Local hams deliver messages from MARS

By Donna Walker
Staff Writer

Most nights, Lowell Shaffer and his 16-year-old son, Bruce, can be found huddled around a short-wave radio on the second floor of their Grosse Pointe Park home, listening for messages from MARS.

No, not the planet, the Military Affiliate Relay Service (MARS).

The service, among other things, helps U.S. military personnel stationed overseas send messages to their loved ones in the United States.

The messages from military radio operators stationed at U.S. bases around the world are transmitted to volunteer, civilian, amateur radio operators (also known as hams) in the United States. The hams then deliver the messages to the addressees, either by telephone or mail.

Each branch of the military has its own division of MARS, which has been around since World War II, in peacetime and in war.

Bruce, a student at Grosse Pointe South High School, and Lowell, manager of material control at GM Truck and Bus, received their amateur radio licenses about four years ago and have been MARS volunteers for more than three years.

Since Operation Desert Shield started last August, they have delivered between 30 and 40 messages to people in the metro Detroit area from soldiers overseas.

Most of the messages were originated in Germany, by soldiers who had stopped there on their way to the Persian Gulf, said Lowell. To his knowledge, no MARS messages have been coming out of Saudi Arabia.

Soldiers are allowed to send messages of up to 25 words.

Library vote is Monday

Here's the what and why

By Ronald J. Bemas
Staff Writer

On Feb. 4 Grosse Pointe residents will go to the polls to vote on a $7.6 million bond issue to fund a new library.

What follows is a compilation of facts on the proposal and what its effects will be.

The proposal

"Shall the Grosse Pointe Public School System...borrow the sum of not to exceed seven million six hundred thousand dollars and issue its general obligation unlimited tax bonds therefore in order to provide funds for erecting, furnishing and equipping a new central library building and developing and improving the site for the building and the adjacent athletic field at the Brownell School site in the school district?"

A bond issue is not the same as a millage. It is more like a mortgage. If approved, the schools will then add .4 of a mill which would be levied under debt retirement. The .4 mill will expire in 2011 when the taxpayers will have paid back $14,681,000 in principal and interest. The .4 mills will expire at that time. The .4 mill levy will cost a taxpayer with a home with an SEV of $100,000 an average of $40 a year.

Currently, the schools levy 28.38 mills for operation of the schools; 1.25 mills for operation of the libraries; and .68 mills for debt retirement. That amounts to $125 per year for a home with an SEV of $100,000.

If the issue is approved, the school will ask, in 1993 or 1994, when the library is completed, for an additional .4 or .5 mills to operate the new facility. For a home with an SEV of $100,000 that would mean $40 to $50 per month for operating expenses.

The money will be used to build a new, 43,000-square-foot building on the grounds of Brownell Middle School.

The Woods branch and the Park branch will be renovated and will remain open. Their combined 10,000 square feet will still be needed, the schools say, for a total of 53,000 square feet of library space. Currently, Central Library has 27,000 square feet.

If approved, the new library would be completed in 1993 or 1994. The current Central Library would be renovated to accommodate the board offices which will move from their home at 389 St. Clair.

The property at on St. Clair will be sold and the money received will be used to renovate the new offices.

Is it necessary?

In 1966, a study commissioned by the school district said "...the Central Library has exhausted its space, resulting in a reduced efficiency of its operation. To add more shelves would reduce equally valuable patron space. The children's room cannot accommodate its patrons and there is no suitable story hour space. Work room space is at a premium, multiple operations being performed in areas too small for any one of them. Patrons cannot find seating on many occasions and the generally crowded conditions have turned away the young as well as the old."

A 1988 survey expanded on that study, finding the library could no longer serve the needs of the community.

Library officials say there is no room for new books so hundreds of titles are taken off the shelves and stored in the attic at Richard Elementary School to make room for new ones; parking and seating is limited and on some days unavailable.

Why this site?

In 1987 the school board asked the public to approve a bond issue to expand and renovate the current Central Library. It failed because many people were opposed to the space it would take away from Grosse Pointe South's practice field.

Since then two different committees have searched for a place to put a new library. The board wanted a spot in a central location which was accessible to all Pointes equally.

Elworthy Field was rejected because of the impact on the playing fields there and because of poor soil quality.

Messner Field was never considered because of the impact on field space.

Kerby Field, owned by Grosse Pointe Farms, is not for sale, so it wasn't considered.

University Liggett School's Briarwood Campus was rejected by the committees because of the high cost of buying the land and the building and the renovation to follow. Also, the land was recently rezoned "residential only" so when it is sold, it must be developed only for that use.

Barnes School, which now houses the Department of Community Education and the Instructional Materials Center, was rejected because if the Pointe population grows, Barnes may need to be reopened as an elementary school.

got kids, too... it's not fair that we have to take this burden," she said.

Fife was one of 20 residents who objected to the trial plan. Of those 20, four residents wanted to see the plan abandoned altogether and then have a traffic study made of all the streets in Grosse Pointe Farms.

Before Grosse Pointe Farms Mayor Joseph Fromm opened the hearing, he told the audience that the council had three op-and I don't want the barricade opened up. Without the barricade, cars will fly by and someone will end up getting hurt," she said.

Marisa Fife, who lives on Moran at the corner of Charlevoix, noted that traffic on her street had increased substantially since the McKinley barrier was put up. She said that she understood the concern McKinley residents had for their children, but that she thought they were being selfish neighbors.

3rd bank robbery in Woods reported in as many months

The Comerica Bank on Mack at Kenmore was robbed again Jan. 22 — the third bank heist in as many months in Grosse Pointe Woods.

On Nov. 5, the First Nationwide Bank on Mack at Bourne-mouth was robbed and on Nov. 9, the same Comerica branch, was held up.

In the most recent incident, a man walked into the Comerica Bank at 12:10 p.m. and demanded $10s, $20s and $100s from the teller. Police said that when the teller emptied one drawer of cash onto the counter, the robber asked, "Is that all you have, where is your second drawer?"

The teller told him that she didn't have a second drawer. The robber then put the money in a wrinkled, brown paper bag and fled on foot.

The three robberies all occurred in the afternoon. The first Comerica robbery was at 3:15 p.m. and the First Nationwide robbery was at 4:29 p.m.

In the first two robberies, the suspect presented the tellers with a note demanding money. No note was used in the most recent robbery. No gun was used in any of the robberies.

Woods police and the FBI are investigating.

When John Williams was a young man attending Hamilton College in Clinton, N.Y., he planned to become a doctor. World War II interrupted his — and countless other young men's — dreams.

Today, decades later, instead of mending broken bones, he volunteers his time to fix up broken-down houses in the inner city, transforming abandoned, derelict structural skeletons into habitable homes for poor families.

From the time he was a young college student from Syracuse, N.Y., to today's grandfather of 10, the Farms resident has amassed a lifetime of experiences and achievements that continue unabated in retirement.

And when his wife, a gerontology professor, retires, he says a whole world of new opportunities will present itself. It could be a stint in the Peace Corps; it won't be retirement in Florida, he said, adding, "Often the future happens by accident."

After seeing combat in the infantry, Williams returned from Europe and enrolled in Harvard Business School under the GI bill. "Ours was the first class to come out of the war on the GI bill," he said. "Before that, it (Harvard) was only for the rich."

The class produced a number of achievers, including the founders of Xerox and Parker Pens, the developers of Hilton Head, and several board chairmen of large corporations. Every 10 years, Fortune magazine followed the progress of the class, Williams said.

After graduation in 1949, he and Elizabeth Buchanan, whom he met at Wellesley, were married. With his MBA in hand and an interest in retailing, Williams got a job at J.L. Hudson's, "the best store at the time," he said.

McKinley barricade taken down in effort to 'fine tune' traffic plan

By Donna Walker
Staff Writer

The barricade on McKinley Road at Mack was scheduled to come down Tuesday as part of the Grosse Pointe Farms city council's decision to "fine tune" and extend the trial traffic plan it instituted last July.

The decision was made at the second and final public hearing on the controversial traffic issue, which was held Monday night in the gymnasium at Grosse Pointe South High School.

About 100 residents attended the hearing. Of the 36 residents who spoke at the meeting, 16 said they wanted to make the trial plan permanent, or at least make permanent the portions of the plan that they said changed their streets for the better.

Four residents of McMillan said that they wanted to keep their street's one-way designation, and 12 McKinley residents urged the council to maintain the barrier at the end of their street.

"I do not want to go back to the way it was," said Alice Kachman, a McMillan resident. "I'm a college student, and I couldn't read a book past 1:30 in the afternoon because of all the traffic. It drove me crazy."

Julie Russ was one of many McKinley residents who said they wanted the barrier left in place for the welfare of children on the street.

Most Pointers surveyed give schools passing grades

By Ronald J. Bemas
Staff Writer

The report card is in and Superintendent of Schools Ed Shine said he is pleased with the results.

In a study conducted in November, most of those surveyed — 85 percent — gave the school district either an "A" or "B." Six percent gave it a "C" and 8 percent weren't familiar enough with the schools to give them a grade.

"That degree of public confidence, when you compare it with the state or national survey is quite dramatic," Shine said.

Only 41 percent nationally and 51 percent statewide gave their schools a grade of "B" or higher.

The survey, conducted in November by Project Outreach of the Michigan State Board of Education, included 380 people. They were chosen by a systematic random sampling, which was weighted by city, Shine said.

Because Grosse Pointe Woods has the largest population, more Woods residents were surveyed. Respondents were chosen according to their demographics, including age and whether they had children in public or private schools. The demographics of the respondents are roughly equal to the demographics of the Pointes as a whole, and the study has a 95 percent accuracy rate.

The 79 questions, asked by trained pollsters, were meant to determine what the public perception of the schools is and what the district could do to improve.

The teachers were also given high marks — 69 percent gave them an "A" or a "B" with 24 percent responding they didn't know. Statewide, 55 percent gave teachers a "B" or better.

Fifty-five percent awarded the principals a "B" or better, with 36 percent unable to give a grade. Statewide, 49 percent of the principals got high marks.

The board of education also received good grades with 56 percent earning a "B" or better. Statewide, 37 percent gave their boards an "A" or "B."

When asked what they liked about the school system, respondents cited the curriculum, the qualifications of the teachers, the reputation, the communication with the community, the individual attention students receive and the fact that the schools are so close to home.

Of those who found fault with the district, the reasons given were poor quality of some teachers or their methods, the lack in variety of class selection, lack of discipline and quality special programs and the lack of acceptance of social, cultural and economic differences.

But 41 percent of the respondents could find nothing to criticize about the schools.

The survey cost $6,000 and was done for several reasons, Shine said.

"Five years ago when Superintendent (John) Whritner came, a community survey was done to determine where the districts stood in the community," Shine said. "It seemed appropriate that we try to get a lot of feedback on a whole variety of topics.

One of those topics is the library bond issue which is up for a vote Feb. 4.

When asked if they would participate in the Feb. 4 election, 76 percent said they would definitely vote. Forty six percent of those surveyed said they would vote for the bond issue, 39 percent said they would vote against it and 14 percent were undecided. The survey was done in November, so the percentages may be different today.

The majority of the residents — 79 percent — said there were questions the voters needed answered before the election, such as proof the district needs a new library, the exact cost and why the Brownell site was chosen.

Those opposed said the community didn't need a new library, that they needed more information, that the site chosen is poor and that taxes are too high now.

One interesting response, according to Shine, is that 84 percent of those surveyed said alcohol and drug education programs and counseling were very important. Breaking that figure down, 91 percent of parents of middle school students said that kind of programming was of utmost importance.

"That's very good to know, especially as we're planning our curriculum," Shine said.

Shine is pleased with the results, not only because of the favorable public perception, but also because he now has a blueprint for the future direction of the district. The school board met to discuss the survey on Tuesday.

"I wish there were a higher percentage of people who would rate us 'A' and that's what we're aiming for," Shine said. "We'll take this and work with it and maybe in three years or five years from now go to the people again and ask them the same questions and maybe we'll get that (more 'A' grades)."

Schools begin new assistance program

By Ronald J. Bemas
Staff Writer

In December the Grosse Pointe school board approved a new assistance program to help students and employees with problems ranging from depression to drug abuse.

The schools have had a plan in place for several years; the new plan is simply an updating and broadening of the old one, according to Dr. C. Suzanne Klein, director of special education.

The new plan also links the various people working with the students with each other and with the community so a problem can be detected sooner, she said.

Each school will develop a student assistance team made up of the student assistance coordinator, the student assistance facilitator, social workers, guidance counselors, the school nurse and, if necessary, teachers. Each team will meet monthly, more often if necessary, to discuss students they are assisting.

"What has happened in the past," said Susan Pearce, student assistance coordinator, "is that we missed students because of insufficient networking."

A student might be seeing a counselor because his grades were dropping, and the nurse because he's not feeling well and a social worker because things at home are going wrong. Pearce said that if the counselor and nurse and social worker got together, they might be able to better determine what the problem is and how it could be approached more effectively.

"We have that system in place for special education, we're just expanding it to include all students," she said. "This way we'll be able to pick up the problem a lot earlier."

All the problems students face — depression, family violence, health-related issues, divorce, and alcohol and other drug abuse — are inter-related, Pearce says, and should be approached with that in mind.

"If a student has a drinking problem, he or she may be reacting to another problem," she said. "Drinking and drug use don't happen in a vacuum; there are all sorts of other factors entering into it."

Teachers used to be the primary source of referrals to counselors, Pearce said, which placed an unfair burden on the teachers.

Policies will be looked at system-wide to make sure the message of the school system — no drugs or alcohol — is reinforced equitably.

Parents, Pearce stresses, are still an important part of the plan. No child is discussed without the parent knowing about it.

"We tell the parents we're not labeling their kid," Pearce said. "What we're doing is showing behaviors we're seeing and telling the parents what we can offer for the student to reverse the behaviors and get the kid on track again."

Parents will also be apprised of what the schools are teaching about drugs and alcohol and will be asked to reinforce those ideas at home.

Seminars for families, like one that was held last fall for middle school families on how to keep the lines of communication open, will be offered again this spring and in the future.

In a recent community survey, 84 percent of those surveyed rated alcohol and drug counseling and education as "very important" for the schools to continue. Among middle school parents, 91 percent gave it the same high rating.

Pearce says those figures prove the need for a plan and the importance of keeping it in place.

Pearce said the master plan for student and employee assistance was first written in 1986; the new plan is simply an updating after seeing it in action for four years.

Ron Tonks, director of personnel, said employees are included in the new plan, but adding the changes would not affect them.

Most assessment increases exceed 10 percent — again

By John Mlnk
Assistant Editor

For at least the third year in a row, residential assessment increases in most of the Pointes will be greater than 10 percent.

Residents should be getting notices of their assessment adjustments in February or the beginning of March. The new assessments will apply to the 1991 summer and winter tax bills.

The assessment increases, determined by the Wayne County Department of Assessment and Equalization, range from 9 percent in Grosse Pointe Farms to 12.42 percent in the Park.

The increase in Grosse Pointe City is expected to be 11.31 percent; the Shores average assessment increase should be 11 percent; and the Woods average increase is pegged at 11.76 percent.

The percentage increases are determined by a two-year study by the county assessing department. The 24-month market study ending March 31, 1990, compares the purchase price of homes in each city with their assessed values.

Because the state equalized valuation or assessed value should be 50 percent of market value, if houses are sold for more than twice the SEV, then they are under-assessed. The county determines by what average level the houses are under-assessed and comes up with a factor or percentage by which assessments must be increased in each city.

Because the percentage of increase is an average for the entire city, the local assessor may apply it across the board to all properties or assess each property or neighborhood separately. If the assessment increases are not across the board, then some properties may have increases larger than the citywide average and some below that level.

Grosse Pointe Shores assessor Timothy O'Donnell, an appraiser with the county Assessment and Equalization Department, said each of the 1,100 residential properties in the Shores will be looked at to determine if it is under- or over-assessed. Rather than an across-the-board increase, the overall assessment adjustments in the Shores will average about 11 percent.

O'Donnell said the lakefront properties will probably see the largest assessment increases, and the smaller increases will be imposed on those farthest from the lake.

Woods medians to carry message

By Donna Walker
Staff Writer

One Grosse Pointe Woods city official calls it "the rape of Mack Ave." Local business people and motorists aren't thrilled with it, either. But the construction that has closed portions of Mack's north and south left lanes in the Woods is needed to improve telephone service in the area, according to the Michigan Bell Telephone Co.

Bulldozers began tearing up the traffic islands on Mack about two weeks ago for the Michigan Bell project. The company is installing new, copper and fiber optic cables beneath the medians, from Moross to St. Clair Shores, said Dean Hovey, a Michigan Bell spokesman.

The new cables are needed to handle an increase in telephone traffic that is being caused by the expansion of St. John Hospital and the influx of new businesses in the area, such as the Pointe Plaza shopping center at Mack and Moross, said Hovey.

neighborhood lines in a brick shed that Michigan Bell erected on the south side of the Woods' city hall property last year, Hovey said.

Chester E. Petersen, Grosse Pointe Woods city administrator, said he was upset about the project because the city spent thousands of dollars last year landscaping the traffic islands.

"I call it the rape of Mack Ave. That's what I call it," said Petersen.

"Right now, our feeder cables are operating at maximum capacity," said Hovey. "Once we're done with this, we should never have to tear up Mack Ave. again."

Michigan Bell must restore the traffic islands to their previous condition according to its construction permit filed with Wayne County, said Greg Harrison, Wayne County division permit engineer.

Although the project is needed, it is inconveniencing motorists and businesses in the area.

husband owns the store, located at 19850 Mack Ave.

Anne Dolengowski of Harper Woods said the construction is a bit of a bother, but that it hasn't stopped her from taking Mack into Grosse Pointe Woods to do her grocery shopping.

"People can't really park out in front, because of the construction and the traffic, and customers think they can't get down here because the street is so plugged up," said Bonnie Healy, of Healy's Health Hut store. Her

But Katy Yaklin, associate broker manager of Johnstone & Johnstone Inc.'s Woods office, located at 19790 Mack, said the construction isn't all bad. "We're conveniently located on a corner, so it's easy for customers to park around back. And there's still parking out front, too. Traffic is slow, but that may be a good thing for us, because when it's stop and go like that, more people have a chance to read our sign and notice our company," Yaklin said.

The $250,000 project should be completed by April, according to Hovey.

The older cables could only handle a finite number of telephone calls at one time. A fiber optic cable, however, is only limited by the number of electronic on and off impulses that are placed at its ends, according to Hovey.

Explaining last year's assessment notices, which infuriated some residents and caused long lines during Board of Review sessions, Belcher said:

He said the last time all the Shores properties were reassessed was for the 1983 tax year.

In the Farms, the county recommended a 10.7 percent increase in assessments, but city officials have decided to apply a smaller, across-the-board increase.

John Lamerato, city controller, said the 9 percent increase will be applied to all the city's residential properties. The lower increase still brings the citywide assessed value to within 49 percent of market values.

In the Woods, where outraged residents last year experienced wildly fluctuating assessment adjustments, the citywide average increase will be 11.76 percent.

Phillip Belcher, acting assessor and assistant city administrator, said the assessment adjustments will vary from area to area and by property type.

"We're trying to redo a lot of work from last year," he said. "It will not be across the board."

"We're trying to get values back to where they should be. We're not quite there. We've done some things to minimize the problems that occurred in 1990."

Instead of comparing purchase prices over a 24-month period ending early last year, the one-year study would look at sales prices during the 1990 calendar year. The one-year study could result in a lower assessment in-

"In the process for the 1990 assessments, the city attempted to do a reappraisal of all the properties, which was a couple years of work. In the process, there were some judgment errors made in coming up with the calculations that made things look bad. We still aren't sure of everything that went wrong."

He said the city will be doing this year to make sure assessments are more uniform and equitable. Some residents will see assessment increases of more than the citywide average and others will see decreases.

looking for under-assessed properties in order to get its citywide SEV up the required 12.42 percent, according to City Manager Dale Krajniak.

Grosse Pointe City has yet to decide how it will apply its assessment adjustments.

Treasurer/Assessor Dennis Foran said he has asked the county to do a 12-month market study to determine what kind of factor that would generate.

city councils, set the tax rates. Each year, the tax rates must be rolled back so revenues only go up equal to the inflation rate, but many times the elected public officials raise the tax rate to the point where revenues exceed the inflation rate.

Also, residents whose assessment adjustments were larger than the citywide average will obviously pay more in taxes.

Assessors point out that by law they are required to keep state equalized valuations (or assessments) at 50 percent of market value.

In information age, we need a new library

In our view, the strongest argument in favor of the proposed new library is that in the information age the Pointes really need it.

That is the basic reason the Grosse Pointe News is recommending YES on the Feb. 4 vote on a $7.6 million bond issue to erect and equip a new central library building and improve the adjacent athletic field at the Brownell School site.

What has happened in recent years has amounted to a revolution in the assembling, processing and serving of information to the public. Many commercial firms have entered the field but most of them put their own spin on information in order to serve their customers.

That means, in our view, that for the general public the library remains the basic source of information, offering a tremendous range of facts, figures, opinions and research material to serve the many needs of an upscale community such as this one.

The fact that this is truly the information age has led to a huge increase in the use of the library and offers the best answer to those who look at recent population statistics and say, wrongly, that a small population decline means a decrease in library usage.

To the contrary, the library book collection has risen by 40 percent and the number of library cardholders has leaped by 237 percent since Central Library opened its doors with a collection of 52,000 volumes nearly 40 years ago. That growth continued during the time the Pointes increased in population and it still continues as population declines slightly.

But as the information age arrived, so did new demands for library services. Today, for example, the collection includes, in addition to its 72,000 books, such items as audio and videotapes, compact disks, computers, copiers, fax machines and other materials, services and resources that were rare or unheard of when the Central Library building opened.

As a consequence, the library today is often overcrowded and unable to provide adequate desk and seating space for students, researchers and even browsers. Overflow materials, including many books, are stored and inaccessible in the attic of Richard School.

To meet the increasing demands, the new building would more than double the main library's available space, from 18,000 to 43,000 square feet. But Grosse Pointe is not the only community in Michigan reacting positively to the need for expanded library space and services.

Ann Arbor is building a 43,000-square-foot addition and Rochester a new 70,000-square-foot library. West Bloomfield built a 10,000-square-foot addition in 1989. Livonia has just completed a 65,000-square-foot library and Farmington and Southfield are proposing new library buildings.

But the issue is not keeping up with the Joneses. It is keeping up with the demand by Grosse Pointers for more and improved library service to help them meet their needs in the information age.

We know there is a war on. We know that property taxes are high, that a yes vote on Feb. 4 would add four-tenths of a mill to the library tax to finance the bond issue, and that property owners would be asked to approve another four-tenths to five-tenths of a mill for operations, probably in 1993-94 when the building is completed.

But the need remains. And so does the demand by a highly educated community for improved library service.

In the recent public opinion survey about the Grosse Pointe school system, 85 percent of the respondents gave the school district an "A" or a "B." Taken before the library campaign had reached its height, the survey also showed that the proposed new library was favored by a 46 percent to 39 percent margin.

Those survey results express strong confidence in the school district's leaders who have proposed the new library as part of their goal of maintaining an excellent educational system as well as preparing for the 21st century, now less than nine years away.

In our view, the confidence is deserved — and so is a YES vote on Feb. 4.

Using the Ford Auditorium

The decision by Comerica Inc. to abandon its proposal to raze Ford Auditorium to make way for a new riverfront headquarters has been welcomed in the Pointes and many other communities.

However, most of the people who opposed the commercial development of the riverfront area are still seeking some good public use for the building.

As might have been expected, Mayor Coleman Young and his clique bitterly condemned what the mayor called "a handful of naysayers" for their success in halting a development that he said would have meant a substantial investment in Detroit as well as additional jobs.

Comerica itself said, however, that while it was "greatly disappointed," it had been unable to arrange the financing for the $150 million project because of the current recession and the continuing legal challenges. However, prospects of losing the April 23 auditorium rezoning election also may have influenced the decision.

But project critics said they would continue their campaign for a no vote in the referendum in order to prevent some other commercial use of the property.

In the Pointes, opposition to the razing of the auditorium was expressed not only because of the proposed use of a prize piece of riverfront property for a commercial development but also because the city of Detroit failed to obtain the Ford family's approval before going ahead with the project. Funds for construction of the auditorium had been provided by the Ford family and Ford Motor Co. interests.

It's too early to say the auditorium has been saved, however. If the April 23 vote approves rezoning, some other commercial use may be sought for the property. But in the meantime the building remains locked and unused and there is no money in this year's city budget to finance even its upkeep.

That apparently reflects the attitude of the Detroit city administration which, it seems to us, gave the Ford family another poke in the eye when it halted its efforts to promote the use of the building.

If it can be saved, the auditorium ought to be used. Finding a constructive use ought to be the next goal of those who apparently have killed the Comerica project.

Murder anyone?

Grosse Pointe News staffers join this week in paying tribute to their colleague, Ronald J. Bernas, for the success of his play, "A Little Murder Never Hurt Anybody."

The comedy was presented by the Grosse Pointe Theatre to 11 enthusiastic audiences at the Fries Auditorium at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial before closing its scheduled run Saturday night.

Bernas, a News reporter for three years, has been member of the theater group since September 1988, has been an actor in four earlier productions and served as assistant stage manager for "A Little Murder."

The play was the first ever written by the newsman and budding playwright but it may not be the last. Ron says he's got a couple of other ideas buzzing around in his head these days as he carries out his newspaper assignments.

Good show, Ron.

Is it 'forward' or backward?

With the approach of the Feb. 4 election on a $7.6 million bond issue to finance a new library, a disappointing development has been reported to the Grosse Pointe News.

Vision unfulfilled

For most of the first half Sunday, Grosse Pointers had visions of sharing in the glory of a Buffalo Bills victory in the 25th annual Super Bowl.

The reason: Grosse Pointe Shores resident Ralph Wilson, a Detroit businessman, owns the Buffalo Bills and his team outplayed the New York Giants to lead 12 to 10 at the half.

Alas, it was not to be. The Giants rallied and won, 20 to 19, with the Bills missing an attempted field goal by a narrow margin at the finish.

Does that mean it is up to William Clay Ford, owner of the Lions who also lives in the Shores, to provide Grosse Pointers with some future Super Bowl satisfaction?

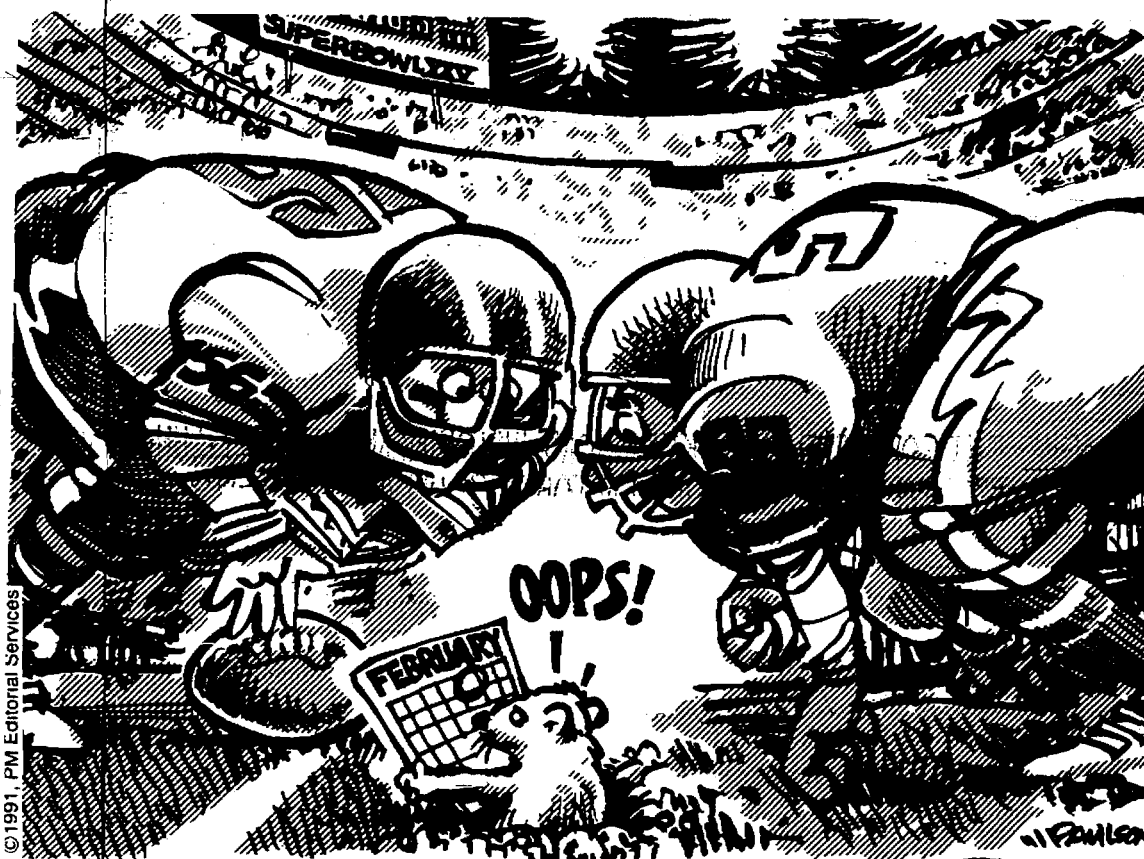

Let's hope so.

A pamphlet distributed under the name "Pointes Forward: Citizens for Accountable Government," but carrying neither the name nor the address of any Grosse Pointe citizens, has made its appearance in several locations in the community.

John Bruce, chairman of the Citizens Committee for a New Library, said that the organization named in the pamphlet is not registered with the elections commission and that information contained in the pamphlet is in error in at least two important respects:

It erroneously implies that the Woods and Park library branches will be closed if the bond issue is approved and it exaggerates the total cost of the project, saying it will be $22 million, well above school estimates of the $14.681 million required to pay off the bonds and interest in the next 20 years.

It is true that the proposed new library has become a controversial issue but in our view people should vote for or against it on the basis of factual information, not material that is false or misleading and distributed anonymously.

Letters

For excellence

To the Editor:

When my family moved to Michigan from out of state seven years ago, we chose to live in Grosse Pointe for one reason: its reputation for excellence. Imagine our disappointment and shock when we learned that, in some cases, it was more reputation than fact.

The library system, both public and in the schools, is inadequate and antiquated. What was state of the art in the 1950s cannot possibly meet the needs of the 1990s. It is time that the residents of Grosse Pointe recognize that fact and do something about it. After all, excellence cannot be maintained without growth and change.

We have the opportunity to make that growth and change possible by voting on Feb. 4. We can see that the size of our library is doubled. We can see the services of our library increased to fit the needs of preschoolers through seniors. We have the opportunity to restore excellence to our library system.

A vote for the new library would cost taxpayers approximately four-tenths of a mill. Translated into dollars, this would mean that the homeowner whose house is worth $200,000 would pay an additional $40 a year. This amounts to $3.33 per month, 77 cents per week.

A good library system is an invaluable source of relaxation, entertainment and education for people of all ages. With a relatively small investment, we all stand to reap great returns. Let's bring our Grosse Pointe libraries into the future instead of allowing them to remain in the past. Please vote on Feb. 4.

Extravagant

To the Editor:

I've been weighing all the pros and cons regarding the proposed new library, reading opinions in letters to the editor of this paper, as well as articles written in the news section.

After much thought, I am compelled to add my protests against high-handed methods used by the school board to further their extravagant and wasteful proposals.

I see no reason why the present Central Library couldn't be expanded. I also think the tool and art rental should be removed from the library and the service provided elsewhere in the community. Videocassettes, other than those that are educational, are unfair competition for the businesses in the area who already supply this service at reasonable cost. These services are not library functions.

I would like to see a reasonable plan of expansion for the present library location minus unproductive and unnecessary fill-ins and services.

As far as new offices for the school board are concerned, in years past they fought to close four of our schools. They did manage to close Barnes School and there must be enough office space there if they're determined not to stay in the old Cadioux School.

As it did when the closing of so many of our schools was proposed, may common sense prevail in the coming election.

Nancy Spalding
Grosse Pointe Woods
P.S. My family and I are frequent users of the library.

Don't strike out the band

Like millions of other Americans, I tuned into ABC to watch Super Bowl XXV last Sunday. But I didn't do it because I like football, or wondered if terrorists would attack, or because someone else had commandeered the remote control.

I sat through the game — at least the first half — because I wanted to see that flashy spectacle known as halftime.

Call me crazy if you will, but to me, football is just filler between the pregame and halftime shows when marching bands take the field.

Some people like watching grown men pummel each other over an oblong piece of pigskin. I can understand that.

However, I just wish television producers would understand that there are members of the viewing public who, like myself, want to see halftime shows.

Maybe I'm biased because of all the chilly — and downright cold — nights I spent marching across a football field, playing my trusty cornet in my high school band. But I've always bristled over the fact that halftime shows often get short-changed by TV.

College and high school musicians spend months learning and perfecting the routines they perform at halftime. Those geometric designs don't just come to them in a day.

At my high school, the band started practicing in August, when the football players did. Both groups trained about five hours a day, five days a week, and attended after-school practices in the fall.

The band also went to camp for a week of intense training at the end of August.

Camp was about 90 percent work and 10 percent fun, with eight hours of practice a day. And, in pursuit of art, band members endured heatless cabins with leaky roofs and the clouds of mosquitos and swamp gas that infested that locale.

Camp directors called it a nature preserve. Band members affectionately referred to it as a "hell hole" and likened camp to basic training.

However, that was back in the good old Cold War days, when we got our information about basic training from the movies — "Stripes" and "Private Benjamin" — and not the evening news.

But getting back to the point: College and high school musicians spend a lot of time (in some cases, as much time as football players) practicing for games. However, the only time their efforts are televised is during bowl games when halftimes become huge extravaganzas.

During the rest of the season, TV stations cut away for commercials or commentary at halftime.

OK, commercials help pay the rent. But do the remaining minutes of halftime have to be filled, as they usually are, with interviews with former football greats and sportscasters predicting what will happen in the second half?

Come on. Die-hard football fans are probably in the kitchen grabbing something to eat at halftime or are in the bathroom.

So why not televise the band's halftime show for people who want to see it? And in its entirety, not just a sound bite and screen blip as the station leads into or out of a commercial.

As anyone knows who watched last Sunday, halftime was once again pre-empted by TV. But this time, it was for good reason. ABC News broke in with a "Gulf War Update."

At the end of the news segment, U.S. soldiers were shown watching the game on TV at a base in Saudi Arabia.

Last week, many people said it would be absurd, tacky and even disrespectful to go through with the Super Bowl in light of current events. However, the game sure seemed to mean a lot to those soldiers in Saudi Arabia.

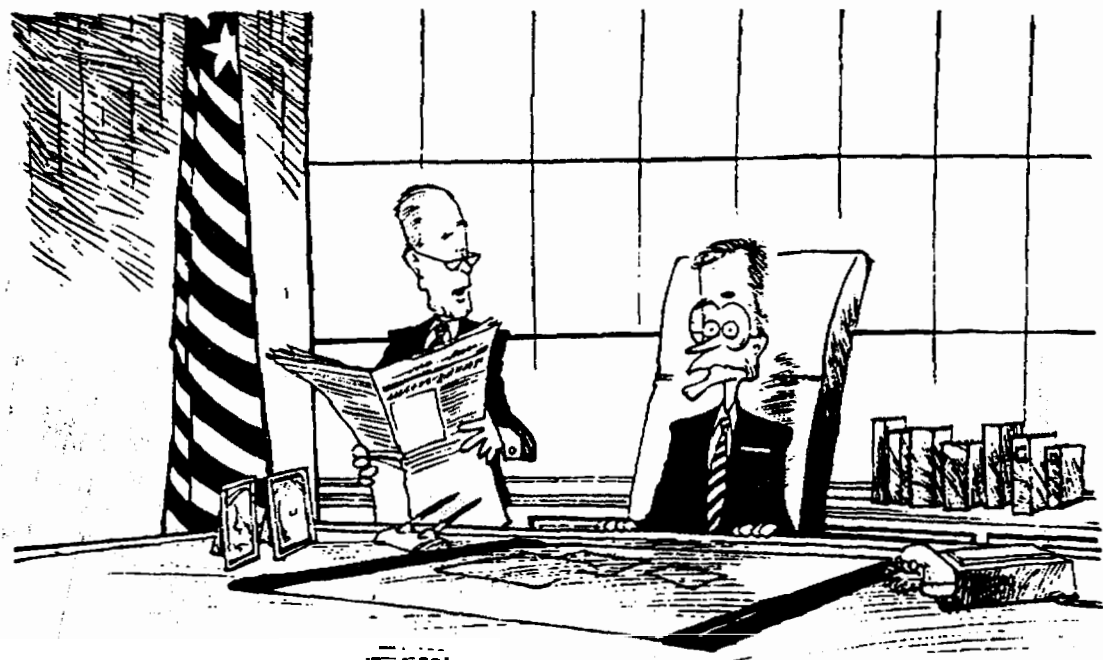

I wonder if Dawn Krull was watching. A good friend and talented trumpet player, she was my squad leader and later drum major of our high school band. Now she's a sergeant in the Air Force, stationed in Dhahran, Saudi Arabia.

If she wasn't sleeping, or busy checking for enemy explosives in aircraft baggage, or worrying about a SCUD missile attack or the possible lack of drinking water due to the oil spill in the Persian Gulf, and if she was anywhere near a TV, I'm sure she would have liked to see halftime, too.

IMAGINE THAT GORBACHEV AT POINTING SOME INSIGNIFICANT, UNPOPULAR, UNKNOWN ACCOMPLISHMENT LACKING EAR DOG TO BE HIS VICE PRESIDENT!

In pursuit of understanding; an elusive goal

It is a sunny Sunday afternoon. On countless television sets up and down the street, the Bills are beating the stuffing out of the Raiders for the chance to go to Tampa the following week-end. The game's ups and downs waft from windows open to the sea breeze, as do the cheers and groans of the assembled fans.

On the other side of the yard, life is playing itself out in a hibiscus bush, where lizards leap from branch to branch in pursuit of lunch and each other. One lizard freezes on the end of a stump; his head bobs; suddenly a brilliant scarlet pouch blossoms at his throat.

Today is the fourth day of the War.

Across the Intracoastal Waterway, Maged Metwally is enjoying the weekend too. Relaxed, in bare feet and trendy yachting clothes, he pads around the room doing business on a cordless phone.

But a seriousness underlies everything he says. For Maged Metwally is Egyptian, and yesterday his phone call was to his brother in Alexandria.

"They are sad, very sad, over there," he says. "They don't expect anything good to come of this."

Metwally, 48, came to the United States 25 years ago, when he finished his education in Great Britain. He's a mechanical engineer with a doctorate, who manufactures pneumatic stabilizers for million-dollar yachts.

Maged Metwally has it made. Good job, nice house, beautiful family. His adopted country offers the freedoms he hoped for when he left the Middle East.

He could just kick back — but he doesn't. He has family and friends living near a war zone. He sees misunderstanding of the Middle East everywhere he turns.

Not that he supports Saddam Hussein. No, the Iraqi leader has violated the unspoken understanding and carried a boundary dispute into an invasion. For that, the majority of Arabs agree, he should be punished.

But Metwally believes the United States would have been wise to stay out of it. The Iraqi threat is overblown, he says, and Americans don't understand the Middle East.

I came to see Metwally in the hope of gaining some insight into the Middle East morass. He is willing to talk to an out-of-town journalist because of his Islamic obligations. "Each and every Moslem is required to portray Islam in his actions, his words, and in his way of life," he explains. "This puts a responsibility on our shoulders."

To carry out this responsibility, Metwally makes himself available to the press, works on a committee to establish a local mosque, and teaches Islamic thought at the county prison. It's an uphill battle: Every year, he publicizes Ramadan to the local media; every year but one, he has been ignored.

Making sense of the Middle East situation is an uphill battle as well. Shifting allegiances, cultural misunderstandings, religious differences, dictatorships that don't reflect the attitudes of the masses — they're all complicated by our own ethnocentrism that simply doesn't bother trying to understand the mysteries of other ways of life.

An article in the Economist outlined what could happen after the war finally concluded: "Even if this war runs like clockwork, the postwar Middle East will be a mess. But the Middle East is already a mess."

Like many Americans in my generation, I grew up taking Israel as a given. "Exodus" romanticized its founding; the Holocaust created sympathy. Jews have lived in the West for centuries; not since the Enlightenment have they been viewed as mysterious or exotic or unfaithful.

Arabs, on the other hand, have kept their old ways. They are not only exotic and mysterious, they are impenetrable. We just don't get it.

Taking Israel for granted is precisely the problem, according to Metwally. Like many Arabs, he sees Israel leading the United States around by the nose, no questions asked. Arabs, meanwhile, have tried to make friends and been rebuffed at every turn.

"The United States is a giant with its tongue clipped off (where Israel is concerned)," he says.

"... The United States has been highly respected by Arabs. Islamic teaching requires us to acquire knowledge. So we regard people with knowledge positively. Even after the colonial period, people looked to the West for knowledge, for their education."

"And we are taught to respect people of the book."

(The people of the book include Jews and Christians as well as Moslems, Metwally explains. All three religions grew from the same roots and traditions and use some of the same writings, as well as sharing prophets.)

George Bush has said that his administration is going to need some extremely "sophisticated" diplomacy to iron out the mess once the war is over. Just where do we stand?

Border disputes left over from the British division of the old Ottoman Empire still fester almost everywhere. Iraq claims part of Kuwait, and the Iran-Iraq war was about boundaries. Syria thinks it has a right to Lebanon, which of course was drawn up to include warring factions, making it impossible to govern even without Syria's interference. Palestine, Israel and Jordan require a Solomon to figure out acceptable borders.

Support

To the Editor:

I now support the millage for the new public library A letter by me in opposition to the proposed new library at Brownell was published here last summer.

Because of the changes made in the site plan and the assurances which have been given to those living nearby, I now intend to vote in favor of the millage and recommend the same to your readers.

I favor this new library for all the right and regular reasons; a new library is needed and this one is appropriate.

I withdraw my objection to the Brownell site, and recommend approval of the millage, because the amended plans meet my previous objections and because at the public meeting of the Grosse Pointe Farms City Council on Aug. 13, the chief of police, with the approval of the Farms council, assured the residents of the area that any traffic problem would be addressed and that if the residents in the area requested restricted parking on one way directions of their residential streets, it would be done.

With the safety and aesthetic improvements now included in the site plan and the assurances regarding traffic problems given to those of us living in the immediate area I support, and recommend, passage of the millage for the new library at the Brownell site.

Too small

To the Editor:

I was a member of the library staff at Central Library when it opened to the public in 1953. Shortly after the opening, Mr. Dexter Ferry, who had been instrumental in donating the money for the new library, came into the library and said to me that his foundation had made a mistake. I asked Mr. Ferry to clarify what he meant, since the library was heavily used by the public and was very popular. Mr. Ferry commented that the mistake was that the library had been built too small to provide for all the users and their roads.

Imagine, not enough space already in 1953! And Mr. Ferry had no idea at that time about the number of services that the library would have to provide today. Now the library needs more space for more books, more audiovisual materials, more magazines, more computers, more technology, and more quiet areas. The library offers services today that we did not dream about in 1953!

This critical need for library space remains a problem. The library needs a building that can accommodate current and future needs. That is why I am so delighted that the voters of this community will be given the opportunity on Feb. 4 to say yes to our community library's needs. Mr. Ferry's Foundation provided a gift that served this community well. Now we, the taxpayers, can carry on his foundation's generosity by providing new library space for which Mr. Ferry recognized a need in 1953.

Vote yes on Feb. 4 for a new library.

Don't worry

To the Editor:

Worry! Fret! Torment! We worry about ourselves. We are bedeviled about our children. We agonize about our future. Where on such an agenda do we trouble about our Grosse Pointe libraries?

The New York Times tells us that America is becoming increasingly illiterate. This means we are able to read but don't. All members of our households work; information comes via television rather than via sports; entertainment via sports and movies; and we are left too tired to read. Of course, some facts belie this reasoning, as book sales increase, especially for children's books, and the image of middle class America continues as one of intelligence and reflection. Our own libraries are tremendously busy. Too busy and too active for their buildings.

For a small cost of $50 or perhaps less each year per household, we can collectively solve at least this one of our many worries. We can stop fretting about whether our libraries will be here when we want them. We can be reassured that information is at hand! For the price of two or three magazine subscriptions each year we will have all the periodicals, books, data bases, videos, outreach programs, and all the happy readers we will ever need.

Necessary

To the Editor:

On Feb. 4 voters in the Grosse Pointe School District will decide the question of whether we will have a new library.

I vety much hope the answer will be yes.

The need for a new facility is evident to all who have examined the question. The present building is inadequate and becomes more so with every passing year.

Most of the community discussion has centered on site location, a subject which has been studied almost endlessly. While there is no ideal site, Brownell is the best we have. The school board owns the land and the facility can be placed there while preserving — and in some ways enhancing — the playing fields.

A quality library serves residents of all ages and is a critical element in community life. We have a chance this February to make Grosse Pointe a better place in the future and we owe it to ourselves to seize this opportunity.

Invest

To the Editor:

I encourage my fellow Grosse Pointers to vote yes for a new library on Monday, Feb. 4.

My love of libraries began as a child. I fondly remember regular trips to the Central Library when I would spend hours browsing and exploring the wealth of treasures the library contained. The pleasure I got from these experiences instilled in me a love of reading and scholarship that has been a source of pleasure and an asset to me in my academic and adult years.

It makes me sad to see that our libraries are no longer the community treasures they once were. They no longer have the space needed to provide the broad range of newer information services today's best libraries provide.

Even the quality of traditional services has deteriorated. With the removal of many materials to storage and the crowding that has developed, the atmosphere of our libraries is no longer adequate for reading and studying.

We have an opportunity on Feb. 4 to restore a level of excellence to our libraries that equals that of other communities. Let's invest in making our libraries a community treasure we can once again be proud of.

Rally 'round

To the Editor:

Monday, Feb. 4, is the time for Grosse Pointe residents to rally together. We need to have positive and enthusiastic support for a new central library when we go to the polls. Let's show that we are a caring community responding to changing needs by giving this gift not only to ourselves, but to future generations of Grosse Pointers.

Our public libraries are utilized by pre-schoolers, elementary, middle and high school students, as well as college-age students, parents, teachers, grandparents and senior citizens. The investment of a new, updated facility in and by our community enhances our property values, makes the Grosse Pointes a more desirable community in which to live, and gives opportunities for literary excellence. It provides the necessary educational credibility to the students in our public, private and parochial schools. Our youth are the future of our community and world, and they deserve a library facility that has updated technology and services.

We are fooling ourselves if we think the current Fisher Road library provides opportunities relevant to the 1990s, when it did not meet our needs 25 years ago. Furthermore, the amount of tax increase to each homeowner is miniscule when you consider the compact jewel that will be built to provide benefits to all ages. We spend in one evening at a favorite restaurant the amount being asked of us as taxpayers for the library for an entire year.

The library bond issue has been well thought out by utilizing professionals from both inside and outside our community, as well as our own residents, to come up with this best possible, centrally located site and library configuration at a realistic cost. Grosse Pointers, serving on the Library Study Committee, have traveled to Livonia, Plymouth-Canton, Troy and Sterling Heights for comparisons of existing facilities, and they discovered that our library system is woefully outdated and under-sized for our community needs.

More than 100 citizens have served on committees for the past three years, along with the administration and staff of our Grosse Pointe Public Libraries. Congratulations to all of you who have brought this very realistic plan to us for a vote. Let's support their dedication and perseverance, and support the Brownell site on Feb. 4 with an enthusiastic "yes" to this gift to our community. By doing so we will be meeting our community's library needs in the 1990s as well as in the year 2000.

In favor

To the Editor:

At our January meeting, the Board of Directors of the American Association of University Women, Grosse Pointe Branch, voted to endorse the library bond proposition for building a new library at the Brownell site.

Members of the board discussed the importance of expansion of our current out-of-date and overcrowded facility. The increase to 2-1/2 times the current physical space will provide a much-needed increase in space available for expansion of the book collection and reference materials.

AAUW's mission statement includes promotion of education and self-development over the lifespan, and positive societal change. We feel a vote in favor of the library bond issue is a vote for education and enhancement of the Grosse Pointe community. We urge all voters of Grosse Pointe to participate in this decision to better our community resources.

Vote no

To the Editor:

In the midst of a combination of war and recession, with Michigan one of the three most depressed states in the nation, with hundreds of thousands of jobs already lost and many more to come, with talk of possibly closing down the Detroit Public Library and perhaps even the rest of the Cultural Center as well, one must seriously question the sanity of replacing our debt-free library at this time.

Michigan citizens, particularly in this area, already pay some of the highest local taxes in the nation. And for those awesome outlays we cannot even get our streets plowed at the peak traffic time of the year! With the prospect of declining school enrollment, which by the magic formulas of school financing always leads to increased costs, does it make sense to inflict upon ourselves yet another tax burden?

For the additional library space needed, can we not look first to the areas now devoted to tools, paintings, videotapes and the like? No doubt these things are desirable adjuncts to the library function when affordable, but they are peripheral and dispensable aspects in periods of austerity.

In times like these, let us opt for common sense and fiscal sanity and vote no on Feb. 4.

Suzanne C. Jackson
Grosse Pointe

Do it now

To the Editor:

Local taxes — is never a barrel of fun. But our tax dollars indeed buy some things on which we place the highest value: our schools, our protection, basic sanitation. Our public libraries.

Grosse Pointe has paid for only one of its three libraries. The Pierce Branch and school were provided mostly by WPA funds in about 1939; Central was largely a gift from the Ferry and Sales families.

With a measured growth rate, even in the 1950s and '60s, Grosse Pointe has been spared a burden other communities know well — paying for perhaps half its public buildings at the same time. Only North High School and South's industrial arts renovation remain on our debt load.

For 25 years, this community has agonized over the decision to build the public library space so desperately needed. No decision is perfect, but let's do it now.

What will it cost annually? Depending upon the worth of your house, about $20 to $60. (And we should remember that for those of any age who cannot afford that, Michigan's "circuit-breaker" helps reduce their property taxes.) In terms of buying power, what do you buy for $20 to $60? A skirt? A couple of neckties? Two or three books you might have borrowed from the library? How many drinks, how much fast food can be bought for that amount?

This enlightened community has a responsibility to get its priorities in order. I shall vote yes on Monday, Feb. 4. I hope you will, also, and take pride in doing so.

Questions

To the Editor:

I am a lifelong resident of Grosse Pointe and attended our public schools. My husband and I have four children, two still in public schools, one who will start kindergarten in two years, and our oldest, who graduated from Grosse Pointe South and is a college junior.

With this large age span, we have participated in many sports teams, as well as coached, and have been very active at all levels of volunteerism in our schools. We have been very aware of what is happening in the community because so many activities affect our family, from pre-school through high school.

The question of whether we should build a new library has been a puzzle to us because not one word has been printed about what this could do to our community.

The only discussion that has been made public concerns money. We all know that we are in a recession and with the war now a reality, we have more economic warnings that this recession will deepen.

There are many other questions besides money that should have been discussed, and even though they were brought up at public meetings, they were inadequately covered by this paper.

What about the sale of the school board office on St. Clair? All I've been able to find out is that the school board is discussing selling the property to Bon Secours Hospital. How would the hospital use this property? A clinic, or parking lot? What do the City of Grosse Pointe or the residents on St. Clair have to say about property use?

If this building is torn down, shouldn't we save the property for our schools? We no longer have places to build anything in this community and who knows what need new technology would bring in the future.

I am astonished that there has been nothing reported about the full picture concerning building a library. We already have over 60,000 square feet of library space that is underused. There are the libraries at both high schools.

Most high school students take seven courses every day, without a study hall. The vast majority never use the library during the day, unless a teacher takes a class period there. After school, the libraries are closed at four o'clock. If your child takes seven courses and plays sports, the library is unavailable except before classes.

I think these libraries should be open to the public and the Central Branch should be rebuilt. Since the last defeat of the library, all suggestions of changing the plan, including the fact that the building can legally expand 18 feet toward Kercheval, were all dropped.

I think that it is an embarrassment to this community, with all our innovative citizens, that the only plan the board could come up with was to write a check for a new building. I believe the reason that something more innovative wasn't forthcoming is because the same people serve on every school board committee.

Our board members are very knowledgeable about every fraction of this community, and they make sure that opposing views are never represented. The outcome is always predetermined.

Our Central Library is also an integral part of the businesses on the Hill. It is a magnet to bring people to patronize our local stores. Residents, who are using the library, often stop and shop at the surrounding shops because they are already there. Loss of Central Library means loss of business traffic. A school board business office will not draw business to our local shops.

The site at Brownell is cutting into our playing fields, which already are in short supply. Anyone who has children in sports who use the Brownell field, know that soccer and softball and baseball overlap each other and that it is very difficult to get practice time. After the first rainout, all schedules overlap each other. Our school can no longer have freshman or intramural teams, nor can it add new sports because we do not have enough playing fields for more teams.

Anyone who attends school board meetings or reads the minutes knows that the administration has tried to figure out a way to move to a new building for at least 10 years. They have, in this time, replaced windows and landscaped and decorated offices at great expense. I wonder how much of the library issue is to provide a way to obtain a new administration building?

I attended many of the meetings concerning the library and, unfortunately, many questions were answered with a pre-set "line" which did not answer the question. When the audience cried out to answer the questions, the subject was changed.

While I believe our Central Library needs remodeling and updating, I do not think this present plan should be approved. Too many questions remain.

Too many good ideas that were presented at the city council meeting were not looked into.

Can a community with such limited space afford to undertake such a dramatic step? I think not.

Logical

To the Editor:

What a relief that it's not too late for Grosse Pointers to wake up! Pete Winkler's idea for the Grosse Pointe library expansion is persuasive. Expansion of the existing facility provides a logical, economically responsible solution.

The past votes against the library were not votes against our children's excellent education, but simply the refusal of an unnecessary, ill-conceived solution to the library dilemma.

Listen to the voters by refocusing efforts on a plan for expansion of the present facility.

Inconsistencies

To the Editor:

We are opposed to Grosse Pointe Farms' proposed traffic flow plan, and the Jan. 14 public hearing revealed many inconsistencies and misinformation. I will summarize these briefly:

Designation of Fisher Road as a "major road" was made arbitrarily in 1951 without any traffic study, and nothing has been done since to review the decision.

The Grosse Pointe Farms City Council allowed significant development on the Hill without any plan for traffic flow.

The proposed traffic plan was initiated based on complaints by residents of McMillan, and does not consider complaints of residents on other streets.

The proposed traffic plan plays one street vs. another without addressing the overall traffic issue.

We were disappointed with the Grosse Pointe Farms council's attitude toward speakers when they raised serious traffic-related issues.

Andrew H. Dervan
Grosse Pointe Farms

Growing

To the Editor:

The Grosse Pointe community is blessed with an active, informed citizenry that's formed many a committee to tackle many a thorny issue. Perhaps no group of citizens has worked harder or longer than the committee working for a new central library.

The issue has been considered for some 25 years — an entire generation. Study after study, group after group reached the same conclusion; a new central library is badly needed. Current plans, a result of thoughtful revisions, call for a superb facility. How can we not vote to improve our educational climate for all age groups? With the information age upon us, how can we reject a plea to keep abreast of developments? Peason we in the Pointes might tend to reject the bond issue of Feb. 4 is our conservatism and appreciation of the status quo. Surely many of us are attached to the familiar red brick building on Kercheval. With so much changing around us, this symbol of knowledge reassures us with its familiarity. But things that don't grow die.

If the vote is a positive one, the excellent new facilities will soon have us wondering how we ever lasted as long as we did with our current building. Newcomers and a whole new generation will see in the new library a welcoming home for learning.

I urge you to join me in voting yes Feb. 4. Vote yes, not just to keep our library going, but to keep it growing.

Mike Mengden

Perplexed

To the Editor:

I have, since 1960, been a fairly frequent user of Central Library, and in all of those 30 years I have never found it difficult to browse, find the books that I wanted, and a comfortable place to sit. Consequently, I am perplexed by the supposed urgent need for a large and expensive new structure when there is substantial expansion space at hand in the present building.

Why not convert the second floor meeting rooms — used by non-residents as well as residents — to actual "book usage"? If 75 to 100 people can meet and enjoy refreshments in the second floor library meeting room, it should be possible to provide a lot of additional book stacks there.

Why not shift those meeting facilities to Barnes or some other school, or the recently expanded Grosse Pointe War Memorial?

Why not replace tool and video rental space with books — and let Central get back to the function of providing books?

C. Rusch

Inadequate

To the Editor:

The Grosse Pointes must have been an exciting place to live during the 1950s. Although I was growing up in another state at that time, I have no doubt that citizens here must have experienced the same exhilaration that I felt seeing new homes and new schools going up — a sense of purpose and direction in the community.

Grosse Pointe was even more fortunate than my home town during those years. Thanks to the vision and generosity of the Ferry Foundation, residents saw a new library building rise before their eyes, and at no cost to the taxpayers.

My family has benefited greatly by having access to all of the Grosse Pointe libraries. Today, however, it is evident to even the most casual library user that the Central Library building is inadequate. What should be a quiet, uncrowded place is so overutilized that it seems more like a beehive. Indeed, there is barely room there to display the drawings of the proposed new library building.

The possible sites for a new library are very limited, and clearly none can please everyone. However, because of its central location in the school district, access from a major street, and the fact that it is already owned by the board of education, Brownell is the best location available. The board of education is to be commended for its comprehensive effort to consider all possible sites before selecting Brownell.

The Grosse Pointes are now a mature community, and we who enjoy its many benefits need to direct more of our attention and our tax dollars to ensure its renewal and safeguard its future. Building a new library is a good step in this direction, and one that adds very little to our existing taxes. I look forward to the opportunity to support the bond issue to provide funds for the proposed new library. Vote yes on Monday, Feb. 4.

Misinformation

To the Editor:

In the Jan. 24 issue of the Grosse Pointe News you printed a letter accompanied by a sketch of a proposed library expansion by Pete Winkler. While the proposal is obviously an attempt at trying to solve the library's need of space, it is a proposal that was rejected as a workable option by the voters more than three years ago!

Furthermore, it ignores the complexity of the library expansion issue, since it does not represent an approved plan by the Farms City Council. All those involved in the current, approved plan for the construction of a new library on the Brownell site have worked through the process following the rules, ordinances and regulations of several diverse governing agencies.

It would appear that Mr. Winkler's proposal arrives on the scene — interestingly enough, two weeks before the scheduled bond election — in order to diminish the hard work of many concerned citizens and to add chaos to a difficult problem-solving process. His proposal does not account for the demands of parking (the Farms ordinance would require 120 parking spaces to comply with his proposed design), the cost figures for renovating the current Central Library, the costs which are part of equipping and furnishing a library and, worse yet, his proposal takes a large chunk of South High School's playfields! In short, the proposal does not represent the complete story and is filled with misinformation.

In order to gain a clearer picture of the library's proposal, I would encourage Mr. Winkler and others to read the information contained in the brochures available at the libraries. As one of them states, "this was no spur of the moment, pie in the sky decision; we've been wrestling with library space problems for 25 years." Mr. Winkler would have us believe that his simplistic, erroneous solution is the answer to the library space needs. Meanwhile, an approved solution and proposal is on the ballot for Feb. 4. I am certain that enlightened, informed Grosse Pointe citizens will join me by saying yes to the bond issue proposal.

The best

To the Editor:

Grosse Pointers tend to think that their community offers the best — the best public school system, the best in community health care, the best in recreational facilities, and the best public library system. I have lived 48 of 50 years in Grosse Pointe and have always felt that my community was among the best in the country. I was always proud when asked where I was from to say, "Grosse Pointe."

I am still proud to say it, but no longer can I boast of a superior library system. The only superior part of our library system is the staff that works so hard and well to cover the inadequacies of the system's physical plant, materials, and equipment in order to render excellent service to our community. But even to the casual library visitor, this challenge has been met with increasing difficulty over the past few years.

I consider myself a frequent user of the library, visiting the Central Branch an average of about twice a week throughout the year. When I return home with a book, magazine, audio or videotapes, or something copied on the copier, I am exhausted from having squeezed and elbowed my way around a central library that is filled beyond capacity with books, people, and equipment in a relatively noisy atmosphere that such overcrowding produces. A trip to the library should not be a stressful experience!

People have commented to me that the library system meets their needs perfectly. They call the library, ask for a book, magazine, or video, and go in to pick it up. That is fine, but I would hope that even those people would recognize that a library system must meet the needs of all library users who are diverse in age, needs and interest, while at the same time keeping an eye on how those needs and interests will change in the future.

It is the future that concerns me most. Certainly many of us 50 years of age or beyond think the word "library" is synonymous with "books and magazines." But really today's library, and certainly the library of the future, is a place where members of a community will go for information needs — whether that information is delivered in hard print, in an audio or audio visual format, or electronically (computers).

With the proliferation of books and magazines over the past five years, we cannot even meet the traditional and present needs of our library let alone its future needs within a physical plant of 18,000 square feet. We must consider that the newest building was constructed in the early 1950s.

We do not have to look far to see what happens when we fail to make an investment in the future. American industry, complacent with its world-wide competitive advantage during the first half of the century, thought it could ignore investing in the future — in new plant and equipment. Much of the physical plant used by established American industries in the 1950s and 1960s was built at the turn of the century or earlier. Ail of us have paid a heavy price in terms of our country's competitive posture because of American industry's failure to invest in the future.

On Feb. 4, I will vote yes for a new library building on the Brownell site. However, for those in our community who feel that a new and improved library facility is unwarranted, then I ask: What happens if we fail to keep pace in health care, education, and public safety as well? We certainly run the risk of settling for something that is less than best. And, if we compromise our community standards, we will ultimately compromise our property values.

In other words, all of us win by voting yes in February; those who avidly support a new and improved library facility and those who are privately concerned with the future of their property values.

Hopefully, we can look beyond our own self-interest and do what is best in a community sense both for the present and the future. After all, when some of us were growing up in Grosse Pointe 30' or 40 years ago, there were those then in the 50s, 60s, 70s, and older who sacrificed their self-interest so we might enjoy the "best."

Responsibility

To the Editor:

It is time for the citizens of Grosse Pointe to assume the responsibility for the public library.

Our original Central Library was given to us by the Ferry Foundation, through its gift in 1951. Since then our record has been as follows:

1967 — The voters defeated a plan to expand Central Library, remodel the Woods branch, and move the Park to a new building.

1987 — The voters defeated a 8.63 million bond issue to expand Central Library and renovate its branches.

Central Library was designed to hold a collection of 52,000 books. Today the library houses 72,000 volumes, with overflow materials stored in the attic of Richard School. User space and seating are at a premium. Parking is inadequate, and handicapped residents do not have barrier-free access.

Furthermore, Central Library is not equipped to deal with the electronic information that is now part of modern library service. Central Library is doing its best to keep up, but it is fighting a losing battle.

I have lived continuously in Grosse Pointe since 1948, except for two years. During the years of 1988 and 1989, I lived in Troy, and was greatly impressed with the facility.

The Troy library is much larger than our Central Library. It is divided into many separate rooms, and offers a much better atmosphere in which to study or read. I continue to ask myself how a community like Troy, with an antiquated volunteer fire department, can surpass Grosse Pointe with its library.

Our community is outstanding in the United States. Wherever one goes, Grosse Pointe is well-known, and well-respected. We have a fine school system, excellent police and fire protection, wonderful parks, and our city maintenance departments provide the best in services. So why do we have an inferior library system?

We will be asked to vote on Feb. 4. We will be asked to approve a bond issue that will be retired by 2011. If our home is worth $200,000 we will be asked to contribute $40 a year until 2011. Inflation alone should tell us that we have to spend more now than we did in 1953, when our Central Library was built. Let us step up to our responsibility.

Function

To the Editor:

One of the principles of architecture is that form follows function. School libraries have been designed to provide for the functions and support of the school curriculum assisted by trained school librarians. Public libraries have been designed to serve the information functions of the general public assisted by trained public librarians. The current Central Library has for some time exhausted its available space, diminishing its ability to provide important public functions.

Those who suggest that current public library space needs could be solved by transferring some public library functions or hours of service to the school libraries are overlooking an important fact: Libraries don't work that way.

In addition to their different functions and focus, it should be noted that school libraries are staffed to coincide with the school day, five days a week, whereas the public library is open at different hours to accommodate the public seven days a week.

Furthermore, while access to the public library by all members of the community is encouraged, it is an important school regulation for child and staff safety and protection that the general public not be permitted to walk unannounced into a school building.

The public and school libraries are already performing optimum sharing of their resources through a computer connection which provides for interloan of materials. The public library is the community's library, serving everyone, in a building that can no longer accommodate its functions. That is why the community is being asked to support a proposal for a new public library on Feb. 4.

The facts

To the Editor:

Over the last three years I have been one of the hundreds of citizens who have worked very hard to solve our public library's critical space problem. As the volunteer chairperson of Citizens for a New Library, I want to highlight a few facts.

1. A broad-based citizen committee thoroughly studied all alternatives and supported the construction of a new main library at the Brownell site as the best solution.

2. The Park and Woods branches will remain open and are an essential part of the delivery of library service.

3. Leaders of athletic groups participated in the development of the Brownell site plan and believe the new library and field improvements create a win-win solution.

4. The library budget represents less than 5 percent of a homeowner's annual property taxes, and construction of a new library will cost most taxpayers less than 11 cents a day.

5. More than 1,000 people have indicated their support of the bond issue (see today's endorsement ad). Also, hundreds of residents have volunteered time and given money to this campaign.

6. Citizens for a New Library, the school board, school and library administrators and Friends of the Grosse Pointe Public Library board have all been forthright and open in providing information. Numerous public presentations have been given. Every piece of our information or campaign literature has identified the source and included a phone number to contact for more information.

The election on Monday, Feb. 4, is an opportunity for you to help solve a long-standing problem and to indicate your support of our public library. I hope you will join thousands of your friends and neighbors by voting yes.

Disadvantaged

To the Editor:

Earlier this winter, a new client and I were extolling the resources available in Grosse Pointe. She and her family recently moved here from Shaker Heights outside of Cleveland. When I began describing the fine library staff that assists my family each week, she quietly commented that the staff was fine, however the facility and space were in the "dark ages." This was a surprise to me and I later found that their support level for the library was at 3 mills versus our 1.25.

When I shared this with my father-in-law in Plymouth, he suggested that I visit his Canton Public Library if I wanted to see a first-rate facility. I visited that library earlier this month and was very impressed at what a public library could offer. In touring the 31,000 square foot library, I remarked to the librarian that their children's section would almost cover the entire ground floor reading and stack area of our Central Library. The children's section alone carries 50 periodicals and there are three personal computers devoted just for children. They also offer more than 1,000 children's recordings.

The resources for adults were just as impressive, including Fax services, meeting rooms, expansive periodical browsing space, quiet study area with carrels, quiet reading area, and newspaper clipping files.

The librarian then informed me that they are planning to add 15,000 square feet to their library for a total of 46,000 square feet ('80 population was 49,000). The current Canton millage for library support is 1.67 mills. I understand now that the industry standard for library facility space is one square foot per citizen. The Grosse Pointe library service population is 56,000 and our current library space totals 27,300 square feet (18,000 Central and 9,300 for the Woods and Park).

I never realized until this month that our family was living in a disadvantaged community. We hope that the Grosse Pointe citizens take the opportunity on Feb. 4 to vote and raise the standards of our library facility to the level our fine community deserves.

Years of planning

To the Editor:

Mr. Winkler's proposal to build a 30,000 square foot addition on to the present Central Library at a cost of only $2.8 million sounds too good to be true. Let me assure you, it is.

Mr. Winkler puts his addition squarely on South High School's playing fields, with no regard for the impact of the high school athletic program. He ignores current Farms building ordinances which require 120 parking spaces for an addition that size and provides 28 new spaces instead.

He leaves out the costs of furnishing and equipping the addition and renovating the present Central Library and then says his addition would cost $5 million less than the proposed new library at Brownell.

Mr. Winkler also seems to have forgotten that, in 1987, an addition to the present Central Library was proposed by the Board of Education and rejected by the voters. Since that time, commercial development on the Hill has escalated, and parking in the area has become more and more difficult. Expansion at the Kercheval and Fisher site is no longer a viable option.

The proposed new library at Brownell is the result of years of planning and work by hundreds of Mr. Winkler's neighbors. For two years, they wrestled with building and parking ordinances, the needs of both athletes and library patrons, the future of the Breuer building, and countless other problems that had to be solved before a workable plan was arrived at. If Mr. Winkler had chosen to join in the planning process then, he would have realized that his quick-fix solution could never work.

The proposal before the voters on Monday, Feb. 4, is a well-thought-out plan, supported by countless community-minded residents, with a building designed by an award-winning architect. Mr. Winkler's proposal is not a constructive attempt to solve the library's space problems as much as it is an attempt to continue his own opposition to the proposed new library at the Brownell site.

I am confident that on Monday, Feb. 4, Grosse Pointe residents will recognize and affirm the good and genuine efforts of their fellow neighbors who reviewed every available option before developing the best and only solution.

Misleading

To the Editor:

Your publication last week of an "alternative" library plan was very misleading. There is no alternate plan, and the focus should remain on the need and value of the proposal now before the voters. Dozens of options were explored during the several years of planning the proposed facility.

Unlike your published "alternative," the proposed library plan:

1. Provides adequate parking (well over 100 cars in a safe configuration).

2. Has met all local zoning constraints.

3. Has received support of the local planning commission and city council.

4. Provides significant upgrading of the adjacent playfields, including safe off-street parking for organized sport activities.

5. Is a handsome and well-developed design that respects the library's needs.

The attempt to provide credibility to the "alternative" plan with reference to the American Institute of Architects was also misleading. There is a considerable difference between a conceptual sketch and a detailed, responsive and fully approved plan respectful of all applicable codes and ordinances.

As an architect myself (and an A.I.A. member), as a neighbor of the proposed library building, as a father of kids that use the Brownell playfields for both casual and organized sports, and as a citizen concerned about the quality of our local library — I fully support the proposal before us.

Thorny issue

To the Editor:
The subject of the proposed new library has certainly become a thorny issue. Once again, we have the Grosse Pointe school board and the public school teachers participating in a propaganda campaign to convince voters that a new library is an absolute necessity and will only cost the taxpayers $7.6 million.

There is little I can say to refute their claims of necessity that hasn't already been said by Mr. Winkler, Mr. McCarthy of the Pointer News, and many others. Each has carefully analyzed this project and has revealed the real cost to be far in excess of the amount claimed by the school board.

What I believe must be said, is that there is a dramatic difference between want and need. There is no doubt that the school board wants a new building. They have not produced any credible evidence that there is a need for one. We may all want something we don't need. I want a sports car; I need a station wagon.

As an editorial in the Pointer News illustrated, the Pointes actually have 17 libraries available for us when we include the school libraries available to our students. What we have here is a case of gross mismanagement of resources. Instead of using our hard-earned tax dollars to underwrite architectural plans for a new library, they should be conserving the monies that have been allocated and devoting some brainpower to the task of better utilizing the great resources already available.

The school board must also realize that they are charged by the voters with the task of being fiscally responsible. As a recent Detroit News article illustrated, we already have the highest property taxes of any city in the Midwest. For a comparably priced house, our taxes are 21 percent higher than Milwaukee, 59 percent higher than Des Moines, 7.4 percent higher than Chicago, and 38 percent higher than Minneapolis.

We voters have already told the school board twice before that we neither want nor need a new library. Please, on Feb. 4, get out to vote and tell them once again that a new library is not necessary. Be sure to vote.

And, while we're at it, let's be a little appalled, too, at the gall of this school board to waste our money to get its own way. The fliers they've sent out, the mailings, the architectural costs... this is all our money. They won't take no for an answer, and we're paying for it.

Essential

To the Editor:
The Feb. 4 library vote concerns the proposed new library at the Brownell site. That is the issue, and the only issue at this election.

The alternative posed by Mr. Pete Winkler is neither a valid approach nor a direction that is pertinent to this vote. The fact remains that through several years of studies, multiple committees, and various alternatives that the Brownell site has been proven to be the most viable option. It is the plan that has been approved by the city of Grosse Pointe Farms. It has, in fact, met all requirements, zoning ordinances, and site plan reviews that have been established to control a very difficult process.

The board of education, the various library committees, and the city of Grosse Pointe Farms have all engaged professionals to assist in this process. We must respect that process and not lose sight of the real issue at hand — that a new library is essential to provide 21st century technology for our children, our grandchildren and ourselves.

Hold expansion

To the Editor:
It is rather unfortunate that our board of education members fail to recognize the current problems facing American people in the Grosse Pointe school system, the state of Michigan and in the United States.

Decisions made today over-powering other more critical priorities which face every American today is something we cannot ignore.

The war with Iraq affects all of us — our soldiers sacrificing their life blood when aggression begins in hand-to-hand fighting soon. If this is questioned — count the yellow ribbons in the Grosse Pointe school district. These soldiers are the ones taken out of established families with children, let alone families. Can we say "no" to these families?

When we, at home — add $8 million fixed obligations to their family obligations while they fight in the trenches giving up their family ties — certainly deserve the support of all other citizens in the Grosse Pointe area.

In addition — we must accept the fact that the United States is in a major economic depression. Employers are cutting employment. In Michigan and the Grosse Pointe areas employment is declining over 7 percent.

Comerica Bank just cancelled expansion for a $12 million headquarters in Detroit. Kellogg's cancelled a $16 million expansion in Tennessee. Layoffs in retail stores are numerous and many stores have to merge or close.

Governments — U.S. deficits, state of Michigan — our new governor, Mr. Engler, reports over a million dollar deficit in the state, plus announcing new layoffs to balance the budget.

Locally — our property owners have experienced three consecutive years of increases in assessed values and total taxes per household. Average increases have exceeded 13.2 percent per year.

State of Michigan senators have now officially rejected substantial compensation increases which were recommended by the Officers Compensation Commission and according to the Free Press report, the House of Representatives members are expected to follow suit.

We could enumerate many other situations which emphasize the need to economize locally — withhold expansion for the library.

Vote no on February 4.

Use foresight

To the Editor:
It is obvious Mr. Pete Winkler and his associates have put a lot of thought into solving our library's space problems. The sketch of an expanded central library in last week's Grosse Pointe News was impressive. However, I can think of at least two major problems with it.

First, just a few years ago, in 1987, Grosse Pointers voted down a proposal to expand Central Library. Although there may have been various reasons for this, the one that still rings loudly in my ears is, "Don't take one square foot of land from South's playing field, or I'll vote 'no.'" There is no indication that that sentiment has changed.

Second, under Mr. Winkler's plan, the Grosse Pointe Farms ordinance would require far more additional parking spaces than the 28 it allotted. Using the same formula applied to the proposed new library at the Brownell site (that 40 percent of the area is considered "usable floor space"), an additional 120 parking spaces, not 28, would have to be added to the number that exists today at the Central Library site.

I plan to vote yes on the proposed new library for many reasons — chief among them is that our present system is so far behind the times that I seldom use it. During the past year I had to do an extensive research project that led me to use far superior libraries in Macomb County and the Detroit Public Library on Woodward. The differences are appalling. Although I do not mind traveling in pursuit of knowledge, there are many others who either can't or won't bother.

If this proposal is voted down, I'm afraid we won't have another opportunity for decades. Although it is never easy to commit to spending money on a public project, I wonder where Grosse Pointe would be today if others before us had never acted on their vision of a greater community for everyone. I thank them for their foresight — now it's our turn.

Hire him

To the Editor:
How refreshing to read a few letters from people who oppose the building of a new library. I was beginning to think that all the Grosse Pointers with common sense had moved out of the area.

Pete Winkler's letter, with picture of a proposed addition to central library, was unbelievable. This man is a genius.

Perhaps the school board and library commission could hire him. He could show them how to more efficiently utilize the branch libraries, plus those that are within each and every school. His salary could be taken out of the five or 10 million dollars saved. The residents would be the winners — they would have the library plus we could keep a bit more of our natural land.

It is most unfortunate we voters weren't asked if we wanted an addition to central library or build a new one.

Sincere thanks to the Grosse Pointe News for printing this particular letter. It shows that they really try to give both sides of each issue in our community.

Fly the flag

To the Editor:
As I left for work this morning, I was still thinking about the Hielscher family, who I watched on the 11 o'clock news Sunday night.

More letters on page 19A

John is serving with the 82nd Airborne stationed in the Gulf. As I drove down Woods Lane I noticed four flags displayed on homes. I turned the car around and rushed to display ours. I realize there is not a whole lot we can do for our soldiers, but let's start by:

- Praying for their safety.
- If you don't know a soldier personally, call the War Memorial, 881-7511, and ask for a name and address. Write to them, let them know we care. "We are all neighbors."

Please display your flag — let every Grosse Pointe family who has a loved one serving in the armed forces know we support them.

These men and women are risking their lives for all of us... Show your support... "Fly om Rag."

Resolve to take different images for 1991, perhaps waterfalls with long-time exposures such as Laughing Whitefish Falls near Sundell, Mich.

Photography

By Monte Nagler

Shoot more, learn more

As the new year begins and you make your list of resolutions, don't forget to include your photographic activities.

Resolve to get those favorite shots enlarged, matted, framed and up on the wall. You're still thrilled by that colorful sunset you shot last summer and that candid shot of the newborn baby nestled in Grandma's lap, so what are you waiting for? The small investment required to get them on the wall will pay off in enjoyable dividends.

Resolve to take one of the many excellent photography classes or workshops that are given throughout the metropolitan area. Or treat that certain budding young photographer in the family to a class to get the photography juices flowing.

Resolve to enter a photography contest. There are many offered in the area. Unusual photographs with emotional impact often score high and, of course, if you don't enter, you'll never know how well that special shot might have done.

Santa didn't leave you the new telephoto lens you've been longing for? Then how about pleasing that special person, yourself, with an after-holiday gift? Buy it for yourself and enjoy it throughout the coming year.

Resolve to photograph subjects differently than you've done in the past or perhaps in a different way. For starters, how about a photo-documentary? Photograph a year in the life of one of your children or document the old oak tree in the back yard as it appears during the different seasons. Put on your photographic hat and you'll think of many subjects you can photo-document.

Resolve to take in more photography exhibits this year, look at more photography books and closely study and analyze photos you see every day. In short, begin in earnest to look at photographs. If you do, you'll be pleasantly surprised at how much you can learn.

And finally, does the winter weather keep you and your camera in hibernation? If so, resolve to bundle up and head outdoors to capture some of winter's fantastic scenes on film. You'll be glad you did!

To all readers, students, and friends, best wishes for a happy, healthy, and photo-filled 1991. Monte Nagler will teach a basic photography class for four weeks beginning Tuesday, Feb. 19, at the War Memorial. The class will run from 7:30 to 9 p.m. Topics will include depth of field, composition, filters, film, lenses and more. For more information, call 881-7511.

Waldorf to sponsor conference

Parents and educators will explore the Waldorf education option on Saturday, Feb. 9, at the fourth annual "Guiding Your Child's Journey" conference sponsored by the Detroit Waldorf School.

The day-long conference will include workshops, exhibits and demonstrations covering a wide range of topics that discuss how the arts and traditional academic subjects are equal partners in a child's education, including "Cultivating Creative Play," and "The Waldorf Preschool Curriculum."

In addition, the conference will present Waldorf's classical approach to learning. Waldorf teaching encompasses a philosophy of "heart, hand and mind education."

The school's faculty and students will present, "The Sights and Sounds of Waldorf Education." Additional workshop sessions include "Math and Music," "Language Arts and Movement," "History/Geography and Painting," "Science and Art," as well as hands-on workshops focusing on the younger child.

Waldorf teacher, educator and consultant Joan Almon will keynote the conference with a speech titled, "Waldorf Education and the Developing Child: How Children Learn to Think."

Almon, a kindergarten teacher at Acor Hill Children's Center outside Washington D.C., currently serves as the chair of the Waldorf Kindergarten Association of North America, representing more than 78 kindergartens in the United States, Canada and Mexico.

The conference will run from 8 a.m. to 2:15 p.m. A $20 registration fee covers all workshop materials and a catered luncheon. Child care is available on a limited basis for a fee. The deadline for registration is Feb. 4.

For more information, call Ruth Schwan or Candyce Sweda at 822-0300.

American Heart Association

For everything, there is a reason

I inherited a friend and she has become one of the great blessings in my life.

My father had a dear friend, an elderly woman who had worked for his friends. She was widowed, loved animals and used to care for Dad's dogs in her home when he vacationed.

My friend is an extremely bright woman who enjoys attacking the New York Times crossword and listening to her favorite music on Canadian radio, mostly symphonies.

Whenever my father was out of town I would drop off the Sunday papers at her home, change her cat's litter box, put fresh water out for the birds and scraps for the squirrels and stay for a brief visit. When Dad died, our relationship grew and has continued to thrive into its second decade.

Two weeks ago my friend celebrated her 96th birthday. Unhappily, it became necessary for her to move to a nursing home after a second hip fracture left her unable to care for herself. Her cat had to be put to sleep, her home dismantled and most of her personal possessions disposed of. One of her primary concerns at that time was for the animals dependent upon her. Calls were made to the Audubon Society and Humane Society to determine the kindest methods of weaning her feathered and furry friends from their dependencies.

For the past three years, this dear lady has lived in the confines of a room approximately 14 feet by 16 feet, in a local senior care facility. She prefers to have her meals in her room because she is depressed by many of the other residents who are no longer responsible for their behavior or infirmities. My friend has a handful of dedicated friends who visit, bringing church bulletins, soap, a posy or goody treat and one special lady who manages our friend's business and personal affairs.

Those of us who are close to our special friend are frustrated for her and are genuinely understanding of her feelings. She is totally undemanding of us and always appreciative of our visits. She is puzzled by her longevity. She often tells me that she prays to die and voices her questions as to why she has been chosen to live as she does. I certainly don't have an answer, but what I do know for certain is the impact she has had on the lives she has touched. This intelligent, witty, caring and generous Southern lady has entertained and taught me much over the past 20 years. She has even opened some doors for me concerning our family history.

I cannot answer your questions as to why you are here, Virginia, but I can say that I am grateful that you have been here all these years and to have had the privilege of sharing a portion of your life, thereby enriching my own.

Woman followed in possible robbery attempt

A 67-year-old Grosse Pointe woman was followed home during the early hours of Jan. 20 in what may have been a robbery attempt.

The woman told police that she dropped her sister off at home in the 1700 block of Aline at 1:13 a.m. As she was leaving she saw a car with its headlights on parked at the curb a couple of houses away. As she drove to her home in the 1500 block, the car followed.

She became apprehensive, and when she drove into her driveway, she pulled up as far as she could. She looked back and saw that the car, now with its lights off, had pulled up in front of her house and someone was running up the driveway toward her. She began sounding the horn, and the individual stopped halfway up the driveway, apparently unsure of what to do.

The woman's husband, who had been waiting for her to get home, opened the side door and the woman yelled for him to call police. He ran to the front of the house where he saw a youth entering the passenger side of a car, which then sped away.

Pellet pistol confiscated after shooting

A 16-year-old Grosse Pointe Shores youth was detained and a pellet pistol was confiscated following a reported shooting at a parked car on Meniweather in the Farms Jan. 23.

A Merriweather resident called police at 4:37 p.m. and said two youths had just shot at a car parked on the street. Police located and stopped the suspects' vehicle at Kerby and Grosse Pointe Boulevard.

Police saw a Daisy pellet pistol in an open, blue-canvas bag on the rear seat. The driver of the car was the Shores youth, who said he had just dropped his friend off at a home on Lothrop. The Shores youth was turned over to his parents.

Man dies in house fire; wife in fair condition

A Grosse Pointe Woods man died in a fire at his home on Hawthorne Jan. 23, and his wife is in fair condition at the Ann Arbor Burn Center.

Robert P. Marshall Jr., 52, was pronounced dead at St. John Hospital following the incident, which was reported at 12:52 p.m.

According to police, a neighbor reported a house fire in the 1500 block of Hawthorne. Arriving officers found Mrs. Marshall, 51, sitting on the front porch and suffering from burns. Mr. Marshall was believed to be still inside the house, which was filled with smoke, but there were no signs of flames.

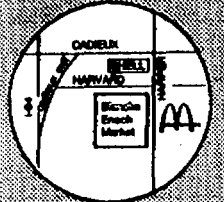

After airing the house, officers found Mr. Marshall in the kitchen unconscious.

The officers noted obvious signs that indicated an accelerant, such as a flammable liquid, was used to start the fire.

Mr. Marshall was taken to St. John Hospital by Woods paramedics. Shores emergency medical technicians rushed Mrs. Marshall to St. John Hospital.

Police said the incident is under investigation.

Imagine that! Kids to design own park

Walt Disney's "Imagineers" will have nothing over Grosse Pointe Park kids, who will be imagining their own play world Feb. 5.

The kids will design their own "Playscape in the Park" with the help of the renowned architectural firm of Robert Leathers Associates of Ithaca, N.Y. The company specializes in unique playground equipment design and construction and has been featured on "Sesame Street" and other national programs.

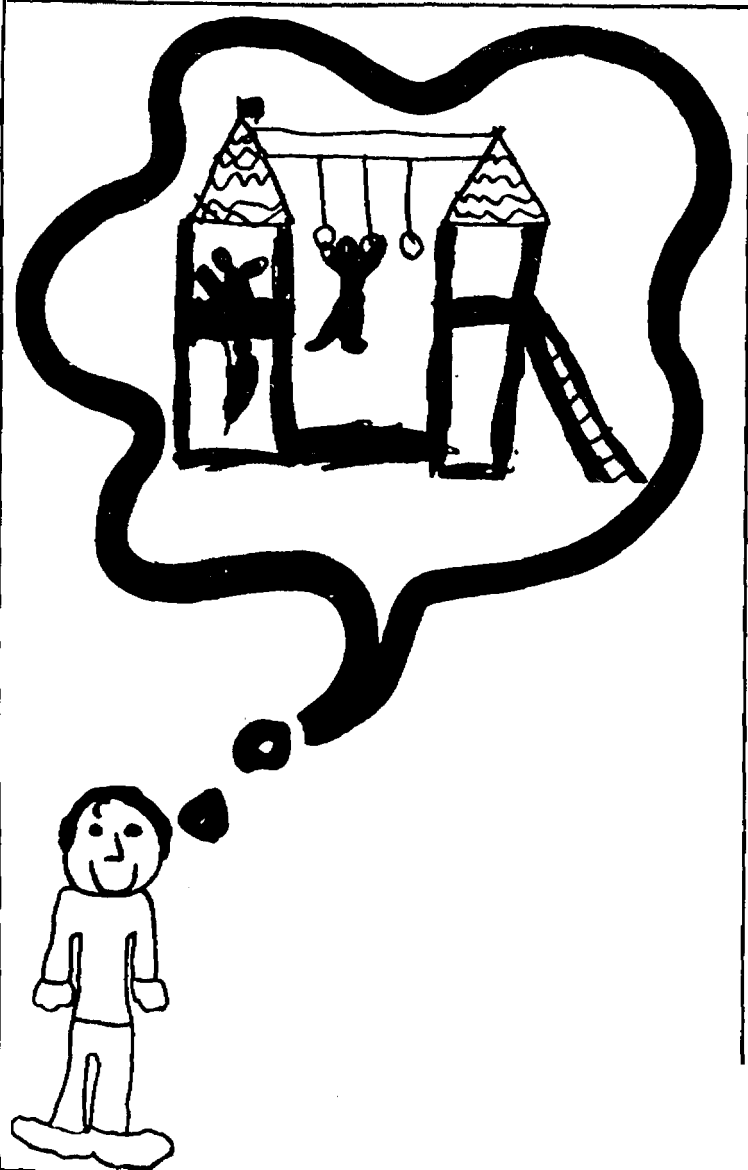

Architect Tricia Machemer will conduct brainstorming session with children in three public schools. In the evening, a town meeting will be held to present the architect's plan, which will be derived from the students' ideas.

Construction of the playscape in Patterson Park will take place in late September with all volunteer labor and with the participation of the kids.

Playscape in the Park is an all volunteer community project and is funded through donations. No public funds will be used.

The architect's schedule for Design Day, Feb. 5, is:

- Visit to park site - 7:30 to 9 a.m.
- Trombley Elementary School visit - 9:20 to 9:45 a.m.
- Maire Elementary School visit - 10 to 10:30 a.m.
- Defer Elementary School visit - 10:30 to 11:15 a.m.
- Plan is presented to the public at a town meeting at Pierce Middle School auditorium - 7:30 p.m.

Photographers to meet

Photographers of all kinds - from beginners, shutterbugs, to professionals, will meet Sunday, Feb. 3, for the Detroit Super Camera Show & Model Shoot, at the Dearborn Inn-Marriott, 20301 Oakwood Boulevard, Oakwood west of Southfield Expressway, Dearborn.

The camera show will be open from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Admission is $4.

Develop your baby's potential

The Grosse Pointe Public School System's Preschool Early Education Partnership will sponsor a lecture by Dr. Lorraine F. Colletti on "How to Develop Your Baby's Potential."

Colletti received her bachelor of arts degree from Marygrove College and her master's degree and doctorate in clinical psychology from Wayne State University.

More than 60 dealers will display new and used photo equipment, including cameras and lenses, as well as antiques and collectibles.

There will be a workshop on model photography. Times will be announced at the show; admission to the workshops is free with admission to the show.

The public is invited to attend the lecture at 7 p.m. Tuesday, Feb. 5 at the Brownell Middle School library. To reserve a seat, call 343-2137.

Business, home burglaries reported

A business and a home were burglarized in the Park recently.

A burglar broke into a business in the 15400 block of Mack sometime between 2:45 and 8:50 a.m. Jan. 24. Entry was gained through a bathroom window.

Once inside, the burglar took a small amount of cash from an office and pried open the doors of vending machines and took the coins. Also, 55 compact discs were taken.

A home in the 1100 block of Harvard was broken into sometime between 5 p.m. and midnight Jan. 24. The burglar broke out a window pane and reached in to unlock a side door.

After a thorough search, the burglar took a phone and a set of coasters. The burglar thought better of keeping the coasters and discarded them on the front lawn.

Beware, be aware

During the Christmas holidays, someone posing as a Michigan Consolidated Gas Co. meter reader stole more than $2,000 in cash and other items from a customer's home.

The company reminds customers not to let anyone claiming to be from MichCon into their homes without first carefully checking identification.

All MichCon employees carry photo I.D. cards.

Also, ask the purpose of the visit.

If you are still suspicious of the person, don't admit the individual into your home. Call MichCon for verification.

Facts about kidney transplantation

There were 313 kidney transplants performed in Michigan in 1989, including 78 from living-related donors, three from living-unrelated donors and 232 from cadavers.

Only one-fifth of the people who need kidney transplants in Michigan are fortunate enough to have a relative who can donate a kidney. The rest must wait on the Organ Procurement Agency of Michigan's list for a kidney from someone who has died.

The Organ Procurement Agency of Michigan has over 800 persons on its waiting list for cadaver kidney transplants. A long waiting period is necessary for some patients because not enough kidneys are being donated.

The National Kidney Foundation of Michigan Uniform Organ Donor Label can be used to "will" kidneys and other organs for transplant purposes. Uniform Organ Donor Labels are automatically mailed to all Michigan drivers who renew their existing license or apply for a new one. For those individuals who are not renewing their license or who do not drive, a donor card can be requested from the National Kidney Foundation of Michigan's office by calling toll-free 1-800-482-1455.

are waiting for kidney transplants, yet only about 8,000 will receive one this year because of the shortage of suitable donors. Informing your family of your decision to donate and signing a donor label could mean a "gift of life" for two people.

According to recently released statistics from the Renal Network of the Upper Midwest, 8,596 kidney transplants were performed in the United States in 1989, including 1,807 from living-related donors, 67 from living-unrelated donors and 6,722 from cadavers.

Many Michigan residents are currently leading productive lives after successful kidney transplant surgery. As of the end of December 1989, there were 1,747 living kidney transplant patients in Michigan, including 545 from living-related donors and six from living-unrelated donors and 1,196 from cadavers.

The statistics are based on data received from the National Kidney Foundation of Michigan and the Michigan Kidney Registry.

Once again, Shores has no auto thefts, violent crimes

By John Minnis
Assistant Editor

For the second year in a row, no violent crimes were reported in Grosse Pointe Shores in 1990.

and for the fourth straight year, no cars were stolen in the Shores.

The last time the Shores had anything to report in the auto theft category was in 1987, and then only one car was stolen.

"We didn't have a bad year," said Daniel Healy, Shores public safety chief. "Burglaries were up, but losses were slight. In two B&Es nothing was taken."

According to 1990 crime statistics compiled by the Public Safety Department, there were 32 major crimes reported in the Shores in 1990, down one from the year before.

Major, or Part I, crimes, under FBI reporting standards, are homicide, criminal sexual conduct, aggravated assault, robbery, burglary, larceny, auto theft and arson.

There were no murders, incidents of criminal sexual conduct, robberies or aggravated assaults reported in the Shores in 1990.

There were also no arsons reported.

Burglaries doubled from four in 1989 to eight in 1990. Healy said an arrest was made in one burglary and all the stolen property was recovered. Nothing was taken during two burglaries, and all the breaking-and-enterings occurred when the residents were away. No lights were on at five of the eight houses burglarized.

The Shores' annual police report also shows that overtime hours were cut more than 40 percent from the year before. In 1989, overtime totaled 1,585.5 hours. Last year, only 898.5 hours were charged to overtime.

Healy credits the sharp drop in overtime to the change in January 1990 to 12-hour shifts for patrolmen.

Fugitive arrests — usually made when a traffic stop reveals the driver is wanted on a warrant — increased from 30 in 1989 to 81 last year. Drunk driving arrests increased slightly from 68 in 1989 to 74 last year.

There were 12 runs to structure fires in 1990, down from 14 the year before. Thirty fire runs last year were false alarms.

Ambulance runs were up from 125 in 1989 to 142 last year. Thirty-seven of the 1990 ambulance runs were to assist other cities.

Police scout cars logged 205,784 miles last year, up from 196,623 miles in 1989.

Tickets were up from 2,041 in 1989 to 2,320 last year. Traffic accidents were down with 76 in 1990. There were 81 accidents in 1989. Of last year's accidents, 16 resulted in injuries.

The number of dog licenses issued doubled from 76 in 1989 to 153 last year. The number of animals impounded also doubled from nine in 1989 to 20 in 1990.

There were 48 guns registered in 1990, up from 35 the year before.

Last year, 11,366 checks were made on homes while residents were on vacation. Burglar alarms that went off totaled 690, up from 473 the year before.

While the Shores had a pretty good year as far as holding down crime was concerned, Chief Healy cautioned residents to be vigilant and work with police to prevent crime. He said putting lights on a timer can help, as well as making sure the burglar alarm is turned on.

He is concerned that as the economy worsens, crime will go up, and he urges residents to report anything unusual or suspicious.

"You're not bothering us," he said. "Vigilance never hurts."

Petitions circulated to block jogging track at Ghesquiere Park

Assistant Editor

Grosse Pointe Woods residents are circulating petitions to force a ballot question on whether to have a jogging track installed in Ghesquiere Park, but their efforts may be in vain.

Residents Jim Perry and Margaret Potter are leading the opposition against a proposed 5-foot-wide, paved track in the park behind City Hall on Mack. They believe that by getting 2,000 petition signatures they can force a ballot question concerning the jogging track.

However, Chester Petersen, city administrator/clerk, said Perry and Potter are misinterpreting a section in the city charter covering initiatives and referendums.

According to the charter, initiatives and referendums concerning city ordinances can be forced to appear on the ballot by getting signatures of 10 percent of the city's 14,367 registered voters. Perry said he and others plan to get 2,000 signatures.

Petersen said that because the charter provision applies to ordinances only, even if opponents do get the required signatures, the City Council would be under no obligation to put the jogging track question before voters.

Under the charter provision, existing or proposed ordinances can be forced to appear on the ballot if enough petition signatures are obtained, but there is no provision for forcing non-ordinance questions to appear on the ballot.

"I feel as a citizen that that's not fair," Perry said. "That is undemocratic as far as we're concerned."

Even if the petitions are not binding on the council, Perry said he hopes the number of residents opposed to the jogging track will persuade the council to reconsider.

Perry said he and others oppose the jogging track because it would encroach on the wooded, natural areas of the park. "... paradise is slowly being paved," Perry said in a letter to the city.

Last week, he said, "We feel the park is overbuilt and we'd like to retain the park's wooded areas."

Petersen said voters approved the jogging track and other additions to the city's parks when they passed a $3.5 million bond issue in November 1986 for park improvements, which were designed to increase residents' use of the parks.

Already, batting cages, paid for by the Little League, have been added. Other planned improvements include a sledding hill and two practice tennis courts. The Recreation Commission has approved the park improvements, including the jogging track.

Originally, the 0.7-mile track was to be 8 feet wide and would meander through the park. The cost was estimated at $46,000. The council has agreed to reduce the width of the track to 5 feet, Petersen said.

The city may add lighting and benches along the track, which is designed for walkers, joggers and, possibly, bicyclists.

Currently, the park has a gazebo, two skating rinks, five baseball diamonds, two lighted tennis courts and a tot lot.

Earlier, the council turned down extended parking and putting a road through the park. A 6-foot fence around the park and a 4-foot brick wall to shield the residential areas from the parking lot were also shot down by the council.

Perry said the park was intended to be a place of natural beauty, but it is turning into an amusement park. He said he would rather see the city use the remaining park bond money for planting trees, not laying asphalt.

Perry and Potter have scheduled a petition drive meeting in the Grosse Pointe Woods City Council chambers at 9 a.m. Feb. 2 and plan to canvass neighborhoods over the weekend prior to the next council meeting.

The City Council will again consider the jogging track at its Feb. 4 meeting at 7:30 p.m. at City Hall.

Major crimes up slightly in Woods, metro area's 'safest city'

By John Minnis
Assistant Editor

Grosse Pointe Woods, which had the lowest crime rate in the metro-Detroit area in 1989, saw an increase in major crimes in 1990.

But even with the increase, major crime in the Woods was still far below the decade high of 653 incidents in 1981, which, in turn, was a large drop from the 826 major crimes in 1980.

The Woods earned the safest city designation when it was reported to have the lowest crime per capita in the metropolitan Detroit area in 1989, according to the FBI's Uniform Crime Report.

Jack Patterson, Woods public safety director, pointed out that overall crime, including major and minor crimes, was down.

"Overall, it wasn't a bad year," he said.

A rash of burglaries last spring in the southwest corner of the city and a sharp increase in thefts under $200 led to the Woods' increase in major crimes.

Major, or Part 1, crimes, according to FBI reporting standards, include homicide, criminal sexual conduct, aggravated assault, robbery, burglary, larceny, auto theft and arson.

There were a total of 383 reported major crimes last year, up 50 from the 333 in 1989. The figures include attempted crimes.

Patterson said the increase in major crimes was the first since 1986.

No homicides, incidents of criminal sexual conduct or arsons were reported last year. Aggravated assaults declined from five in 1989 to two last year.

Robberies increased from seven in 1989 to 11 in 1990. Patterson said the increase in robberies was due to purse snatchings. The last time the city experienced as many robberies was in 1982.

There were 18 more burglaries in the city last year compared with the year before. In 1989, there were 49 burglaries; last year, burglaries totaled 67.

Patterson said the increase in burglaries is attributed to the early morning breaking-and-enterings that began in April in the neighborhoods between Mack and I-94 and Moross and Allard.

He said that weeks of surveillance, directed patrols and a lot of police hours were focused on the area. One of the burglary suspects was apprehended and the burglaries in the area ceased, Patterson said.

"It was tough," he said. "There's just so much you can do."

Total burglaries in 1990, however, were still far below the level in 1981 and 1982, when 113 and 109 were reported, respectively.

Larcenies of property valued at $200 or less represented most of the increase in major crime. There were 275 larcenies reported in 1990, up 47 from the 228 larcenies in 1989.

Even with last year's increase in larcenies, the total number of thefts in 1990 was the second lowest in 10 years. In 1981, a total of 479 larcenies were reported. Larcenies declined throughout the '80s to the 1989 low of 228.

Auto thefts continued to decline with 28 reported last year — a 10-year low, Patterson said. In 1989, 43 cars were reported stolen. The most cars stolen in a single year over the past decade was 54 in 1982, followed by 52 in 1988.

Part 2, or minor, crimes decreased from 3,075 in 1989 to 2,916 last year. Part 2 crimes include minor assaults, narcotics charges, weapons violations, drunk driving and vandalism.

Following an increase in vandalism in 1989, such crimes were targeted by police, resulting in a reduction of more than 100 cases last year, Patterson said.

Overall crime, including Part 1 and 2 incidents, totaled 3,299 last year, down from 3,408 in 1989.

Woods police made 960 arrests last year, up from 828 the year before. The total number of incident reports was 10,617 last year, up slightly from 10,441 in 1989.

Traffic tickets (moving violations) totaled 8,948 last year, down one ticket from 8,949 the year before. Drunk driving arrests declined from 93 in 1989 to 78 last year. The greatest number of drunk driving arrests was in 1985, when there were 195.

Parking tickets issued increased from 11,860 in 1989 to 14,500 last year. The most parking tickets issued over the past decade was 34,750 in 1981.

Ambulance runs were up from 586 in 1989 to 600 last year — a 10-year high. Of last year's runs, 198 required advanced life support treatment.

Fire alarms totaled 84 last year, of which 15 were working fires. In 1989, there were 98 fire alarms and 26 working fires.

The presentation will be made by Chris Fenton, assistant superintendent of business and support services.

"Lots of people tell us they hear about school finance only when the schools want more money," said Dr. George T. Edgington, director of community education. "They want to learn more about budgets, millages and tottery money when there isn't an election. This class is for you."

James Mackintosh has been named to fill one of two vacancies on the Grosse Pointe Woods board of review.

The Woods City Council unanimously approved the appointment at its Jan. 21 meeting, at the recommendation of Phillip H. Belcher, assistant city administrator.

The council also appointed three Woods residents to serve as alternate members of the board, which reviews property assessments. They are Milt Henkel, Nunzio Ortisi and Lynn Pierce.

Chairman of the membership committee of the Grosse Pointe Board of Realtors, Mackintosh is a real estate agent with Bolton-Johnston. He has been in the real estate business for 15 years, specializing in Grosse Pointe properties.

One of four regular board members, Mackintosh will serve a three-year term. He is replacing John Pierce, whose term on the board expired last year. Pierce was not considered for reappointment because he has moved out of the Woods, said Belcher.

The city council is still looking for someone to fill the other vacancy, which was created earlier this month when Milt Henkel resigned. His successor will serve a two-year term. The city is accepting applications for the position through Feb. 4, Belcher said.

After serving on the board of review for 30 years, Henkel found he couldn't leave it entirely, so he volunteered and was chosen to be an alternate. He works in real estate appraisal and commercial properties.

Ortisi was the city comptroller for Grosse Pointe Park before he retired, and Pierce is a local attorney who specializes in real estate law.

This is the first year Grosse Pointe Woods has had alternates for the board of review.

"Last year we had a couple of emergencies where members who thought they could make the meetings, couldn't," Belcher said. "We had to scramble to find people to replace them at the last minute, and we just decided it would be better to have some alternates already on hand."

The board of review meets each March to hear property assessment complaints from home and business owners. The board then checks the city's property assessment roll to make sure the city assessor's work complies with state law and market value estimates.

In all, the board meets about 10 days out of the year, and members are paid $100 for each day that they work, Belcher said.

Property owners may address the board of review between 9 a.m. and 8 p.m. on March 12, 19, 21, 26 and 28, by appointment only. Appointments can be made by contacting the Grosse Pointe Woods tax department either in person or by telephone at 343-2435.

Local florist assists in Gulf support effort

Scanlan's Fisher Road Florist in Grosse Pointe is one of more than 17,000 American florists which have joined in an effort to boost the morale of Desert Storm service personnel in Saudi Arabia.

Project ROSE (Remember Our Servicemembers Everywhere) will send commemorative pins to American troops. The solid brass clutch-back pins will feature a yellow rose on a red, white and blue ribbon along with the words, "Desert Storm, America supports you."

The floral shop is collecting donations of $1 or more for the project, conceived by a Teleflora employee who wanted to create a way for Americans to show their support of military personnel in Saudi Arabia.

Donations are being accepted at Scanlan's, 399 Fisher Road, with all money forwarded to the Teleflora Foundation, a non-profit organization created to oversee the effort.

Alternative methods of participating are: Send a check to Teleflora Foundation, Dept. 60001, City of Industry, Calif. 91716-0001, or call 1-900-786-ROSE. Callers will be billed $2 on their next monthly telephone bill with net proceeds sent to Project ROSE.

Two women robbed at automatic teller

Two women were robbed in separate incidents last week while using the automatic teller machines at the National Bank of Detroit branch at Mack and Moross in Grosse Pointe Farms.

A 31-year-old Detroit woman entered the enclosed automatic teller area at the bank at 8:19 a.m. Nov. 23. While she was removing cash from the machine, a man walked in and said, "This is a holdup."

He then took the banking card from the woman's hand and demanded her card number. The woman told him, "You must be kidding," according to police reports.

A second man then came into the automatic teller booth, pointed a gun at the woman and said that they weren't kidding.

The woman gave the robbers a fake card number, and when they tried to use it, the automatic teller machine said her account was frozen.

The first suspect then took the woman's banking card and the cash she had withdrawn. He told the woman to go out the north door of the booth while they left through the south door.

Two days earlier, on Nov. 21, a similar robbery occurred at the same automatic teller booth at 5:15 p.m., after the bank had closed. The bank was also closed during the other robbery.

A 43-year-old woman from Lewiston, Mich., was at the banking machine when a man came in and appeared to be using another machine. As soon as the woman had withdrawn money, the man grabbed it from her hand.

At this point, a second man came in and grabbed the woman around the neck, and the first man told her to give him her card number "or I'll kill you."

The woman gave him her number as the second man tightened his grip around her neck. The first man then withdrew an undetermined amount of money from the woman's account.

The robbers then ordered the woman to leave through the north door while they left through the south door and got into a waiting car driven by a third man.

The woman fled to a nearby gas station and called police. She suffered abrasions to the front of her throat, according to police.

Tellers of tales

— Sir Philip Sidney (1554-86)

During National Children's Book Week, nearly 40 local residents read their favorite children's book at the first Great Grosse Pointe Read-Aloud.

Sponsored by the Friends of the Grosse Pointe Library, the Read-Aloud included a number of local celebrities in addition to librarians and other book-lovers.

More than 3,000 people poured into the library between 1 and 8 p.m. to hear the readers. Planners say the success ensures another one next year.

Obsolete

To the Editor:

As an 18-year resident of the Farms, and as a professional librarian, I would like to express my enthusiastic support for the library bond issue that will appear on the Feb. 4 ballot.

When we moved into the Farms, the Friends of the Library was engaged in a desperate door-to-door campaign to keep the doors of the library open — an astonishing phenomenon in one of the more affluent and well-educated suburbs in the Midwest. Perhaps residents tend to be a bit complacent about the excellent library services we enjoy — services which are delivered in the face of daunting physical constraints.

The Grosse Pointe library is one of the busiest and most intensively used libraries in the 60-member Wayne-Oakland Library Federation. Yet by any standards of measurement employed by library managers, the physical facilities are far too small and obsolete. To add a new title, a book must literally be removed from the overcrowded shelves. There is not sufficient space to accommodate patrons doing business- or school-related research. Architectural restrictions in basic building design prevent truly effective provision of information in electronic format.

The Grosse Pointe library is ably directed by Dr. Charles Hanson, who commands national respect in the library management profession; the staff is very competent and is strongly motivated to provide excellent public service. The information needs of the community are extensive in breadth and depth. Many, many concerned citizens have worked for providing the needed facilities over the past 25 years. The proposed bond issue will cost the average homeowner in the Pointes less than the price of two best sellers in a tax year — and the library is so much more than best sellers.

The community must rise to meet the challenge of continued provision of information through its library into the 21st century by affirming the Feb. 4 ballot proposal with a resounding yes. In a very basic sense, it is one of the best investments we can make for our future, and our children's future.

Necessary?

To the Editor:

Regarding the new library, I am sure it would be nice to have, but is it really necessary?

Considering the school board's consistent lack of fiscal responsibility over the past few years, can we really believe its costs and staffing estimates?

With our excessive increases in assessments over the past few years, school board revenue has been far ahead of cost of living. Despite this our board has managed to spend all the money it can get its hands on.

I believe that the alternatives suggested in recent weeks by some of your readers are the best solutions.

1) Stop competing with private business and get out of the tool, record, tape, etc., rental business. This would free considerable space in the present library.

2) Enlarge the existing library at an estimated cost of 37 percent of a new library.

It is time that we as taxpayers stop giving our school board a blank check and demand fiscal responsibility.

Renovate

To the Editor:

I hesitate to enter the great new library debate. I find the pro-newsletters signed by people for whom I have great respect.

My question is why not renovate and expand the current facility. I am certain it was not by plan, so few things are, but the current facility is in the population center of the Pointes. It is situated across from land zoned commercial, so few property owners are offended. The adjacent land is usable. It would seem more economical to expand the current facility and its parking lot than starting from scratch.

Speaking of scratch, most certainly any new facility would be financed by a bond issue. I refer the committee to a book called "Liar's Poker" about the Wall Street Robin Hoods at Solomon Brothers. A Wall Street Robin Hood steals from the rich and keeps it. Beyond this area of unbridled greed, there shines dimly on the horizon a hope that the S.T.R. (Soak the Rich) Democrats are beginning to understand the benefits of lowering the capital gains tax to assist public bond issues. Even (New York) Gov. Mario Cuomo, who hesitates to come out against man-eating sharks and for motherhood, has joined the voices to decrease the capital gains tax. Admittedly, this lamp of reason is dim. Most S.T.R. Democrats come out with their lances high and then dip them to skewer the middle class. But there is hope for easier bond financing for any project.

The "pro" new library people will respond to this that I know not of what I speak and will verbally hasten me to the nursing home to sew buttons on soap. Before drastic reaction, I confess I do not know of what I speak. Please tell me why new is better and/or more economical than old, renovated and expanded.

Cost-effective

To the Editor:

Because I am an elected public official, I have been advised by some to steer clear of the Feb. 4 library expansion bond issue. The argument is made that library expansion is a school issue; that it falls under the special province of the board of education and that city business should not be mixed with school business or vice versa. I must say that I find this argument to be a sound one. As a general rule, I don't think I should intrude upon the domain of school officials who are elected by and answerable to a larger constituency than my own. However, in the case of our library, I think there are good reasons to make the issue an exception to the rule.

As a private citizen with children in the school system, I naturally want what is best for them. As a result, I support the proposed expansion of our central library. This being said, I believe the library issue goes beyond my interests as a private citizen and touches upon my responsibilities as a public official.

In most communities, library services are provided by local city government and funded from the general revenues of city government. If the school board did not provide library services, then each of the several communities within our consolidated school district would have to provide the service themselves. For this reason, I think it is appropriate for me to weigh in on the matter and express my unqualified endorsement of the proposed library expansion.

All of the communities that comprise our consolidated school district are unique and distinctive. Yet, we share a great deal in common. Our school district is the best reflection of our common interests and identity. It is the embodiment of a special social compact that serves us all well. Acting in concert, through the auspices of the board, we are able to capture economies of scale and avoid duplications, overlap and other inefficiencies in the provision of education services to our communities. The net result is a school system that is worthy of us all.

Unfortunately, the same cannot be said about our library. The best justification for anyone's involvement in this matter rests in the actual merits of the case. As a Pointe-wide, consolidated effort, an expanded central public library provides the most cost-effective means for the provision of library services. Could the various city governments provide library services in a better way? Would five or six libraries in five or six locations with as many head librarians be the better or more cost-effective way? I think not. We public officials would do well to look for more opportunities to consolidate our efforts to provide public service to our constituents. Pointe-wide recycling, ambulance and forestry services come immediately to mind.

The fact has been fairly established that there is a clear and demonstrable need for improvements to our central library. The plan that has been submitted for our approval has been painstakingly developed with efforts made to satisfy the interests of all concerned. The plan includes improvements to and the continued operation of our two branch facilities. The time has now come for us to approve the plan. We must look beyond these difficult economic times and protect our long-term interests. Statewide school finance reform measures may severely affect our ability to make these needed improvements in the near future.

On a more personal note, I cannot help but recall the untold hours I spent in the Herrick Public Library in my hometown when I was a child. The sad fact is that a young person in the Pointes would be lucky to find a place to sit in the library today. Library services are increasingly important in today's world. What's more, they have always been viewed to be an important function of government. The libraries of Alexandria and Pergamum have been a measure of the greatness of entire civilizations. Let's hope that our library is not used to measure our communities until after the library bond issue has been approved.

Vote yes

To the Editor:

On Monday, Feb. 4, the voters in our community will decide whether or not to build a new library. The decision to ask the voters to fund this project is the result of painstaking research by our library staff, the Board of Education, King Research Inc. (library consultants), and concerned citizens.

With the explosion of information and knowledge, our present facility is woefully inadequate and cannot expand at its present location due to parking restrictions and impingement on South's athletic field.

The choice of the Brownell location was made by a committee of more than 50 people representing a cross section of all the Grosse Pointes, of which I was a member. This group sifted through all of the options to arrive on this location as the best available in our area.

In the past, our present library building came into being through the generosity of the Dexter Ferry family and the taxpayers were not asked to pay a dime. Don't you think it is time we did our share?

Conflict

To the Editor:

The proposed new Central Library should be rejected by Grosse Pointe voters. It is far too expensive, and it is a bad plan constructed through a tortuous process which, in the end, arrived at a solution only 3 percent of the population wanted.

The plan is to abandon the current Central Library and to replace it with a $7.6 million structure on Brownell field. The real value added is a fraction of what we are being asked to pay. According to the school board, the replacement value of the current building is $4.8 million, excluding the land on which it stands. So, we are being asked to spend about $14.6 million (including interest) for a net gain in library system assets of $2.5 million or less over the past decade, property tax increases to operate the libraries have far outstripped inflation. Library revenues from property taxes rose 12 percent, from $924,238 in 1980 to $2,097,702 in 1983. The Consumer Price Index rose by 57 percent over the same period. If this growth continues, and if the new library is built, a simple calculation shows that taxes to support the library system will double within the next three years.

(Incidentally, school operating taxes per pupil rose by 122 percent, from $2,460 to $5,469 over the decade, and the rate of increase shows no sign of slowing. Perhaps the school board should direct its attention to controlling costs rather than spending hundreds of thousands of dollars to plan and promote ill-conceived projects. I really do fear that a tax revolt in the next few years will do major damage to the Grosse Pointe Public School System.)

Over the past few months, I have been researching the question of how the current library proposal came about. The story is one of conflict among the participants, and a consistent disregard for community opinion. For example, the 1986 King Research study concluded that:

"Residents of Grosse Pointe (80 percent of them) recognize and prefer that the existing libraries be expanded and remodeled at their existing locations (to the extent that this is possible) over relocation of any of them."

The same study included a survey in which 3 percent of residents thought that building a new Central Library was the best option. It is astounding that this is now the proposal before us.

In 1987 an $8.63 million proposal to expand the Breuer building and renovate the branches was defeated, to the surprise of all concerned. I could find no evidence that a voter survey was conducted after the fact, but it was concluded that expansion on the present site was impossible. In my own view, the proposal was simply too expensive.

In 1988, as school board leaflets tell us, a committee of residents recommended that a new "main" library be built on Brownell field. The leaflets don't tell us that the same report recommended "the Park, Woods, and Central libraries should be maintained and improved."

The decision to abandon use of the Breuer building as a Central Library was apparently made by the school administration, and is not in the public record.

In 1989, a report by Anders Dahlgren of Library Planning Associates recommended the 3 percent solution: "New three-story facility at Brownell site; Park and Woods branches to close." The report notes under the heading "Limitations" that the recommendation "Doesn't provide a substantial increase in the library's current capacities and service capabilities." So, we arrive at the current proposal, except the school board promises to keep the branches open. Note that this study was constrained by the assumption that the Breuer building would be closed.

The school board then sought legal advice on the disposition of the current Central Library, which is a gift to the community from the Ferry family. The legal opinion is that "there are no restrictions on the use or disposition of the Central Library Building created by that gift." However, the opinion notes a relevant Michigan state law: If any property used for the purpose of a public library is disposed of, "the proceeds thereof shall be used and applied for the purpose of such library."

Conversion of the Breuer building to school board offices will be a loss to the library system in excess of $5

Hammers, nails are the glue that holds this family together

By Ronald J. Bernas
Staff Writer

Fruit baskets and flower arrangements were arriving every few minutes between congratulatory telephone calls. It was the first day of business for the De Ronne True Value Hardware Store.

In case the casual observer didn't catch the name of the huge new hardware store in the old Morley Candy Shop on Nine Mile and Kelly, it was emblazoned on owner Paul De Ronne's turtle-neck sweatshirt.

And on his wife's sweatshirt. And on his father's hat. And on his three children's sweatshirts. And on his grandchildren's overalls.

Four generations of De Ronnes were on hand to wait on customers. Lisa, one of the grandchildren, stood at the door offering balloons to any kids who came in as the older De Ronnes took care of the adult customers.

The new store is run by several De Ronnes — Paul and his wife, Lorrie; their son, David, and his wife Amy; their daughters, Diane and Donna; and his father Alfred. Paul and Lorrie's four grandchildren help when they can, stocking shelves and keeping their grandparents and great-grandparents smiling.

Working together is not new in the De Ronne family. In fact, it's a tradition.

Fathers, uncles, brothers and brothers-in-law have been in business together since before Borden Co. bought the Bell Isle Creamery, which was owned by De Ronnes.

Dick De Ronne Sr. left Borden to open the first De Ronne Hardware on East Warren; then, in 1940, after World War II, a new De Ronne Hardware opened on Morang and Whitehill. The store operated until 1972.

In 1964, Paul De Ronne opened his own De Ronne Hardware on East Warren; then, in 1975 he moved down the street to a bigger building.

The latest move was on Jan. 14 to the new store in the Morley Candy building.

Renovating the Morley building was a major undertaking — all of which was done, of course, by the family, with David heading the project.

Paul said family members put in 120 hours a week for five months to transform the building from small partitioned offices and kitchens to the huge open space it is today. The interior was designed by Lorrie, who was aided by an architect.

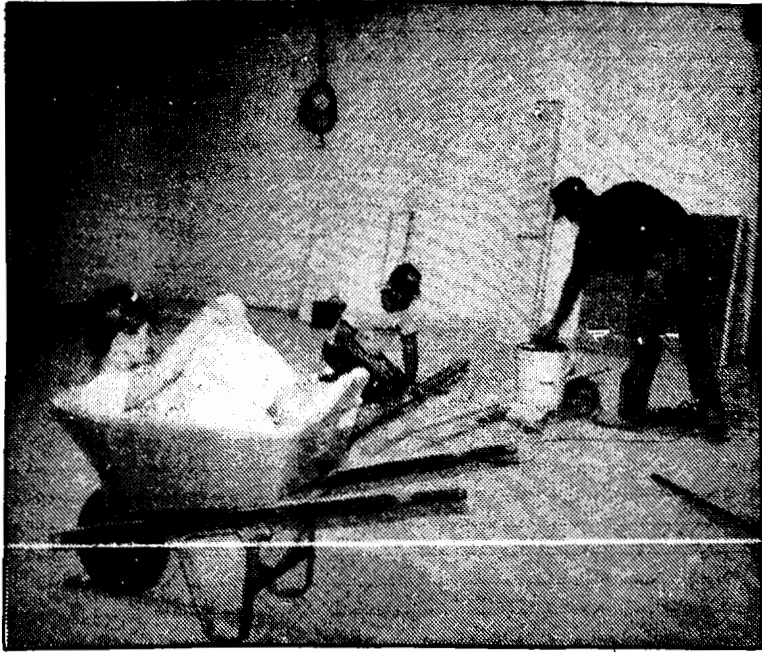

Morley Candy Co. still has a retail store in the building, but moved all its candy-making facilities to a new store on Hall Road.

It was natural for David, Diane and Donna to go into the family business; they grew up in the old store on Warren. A neighbor of the store allowed the

The DeRonnes renovated the entire building while operating in their old store. The insides were gutted and then redone according to a design by Lorrie DeRonne.

The former Morley Candy Shop on Nine Mile and Kelly is now home to DeRonne Hardware.

Business Notes

On Tuesday, Feb. 5, the Metro East Chamber of Commerce and the Macomb County Business Assistance Center will co-sponsor the second in a series of three business seminars, "Competing in the '90s."

The session, which begins with a continental breakfast at 7:30 a.m. and ends at 10 a.m., will be held at the Days Inn, Little Mack and Masonic, Roseville. The cost is $10.

All of the seminars will be conducted by Donald Morandini, coordinator of the Macomb County Business Assistance Center.

The Feb. 5 session, "Market Research: What is Your Target Market," will focus on the following points: assessing the competition; who are your customers, how to define your niche, and other related topics. A product or service can only be successful if you understand who your customers are and why they buy.

Reservations are requested and may be made by calling the chamber office at 777-2741.

De Ronnes to put a sandbox in the back yard so the kids could play after school. When they were younger, they slept on specially designed shelves in the back room. They rode their tricycles up and down the aisles. Today, their kids do the same thing.

"They never pushed us to go into the business," says David. "We always had a choice of whether we wanted to go into it or not."

Lorrie said she and Paul never pressured the kids or gave them strict hours, allowing them to put their energies into anything they wanted to pursue.

David and Diane did try alternate careers before coming back to the fold.

Lorrie and Paul's children are doing the same thing with their kids.

The De Ronnes credit good service and the friendly atmosphere for their longevity.

"We still sell nails by the pound," Alfred said. "And you can buy individual screws; you don't have to buy a whole package."

And you can hear things like "Dad, there's a call on line one" ring over the store's speakers.

Attesting to customer loyalty, one of the decorations which is going to adorn Paul's new office wall is a grouping of bills in a frame. The first one is the work order for a water heater Paul installed in 1965 for $50 and a few beers. The second bill is for a replacement water heater his son installed in 1989 in the same house for the same customer. The price this time was $150.

"Everybody likes each other and they all get along," Lorrie said. "It's nice to work with them all the time."

"Otherwise," Paul said, "I wouldn't get to see my grandchildren as much as I do."

"Most of the messages are 'hi mom, don't worry, I'm fine,' that sort of thing," said Lowell.

MARS requires its volunteers to keep a log of the messages they are entrusted to deliver. One of the messages that the Shaffers recently delivered was from a soldier in Germany to his parents in Marine City.

"Hi mom and dad. Almost there. Try not to worry. I am fine, will send letter ASAP," was the soldier's message.

One soldier in Germany, who thought he would have been in the Persian Gulf by the time his message reached his wife in Detroit, said, "Right now, I'm in Saudi doing my job. But I'm thinking of you always.

Always be strong, your husband loves you and be good."

Another soldier asked his father in Mount Clemens to send him a replacement part for a jeep.

The Shaffers said they couldn't recall receiving a message for anyone in the Grosse Pointes.

"The reactions from the families is why I do it (deliver MARS messages)," the elder Shaffer said. "Most of the time, my phone call is the first contact they've had with their loved one since that person has gone overseas, and they're just overjoyed to learn that he or she arrived there safe and well.

"I've even had people offer to pay for what I've done." He said he politely declines the offers.

MARS volunteers only deliver positive, upbeat messages, Lowell said.

"The most negative message we would deliver would be something like, 'I can't come home for Christmas,'" he stated.

Bad news, such as that of a death, is handled in person by military officers, he explained.

Bruce and Lowell are just two of many MARS volunteers in the metro Detroit area.

Volunteers must be at least 13 years of age, citizens of the United States and licensed amateur radio operators. They must also undergo MARS training (which, in the Shaffers' case, was done by radio on six consecutive Sundays).

MARS messages are broadcast by voice

(not Morse code) over radio frequencies that are similar to, but not inside, amateur radio bands.

Lowell is planning a MARS presentation for the South Eastern Michigan Amateur Radio Association (SEMARA), an organization for ham radio operators. He is president of the group, which has about 150 members in the metro Detroit area and meets at 7:30 p.m. on the first Friday of every month at Grosse Pointe North High School.

Its meetings are open to the public, and the next one will be held on Feb. 4.

Eager to share his hobby with others, Lowell said that anyone who is interested in learning more about ham radio or MARS may call him at 885-7434 or attend a SEMARA meeting.

The couple borrowed her mother's car, packed up their belongings and drove to Detroit. Housing was limited at the time and they ended up renting a room in a men's boarding house near downtown Detroit.

Williams spent 25 years with Hudson's where he was a divisional merchandise manager. He found himself out of a job when Hudson's was sold, and with an interest in carpentry, he studied for and received a builder's license.

He started with room additions and the business evolved into Michigan Shelf Distributors. Shortly after, he started another business, Michigan Incentive Representatives, a firm selling premiums mainly to auto and chemical companies. He sold both companies and retired.

Through his church, Grosse Pointe Memorial, Williams became involved with the Ravendale project. The 38-block area, located north of Harper between Conner and Dickerson, was marked with abandoned and derelict houses and was a rapidly deteriorating neighborhood.

Under the leadership of Eddie Edwards, a minister who founded the Joy of Jesus Community Center and Joy of Jesus Academy, the residents of Ravendale began organizing block clubs. Knowing there is strength in numbers, the block clubs were able, with the help of police, to put pressure on absentee landlords who were renting to drug dealers.

Once residents saw they were able to rid their blocks of drug dealers, they regained a pride in their neighborhood, Williams said. That evolved into cleaning and maintaining the area and that's where Williams and a number of groups became involved.

It began 1-1/2 years ago when a group of G.E. employees wanted to do something in the area. Through Edwards' organization, it was decided to rehabilitate abandoned houses with volunteers. Four houses were selected and 300 employees from G.E., 3M and the Budd Co., along with volunteers from various churches, descended on the area.

"They asked me to be in charge of the worst house there," Williams said. "We had about 60 people that weekend crawling all over; it was like a barn raising."

One group replaced bricks that had been stolen from one side and another group tore off the roof and put on a new one. Williams spent a month building a porch, installing kitchen cabinets and cleaning out the basement.

"We got the house pretty much along the way," he said. "It took about three more months and that was one house back."

The same program was undertaken last spring and seven more houses were rehabilitated, Williams said. TV channels 2 and 56 jointly produced a one-hour documentary on the Ravendale experiment. It was shown early last year; coincidentally, the same day President George Bush came to Detroit and presented Edwards with one of the Thousand Points of Light awards.

To volunteer

People who are interested in helping in the Ravendale project can call Eddie Edwards at the Joy of Jesus, 8394747, or John Williams at 8858724.

In between the "blitz weekends," Williams takes church groups to the area to work. "One Saturday, some junior high students wanted to work and we decided to panel the basement. Here were 15 junior high kids who didn't know dry wall from wallpaper."

Williams showed them training tapes and "by the time they left, they put up 30 sheets of dry wall and did a very nice job," he said. "A good part of the fun of the job is teaching people some of these skills."

He has been teaching carpentry skills to residents in the area and as a result, some of them have been able to find jobs, Williams said.

It's cheaper for the Department of Housing or the city of Detroit to give the house to Edwards' organization than to spend $5,000 to bulldoze it, Williams said. The cost of rehabilitating a house can come to $10,000, with many materials donated by companies.

"That house should sell for $15,000 to $20,000, so the Joy of Jesus should realize some profit. They hope to build a child care center so that the women in the area can go to work," he said.

Banks like Comerica, NBD and Manufacturers have helped, he said.

"Eddie Edwards' dream is for other neighborhoods in Detroit to see what has happened here and pick up the torch, so to speak," Williams said.

The inner city is not the only place where he is putting his carpentry skills to work, however. Williams is also involved in restoring the museum in Huron City as well as rebuilding a cottage on Lake Huron. He became involved with the museum through friend Charles Parcels whose ancestor, a lumber baron, built Huron City.

"I enjoy doing carpentry as long as it's for charity," Williams said. "I'm not for hire."

Activism runs in his family. His mother was secretary of the first women's suffragette movement at the University of Minnesota, he said, and when she was 93, she marched for the equal rights amendment in Springfield, Ill.

Williams keeps fit by playing tennis and running. In the summer he sails and plays golf. This spring he and his wife plan to sail to the Erie Canal.

They also travel in connection with his wife's work as a gerontology professor at University of Detroit Mercy. She studies cross-cultural aging in different societies and they have traveled to Japan, China and Russia for seminars on the topic. Williams videotapes the lectures and edits them, and his wife then uses them in her classes.

Their four children are scattered throughout the country — John is in Washington, Anne in Cincinnati, Kathryn in San Diego and Ted lives in Chicago.

John Williams applies his carpentry skills to a bay window restored for the museum in Huron City.

tions: It could terminate the trial traffic plan that the council instituted last July; it could put the trial plan into permanent effect; or it could "fine tune" the traffic plan and continue the trial for a longer period.

The City Council asked Farms Public Safety Director Robert K. Ferber last spring to develop a trial plan to improve the flow of traffic to and from the Hill and to control traffic on nearby residential streets.

Ferber came up with a plan that included barricading McKinley at Moran, and posting "not a through street" signs on several roads.

Goodell-Grivas Inc. was called in to conduct a "before" traffic study of certain roads in the southwest section of the Farms. That study was conducted in May 1990. The company conducted another study in October 1990, after the trial plan had been implemented.

After listening to residents for more than two hours, the Farms council opted for the middle road, unanimously voting to "fine tune" the trial plan and extend it through October.

The two changes that are being made to the plan include removing the barricade at McKinley and adding a flashing traffic light at the intersection of Beaupre and Moran. The rest of the plan will remain the same.

million, but will not generate any "proceeds to be applied."

To summarize: In 1986, residents wanted and would support a modest expansion and remodeling of current facilities. Five years, and hundreds of thousands of dollars later, we are faced with a vote on the solution desired by 3 percent of the community.

In addition, passage of Monday's millage will bring new pressures: Traffic studies project an increase of 35 percent along Chalfonte at Kerby, and 25 percent along Moran at Chalfonte.

The school board has said (threatened?) that failure of the millage on Monday will kill any library improvements for a decade. Let me propose a different agenda: If the millage is defeated, the Grosse Pointe library and school systems should be separated.

studies. The streets that were included in those studies included Fisher, McKinley, Moran, McMillan, Muir, Lewiston, Memiweather, Kercheval, Ridge and Charlevoix.

Ferber estimated that the October 1991 traffic study would cost between $3,000 and $5,000 (the last study cost about $5,000, he said).

If Grosse Pointe City wanted to join the next study to develop a data base on the amount of traffic on its streets, it could, Ferber said. However, Grosse Pointe City Manager Thomas Kressbach said that would be pointless, since the City was not

The car dealership in Grosse Pointe Park was deemed not centralized enough and not large enough.

The board offices at 389 St. Clair were also considered, if the offices were moved to Barnes school, but the expense of renovating the building made it prohibitive. Parking at that site is limited and access is difficult.

The Brownell site was chosen because it is owned by the schools and is already zoned for community service. The playing fields would need to be redesigned and would, the schools say, be upgraded. One softball diamond would be lost.

Parking will be available for 191 cars in new lots in front of the library and behind the school.

The opposition

People are opposed to the library for a number of reasons ranging from the timing of the election to the choice of the site.

Although two traffic studies commissioned by the board show the streets around the proposed site can handle the increased traffic, local residents doubt the studies' accuracy.

They say that during the summer when little league games are played on the fields of the new site, the traffic is terrible and that a new library would only add to the burden.

Those near the site have also said that the traffic which comes invited to participate in the May 1990 study and would have nothing with which to compare 1991 figures.

"Our public safety director will just have to work with the Farms' public safety director and traffic engineers and see what they're doing to give us an idea of how our streets will be affected and what we can do," said Kressbach.

Fromm said that the Farms council will meet again after the October 1991 traffic study results are compiled and will make a "finite" decision about the traffic plan.

"We don't want to stretch this thing out forever," he said.

with a new library would lower their property values.

Others are opposed to the cost of the library. With the nation in a recession, they are wary of voting themselves a tax increase. Still others say the current library suits their needs and an expensive new library is not necessary.

The board of education and Superintendent of Schools Ed Shine have talked to local community groups to explain the need and Director of Libraries Charles Hanson has scheduled special office hours to talk to those who have questions.

When Joe and Angie Weaver of Grosse Pointe bought a condo in Florida, one of their first stops for furniture was the local Goodwill store.

Joe Weaver pointed out, however, that Goodwill is more than a store to pick up some nice antiques.

It's also more than a collection box for discarded clothing.

"I always thought Goodwill was just a used clothing store," he said. "But they help poor, needy, handicapped people and they do it on a self-sustaining basis."

Weaver is editorial director of WJBK-TV and serves on the board of directors of Goodwill Industries of Greater Detroit. He helped produce a promotional video for Goodwill's 70th anniversary.

Burkhard H. Schneider of Grosse Pointe has been involved with Goodwill since 1984. He is vice chairman of the board and serves on committees for strategic planning and industrial contracts. Schneider recently retired from Detroit Edison, where he was group vice president.

"Goodwill is an agency that really does what its slogan says," Schneider said. "It helps people to help themselves. We want to train people to be independent in spite of their handicaps."

In fact, as Goodwill Industries of Greater Detroit celebrates its 70th year, it can boast of being the largest non-profit vocational rehabilitation agency in the state.

Goodwill Industries:

70 years of helping people with disabilities

The mission of Goodwill Industries of Greater Detroit is to help people with physical, mental and social disabilities achieve greater independence and self-esteem through training, work experience and other services designed to improve their ability to become more self-reliant, self-supporting and contributing members of society.

On a typical day at the agency's main facility, 3132 Trumbull, in Detroit, one can find about 400 adults who have a history of mental illness or developmental disabilities participating in five day programs. The classes are designed to help clients deal with their disabilities and to develop skills that will help them integrate more effectively in the community.

Activities include instruction in skills for daily living, physical fitness programs, community awareness and vocational skills development, and adult basic education through the college level taught by certified instructors.

In addition, many of Goodwill's clients are earning paychecks in sheltered workshops with lots of on-the-job training and support. Industrial subcontracts at the Trumbull facility currently include the packaging of license plate assembly kits and vehicle owner manuals for the automobile industry, sewing coin bags for the banking industry, and silk screening.

Goodwill services extend beyond the Trumbull facility. The agency operates four workshops and plants in the tri-county area; two residential homes for people who have multiple disabilities; a hospital equipment loan program; a store carrying special aids and equipment for people with visual impairments and other handicaps; and a variety of counseling services, vocational evaluations, skill training, job placement and support programs for its clients.

The first Goodwill was founded in Boston in 1902 by a Methodist minister, Edgar Helms.

The Detroit Goodwill was founded in 1921 by John Martin, also a Methodist minister. In the same year, the Junior League of Detroit organized the League for the Handicapped. The two organizations shared the same goals. They joined in 1970, becoming League-Goodwill. In 1984, the name was changed to Goodwill Industries of Greater Detroit.

The agency is affiliated with Goodwill Industries of America Inc., which is based in Washington, D.C., and includes 177 Goodwills in the United States and Canada, and 43 affiliates in 30 foreign countries.

The Detroit agency is governed by a volunteer board and is supported by two volunteer auxiliaries, the Women's Association and the Junior Group.

A major portion of the money for Goodwill services comes from contract operations and the sale of merchandise at Goodwill stores. Government grants and contracts, United Way allocations and contributions provide more funds. And benefits such as the Junior Group's annual Antiques Show and the Goodwill Classic provide more revenue.

Goodwill stores are located at 26510 Gratiot, in Roseville, and 29075 Deyuindre, in Madison Heights. A third store will open in February on the corner of Perry and Walton in Pontiac, featuring new and next-to-new items. Mod goods are donated by individuals or businesses.

In addition to providing a source of income for Goodwill programs, the stores accomplish Goodwill's goals by providing sheltered training and employment for its clients. The resale store concept is also right in tune with the nation's recycling mood. And the stores are a source of bargain-priced clothing and household items for cost-conscious consumers.

Goodwill stores accept clean, usable clothing and shoes, small working appliances, household items, toys, linens, books, records and hand tools. The agency no longer repairs, reupholsters or launders items, so all donations should be clean and in working order.

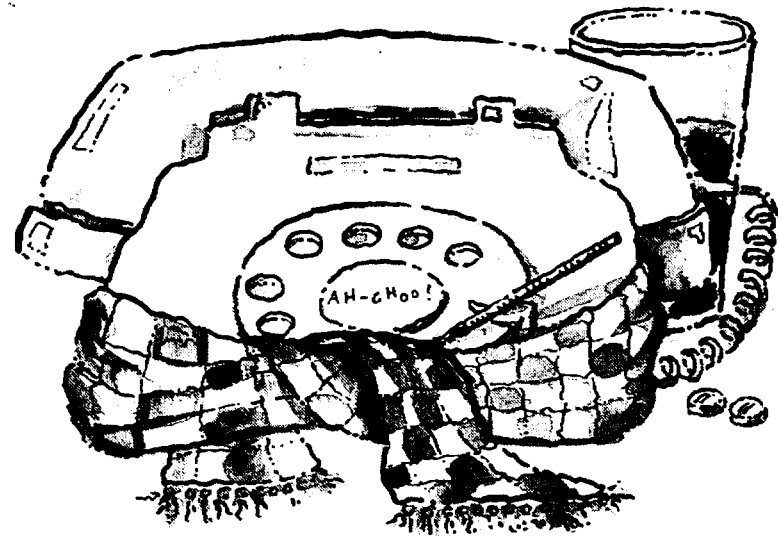

A Goodwill truck is available periodically at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial for the convenience of Grosse Pointers who wish to make donations. For dates and times — or for the nearest dropoff location, call 777-4410.

Volunteers needed to 'prevent child abuse, neglect

Macomb County Cooperative Extension Service is looking for volunteers who are willing to give up one hour a week to help parents whose children are being neglected and/or abused.

The "Parent-to-Parent" program will aim to break the generational cycle of abuse and neglect. Supervisors will help volunteers develop a close one-to-one relationship with a parent to provide caring, consistent support, education and role-modeling.

Training and supervision will be provided. Free training sessions begin on Saturday, Feb. 2, from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m., at the Extension Service office, 21885 Dunham Road, in Mount Clemens. Training continues on Saturdays, Feb. 9 and 16.

For information, call Janice Gwozdz or Janet Voorheis at 469-5180 between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m., Mondays through Fridays.

A change in the weather

... is certain to improve the setting. Concert-goers won't need their winter coats, scarves and boots when the Grosse Pointe War Memorial begins its series of summer musical and theatrical offerings. Checking out the site for the performances this summer are, from left, Jan Arndt, War Memorial program director; Mark Weber, War Memorial director; Johanna Gilbert, general chairman; and Alex Sucek, founder and artistic director of the festival. The Summer Music Festival will present musical and theatrical offerings, using the Alger House and terrace as the stage. Stay tuned for details.

Bon Secours support group to aid chronically ill

The Bon Secours Grosse Pointe Center, 15224 Kercheval, Grosse Pointe Park, will offer group therapy for persons with cancer or other chronic illnesses.

Sessions will be held on Wednesdays from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. at the Grosse Pointe Center, starting Feb. 6.

The group was formed based on the knowledge that people do better if they participate in their own healing, according to group leader Ada J. Kidd, R.M., M.A., L.L.P., a psychotherapist with 18 years' experience.

"Our group is designed to focus on physical, emotional, mental and spiritual health and is meant to be used in conjunction with medical treatment," she said. "This type of therapy provides a safe environment to deal with the emotional stress of living with a chronic illness."

Group members may bring a support person to the group meetings. A monthly support group for family members may be formed if necessary.

Cost will be $30 per session, with insurance accepted. A two-hour individual session will be scheduled for each member before he or she joins the group. For further information, call 823-2011.

Bridge group

The Grosse Pointe Women's Club bridge group will meet on Wednesday, Feb. 6, for lunch and bridge, at noon, at the War Memorial. Fee is $6.

Reservations are required, with no cancellations after Saturday, Feb. 2.

Bridge

HAVE A PLEASANT TRY AT PERFECTION
BRIDGE BY WOODY BOYD ♠♥♦♣

Two of the most vivacious and fun loving gals in our bridge midst are Margie Stehr and Mel Curningham. They play to win and often do so, but their primary reason for being there is to enjoy bridge and its participants. This is a virtuous basis for involvement, but on occasion I have prudently admonished them for letting frivolity and trifle get in the way of their skills and subsequent success. Certainly ones posture or playing manner is important, but table presence and skill are more so and few have the discipline to mix them properly in their quest for bridge perfection. Lose your concentration for only a moment over a quip and the fate of a hand can come tumbling down around you. I can promise you, though, that if either of these lovely ladies someday become exceptional at this game it won't be at the expense of their flourishing personalities and that is commendable.

Nearly all of the most sought after expert partners are well fortified with charm and a wonderful sense of levity so Margie and Mel already have much of what it takes, it's just a matter of placing the proper priority upon their talents.

In my wanderings I cover a number of duplicate games. From this I am able to accumulate many of the fun hands featured in this column. Today's from a Don Curtis duplicate game last November brought me up straight in my non-partial, but see all kibitzers fifth chair for it was a classic example of Margie and Mel at their very best.

Ma. Stehr's opening bid has my advocacy. She who holds the master suit (spades) plus some semblance of the required high card points should always launch the auction. I like all the calls that followed. If West's style allowed for it, 3NT immediately might have wreaked havoc, but his call isn't to be faulted. Mel's last bid was aggressive, but averages never won much and six spades had a play if declarer could unravel the riddle of the key missing card issue.

When the dummy came into play, Margie was probably bewitched with both and bewilderment, but her composure from my fifth seat on the side line seemed supreme. Were twelve tricks there with only twenty-two combined H.C.P. plus a void and a singleton? Certainly the suits were well placed, but where was the key king in the heart suit? Missing minor honors must be with West from the bidding and probably the trump ace. The lead of that suit at trick two was mandated and would quickly clarify that supposition.

Try this expert execution which was most impressive. She ruffed the club lead. Led a spade which West won and returned the heart ten. Margie won the ace in dummy, ruffed a heart exposing West's singleton and it was all over. A club ruff in dummy and the known ruffing heart finesse toward her hand was a winner for her losers.

Heart to heart: The Fontbonne Auxiliary of St. John Hospital and Medical Center will hold a special "Heart to Heart" Valentine luncheon beginning at 11 a.m. on Thursday, Feb. 14, at the Gourmet House in St. Clair Shores.

The whole idea is to show appreciation to all the women who have volunteered thousands of hours to the hospital — the women who serve on committees, sew puppets, make tray favors, sell raffle tickets, work in the gift shop, type, mail, and fill in whenever and wherever they're asked, said member Marilee Rinke.

"It's a special thank-you luncheon. Why do these women sacrifice so many hours volunteering?" Rinke asked. She answered her own question with a quote from "The Secret of Happiness" by D.C. Mareum:

"You're someone who knows this secret that's more precious than silver or gold — that love and the joy that you give away will come back to you, many-fold."

Television war

By Rev. Gordon A. Mikoski
Grosse Pointe Memorial Church

Some have called the war in the Persian Gulf "the television war." This may be an apt description. Perhaps your experiences have been like mine. When the war in the Persian Gulf began a couple of weeks ago, I was glued to the television set. For the first two days and nights I was so shocked and mesmerized by what I was seeing that I could hardly do anything but impatiently flip from CNN to ABC to CBS to NBC to see if anything new had developed.

Everyday activities seemed to be of little importance to me. My television screen became a kaleidoscope of fighter jets, night bombings, and packs of war analysts.

By the third or fourth day I realized that I could not continue to do little else but watch the war. I needed to find some way of doing normal things in the midst of abnormal circumstances.

The first thing I did was turn off the television. I decided to allow myself permission to watch the war news only at certain times and for definite periods of time (usually just enough to get the latest big developments).

These measures seem to have helped some. As of this writing I am not as stagnated and "shell shocked" as I was during the first hours and days of the war. I must say, though, that rather often some terrible aspect of the hell on Earth that we call "war" breaks through my defenses and arouses intense feelings and troubling thoughts.

I know that for many people in this community, the experiences of fear and horror are much more than vicarious. Many whose loved ones are in the Persian Gulf cannot simply turn off the television and try to get on with daily life as best they can. For those who have loved ones in the war, each day is filled with the pain of separation and the agony of not knowing when or if loved ones will return home. Each day for these folks is filled with intense feelings and troubling thoughts.

Individually and together we need to do all that we can to support people in our midst who have loved ones on duty in the Middle East.

I wish that I could close this column with some profound spiritual advice or a satisfying theological answer that would somehow "fix" everything.

I can't.

All I can do is call on us to pray for a just peace and to support one another and our loved ones who are far away in whatever way we can. May the Lord, who is our peace, grant peace to the world and to us.

After nearly a year, growing forum presents all that jazz

By Ronald J. Bernas
Staff Writer

"The biggest problem in the Detroit area is that there are very few venues for any kind of quality music. We're trying to fix that."

That's what Steve Wood, production manager of the Jazz Forum, said about the nearly year-old non-profit organization founded by Grosse Pointers Jim and Fred Ruffner.

The Forum was designed with a two-fold mission, Wood said.

"The first is that we wanted to present jazz music in a concert setting, free of the distractions normally found in a nightclub," he said. "It takes on the feel of a chamber music concert."

The second mission is to present the best music of American composers.

"You can go to lots of places to find jazz, but most venues are presenting jazz fusion or jazz pop, they're not playing authentic American jazz," Wood said. "There's nothing wrong with that kind of music, it's just not what we want to present."

Wood says the music the forum features had its heyday with performers like Sarah Vaughn, Nat King Cole and Benny Goodman and is experiencing renewed popularity today thanks to artists like Harry Connick Jr. and Diane Schuur.

"It is still very much today's music, it's just rarely presented anywhere," Wood said. "But there is an audience for it in Detroit. The success of the Jazz Forum shows that."

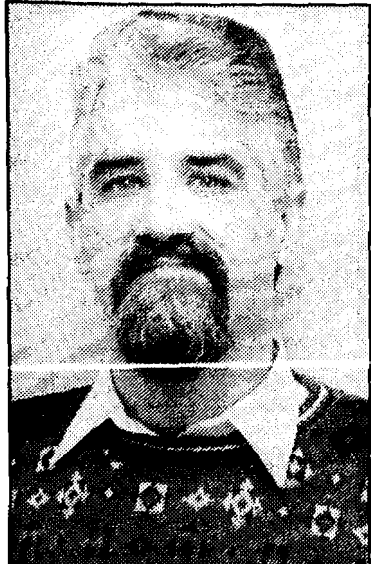

So, with the Ruffners as backers, the Forum was formed last spring.

"The impetus was a private party we organized the entertainment for," Jim Ruffner said. "People were amazed that that kind of music could still be heard, so we thought maybe there would be some interest in a concert series."

He said he wanted only home-grown talent performing only the best material.

"This century there have been more than one million songs copyrighted, and maybe 20,000 are worth remembering, and only about 200 of those are the standards we deal with in the forum," he said. "We always said we wanted to present good music well-interpreted. That's what we're presenting."

Steve Wood

A fourconcert spring session was planned last April. It went over so well the summer season included six concerts. The 1991 winter-spring series of 10 concerts began Jan. 16 and runs every other Wednesday through June 5 at the Grosse Pointe Unitarian Church in Grosse Pointe City.

Each concert spotlights an American composer or performer; this season tributes to Rodgers and Hart, Nat King Cole, Leonard Bernstein and Benny Goodman are featured. The performers present the songs in the same spirit as the composers intended, Wood said.

Ruffner is pleased with the series.

"Without reservation, it's been an exceptionally good series," he said. "Artistically, it couldn't be better, and those we attract are quite delighted with what we're doing. The audience could be bigger, though."

But Wood says presenting music through the Forum is a pleasure in itself, and if they make money, it's so much gravy.

"If we can break even on these series we're happy," he said. "Making money would be nice, but that isn't our goal."

The Jazz Forum's 1991 Winter-Spring Concert Series continues Feb. 13 with Thomas "Beans" Bowles and Friends highlighting music published by Jerome Remick. Tickets for all performances are $9 in advance and $10 at the door. A three-concert series is available for $25. Call 961-1714 for information.

DSO report:

Peter Serkin: An impressive pianist who lacks passion

By Alex Suczek
Special Writer

In the second of this season's recitals presented by the Detroit Symphony Orchestra Hall, pianist Peter Serkin played an unusually arranged program last Sunday evening. Noted especially for his advocacy of contemporary music, he included three short works that he commissioned.

The conventional form would have been to arrange his pieces in chronological order and perform all three short modern works as a group. This rising son of a very famous father (Rudolph Serkin, world renowned pianist and head of the Curtis Institute in Philadelphia) chose instead to put two in the first half and one after intermission. Moreover, he sandwiched them between Brahms and Beethoven, and then Mozart and Chopin, in that order. He is also noted for unconventionality.

The Brahms Chorale Preludes opus 122 were a moving opening. The final compositions of Brahms' life, they treat the composer's 19th century musical ideas in the form of Bach chorales. Serkin's artful technique at the keyboard and especially in pedalling, created an organlike effect. Supported by the remarkable acoustics of the hall, the piano sound had the sustained and throbbing power of pipes.

Of the two contemporary works that followed (both composed in 1989), the first by Peter Lieberson, a close collaborator of Serkin's, was accessible and almost traditional in rhythm and recurring themes though contemporary in style. Serkin, who played from the score with a page turnover to negotiate the tricky piece, paid close attention to technical accuracy and specific phrasing.

The second work, by Oliver Knussen, had less sense of continuity and was more difficult to concentrate on. It was like an assembly of special effects. Interesting nonetheless, it was played with the same meticulous care. It also was interesting as a contrast in contemporary style to the Lieberson work.

Very considerably, Serkin did not tax his more traditionally oriented listeners. The two works endured not more than their commissioned time limitation (imposed by Serkin himself) of six minutes each.

The pianist then turned to the last set of bagatelles by Beethoven. These are anything but the trivial exercises that the name implies. They are late Beethoven and credited with being tests of ideas for his late, great quartets.

Serkin played them with the same intellectual attention to detailed phrasing. Every effect was carefully calculated. The continuity of the musical ideas did not come across, however. Regardless of the superb control and technique that turned out every trill and run with the utmost clarity, the performance was an exercise in analysis.

There is a thoughtful, pensive air to Serkin's playing that is soothing and affectionate. Moreover, it is technically superb. But there was no passion.

Again turning to a late work, the pianist followed intermission with Mozart's Sonata in F major, K 533. And again the playing was impeccable but lacking cohesion.

A famous and respected pianist in the audience was heard to comment, "I can't tell what he's playing."

The third modern work that followed, "... in real time" by Alexander Goehr, begged to have been included with the earlier two. It would have been more interesting and made more sense compared to them than to the Mozart and Chopin that surrounded it.

Only at the finale was there a release from the oppression of over-analyzed music. Chopin's Bolero, opus 19, was composed in his early years in Paris and is both tuneful and rhythmically well defined. Serkin gave it a straightforward reading that allowed the Spanish mood ample expression and provided a pleasant treat to end the program.

DSO execs urge letter campaign

With a letter inserted in the evening's program, DSO Chairman Steve Miller and Executive Director Mark Volpe described the alarming potential effect of Governor John Engler's proposed cut of all arts funding from the state budget.

"Without continued state support," the letter reads, "the public and private partnership responsible for DSOH's dramatic recovery over the past 18 months will collapse. DSOH will fail and the state will lose - permanently - one of its most precious cultural resources."

This would be a tragic irony at a time when a most promising new music director has just taken over and a new recording contract has just begun. Citizens who believe in the importance of the arts to our community must find ways to defeat this move.

Miller and Volpe ask symphony fans to write letters expressing their opposition to the elimination of State funding for the Orchestra. These, they suggest, should be sent to Governor Engler, Speaker of the House Lewis N. Dodak, Senate Majority Leader Dick Posthumous, and individual state senators and representatives.

Meanwhile, concerts continue this weekend with the fast-rising young American conductor Hugh Wolff leading the orchestra in a program of serenades by Mozart and Brahms. The times are Friday evening at 8 p.m., Saturday at 8:30 p.m. and Sunday at 3:30. For tickets and information call 833-3700.

Sparks fly when Teibele meets her demon lover

By Alex Suczek
Special Writer

Bringing plays that are delightfully different is so routine at the Attie Theatre that it's no surprise to discover that Artistic Director Lavinia Moyer has done it again. "Teibele and Her Demon" is a fanciful love story that explores the basic needs of people for illusion, excitement and adventure in their sex life. And it does so in a context where you'd never think to look.

The subject remains forever alluring to anyone with a breath of life. But Yiddish folklore in 19th century Poland, where the play is set, is what lends the real enchantment. The ironic humor, the mischievous homespun philosophy and the human foibles that we learned to love in "Fiddler on the Roof" are also in this story. The original version was by the great Yiddish American writer Isaac Bashevis Singer. It was turned into very effective theater in English by dramatist Eve Friedman.

Against a painted background reminiscent of the art works of Marc Chagall, Mirjana Urosev as Teibele reveals her credulous fascination with the mythology of demons. Outside her window, her would-be suitor, Alchonon, hopelessly shares his desire for her with his friend, and then conceives a scheme to seduce her disguised as a demon.

Improbable? Of course; but Wayne David Parker as Alchonon and Urosev, as Teibele, communicate their human passions with tender conviction and bring the make believe to life in love scenes that are as torrid and arousing as they are unbelievable. And for Teibele, at least, fantasy becomes reality.

Even for the audience, fantasy and reality are difficult to separate as Teibele's passion for her demon and her inability to accept its impersonator in his true identity capture everyone's sympathy. Meanwhile, through all this, Singer's insights into human nature are demonstrated in all their frailty by Urosev and Parker who personify his open advocacy of the joys of love and passion. As we laugh at them for their clumsy efforts to find their way, and their self delusions, we realize we are laughing at ourselves as well.

Few of us are likely to identify with the madcap scene where Teibele and her best friend are surprised by the rabbi in group sex with a proxy demon. But we roar with laughter.

On the other hand, we can understand the erogenous power of imagination demonstrated by Teibele's passionate fixation on her demon. And we share Alchonon's frustration when Teibele is unable to accept him as a man, though she loves him as the demon. Parker's almost acrobatic body language speaks volumes in both guises.

There is clever stagecraft to admire in this production, too. Teibele's bedroom is on a simple revolving platform, center stage. Turned a few degrees by supporting actors at each scene change, it brings a series of new perspectives to the simple yet effective set. Each change, moreover, emphasizes a new development in the outlook of the characters on stage.

And at the end, no amount of whimsical humor, demonic antics or lustful behavior can dim Singer's impassioned message on the beauty of love joined with passion.

Detroit Institute of Arts celebrates black history

The Detroit Institute of Arts (DIA) is the place to be for Black History Month. From ancient history to modern cinema, the DIA offers a wide variety of events for all ages designed to mark the national observance and celebrate the achievements of African-Americans.

A gallery concert on the DIA's own Barambo Slit Drum kicks off the month on Saturday, Feb. 9. The rare slit drum from Zaire will be played for the first time in Detroit at two concerts (2 and 3:30 p.m.) featuring traditional rhythm patterns. The event will also include a noon lecture by Detroit artist Gilda Snowden and a 1 p.m. reception. The event is sponsored by the Friends of African Art and the Department of African, Oceanic and New World Cultures.

Also scheduled are two special lectures: "Brought to Light: A Black Film Industry, 1910-1950" on Feb. 24, and "Kush: Lost Kingdom of the Nile" on Feb. 27. Film historian and collector James Wheeler examines an African-American alternative to the Hollywood of the early half of this century in "Brought to Light." Wheeler's collection of cinematic memorabilia consists of more than 20,000 items, including books, films, videos, photographs, posters and recordings that span almost a century of significant achievements of blacks in film.

The program, offered in conjunction with the Detroit Film Theatre's History of the Moving Image series, is sponsored by the departments of education and performing arts as well as by the Friends of African Art. It will be held at 3 p.m. in the Lecture Hall. Admission is $5 general admission; 4$ students/seniors/founders.

The lecture "Kush: Lost Kingdoms of the Nile" focuses on the 1916-1920 excavations by the Museum of Fine Arts, Boston, and Harvard University at the site of Jebel Barkal in the Sudan, the religious center of the black rulers of the Kush Dynasty. Timothy Kendall, associate curator in the department of Egyptian and ancient near eastern art at the Museum of Fine Arts, has revisited the site and will discuss his discoveries and conclusions at 8 p.m. in the Lecture Hall. His project was featured in the November 1990 issue of National Geographic. The program is free to the public.

A number of special films are also scheduled in conjunction with Black History Month. Beginning in February, the History of the Moving Image will feature a program of American films produced for African-American audiences by independent film makers between 1927 and 1950. These constitute the largest output of films made outside of the Hollywood studio system and range from melodramas to comedies and science fiction.

These films are an important part in the social history of American cinema and are screened Thursday through Sunday in the Lecture Hall. Featured in February are "Scar of Shame" and "Murder in Harlem." For a schedule, call the DIA ticket office at 833-2323.

Two short films focusing on African traditions will also be shown in the Holley Room as part of the museum's Sunday at Three program on Feb. 3. A "Great Tree Has Fallen" documents the elaborate ceremonies associated with the funeral of an Asante King in Ghana; "Mufarq's Beautiful Daughters" is a short film based on a Zimbabwe folk tale. A discussion about jects in the museum's African galleries will follow the films. The Detroit Film Theatre will also feature two films related to African Americans: "Tilai" (Feb. 1 and 2) and "To Sleep With Anger," (Feb. 3).

"Tilai (The Law)," by Idrissa Ouedraogo, tells the story of a young man who, after a two-year absence, returns home to discover that his fiancée has become his father's second wife. "To Sleep With Anger," by American director Charles Burnett, is an alternately hilarious and sobering look at a complex American family. Showtimes are 7 and 9:30 p.m. Feb. 1 and 2 and 4 and 7 p.m. Feb. 3.

Family audiences won't want to miss three special Youtheatre performances designed to commemorate Black History Month. West Africa's Ishangi Family returns by popular demand in "Ishangi's Africa" on Feb. 9, followed by New York's Kim and Reggie Harris in "One Family, One Planet" on Feb. 16. Fans of legendary Brooklyn Dodgers player Jackie Robinson will be inspired by his story chronicled in the musical "Play to Win" on Feb. 23. Tickets are $5 with performances at 11 a.m. and 2 p.m.

For more information on Black History Month activities, call 833-7900; for ticket information, call 833-2323.

Gnome serves a cabaret honoring those 'Rogues & Rascals'

The Gnome Restaurant revives the Detroit cabaret scene with the opening of "Rogues & Rascals (the men you hate to love)." Developed by vocalist Mark Watson and pianist Bernie Katz, the show combines song and satire in a tribute to the infuriating but irresistible chauvinists back in vogue.

Cabaret has become one of the hottest entertainment trends in New York and major cities, as reflected in the "overnight" international success of Harry Connick Jr. and Michael Feinstein. Cabaret's combination of ragtime, Latin and swing rhythms, sharp wit, and romantic melodies performed in an intimate setting has become a glamorous evening for the young, and nostalgia for the aging majority. A staple cabaret restaurant, The Gnome hosted local cabaret favorites Sheri Nichols and Kate Patterson long before their Van Dyke Place or Whitney debuts.

"Rogues & Rascals (the men you hate to love)" is a 50-minute tribute to the playboys and cheats in affairs of the heart. The show combines songs about the love'em and leave'em men with risque and playful comedy the audience can react to. "A lot of the comedy used in the show was based on conversations I've had with female friends about the men in their lives. Their comments, played with tongue-in-cheek humor, coupled with the vibrant music of the 30's and 40's, creates an atmosphere of innuendo and romance," noted vocalist Mark Watson.

Watson, an East Detroit native, brings a wealth of vocal talent to the show. A Center for Creative Studies teacher and international performer, Watson has entertained audiences at the Lincoln Center, Carnegie Hall, and on Broadway. Bernie Katz, arranger and accompanist, has amazed audiences for over fifty years with his keyboard genius and off-beat humor. He has accompanied such greats as Judy Garland and the Andrews Sisters, and has performed chamber music with many of Detroit's finest musicians. In keeping with the vintage mood of "Rogues," an Art Deco backdrop has been designed by Bernadine Vida, whose work includes local theatre design as well as music videos for Elton John and Billy Joel.

Showtimes are 9 p.m. and 11:15 p.m. every weekend. Appetizers, dinner and drinks will be served prior to and during the performance, from 5:30 p.m. to 1:30 a.m. with a $5 cover charge during entertainment. The

Mark Watson

Gnome, now featuring valet parking, is located at 4124 Woodward, 1 1/2 blocks north of Orchestra Hall. For reservations or further information, call (313) 833-0120.

Gibson's 'Hamlet' is invigorating

By Marian Trainor
Special Writer

A playwright for all seasons is William Shakespeare. Had he lived in a different era he might also have gained fame as a screenwriter. Shakespeare not only knew how to tell a good story but he also knew how to write great dialogue and create unforgettable characters. Audiences have never tired of his works, which can be adapted to make them more appealing to current tastes without losing their essence.

For instance, in the original form, "Hamlet" ran for four hours. Director Franco Zeffirelli has made the play more accessible to moviegoers by extensive surgery, while at the same time presenting a physical, invigorating "Hamlet."

Shakespeare's themes are universal. "Hamlet" might well have been the original "Rebel Without a Cause" who works himself into self-serving righteous fits railing against a world that has fallen short of his standards.

The ultimate ambition of performers is to be cast in a Shakespeare play and only the best have successfully achieved that goal.

So how does Mel Gibson fare as the melancholy Dane? It is not likely that he will be ranked among the great, but he does have a good baritone voice and brings to the role the same quicksilver energy that served him so well in "Lethal Weapon." We are told that Gibson had some training in Shakespearean theater in Australia and he does speak his famous lines with unpretentious ease in a way that suits his neurotic physicality. He plays the role rough, making it so vigorous that the audience almost forgets it's poetry and settles back to enjoy a story that is not only action-packed but also a little racy.

In Zeffirelli's production, there are suspicions that Gertrude and the dead King's brother were fooling around before his death and hints that Hamlet had an incestuous attachment to his mother.

Although Hamlet is the central character in the play, the tragedy embraces and enlarges the lives of the other characters.

Zeffirelli has cut some characters and passages but he uses the camera to say in seconds what would have taken minutes to express in words. It is a vibrant, sumptuous production. He bathes the hulking exteriors, a composite of three English castles, in white light — a counterpoint to the film's brooding interiors.

Hamlet is essentially a charismatic spoiled brat. Even before the ghost of his father appears to fill him in on his mother's treachery he broods because of Gertrude's hasty marriage to Claudius, his father's brother, and goes out of his way to show his displeasure.

His mother, who apparently subscribes to the philosophy that life is for the living, cannot understand his attitude, while he cannot bear to see her laughing and enjoying herself. Neurotically depressed, he goes completely over the edge when his father's ghost appears to him with the story of how he was murdered. Hamlet bounds around the castle trying to decide what to do to avenge his father, meanwhile driving his mother to distraction and so intimidating his girl-friend Ophelia that she loses her wits.

The action heats up until the final dueling scene where Gibson puts on an amazing show of the same dexterity and daring that thrilled his "Lethal Weapon" audiences. Before it's over, everyone concerned is done in, even Hamlet, who has suffered a wound from a sword dipped in poison. The show ends with the court gathered around him as his friend and classmate whispers, "Goodnight sweet Prince."

Gibson gives a credible, engrossing performance as Hamlet. He is supported by an outstanding cast. Glenn Close as Gertrude is delightful in her girlish oblivion to the seriousness of her situation. Helena Bonham-Carter's Ophelia departs from the usual gentle portrayal in her meetings with Hamlet, which makes her mad scene take on a pitiful eloquence.

Alan Bates as the villainous Claudius appears to be more of a buffoon than an evil schemer and Paul Scofield as the ghostly king gives a classical rendition in matters of elocution and phrasing. Ian Holmes amuses with his performance as the windy, interfering Polonius.

Under Zeffirelli, the excellent cast creates a complex and compelling "Hamlet" that is not to be missed.

Mel Gibson stars as Hamlet.

Extraordinary 'Awakenings' is therapy for our troubled times

By Chris Lathrop
Special Writer

Although it's happening on the other side of the planet, the war with Iraq has affected every American to some degree. It is during times like these — times of unrest and uncertainty — that the entertainment industry takes on its most significant role. People desperately need something to take their minds off the grim realities of life, at least for a little while.

"Awakenings," the latest effort from up-and-coming director Penny Marshall, is an extraordinary film for a number of reasons. Perhaps the most ironic is that in light of recent events, "Awakenings" is a must-see, even though it provides no escape from reality. Instead, the film is a poignant portrayal of the triumphs and tragedies that comprise the human condition. And there could be no better time than the present to come to grips with both the miracles and disappointments life has to offer.

The film tells the true story of Malcolm Sayer (played by Robin Williams), a neurologist who encounters a baffling medical condition at a mental hospital in The Bronx. Dr. Sayer's patients are all in a catatonic state, an illness that has affected some of them for several decades.

By taking one patient, Leonard Lowe (Robert DeNiro) under his wing, Dr. Sayer discovers an effective treatment for the condition, and Leonard slowly emerges from his trance after 30 years. Each of the patients is granted the miracle of beginning life anew, but miracles do not come with lifetime guarantees. Leonard and the others are faced with an entirely different set of challenges: challenges they are not prepared to cope with.

To no one's surprise, the performances in "Awakenings" are excellent. As was the case in "The World According to Garp" and "Dead Poet's Society," Williams demonstrates his new specialty of serious acting with a hint of comedy. His days of strictly over-the-top humor seem to be behind him, and his best work may still lie ahead.

And as for DeNiro, can he do no wrong? "Awakenings" is the latest in a long line of incredible DeNiro performances, performances that somehow get progressively better. He is without question one of the most versatile actors in the history of the industry.

Behind the scenes, Marshall, whose other notable film was the bittersweet comedy "Big," has certainly established herself as a capable director with "Awakenings," a fine addition to her resume. Hopefully, her success will encourage other talented female directors to try to make their marks in the male-dominated movie industry.

But what lifts "Awakenings" above the level of an ordinary film to the heights of greatness is the abundance of themes and messages contained within that apply to this fantastic puzzle we call life, especially now. The question of money vs. the preservation of life. The ability and foresight to solve both short- and long-term problems. The importance of love and determination to survive. The notion that time gone by is indeed lost forever.

Perhaps the most relevant topic is addressed when Leonard and Dr. Sayer have a late-night meeting. "Look at the newspaper," Leonard says. "It's all bad. We need to look at the good things. We need to learn how to live."

Amen, Leonard. And amen to "Awakenings," a thought-provoking, therapeutic film that couldn't have come at a better time. Whereas the tunnel in "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest" offered only pitch darkness, there is a flicker of hope at the end of "Awakenings." And in these troubled times, we need all the hope we can get.

'Daughter' is thrilling family drama

By Marian Trainor
Special Writer

A heart-rending betrayal by a trusted loved one and the harrowing nightmare of being held captive in a strange and alien country combine to make "Not Without My Daughter" an engrossing film.

Based on the true story of Betty Mahmood, played by Sally Field, it gains immediacy not only because Mahmood was a resident of Michigan but also because of the story's locale, the Middle East.

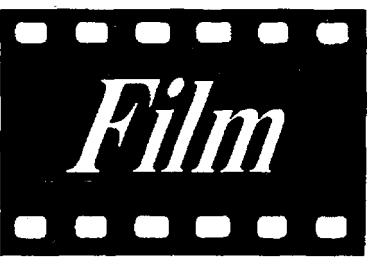

First presented in Mahmood's book, "Not Without My Daughter," the film loses none of the impact of the mind-numbing cruelties described in the best seller.

It is a grueling odyssey of spouse abuse, cultural misunderstanding and the helplessness of a woman who doesn't speak the language trying to escape an unbearable situation in a strange land. With no friends and no rights, her only recourse — divorce — would mean that she would have to give up her daughter, which she refuses to do.

For seven years Betty and her Iranian-born doctor husband, Moody (Alfred Molina), had a happy marriage in Texas and Michigan. Although he had been an American citizen for 20 years, in 1979 when the Iranian revolution swept the Shah from power, Moody's thoughts turned to his homeland.

When he suggested to Betty that they go to Iran for a two-week visit, she reminded him of the dangerous political climate there. To allay her fears he swore on the Koran that she and their 4-year-old daughter would not be in danger and that they could return unharmed in two weeks. Reluctantly she gave in to his pleas.

From the very first day, the Iranian women made it clear that while she was in their country she must follow its customs. Thinking she will be going home in two weeks, she does her best to comply, although she is shocked at the subservience of women in the Moslem culture.

Stinging from what he perceives as American antagonism toward Iranians, and prodded by his relatives to remain in his homeland, Moody begins to change. At the end of two weeks when Betty is happily packing to go home, he tells her that he has decided they will stay because he feels that the greatest gift he can give their child is to raise her in the Moslem religion.

From then on Betty's life becomes a long struggle to escape with her child to America.

When she appeals to the State Department she is informed that she is no longer an American citizen. When she tries to telephone her parents, the Iranian women, who watch her every move, inform Moody and she is beaten. She knows if she tries to escape and she is caught she will be executed.

For two years she outwardly complies with Moody's demands, including the rule that she cannot leave the house without his permission. But she never gives up hope. Every night she and her daughter pray that God will help them escape.

Finally, with the help of strangers, she makes a daring break that takes her on an arduous trip across the desert to Turkey and freedom.

Grippingly brought to the screen by Emmy Award winning David Rantels and English director Brian Gilbert, "Not Without My Daughter" is a story with strong emotional impact, suspense and insight into the Moslem culture and its religious fervor.

It would be easy to dislike Moody, but Molina's excellent complex performance as a man who feels driven to embrace the culture he feels he never should have left and his desire to make Betty and his child a part of that culture is dramatically presented. Field is excellent. You feel for her completely.

Bringing the film to the screen at this time in history may seem exploitive, but that doesn't lessen its merit as a well-presented story with a strong emotional impact.

Hilberry presents 'The Importance of Being Earnest'

Oscar Wilde's comedy masterpiece, "The Importance of Being Earnest," opens at the Hilberry Theatre Saturday, Feb. 16, following a preview Feb. 15. It runs in repertory with "Peer Gynt" through April 13.

The peppery drawing-room farce is considered to be one of the most brilliant comedies in the English language. Based on this play alone, Wilde is recognized as "the most individual British dramatist between Shakespeare and Shaw," according to Hesketh Pearson.

The play is a mad, witty farce which pokes fun at the Victorian way of life. Wilde subtitled his play "a rival comedy for serious people" because it dispenses with problems of the day and manifests a farcical elegance that hides the underlying satire.

The cast includes Nancy Lipschultz as Lady Bracknell, Lance Retallick as Algernon, Ray Shultz as Jack, Catherine Coscarelli as Gwendolen, Tami Evans as Cecily, Lee Heinz as Miss Prism and Henry Lide as the Reverend Chasuble.

"The Importance of Being Earnest" is directed by Robert T. Hazzard, chairman of the theatre department at Wayne State University. Scene design is by Susan Howell, lighting design by Shawna Van Tatenhove, costume design by Christine Ann Burr, properties by Brent Menchinger and sound by Sean Stone.

Tickets can be obtained by calling the Hilberry Theatre box office at 577-2972.

Travel Trends

By Phyllis Hollenbeck

Flying in time of crisis

Our current airport security system, which was put into place in the 1970s to stem the epidemic of airline hijackings, has been successful in this regard. Last year there were only two hijacking incidents in the United States, the lowest number in fifteen years.

United States domestic travelers have been living a relatively worry-free travel life style. But ever since the 1988 bombing of Pan Am flight 103 over Lockerbie, Scotland, European travelers have been subjected to severe security measures whenever traveling in or out of their home country. Although our current system seems adequate to stop a lone hijacker, there is still the question of whether or not it will stand up against the present danger of heavily armed and technologically advanced terrorist groups.

Lee Grodzins, a physics professor at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and an adviser on nuclear and X-ray technology to the FAA, says "no one is prepared for this." The new, beefed-up domestic airport security systems that have been put into place since Jan. 15, though annoying and inconvenient, are vitally important in making our domestic flights safer. Early check-in, personal interrogation of all passengers, baggage X-ray and positive baggage identification are just some of the anti-terrorism steps currently being taken at various airports around the country. Unfortunately, much of the new bomb-detection technology being tested, as well as the systems that need to be in place to make this technology work, take time and money.

U.S. Transportation Secretary Samuel K. Skinner says that with anti-terrorist security measures at the highest levels in U.S. aviation history, the public should not be alarmed about air travel during the Persian Gulf war. However, with the worrisome possibility of terrorist attacks by Mideast zealots, it is wise to think about protective steps that can be taken by travelers at home and abroad, in airports and other public places.

If you do plan to travel during periods of tension, the basic rule of thumb is to spend as little time as possible in areas that could be considered targets for attack. That may seem to conflict with arriving at the airport early, but there is nothing wrong with getting there ahead of time and then going to areas where there are not large numbers of people assembled. Unused passenger boarding gates would be a good place to wait until you board your flight. You can also help airport security personnel by being alert for unattended parcels or luggage. If you spot an unattended item, report it immediately to the law enforcement, airline or security personnel at the airport.

Your check-in frustrations can be minimized by limiting the amount of baggage you take with you. If possible, make it only carry-on luggage. That way, you will not be required to wait around crowded baggage claim areas. Be prudent in what you pack. Do not carry knives, electrical devices or any other suspicious materials in your luggage. Understandably, security personnel will be particularly sensitive during stressful periods and may hold you up for deep screening.

And, of course, never make any cute remarks about weapons, bombs, terrorism or such subjects. Security and law enforcement people will not be amused. They are within their rights to arrest people who make such remarks. Thank goodness they take their work seriously. If you are traveling abroad, particularly to Europe or areas adjacent to the hostilities, there are additional steps you might consider to help ensure your safety. Briefly — do not advertise the fact that you are American. If convenient, dress in the manner of local people; don't display your passport except when required. If you can find a comfortable hotel that is not part of an American chain, stay there. Don't read USA Today or English-language books in public. Do not spend time in the public rooms of the hotels.

Of course, the ultimate security is staying home. If nobody traveled and nobody appeared in public, there would be no targets for terrorists. A long-time world traveler friend says, "I will not allow my life to be run by lunatics (terrorists). Knowing the risks, being conscious of them and taking intelligent protective steps will permit me to enjoy my travels, even in the worst of times."

Changes in society chronicled in ad campaigns

By Charlotte Evans
Smithsonian News Service

Since 1984, the Smithsonian's Center for Advertising History, based at the National Museum of American History in Washington, D.C., has been studying high-profile advertising campaigns of selected U.S. companies to see how the ads have been orchestrated and how they reflect changes in American life.

To date, ads of Pepsi, Marlboro, Alka-Seltzer, Federal Express and Campbell's Soup have been examined. But Scott Ellsworth, historian at the center, said that advertising can be elusive to document, which is why the project uses oral history as a major tool in its research.

"Much of the work associated with advertising is carried out on the telephone," Ellsworth said. "Account executives talk; they fly to New York for a brainstorming session. Nobody takes notes. A decision is reached, and they fly back." This lack of documentation, he said, will present problems for historians of the future.

The case studies of individual advertising campaigns are what Ellsworth calls "first installments in a larger game plan," which the center's staff hopes will include an ability to study advertising topically. "We'd like to embark on different studies," he said. "For example: how women were treated; the use of humor or racism in advertising.

While they are still with us, we'd like to study the ad pioneers. And we're trying to put together a history of public service ads. We'd also like to put together a manuscript guide to where ad collections are located and, eventually, a museum exhibit."

Stacy Flaherty, the center's coordinator, said that it is exciting and challenging to collect and study advertising. "It speaks to a variety of disciplines — cultural, social and economic history, business history, anthropology, communications, graphic arts and more."

Each case study takes about a year to complete. The first portion, Ellsworth says, "involves a lot of background research, dirty old historical research." Then there is a series of meetings with old hands at the company, retired ad executives and outside consultants. "Someone's memory triggers somebody else's," he said.

In the second phase, a historian conducts between 25 and 60 interviews with staff from both the company and the ad agency. Other materials such as television spots, print ads and business records are collected. Once the material is at the museum, it's organized for researchers to use: Each item is numbered, interviews are abstracted, an index is compiled and a finding aid for all the material in each collection prepared.

The Alka-Seltzer oral-history resource, for example, contains 25 interviews, a total of about 33 hours, including one with Perry Shupert, the first salesman to take the product on the road in 1931. Shortly after that, the manufacturer, Miles Laboratories, began experimenting with radio advertising and sponsored a show called the National Barn Dance on WLS in Chicago. After that, Shupert couldn't get Alka-Seltzer to the drugstores fast enough. It was, he recalled, "like throwing snowballs into the sun. It was sort of a miracle."

While the case studies involve a certain amount of drudgery, they can also be highly entertaining, especially ads from the creative revolution made during the late '60s and early '70s. Remember the Groom's First Meal, brought to you by Alka-Seltzer in 1970? Bride in bed perusing cookbook while groom, gulping Alka-Seltzer in bathroom, attempts to recover from the biggest dumpling he's ever seen. She rejects marshmallow meatballs in favor of poached oysters; he races for the sink.

The same year brought Mama Mia, that's a spicy meatball! After a whole morning of stuffing down spaghetti and mugging his line, our hero finally gets it right. Except that the oven door behind him falls open with a crash, ruining the take. "OK," the director-character sighs, "let's break for lunch."

A more recent popular classic is Wendy's Where's the Beef? campaign that made Clara Peller a star in 1983. The idea for that, according to Ellsworth, came from the post-college experience of Joe Sedelmaier, the ad director. "He was living in this awful, dump apartment in Chicago with nothing in it. His aunts would come to visit and try to think of something nice to say, so they'd say, 'Gee that's really a nice window, a nice big window.' These are the women in the commercial who would say, 'That's really a nice bun, a nice big bun,' and Clara was the bull in the china shop demanding to know where the beef was."

What is entertaining, however, doesn't necessarily sell, according to Dr. Barbara Griffith, a historian at the center. "The experts I've talked to agree that humor does sell, but in and of itself it will not be enough." The quality of the product matters, as does the accuracy of the target market.

One thing humor does do successfully, she points out, is cross class lines. "Alka-Seltzer had a problem," she said. "Was it for stomachs or for heads? Research showed that blue-collar users took it for stomach complaints while white-collar types took it for achy heads. When sales decreased rapidly after 1953, they were ready to try almost anything, and humor, in fact, was a great way to get around the class problem. You can always find a chief executive officer or a truck driver who stuffs himself at his mother's."

Alka-Seltzer's commercials, she said, provide a pretty fair mirror of American culture. In the relatively restrictive and moralistic '50s, the ads featured happy families whose only problems were sudden indigestion or a headache. The '60s were much more creative and introspective; one television spot, called Stomach Talk, portrays cartoon characters of a man and his stomach in a psychiatrist's office.

Late in the decade, following Vietnam, assassinations and urban unrest, the campaign featured "the blahs." In 1978, the company recognized that it was no longer a man's world and saluted the women of America — welders, jockeys and astronauts among them. The mid-1980s commercial was set in the boardroom with the chairman claiming his goals for the coming year. It's Alka-Seltzer all around "for the symptoms of stress that come with success." Plop, plop. Fizz, fizz.

Section B, what's that?

Hey, I'm over here. No, not that page, keep turning. I'm over here, goofy. Please, keep turning the pages.

Yo, I'm back here. I'm out of my element. Help, I've fallen into section B and I can't get out.

Since we had to reduce our four-section paper back to three, my sports pages will now be in this section. It's a necessary change so I don't have a problem with it; the only dilemma I face is having to spruce up my copy to compete with feature editor Margie Smith's outstanding articles and Ronald J. Bernas' entertainment section.

Sports and entertainment are basically the same, but community news and sports just don't mix.

Anyway, here I am, you have found me.

Frankly, who cares?

With the war and recession completely consuming our thoughts, how can we even think of watching or partaking in a football game? Easy. We have to live. We have saluted the troops with our flag waving, yellow ribbons and constant prayers, but to think of canceling the games, whether basketball, hockey or anything else, wouldn't be proper.

We do suffer each time a missile is fired. We do cringe at the thought of Americans being shot at in the desert. However, we must progress and not stop living.

But it's important that we don't lose sight of what is going on. While watching the Super Bowl last Sunday, I didn't feel guilty, but I was preoccupied with the constant reminders of war.

Some people are becoming desensitized to the conflict because they are bored, tired or confused by the many reports from CNN and other networks. How can you ignore it, or try to get away from it? People, wake up. We're in the middle of war — you know, the kind of event that people are killed in? Football or not, we have to go on, but at the same time we must remember those troops who are fighting for us.

Many college and professional teams have shown their support by wearing flags on the backs of helmets, taking a minute of silence at the start of the game or wearing a flag on their uniforms.

I never thought I'd live through a war, but now I find myself saving the papers and magazines for my yet-unborn child to study some day. The games seem irrelevant in the big picture, but those athletes have a job to do, too, and we can't ask them to stop going to work. I know playing sports doesn't seem like a job, but to them it is their livelihood, just as journalism, teaching or being a lawyer is for me and you.

Another thing we should stop doing is comparing sports to war.

Many writers and sportscasters like to make a game sound more like combat: "Oh, the Bills' couldn't mount much of a ground attack in the first half because the Giants stymied them with their defensive maneuvers."

There's no parallel between games and wars. Besides, nobody wins in war, but people and teams do win games.

We must move on and live, even though there are servicemen battling for US while we sit patiently waiting for their return. Games should be played, but we must all remember that they are immaterial when men and women fight, and inevitably die or are lost in action or captured.

Renegade cruises to J-44 championship

By Rob Fulton

Lake St. Clair is iced over and the ice-fishing huts have sprouted.

Cold winds and blocks of ice blow into the shoreline, forcing water sports enthusiasts to look for a winter home.

So where do all the captains and crews go to get their fill? Florida.

Grosse Pointe's Ken Meade took his boat, Renegade, to Florida and left it there after a week of racing in the 5-44 North American Championships, but he brought home nine trophies, including the top prize: The 5-44 North American Championship.

It was Meade's second consecutive 5-44 title. He won the fall classic in Annapolis last October. "All I can say is that it was a special week of sailing," said Meade, whose boat is less than a year old. "We had great weather, a great crew and didn't make many mistakes."

Perhaps his only mistake was returning to Michigan, but it's business as usual.

"The weather was ideal and the winds were great," said Meade, who skipped Renegade in its maiden voyage in last year's Mackinac race. "The breezes were great and our boat does well in 10-17 knots and most of the time they were 16 to 17 knots. We have a boat that's quick and a crew that responds to the contests."

Meade also won the Audi-Quatro Trophy, which goes to the boat with the best overall record.

"That was especially nice," Meade said. "We knew we had the 5-44 championship after the fourth race, but we needed to take a first place in the fifth race to get the Audi cup."

After finishing second to T.K. Lowry's (Grosse Pointe) Tomahawk in the first race, Meade put together a string of four straight wins. Lowry won the 150-mile race from Fort Lauderdale to Key West, which officially kicked off the race week. Bill Alcott, also of Grosse Pointe, skipped Equation to a third place in the 5-44 championships, and Lowry was seventh, after suffering mechanical difficulties during the final four races.

Lowry didn't finish the second race, but wound up with a fifth and two third-place finishes. Alcott's highest finish was a second in Race 2, and he added a third, fourth and two fifth-place finishes.

After the 150-mile race, Alcott, Lowry and Meade joined to challenge a team from the East Coast. The three Bayview boats won the team-race, and the trophy now stands in the hallowed showcase at Bayview.

Meade, who got four trophies for his first-place finishes, will try for a third straight 5-44 championship in Miami in March.

"This win was just a culmination of a great racing week," he said. "I was absolutely sick of sailing after the Friday race, but I'll have enough time to recuperate and get back down there in March. We're really looking forward to getting our third championship."

Ken Meade's Renegade (US-55) takes an early lead at the start of Race 3 of the 1-44 North American Championships during Audi-Yachting Key West Race Week. Bill Alcott's Equation (35777), last year's mid-winter champion, and T.K. Lowry's Tomahawk (35753), returned to restart after crossing the line. All three represent the Bayview Yacht Club.

Gregory, Jeff Fawsat, Keith Lorenz, Dwight Scott, David Wilber, Jon Upton, Paul Kerber, Bruce Kuryla and Joe Hazebrook.

"We had some fine starts, and even if we trailed at a mark, the crew worked particularly hard to close the gap," Meade said. "In one-design racing all the boats are the same so it comes down to the crew, and our crew was very good."

Gramling succeeds with little pressure

By Rob Fulton
Sports Editor

He's quiet and reserved and speaks only when spoken to. He's gentle and kind, but he also tells it like it is.

Tim Gramling isn't one to boast. He's very unassuming and works harder than most high school athletes.

On the court, diamond or field, Gramling is confident and thrives on pressure. Off the court, the three-sport athlete is meticulous, hard-working and always submerging himself in his academic load. Gramling's grade point average is 3.6, and he has three advanced placement courses.

"I was always able to compete without any pressure from my family," said Gramling, who captains this year's South basketball team. "They have always supported me and not once pres-

But Gramling, a 5-foot 10-inch point guard, knows what his parents expect.

"My parents have always told me that I won't have basketball forever," he said, 20 minutes after an individual workout and an hour before a team practice. "My mom and dad want me to get a good education and that's why I devote so much time to studying. I work hard for them because I can't repay them in any other way for the support they've given me."

At 17, Gramling knows high school may be his last stop for athletics, but that doesn't get him down.

"I've got half of a basketball season left and a full season of baseball before I graduate and that may be it for me," said Gramling, who plays shortstop in baseball and quarterback in football. "I'm prepared for that and mature enough to understand that academics must come first. There's going to be a day I look back on it all and reminisce, but I won't miss not playing in college. It's a reality I have faced."

He's applied to Vanderbilt, Kalamazoo, Holy Cross, Colgate, where his brother Chris goes, Hillsdale and DePauw (Indiana).

And he's good enough to play college basketball.

"Sure, but I'm not pushing it," said Gramling, who is the seventh of nine Gramling children. "If I'm able to play, fine. But I'm not counting on it."

Although he excels in football and baseball, it's basketball that Gramling prefers.

"I play all three sports because of the competitive streak in me," he said. "I play just to be competitive. I love all three sports, but it also helps me budget my time for homework. Sure, basketball is probably my best sport, but I work just as hard for baseball and football."

Gramling began playing hard and becoming a disciplined person when he played in fifth grade at St. Clare of Montefalco. For four years he played under Tom Molloy, Vito Tocco, Bob Conway and Bill Dailey. Besides his father, Gramling feels the St. Clare coaches did the most to shape his career.

"I've had the opportunity to play under some fine coaches who helped me a great deal," he said. "My father and the coaches are very responsible for my game."

Which is deliberate, concentrated and perhaps one of the finest on the east side.

"His game is so good because he's astute and adept at understanding the principles of the game between the coaches and players and how it is supposed to be translated on the court," said Coach George Petrouleas. "Tim is a fine young man and we've been fortunate enough to have him and two of his brothers come through the program. He's a pleasure to coach."

Even though he comes from a basketball family, Tim has never felt like he's played in his brothers' shadows.

"No, I have never felt that," he said. "I really don't emulate anyone, either. I work hard for me because it's a matter of me wanting to be the best that I can be. If you want to achieve something, you've got to take it upon yourself" to set the goals and reach them."

Gramling began playing street basketball in Delaware, where his family landed after moving from Tehran, Iran, where Tim and Chris were born. But it was in Grosse Pointe Park where Tim began really honing his game.

"I was a little more competitive with Chris because we were only two years apart," said Gramling. "I was also playing with my brothers' friends and they taught me a lot too. We'd go down to St. Cecilia's in the summer and play ball with Andy Ament, Chris Rowan and some of Chris' friends. Those games we had in the streets were very intense and some of the best street games ever."

Gramling wants to head back east for college and someday start a large family of his own.

"I want a big family," he said. "When we get together right now we have a great time and I want to give my kids what my parents have given me, and that's just the opportunity to be my own person with no pressure."

Except the pressure he puts on himself.

"Yeah, I guess I do put pressure on myself to excel," he said. "But I do that because I know what goals I have set, plus I don't like losing."

Gramling has fond memories of his four years, but one of them isn't so good.

"I really wouldn't change one thing about high school," he said. "I've had four great years to play and enjoy everything. Well, I guess I would change one thing; I'd play better D on Vier."

Dave Vier's basket for Grosse Pointe North knocked South out of last year's district playoffs in the first round.

After Gramling forced the overtime by canning a three-point basket in regulation, he hit two free throws with five seconds left that gave South a two-point advantage. But David Vier lofted a 45-foot shot that hit nothing but net, giving North the 52-51 win.

"I should have been in his face, but I wasn't," Gramling said. "That's the only thing I'd change."

So, as he plays out this high school fantasy, Gramling doesn't worry about college recruits not paying attention to him. He's focused on winning a league championship in hoops, and then having a sterling baseball season.

"And when it's all over, it's over," he said. "I've had four great years, met a lot of people and have a lot of friends. But, if I no longer play basketball I won't stop living."

Norsemen hockey team can't find winning edge school suspensions and only one goaltender, things have gotten worse for the North hockey team.

The season has become one of attrition for North — it now

With a 7-3 loss to Southgate Anderson Jan. 26, the Norsemen fell to 3-10 overall and 1-7 in the Michigan Metro.

"The kids are really getting demoralized now because we've had so many things happen to us," said coach Mike Manzella. "These kids have gone through a lot this season, but to their credit they have really stuck together. They deserve a break somewhere down the road; I just hope it comes soon."

Manzella also hopes his struggling defense can come around.

"We're having a lot of problems in our own zone," he said. "We've had to put one of our better forwards back on defense to get some help, and that's not what we should be doing. We're having problems clearing our own zone."

That was the case against Anderson, as North gave up three goals in the first five minutes.

"It's really strange," Manzella said. "We've started off in a hole like that too many times this season and we're not a good enough hockey team to come back from a three-goal deficit."

Southgate beat goaltender Brian Dennis at the two-, three- and five-minute marks, before

John Ferguson, who has eight goals and five assists in the league, put North on the board with his first of two goals on the night. Mike Klobuchar added North's third goal, and Brian Quinn had two assists.

"We had some fine individual performances from Gary Corona and Ferguson," Manzella said, "but I have yet to see our team play an entire game. I haven't had a total team effort or 100 percent from everybody yet."

But he's not giving up. "We are approaching things a little differently now," said Manzella, who took the Norsemen to the 1986 state finals. "We're going to tough it out and see what happens. We've had a lot of adversity, which I don't want to talk about, but this team is still a very close group. We're remaining optimistic."

With near perfect passing, the Lady Norsemen crushed L'Anse Creuse North, 15-3, 15-6, Jan. 21 at home.

Nicole Herceg led the Lady Norsemen with 11 hits.

North is 5-3 overall and 4-1 in the league.

Swimming

J.P. Gamrat led the Norsemen to a resounding 132-58 win over Sterling Heights with wins in the 100 backstroke, 200 medley relay and the 200 freestyle.

Joining Gamrat in the winner's circle were Chris Janutol (200 and 500 freestyle), Mike Collins (50 and 100 freestyle), Nick Harrington (200 medley relay and 500 freestyle), Steve Williams (200 individual medley and 100 butterfly), Steve Chevalier (diving), Larry Lloyd (diving) and Rusty Milne (200 and 500 freestyle).

Gymnastics

Despite some excellent individual performances, the Lady Norsemen fell to Troy and North Farmington in a tri-meet Jan. 21.

Troy had 129.85 points and North Farmington was second at 128.2, while North had 109.05.

Megan Gray scored an 8.3 on the vault and had a team high all-around score of 29.5. Heather Henning was impressive with an 8.0 in the floor exercise, a 7.3 on the beam and an all-around score of 26.95.

Lisa Vallan earned a second place on vault (8.15).

North is 2-3 overall and 2-1 in league competition.

Basketball

After 11 games, including six in the Macomb Area Conference White Division, the Norsemen have struggled to a 4-7 overall record.

With two league losses to Anchor Bay (64-59) and L'Anse Creuse North (67-42), North is 1-5 in the league, five games behind pace-setting Roseville.

At L'Anse Creuse North Jan. 22, Tim Sacka, in his first game back after suffering a head injury in a win over South, led North with 12 points and D.J. Reynolds had 11 points.

Against Anchor Bay Jan. 24, Sacka and Dave Vier poured in 14 points each, and Adam Lowry right were in a bit of a tailspin

George Olman. "We have been getting pretty good shot selection, but haven't been able to hit the shots."

It was not a week for the faint-hearted as the Grosse Pointe South boys' basketball team split a pair of Macomb Area Conference White Division games.

South, 8.3 overall, fell two games off the pace with a 68-66 overtime loss at Roseville Jan. 22, but defeated previously unbeaten Utica, 55-53, three days later at home.

"We're making these games quite interesting," said South coach George Petrouleas. "People who have seen us play can't say the games haven't been exciting."

At 4-2, South is in third place, two games behind Roseville and one game behind Utica.

Petrouleas doesn't mind the close games, but at Roseville, the game should never have been up for grabs.

South led by nine with 2:13 to play, but mishandled the basketball and couldn't hit the front end of three consecutive one-and-one free throws down the stretch.

"After each one of those misses, Roseville scored," Petrouleas said. "Plus, we had a couple turnovers mixed in there and we didn't get off a good shot when we had to."

After blowing the nine-point lead, South still had a chance to win the game in regulation but couldn't get a shot off.

"There was a scramble for the ball after we mishandled it and time expired," Petrouleas said. "But it should have never gotten to that point. We did some very unusual things that allowed Roseville to sneak back in the game."

If South had won, it would have moved into a first place tie with the Panthers.

"That was what we call a double game," said Petrouleas. "It was crucial because we fell two games back instead of pulling into the tie. But we didn't take care of the basketball and do what we had to do in the last two minutes."

Tim Gramling led the Devils with 20 points and seven assists, and Blair Hess had 13 points and six rebounds. Junior guard Mike McLaughlin added 12 points.

South entertained Utica Jan. 25 and avoided its second consecutive overtime affair when Gramling canned a 15-footer with two seconds to play.

With 28 seconds to play, Hess made a basket and was fouled, but didn't convert on the three-point play. On the missed free throw, Gramling grabbed the rebound, brought the ball back out and played for one shot.

"It was a smart play on Timmy's part," Petrouleas said. "Instead of rushing a shot, we had the ball and a tie game (53-53) so we worked the clock for the final shot."

South, which shot 50 percent from the floor, was led by Gramling's 19 points and six assists. Mike Armstrong had 14 points and seven rebounds. Hess finished with 12 points and a game-high 10 rebounds.

Swimming

Behind the first-place diving effort of Chad Hepner, the Grosse Pointe South swim team beat Roseville, 116-70.

Hepner's diving partner, James Loffredo, took fourth.

The 200 medley relay team of Jim Bellanca, Peter Mertz, Andy Walter and Tim Jogan took first place, as did the 400-free relay team of Patrick Ollison, Matt Millikin, Brenn Schoenherr and Tim Harmount.

Bellanca was also first in the 100 backstroke, while Schoenherr, Ollison and Millikin took the top three spots in the 200 freestyle. Mertz, Rob Bacon and Brad Kimmel swept the 200 individual medley, and Walter, Harmount and S. Lucas took first, third and sixth, respectively, in the 50 freestyle.

Schoenherr took a first in the 100 butterfly, with Millikin a close second. Tim Jogan and Walter took first and second in the 100 freestyle. Ollison was fourth in the same event.

Chuck Ruifrok took a second in the 500 freestyle, just ahead of third place Ryan Milligan. Bacon was second in the 100 breaststroke for South, and the 200-free relay team of Ollison, Schoenherr, Millikin and Harmount took first.

Volleyball

Behind the one-man gang of Tina Higel, the Lady Devils beat Roseville, 15-9, 15-6, and Utica, 15-3, 15-1.

Higel had three kills, 11 service points and four ace serves in the win over Roseville, and four kills and eight service points against Utica.

Angela Drake added four kills, and Ashley Moran and Emilie Ayrault combined for six kills against Roseville.

Drake led South with four kills against Utica, while Moran had five kills. Sue Faremouth added 14 assists as the Devils improved to 8-2 overall and 5-1 in the Macomb Area Conference White Division.

Wrestling

In a tri-meet, South beat Romeo, 46-21, but lost to Roseville, 36-24.

Double winners for the 10-5 Blue Devils were Lou Preston, Jon Ostrowski, Brion Czajczynski and Frank Voelker. Paul Kelley, Scott Cairo and Jesse Culver each had one win, and Nate Eriksen had a win and a draw.

Soccer referee clinic Feb. 4

The Grosse Pointe Soccer Association will hold an instructional program for soccer referees at Barnes school Feb. 4 from 6:30 to 9 p.m.

The program is scheduled for eight consecutive Mondays, and is geared for high school students without prior referee experience, particularly soccer players from boys' and girls' teams fielded by area high schools.

Greg Curtis will conduct the program.

Upon completion of the course and a test, participants will be FIFA certified. The certification will allow participants to referee games for the GPSA, Neighborhood Club and other soccer organizations.

Knights back at .500

By Rob Fulton
Sports Editor

With a 67-64 win over Lutheran Westland Jan. 25, the University Liggett School boys' basketball team evened its overall record at 5-5.

With a 3-0 mark in the Michigan Independent Athletic Conference, the Knights lead the league.

"We played an inspired Westland team," said ULS coach Chuck Wright. "But we kept our composure and played smart basketball down the stretch. It was a good team effort."

And that's what Wright wants more of.

"We never really got into a rhythm and we struggled," he said. "But it was good to see the team stick together and perform as a team."

The win, ULS' second straight, was the first time this season the Knights had won after trailing in the fourth quarter.

"We had to battle back because the lead changed hands several times," Wright said. "But I think what pulled it out for us was our support for one another and our ability to stick together."

It also didn't hurt that DeDan Milton, who finished with 19 points, scored nine second-quarter points as ULS took a 39-33 lead at the half.

Tarik Lester, who led all scorers with 20 points, then took over in the fourth quarter and scored eight points, including two free throws, to seal the win.

Brent McMahon added 13 points for the Knights.

Girls' hockey

The ULS girls' varsity hockey team advanced to the semifinals of the Golden Blades Invitational Jan. 26 at the Ice Box in Brownstown Township, finishing in the runner-up spot.

Goalie Ann Cavanaugh stopped a breakaway with 23 seconds left in the first game to salvage a 3-3 tie with Lake Forest. P-R Stark led the Lady Knights with five goals on the weekend, and Beth Paul, Julie Galsterer, Kelly Gotfredson and Emily Wardwell each added one goal.

Beth Mozena led ULS with four assists.

Boys' hockey

Juniors Mike Whelan and Bill Robb each scored a goal as the Knights, the defending Class B-C-D state champs, battled to a 2-2 tie with Port Huron Jan. 26 at McCann Rink.

Whelan, a center, tied the game at 10:30 of the first period off a picture-perfect play by Chris Crain and Nick Giorgio. Giorgio played the puck along the board to Crain, who fed it to Whelan, who picked the upper corner for his fifth goal of the season.

With 47 seconds left in the second period, Eric Kisskalt won a face-off in the offensive zone and pushed it back to Robb, who buried it for ULS' second goal.

It was Kisskalt's 17th assist and Robb's eighth goal of the season. Port Huron tied the game late in the third period.

Volleyball

After a slow start, the Lady Knights have really picked things up lately.

ULS defeated Lutheran Westland, 15-6, 12-15, 15-3, 15-7, on Jan. 25.

Senior Ali Frederick kept ULS in the match with 17 service points and freshman Magda Chojnacka was the team's outstanding setter. Senior Lynn Sinsel and senior Martina Jerant, who had 11 attacks and three blocks, also anchored the offense.

"The girls have really come together as a team," said Coach Ann Belloli, whose team is now 2-1 in the league and 6-4 overall. "The girls play with the kind of confidence you hope your team has at the end of the season and we've got it now."

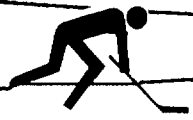

Frederick also had 14 service points and 13 attacks in ULS' 15-5, 15-12, 3-15, 15-7, 15-8 win over Oakland Christian. Natasha Levy was also instrumental in the win.

Outcrank the yuppies with this high-powered Chevy truck

Imagine a vehicle that has neck-snapping acceleration but guzzles gas like an old-time Pontiac GTO or Dodge SuperBee. The EPA rates its fuel economy at 10 miles per gallon city and 12 highway.

Its styling is a knockout with its special black finish, but it has no backseat and will hold three passengers if they are friendly (it would prefer two with a dog). It's a pickup truck, but it costs about 20Gs.

Do you think it would sell? With war in the Persian Gulf putting the availability, let alone price, of gasoline in some peril, nobody is going to want this throwback to the muscle car era, right?

Wrong again! If you can find a Chevrolet SS 454 pickup (the 454 refers to the size of the engine, a 454-cubic-inch V-8 of the sort that used to be used in the factory hot-rod SS Chevrolets) on a dealer's lot anywhere, you have found a needle in a haystack because most of these limited-production vehicles are sold before they reach the retail outlet.

Why, you might ask, in a nation where you can legally drive no faster than 65 do people want a 200-mph Ferrari or a pickup truck that will keep up with a Corvette in a drag race? Why will they pay a gas-guzzler tax to buy a vehicle when they know it will be expensive to operate and they know that availability of gasoline will be in doubt from time to time? There may be no answer, they just do.

That said, there are many reasons one might want a Chevy SS 454 pickup. For one thing, it is very nicely appointed with all manner of luxury items, and it has a nice ride, not quite passenger car but pleasant enough. And, of course, you don't have to worry about merging into traffic when you enter the freeway, no matter how fast that traffic is going. You'll get up to speed in no time.

The SS 454 is a model of the Chevrolet C/K full-size pickup.

AUTOS

By Richard Wright

1991 Chevrolet all-wheel-drive extended Astro

1991 Chevrolet 454 SS pickup

Full-size pickups are the highest-volume segment of the light-duty truck market and the C/K truck is General Motors' best-selling model.

The 454 SS has the largest V-8 in a regular-production half-ton pickup and for '91 it was linked to a new four-speed electronically controlled overdrive transmission with locking rear differential with 4.10 axle ratio. The electronic controls provide enhanced shifting precision and smoothness and a new dual-stator torque converter increases low-speed torque.

The 454 SS also features a special handling package and Bilstein gas shocks and rides on B.F. Goodrich T/A P275-60R-15 blackwall tires. The truck is equipped with halogen composite headlamps, tinted glass and Silverado trim with blackout effects.

The V-8 has been upgraded for '91 by a dual exhaust system which boosts the engine's horsepower rating by 25 to 255 hp. All 1991 C/K engines have improved throttle body fuel injection and redesigned starter motors.

All these goodies put together in the 454 SS add up to a rather unique driving experience. It will give a Corvette a run for its money, but it feels nothing like a Corvette. The incongruity of a muscle-car spirit in a utilitarian pickup truck body obviously has appeal, because the limited-production vehicle has been for the most part a pre-delivery sellout. Like its muscle-car ancestors, the 454 SS makes a somewhat antisocial statement and marks its bad-boy (or bad-girl) owner as a maverick who is not interested in CAFE or Ralph Nader or any of the other specters which haunt the auto industry.

It is old-fashioned Chevy apple-pie fun in a utilitarian package. You can polish it up and take it to town in high-style splendor and outcrank all the yuppies in their BMWs and Volvos, even the ones in the Saab Turbos.

Or you can use it to haul manure, or whatever.

Another Chevrolet truck worth investigating is the Astro. Overshadowed by the more glamorous new minivans, perhaps most notably Chevy's own Lumina APV and its Pontiac Trans Sport and Oldsmobile Silhouette stablemates, the Astro has been improved and enhanced over the last couple years, making it much more attractive in its very competitive market.

The extended version of the Astro offers the greatest cargo capacity of any minivan and every Astro is equipped with a state-of-the-art four-wheel anti-lock brake system for sure handling and stopping.

Since it was first introduced, the Astro has never received much respect from the automotive enthusiast magazines, but in fact it is quite a user-friendly machine, a bit cartoonish in its shorter form, and over the years Chevrolet has added an improvement here and an enhancement there.

The Astro is available in two-wheel or all-wheel-drive versions in both regular and extended bodies. A higher-output V-6 rated at 170 hp is optional on two-wheel-drive models. The standard version puts out 150 hp.

The all-wheel-drive system delivers power to the Astro's wheels on a 35/65 front-to-rear ratio under normal conditions. But when low-traction driving conditions require it, a viscous coupling in the transfer case automatically varies the torque ratio to correct for traction loss. All-wheel drive combined with four-wheel anti-lock brakes makes the Astro a sure-footed beast indeed.

A Chevrolet spokeswoman pointed out that towing capacity is a big factor in the mid-size van market and the Astro is the leader with capability to tow up to 6,000 pounds. She said most Astro buyers are in the 35-to-65 age bracket, 93 percent are married and Chevrolet figures the influence of women on purchases is 32 percent.

Prices start at $14,580 for the regular rear-drive version. If you tried an Astro a few years ago and bought something else, you might want to check it out again. It still looks the same, but it isn't.

New car's cooling system vastly different today

In case you hadn't noticed, cars are a lot smaller nowadays. Under their low and sloping hoods are engines that produce twice the power per pound as their predecessors of the '60s did, delivering better than twice the miles per gallon with reduced exhaust emissions.

Lighter weight, improved aerodynamics and high-tech thermodynamics (better control and utilization of heat generated within the engine) have contributed to these improvements. Engine heat dissipates through the cooling system.

The new, smaller, lightweight engines are more vulnerable to major damage from overheating. If the warning light turns on, indicating your car is overheating, pull over as quickly as possible and turn the engine off.

Never remove a pressure cap from a hot radiator; you could be scalded by steam. Allow the engine to cool before adding a 50-50 mix of antifreeze and water. Then determine the cause of overheating and take corrective measures.

A clean cooling system works better and lasts longer. Flushing, pressure testing and refilling with fresh antifreeze should be done at least every other year.

When one of the new aluminum radiators with plastic top tank deteriorates due to neglect, repair or replacement is likely to be more expensive than for the traditional copper/brass radiator.

If your car is equipped with an electric radiator fan, be sure it's working; an inoperative fan can cause overheating. (Stay clear of blades: The fan may turn on unexpectedly).

Check your hoses and belts. Newer cars may have a single serpentine belt instead of the traditional two or three belts driving various accessories. A slipping or broken belt may cause loss not only of cooling but also may affect every other belt-driven system, including brakes, alternator, air conditioner, power steering and, on some cars, power brakes.

Keep your engine tuned-up. Several sensors and microprocessors connected to the cooling system interact with other engine systems and components to produce optimum efficiency. A faltering engine can induce overheating; a malfunctioning cooling system can hurt engine performance.

Remember, too, that the transmission is cooled by the engine cooling system. Severe strain, such as a trailer towing in hilly terrain, can overheat both components. Installation of an auxiliary transmission cooler might be a wise investment.

With 80 percent of gas now being pumped by the driver, service station attendants are few and far between. For this reason car owners should get in the habit of making under-the-hood checks at least once a month.

To make this easier for the uninitiated, the Car Care Council offers a variety of informative pamphlets, including "How to find your way under the hood and around the car" and "How to help your car keep its cool." Pamphlets are available for 50 cents. Send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Car Care Council, One Grande Lake Drive, Port Clinton, Ohio 43452. (Be sure to specify which pamphlet you want.)

Teen drivers crash more than older motorists

Teenage drivers are three times more likely to be involved in a traffic accident compared to motorists ages 45-54, according to a recent study conducted by the Michigan Association of Insurance Companies (MAIC).

Statistics in the report also indicate that young driver crashes tend to be more deadly.

"About 22 percent of drivers aged 15 to 19 are involved in a traffic accident each year," said Terry Buckles, president of MAIC. "By comparison, only 7 percent of 45 to 54-year-olds are involved in a roadway crash."

Drivers aged 20 to 24 have a lower accident rate than do teenagers — 15 percent annually — but are still more crash-prone than older motorists. The rate of accident involvement declines gradually with age.

Buckles also noted that 15- to 24-year-old drivers have a greater involvement in fatal accidents than do all other age groups.

"This is the reason younger motorists pay higher premiums for car insurance," Buckles said. "They have more accidents and more costly accidents. The higher price is a reflection of higher insurance paid out."

A younger person who is the principal driver of a motor vehicle typically pays 40 to 200 percent more for coverage than older drivers, according to the MAIC report. This surcharge is reduced as the driver grows older and is generally discontinued by insurance companies at or before age 25.

Premium surcharges are generally much lower for young drivers who use the family car only on an occasional basis. These typically range from 20 percent for 24-year-olds to 90 percent for 16-year-olds, but vary from one insurance company to another.

The insurance spokesman offered the following suggestions for controlling the cost of auto insurance:

- Drive less — rates are determined by the amount and type of driving you do.

- Select your car carefully — rates are based on its cost, repairability and performance characteristics.

- Coordinate personal injury protection coverage if you have other accident and health insurance.

- Choose higher deductibles on collision and comprehensive coverages.

- Consider a more economical type of collision insurance — but make sure you understand when you are covered and when you're not.

- If you have an older car, consider dropping both collision and comprehensive coverage.

- Drive carefully. Most traffic tickets and at-fault accidents will automatically increase your rates.

- Ask about special discounts. Most companies offer rate discounts for safety belt usage, anti-theft devices and insuring two or more vehicles under the same policy.

MAIC is a non-profit organization which sponsors a number of consumer information and education programs, including driver safety presentations in Michigan high schools.

Check your brake I.Q.

Brakes are the most critical safety system on a vehicle. After tires they are the leading vehicle defect found in highway accidents.

How much do you know about the brakes on your car? Here's a multiple choice quiz by the Car Care Council that offers a few pointers on the subject.

Score yourself as follows: 5 correct, excellent; 4 correct, good; 3 correct, passing; below this, brush up on your car care.

I. If your car pulls to the left when brakes are applied:

a) Your left front tire may be underinflated;

b) Your right front brake isn't functioning properly;

c) Your left front wheel bearing may be failing;

d) All of the above.

II. When brakes squeal you should:

a) Replace all pads and linings;

b) Have the rotors resurfaced;

c) Ignore the noise, it's normal;

d) Have a mechanic check it out;

e) All of the above.

III. Brake fluid in the master cylinder reservoir should be checked and replenished as needed. When doing so, use:

a) Whatever good brake fluid you may have in your garage;

b) A good brand of brake fluid that meets Department of Transportation specifications, as recommended in your owner's manual;

c) Any quality grade of 20 weight motor oil;

d) Any or all of the above.

IV. A complete brake system overhaul should include:

a) Rebuilding or replacement of hydraulic components on all four wheels;

b) Replacement of all linings and pads;

c) Repacking of wheel bearings;

d) Realignment of front wheels;

e) And/or all of the above.

V. Most brake linings and pads now are made of:

a) Steel wool-like strands in heat resistant resin binder;

b) High-friction, heat resistant asbestos fiber;

c) Ceramic based friction material;

d) Any or all of the above.

Answers to Brake Quiz:

I. (D) is correct.

II. (D) is correct, although inspection may disclose that one or more of the other answers also applies. Brake squeal is common, sometimes indicating the need for corrective measures.

III. (B) is correct. Always use brake fluid from a freshly opened container; use only, the specified grade of fluid.

IV. (A, B and C) are correct. Other replacement parts may include hydraulic lines, springs and various hardware parts and fluid (which should be replaced as part of a system overhaul).

V. (A) is correct. Asbestos, now considered a hazardous material, no longer is used in brake lining.

S & L bailout shouldn't affect new homebuyers Concerned that the savings and loan bailout means bad news for homebuyers hunting for a mortgage? "Don't be," says Thomas R. Youngblood, president of the Grosse Pointe Board of Realtors. "If you can afford the down payment and interest rates, you should have no trouble qualifying for a loan.

"You do, however, need to educate yourself about lenders, the business of lending, and your options and responsibilities. Begin by meeting with a professional — a real estate agent who is not representing a specific lender, but rather one who will provide a list of reliable lenders and suggest other possible sources for a mortgage.

"In addition, brush up on your mortgage terminology. The more knowledgeable you are before you meet with potential lenders, the better you'll be able to evaluate their mortgage packages."

Local savings and loans head the list of common sources for a mortgage. Commercial banks are another option.

"Shop around," advises Youngblood. "Begin with one which you are most familiar — possibly a previous lender — and ask lots of questions. Once you have a feel for the different types of mortgages, you'll be more confident asking questions elsewhere."

Mortgage bankers or brokers are another route many homebuyers choose.

"They are in touch with many mortgage sources, and often can get better loan terms and rates," Youngblood says. "A fee may be charged for this service. Again, remember to shop around. Lenders are in the business of selling loans. Don't be afraid to negotiate with them on rate and terms or ask for a tailor-made mortgage to meet your specific needs."

Youngblood urges buyers not to overlook less traditional sources of financing.

"These include life insurance companies, credit unions, pension funds, foundation/endowment money, friends, rela-

Sons building Park home as gift to parents

By Linda Parker
Special Writer

It seemed like the logical thing to do.

In 1987, after receiving his bachelor of arts degree in architecture from the University of Detroit, Vasilios Simopoulos decided to design and help build a home in Grosse Pointe Park for his father, Fotios, and his mother, Vasiliki.

"They worked hard to put me through school," Simopoulos said. "This is the least I could do for them."

Working hard is nothing new for Fotios and Vasiliki Simopoulos. They came to America 18 years ago from Greece and have lived in the Grosse Pointes for 16 years, working hard to provide opportunities for their two sons.

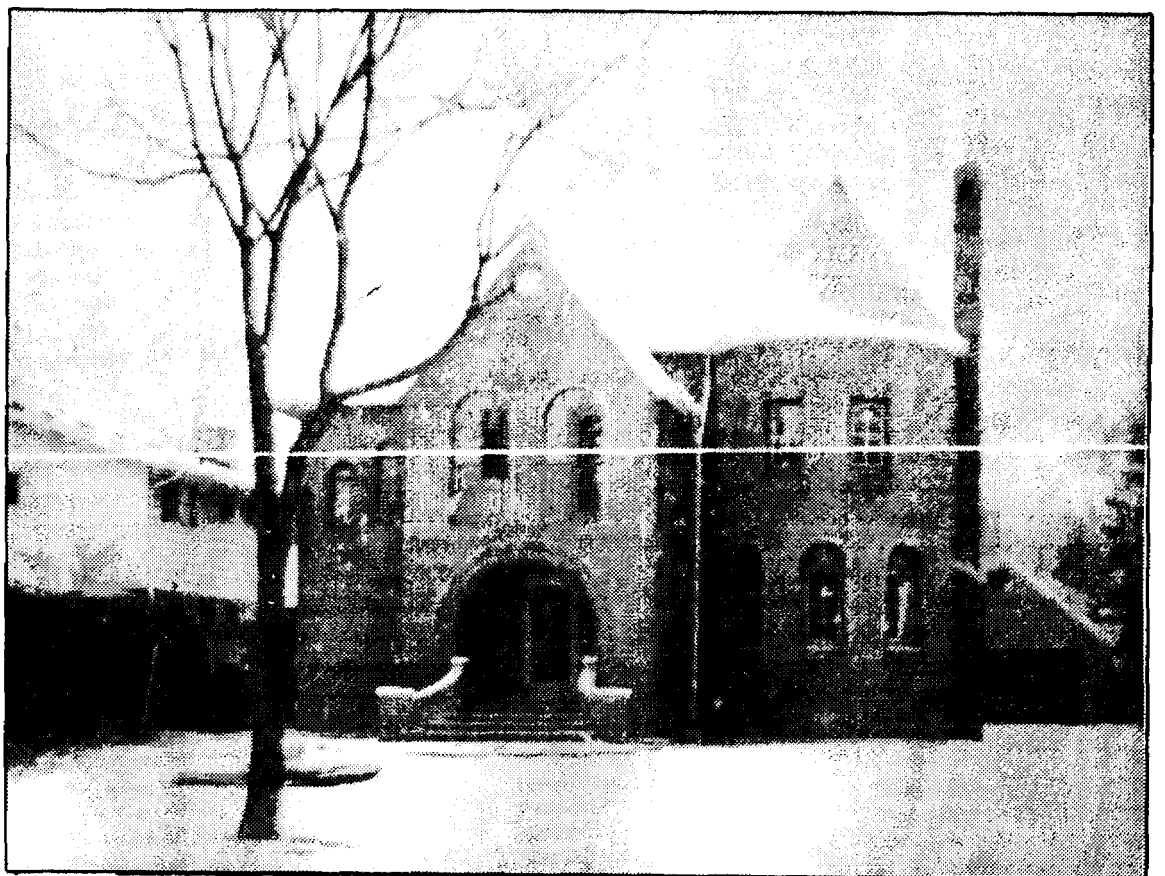

When the Simopouloses decided to move in 1987, Vasilios told them of his plan. He said he would design the house and help with the construction. His parents agreed and purchased a 60-by-275-foot lot on Three Mile. Vasilios began drafting the blueprints. While the 30-year-old Vasilios is responsible for the unique design of the two-story brick house with French-style turrets, the entire family has been involved in the construction.

An excavator was hired to dig the foundation. "After that, we have hired no one," Fotios said.

Nearly every day, Fotios leaves his full-time job and drives to the new house to lend his 20 years of building experience to the project. Vasilios' brother, Nick, 24, a sophomore at the University of Michigan's dental school, helps out on weekends.

"Even my mom comes over and helps cleaning and clearing things away," Vasilios said.

The three men have been building the 2,800-square-foot home since October 1987 and hope to complete the project this summer.

Along with installing 3-by-3 footings, twice the size for a normal house, the Simopoulos family laid extra thick, 2-by-12 floor joists and used 2-by-6 boards for the exterior walls instead of the normal 2 by 4s.

The concrete balconies that are on three sides of the house are enhanced with iron railings which were specially designed by Vasilios.

The exterior brick work, which took four months to complete, adorns both the house and the two-car garage. "Probably 35,000 bricks have passed through my hands," Vasilios Simopoulos said.

With the exterior complete, the Simopoulos family is currently concentrating on the interior.

Even though the drywall has not been installed — only the wall frames are up — it is not difficult to envision the spectacular result of the Simopoulos family's hard work.

The living room has a 14-foot-high ceiling with a winding staircase at one end and French doors off the dining room and the other end.

The family room is engulfed in windows and has a natural fireplace. The kitchen will include a work island with a laundry room off it.

Wetzel said he installed the washer and dryer in the basement but I felt the first floor laundry would be more convenient for my mother," Vasilios said.

Asked how the neighbors felt about the construction, Vasilios said, "Bob and Mary (who live next door) are great. They even plow the driveway when it snows. And Mr. Murphy (a neighbor from across the street) comes over and joins the effort by cleaning and clearing things away. We really are lucky."

The Simopouloses have come a long way since leaving Greece. They will soon be living in a home that was built with love and hard work by their two sons.

The young architect stepped over a pile of boards and picked up his screwdriver. But before returning to work, he paused and said, "I just want to be as good a provider as my parents have been to us."

Vasilios, who will soon complete his master's degree, plans to get a job with a local architectural firm.

After earning a bachelor's degree in architecture, Vasilios Simopoulos decided to build a home in Grosse Pointe Park for his father, Fotios, and his mother, Vasiliki.

The Edgcombe is a spacious split level home for those looking for more than the usual, to build on a sloping lot.

Skylights accent the variances in roof level, as well as giving natural illumination to the elegant sheltered entry. The whole design of the home makes generous use of windows, both for setting mood, and to allow as much light and view as possible to fill the home even on cloudy days.

A good view is again a consideration in planning the levels. The bedroom wing is on the main level, but the living areas are a few steps up for a better vantage point.

The large living room gains additional visual space, since the dining room is separated from it by a half-wall, rather than being a completely separate room. Both rooms have full walls of windows. Floor to ceiling bookshelves and a built-in wood box flank a masonry fireplace.

Extra working space and a corner sink with a view make the U-shaped kitchen more than just a convenient place to prepare meals. Neither full-scale canning in the fall, nor extensive entertaining would tax this kitchen. An added feature is the attractive nook for sunny breakfasts. Space is allowed here for a 5-foot-long built-in china closet.

Added storage space is evident throughout the home. The hallway on the main level holds another bookshelf section, linen closet, and a closet for guest use. An indoor utility opens to the bedroom hall, as well as serving as a mud-room entrance from the back yard. No tracking through the whole house when the kids decide to play inside. It is adjacent to a spacious bathroom, compartmentalized for comfortable-sized bedrooms.

The master suite is an elegant and private getaway for the homeowners. Corner window seats create an atmosphere for peaceful daydreaming, reading or talking, within the extensive overall area included in the master suite. Extending the luxury is an elegant dressing area — with long vanity and walk-in closet — and a private bath that contains a second vanity, commode and a shower large enough to share.

The lower level of the Edgcombe features a two-car garage and a large party or game room with its own entrance and access to a patio for summer entertaining. There is a half-bath, closet and plenty of space for a pool table, the electric train set, or even a home office or guest room.

For a study kit of the Edgcombe (108-03), send $5 to Today's Home, P.O. Box 2832-T Eugene, Ore. 97402. (Specify plan name and number when ordering.)

Wildlife poster available

"Michigan Forests — A Heritage Worth Discovering" is the theme of this year's wildlife poster produced annually by the Department of Natural Resources as part of its Natural Heritage Program.

The poster portrays a mature hardwood forest and many of the animals and plants which are part of that natural community. It was painted by Gijsbert van Frankenhuyzen, art director of the Michigan Natural Resources Magazine.

"This full color poster captures the essence of the beauty and richness of Michigan's forests," said Director David Hales of the DNR. "The painting and the narrative on the back present the historical development of Michigan forests and the important role forests have played in the development of our state."

The 1991 poster is the third in a series produced by the DNR Natural Heritage Program which features Michigan natural communities. Wetlands was the 1988 theme and coastal sand dunes were featured in 1989. All have been popular with educators who have used the posters in the classroom.

The production of posters is made possible through citizen contributions to the Nongame Wildlife Fund "next to the loon" on the Michigan income tax form.

These contributions support critically important work on Michigan's endangered plants and animals and nongame wildlife including forest species depicted in the poster — such as the red-shouldered hawk, pileated woodpecker, wood turtle, great trillium and dozens more.

Copies of the poster may be obtained by sending a letter to Poster, DNR Information Services Center, Box 30028, Dept. NR, Department of Natural Resources, Lansing, Mich. 48909.

tives and even seller financing," he says. "Your real estate agent or mortgage banker or broker should be able to provide you with additional information on these alternatives. In addition, your real estate agent may be helpful as a third-party point of view when it comes time to evaluate your choices.

"Once you've decided on a direction to go, be prepared to supply the usual documents and personal financial records. Before you arrange a meeting with your chosen lender, ask what you need to bring. This will save time.

"Make sure you are clear on all aspects of the mortgage before signing the paper work. If you have questions or problems, talk with professionals — your lawyer, tax adviser and real estate agent. Don't go it alone."
