

Now hear this! Talking paper debuts in Persian Gulf

By Donna Walker
Staff Writer

An organization that tape-records the Grosse Pointe News for the visually impaired has joined the Grosse Pointe War Memorial's effort to send care packages to soldiers overseas.

Since Operation Desert Shield began last August, the War Memorial has been sending care packages to U.S. military personnel from the Pointes who are stationed in the Persian Gulf.

In addition to toiletries and items from local residents, the care packages have usually included a copy of the Grosse Pointe News.

However, after speaking with the U.S. Defense Logistics Agency (DLA) last week, the War Memorial thought it might have to stop sending the newspaper.

The DLA asked the War Memorial to refrain from sending packages that weigh more than 12 ounces until further notice.

"They (the DLA) said the weight restriction was voluntary, not mandatory, but they indicated that packages that weigh more than 12 ounces would be held up for a while, and that lighter packages, such as letters, would be delivered a lot sooner," said Teri Hearn of the War Memorial.

Because the Grosse Pointe News weighs about 10.5 ounces and would take up most of a package's allotted weight, the War Memorial decided it would have to quit sending the newspaper unless another solution could be found.

One idea was to have someone record the newspaper on lightweight audio cassette tapes.

That's where the Detroit Institute of Ophthalmology's (DIO) volunteer arm, Friends of Vision, entered the picture.

Besides sponsoring support groups, operating a gift shop filled with vision aids and conducting public education events, Friends of Vision has been taping editions of the Grosse Pointe News for the past 10 years.

When they heard about the War Memorial's problem, they gladly agreed to help, said Susan Gillet of Grosse Pointe Park, chairwoman of the "talking newspaper" project.

"We're so happy to do it. It's such a small thing to do, and we're really proud of our men and women in the Middle East," said Gillet.

Besides making tapes for its 30 regular clients in the Pointes, St. Clair Shores, Harper Woods and Detroit, Friends of Vision started making copies for the care packages last week.

As of this writing, the War Memorial knows of 30 residents or former residents of the Pointes who are serving in the Persian Gulf.

"We're so glad that we were able to work something out, because the guys say they love getting the Grosse Pointe News," said Hearn.

Gillet said that five volunteer readers take turns recording the newspaper on a 90-

Starting young

You're never too young to learn the responsibilities of democracy. Lyndsey Briggs brought young Philip, 1 1/2, with her to vote at Brownell School Monday morning. One question was on the ballot: yes or no on the library bond issue. Philip wouldn't say how he voted. The turnout was slow but steady. At 10:40 a.m., 450 Farms residents had cast their votes at Brownell, the proposed site of the new library.

Library bond defeated

By Ronald J. Bernas
Staff Writer

The book on a proposed new central library was closed with a resounding thud by Grosse Pointe residents on Monday. School board trustees and school officials sat in the boardroom long after it was clear the voters had turned down the proposed bond issue, waiting only for a final score.

The tally was 5,682 no votes to 3,955 yes votes. Approximately 22 percent of the voters went to the polls.

Residents were asked to approve a $7.6 million bond issue to fund a new library on the grounds of Brownell Middle School. The plan had been discussed for nearly two years and more than $191,000 in study costs and architectural fees was spent on two proposals to expand library space.

School officials were understandably disappointed. "The community has spoken," board president Carl D. Anderson said. "There are no plans as to where we go now. The community simply doesn't want a new library."

"Apparently we didn't convince the community of the need for a new library," said board trustee Jane Nutter. "People are obviously pleased with the mediocrity they have."

Trustee Jon Gandelot once said the most important thing he wanted to achieve during his tenure on the school board was to get a new library built.

"You can't blame the economy, or the war or anything else," he said. "It's clear that the community didn't want it. There was no organized opposition, but they took 60 percent of the vote. That shows that they just didn't perceive the need."

Trustee Gloria Konsler was upset that in telephone campaigning by Citizens for a New Library, nearly 5,000 people said they would vote yes on the proposal.

"Whether they didn't vote or voted no instead, I don't know, but that hurts," she said.

Superintendent Ed Shine said that while he's disappointed with the turnout, he's not second-guessing the campaign effort on behalf of the library.

"We did everything that we thought was important to do," he said. "We gave all the facts to the people, but the people just don't wish to have a new facility."

"But we still have 7,500 kids in our school system and we have to try to serve their needs. The board has other issues to address."

Library Director Charles Hanson said it's going to be business as usual now.

"We ran a strong information case, we gave out all the facts, I don't know what we should have done differently," he said.

The library services will remain the same, despite suggestions from residents that the space problems could be solved if the library stopped loaning out videotapes, compact discs and tools.

John Bruce, who headed the Committee for a New Library, said that despite the obvious public sentiment that a new library is unnecessary, the space problem exists and will continue to exist.

"The case for a new library is very clear," he said. "We're wrestling with taxes and other tough issues which Grosse Pointe is going to face again. And it's going to be harder next time."

He praised the hundreds of people who volunteered to work in the campaign and donated money to the cause.

"The board has other issues to discuss and to address," Anderson said. "We should start addressing them now."

Pointer of Interest Sharon Fromm

By Donna Walker

A little boy named P.J. set Farms resident Sharon Fromm on the path she's been following for the past 10 years. At the end of that shadowy, winding trail she hopes cures for leukemia and other childhood cancers will be found.

Sharon Fromm

Fromm, 40, has been president of Leukemia, Research, Life, Inc. for the past two years, and is also one of its charter members. The group was founded 10 years ago to raise money for research into childhood cancer cures at Children's Hospital of Michigan in Detroit.

Fromm said her devotion to the cause started when she met P.J. Dragan about 11 years ago.

She and her husband, Richard (the nephew of Grosse Pointe Farms Mayor Joseph Fromm) were living in Detroit at the time, and 5-year-old P.J. lived next door, with his parents, Paul and Sharon, and his big sister, Kristin.

"He was our buddy. He was a special little guy," Fromm remembered.

P.J. had leukemia, and sometimes the Fromms would go with him and his parents to Children's Hospital, where P.J. received treatment for the disease.

He died in 1983 at the age of 8.

"When P.J. was going to the (cancer) clinics, his parents and friends and other people at the

Pointes' population falls below 50,000

By John Minnis
Assistant Editor

The population of the five Grosse Pointes fell below 50,000 during the decade of the '80s, according to the 1990 census.

But a May 1990 poll conducted by the Grosse Pointe school district puts the Pointes' population at 50,871 — 3.2 percent higher than the 1990 census count.

The last time the Pointes' population was below 50,000, according to census figures, was in 1950, when 39,149 residents were counted. The peak decennial census for the Pointes was in 1970 when 58,708 residents were recorded.

Since 1970, the Pointes have experienced a two-decade decline in population due to a drop in the number of children per household and an aging population.

The figures released by the U.S. Census Bureau last week put the Pointes' population at 49,300 — a 5.4 percent drop from the 1980 census total of 52,099, and a 16 percent decrease since the 1970 census.

During the last decade, all the Pointes lost population. Grosse Pointe Woods' population dropped the most, 6.2 percent; followed by the Park, 5.7 percent; the Shores, 5.3 percent; the Farms, 4.35 percent; and the City, 3.7 percent.

The population figures from the 1990 census for each of the Pointes are: City, 5,681; Farms, 10,092; Park, 12,857; Shores, 2,955; and Woods, 17,715.

The latest census figures are up slightly from the preliminary figures released by the Census Bureau in August. Cities were then given the opportunity to challenge the census figures.

Through a block-by-block count, Park officials were able to get 226 individuals added to the census total, according to City Manager Dale Krajniak.

The Woods' population was increased by 47 people over the initial count; the Farms count increased by 41; the City added 18; and the Shores increased by seven.

Chester Petersen, Woods city administrator/clerk, said his city contested the Census Bureau's initial counts in August and presented the school district's sur-

Towel-wielding man holds up video store

Time Out Video on Mack in Grosse Pointe Woods was robbed Jan. 30 by a man wielding a towel, which may have been hiding a gun.

The man entered the store at 10:30 a.m., looked around awhile and handed a store employee a note that said, "This is a holdup. Give me all your money," according to police reports.

The man's right hand, which was pointed at the store employee, was wrapped in a beige towel. No gun was seen.

The employee handed the suspect money and was told to wait a few minutes before calling police.

Flasher reported in Detroit

Two 13-year-old girls on their way to St. Clare school at 8 a.m. Jan. 30 were accosted by a man in Detroit, according to police.

The man attracted the girls' attention and then exposed himself. He is described as black, and he wore a blue skull cap. His car is described as an older model with red or rust colored front fenders and light blue rear quarter panels. Part of the car may have been covered with newspaper as if the vehicle were being prepared for painting.

Corrections will be printed on this page every week. If there is an error of fact in any story, call the newsroom at 882-0294.

The front page story last week on the proposed library project should have said that 4 mills on a home with an SEV of $100,000 would amount to $40 a year. And it should have clarified that a resident in the same home is currently paying $125 a year in library taxes.

Let there be peace

Our Lady Star of the Sea School joined other Catholic schools across the country Thursday in a prayer for peace. All Catholic schools were asked to pray together at 2 p.m. EST for a quick solution to the Persian Gulf crisis. The students — both elementary and high school — held hands in a series of circles and were led in prayer by Sister Jane Herb, principal of the high school, before they sang "Let There Be Peace on Earth."

How to locate vital records

In this age of bureaucratic documentation, everyone has need of copies of records of birth, death, marriage or divorce. An application for benefits from the Veterans Administration or Social Security, a passport or marriage license requires not only the information in the records but usually copies of the records themselves.

All these records are stored permanently by municipalities, counties, states and the federal government.

The Consumer Education Research Center, a national non-profit consumer group, found there was little uniformity on where the records were available and the costs. In some states, birth records are kept by the city and in others by the county or state.

To further complicate matters, often older records are held in different places than current ones. In addition, the addresses where the records are kept are changed quite often.

The consumer group found many people had difficulty locating the records they needed. Often, it was necessary to make expensive long distance calls just to find out where to write, what information was required and how much money to send.

For that reason CERC has been publishing a book, "Where to Write for Vital Records," which contains a state-by-state listing of the addresses and telephone numbers of the archive where each record can be found, the cost of a copy of the document and sample form letters containing all the information needed to get these and other vital documents.

CERC has just released an updated edition. For those needing information from foreign countries, the book contains a list of government offices where you can get help in locating vital records kept in almost every country. Even U.S. citizens born overseas, on a ship or aircraft, can locate the place where their records are kept.

The organization found that many people have used previous editions to locate their family trees or roots. For those, the book includes information on the Family History Library of the Mormon Church. This library contains over 200,000 volumes of family history records and a list of almost a quarter-million people who are willing to share information to help you find your family roots.

To get a copy, send $6.50 to Consumer Center-Documents, 350 Scotland Road, Orange, N.J. 07050 or call 800-872-0121 with credit card.

Foundation for Academic Enrichment still seeks recognition

By Ronald J. Bernas
Staff Writer

Even after 20 years of funding special programs, speakers and events for local schoolchildren, the Grosse Pointe Foundation for Academic Enrichment is still having a recognition problem.

Marge Nixon, president of the foundation, said the problem is as old as the group.

In October 1971, the group was incorporated. Its first funds were donations to the Joanne P. Bokram Foundation, an organization founded to honor Bokram whose volunteer work to the community and the schools in particular continued until she died.

The memorial foundation was aimed at helping enrich the school's curriculum with events the schools could not afford.

They started with less than $6,000. Over the years contributions were given to the foundation to honor teachers or retiring staff members.

With the aid of only one major fundraising project in the group's history, the budget today stands at $56,000. The funds are invested conservatively, and approximately $3,500 to $4,000 is given out in amounts of less than $500 each year.

The 1986 board game Grosse Pointopoly, which was a big seller, still continues to sell a few each year. The game is out of print and fewer than 100 copies are unsold.

The foundation is looking to hold another fundraiser, Nixon Resident, police are commended

A Grosse Pointe Park resident received a police commendation for his action leading to the arrest of a burglary suspect last year.

The award was given in conjunction with the annual police commendations presented last week.

Mayor Palmer Heenan and Richard J. Caretti, public safety director, presented the commendation to resident Jerry Brown at the Jan. 28 City Council meeting.

Caretti explained that Brown became suspicious of a man he saw near his home Sept. 7 around 9:30 p.m. Brown followed the man while a family member called police. Thanks to Brown's information, police found the man hiding in a parked car. Fingerprints linked him to burglaries in the area.

"Too often people observe something and don't get involved," Caretti said.

Also, Park public safety personnel were recognized for special achievement in 1990.

Those who received Department Commendation(s) were Lt. David Hiller (3), Lt. John Schulte, Sgt. Walter Paton, Sgt. James Smith (3), Sgt. Mark Maple, Sgt. James Armbruster (2), Cpl. Martin Buss and Public Safety Officers John Viviano, John Sauber, David Loch (2), Leo Deraedt, Craig Schwartz (3), Christopher Flanagan, Jeffrey Milke, Michael Najm (2) and dispatcher Carol Otto.

Public safety officers receiving a Director's Letter were Paul Konefke (2), Viviano, Schwartz and Ann Hoffman.

said, but at this point is not sure what form it will take.

The money the board of trustees doles out is to be used for specific things, but the rules bend depending on the project.

Equipment is not purchased with foundation grants, but it has, in some cases. The money is to be divided as evenly as possible between the schools, but unless a school asks for money, it won't get it, Nixon said.

Many times the money is used to bring in an author who then shuttles around to all the schools, or the foundation is one of several organizations sponsoring a program.

"Basically what it all boils down to is which teachers are being innovative enough to try to use the foundation," she said.

Recently the foundation gave funds for a pantomime workshop in all classes at Barnard Center, a native American storyteller at Pierce Middle School, the Grosse Pointe South High School radio telescope, a presentation about Abraham Lincoln at Richard Elementary School by noted Lincoln expert Dr. Weldon Petz and donated funds to bring psychologist/author Dr. Bruce Baldwin to Grosse Pointe to talk about his book "Beyond the Cornucopia Kids: How to Raise Healthy Achieving Children."

"We generally give money to programs that enhance or enrich the curriculum of the school," Nixon said. "The schools have money for enrichment in their budgets, but many times that's earmarked for something else."

The 22-member board of trustees is made up of school employees, parents and others interested in the school system. Its offices are at Barnes Elementary School, but it is run independently of the school district.

But the group wants to do more, Nixon said, but no one knows it exists.

"We sent folders around to all the schools a couple of years ago telling the teachers who we are and what we do, and then the folders got lost," she said. "We have board members talk to the staff at their schools, but they forget about us."

And just as potential recipients forget about the foundation, so do those who might be able to donate to the group, Nixon said.

The foundation has created a 15-minute slide presentation of its history and what is available through it, but not many organizations have asked to see it.

"But if the state funding goes like it is," Nixon said, discussing the recent cutbacks, "maybe more people will turn to us." For more information on the

at 20090 Morningside Drive, Grosse Pointe Woods, Mich. 48236.

Lincoln historian Dr. Weldon Petz recently spoke to third, fourth and fifth grade students at Richard Elementary School. Funds for the talk were provided by the Grosse Pointe Foundation for Academic Enrichment and the school's P.T.O. Petz discussed Lincoln's life using artifacts, many of which belonged to Lincoln. It was one of several curriculum enrichment activities the foundation sponsors throughout the district.

Charlevoix business district in Park set for improvements

By John Minnis
Assistant Editor

The Charlevoix business district will get much-needed improvements this year through Grosse Pointe Park's Tax Incentive Finance Authority.

"That area sure needs it," said Park Mayor Palmer Heenan, "and I think it will be a terrific improvement."

TIFA President James O'Dell Jr. said the improvements, which will be done without cost to the city, are part of the ongoing projects in the TIFA district.

"Charlevoix has always been the forgotten street," he said. "Right now it's in need of substantial improvement."

He said he hopes the planned streetscape improvements will bring Charlevoix back to life as they did the Jefferson and Kercheval business districts.

The Charlevoix improvements, from Wayburn at the city's border to Beaconsfield, will include interlocking-brick sidewalks; mature, canopy-type trees with steel grates; landscaping; attractive fencing to screen parking lots; and Colonial-style lampposts similar to those on Lakeshore in Grosse Pointe Shores.

The streetscape improvements have been designed by architect

Jeff Graham, owner of Designtec, a Park-based company.

He said the city's property from the curb to the storefronts is only 10 feet, so the improvements would be more limited than those done on Mack Avenue. He said the trees will be protected by grates instead of planters, because the planters take up a lot of space.

Because of space limitations, the Charlevoix streetscape improvements will be less costly than those on Mack.

Graham said business and property owners along Charlevoix will be encouraged to participate in the program through their own facade improvements, such as new awnings.

"We hope to get some financial incentives to them to help this program," Graham said.

O'Dell said there are loan subsidies available through the TIFA to help commercial property owners in the TIFA district with exterior remodeling.

He did not have a cost estimate for the Charlevoix project, which is being put out for bids.

Another TIFA project to be completed this summer will be streetscape improvements on Mack between Maryland and Lakepointe — the last of five blocks between the city border and Somerset to be upgraded.

O'Dell said he didn't know if the entire Charlevoix project would be completed this year due to cost, but he expects to make substantial progress.

"I'd like to start at the city border and proceed from there," he said.

consfield to the east.

TIFA projects are funded by capturing increases in property taxes realized by rising property values in the TIFA district. Theoretically, a TIFA district reinvests the captured taxes in its area, thereby raising the value of properties and bringing in additional revenue.

The Northwest TIFA district was created in 1986 as a four-year plan, and later it was upgraded to a 15-year life span. An estimated $7.1 million is expected to be raised during the life of the TIFA district.

Besides the streetscape improvements, TIFA funding assists in pedestrian lighting along residential streets, public and private parking improvements, facade and landscaping services and housing rehabilitation.

The state no longer allows TIFA districts to be created.

Artists at Designtec, an architectural firm in Grosse Pointe Park, provide an illustration of what the corner of Charlevoix and Maryland will look like when the streetscape improvements have been made along the Charlevoix business district in the Park. Also shown are business facade improvements, such as awnings, which the property owners are being encouraged to undertake.

Hospitals plan conference

A day-long conference on "Understanding and Managing the Violent Patient" will be held on Friday, Feb. 22, at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial. The conference is sponsored by Cottage Hospital's Mental Health Services, and features James R. Creps, M.D., division head of the Department of Psychiatry at Henry Ford Hospital, West Bloomfield Center. Cottage Hospital is an affiliate of Henry Ford Health System.

The conference is designed to help those working in situations where they might be confronted with violent persons. The information could apply to those working in the mental health field, as well as social workers, therapists and other hospital personnel, public safety officers and school employees.

The program objectives are to facilitate the identification of potentially violent individuals, review precipitating factors which cause their violent reactions and help in the understanding of violence and its management.

The conference begins with registration at 8:30 a.m. and continues until 3 p.m. A luncheon and break snacks are included in the fee of $35 per person.

To register, call 884-1177.

Visit

The Rehab Department at Cottage Hospital received a special visitor recently when former Detroit Tiger and Grosse Pointe resident Kirk Gibson stopped in to visit John Hertel. The youngster has been undergoing therapy after suffering severe injuries in a car accident in October. Gibson presented Hertel with an autographed baseball bat. With them is Jill Mott, occupational therapist.

Camp counselor class offered

The Interlochen Arts Camp is recruiting young men and women for the Counselor-In-Training (CIT) Program from mid-June through mid-August.

Applicants must be 17 or older and have an interest in recreational counseling.

CITs take part in various workshops, field trips and training sessions that includes Red Cross certification in first aid, CPR and advanced lifesaving.

The program is free and provides room and board for participants. In addition, CITs attend free concerts and recitals presented by Interlochen Arts Camp students, faculty and staff.

Upon completion of the program, CITs earn a certificate of merit.

More than 1,300 students from around the world travel to Interlochen Arts Camp in the summer to develop their artistic skills in music, art, dance and theater. They also enjoy Northern Michigan's camping, water sports and other outdoor activities. Junior division campers, 8-11 years old, and Intermediates, 12-14, need caring counselors to provide structure, guidance and support. CITs gain experience working with 200 counselors who supervise the camp students.

Poor timing, big obstacles doom library

As residents of the Grosse Pointe School District went to the polls Monday, the major question was whether a determined band of supporters of a new library could overcome the obstacles that faced the $7.6 million project.

As Superintendent Edward Shine had pointed out, there is no "right time" for an election of this nature but the unfortunate timing of this vote no doubt contributed to its stinging defeat, 5,682 to 3,955. Just look at the many obstacles that stood in the way of a victory for the proposed library expansion:

Less than a month earlier, the nation had begun a war in the Persian Gulf; a recession was spreading throughout the United States; public services were being sharply cut back by a new economy-minded GOP governor, and serious concern was being expressed even in the Pointes about the continuing rise in property taxes.

As we were often reminded during the campaign, the library proposal would have required an estimated nine-tenths of a mill increase in the library tax to finance the 20-year bond and to pay for expanded operations once the building was completed.

To make matters even worse for the library proposal, assessment increases on residential property ranging from 9 percent to 12.42 percent this year had just been reported last week for all the Pointe municipalities.

Finally, with a national tax revolt still raging, the library issue gave Pointers the chance to vote against a tax increase, an opportunity that never occurs at the federal level and not very often at the state level.

In short, the proposal lost because there were just too many obstacles for the school system and the library's determined band of supporters to overcome, despite their well-organized campaign to seek public approval.

So where do we go from here?

Nobody really knows yet but it is unlikely that the library issue will come before the voters again in the near future after the voters have rejected two ballot efforts in the last four years.

However, there was talk, even before the election, that a study should be made into the advantages of an independent library separate from the school system. Under recent changes in Michigan law, the conversion to an independent one apparently would not be too difficult.

Those who favor such a conversion feel that the major advantage would be the election of a library board whose major interest would be centered on the library. That comment is not made as a criticism of the school board's efforts on behalf of a new library but it recognizes that the school board's highest priority must be the public school system.

As we see it, a possible disadvantage is that an independent library would require a new organization and a new bureaucracy that might cost taxpayers more than the current system under which the school board and the superintendent supervise library operations.

In our view, the community still needs the expanded space and services that would have been provided under the plan defeated at the polls last Monday. And some day, perhaps in better times, we think an expansion will come.

Whether the next vote will be part of a conversion to an independent library or another test of the community's willingness to support an expanded library operated by the school system, those of us who support expansion hope that the timing will be better when the Pointes vote on the issue again.

Population slide no big deal

What is the meaning of the further decline in the population of the Pointes which in the 1990 census dipped under 50,000 for the first time since 1950 and counted only 49,300 residents?

That figure represents a loss of 2,799 from the 1980 census total of 52,099, and a further decline from the 1970 census that gave the Pointes their all-time peak population of 58,708.

For one thing, the decline will cost the municipalities small amounts of state and federal funds although the Pointe governments are not as concerned about the dip in population as Detroit and other large cities that rely more heavily on governmental aid.

In fact, we think most Pointers will regard the new population figures as further evidence of a community stability that contributes to the excellent quality of life here. In short, the decline is no big deal.

Unlike expanding communities, the Pointes do not suffer from growing pains caused by construction projects and the extension of streets, power lines and water and sewer services that are required by new developments.

But what has caused the decline in population?

Several factors are responsible but the most important is the decline in the birth rate and the size of the average family. That has cut the public school enrollment almost in half in recent years.

Another possible effect of the decline in population of the five municipalities that comprise the Pointes might be revival of proposals for consolidation of the Pointe governments, or further consolidation of public services.

However, the proposal for one Pointe government that has been raised a number of times by the Grosse Pointe News and by several survey studies has not received much support in the past.

The reason? Chiefly that residents like the current municipal arrangements and tend to agree with the maxim, "If it ain't broke, don't fix it," when the merger issue is raised in the Pointes.

So, on a practical basis we see little possibility of immediate changes for the Pointes as a result of the small population drop reported by the census. The Pointes may have a few drawbacks but to most residents it's still an excellent community in which to own a home, raise a family and enjoy a fine quality of life.

A View from the sidelines

by Wilbur Elston

For many of us senior citizens, the outbreak of war in the Persian Gulf that marks the start of the fifth major U.S. war in our lifetime prompts recollections about the effects of the other four.

Each major war has left its impact on the United States. In addition to the terrible human losses, there are economic, social, political, cultural and other effects that are felt for years afterward.

The war in the Persian Gulf promises to be no different. Losses of loved ones are already being reported in Michigan and elsewhere and with a ground war about to begin in earnest, there will be many more casualties.

But the Gulf war is already having other

Take a bow!

Mr. and Mrs. John Q. Public of the state of Michigan deserve most of the credit for the surprising defeat of the proposed pay raise for elected state officials last week.

It is generally agreed that the people of Michigan spoke with almost one voice on the issue. They communicated their views by telephone and direct mail to state legislators and by letters to the editors of the state's newspapers.

The result?

The state Senate unanimously voted against the proposed raises that would have benefited the legislators themselves as well as the governor, lieutenant governor, Supreme Court justices and 600 other judges. The state House voted no, too, with only three members supporting the hike.

Legislators and some state officials may need a pay hike — but not at a time when state employees are being laid off, state services are being slashed, including those for the needy, and the state is in a recession.

Take a bow, citizens!

effects. Just last week Alan Greenspan, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, warned that the nation could face a long and deep recession if the war lasts more than three months.

As for World War I, the first we seniors knew, it cost 53,500 battle dead and 320,700 total casualties. That war presumably had ended the nation's isolation from world affairs but it took a second World War to make us a world power.

World War I also laid the seeds of the great depression. It began with American agriculture. When wartime demands for food stimulated the farm economy and the federal government urged farmers to "plow to the fence for defense," farmers put 40 million new acres into production.

In 1920, the bubble burst. Farm prices skidded and American agriculture dipped into a major depression that foreshadowed the national economic debacle of 1929.

Between the two world wars, the myth that the munition makers were responsible for war took root. At the University of Minnesota, a hotbed of isolationism when I was a student there in the early 1930s, one rally even approved an amended Oxford pledge saying students would fight only in defense of their country.

In 1941, as editor of the Worthington Daily Globe, I helped produce an "extra" to report the news of the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor on Dec. 7, the "day of infamy" that took us into World War II.

Isolationism died that day and even Oxford pledgers volunteered. But reports soon began to roll in of the deaths of relatives and friends. And shortages, rationing, travel restrictions and other wartime limitations plagued the home front.

In Washington, D.C., on special assignment for the Minneapolis Star and Tribune in the summer of 1945, just after V-E Day, I wrote background stories about the use of the first atomic bombs that persuaded Japan to surrender that August.

World War II cost this country more than 292,000 battle deaths and more than a million casualties all told, but afterward the nation proved it had ended its isolation by stationing troops in Germany and Japan. Some are still there.

The war's end set off a huge burst of economic activity in the United States. As the troops returned, manufacturers of civilian products pushed output to fill the pent-up demand and fueled an era of prosperity.

The war also began the liberation of American women who not only had served in the armed forces but as production line Rosie the Riveter replacements for the men who had gone to fight. After the war, they stepped up their fight for equality and independence — and 27,000 of them are serving in the Gulf.

A new war in Korea briefly delayed my departure for a new assignment in Washington in 1950 but when I arrived in late July, nobody knew how extensive the UN action would become. Many feared, in fact, it might be the start of World War III.

It wasn't, of course. It did threaten to become one when the UN command found itself facing not only the North Koreans but the Communist Chinese who feared their borders were threatened.

Following early U.S. and UN successes, and later setbacks, the war wound down in stalemate. Cease-fire talks began in 1951 but the fighting dragged on until July 1953. That undeclared war cost the United States 33,600 battle deaths and 157,500 casualties — and we still have forces stationed in South Korea.

As a Detroit News editorial writer, I supported the Vietnam War after President Kennedy began sending military advisers to Saigon in 1962. I had interviewed President Ngo Dinh Diem of South Vietnam in Saigon in 1956 and had been impressed with his efforts to obtain U.S. investments to bolster his flagging economy.

But Diem turned out to be a weak reed. Eventually, as U.S. president after U.S. president failed to win the war, I came to agree with most Americans that we were unlikely to win without the support of a majority of the South Vietnamese.

With the war intensifying, college students and other war protesters staged violent demonstrations as the number of U.S. troops in the front lines rose and casualties mounted.

Withdrawal of U.S. forces began in 1969 after they had peaked at 543,000 but the last U.S. combat troops did not leave until August 1972. U.S. forces reported 47,000 battle deaths and 211,000 casualties in all.

The anti-war sentiments expressed in those Vietnam years are being revived today. Once again, Americans are divided. Most people have rallied behind the president but others oppose the use of force, the ground war or any U.S. participation.

Even some supporters of the war complain that the United States is carrying the heaviest load under the UN banner, both in fighting forces and financial burdens, despite allied pledges of support.

Those who raise this issue question neither the purpose of the war effort nor the contributions of young Americans whose blood is draining away in the desert sands. But in my view it is fair to question the substance of the support from some allies, notably Germany and Japan, our World War II enemies.

In fact, if a "new world order" is to be successful, some of the foot-dragging nations will have to guarantee more support in the field and at the bank for any future collective security action. Otherwise, they will risk seeing a U.S. retreat into a new isolationism.

Radio Days

I know why it's called heavy metal. It sounds like an overloaded trash truck rumbling down a cobblestone street as bits of metal rattle and bounce, clatter to the ground and roll into the gutter. I steer clear of heavy metal music whenever possible. However — when two generations travel together in a car — who gets to choose the radio station? My kids call them channels. You can guess how they spent their formative years. When they were toddlers, I strapped them firmly into their little molded car seats and I picked the channel. They listened, gurgled, chattered, sang along, slept. I also dressed the little critters in a variety of maize and blue sweatshirts, hats, mittens and T-shirts featuring the University of Michigan logo. (My alma mater.) They were thrilled. Before long, they learned to change channels. Soon in-car channel hopping was a favorite pastime, along with noisy debates about which channel was best. For years, the standard, time-worn solution worked: "If you kids don't stop fighting, I'm gonna turn the radio off." Then: "If you kids don't stop fighting, I'm gonna turn the radio off and I'm gonna pull over to the side of the road and spank you." Then I decided that the selection of an appropriate radio station should be the driver's prerogative. The operator of the vehicle is, after all, a notch above mere riders in the hierarchy of car occupants. The driver needs to be coddled, catered to, comforted. She needs all the help she can get to keep her concentration on the rigors of driving. I need to be surrounded with the witty patter of WQRS-FM and soothed by the precision of Bach, the brilliance of Mozart, the romantic excesses of Tchaikovsky. I need WDET-FM with its comprehensive, in-depth examination of international news, its insightful interviews and its well-rounded intelligent assessments of what was happening when, where and why. I occasionally need to slip down the dial for some golden oldies and top 40s stuff. But it should be my choice. I am the driver. The driver, I decided, should also have the final say on volume. She should be assigned a generous portion of any snacks or drinks being consumed en route. If it's sunny, and there's only one pair of sunglasses, she gets 'em. She should also get to choose the position of the front seat; the opening and closing of windows and sunroof; the levels of hot and cold air; their direction and intensity. I was powerful. For years, I was golden. But I think I've backed myself into a corner.

I Say

Margie Reins Smith

Recently, Daughter No. 3 got her driver's permit. All three daughters now drive. Daughter No. 1 even has her own car. When Daughter No. 1 broke with family tradition to attend Michigan State University, the first thing she did was send me a Michigan State sweatshirt. She said she had been forced to wear maize and blue for 18 years and now I owed her. I had to wear MSU duds for 18 years, in return. So here I am, riding shotgun, wearing a green and white sweatshirt with Sparty on the front, listening to Twisted Sister, squinting into the sunset, sharing my diet Coke with the driver. Help. I'm being driven and I can't get away.

Nature lurks in unexpected places

Call it perverse. I've been trying to think of a more flattering light to put it in, but there just isn't another word for it. And I can't shake it.

Nancy Parmenter

It's a routine: I select a well-known leisure spot, then spend my vacation ranting at the traffic and tourists. It becomes an ongoing challenge to find the unfrequented places, the beaches that don't appeal to anyone else, the stores where other people don't shop, the streets they don't travel.

It can be done. But it ain't easy — and I want full credit for my success. After all, anyone can vacation off the beaten path — it takes a near-genius to find the road less taken in the midst of a madding crowd.

Not that I am wholly unappreciative of civilization. One of the wonderments of this place is a nearby lode of cheap clothes, where last year I bought four garments for $30, and this year, the same number for $60. Prices do go up, but this is still in the realm of what even I consider reasonable.

The real irony is that what I am really looking for is nature. Yeah, in Florida. I told you I was perverse.

At first glance, Florida is full of nature, especially of the botanical kind. My journal entries for the first couple of years were of Eden revisited. Oleander, bougainvillea, gardenias, 70 kinds of palm trees.

Then it dawned on me that 69 kinds of palm and many of the flowering shrubs were Caribbean, not native, and were planted (along with the dread, water-guzzling, non-native monoculture, grass) by well-meaning Florida transplants and yuppie developers.

Now, as in Arizona, there's a push to plant native species. They're better adapted to the climate and — important point in south Florida — they don't need much water.

So, eventually, the organized flowering of Florida may be supplanted by a different, more natural, lushness, with more spiky palmetto and cabbage palm. Nature is making a comeback.

Animal-type nature is having a tougher time. Along the coasts, perhaps more than anywhere else, we humans have so disrupted nature that by now it needs our manipulations and protection to survive at all.

The manatee is a shining example. It needs warm water (going into hypothermia below 60 degrees). Around here, warm as it seems, the water is too cold for the manatees during the winter. But they've discovered power plant warm-water discharges and congregate there in cold spells.

One of our favorite outings is to drive up the deserted coast (construction is at a halt pending installation of sewer plants), spend some time strolling along the jetty watching the fishermen and the begging birds, then drive across the causeway to the power plant.

Manatees are a little hard to count since they bob up only for a quick breath, then sink for five minutes in the murky water, but we figured 25 the last time we were there.

Big noses, little noses, barnacled backs, backs scarred by boat propellers. Their calm, round eyes seem to gaze up through the water at the humans lining the shore.

For a bit more excitement, we drive down the coast to canoe the Loxahatchee at the 10,000-plus-acre Dickinson State Park. This is billed as Florida's last wild river.

"Wild" down here doesn't mean rapids and waterfalls, as are usually implied in northern wild rivers. It means slow-moving "black" water, lined with marshes and jungle. And it means birds.

Kingfishers, cormorants, pileated woodpeckers, osprey. We've seen osprey on nest, osprey hunting for fish, osprey perched high above the water struggling to eat a fish as long as the bird itself. Osprey mating, osprey chasing crows away from the nest tree. It's osprey heaven.

Last week we spent a morning there. Paddling silently up a tributary, we passed through a jungle of palm and cypress, with scarcely a boundary between the river and the shore. It was a vast swamp with a river pathway.

As we rounded a bend, Bob whispered from the rear of the canoe, "Holy cats, that's a big one!"

I looked up in the tree for more osprey, which we had been watching. Nothing.

"Over there," he whispered. My gaze traveled to the left, to a glistening log on the bank. And as I stared, the log turned into an alligator. A 12-foot alligator, only a boat's length away.

Everybody knows Florida has alligators. Golf courses have warning signs, for crying out loud. But meeting one in a canoe is a whole lot different from sighting one on a golf course. We were impressed.

Frequent letter-writer John Conley has managed to find me in my island fastness. He and his wife, Marguerite, are also down here in Shangri-La, about 80 miles south, in the Fort Lauderdale area.

Conley writes of his fondness for certain press alternatives, "a good antidote to the big press and to lethargic journalists, against whom you seem to be taking aim." (That in reference to a recent column on pack journalism.)

Well, to my dismay, those CBS journalists who have been missing for a week along the Kuwaiti border, were trying to break away from the pack. Frus-

Social Security numbers for dependents required

This year, taxpayers who do not provide a Social Security number on the federal income tax return for dependents age 2 and over may have the exemption automatically disallowed, according to the Internal Revenue Service. Taxpayers may also be fined $50 for each number not shown on the return.

The 1986 tax reform act required Social Security numbers for dependents age 5 and over. In 1989, the requirement changed to age 2 and over. Next year, the requirement will apply to all dependents age 1 and over.

To be issued a Social Security number, a person must have proof of the following items: age, U.S. citizenship or legal alien status, and identity.

A birth record from a public authority, hospital, or religious organization is generally sufficient for the first two items, and a school record or certain other documents can be used for proof of identity.

For more information, taxpayers should contact the Social Security Administration toll-free at 1-800-234-5772, or visit any Social Security office for Form SS-5, Application for a Social Security Number Card, and for the free leaflet, "Applying for a Social Security Number."

Mis-delivery

To the Editor:

Why is the frequency of mail mis-delivery so high in Grosse Pointe? Having lived previously in several other parts of the country where mis-delivery of mail occurred usually less than once a month, I now note that at least one-third of mail delivered to my home is not for me. Mis-delivered mail falls into two classes:

1. Mail for the previous owners.

2. Mail for the same number, wrong street; wrong number, right street; similar name, Detroit address and zip.

I have even received mis-delivered mail whose address contains the four-digit sub code. Naturally, I wonder if mail addressed to me is mis-delivered as well.

Is there a possibility that the recently installed electronic mail sorters do not work properly? Or is it possible that the postal facility servicing this area (and others nearby?) handles too great a volume of mail to assure accurate sorting and delivery?

The mail does go through, but where it goes through to seems to be of minimal concern in this area.

Hoping

To the Editor:

We have been watching the news and learning about the war. We have been learning about the words used on TV and in the newspaper. We have learned what casualties mean. We have been talking about all the soldiers who have been captured and we hope no more will be captured.

We all care about the men who are over there and hope they come back alive. Hopefully, Iraq will give up.

Is it news?

To the Editor:

I read with great interest your "Questions but no answers" Jan. 17 piece in the Grosse Pointe News. The issue it raises is one which has been bothering me.

Right now, network television news coverage of the war is no less than spectacular. Certainly it deserves the highest praise.

At the same time, the local stations seem never to miss an opportunity to opt for pure sensationalism. How often are we asked to agonize our way through the typical TV interview with the wife or mother of a young man who has just left for Saudi Arabia? Seemingly unmindful of how emotionally charged the situation is, the interviewer barges right in with... "And tell us how you felt when you learned that Charlie would be going to the front?"

We are treated repeatedly to this kind of stupidity, or unfeeling sensationalism, in the coverage of both run-of-the-mill news and war-related stories. No regard for the dignity of the person being interviewed. Just let the tears flow. It makes for great TV!

As your article asks in the opening sentence, "What is news and when does it cease being newsworthy and become an invasion of privacy?"

This kind of "news" coverage, so often seen on television, and occasionally in the print media, colors public opinion. A talented writer or even a seasoned TV cameraman can do his job in such a way as to editorialize without ever being suspected of it. Unfortunately, the ineptitude of a careless TV interviewer sometimes produces the same result. Besides being in very bad taste, this kind of journalism can be dangerous in time of war simply by implying the wrong thing.

Being a journalist, your apparent purpose in the article was to call attention to the same thing which has been concerning me, but you didn't want to land too hard on your fellow laborers in the journalism vineyard. Not having your reasons for restraint, I would give run-of-the-mill television reporting, particularly that coming from local stations, the low grade it deserves — not only for its maudlin approach in sensitive situations, but for its general failure to live up to the standards of good journalism.

Thank you

To the Editor:

I am writing to say thank you to you and the readers of your paper for the many, many letters and cards sent to our local young people serving in the armed forces.

A special thank you is from our son, Tech. Sgt. John F. Kujat, United States Air Force Reserves in the Persian Gulf area. John appreciates, as we do, the weekly paper sent to him by the War Memorial and the many, many letters and cards sent to him by your readers.

Peace vigils

To the Editor:

We invite the citizens of Grosse Pointe to join us in launching a nationwide campaign to protest war in the Mideast through a series of nighttime vigils utilizing the theme "A Thousand Points of Light for Peace."

Since George Bush campaigned using a similar slogan, it would help both to capture the attention of our leaders and the imagination of the public.

We suggest Americans hold vigils once a week to gather momentum and to give others time to join. Participants would hold candles or other lights, gathering in a visible place. We hold our vigils on the village green in front of the public library. Some Manchester residents participate by placing a light in the window of a dark room facing the street.

This theme can be incorporated into any protest action already under way or being planned. Across the nation small community groups will show the degree to which grassroots Americans are unified in opposition to the war.

If a group does incorporate this theme into its activities, we would appreciate a postcard sent to us.

Not in fear

To the Editor:

Saddam Hussein has said that he will cripple our nation with fear. Are we, the American public, the greatest nation on Earth, going to allow a mad dictator this satisfaction? I say no!

We will live cautiously but not in fear. We will go about our daily lives normally. We will keep our economy alive by continuing to spend in a healthy fashion. We will travel, we will attend events. We will not be intimidated. And we will support our troops by making sure that they come home to a thriving economy, not a nation weakened by fear and in the throes of recession.

Wonderful day

To the Editor:

What a wonderful day we had Wednesday, Jan. 23. The Friends of the Grosse Pointe Public Library celebrated "Join the Friends" month and National Book Week during the Great Grosse Pointe Read Aloud. Thirty-five local celebrities came to Central Library and read from favorite childhood stories during half-hour time periods. Many warm memories were made for all of us.

Our sincere gratitude goes to the readers and volunteer hosts from the community and library staff. We would also like to recognize the many hours of thought and hard work of Sally Giacobbe, Kate Callas and Gerda Bielitz. Our appreciation goes to Dick Cooper who photographed so many special moments.

Also, my thanks to Don Sweeney and Charles Hanson who helped me invite the readers. And, of course, thank you to the students and teachers of Richard School, Grosse Pointe Christian Day School and St. Paul's and to all the residents who came to listen.

We have had so many positive comments we just may do it again next year. If so, we will invite everyone in the community to join us for the second Great Grosse Pointe Read Aloud.

Special thanks

To the Editor:

Our son is one of the hundreds of thousands of men and women currently serving in Operation Desert Storm. Since he represents all those in the military service, and we represent all those who wait at home, we prefer to remain nameless, faceless.

We last spoke with our son on New Year's Day. He told us that he would not be able to write or contact us for a very long time. He asked, "Mom, would you please thank everyone in Grosse Pointe for all their great support?" ... and he specifically mentioned the Grosse Pointe War Memorial and the children at Monteith School. He said that he was receiving cards, letters and packages from people he didn't even know, and that there was no way he could ever thank all of them personally.

For our son, and for the other men and women of Desert Storm, we add a special note of gratitude to all those who fly the American flag and exhibit other visible signs of support for our troops. As parents of those in the military, the sight of the American flag is a special and heartwarming comfort. We also thank you for your phone calls of support, for your constant expressions of concern and, certainly, for your prayers.

May God bless all the precious men and women who are serving our country in the military, and may God bless all of you who give all of us the very special gift of your support and your love. Name withheld by request

Correction

To the Editor:

Thank you for printing my letter regarding my opposition to the proposed library in the Jan. 31 issue of the Grosse Pointe News.

However, I would like to point out your error in printing the relative real estate taxes of other midwestern cities. I had indicated that our real estate taxes are 384 percent greater than those in Minneapolis, not 38 percent as you had indicated in your printing of my letter. Not an insignificant difference!

In Mr. Keith Meintjes' story, he indicated that library revenues had increased from $924,238 in 1980 to $2,097,702 in 1989. Your printing indicated that this was a 12 percent increase during this period. In fact, it was a 127 percent increase! Again, not an insignificant difference. In view of your pro-library position, one has to question if these were simple typographical errors.

I realize this will be printed after the library vote has already been taken, but I believe the correct information should be shared with all voters. We can only hope that no other misstatements or omissions of pertinent information have been presented by the pro-library supporters.

It would have been so much fairer if an endorsement page could have also been devoted to the Grosse Pointers who are not in favor of building a new library, to properly reflect the level of opposition to this matter.

I have always heard that the Grosse Pointe News was very biased, and in this library issue, I would certainly have to agree. Objective reporting certainly did not prevail this time.

Michael McShea
Grosse Pointe Farms

Editor's note: The writer is correct regarding the percentages. Both errors occurred in the editing process in which proofreading marks to indicate that the percent sign in the original letter should be spelled out obliterated the number next to the percent sign.

The writer's reference to an endorsement page in the second from last paragraph refers to a full-page ad paid for by Citizens for a New Library.

Incorrect

To the Editor:

The purpose of your newspaper is, as I understand it, service to the Grosse Pointe communities. Generally, you seem to achieve this purpose.

However, your page 1 article on the library vote in the Jan. 31 edition was a disservice to those in the community trying to weigh the pros and cons of this election. The statement that the current cost of school millage "amounts to $125 per year for a home with an SEV of $100,000" is misinformation or disinformation. The actual tax burden in that instance is $3,031.

Unfortunately, any correction that could be printed would come after the vote. If the community is to rely on the information you print, we must be assured of its accuracy, especially in a matter as important as this.

Thomas W. Ricard
Grosse Pointe Park

Editor's note: The writer is correct. The story should have stated that $125 is for operation of the libraries only.

Letters to the Editor

The Grosse Pointe News welcomes letters to the editor from readers. Letters should be signed with a name, address and telephone number at which the writer can be reached during the day in case there are questions.

Address letters to: Editor, Grosse Pointe News, 96 Kercheval, Grosse Pointe Farms, Mich. 48236.

Elves come in all sizes

Good people bring warm feelings with kind deeds born of love. Could I pack a little more emotion into that statement? It's just that I heard a nice story the other day and it's good to reflect on thoughtful gestures in "times that try men's souls."

While inquiring about the well-being of an elderly neighbor, it was once again revealed to me that elves do live, that there need be no generation gap; love transcends all ages.

The neighbor is a woman in her late 90s. She has led an active life, raising four children, and has experienced fulfillment. For the past few years she has been confined to the second floor of her home, coming downstairs on rare occasions to participate in family celebrations. Her home is warm and inviting with photographs of loved ones on table tops. A favorite room is the beautifully paneled library where most of her waking hours were once spent.

On Christmas Eve, two of my neighbor's grandchildren sneaked into her home bearing a large, live Christmas tree and various roping and garlands. The young man and woman, in their early 20s, spent the next few hours trimming the tree and hanging greenery throughout the downstairs. The elves' final act was to hang stockings for the invited guests for the following day. The contents of the stockings were not randomly picked, but thoughtfully chosen to satisfy the individual tastes of the intended receivers.

When the grandmother was carried downstairs for Christmas dinner, she was not the only one surprised by the transformation of her home. All of her four children were present, as well as other family members. No one had been in on the secret and all were delighted and proud.

After initiating the traditional blessing from her chair at the head of the table, the grandmother requested that each person at the table join with a personal declaration of thanksgiving.

The caring thoughtfulness of two young adults opened the doors for an especially meaningful and loving family memory for all involved.

Seems as though they found the perfect gift!

(The grandmother, about whom this was written, died last week.)

Former resident promotes public TV as a tool to educate

By Pat Paholsky
Editor

A 16th floor apartment in Manhattan surrounded by millions of city lights and a view of the Empire State Building is a long way from growing up in Grosse Pointe near the lake and walking to St. Clare Elementary School.

But it's a natural progression for Harry Chancey Jr. who keeps expanding his horizons and his interests — natural because at heart he's an educator.

Chancey, senior vice president and director of Broadcast Center, WNET, in New York, recently visited his parents, Dorothy and Harry Chancey Sr. The family home on Grand Marais, where he and his sister and four brothers grew up, is for sale. His mother's knee operations have made it difficult for her to get up and down the stairs.

But the family gathering was festive, with all the members coming in for the opening Jan. 25 of his sister's art exhibition at the Center for Creative Studies. It was also a chance for him to meet the newest member of the family, nephew Christopher.

With increasing responsibilities at the TV station and a new role as an innkeeper, Chancey said it gets harder to get together with his family. But he has a deal with his parents — he visits them once a year and they reciprocate, ensuring they meet at least every six months.

After graduating from the eighth grade at St. Clare, the young Chancey entered a Catholic seminary to become a priest. "At the end of my junior year, I realized I was not cut out to be a priest," he said.

He enrolled at Michigan State University and earned a multi-disciplinary bachelor's degree in English, philosophy and sociology and then a master's in education. Chancey was active in the sweeping sociological changes — women's rights, civil rights, the war in Vietnam — of the late '60s and early '70s.

"I was a part of all of those through the institutional channels as opposed to on the street," he said. "I always felt my role would be to work within the structures. It was a big, big part of my development and it had a lot to do with my own role in society.

"I've always been finding out what box I'm in and then getting into a bigger box."

It was natural, therefore, to go to Europe for a couple of years where, he said, "I wrote and wrote and wrote — with very little success." He lived in Paris and Italy and taught English to French children.

Chancey accepted a teaching position at a community college in Connecticut, which offered not only the traditional classes, but courses in video journalism, a developing industry.

The college offered an extension course to inmates of a nearby maximum security prison which Chancey said he "signed up for right away."

"The eagerness to learn inside prison walls is unparalleled," he said. "There was a hunger to learn. It was absolutely exhilarating."

The classroom was getting "a bit tight," he said and he got a job in public TV in New York City in the education division.

"My first job was jumping in a rent-a-car with a slide projector and briefcase and going to schools in New Jersey and New York to get teachers involved in using educational TV," he said. "I was, in essence, a traveling salesman for public TV."

As soon as there was an opening in the production part of the business, Chancey applied and got the job, learning all phases of production from the ground up.

"I always felt and feel very strongly today that TV in itself is nothing without a good educational background," he said. "All of those (technical) parts can be

Bringing up roses

"Plan Your Rose Garden," is a new class to be offered by the Department of Community Education at Barnes School, 20090 Morningside Drive, at 10 a.m. on Saturday, Feb. 23.

John Stephens, a Grosse Pointe rosarian, will use slides, charts, drawings and the latest rose literature to help you grow beautiful roses.

"February is the perfect month to plan next summer's rose garden. Location, design, and planting techniques for rose beds will be presented along with a discussion of rose classifications and rose varieties suitable for our Michigan climate," Stephens said.

The fee is $7. Call 343-2178 for information.

quickly learned, but if you don't bring a wealth of knowledge, it's nothing."

Young people looking for jobs in the industry who can operate a camera or the sound equipment don't impress him as much as the applicant's background in English, he said.

His responsibilities today include program scheduling, acquisitions, operations and the production of station-break material at Broadcast Center. He also develops local programs, series and special events.

He talked about "Live Wire," his newest public affairs program: "It's a very unconventional program. We break certain conventions. In my generation, we didn't discuss sex, politics or religion at the dinner table."

"Live Wire" does just that "at 6:30 every night," he said. No topic is taboo and the program is hosted by a different person every night. The response so far has been favorable, he said, and the TV critics have given it a thumbs-up.

"Public TV has a mandate to represent American society, not just white and not just black. The bottom line perhaps is to say that tolerance is a value in and of itself," he said.

During his career with WNET, Chancey was nominated for the first national news and public affairs Emmy Award for his 1986 production, "AIDS: Profile of an Epidemic," hosted by Edward Asner. He won an Emmy in 1981 for "Musing" with Tom Hoving, and the Cine Golden Eagle Award in 1987 for "Red Shoes."

While public TV consumes his work week, he spends his weekends as an innkeeper of a bed and breakfast in East Hampton. This new role, he said, was "a fluke."

He and a partner were buying and renovating homes for investment. Their fifth house, a derelict, vacant structure that had been used as a dormitory and had been on the market for awhile, turned out to be the charm.

"We stripped it and underneath was this graceful, elegant Victorian house," he said. In their renovation, they discovered the builder had signed and dated the house — April 22, 1876 — and they decided to name it the Centennial House.

It has six bedrooms with 6-1/2 marble baths, a parlor with a bay window and a grand piano, a large dining room and a fireplace in the kitchen. There is also a three-bedroom cottage with a pool nearby on the 1-1/2 acre property. With the help of friends and some propitious yard sales, the business partners restored and filled the house with antiques.

The bed and breakfast caters to the carriage trade and has hosted a number of distinguished guests, Chancey said.

His passion is gardening, which he attributes to his father. "I have an English garden going right now, and we're only in our third year. There are trellised arbors, berms built on the grounds, a rose garden and an herb garden."

Chancey doesn't have any long-range goals for the future — "I've never been very good with five-year plans" — but he knows that education will be the thread that continues throughout his life. He is concerned with the alarmingly high number of children at risk within the American education system. "It concerns me that critical thinking is not valued, not fostered in the classroom," he said.

"Broadcasting is a part of education."

Family history to be explored

This winter the Department of Community Education will offer five classes and activities for those interested in researching their family history. Learn the sources of procedures of genealogy, the second most popular hobby after stamp collecting.

The first of these, "Genealogy — An Introduction," will be at 7:30 p.m. on Thursday, Feb. 7 at Barnes School, 20090 Morningside Drive in Grosse Pointe Woods.

In addition to the two sessions conducted by Mary Lou Duncan, president of the Detroit Genealogical Society, members of the group will visit the Burton Historical Collection of the Detroit Public Library. Fee for the class is $12.

The second activity in the series, "Lineage Research Workshop," co-sponsored with the Elizabeth Cass Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution, will be held from 12:30 to 4:30 p.m. on Saturday, Feb. 23 in the Exhibition Room of Grosse Pointe Central Library, 11 Kercheval, Grosse Pointe Farms. Special assistance will be available from DAR members to help with specific genealogical problems. Those interested may attend free of charge.

John Hammel will present a single-session class, "Oral History," at 7 p.m. on Thursday, Feb. 28 at Barnes School. "The history of your family, business or organization can be saved by recording the personal memories of those who participated," he said. The fee is $7.

The fourth activity in the genealogical series is "Family Lore," and will be presented by Barbara R. Thompson at 7:30 p.m. on Thursday, March 14 at Barnes School. "Inclusion of your family's unique traditions and all those ingredients of 'family lore' will add interest, heart and soul to your genealogy," Thompson said. The fee is $8.

The fifth class in the series provided by the department is "Selective Membership Societies," and will be conducted by Boyce Tope at Barnes School at 7:30 p.m. on Thursday, March 21.

Prior registration is urged. Call 343-2178 for more information.

was one of two co-winners of the Sears-Roebuck Foundation Teaching Excellence and Campus Leadership Award in January. Sax began his career at Madonna as a part-time instructor in 1984 and by 1985 was a full-time member of the communication arts department. He is now the academic chairperson for that department which encompasses the English, journalism, and speech and foreign language programs. He is charged with recruiting faculty and promoting excellence

Local blood council still active after 40-plus years

By Donna Walker
Staff Writer

Ask members of the Grosse Pointe Community Blood Council when their next blood drive is, and they'll quickly answer Feb. 21 at the War Memorial, from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m.

Ask them how the blood council began, however, and things get a little fuzzy.

The Grosse Pointe Community Blood Council consists of 24 Grosse Pointe-area churches, Grosse Pointe Public Schools and Jacobson's, said Esther Riske of Detroit, the council's blood drive coordinator.

The council has held four blood drives a year since 1948, as near as Riske or the council's president, Harriet Kamm, or its corresponding secretary, Rosanna Culp, can recall.

"We don't have records from back then, but I found an old church newsletter that said Mrs. Duall Martin conceived the idea for a blood council in 1948," Kamm said.

Martin, who lives in Grosse Pointe Park, said she can't remember starting the group, but that she wouldn't be surprised if she did. She explained that she was a nurse and that her late husband was a doctor, and that she was involved in many service projects.

"I always had the feeling of helping persons who couldn't help themselves," Martin said.

Riske, who has represented her church on the Blood Council since 1951, said three churches belonged to the council at that time — Grosse Pointe Congregational (now Grosse Pointe United) Grace Evangelical and Reformed Church of Christ (now Grace United Church of Christ) and Grosse Pointe Methodist Church.

The reason the churches got together, she said, was because the American Red Cross blood bank operated like a real bank — on a debit and credit system.

"If you needed blood, you would go through your church. Churches held blood drives for the Red Cross, and if you needed blood, the Red Cross would look at its record and see how much your church had collected, and you would be able to use that much, free of charge. Otherwise, you'd have to pay for it," Riske said.

In order to have a larger deposit from which to make withdrawals, churches in the area decided to pool their resources under the auspices of the Grosse Pointe Community Blood Council. The churches would take turns hosting blood drives and members of all three congregations would donate.

Today, two of the Grosse Pointe Blood Council's quarterly blood drives are held at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial, and the other two are rotated among the churches.

The Southeastern Michigan Region of the American Red Cross stopped operating on a debit and credit system in 1975, said Denise Morrow, a spokeswoman for the agency.

It now operates on a "total community supply system." That

War anxiety hotline open

The crisis in the Persian Gulf has altered the lives of millions of Americans, especially those who have loved ones overseas.

For some people, their anxiety over the war may become so severe that they have a difficult time carrying on with their daily lives.

To help people deal with their anxieties, Henry Ford Health System has instituted a hotline that allows people to talk briefly with a mental health professional.

The Henry Ford Health System Gulf Crisis Hotline can be reached by calling 876-8000. The service will be staffed from 8 to 10 a.m. and 4 to 6 p.m., Monday through Friday. The hotline is manned by psychiatrists, psychologists, nurses and social workers from Henry Ford Health System.

Henry Ford Health System is also offering a new Tip Line for parents who are concerned about how the war affects children. Call the Gulf Crisis Tip Line at 876-7100, anytime, and hear a recorded message that offers advice to parents on how to help their children cope with the war.

means that residents of Wayne, Oakland, Macomb, Washtenaw and St. Clair counties will be able to receive blood whenever they need it, provided that the Southeastern Michigan Region Red Cross has some in stock.

If people in these counties do not donate blood regularly, it might not be there when they need it, according to the American Red Cross.

Ed DeWhitt, spokesman for the Southeastern Michigan Region Red Cross, said the agency must collect at least 1,000 pints a day to meet both local blood needs and any future military needs in the Persian Gulf.

So far, the agency has donated 200 units of blood to be used by the military in Operation Desert Storm. However, the Red Cross must make sure that the needs of local hospitals are met before it can send blood to the Persian Gulf, DeWhitt said.

More than 70 percent of the blood collected by the Southeastern Michigan Red Cross Blood Services comes from blood drives sponsored by businesses, churches, synagogues, unions, community groups, high schools and colleges throughout the region, according to Red Cross literature.

Bill Buciencki, regional representative of blood donor services of the Southeastern Michigan Red Cross, said that the Grosse Pointe Blood Council's blood drives are among the largest put on by community groups in southeastern Michigan. In 1990, the group collected a total of 449 units of blood in its four blood drives. That was down from 558 units in 1989. Organizers blamed bad weather for the decrease and hope for better turnouts at this year's blood drives.

"I think giving blood is the most worthwhile thing a person can do. It's lifegiving — to new mothers, the elderly, heart transplant recipients. I can't see why anyone between the ages of 17 and over 70 doesn't give blood if they are in good health," Riske said.

She said she stopped giving blood at the age of 65, because that was the cutoff age then. She is now 77.

According to American Red Cross guidelines, blood donors must be at least 17 years old, weigh 110 pounds or more, and be in good health. There is no upper age limit, but donors over the age of 71 may be required to present written permission from their personal physician within six months of a planned blood donation.

A person is not allowed to donate if he or she has given blood in the last eight weeks, has had hepatitis, has been pregnant in the last six weeks, has had tooth extractions or oral surgery in the past three days, has taken penicillin within 48 hours, has had malaria or been on antimalarial medication in the past three years, or has been exposed to AIDS or has engaged in activity that would put him or her at risk of having the virus.

People who are on high blood pressure medication can usually donate if blood pressure is normal at the time of donation, and diabetics who take medication orally may be eligible.

Walk-ins at the Grosse Pointe Community Blood Council's Feb. 21 blood drive at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial will be welcome, but appointments are encouraged.

To make an appointment, call the Southeastern Michigan Region Red Cross at 494-2798.

THESE IMPORTS ARE GOING TO BE VERY POPULAR THIS YEAR.

Three new foreign imports are sweeping people off their feet this season. They're the latest strains of influenza — A-Taiwan, B-Shanghai, and A-Yamagata.

As with any other flu, their symptoms are quite familiar. Once again, people are complaining of fever, runny nose, sore throat, and a tired, achy feeling. In most cases, these symptoms are the extent of the infection. But not always.

Left unchecked, these flu bugs may open the door to more serious, secondary problems such as pneumonia.

To help prevent this, see your family doctor now — before one of these imports takes hold. Your doctor can help prepare you with preventive measures, including a flu vaccination created for this current strain.

If you'd like a referral to a physician specializing in these treatments, call the referral line number shown here. Maybe then, these new imports won't be so popular after all.

Students learn Japanese by video in pilot program

By Ronald J. Bernas
Staff Writer

A pilot program in which students are taught via satellite has worked so well it is being expanded for next year.

The Japanese language is being taught to two Grosse Pointe North High School students by a teacher in Nebraska. It's the first program of its kind in the Grosse Pointes and is working so well it will be offered again next year along with a new class in the Russian language.

Every day at 2 p.m., Japanese I is broadcast by the Satellite Educational Resources Consortium (SERC — pronounced ser-see). It is watched by seniors Shannon Sullivan and Jim Murray under the guidance of television production teacher Jeff Hastings, who acts as the student facilitator. The entire program is under the supervision of Dr. Julie Corbett, director of television production for the schools.

"This gives us an opportunity to offer a class we could not possibly offer previously," Corbett said.

The two students were chosen from among dozens who applied. Their selection was based on academic achievement, interest in foreign language, leadership, maturity and self-motivation.

The maturity and self-motivation are very important, Hastings said, because when teenagers sit in front of a television set, they're generally not doing it to learn.

"I think people are very used to watching TV in a passive way," Hastings said. "But they can't be passive and learn what's expected of them."

The show consists of some lectures — albeit informal ones. The instructor is not much older than the students he is teaching, and he wears blue jeans. There are also skits acted out by teens. Nearly all the instruction is done in Japanese.

On Tuesdays and Thursdays the students are hooked up via a telephone conference call with other schools and a tutor who talks with the students and helps with pronunciation and other questions they may have.

Every six weeks or so, the Grosse Pointe students are guests on the show. Using the telephone, the host-instructor asks them questions to test their knowledge.

"It's good because it puts cyclical pressure on the students to keep practicing," Hastings said.

The students have minor quizzes graded by each other. More substantial exams are graded by Hastings with the scores being reported to SERC. The most important tests are sent to SERC where they are graded. The results are returned in a few weeks.

Hastings takes the classes along with the students so he can offer help. He records each broadcast and the students watch the tapes at home for more practice.

Corbett says the program has been tried with great success in the Pontiac school system and that other schools throughout the country are jumping on the bandwagon.

"This is not a way to replace teachers," Corbett said. "It is a way to offer things we're not able to offer. We still need a teacher to facilitate the running of the class. We would never use this in a large class setting, and we would never put kids in front of a television without some sort of supervision."

As Hastings says: "As advanced as these two students are, they're still teenagers."

He said the program is used extensively in rural areas where one or two advanced students can take courses like macroeconomics, probability and statistics without the district having to hire a special teacher.

The program, at $490 a student, is rather expensive, Corbett said, which is another reason it is not offered to a large group of students.

"In Pontiac, there were some teachers who felt the program may be taking jobs away," Corbett said. "But what's happened is that there was such an interest they had to hire a teacher to teach Japanese."

Corbett believes that is what will happen in the Pointes.

The students say they love it. "Japanese is a very marketable skill that will be needed in the future," Sullivan said. It will come in especially handy in the field of international relations she plans to study in college.

Murray plans to continue his Japanese studies in college, too, with a major in international law at.

"I've taken four years of French and this is a lot more relaxed, it's fun," Murray said. "It's almost total immersion on Tuesdays and Thursdays, which is helpful when learning a language."

The two students can speak with each other, and read and write in two of the three Japanese alphabets.

"It's like any first-year language," Sullivan said. "You learn the basics, but you're not very smooth yet. But it's definitely worth it."

They say it would be easy to slack off, but with Hastings, and with the teamwork that has developed between the two, it's become more than a class — it has become a rewarding experience.

Tie a yellow ribbon . . .

Grosse Pointe Shores wants everyone to know it supports the U.S. troops in Saudi Arabia. Village employees last week chipped in and bought 64 of the plastic yellow ribbons to tie on the lampposts along Lakeshore through the entire length of the Shores.

Not to be outdone where patriotism is concerned, the Shores Improvement Foundation bought a huge yellow ribbon that was fastened to the Village Hall's elevator tower. Tony Orlando would be proud.

Also, on the order of Village President Edmund M. Brady Jr., the U.S. flag was flown at half staff in memory of those already killed in Operation Desert Storm.

Arrested men apparently weren't bank robbers

Two men who were arrested by officers on Mack near Bourne-mouth Feb. 3 were apparently not the bank robbery suspects police thought they were.

At 4:14 p.m., an employee from a Mack business was going to the Comerica Bank branch at Mack and Kenmore to get change when he saw two men in a car at the bank who matched the description of suspects in the Nov. 9 and Jan. 22 robberies at the bank.

He called police from a nearby store. When officers arrived, one witness reported two men almost ran into her as she pulled into the Comerica branch's parking lot. She believed the men in the car may have been fleeing.

Officers found the suspects traveling south on Mack and pulled the car over near Bourne-mouth. Farms and Woods police officers ordered the two suspects to get out of their vehicle, and they were taken to the Woods station.

One man was wanted on Detroit warrants for felony cocaine possession and two misdemeanor drug possession charges. Both men were turned over to Detroit police pending further investigation.

The two men were apparently not involved in the two Comerica bank robberies or a third robbery that occurred Feb. 5 at First Nationwide Bank, also on Mack in the Woods.

Annual exam will guard against glaucoma

President George Bush's signature on this year's proclamation of Save Your Vision Week, March 3-9, a national event sponsored by the American and Michigan Optometric Associations. The event draws attention to the importance of vision and the need for routine eye care.

"Glaucoma is only one of many eye conditions and diseases that can be detected through annual eye examinations," said Roger R. Seelye, O.D., president of the Michigan Optometric Association. "Many non-eye, systemic diseases such as diabetes and hypertension have early warning signs that are detected during eye examinations."

Glaucoma involves an increase in the pressure of the fluid inside the eye and gradually causes damage to the optic nerve. Although glaucoma may strike at any time, it is more likely to develop after age 35 and particularly after age 60.

"Glaucoma has few warning signs," says Dr. Seelye. "When the patient begins to have problems, irreversible damage may already have occurred." For this reason, the Michigan Optometric Association recommends an annual eye examination including a measurement of the eye pressure and a thorough examination of the internal structure of the eye. The eye health portion of the optometric exam (including ing glaucoma testing) is covered by Medicare.

Like President Bush, most people who have glaucoma can control it and minimize vision loss by using eyedrops daily.

People with glaucoma also need to be monitored by their optometrists on a regular schedule. In some cases, oral medication, laser treatment or eye surgery may be needed.

Seeking help when you suspect your child is on drugs

How do you find a counselor or a therapist who can determine if your child has an alcohol or other drug problem?

If you are quite sure that chemical abuse is the problem, I would immediately look for someone who is a specialist in that field. Most adolescent treatment centers do assessments which are either free or covered by insurance. Local treatment centers are listed in the Yellow Pages. If you belong to an HMO, you may need to see one of their counselors first for a referral.

When you talk with the therapist (usually called the "intake" or "assessment" therapist), share honestly any incidents or signs of use that you have observed. It is often helpful to write down in advance all of the incidents that have aroused your suspicions, no matter how trivial they may seem when taken individually. Remember: A therapist will be looking for a pattern of behavior.

If you would like assistance in this process, sharing your concern with your child's school counselor is a logical first step. Counselors and teachers have the opportunity to observe your child in a variety of settings and over a period of time. They can let you know of any changes in behavior, attitude or performance of which you may not be aware.

Remember, when substance abuse is suspected, we are looking for a pattern of behavior, and the more pieces we have, the more likely we are to come up with the correct picture. All of our counselors and social workers in the Grosse Pointe public schools have had some training in substance abuse issues, and all communication with them is confidential and protected by law.

If you have no direct evidence of substance abuse but see enough signs of emotional or behavioral problems that you think your child needs some kind of professional help, I encourage you to trust your instincts!

Your child's difficulties may not be related to substance abuse. But when seeking help of any kind for an adolescent, these basic guidelines would reassure me that the therapist you are considering has enough of an awareness of chemical dependency to differentiate it from other kinds of psychological distress.

First, three questions the therapist should ask you during the first meeting:

1) "Do you suspect chemical use or abuse?" Alcohol or other drug involvement among youth is so pervasive today that it should at least be considered and discarded by any therapist working with adolescents. I have had several students who were chemically dependent and needed inpatient treatment whose parents have never actually seen them drunk or high. Young people are quite good at keeping from us what they don't want us to know, so any suspicion should be taken seriously.

2) "Is there a history of alcohol abuse in your family?" Since this disease often runs in families, the therapist should ask you about history of alcoholism among parents, grandparents, aunts, uncles or siblings.

3) "Will you sign a release of information so that I may speak with a school representative?" If you or the therapist suspects chemical abuse, he or she should ask you for a release of information to talk with your child's school counselor or student assistance counselor to get a picture of the whole child. You may refuse to provide such a release, of course, but the fact that the therapist asks shows an understanding of the process of putting together all of the pieces (that no one person usually has) that might lead to a more accurate diagnosis.

If the therapist asks you all three of these questions, I would already feel quite confident that he or she is knowledgeable about this subject, but I would still ask one important final question:

"Do you believe in responsible use of alcohol or other drugs for adolescents, especially those in therapy?"

Some therapists believe that some use of these drugs is normal, and that a child will spontaneously stop abusing once his or her "real" problems are identified and confronted.

I would be very wary of this philosophy. For one thing, I know of few better ways to determine how important drinking or other drug use is to someone than to suggest that he or she quit using it for the length of the therapy.

Secondly, since the purpose of therapy is to deal with emotional pain and to learn methods of overcoming it, the use of alcohol, marijuana, cocaine or other painkillers in even small amounts will interfere with progress. I have had students who either go to their therapist "high" or make plans to use a drug right after the session. For these reasons, many excellent therapists refuse to see a student for other types of therapy until his or her use of chemicals has been addressed.

One final word of caution: In order for therapy to be effective, your child will have to connect with the therapist and be willing to work on problems. But you must also be honest.

Good therapists recognize that a child is part of a family system, and they need to understand that system for real change to take place. You may be embarrassed or feel guilty or inadequate because of things you have or have not done as a parent up to this point. All parents probably experience this feeling. However, your candor and cooperation will allow the therapist to work with your child most effectively.

Honesty, combined with this opportunity to talk with someone who knows how to help, will show your child how much you love and support him or her. The rest is up to the therapist and them.

Support network to link transplant patients

The Children's Leukemia Foundation of Michigan announces the immediate availability of a Bone Marrow Transplant Partner Network for individuals facing the possibility of a bone marrow transplant as treatment for leukemia, lymphoma or other related blood disorders.

The network is open to patients throughout Michigan who want to learn about bone marrow transplantation from someone who has already undergone the procedure. The network is intended to offer support based on the sharing of personal experience by patients and/or family members of patients.

For more information, call the Children's Leukemia Foundation of Michigan at 1-800-825-2536.

Because of the highly personalized nature of this service, it may take two to three weeks to process requests. The feelings and opinions expressed will be based on the individual's own experience, and while emotionally supportive, comments will not include medical advice.

New seat belt law beginning April 1

State police officials remind drivers that the days of young children bouncing around in the front and back seats of automobiles and the front seats of pickup trucks are coming to an end.

Beginning April 1, the Michigan Department of State Police will enforce new child passenger safety legislation requiring all children, 4 to 16, to wear safety belts while riding in the back seat of all motor vehicles. Combined with existing safety belt laws, all children under 16 years of age must now be in some kind of restraint, child seat or safety belt, in either the front or back seat of a motor vehicle.

Motor vehicle crashes are the No. 1 cause of death for children under 15 in Michigan, and children ages 4 to 16 have one of the lowest safety belt use rates compared to other age groups. Crash statistics for 1989 indicate that 73 children under the age of 15 were killed in motor vehicle crashes and another 10,416 were injured.

With adoption of Public Act 90 of 1990, Michigan safety belt laws are among the strongest in the nation. Michigan is the 18th state to enhance its children passenger safety law.

'91 Chevrolet Caprice passes 36-hour ride-and-drive

The 1991 Chevrolet Caprice station wagon is big, no doubt about that. It looks about half a block long. For the young driver who has never experienced the traditional "big American car," the Caprice will be an experience. Sitting in the driver's seat, you feel you are piloting something of substance.

But I noticed that parked next to a 10-year-old Cadillac, the Cadillac's tail stuck out at least a foot beyond the Caprice. We decided to check. How much has the American car been downsized? A lot.

The '91 Chevy Caprice has a wheelbase of 115.9 inches, just one-tenth of an inch shorter than the 1975 Chevelle and Monte Carlo. The '91 Caprice wagon is 217.3 inches long overall, a couple inches longer than the intermediate '75 Chevelle wagon. The full-size '75 Chevrolet wagon had a wheelbase of 125 inches and was 228.4 inches long, almost a foot longer than the '91.

So it's not as big as it seems. But it is big enough for any reasonable purpose, big enough to transport eight people not only in comfort but in luxury. It is the biggest regular production passenger car now being built.

A friend who drove the car liked it, but said he didn't think it was as big as an intermediate-sized '75 Dodge Coronet wagon he owned when the second oil crisis hit in 1978 and gasoline prices doubled almost overnight. He remembered because the Dodge got about eight miles per gallon in the city and 11 to 12 on the highway, not unusual for heavy Detroit iron in those days.

Well, the '91 Chevrolet Caprice tips the scales at 4,354 pounds, considerably less than 4,977 for the '75 Chevrolet wagon and a bit more than the gas-guzzling '75 Dodge wagon, which was a svelte 4,285 pounds. The '91 Caprice wagon, however, is rated by the EPA at 16 miles per gallon city and 25 highway. All of which proves that cars are not only smaller now, they are much more efficient.

Introduced late last fall, the Caprice wagon, with its sisters, the Oldsmobile Custom Cruiser and Buick Roadmaster Estate Wagon, is being built at the Willow Run Assembly Plant, where the penchant for quality borders on the fanatical.

This isn't just the company line, the rhetoric of national advertising campaigns. I've experienced this quality push firsthand, right out at the plant that in its many years of service brought us, among other vehicles, the X-bodies of the late 1970s — front-drive X-cars like the Citation — that brought howls of complaints from owners and more than a measure of chagrin to plant management and workers alike.

Climbing into the new midnight-blue Caprice wagon — an awesome 79.6 inches wide, so you'll need a long arm to mail letters at the post office's curbside mailboxes — reminded me of an unusual trip north a year earlier.

It was one of the first ride-and-drives out of the Willow Run plant. In groups of three and four, Chevrolet engineers and service specialists and various support people drove brand-new 1991 Caprice sedans, plus a couple of '90 models for comparison, up to Shanty Creek one day and back to Willow Run the next.

Although several participants joked about how this beat working at their desks, the field trip was serious business and participants addressed the product with pencils sharpened. Several of us had gathered at 7 a.m. at the GM Tech Center. From there we were driven through the winter darkness across I-696 and on to Willow Run in time for coffee and rolls and a meeting, the first of several. These guys take meetings seriously, especially quality control meetings with plant management and workers.

Our assignment over the next 36 hours was to drive and give honest evaluations of some of the first Caprices to come off the line at the totally refurbished plant. Plant management wanted to know about problems before the lines were geared up for final production. Better to troubleshoot now than deal later with goofs reported by dealers and owners. No more Citations, we were told.

The weather cooperated perfectly that wet January day. This is Michigan, and we had a little bit of everything except sunshine. It was warm and foggy when we left Willow Run and headed, in a long, eerie snake of aerodynamic cars, for northbound I-75. By the time we reached the Saginaw area, it was snowing and the roads were growing slippery. Several drivers enthusiastically began testing the ABS brakes on the new Caprices. Others accelerated out of the rest areas to see how the rear-drive cars handled in the snow.

This was no bunch of hot-dogs having fun. These were some tough critics taking a hard look at the new product Chevy was soon to introduce as its full-size flagship. This car was designed to retain current Caprice owners as well as attract new buyers, particularly younger ones, people in their late 30s and 40s who would appreciate its rounded styling and luxurious full-size features and who do not now fit the Caprice buyer profile.

In fact, the average age of Caprice owners is 55 and the most common occupation is "retired." Chevrolet expects the new Caprice, especially the Caprice wagon, to attract younger (52 average) and better educated (45 percent college-educated compared with 32 percent for the sedan) buyers.

The Shanty Creek gang was hard on the new sedans. We took turns driving and evaluating, noting our observations on sheets of paper that were collected at our rather frequent rest stops.

There we were, snaking northward, holding it to a conservative 65 MPH and knocking these new cars. Rear axle noise in a couple of vehicles bothered some; others wrote volumes on wind noise; there was a bum fuel gauge in one car, and rear-seat belts were inches too short in most vehicles. These were all things that could and would be corrected, plant management said.

The line of Caprices passed through downtown Mancelona during evening rush hour and moved on toward Shanty Creek. To rest and goof off? Hardly! Several in the caravan quickly set about organizing the stacks of evaluation sheets in preparation for a report — at yet another meeting. Others talked with the plant manager and his assistant who were ride-and-drive participants.

A late night flowed into an early morning. It had snowed a couple of inches between dinner and breakfast, so we could test defrosters as well as our willingness to share a few scrapers among many in need.

The ride back to Detroit included everyone stopping at a filling station in Grayling so we could record and compare fuel economy. Most reported around 18 mpg from their 5.0-liter V-8 engines. Not too bad considering the road conditions. And certainly we provided some dinner table conversation for the startled attendant at the station.

Back in Willow Run by late afternoon — via Frankenmuth, where we had steak for lunch at one of the famous chicken eateries — we went back into a meeting that lasted until 6 p.m. Steak and meetings — pure General Motors! Our final task was to prioritize complaints about the new Caprices. Which ones were flukes? Which ones needed to be corrected immediately? How complicated were the fixes? How would they affect production?

As for the new Caprice wagon, it offers the traditional GM big-car ride. The interior is pleasant enough, with thick, upholstered seats. The front doors are enormous. Watch out for the upper edge of the door when opening and closing it. The new designs, with doors reaching up onto roofs for a more aerodynamic shape, mean there's more door to close and a greater chance of catching it in the face if you are standing beside it.

Dealers might consider giving new owners industrial-size ice scrapers as thank-you gifts. Today's windshields add to contour and visibility, but these great expanses of glass take a long time to clear of ice and snow with conventional scrapers.

The ABS brakes are very effective. You can feel them pulsing as they keep the wheels from locking in snowy road conditions. Everything works well and the car provides a very pleasant environment, although in spite of Willow Run's efforts, wind noise persists at freeway speeds.

The Caprice wagon has a base price of $17,875. The well-equipped test vehicle priced out at $20,419.

Arthritis: Determining whether replacement surgery will help

Although it is not exclusively an ailment of the elderly, older people are more apt to suffer from arthritis than those who are young. It is not entirely understood why this is the case, but we are told it is associated with the breakdown of the joints.

A joint is a movable connection between the ends of two or more bones. These ends are covered by a smooth material called artilage and are connected to each other by flexible ligaments. The joint is lined with a tissue called the synovia which produces a lubricating substance called synovial fluid. Muscles and tendons that surround and cross the joint power its movement. For the human body to have free and easy mobility, all these components must be working well.

Experts agree that arthritis

Prime Time

By Marian Trainor

breaks down the fine-tuning between bone, cartilage and muscle. Just how the arthritis process works is still not clear. But researchers do know how it affects the joints.

In osteoarthritis, the smooth cartilage covering the joint becomes rough and worn thin, so that the bones rub directly against each other, causing pain and inflammation. In rheumatoid arthritis, the synovia becomes inflamed and attacks cartilage. In either case, the joint can become stiff and painful. The arthritis sufferer then avoids moving the joint to avert the pain, which only exacerbates the condition by making the structure adjoining the joint weaker and movement increasingly difficult.

When this happens, joint replacement surgery may be necessary. However, Dr. Adolf Yates Jr., assistant professor of orthopedic surgery at Johns Hopkins, says, "The first and foremost reason — and indeed often the only reason — for joint replacement is unremitting arthritis pain that doesn't respond to medical treatment. For such cases, it will relieve pain. It very well may improve motion and flexibility, but that is a secondary gain and not, in and of itself, enough of a goal to warrant surgery."

Dr. Yates offers these symptoms to determine whether surgery is called for:

- Arthritis that doesn't respond after three to six months of conservative management with different combinations of drugs and injections. He advises that patients should not give up if they don't experience relief after the first antiarthritic drug because there are lots of different ones, and it's often hit-or-miss as to which will work on an individual patient.

- Joint pain of sufficient severity to awaken you at night.

- Joint pain that limits your walking endurance to about a block.

- Evidence of joint degeneration on X-rays. But he warns that X-ray evidence of arthritis is not by itself enough to mandate surgery. He says that pain should still be the motivating factor.

If your condition meets any of these criteria, you should talk to an orthopedic surgeon who will help you decide if you need surgery.

The surgeon will take a detailed medical history and run a number of tests to rule out other possible sources of pain, such as bursitis or arteriosclerosis. If you are overweight, you may be asked to shed some pounds since extra weight puts extra demands on the heart and lungs during surgery, as well as extra strain on the joint during recovery. You may want to allow two to four weeks before the operation to donate your own blood, since surgery usually necessitates a transfusion.

There are two types of joint implants, cemented or uncemented. Cemented implants are glued to the natural bone. Uncemented implants are covered with a porous material, onto which the natural bone eventually grows and attaches itself. Each has its advantages and disadvantages which you will want to discuss with the surgeon before you make a decision.

The real work of joint replacement starts after the surgeon is finished. Rehabilitation usually begins while you are still in the hospital. With hip, knee, or ankle replacements, you will begin to walk within several days; motion is regained more quickly after shoulder, elbow or wrist replacements.

Recovery from replacement surgery usually takes about six weeks. During this period you must follow a timetable of exercise, rest and medication.

Your reward for this investment of time, money and energy will be pain-free movement and better flexibility, which should make it all worthwhile.

minute cassette tape (45 minutes on each side).

One reader records an edition of the newspaper on side A, and then delivers the tape to another reader who records the following week's paper on side B.

The tape is then delivered to the DIO office on Lakeshore Drive in Grosse Pointe Park, where copies are made on a high-speed dubbing machine.

Local customers receive the tapes by mail, free of charge, every other Saturday.

Because they are only given 45 minutes, Friends of Vision readers leave out some articles that appear in the paper.

"We're kind of particular about what we read to our clients, because most of them are elderly. We only read things that we think they'll be interested in," said Gillet.

Things that are usually read, she said, include the front page, "Pointer of Interest," the "I Say" column and obituaries. Crime news isn't read unless it is about a scam that preys upon seniors, Gillet said.

"We're trying to vary our format now, and include things that younger people would be interested in, for the men and women in the Persian Gulf," she said.

For example, the tapes now include sports and entertainment news.

"I think our regular clients will be very patient about it (the new format) and I'm sure this is only temporary, until the weight restriction is lifted," said Gillet. "But if we have too much dissension within our ranks, we'll just get a few more ladies to come in and read and we'll put out two different editions."

When local clients are done listening to a tape, they mail it back to Friends of Vision in a postage-free, reusable envelope, so that two more editions of the newspaper can be recorded on the tape.

However, the group will not be able to recycle tapes sent to the Persian Gulf, because they are given to the soldiers to keep.

Friends of Vision buys its tapes from Motor City Animation in Troy. The cost for 100 tapes and their plastic cases is $103, Gillet said.

The War Memorial is paying for the tapes that are used in its care packages. All of the War Memorial's Operation Desert Storm projects are paid for out of its general fund, Hearn said.

The War Memorial's annual fund drive is now under way. To contribute, or for information about how to help military personnel and their families during Operation Desert Storm, call the War Memorial at 881-7511.

The DIO Friends of Vision is always looking for new volunteers. For information about volunteering or the services available through the DIO, call 824-4710.

Cookie time!

The Girl Scouts will be selling cookies March 1-24. Proceeds support a variety of programs for more than 26,000 girls in the metro Detroit area.

This year the cookies are priced at $2.50 a package and will help support the building and renovation of camp facilities for girls.

The girls will sell seven varieties of cookies in local banks, stores and supermarkets during the sale.

To order by phone, call the Michigan Metro Girl Scout Council at 964-4475.

Friends of Vision volunteers Daria Coyle, left, Pat McCaffrey and Susan Gillet, all of the Park, copy cassette tapes of the Grosse Pointe News for visually impaired residents and military personnel in the Persian Gulf.

clinics felt so frustrated," said Fromm. "When something like that happens, you want something done; you want a cure, and you feel helpless, because you don't know what you can do. So we said let's do something. Let's provide research into a cure."

Thus, with a core group of about seven couples and P.J.'s father as president, Leukemia, Research, Life, Inc. was born.

By holding a number of small fundraisers and a benefit dinner dance, the group raised $30,000 for research at Children's Hospital in its first year.

Since then, the group has grown to include 30 core members (people who regularly attend meetings). At this year's Feb. 23 dinner dance, the amount of money raised by the group since its inception should reach the $1 million mark, Fromm predicted.

"Back when we started, nobody expected that we'd end up raising a million dollars. And a lot of people told us we wouldn't last five years. Statistically, I guess a lot of groups burn out after five years," Fromm said.

However, Fromm said she has no intention of burning out.

"I'm here to stay," she said. Fromm was born in Pittsburgh to William and Bettyanne McTighe. Her father died when she was 10 and Sharon, her three brothers — Bill, Gerry and Brian — and their mother moved to Grosse Pointe, where Bettyanne's sister lived.

At a Parents Without Partners meeting, Bettyanne met Ray Dresden, the owner of the owner of the R.M. Dresden Mortgage Co. They married when Sharon was in the 10th grade.

"They're a super couple. I really don't think of him as my stepfather, I think of him as my father," Fromm said. "He has always been great. And I think anybody who would take in four kids — especially four McTighes — deserves a medal of honor."

The family lived in Grosse Pointe Farms and Grosse Pointe Park, and is now back in the Farms. Fromm and her parents live down the street from each other on Ridgemont.

Fromm met her husband at St. Paul's High School, where they were members of the Class of 1968. They were high school sweethearts, but drifted apart after graduation.

"We met each other again later in life and after a while decided to get married," she said. They'll celebrate their 11th wedding anniversary this year. They have two sons, Remy, 7, and Peter, 4.

Peter was born with a heart abnormality. His pulmonary and aortic arteries were reversed, so that oxygenated blood was going the wrong way. He was rushed from St. John Hospital to Children's Hospital, where doctors performed life-saving emergency surgery.

At 9 months, Peter underwent open heart surgery at Children's, and today, he is just like any 4-year-old, his mother said.

"So you see, our allegiance to Children's Hospital goes beyond the cancer research they're doing. We have a high regard for the hospital from our own personal experience," Fromm said.

No one would have blamed her if she had dropped out of Leukemia, Research, Life, Inc. during that traumatic time, but she didn't.

"I just have this incredible devotion to this group. I think that when someone is a part of starting something, they feel more responsibility to that group than if they had started something in the middle, a group that was already formed," Fromm explained.

Fromm worked as a legal secretary until Remy was born.

Planning fundraising events keeps Sharon Fromm busy on the phone.

Since then, she has made taking care of her family her fulltime occupation.

She said she might go to work for her husband, a general contractor, when the boys are older, but right now, she's perfectly content staying home with her children.

Chauffering Remy and Peter to their various activities — including school, preschool, hockey practice and skating lessons — keeps Fromm busy. However, in between, she manages to practice the flute. She has been taking lessons at the Center for Dance and Music in Detroit on and off for three years, and has played at a few recitals.

"It's something I decided to do for myself, after the kids were born," Fromm said.

About performing in public, she said, "I get really nervous. It's the most nerve-wracking thing in the world. It's almost as bad as having to give my speech at the dinner dance."

As for the future, Fromm said she wants to be able to provide her children with a good education and "to raise them to be the best people that they can be."

And, of course, she said that she would like to see a cure for leukemia and other childhood cancers in her lifetime.

For tickets

Tickets are still available for Leukemia, Research, Life, Inc.'s dinner dance, which is being held on Feb. 23 at Roma's of Livonia, 27777 Schoolcraft in Livonia. Doors open at 6:30 p.m. Tickets are $35 per person and include an open bar, buffet dinner, salad bar, cheese and wine tables, fruit and dessert tables, a late night pizza snack, music and dancing. About 1,200 people attended the dance last year. For tickets, call Sharon Fromm at 884-7068.

as evidence of an undercount. He said, however, that the Census Bureau would not accept the schools' figures.

Shores officials also believe their city has been undercounted — at least by a little bit.

Village Manager Michael Kenyon said the census figures don't jibe with the village's internal census or the number of park passes requested by village residents. He said park passes for residents total about 3,250, well above the number of people reported in the new census figure.

Some residents may be padding the village's census so they can get extra park passes, he said. The Shores, however, will send in a revision request to the Census Bureau.

Kenyon agreed that fewer children per household was a major reason for the population decline.

The decennial census figures are important to local governments because they determine how much state shared-revenue funds and federal dollars, including highway funds, governments receive during the decade until the next census. Over the 10-year span, the decrease in federal and state funds due to population loss could be substantial.

Pointe and state officials, however, said it is too early to say just how much the new census figures will affect individual communities.

Grosse Pointe City Manager Thomas Kressbach said that trying to predict how the population will affect the budget is like trying to hit a moving target.

Furthermore, it is not known how state and federal budget cuts will affect population-based funds.

Tax relief provided for combat personnel

The designation of the Persian Gulf as a combat zone triggers a number of federal tax relief provisions for taxpayers serving in Operation Desert Storm.

According to John Hummel, IRS district director in Detroit, members of the armed forces and support personnel in the Persian Gulf assigned to Operation Desert Storm will not have to file their 1990 federal income tax returns until at least 180 days after they depart from the Persian Gulf. No penalty or interest will be charged during this period on any tax due for 1990.

The IRS will also suspend all tax return examinations and actions to collect any back taxes owed by these taxpayers for years prior to 1990 until at least 180 days after the taxpayer leaves the combat zone. During this time no penalty or interest will be added to any tax due.

"These relief provisions apply not only to armed forces and support personnel serving in the Operation Desert Storm combat zone, but also to their spouses," Hummel said.

Military pay received by enlisted personnel while serving in the combat zone is exempt from income tax. For commissioned officers, up to $500 a month can be excluded from income. The exclusion generally includes amounts received during periods of hospitalization resulting from injury or sickness suffered while serving in the combat zone.

The combat zone designation is effective Jan. 17, 1991, and covers Iraq, Kuwait, Saudi Arabia, Oman, Bahrain, Qatar, United Arab Emirates, Persian Gulf, Red Sea, Gulf of Oman, certain parts of the Arabian Sea and the Gulf of Aden.

Hummel said that taxpayers, including spouses and others acting on behalf of a taxpayer in the Operation Desert Storm combat zone, should call IRS toll-free at 1-800-829-1040.

Taxpayers who receive correspondence about any collection or audit matter covered by these relief provisions should contact IRS immediately so that the action may be suspended.

Threat of terrorism keeps travelers grounded — temporarily

By Pat Paholsky
Editor

The travel business is one of the first industries to feel the effects of war. Travel is down by almost 50 percent, according to several published reports.

The threat of terrorism is serious enough to make even the seasoned air traveler consider whether the next flight is necessary.

"Terrorism is not only a bomb on a plane," said Geraldine McInerney, regional president of Uniglobe. "Terrorism is an empty airport and empty airplanes. The psychological sanctions are working against us."

Uniglobe, a franchiser of more than 800 travel agencies in North America, sponsored a seminar on terrorism last week aimed at the businessmen and businesswomen who spend a considerable amount of time in airports and in the air. The security checklist applies to all passengers, however.

Margot Fox, a consultant to Uniglobe and a contractor for the U.S. State Department for 10 years where she served as an escort officer and interpreter, has conducted security briefings and anti-terrorism programs.

First, she advised, find out as much as possible about the country you are visiting. Sources include your travel agent, people you know who have been there, the foreign department of the local bank. You may even want to call the U.S. Embassy located in the country you will be visiting.

The State Department issues advisories on areas of unrest and the penalty if you are caught with drugs, which, for instance, is death in some countries. American citizens are subject to the laws of the country they are in. The phone number for travel advisories is 202-647-5225.

It's also possible to subscribe to the State Department's electronic bulletin board for more information.

"Make sure your passport doesn't expire while you're on your trip," Fox said, and she advised that when visas are necessary, obtain them for longer stays or for multiple entries.

Fox said she carries extra copies of passport photos in case her passport is lost or stolen. She also carries photocopies of the first couple of pages of her passport and keeps the original in the hotel safety deposit box or a wall safe in the room, if there is one.

She advises women to hold their purses against their body and away from the street when walking to discourage thieves on motorcycles from snatching their bags. And always walk against the traffic, Fox said.

Check your medical insurance. "There's a good chance it won't cover you abroad," she said.

With the prevalence of AIDS and the possibility of getting blood that has not been screened, Fox said, "I consider medical evacuation insurance a necessity."

There is even ransom insurance available.

Don't wait until the last minute to make financial arrangements, Fox said. "You will need enough foreign currency from a bank to get to your hotel and for tips," she said.

"Always carry about $100 in single bills when traveling in third world countries, and check if there's a departure tax in a country."

"Expect the unexpected. Credit cards may not be accepted."

Fox said she was once told she couldn't use her credit card because only men were able to have credit cards.

If you are a lone traveler and you are not going to be met at the airport, take only what you can carry or pull in case there is no porter available, she said. And check if there are any restrictions on laptop computers before taking one into another country.

"If no one is meeting me, I get a porter to help me," she said. "It gives me some protection from hustlers and quick access to taxis."

Women traveling alone should walk with confidence and with purpose, Fox said.

She also advises travelers to put expensive items, like a camera, inside carry-on luggage.

In the same vein, Fox said, "Aim for a low profile. Don't announce yourself as an American. Leave your cowboy boots and hats and baseball caps at home. We all know Americans are targets."

With increased security at airports, Fox said many airlines are now requiring photo IDs. You may be asked who packed your bag and other questions. Be frank and honest, Fox said.

Since airports are potential terrorist targets, don't hang around, she said. "If you see a suitcase that's unattended, report it immediately," she said.

Fox said the best seat on a plane is in the rear near a safety exit. "After a crash, quick evacuation is vital."

While an aisle seat gives a passenger quick access to an exit, a window seat offers distance if the plane is hijacked. Terrorists generally set up their command post in the cockpit and concentrate on the front of the airplane.

"Avoid eye contact with them," Fox said. "They may single out people in aisle seats."

about hijacking and hostage situations is available by writing to the State Department for the booklet "A Safe Trip Abroad." The address is Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402. A single copy is $1.

If you are carrying papers that have information about you, don't carry them on your person, Fox said. Pack them in your luggage.

Once at the hotel, Fox said she gets a room between the third and seventh floors. "It's high enough to be away from public access and low enough to get out," she said.

In the room, find out where the fire exit is and count the number of doors to it in case you have to crawl to it in a smoke-filled hall. If the room adjoins another, be sure the door between is locked.

It's good practice to use a public telephone and to have the proper coins on hand in case of emergency, Fox said.

"Think carefully about how much time you spend in lobbies or lobby bars," Fox said. "Be careful of strangers who have an inordinate interest in your business affairs."

If you are in a country with strong anti-American feelings, be as anonymous as possible. Don't sit by the door or a window in a public place, Fox said.

While most of her advice was cautionary, Fox predicted that the decrease in travel will not be permanent. "Travel is too much a part of our lives," she said.

The local Uniglobe office, B.F. Guiney, is located at 63 Kercheval, Suite 201E, Grosse Pointe Farms. The telephone number is 882-7560.

Kerby celebrates National Book Week

Kerby Elementary students celebrated National Children's Book Week with a host of programs and activities planned to enhance their appreciation of quality children's literature.

Kerby kids took 15 minutes each day to D.E.A.R. — drop everything and read — during school hours. Principal Catherine Hackney also hosted a Poetry Break for students on Wednesday with poetry readings by popular children's poet, Jack Prelutsky.

Puff, the Magic Dragon, designed and constructed by Rita Flaherty's fifth grade students, stood guard in the corridors of the magical kingdom of books. His puffs of dragon smoke floated through the halls, each representing Kerby students' favorite books.

A bookmark contest was held and the winners were: Jamie

South to present concert

The instrumental music department of Grosse Pointe South High School will present a winter concert on Thursday, Feb. 14 at 8 p.m. in Parcels Auditorium.

South's Symphony Orchestra will begin the program with two selections by Mozart: the Allegro in C major and Flute Concerto No. 1, featuring senior Joyce Stuckey on flute.

Following the orchestra's performance of Beethoven's Symphony No. 1, the symphonic band will play the symphonic march by von Weber, Carmina Burana by Orff and the Military Escort March by Fillmore.

To close the program, the orchestra strings will join the band to perform the English Folk Songs by Vaughn Williams and Bizet's Farandole from the L'Arlesienne Suite No. 2.

Admission to the concert is free, and information is available by calling Ralph Miller, instrumental music director at 343-2388.

Ferry plans VIP night

On Friday, Feb. 8, from 6 to 8 p.m., the Ferry Elementary School P.T.O. will host a V.I.P. night in the gym.

All the pizza and dancing you can stand will be available for $3 in advance and $4 at the door. Those coming are asked to wear red and white. For more information, call 343-2257.

Contest deadline drawing near

A short time remains in the search for high school students with a flair for writing.

Any high school student, grades 9-12, may participate. Students are asked to respond in 300 words or less how, as a young person, they can begin to make an impact on what they perceive as the most serious problem facing future generations.

The top three essayists will be presented awards at Senior Power Day, May 14, at the Civic Arena in Lansing.

First of America Bank Central has agreed to sponsor the awards of $600, $400 and $200 for the top three winners.

Students who want more information about the contest can contact the Senior Power Day, Inc. office at (517) 482-4725.

The special reading week culminated in a read-aloud for the whole school. On Friday afternoon, a group of celebrities together with Kerby teachers shared their favorite books with students. Harrison Cass, deputy superintendent of schools, Mary Collins, Kerby PTO president, Chris Fenton, assistant superintendent for business affairs and support services; Bob Welch, director of secondary curriculum and Alfreda Frost, assistant superintendent for curriculum and evaluation were among the special readers.

Snowmen

Snowmen are wonderful things. You can't make them in the spring. In the noonday sun, it can be felt, What they feel is the feeling of melt. In the night, when the mind runs free, Those happy snowmen laugh with glee.

Son recalls days when mom held court at Pointe home

Editor's note: The following column was published Jan. 26 in the Mesa Tribune in Phoenix. It was written by Doug MacEachern, political columnist for the Tribune Newspapers and a graduate of Grosse Pointe St. Paul. It is reprinted here with his permission.

As this Saturday's first light breaks in the Valley, the morning is already growing old in frigid Grosse Pointe, Mich., a tiny Detroit suburb some 2,000 miles to the east.

By now, no doubt, my brothers there have discovered a way to twist our mother's bed down the narrow stairs leading to her second-floor room. Likely, too, they've hoisted her bureau and dresser down that steep flight and have carted them out the side door to a trailer waiting in the snow and ice outside.

By maybe 10 a.m. our time, they will have filled the trailer with mom's most essential belongings — the bedroom furnishings — a sofa, a chair and some kitchen things — and will pull out of the driveway with that first load onto St. Clair Avenue.

At the corner, they will turn right onto St. Paul Avenue, travel one block and turn right again onto Notre Dame. There, they will deposit mom's belongings into a three-bedroom apartment she will share with her devoted Korean housemate, Kim.

Once they are done, hopefully by dark, a 30-year chapter of the Book of Betty will close. Queen Elizabeth will no longer reign over 568 St. Clair Ave., and all of Grosse Pointe will mourn.

Time changes everything. Always. But, for longer than I had a right to expect, Betty and that rambling old modified Victorian at 568 St. Clair remained there for me whenever I returned.

The seventh son, Duncan, has bought the house. Dad has gone his own way, and, at long last, keeping up the big old home became too much.

So, today, Betty yielded finally to the onslaught of change, although not without a fight.

No matter where I'd been or how long I'd been gone, Betty remained, anchored steady and fast to the home in which she raised her eight boys.

So much else changed, so many of us drifted away.

I left for the West. Mike followed. Then Lloyd. Her sons went their different ways.

Her beloved Gaelic "down home" crowd is mostly gone now, too. Nova Scotians — Cape Bretoners, all — they formed a rowdy expatriate community in Detroit and Windsor, Ontario, after World War II.

There was Don Lindy and Donny McEachern, the Campbells and MacDonalds and MacLellans. There were Betty's sisters, Lil and Theresa and Mary. And dear Uncle Dick, the rare Belgian in this intensely tribal crowd. They comprised a vast pantheon of eccentric, working-class characters, all of whom would drop in at 568 St. Clair at nearly any hour of the day or night. They would pop in unannounced, gossip like hens with Betty and then be on their way.

She was the queen of her world, and the house on St. Clair was her court. Just as their families had paid their respects to Betty's mother, Maggie Bell Gills, in Nova Scotia in decades gone by, so too would these Gaelic-tongued Scotsmen drop by my home to pay their respects to my mom.

Now, one by one, they are going, dragged away by the un-sentimental, relentless surges of time.

The old crowd has grown thin, and the rambling, five-bedroom old barn on St. Clair is more quiet than Betty can bear.

Too long ago, the house thrived from the pummeling of a family of 10 that was provided no girls who, theoretically, might have helped to soften the blows. We broke windows, splintered doors and inflicted more than two decades worth of mayhem on a house that was nearly 50 years old when dad and mom bought it in 1960. It didn't always hold up well, but it held up fine for us.

It's odd how, in the jumble of memories that a change like this churns up, some of the most insignificant moments stand out like beacons.

I see the gleaming reflection of a Christmas tree in the dark screen of a television. And its pine scent, wafting from the far corner of the living room, is thick in my nose.

And I see Betty, still furiously ironing the satin cloaks of a trio of choir boys as the commencement of midnight Mass draws near.

Most clearly, though, I see Betty rocking away on that long front porch on a summer night.

The lyric voice of Ernie Harwell, the splendid radio announcer for the Detroit Tigers, is blending its tenor with the breezy sweetness of June air.

A car pulls into the drive, and another of my brothers joins the burgeoning pack on the porch.

The Tigers are behind, and their chances are running out. It is the bottom of the ninth. Outfielder Willie Horton comes to bat, and Betty's once somnolent rocker comes suddenly to life.

"Come on, Willie," she says, "Come on Willie, damn you. Get a hit now."

Spitefully, Horton disappoints my mother once again with a magnificent swinging strikeout.

It's what I remember most. Before Harwell's partner, Paul Carey, has finished the game's box scores, the rocker creaks to a halt. Someone touches Betty's shoulder and she awakes with a start.

"To bed," she orders us all, assuming her firmest Gaelic brogue. "B-A-D. Bed."

The massage message:

It tunes up your body; reduces tension, stress

By Margie Reins Smith
Feature Editor

Kathleen Wood is an exercise physiologist, recreation program director and member of the faculty of Macomb Community College. She's a race walker and a runner. She has competed in three triathlons, has done bike touring and racing and she plays softball.

She is currently training for a race walking competition — a 3K National Masters Championship on March 23.

Wilma Cash, massage therapist, gently rotated Wood's right arm as Wood lay stretched full length on a heated, padded table in a locker room at Assumption Cultural Center.

"I'm doing some stretches and compressions on her arms," Cash said, "to loosen up the muscles and extend her range of motion."

"I'm going to give Kathleen a light sports massage. It's like a tune-up."

Wood explained the benefits of massage: "Muscles are made up of thousands of fibers. By working through these fibers with the fingers, you can smooth them out so they're fresh and strong again."

"It kind of irons out the wrinkles," Cash added, with a smile. "But the biggest benefit of massage is stress reduction. The stress can be either psychological or physical. It doesn't matter."

Wood said she tries to get a massage every three weeks, minimum.

"Loosening the muscles improves my time for racewalking. I had a lingering hamstring problem that I couldn't get rid of by stretching. Massage worked it out. It helps the fibers to heal in a different way."

"Then I cut time off my walking within a few days."

Cash listed the benefits of massage:

- Reduction of stress; relaxation
  - Relief from muscle tension and stiffness
  - Reduction of muscle spasms
  - Improvement of joint flexibility and range of motion
  - Better circulation of body fluids
  - Relief from tension-related headaches
  - Enhanced feeling of calmness and well-being
  - Reduced levels of anxiety
- "Now I'm loosening up the muscles around the knee," she said, as she flexed Wood's right leg and applied light pressure to the knee. Wood explained where the pain was.

Cash found the muscle with her fingers. "There it is."

Cash received her training as a massage therapist through the Health Enrichment Center in Lapeer and is registered with the American Massage Therapists Association. She completed 1,000 hours to fulfill curriculum requirements. She now teaches massage to about 40 students.

She said she does between 15 and 20 massages a week, many through Assumption Cultural Center in conjunction with its sports programs, mini spas and its Spring Farm Spa.

Wood also lectures at Assumption on sports and health-related topics. Some people are still suspicious of massage therapy because of past negative connotations associated with so-called massage parlors. Michigan has no licensing requirements for massage therapists, Cash said.

She said that her association with Assumption helps dispel the negative feelings newcomers have toward massage and added that the Yellow Pages are, in fact, a good place to find a therapist.

"Just be sure there is that AMTA after the name."

She said she gives an evaluation massage to first-timers. The client first fills out a form noting his or her specific pains, injuries, surgeries, allergies, medication and so on.

Cash listed nine different types of massage therapy she performs:

- Swedish massage (for relaxation)
- Deep muscle/connective tissue massage (which releases chronic tension patterns)
- Trigger point therapy (which applies direct pressure to trigger points)

• Shiatsu and acupressure (which applies finger pressure along meridians)

• Reflexology (for feet and hands)

• Polarity therapy (a gentle and deeper touch)

• Hydrotherapy (which includes hot packs, ice applications, saunas, steambaths and whirlpools)

• Sports massage (which can be pre- or post-competition)

• Corporate massage (which is done while the client is seated, at work).

"I can't fix everybody," she said.

"People have to take care of themselves. Massage is no panacea. You still have to watch your diet and do your exercise. Massage is the icing on the cake."

"We're one person," Wood said.

"We go to a foot specialist, a throat specialist, a heart specialist, and so on. Massage puts it all together. It puts you in touch with your body and gives you a greater sense of wholeness."

Wilma Cash, massage therapist, demonstrated the benefits of massage by giving a light sports massage to Kathleen Wood, exercise physiologist. Wood is training for a race walking competition.

One of massage's biggest benefits is stress reduction and relaxation, Cash said.

Wood said that massage therapy helped loosen and heal muscles in her legs and improve her walking time.

HAVE A PLEASANT TRY AT PERFECTION BRIDGE BY WOODY BOYD ♠♥♦♣

When the name Stein is pondered by the bridge world immediately Sylvia comes to mind or even Ethan who is especially well known on the east coast. But today I'm not writing about or is my talent needed to extend either of their commendable reputations. The Stein on my mind I've only been playing with for just under a year and he goes by the handle of Harry.

When we first agreed to play, I'm not sure either of us were ready for each other or notably enthusiastic about the opportunity. The incredible question preceding this first meeting was whether we could work together successfully. As I look back upon that occasion, I am firm in my feeling that we both made the right decision and I am particularly appreciative of Joyce Krout for grouping the two of us.

You play once with Harry and you're not sure it should be done again, but my favorite bridge writer had an excellent application to getting us meshable. "If at first you don't find victory, work at it and you may find out why." Needless to say, Harry's game has grown on me and I have found a challenge and great satisfaction working with him in the successful development of our playing relation.

All of us have witnessed the reverse experience... a partnership's failure and falling out. It is especially satisfying that ours is headed in a positive direction and I'm respectful of his participation in this effort.

Today's hand is a true blue bidding problem and Harry's excellent technique made it possible for me to place the contract at an attainable playing level.

At my second turn to bid, I was overcome with a serious case of what was my best call. Game was obvious. Was slam a possibility? If so, what was my next call to help us get there? Realistically there was no book bid that had merit and I wanted to know more about Harry's hand so I improvised. Some call my 3 clubs a relay bid which partner and I had never discussed, but it was asking and the great Mr. Stein's redouble told me more than I needed to know. Six spades was a foray, but my confidence in his last call convinced me we were favorites.

I won the diamond ace and played two rounds of trumps. I was willing to bet my life on the club king's location so played to the ace and back to the queen. This gave me a resting place for a losing heart and the other two were ruffed in dummy.

Junior League of Detroit repeats annual Christmas parties

For the 33rd year in a row, the Junior League of Detroit threw its annual December Christmas parties for clients of Goodwill Industries of Greater Detroit and Adult Well Being Services. Funding for the events came from proceeds of the League's November Holiday Preview fundraiser.

Guests at the Dec. 6 party were 375 clients of Goodwill Industries. Dinner music was provided by the Joe Vitale Quartet and after-dinner dance music was provided by the Blue Pigs.

More than 275 senior citizens from Adult Well Being Services were guests at a second party on Dec. 8. Seniors enjoyed a fashion show of their own designs and crafts and music by the Blue Pigs.

League members served turkey dinners and provided Christmas gifts for guests at both events.

The League for the Handicapped was founded by the Junior League of Detroit in 1921 and later merged with Goodwill Industries of Greater Detroit, the largest agency currently devoted to testing, training, employing and finding jobs for Detroit's handicapped citizens.

Adult Well Being Services was founded in 1953 by the Junior League of Detroit to help provide recreation and rehabilitation for seniors.

Christmas party co-chairmen were Beverly Butler and Susan Gilbride.

Eighth graders from University Liggett School helped League members with the parties. And Santa (a.k.a. Col. Charles Grimshaw of Grosse Pointe Park) distributed gifts and prizes at both parties.

Lundi Gras: The Detroit Council of the Archives of American Art will hold its annual Lundi Gras benefit ball on Monday, Feb. 11, at the Rattlesnake Club. Keeping secret the closely guarded details of the menu and decorations for the black tie event are Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Lee Schoenith of Grosse Pointe, co-chairmen of the benefit.

Grosse Pointer Jimmy Schmidt of the Rattlesnake Club will preside over the cuisine and Bob Mounsey of Jacobson's will be in charge of the decor.

The Archives of American Art, Smithsonian Institution, collects and preserves original papers, photographs and taped interviews that document the history of the visual arts in America from colonial times to the present. Proceeds from Lundi Gras will help support the Midwest Regional Center of the Archives, which is located in the Detroit Institute of Arts and is open to researchers by appointment, Mondays through Fridays.

For more information about Lundi Gras, call Jeanne Zanke at the Detroit office of the Archives of American Art, 226-7544.

Do the limbo: The annual benefit for the Children's Center is patterned after the Goombay Festivals celebrated each summer in the streets of the Bahamas. Party planners are billing the event as a hot tropical fete and a way to break the winter doldrums.

The Goombay Festival will be from 4 to 9 p.m. on Sunday, Feb. 10, at the Key Largo restaurant in Walled Lake.

Guests are encouraged to wear tropical duds and to be prepared to do the limbo. The party will feature Caribbean hors d'oeuvres and desserts, Island entertainment, a mini auction and music by Universal Spectrum Band.

The Children's Center provides emotional and mental health services to children and their families.

Tickets to the Goombay Festival are $55 a person. Among the Grosse Pointers who are involved in the benefit: Lynn and Paul Alandt, Denise Anton, Rick David, Dale and Don Austin, Marilyn and Michael Connor, Diane and Tom Schoenith and Mimi and Brian Streck.

For information, call the Children's Center at 831-5535.

Celebrity servers: The newly formed East Shore division of the American Heart Association of Michigan's mission is to help Grosse Pointers reduce Junior League of Detroit members who worked on the group's annual Christmas parties for clients of Goodwill Industries and Adult Well Being Services were, back row, from left, Beverly Butler, Lacey Logan, Sue Smith, Barb Kennedy and Cathy Kegler. premature death or disability from heart attacks, strokes and related heart and blood vessel diseases.

The group will hold a fundraiser on Tuesday, April 30, at the Grosse Pointe Hunt Club — a Celebrity Waiter Event.

Regional director Rodney Harden wants to get the word out and to recruit some celebrity waiters from Grosse Pointe.

Four of the five committee chairmen are Grosse Pointe Woods residents: Madelyn Kleitch, Mary Roehm, George Martin and Marian Roehm. Debbie Syzmanski is from Harper Woods.

Harden said the fundraiser will give guests a chance to raise money for the American Heart Association of Michigan while enjoying lunch and taking advantage of a chance to "tip" some local notables (waiters and waitresses) for performing zany antics or special services.

Anyone who would like to join the fun as a waiter, participant or committee member should call Harden at 557-9500.

Optimist awards: The Lakeshore Optimist Club's Chet Wojciechowski of Grosse Pointe Woods was honored by the organization as a distinguished Lt. Governor for his outstanding service to the community and his dedication to optimism.

The club was also recently awarded honor club status by Optimist International.

Midwinter pick-me-up:

The League of Women Voters is billing its next party as the answer to midwinter doldrums. It's a birthday buffet on Sunday, Feb. 17, from noon to 3 p.m. at Tom's Steamer (formerly Park Place).

Whose birthday? It'll be a celebration of Presidents' Day and the league's anniversary.

The price is $20 a person. The shindig will include food and live entertainment and the proceeds will help fund the organization's community projects and lobbying efforts.

Evelyn Montgomery of Grosse Pointe City is chairman of the fundraiser. Also working on the party: Lenore Marshall, Miriam Schaafsma, Joanne Watko, Pearl Warn, Kay Kirby, W.N. Montgomery and Katherine McDonald.

Reservations must be made by Saturday, Feb. 9. Call 881-6343 or 882-3497.

— Margie Reins Smith

In the center is Jimmy Schmidt, owner and chef of the Rattlesnake Club. Diane Schoenith is wearing a white chocolate mask, a dessert created by Schmidt for the event.

The Pastor's Corner

Windows and mirrors

By Rev. Jack T. Ziegler
Grosse Pointe Woods Presbyterian Church

Sunday: O Lord, if in these troubled times I cannot provide answers, help me at least to point people in the direction of hope.

Monday: I waited patiently for the Lord; he inclined to me and heard my cry . . . and set my feet upon a rock.
Psalm 40:1,2

Tuesday: Help us discover, Lord, that loving in safety is the smaller part of loving.

Wednesday: On a pastoral call today, a lady asked that someone come read poetry to her. We reminisced about the times as children we were read to by our parents. Does the time ever come when we don't long for someone to read to us? I hope not.

Thursday: Speaking of poetry, Emily Dickinson probes deeply when she writes:

I shall know why — when Time is over
And I have ceased to wonder why
Christ will explain each separate anguish
In the fair schoolroom of the sky.

He will tell me what Peter promised
And I — for wonder at his woe —
I shall forget the drop of Anguish
That scalds me now — that scalds me now!

Friday: Though her father was a clergyman, Emily D. was not one to abide comfortably in the traditional religious mold. She pressed on with questions and a freshness of expression. How fortunate for us she did. How else would we ever know that:

Hope is a thing with feathers
That perches in the soul
And sings the tune without the words and never stops at all.

Saturday: Lord, as people everywhere long for loved ones to come home, help us to come home to you. The Talmud says it well:

O thou who are at home
Deep in my heart
Enable me to join you
Deep in my heart.

Storing the wedding gown after the wedding

Many brides want to preserve their wedding dresses as keepsakes or perhaps for their daughters to wear someday.

Most experts agree that the first step is having the wedding dress expertly cleaned as soon as possible after the first wedding.

It's true that the dress was worn for only a short time, but it may bear invisible stains from food, beverages, body oil or perspiration. If not removed, these will appear later as permanent yellow or brown stains. On a long gown, the hemline is most likely soiled.

Point out any spills or stains to the dry cleaner. If you will be gone on an extended honeymoon, ask your mother or maid of honor to take the dress to the cleaner for you.

Some cleaners will pack the gown in a special storage box, which makes it very convenient to store. Often the gown will be wrapped in acid-free tissue. Don't put the dress away and forget about it. Even though it's been cleaned, it's possible that some stained areas may oxidize over time and turn yellow. If you notice this happening, take the dress back to the cleaner immediately. The stains can usually be removed. However, if they are left on for years, they will become permanent.

Some cleaners are offering vacuum sealing as a method of safekeeping. Some questions to ask about vacuum sealing:

- Do cardboard boxes and plastic really hold a vacuum?
- Was the container truly vacuum sealed and is there still a vacuum in the container weeks or months after the processing?
- Will you want to open the box to look for oxidized stains? If so, the vacuum seal, if it exists, will have to be broken.

There have been some reports of people not getting their own wedding dresses back. The vacuum seal box has only a little window to look through, and often it's impossible to tell if it is your dress.

Vacuum sealing may or may not be of value, but it will probably raise the overall price.

Unfortunately, no process or storage method yet known can guarantee against the possible yellowing or deterioration of textile fibers with age.

When you take your gown home, store it in a cool, dry place. Don't store it in a basement or attic. Attic heat could cause yellowing, while dampness in a basement could promote the growth of mildew.

If the cleaner doesn't pack the dress in a box for you, follow these storage tips:

- If you're storing a long gown on a hanger, sew straps a little shorter than the dress bodice to the waistline of the dress. They will carry the weight of the skirt and will relieve pressure on the shoulders.

Use a padded hanger, not a wire or foam-covered one. Wrap the dress in a protective white sheet or muslin covering. Do not use a plastic bag; plastic can trap heat and moisture.

If the gown has sponge shoulder pads, remove them before storage. Some padded material deteriorates and yellows with age and could stain the dress.

Stuff the sleeves with crumpled, acid-free tissue to prevent wrinkling.

Profile: Mark Volpe of the DSO

New director is upbeat and uptempo

By Alex Suzek
Special Writer

On welcoming his interviewer to the DSO offices in the Buhl Building, the symphony's new executive director, Mark Volpe, asked directly, "Do you want to go to lunch now, or shall we talk first?"

It was obvious at once that unless tact or diplomacy intervenes, he always gets right to the point. Moreover, he rarely digresses or loses his focus.

In this exciting and promising, but also highly unstable era of the DSO, this young musician, lawyer and pragmatic visionary has a background and temperament uniquely suited to his job.

The son of a symphony musician, Volpe has been around orchestras all his life. He earned his BA in music at Eastman with a major in clarinet and a juris doctorate from the University of Minnesota Law School. He played in the Orchestra at Indiana University where he was mistaken for his father by guest conductor Antal Dorati, an old friend. And his limited but highly active years in the management of the Baltimore and Minnesota orchestras have already subjected him to the rigors of deficits, politics, foreign tours, recording contracts and all the other crises that orchestras face.

Knowing all that, it is easier to understand how at 33, with only eight days on the job, he could appear so much in command and so "cool."

It was hardly necessary to ask a question. Volpe talks knowledgeably and enthusiastically about the orchestra and Music Director Neeme Jarvi.

High on the list, of course, is programming, and he credits Jarvi, gratefully, with showing exceptional initiative.

"Neeme thinks about it all the time," said Volpe, "and cares so much that he came in with an outline he'd made for the whole year."

Volpe gets so involved and his ideas click so fast that the words come tumbling out almost faster than a listener can take them in. But they never digress from the point and his point is the remarkable promise of success for the DSO with Jarvi as musical director.

"One of the reasons I'm here is because there are few wonderful marriages between orchestras and conductors and this appears to be developing into one of them. Right now it is still the honeymoon, but the relationship is looking very good," Volpe said.

"Neeme is an inspiration for the DSO. He believes so much in the orchestra and its repertoire that it is contagious. All the musicians are infected by it. As the season progresses, he is becoming more familiar with the orchestra and trusts it more. So he takes risks to keep the performers fresh and on their toes.

"He'll do a Brahms symphony slow one night and fast the next. He wants to keep the orchestra engaged and alert.

"Look at the signs. We're playing encores because the audience is still there applauding and Neeme likes to give. The chemistry is too good to miss."

Less ready to talk about himself, Volpe slows down when asked about his personal life and how he is settling down in Detroit.

"We live at the Millender Center in a furnished apartment right now. We are looking for a home in Grosse Pointe because of the proximity. This is a job where I may be up until midnight entertaining a visiting artist. A short drive home is a big advantage. And the Pointes are a beautiful, appealing community," he said.

The "we" refers to himself and his wife, Martha Batchelor Volpe, who also served on the artistic staffs of the orchestras in Baltimore and Minneapolis. Still comparative newlyweds without children, they are prudently waiting to sell their Minneapolis home before taking on a mortgage here.

That kind of prudence, perhaps it's his law training, is evident in his strategy for the orchestra.

What are the main challenges the DSO is facing?

"Everyone knows, the big one is financial," he said. "Steve Miller and the staff created an extraordinary operating initiative in which the state commitment was leveraged against private support. Now the state's commitment is being threatened.

While we are definitely working on a strategy that will balance our budget and make us less dependent on such grants, to cut it off abruptly could be fatal at this juncture. It would just happen too fast."

But Volpe didn't linger once he made his point. The subject was challenges and he moved to the next. "The second is undercapitalization of the endowment," he said. "There has been poor control and management in the past and we have to make up for that.

"The third is the summer season. We have had an incredible rebound this winter. There has been an upsurge in attendance and ticket income. But recent summer seasons have not worked well. They were a drain on resources. We are just beginning discussions with Meadowbrook for this year so we'll see.

"The fourth challenge is to continue to be innovative and progressive in outreach programs. We want to perform in schools and support the goals of the city and the state. That's a lot.

"There's so much, in fact, that you can never get bored in this job. Sometimes it's over-exciting. Just dealing with artist agencies in New York and with local leaders is stimulating. It pulls you in many directions."

And as he warmed to what is obviously his favorite subject — orchestra management — Volpe revealed more about himself.

"When I finished law school, I had too many interests to go into a law office. All my life, my father had been a musician playing in orchestras. I grew up with music and music management issues around me. So I chose orchestra management as my field," he said.

"Dealing with talented people is one of the most fascinating aspects of this job. Neeme himself is a charismatic man who cares very deeply about what is going on in the world. He talks with passion about his homeland and the politics there."

Volpe did not have to be reminded, however, that the subject was still challenges.

"The fifth is that there has been a period where the Hall and the orchestra and their respective volunteer groups had to merge. There are the remnants of tension that still need attention. We are seeking a common vision and a sense of goals. It's like a merger of two corporations. People have to be sensitive," he said.

Watching and listening to him talk, there is a strong sense of a man of vision totally free of pretense or affectation.

"What is great," he continued, "is that the orchestra has made a profound recovery. It had to come because we have the right conductor, a great hall and a really supportive audience. The top artists that come here tell me how wonderful the acoustics are. The Chandos people, who came to make our first record, fell in love with the hall and then the orchestra, too."

But Volpe's enthusiasm and vision never loosen his grip on the task. He outlined the steps that lay ahead and you could tell by the assured way he ticked them off that he had already considered them very carefully in his short time on the job.

"We have to build on this year's success in marketing the orchestra. More than 85,000 people attended the Christmas Festival concerts this season alone. Next year our goal is 100,000. This introduces a lot of people to the orchestra," he said.

"We want to build a better relationship with the city. I haven't met the mayor yet, but I want to."

Mark Volpe is the visionary new director of the Detroit Symphony Orchestra.

And his main concern kept coming up.

"The governor has to be made aware of the value and importance of the orchestra to the city and the state," he said.

It is an issue Volpe has faced before. With the Baltimore Symphony, he was a key figure in that orchestra's successful turn-around and helped raise funds, including a state grant, for its 31-day tour of Europe and the Soviet Union. Its success, he recalls, played a part in opening Maryland's door to foreign commerce.

See page 10B for a review of Friday's DSO concert.

It is obvious as he talks that funding is a high-level problem, but not an insurmountable one. In fact, for this cool-headed, high-energy young man, almost any achievement seems possible for the orchestra. And with his unique array of qualifications, coupled with all the positive signs he listed so methodically, the DSO may indeed be on the roll this time that takes it to the long sought after, and much deserved, world class status.

Volpe said he wouldn't be bored as the new executive director. Nor should we, watching and cheering from the sidelines.

'Alice' is society as seen through Woody Allen's looking glass

By Chris Dellas
Special Writer

What would a Woody Allen film be without grandiose themes? Would the work of the auteur be as instantly recognizable without hefty doses of guilt, infidelity, morality and the failures of religion and philosophy?

Probably not, so in his latest release, "Alice," Allen has made sure to include all of the above plus throwing in a few other ponderables for good measure.

With clever references to "Alice in Wonderland," the story pits the constraints of Western values against the less materialistic approaches of Eastern philosophy and mysticism.

In this contemporary fairy tale, Mia Farrow, in her eleventh collaboration with Allen, stars as a rich Manhattan housewife on a journey of self discovery.

Farrow's Alice is uptight, very Catholic, and unable to communicate with her husband (William Hurt). He dismisses her ideas to better herself and belittles her initiative. She is at a crossroads, and wants more than the role of wife and mother, even if that role includes regular shopping sprees at Polo and Valentino.

Farrow comes off at times as a female version of Allen's trademark frenetic hypochondriac. Full of paradoxes and maladies, Alice stutters and stammers and lets others finish her sentences for her. We've seen it before, yet it's still funny, and Farrow does give it a new twist. Allen has been so prolific with this type of character, though, that it's nice when he eventually allows Mia to move on.

Just as Allen has been traumatized by Judaism in past films, so Alice is burdened by her Catholic upbringing. She aspires to be like Mother Theresa, but at the same time wishes she could consummate her attraction for a strange man.

To relieve these moral dilemmas, as well as an imagined backache, enter Dr. Yang. This charming Chinatown guru supplies Alice with herbs and advice intended to allow her to achieve one of those New Age clichés — "to find herself" or "to get in touch with her feelings."

Sound simplistic? Well it is, even silly at times, like when one dose of herbs renders Alice and her lover invisible. But Allen pulls it off with the tongue-in-cheek sight gag style that he does so well. He has always reminded his audiences that we are watching a movie, not reality, and he demands our suspension of disbelief to make it work.

What helps this movie work is the beautiful cinematography that paints Allen's Manhattan as the romantic center of the world. Allen's lyrical vision of New York has been unparalleled by any other filmmaker; it is on a par with Sinatra singing "New York, New York" or Dinah Washington crooning "I'll Take Manhattan." Maybe he'll show us the underbelly of New York sometime, but perhaps he feels that's better left to the likes of Scorsese and Spike Lee.

What also works is the strong ensemble cast. Keye Luke, best known as the "Number One Son" to Charlie Chan (and as Kung Fu's mentor to my generation), adds a reassuring touch as Dr. Yang. He is a positive reinforcement for Alice, but he also gets to serve up some deliciously biting references to Catholicism's failure to free her.

William Hurt plays the yuppie cad of a husband with an indifference that makes us root for Alice to go ahead and break that sixth commandment.

Bernadette Peters has a great cameo as an ethereal muse with a deadpan delivery. When she reaches into her angelic frock to pull out her reading glasses we know we are with Allen at his utmost comic comfort.

The ensemble is rounded out with Joe Mantegna as Alice's partner in adultery; Alec Baldwin as a romantic ghost from the past brought to temporary life through Yang's devices; Cybill Shepherd as a former friend who has "made it"; and Blythe Danner as the sister with whom Alice struggles for a closer relationship.

As an unexpected twist in the theme department, it is Alice's adherence to the religion that wracks her with guilt that also helps to finally liberate her. "There's nothing sexier than a lapsed Catholic," says Mantegna's character at one point.

Lovers and chocolate — a Feb. 14 treat for your sweetheart

Chocolate — one of life's small temptations and great pleasures — is perfect for Valentine's Day. Its rich special quality has an allure that few, if any, other foods can match.

Arguably one of the greatest discoveries made on the American continent was the bean of the cacao tree — the source of chocolate. Almost everyone loves rich and smooth chocolate. The Greeks called it the "food of the gods" or Theobroma cacao. Most of the world's cocoa crop comes from Brazil and Africa.

Through drying, roasting and grinding, cocoa beans are converted into a thick paste called chocolate liquor, composed of cocoa solids and a light yellow fat called cocoa butter.

Cocoa powder is pure chocolate liquor from which most of the cocoa butter has been extracted (content varies from 8 percent to more than 20 percent). Unsweetened cocoa powder is most commonly used for baking and preparing desserts. Chocolate acts as a binder for other ingredients. An illustration is chocolate soufflé. It is one of the few soufflés not requiring any flour; the chocolate holds the mixture together.

Chocolate is used in baking, desserts, dipping, decorations, ganache, drinks, and savory dishes. The use of chocolate in savory dishes is less well-known. Chocolate was commonly used by the Aztecs, and one of the fine dishes of Mexican cookery is still mole poblano de guajolote (a turkey stew with unsweetened chocolate, flavored with sesame and chili peppers). Spain has two dishes which use bitter chocolate in sauce, and in Sicily there is a popular recipe for rabbit with chocolate.

With chocolate in mind, why not whip up a homemade chocolate treat to convey Valentine affection this year? It will be even more special because you

Chocolate Glaze (recipe follows)

Chocolate Leaves (optional)

Heat oven to 350 degrees. Grease and flour 2 heart-shaped cake pans, 9 x 1-1/2 inches.

Add oil, buttermilk and egg yolks; beat until smooth. Gently fold egg whites into batter. Pour batter into prepared pans. Bake 25 to 30 minutes or until cake

Split layers in half horizontally. Prepare Chocolate Cream Filling. Spread with 1/3 cream filling; top with second cake layer. Repeat procedure ending with plain layer on top. Prepare Chocolate Glaze; glaze cake. Decorate with Chocolate Leaves if desired. Chill. Store leftovers in refrigerator. Makes 8 to 10 servings.

Note: To sour milk: Use 1 tablespoon vinegar plus milk to equal one cup.

Chocolate Cream Filling

In small mixer bowl combine 2/3 cup sugar and 1/3 cup unsweetened cocoa. Add 1-1/2 cups chilled whipping cream and 1-1/2 teaspoons vanilla extract; beat on low speed to combine. Beat on medium speed until stiff.

Chocolate Glaze

In small saucepan combine 3 tablespoons butter or margarine, 3 tablespoons light corn syrup and 1 tablespoon water; place over medium heat stirring constantly, until mixture begins to boil. Remove from heat; stir in 1 cup semi-sweet chocolate chips until melted. Cool to room temperature.

Chocolate Leaves

Thoroughly wash and dry several ivy, lemon, rose or other non-toxic leaves. In small micro-

chocolate chips or chunks
2 T shortening, divided (not butter, margarine or oil)
3/4 cup vanilla milk chips
1/4 cup finely ground nuts

In small microwave-safe bowl combine chocolate chips with one tablespoon shortening. Microwave at high for 1 minute; stir. If necessary microwave an additional 30 seconds or until melted and smooth when stirred. Spoon into heart-shaped ice cube tray or candy molds, filling each 1/2 full; tap molds to release air bubbles and smooth surface. Chill several hours or until firm. Invert tray or molds and tap lightly to release heart candies. Yields about 10 candies.

Variations: Almond — add 2 or 3 drops almond extract to melted chocolate chips. Cherry — Omit nuts; add 1/4 cup finely chopped red candied cherries and 2 or 3 drops red food color to vanilla chips.

wave-safe bowl place 1/2 cup semi-sweet chocolate chips and 1 teaspoon vegetable shortening; microwave at 45 seconds or until chips are melted when stirred. With small soft-bristled brush, spread melted chocolate onto backs of leaves being careful not to drip over edges; place on wax paper-covered tray or rack. Refrigerate until very firm. Carefully peel fresh leaves from Chocolate Leaf; refrigerate until ready to use.

Travel Trends

By Phyllis Hollenbeck

Pick the right package

The majority of American tourists think along the same line when planning foreign travel — they join an all-inclusive tour. This type of travel package provides a group of travelers with airline reservations to their destinations, transfers from the airport to the hotels, hotel fees, some meals, guided bus tours, transfers back to the airport and the flight home. You are with the same group of travelers every day of the journey.

There is a place for this type of inclusive tour; perhaps for the first-time foreign traveler, a solo traveler seeking companionship, or a traveler seeking a specialized tour program. However, for some travelers this structure and "togetherness" may be undesirable.

There are some options, though. One popular alternative is the F.I.T. (foreign independent tour). To arrange a F.I.T. go to your travel agent with a general plan of where you want to go, when you want to go, how long you want to stay and what type of accommodations and activities you want. Discuss your budget and interests, make decisions and ask the agent to arrange all the details. Your travel agent sets up the program and, as with the all-inclusive group tours, all the plans are made in advance. This time, however, the plans have been made to your personal specification. Although this is far more expensive than an inclusive group tour, it is a particularly attractive option for the traveler with specific needs or interests.

Another alternative is the independent packaged tour. This alternative is offered by many of the larger tour operators to the more popular destinations. "Independent package tour" seems a contradiction, yet that is exactly what it is. The tour operator will book group air space, group hotel space and group tour space. You choose the departure and return date you want, the hotel you want (usually from a choice of several with varying costs and locations) and the ground-tours you want to take. You have the advantage of the lower group rates with the benefit of flexibility.

On this type of tour you will be on your own. You will not have a guide, but often there will be a "host" located at your hotel or at a nearby office who can take care of any problems that need solutions or questions that need answers. The independent package tour is a good alternative for someone revisiting a place, for someone who needs time to "do their own thing," or for someone who just doesn't want to be with the same people every day of his or her two or three week holiday.

In many resort areas, you can enjoy complete independence by renting a villa or apartment at your destination. Your travel agent can provide you with detailed listings of villas and apartments that are available for one, two or more weeks. These villas and apartments are advertised by international real estate brokers. The accommodations are completely set up for the vacationer and include linens, kitchenware, etc. They are usually found in popular seaside or mountain areas, or in major city centers. Although you are among others on holiday you do have the opportunity to stay in one spot and have your own "home" to come back to at the end of a busy day. There is a kitchen so you don't have to eat every meal out, and you really have the opportunity to explore and be part of the place you are visiting.

For those who really want the experience of "living among the natives," a special program is offered by a company named Idyll Ltd. In 1976, a Philadelphia professor named Harold Taussig decided to form the company to provide "untours" for "untourists." He decided that there needed to be a way to learn about a foreign country and its people, and the way to do that was by living among them.

Untours takes you to untouristy towns in Austria, Switzerland, Germany, Wales and Scotland. Usually you live in a two-family house with separate quarters and entrances, but close to your neighbors. You live like a local. Shop at the local bakery, butcher shop and grocer. Use the local transportation system and buy stamps from the village post office. You experience things as you never could in a "discovered" tourist destination. Idyll Ltd. arms its travelers with complete information before departure including hints and rules of conduct as well as information on how to get from here to there.

For brochures, schedules and rate sheets contact Idyll Ltd., P.O. Box 405, PA 19063 (phone 215-565-5242) because your travel agent has probably never heard of them.

DSO report:

Wolff and winds play memorable Mozart

By Alex Suczek
Special Writer

Programming three serenades for last weekend's concerts at Orchestra Hall seemed like a contrived and risky device. But under the baton of the youthful American guest conductor, Hugh Wolff, it was a well-balanced and genuinely satisfying program. Moreover, he and an octet of DSO wind players presented what must be one of the most exquisitely beautiful, quintessential Mozart performances of all time.

That piece was the opener, moved up from second place on the printed program, and one had only a moment to wonder why an octet of oboes, clarinets, bassoons and horns needed a conductor. From the moment Wolff, conducting chamber style without a podium, began to lead the group, it was obvious that something special was taking place. This Serenade No. 12 in C minor, K. 384a, is one of Mozart's finest works. Rich in sublime melodies, perfectly crafted detail and brilliant modulations, it represents the composer's creative gift at its peak.

Wolff conducted with perfect Mozartian vitality and joy. Every gesture expressed clearly the character of style and phrase that he wanted and the octet, with the subtlety and elegance of a string section, gave him what he asked for. The minuet danced lightly. The sublime melody of the andante rose on the air in a seamless legato. The dynamics throughout were wonderfully conceived and precisely achieved, ranging from a whisper to full voice that made Orchestra Hall ring. It was a memorable performance, in perfect taste and delicious.

It made sense to open with the octet, the smallest instrumentation, but Eine Kleine Nachtmusik, now second on the program, could not top this. It did, however, give the DSO strings their turn and with Wolff's intelligent and insightful direction, they did themselves credit with this very familiar late work (K. 525). Though half the audience could surely hum it from memory, the performance had a freshness that lifted this serenade well out of the realm of trite familiarity. And the violins easily met the challenge of maintaining precision and unison in following Wolff's expressive phrasings, retards and cutoffs.

Only one work, the Brahms Serenade in D major, op. 11, was for full orchestra. Presented last, after intermission, it was the culmination of the evening. It is generally regarded to be the piece on which Brahms refined his skills as an orchestrator and certainly most of his musical trademarks are pleasingly evident.

Wolff and the orchestra made it sound like mature Brahms and brought the evening to a conclusion with a satisfying demonstration of the orchestra at full power.

For this week, the Thursday evening concerts resume with performances tonight at 8 p.m., Friday morning at 10:45 and Saturday at 8:30 p.m. The program features several special attractions.

For starters, Music Director Neeme Jarvi returns to lead the orchestra in the world premiere performance of Lawrence Rappach's Sinfonia Antiqua, composed in 1989. The composer's explanation of the name is that the 11-minute work is modeled on archaic forms — the Italian overture — sinfonia, and the minuet-finale symphony. Rappach will also appear as guest lecturer at 7 p.m. in Orchestra Hall before tonight's concert.

In addition, there are two solos. Violinist Nadja Salerno-Sonnenberg will play Shostakovich's Violin Concerto No. 1 in A minor and organist Marilyn Mason will perform in Saint-Saens' Symphony No. 3 in C minor. It can be fairly described as a generous and intriguing program.

'A Lion in Winter'

The Fine Arts Society of Detroit will present "A Lion in Winter" at the Players' Playhouse Feb. 8 and 9. Directed by Kenneth Howard and co-produced by Norma Gohle and Dorothy Ludwig, the play is a brilliant modern classic, re-telling the tale of Henry II and his court. The cast includes David Mitchell as Henry II; Jane Combrinck-Graham as Eleanor of Aquitaine, Queen of England; Kathleen Handyside as Alais; Jeff Montgomery as Richard; Joseph Gillis as Geoffrey; Charles Ruda as John, and Robert Kitchen as Philip, King of France.

Backstage, Stephen Shrader and Phillip McCallister manage the stage and technical crew. The set was designed by David Kludt and adapted by Charlotte Giltner. Set construction was handled by Stanley Thorwaldsen. Others putting in backstage work were Sally Van Deventer and Greta Rettig. Medieval music will be performed by Grosse Pointe South High School students Ben Temkow, Colton Weatherston, Maria Di Fiore and Cymbrie Terepcynski under the planning of Evelyn Bogan.

'Grecian Odyssey' Travelogue at Macomb Center Feb. 14

The country variously known as the "Birthplace of Culture" and "Cradle of Civilization" will be portrayed in the travelogue "Grecian Odyssey" to be presented at 7 p.m. Thursday, Feb. 14, at Macomb Center for the Performing Arts.

The film and narration, by Clint Denn, is part of Macomb Center's monthly Travel Series, coordinated by lecturer and TV personality Dennis Glen Cooper and sponsored by AAA Travel Agency.

Denn, who has appeared on stage more than a thousand times in 42 states and Canada, has had a varied career in photography, acting, writing, travel and underwater filming for Hollywood movies.

In his Grecian program his cameras focus on the country's heritage as reflected in its ancient ruins, music, athletics, philosophy, architecture, arts and most of all its people — not a single race but an amalgam of Spartans, Dorians, Minoans, Ionians, Myceneans, Thessalians and Arcadians.

Tickets are $4.50 for adults and $4 for students and senior citizens. They may be obtained at the Center's box office or reserved on credit card by calling 286-2222, Monday through Friday, from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Macomb Center is located on the center campus of Macomb Community College at Hall (M-59) and Garfield roads in Clinton Township.

Follow me

All you're going to need for this four-day excursion is 12 bucks, a full tank of gas and some free evenings.

Our trip will start shortly after dinner Feb. 11, and will take us down Kercheval, then left on Fisher to Grosse Pointe Boulevard and left again at the S-slot of South, approximately 1/8 of a mile north of Fisher.

Find a parking spot, step inside to the ticket booth and shell out three of those 12 bucks for a North-South volleyball game.

Enter and say hi to South's ticket-taker and grab a seat in the lower bleachers that face the benches. You better eat before you go, though, because the concession stand generally isn't open for volleyball games.

Don't think you'll be home for "Coach" Tuesday, Feb. 12, either.

After a long day at the office, strip off your suit and paisley tie, slip on your Bugle boys and motor over to North.

You'll enjoy end-to-end action as North and South tangle in the second of two regularly scheduled basketball games.

You'll be able to second-guess the coaches, scream at the refs and release some of that aggression that built up at the office. If you travel east-bound on Vernier, you'll have to turn right into the North parking lot. When you enter, buy your tickets from Rose, say "hi" to Norm and then waltz to the concession stand for a slice of pizza or bag of popcorn. Oh,

Recent incident causes new look at old policy

By Rob Fulton
Sports Editor

North hockey coach Mike Manzella had seen — and been through — enough.

He was fed up with some poor behavior by two of his hockey players, and he wanted to dismiss them from the team. However, because of the Student Conduct and Discipline - Athletics code, Manzella was forced to keep the two players he felt were disrupting his team.

The players were suspended from competition, one of them for the second time in the school year, but remained on the team.

They asked Manzella to reconsider his position, and the following day he rescinded his resignation. However, he made a big enough stink that the policy will now undergo its first major review since its implementation.

"If a system has a policy, you have to follow the policy," said Gauerke. "If you think the policy needs changing, then you work to change it. I understand how Mike felt, but neither he, and I think one incident is one too many. One incident breaks that contract; therefore they should be let go."

Manzella felt he had the power to dismiss a kid from the team, but discovered his hands are tied by the board policy.

"I followed the board policies, but now I want to work to change them," he said. "I feel that our policy goes too far in allowing kids to make too many mistakes."

Superintendent Ed Shine has asked Gauerke and South athletic director Jo Lake to form a committee to analyze the policy. "It seems to me that after four years, maybe it's an appropriate time to review it and see if it's on target for what we're trying to do," said Shine. "Several years ago if an athlete had a problem with alcohol or drugs he or she was just removed from the team. Most parents and students thought that was too harsh and insensitive, so we came up with this policy. We've always been open about reviewing the policy, and I think it's worth having a group of concerned people get together to review the document."

Gauerke believes it's time for an evaluation, too.

"Anytime you have a policy that serves as an umbrella for all your activities, it needs to be periodically reviewed," said Gauerke. "We've been asked to look at the policy this year and determine if revisions should be made for the next school year."

"At North, we review the policy each year with our academic advisory committee, but this is the first time for a school-system-wide review."

The original document, based on a model policy developed by the Hazelden-Cork Foundation in Minnesota, reflected two years of work when it was first adopted, and according to Gauerke, was a bold but necessary move.

"It certainly was and is an improvement over what we had before," Gauerke said. "Before, we really had no official board policy. We were trying to address both ends of the spectrum, ranging from alcohol or tobacco abuse being ignored to the athlete being kicked off the team completely."

"Before, almost everything we did was punitive and involved no rehabilitation. We had to come up with some consequences for athletes who were caught abusing alcohol or tobacco, and a way to rehabilitate and help them."

"From time to time I think all our policies need a review and potentially a change," said Lake. "It's no skin off anybody's nose to give another chance. My biggest fear is for the kids who begin to abuse and use the system just because we do give a couple opportunities. If we don't give another chance, then we could potentially lose kids."

Any North or South athlete caught using tobacco, alcoholic beverages, narcotics, other drugs or other behavior-altering substances, except drugs as prescribed by a licensed physician, has to pay a penalty. However, the policy now gives kids three chances, which several coaches feel is too lenient.

At the beginning of the school year, each participating athlete and his/her parent or legal guardian, signs a Grosse Pointe Standards for Athletes card, agreeing to abide by the rules and regulations as outlined in the Standards Policies for Athletes. Basically, it's a contract.

The first time an athlete is caught, he or she is suspended from competition for two weeks, and must undergo therapy with a school counselor, which may include enrollment in the Grosse Pointe schools' substance abuse education program, called "Choices."

On that first offense, the athlete can still practice, but may not play in games for two weeks. It is up to the coach whether the player dresses for practice, or just sits and watches.

A second offense includes a four-week suspension and the completion of a substance abuse program which is approved by the substance abuse counselor. All costs are paid by the family.

A third infraction for an athlete calls for suspension from all sports for one calendar year, and re-enrollment in and completion of a substance abuse program approved by the counselor.

"We try to foster non-participation in alcohol, but we can only do so much," said South head football coach Jon Rice. "I think there should be some leeway on the first offense, but after that the repeat performance should be more punishable."

"When the kids sign it, they agree that they won't abuse any drug. If the lesson isn't learned after the first offense, then I don't feel they are a part of my team anymore. Our current policy goes on and on and on."

Frank Sumner, North head football coach, thinks he and the other coaches must adhere to the policy.

"The thing we have to remember here is that we all sat down to write it in the first place," he said. "There may be flaws in it and we might need to make adjustments now and then, but I have to go along with the policy that was established by coaches, players and administrators."

"Let's face it, every coach has the power of participation, if you know what I mean. The kids who abuse alcohol or drugs are still part of the team. I've always looked at an athlete who has a problem as sort of being on waivers. I have had kids suspended and I've lived with it and so have the kids on the team."

The policy will remain intact for the remainder of the school year, but it appears some changes are in order.

"I think our current policy is extremely sound and has served its purpose," Gauerke said. "I don't anticipate any huge changes, but there's always that possibility."

This statement must be signed and returned to the Athletic Director's office prior to practice or participation.

Student athletes at North and South must sign this card at the start of each school year. By signing it, athletes commit to say no to alcohol, drugs, or any other mind-altering substance, other than a physician's prescription.

Manzella marched into athletic director Tom Gauerke's office demanding action be taken to dismiss the two players. Gauerke stated he couldn't stand behind his coach of eight seasons because of the policy that was drafted in April 1987. Manzella wanted the backing of the administration to release the two kids from the team, and threatened to resign if he got no support. One day later, Manzella nor anyone else at this time, can work outside the policy."

"I think to play athletics is an honor and the kids who abuse the policy don't deserve a second chance," said Manzella. ## Blue Devils seek revenge in North-South hoop game

By Rob Fulton
Sports Editor

North will seek to extend its winning streak, while South will look for retaliation or pure satisfaction.

North and South, both playing in the Macomb Area Conference, will go head-to-head Feb. 12 in the second of two regular-season basketball games between the arch-rivals.

The Norsemen, without senior forward Tim Sacka most of the game, upset the Blue Devils, 56-53, Jan. 15 at South. South never led in that game as North used a deliberate and very consistent attack to hand South its first league loss.

The win gave North its first league victory and snapped a three-game losing streak, but also marked the second straight time North has beaten South. The Norsemen eliminated South from last year's district playoffs when Dave Vier hit a 45-foot shot at the buzzer.

Sacka was injured late in the second quarter and never returned after suffering a concussion. He also had a cut that required 16 stitches, but it only kept him out for one game — a loss at Utica.

This time around South needs to be better prepared to stop North's quick start. In the previous meeting, North shot to a nine-point lead and extended it to 12 midway through the second quarter.

"We're going to prepare for them just like we do any opponent," said South coach George Petrouleas, "but this time around it's a question of playing our game and not getting caught in their game."

South shot only 45 percent in that game compared to North's 55 percent, but still had several chances to win the game in the fourth quarter. South's floor-leader and top scorer, Tim Gramling, had the ball with eight seconds to play, but opted to pass the ball to Mike Armstrong, who had his shot blocked by North's Adam Korzeniewski, who finished with 17 points.

Korzeniewski was fouled and subsequently canned two free throws to pull away from a 54-53 score.

North coach George Olman wasn't so sure his team could get the early jump on South's outstanding defense, but he was pleasantly surprised.

South, which hangs its hat on defense, couldn't stop North's attack, which was led by D.J. Reynolds, who poured in 19 points.

"He had a hot hand," said Petrouleas. "They did a good job of getting him the basketball, and obviously we didn't do a good enough job of denying him the ball. North played a full game and we really only played the final nine or 10 minutes."

After beating South, North lost three straight before defeating Lakeview and Fraser. The reason for the 1-3 streak: inconsistent shooting.

"We were getting good opportunities, but weren't hitting the shots," said Olman, whose team was averaging about 38 percent from the floor.

Coaches generally don't need to hype the North-South games because the players are fully aware of who the opponent is. This time around, however, Petrouleas has got to approach the game from a "settling" viewpoint.

"We had too many guys playing with their emotions and not enough with their minds," he said. "We have to be able to concentrate on the entire game. Sure, there's not a lot needed to be said about the opposition, but we've got to play within ourselves and not get caught in the emotional situation."

Sacka looks forward to the rematch, as well.

"It seems South always has a tough time beating us," said Sacka. "I'm looking forward to playing them again. It means a lot to us that we get to play the people we know and it's a rivalry we get really up for."

Norsemen grapple to MAC team wrestling title

By Rob Fulton
Sports Editor

After finishing second to Grosse Pointe South for the Macomb Area Conference Blue Division dual meet championship, the North wrestling team proved why it's one of the finest tournament-tested teams on the east side.

North used a mix of youth and experience to win the MAC team championship Feb. 2 at Cousino.

"Some of the young kids placed and that's what pulled it out for us," said North coach Art Roberts, whose team had 10 finalists. "We are tournament tested because that's how I coach these kids. We approach the regular season meets as an opportunity to get ready for the state meet. Sure it means a great deal to us to win the championship, but our goal is to get as many guys to the state meet as possible."

North got first-place wins out of Bryan Fleming (112), Reid O'Brien (119) Keith Giannico (125) and Dan Skuce (130). Finishing second for the Norsemen were Chris Irving (135) and Dave Sandercott (103). Jim Ulicny (140) and Dave Pierno (heavyweight) took third place, and Tony Romolino (145) and Mark Brewster (152) took fourth place.

"We expect the guys who finished first to do so," Roberts said, "and in order to be successful in tournaments you need a couple others to step forward and we got just that."

O'Brien, with a record of 39-6 on the season, was voted the league's outstanding wrestler after he pinned all three of his opponents. Fleming is 34-2, Giannico is 43-2, and Skuce is 39-10.

"We started the season slow, but we expected that," Roberts said. "We had eight new guys in the lineup, so we knew we weren't going to get a quick start. But, the kids are peaking right now. We have asked some kids to wrestle up a weight class or two all season in dual meets, but we bring them back down for tournaments. I just hope I haven't burned them out."

In six tournaments this season, North has three fourth-place finishes, two seventh places and a sixth place.

Coach

Coach Mike Manzella decided it was time for his Norsemen to take a better look at themselves and ask, "Where is this season going?"

It continued to go down the tubes last week as North lost at Gabriel Richard (5-4) and at Cabrini (7-4).

North is 3-12 overall and 1-9 in the Michigan Metro.

"It was gut-check time," Manzella said. "We sat down before the Richard game and had a talk with the team. We just wanted each kid to know that despite the things we have gone through we can still win. We told the kids we just wanted 100 percent every period, and that's what we got."

North dominated the first period against Richard, but settled for a 1-1 tie at the end of the period. North fell behind 1-0, but John Ferguson tied the score.

But then the roof fell in.

Richard took a 4-1 lead, but North's Gary Corona cut the lead to 4-2 with his first of two goals on the night.

Carrying the play, North then countered with goals by Corona and Ferguson to tie the score at 4-4. Ferguson scored a power-play goal just 37 seconds after Corona's goal. Ferguson now has eight goals and six assists in league play.

"We put Corona on the same line with Ferguson and Nesom (Scott) to see what would happen," Manzella said. "Obviously it was a good move because we got a lot of production from them."

Ferguson finished with two assists.

With 5:53 to play, Richard tucked in the game-winning goal after a defensive lapse by North.

"We showed we could play with a good club if we want to," Manzella said. "The kids gave 100 percent every shift."

Despite a regional-qualifying team score, the Lady Norsemen couldn't knock off Troy, 130.6-107.5.

Megan Gray led North with a 7.75 in the vault, and a 7.85 in the floor exercise. Regional-qualifying numbers were also earned by Heather Henning and Debbie Stevenson on the floor, as both recorded a 7.8 score. Stevenson also earned a 7.3 on the bars.

At the Adrian Invitational, Henning placed ninth on the beam (8.0) out of 75 competitors, and was honored in a post-meet ceremony.

Paula Herodote had a 7.15 on the beam, and Nicole Venettis, in her first meet of the season, had a 7.6 on vault and a 7.1 on beam.

North is 2-3 overall and 2-1 in the league.

Volleyball

At the Wayne State Invitational, the Lady Norsemen took third overall, after defeating Dearborn Heights Robichaud, Dearborn Divine Child and Melvindale.

Losses to South and Livonia Churchill, the eventual tournament champ, prevented North from finishing higher.

Katie Loeher and Lori Haskell combined for 43 service points on the day, while Jennifer Shapiro had 45 passes. Missy Bania had 10 service points and 43 of 53 passes, and Nicole Herceg, Stephanie Gore and Bonnie Krieg combined for 26 blocks.

Bania had nine kills, while Gore had four and Krieg had five.

North then promptly knocked off league-leading Fraser, 15-6, 10-15, 16-14, after coming back from a 12-7 deficit late in the third match.

Noelle Cormier had eight service points and two aces for North, and Herceg and Bania, who had eight kills, had six points each.

With five kills, Bania led the defense, with help from Shapiro's 28 passes.

Earlier in the week, North lost to Anchor Bay, 3-15, 9-15.

For the third year in a row, the jayvee volleyball team won the North Invitational.

Swimming

On Jan. 31, North outdistanced Roseville, 98-88, behind the first-place performance of the 200 medley relay team of Rusty Milne, Charlie Roddis, Peter Ellison and Steve Williams.

That combination also won the 400 freestyle relay for North.

Milne was also a first-place winner of the 200 free, while Williams won the 200 individual medley. Roddis won both the 100 butterfly and 100 backstroke, and Ellison took the 500 freestyle and 100 breaststroke.

John Galvin took second in the 200 freestyle and 100 breaststroke, and was on the second-place 200 freestyle relay team with Mike Collins, Ditty and Jeff Dungan, who took second in the 50 freestyle.

Basketball

North maintained four full quarters of disciplined basketball to shell Lakeview Jan. 29, by a score of 80-62.

The win snapped a three-game losing streak as the Norsemen raised their record to 6-7.

Tim Sacka and Adam Lowry each hit for 17 points, while D.J. Reynolds scored 14 points.

Three days later at Fraser, North needed overtime to beat the Ramblers, 70-65.

Dave Vier, who finished with 15 points, sank two free throws to send the game into overtime, where Sacka, who scored 12 points, hit North's final five points as the Norsemen pulled away for the win.

Lowry led North with 17 points and eight rebounds, and Reynolds tossed in 14 points.

Knights enter stretch drive

The University Liggett School hockey team began the February stretch drive toward a second straight Class B-C-D state championship with a 3-1 victory over Livonia Stevenson, but lost twice to University School of Milwaukee.

Sophomore Chris Eldridge had an outstanding week in goal for the Knights, turning aside 31 shots against Livonia and 30 in the first of two games against Milwaukee.

At Livonia, ULS began the third period with the score tied 1-1, thanks to Andy Vandeweghe's 21st goal of the season. Stefan Teitge and co-captain Jesse Kasom assisted on Vandeweghe's tally at the 4:29 mark of the first period. Early in the third period, Vandeweghe again found the net, this time on a power-play. Kasom and Bill Robb Drew the assists. Mike Whelan sealed the victory with a goal on assists from Chris Crain and Nick Giorgio.

"Chris Eldridge was the single reason we were able to hold the score close," said ULS coach John Fowler of Eldridge's performance in a 2-1 loss to Milwaukee. "It was exactly what you want to see in a hockey game; no penalties, plenty of chances for both teams and superb goal-tending at both ends."

Kasom scored ULS' only goal. In a rematch with Milwaukee one day later, ULS was in a see-saw battle, but came up short, 4-3. Vandeweghe scored twice and Eric Kisskalt added an unassisted goal.

Basketball

You won't find the Knights' basketball team turning down an invitation from Maumee Valley High School.

Last week, ULS won the Maumee (Ohio) Valley Invitational for the fifth straight time, downing Ann Arbor Greenhills, 61-43, in the first game, and then clipping Maumee Valley, 70-60, in the finals.

The two wins extended ULS' winning streak to four and pushed its overall record to 7-5.

According to coach Chuck Wright, the Knights played their best first quarter of the season against Greenhills, as they raced to a 17-0 lead. ULS then kept up the pressure defense en route to a 41-13 edge at the intermission.

DeDan Milton, the tournament's Most Valuable Player, scored 18 of his game-high 26 points in the half, while Brent McMahon, who was named to the all-tournament team with Tarik Lester, had 10 of his 15 points in the first half.

"What a great half of basketball," said Wright. "Our defense was sensational. Chris Carroll really gave us a defensive spark and DeDan had a tremendous shooting night."

ULS struggled early in the championship game, but managed to lead, 20-17, at the half. The Knights led by 10 at one point in the second quarter as Lester hit for eight points.

"We were a step slow," said Wright. "Fortunately, we had our best foul shooting performance of the year."

ULS hit 18 of 22 free throws. Milton led ULS with 15 points and seven assists, and Lester had 14 points, six assists and seven rebounds. McMahon led the Knights with 17 points, and David Darby had 13 points, seven rebounds and an outstanding defensive performance.

Swimming

The ULS swim team, despite five first-place performances, lost to Ann Arbor Greenhills, 89-74, Feb. 1.

Beth Weyhing was a double winner in the 200 individual medley and the 100 butterfly, clocking a state-cut time of 1:04.7 in the butterfly. Jon Sieber won the 500 freestyle (5:34) and teamed up with Weyhing, Abby McIntyre and Sean Gardella for a first in the 400 freestyle relay. Gardella also took a first in the 100 freestyle and was second in the 100 breaststroke (1:51.1).

Take a deep breath, now. Kick up your heels and relax at home Wednesday, Feb. 13. You can soak your aching feet, count what little money you have left, and wonder how you're going to be able to make the North-South gymnastics meet and the North-South hockey game Thursday, Feb. 14.

Instead of a pleasant Valentine's Day dinner at a fancy restaurant, take your honey (it'll cost you three bucks more, though — excluding munchies), and drive to North. But don't turn the car off. Leave it running for an hour or so, because once you're out of the gymnastics meet, you'll need to hurry to catch part of the 8 p.m. hockey game at the St. Clair Shores Civic Arena.

The gymnastics meet starts at 7 and should be over by 8:30; plenty of time to scurry to the arena for the second and third periods.

Please don't speed. If you happen to run into the same St. Clair Shores policeman I did a year ago, LIE — don't tell him you're rushing just to get to a hockey game.

This night out, if you take your sweetie, will cost you six bucks at each game. If you go solo, it's six total. It's a pretty small price to pay for your special person if you want to stay out of the doghouse.

Turn left out of the North parking lot and take Mack to Nine Mile. Turn left as you stay on the right track to Nine Mile and Mack (Roy O'Brien's Ford dealership) and take that for 1 1/2 miles to Industrial Drive. Follow the winding road all the way to the back and you'll see the rink.

It's North's home hockey game, so you'll see Norm again; just pay him and in you go.

Ah, Friday, Feb. 15, what will I do now? You can watch

North play Utica in hoops and South hosts Romeo. Or, you can rest up for Feb. 16, when North and South wrestle in the individual regionals, or South's swim team is at the MICA championships, or you can watch Brighton play South in hockey, or North's hockey team play at home against Port Huron Northern.

By the way, that'll cost you more.

Blue Devil wrestlers grab Blue Division

By Rob Fulton
Sports Editor

No longer will the South wrestling team be a doormat.

After endless losing seasons in the now defunct Eastern Michigan League, the Blue Devils didn't drop one league dual match en route to the Macomb Area Conference Blue Division championship.

South, 13-5 overall, won its first title under eight-year head coach Larry Carr with an unblemished 6-0 league mark.

"This feels awfully good, and I think it's a tribute to every one of the kids on this team," Carr said. "It was a total team effort from day one."

But Carr won't rest now. "Once you start winning, you want more and more," he said. "We're not stopping here. We want to do a lot more, plus we're looking at next year and how this should carry over."

South took the title by defeating Cousino, 52-18 Jan. 31. In that match, Nate Eriksen, Lou Preston, John Cugliari, Scott Cairo, Frank McCarroll, Jess Culver and Frank Voelker all won their respective matches.

"Everything just came together for us because the kids did work hard all season," Carr said. "We sat down and talked at the beginning of the year and told the kids they had to learn how to win. Well, they have learned and now have a great deal of confidence."

But that confidence may be growing too quickly.

"I think we might be becoming a little cocky," Carr said. "It's something I'm not overly concerned about, I'll have to keep an eye on it. I know the guys are excited, and should be, but we have to remember where we started several years ago."

And that was at the bottom of the EML.

In the MAC championship tourney Feb. 2, South took second place, behind North.

First-place wrestlers for South were Chris Giannino (140), Jon Ostrowski (145), Brion Czaczy-ski (171) and Voelker (heavy-weight). Paul Kelley (112) and Lou Preston (130) were second-place finishers.

"We knew North was a very good tournament team," Carr said, "but we're very pleased with our finish."

Basketball

In a non-league affair at Mount Clemens, the Blue Devils had to overcome an 11-point fourth-quarter deficit to pull the Bathers' plug, 69-65.

South trailed most of the way, until Tom Eckert's three-point basket tied the score at 55-55 early in the fourth quarter.

During that run, senior point guard Tim Gramling hit six straight free throws. Also in the fourth quarter, South canned 14 straight free throws.

"We played their tempo for three quarters of the game," said South coach George Petrouleas, whose team is now 10-3 overall and 5-2 in the MAC White Division. "So we decided to turn it into our game in the fourth quarter by pressuring the ball."

South trailed 31-27 at the half and 51-40 at the end of three quarters.

"We were playing strong defense on everyone except Miles," Petrouleas said. "Don't ask me why we forgot about him, but we did."

Robert Miles reminded South of his potential as he poured in 19 second-half points.

But Eckert's shot got South back to a tie and an eventual lead.

Eckert came off the bench to score 11 points, and Matt Recht chipped in with 10 points, including three, three-point baskets.

Mike Armstrong led South with 18 points, and Gramling hit for 13 points to go with seven assists. Jeff Kerfoot, starting for the injured Bill Leins, had 11 points.

Three days later, South won its third straight game since losing to Roseville, topping L'Anse Creuse North, 40-33.

"We played the entire game at their tempo and couldn't hit a lot of our shots," Petrouleas said. "But we got out of there with the win."

The 33 points were the fewest South has given up all season.

"We smothered them defensively and didn't give them a lot of second-chance opportunities," Petrouleas said.

Gramling paced South with nine points and six assists, while Armstrong and Eckert each had seven. Blair Hess had seven rebounds and two blocked shots for South.

Volleyball

With wins over Roseville, 15-9, 15-6, and Utica, 15-3, 15-1, the South girls' volleyball team remained in a first-place tie with Anchor Bay.

South was paced by Tina Higel's three kills, 11 service points and four aces against Roseville, and Angela Drake's four kills against Utica.

Drake added four kills at home against Roseville, and Ashley Moran and Emilie Ayrault combined for six kills.

Higel had four kills and eight service points against Utica, while Moran had five kills and Sue Faremouth had 14 assists.

Swimming

After trouncing Roseville (116-70) Jan. 24, South was beaten by Dearborn, 104-81, Jan. 31.

In the win over Roseville, the 200 medley relay team of Jim Bellanca, Peter Mertz, Andy Walter and Tim Jogan took first place. Brenn Schoenherr followed with a first in the 200 freestyle, and Mertz took first in the 200 individual medley.

Walter was a winner in the 50 freestyle and Chad Hepner won the diving competition. Schoenherr went on to take the 100 butterfly, and Tim Jogan won the 100 freestyle.

Ollison, Schoenherr, Matt Millikin and Tim Harmount won the 200 freestyle relay, while the team of Ollison, Millikin,

The Grosse Pointe South wrestling team had plenty of reason to celebrate after winning the MAC Blue Division dual meet championship.

Schoenherr and Harmount won the 400 freestyle relay. Rob Bacon won the 100 breaststroke.

Bellanca, Stedem, Walter and Nelson then swam a state-cut time of 1:42.23 to win the 200 medley relay against Dearborn. Tim Jogan also qualified for the state meet with a first-place time of 1:47.41 in the 200 freestyle, and Stedem swam a state-cut time of 1:59.6 to win the 200 individual medley, and won the 100 butterfly in 54.98, also a state-cut time.

Walter took first in the 50 free, and Jogan had a state-cut time of 4:44.95 in the 500 freestyle. Stedem, Walter, Bellanca and Jogan ended the night with a first-place time of 3:23.9 in the 400 free relay, which qualified them for the state meet.

Hockey

After challenging for the Michigan Metro and being rated in the top five all season long, it appears that both those battles are being lost by the South hockey team.

The Blue Devils fell into third place after losing to Trenton, 7-2, and Gabriel Richard, 2-1, last week.

In the loss at Trenton, South got goals from Brad Warezak and Todd Frederickson. Tom Rajt scored in the loss to Richard.

Five minutes into the Trenton game, South lost Brian Crane for the remainder of the season when he suffered a broken collarbone. The team has also been hit hard by the flu and injury bug.

"The entire week was bad because we had guys missing because of injuries or illness," said coach Jim McCauley. "I hope we can get our full squad back because the next few weeks are crucial."

South is 10-5-1 overall and 5-4-1 in the league.

Star of the Sea

Tuna volleyballers move to 11-1

The past week, Our Lady Star of the Sea's volleyball team defeated Immaculate Conception, 15-6, 15-2, and St. Mary's, 15-2, 15-11, to move to 11-1 in league play.

Mary Helen Ciaravino won the Player of the Week award by going 14 for 14 at the service line. Ciaravino's serving and attack receptions were 100 percent for both games, and she also had six key scores. She also led all Tunas in every category. Defensively, Star was led by Deanna Maday's three kills, three blocks and numerous attack receptions.

Star's only league loss was to Oakland Catholic, but it has a shot at revenge in a rematch Feb. 7 at Star.

The Commodore pioneered development of the Pointes

By Margie Reins Smith
Feature Editor

Commodore Alexander Grant was the first person to clear land and build a substantial permanent residence on Grosse Pointe soil.

Grant was a contemporary of the George Washington, and probably was acquainted with him, since they both served the British king in the same military campaign during the 1750s.

Grant married and raised a family in Grosse Pointe — 11 girls and one boy. His home, called Grant's Castle because of its grandiose proportions, stood at the junction of present-day Moran Road and Lakeshore. It was built about 1775, the year before the Declaration of Independence was written, and parts of it remained standing for 100 years.

Some historic records accuse Grant of using British soldiers and sailors to help build and staff his private residence, but whether the accusations are accurate or not is unclear.

Today, the Grosse Pointe Academy, St. Paul Church and Moran Road itself occupy parts of Grant's acreage. Nothing of Grant's Castle is left, except detailed descriptions of the structure.

The building, 160 feet long, was made from huge oak timbers cut from the surrounding area. It was two stories high and completely surrounded by a two-story veranda. The spaces between the heavy timbers were filled with plaster and the corners of the logs were neatly dovetailed.

Grant's property (formally registered as Private Claim No. 231 in the year 1808) embraced nine acres on the lakefront and stretched 71 acres back into the wilderness — 640 acres in all.

Illustration by Richard Reins

Commodore Alexander Grant was the first to build a substantial home in Grosse Pointe. The large structure, as depicted in a recent illustration, was built by the Commodore about 1775 at Lakeshore and Moran Road.

Grant was the third son of a landed Scotsman and was born on May 20, 1734, in Invernesshire, Scotland. He joined the British navy and was sent to the colonies in 1757. He was first put in charge of a ship on Lake Champlain but eventually became commander of the Great Lakes region during a time when Detroit was the center of naval operations for the British in North America.

Grant moved to Detroit just about the time the eastern colonials were plotting to throw a shipment of tea into Boston Harbor. He married a 16-year-old French-speaking Catholic girl named Therese Barthe. In 1774, the year of their marriage, Grant was 40, English-speaking, and non-Catholic.

The following year he set about clearing his niche in the wilderness of Grosse Pointe, building his spacious castle and beginning his family.

Grant's Castle became known for its animated parties and its open-door hospitality. The Grants were known as a lively family. The Commodore was obliged to entertain various dignitaries and it was said that the great Indian chief Tecumseh was a guest at Grant's Castle.

The Grants reportedly owned the first harpsichord in the area.

The Grant girls, according to an old letter, were noted as "the finest girls in this part of the country." They evidently attracted naval and military officers who were stationed at the fort in Detroit. Many of Grant's daughters married officers and most of his descendants today live in various parts of Canada.

Commodore Grant's only son was adopted. The story goes that one day Mrs. Grant noticed a 3-year-old boy in the midst of a party of Chippewa Indians. She discovered that they had captured the boy during a raid on an Ohio settlement. Mrs. Grant, it is said, persuaded her husband to buy the boy from the Indians.

The Grants named him John, adopted him, and he grew up to inherit part of the Commodore's estate.

Commodore Grant was relieved of active duty after the Revolutionary War. By that time, the Northwest Territory was solidly American property, but he never became an American citizen. He held an administrative position with Upper Canada and sat on the executive and legislative councils — all the while living in Grosse Pointe.

Grant's Castle was for sale in 1820, seven years after his death at age 79. It became the property of George Moran and the last remnants of the building were finally torn down in 1875.

Theodore Parsons Hall owned John Grant's portion of the land in the late 1800s and built another house of grand proportions called Tonnancour. Hall's house reportedly contained the old walnut staircase, mantelpiece and doors from Grant's Castle.

Protect your home as if it had historic designation

You may be living in a historic house and not know it.

Of course, the odds that you own a dwelling important to this country's past is slim. But every community does have such gems.

A home can be historic for several reasons — architectural, event-related or age. An antebellum mansion with a sweeping staircase is quite different from a 1700 New England saltbox and Philadelphia's Independence Hall. But all are important to the country's history.

If you live in a house that has a local, state or federal historic designation, you already know that you must follow certain regulations concerning alterations and improvements.

If you live in a simple old house that has not been dubbed historic, but want it to look great while keeping the antique appearance, contact hardware stores and mail-order companies that specialize in period hardware or recreate the old look with new products.

A good start is to subscribe to The Old House Journal (six times/year, 435 Ninth Street, New York City, 11215-410). This magazine will help you with ideas to do the work yourself. It also provides product and contractor resources.

If you want to know about your home's appearance when it was first built, or during any other era, contact your local library or historical society. They might have pictures in the archives.

Also try city hall. They might have records detailing original design, an artist's rendition or a list of the materials used by the builder.

If all this fails, contact a preservation organization that may be able to provide generic information as it relates to a house of similar age, size, or geographic area. Some of them can provide fix-up guidelines for your period dwelling.

These groups include Preservation Techniques (Philadelphia)

Paint & Household by Bob D'Angelo

Q. I recently painted my house, and after a short time, noticed that the paint is peeling. I believe that I prepared the surface thoroughly and need some advice. F.Y.

A. It is my feeling that the peeling areas are caused by moisture in the wood, probably greatest outside the bathrooms. Condensation builds up from taking showers then pass through the walls to the outside surface. If the wood is not dry, paint won't adhere. The same may hold true for garages that are not attached to the house. Rarely are the inside walls painted or sealed in a garage, and moisture will also accumulate in the wood.

To prevent additional peeling of the house, allow the condensation to escape from the bathroom by keeping the bathroom door opened after showering, or you may even consider a bathroom vent. The garage can be sealed with a coat of primer and paint. If the wood comes into contact with the ground, moisture will be drawn up by capillary action, so try to seal the edges of the wood.

Q. As a paint contractor, I frequently get myself into trouble when a client tells me they want a coat of paint to freshen things up, yet when I do just that, they expect so much more. How do you successfully prevent such occurrences? F.A.

A. I must admit that I don't always successfully prevent such occurrences. There are times that no matter how specific a contract reads, there are always ambiguities between what the client expects, and what the contractor promises. When a client wants a no-frills paint job, ask them to be specific. On a scale of one-to-10, what does she expect. If she tells you a seven, you repeat it, and jot it down. Later on, when she tells you her husband is a perfectionist, and you remind her about the seven, she'll deny it, and you'll still be behind the eight ball. It's the nature of the game.

My friend Frank Mamarale once told me, "It's better to be upset that you didn't get a job than to be upset that you did." I also think that if you communicate throughout the job, it will be easier when you are nearing completion to solve punch list problems.

and the U.S. Department of the Interior (Washington, D.C.), which publishes a series of architectural briefs.

You also might wish to join the National Trust for Historic Preservation (1785 Massachusetts Avenue NW, Washington, D.C. 20036). Each October the trust holds an annual national conference that addresses historic preservation issues.

An important feature of the conference is Rehabitat, a "trade show" of manufacturers of restoration products and services. Through its Center for Historic Houses, the trust also sponsors a separate annual conference, in late spring, that is geared specifically to the interests of the private homeowner.

Not all preservation projects, though, are just for the homeowner. If you are associated with a historical structure that is classified as a museum, contact the "3M Saving Our Heritage" program (3M, Dept. PR, 530 Fifth Ave., New York City 10036).

Initially, the program will focus on the most perishable structures — buildings from Colonial times and those with a relationship to the Revolution and Civil War. But all historic structures will be considered.

Qualified sites will receive 3M sandpaper, energy-saving products such as 3M Window Insulator Kits, Safest Stripper Paint and Varnish Remover and Scotchgard Wipe On Polyurethane for wood projects.

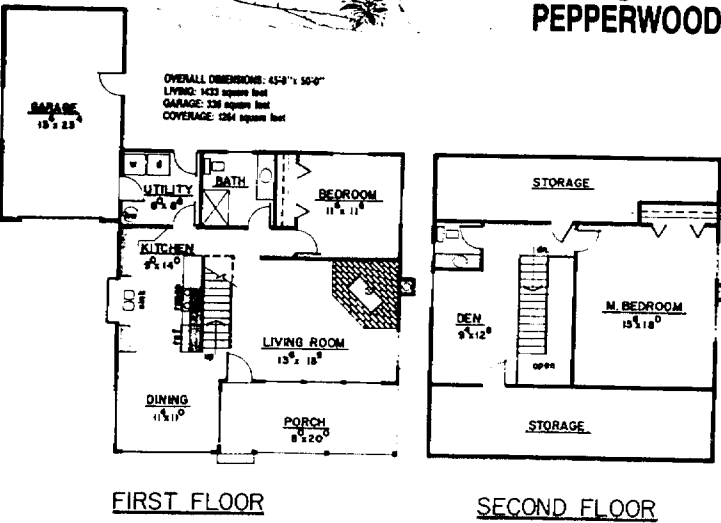

The Old Dutch Church of Sleepy Hollow in North Tarrytown, N.Y., is the first historic property selected for such assistance.

The Hudson River Valley church, built during the 1860s and the setting for Washington Irving's "The Legend of Sleepy Hollow," is about 30 miles north of Manhattan.

The church is undertaking major structural restoration. Donations to save the site, designated a National Historic Landmark in 1962, can be sent to The Old Dutch Church Preservation Fund, 242 North Broadway, North Tarrytown, N.Y. 10591.

PEPPERWOOD

FIRST FLOOR

SECOND FLOOR

Pepperwood: Blend of old and new

The Pepperwood is a blend of traditional and up-to-the-minute housing ideas. The wood siding, cedar shake roof and covered front porch are time-tested and functional designs that are just as attractive today as always. Features like the garden window in the kitchen are adaptations of old ideas improved with modern materials, but the skylight in the entry is feasible only with new building technology. This home would be at ease in a variety of locations.

The covered front porch is not only a gracious entry, but is usable space year-round for a variety of activities. Opening to the porch is a good sized dining room which is an especially cheerful place, as its three walls are filled with windows. The adjacent kitchen is large, with an efficient work plan. A full-length pantry and a garden window are special features.

A utility room is convenient to the kitchen. Since it opens to the back yard as well, a deep sink here would open up possibilities as a mud room. The downstairs bath can be reached without going through the living room, yet is also handy for guest use. A wood stove adds extra warmth to the living room. One bedroom makes the downstairs self-sufficient for a young couple or retirees.

Upstairs, a half bench, large master bedroom, and a small den make up private living area. The den, which lofts to the stairwell and also benefits from the skylight, could be used as a third bedroom. The upstairs also has a large storage area.

For a study kit of the PEPPERWOOD (108-44), send $7.50 to Todays Home, P.O. Box 2832-T Eugene, OR 97402. (Be sure to specify plan name and number when ordering.)

Select the right sandpaper for job

Not all sandpapers are alike. Selecting from among the many varieties carried by hardware stores and home centers confuses even some seasoned woodworkers.

Sandpaper — also known as a coated abrasive — does not contain sand; some types do not contain paper.

The various abrasives are flint (the least expensive, slow cutting and easily dulled), garnet (lasts up to five times longer than flint, but is more expensive), aluminum oxide (very durable and works well when you need to do a lot of sanding, especially when using power sanders) and silicon carbide (wet/dry sandpaper that will smooth almost anything).

According to the experts at 3M, sandpaper is graded according to particle size (grit number). This categorizes the particles according to the number of openings per inch in a screen through which they can pass. The most widely used system of grit numbers ranges from 12 (coarsest) to 600 (finest).

The following are the most commonly available grades:

Extra coarse — 24-36 grit for removing thick paint or other heavy finish and heavy rust.

Coarse — 40-60 grit for removing large amounts of wood or metal from unfinished stock.

Medium — 80-100 grit for removing small amounts of wood and light rust. Also can be used to prepare walls and ceilings for painting. For drywall, though, try 3M Drywall Sanding Screen. It has an open mesh design that resists clogging.

Fine — 120-180 grit for final sanding of bare wood and for removing slight imperfections.

PRE-QUALIFY YOURSELF

If you're so afraid you won't qualify for a mortgage that you're afraid to apply for one, relax! Lenders say that 85% of all mortgage applications are approved, so you are likely to be one of the fortunate ones. After all, banks are in the business of lending money. Unless the country is sailing through some very troubled economic waters, making mortgage money available is their job.

If you are nervous to the point of paralysis about securing a mortgage approval, take some preliminary steps to see how you might rate with a lender. Better yet, visit three so you can acquaint yourself with various financing programs. Do some comparison shopping that will lead you to the best deal.

Ask the officer if you would qualify for a home loan with your income, and in which price range you should be looking. No lender can make a firm mortgage commitment without a formal application (done after you have found the house you want), but he or she can tell you if you're in the ballpark.
