

Local residents respond to U.S. attack on Iraq

By Ronald J. Bernas
Staff Writer

In hushed conversations and heated discussions; through tears of anger and relief; with feelings of pride and fear; with curses and with prayers, the word on everyone's lips Thursday, Jan. 17, was "war."
Teachers discussed it with their students. Normally quiet workplaces buzzed with radios and mini-televisions brought from home. Newspaper boxes were emptied early as everyone sought more information about what happened at 7 p.m., our time, Jan. 16.

The rumors and half-heard facts were repeated as truths. Although everyone tried to continue normal activities, their minds were halfway around the world.

Not many people were willing to guess how long the conflict would last but they hoped it would be quick.

"We were all anxious to get it over with," said Grosse Pointe Shores' Jesse Rose while he sat at the lunch counter at Sanders in the Village. "I hated to see it happen, but I guess it was inevitable. I think Bush has done well. I don't think we should have waited until we were hit first."

He believes the allies will prevail: "If not, they'll just look like a bunch of fools."

He and his wife had been planning a trip to Puerto Vallarta, but had decided that with the war they would probably cancel it.

A few stools down, Howard A. Lee of Detroit was more cautious in his support.

"When you choose sides in the Arab world, you're opening a can of worms. I'm anxious, not relieved," he said. "And I'm mad as hell it got this far. I was all for sanctions. I don't support the policy (in the Middle East). We're probably going to have people killed with our own weapons (our government sold to Iraq)."

He guessed the war would last six months and would not end easily.

"They won't surrender. They'll die for the emperor, that sort of thing," he said. "I think the key to the whole thing will be the U.N. It'll be a compromise between the hawks and the doves."

Anita Siefer of Grosse Pointe Farms was also at the counter eating breakfast.

"I back Bush all the way," she said. "I'm more relieved, actually. I can't stand this waiting. Now he's gone in. I felt he should have, just for the reason (Hussein) has to be stopped now or else he'll have to be dealt with in five years or less."

An optimist, Siefer said that because of superior U.S. weaponry, the war would not last more than a week.

History and social studies teachers — like most teachers — watched and heard history in the making with their students on Thursday.

"I have mixed feelings, like many peo-

Arts and crafts

Local craft artists showed and sold their wares at Defer Elementary School last week at the school's annual craft day. Items included rose pins made of leather, spiders made of pipe cleaners and medallions made from old coins. At left, students check out the items, while below, Toshie Tamura shows a basket of origami flowers. The event was planned by Defer art teacher Augie Tedesco.

Grosse Pointe Cable bills Macomb for breaking line

By John Minnis

Assistant Editor

Grosse Pointe Cablevision has billed Macomb County $18,493.45 for expenses incurred when a salt truck knocked down a Comcast optic trunk line Dec. 30.

The overhead line that crosses 10 Mile Road at Ursuline in St. Clair Shores was pulled down by a Macomb County Road Commission dump truck at 11:45 p.m., leaving 15,200 Grosse Pointe Cable subscribers without service for 21 hours. Service was restored at about 9 p.m. New Year's Eve.

The four-span fiber optic trunk line also serves about 1,000 subscribers in the northern third of St. Clair Shores and all of Fraser.

According to a St. Clair Shores

police report by Sgt. Robert Hayden, police and fire personnel responded to a report of a wire down and found a Comcast line lying across the road. The report stated that the wire had drooped lower than normal due to ice and snow, thus causing it to snag the salt truck.

Hayden said that when he arrived at the scene, the cable was completely wrapped around the truck. He said that at first police feared it was an electrical wire. When it was discovered to be a cable television line, "we were all relieved," Hayden said.

He said the driver of the salt truck called the road commission dispatcher and was told not to leave the truck until emergency workers arrived. Hayden said that was good advice because the downed line could have been an electrical wire. The rubber truck tires would protect the driver as long as he stayed in the truck.

Hayden said the dump box of the truck was up.

The truck driver told police that he saw the cable, but because the truck had cleared it in the past, he assumed it would do so again.

However, a follow-up Comcast investigation says repair technicians reported that there was no ice or snow built up on any of the wires during the night of the mishap. In the 11 years that Comcast has had an overhead cable at that location, there has never been a height problem.

The overhead cable was replaced a few weeks ago with a fiber optic cable, but the additional weight of the new cable is insignificant, according to the report by Comcast regional engineer Doug MacLeod.

Furthermore, MacLeod estimates the height of the cable as installed was 19.2 feet with no ice buildup. Even if one-quarter inch of ice had built up on the cable, the clearance would have been 18.6 feet, according to MacLeod.

"... since there was no, or minimal, ice loading at the time of the accident, we were not in violation of the road clearance," MacLeod reported.

According to the 1987 national electrical building code, the minimum height for a cable over a roadway is 18 feet.

"We are very confident the cable was well within specifications," said John Ogren, Comcast vice president. He speculated that the truck driver had the dump box lifted too high and that it caught the cable wire.

The Macomb County Road Commission, however, maintains that it would have been impossible for a salt truck to pull down a cable that was at the proper height.

Carlo Santia, assistant county traffic engineer with the road commission, disputes Comcast's findings and believes the cable was hanging less than 12 feet above the roadway.

He said the minimum height of cables over the roadway is 13 feet 6 inches. Furthermore, he said, even with dump boxes fully raised, trucks would clear a cable at the minimum height.

Also, he said the salt trucks are not operated with the dump boxes fully raised. Under normal running conditions, the clearance for the salt trucks is 12 feet, Santia said.

It took five hours for Comcast technicians to find the cable break. Tests at the Grosse Pointe and Clinton Township ends of the cable system indicated the break was more than five miles from each location. At first the technicians thought their testing equipment was faulty.

Comcast employees drove along the cable route from Clinton Township to Grosse Pointe but could not find the break. They expected to see a downed wire. Finally, at about 6 a.m., a technician noticed that the cable that was supposed to run over 10 Mile Road was gone. The break was at the one point where it was in fact more than five miles from Grosse Pointe and Clinton Township.

What remained of the overhead cable was found coiled and lying on the ground behind some hedges, according to Mary Schultz, operations manager at Grosse Pointe Cable. According to MacLeod's report, St. Clair Shores fire department officers had completely removed the cable.

In 5-degree weather with a wind-chill factor well below zero, Comcast technicians restring a gela Kennedy's Dance Studio on Mack in Grosse Pointe Woods, you'd drive right by the unassuming building in the middle of the block.

But this year, more than 600 students — mostly young girls — will go through those doors, dressed in black tights, their hair pulled back, to learn to dance. Although Kennedy is not teaching dance this year, she is on hand to watch and to surround herself with the things she loves: music, dance and children.

Kennedy, a vibrant, energetic woman of 52, is doing something she never thought she'd do. But then, she says in her forthright manner, she never thought she'd be anything other than a housewife.

Man found guilty of manslaughter in death of Park woman last year

The defendant in the May 5, 1990, death of a 52-year-old Grosse Pointe Park woman was found guilty of manslaughter by a Wayne County jury Jan. 11.

Anthony Raymond Angerilli, 33, of Allen Park, faces up to 15 years in prison for manslaughter and two years for committing a felony with a firearm. The sentences would be served concurrently. His sentencing is scheduled for Jan. 24.

Louise Oliver died from a single gunshot wound in the chest at 4:13 a.m. at her apartment in the 900 block of Trombley. Angerilli reported the shooting death as a suicide.

Angerilli was arrested and arraigned on a charge of second degree murder. His bond was set at $250,000 by Park Municipal Judge Kirsten Frank. Angerilli spent the time awaiting his trial in Wayne County Jail.

Angerilli was reportedly Oliver's boyfriend. He worked at the Fishbone Rhythm Kitchen Cafe in Greektown where Oliver was the manager.

Richard Caretti, Park public safety director, congratulated the responding officers and detectives for a thorough investigation that led to the conviction.

All about romance

Romance expert Elliot Gold advises: "Use Valentine's Day to make your partner feel special. Too often people want to do big, expensive things. But if you listen closely to each other, you can find something inexpensive and still very special to do."

Elliot described what he enjoys doing for his wife, Lorraine Stefano, on Feb. 14. "I might get her three or four different Valentine's cards. I'll give her one in the morning, send one through the mail, put one in her car and give her the last card in the evening. For her part, Lorraine might put those little candy hearts with sayings on them in my suit, on my pillow, in my shoes — let's just say, she uses her imagination!" he said.

In time for Valentine's Day, Lorraine and Elliot will offer a workshop, "Romance and Relationships," on Monday, Feb. 4, from 7:30-9:30 p.m. at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial.

Class fee is $12.50.

To help plan your special Valentine's Day, they offer these tips for creating and keeping romance in your life:

1. Develop an attitude of romance. Make romance important in your life. That means thinking about romance and committing time to it. Eliminate the excuses such as "I don't have time" or "Let's wait until next year to go on vacation."

2. Be romantic, don't wait for it to happen. Too many people either wait for the other person to be romantic first, or they stop trying because the other person doesn't respond properly.

Instead, do romantic things just for fun and just for you. Send a card, bring home a flower, put a love note in a lunch bag. Do it just for your own pleasure.

3. Be your partner's romance. Most of us have in our own mind what we want romance to be for us; but that might not be our partner's idea of romance. If we listen carefully, we can find out what our partner would want for romance and then we can create that for him or her.

For more information, call 881-7511.

Schools work to deal with students' war fears

By Ronald J. Bernas
Staff Writer

"We're here to help you talk about your feelings about the war. It's all right to be afraid or to be worried. But we want you to talk about it. Don't worry about if you agree with someone else. We all need each other's support and help at this time. Talking about it will help."

That's what Jim Spillan said to Donna Hicks' sixth grade class at Parcels Middle School on Friday. It was the same message he gave the seventh graders the day before, and the eighth graders on Monday.

It was the same message counselors were telling students across the Pointes in formal and informal meetings.

Hicks' students — like many youngsters who have lived in relatively peaceful times — were having trouble grappling with the emotions and fears of war. The younger students are learning, among other things, that their parents and teachers don't have all the answers.

The students held an open exchange for 20 minutes of homework.

"I'm scared of the deaths that can happen, but I'm also proud of our soldiers," said one student.

"If we don't stop Saddam Hussein, then he's going to keep on taking over other countries and then he's going to come over here and attack us," another said.

"Saddam Hussein had to go through with the war because people would think he's a sissy if he didn't," a child said.

"He did too have a choice," another countered, "because now he's risking millions of lives and a life is worth a lot more than his reputation."

They talked about the possibility of reinstating the draft and strategies the United States should and could have used. They talked about political assassinations of Saddam and also about sending prisoners to fight the war.

The session concluded by urging students to continue open and frank discussion with friends, family, teachers and counselors.

"They want to show support for our people but they don't know how," said Parcels Assistant Principal Bill Taylor. "I had a student ask if we could fly the flag at half staff to show support."

In another counseling session, Taylor said a student told about his brother who has been put on alert, but no one in the family is willing to talk about it. The tension, the child said, was severe. Telling the students was an outlet for the child.

Spillan said he has been proud of the way the students are reacting.

"There hasn't been that Rambo mentality," he said. "That's good to see."

Teachers are keeping watchful eyes on their students, looking for anyone who might be affected too deeply.

According to Nancy Salamas, assistant principal at Pierce Middle School, students in the social studies classes are talking at length about the war. The school had a moment of silence last week in honor of the soldiers.

But Salamas says the school as a whole doesn't need counseling. They have been sending packages and letters to soldiers for months, and one of their social studies teachers was called into duty and is currently in Saudi Arabia. His wife updates the students on where he is and what he's doing.

Brownell Middle School is keeping an eye on its students and handling each case as it occurs.

Dr. John Burl Artis, principal at Grosse Pointe South, said the teachers have been provided information on how to get the students to talk about their feelings and to defuse any intolerance that might arise.

More than 45 students attended a recent before-school meeting to discuss their feelings, he said. The school's crisis team was to have met yesterday to come up with a plan on how to deal with potential casualties — either among former students or relatives of students.

"We are trying to keep things as normal as possible during the school day," he said. "We're not taking a position on the war, we're taking the position that the school's job is to educate the students and allow them to have their own opinion."

Those students opposed to the war are, as is the case generally across the country, opposed to the action, not the soldiers.

Grosse Pointe North is also involved in crisis counseling.

At University Liggett School's upper school nothing out of the ordinary is being done, but the television in the audio-visual room is tuned to CNN all day.

According to middle school head Matthew Hanly, a special assembly was held Jan. 16. Students said the pledge of allegiance and had a moment of silence and were reassured they were safe from an attack.

"The students are also being encouraged to discuss their fears and concerns with their advisers during the daily adviser periods," Hanly said.

No special counseling is offered at ULS's lower school.

"We have asked our faculty to be extra-sensitive and thoughtful at this time because that's important in a school such as ours with its multi-cultural makeup," said Michael Murphy, lower school head.

Superintendent Ed Shine said the district is urging the schools to continue the counseling, but will leave it up to each school to determine how to best help its students.

Local doctor, nurse on standby for casualties

A Grosse Pointe doctor has been named to head a critical care team from Detroit Receiving Hospital that's on call to respond to those injured in the gulf war.

Dr. Marilyn Haupt, director of the intensive care unit at Detroit Receiving and an associate professor of internal medicine at the Wayne State University Medical School, will direct the 12-member team, which will include doctors, nurses and a respiratory therapist.

Also on the team is Grosse Pointer Denise Linclau, R.N., nursing director at Detroit Receiving.

The Department of Defense, through the Society of Critical Care Medicine, has requested that trauma centers nationwide with critical care capabilities provide volunteer teams that can be ready for deployment in Europe in case of war casualties.

Detroit Receiving Hospital is a Level I trauma center, as recognized by the American College of Surgeons, and devotes more than a third of its 340 beds to critical care patients.

The specialty of critical care medicine is a recent development for physicians — known as "intensivists" — who limit their practice to critically ill patients. Also, nurses and other health-care professionals have specialized training to meet the complex needs of critical care.

The Detroit Receiving critical care team, as well as teams throughout the nation, will be given five days' notice by the

Park girl witnesses theft; arrests made

A 14-year-old Grosse Pointe Park girl witnessed the theft of nearly $800 from K mart at Nine Mile and Harper Jan. 13 and reported it to store security.

Four minutes later, Grosse Pointe Woods police arrested the suspects on Mack at Lancaster.

At 1:58 p.m., Vernet Deese was at the checkout counter at the store when she saw two men approach a cashier who was counting the money in her cash drawer. While one of the men distracted the cashier, the other man grabbed the cash.

Deese immediately told her mother, Linda, what she saw. Mrs. Deese then notified the store's security. Mrs. Deese said a store security officer followed the suspects outside and got a description of their car.

A Woods officer monitored the report of the theft and proceeded to the Mack-Vernier intersection to watch for the suspects, if they decided to come that way.

At 2:02 p.m., he spotted a car with three occupants that matched the description of the suspects. He maneuvered behind the suspects' vehicle and found the license plate number matched the one reported by the K mart security officer.

When the Woods officer activated the overhead lights and siren, the car did not stop, but heavy traffic interrupted its progress. About five blocks west of Vernior on Mack, the suspects' car was hemmed in by Woods police cars and forced to pull over.

The Woods officers exited their cars with weapons drawn, according to police reports. As officers approached, the suspects' car lunged forward, but when officers leveled their guns at the driver, he stopped the vehicle.

The suspects were taken to the Woods police department and then turned over to St. Clair Shores police.

Mrs. Deese said she is proud of her daughter's courage in reporting the incident. Vernet Deese has been subpoenaed as a witness. Mrs. Deese said her daughter is a quiet student at Grosse Pointe South High School, where she carries a 3.5 grade point average.

Grosse Pointe Cable moves into new building in Park

By John Minnis
Assistant Editor

Grosse Pointe Cable is the most recent occupant in a string of diverse businesses that have operated out of the large, old building on Charlevoix at Wayburn in the Park.

Over the years, the building at 15001 Charlevoix has housed a movie theater, skating rink, heating and cooling company and sailmaker. In fact, the building is known by many today as the old Hood Sail building.

Grosse Pointe Cable bought the building last fall for $300,000. By mid-October, contractors were working feverishly to get the building ready for its newest tenant.

"We had to redo everything," said Mary Schultz, Grosse Pointe Cable operations manager. "We completely gutted it and started over."

While suitable as a movie theater or skating rink, the building was not designed for offices. In fact, the concrete floor still slants in places — probably intentionally so that water could drain from the old skating rink.

New partitions, a customer window, kitchen, offices, carpeting and textured wall coverings of light gray and maroon accents give the new cable offices a modern look and feel.

John M. Rickel, president of Grosse Pointe Cable, said landscaping and parking additions remain to be completed.

Since 1980, Grosse Pointe Cable had been located in an office at Mack and Moross where Pointe Plaza is now being built. The company was forced to move to a new location because of the Pointe Plaza project.

Rickel said the firm could have rented an office in the new office-retail center, but the rent would have been six times more than the $4 per square foot the company was paying. As it turned out, buying is less expensive than the higher rent would have been, Rickel said.

Grosse Pointe Cable's business and service operations are being conducted out of the Park office, where 16 people are employed.

The new building provides 13,000 square feet. The old building had 12,000 square feet. About half of the Park building is used for cable supplies and for inside storage of service vehicles.

The previous location also had a studio. Currently, a small studio has been set up in a room at the War Memorial.

Also, the new cable office does not house the equipment necessary to receive and transmit programming to Grosse Pointe subscribers. The programming is sent to the Pointes via an optic trunk link from a Comcast facility in Clinton Township.

On New Year's Eve, a snow plow damaged the Comcast trunk line and disrupted service to the Pointes, and Grosse Pointe Cable is billing Macomb County $18,493.45 for the damage. (See related story, page 1.)

Grosse Pointe Cable is unusual in that it is one of only a few cable companies nationwide that are owned by the communities they serve. Grosse Pointe Cable is owned by the War Memorial, Comcast and four of the five Pointes and Harper Woods. The Shores gets its cable service independently from Comcast.

Comcast, as the technical operator of the system, owns one of four shares of Grosse Pointe Cable. The War Memorial, then under the direction of Rickel, who put together the community ownership plan for Grosse Pointe Cable in 1980, owns 1-1/2 shares and the remaining 1-1/2 shares are divided among the City, Farms, Park, Woods and Harper Woods based on the number of subscribers in each community.

After a decade of operation, Grosse Pointe Cable paid its first dividends to shareholders in 1990.

Nearly half of Grosse Pointe Cable's 13,000 square feet at its new location is used for inside storage of service vehicles and supplies.

Woods sergeants, corporals reach contract with city

The Grosse Pointe Woods Sergeants and Corporals Association has a new contract with the city.

Ratified by union members on Jan. 14, the agreement was approved by the Grosse Pointe Woods City Council at its meeting Monday night.

The officers had been working without a contract since July 1, 1990.

Under the new, three-year agreement, which is retroactive to July 1, 1990, association members will receive a 4 percent salary increase for each year of the contract. Also, a 2.5 percent cost of living factor will be added to the supplemental retirement annuity benefit.

To reduce hospitalization costs, the city switched from a traditional Blue Cross-Blue Shield Plan to a Blue Cross-Blue Shield Preferred Provider Organization Plan (PPO).

Sgt. James Fowler, president of the Sergeants and Corporals Association, could not be reached for comment.

The Grosse Pointe Woods City Council approved the Public Safety Department's request Monday night to buy four 1991 Chevrolet Caprice Sedans this year.

The specially equipped "Police Package" vehicles will cost a total of $58,530.32. They will replace police cars that are two to four years old and have more than 70,000 miles on them. The old cars will be sold by the department.

"After 70,000 miles, you start talking about replacement costs, and if you sell them before they're too old, they'll still look good on the outside and you can get a better price for them," Public Safety Director Jack L. Patterson told the city council. "Our cars still look good because we take care of them."

He said the department normally buys three or four new vehicles a year to replace worn cars. Three of the 1991 sedans will replace worn patrol units and the fourth will be used by detectives, Patterson said.

The city is still negotiating new contracts with the 12-member Paramedics and Dispatchers bargaining unit and the 29-member Patrolman's Association, which are part of the Fraternal Order of Police Labor Council. Their contracts also expired on June 30, 1990.

Fireworks show is a go

Robbie Curry, chairwoman of Mack Avenue USA, arrived breathless at the Grosse Pointe Woods City Council meeting on Monday, Jan. 21. She was late for the meeting, where she was scheduled to address the council and ask it to once again support the Mack Avenue USA fireworks and musical event.

When she arrived, Mayor Robert E. Novitke informed her that the council has already moved past her agenda item. For an instant, she looked crestfallen, until Novitke told her that the council had unanimously voted to support the event, provided that Mack Avenue USA file the appropriate insurance papers with the city. "I don't know what to say. I just hope you enjoy the show again this year," said a surprised Curry.

Under the agreement, the city will contribute $500 cash toward the event and will provide police, fire and safety protection. In exchange, Mack Avenue USA will take out a $1 million insurance policy, covering itself and the city.

The eighth annual show will be held Sunday, June 30, with a rain date of Tuesday, July 2, at Parcels Middle School, 20600 Mack Ave., Grosse Pointe Woods.

Couple robbed

A couple who had just parked their car in the 1300 block of Wayburn at 10:44 p.m. Jan. 7 were robbed by two men, one of whom was believed to have a gun.

The man and woman, both 20 years old, were approached by two men. One man held his hand in his pocket and demanded money. After taking money from both the victims and a bag of toys from the woman, the suspects fled.

State cutback takes big toll of the needy

Gov. John Engler laid a heavy hit on Detroit last week when his administration made public its proposed cuts in the 1991 state budget. We're inclined to agree with the critics that the hit was excessively heavy.

As the state's largest city and the recipient of a major portion of overall state aid, Detroit would take huge reductions ranging from proposed cutbacks in financial support to Detroit's cultural institutions to the abolition of General Assistance welfare grants and Youth Corps summer programs.

In announcing the cuts, Budget Director Patti Woodworth said that while the cuts were painful, Michigan taxpayers constitute the "large but hidden group of beneficiaries." That group would benefit directly from the scheduled property tax cuts but it appears that senior citizens and middle and upper income people would get the biggest tax savings.

Yet is it not true that, under the proposed cuts in state aid and services, some of the neediest people in Michigan are going to suffer the most?

Rep. David Hollister, Lansing Democrat, says yes. He told reporters, "This proposal is a political statement that says property tax cuts and downsizing government are more important than protecting our most vulnerable citizens."

In addition, Detroit's long fight to extract state aid in the form of an "equity package" for its cultural institutions, including the Detroit Symphony Orchestra, the Detroit Institute of Arts, the Detroit Public Library and other institutions, could be set back by sharp cuts that could devastate them.

If that kind of aid is slashed as sharply as proposed, there were predictions last week that some of the institutions would have to close their doors. That would be a serious loss not only to Detroit but to the entire state. Since the days of GOP Gov. William Milliken, Detroit's cultural institutions have been recognized as state resources as well as jewels in Detroit's crown.

True, Michigan is in a recession along with the rest of the nation and, traditionally, it has sunk deeper than other states although it has sometimes emerged more quickly because of the volatility of the auto industry.

That industry's increasing competition from abroad, however, means that this time the state is less likely to snap back as quickly as it did when earlier recessions had passed.

The theory behind the Engler administration cuts, as explained by Budget Director Woodworth, is that "we need to get the economy going and to do that we need to end subsidies."

Yet part of the state government's obligation is to meet the needs of those who are not able to take care of themselves. So what happens to the estimated 100,000 people lopped off the General Assistance rolls and others who will lose Medicaid and other assistance under the economy moves?

Will jobs open up quickly enough to absorb them or members of their families? Will new state programs provide them with the basic necessities? Or will the responsibility even to feed them fall back on the hard-pressed cities that in most cases are already short of revenues?

While we support some of the governor's efforts to improve the state's business climate and restart Michigan's sputtering economy, we think that meeting basic human needs still deserves high priority on the political agenda in Michigan and elsewhere in these hard times.

Nor, in fact, is the level of taxes the only subject of interest to businesses hoping to locate or expand in Michigan, as implied by some supporting the governor's attack on Michigan's "welfare state."

Businessmen are also concerned about such matters as the conditions of the state's infrastructure — the roads, bridges and transportation facilities — as well as the availability of skilled labor, the quality of education, the cultural advantages and the level of medical care offered in the state.

The new governor's task in cutting state spending is a difficult one but the neediest people should not be especially targeted just because they are the easiest to hit.

War trivializes other activity

For many Americans during the past week, war has trivialized all other human activities.

All of us have had a ringside view of the war through the miracle of TV. In the security of our own homes, we see the dazzling spectacles of the firing of the missiles and shells and the takeoff of the war planes to attack targets in Iraq.

We even see views of some of the havoc our planes are wreaking on Iraq as well as some evidence of Iraq's successes in its missile strikes against Israel and Saudi Arabia.

Even more than the Vietnam War, this is a TV war. Yet we get a sanitized view with little impression of the death and desolation dealt to civilians on the ground. But as the war continues, the realities intrude and dispel the early euphoria.

Now we're seeing American prisoners being paraded through Baghdad's streets and forced to make statements critical of the war. And there are increasing reports that more planes piloted by UN fliers from Britain, Canada, France, Italy, Saudi Arabia and Kuwait are also being downed.

As we try to continue our normal schedules in these perilous times, however, the American people have united behind the president, with a national poll showing more than 80 percent of the respondents now supporting the UN forces' attack on Iraq.

Many Americans, even including those who now support the president, feel sorrow that the welcome end of the cold war in Europe now has been succeeded by a hot war in the Middle East that is taking an increasing toll of casualties.

And some people, believing the United States and its UN partners have overreacted to the threat by Saddam Hussein, are demonstrating to demand peace and a U.S. pullout. Others are protesting at the possible early use of ground forces to assault the enemy entrenched in Kuwait.

Yet supporters of the war must be reminded that the dissenters have the same right to protection under the First Amendment as do all other Americans. That protection does not cover treasonable acts in wartime but it doesn't excuse such acts in peacetime either.

The administration has pledged to report to the public as fully as possible on what is happening but the wide range between Iraq's claims of downed planes and those admitted by the UN side offers evidence that once again the first casualty in war is truth.

As of Monday, Iraq had ordered all foreign newsmen out of the country, save one: Peter Arnett of CNN. But even his dispatches now are being censored by Iraqi officials. U.S. correspondents in combat areas are also coming under censorship restrictions and so are those serving in Israel.

National security surely requires some limitation on news coverage to prevent the enemy from learning of U.S. war plans but, lacking a relatively free press operating in the combat zones, the U.S. public tends to get only the official view of the action.

Let's hope our own government seeks as strongly to avoid making truth a war casualty as it does to prevent more of our service men and women from becoming war casualties in the Persian Gulf.

Harvard hype

We received the other day a mailing piece that might be called an example of modern Harvard hype.

Promoting the Harvard Medical School Health Letter, the ad quoted as an authority no less than Ann Landers, the popular newspaper columnist who offers advice on everything from medicine to problems of the lovelorn.

"The Harvard Medical School Health Letter provides excellent information on a variety of health issues presented in layman's language," Miss Landers wrote. "I find it extremely informative and useful in my work."

Careful, Ann, or you will be accused of practicing medicine without a license. As for the Harvard Medical School, isn't this world-famous medical institution pandering to the public with this kind of a sales pitch?

Sales dip aids home buyers

Following a national trend, the number of home sales dipped slightly in the Pointes in 1990 even though average prices in the Pointes continued to show small increases.

In fact, four of the five Pointe communities reported sales averaging more than $200,000 for the year, with only the Woods falling below that figure. In the Woods, the average for 215 sales turned out to be $140,058, as contrasted with $135,242 for 224 sales in 1989.

A comparison of the average sale price of all Pointe homes shows, however, that prices leveled off in 1990. The increase in the average price of a Grosse Pointe home, based on 629 sales in 1990, was less than $2,000 above the average price for 1989, based on 698 sales.

As indicated in a perceptive story by John Minnis of the Grosse Pointe News staff in last week's issue, lower interest rates, an adequate supply of homes for sale, more attractive financing options and a leveling off in prices make this a good time to buy a home in the Pointes.

Just what the onset of war will do to these prospects is uncertain at the moment. Economists seem to agree that Michigan might benefit if the war is of short duration but might take another economic hit if it is an extended one.

Thomas R. Youngblood, president of the Grosse Pointe Board of Realtors, told Minnis the Pointes represent a stable market. It's also a stable community with an excellent public school system that adds to its attractiveness as a place in which to live and raise a family.

And those assets won't change, war or no war.

Successful

To the Editor:

It is with heartfelt thanks that we write this letter to you, the editor, and to the community of Grosse Pointe, that is to say all the Pointes, parts of Harper Woods, East Detroit, the east side of Detroit, St. Clair Shores, and Roseville.

To say the least, the "Coats for the Cold" campaign was a success. We couldn't believe the response we received from the more than 140 families who opened their hearts and closets to give needy families of Corktown a warming Christmas gift. At last count, 737 coats were donated to the Holy Trinity community.

It was quite a sight to see Grosse Pointe City resident and Lakeshore Optimist member Dave (and wife Betsy) Hohlfeldt's Boston Whaler fishing boat filled to the brim with plastic bags of donated coats, followed by two vans, two station wagons, and one pick-up truck heading west on Jefferson on the afternoon of Dec. 22 overflowing with the generosity of the community's citizens!

If you saw it, you know what we mean! To read about it is great but to actually witness this gesture of love, kindness and generosity by so many people is really what Christmas is all about. Thanks to the Grosse Pointe News for letting the community know and thanks to all who so warmly responded to the appeal.

Treasure

To the Editor:

I write in favor of the proposed new public library for the community of Grosse Pointe. For years the library has provided services of all kinds — books, tapes, records, magazines — and now, computers and new technology. Yet for years there has been a severe space shortage that many may be unaware of or simply refuse to acknowledge.

We all like to say that we place high value on our Grosse Pointe libraries, that they are treasures of the community. They have striven to be an involved part of the entire community. And now, all voting citizens of this community, young and old, can help build a new library. How wonderful that will be, especially for children and youth, those I work closest with, for they will discover a new treasure that all of us can be proud of for many, many years.

I am proud of the excellence in this community that so many have helped to build. We will soon have an opportunity for everyone, long-time resident and newcomer, to make a positive commitment reaffirming Grosse Pointe's quality public library system. I am optimistic about each citizen sustaining that excellence by putting aside past grievances and personal animosities and voting "yes" for excellence in library services on Feb. 4.

Blitz

To the Editor:

Here we go again, the blitz is on. Hang onto your wallets, folks, your pockets are about to be picked to the tune of $7.6 million for a new library.

And that's just for openers. Very little has been said about the additional millage required for increased operating expenses of this new structure — which will go on, and on, and on.

Twice before, the voters of Grosse Pointe have shown excellent judgment in rejecting such a proposal. We are in a recession of indefinite depth and duration, and to propose spending that amount of money under such circumstances to replace an existing facility, the school board demonstrates very little regard for fiscal restraint.

On Feb. 4 this new library proposal once again, more than ever, deserves a no vote.

Long-lost friends

Ever know one of those people who just likes everybody and who everybody likes right back? I knew a girl like that once in high school.

She was absolutely beautiful, inside and out, but she never knew it or flaunted it. She had strawberry blonde hair and lots of it. She was petite, yet athletic — that came from her dance training. She was, of course, a cheerleader, but not one of the snotty ones who became a cheerleader because they wanted to be something. She became a cheerleader because she wanted to.

She was a good cheerleader, too. It was what she was made to do — make people stand up and take notice, go that extra mile and feel good about themselves.

She was an outstanding singer and dancer and actress, always snagging lead roles and solos in school plays and concerts. Being the kind of person she was, she never let it go to her head, like most high school stars are wont to do.

In junior high and high school, when if you weren't a jock or a brain or a burn-out or a nerd or some other label, you were nothing, she made friends of everyone without even trying. She moved freely among the cliques, never allowing herself to be labeled.

But she didn't see the cliques. Well, to be honest, she saw the cliques, but didn't label anyone either.

It would have been easy to hate her, but nobody I know did. She had the knack of making everybody feel important and needed. That came as a comfort to those of us who never fell into a clique, but wanted desperately to fit in.

I Say

In junior high and high school, I had sporadic crushes on her, like most of the boys probably did. I mistook the friendship of a beautiful girl for romantic interest. But because she was always so wonderful I never got angry or hurt when she was seen out in public with a new boyfriend.

Her boyfriends never lasted long: Either she was picky — and she had every right to be — or she just didn't want to be tied down too early. Either way, I always knew that one day she would find the perfect man and live happily ever after. She deserved it.

Outwardly, she was the perfect well-adjusted girl with a future before her that most of us only dreamed about.

Privately, though, she was afraid.

I spent hours reassuring her about her beauty. And in the rare moments she actually believed that she was pretty, she thought she was dumb.

She was probably voted most likely to succeed or best liked or most popular in our senior class. If she wasn't she ought to have been.

Even as she continued her education at Central Michigan University, where I went, she had a way of drawing people to her. At parties she was surrounded by admirers and friends. She fixed people up, because she wanted them to be happy. I can't count the number of times I met someone at CMU who, upon finding out where I was from, asked me if I knew her.

Whenever we bumped into each other on campus, even if we were both late for class, we stopped and talked. I always felt good after seeing her, and it was worth missing a few minutes of a lecture.

We lost touch after I graduated college, but my thoughts turned to her every now and then, knowing she was successful somewhere. Or if she was not successful, at least she was happy, which is in and of itself a rare kind of success.

My thoughts have been on her a lot since last week, though, when a friend — who also had sporadic crushes on her — informed me she had died of cancer. She was only 26.

But the thing that made her death less tragic, if it can be said, is how she died.

After finding out her skin cancer had spread to her brain, she and her husband — a lucky and obviously very special man — quit their jobs and went to Europe and China and every place everyone has ever wanted to see before they died.

Just like her to turn a defeat into a victory.

Although I haven't seen her in years, I suddenly miss her deeply.

Support group

Lynne DeGrande, A.C.S.W., and Claire Allen, M.A., have volunteered to lead a support group for people in the Grosse Pointes and St. Clair Shores who have family members or friends serving in the Persian Gulf — or who are touched by the war in some way.

DeGrande is a social worker and Allen is a clinical therapist. Both women have experience with crisis intervention.

"We're looking for spouses, parents, significant others, children, Iraqis, anyone who needs support," Allen said. "Some people have family members living in Baghdad."

She said the group will discuss the feelings — fear, anger, frustration and more — and later on they may present speakers or special guests.

"We see a need for a support group," she said. "There is nothing so far. And we know 25 or more families in the Grosse Pointe area with relatives in the Persian Gulf."

For information about the group, call the Grosse Pointe War Memorial at 881-7511 and ask for Terry Hearn.

List-mania

Here's some trivia from American Business Information Inc., a company that provides business lists compiled from the Yellow Pages from around the nation.

Some of this is, uh, mildly interesting.

There are 13,854 health clubs in the nation.

But only 959 historical places.

There are 210,400 beauty salons in the nation; 64,642 barbers; 21,082 tanning salons; 15,213 weight control services; 1,836 color consultants; 4,010 hair removing establishments; 3,274 hair replacement establishments; 464 businesses that sell artificial fingernails.

We should look pretty good. There are 1,123 dating services nationwide; 10,321 wed-

A trip through a surreal looking glass in sunny Florida

Welcome to the time machine — it's time for our annual trip forward into summer. We've been coming to Florida for four years now, and it still feels like a voyage in time rather than distance.

As this is written, the fateful deadline still looms. Newspapers and television can speak of nothing else. Explanation, exhortations, new and old theories, all try to focus our attention on the frightful prospect.

But to judge by everyday conversations, the effort is wasted here.

In true Wonderland fashion, talk of problems focuses on the traffic nightmare caused by bridge repairs, or maybe on muggings in Miami. No one we've met has brought up the subject of war.

I can't get a fix on the Gulf down here. Once away from the media news sources, it's through the looking glass again. Back to the world of palm trees and retirees, fun, relaxation and insouciance.

Maybe it isn't fair to expect otherwise. After all, Florida is full of people from somewhere else who don't know each other, and full of people who feel they've done their bit for society and now deserve to sit back in their old age. And when people are on vacation, spending time and money they've saved for a year, they put worldly affairs aside for the moment (whether I think they should or not).

As we were leaving the 17th-century fort at St. Augustine, a woman in the doorway of a motor home parked in the lot began tossing bread to the seagulls.

In no time at all, at least 50 gulls were screeching and wheeling in the air above the parking lot. Suddenly, a car drove through and hit the crowd of gulls, running over three of them. Tourists stared as the gulls writhed briefly and died. The car didn't stop.

Perhaps gulls are not important in the grand scheme of things. Probably the woman shouldn't have attracted them there with food in the first place. And maybe the driver was blinded by the morning sun.

No such excuse in Orlando the following night. Police reported that eight cars ran over a pedestrian, one right after the other. The man was standing when the first car hit him; his body bounced a little further along the road with each successive hit.

Nobody stopped. Somehow these unrelated incidents are a ghastly metaphor for the Gulf situation. . . . But even in the midst of such a shock, sunny Florida beckons with the charms that are only partly obscured by too many people, too many cars, too many malls.

I succumb. A Florida odditorium: A brightly clad "swami" hitchhiking to Key West. I wonder if he knew Mallory Square is deserted just now in favor of Miami's Art Deco weekend?

A man carrying his little dog around the euphemistically named pet "exercise" area at a freeway rest stop. That's one pooch who didn't get any exercise — or any other satisfaction either.

In this land of lush tropical blooms: plastic flowers in the window boxes. We know someone with a plastic evergreen in the front yard. (But I shouldn't be too harsh — has anyone seen the yard with two full-size plastic coconut palms in Lincoln, Mich.? Let's call it a wry sense of humor.)

A developer's ad (in a state long since sold to developers): Owing to new restrictions on coastal building, "this will certainly be the last to rise a graceful 18 stories above the lush landscape. . . . That's fortunate for those who will soon purchase one of the last remaining units."

Why not Wonderland's outrageous truth: The type of development we do is so incredibly detrimental to the environment that the government has had to pass laws stopping anyone else from doing it. But those of you who don't give a rip can still buy a condo.

A Gulf rally in Stuart last week included both anti-war types and supporters of Desert Shield. "Too often those that protest capture the attention of the media," one explained.

Manatees congregate in the warm water of an inlet right in our complex. This "cross" between a walrus and a whale was actually mistaken for a mermaid by Christopher Columbus. (They are not as beautiful as reported, he wrote to the king after eyeballing their whiskers and leathery, wrinkled skin.)

Even when you know they're there, manatees are tough to see, because they stay underwater to eat and sleep. Most of the time, they live in a slow rhythm of lethargic bobbing to the surface for a breath, followed by slow sinking to the bottom again. And it isn't as easy as it looks, because manatees are (to be plain about it) gassy. They would have major buoyancy problems if their bones weren't so heavy.

That's it for time travels this week. It sure isn't H.G. Wells, is it?

Nancy Parmenter

Actually, Bob and I were among the very last Michiganders to discover America's hottest winter vacation spot. It's pretty clear everywhere we go that millions have trod the way before us.

The first time we came, we flew. It was that trip that set the stage for time travel. To board a plane in snowy Detroit and disembark three hours later in a stand of palm trees — well, it was surreal. It still is, but now it's gradual because we drive.

The surrealism is heightened this year. To hang out at the beach or sip fruit drinks under the thatched roof at Conchy Joe's is to bliss out in a world that doesn't seem to have much blissful space just now.

In a world of tropical flowers and pastel-clad tourists, the news of impending war is an unwanted snake in paradise. It's a bitter blow to the gut of the hordes of Alices in Wonderland. A blow they'd prefer to ignore.

Bad plan

To the Editor:

The traffic experiment under way in the Farms is surely an exercise in bad government.

The design of the experiment was delegated to the Farm's director of public safety, a former resident of McKinley, rather than asking the Goodel-Grivas traffic engineers to make an impartial, open-minded study of any problems which might exist.

The Ferber plan, accepted by the council, was intentionally designed to divert traffic from McKinley and McMillan onto Fisher and Moran by barricading McKinley and limiting McMillan to one-way. This in spite of the fact that every block of McKinley carries less traffic than the corresponding block of Moran.

The Ferber experiment was cloaked in an appearance of professionalism by hiring Goodel-Grivas to conduct traffic counts on a select few streets. Those traffic counts prove the obvious — traffic can be diverted from some streets onto others by using barricades and one-way signs.

We knew that back in 1951 when the Farms' longer streets like Moran and Fisher were designated as "major" in order to qualify the maximum possible street mileage for state funding under the 1951 Motor Vehicle Highway Act. However, both the city and Goodel-Grivas readily admit that Moran at 24 feet in width and Fisher at 20 feet have no greater capacity than McKinley and McMillan at 24 feet and none of these streets are wide enough to meet the state's current minimum requirements for designation as major streets.

The Ferber plan is directly at odds with the comprehensive city-wide traffic study made by Goodel-Grivas in 1985. That report was based upon intensive and impartial engineering analysis of the whole city and offered three alternative proposals, none of which bear any resemblance to the Ferber plan. Goodel-Grivas concluded that the best alternative for moving traffic to the Hill was to make McKinley one-way into the Hill to complement Fisher's one-way flow away from the Hill. Instead, the Ferber plan uses a barricade to block traffic from McKinley.

The 1985 Goodel-Grivas report concluded that the use of barricades and a more extensive one-way system were not acceptable "because it is believed that they would eventually create more problems than they solve."

Citizens who believe that governmental decisions should be based upon impartial expert advice rather than political pressures and favoritism should attend the public hearing at South High on Monday, Jan. 28, 7:30 p.m.

Quick gavel

To the Editor:

Thank you for giving in-depth coverage of the Traffic Control Study in the Farms. However, some unusual things happened toward the end of the last council meeting that were not mentioned. I also found Pete Winkler's letter very interesting — like a breath of fresh air in a smoke-filled room. With property taxes escalating at an outrageous rate and the country in a recession, it is not the right time to take on a $7.5 million obligation and the added cost of maintenance before exploring other ways of giving Central Library the improvement and expansion it needs at less cost.

In opening the council meeting, Mayor Joseph Fromm advised us to stay within time limits when speaking, to be quiet and no applause.

GROSSE POINTE PUBLIC LIBRARY
PROPOSED ADDITION

Alternative

To the Editor:

As an alternative to a new library on a different site, this addition to the existing facility is the logical expansion of Grosse Pointe's Central Library. It could be done for $2.8 million.

Since Grosse Pointe has become short of land, this compact two-story addition with a full basement would provide an additional 30,000 square feet of space on a minimum site. Approximately 112 feet of Kercheval frontage would be required, and the land area for the building and new parking lot would be less than one half acre.

The expansion would be to the north. The new driveway would be approximately in line with McKinley.

The parking lot would contain 28 new parking spaces.

The construction would be 100 percent masonry bearing walls and reinforced concrete floors. A fine hydraulic elevator would serve all three levels for the handicapped. The building would be designed for maximum energy efficiency and would be centrally air-conditioned.

From my original rough drafts, Jeffrey Graham, American Institute of Architects, of Grosse Pointe Park, and his associate, Frank Ferlito, prepared this drawing.

Their company name is Designtec. The modern sculpture at the left side of the entrance was their suggestion.

This 30,000-square-foot addition to the present 18,000 square feet at Central Library (48,000 square feet gross) would provide approximately 8,000 square feet more space than the proposed new building at the Brownell site.

The best part is, we would be saving $5 million initially, or a total of over $10 million over the life of a bond issue.

Street closings

To the Editor:

Two years ago the Grosse Pointe Farms council met at South High School before several hundred irate residents who were opposed to street closures.

And there they are again with another proposal to close a moderately traveled street to through traffic for 100 people who petitioned in a city of 13,000 people.

The so-called major roads and minor roads surrounding this street and other major roads in the Grosse Pointes have increased in traffic and have had to bear the burden of this unnecessary closure.

It also seems that when one street is closed, there are thoughts for the future closures such as the more plan for Hall Road that was discussed with the defunct traffic study committee.

The Goodell-Grivas study that I have read says that they do not recommend street closures. Street closures are not a solution according to the study, but create more problems!

Let's let the Farms council know once and for all that we object to present and future street closures for a few without consideration for the whole community.

You can do this by attending the hearing at South High School on Jan. 28 at 7:30 p.m.

Doing fine

To the Editor:

Thanks so much to all the Grosse Pointe North and Grosse Pointe South faculty, parents, students and friends who expressed their concerns for our son, Tim Sacka, who was injured during the North vs. South varsity basketball game on Jan. 15.

It was a very frightening experience for all who witnessed the accident. So many of you came to the hospital, over to the house and phoned. Your support and prayers were very much appreciated. He is doing fine now and hopes to be back on the court soon.

Greetings from Saudi Arabia. I wanted to take a few minutes to say thanks to the people of the Grosse Pointe community for their contributions to a recent CARE package I received. Your support helps me realize my sacrifices aren't in vain.

Believe me when I say we are really anxious to get

"I grew up in a time that when you graduated from college you had a diploma and a wedding ring, and you went home and had babies," she said.

She studied teaching at St. Mary's of Notre Dame, where she met her husband. They were married and quickly had three children.

"You go to a good school, you get a degree, and you sit home and say 'well, the house is clean, now what do I do?'" she said.

What she did was become a substitute teacher in the Detroit schools, an experience in which she learned more than her students.

"I loved being with the students, I loved their spontaneity and their humor and their honesty, but it was very difficult to see what they went through in the inner city," she said.

As her daughters got older, Kennedy took them to Ruth Carney's dance school in Grosse Pointe Woods. As she watched them learn, she found what she wanted to do.

"I thought it was the most beautiful thing I had ever seen," she said. She started taking dance classes, too — her petite frame well-suited for the ballet she loved.

"Then one day it clicked," she said. "I love to teach, I love to dance, why not teach dance?" That's what she did.

When Carney decided to retire, Kennedy bought her studio which then had 90 students. The 600 people who pour through her doors each year take ballet, jazz and tap, exercise classes and creative movement classes for 3-year-olds. It's a decision she has never regretted.

"I enjoy this so much," she said. "Even today, sometimes I see all the girls lined up at the barre, all in pink and black, their hair all pulled back, it's so beautiful it brings tears to my eyes."

But Kennedy isn't a softie when it comes to teaching. All girls in the ballet classes must wear the same outfits: pink tights and black leotards. Their hair must be pulled back. They must come to every class, and if they don't they have to call with a good excuse. There are oral exams in addition to the technical dance exams which must be passed before a student can progress to the next level.

Every other year Kennedy's students put on a show. The students who want to be in it sign an agreement that they will be in every performance, they will attend every rehearsal and will work hard.

"It won't stand up in court, but I think it's important that they understand they have to work hard. Yes, they think I'm Wicked Wanda, but if I didn't run a tight ship I don't think they would do as well," she said. "And anyone who's seen one of our shows will tell you, they're not recitals. They're shows."

There's a reason she's a tough teacher. "If I were a parent, I'd want to know what I was spending my money on, I'd want to see what they learned," she said.

As hard as she is on her students, though, she is loved by many of them and years later they come back to visit.

"I've seen them through boyfriends, and trouble at home and everything a teenager goes through," Kennedy said. "When they come back to see me, years later, that means you've succeeded, to have them think about you after they've left."

Kennedy isn't turning out tomorrow's Gelsey Kirklands or Mikhail Baryshnikovs, but she measures success differently.

"Even if they never dance professionally, at least they've learned the technique and can be a good audience and will be able to tell what's good and what's not so good," she said. "And they learn the art form. Should you not play piano if you can't play like Horowitz? No, that's silly. Even if, at the end of a year, they are just able to recognize one piece of classical music, I feel I've done something."

And there are some who just can't learn to dance.

"I can teach them to move, but I can't teach them to feel dance," she said. "But even that is helpful with their poise and their self confidence. It all helps."

Kennedy stopped teaching this year to devote her time to running a talent and modeling agency she purchased late last year. The Marce Haney Modeling Agency had used Kennedy's students as dancers in many productions through the years. Kennedy thought if she owned it she could cut out the middleman.

It was one decision she regretted and 3-1/2 months after she bought it she sold it.

"I hated it," she said. "I knew a month and a half into it I hated it. It was more pencil pushing and clerical than it was creative. You just don't put me behind a desk for all that time. I missed the humor and the spontaneity of the kids. I was a very unhappy person, and I'm just not like that at all. I'm real glad I got out of it."

Kennedy still isn't teaching, but there's something else she's involved in — she recently purchased the rights to the Miss Detroit Pageant, a local contest on the path to the Miss America Pageant.

"I know pageants have a bad name, and I agree with all they say about them, but because it is a local for the Miss America, it's got a lot of credibility," she said.

What makes this pageant different is that there is no entrance fee and all cash prizes are in the form of scholarships paid directly to the schools; the contestants never see the money. The Miss America Pageant system is the largest scholarship foundation for women in America.

In September, Kennedy will host the first Miss Detroit Pageant since 1970. It will be at the Masonic Temple and will be emceed by Kaye Lani Ray Rafko, former Miss Michigan and Miss America.

Kennedy once tried to start a Miss Grosse Pointe Pageant, but because of lack of interest, it was dropped. She is certain the Detroit pageant will be a success.

Then what?
"Who knows?" Kennedy said with a gleam in her eye. "You never know."

new cable and then spliced the optic cable — a tricky procedure under the best of conditions, according to MacLeod.

Comcast had to rent an ice shanty and get a propane heater to provide a shelter in which the delicate splicing could be done. Even then the technicians had to return to their vehicles when their hands became too cold to do the work.

John M. Rickel, president of Grosse Pointe Cablevision, said his answering machine was filled with messages from subscribers calling to find out what had happened to their service.

What irks Rickel is that Grosse Pointe Cable and Comcast were not notified of the cable break.

Rickel said the fire department had to snip the cable to free it from the salt truck, but apparently neither the St. Clair Shores fire or police departments nor the Macomb County Road Commission contacted Comcast.

"We thought it was rather rude of them to snip off this cable without telling us," he said. "If we would have known immediately where it was, we could have had people and equipment there."

The St. Clair Shores police report on the incident lists Comcast's St. Clair Shores address and phone number.

Hayden, who filed the report, said he does not know if someone from the police department called Comcast. He said it would have been up to the dispatcher to notify the cable company. It is department procedure to notify the affected utility company when a wire is down, Hayden said.

He added that if his department failed to contact Comcast, he apologizes, and now that he knows about the cable, he will definitely know who to call if it is damaged in the future. He said his cable service at home was knocked out as well.

Ogren said that to the best of his knowledge, no one tried to contact Comcast to report the downed wire. He said that all police departments should have Comcast's telephone numbers, and even if police called the St. Clair Shores office after hours, a message could have been left with the answering service.

Santia said that at the time of the incident, the road commission thought the downed line was a power cable and police and Detroit Edison officials were immediately notified. He assumed that police or fire officials contacted the cable company.

Grosse Pointe Cable's bill submitted to the Macomb County Road Commission includes $6,569.68 for labor and engineering, $2,033.37 for materials and $9,890.40 for service-outage credits.

Rickel said that subscribers get credits on their monthly bills when service is out for 24 hours or more.

Hospital opens Desert Storm anxiety hotline

The war in the Persian Gulf has stirred the hearts and minds of people all over the world. Millions of Americans are burdened with the anxiety of many unanswered questions. Henry Ford Health System has implemented a telephone hotline to help people cope with the Persian Gulf crisis.

Dr. Glenn David, chairman of psychiatry and a post-traumatic stress disorder expert, says the crisis in the Gulf has made it difficult for many Americans to carry on with their daily lives. Many of these feelings are not unusual but it's important to recognize the symptoms of anxiety, to know how to deal with them, and to know where to go for additional support.

The anxiety hotline describes symptoms and offers suggestions for those who need help.

ple," said Burl VonAllmen, a social studies teacher at Grosse Pointe South High School. "I back our forces over there and support Mr. Bush's decision.

"Nobody wants to see American lives sacrificed, but at the same time you have to rely on what you're told and your knowledge of American history. Hitler came to power, then when the allies went through a period of trying to appease this man, it led to World War II. Perhaps we could have forestalled that if we had moved quicker.

"When you draw a parallel with what goes on with the leadership in Iraq and see what this man has done, poison gas on his own people and overruns his neighbor. And we're told by military experts he'll probably have developed nuclear weapons... Young people are saying no blood for oil, but it's not only oil, it's a matter of preserving the peace."

A number of VonAllmen's students and former students are involved in Operation Desert Storm, and his brother's reserve unit has been called up.

"I hope and pray it will be over shortly," he said. "Based on military analysts, I think it will go a lot longer. I think there is no doubt about it — the U.S. will win. It won't resolve many problems. It'll create more problems — if Saddam is still in power, what's the guarantee some other groups won't come into power. We'll have the same question about Palestine and Israel. I do feel people have to be willing to compromise."

University Liggett School's David Backhurst is head of the history department. He is concerned about how long it will be before it is over.

"I supported extending the time for the sanctions, but I certainly support the soldiers over there," he said. "I'm concerned about when it will end. I must say my initial reaction was it would probably be months. After hearing the news yesterday and today I might have to re-evaluate and say weeks.

"However, the terror and hostility is much more difficult to deal with. That's what I really fear. I think there's going to be a whole lot of hostility and hatred toward the West. I'm concerned about the power vacuum that will develop. What about Iran, or Syria? It's going to be a continuing power struggle and where the U.S. fits into all of this, I'm really not sure."

At Our Lady Star of the Sea High School, Tom Briske, a history and government teacher, said he supports America, despite his own personal feelings.

"It's important that you express your opinion, but your heart has to be with whatever actions are going on now," he said. "Initial opposition on my part was because I believe sanctions should have been stretched further. Once you move on to the next level, you reassess your decisions and priorities and work from there.

"I hope it's short and quick. The fear is that it will be lengthy because as you move into ground forces and what could be a defensive war and guerilla war, it could be long. The first few weeks will probably dictate the next few months. I wish I knew (who was going to win). I only hope from our point of view, our objectives and the U.N. objectives are met."

Meanwhile, at Our Lady Star of the Sea's lower school, students were praying — both for George Bush and for Saddam Hussein. It's a prayer they have been reciting for some time and most students knew it by heart.

O God, you fill the universe with light and love.

In you we live and move and have our being.

We pray for Saddam Hussein and George Bush.

Enlighten their minds and fill their hearts with the power of your creative love. Guide their actions so that all civilians and soldiers in the Gulf area are protected from the sufferings of war.

Inspire their decisions so that the crisis in the Middle East is resolved peacefully, and all peoples of the world learn to walk in ways of justice, love and peace. Amen.

The prayer held special meaning for third grader Katie Irwin. Her mother is a nurse stationed in the Middle East, about 100 miles from the Gulf.

"I feel a little nervous because a lot of our soldiers could get very hurt," she said. "I don't like violence, but if we have to go to war, it's just what we have to do. We're bombing their weapons so they'll surrender. I hope it only lasts a couple of months."

Fourth grader Angela Lapiana, 10, was also worried about the situation.

"I don't think it's fair to kill people for oil. Saddam Hussein is weird. It's unfair. He walked into a country and took over," she said.

Paul Thursam, also a fourth grader, thinks the war should never have started.

"We should have compromised," he said.

Bobby Kittel, 9, also thought it was a mistake. He thinks Iraq and Kuwait should work out their own differences without outside help.

"It's their problem," he said.

The fourth grade class has direct knowledge of the situation through Gregg Deathridge, a serviceman on a hospital ship in the Middle East who has been their pen pal for two months. They expect — and pray — that the war will be short.

"I think Saddam Hussein will end up giving up. He's desperate because he's using 17-year-olds to help fight," said 9-year-old Jonathan Paquin.

"Everyone is going to get Saddam Hussein and talk to him and get him out of Kuwait and make a treaty," Meg Guillaume, 9, said. Lindsay Hawkins, 9, was hopeful about the outcome.

"The U.S. will win the war and there will be a peace conference. Saddam and Bush will be friends," she said.

"I'm disappointed they had to take this route," said Sally Clancy, who paused while running errands in Grosse Pointe Park. "I wanted a longer time for sanctions to work. I'm afraid it's going to be a long war. The loss of American lives over a situation like this is hard to take," she said.

"Even if we win," she said, because of the way the Middle East changes so rapidly, "we'll lose."

For Jim Odell at Pointe Printing, Inc., it was another business day, but his mind was with the troops. He supports the attack not only for what Saddam has done, but for what he's capable of.

"To me, the scariest thing is Iraq having nuclear capabilities," he said. "I hope the war is short, but that's hard to speculate about. I'm sure Saddam will be deposed, but how much force it will take is the question.

"This will have both long-term and short-term effects. The short term is what is happening now, but the long term is what the balance of power will be afterwards. I think the long-term effects will be minimized if we let the Arabs work with the Iraqis afterward, instead of the Christian countries of the West.

"I hope it's over soon, but that might be too much to hope for."

Richard Sterr was still listening to the radio at Carl Sterr, a men's clothing store. He spent the previous night glued to the television, fascinated and amazed at how smoothly the attack went.

"I was initially shocked, but now the waiting is over," he said. "I hope it continues to go as smoothly as it has."

Like most, he expressed hope it would be over quickly — in less than a month — but said that even if it is, U.S. involvement in the Middle East would last a long time.

"I think there will be an extended occupation in Kuwait, and most definitely a longer stay in Saudi Arabia," he said.

"It's a waste of time," said Karry Carlton of Detroit. "They're fighting over oil."

Not willing to say who will win, she did say the Iraqis would have more casualties because they were ill-prepared to take on the force of the allied countries.

Jonathon Purslow was excited that war had finally started, but hoped it would end soon. He has two brothers in the service, one at Fort Knox and one in the Air Force in the Netherlands. They haven't been called yet, but he's worried they might be.

"It should last a few months, this is the easy part," he said. "The troop movement is the part I'm worried about."

Despite the potential that his brothers might take part in the fighting, he supports the U.S. involvement.

"You can't allow this guy to go on and challenge any country he wants," he said.

Anne Wisniewski was concerned about the possibility of her younger brother being drafted, but didn't think the war would last long enough to get to that point.

"I hope they can get in and out," she said. "But it's not realistic to believe they'll be back in a month or less. I'm worried, but it was something we had to do."

Staff writers Margie Reins Smith, Rob Fulton, John Minnis and Pat Paholsky contributed to this report.

Hill, Village merchants found holiday shopping blessed

By John Minnis
Assistant Editor

Despite doom and gloom media reports of retail sales over the holiday season, Hill and Village merchants say business was good.

"We had an excellent season," said Sandy Gillespie, owner of Something Special and member of the Hill Merchants Association.

"It was better than last year, much better. It was superior," she said of holiday business at her store, which features seasonal holiday decorative items. "Everybody's sales were real good."

Gillespie, as well as retailers in the Village, said a key to the Pointes' sales success during what was expected to be a poor shopping season was the personal treatment shoppers received and the "right mix of merchandise" available in the Hill and Village.

"They did well because they offer the personal shopping," said Jane Schmidt of the Hill Merchants Association. "We've been accenting the fact it's convenient, personal shopping."

"People realize it's more fun and relaxing shopping in the atmosphere we have on the Hill. Everyone was saying things are bad (during the holiday shopping season), but the Hill was saying it's just fine."

Brooks Brothers Manager Rebecca VanWalleghem said her store had a very good season.

Of course, Hill merchants didn't sit back waiting for customers to walk through the door. Gillespie put out a catalog featuring her wares and did mass mailings. She and other retailers advertised heavily and many extended store hours and opened Sundays.

The Hill also got a boost with the new municipal parking lot that was completed behind the shops on the north side of Kercheval. The lot provides ample, safe, attended parking nearby, and merchants chipped in by validating parking stubs so customers in most cases could park free.

Gillespie speculated that safe, convenient parking, coupled with courteous customer service, had a lot to do with bringing shoppers to the Hill.

While the Village is not boasting a record-breaking holiday season, most merchants reported steady business.

"Virtually everyone at least had business equal to the year before," said Danielle Harris, owner of Danielle's and president of the Village Association.

"All the doom and gloom forecasters were wrong."

She said customers were more cautious and tended to do less impulse buying. From about the middle of December on, shopping picked up dramatically, Harris said. She credited extended evening and Sunday hours, personalized customer service and the diversity of retailers as reasons for the Village's good holiday shopping season.

Beverly Leinweber of the Village Association also credited extended store hours and customer service as reasons that made the Village attractive to holiday shoppers.

"I think all the doom and gloom the media prophesied was not true," she said. Leinweber said business wasn't better than last year, but it wasn't worse, either.

She said some 95 percent of the Village's retailers were open Sunday.

For the first time in its 121-year history, Jacobson's opened on Sunday during the weekends between Thanksgiving and Christmas, said Tom Drummy, general manager of Jacobson's in the Village.

"We did have a good holiday season," he said, "despite the general attitude elsewhere."

He said the success of Sunday hours before Christmas indicated that Grosse Pointers do shop on Sundays, at least prior to the holidays. He said his company has not decided whether to make Sunday hours a year-round policy.

"The message for Grosse Pointe was shoppers prefer to shop close to home and that the Village is a viable and attractive business district," Drummy said.

Grosse Pointe Farms resident Jeffery T. Budday AIA was named 1990 Young Architect of the Year by the Detroit Chapter of the American Institute of Architects. Budday, president of Garbooshian/Budday Associates, Inc., was recognized for his significant accomplishment and leadership in the ideals of the architecture profession in a person under the age of 40. The chapter cited his local and national design awards, project methodologies and public and architectural service activities in their selection. Garbooshian/Budday Associates, Inc. also received a 1990 Design Award for its proposed Jefferson Beach Marina mixed-use facility. The design was cited for its dynamic mixture of nautical and industrial imagery which capture the spirit and character of the marina. ## Clarification

Timothy J. Hazlett, the lawyer who lived in Japan for two years and who was featured on these pages Jan. 10, clarified the following statement:

"He believes the problems between the two countries are a result of federal policy. 'We keep giving away the store,' he said. 'Of course, they're beating the pants off us. Our government is giving them the land.'"

To clarify this point, Hazlett said: "In general, I believe the problems between the United States and Japan are a result of many things, perhaps the most important of which is a general lack of understanding and information each society has with respect to the other. In addition I recall specifically commenting on some of the complaints of local industry regarding the concessions being made to direct foreign investments by Japanese multinational corporations; and in this regard, I believe my comment was that one of the problems in these circumstances is the absence of federal policy, which permits states to follow 'beggar thy neighbor' policies of investment incentives to attract long-term investments in their particular states."

City businesses may be forced to use incinerator

At the urging of the Grosse Pointe-Clinton Disposal Authority, Grosse Pointe City is considering an ordinance to force all businesses to send their trash to the authority's incinerator.

Already the Farms, Woods and Harper Woods have adopted ordinances that require all private trash haulers making pickups in their cities to take the trash to the incinerator in Clinton Township.

Deadlines for commercial haulers to comply with the ordinances vary, but the City is considering making the deadline Aug. 31, 1992, which is the same deadline specified in the Woods.

According to the charter that created the Grosse Pointe-Clinton Disposal Authority in 1962, all trash originating out of the authority's member cities has to be taken to the incinerator. Member cities include the five Pointes, Harper Woods, Clinton Township and Mount Clemens.

The costs of the incinerator are paid by tipping fees per ton of trash delivered to the incinerator. If some of the trash from a member city is not taken to the incinerator, then other cities that are taking all their trash to the authority pay proportionately more than their fair share.

Complying with the ordinance will cost businesses more because the $55 tipping fee at the incinerator is higher than commercial trash haulers pay at landfills.

In the City, there are seven businesses or institutions that are not sending their trash to the authority — among the largest, Bon Secours Hospital and Kroger.

Recyclable and toxic materials and medical wastes are exempt from having to be disposed of at the authority's incinerator.

The Grosse Pointe City Council offered a first reading of the proposed trash compliance ordinance at its regular meeting Monday night. The ordinance will be considered for adoption at its Feb. 19 meeting.

Man charged with larceny

A man with no permanent address has been charged in a December larceny of a business in the 15400 block of Mack in Grosse Pointe Park.

Dale Keith Nicklowicz, 27, was arraigned on larceny charge before Park Municipal Judge Kirsten Frank following his Jan. 17 arrest. He was also wanted on felony warrants in Macomb County, and Frank refused to allow him bail.

According to police, Nicklowicz is also a suspect in the burglary of the same Mack Avenue business. The burglary occurred sometime between 2:30 p.m. Jan. 14 and 8:45 a.m. the following day.

Nicklowicz has not been charged with the burglary, and the investigation is continuing.

Roberta Keydel of Grosse Pointe places a puppy in the lap of a patient.

Pets aid patient recovery

Twice a month, patients at the Rehabilitation Institute of Michigan receive special visits by some furry friends. Puppies and kittens are brought in from the Michigan Humane Society by the hospital's volunteers for a couple of hours' worth of cuddling and frolicking.

Auxiliary volunteer members Roberta Keydel and Gwendy Lambrecht, both of Grosse Pointe, and Ginny Lambrecht of Grosse Pointe Shores, coordinate the program which relieves anxieties for physically challenged individuals and makes their hospital stay more enjoyable.

"The expressions on the faces of patients when they have a puppy in their lap is just incredible," Keydel said. "The staff also seem to get as much enjoyment out of the program. We have even had a couple of the small animals adopted by patients as a result of our visits," Lambrecht said.

"We would like to expand the program to weekly. We are currently seeking more volunteers."

Volunteers can come individually or in pairs. Individuals interested in learning more about volunteer opportunities can call the Rehabilitation Institute of Michigan's community relations office at 745-9850.

The Rehabilitation Institute of Michigan, a member hospital of The Detroit Medical Center, is one of the nation's largest hospitals specializing in medical rehabilitation. It offers comprehensive programs for patients with strokes, spinal cord injuries, traumatic brain injuries, severe pain, geriatric disabling conditions, amputations and other disabling disorders.

City orders dormer removed

Grosse Pointe City has ordered a Fisher Road resident to remove a dormer that he added to his garage without city approval.

The dormer was built by Peter Kauffman, 29 Fisher, who was building a four-car garage to replace two two-car garages that were formerly on the property.

On Oct. 16, 1989, Kauffman was granted a height variance for the garage so that he could have a steeper roof and more storage space. At the time, a dormer was discussed but not approved.

Subsequently, Kauffman built the dormer, and the city attorney ordered it removed.

Kauffman appealed the city attorney's order to the Board of Zoning Appeals.

At the appeals hearing Monday night, residents opposed allowing the dormer to remain. They feared that at some future date someone would use the second story of the garage as a residential unit. Kauffman offered to have a deed restriction placed that would forbid the garage to ever be used as a dwelling.

The main floor of the garage is 1,000 square feet, and the second story is 600 square feet. City planning consultant Brandon Rogers pointed out that many of the city's homes average the same square footage of the garage, and he feared the city would have difficulty enforcing a deed restriction in the future.

He was most concerned, however, with the precedent of someone building in the city without the proper building permits and variances and then getting city approval after the fact.

Residents echoed Rogers' concerns and said the dormer should not be allowed out of principle.

The zoning appeals board, which is composed of the City Council members and mayor, agreed and refused to reconsider a variance to allow the dormer. Kauffman must now follow the city attorney's order and remove the dormer.

Armed robbery at Farms store

Jo-Ann Fabrics on Mack in the Farms was robbed Jan. 19 by a man who apparently had a gun.

At 7:50 p.m., the suspect was in the process of making a $1.30 purchase when he put his hand in his coat pocket, made a gesture to indicate he had a gun and told the cashier to give him all the $10s and $20s in the cash drawer.

The cashier began to comply when the suspect reached into the cash drawer and grabbed a couple handfuls of money. He told the cashier: "If you look out the door, I will shoot you." He then fled in an unknown direction.

Letter

There was some constructive criticism of the trial plan now in use and good suggestions. Occasionally there was a little applause.

Toward the end of the meeting a Farms resident was speaking and mentioned the new library in regard to traffic on Chalfonte. Fromm used the gavel, saying, "Stop right there; the only thing to be discussed here is traffic control." Continuing, the resident asked a question re: traffic if Detroit City Airport is expanded or there are increased activities at the War Memorial. Fromm said, "Stop right there."

Someone in the audience said, "Let the man speak. We want to hear what he has to say." There was applause. Fromm said, "If there is any more applause, I will adjourn this meeting." Being warned, we sat in stony silence while valid criticism of the plan continued. Then what seemed like the point man for the plan spoke, giving high praise for it with the results they wanted. And there was silence. Everyone seemed too surprised to respond when Fromm said, "You may applaud now." Silence continued until he said, "It is all right for you to applaud." And the audience responded. I hope it made him feel better.

It had been a long meeting at the end of what had to be a stressful day for everyone, but something good is bound to come out of it.

I spoke at the meeting because I know and love Grosse Pointe and the wonderful people who came into my life in 1937 when I began working in Sam Barker's shop above the bank at Rivard and Jefferson.

We found our home on Fisher Road in 1944. It was a quiet little street with stately elm trees arching over to touch the trees on the city side.

City, Park police warn of scam

Grosse Pointe City and Park police are warning residents to be aware of an extortion scam being reported in the metro Detroit area.

On Jan. 17, City police received a report of an attempt to extort money from an 83-year-old resident. The woman, fortunately, called to verify what was going on and was prevented from being victimized.

According to Detective Dennis Van Dale, the extortionists pretend to be family members, like a nephew or grandson, who claim to be in trouble with loan sharks. The callers say they need money immediately to keep from getting harmed.

Another twist is for the caller to say he is a loan shark and that he's going to harm the nephew or grandson if he doesn't get money. Sometimes one man will play the role of the loan shark who will put the distressed "relative" on the phone to plead for money.

Usually a drop-off location for the cash is stated.

Van Dale said the extortion scams have been reported in communities throughout metro Detroit, including St. Clair Shores.

Park detective Lt. David Hiller said his department is working on a case from almost a year ago that matches the description of the extortion attempt in the City. He believes a couple of men are responsible for the extortion attempts.

He and Van Dale urge residents not to give any information over the phone. They said the extortionists prey on older people and trick them into giving out information about family members. They urge anyone getting a call from someone threatening a family member, asking for cash or purporting to be a relative, to call police.

In both the Park and City incidents, the intended victims wisely called family members to verify what was going on. The family members then called the police departments.

About 40 years ago someone had a not-so-bright idea to widen Fisher Road. An alert resident learned the trees would be lost. He got the message to the people. The council chamber was packed and people were standing on the stairs and the sidewalk but the trees were saved. Fisher was widened about 2-1/2 feet and made a one way street — a slight inconvenience but nothing compared to the problems of the McKinley barricade and many cars going the wrong way on Fisher. To put our street and Moran in the same category as Kercheval, Charlevoix, and Ridge is ridiculous. Let us hope we find the answers at the next meeting.

Filling a gap

To the Editor:
Grosse Pointe's reputation as a fine community with excellent facilities is accurate with one exception. Our existing library facilities are woefully inadequate, but our community currently has an excellent opportunity to rectify this situation.

The plan for a new library should be overwhelmingly endorsed because it will meet the communities' needs for years to come and the site will accommodate the library and adjacent functions in a location convenient to users. The problems of the library system have been carefully studied for years and the solutions offered by the library's award-winning architects are attractive and well-thought out.

As a concerned citizen and as a design professional, I wholeheartedly support this sorely needed development and encourage my neighbors to vote yes on Feb. 4.

Grosse Pointer helps victims cope with closed head injuries

By Margie Reins Smith
 Feature Editor

A 70-year-old former teacher was injured in an automobile accident. The woman was intelligent, creative, academically-oriented. She was the type of person who read textbooks for fun, in her leisure time. She was also a poet, a painter and a sculptor.

Although she recovered fully from the physical injuries of the accident, her brain will never heal completely. She suffered from depression because she had difficulty doing the normal, every-day activities that were so easy and so satisfying before the accident.

Jeffrey A. Ditty of Grosse Pointe Woods deals with such lost dreams every day.

He's a psychologist, an expert on the treatment of patients with closed-head injuries. He's president of J.A. Ditty & Associates Inc., a private rehabilitation and retraining program for traumatically brain injured adolescents and adults. He's also executive director of the head injury rehabilitation program at Margaret Montgomery Hospital, in Westland.

something that can happen to anyone, any time. Fifty percent of closed head injuries are the result of automobile accidents. And 50 percent of those are alcohol related."

His firm uses a combination of computer assisted instruction, workbooks, classroom activities and simulated environments to measure, then re-train clients so that they can improve the quality of their lives.

Ditty said that of the 700,000 to one million closed head injuries that occur each year in the nation, between 70,000 and 90,000 people have injuries severe enough that they require cognitive and social re-training.

He said that only in the last 10 years or so have these people been treated as a special group. Before, head injury patients were treated in the same manner as developmentally disabled or mentally retarded patients. Some received treatment for their physical injuries, then were sent home, even though they obviously had not made a full recovery. Others were sent to nursing homes.

Some of the symptoms of brain injury may include memory loss, depression, impatience, irritability, temper outbursts, decreased self-control, decreased ambition and initiative, sexual changes, self-centered behavior, inappropriate behavior in public, as well as changes in vision, hearing, speech, taste, smell and balance.

Other, more subtle symptoms often involve what Ditty calls executive skills: the ability to plan, organize, anticipate, see a sequence and remember; or initiation difficulties preventing the client from getting started on a task.

"If these skills are affected, individuals will have severe difficulties with daily living," he said. Preparing a meal, operating a washing machine, budgeting, planning routine tasks, communicating with others, accepting criticism, and following directions are difficult, often overwhelming. Many have trouble with short-term memory.

'I never wore a seat belt until we started this organization. I see what these folks go through and the torment it causes their families. Now I buckle my seat belt even to change parking places.'

Jeffrey A. Ditty
 President, J.A. Ditty & Associates

"You could meet a person on the street and wouldn't know he was the victim of a head injury. He has no wheelchair. He has no speech impairment. No facial deformities. But he has serious psycho-social difficulties. He constantly feels overwhelmed. He has to work very hard to do normal things. He's constantly under stress because of this and may experience anxiety or panic attacks.

"He may not be able to handle the stimulation of, say, the activity and bustle of a shopping mall. Even if he is able to drive a car, he may have delayed reaction time. He may appear to be functioning well in his job and can handle routine tasks, but an unexpected change or a bit of extra commotion may overwhelm him."

Ditty's firm helps clients improve their lives with individual programs that may include residential treatment homes, day treatment facilities, or a hospital setting. Evaluation and retraining involve computers, workbooks, hands-on classroom activities and simulation of actual work environments and social situations.

Ditty's firm also provides assistance and support for clients' families, who are often also under stress while learning to cope with their loved ones' disabilities.

J.A. Ditty & Associates currently has about seven residential clients in two supervised residences; four day treatment clients who live at home and come in for instruction and a simulated work environment; and a half dozen clients in a hospital-based program in a local psychiatric hospital.

Ditty said that in Michigan, no-fault insurance or workman's compensation insurance generally pays for clients' treatment. Michigan has no cap on the amount of no-fault insurance.

"Many clients do not return to normal and need help for the rest of their lives with psycho-social problems. Often clients are not aware of their difficulties.

"We do lots of counseling with families. Lots of support. Lots of telephoning. When family members realize the client is not going to get better, they're disheartened. It's a grieving process.

"I try to put myself in the place of these family members. When a child is injured — even though that child is 25 or 30 years old — whatever hopes and dreams the family has had for him go right down the tubes. Everything seems to be lost."

Ditty's staff of 25 to 30 includes people with backgrounds in education, psychology, social work, and occupational, recreational and mu-

'Anything Goes' on Feb. 5 at 10th annual Ball in the Hall

The 10th annual Ball in the Hall, a fundraiser for Orchestra Hall, will be on Tuesday, Feb. 5, beginning at 6 p.m., at Orchestra Hall.

Eleanor Breitmeyer Gebert, and her husband, Armand, are serving as publicity chairmen for the benefit. She said the event will be unique for three reasons:

- It's Mitch Miller's 80th birthday. "Miller, of 'Sing Along with Mitch' fame, will again (for the 10th time) pay his own way to Detroit to lead the Detroit Symphony Orchestra musicians. Miller thinks that Orchestra Hall and Carnegie Hall in New York City are the two most acoustically perfect halls in the country," she said.

- It's the 100th birthday of Cole Porter, whose music will be featured during the evening.

- It's Ball in the Hall's 10th anniversary. One of the major fundraisers for Orchestra Hall, last year the event raised $50,000, according to Gebert. She is enthusiastic. "Absolutely the best party of the season," she said.

Tickets are $200 and $300. The $200 ticket-holders will be seated on the main level — a temporary floor stretched over all the seats in Orchestra Hall and magically transformed by designer Joel Stone of Grosse Pointe. The theme of the party is "Anything Goes," a reference to one of Porter's hit songs.

"Each year our theme involves a composer," Stone said. "I've saved props from the last nine years." This year's decorations will include something from "Forty-Second Street," "Some Enchanted Evening," "Showboat" and more.

"The transformation of Orchestra Hall into a Viennese setting with tables and flowers and trees... the overall effect is incredible," he said.

The $300 ticket-holders will have a choice of seats — including the boxes, where they'll be able to overlook the festivities. Guests will dance on the stage.

Grosse Pointers who plan to be there: Mr. and Mrs. Donald M.D. Thurber, DSOH chairman Mado Lie and her husband, Dr. Kim Lie.

Dr. and Mrs. Donald Austin, Andrew and Gayle Camden, Marianne Endicott and Patricia and John Young Jr. are honorary chairmen of the event.

For tickets, call the DSOH volunteer office at 962-1000.

Action has begun:

Grosse Pointe Academy Action Auction volunteers have chosen "Building the Future... Today," as the theme for the May 11 event.

More than 100 committee members attended an Action Auction Update party on Jan. 23 at the home of honorary chairmen Happy and Bill Rands. General chairmen for the fundraiser are John and Diane Mills and Patrick and Patricia Verb, all of Grosse Pointe. The acquisitions committee, chaired by Greg and Mickie Smith and Bill and Kathy Whelan, is working hard to ensure that the guests at the event will have a variety of interesting items to bid on. So far, they've rounded up a 6.5-carat diamond and platinum antique watch; a Tuscan dinner for 20 at Da Edoardo restaurant; a Hawaiian vacation; a children's country cottage playhouse; and more.

The auction festivities will take place this year in the Academy's new Tracy Fieldhouse.

The nation's most successful independent school auction raised more than a half million dollars last year. Proceeds from the benefit are used to support the school's operating budget, scholarships and the restoration and renovation of the school's historic campus.

Let it snow: The Michigan Winter Ice Festival: Winterfest 91 (the first ever in Detroit) is coming to the Michigan State Fairgrounds Jan. 25 through Feb. 3. Sponsored by the Detroit-based Midwest Ice Corp., the international ice carving competition and exhibition will include an exhibition of ice and snow sculptures, a 30-foot ice palace, as well as entertainment, food from Detroit's finest eateries — and a fundraiser.

On Tuesday, Jan. 29, Gleaners Community Food Bank Day, admission will be free for those who donate three cans of food to Gleaners. Since 1977, Gleaners has gathered and distributed more than 72 million pounds of surplus food to more than 180 soup kitchens and social agencies in six metropolitan Detroit counties.

A portion of all food and beverage sales during the 10-day festival will be donated to Gleaners.

James Ryder of Grosse Pointe, owner of Midwest Ice Corp., is president and founder of the festival. Jaimie Kleinstiver of Grosse Pointe is executive director. Ryder traveled to Sapporo, Japan, to study the world's largest ice and snow sculpting festival and he hopes to make the Detroit festival an annual event.

Joel Stone of Grosse Pointe, a freelance artist, sculptor, illustrator and set designer, is in charge of giving Orchestra Hall a festive party atmosphere for the 10th annual Ball in the Hall on Tuesday, Feb. 5. He's shown here at a previous Ball in the Hall.

Highlights of the 10-day festival will include an international ice carving competition and the Detroit debut of professional snow sculpting.

"Many admirers of ice sculptures are not aware that ice carving has long been associated with the culinary arts and is considered to be primarily a skill of chefs. Michigan Winter Ice Festival aims to promote Michigan's food industry and culinary arts program by highlighting the art of ice carving," Ryder said.

Among the ice carving competitors are Marc Arneau of Grosse Pointe Park. He's a chef at Elizabeth's in St. Clair Shores.

Michael Green of Grosse Pointe Shores is competing in two events. He works at the Detroit Yacht Club.

Other sponsors of the event are Diet Pepsi, The Kroger Co., Sheraton-Oaks Hotel-Novi and WDIV-TV.

Tickets are $5 for adults; $2 for children 6 to 12. Hours are 1 to 10 p.m., Monday through Thursday; 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. Friday and Saturday; 1 to 6 p.m. Sunday.

For more information, call 868-8800.

Guest House: Guest House of Lake Orion will hold its 33rd annual Detroit Bishop's Dinner on Friday, Feb. 8, at the Westin Hotel.

The fundraiser will be hosted by Bishop Walter J. Schoenherr, and Mr. and Mrs. Emmet Tracy Sr. will be honored for their years of community leadership and support to Guest House.

The evening will include dinner, entertainment and special guest Kaye Lani Rae Raffo, Miss America 1988. A minimum $100 per person contribution is requested and black tie is optional.

Guest House opened in 1956 and is recognized nationally as a leader in residential and after-care treatment of Catholic priests, brothers and seminarians who are recovering from alcoholism, other chemical dependencies and related problems.

For more information about the Detroit Bishop's Dinner, call 391-4445.

Fundraiser: A dinner dance on Saturday, Feb. 23, at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial will benefit World Medical Relief Inc., a philanthropic organization contributing medical supplies for the care of the world's sick and destitute.

The fundraiser will feature music from the '20s, entertainment by dancers and actors, dinner, entertainment and a silent auction.

Tickets are $50 a person; $150 for patrons; $250 for benefactors. Call 866-5333 between 8 a.m. and 4 p.m. weekdays.

What is quality?

Rev. William DeVries
First Christian Reformed Church

It is Jan. 15, 1991. I am writing this article today because of deadlines to have it typeset and to accomplish a number of tasks I set for myself.

Depending on what happens in the next few hours and days you may know the answers to the questions of Jan. 15 by the time this article comes out. You may know of vast bloodshed — or of peace. Or you may still be waiting.

January 15, 1991, may be remembered for decades to come, or it may be forgotten in a few short months.

But today it is the deadline: the turning point; beyond here it cannot be just as it was.

Deadlines are things that force one to action. That is their whole function.

"At this date the matter shall commence (or finish)."

We say to others or to ourselves, "Now we must get going."

But going where? I guess that is one of the frightening things about the possible war in the Persian Gulf. We are not at all sure where we are going.

We all (at least everyone I've spoken to) want to support our troops and our president. If the horror of war is begun, we want it done well. Most of us are dismayed at the realization that war, done well, is swift, violent, massively destructive and bloody.

But we want to know if it is worth it. Is where we are going worth going?

This is where the rub is. We have lost our ability to evaluate worth; true quality; real value. By the time you read this the crisis in the Persian Gulf may well be sorting out the pieces — one way or another.

But we seem totally unable to sort out what real quality is for a human being, let alone a society.

We are very good with quantity — measure this; count up that. But ask what is a life of quality and people will hem and haw and usually settle on, "Well, I guess what is good for you may not be good for me."

And so we have no practice, no expertise at all in deciding together what is really worth human life.

Regardless of how the issue of Jan. 15, 1991, turns out, we must find ways together to define quality as more than mere independence.

There must be more to life than how high you can count. And there is.

There must be something that can put real quality into human living. And there is. We stand at the crossroads, at the deadline. Either we decide to find and live real quality, or we will finally destroy each other and our world.

Jesus said, "Whoever wants to save his life, will lose it, but whoever loses his life for me will find it. What good will it be for a person, if that person gains the whole world, yet forfeits his own soul?" and "I tell you the truth, whatever you did for one of the least of these brothers and sisters of mine, you did for me."

Bridge

HAVE A PLEASANT TRY AT PERFECTION
BRIDGE BY WOODY BOYD ♠♥♦♣

Many of Hollywood's finest have dabbled at bridge with unusual enthusiasm and some of them have become accomplished.

Lou Holtz of Sam Lapides story fame and Les Brown of "The Band of Renown" were certainly two of the glitzy city's greats. The ageless George Burns once played a fine game, but since Gracie's passing he only has time for girls. Billy Wilder, producer of the unforgettable "The Apartment" and many more academy awards still plays to this day twice a week and his game is commendable. Don Adams of TV's "Get Smart" is another who has taken the game seriously.

But the two whose comedy and glory are legendary were Groucho and Chico Marx. Groucho was by far the star at gin, but Chico was the leader at bridge. As a partnership they would play any game, with anyone for any amount. They gave up real money monopoly because the payoff was too small. Both were often accused of purposely diverting their opponents concentration with their wonderful wit and whimsy. Charlie Goren once said that it was practically impossible to keep a straight face when they were in a stake game against you. Their defensive playing conventions were unprecedented if not comically unethical. As Chico would say to his brother, "if you like my lead, don't bother to signal with a high card, just nod your head." Chico, as dummy, once placed his thirteen cards in play composed of four queens, a king and a jack. As he did so he was heard to say, "I always bid, sometimes more with less." With this trash he had opened the bidding and jump shifted Groucho's response which landed them in a precarious three no trump that Groucho somehow successfully managed. Of course on that occasion they were playing a couple of wealthy old whisperish widows who were literally paying their money for the privilege of being uproariously entertained. In deference to their opponents mediocrity the Marx's had agreed to play the game off the ladies tees, but in spite of this handicap a Brinks armored car that Chico had leased was in wait at their country club's front gate.

On another occasion, Chico and his matchless mustached brother challenged west coast star Lew Mathe and Goren to a leviathan sized stake game. Chico wanted to hold the match at the Rose Bowl for he knew it would draw a big crowd, but gambling laws restricted play for pay in public places so wiser minds decided on the men's locker room at The Wilshire Country Club. This wasn't satisfactory for the Marx brothers as the fire marshall's ordinance limited attendance to sixty-two, but Chico agreed to make the best of it. As he later stated, "It was a close match until the first deal, but we did pretty good." It seems that he had sold kibitzer tickets at $50 a head. George Burns was actually there and recalled that after the Marx's had paid their card losses they still had twenty-one hundred left from the gallery's gratuity.

It was at this propitious event that Chico introduced his new convention. He called it "The Braille System" as both loved to bid, it gave them a better chance to feel their way around. (All bids at the one and three level were psyches, ed. note.) Of course Mathe and Goren weren't alerted to their shenanigans, but in short order they were able to decipher the slyness and neutralize the intended deception.

Chico led spade ace

On this hand "The Braille System" cost the comedians a carload. Six spades by Chico can only be beat by a diamond ruff at trick one, but Groucho's penalty double of the club slam eliminated that possible eventuality. Chico slipped by leading the space ace which made declarers work easier, but no defense can beat six clubs.

As Groucho penned the -1540 he noted that, "These bums are hustlin' us."

Injuries

From page 1B sic therapies. Ditty earned a bachelor's and master's degree in psychology from Wayne State University and a Ph.D. in educational and clinical psychology. He worked in sheltered workshops before going into private practice.

"I was always interested in the behavioral approach," he said. "I like psychotherapy, but I'm interested in taking things step by step, creating situations for progress and practice."

"I like to see people working right in front of me and see how well they do. I like the feedback and the opportunity to see actual changes. I like monitoring and measuring and correcting right on the spot."

Ditty is outspoken about drivers' buckling their seat belts.

"I never wore a seat belt until we started this organization. I see what these folks go through and the torment it causes their families. Now I buckle my seat belt even to change parking places.

"If more of our teenagers could see what these clients go through — how their lives have changed — they'd all buckle up and they wouldn't drink and drive."

The 70-year-old woman was a success story, Ditty said. The firm devised a re-training program that included her former artistic endeavors. She has regained many of her former abilities.

"She still has difficulty with banking and budgeting and some directional difficulties," Ditty said the woman must continue with follow-up treatment or her abilities will deteriorate.

"We consider her one of our successes."

DSO makes first CD under Jarvi for release this May

By Alex Suczek
Special Writer

With notable speed, the DSO's new executive director, Mark Volpe, barely took over before he came to terms with Chandos Records. There were big hurdles. The orchestra's share of the recording budget for a series of five discs is $250,000. A big part of that is musicians' pay. Moreover, Music Director Neeme Jarvi's schedule is already filled to capacity. Timing is critical.

But the personal letter from Jarvi inserted in the programs has netted more than $35,000 in gifts from the audience alone — a triumph in itself. Meanwhile, a foundation added a major anonymous gift. Even in the face of brutal state budget cuts, such support made it possible to proceed. Besides, recordings are essential to an orchestra's international reputation and success.

Deciding what to record was the least of the problems. One strategy that wins recognition and sells CDs is to record good music that has been neglected and that caters to a nationalistic or other special-interest audience. That is the rationale for the first CD the DSO will make under Jarvi.

Its program will be Mrs. H.H.A. Beach's Symphony in E minor, Op. 32 (Gaelic) and Samuel Barber's Symphony No. 1, Op. 9 and Overture to The School for Scandal. Obviously, it's an all-American program including a neglected work by a woman.

What is interesting for DSO subscribers is that the Beach Symphony was performed by Jarvi last November. Meanwhile, to accommodate the rehearsal needs for the recording which was done over the past week, Jarvi included the two Barber works in last weekend's concerts, giving his audiences a preview of the first disc to be. (See review.)

The technical problems are what is fascinating right now. The DSO's recording engineer, Dan Dene, has to create a setup that will show the orchestra to its best advantage. He has final responsibility for the quality of sound and balance. Ralph Couzens, sound engineer from Chandos, was also on hand to ensure that they get the special sound that has become known as the Chandos trademark.

The process is painstaking. Deciding how to position the orchestra (inside the proscenium or on the apron) and the mikes was their joint responsibility. During regular rehearsals for three days last week, without actually tapping, they tried multiple mikes in many locations.

One split mike stood over the flutes and oboes. Another hung over the percussion. A mike stood on a high stand behind the conductor and one was placed out in the hall.

Measurement amounted to educated listening on earphones in the hall's studio. Then they made adjustments in controls and mike placement to optimize the mix. Sometimes a mike was moved only a few inches. Jarvi and the two engineers would then listen intently over the headset while the orchestra played.

A flap occurred when a TV reporter hung his jacket on the boom end of one of the painstakingly placed mikes. He promised not to do it again.

Even Robert Schaefer, the recording engineer who helped make Dorati's recordings with the DSO, came to help. In his day, before the hall was fully restored, the orchestra was placed off the stage with audience seating removed. This time the choice was on the stage. It was designed, after all, to frame and project the sound.

In all, the orchestra had 11 services last week, including the three days spent placing microphones. According to observers it was an uplifting experience as they discovered every acoustic potential of the hall and the equipment. In the process, Jarvi explored, to his pleasure, just how good the DSO could sound.

He was heard to croon at one point, "That's the best cello section I ever heard."

Friends of the players respond that it's hard to miss with a section led by Babini, Chanteaux, Thurman and DiFiore.

The fast pace is continuing, according to DSO spokesperson Paul Marotta. Not to be beaten to the market with the Beach Symphony, Chandos is going into production and distribution immediately. We can expect to see the first Jarvi-DSO CD released in early May, perhaps even late April.

And when Jarvi returns for his next concerts, more DSO performances are expected to go on tape to begin their journey into the DSO discography, the airwaves and our home players.

It brings a new high to an already exciting year, even with all the challenges. One of them is still finance, and gifts to the recording fund continue to be a high priority. Anyone who would like a piece of the action can still send a contribution to: DSO Recording Fund, 400 Buhl Building, Detroit, MI 48226.

DIA expects to draw a crowd for its DSO report: third Animation Celebration

This weekend only, the Detroit Institute of Arts' popular Detroit Film Theatre series will present the exclusive area engagement of The Third Animation Celebration.

One of the DFT's most eagerly anticipated annual events, the 1991 animation celebration features dozens of short animated films from around the globe. Some of this year's selections are serious and powerful examples of the modern animators' craft, while others are just plain hilarious.

The subject matter varies as widely as the director and country of origin: a Soviet animator elegantly interprets Dr. Suess; a computer generated lava lamp displays alarmingly human characteristics; and the distant relatives of Gumby have some impressions to do. As always, the celebration is comprised of recent prize winners and film festival favorites; all are being shown here for the first time.

Showtimes for The Third Animation Celebration are 7 and 9:30 p.m. Friday and Saturday; 4 and 7 p.m. Sunday. Tickets are $5 general admission and $4 for students with full-time ID. They are available in advance at the DIA ticket office or at the door of the performance.

Tickets can also be charged by phone with Visa or Mastercard, Monday through Friday only from 9:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m.

For further information, or to receive a season schedule of upcoming DFT films, phone 833-2323 from 9:30 a.m. until 5 p.m. daily.

Jarvi serves a near east feast

By Alex Suczek
Special Writer

The sellout audience at Orchestra Hall last Saturday evening was wistfully aware of the coincidence. The DSO concert offered a piano concerto rife with musical effects attributed to Saint-Saens' experience in Egypt and a Symphonic Suite programmed to a story from The Arabian Nights; this at a time when the map of the Arab world is uppermost in our minds.

But few were troubled by this inadvertent reminder of the war. It only added to the excitement of a concert that was memorable in many ways.

The opening number was the Overture to School for Scandal by Samuel Barber. This is one of the three works to be included on the DSO's first CD release with Music Director Neeme Jarvi on the Chandos label.

Reflecting the satire of Sheridan's comedy about England's jaded Restoration society, the work opens with a sarcastic tone. But like the play, Barber's music moves quickly to a more joyous and humorous mood with a lilting melody played in turn by each section of the orchestra. The orchestra was in good voice and Jarvi gave the piquant work a sprightly reading.

Pianist Lorin Hollander became the main event for the Concerto No. 5 in F major, op. 103, by Camille Saint-Saens. With undivided attention to phrasing and dynamics, Hollander shaped each melody and development to perfection. The romantically styled modulations were comparable in impact to works of Liszt or Rachmaninoff.

But Saint-Saens was his own man and let us know very quickly that he had something different in store. It was a challenge that Hollander met with both sensitive interpretation and unique technical achievement.

The second movement is credited with having been inspired by the composer's visit to Egypt where he picked up an Arabic love song sung by a Nile river boatman and was struck by the distinctive sounds of native musical instruments. As Hollander played, he brought to the music the unmistakable feeling of the orient and through his keyboard and pedaling technique imitated the sounds of finger cymbals, water drums and the Arabs' wailing predecessors of the violin and guitar.

As though it were not enough, the third movement begins with syncopated, rhythmic contrasts between piano and orchestra that have all the jazzy flair of fast ragtime. Was Saint-Saens before his time? It doesn't matter. The last movement was a Jarvi's artful holds and slowed tempi for the music of the young prince and princess made this tender love scene heartfelt and evocative.

The metaphors of music being what they are, one could, if one wished, hear the storm of war in the frenzied movements representing the Festival of Baghdad swinger reflecting the remarkable piano virtuosity with which the composer, as a youth, dazzled his professors and peers at the Paris Conservatory. It was performed with equally dazzling flair by Hollander. Jarvi and the orchestra to earn a hearty ovation.

The Sheherazade Suite of Rimsky-Korsakov which closed the concert, is lighter and more programmatic, retelling musically four tales from the Arabian Nights. Thus it is a work one is more apt to hear on records or on the air than in concert. In this performance, it proved to be a shining example of having to hear a live performance to measure a work's true quality.

Jarvi's direction brought power and excitement to the dramatic tales. The suspense was tangible and the storm at sea almost real. Here, too, was an outstanding opportunity to hear the elegant, sweet tone of Concertmistress Emmanuelle Boisvert's violin as she represented the storyteller Sheherazade introducing each of the four tales.

Thrilling glissandos on the harp were all the more effective as a result of the resonant acoustics of Orchestra Hall. And and the Wreck of Simbad's Ship. It was not what Rimsky-Korsakov had in mind, of course, but he had never heard of Saddam Hussein. Either way, Jarvi and the DSO provided a generous dose of excitement as the Suite approached its denouement with full orchestral force.

As is often the case, the last word was a woman's as Boisvert spun out Sheherazade's concluding phrases on her wondrously expressive violin. But then the audience proceeded to give Jarvi, Boisvert and the orchestra a rousing hand, interrupted by a delicious encore and culminating in exuberant rhythmic clapping. It ended only when Jarvi, with a smile, took his concertmistress by the arm and led her from the stage.

This weekend brings a Weekender Pops Series with Erich Kunzel leading the DSO and the Singing Hoosiers in a program of light classics and selections from "Music Man." Concerts are at 8:30 p.m. Friday and Saturday and 3:30 p.m. Sunday.

The DSO also will present the second of its 1990-91 season recital attractions Sunday at 8 p.m. with renowned pianist Peter Serkin. For tickets and information call 833-3700.

Just remember this — superficial 'Havana' is no 'Casablanca'

By Chris Lathrop
Special Writer

These days, the predominant philosophy seems to be "out with the old, in with the new." It's happening everywhere. Just ask Ernie Harwell.

It's happening in Hollywood. Cases in point: Robert Redford and "Havana," Sydney Pollack's latest film.

Redford was one of the top actors of the 1970's, sharing the spotlight with Paul Newman in hit movies like "Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid" and "The Sting." He also turned up alongside Dustin Hoffman in the excellent "All the President's Men."

But Redford pulled a disappearing act in the 1980s, with his most notable work coming from behind the camera in the powerful drama "Ordinary People" and in front of the camera in the disappointing comedy "Legal Eagles." As a result, Redford's box office appeal dimished significantly.

Now, at the beginning of a new decade, he has resurfaced in "Havana," a romantic epic that has been compared to "Casablanca." Redford has aged well; aside from some loose skin around the neck, he still has a great physique and a full head of that sandy blond hair.

As a box office draw, however, Redford has been replaced by young turks Kevin Costner, Mel Gibson and, yes, even Arnold Schwarzenegger. So in order for "Havana" to be well-received, it had to rely on solid plot and character development. In other words, "Havana" had to be an exceptional film.

So far, the reception to "Havana" has been lukewarm at best, reflecting the mediocrity of the work. Blame falls on producer, director and co-writer Pollack, whose film is so retrogressive that it fails to live up to modern moviemaking standards.

The story takes place during the last days of 1958, just before the Cuban revolution and Castro's rise to power. Redford plays

Jack Weil, a gambler whose passions in life are beautiful women and high-stakes poker. Jack is on his way to Havana in search of the biggest card game of his life, to be arranged by his friend, casino manager Joe Volpi (Alan Arkin).

What Jack doesn't bargain for is crossing paths with Bobby Duran (Lena Olin), the beautiful wife of a Cuban revolutionary. Jack is immediately taken by her, but when her husband is murdered by the existing regime, Bobby is determined to continue his cause.

Jack tries desperately to convince Bobby to abandon the impending revolution and return with him to Miami. Meanwhile, Joe has set up a lucrative poker game that conflicts with Jack's planned escape. Jack is forced to choose between his two passions, a choice made more difficult by a startling discovery.

On the surface, "Havana" has the makings of a great film: a good cast, an interesting plot and a talented director. Unfortunately, Pollack never dips below the surface to develop significant historical events. He merely hints at what should have been a major theme, that the carnival atmosphere in Cuba was created by the American government and maintained by a puppet regime, prompting revolutionaries to support Castro's communist faction as a way of eliminating the American influence.

In a climactic scene, Jack and Joe watch as a mob destroys the casino following Castro's successful coup. As card tables and slot machines are symbolically destroyed, Joe turns to Jack and says: "It looks like fun." That is the extent to which Pollack addresses the subject.

Had they received more than surface treatment, the political undertones in "Havana" could have added more tension to the relationship between Jack, an American, and Bobby, a Swede who has embraced the revolution as her own cause. As it is, the romance, like the film, pales in comparison to what could have been.

Today's moviegoer expects a lot from a film, especially one of presumed epic proportions. Audiences expect all the important elements of the plot to be developed, not just mentioned and subsequently ignored at the expense of one or two primary elements. This is especially true in "Havana," as the primary element, the romance between Jack and Bobby, suffers because of a lack of attention given to the film's political subject matter.

"Havana" runs more than two hours, which should have been plenty of time for Pollack to effectively incorporate the political issues into the film. Instead, he wastes precious celluloid to illustrate Jack's extravagant lifestyle, which, unlike the reasons behind the revolution, could have been implied.

Any similarities between "Havana" and "Casablanca" are purely coincidental. "Casablanca" was and is a classic; "Havana" is destined for little more than a quick and forgettable trip to the video shelves. If Redford is planning a comeback, he still has some work to do, as "Havana" falls short of his and its own potential.

Bogie himself couldn't have made it work.

Magical 'Edward Scissorhands' is a cut above the average fairytale film

By Marian Trainor
Special Writer

"Edward Scissorhands," a whimsical and haunting adult fairy tale, begins with the familiar "Once upon a time" as we see a grandmother sitting in a rocking chair beside her granddaughter's bed. Outside the window snow is falling. The child asks as she looks in wonder, "Where does the snow come from?" And the story begins.

Long ago there lived a boy too sensitive for this world (Johnny Depp). He lived way up on a mountain top in an eerie old castle. In a way, he wasn't a real boy. He was the creation of an inventor (Vincent Price), a kindly Gepetto figure.

The boy had a beautiful powder-white face and a shock of black hair, a brain, a heart and eloquent black-rimmed eyes. The only part of him that was not human was his hands. Before the old man could fashion hands for him, he died.

In place of his hands was a complicated array of two-foot long scissor blades — one set of shears for each "finger." He could have been a frightening figure, but his voice was soft and delicate and he took great care to keep the scissors neatly folded. His face was covered with self-inflicted scars from his efforts to dress and feed himself.

He made the most of his disfigurement by becoming an artist, using his scissorhands to sculpt lawn hedges into striking figures — dinosaurs, reindeers, towering statues. And so he passes his day in this strange world he had built for himself.

And then one day, the Avon Lady (Diane Wiest) comes to call. A kind, generous person, instead of recoiling in horror, she offers to try out her products on his face to cover the scars. She decides to take him home to live with her family — husband Bill (Alan Arkin), teenage daughter Kim (Winona Ryder), and her young son Kevin (Robert Oliveri).

It's a brand new world for Edward. He has problems with the water bed and eating peas, but in his own quiet way he adjusts as do those around him.

After inadvertently angering two neighbors, the innocent is hunted down and driven back to his Gothic home.

Tim Burton, who directed the demented but fun "Pee Wee's Big Adventure," "Beetlejuice" and "Batman" has once again demonstrated his ability to conjure up arresting visuals in "Scissorhands."

Depp brings a wondrous dignity and discipline to Edward and Wiest is delightful as the concerned plucky mother determined to fit Edward into the life of the community. The film closes as it began with the child listening wide-eyed as her grandmother finishes with the answer to her question, "We never had snow before Edward came."

In "Scissorhands," Burton has conjured up an original punk fairy tale that is both satirical and magically sweet.

Performances by Cher, Ryder, keep 'Mermaids' afloat

Sweet-natured may seem a misnomer in describing a film starring Cher. She hasn't changed or mellowed at all and is still determined "to do it my way."

But in "Mermaids" she is also a mother, a good and concerned one, who in her own way tries to create a happy if hectic household.

She has two daughters, both of whom were rather casual happenings. The older daughter, Charlotte (Winona Ryder), was produced from a brief union with a Mr. Flax, a name Cher adopts to become Mrs. Flax. The younger daughter, Kate (Christina Ricca), came along after Cher spent too much time delivering towels to an Olympic swimmer. Eight-year-old Kate is a happy-go-lucky adorable child, who aspires to be a swimmer. She practices endlessly in the pool or the bathtub trying to increase the time she can hold her breath underwater.

With Charlotte it's a different story. She does her best to be as unlike her mother as possible. She is quiet and introspective. She falls in love with Roman Catholicism and spends time reading the lives of the saints. She even erects a shrine in her room which irks her mother "Charlotte," she screams, "we're Jewish."

One of the things that upsets Charlotte the most is that Mrs. Flax — as she often refers to her — insists on moving at least once a year. Mrs. Flax, for her part, believes life is change and death is dwelling in the past, or staying in one place too long. This is 1963 and Mrs. Flax is a woman ahead of her time. She depends on no man to support her, to help her raise her two daughters or for comfort.

"Mermaids" is adapted by the English writer June Roberts from the novel by Patty Dann. It is a gentle comedy about growing up in an era where really bad things happened only on television. The year is clearly identified with several shots of televised scenes of the Kennedy assassination and of Cher dancing around the kitchen to the songs of the era, such as

"Johnny Angel," and "She's My Baby."

Although Cher is the focal attraction (you can't imagine any movie where she wouldn't be), the story belongs to Charlotte.

Cher gives her usual assured flamboyant performance. When she's on the screen it's fun all the way.

Ryder is enchanting and funny. She is good at playing the innocently sane teen of earlier years. At the same time she is in touch with the typical teenage insanity of any era; funny, sad and scary all at once. They are a dynamite pair.

P.S. Don't leave before the last scene. You'll miss seeing a little surprise.

Travel Trends

By Phyllis Hollenbeck

Seniors fare better

There are some real advantages to getting older. It may be difficult to believe, but the mature traveler is recognized and appreciated by the travel and tourism industry. He or she generally appreciates cultural differences rather than criticizes them, has disposable income, the time available for travel and the interest.

The mature traveler's needs and wants are being scrutinized by all segments of the travel industry. "Young folks, it appears, go the movies; older ones go on vacation," says travel guru Arthur Frommer. Today, seniors are healthier, live longer and feel better about themselves. The senior workforce today is looking forward to retirement. With families scattered across the country, retirement is looked upon as a time to visit with family and friends and to explore the world, not a time for the hearth and rocking chair.

The airlines are out front in the quest to lure the mature traveler. If you or your spouse is 62 or older, you are eligible for some special discount fares on most major airlines. Senior travelers are currently being offered three programs — passes, coupons or fare discounts.

Airline passes are being offered by Continental Airlines for frequent travelers. You pay a fixed price and you can take a one-way flight almost every week for a full year. There are several variations on the theme, with add-ons for Mexico, the Caribbean, Central America, Hawaii, Europe and the South Pacific.

The basic cost for the domestic "Passport" is $1,500 for coach and $1,999 for first class. This once-a-year cost covers travel to every city serviced by Continental in the lower 48 states plus Canada and the U.S. Virgin Islands. It allows up to three visits to the same destination within a year. There are some blackout dates, and you are limited to 23 round-trips a year. Travel is restricted to mid-week and seat availability is limited; but a little research will show that this could be a bargain for you even if you don't travel every week.

A major risk in the program is the financial fragility of Continental. It is up to the individual to decide whether the savings are worth taking that risk.

Another alternative is the senior travelers' coupon books, now being sold by most major U.S. airlines. These books give senior travelers four or eight coupons. Each coupon is good for a single one-way trip between cities in the lower 48 states. The prices for these coupon books vary from airline to airline. There are rules, of course, and limited seating. But, for the person planning at least two long-distance round trips within a year, these coupon books will provide transportation for less than the lowest published excursion fares.

Finally, most airlines offer seniors a straight 10 percent discount on normal published adult fares. Southwest Airlines even has a complete set of special reduced fares for travelers 65 years and older.

Many of the airlines have other special fare programs for senior passengers. Work with your travel agent to determine which program is best for you. Although it will take time, research and advanced planning, it can provide some terrific savings in travel costs.

Chase away the winter blahs at Henry Ford Museum & Greenfield Village

If Jack Frost nips at your nose once too often and the long, cold winter seems to stretch endlessly in front of you, Henry Ford Museum & Greenfield Village offers a variety of experiences which can chase away the winter blues.

To counteract the post-holiday lethargy, the Dearborn museum will focus on Americans' fascination with fitness with both a new exhibit and a special weekend.

The traveling exhibit "Fit for America: Health, Fitness, Sport and American Society, 1830-1940" shows how Americans have embraced almost every fitness fad that's come along in the last two centuries. It will be on view through Oct. 31.

On Jan. 19-21, old and new fitness fads come to life during the special weekend entitled America Gets Fit. As they explore everything from calisthenics to aerobics, and from snake oil to bottled water, visitors of all ages can discover America's changing health concerns through participation and demonstration.

For anyone who could use a good laugh to cure the winter blahs, head to Henry Ford Museum on Feb. 16 and 17 for Giggles, Gags and Guffaws. This weekend will not only have visitors laughing in the aisles as they track America's sense of humor through two centuries, but it will offer opportunities for them to make others laugh.

Vaudeville acts, political satire, and much more will tickle the "punny" bone of all.

Just as cabin fever reaches its peak, Get Away From it All offers museum visitors a minivacation on March 17 and 18 to explore the trends and travails of American travel. This weekend complements the special exhibit "Americans on Vacation," which examines 150 years of change in how we've planned for, traveled to, enjoyed and remembered our vacations.

While Henry Ford Museum offers visitors an opportunity to discover more than 300 years of American technology and ingenuity anytime they visit the museum, these are the final weeks to see two popular exhibits.

Power In Motion: The Automotive Design Career of Bill Mitchell, which chronicles the striking work of this former General Motors design chief, will close on Feb. 4. And The Herman Miller Furniture Collection: A Gift to Henry Ford Museum & Greenfield Village, featuring innovations in 20th-century residential and office furniture, will end on March 4.

Visitors are also welcome to enjoy a quiet winter walk among the outdoor sites, the historic homes, shops and workplaces of Greenfield Village. If weather permits, sleigh rides or horse-drawn carriage tours are available for an additional charge. While Village building interiors are closed from Jan. 2 until March 12, one ticket buys admission to both sites.

Fisher plays 'Heidi Chronicles'

Wendy Wasserstein's multi-award winning play "The Heidi Chronicles" plays until Jan. 27 at the Fisher Theatre. Stephanie Dunnam from the TV series "Dynasty" stars as Wasserstein's heroine, Heidi Holland.

A coming of age tale of Heidi Holland and her generation, "The Heidi Chronicles" follows one woman's journey through the minefields of the last three decades: The impassioned 60's, the consciousness raising of the 70's, and the "having it all" of the 80's. Heidi's 25-year search for "her place" is both touching and humorous.

Tickets for "The Heidi Chronicles" are available at all TicketMaster outlets or the Fisher Theatre box office.

Manual Alvarez Bravo featured in exhibition at DIA

"Revelaciones: The Art of Manuel Alvarez Bravo" will be seen at the Detroit Institute of Arts through Sunday, March 3. The exhibition presents 113 images representing six decades of the 88-year-old photographer's work, and is free to the public.

Alvarez Bravo's black-and-white photographs are known for their rich content and powerful imagery. The subjects — whether landscapes, nudes, portraits, or murals — often transcend the straight image to portray his inner vision of Mexico through symbolism and mythology. For Alvarez Bravo, early influences included Mexican muralists Diego Rivera, David Alfaro Siqueiros, and Jose Clemente Orozco; writers such as Cervantes, Joyce and Dostoevsky, and photographer-colleagues such as Paul Strand and Edward Weston.

"Revelaciones" was organized by the Museum of Photographic Arts, San Diego, Calif., and made possible by a grant from American Express Company. Additional support was received from the Rockefeller Foundation and the National Endowment for the Arts.

To augment the exhibition, a bilingual video (15 minutes) produced by the Museum of Photographic Arts will be shown continuously in a screening room near the exhibition gallery. Accompanying the exhibition is a bilingual catalogue with an essay by Nissan Perez and introduction by Arthur Ollman ($19.95 in the DIA Museum Shop). Perez and Ollman co-curated the exhibition.

Didactic panels in the gallery and the accompanying brochure are printed in both English and Spanish.

The exhibition is open to the public in the DIA's De Salle Gallery of Photography during regular museum hours: Wednesday through Sunday, 9:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m.; closed Monday, Tuesday and holidays.

FOIA gives little information

Some two months after the firing of then South hockey coach Tim Zimmerman, school superintendent Ed Shine remains close-mouthed about the situation.

Other officials, including South director of athletics Jo Lake and South principal Dr. John B. Artis, also decline to comment.

Zimmerman did not return several phone calls, either.

Zimmerman, who had coached the South hockey team since 1983-84, was fired Nov. 26 after school authorities obtained information indicating he had engaged in activities which the administration viewed as being inconsistent with the health and welfare of the students.

A month ago, I made a plea to the school system to explain why he was fired, but administrators remained tight-lipped. At that time, I thought the school administrators were gutless for not elaborating, but after further investigation I realize that the officials were

Reynolds, quick start push North past South

By Rob Fulton
Sports Editor

Behind the sharp shooting of D.J. Reynolds, who had a game-high 19 points, and a thoroughbred-type start, the North basketball team upended South, 56-53, Jan. 15 at South.

South had been riding a four-game winning streak, including two victories in the Macomb Area Conference White Division, but couldn't ward off the Norsemen, who were underdogs going in.

The win was North's first in three league games, but still leaves the team two full games behind first place Roseville. The win also snapped North's three-game losing streak.

"This was a big win, but they're all big," said North coach George Olman, whose team moved to 4-4 overall.

"We were two games off the pace and we couldn't afford to go three back, but the kids deserve all the credit for the way they rallied around one another and played one of the better games of the season."

South, which had the ball with a chance to win the game with eight seconds left, fell to 2-1 in the league and 6-2 overall.

"After viewing the tape of the game, I realized that two or three of our guys were playing more with their hearts than their heads," said South coach George Petrouleas. "I've always said if you play too much of an emotional game it can get you in trouble, and sure enough it did."

With eight seconds to play, South's Tim Gramling, who finished with a team high 14 points, including three 3-pointers, drove to the lane and dished the ball to Mike Armstrong, who tried for a layup only to have it rejected by North's Adam Korzeniewski, who finished with 17 points and nine rebounds in his finest performance of the season.

South, down 54-53, was forced to foul Korzeniewski, who iced the game by hitting both ends of a one-and-one, pushing the lead to 56-53. South had one desperate chance with four seconds to play, but couldn't get a shot off.

"We let North out of the gates early and had to play catch-up ball the rest of the night," Petrouleas said. "We tried to do too many individual things and didn't work hard enough as a collective unit."

Olman didn't think the Norsemen could get an early jump on the Blue Devils, but was pleasantly surprised.

"We always want to get out of the gates early, but I wasn't so sure we could do it against South," he said. "They play a strong defense and had only been beaten once, but we just played a consistent game and executed well."

North outscored South 22-13 in the first quarter behind Reynolds' 12 points, but in turn was outscored the final three quarters by the Devils.

"Taking nothing away from North because they played a good game, but I think we only really played the last nine to 10 minutes of the game," Petrouleas said. "We outscored them and chipped away and had more than one chance to win it in the fourth quarter, but we missed some extremely important shots."

Lady Norsemen spiked by Lady Devils

By Rob Fulton
Sports Editor

It appeared that neither team wanted to win the match and take control.

However, it was one of the more exciting volleyball contests between North and South.

After losing the first game, 9-15, the Lady Norsemen outlasted South, 17-15, in the second game to force a third and deciding game.

But, it was no contest as the Lady Blue Devils rolled to a 15-3 win to take the match.

South is 3-1 in the Macomb Area Conference White Division, and 6-2 overall, while North is 3-1 and 4-4.

Both teams are one full game behind league leading Fraser, which is unbeaten.

"The only reason I was happy about this game is that we won," said South coach Cindy Sharpe. "We didn't play well at all, but we won so I'm happy about that."

South may have faltered on its own in the second game, but a weakening North team couldn't supply much opposition in the final game.

"I've already put that game out of my mind," said North coach Leslie Harwood. "My girls were there for three hours before we even started playing and they were so pumped up emotionally that I think the long wait really hurt us."

The freshman and jayvee games were longer than expected, therefore the wait.

"The girls looked tired in that final game," Harwood said. "Although I don't want to take anything away from South, we were tired. Two days before the match we drained ourselves by winning our last two games and reaching the semifinals in the Foley tournament, so maybe that had something to do with it."

Or perhaps South just took control.

"I was surprised it was that easy," said Sharpe. "I thought North would have come out a lot stronger than that, especially after coming off that big win in the second game. We finally started getting our serves in and playing a better offense."

Getting serves in was something neither team did in the second game that's why there were five lead changes.

"We got stagnated because we couldn't get our serves in and we gave up more points than we should have," said Sharpe, whose team missed five straight service points in that game. "That's been our problem all season and it hurt us in that game, too."

North wasn't much better, but did prevail.

"We had trouble taking control by getting our serves down,"

Harwood said. "I think the girls did a great job of coming back and then holding South off, and I thought it would have been enough to carry over to the third game, but obviously it wasn't."

"Both teams seemed very up-tight and too emotional," Sharpe said. "And I think that limited both teams in what they should have been doing. We didn't do what we should have, and we were too caught up emotionally and started doing some really crazy things in the second game that cost us."

South's Tina Higel had five kills and Angela Drake four. Ashley Moran and Emilie Ayrault combined for six kills and Jenny Nyenhuis had 16 service points, including four aces.

North was led by Tricia Campau's eight service points and Lori Haskell's six.

"We tried to stop them from scoring too many points in a row and then gain control," Sharpe said. "We did that in the first and third games even though we made some mistakes, but the second game was pretty bad."

Blue Devils split pair in Alpena hockey invitational

By Rob Fulton
Sports Editor

After picking up a 3-2 win over Brother Rice Jan. 15, the Grosse Pointe South hockey team dropped one of two games at the Alpena Hockey Tournament.

South is 9-3-1 overall and 5-2-1 in the Michigan Metro East League, but still trails league-leader Southgate Anderson by two full games.

"The Brother Rice win was very big for us because it was a good test," said South coach Jim McCauley.

South took a 2-0 lead after one period on goals by Brad Warezak and Brian Crane, who leads the league in scoring (14 points), but allowed two goals in the second period. Tied at 2-2, the game was up and down until Warezak notched the game-winning goal midway through the third period, making a winner out of goalie Jason Hall.

At Alpena Jan. 18, South took on and beat Port Huron Northern, 3-2.

The Blue Devils led 3-0, and almost lost the game after becoming complacent.

"I think we were content with the lead we had and really didn't seal the game when we could have," McCauley said.

"We relaxed in the third period and had to hang on to win it."

Goalie Chris Paul earned the win. South took its lead on goals by Crane, Peter Bourke, who was later named to the all-tournament team, and John Morreale.

"We escaped with the win, but the next night we really stunk the place up," said McCauley. "Our big guns were nowhere to be found, and if we're going to win in the big games, we've got to have our big guys, who we count on a lot, to be there for us and they weren't."

South was shut out for the first time this season, 6-0, by Alpena, the No. 5 ranked team in Class A.

"Alpena is a very disciplined team," McCauley said. "We were two steps slow all night long and let them carry most of the play. We stayed with them for two periods, but didn't have anything left in the third period."

McCauley credits Hall for keeping South in the game.

"Jason played a strong game, but he had no support from anyone else," he said. "We were going to the puck, but were too slow getting there. Jason made some fine plays, but it seemed nobody else was playing with him."

Basketball

Mike McLaughlin poured in 26 points and Bill Leins hit a crucial three-point shot as the Blue Devils beat Romeo, 69-64, Jan. 18 at Romeo.

South led until Romeo took a three-point lead with three minutes to play, but Leins, a senior co-captain, sent the game into overtime by hitting a three-point shot with six seconds to play.

Regulation ended 61-61, but South pulled away in the three-minute overtime period for its seventh win against two defeats. More importantly, South picked up its third Macomb Area Conference White Division win to stay in the race.

"We got a big game from Mike and a pretty strong team effort," said South coach George Petrouleas. "It was a big win because we stayed in the hunt."

At 3-1 in the league, South trails unbeaten Roseville and Utica by one full game. South played at Roseville Jan. 22 (after press time), and hosts Utica Jan. 25.

Blair Hess and Leins finished with 12 points each, and Tim Gramling had eight points and nine assists.

The Blue Devils led 37-33 at half with a strong defensive front. South was tough offensively, too, shooting 53 percent from the floor and 80 percent from the free throw line.

"We did everything we had to do defensively and got some points off our defense," Petrouleas said. "In the overtime period we toughened up our defense and didn't give Romeo any easy opportunities to take control."

It appeared South lost control when it fell behind in the fourth quarter, but Petrouleas didn't think so.

"We missed a couple shots and Romeo hit four straight free throws to take the lead," he said. "But we were still in control of the game even if it didn't look that way."

Wrestling

Don't take a second look when you glance at the South wrestling team's overall record.

South continued to enjoy its finest season ever as it rolled up two wins in triangular meets last week.

South beat Lake Shore, 62-18, and Notre Dame, 47-18, in one meet, and cruised past Allen Park, 46-28, and Edsel Ford, 33-30.

Double winners against Lake Shore and Notre Dame were Paul Kelley, Lou Preston, Scott Cairo and Chris Gianino. Kris Høglund, Charlie Lickford, Richie Reynolds, Jesse Culver and Frank Voelker were single winners.

Kelley and Voelker led the double win over Allen Park and Ford with two wins each, and Tim Quantz, Scott Cairo, Brion Czajczynski, Jon Ostrowski, Gianino and Culver each won once.

South is 9-4 overall and 2-0 in the league.

Swimming

Behind the first-place diving of Chad Hepner and Ted Stedem's win in the 100 butterfly, the South swim team earned its first win of the season, a 109-70 decision at Fraser.

Jim Bellan went on to win the 100 backstroke, and teamed with Stedem, Brenn Schoenherr and Andy Walter to win the medley relay.

Tim Jogan won the 200 free and the 100 free, in which he swam a state qualifying time. Chuck Ruifork won the 500 free and Stedem took the 100 breaststroke with a pool-record time. Chris Nelson won the 50 freestyle.

Gymnasts' streak ends with loss to Trenton

By Rob Fulton
Sports Editor

The winning was fun, but the winning streak only lasted two meets before the Lady Norsemen gymnastics team bowed to Trenton, 119.65-116.45 Jan. 16, despite recording its highest team score of the season in three meets.

On Jan. 14, North extended its streak to two by defeating Belleville, 104.4-98.5.

Megan Gray paced North in the win over Belleville with a 7.75 on the vault and a 7.0 on the uneven parallel bars. Lisa Vallan was second on the vault at 7.65.

Jenny Quick (6.8) and Paula Herodote (6.7) took first and second, respectively, on the balance beam, while Heather Henning recorded a team-high 7.0 in the floor exercise. Debbie Stevenson had a 6.9 in the routine.

At home against Trenton, Gray took the vault with a season high 8.25, and Vallan was second at 8.15. Janell Ellis and Torrey Teetaert both recorded a 7.7. Gray was first on the bars (7.7) and Stevenson was second (7.45).

On the beam, Henning was first (7.85) and Herodote second at 7.55. Gray, Henning and Stevenson all recorded a 7.5 in the floor competition.

When you're behind, you can't miss your shots and then give up a bucket at the other end."

South shot 45 percent and North 55 percent.

With 1:13 to play in the second quarter, North's Tim Sacka was injured and left the game on a stretcher. He landed head-first on the floor after making a play, suffering a concussion and a cut which required 16 stitches.

"We were extremely pumped up in the locker room for Tim," said Reynolds. "We stuck together to win this one for him. We didn't know what to expect or how badly he was injured, but we knew we had a job to do and just did it."

Olman and Petrouleas were concerned, too.

"We made a statement about Tim," said Olman, "but then we wanted to focus on why we were there and that was to win the game."

"The injury really took the luster off a fine game because we were all very concerned for the young man," Petrouleas said. "Our kids were very concerned about him, but we had to temporarily put it behind us and get back to executing and playing defense."

Several players stepped in for Sacka and did an admirable job, but it just wasn't the same team.

"It took a lot out of us to take a player of Tim's caliber out of the lineup," Olman said. "However, we had some fine performances off the bench."

After taking a 29-23 lead, North couldn't stretch its margin because South was creeping back into the game. Mike McLaughlin hit a couple of big buckets en route to his 11 points, and Brad Hess, who fouled out in the fourth quarter, also finished with 11 points. "We executed better in the second half," Petrouleas said, "but we didn't have the luxury of playing our own game. When you're behind, you're forced to play more of a transition game."

That transition game enabled South to cut North's lead to 41-37 at the end of three quarters, and a couple of muffed passes in the final two minutes of the game kept North from icing the contest.

"We didn't make some good passes," Olman said. "We made a couple soft and glaring passes and that almost cost us."

Gramling's three-pointer with 1:43 to play cut North's lead to 52-49, but North's Mike Haskell hit two free throws, extending the lead to 54-49. McLaughlin countered with two free throws and a basket, pulling South within a point, 54-53, with 36 seconds to play, but that's when Korzeniewski took over.

"Our goal at the start of the game was to play four strong quarters and keep the game winnable," Olman said. "We were consistent and the whole team rallied around one another for one of our better performances."

trying to protect the students' welfare.

As far as administrators are concerned, it's a done deal, and that's why they hired Jim McCauley Dec. 10.

The Free Press and News both filed Freedom of Information Act requests in an effort to get more detail on the firing. I received the same information from Shine, and through my own guessing and assumptions, I've got to say the administrators had no other choice but to fire Zimmerman, who once told me he used poor judgment on some things which he wouldn't specify.

Much of the information was deleted because data of a personal nature, where the public disclosure would constitute a clearly unwarranted invasion of an individual's privacy, cannot be made public.

It was also Shine's opinion that disclosure of the information which had been deleted from the documents would constitute such an invasion of Zimmerman's privacy and that of the students of the school system.

According to the FOIA package:

A letter from Artis to Zimmerman stated that Zimmerman had not gotten parental or school administration permission for the activities he participated in (whatever they were).

When asked to provide full disclosure of any information he had about the incidents, Zimmerman didn't produce any further information.

In a statement prepared by Zimmerman, he admitted receiving a newsletter about twice a year that was professionally done and very informative, and Zimmerman considered it a good publication.

Two years after the newsletter started arriving in the mail, Zimmerman received a letter on printed stationery with an imprinted envelope. It requested some information regarding athletes born on a certain month in a certain year, with a nine digit ID number corresponding with each athlete.

Also in Zimmerman's statement was the disclosure that over the course of the years, a total of about six (deleted) were sent to (deleted).

They (whoever that is) fed the information forwarded by Zimmerman into a computer to develop optimal training programs for athletes.

In Artis' statement, it was revealed that Artis and Zimmerman had made attempts to determine the authenticity of a post office box number that the information was apparently being forwarded to, but those attempts proved futile. According to an employee, the Long Beach Post Office has no such post office box and no record of a company called (deleted).

At meetings on Nov. 21 and 26, Zimmerman, according to Artis, was given the opportunity to present any evidence he wished to justify his admitted activities. At the Nov. 26 meeting, Artis said Zimmerman gave "us" no information other than what was already contained in Artis' statement.

Artis then concluded: "Based on your admissions and the above findings, I and the administration of the school system have concluded that your activities have been totally inconsistent with the health and welfare of our students. Therefore, the Grosse Pointe Public School System can no longer retain your services as varsity hockey coach for Grosse Pointe South High School."

VanDeweghe, Crenshaw lead Knights to 9-4-3 mark

By Rob Fulton
Sports Editor

Last week, junior captain Andrew VanDeweghe scored five goals to lead the University of Lake Superior ice hockey team to two ties and a win.

ULS, the defending Class B-C-D state champion, is ranked No. 9 with a 9-4-3 record.

ULS tied Sarnia St. Pat's, 5-5, and Cranbrook, 2-2, and beat Ann Arbor Pioneer, 4-3.

VanDeweghe netted a hat trick against St. Pat's and drew an assist, and Eric Kisskalt and Billy Robb had one goal and two assists each. The score was deadlocked at 0-0 at the end of one period, but ULS got a goal from Kisskalt and two from VanDeweghe to tie the score at 3-3. St. Pat's took a 4-3 lead, but Robb's goal tied it at four and VanDeweghe's third goal of the night with 1:26 to play tied the score at 5-5.

Tom Best had 21 saves in net. On the road at Cranbrook, Best came up with 25 big saves as the Knights avenged a Dec. 8 loss to the Cranes with a 2-2 tie.

In the December matchup, ULS and Cranbrook were tied 2-2 going into the third period, but the Cranes exploded for four goals en route to a 6-2 win. That wasn't going to happen this time, though.

"They broke us in the third period the last time and I think the kids remembered that and didn't want it to happen again," said ULS coach John Fowler. "We really played a solid game against a strong team and it was a big tie for us."

Kisskalt gave ULS a 1-0 lead in the first period, but Cranbrook tied it midway through the second period. Crenshaw then gave ULS a 2-1 lead with 2:26 left in the second period, but Cranbrook tied it a minute later.

Crenshaw ended his fine week at home Jan. 19 with a game-winning goal against Pioneer.

Crenshaw's sixth goal of the season came with 1:28 to play in the game.

VanDeweghe opened the scoring with a first-period goal, but Pioneer tied it late in the second period at 1-1. Robb's second period power-play goal moved ULS to a 2-1 lead, but Pioneer again tied the score, and eventually took a 3-2 lead.

VanDeweghe then notched the tying goal and a minute later Crenshaw won the game with a slap shot in the slot.

Basketball

The Knights hadn't played in a week, but they didn't appear flat as they rolled to a 54-46 win over previously unbeaten Oakland Catholic Jan. 18 at home.

ULS trailed 13-12 at the end of the first quarter, but raced to a 28-19 halftime lead. Oakland picked the pace up in the second half with a full court press and cut the lead to five, but clutch foul shooting by DeDan Milton and floor leadership by Tarik Lester held the Lancers at bay.

"David Darby and Kevin Whitfield really did a job on the defensive boards," said Chuck Wright, whose team is 4-5 overall. "It was crucial that we didn't give Oakland, a very good shooting team, any second chances."

Whitfield collected 12 rebounds while Darby had 11. Lester led the Knights with 16 points, and Brent McMahon (14) and Milton (11) combined for 25 points.

Swimming

Despite losing 104-68 to defending Class C-D champ Erie Mason, the Knights had four first-place finishes.

Jon Sieber won the 200 freestyle and the 500 freestyle in a state-cut time of 5:31.6. Freshman Anita Werner placed third (5:57.4) in the 500 freestyle.

100 backstroke (1:13.4).

Sean Gardella, Tracy Howard, Ali Bararsani and Lesley each dropped several seconds off their times in the 100 freestyle, and Zhenyu Zhu and Margo Metcalf also had fine performances in the breaststroke and butterfly, respectively.

Seiber, Weyhing, Werner and Abby McIntyre teamed up in the

North

Basketball

Coming off a big win Jan. 15 at South, the Grosse Pointe North basketball team was hoping to keep the momentum.

Utica had different ideas. "You'd like to think you're not flat after a win Tuesday night, but I guess we were," said Norsemen coach George Olman. "It's disappointing, because now it's going to be awfully tough to get back into the league race."

The Norsemen were upended on the road by the Chieftians, 55-47, despite 15 points from D.J. Reynolds Jan. 18.

North is now 1-3 in the league and 4-5 overall.

"I guess we found out that we can't replace Tim Sacka," Olman said about his senior forward who was out with an injury. "You always hope someone will step forward and pick up the slack, but they didn't."

Plus a 37 percent shooting night from the floor didn't help.

"We obviously didn't shoot the ball very well and I think we can contribute that to Tim's absence," Olman said. "We missed his leadership, plus when you take someone like him out of your lineup it's going to hurt somewhat. We just needed someone to step forward and he didn't."

Adam Lowry had 10 points for North.

Volleyball

After losing to South Jan. 14, the Grosse Pointe North volleyball team got back on the winning track with a 15-11, 15-8 victory at Utica.

Milly Dyson had 11 service points, including 10 straight, and Melissa Drouillard and Noelle Cormier had five each. Drouillard had three aces and Cormier had two.

Bonnie Krieg had four kills on eight hits, and Jenny Shapiro and Missy Bania combined for 14 of 17 hits.

Hockey

With a 6-4 win over Cabrini, the Norsemen picked up their first Michigan Metro League win.

Wrestling

With wins over L'Anse Creuse (39-32), Clawson (42-32) and Bishop Foley (54-18), the Norsemen improved their record to 3-1.

Bryan Fleming, Reid O'Brien, Keith Giannico, Dan Skuce and Chris Irving all pinned three opponents.

Swimming

Charlie Roddis won the 100 backstroke and 100 butterfly, but the Norsemen lost to Edsel Ford, 117-67.

Steve Williams won the 200 and 500 freestyle events for North, and Peter Ellison was first in the breaststroke.

Another Big Apple, please: Driving in New York, Part II

When we offered to drive our student back to New York City following a recent holiday, we were in possession of a smart, aerodynamic little Mercury Tracer station wagon. We harbored no illusions about the ease of the 650-mile, one-day drive. And we're not as quickly disturbed by the quantities of goods this new outlet-mall generation possesses.

The 1991 Tracer is a Japanese-American design. We figured if anyone can create great spaces in a small vehicle and make it economical to run and reasonably comfortable for a long haul, it would be the Mazda-Ford Motor Co. team behind the new Tracer/Escort. Our earlier New York run was in a vehicle from the other end of the Mercury lineup, a Grand Marquis four-door sedan.

So on the last Saturday of the month, we synchronized our three watches for a 9 a.m. departure from Grosse Pointe. We left promptly at 10:15 a.m. Make that 10:20, after a return for a favorite hairbrush left in the bathroom.

This time discrepancy might have upset some folks, but not these experienced parents. Our first drive to Manhattan around the end of August was scheduled for a rise-and-shine 8 a.m. departure. That warm Tuesday, we hit the freeway at 10:45 a.m. We're making progress.

No doubt about it, the Tracer was loaded. In spite of parental pleading, nothing came home with the student for winter storage. He claimed he needed everything he took in August, plus the three large boxes of clothes mailed subsequently.

November's cargo included an ugly but utilitarian end table for a sparsely furnished apartment; a beautiful 4-foot by 6-foot area rug, assorted posters (framed and soft), winter clothing, overnight gear, kitchen wares, and a couple of grocery bags stuffed with fresh fruit, Big J bran muffins and enough reading material for a drive to New York by way of Horror tale from the Big Apple: Sign gives range of typical parking costs on Manhattan, from $7.19 for a half-hour to $312.90 a month.

New Orleans, if necessary.

The rug was nicely accommodated by the wagon's split folding rear seat. What a practical design! The full-size rear-seat passenger had enough leg and hip room; she was a little shy on patience. This is indeed a long-day drive. And for some reason it seems longer in the back seat.

We keep hearing about the demise of the station wagon. It's losing out to mini-vans, hatchbacks and sport utilities, some say. Yet automakers don't appear to be in any hurry to drop the four-door wagon body style.

The Ford Escort and Mercury Tracer were introduced as '91s last spring. The earlier Tracer did not offer a wagon model. Presumably Mercury dealers wanted to have something to offer customers not interested in their intermediate or full-size Grand Marquis wagons. Since they lost the Lynx nameplate a few years ago they have not had a small wagon in their lineup.

The Tracer rather shamelessly mimics the Taurus/Sable wagon styling (not a bad idea). In fact, one fellow who makes his living editing service manuals and presumably knows a lot about cars, mistook it for a Taurus wagon.

Honda, the automaker that seldom makes a mistake, added a brand-new U.S.-designed Accord wagon to its '91 family just last month. GM's Oldsmobile, Chevrolet and Buick lines are busily bringing out new rounded versions of their traditional B-body, rear-drive wagons.

Ford says it will not do a wagon on its new 1992 Crown Vic/Grand Marquis. There are '91 models available. Build-out has already taken place, says a Ford Division spokesman, so the redesigned '92 sedans can be assembled at the same plants for their spring debut.

The Mercury Tracer notchback sedan and the Tracer Wagon are powered by a 1.9-liter, 88-horsepower, fuel-injected four. A hotter Tracer LTS sedan has a 16-valve, dual-overhead-cam, 1.8-liter engine that boasts 127 horsepower — fun in a little sedan, but a bit hot for a family wagon. A five-speed manual transaxle is standard with both engines; a four-speed automatic is optional.

The cars are assembled in Mexico and at Ford's plant in Wayne. Expect to pay between $9,000 and $12,000, depending on model and equipment levels.

But what about driving in New York, Part II? We have an acquaintance living east of Central Park. She and her husband moved from Detroit to the Big Apple last spring. He loves it, she hates it. (We suspect his position includes being driven to an from work in a limo.)

Drive to the store or church? No way, she says. Driving to the grocery store is impossible. There is no place to park. Never thought going to the store once a week with a car was such a luxury, she says. Instead, this university lecturer-turned-home-maker walks to the nearest Food Emporium each day and carries her groceries back to the apartment.

This includes bottled water, she says, which she switched to when she discovered the stuff coming out of the faucet had a brownish hue.

"I thought about driving across town to church, but decided against it," she says. "Our car seldom leaves its place in the garage under the building."

Negotiating the crowded grid of streets in Manhattan should be easier in a small Tracer than it was in the big Grand Marquis, right? Well, yes and no. It is true that the Tracer is less scary in the tight lanes one often finds between double and even triple-parked vehicles. But much of New York driving is state-of-mind and requires an aggressive approach to survive in the fleets of full-sized Chevrolet cabs rocking around the island like yellow laser-guided battering rams, and a broad-shouldered car like the Grand Marquis is not a bad idea.

Not only is parking space at a premium on Manhattan, so is space for abandoned vehicles. We spotted only a couple, both of which had been squeezed into corners of parks and reduced to a skeletal condition.

Another automotive necessity that's hard to find in New York is a gas station. As usual, we were low on fuel as we began our homeward journey from East 63rd Street. Winding across town to the George Washington Bridge, we didn't sight a single place to buy gas. In fact, we began licking our lips and searching the horizon for familiar signs as we crossed the bridge and found ourselves locked into the express lanes of I-80. We did get off in time. But don't try to pump your own in New Jersey — it's against the law. And the mandatory service doesn't seem to affect the price.

The Detroit-New York City trek includes a long stretch in Pennsylvania with no food exits. We think of the East as a huge, crowded urban sprawl, but I-80 goes through some pretty undeveloped country. This may not concern those who drive for hours without a sincere need for coffee, chocolate chip cookies, a salad, frozen yogurt, a rest room, some diversion. Those who appreciate these finer aspects of motoring should be prepared for more than a hundred miles of slim culinary pickings, between DuBois and the I-81 exit to Scranton. This desert is more noticeable en route to NYC because it comes later in the day, when passengers are beginning to wonder whatever happened to the Delaware Water Gap.

Pennsylvania is one of our more populous states, but you wouldn't guess it driving I-80, which is one of its charms, too. In any event, it draws a pretty direct line from Toledo to the George Washington Bridge, traffic is lighter than on the turnpikes and it is a lot more scenic than 401 through Ontario.

The Mercury Tracer wagon did yeoman work, worthy in cargo space, passenger comfort and pleasant ride of much bigger vehicles. The Ford Escort and Mercury Tracer blend the best of Japanese and American design and anyone in the market for a new car should take note, no matter what kind of car he or she favors.

Rotate those tires for even wear

Then there's the story about the tight-fisted guy who installed his snow tires on the rear wheels of his front wheel drive car so they'd last longer.

True, tires do wear better on the back end of a front drive vehicle, about 2-1/2 times longer than the front when all wheels are properly aligned. This fact occasionally raises a controversy about the pros and cons of tire rotation (periodic switching location of tires on the car). Is it better to keep the same tires on the rear and replace only the front tires when they wear out?

Not such a good idea, says the Car Care Council. Front wheels not only carry most of the weight of a front drive vehicle, they also provide steering, braking and propulsion. So it stands to reason that they deserve healthy tires. If wheels are not rotated, the front tires would be worn thin while the back ones still would look nearly like new.

One reason for rotating tires is to keep the wear as even as possible. A tire which remains in one position throughout its life may wear unevenly because of such factors as passenger weight variations from one part of the car to another. When tires can share these stresses with other members of the "team," putting their tour of duty on each corner of the vehicle, they all wear at about the same rate.

Most cars are equipped with the small space-saver spare tires which cannot be included in rotation, so the recommended pattern is a modified criss-cross left front to right rear, right front to left rear, left rear to front and right to right front.

If the vehicle is equipped with more than one type of tire, i.e., belted and radial, rotate those tires on the same axle to avoid serious handling abnormalities.

Can't start? Try this

"Can't start" calls can ruin your whole day, particularly when you are running late for work or the long-awaited baby chooses a blustery winter day to make its debut.

But many of those infuriating "can't start" problems are preventable. Last year, for instance, of the 900,000 emergency road service calls received by AAA Michigan, nearly half were "can't start" pleas for help.

To ward off this nightmare, the first thing to do is make sure the battery is OK. Remember, at zero degrees your battery has 35 percent less starting power than it does during the summer.

First, check the battery's fluid level and fill it to the indicated level with distilled or clean tap water if it's low.

Next, loose battery cables should be tightened, frayed ones replaced. Battery cables and posts covered with corrosion should be cleaned with a baking soda/water mixture.

Nippy temperatures also call for different steps when starting your vehicle. Things like don't pump the gas pedal in fuel-injected vehicles. Simply turn the key and release when the engine starts. Do not grind the starter for more than 15 seconds. If the engine fails to start or keep running, consult your vehicle owner's manual for procedures recommended by the manufacturer.

To start carbureted engines, the general practice is to press the gas pedal to the floor, release it and turn the ignition key to the "on" position. Do not grind the starter for more than 15 seconds. If the first attempt fails, release the key and wait 30 seconds between tries.

If you smell gas, the engine may be flooded. Turn off the ignition, wait one minute, depress gas pedal to the floor for one minute. Keep the pedal depressed while you try the key again.

Once you've gotten the engine going, warm it up by driving slowly for the first few minutes. Idling an engine to warm it up wastes gas and actually slows down the warming process.

Never warm the vehicle in a closed garage, as carbon monoxide fumes contained in the exhaust could be lethal.

Safety tips for jump-starting cars

Motorists could find it expensive and dangerous to use the wrong procedures when jump-starting a dead battery.

"Before attempting to jump-start a battery, car owners should consult their owner's manual for specific instructions," said Paul Gleisman, AAA Michigan Emergency Road Service manager. "Improper procedures can lead to explosions, serious damage to the automobile's electrical system and personal injury."

Gleisman advises motorists to wear safety glasses and remove all jewelry to avoid the possibility of unwanted sparks when working near the battery. No smoking or open flames should be allowed near the automobile when attempting a jump-start, and clothing and hands should be kept away from moving parts under the car's hood.

Before hooking up the cables, the battery should be inspected for cracks or bulges and the battery posts should be cleared of acid build-up with a pasty solution of baking soda and water.

To jump-start the car, AAA Michigan advises motorists to follow these procedures:

- Position the cars so they are close enough for jumper cables to be connected but not touching. The transmission on both vehicles should be in park or in neutral for a manual transmission. Be sure the parking brake is on and the ignition and accessories are turned off.

- Connect one end of the positive cable to the positive terminal of the good battery.

- Attach the other end of the positive cable to the positive ter-terminal of the disabled battery.

- Connect one end of the negative cable to the negative terminal of the good battery.

- Attach the other end of the negative to a good ground like a bolt on the engine or other unpainted, metallic surface on the car with the dead battery. Do not connect the negative cable to the negative terminal of the dead battery.

- Start the engine on the car providing the jump. When attempting to start the disabled vehicle, don't crank the starter for more than 20 seconds. If it doesn't start in 20 seconds, wait two minutes before trying again.

- When the disabled car is running, disconnect the jumper cables in the reverse order from which they were connected.

12-point vehicle check saves time and money

A few household tools and a half-hour of spare time could save motorists from inconvenient breakdowns and costly auto repair bills this winter, AAA Michigan reports.

For those car owners doing the 12-point check at home, the only items required are the owner's manual, wire brush, tire pressure gauge, screwdriver, anti-freeze hydrometer and baking soda. The following items should be checked:

Battery — Dip a wire brush in a baking soda and water solution and scrub the battery terminals and cable ends. Do not splash the solution on painted surfaces. If the battery is not maintenance-free, make sure water is at the correct level.

Antifreeze — Check the radiator's antifreeze strength with a hydrometer to make sure that it's about 36 degrees below zero. The level of antifreeze in the overflow tank should also be checked.

Brake Fluid — Pry off the chamber's cover clips with a screwdriver if necessary, or just screw off the cap on some of the newer models. Keep the fluid level within one-quarter inch of the top of the reservoir. New models have translucent reservoirs and can be checked visually.

Oil — Check with dipstick. Add oil as needed. Check owner's manual for exact intervals between changes and for SAE viscosity grade.

Power Steering Fluid — Follow directions in owner's manual when checking the indicator stick. Add fluid slowly to avoid overflowing.

Automatic Transmission Fluid — Check the indicator stick, usually located behind engine on passenger side. Make sure the car is on level ground and placed in "park" with the engine running when doing the check.

Tires — Check tire pressure with gauge for correct inflation and inspect tread wear. For accuracy, check inflation pressures when the tires are cold, after a car has been sitting for three hours or more.

Belts and Hoses — Press on the middle of each belt to test tension. Tighten or replace belts that give more than 1 to 1-1/2 inches. Check for cracks and fraying and be sure hoses are firmly in place. Replace as needed.

Air Filter — Hold the filter up to a light. Replace it if you can't see light through it.

Washer Fluid — Keep the reservoir filled with solvent.

Wipers — Test them and replace if they streak or leave spots on the windshield.

Free tax aid

The Detroit Public Library's TIP Service has published its 1991 edition of the "Directory of Free Tax Assistance Sites in Wayne, Oakland and Macomb Counties." This directory is for Detroit area residents who need help with filing their federal, state and city income tax forms.

It is available for public use in all Detroit Public Libraries as well as public libraries in Wayne, Oakland and Macomb counties.

Included in the directory is a list of sites that provide free tax assistance to households which meet specified income criteria. There is also a listing of tax due dates and federal, state, county and city tax departments to contact for requesting forms, information and mailing addresses.

Organizations that have not received a copy may request one by contacting the Community Relations Department, Detroit Public Library, 5201 Woodward, Detroit, Mich. 48202; telephone 833-4006.

Foundation, announced that the Michigan Historical Museum in Lansing has received grants totaling $370,000 from Chrysler Corp., Ford Motor Co. and General Motors Corp.

Funds from the Big Three automakers will allow construction of three automobile-related galleries, titled Automobile Showroom, Evolution of the Big Three and Arsenal of Democracy. They will trace the significant role automobile manufacturers have played in Michigan's development from the turn of the century through the manufacturers' efforts during World War II.

Bids will soon be solicited for construction of the three galleries, which are planned for the second phase of exhibits at the museum.

The 25-member Michigan Historical Center Foundation is dedicated to furthering the work of the Department of State's Bureau of History, including the Michigan Historical Museum, through fundraising and other private sector support.

The Michigan Historical Museum, located in the Michigan Library and Historical Center in downtown Lansing, has hosted 402,000 visitors since opening in March 1989. The attendance figure includes approximately 250,000 students from school districts throughout the state.

The museum currently has permanent exhibits portraying Michigan's development through the 19th century. Phase II exhibits will continue the story through modern times.

Here's two people whose stories should have been told

In an interesting and provocative column in the Grosse Pointe News, Nancy Parmenter wrote about the practice media seem to follow of covering one or two big stories at a time at the expense of other events which are covered superficially or not at all — many of them important and pertinent.

This is true of other stories, too, which by their very nature would make interesting reading. Russell Baker, who writes a column that appears in the Free Press, believes that the reason young people don't read newspapers as much as they used to is because newspapers no longer print the kind of news most people want to read. The stories have no emotional appeal.

As an example, he cites the matter-of-fact way in which executions are handled. Once they were presented as a human drama, every detail noted right down to the time "he walked the last mile." Such clichés, Baker says, produced images in the reader's mind of what it was really like to pay the ultimate penalty.

The passing of the human interest angle is a loss to journalism. So, too, is the failure to follow up on newsworthy stories such as those announcing honors conferred on persons never in the news before. What motivated them to give so much of themselves to be chosen from hundreds of others to be honored?

Writing in A.I.M., a publication of the Office of Services to the Aging, former Director Olivia P. Maynard says, "The heroes we heard about are those who performed one-shot, death-defying feats in terrifying situations that make the evening news. But we are surrounded every day by people who through a quiet, definite sense of purpose and perseverance accomplish heroic feats that improve the lives of others, but never make the news."

On Aug. 27, Senior Citizens Day at the State Fair in Detroit, two such people were selected from many nominees as the 1990

Prime Time

Senior Citizens of the Year.

Who they are, what they do and what motivates them would have made an interesting article.

One was Audrey Lyons of Brimley, who was selected as Senior Citizen of the Year in the Service category, the first Native American to be chosen for this honor. Lyons singlehandedly saved a senior program from devastation.

As the director of the meals program in the Bay Mills Chippewa Indian Community, a reservation near Sault Ste. Marie in the Upper Peninsula, she knew that some 60 Native Americans would not have enough to eat after their government funds were cut.

She knew she had to find funding to save the program. As director of the senior meals program, Lyons shops for the groceries, cooks the meals on a little three burner stove, welcomes people to lunch, cleans up afterward, makes all the bread, rolls and other baked goods, delivers the home meals in her own car (she put 85,000 miles on her car last year delivering meals), refers people to other programs and plans next week's meals, mostly on her own time.

"Well, I just knew I had to do it," she said. "How else were we going to keep the program going and feed our elderly?"

Through her talents and skill as an organizer and tireless fundraiser, Lyons raised money for the program through bingo, bake sales and dinners, using friends, family and anyone else she could get to volunteer to help.

Talk to seniors in southeastern Michigan, and they are likely to know Leo Mahany of Royal Oak, winner of the 1990 Senior Citizen of the Year award in the Leadership category.

Through his efforts many senior centers have been built, beginning with the first Royal Oak Senior Center in 1977. When it became too small for the growing number of seniors, he saw to it that it was relocated and rebuilt — bigger and better.

Volunteering his time to advisory councils and committees too numerous to mention, Mahany is a tireless advocate for seniors both in his own community and statewide.

But Mahany is not one to just meet and greet and discuss lofty issues and programs. He is a teacher and personal advocate as well. With patience and dignity he conducts classes on senior issues and current affairs.

Mahany was also instrumental in increasing transportation services for Royal Oak seniors and has worked on several ballot issues and millages designed to benefit seniors.

At the award ceremony Mahany listened to the accolades and accepted his many honors and tributes. At the end, he asked to say a few words.

"If you don't already volunteer," he said, "do it. You can do so much good for others and I can't tell you how good it will make you feel."

Wise words from a man who knows.

The ties that bind the generations are learned early

By Marlys Dee Craig
Special Writer

In 1952, David Beattie, a private first class in the U.S. Army, was stationed in South Korea. Being an orphan himself, he decided to care for a young ragged Korean orphan, Baik Sung-Hak. He taught the boy what two very devoted foster mothers had instilled in him: to be honest, gentle and helpful with other people.

More than once Beattie held the crying boy when his courage weakened, and on one occasion carried Baik to receive medical help when he was seriously burned.

The lad grew and worked as a washy, washy boy for the artillery unit until he was sent away to an orphanage. He lost all contact with "Billy," as he called Beattie, but never forgot what he had learned.

Almost 40 years passed during which Baik worked hard in Korea. After learning how to make caps for schoolboys and baseball players, he opened his own shop. Later, he expanded his business into other areas, and today is one of the richest men in Korea. He built a village which he named Billy's House.

Baik searched for several years hoping to find Beattie and repay him. Finally, he found him in Pennsylvania.

For many hours the multimillionaire and the night shift janitor sat and talked. Beattie told Baik that he had all he needed, a job and a happy family. He also assured Baik that he would have done what he did for anyone.

What you teach your children today will affect the way they behave toward older persons. If you want your children to be considerate and kind, then you must show them how through the way you treat them. It takes a lot of heart and hard work.

Your children will benefit if you provide experiences that show them "real" elderly persons. Let them describe and classify their observations — the gray hair, wrinkled skin, slow walk and occasional shaky hands. Through the eyes of children these need not be bad or ugly — just different from themselves. Allow them to see what they see.

A lot depends on how you respond to what they say. If there is fear and avoidance in your voice, your children will pick this up instantly. The question becomes: What do you want your children to feel about old age? How do you want them to feel about you when you are old? Will they see the real you or will they think of you as a "poor thing"?

Today's children will be the workers of tomorrow. They will produce the goods that will support the baby boomers who have retired. These workers face the burden of having to support an estimated 65 million people, age 65 and over.

We are not sure what kind of attitudes these workers will have toward a huge retiree population.

A social myth is circulating which describes an exaggerated conflict between the two age groups. There is a strong need for parents of children and older adults to acknowledge a common interest and join together politically against poverty and poor health at both ends of the life cycle. Impoverished family groups have poor children and poor older adults to care for. Children and older adults often suffer together within the extended family when poverty and poor health shatter the ties through which family assistance ordinarily would be provided.

Political action which is fair and equal is based on the interdependence of the generations. The American Association of Retired Persons recently saw its mistake in focusing lobbying efforts for adequate health care on seniors exclusively. They have since expanded that effort to include adequate health care for poor mothers and children.

If you are an older person who would like to volunteer your time working with children, contact the school nearest your home for information about ongoing programs.

New officers

Chapter 2151 of the American Association of Retired Persons recently installed elected officers for 1991. Chapter meetings are held at 1 p.m. the fourth Monday of each month at Grosse Pointe Memorial Church, 16 Lakeshore Drive. The chapter provides a variety of programs including speakers, travel, insurance and legislative highlights, marathon bridge and other activities.

Creative programs sought for recognition

The Michigan Office of Services to the Aging in conjunction with its co-sponsor, Consumers Power Co., is seeking innovative, creative and unusual programs for nomination to receive the 1991 Michigan Project Independence Award. The deadline for nominations is Feb. 9.

The annual award process is designed to recognize two exemplary programs for their commitment, creativity and success in providing services which enhance and promote the dignity of older Michigianians.

Programs are nominated by the state's 14 Area Agencies on Aging according to criteria set forth by OSA, and the selection is made by specialists on aging and dignitaries. The program area from which nominations for the 1991 award process will be accepted is enrichment/education.

The two winners, one for delivery of service in a rural area and one in an urban area, will be honored at a ceremony during Senior Power Day activities May 14. They will also be featured in the May/June issue of AIM magazine and will receive a cash award from Consumers Power Co.

Agencies which feel they have programs that may qualify for the award are encouraged to contact their nearest Area Agency on Aging for consideration.

Persons wishing more information should contact Wendi Middleton, communications representative at the Michigan office of Services to the Aging, at 517-373-4070.

Each week in this column, we will focus on the work of a student. It can be a poem, a drawing, a short story, a picture of a scientific experiment or a wood-working project, a book review.

The Escape

It was a gray day in East Berlin in the little town of Bovergahn. Timmy and his dad were standing in their one-room apartment. They had been in East Berlin now for seven years.

They were trapped on one side of the Berlin Wall, and Timmy's mom was on the other. Timmy and his dad had tried four times to get out of East Berlin. Timmy cried a lot because he missed his mother. Timmy and his dad were planning an escape in a hot air balloon which they were working on right now. They had been going around asking for blankets for two months now. Timmy was so bored with collecting blankets, the only thing that kept him going was the thought of seeing his mother for the very first time. Timmy was sitting in his apartment looking around. It seemed so barren! There was only a wood burning stove, a water tap and two cots. He was painting all the blankets black so they would be harder to see.

Timmy and his dad had just saved enough to buy an air compressor which they would use to make the air hot enough so that it would lift the balloon. The next step was to weave the wicker to make the basket. Timmy hated this part because it was such a tedious job. All you did was weave wicker together again and again. Finally, after two weeks, the wicker basket was done.

Timmy's dad hauled the wicker basket to the old grave yard. Timmy thought the grave yard was creepy because the grave stones shone brightly, almost penetrating into Timmy's heart. They walked back to their apartment in complete silence. Timmy thought the silence was eerie. When they got back to their apartment they immediately went to sleep.

Timmy was helping his dad haul the actual cloth for the balloon to the old cemetery. Once they got it there they were going to cover it with leaves so it could not be seen by anyone who might be passing by. Timmy was sick of shoveling leaves onto the cloth so he began to dream about encountering the border guards at the Berlin Wall and being shot.

It was one day till the time they would leave for West Berlin. Timmy lay in bed thinking; would he actually see his mother or would he be killed by a border guard?

The next night Timmy and his

All-day kindergarten enrollment begins

Applications for enrollment in the Grosse Pointe Public School System's full-day kindergarten program are being accepted for the 1991-92 school year.

Tuition for the optional program is $1,750 a year and parents are responsible for transportation to and from school. A quarterly payment plan is offered.

Full-day kindergarten classes are tentatively scheduled at Defer, Ferry and Kerby schools, but locations may change depending on final enrollment figures.

The full-day kindergarten program offers an alternative for parents who wish to enhance the experiences provided in the traditional half-day kindergarten program. The additional time allows for more supplementary and enrichment experiences. It is not intended as an acceleration of the curriculum.

Full-day kindergarten meets Monday through Friday, with the same beginning and dismissal times as the rest of the elementary schools. Children may eat lunch at school or at home.

Enrollment forms are available at all Grosse Pointe elementary schools or at the Office of Curriculum and Evaluation, 389 St. Clair, Grosse Pointe 48230. Completed forms, along with a deposit of $150, must be returned to the Office of Curriculum and Evaluation on or before March 1.

A child is enrolled, and a location is assigned when both the form and deposit are received. Enrollments are accepted and locations assigned on a first-come, first-served basis.

For more information on the all-day kindergarten program, call 343-2022 or 343-2023.

North information night scheduled

Students from parochial and private schools who plan to attend Grosse Pointe North High School in September are invited to a special enrollment session.

On Friday, Feb. 1, anyone who expects to be a freshman at Grosse Pointe North in the fall should report to the school cafeteria at 1:30 p.m.

Students and their parents should bring a birth certificate and any records available from the current school, as well as any recommendations for program selection.

North counselors will arrange academic testing with each of the parochial/private schools after the students register on Feb. 1.

Transfer students entering the sophomore, junior or senior year will be enrolled by appointment. They should call the office of the assistant principal administrative services, 343-2205, for an appointment.

Letters to the local schools explaining procedures were mailed several weeks ago. Those wanting copies can pick one up at the school they now attend or at Grosse Pointe North.

Learn about fossils

Don't hesitate — the real you should start immediately

In our quest for renewal, we often forget to ask ourselves two questions beyond "where am I," "and what do I want?" to include "when do I see this happening, and why do I want a change?"

During the winter months, we may become "pregnant" with ideas but lack any concept of "delivery."

This is the beginning of a new you, and you have decided to diet, right? Wrong. Because this is a beginning, let's start with a new way of thinking.

Instead of concentrating on dieting, concentrate on a good eating program. Yes, losing weight will make you feel better and it will make you look better. But, if you do not think about the way we use food, and the way you approach yourself in general, then you are setting yourself up for some big disappointments.

Do you turn to food when you are tired, alone, angry, hurt, depressed or frustrated? Many of us do, but to begin to change this behavior you have to ask yourself "Did the food really help to make me less angry, did the food make me hurt less?"

It may have been a temporary fix, but eventually you are left feeling more angry, and the merry-go-round syndrome is once again in effect. The sooner we realize the truth of this, and act on this truth, the sooner we can begin to make lifelong changes.

When you begin to act upon the truth of your eating, you can begin to substitute other activities for emotional and stressful eating. As you begin to lose weight and feel better, focus on your strong points rather than any shortcomings you may have — after all, none of us is perfect.

Tell yourself this truth 10 times a day if needed: I'm losing weight because I am a good person and I deserve the best life has to offer.

Sounds so simple, doesn't it? Yet many of us think we're no good and by losing weight we can become "good." Forget it, you're already good and you are losing weight because you choose to eat healthy for today.

Take care of today and tomorrow will take care of itself.

How are you doing??

You can be provided with all sorts of technical knowledge, behavior modification techniques and counseling, but unless you are willing to look at yourself in an open and honest way, all of the techniques will be of no help.

Make a daily checkup of yourself. 1) Am I angry because I can't eat my favorite foods? This may be painful, but it will help to break through that habit of focusing on the wrong reason for your eating habits.

2) Am I having problems staying with a good eating program because of my work schedule? If so, you may need to spend more time pre-planning your meals and making an alternate plan in case the first one can't be put into effect.

3) Do I really want to change my eating patterns, or am I merely going through the motions because I think I should lose some weight? Discover your very own motivation, not what someone else thinks you should do.

4) Am I afraid to change my eating patterns because someone else may think I'm strange or different? It's a fact that none of us likes change, least of all our families and friends that knew us "when." But the fact is, the more you practice the real you, or the new you, the more your family or friends will come to accept this new mode of behavior as normal.

5) Does ice cream, nachos, chocolate, or pizza mean "love," and no ice cream mean "punishment?"

Yes, that may be what it meant to you as a child, but doesn't necessarily mean the same today. If we were children today, an apple, orange or walk could easily signify love.

We have approximately 350 days or so to make it the best year yet. You can emerge as the real you, not some overweight, out-of-shape reflection that has no link to the true person underneath those excess pounds.

Mary Busse, a diet counselor, wrote this article.

Eat all your citrus fruits — they are good for you

What a happy coincidence it is that the supermarket is filled with lavish heaps of grapefruits, oranges and lemons in late January when the season for colds and flu is at its worst, and when we all need extra rations of vitamin C.

Although previous generations had never heard of vitamin C, the connection between immunity to colds and eating citrus fruits has been recognized for centuries.

Some 800 years ago Chinese agriculturists told of many citrus varieties being cultivated in southeast Asia. Citrus fruits were raised by royalty in Italy during the expansion of the Roman empire and followed the later expansion of the Arab empire into northern Africa, Spain and the Mediterranean countries. At the end of the 11th century, Crusaders brought back to Europe various varieties of citrus fruits, and by 1400 Orangeries, which were greenhouses designed especially for growing citrus fruits, became popular in Europe.

On his second voyage to the New World, in 1493, Columbus brought several varieties of citrus fruits with him to Haiti and within a century a naturalist wrote that lemons and limes were so abundant in Haiti that they were past counting. Spanish explorers brought citrus fruits into Florida for trading with the Indians early in the 16th century and soon citrus trees were growing wild near rivers and lakes from seeds dropped by the Indians.

In 1646, botanists were writing about the Portugal orange, the first sweet orange in Europe, which was brought to Portugal from southeast Asia by way of the trade routes established by Vasco da Gama.

In 1750, the grapefruit, a natural mutation of the Pomello orange, was first described in a report of travels to Barbados by one Griffith Hughes, who called it "the forbidden fruit." The name grapefruit was first used in Jamaica, presumably because of the way the fruits grew in clusters, like grapes.

The first grapefruits in Florida were grown from seeds by a Spanish nobleman, Don Philippe. The first navel oranges imported from Brazil into southern California arrived in 1870; the first infant tree was planted near the doorstep of Eliza Tibbets in Riverside.

Today navel oranges are grown in profusion in southern California, as well as in Texas and Florida.

So-called seedless grapefruits

Garden SHED

By Ellen Probert

were grown in Florida in the late 1800s, and the first pink seedless grapefruits were grown there in 1913. The term "seedless," incidentally, refers to a fruit with less than nine large seeds.

In 1929, the first ruby-red grapefruits were discovered in the Rio Grande valley in Texas — a natural limb mutation on a pink grapefruit tree. This new variety quickly became popular for its deep, red color, sweet flavor and superior quality. The Rio Grande valley is still the finest growing area in the world for this variety.

The medicinal value of citrus fruits is great. Not only do they have a high vitamin C content, but they also provide natural compounds which lower cholesterol and even fight cancer. Experiments have shown that eating two grapefruits a day can lower blood cholesterol up to 19 percent. This, in turn, can cut the risk of heart disease about 40 percent.

Oranges were much valued in the 16th century for making pomanders — those spicy, clove-studded globes used today to scent closets and linens — but then prized as a fashion accessory, suspended on a ribbon or a chain from one's belt or wrist. For a while they even carried a pomander stuck on a wand or stick as a badge of office.

Citrus marmalades rank high on many lists of favorites with perhaps the thought of their high vitamin C content easing guilt feelings about their caloric density.

During World War II, when citrus fruits were very hard to come by, it was discovered in England that rose hips, or fruits, are even higher in vitamin C than citrus fruits, and rose hedges and bushes across the country were harvested for their bright red bounty. Rose hip jam and jelly and rose hip teas became popular and, indeed, have retained that popularity even though grapefruits, oranges, lemons and limes are again available in England.

Another valuable source of vitamin C is the tomato, which originated in South America. The first name given to this plant was Peruvian apple, but the name it bears today comes from an ancient Mexican word, tomati.

Tomatoes were brought to Europe by the Spanish and Portuguese who used them for food, but in the 18th century they were listed in horticultural catalogues as ornamental plants and considered not only inedible, but poisonous.

Builder's class offered

The Michigan Builders Institute, in cooperation with Grosse Pointe Community Education, will offer a 16-hour evening seminar to prepare people to pass the Michigan state builders' licensing examination. The seminar will begin Monday, March 4, at Barnes School, 20090 Morningstar Drive, Grosse Pointe Woods.

The course is designed for people in the building trades now working without a license who want to obtain one, as well as for those who want to build their own homes. The cost is $150 per person and includes all materials.

Evaluate your garden now — before you forget

You probably can recall which crops did well in your garden last year, which ones flopped and perhaps why they didn't perform, what varieties yielded better than others and where the various crops were planted.

Sandra Goeddeke-Richards, home horticulturist for the Macomb County Cooperative Extension Service, suggests that now is a good time to evaluate last year's garden and make notes to help you plan this year's effort.

"Notes should include a sketch of last year's garden layout," she said. "Some disease organisms can carry over in the soil from year to year, so you want to move closely related crops to a different spot each year. This is a lot easier if you have a map of the previous year's layout."

Making notes on the crops and varieties you grew last year can guide your seed and transplant purchase this year. Exceptional flavor; excellent keeping quality; disease resistance, and high yields of various varieties would be worth noting.

Make a note, too, of crops and varieties that did poorly, along with the reasons for their lagging performance, if you know them. If you burned the roots off your tomato plants with fertilizer or neglected to spray your cabbages to protect them against cabbage worms, you can hardly blame the results on the variety you planted.

Likewise, if you didn't get your broccoli planted until Memorial Day and it promptly formed 2-inch heads and flowered, it was only responding to the dry, hot weather. Make a note to plant earlier this year so your broccoli has a chance to produce a crop before the weather gets hot, or you can plant later for a fall crop.

If you had a chance to visit other people's gardens and saw some crops or varieties you think you'd like to try, put them in your notes, too.

Did you get enough beans? Too much summer squash? Too few tomatoes? Record how many plants or hills or feet of rows you planted and the approximate yields so you can increase or decrease the amount you plant this year.

Did weeds take over by mid-June? Maybe your garden was bigger than you could comfortably keep weeded. Or perhaps you need to consider mulching or other weed control tactics. If lack of water was a problem, you might want to consider trickle irrigation.

A trickle irrigation system applies water at the bases of individual plants or alongside row crops. Because you don't water plant foliage, you may have fewer foliage disease problems. Fruits will stay cleaner, and you will use less water with a trickle system than with overhead watering.

"Even if last year's garden was the best ever and you don't want to change your methods or choice of crops it's a good idea to jot down notes on what you did last year that worked," Richards said.

If you have any garden questions, you can get help by calling the CES Master Gardener Hotline at 469-5063 on Monday, Wednesday, or Friday from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. You can call toll-free by checking your telephone directory under Macomb County Government and asking for ext. 5063.

Build a door rack

If towel rods and wall space are in short supply in your bathroom, you'll appreciate this handy rack that hangs out of the way on the back of the door.

The rack provides almost 5 feet of rod space and is easily made from standard size western lumber. You'll find that western softwoods are easy to work with and require no special skills or expensive tools.

The project shown in the illustration is 24 inches wide, 3-1/2 inches deep and 60 inches high to the top of the door. However, the dimensions can be adjusted to fit the space you have available. Before you start, make sure the door will open fully when the unit is installed.

The towel rack consists of a 1 by 4 frame and center divider, with 1 inch wood dowels serving as rods. To build it, you will need two 5 foot lengths of 1 by 4 for the vertical frame and two 23 inch lengths for the top and bottom frame.

You will also need a 42 inch length of 1 by 4 for the center divider and 6 feet of 1 inch wood doweling for the rods. The only tools required are a tape measure, saw, hammer, screwdriver, drill and a 1 inch drill bit.

Glue and nail the vertical members to the top and bottom frame, using 2 inch finishing nails. Position the top frame 41 inches above the lower frame. Trim the center divider to fit snugly between the top and bottom frame, then center it between the vertical members and glue and nail in place.

Mark the location of the towel rods on the frame and divider, making sure the rods will be level; drill 1 inch holes through the 1 by 4s to support the rods. (To make drilling easier, mark and drill all holes before assembling the frame.) Measure and cut doweling so it extends through the 1 by 4s on both ends. Glue in place. Sand the ends of the dowels so they are flush with the frame.

Stain or paint the wood to complement your decor. Or finish it with a coat of clear varnish to protect against dirt and moisture. For extra towel storage, additional rods may be installed above the frame.

If the bathroom door is hollow core, the rack must be mounted to the solid "rail" at the top of the door. The rail is normally 1-1/2 inches deep, but tap gently with a hammer to make sure.

To mount the rack, attach a flat metal bracket to the top of the vertical members, on the back side. Attach the other end of the bracket to the solid door rail. Use 1-1/4 inch screws to install the brackets. Secure the bottom of the rack to the door with carpenter's glue or metal L-brackets.

For more do-it-yourself projects with wood, write to Western Wood Products Association, Dept. HI-190, Yeon Building, 522 SW Fifth Ave., Portland, Ore. 97204-2122.

Where do insects go in the winter? Some hide in your house

When hostile winter weather arrives, the bugs of summer disappear, only to reappear again the next year when the weather warms.

"Of course they don't just 'disappear' and come back again from nowhere," said Sandra Goeddeke-Richards, home horticulturist for the Macomb County Cooperative Extension Service. "To survive from year to year in Michigan, insects have had to develop various tactics for dealing with the cold weather."

Some of them move in with humans. Wall voids and attics are favorite wintering spots for box elder bugs, ladybird beetles, cluster flies and elm leaf beetles.

"Buildings, obviously, are a relatively new adaptation," Richards said. "These insects' ancestors probably used hollow logs and other naturally occurring hiding places before humans started providing their winter shelter."

A few insects migrate to warmer climates. The only true migratory insect in Michigan is the monarch butterfly. Monarchs from Michigan, like other monarchs east of the Rockies, fly to a spot in central Mexico near Mexico City, where they winter on several mountain peaks, one or two of which are protected as monarch refuges. Monarchs west of the Rockies travel to a spot near Santa Barbara, in southern California.

"These are true migrating insects because the same individuals go away for the winter and then come back," Richards said. "Michigan has some other insects, such as leafhoppers and milkweed bugs, that move south as the weather cools off, then reinvade the next year, but in this case, it's different individuals that return."

Among the insects that stay in Michigan in the winter, the biggest variable is which life stage they overwinter in.

Many spend the winter in the egg stage. Eggs may be covered with some kind of protective material to insulate them or placed in a protected area, such as under bark or in the soil.

Some insects overwinter as immatures. These include cicadas and June beetles, which spend several years underground as larvae. In a severe winter they simply dig deeper.

A number of insects spend the winter in the pupal stage. Probably the most familiar of these are the moths in their papery cocoons.

"A small number of insects overwinter as adults," Richards said. "These include yellowjackets and wasps, some mosquitoes and the mourning cloak butterfly. That's why it's usually the first butterfly you see in early spring."

No matter which insect you're looking at or what its winter survival strategy, the pattern of development doesn't have much room for variation, Richards said.

"For instance, moths that form cocoons in the fall must have that winter period of exposure to cold," he said. "If you bring them inside and keep them warm, chances are that they will not complete their development."

Likewise, an extended January thaw generally won't trick insects into breaking out of hibernation. Some insects will become active, but most of those would have been active anyway.

The rest were not truly hibernating but rather resting in the adult stage. If they happen to be resting in wall voids, they might tumble into the house and give the homeowner reason to wonder where the insect invasion is coming from.

Finally, some insects are simply active year round. They most frequently spend the winter as immatures in rapidly flowing streams that don't freeze all the way to the bottom.

Lake level

Lake St. Clair at the end of December was at elevation 574.28 feet above the mean water level at Father Point, Quebec, or 35 inches above chart datum.

This was about 14 inches above what it was a year ago, and about 11 inches above the level one month ago.

The December monthly mean level of 573.86 feet was about 8 inches above the long-term average for December.

The lake, however, remained about 27 inches below the all-time high December monthly mean level, which was recorded in 1986.

The forecast shows that at the end of January, the level of Lake St. Clair will be about 7 inches below what it was at the end of December. The level of the lake is expected to complete its seasonal decline in February.

The water level in June 1991 is expected to be about 9 inches above the long-term average for that month, or about 6 inches above what it was at the same time in 1990.

PLEASE DON'T DELAY!
SPAY or NEUTER YOUR PET TODAY!

An altered pet is a healthier and happier companion. Also, it spares you the grief and pain of having puppies and kittens destroyed when no homes can be found. Countless numbers of sweet, innocent little ones are euthanized every day in shelters across the country because a pet wasn't spayed or neutered. If we cut down on the numbers of unwanted litters being born, we will also cut down on the number of abandoned, lost and unwanted animals to destroy.

Give a gift from your heart...
Make a generous donation to the Anti-Cruelty Association for Valentine's Day.

"Don't break our hearts. Make a donation to the Anti-Cruelty Association."
When the animals pictured above needed help, the Anti-Cruelty Association was there. We've had cases of animals dumped in parks as if they were yesterday's garbage; often loyally waiting at the very spot they were abandoned for their owners to return. We've had cases of owner irresponsibility, abuse and neglect; often these animals huddle, frightened and confused, in the back of the kennel, for fear of being punished for some unknown wrong-doing. We've had cases of owners turning in their cute puppies and kittens to the shelter because they "could never get the mother spayed, and besides the shelter will find good homes for all of them"; which, of course, seldom happens. And, we've had cases of owners who feel that animals are disposable commodities to be taken to a shelter when they get too big, are too much trouble, or are just not wanted any more.

Because of concerned people like you, we are here for each and every one of them.
That's why we need your help this Valentine's Day. We must be here for the animals when they need our help. Only through your support can we continue to carry on this important work. Donations, memberships, and fund raisers are our only source of support. Your tax-deductible gift will pay for food, medical treatments, and help maintain the high quality of care these animals need. Your donation will also help protect abused and abandoned animals through our rescue programs. Most importantly, your money will give many homeless animals that second chance they deserve.

So please, give a gift from your heart this Valentine's Day. Your donation, whatever you can spare, helps us help them. Thank you for your support and generosity in helping us make it a "Be Kind to Animals World."
These are only a few of the 17,000 animals that come through our shelter each year. Each one of them with personalities and feelings as unique as yours and mine. Each animal has its own individual story to tell. They say that the eyes are the mirror of the soul, and the fear, terror, agony, suffering, and confusion that these animals endure are reflected in those eyes. We know if you could look into those eyes and hear their stories, you'd want to help.
