboard for the football field.
- Figure out why there's not enough school spirit at North or South, and why there aren't enough fans at the games.
- Give North swim coach Mike O'Connor, and South swim coach Fred Michalik the 1990 'Atta Boy Award for consistently turning out fine swimmers.
- Bring Dick Grammatico back to the North football coaching staff.
- Find a way to renovate or just replace the Grosse Pointe Community Rink.
- Find some place for the Grosse Pointe Soccer Association to field more teams and play more games.
- After four straight years of light-air Port Huron to Mackinac sailboat races, please assure us there will be wind from now on.
- Keep the North-South rivalry alive.
- Please make it a short winter.

ULS' state championships highlight 1990

By Rob Fulton
Sports Editor

This year, like the last few, has gone by extremely fast.

With the year ending, we look back on our fond memories and wonder how to learn from mistakes and lost opportunities.

There's only one way to relive some of the year's sporting events in Grosse Pointe, and that's to take a look back.

University Liggett School won the 1990 Class B-C-D state hockey championship, and the ULS boys' and girls' tennis teams also won state titles. South and North both won numerous league titles, and several district and regional titles.

This first of a two-part series will cover January to June, 1990. In the Jan. 3 edition, the final six months of the year will be highlighted.

JANUARY

• The North basketball team, after a 1-3 start before the Christmas break, lost its fourth straight game, 48-38, at Utica. Brian Sheehy, who now plays for Albion, led North with 13 points.

• Port Huron Northern scored 78 points, the most a South basketball team had given up in three years, to beat the Devils, 78-67. Rob Khoenle had 19 points for South in the league opener.

• John Dodds, who played football at ULS, was named to the Michigan High School Football Coaches Association Academic All-State Team for his work in the classroom and on the football field.

• With 4-2 and 8-2 wins over Midland Dow and Arthur Hill, respectively, the South hockey team moved to 6-2-2 overall.

• Ranked No. 1 in the Class B-C-D state hockey polls, ULS moved to 11-1 after beating East Kentwood (the eventual state Class A champ), 4-3. Doug Wood, who would later become the school's and state's career leading point-getter, had two goals in the win.

• South's hockey team beat North, 3-1, for the first time since 1987. Goalie Kevin Nesler, who was named to the All-State team in March, stopped 27 shots.

• Jenny Kalmink had six kills and seven blocks, but the South volleyball team lost to Port Huron Northern, and never caught Northern again for the Eastern Michigan League championship.

• The North gymnastics team started the season with a 103.45-103 win over Berkley Deborah Stevenson had the team's high score (25.45).

• The ULS girls' hockey team posted its second win of the year, setting a school record for most victories in a season. Sarah Haggarty was the winning goalie in the Lady Knights' 2-0 win at Livonia.

• North's Charlie Stumb, the school record holder with 60 career receptions, verbally committed to play football at the University of Michigan.

• The North basketball team beat Roseville, 72-60, to snap its seven-game losing streak.

• The South wrestling team was enjoying its finest season in years with a 4-8 dual-meet record.

• The No. 9 ranked North hockey team beat ULS, 7-6. North has never lost to a ULS hockey team.

• In a loss to North, Doug Wood of ULS scored his 155th hockey point, giving him the career mark at ULS.

FEBRUARY

• North's Reid O'Brien pinned South's Nate Erickson at 119 pounds to lead the Norsemen wrestling team to a 40-33 win over the Blue Devils.

• South's basketball team moved into a three-way tie for first place in the EML with its fifth straight win, a 63-61 squeaker over Anchor Bay.

• Andy Dudeck scored 21 points as North avenged an early-season loss to Utica, 69-55. It was North's third straight win.

• With a 115-59 win over North, the South swim team, led by Chris Nelson, Brenn Schoenherr and Norman Rice in the 100 freestyle, retained its No. 2 state ranking.

• North's Bob Beltz scored back-to-back hat tricks in a 6-3 win over Port Huron Northern and a 5-3 loss to No. 1 ranked Trenton.

• The ULS hoop team, behind Kandia Milton's Most Valuable Player performance, won its fourth straight Maumee, Ohio, Tournament. Milton combined for 32 points in two games.

• North wrestlers Dan Collins, Bryan Fleming, Keith Giannico and Reid O'Brien wrestled their way to MAC championships. Collins and Fleming later qualified for the regional tournament.

• At 12-2 overall and 6-0 in the league, the ULS basketball team clinched another Michigan Independent Athletic Conference title.

• South's hockey team locked up second place in the Michigan Metro East with a 3-3 tie against Southgate Anderson. Goalie Kevin Nesler stopped 29 shots to remain unbeaten for the year at home.

• South hockey forward Brian Crane notched a hat trick as South beat North, 3-1. North fell to 9-10 overall and South moved to 13-3-4.

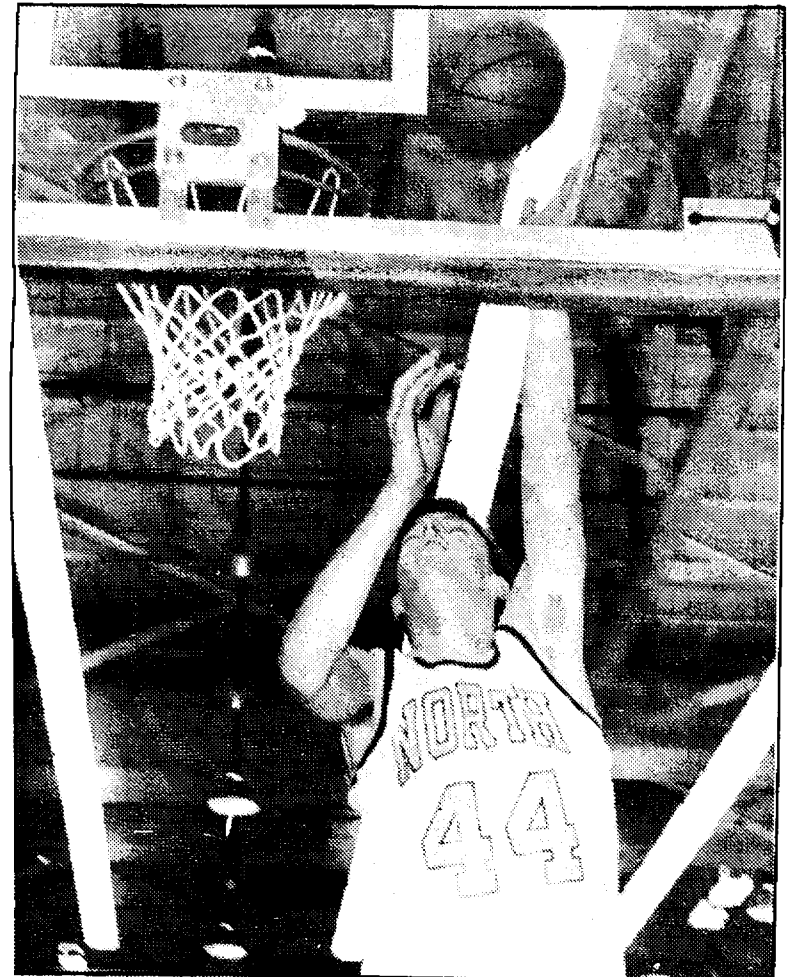

• ULS' Doug Wood became the state's most prolific high school hockey scorer with 349 career points. Wood broke the record number in an 8-3 win over Lumen Christi.

MARCH

• Behind the superb goaltending of Tripp Tracy, who is now goaltending for Compuware, the ULS hockey team took its first step toward the state title by winning the regional championship at Allen Park's Civic Arena.

Just one week later, the ULS hockey team beat Sault Ste. Marie, 2-1, and Saginaw Nouvel, 6-0, to win the Class B-C-D state title, its first since 1980.

Dave Vier hit a 45-foot desperation shot as North's basketball team beat South, 52-51, in the first round of the district playoffs. South finished 13-8. It was North's 12th win in its last 13 games. North also shared the championship in the MAC White Division.

The ULS basketball team entered district play riding a 16-game winning streak, but was beaten by Royal Oak Shrine, ending the Knights' season.

South and North both lost to Regina in district volleyball play. North took Regina, who eliminated South in a semifinal game, to three sets in the championship match, but lost, 15-4.

The health department shut North's pool because of recurring problems with the liner.

April

Brian Letscher knocked in six runs as South beat ULS in a baseball doubleheader, 11-1, 11-1. It was the opener for both teams.

Katie Kolp and Kathy Gay-man scored solo goals as the South girls' soccer team won its first game of the season, 2-0, over Seaholm.

The North and South hockey teams faced the possibility of asking parents to fund ice time for the 1991-92 season because the school system's PAC committee found inequities in funding hockey vs. other sports. The idea was later dropped.

South's Karen Ehresman ran a 15.7 in the 100 meter hurdles to set a new school track record.

Senior left-hander Lou D'Angelo struck out 20 batters in North's 12-7 win over Clintondale. D'Angelo gave up only four hits, but three of them were two-run homers.

ULS' soccer team ran its early season record to 3-0.

South got home runs from Brian Letscher and Matt Wysocki to beat North, 4-2, in the first game of a doubleheader. In the nightcap, North's Marc Adams and South's Mark Jungwirth were locked in a pitcher's duel, but Jungwirth came out with a 2-1 decision.

With five nationally ranked players, the South boys' tennis team, proved worthy of its ranking as it shelled North, 8-0.

South's girls' track team beat Mount Clemens and East Detroit to remain unbeaten. Jenny Williams led the surge with outstanding leaps in the high jump.

MAY

South tennis player Lee Lorenzini received a scholarship to play college tennis at Purdue.

North, traditionally the winner of the Alpena Baseball Tournament, won only one out of three games to fall to 5-10 on the season.

The North soccer team remained unbeaten and unscored upon in six games. The North girls' track team was also unbeaten.

Christi Mack scored twice and assisted on a third goal as the North girls' soccer team beat South, 3-1. Vicky Spicer scored South's goal. North moved to 9-0 on the season.

The Lady Norsemen track team, still unbeaten, won its second invitational of the season behind Laurin Schultz's wins in the mile and 400 run.

The ULS boys' lacrosse team moved to 8-2 with wins over Pioneer and U of D. John Gordon, who later was named an All-American, scored four times against U of D.

After five straight losses to South, the North baseball team ended the streak with a 5-3 win at the Fraser Tournament. Paul Straske fired a five-hitter for the win.

South upset North, 75-53, in girls' track competition. Karen Ehresman had three first-place finishes.

South's tennis team scored 47 of a possible 49 points to win the Eastern Michigan League championship for the last time.

Kevin Crociata, ULS' shortstop, was an all-state baseball player.

North's Scott Collins and South's Mark Sonnenberg ran a tight 1600 race at the regional meet. Collins took the lead in the final 1/8 mile, but Sonnenberg surged at the end to win it. Both runners advanced to the state meet where Collins got some revenge, beating Sonnenberg and finishing 10th overall.

North eliminated the South soccer team, 3-2, in the district tournament, but it took seven overtimes. South won the Expressway League with an overall mark of 11-5-1, and North, the MAC champions, advanced to play Regina in the finals. North's season ended, however, with a 4-3 overtime loss. It was North's only defeat of the season.

After finishing second in the regional tournament to Country Day, the ULS boys' tennis team battled back a week later to win its 20th state Class C-D title.

In one of the biggest upsets in North history, the girls' softball team picked up a run in the bottom of the seventh to beat Regina, the defending Class A champs, 2-1, in a pre-district game. North went on to win the district title, but lost, 1-0, in the first round of regional play against Fraser.

South's baseball and softball teams won pre-district games, but eventually lost in the district tournament.

JUNE

The South tennis team, after being ranked No. 1 all season, was upset by Ann Arbor Pioneer at the state tournament. South had 23 points to Pioneer's 28. Jeff Giraldo (No. 1 singles) and Nick Lorenzini (No. 3 singles) won individual state titles.

North baseball and football coach Frank Sumner was inducted into the Michigan Baseball Coaches Hall of Fame.

Car buyers back on wagon — station, that is

It was not long ago that it was clear to everyone that the station wagon was on the way out, displaced by the growing popularity of minivans. Minivans make more efficient use of space, the reasoning went, and acceptance of the body style has definitely been on the ascent.

And years of declining sales figures seemed to signal that the station wagon, long the favored machine of the American gentry and then of the post-World War II suburban middle class, is a period piece, a relic of an earlier age.

Station wagons accounted for 17 percent of domestic production at their peak in 1959. By 1973, their share had slipped to 13 percent, then to 9 percent in 1985 and 5.5 percent in 1988. But in 1989, station wagons' share of domestic production increased to 6 percent.

Now for 1991, a number of all-new station wagons have been introduced or are on the way and it appears that there is a new vigor to this automotive art form. In fact, there are more station wagon models on the market now than ever before.

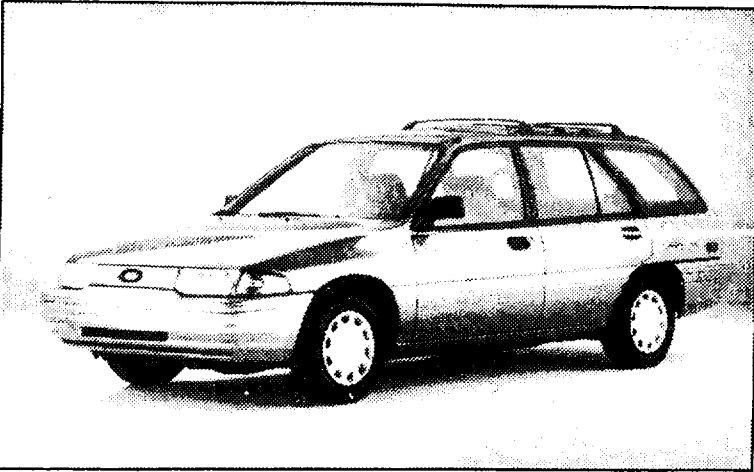

At the smaller end of the automotive scale, well-designed Ford Escort and Mercury Tracer wagons have been introduced. And at the upper end are new Buick Roadmaster, Chevrolet Caprice and Oldsmobile Custom Cruiser wagons. Ford Taurus and Mercury Sable wagons continue to be big sellers. Chevrolet Cavalier, Buick Century, Olds Cutlass, Pontiac 6000, Ford Crown Victoria and Mercury Grand Marquis are all available in station wagon form.

The station wagon continues to be a staple of import lineups. Honda Civic, Subaru Legacy and Loyale and Toyota Camry and Corolla are available as wagons in the smaller sizes and Audi 2000 Quattro, Mercedes-Benz 300, Peugeot 405 and 505, Volkswagen Passat and Volvo 240, 740 and new 940 are available for the upscale buyer.

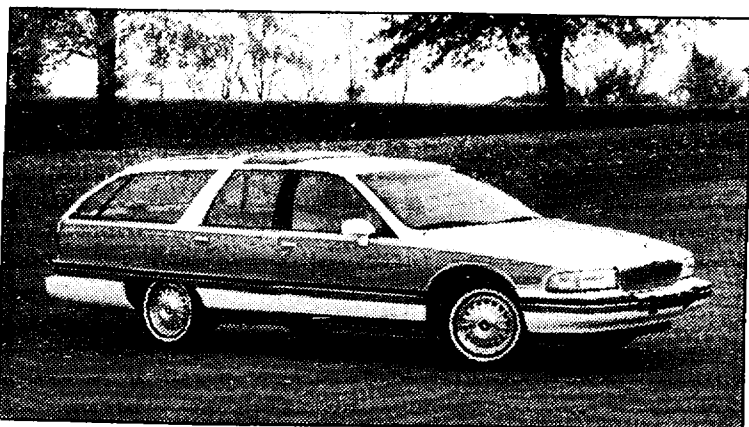

AUTOS

By Richard Wright

Crisply designed new Ford Escort wagon shows the automotive form is still healthy at the smaller end.

New Buick Roadmaster represents resurgence of the station wagon at the upper end of the market scale.

The convertible was pronounced dead in 1976, then came back to life in the '80s with surprising strength and there is now a very large selection of ragtops.

It appears the same may happen with station wagons. Like convertibles, wagons have their fans and have often been among the more interesting vehicles on the market.

The station wagon started as a woodie with the Ford Model A Depot wagon and in the '30s rivaled the limousine and the convertible as the favored status vehicle.

The death of the woodie was a symptom of deep sociological and technological change in the United States in those years between the woodie's birth in the late '20s and the post-World War II era.

The woodie station wagon was an elegant workhorse for the American gentry. Ford built a series of magnificent woodie wagons during the '30s, employing craftsmen to hand-fit the hardwood panels to the steel bodies.

Plymouth entered the market in '35 and Chevrolet in '39. Packard brought out an elegant woodie wagon in '37 (it cost $1,295 then, a good one is worth more than $26,000 now). Oldsmobile, Buick and Pontiac introduced woodie wagons in 1940.

In 1941, Chrysler brought out a "barrel-back" sedan with white ash wood framing and genuine mahogany veneer panels in the doors and trunk lid. Designed by David A. Wallace, then president of Chrysler Corp., it was called the Town & Country. It lives on now, but the current Town and Country wagon, minivan and convertible have no wood.

After the war, Nash offered a Suburban sedan which had wooden doors and trunk lid. Packard introduced its only post-war woodie wagon in 1950, but dropped it the following year. But these were steel-bodied cars with wooden panels attached.

The last true woodies, which had all wooden doors, inside and out, tailgates and canvas roofs, were phased out in 1948. When the first big round of all-new post-war designs by Ford Motor Co. and General Motors hit the market in '49, they included steel-bodied station wagons which had real wooden panels attached to all-steel bodies, and steel roofs. The insides of the doors and tailgates were also steel.

In a sense, they were still "woodies." But the die was cast. By '52, they were gone, replaced by much-easier-to-care-for fiberglass and simulated wood panels.

The woodies appeared in the greatest volume in the late '40s, on the eve of their death. The suburban explosion after the war created an enormous demand for station wagons, but the returning vets didn't want to have to varnish their cars each year.

The first all-steel wagon appeared in 1947, a Willys civilian version of the Jeep. But not many vets were interested in Jeeps, they wanted Buicks and Fords and Chryslers. So they bought woodies, but the makers were preparing steel wagons for this burgeoning market. They would try to emulate the looks of the woodie without the drawbacks. It worked.

And those legendary woodies did have drawbacks. They were not really as comfortable and luxurious as cars, nor were they as useful as trucks. They were a compromise, but they were works of art too and so they are among the most valuable cars of the '30s and '40s.

Woodies were expensive to build, high-priced to buy and too much trouble to maintain. They were beautiful and impressive, identified with the rich and so with high status. But they didn't fit the post-World War II lifestyle. Station wagons did, "woodies" didn't.

In recent years, it looked like the station wagon would be eased out by the minivan, just as the convertible was replaced to some extent by the pillarless hardtop coupe. But now it looks as if the station wagon is recovering, much changed from the woodies of the '30s and '40s, but still filling a market niche.

Cottage Hospice uses teamwork to help terminally ill patients and families face death realistically, with dignity and support

By Margie Reins Smith
Feature Editor

Dean Tait died on March 17, 1990, of cancer, after a more than four-year association with Cottage Hospice.

Four years with a hospice is unusual. Hospice care is designed for terminally ill patients who have a life expectancy of about six months.

"We believe in helping dying patients live the rest of their lives in a responsible and dignified manner," said Sondra Seely, R.N., director of Cottage Hospice.

Dean Tait's wife, Mary, took care of her husband at home during his final illness. She praised the hospice team for making his last years as satisfying and as comfortable as possible by giving him — and her — support and advice.

"I was not uneasy about keeping Dean at home," she said, "because I had the feeling that somebody was always there to refer to and to back me up. I think that his basic good health and this support helped keep him alive for so long.

"So many things didn't require actual help. But I was able to do them because of the comfort and kindness and the support of someone behind me.

"Everything about hospice was comfortable. The reason Dean lasted so long was because he was at home. He could read his books; see his friends; go to movies, which were a lifelong pastime. Without (hospice) he would have given up much sooner."

Tait stressed that prolonging life for a terminally ill patient is NOT what hospice care is all about.

"The minute you get involved with hospice, they remind you that death is the name of the game," she said. "They make a point of not using euphemisms such as passing away or crossing over. They're realistic."

Hospice philosophy is based on the belief that terminally ill patients have the right to live the rest of their lives as they wish. Hospice care allows patients to control pain and to live as comfortably as possible with dignity and responsibility. Patients may remain at home with their own families, among their own possessions.

They are encouraged to plan their own funerals, to get their financial affairs in order, to discuss their impending deaths and to say goodbye to loved ones.

"Most people know what's happening to their bodies," said Dr. Eugene Agnone, one of Cottage Hospice's medical advisers.

"They do better and their families do better if they address their deaths and talk about it."

The hospice team supports patients and families during the terminal stages of illness and death. It also continues its association with bereaved families for 13 months after the patient's death.

"I still have constant contact with the people at hospice. It's kind of a family feeling," Tait said.

Grace Lowe of Roseville, a volunteer with Cottage Hospice for the last five years, provided help and support for the Tait's during Dean's illness. At first, Lowe said, she spent a great deal of time with Mary.

"We started taking long walks around the neighborhood to get acquainted. She loved the exercise and the walking. Then we started walking at Metropolitan Beach. It's lovely, tranquil, peaceful, with the water and the boats. We usually walked on Thursday mornings, year-round, but later on we accommodated Dean's schedule."

"Grace Lowe was such a comfort," said Tait. "She walked with me for hours. I'd come back refreshed and in good shape."

Lowe got to know Dean several years later. "When he got worse I would stay with him occasionally, so Mary could get out of the house."

Cottage Hospice uses an interdisciplinary team approach for helping its patients. Team members include a physician, registered nurse, social worker, spiritual care adviser, dietitian, pharmacist, home health aides and trained volunteers.

The team coordinates an individualized plan of care for each patient and his or her family with attention to pain control, assistance for the caregivers at home and education and counseling for the family to help them cope with terminal illness and death. Hospice volunteers also help arrange for equipment and supplies for the patient and provide assistance in figuring out insurance reimbursement.

The team meets each week to discuss and evaluate the care of each patient.

At a recent meeting, team members discussed the care and concerns of the 15 patients currently in the program.

Team members covered, in part, the following:

- Changes in a patient's medication.
 - How to help a former patient's daughter handle her grief.
 - Thank yous from patients for gifts of flowers, phone calls, shopping trips and transportation.
 - Arrangements for a volunteer to stay with a patient while his wife goes bowling.
 - Plans to take a birthday cake to a patient.
 - A patient whose appetite was declining.
 - Family frictions in the household of another patient.
 - A family who needed help administering pain medication to the patient.
 - A heart-to-heart talk between a patient and nurse, with tears shed by both.
- "We cry a lot," said Mari Thomas-Beals, R.N., "and we laugh a lot too. I present myself with humor to my patients. We're involved in the most intimate parts of people's lives. They open up and share so much. They praise us for the littlest things. That's the reward."
- Lowe is currently working as a volunteer with several hospice patients. She helps them by doing whatever is necessary: delivering medication, driving patients to chemotherapy appointments, running errands, calling to check on patients and families, and serving as a respite caregiver when the primary caregiver needs a rest.
- "I get to love these people," she said. "I benefit too. I'm extending my life in a wonderful way. I meet people I never would have met. I share these experiences with my husband and my family."

Tait said that her husband's cancer, a malignant lymphoma that compressed his spine, became increasingly painful.

"With the help of hospice care, he was able to control the pain," she said. "He was one of Dr. Coello's first patients to receive an implanted morphine pump — which allowed a constant, automatic drip of morphine. He was able to go from enormous amounts of (oral) morphine to a small amount."

Agnone said the hospice program is cost effective.

"It works because it's a network of caring people, not a big bureaucracy," he said.

The costs of hospice care may be paid by Medicare, Medicaid or private insurance. Some insurers may require a co-pay or deductibles, which are met by patients and their families according to their ability to pay. Nobody is turned away for lack of funds.

Hospice programs stay above water with supplemental donations, memorials and fundraisers.

Cottage Hospice, one of a half dozen hospices in the Detroit area, currently has about 75 volunteers who receive 10 hours of training. A bereavement support group is also available for families of hospice patients and for anyone in the community.

How do hospice volunteers and caregivers avoid burnout? How do they keep from getting depressed?

"My patients have always given me more than I give them," said Seely.

Sister Elaine Hartnett, spiritual care adviser, agreed. "Nobody gets out of here alive anyway," she said. "Sometimes a little black humor keeps us going."

"Society is so against death," said Lois Quig, social worker for the hospice team. "Replace the parts and live forever. That doesn't make sense."

"Hospice helps people enjoy the moments they live," said Agnone. "Dying is only one second. Hospice helps them enjoy the moments of living by dealing with those last seconds."

Childhood cancer family support group

The Metro Detroit Candlelighters affiliated with St. John Hospital, a support group for families and health professionals touched by childhood cancer, meets the first Thursday of each month at 7 p.m. in St. John Hospital and Medical Center's ground floor boardroom.

The group shares goals such as linking parent to parent, exchanging information, breaking down social isolation, providing guidance in coping with childhood cancer's effect on all in a family, and identifying patient and family needs so medical and social systems respond adequately.

The group will meet next on Jan. 3.

St. John Hospital and Medical Center is located at 22101 Moross at Mack, one mile east of the I-94 freeway.

Bridge

HAVE A PLEASANT TRY AT PERFECTION
BRIDGE BY WOODY BOYD ♠♥♦♣

Today I'm going to tell you about one of my favorite people in this thought provoking, but fascinating, world of contract bridge. John Reindel is "my kind of guy" if you will forgive me resurrecting an earlier this century cliché. He's also a player I have sat with or against on a bundle of fun occasions in the past forty-some years. Seldom do I duplicate for that isn't his chosen avocation, but often at stake play where he is a tenacious performer. Much could be appropriately penned about him, but the limited news print allowed me curtails that extra pleasant possibility. I will, though, write slowly and deliberately so that you may appreciate the full value of his talent and personality. Of course, there will be no pause for applause or breaks to allow for admiration and awe.

Unlike duplicate where calculated chances as declarer are all part of a days play, stake bridge mandates declarer play safely to insure the contract. Conversely as a defender at stake play, defeat is supreme even if the consequence for failing in a diabolically daring play nets declarer an overtrick for that is meaningless. In duplicate the overtrick is often costly so you tend to defend with intent, but carefully.

John would certainly be one of my chosen few in a stake match if I had a say in my associate's selection. No one counts winners and losers, plans his play more sagaciously than this column's guest today. Unlike many winners whose ego can cause anger, John treats the weak with great courtesy and accommodation for they are a constant source of subsidy and sanction. One of his sage and famous sayings is worth repeating. "Admonishment after partner's incompetence comes to the front is almost like medicine after death."

He has been known to bid what he hasn't before he bids what he has, but such psyches require sound judgement and an experienced partner who knows when he's operating. Today's hand is a masterpiece in this style of masqueraded inversion. Some may say that East/West's plight could never happen to them, but I've witnessed many fine players who have been hoodwinked and

I could write a biography about John's bidding technique on this hand. Needless to say it achieved the purpose of throwing E/W into total disarray,

E 1H 4H -♦♦♦	John 1S 4NT*	W 2H -DBL	N 2S 6D
E/W vulnerable	♠ 8 6 5 4 ♥ - - - - ♦ A K 7 4 2 ♣ 9 7 6 5	N ♠ John	♠ Q 10 9 7 3 ♥ A K Q 8 6 3 2 ♦ - - - - ♣ J
♠ A K J 2 ♥ J 10 9 4 ♦ J 3 ♣ 5 4 2	W ♠ E	♠ - - - - ♥ 7 5 ♦ Q 10 9 8 6 5 ♣ A K Q 10 8	E led heart ace embarrassment and a minus 1190. They just never recovered their card holding composure after John's overall of one spade and were at his mercy thereafter. Unquestionably he was extremely lucky finding dummy with the perfect thirteen to compliment his hand, but good players manufacture their own luck. They just don't stumble on to it.

I have taken a liberty or two in recapturing one of William Thackeray's most famous quotations as it seems to best portray John's performance at the table.

"Let the player who would make his fortune at contract bridge remember this; attacking is the only way. Dare and opponents usually yield, or if they sometimes beat you dare again and they will succumb!"

The baby on our doorstep

By Jack L. Marnschreck
Grosse Pointe United Methodist Church

What would you do if you found a baby at your back door?

Most of us would call the authorities and have the child taken away to be properly cared for in a government-operated facility. Indeed, that is the proper action to take in such a circumstance. After all, we live in a rather litigious society and heaven knows what ill would befall one who did not exercise proper discretion.

However, let's pretend that, should a child be left at your home, you could actually decide whether or not to keep him.

Would you keep the baby? I suppose not many of us would decide to keep the baby to nurture and care for him. Although I dearly love children, making such a decision in our home would require much prayerful thought. You see, my wife and I have two sons, one 2 years old and the other just 3 1/2 months. We are still awakened for a 3 a.m. feeding by our youngest, and I am acutely aware of the great responsibility babies represent.

From personal experience, I know that babies and young children require almost constant attention. I suspect that even as children grow older and begin to care for themselves, they still require a certain amount of emotional (if not actual) blood, sweat and tears. There is a great deal of responsibility required when bringing a child into the world or accepting one into your home.

It was the same for the babe born in Bethlehem nearly 2,000 years ago. That baby was given to each and every one of us. Like the hypothetical baby mentioned above, accepting God's gift of the Christ child implies the acceptance of the tremendous responsibility that accompanies that precious gift. Accepting the Christ child implies accepting the way of the cross marked by unconditional service and obedience. Accepting the baby Jesus means enduring his passion and death.

Although there is great responsibility and even suffering involved in caring for and nurturing a child, there is great joy received in that nearly life long ambition. We must remember that after the storm and rain, there is sunshine. After the crucifixion, there is the resurrection.

I pray that all will have the opportunity this Christmas season to accept God's greatest gift of compassion — the babe of Bethlehem. Most of all, I pray that we accept God's gift with open eyes. May we be aware of the responsibilities that accompany that wonderful gift — to seek peace with justice, to walk in humble communion with our God, to meet human needs and to heal human hurts in a ministry which bears the name of Jesus Christ.

A grave responsibility, yet such joy, peace, and happiness one can know!

As we all realize, babies grow up. Accept the gift of the Christ child, but prepare for his adult ministry and message. Prepare for the day when he said to you, "Follow me."

The end of the Perfect Week

John K. Conn, Michael Grates and Alex Miller III (all 1982 grads of Grosse Pointe North High School) held a fundraiser for Children's Hospital of Michigan on Nov. 24 at the Roostertail. They called it The Perfect Week and gave away donated prizes for a week's worth of this and that.

Conn said about 350 people attended the event, including WDIV-TV's entertainment reporter, Neil C.M. Mandt.

Conn said he was pleased with the turnout. "The most fun was presenting a check, which will be used to buy an infant scale."

Debtors Anonymous group to meet

A new Debtors Anonymous group began meeting in October at the Living Our Vision Center on Saturdays at 10 a.m.

Like Alcoholics Anonymous and all 12-step recovery groups, Debtors Anonymous is a group of men and women who share their experiences, strengths and hopes with each other so that they may solve their common problem and help others recover from compulsive behavior.

In DA, the compulsiveness is focused on money. It may be over-spending and credit card abuse or it may be an addiction to poverty or an inability to spend money comfortably.

There are no dues or fees for membership in DA. The Living Our Vision Center is located at 17427 Mack Ave., upstairs. Use the rear entrance. Call 884-8200 for more information.

Cook up some luck for the new year

Black-eyed peas are a southern New Year's tradition. The saying goes that turnip greens will bring you money all year long while black-eyed peas will bring you a lucky day for each one you eat. Let luck bring you riches; turn black-eyed peas into a real southern treat... Texas Caviar, a southwestern-style salsa salad.

Several types of fresh peas are available at your greengrocer. They are the English pea, jade peas or snow peas and a new variety, as full as the English peas with edible pods, called the sugar snap. Both the snow peas and the sugar snaps are tender enough to eat raw.

There are also some Southern table peas, usually sold below the Mason-Dixon line, that look more like beans than peas. These include Crowder peas and black-eyed peas, both of which are called cow peas. The pods are inedible and the peas are not tender enough to eat raw.

Dried black-eyed peas may be soaked and cooked like any dried beans. To cut down on preparation time, use conveniently frozen black-eyed peas which require no soaking.

Serve black-eyed peas with tortilla chips for a New Year's Eve party appetizer, or make a double batch for the group watching football games the next day. But don't reserve your luck for New Year's Day only. Whether its Zephyr's Pickled Black Eyed Peas, H. John Millet's dish or Texas Caviar, it makes a perfect luncheon salad or appetizer all year long.

Texas Caviar

- 1/2 cup blanched slivered almonds
- 2-1/2 cups frozen black-eyed peas

Elegant Eating

By Irene H. Burchard

(or 1/2 cup dried black-eyed peas, cooked according to directions)

- 1 1/2 cups chopped tomatoes
- 1/2 cup chopped green bell peppers

- 1/2 cup chopped onions
- 1 T minced jalapeno peppers
- 1 t minced garlic
- Lone Star Vinaigrette
- Tortilla chips as needed

Spread almonds in a single layer in shallow pan. Place in cold oven; toast at 350 degrees, 9-11 minutes, stirring occasionally, until lightly toasted. Cool. Cook black-eyed peas according to package instructions. Combine almonds and black-eyed peas with remaining ingredients, except Lone Star Vinaigrette and tortilla chips, in a mixing bowl. Toss with vinaigrette; mix thoroughly. Serve immediately as a dip with tortilla chips. Makes 5 cups (12-15 appetizer servings)

Lone Star Vinaigrette

- 2 T red wine vinegar
- 2 T almond or vegetable oil
- 1 T Dijon-style mustard
- 2 t chopped cilantro
- 1 t cumin
- 1/8 t black pepper
- Salt to taste

Whisk together all ingredients until thoroughly blended.

H. John Millet

- 1 cup hulled millet seeds
- 4 strips bacon

- 1 medium onion chopped
- 1 package (10 ounces) frozen black-eyed peas

- 2 cups homemade chicken stock or canned broth
- 3 T red wine vinegar
- 1/2 cup chopped fresh or frozen chives
- 2 T chopped fresh parsley
- 1 t unsalted butter

Place the millet in a large heavy skillet and stir over medium-high heat until the seeds turn golden, about 5 minutes. The millet will pop slightly as it browns. Remove from the heat.

Saute the bacon in a medium-size saucepan until crisp. Drain on paper towels, crumble, and reserve.

Add the onion to the bacon drippings. Cook over medium-low heat 1 minute. Add the garlic; cook 2 minutes. Stir in the black-eyed peas, tossing with a wooden spoon until thawed. Add the chicken stock, and heat to boiling. Reduce the heat, cover, and cook over medium heat 10 minutes. Stir in the millet and return to boiling. Reduce the heat, cover and cook over medium-low heat until the millet is tender and all liquid has been absorbed, about 20 minutes.

Remove from the heat and let stand, covered 10 minutes.

Fluff the millet with a fork, then toss in the reserved bacon, the vinegar, chives, parsley, and butter, if desired. Season with salt and pepper to taste. Serves 6.

Bert Greene. "The Grains Cookbook." Workman Publishing, New York, New York, 1988.

Bert Green said that H. John Millet is a dish that springs from Gullah country of the Carolinas. Good southerners will note a resemblance to Hoppin' John, a dish eaten for good luck on New Year's Eve, hence the name.

Zephyr's Pickled Black-eyed Peas

- 4 cups cooked, drained black-eyed peas (fresh, frozen, or dried)
- 1/2 cup olive oil
- 5 T red wine vinegar
- 2 jalapeno peppers, diced
- 3 garlic cloves, minced
- 1/2 cup diced red onion
- 1/2 cup diced red bell peppers
- 1/2 cup diced green bell peppers

- A pinch of salt
- A pinch of freshly ground black pepper

In a large mixing bowl, combine black-eyed peas with the remaining ingredients. Cover with plastic wrap and chill overnight. Serve cold as a side dish for picnic foods, such as fried chicken and barbecued spareribs. Add more salt, pepper, and/or jalapeno peppers before serving, if desired. Makes 1-1/2 quarts.

"The Delft Horse," above, is part of Gari Melchers: A Retrospective Exhibition at the DIA through Feb. 17.

DIA exhibit honors great American artist

Detroit-born artist Gari Melchers (1860-1932) became internationally celebrated for his hundreds of paintings done in France, Holland, Germany and America. A major retrospective of his paintings, pastels and drawings will be shown at the Detroit Institute of Arts through Sunday, Feb. 17.

At the beginning of his career he realistically painted the peasants of Brittany and Holland. In the late 1880s and the 1890s his art was influenced by symbolism; in the early 20th century, he turned to Impressionism for inspiration. Underlying is diverse subjects — genre scenes, religious themes, portraits, landscapes, nudes, still-lives — there is always a direct honesty, a basis of sound academic principles and a commitment to solid images that convey spiritual strength.

Christened Julius Garibaldi Melchers (his father admired the Italian patriot), Gari's childhood in Detroit's German immigrant community (near the present Eastern Market) was highlighted by early art instruction from Julius Melchers, his sculptor-father. Academic training took him to Dusseldorf, Germany, then on to the Academic Julian and the Ecole des Beaux-Arts in Paris.

Melchers' continental success began at age 22 with the Paris Salon acceptance of his painting "The Letter." In 1889, he and John Singer Sargent were the only two painters to receive grand prize medals in American Painting at the Paris Universal Exposition.

That Melchers was respected in Europe and America is clear from his long exhibition history, the awards and medals he won, the commissions he received and the number of works purchased by museums and collectors in this country and abroad.

Melchers never lost touch with his Detroit roots despite his expatriate years: His work was featured in the first Detroit Art Association Exhibition (1876) and in the Detroit Art Loan Exhibition of 1883 (genesis of the DIA) to which his father was one of the lenders. He curated a retrospective of his work for the inauguration of the museum's current building in 1927.

Family descendants live in the Detroit area to this day. In 1883 Melchers' sister, Hedwig, married Julius Stroh, a son of the founder of the Stroh Brewery Company. Their son, Gari, was the father of Peter Stroh who today is Stroh Brewery chairman and developer of Detroit's River Place community.

For his monumental early paintings, like "The Sermon" and "In Holland," the townfolk of Egmonds, Holland, were his models, and established Melchers' reputation as a painter of Dutch scenes that celebrated the virtues of a life of hard work. His internationalism is evident from the fact that Melchers was identified as a German in Germany and as a Dutchman in Holland.

His major commissions included murals for the Chicago Exposition (1893) and for the Library of Congress (1895), as well as for the Detroit Public Library (1921).

Melchers painted a charming image on wood panel of an introspective "The Bride" (1903); that same year he married an American art student, Corinne Mackall, and established a permanent home and studio in Egmonds.

During bachelorhood, he focused on genre scenes of Dutch working-class life; following marriage, he turned to domestic scenes of bourgeois life, often with his wife as the model. These were an increasingly popular subject among American and European artists and their clients at the turn of the century. Rather than use the typical small-size canvas with its sense of intimacy, Melchers painted his scenes on large canvases and featured solid, monumental figures as in "The Open Door" and "Penelope."

From 1909-1914 Melchers was professor of art at the Grand Ducal Academy of Fine Arts in Weimer, Germany. World War I forced Melchers and his wife to return to the United States, where they purchased an 18th-century house in Falmouth, Va. There he painted impressionistic landscapes and genre scenes.

"Gari Melchers: A Retrospective," was organized by the Museum of Fine Arts, St. Petersburg, Fla.

Jarvi directs music for daydreaming

By Alex Suzcek
Special-Writer

The process of getting to know the DSO's new music director has focused much attention on his programming. While some criticism has been directed at his penchant for unfamiliar works, at least non-standard repertoire, there is a refreshing side to this. Moreover, it outweighs any sense of being short-changed on the old standbys.

Anyone who cared could have gotten the picture in advance anyhow just by scanning the long list of titles in Jarvi's discography. It is 90 percent non-standard, full of refreshing discoveries and re-discoveries.

It is likely, in fact, that part of Jarvi's success in winning worldwide recognition has been his choice of otherwise seldom heard music to record. His choices include much music well worth hearing.

This double CD album of Dvorak Symphonic Poems is a wonderful illustration.

They are programmatic musical interpretations of traditional Czech and Bohemian tales. As such, the music is rich in storied melodies and imagery.

The credit to this inspirational material and the composer's genius is that the results are highly stimulating to the imagination. Skip reading the program notes and let your fancies respond to Dvorak's rich musical palette. Images and action spring easily to mind.

On the other hand, it is equally rewarding to follow the story of each tone poem and recognize the turns of the plot as they occur in evocative melodies and orchestral effects.

At this time in history, there is still another reward. These movingly crafted pieces contain and are based on the rich culture of a country much in our thoughts (and headlines) these days. We are watching Czechoslovakia, like other iron curtain countries, struggle to resume a life of self-determination and free enterprise. This music demonstrates the cultural depth that its people can and must draw on in their current challenging revival.

At every turn, some delightful folk tune or characteristic Slovak rhythm seems to turn up. Dvorak drew heavily on the traditional music of his country. These glimpses into this particular aspect of the Czech psyche is a welcome and reassuring insight into a culture that we can once again explore freely in person through travel and trade.

Getting to know Dvorak's music, in fact, could be a provocative prelude to visiting the land and culture that gave rise to it. It raises visions of Prague or the castles, mountains and valleys of Bohemia.

This thought comes into sharpest and most poignant focus with the one overture included on these discs. "My Home" was composed as a prelude to performances of a Czech play by the same name. The music is based partly on the song "Kde Domov muj" (Where is my home?) which became the national anthem.

For this reason, the work has been considered as suitable only for domestic performance. Yet the passion, lyrical beauty and origins of this music reveal much about the Czech spirit. Both the play and the words of the song were written by a native actor and playwright who was revered in Dvorak's day as the country's current poet-president, Vaclav Havel, is today.

Having almost over-rhapsodized the inspirational experience of this recording, the quality of the performance is clearly implied. Jarvi's remarkable combination of spontaneity and control — already evident to observers at his concerts with the DSO — is obvious in this recorded performance. There is full expression of the moods and emotions evoked by the stories which run the gamut from terror to triumph, sadness to jubilation, and mystery to surprises, for the plots of these folk tales, like most such material, are replete with extravagant twists of fancy.

Moreover, the musical progress of each story idea never falters. Jarvi moves with a sure touch from one episode to the next, holding interest and attention. He becomes, in a sense, a storyteller with a baton. And the stories deserve to be retold, again and again.

'Home Alone' is holiday fun for kids from 1 to 92

By Marian Trainor
Special-Writer

"Home Alone" is perfectly in the spirit of the holiday season — an irresistible film as bright as the lights on a Christmas tree. It sparkles with humor, sentiment, Christmas card scenes and best of all — like a star on the top of the yuletide tree — it has Kevin McCallister, played with great glee by 10-year-old Macaulay Culkin.

Slightly built with mournful eyes and an impish smile, he is a totally endearing little boy. At the same time he is a dynamo of energy and is just mischievous and ingenious enough to put it to work, which he does to the consternation of his parents and the terror of two burglars who make the mistake of trying to rob his house — and to the delight and amazement of viewers.

Kevin is the fifth and youngest child in a rich family. When the film opens the family is bustling around, trying to get everything in order before they fly to Paris for Christmas. Besides Kevin's family, the entourage includes his aunt and uncle and their five children. Things get pretty hectic and in the hubbub the group takes off without Kevin, who had been relegated to the third floor for spilling milk on the passports.

On his way to bed he wishes he'd never see his family again. When he awakens the next morning, they're gone. Thinking his wish had something to do with it, he gloats, "I made my family disappear."

You don't have to be an 8-year-old (but it helps) to appreciate what a sense of freedom a boy of that age experiences having the run of a house.

His first thought is junk food. He makes himself an ice-cream concoction a foot high, turns on the video to his favorite program, invades his brother's room where he splashes himself with Brut, looks through the collection of Playboys, decides they're overrated and lets his brother's pet spider loose. He whips up a batch of soapsuds, spreads it on the stairs and whizzes down it on a toboggan.

Just as the novelty of being alone is wearing off, Kevin's house is targeted by two dimwitted burglars — Joe Pesci and Daniel Stern. Ever resourceful, he decides that since he is now the man of the house, he will defend it. He uses all the tools available to a little boy, but most importantly, he uses his imagination.

Every so often in the scenario, the camera takes us on board the plane to Paris where Mom (Catherine O'Hara) and Dad (John Heard) realize that they are one child short, and vainly try to make it back home.

"Home Alone" is vintage John Hughes, who wrote and produced the film. He has a special talent for making entertaining and amusing films featuring young people, such as we saw in "16 Candles" and "Ferris Bueller's Day Off." He also has an eye for choosing just the right star. In Macaulay Culkin he has hit the jackpot. Culkin has an enormous, refreshing and enduring talent, as he proves in "Home Alone." It is a one-man show and he is it.

Travel Trends

By Phyllis Hollenbeck

Don't be a wild boor

The old saying "the ugly American" seems to have passed by the wayside. Unfortunately, the creature it described has not. An acquaintance, who is lucky enough to live on the island of Maui, recently lamented, "Why is it that when Americans are on vacation they behave in a way they would never behave in their own home town?" A good question.

A 1988 American Express survey on the psychology of leisure travel discovered that wherever the American tourist is, he is probably there for rest and relaxation. He views his vacation time (which is briefer, on average, in the United States than most developed nations) as an "entitlement." He is trying to escape from the stress of working 50 weeks out of the year in a highly industrialized society. He needs and deserves a "good time." Unfortunately, for North Americans (as well as some Western Europeans and increasingly, the Japanese) this often translates into treating their vacationlands as playgrounds. They disregard appropriate dress and manners.

Responsible tourism in the 1990s is essential. As tourism becomes the world's No. 1 industry, more and more attention must be given to the effect it has on the culture, environment and economy of the newly popular destinations. Once the authenticity and culture of a destination have been destroyed, there is no way to recreate them.

The following "Traveler's Code of Ethics" was developed by the Christian Conference of Asia in 1975. It continues to be important and appropriate:

- Travel in a spirit of humility and with a genuine desire to meet local people
- Be aware of the feelings of the local people to prevent what might be offensive behavior, particularly when taking photographs
- Cultivate the habit of listening and observing, rather than merely hearing or seeing
- Realize that other people may have concepts of time and other thought patterns which are very different. They are not inferior, only different
- Instead of seeing only the "beach paradise," discover the richness of another culture and way of life.
- Get acquainted with local customs and respect them
- Rather than knowing all the answers, cultivate the habit of asking questions
- Remember that you are only one among many visitors — do not expect special privileges
- Be cautious about bargaining; the poorest merchant will often give up his or her profit rather than his or her dignity
- Make no promises to new, local friends that you cannot keep
- Spend time reflecting on your daily experiences in order to deepen your understanding. What enriches you may be robbing others

If you are interested in learning more about being a responsible tourist, there is information available in most public libraries. "Good Books for the Curious Traveler" suggests readings on Europe, Asia and the South Pacific. "The Traveler's Reading Guide" covers the world. There is also a guide to international behavior titled "Do's and Taboos Around the World," which offers practical tips and a lengthy index to additional etiquette resources.

Ensemble to give two post-holiday concerts

"Clarinet and Companions" is the Lyric Chamber Ensemble's fourth concert of its Grosse Pointe War Memorial series, set for Sunday, Jan. 6, at 3:30 p.m.

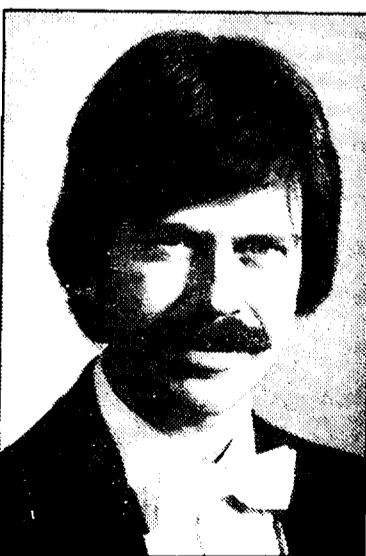

The "post holiday blues breaker" will feature the Mozart Trio for Clarinet, Viola and Piano in E flat (K. 498), Bartok's "Contrasts," the Mozart Duo for Violin and Viola (K. 423) and Poulenc's Clarinet Sonata.

Theodore Oien, principal clarinetist of the DSO and previously with the Denver Symphony, will be the featured clarinet soloist. Also featured are Emmanuelle Boisvert, the DSO's concertmaster, James Van Valkenburg on the viola and pianist Fedora Horowitz.

Boisvert has rapidly made her mark as a professional since graduating from the Curtis Institute in 1984. Before taking the chair as the DSO's concertmaster, she played two seasons with the Cleveland Orchestra. She earned recent acclaim for her performance of the Stravinsky Violin Concerto with the DSO.

Van Valkenburg, assistant principal violist of the DSO, is a Michigan native and a graduate of the Interlochen Arts Academy and Indiana University. He toured extensively in Europe, South America and the Far East as a member of the prize-winning International String Quartet.

Horowitz, pianist and LCE's founder and artistic director, had well-established credentials in Romania and Israel before immi-

Tickets for "Clarinet and Companions" are $15 ($13 for seniors) and can be purchased by calling LCE at 357-1111.

In the second concert on Sunday, Jan. 13 at 3:30 p.m. the LCE will present its first Orchestra Hall concert of the season with the first of three Mozart Festival programs.

An array of vocal talent includes Kathleen Segar (mezzo-soprano), John Paul White (bass), George Shirley (tenor), Earnestine Nimmons (soprano), Valerie Yova (soprano) and Claritha Buggs (mezzo-soprano). A chamber orchestra composed of members of the DSO will be under the baton of Felix Resnick.

Segar is familiar to Detroit audiences for her frequent performances with the Michigan Opera Theatre, most recently as Maddalena in "Rigoletto." She has appeared with many American opera companies including The New York City Opera National Company, as well as being a frequent guest artist with the DSO.

Shirley, a tenor of national and international renown, has sung with many of the world's greatest orchestras and conductors, including appearances with the Metropolitan Opera, Royal Opera and Chicago Lyric Opera. Shirley has recorded under most of the major labels and received a Grammy Award in 1968.

Nimmons, a Detroit native, has been praised by critics for her skills in "vocal expression, sensitive musicality and exceptional control." Nimmons is a member of the Brazeal Dendard Chorale and this season marks her seventh year with LCE.

Buggs is making her mark as an up and coming young singer. She has performed with MOT as Siebel in "Faust," as well as roles in Copland's "The Tender Land" and Mozart's "The Magic Flute."

Yova made her operatic debut in 1987 as Nedda in a touring production of "I Pagliacci." Since that time she has performed on

New clothes for Christmas

Vanity reigns supreme Dec. 26-30 as the Detroit Institute of Arts' own Prince Street Players perform the all-new original musical comedy "The Emperor's New Clothes" live on stage at the DIA. Elaborate, constantly changing sets and fancy period French costumes set the mood for the 13-member Prince Street Players company as they sing and dance their way through the Broadway-style production, bringing new bounce and non-stop excitement to this beloved "riches to rags" Hans Christian Andersen story. Eight performances of the 90-minute production will be given at 2 p.m. on Dec. 26 and 30, and at 11 a.m. Dec. 27, 28 and 29. All tickets are $6. No one younger than 5 will be admitted to the theater. Tickets and gift certificates may be charged to Mastercard or Visa by calling the DIA ticket office at 833-2322.

Attic Theatre rings in a jazzy new year

The Attic Theatre rings in the New Year with the swinging and swaying Chenille Sisters and James Dapogny's Chicago Jazz Band at 9 p.m. on Monday, Dec. 31.

The concert opens the Attic Theatre's gala New Year's Eve Bash which also includes dancing, dinner (catered by Lindos) including hors d'oeuvres and dessert, beer, wine and champagne, party favors and a cash bar.

Attic partygoers wishing to spend the night at the St. Regis Hotel may do so at a special room rate of $50.

The concert will resound with the sounds of classic jazz styles through the '40s and new music arranged by Dapogny for the Chenille Sisters' third album, due out in March on the Red House recording label.

The combination of Dapogny's hot jazz and the Chenilles' cool vocal harmonies and outrageous sense of humor will bring 1991 in with high style.

Grammy nominee James Dapogny formed his band in 1975, requiring that members be able to play classic arrangements and do solo improvisation, the trademark of jazz in any decade.

The band strives for the styles of the great jazz bands of Benny Goodman and Duke Ellington, featuring a traditional strong, vibrant horn section.

Tickets are limited and reservations are strongly recommended.

Tickets are $75 per person and can be bought in advance from the Attic box office at 875-8284, or Ticketmaster at 645-6666.

Majestic celebrates new year

The Majestic Theatre, located at 4140 Woodward, celebrates four years of nightclub nightlife Monday, Dec. 31, with its fourth annual New Year's Eve Dance Party.

DJs Pump the Bass Blake Baxter, Craig Bridgeforth, Rob Rude and Mr. Bill will create a non-stop dance atmosphere from 9 p.m. to 4 a.m. Champagne will be flowing, hors d'oeuvres will be served and noisemakers will be available. Tickets are $10 at Ticketmaster or the Majestic.

Formerly a vaudeville house, commercial soundstage and trophy manufacturing shop, the Majestic first opened its doors as a nightclub on New Year's Eve 1987.

For more information, call 833-9700.

Foundation donates to theater

The Kresge Foundation has awarded the Detroit Repertory Theatre a $75,000 challenge grant toward its $237,000 renovation and expansion project. The foundation challenged the repertory to raise the remaining $106,000 needed to complete the project by July 1, 1991.

The repertory plans call for installation of new theater seats, remodeling and enlargement of the rest rooms making them handicapped accessible, expansion and remodeling of the lobby, and expansion of the parking lot to double its current capacity.

The theater is one of the oldest, most stable, professional theaters in Michigan. Overflowing crowds in recent years have created the need for the improvements.

"This new project is but one more step in the revitalization of our neighborhood," Bruce Milan, artistic director at the repertory, said. "Before we are through, Woodrow Wilson will be a street known synonymously for cultural vitality, adventure and excitement. I invite all of southeastern Michigan to join with us as we carve out a new road to a vital cultural life in Detroit."

For information about the renovation project and contributions, call the theater at 868-1347 or write Detroit Repertory Theatre, 13103 Woodrow Wilson, Detroit, Mich., 48238.

Renovation is this Farms couple's middle name

By Linda Parker
Special Writer

Everybody's doing it. They're doing it in the kitchen, bathroom and even the basement.

But John and Julie Dyle of Grosse Pointe Farms warn, "This is not for the wimpy." The Dyles have been renovating old buildings for some 14 years and show no signs of stopping. "We eat, sleep and entertain in plaster dust," said Mrs. Dyle as she stood where the kitchen used to end.

In a few months the old Telephone Exchange building, built in 1906 at 35 Fisher Road, will be completely renovated after nearly three years of planning, removing, expanding, hammering, sanding, staining and much more.

The historic property was originally The Home Telephone Co., a private corporation owned by John and Anne Dyer. Grosse Pointers came to the office to order their phones and make long distance calls to Detroit.

Strolling through the two-story Dutch-style Colonial is walking back in time. In the old switchboard room, which is now the dining room, the Dyles kept the arts-and-craft style wood trim on the windows and added a brass chandelier. The old cashier's area has become a marble-floored Victorian-style powder room.

The original section that contained several small offices has been transformed into a spacious living room surrounded by paneled wavy-glassed windows. The moldings and hardware were preserved and blend beautifully with the new natural fireplace and hardwood floors.

The honey oak banister in the old waiting room winds its way upstairs, where one walks under skylights into three bedrooms. The spacious master bath features a marble floor and a vaulted ceiling.

The marble bathrooms were designed by John DeClaire, Mrs. Dyle's brother.

The Dyles had the garage lifted off its foundation to pour new concrete. They also ripped down several outside walls on the main house.

"We could have just put on a straight-line roof," Mrs. Dyle said as she pointed to the new ventilation system installed to prevent water from rotting the roof. "Instead, we took great pains to stay with the arts and crafts Dutch-style and sloped the roof."

All new electric wiring, plumbing, heating and air conditioning were installed.

John Dyle is the contractor and used his network of contacts to hire people who are specialists in their fields.

Architect Michael Kirk, who focuses on historic structures, helped lay the groundwork. "We wanted to combine the best of the old and the best of the new," Mrs. Dyle said. "We were under a very tight restriction of what was already here."

"We were lucky to find father and son team Neil and Andy Squires. They are practically the only men left who specialize in pebble-dashing," Mrs. Dyle whispered as we watched the grayish mixture being flung against the carriage house walls. Pebble-dashing uses a peat and gravel mixture that is thrown onto several layers of brown-coat stucco, leaving a rough-pebble texture.

Another father and son team from Ferndale crafted the hardwood floors throughout the house and laid them over the one-foot thick concrete floors.

The half-moon shaped window in the master bedroom is framed in marble salvaged from the old Parcels estate. The wood-paneled sliding glass doors in the new great room open to a red-bricked patio. The bricks came from Cranbrook.

Currently, a marker from the Grosse Pointe Historical Society hangs above the rebuilt front brick porch, and soon the site will also earn approval from the state of Michigan Historical Society.

Knocking down walls or moving the kitchen a couple of feet are jobs not to be taken lightly. The same basic steps the Dyles took apply to all budding home renovators. "There is an obvious sequence that you try to go through," Dyle said.

First, decide what you want to do and lay out a rough plan. Your plan may be as simple as improving the existing space through lighting or furniture.

More complex plans, such as modifying your space with windows and doors or re-arranging your space by altering, removing or adding walls, depend on your needs and budget.

Next, assess the limitations imposed by zoning, building codes and financing. Options for financing include a home equity loan or a home improvement loan.

Couples who have recently purchased their property and initially took a 30-year fixed-rate, 20-percent-down loan, might have difficulty qualifying for a home equity loan because their built-up equity will not be much, said Cheryl Gauss, senior vice-president of mortgage lending, Republic Bank.

The next option is to seek a home improvement loan. "We look at each individual and try to build a product that will best fit this or her needs," Gauss said.

Be prepared with a plan from an architect or licensed builder and cost estimates from contractors. A bank-appointed appraiser will assess your home's current market value and the "when done value." The new dollar figure must not exceed the loan amount.

You now have a plan, cost estimates, a contractor and financing. The weeks that follow might include some of the same steps that Dyle listed below. "We cleaned everything out until all the old was gone and saved the materials we wanted to recycle; then we began reframing the walls. We followed this with the rough heating, plumbing, wiring, insulation (remembering to get permits); dry wall; refinishing; painting; window installation and trim molding. At the same time, we coordinated the new landscaping, outside cement work and supervised the new roofs until they were firmly in place. The appliances, hardware and light fixtures are last on our list."

Suggested reading for those who want to take the renovation plunge can be found at the Grosse Pointe Library. These include: "Manage Your Own Home Renovation," by Carl Heldmann; "Attic Basement and Garage Conversion," by Paul Bianchin; and "Whole House Remodeling Guide," by S. Blackwell Duncan.

The Dyles' next project: renovating their current residence, the old Waterman estate at 330 Lincoln.

Water enhances beauty of architecture

By Stephanie Stubbs
AIA News Service

Buildings have been built near bodies of water ever since humankind began building buildings.

It is easy to understand the utilitarian reasons for placing a building near a source of water for drinking or nurturing crops, for a medium of traveling or transporting goods, or for a source of power to operate machinery.

Yet the beauty of water, in the form of a roaring stream or a tranquil pond, stimulates all of the senses, and offers compelling reasons to place our architecture within view of it.

Frank Lloyd Wright's 1935 residential masterpiece, Fallingwater, cantilevered over a mountain stream in Bear Run, Pa., represents the epitome of integrating architecture and water.

When there is no water on a building site, architects often find clever ways — from monumental rushing fountains and still pools to residential fish ponds and bird baths — to build in its decorative aspects.

This concept has been used since ancient times; in fact, the earliest known decorative use was a carved water pond on an Egyptian estate, dating to 3000 B.C. Rome, the "City of Fountains," possessed some 1,200 public fountains in its ancient heyday, five of which still survive.

Architectural use of water transcends cultural boundaries as well as time periods. Monumental structures from the Lincoln Memorial to the Taj Mahal incorporate water as foils to their grand designs.

A spectacular, contemporary design displays a small cascade of water silhouetted through ground-level pyramidal skylights in the court of the 1985 East Building of the National Gallery, Washington, D.C., designed by world-renowned architect I.M. Pei.

Under the skylights, water cascading down a rippled wall to a trough below fascinates and mesmerizes visitors both inside and outside the building. Another example is the Mirage Hotel, opened last year in Las Vegas, which surrounds a manmade mountain of palm trees flanked by huge, misty water sprays, lighted at night to resemble a volcano on fire.

Water on a site does not have to be in scale to entice people to an area. The quieting sound of rushing water can create a small and soothing backdrop to the cacophony of an urban setting.

In New York City, two extraordinarily popular "people places" are the tiny Paley Park, a pocket greenspace with a back wall consisting of a single curtain of water just two stories high, and Greenacre Park, backed by a 25-foot-tall fountain that cascades down three ever-widening levels.

In suburban areas, a small but beautiful fountain can give a friendly, new image to a town square or park, or enhance the grounds of a community center. Regardless of the scale of the project, be sure to consult a professional designer.

Fountains must be designed to keep their spray from drenching pedestrians, and the water may need to be filtered and possibly purified chemically.

In colder climates, water may need to be heated, unless ice sculptures are a deliberate part of the design.
