Grosse Pointe man has close brush with 'Jeopardy'

By Donna Walker Staff Writer

Answer: A resident of Grosse Pointe, he appeared on the Jan. 30 episode of the television game show, "Jeopardy."

Question: Who is Arthur Mitchell. Unfortunately for Mitchell, he lost on the show. However, he did manage to make it into the final round of "Jeopardy," which is a feat in itself.

Still, "It's kind of dull not to have won anything," Mitchell said.

Senior vice president associate creative director at Lintas: Campbell-Ewald, Mitchell, 35, said he became hooked on "Jeopardy" since age 13.

"I remember watching it when I was sick and stayed home from school," said Mitchell, who grew up in Grosse Pointe.

A 1973 graduate of Grosse Pointe South High School, he earned a bachelor's degree in economics from the University of Michigan in 1977.

He moved to Baltimore in 1980 and was working at an advertising firm there when he learned that "Jeopardy" was going to hold auditions for players at a local television station.

The tryouts were held over a two-day period in August 1989, and Mitchell said about 60 other hopefuls showed up on the day he went to audition.

Mitchell said the contestants were given a written test, which consisted of 50 of "Jeopardy's" more challenging ($800 and $1,000) questions. Afterward, contestants were allowed to play a mock game and were interviewed by casting agents, who were looking for people with "personality."

From the Baltimore tryouts, seven people were chosen to appear on the show, and Mitchell was one of them.

He didn't hear from "Jeopardy" again until January 1990, when he was asked to fly to Los Angeles to tape the show. "I told them I couldn't because I'd be on my honeymoon at that time," Mitchell said. He and his new wife, Jennifer, moved to Grosse Pointe in the fall of 1990, and Mitchell said he thought he would never hear from "Jeopardy" again. Then in October 1990, he received another call to appear on the show.

He flew out to California at his own expense and taped the show on Oct. 16.

The show is taped at television station KTLA in Los Angeles, and Mitchell said he had to be at the studio at 10:30 a.m. He was out by 3:30 p.m., he said.

"Jeopardy" tapes five shows a day, and all of the contestants who were going to play that day met in an upstairs room, where the game rules were explained to them. The contestants also got a chance to work a buzzer like the one they would be

One year after killing a Farms man, a Detroit youth is expected to be sentenced Feb. 22.

The youth, Cortez Miller, 15 at the time of the slaying, pleaded guilty to first-degree charged as adults with first-de-murder soon after the shooting death of Benjamin Gravel, 53, who was driving home from the Bayview Yacht Club shortly after 10 p.m. Feb. 8, 1990.

War Memorial case to be heard in court today

Staff writer

Wayne County Circuit Court Judge Michael J. Connor has the opportunity to give a Valentine's Day gift to either the Grosse Pointe War Memorial or three of its neighbors.

The neighbors, Mary Louis Bodman and Lee H. Wulfmeier and his wife, Barbara, are opposed to the War Memorial using a house it purchased last year for community activities, and want Connor to issue a permanent injunction that would bar any non-residential use of the house.

Connor issued a preliminary injunction on Dec. 14 and will consider making it permanent at a hearing today.

Known as the Griffin house, the property in question is located at 40 Lakeshore Drive, just north of the Alger House, the War Memorial's main building at 32 Lakeshore.

The War Memorial Association purchased the Griffin house (named after a former owner, John Griffin) for approximately $1.3 million last spring with the intention of using it to ease the burden on the Alger House, according to Mark Weber, president of the association.

The historic Alger house is overburdened, Weber said, and the association wants to move some of the 4,000-plus activities that are held there each year to the Griffin house. Activities that would be moved next door include art classes, seminars and meetings by non-profit organizations, Weber said.

The Farms City Council approved the War Memorial's request to rezone the Griffin property from residential to community service use last November. However, the War Memorial and the city council didn't know that there was a deed restriction on the house dating back to 1941.

The restriction limits the use of 40 Lakeshore and a few other houses in the area to residential use only. Created before Grosse Pointe Farms had zoning ordinances, the agreement was drawn up by a small group of neighbors, according to Weber.

Bodman and the Wulfmeiers have based their case against the War Memorial on the deed restriction.

If Connor rules in favor of the War Memorial, it can begin renovations on the house and property, including planting trees and dense shrubbery between the Griffin house and the next house to the north, Weber said.

If Connor rules against the War Memorial, "we'll look at our legal options and see what we can do from there," said Weber. Those options may include selling or renting the house.

Pointer of Interest Arvid Jouppi

By John Minnis

Assistant Editor It is appropriate that Arvid Jouppi, 72, a man who thought he would never love again, be featured as Pointer of Interest on Valentine's Day.

While most people remember where they were Jan. 28, 1986, when the space shuttle Challenger exploded, killing all seven crew members aboard, Jouppi has a more personal reason for remembering that tragic day: His first wife, Marjorie, died in his arms.

"I was so sure I'd never love again," he said.

A year later he met - or rather met again - the woman who was to become his second and current wife, Edith.

Actually, Jouppi had known Edith for more than a dozen years - she was once married to

Pointers serving in Desert Storm By Rose Palazzolo Special Writer

The Grosse Pointe War Memorial continues its effort to identify local residents now serving in the Persian Gulf.

The center sends each service member a care package a week. The packages contain cards and letters along with donations from local stores and residents. The current list has 34 names. The following men and women have been added in the last week:

Clarence Carnes was stationed in Germany for two years and scheduled to come home but was sent to Saudi Arabia instead. Carnes attended Grosse Pointe South High School. He graduated from a high school in Colorado after his family moved. He arrived in Saudi Arabia Jan. 4.

Army Sgt. David Cooley, 22, grew up in Florida, but his family now lives in Grosse Pointe Farms. He is stationed on the front line in Saudi Arabia. Cooley was stationed in Germany before being transferred to the Gulf.

Lt. Sarah J. Osetek-Hondrum, a 1976 Grosse Pointe South graduate, was deployed from Colorado Springs, Colo. She graduated from Nazareth College in 1982 where she earned a bachelor of science degree in nursing.

Gerald Lee was director of guest services at Harper Hospital when activated. He has been a member of the Army Reserves for 19 years. Lee is stationed with the 207th Evacuation Hospital

Andrew Lightbody, 20, a 1988 Grosse Pointe South graduate, was a student at Wayne State University when reactivated for service with the Marines.

Christopher Rayl, a 1980 Grosse Pointe South graduate, re-enlisted in the Army in 1989.

Thomas N. Combf, 19, a 1989 Grosse Pointe South High graduate, enlisted in 1989 and is stationed with the U.S.F. McKee.

John Stickford, 27, attended St. Paul grade school and graduated from University of Detroit High School in 1981. Stickford graduated from Holy Cross College in 1985. He flies A-6's.

William Denler, a 1986 Grosse Pointe South graduate, served in Panama and was discharged August 1990. He has been re-activated but not yet deployed. Denler was attending classes at Macomb Community College and worked part-time at Campbell-Ewald when he was called to duty. He is a member of the 82nd Airborne.

Others listed previously are: Mathew Armstrong, Vincent Bono, Bruce Fine, Jason Fontella, Gregory Grove, James Harrison, John Hielscher, Alita Irwin, John Kujat, Michael Krieg, Bradley Levitan, Robert Marsh, Doug Masserang, Anthony Meier, Thomas Nank, Dale and Rudy Rhode, Christine Rickel, Larry Rock, Thomas J. Flashing light in Farms put on hold

A small band of residents convinced the Grosse Pointe Farms City Council Monday to postpone installing a flashing traffic signal at the intersection of Beaupre and Moran.

At the council meeting, Moran resident Bruce Green presented a petition that he said was signed by 42 residents in the neighborhood who are opposed to the traffic light.

The light was going to be installed by April by Motor City Electric Co. and would have cost the city between $6,500 and

Green said the light would be an unnecessary expense for the city, because there had not been enough research on the matter to warrant its use. He also expressed concern that the light would lower property values and said that he did not want it flashing in his bedroom window at the meeting, the council asked 24 hours a day.

Three other residents who live near that intersection voiced similar concerns.

The city council decided to install a flashing light at that intersection at a public hearing Jan. 31. The light was meant to increase driver awareness of the stop signs on Beaupre at Moran to the council and Public Safety Director Robert Ferber.

However, Ferber said there is no documented speeding problem on those streets. "There is a perceived problem, due to the heavy volume of traffic," on those streets, Ferber said.

The volume of traffic and the number of "perceived speeders" may decrease in the next few months when motorists discover that the barricade on McKinley at Mack has been removed, Ferber said.

After listening to the residents

Ferber if the order for the traffic light could be postponed a few months to see if the McKinley barricade removal has any effect on the traffic on Beaupre and Moran.

Ferber said that a traffic safety analysis did not approve or recommend the use of a flashing light at that intersection, but and to slow speeders, according that he personally would like to see a flashing light over every stop sign in the city because it increases driver awareness, especially at dark intersections like Beaupre and Moran.

The council then decided to take a "wait and see" approach to the traffic light. Council members approved a motion to not take any action regarding the installation of the light until Ferber has had a chance to evaluate the traffic volume on Beaupre and Moran and, possibly, bring the matter back before the council

"That is the only natural, wooded area left within our city limits, and we need to preserve it for our children," Potter said. "I'm a firm believer in the adage from our ancestors, we borrow it from our children.'

Some residents said that they would not be opposed to the path if it were made of an aesthetically-pleasing material, such as woodchips. However, a Parks and Recreation commissioner who was in attendance said that woodchips float when it rains and would clog up the park's drainage system.

Hearing scheduled on park path

By Donna Walker Staff Writer

Should a walking path be put around the perimeter of Ghesquiere Park, and if so, should it be made of asphalt, woodchips or some other material?

The Grosse Pointe Woods City Council wants input and will hold a public hearing on the matter at its March 18 meeting.

In November 1986, Woods voters passed a $3.5 million bond issue for park improvements, and the walking path is one of the projects proposed by the Parks and Recreation Commission, said City Administrator-Clerk Chester Petersen.

A sketch by the city engineer calls for a 5-foot-wide, asphalt path to be installed around the perimeter of the park. The path would meander around existing trees so they would not have to be cut down.

Some residents, however, believe that the park already has too much concrete and asphalt, with parking lots, tennis courts, and a sidewalk down the center of the park.

Two residents opposed to the path are Jim Perry and Margaret Potter. Hoping to get the walking path issue on the ballot by collecting signatures from 10 percent of the city's 14,367 registered voters, the pair kicked off a petition drive on Jan. 17. However, the council is under no obligation to put the issue on the ballot because it is a non-ordinance question.

Potter presented petitions, which she claimed were signed by 2,556 residents opposed to the path, to the council at its Feb. 4

"We feel that the people have spoken, and we're hoping that that we don't inherit the Earth now you'll take a different view of putting a jogging track in the park," Perry said.

Other residents also got a chance to voice their opinions about the path.

One of the 60 some residents at the meeting was Joe Nilan, a registered voter and student at Grosse Pointe South High School. He told the council that he was opposed to the path because it would go through the wooded area on the park's northwest side, where he played as a n many respects, Republicans George Bush and John Engler are ideological twins. But a comparison of their recent budget proposals shows that they do differ in several important respects.

GOP 'twins' differ on help for the needy

They do agree on many issues, of course. Both GOP leaders are seeking to downsize government. Both hope to leave more money in the hands of taxpayers to spur economic revival and enable people to satisfy more of their own wants.

To achieve that aim, Bush would trim capital gains taxes that critics say would aid the well-to-do while Engler seeks property tax relief that Democrats say would benefit business and the wealthy more than it would the average homeowner.

However, Bush also wishes to reduce some federal programs that benefit high and middle-income people while Engler would trim some programs that help the poor and unfortunate who often cannot fend for themselves.

The governor put it somewhat differently in his State of the State comment Monday:

"We must never depend on government to do what we can do for ourselves."

Bush wants to trim scholarships for middle-income college students and eliminate farm subsidies and raise Medicare premiums for people with incomes of more than $125,000 a year.

In Michigan, Engler proposes to reduce or even eliminate state benefits for many of the 120,000 people on general assistance, close some prisons and mental hospitals, and eliminate child-care licensing and monitoring functions.

In at least two other areas, Bush's spending proposals for the coming year run counter to Engler's public pronouncements for the state of Michigan. One is in the controversial area of the arts and humanities. A second is in support for science.

As part of a request for $833 million, an 8.5 percent increase, for "preserving America's heritage," Bush is seeking increases of 15.5 percent for the National Gallery of Art, 14.8 percent for the Smithsonian Institution and nearly 5 percent for the National Endowment for the Humanities.

Engler, however, has proposed eliminating the state support that has helped preserve Detroit's cultural jewels that former GOP Gov. William Milliken once termed "state resources." The proposed cuts could force the closing of the Detroit Institute of Arts and curtail other cultural services.

As for science, the president has proposed spending $71.3 billion for research and development, an 8 percent boost. The National Science Foundation will get a 13 percent increase to $1.9 billion and the National Institutes of Health a 6 percent increase to $4.6 billion for its basic research budget.

Admittedly, state spending in this area is not comparable but the director of the Cranbrook Institute of Science has warned that seven science museums will be "seriously impacted" by budget cuts. Four of them, in Ann Arbor, Bloomfield Hills, Detroit and Lansing, have provided informal science programs for more than 800,000 people, he said.

In both capitals, legislative bodies are offering alternatives to many of the leaders' spending proposals. Democrats who control Congress have hopes of reversing some cuts. But in Lansing's divided Legislature, House Democrats lost a round when the state Court of Appeals ruled out one of the sources they had relied on to finance one of their alternatives.

The ruling expanded a business tax deduction that the Democrats had planned to eliminate to fund their proposed property tax relief. Some observers think the ruling also may make it impossible for Engler to fund the 20 percent school property tax cut he seeks over a three-year period.

Overall, however, it can be argued that Engler has been more responsive to the demands of the Republican right wing than Bush has been and that the governor is proposing a virtual revolution in downsizing social welfare programs as well as other government functions.

Unfair as it may be, however, it appears that in the deepening recession, social programs that are funded by either federal or state sources, or by both, are going to suffer along with the poor, the jobless and other people who find it difficult to support themselves in these times.

Gremlins invade our stories

n reviewing the library bond issue election, we were reminded again of the difficulty of human communication, especially when gremlins invade the minds not only of journalists but of readers as well.

In one story on Jan. 31, the News omitted a word that left an inaccurate impression. The story had listed the millages that support the schools, libraries and debt reduction but then reported the levy "amounts to $125 per year for a home with an SEV (state equalized valuation) of $100,000." The story should have said that the $125 represented only the library tax.

The News also incorrectly reported that the four-tenths to five-tenths of a mill increase that would be sought once the building was erected would cost certain homeowners $40 to $50 "per month" for operating expenses. The paragraph should have said, "per year," of course.

We apologize for those mistakes but we appreciate having them called to our attention by our observant readers. Several who opposed the bond issue cited the first error, the omission of the word "library" that mistakenly minimized the current level of school and library costs. Others who backed the library called our attention to the second mistake.

There may have been other errors of omission or commission in the coverage of the library issue but none of them was intentional, although some readers told us our errors showed we were "biased" about the library issue.

One critic cited as evidence of our "bias" his belief that the Grosse Pointe News had sponsored the full-page ad that endorsed the library expansion. But, in fact, the ad was placed and paid for by the Citizens for a New Library whose officers had signed it.

Some other readers failed to note the distinction between news and editorial coverage of the bond election. The news department sought to provide as fair and complete a coverage of both sides as possible but the editorial page did reflect the newspaper's opinions in support of the is-

By its very nature, an editorial expresses an opinion. And the News does express opinions on a wide variety of subjects. Its editorials often support the schools on proposals that we think will benefit the community but we have differed with the superintendent and school board on some occasions, too.

Why do we take sides in editorials? It's because we think a newspaper has a responsibility to share not only its factual news reports but its informed opinions with its readers even when editorial writers know many readers will disagree.

In its efforts to report community opinion, the News also opened its letters columns to anyone with a view about the library bond election. The result on the Thursday before the vote was a record outpouring of letters. The printed letters divided roughly two-to-one in favor of the issue because that proportion reflected the views of the letters received that week.

The total of 9,635 ballots cast was, in our view, a representative vote if not a huge one. But the margin of defeat left no doubt about the views of the majority who voted. The library expansion issue is dead for the immediate future.

Why did Park back library?

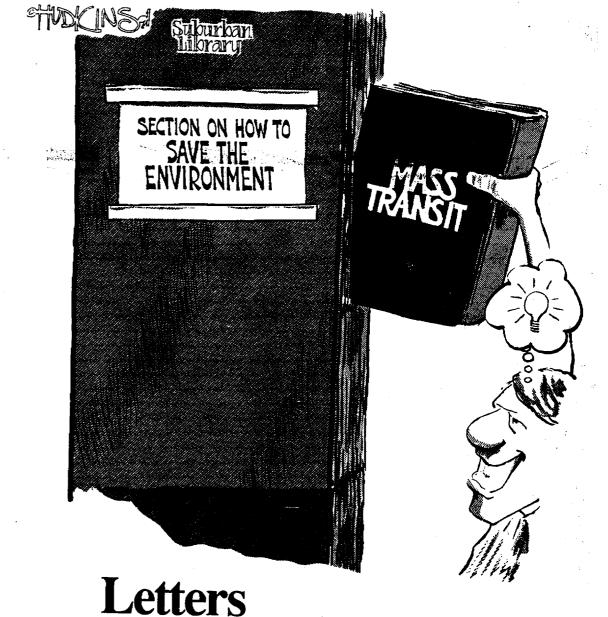

or the second time in four years, Grosse Pointe Park voters approved the expansion of Grosse Pointe's public library facilities but why did they do so again on Feb. 4 as they had done in 1987?

Frankly, we don't know but when we asked Mayor Palmer Heenan for his opinion he expressed pride in his community's action and felt that it reflected the outlook of the younger, upwardly mobile residents of the Park.

A private citizen in the Park, who asked to be unnamed, said he thought the Park's support may have stemmed from the community's relatively high proportion of renters who may have felt they could benefit from an improved library without having to pay more for it.

Whatever the reason for their actions, the Park voters deserve a public compliment from library backers for their steadfast support for an expansion that many people feel is still needed even though it was defeated by a majority in the other four Pointes and in the Harper Woods segment of the district.

Sad

To the Editor:

I live in a country with the highest standard of living in the world. I live in a state which has one of the higher standards of living within that country. I live in a city which has one of the highest socio-economic levels in that state.

I live in a state whose leaders perceive that we cannot afford the arts.

I live in a community which perceives that we cannot afford a library. What a sad commentary on life in these United States in the 1990s.

Cutbacks

To the Editor:

I am writing to you regarding the Jan. 24 article on state cutbacks and who would be affected. It's quite obvious that these cutbacks, controlled by Gov. Englet, would hit the needy, the needy being, of course, the general assistance welfare, youth programs, and people enrolled in the state's Medicaid program.

I understand that the cuts are necessary, but why do the general public aid programs have to suffer? While these cuts occur, the upper income levels and senior citizens save bundles. I find the whole situation unfair. If these cuts must be taken, let them hit public programs that can afford a little loss.

More letters on page 8A

Cuts like these destroy progress of programs and send a lot of people out on their own. People working under these programs are also affected, and might even flee to better employment. Some programs may be forced to close up due to lack of state aid. Isn't it a little pathetic that the better-off families get to sit back and observe tax savings as poor or desperate people are shut

Friends

To the Editor:

I am writing in response to "Long Lost Friends" Jan. 24. I feel that it had a sharp point on friends and how much we should appreciate them. I am a high school student, and I am very thankful for every single friend I have. I think people don't take the time to appreciate friends as much as they should.

I have a lot of friends but I have one special best friend, and I don't know what I'd do without her. Friends are always there for us, either to listen to our problems, or just to admire. Either way, if people don't appreciate each other now, they may miss the chance to develop a special relationship and may regret it.

A longdistance Valentine

After more than 14 years of marriage, this is only the second time I have not been able to celebrate Valentine's Day with my

The first Valentine's Day we were apart was last year. Before anyone gets the wrong idea, no we are not separated or divorced. Actually, we have one of the modern marriages one reads about in the magazines.

We have a commuter marriage. Terry works for Saturn in Spring Hill, Tenn. We see each other on most weekends by tak. ing turns flying back and forth. Though we've accumulated some frequent-flier tickets from Northwest, the experience has been trying.

We've never been apart for such a long time. In fact, we met in 1976 when we both worked at the Cross Co. in Fraser, and for several years after we were married, we rode to work together, ate lunch together and saw each other throughout the work day.

We spent all our time together. This being apart is an unusual experience.

A year ago the first of this month, Terry had a chance to work for Saturn as a contract employee for six months. Then the contract was extended for another half year and then another. She won't be back home permanently until mid-June that is, if the contract isn't extended again.

All in all, though, the experience has done me some good. I've had to learn to cook, grocery shop and do all the other things Terry did that I just took for granted.

In the process of living alone, however, I've developed my own set of habits and likes and dis-

The trouble is, I've picked up these quirks on my own, and when Terry comes back for good, we're going to have to learn to live together all over again.

Take the clothes hooks on the back of my (or, rather, our) bedroom door. The hooks are for my jeans, my sweat shirts, my sweats and my pajamas. The problem is when Terry comes home for the weekend, all of sudden she uses my hooks for her ieans, her sweat shirts and her pajamas. My space is being

On one weekend, out of irritation, I took all of her things off my hooks and dumped them on the floor. Needless to say, she didn't like my approach. So the next time I went into the bedroom, I found my jeans, sweat shirt and pajamas on the floor and her stuff neatly hanging on my hooks.

Another pet peeve I've developed concerns the towels in the bathroom. Those are my towels that were put there for my use. I prefer certain towels over others and my towels and washcloths have to match. I cannot tolerate using a yellow washcloth with a blue towel, but apparently Terry does not seem to share my sensibilities (except for the "company towels" she keeps permanently displayed but never used).

After one of her weekend visits during which she haphazardly uses towels and washcloths without regard for color, a matching towel and washcloth cannot be found. I then have to do the laundry so that I can get the linen closet back in har-

I won't even get into the use of my razor.

Another thing — Terry doesn't seem to understand which seat at the kitchen table is mine. For her benefit (if she decides to read this column instead of pitching it), I will publicly state which chair is mine:

It's the one at the end of the table right next to the heat vent. It's the cozy, warm one that's great after getting up from a winter night's sleep. It also has the best view of the TV I put in the kitchen so that I can watch 'Good Morning America" while I have my morning coffee and read my morning paper.

Because Terry's an earlier riser than I am, on weekends when I get up I'm forced to sit at sense of my newspaper after it tance.

has been womanhandled.

All in all, though, I think we can learn to live together again - although we may have to get a bigger house with two sets of hooks, two bathrooms, two sets of towels, two heat registers, two televisions and two morning pa-

But I do miss her. I miss not having someone at home at night. I miss not having someone to discuss my day with, someone who can share by disappointments and victories. Sure, we talk daily over the phone, but it's not the same.

I look forward to our weekends together. In fact, our weekends are almost like dates because we are learning about each other all over again. That part is exciting. The lonely days in between can make a week or two seem like a long time.

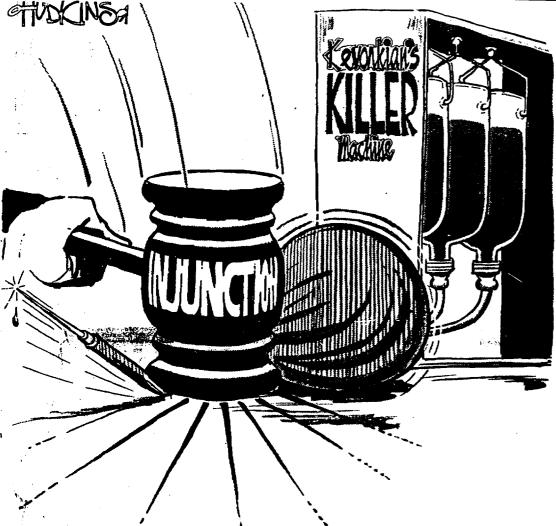

An avid fan of mine, I'm sure Terry will be reading this column. So, Terry, happy Valenthe wrong end of the table, drink tine's Day. I hope it's the last steeped coffee and try to make we'll have to celebrate long dis-

Library, traffic and feminine crisis in Gulf

After wading through a crate of mail and back issues, now I know what's been on your minds while I've been trying fruitlessly to get a tan.

The library. Page after eyepopping page of letters for and against (the letters to the editor must have set a newspaper record) - and now 9,500 of you have duked it out at the polls (but probably not settled the question once and for all). Been putting the war and the recession on the back burner, have

The Farms traffic plan. Along with the library, one of Grosse Pointe's most-recurring stories. And most-insoluble. You can play around with one-way streets and barricades, but you still have narrow roads and more multi-car families and working couples than you had when the town was built. Ergo: more traffic.

Boy, turn your back for a month and all sorts of crazy things happen. Poor Conrad Mallett 'fesses up to having stolen a textbook. (Give me a break. That isn't a story.) Tom Monaghan decides not to build his dream house after all. (Huh?)

Comerica backs out of its plans for the Ford Auditorium site. Not surprising, considering the economy, but I was surprised anyway. The oomph was let right out of that issue, but it isn't really solved until voters grapple with the core question: whether to build private developments on public space. Detroit becomes so scared of the potential for terrorism in its Arab population that the mayor tries to call out the National Guard, just in case. Engler was right to refuse, barring something concrete. But we'll hear more on this, as fear of Arabs grows with Saddam's back more and more against the wall.

What will be the next hot topic, now that the library has been shot down three times? (I do not take libraries lightly, by the way. Living where I do, I know the disappointment of an inadequate library far better than you do.)

Continuing on through the month's stack of mail, I didn't have to look far to find something to wonder about. Grosse Pointe minister John Corrado raised a provocative question in his last church newsletter. It seems that women serving in the Gulf are not being provided with any feminine hygiene supplies.

What does this mean, exactly? Corrado said he had heard that the items are not standard issue and not always available in the PX either. Given the fact that they are not optional cosmetic choices, he said, the Army's failure to supply them doesn't speak well for its attitude toward

Is this just one example of women not being respected in the military? Or is it a symptom of widespread shortages for all the soldiers?

For months, newspapers have urged us stay-at-homes to send toothpaste, shampoo, deodorant, toilet paper to the troops. Does this mean that if we don't send toothpaste, the soldiers can't brush their teeth?

I decide to make a few phone calls.

Teri Hearn of the War Memorial says it wouldn't surprise her to learn that women aren't issued sanitary supplies - after all, the troops are also begging for toilet paper.

You can survive without toothpaste and deodorant, but toilet paper? But Bob says he remembers military issue toilet paper. It's available, but it sure isn't Cottonelle. He isn't surprised the troops are begging.

Hearn is spending her days surrounded by piles of donated items to send to the 30 Grosse Pointers now on the War Memorial's list. In demand are soap, deodorant, dental floss, toothpaste, toilet paper, "the things that make you feel human." And, yes, sanitary napkins are

"They tell us to make sure to mark the package 'feminine hygiene' or else the guys will clean their guns with them," she said.

More phone calls. Mary Ellen Walker at Congressman Hertel's office gets interested and calls around too. She finds the Family Support Group, a Michigan Army National Guard agency, where Capt. Jennifer Clark confirms the shortages.

"Women are not issued those items," Clark says when I reach her. "And there has been a shortage regarding being able to purchase them at the exchange.

Clark explains that toilet paper is standard issue, but personal hygiene items like shampoo and deodorant (and sanitary supplies), "the things that help make life more bearable," must be bought at the PX - which is often geographically out of range or happens not to stock them at the moment.

A friendly reservist at the Defense Logistics Agency agrees that sending the "care" packages is "a convenience, more than anything else," because the people in the front lines can't get to the PX. He reminds me that women aren't at the front, that they are in non-combat support roles, but he doesn't argue when I say that women driving supply trucks often end up at the front in spite of themselves.

As for feminine hygiene products, "we sent enough over there for the next five generations, I think - but there are spot shortages." He added that some of the items get used in other ways.

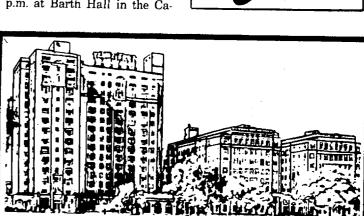

"We spend millions of dollars developing things to clean guns with — and they turn around and use something else. So mark the packages," he said. There are five Grosse Pointe women on the War Memorial's list. Four are serving in the Gulf (two nurses, two soldiers) and one is stateside. Maybe their families can shed some light on this issue.

In the meantime, write your congressional representative. Feminine hygiene products are just as necessary as toilet paper.

Or include those supplies in your regular drop-off at the War Memorial. Or call the Tampax Corp.'s 800 number — they're sending free supplies to the Gulf, but they need the soldier's name and APO number.

That's 1-800-TAMPONS - or, if, like me, you're annoyed by phone numbers without numbers, 1-800-826-7667.

New era

To the Editor:

Some protest Gov. John Engler's proposed budget cuts. Instead, protest Michigan's high cost of owning property or a business, making a living, educating our kids, raising our families, saving, investing for the future and dying.

In Michigan it is easier to sell crack on the streets than to sell flowers. Taxes and paper work strangle small businesses. Personal income taxes are higher than in most other states. Exemptions for children have not kept pace with inflation, penalizing families. Our property tax rates must come down. Perhaps 2.5 percent the rate that brought about a "Massachusetts miracle" before Dukakis made it a Massachusetts mess.

Children are penalized because there is no meaningful competition in the delivery of a quality education. Children must be able to choose where they go to school and teachers must be unshackled to teach.

People leave Michigan to die. They take their accumulated assets with them because it is too expensive to leave them here. Other states benefit in greater wealth, greater representation in Congress, and greater productivity because human capital is the most important resource of all.

Michigan needs to let people, all people, keep more of what they earn. We need to unleash the creative energies of our cities and our highly diverse and talented people - before they go elsewhere.

Agree or disagree, John Engler has begun an important debate. Join it. Let him know what you think about the particular cuts. He leads with a bold heart and a demonstrated willingness to listen. He deserves our thanks. He begins a new era of growth and prosperity in Michigan.

To the Editor:

As chairperson of Citizens for a New Library, I wish I could personally thank the hundreds of people who worked so hard in support of the plan to improve our libraries. As disappointed as I am in the loss of the election, I am proud to have worked with so many active and committed individuals. We sometimes take for granted the public officials, administrators, staff and volunteers who give so much of their time and talent to sustain a quality community.

I would like to share some thoughts gathered over the 3-1/2 years I have been involved in this project and express my appreciation to those who shared their time, energy and leadership.

My respect has deepened for the members of the school board who work as our elected representatives in balancing education, library service and financial priorities. They established a process that invited broad citizen input and involvement in the recommendation of a new library on the Brownell site and in the support of the bond issue campaign. They took a courageous stand, provided complete information and established their leadership as caretakers of the future of our library system.

I more fully understand the complexity of the issues confronting all of the city councils, mayors and administrators. I was impressed by the process the Farms followed in reviewing the site plan, maintaining a sense of fairness and in understanding the need to support the institutions that serve all the Grosse Pointes and Harper Woods.

My admiration for the professional expertise of school system and city administrators was reinforced. Their commitment to excellence extends well beyond their job responsibilities. I especially admire the tenacious desire of Charles Hanson to promote the vision of what our library should be, and I was most impressed by the leadership, honesty and energy of Ed Shine. We are lucky to have them heading two of our most important educational systems.

This community is blessed with teachers, librarians and support staff who are highly qualified and exceptionally dedicated. Many of these staff members shared their time and talent in developing the new library plans and by volunteering to work on the campaign. Special mention goes to Kathy Roberts who used her communication talent to help all of us clearly and concisely articulate issues, and who wrote a series of informational publications.

Most satisfying to me was the involvement of so many community leaders and unselfish residents in the process of reviewing this complex issue, coming to consensus on a solution, donating money to run a campaign and working to gather voter support. The defeat of the bond issue was not due to any lack of effort by those rare people who consistently volunteer to participate, to build and to lead. Special accolades go to Doris Brucker, who chaired the citizen planning committees; Linda Schneider and Gloria Konsler, who were my co-chairs and gave hundreds of hours of time; Don Sweeny, the campaign committee treasurer; my wife, Maureen, who volunteered a month of time as my assistant; my adult children, who gave me emotional support; and to many old and new friends too numerous to mention, who helped in so many ways.

Knowing I risk further charges of bias, I want to acknowledge the professionalism of the Grosse Pointe News. A community as educated and as sophisticated as we are should appreciate the only Grosse Pointe newspaper that values fair and factual reporting and clearly identifies editiorial comment. In addition, as citizens we should understand the significant commitment the Grosse Pointe News made in printing all the letters to the editor concerning the bond issue. Few, if any, newspapers provide such a complete forum for public debate. Finally, I hope that the defeat of this very important issue does not portend a lack of trust in our local leaders and public officials, a misunderstanding of the responsibility and sacrifice required to maintain local control of the quality of our community, or an inability to invest in the future of a community that was built by public and private capital. This is not the last tough tax or bond issue that we will face in the 1990s. The future of our community depends on our ability to identify a common vision of what this community can be and a willingness to work together to achieve that vision.

Interpretation

To the Editor:

The article in the Feb. 7 issue of the Grosse Pointe News, "Library Bond Defeated," indicated my response to the bond defeat as 'it's going to be business as usual now." While this might be interpreted to mean that the negative vote had no impact, it should be clarified that the library must now continue on its path of containment and space modifications in order to deal with overcrowding. Some changes have already been made to existing space, and future changes will be necessary in order to accommodate various collections of materials.

A library task force has been meeting to discuss internal rearrangements which might meet the public's demand for information in various formats. Videocassettes and compact discs are only two illustrations of new formats of information.

Interpreted in its broad sense, business as usual means that the library doors remain open. However, interpreted in light of the bond election defeat, business as usual means that the library will have to continue to make difficult choices and decisions while trying to solve its space needs.

Hill parking

To the Editor:

Editor's note: This letter was submitted to the Grosse Pointe Farms City Council last October and is reprinted at the request of the Hill As-

On behalf of the members of the Hill Association we want to thank Mayor Fromm, City Manager Andrew Bremer, City Clerk Richard Solak and the rest of the city council for their outstanding efforts in re-building the main parking lot on the Hill.

Improving the lot has added to the aesthetic beauty of the area with its tasteful plantings, decorative lights, brick walkway and underground electrical wires. Having the lot restriped added spaces available for patrons on the Hill. Customers have noticed the improvements, making comments such as the Hill being "classy," "convenient" and "accessible." As more and more customers realize they can park free of charge due to validation, they are more willing to spend longer periods of time on the Hill to browse. Customers have discovered shops on the Hill they did not realize existed.

First impressions last. The improved parking and appearance created by the 'new lot" has significantly enhanced the shopper appeal of the Hill. For that the merchants say thanks for making the Hill a great place to do business.

It's a shame

To the Editor:

It was with great frustration, disappointment, sadness and even shame that I learned about the defeat of the proposal to build a new Grosse Pointe central library.

I had worked and donated to the Citizens for a New Library, so of course I was disappointed and frustrated when the cause I so strongly believe in was rejected. And I felt sad for my children and all the others of the Pointes who are learning to truly love the gift of reading, and the ever more important quest for knowledge, who will now be handicapped in their love and quest by a library system which isn't even worthy of a less affluent community.

When we moved here, a year and a half ago from Detroit - a city where people who can ill afford it, seldom if ever voted against an opportunity to improve the library system - we were warned that the Pointes were somewhat provincial (except for "the Park" which, apparently correctly, was said to be progressive). However, until this vote, I happily found the community to be more enlightened than rumored.

Ben Franklin believed that knowledge is the greatest wealth of all, one that can never be stolen but that can be thrown away, and it's a shame that we chose to do just that.

> Donald Healy Grosse Pointe City

Insulting

To the Editor:

No matter which way we voted for the bond issue for the new library, we should be concerned about the responses of some of the school board members:

Trustee Nutter was quoted, "People are obviously pleased with the mediocrity they have." And Trustee Gandelot, who indicated that the most important thing he wanted to achieve during his tenure on the school board was to get a new library built, said, that (the vote) shows that they just didn't perceive the need."

It is my opinion that the "most important thing" for a school board to be concerned about is quality eduation that's the need I perceive. And to suggest that Grosse Pointers are "pleased with mediocrity" is both inaccurate and insulting.

Fortunately, we have school superintendent Ed Shine who accepted the people's choice and feels, we still have 7,500 kids in our school system and we have to try to serve their needs. The board has other issues to address.

Pet peeves

To the Editor:

According to the Dec. 13 Grosse Pointe News, "giving pets as a gift is not always a good idea" since pets are many times given as gifts during the holiday season. When people give a kitten or puppy to someone, they are taking a big chance. They aren't sure if the family is ready for a new member, and in many cases the animal's well-being isn't taken into consideration. To me a pet isn't only a lot of responsibility, it can also be a great asset to our lives, but only if wanted.

Sometimes either the family neglects the pet or takes it to the local pound. Thousands of unwanted animals are either walking the streets or living in a pound hoping to find a home. The problem is that most don't, and if they aren't claimed or fed they will die or be killed.

Not only should we be careful about giving animals as gifts, but I feel the people of our society should take responsibility for their actions and get their pets spayed and neutered. Because if they would do so, the overpopulation of cats and dogs would decrease and we would abolish the problem. Then maybe cats and dogs can be appreciated instead of being looked at as a nuis-

I Believe

To the Editor:

I am an American. I was born in this country, and except for a few trips to Windsor, have never left its borders. This does not make me a special person. It simply makes me an American.

In the last few weeks, since the war has started in the Middle East, there has been a war here in the United States. I speak of the people who do not understand why our country has joined in this Middle East conflict, and those who do not agree with the U.S. policy and who have taken to the streets to denounce it.

I also speak of those who are from the Middle East, who may or may not have family there. I speak of all people who have come to these United States, for its freedoms, for its opportunities, for a chance at a new beginning and then have slandered this great country of ours.

These people have weakened our country. They have taken a piece of our greatness and to this I say, no

The United States of America is a land that has welcomed all men and women, regardless of where they come from. The U.S. cares not what religion they practice or what color or nationality they are. All have been welcomed. And this is how it should be.

But we do need to put some stipulations on those who want to live here. We must, each and every one of us, be able to stand and declare in a loud, proud voice, I am an American. I believe in what this country stands for. I salute the flag of the United States of America, and I will jump at the opportunity to stand and sing our national anthem.

If a man can't do these things, then let him find another country that is better suited to him and his family.

Depressing

To the Editor:

I've always judged a community by its schools and libraries. Support for an educated populace and love of learning and books show a cultured and caring community.

It is very depressing to read of the overwhelming defeat of the bond issue for a new library facility. This is the first time in 26 years that I am questioning the commitment of residents to the Grosse Pointes. I am very pleased and heartened that the Park supported the library.

Donald W. Bierkes Grosse Pointe Park

Bah! Bah! Bah! To the Editor:

There's a current movie (which I haven't seen) called "The Silence of the Lambs." The phrase is a compelling one.

That's a good description of our current Congress. They (members of Congress) didn't debate an upcoming They didn't declare war. They went along with Bush's war. They went along with the U.N.'s stamp of approval.

They're not debating the actual war. They're "poor little lambs who have gone astray. Bah! Bah! Bah!"

John Conley Three Mile Drive

Airport, library To the Editor: The Metro East Chamber of Commerce did not take a position on Detroit City Airport expansion because a majority of members did not respond to its questionnaires. Possible reasons:

1. Some small business members may not be residents of the cities which have taken anti-Detroit City Airport Expansion positions.

2. Non-residential members would be less adversely affected by Detroit City Airport expansion than would residents and private property owners.

3. If adversely affected by expansion, members simply could move their businesses elsewhere. Many buildings are rented and are relatively small. 4. If favorably affected by expansion, members would have no need to take a position in the matter.

5. A pro-expansion position could lose some anti-expansion customers. An anti-expansion position could lose some pro-expansion custom-

Summarily, member business owners avoided taking a position, leaving anti-expansion actions to residents and local councils who must carry the ball if Detroit City Airport expansion is to be defeated.

Reports seem to indicate that the Detroit City Airport Expansion Application contained errors of fact and errors of omission. It would be reassuring to learn that 1) such errors are not correctable and 2) Detroit City Airport expansion has been defeated. Has it?

Perhaps some residents voted against the new central library because they remain unassured that quality of life and property values would continue to be favorable if Detroit City Airport expansion were to become a reality. Both are related to quality of life.

Perhaps a combination of events put the new central library and Detroit City Airport expansion on the back burner. Metropolitan Airport, Senate Ethics Committee, Christmas and New Years, Gulf Crisis - all could have taken our minds from the advantages of having a new central library and the disadvantages of Detroit City Airport expansion.

Perhaps, in part, library defeat relates to concern over the current status of Detroit City Airport expansion. Both are related to quality of life. Could it be that Detroit City Airport expansion will fail and a new, new library vote would succeed if more favorable anti-Detroit City Airport expansion information were made available? In mid-January we received a response from Sen. Riegle to our anti-Detroit City Airport expansion letter of October 1990. His response indicated that he is working closely with the Federal Aviation Administration regarding noise problems relating to Wayne County - Metropolitan Airport and Detroit City Airport. His response lumped the two into one problem, which was clearly not the purpose of our writing. His response also referred to his enclosure of a copy of his correspondence to the FAA _ which, incidentally, was not enclosed. We called his office to report the missing copy but have not as yet received C. Loeher

I asked Frank, a trusted colleague, editor and friend, to drive it because I wanted another informed opinion of the

My own opinion was that the Jaguar XJ-S is as elegant a coupe as is made anywhere and that it is a perfect sports car smooth, powerful, beautiful. And, the word I most associate with it, elegant.

Frank liked it even better.

So that he could drive the Jaguar for a day, Frank generously offered me his wife Linda's car. Linda also works for an automotive publication and so is well aware of the truth in the saying that the biggest difference between men and boys is the price of their toys.

ness with him now." Frank drove off.

The remarkable thing about the Jaguar XJ-S is that although it has not changed form since the body style was introduced in 1975, it still turns heads and most observers describe it as beautiful.

This was not so back in 1975, when it was criticized by many car buffs who did not think it as breathtakingly beautiful as the XK-E Jaguar it replaced, a wonderful mathematical curve of a car. The E-type Jag's level of comfort, reliability and driver friendliness was not as high as its level of beauty, however, and the XJ-S has built up a much happier owner body.

The V-12 engine is even older, but like the entire car, it has been updated and modernized over the years. It is phenomenally smooth, powerful and civilized. And reliable.

In fact, the Jaguar XJ-S is a vigorous argument against automotive change for change's sake. It has been modified over the years as improvements in various automotive systems have been developed. As a result, the car seems at least as modern and contemporary as its rounded, aerodynamic highperformance peers.

But its styling makes it unique and it looks better now than it did in the mid-70's, because it is more distinctive now. And if you're wondering if purchase of jaguar by Ford Motor Co. has changed the car, the answer is "no." It is still very Jaguar, very British.

The Jaguar's braking system is a dream; state-of-the-art antilock braking with yaw control that can differentiate between and compensate for different traction characteristics under right and left tires. Jaguar retains rear drive and with its all the time. And like everything else about the car, the braking is smooth, bringing the two-ton vehicle to rapid and controlled stops without seeming to try hard at all.

The aluminum V-12 engine delivers 263 horsepower if you need it, which is unlikely. You braking system it is hard to im- reach interstate speeds at relaagine a car more under control tively low engine speeds and you can accumulate big-time speeding tickets without ever making the engine breathe hard. Those who know (not me!) say it will do 140 mph without a great deal of effort. In addition to providing more power than you will ever need, the engine itself is a work of art. Open the hood and gaze upon it. The V-12 was introduced in 1971 and remains basically the same, although displacement has been increased somewhat to 326 cubic inches from 265. But the biggest changes have been in the emission controls and the electronic controls that have been added.

At a Fourth of July Jaguar club parade in Grosse Pointe Park, owners drove their cars to a park, where they opened the hoods and let folks see what made these beauties tick. V-12s ranging from 1971 to the present

The inerior of the Jaguar XJ-S. gines were in full view, with ignition wires and cooling hoses about the only complicating factors. Late models, however, had enough wiring and tubing to make your head spin and you had to search for the engine it-

All those developments over the years have changed the Jaguar V-12 from an exciting but unpredictable unit capable of generating intense fear and loathing to the smooth, reliable and lovable powerplant it is today.

New for 1991 is a range of color and trim combinations called the "Classic Collection." Key to the new look is use of cream or light beige leather for interior trim with a color accent supplied by piping which complements the exterior colors, Diamond, Blue, Oyster, Black, Glacier White, Brooklands Green and (on the test car) Signal Red. The deep luster finishes are base-coat/clear-coat.

Heated, anatomically designed seats have pushbutton lumbar sat side-by-side. The early en-support and are upholstered in fine leather. In fact, one of the most wondrous things about the Jaguar is the leather fragrance released by the upholstery on the kind of sunny spring-like days we have had recently.

The Jaguar XJ-8 is perhaps not quite in the "if-you-have-toask-how-much-it-costs-you-can'tafford-it" class, but it is not cheap. A Jaguar spokesperson said that studies show the average Jaguar buyer in the United States (and the United States is by far Jaguar's biggest market) is 48 years old and enjoys a median family income of $177,000.

The XJ-S coupe has a suggested base port-of-entry price of $49,900. The convertible is $10,000 more. EPA fuel economy is pegged at 13 miles per gallon city and 18 highway.

But for what you get, the Jaguar XJ-S may be a bargain. Porsche and BMW sports models with similar performance levels are more expensive. There is nothing else quite like this V-12 Jaguar.

Is an automobile a good financial investment? It's a matter of viewpoint.

A financial analyst who might cringe at the thought of "investing" $15,000 to $20,000 in a new car might see a classic 25-yearold car as a good risk.

Many older cars prove to be excellent investments. And, like fine paintings or coins, they are gaining in popularity among novices as well as experienced collectors. "You can enjoy using your investment while it appreciates," says Robert McMinn, coauthor of the 1991 edition of Edmund's American Dream Cars, 1946-1972. "And, with reasonable care and maintenance your 25- to 30-year-old car is likely to appreciate at a better rate than other investments I could mention."

The new book lists and describes post-war American cars, some of which have appreciated at astonishing rates. The owner of a 1969 Ford Boss Mustang fastback, for example, would be happy to know the value of his car has increased 362 percent to $50,000 in 3-1/2 years.

A 1958 Buick Roadmaster convertible has appreciated 182% to a current price of $30,425 during the same period.

Buy low, fix it up and sell high is the oversimplified formula, of course. But many car lovers prefer to hang on to their dream cars until, as usually happens, they're made an offer they cannot refuse.

"Take your time to find a desirable car that's mechanically sound with minimum rust,' McMinn advises. "Convertibles make especially good investments, often bringing twice the price of their hard top counter-

GM president is committed to 'alternative power vehicles'

The two newest General Motors "alternative power vehicles" demonstrate how strongly GM is committed to being a full-time manufacturer, said GM President Lloyd E. Reuss at the Chicago Auto Show last week.

He displayed the experimental HX3 "sedan of the future" at a press luncheon at the opening of the auto show. The car runs on electric power, plus an internal combustion engine - a secondary source of power that extends the range of the vehicle.

The HX3 uses "much the same technology" as GM's Impact electric car, which, Reuss said, "is going into production." He added: "But the HX3 is not a substitute for Impact. Instead, it. is designed for a different duty

Car getting shiftless?

Old timers may remember the days of the grabbing, jerking and chattering clutch. Shifting through the gears was a chore, far different from the smooth, effortless clutch on today's standard transmission vehicles.

Although modern clutches seldom need servicing, a "stick shift" driver should be sensitive to the feel and operation of his vehicle's clutch which, on a manual transmission vehicle, transmits engine power from the engine to the transmission. Using the clutch properly and being aware of wear symptoms or other malfunctions can prevent unnecessary inconvenience and expense.

Here are a few clutch-saving tips from the Car Care Council:

• Each time you engage the clutch, heat is produced from friction and, consequently, causes wear. To minimize slippage, engage it as quickly as possible without causing the car to jerk.

liner to carpet, door to door and • Do not use your clutch to prevent drifting backwards when starting on an up-hill grade. This increases wear on the clutch mechanism. Instead, use the Car Care Council. People are your brake.

• When you come to a stop,

keep your right foot on the brake, shift to neutral and remove your left foot from the clutch pedal to the brake. This saves wear and tear on the throw out bearing.

• Stay cool if you get stuck. Be gentle on your vehicle when trying to extricate yourself from ice, snow, mud or sand. Fast wheel spinning or rapid rocking back and forth can overheat the clutch and transmission.

• When a clutch wears, usually because of pressure plate or clutch friction disc wear, it may chatter or slip. As the condition gets worse the engine will speed up with little or no power transmitted to the wheels.

Most cars today have no clutch adjustment, other than the linkage (for pedal travel). Excessive wear generally calls for rebuilding the clutch mechanism, including a new pressure plate and throw-out bearing.

If your car acts like it has clutch problems, don't delay: Consult a qualified technician to prevent further damage. Don't ignore the signs of clutch trou-

With normal use the clutch should last the life of the car. Abuse it, and your car may act like it's in neutral when you're ready to get up and go.

Reuss also described other GM alternative fuel programs.

'We're going into production with trucks that run on com-pressed natural gas," he said. 'We've designed several of our engines, in different vehicles, to use methanol-gasoline mixtures. And we're looking into other alternatives, including turbine engines."

The GM president said that "even in these difficult times, we're going to continue our fast pace of product changeover. Since 1988, we've been introducing more new products than any of our competitors. And we're going to continue to do that over the next four to five years as

"There's no other automobile manufacturer I'm aware of that's as firmly geared for the future as we are - that has made the cycle: more passengers and "GM's master plan," Reuss gave this definition of GM's goal:

"General Motors is committed to providing our customers with a full lineup of automotive products - products that in each market segment, are best-in-class in quality, cost, speed to market, and overall customer satisfac-

Reuss said 1990 was a difficult sales year for the entire industry, but that "among the domestics, GM was the only domestic company to gain market share."

"Among our vehicle divisions, "Chevrolet, Pontiac, Buick and Cadillac all increased their share of the total U.S. vehicle market," he said. "Chevy outsold Ford by 43,000 units - a swing of 198,000 units.

"And, of course, we launched our new Saturns. And so far, 83 percent of Saturn shoppers gave non-GM cars as their second choice, and 60 percent gave imports. So Saturn is right on track with those conquest sales.

Jeniors As life expectancy increases, so does need for long-term care

By Marian Trainor Special Writer

Try as we may to take good care of ourselves, it is possible that at some point in our lives, we may need long-term care.

It's not a cheerful prospect but is a distinct possibility, particularly if we live to an advanced

Not that progress in geriatric medicine has not been made. People once crippled by arthritis are now able to move about because of hip and knee replacements. Physical speech and language therapy help stroke victims regain muscular coordination. Cardiac rehabilitation and preventive health programs for heart attack victims not only enable them to enjoy more normal lives but to reduce the chances of a second heart attack.

Newspapers, magazines and journals report on drugs that are almost ready for distribution, drugs which will alleviate the more common conditions that accompany the later years, including senility.

Even so, people age in different ways and react to treatment in accordance with their own body chemistry.

It is likely that these greatgrandparents will need longterm care.

It is expedient, then, that the best possible provisions are made for our emerging new social group, our fourth-generation senior citizens. This should be a real concern for those who may be entrusted with their care.

People who are senior citizens themselves will be responsible for the care of their elderly patrons. If the care-givers are not in the best of health or if they have plans for retirement that do not include custodial care for an elderly relative, this can be a problem.

They have worked hard; they have raised a family; they have postponed doing things together. It is only right that they should enjoy their leisure time and whatever luxuries they have earned.

tates that we make the last years of those who nurtured and cared for us as comfortable and happy as possible.

But this does not have to be achieved at the expense of setting aside all that we have looked forward to in our own later years. What we owe them and ourselves (since it is possible that we will reach the same stage) is the assurance of good medical care and sound provisions for social welfare.

Just keeping a person alive is not enough. Attention must be given to seeing that all the things that made their lives happy and fulfilled in their younger years are provided contact with others, good nutritious food and pleasurable leisure activities.

In the United States, the answer to this problem has been the nursing home. Medicare and Medicaid legislation has encouraged the growth of both private and voluntary nursing homes. However, these efforts to find solutions to the problem of the elderly have not always been effective either in terms of human considerations or cost-containment.

The solution may lie in developing better nursing homes by imposing stricter quality controls. But there are arguments that substantiate the need to develop different approaches to the care of the elderly.

In this context it is necessary to realize that the elderly do not comprise a monolithic group. Unlike adolescence, a stage of life that is relatively limited, the period of retirement could stretch to 30 years. This time span indicates that there is not one solution, because the needs could vary at intervals in advancing years.

Policy priorities may need to shift their emphasis for different age groups and offer a range of services. For instance, if the goal becomes one of keeping elderly persons functioning within the community, then the need will be for the development of a range of housing, home-health

Senior Power Day pushes campaign

Each booster will also receive a memento (de-

and social services, but there to meeting the needs of the eldwill also remain the need for institutional services for the in-

The question is what the term 'good care" encompasses. Certainly it means that health deficiencies are remedied. But it also has to take into consideration social aspects, because many health problems result from failure to provide the amenities beyond just keeping the body functioning.

There is one aspect of extended care about which all factions agree. The nursing home, which has come to include everything from residential or personal care through nursing or extended care, is not the answer erly as individuals.

Pressure for the kind of care we want for our elderly and for our own later years should come not from younger people who are most often responsible for formulating the policies that affect the elderly, but from those who are approaching those later years. Old age, after all, is a land of its own, with a language that can only be understood by those who share it.

Our health is our responsibilty

By Marlys Dee Craig
Special Writer
Recently a Grosse Pointe woman upset a small group of friends when she affirmed that she had no intention of following her doctor's orders. He had cautioned her that she was long overdue for an ultrasound test on a portion of her abdomen to guard against cancer.

She responded to their protest by saying, "I have lived a good life and had fairly decent health. Why should I get shook up about disease at my age?"

She chose to turn her back on a preventive test which would run a fraction of the cost of cancer treatment and care. Yet, were she to need heavy coverage, it would come from Medicare taxes on wages and premiums (public money), and supplemental medical insurance (pooled public money).

The appropriate use of diagnostic tests assists early detection and success of treatment. Probably this is easy for many to accept as good prevention. But, the lesser understood and accepted link between personal health habits and the incidence of preventable disease is another matter.

Not all are ready to act responsibly for the health of their bodies.

In addition, our health care system focuses more on the diseased and injured. More than enough money is spent on health equipment and procedures which prolong the life of the dying or ease the pain of the sick. Yet, the abundance of equipment and procedures does not seem to touch the causes of many serious diseases such as cancer, heart attack and stroke.

Causes which contribute to

The public does believe that prevention in health care is important. Development of some form of national focus, it appears, would have the support of the public, business and labor.

A national effort to tackle the problem does not require spending more and more money. Rather funds may be diverted, for example, from present costly procedures having little if any long-term health benefit to preventive programs with future impact on the health of the per-

Take the heart test

Someone dies of cardiovascular disease every 32 seconds in the United States, according to the American Heart Association.

That's more than 990,000 deaths a year - comparable to the number of lives claimed by cancer, accidents, pneumonia, influenza and all other causes of death combined.

Fortunately, many of these deaths can be prevented through risk factor identification, medical intervention and lifestyle change.

Bon Secours Hospital is doing its part to help the community combat heart disease by offering The Heart Test, published on this page. This easy-to-complete questionnaire is designed to identify an individual's risk of heart disease and to make recommendations on lowering those risks, according to Patricia Sikora, director of community health education.

The test is also featured in the Feb. 19 issue of Family Circle magazine, currently on sale, as part of a special section titled 'The Women's Heart Hand-The Family Circle and newspaper questionnaires completed by local residents will be processed by the Bon Secours Community Health Education Department.

Each person completing The Heart Test will receive a free three-page report on their personal risks of heart disease and information on how to reduce those risks," Sikora said. "Our goal is to have as many complete The Heart Test during February - American Heart Month - as possible, so Bon Secours Hospital and our physicians can help reduce the effects of heart disease in our commun-

Twelve years later, Jouppi again ran into Edith and seven months later they were married.

Last year, the Jouppis were honored as one of Family Circle's four most ideal American couples. At the urging of his wife, Jouppi sent Family Circle a short description of how they met. The designation as one of America's most ideal couples won the Jouppis a spot on "The Phil Donahue Show" and a week in New York.

"We had a wonderful time," Jouppi recalled.

Even with the 25-year difference in their ages, Jouppi was able to capture Edith's heart. A romantic, Jouppi once wrote "I love you" with rose petals on the

While being one of America's most ideal couples brought some brief fame, Jouppi is best known as one of the leading auto industry analysts in the country, if not the world.

Operating out of Grosse Pointe, Jouppi - and Edith as "the right hand of the business" monitors the pulse of the auto industry, from Detroit to Japan. Arvid Jouppi Associates advises some 50 automotive-related clients in the United States and 26 clients overseas. Clients include small auto-related companies, insurers, banks and governments, including the United States and Japan.

He is also senior vice president of research for Keane Securities Co. in New York.

Ironically, Jouppi had a difficult time getting into the auto industry after World War II, where he served as captain in the Marine Corps, specializing in electronic countermeasures.

The auto companies didn't want him because his expertise was too high tech - which is ironic since making automobiles today is very high tech and getting more so each day, Jouppi

"It's better to be asked than go knocking on the door asking for a job," he said.

Jouppi began his carreer in the auto industry in 1952 at General Motors. He then went to Chrysler in 1957 and found his niche on Wall Street as director of public and investor relations for the eastern United States for the No. 3 automaker.

Before the war, Jouppi earned a bachelor of arts degree from Michigan State University. Later, he studied at Harvard and the University of Michigan Graduate School of Engineering.

Jouppi is the eighth of 12 children born of Finnish immigrants, and was raised in Kaleva, Mich. He can speak the language of his heritage and keeps in touch with relatives in Finland. He said it is unusual for first-generation Americans to be as interested in their culture as he has been.

Jouppi and his first wife raised four children, who have added eight grandchildren to the Jouppi clan. Edith has three grown children from her first marriage.

After spending some time with Wall Street brokerage firms, Jouppi started his own company.

Despite Japanese inroads into domestic auto sales in the United States, Jouppi believes Detroit is still the center of the industry's "global village.'

"...despite the truly global nature of the auto industry, its heart still beats in one city -Detroit," Jouppi wrote in an information sheet for his "Detroit Automotive Roundtable."

Jouppi organized the roundtable in January 1990 for the purpose of bringing together the senior decision-makers of the worldwide automobile community to study solutions to mutual

One automotive leader he likes is Lee Iacocca. Jouppi said he was the last to visit Iacocca in his Ford Motor Co. office when he fell out of favor with Henry Ford II. While he was there, movers showed up with the new occupant's furniture, Jouppi said.

Jouppi points out that just 50 chief executive officers control the worldwide auto industry that has 590 million vehicles on the road. "Fifty CEOs control the major means of transportation above the bicycle," he said.

Concerning the future of the auto industry, Jouppi believes U.S. companies will struggle and become more efficient, and growth will be half or less than that experienced up to 1970.

"There is no longer the automatic success," he said.

And while Japanese automakers are building more plants here to get around import quotas, Jouppi doesn't believe the American workforce will follow the Japanese model.

"I don't think you can transplant the Japanese company song to the U.S.," he said, "because we won't sing it."

He does credit Japanese competition, though, for helping make American automakers become more efficient.

Firmly convinced of the benefits of the automobile, Jouppi said that if automobiles were prevalent worldwide, there would be no hunger.

"In the long run," he said, "nothing is going to stop the automobile industry worldwide."

Jouppi said people come to him because he can put a problem into perspective and give his best opinion - an opinion that is all his own.

"I like to make up my own mind," he said. "I guess that's the rebel in me. I like to come up with my own conclusions."

And Jouppi's conclusions can have a major impact, such as whether to buy or sell huge blocks of automotive stock held by institutions.

"There was a time when it was hard for me to say, 'I don't know," he said. "But now it's easier because no matter how much information you have, it's not enough."

That's where experience comes

"I love the industry," he said, "and I've been at it so long."

Park man invests in printing business and America

Staff Writer

In his own small way, Steve Mahac of Grosse Pointe Park has always wanted to make his mark on the world, but he never thought he'd be doing it in the printing business.

Mahac, 44, owns Screen Printing International (SPI), on 10 Mile Road in Warren. Founded in 1987, the company specializes in commercial and industrial printing.

"We print on everything except glass," Mahac said.

That includes bumper stickers, signs, hats, T-shirts, sweat shirts, socks, and "anything that needs to be durable for outdoor use," he said.

The exclusive supplier of Tshirts and sweat shirts sold at the Henry Ford Museum and Greenfield Village gift shops, SPI also does work for General Motors. Other clients include Cottage, Bon Secours, Children's and Wyandotte General hospitals, and Detroit Tigers owner Tom Monaghan.

"We printed the shower curtains for his lodge," Mahac said. The curtains feature prints of the pizza king's sailboat.

SPI's gross sales totaled $250,000 in 1988, $480,000 in 1989 and $490,000 in 1990, Mahac said.

"It should have been much higher last year, but there was a slow down in the fourth quarter. That's usually the biggest quarter, but because of the economy or for whatever reason, sales were down in the fourth quarter," Mahac said.

He projected that company sales this year will reach $1 million based on commitments from new customers.

Business Notes

National Wholesale Drug Co., one of the midwest's largest independent wholesalers, has selected Notre Dame Pharmacy of Grosse Pointe as "Outstanding Independent Retailer of the Month" for January 1991. Awareness of the special needs met by the independent drugstore and the strict management required for the independent druggist to survive among large chains and supermarkets has prompted NWD Co. to give recognition to businesses such as Notre Dame Pharmacy. Notre Dame was chosen for its merchandising effectiveness, overall visual statement and marketing

Mahac said he got into the printing business by accident.

Born in 1946, Mahac grew up on the east side of Detroit and graduated from Nativity of Our Lord high school in 1964. On his 18th birthday, he went to work on the assembly line at Cadillac's Clark Street plant in De-

"I realized in a very short time that that was not what I wanted to do with the rest of my life. It wasn't very rewarding. So I started going to college a few months later," Mahac said.

He attended Lawrence Institute of Technology and earned his bachelor of science degree in mechanical engineering in 1968. Mahac continued to work fulltime on the assembly line through his sophomore year of college. Then he transferred to the company's engineering department, where he worked as a co-op student during his junior and senior years.

After graduation, Mahac worked as a plant engineer at Cadillac. However, his career took an unwelcome detour when he was drafted in 1969.

Mahac served in the Army during 1969 and 1970 as a wheeled vehicle mechanics instructor, and spent his tour of duty stateside.

The experience "taught me to appreciate the things we have at home, things I had previously taken for granted," Mahac said.

Home from the service, Mahac resumed his career at General Motors as a facilities engineer. For some people, holding a wellpaying job at one of the Big Three automakers is a lifelong ambition. However, Mahac said he needed a change after his old-est daughter, Jennifer, died of cancer in 1986. She was 9 years

Mahac, his (now former) wife, Janice and their youngest daughter, Christina, moved from Harsen's Island to Grosse Pointe Park, and in October 1987, Mahac left GM with the intention of working on construction management projects.

Instead, he wound up learning the ins and outs of the printing business.

In 1987, Mahac loaned a relative $100,000 to start a printing business - SPI.

"He had run a similar business, so I thought he could handle it but he couldn't," Mahac

To protect his investment, Mahac took over the business in January 1988.

"When I took over, I didn't know a satin jacket from an Oxford jacket. I didn't know anything about the printing business," Mahac said.

But he figured he could learn. He said he read everything he could find about the printing business and enlisted the help of his suppliers. He also decided to learn every job in his company, and still performs them occasionally. In addition to being owner, president and chairman of the board, he is also a sales representative, part-time bookkeeper and quality control manager.

"I can even print if I have to, but I like to leave some things up to people who are more proficient at them than myself," Mahac said. "But I don't believe in asking my people to do something I don't do myself."

Mahac normally has seven fulltime employees, but he recently hired three more on a temporary basis to keep up with the work load created by one of SPI's newest clients - the Desert Storm Fund of Michigan, a non-profit fundraising group.

Founded by Vietnam veterans shortly after Operation Desert Storm began last month, the group is raising money for Michiganians serving in the Persian Gulf.

The money is being put into an interest-bearing account and will be divided equally among the servicemen and women from Michigan, or their beneficiaries, when the war is over, said Jim Rapchick, one of the founders of the group.

'We want to make sure that when they get back, they have a fresh start and are compensated for their efforts," Rapchick said.

He said his group figures that there will be at least 14,000 people from Michigan serving in the Persian Gulf by the time the war is over. In order to give each serviceman or woman $600, the group will have to raise $8.4 million dollars by the time the war ends, Rapchick said.

The Desert Storm Fund of Michigan's main fundraiser is a T-shirt and sweat shirt sale.

A representative from the group asked Mahac three weeks ago if he would join their effort. He agreed to design a logo for the shirts free of charge, and to provide the Desert Storm Fund of Michigan with the shirts at

The logo features the American flag, an F14 Tomcat fighter jet and the words "Operation Desert Storm.'

SPI has been printing approximately 4,000 shirts a day and has been giving them to the Desert Storm Fund of Michigan on consignment.

"Mr. Mahac has been wonderful. He's probably fronted us about $80,000 in goods. Other companies would not have done that for us. Most companies would want to be paid up front," Rapchick said.

The T-shirts sell for $10, and the sweat shirts cost $18.

The Desert Storm Fund of Michigan makes $5 profit on each T-shirt and $9 on each sweat shirt, Rapchick said. All of the profits are put into the fund, he said.

The shirts are available at all ERA Realty offices and through many United Auto Workers locals. Vietnam Veterans, VFW and Disabled American Veterans posts also have the shirts. They are also being sold at SPI's plant in Warren.

"We normally don't work in retail. We're only doing this during Operation Desert Storm,' Mahac said.

SPI isn't making a profit on the shirts. It's receiving just enough money from the shirt sales to cover the cost of printing and labor, Mahac said. And even though the project has caused him to work late hours and on Saturdays, he said it gives him a great feeling.

"I get a lot of satisfaction helping people," said Mahac, who has also volunteered his time and resources to various hospital projects. "There are so many people out there who can't help themselves, who long for the simple niceties that we take for granted, such as being able to go for a walk. All a person has to do is spend a couple of hours one week at the hemotology department at Children's Hospital and they'll go back home and count their blessings."

Northwood Institute has selected Grosse Pointe resident Gordon L. Stewart, president of Gordon Chevrolet, Inc., to receive its Dealer Education Award. Stewart is among 16 dealers from the United States and Canada to be recognized for their contributions to education. The award recognizes the dealers for their contributions to education "for improvement of business and society." Stewart was one of five Chevrolet dealers invited to the White House to receive recognition awards for their sales records from President George Bush.

Lesley McGlinnen of Grosse Pointe Park has joined the appraisal division of Cushman & Wakefield of Michigan, Inc. as a senior appraiser. She had formerly been with BDO Seidman in the appraisal and valuation services department.

Impact separates good from ho-hum

I'm often asked by students and photography friends: "What makes a picture good? What separates the dynamic photograph from the ho-hum snapshot?"

There are a number of key ingredients that get a picture noticed and give it attention-getting power.

First is impact, difficult to describe but so important in the formulation of a good photograph. You might say that if a picture arouses feelings and emotions of joy, appreciation, or excitement, even anger or sorrow, then it most assuredly will have impact. How do you obtain impact in your shot? Begin by selecting subject matter that is either unusual or is treated in an unusual way. Use a unique camera angle or perhaps a different lens. Place the subject in an unusual environment or try special filtration. It's also important to shoot on a day with fog or mist or dramatic cloud patterns.

Pay attention to good composition. Place the elements of your picture in the viewfinder in the strongest way possible. Express on film what you see and feel when taking your shot. Fill the frame for added impact and watch backgrounds for distracting objects.

A good picture will hold the viewer's attention and will keep him or her thinking about the image. It will also stir up imagi-

Benefits are big business

Charity chairmen need more than closetsful of pretty dresses

By Margie Reins Smith Feature Editor

Scene: Man in tuxedo pants, cummerbund, white pleated shirt stands before mirror; adjusts his black bow tie; brushes off his tuxedo jacket; asks his wife, "What disease are we fighting tonight?"

The charity ball — with its de rigueur drop-dead designer gowns, black ties, fancy food, eye-popping decorations, bigname orchestras and three-tiered ticket prices — is the mainstay of many of Detroit's cultural organizations, social agencies and non-profit foundations.

Jane Meade

The charity auction runs a close second, with its big-bucks biddables: diamond necklaces, luxury resort vacations, custom-designed children's playhouses and original artworks.

Close behind is a shopping list of fundraising events: designers' showhouses, house and garden tours, fashion shows, antique shows, preview parties, luncheons and sports events.

The planning and patronization of Detroit's several dozen charity organizations, it seems, are in the capable hands of a dozen or so high-profile volunteers. While much of the organizing, planning, selling and nittygritty work is done by women, most say their husbands actively support their efforts by donating time, money, talent and corporate connections.

About a dozen Grosse Pointe women seem to maintain high profiles on the charity ball-auction-showhouse-fashion showfundraising circuit.

These women say there's more to their jobs than shopping for a fancy ball gown and hauling out the good jewelry.

Why they do it

"Most people know it's not just glamour," said Mado Lie of Grosse Pointe Park.

Lie is president of the volunteer council for Detroit Symphony Orchestra Hall, a group which is responsible for a number of projects during the year: opening night festivities, a Nutcracker luncheon, a holiday home tour, the Ball in the Hall, a fashion show, a designers' showhouse and about 20 Musical Feasts. Lie has served as president of Alliance Française and Children's Hospital of Michigan Auxiliary and as co-chairman of Lundi Gras, a benefit for the Archives of American Art. She's on the board of Friends of Asian Art and the Center for Creative Studies and she worked on University Liggett School's holiday festival.

"There's just a few people who do what we do," said Dale Austin of Grosse Pointe City.

"It's not all nice luncheons where you dress up and see people," said Diane Schoenith of Grosse Pointe Park. "People who only attend (and don't get involved) have no clue about the work that goes on behind the scenes."

Austin estimated that she spends more than 40 hours a week on charity work. Schoenith said some weeks she works as many as 40 hours; other weeks less than 10. It depends.

' Although Austin's name and photograph are prominently associated with dozens of Detroit's glittery charity balls, she said the largest portion of her volunteer time is devoted to two organizations: the Salvation Army and the United Methodist Retirement Home. "The rest is is just fun," she said.

"I've been involved with the Salvation Army for the last 10 years. I worked up from the advisory board to second vice chairman of the executive board."

Austin and her husband, Dr.

Donald Austin, are chairmen of special events for the Michigan Opera Theatre. MOT's biggest fundraiser will be the annual Opera Ball on May 3. The Austins are also chairmen of MOT's capital campaign and they were honorary chairmen for the American Heart Association's Heart Ball and honorary chairmen for the last three years for the Northeast Guidance Center Assistance League's portion of the North American International Auto Show Preview. They served as chairmen of the Ball in the Hall for the DSOH last year and honorary chairmen of the DSO's opening-night party. Austin was chair for Project HOPE's ball last year, and cochair of auction acquisitions for a benefit for Madonna College. She serves on the executive boards of the Music Hall, the Children's Center and the Salvation Army.

"It's paybacks," Austin said.
"Honorary chairmen get people to come to the events. This community is unique because everybody helps everybody."

Schoenith and her husband,

Tom, were co-chairmen for the recent Lundi Gras, a benefit for the Archives of American Art. They will be honorary co-chairs for Our Lady Star of the Sea school's March auction. Schoenith has been chairman of the American Lung Association's annual Cinderalla Ball and this year she'll serve as chairman of the group's preview party. With her husband, she is a member of the honorary committee for the Henry Ford Estate Dinner Dance in April to raise money to restore portions of Fair Lane.

She is on the committee for Pewabic tile's spring benefit and she's on the planning committee for a benefit ball for Hospice of Southeastern Michigan. She serves on the Music Hall's board and is president of Associates for Performing Arts at the DIA. She's also on a committee for a South High School TV production lab fundraiser coming up on Feb. 23.

Bettejean Ahee

"You don't do it to get your name in the paper," said Jane Meade of Grosse Pointe Farms. "It's to get people to come. It's friends helping friends for the good of all."

Meade and her husband, Ken, recently served as honorary chairmen of Children's Hospital of Michigan's holiday fundraiser, Festival of Trees. She's a member of the board for the Michigan Cancer Foundation and the Michigan Historical Museum Foundation. She's involved with the Council of Sponsors for the Grosse Pointe War Memorial.

"Not everything is a big glitzy party," Meade said. "We're doing women's work. Women are nurturers. If you're a woman who is blessed and you don't have to be working ... well, if it's given to you, you give back."

Schoenith and Bettejean Ahee agreed that the rewards of charity work are many.

"It's an old cliche, but it's true," Ahee said. "You get more out of this than you put in."

Ahee has been involved for 10 years in a family-sponsored fundraiser for the Capuchin Community Center — the Souper Summer Celebration. She is honorary chairman, with her husband, Edmund, for Casa Maria's April auction and dinner dance and Our Lady Star of the Sea school's annual auction. She cochaired a dinner cruise last fall for a fundraiser for St. Jude Hospital. She has been a member of

HAVE A PLEASANT TRY AT PERFECTION " , BRIDGE BY WOODY BOYD 🛦 🎔 💠 🛧

Leonard Harmon is a well medalled veteran of many world class championships who lives in East Hampton, Long Island with his lovely wife (ex-Detroiter) Marion. Today Lenny may be caught on occasion playing in Manhattan some Monday night with friends at the famous Cavendish Club, but other than that his expertise at the table is seldom paraded in this modern age of Thirty odd years ago, Lenny's name was in lights on the major bridge marquees of America. He was a member of the American team in the 1959 Bermuda Bowl, 1960 World Team Olympiad. Coupled with these world class acclamations are many North American championships. Admittedly his greatest year was 1958 when he won the McKenny Trophy competing against the strongest field of United States players ever seated.

The ACBL doesn't give an award for "Mr. Nice Guy," but he would have won such a mythical tribute in a landslide for his gentlemanly manor and dignified presence at play or away from the table. He saves his sageness for his favorites, but if you are lucky enough to be with him when he's moved to do so, you can learn an awful lot about this magnificent game from his scholarly tutorial discourses.

Many of Lenny's most notable achievements were in partnership with the brilliant Ivar Stakgold, professor of mathematics, Northwestern University. It wasn't easy for either to keep even with their demanding professions (Lenny owned a very successful insurance agency in New York City) and the rigorous major tournament schedule of that era, but together they succeeded in capturing many of the laurels awarded in that period of bridge history.

Today's layout is one of the famous Mr. Harmon's Maxima Cum Laudes of contract bridge. The hand is devilish for two reasons; it isn't easy to bid and even harder to play at the twelve trick level. Confronted with a trump lead, not the spade suit which the opponents bid, the probability of success dissipates

With the spade lead declarer has time to win the diamond king and still ruff two diamonds in dummy. As the cards are this line of play is invincible as he only loses to the trump queen. With the diabolical heart lead the second diamond ruff is gone and that loser must be attended to. This can only be achieved by finding the clubs right and then correctly guessing the card to play. The club honors must be divided or with East. If West has a winning honor, he must have a singleton trump so he can't eliminate dummy's last trump. Now you've seen fifty-two but Harmon had only the benefit of the durnny, his own and West's lead yet his suspicion of the out cards position was clairvoyant and he accomplished the task with definess.

At trick one, the heart jack, winning the queen with the king. Now, a diamond to the king and dummy's club king. When East didn't play the ace, he pitched a diamond. West spade return was won in dummy and now the club jack. It mattered not whether East played his queen. If he didn't, a diamond is discarded. If he did, Lenny ruffs and re-enters dummy with a diamond ruff and then the club ten for the other low diamond loser.

You say lucky and I say Lenny certainly was, but great players make their own luck and they do it usually by using their gifted skills adroitly.

MOT plans Opera Ball; something for Milli Vanilli wannabes

The movers and shakers and committee leaders for Michigan Opera Theatre's biggest social event, the Opera Ball, gathered at Ford World Headquarters for a luncheon meeting on Jan. 31.

Ball co-chairmen are Dale
Austin of Grosse Pointe and
Carolyn Ross of Bloomfield
Hills. The ball will be on Friday,
May 3, at the Ritz-Carlton in Dearborn.

Ford Motor Co. is underwriting the Opera Ball and MOT's production of "The Magic Flute." Both events are part of the Ford/MOT-sponsored "Mozart Magic in Motor City," which celebrates Wolfgang Amadeus' 200th birthday.

Ross announced that MOT, Ford, Harmony House, WQRS-FM and the Renaissance Center will sponsor an Opera Lip-Sync contest at noon on Thursday, April 18, in the Jefferson Atrium of the Renaissance Center. Applications will be available after March 1 in Harmony House stores and through WQRS-FM.

Milli Vanilli wannabes will get an opportunity to lip-synch to their favorite recorded arias and will be judged on costumes, presentation and enthusiasm. Prizes will include stuff like a Mostly Mozart Weekend in New York and a Mozart Magic in Motor City Weekend.

The Opera Ball will be a gala evening of hors d'oeuvres, dinner and dancing to the Lester Lanin Orchestra. Price is $300 a person. To get an invitation, call Diane Windom at 874-7879.

Several Grosse Pointers are chairing committees for the ball: Mary Beth Jagger, decorations committee; Mr. and Mrs. Peter Bogas, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Germack, Maria Lucarelli, Mr. and Mrs. Gary Mitchell and Anita Watson, dinner committee; Sybil Jaques and Judith Agley, menu co-chairmen.

Max re-opens: The completely renovated Omnimax
Theater at the Detroit Science
Center re-opened on Wednesday,
Feb. 6, at a reception for those whose contributions helped finance the project.

nance the project.

Mr. and Mrs. Edsel Ford II of Grosse Pointe were honorary co-chairs for the $300,000 campaign which was dubbed, "To the Max."

Joan Gehrke of Grosse Pointe and Dr. Susan Harold of Franklin were general co-chairs. Mrs. Raymond Gardella of Grosse Pointe Shores was chairman of the reception.

The event included hors d'oeuvres, prepared by Grosse Pointer Jimmy Schmidt and his staff at the Rattlesnake Club, and a preview of "Blue Planet," a film about the Earth that is coming to the Omnimax Theater in July.

The fundraising campaign raised money through corporate and foundation grants and a chair sponsorship program from individuals.

Ford told guests at the reception that the chairs are for the children who visit the theater. "For kids who sit back and become saucer-eyed with the incredible sights on this giant Omnimax screen . . . We hope that they will learn and be inspired to learn more."

The theater was closed during January for the renovation project, which included repainting the 67-foot domed screen, replacing carpeting, wallcovering and about 240 tilt-back chairs.

Other volunteers who coordinated festivities for the reception included Mrs. Keith Crain, Mrs. Alfred Fisher III, Mrs. Edward Stroble Jr. and Mrs. Maurice M. Taylor Jr., all of Grosse Pointe, and Mrs. Donald Wingard of Bloomfield Hills.

The Detroit Science Center, 5020 John R, in Detroit's Cultural Center, is open Wednesdays through Fridays from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m.; Saturdays and Sundays from noon to 5 p.m. Admission is $6.50 for adults and children age 13 and up; $4.50 for children 4-12; $4.50 for senior citizens. Special group rates are available.

The current film, "To the Limit," is a fascinating look into the human body as it adapts to meet the demands of physical Crims' condo on the block: The Florida condo of WDIV-TV anchorman Mort Crim and his wife, Irene, is on the auction block.

The newlyweds' beach-front getaway in Ponte Vedra Beach is one of the items in a Feb. 16 benefit for the Michigan Cancer Foundation. The successful bidder gets it for a week.

"Winter SportsFest" is being hosted by The Partners, a group of young, socially-conscious professionals, at the Stroh Riverplace Atrium. More than 30 items will be auctioned, with proceeds going to MCF. Music will be by The Knaves. Tickets are $35 a person in advance; $40 at the door. It all begins at 8 p.m. Dress is casual. Valet parking is provided.

For more information, call 833-0710 Mondays through Fridays from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Project HOPE: Project HOPE will hold a Celebrity Toast at the Ritz-Carlton in Dearborn on Friday, March 8, beginning at 6:30 p.m.

Proceeds from the event will benefit Project HOPE's programs in Romania, Czechoslovakia and Hungary serving the health-care needs of children. Project HOPE is a non-profit independent educational foundation which strives to improve health conditions in developing countries.

Bal Polonais: Six young ladies and their parents gathered recently for a debutantes' tea and to view videos of last year's Bal Polonais.

This year's debutantes were presented at the Detroit Athletic Club on Feb. 9, amid the Bal Polonais' traditional trumpeters, costumed pages and dancers, colorful banners, armored knights and pageantry.

Two debs are Grosse Pointers: Joy Brzuchowski and Tammy Woodbury.

Committee members included Grosse Pointers Mrs. Robert E. Brzuchowski, Mrs. Frank A. Germack Jr., Mrs. Thomas L. Schoenith, and Mrs. George Slezak.

The ball is a benefit for Michigan Opera Theatre's upcoming Polish opera and for the acquisition of Polish art at the Detroit Institute of Arts.

A recent luncheon meeting found 20 women helping address invitations for Project HOPE's next fundraiser, the Celebrity Toast, on Friday, March 8. Grosse Pointers who attended included, from left, Ida Krandle, president of the women's division for Project HOPE, Gloria Clark, Sybil Joques and Laura Cowden. Addie Bauer-Leggat, co-founder of the women's division for Project HOPE, will serve as honorary chairman of the event.

Toys R there: The Detroit Historical Society's holiday party featured the first glimpses of the Historical Museum's new Wrigley Hall, the Detroit Antique Toy Museum Gallery, the Louise C. Booth Education Center and the toy gallery's inaugural exhibition, "Collectors in Toyland."

More than 250 guests dined on food by Les Auteurs, browsed through merchandise provided by the Old Detroit Shop and danced to the music of Mel Ball.

Grosse Pointers Eugene Gargaro, Goody Semple, James Bridenstine, Rebecca Booth, Clune Walsh, Sheila Ingwerson, John Booth II, Mary Gargaro, Lloyd Semple and Mary Anderson were among the guests.

Margie Reins Smith

Develop a laugh lifestyle 🎏

By Rev. Robert E. Nelly St. Michael's Episcopal Church

Pain is inevitable but misery is optional.

We have little or no choice about success, circumstances or even happiness; but we can choose how we are going to approach life. I would encourage you to "develop a laugh lifestyle."

One of Teresa Bloomingdale's books is "Life Is What Happens When You're Making Other Plans." A laugh lifestyle provides a kind of perspective that makes life more pleasant and more bearable, regardless of circumstances. It provides a spontaneous view of life which enables us to laugh when things are funny and laugh sometimes when things are not so funny — to laugh in spite of circumstances.

Laughter and humor are gifts from God that make good times better and bad times more bearable. In the Sermon on the Mount, Jesus says, "Don't look dismal! Don't put on a sad face! Rejoice and be glad!" (Matthew 6:16; 5:12)

Laughter is one of the best ways of dealing with adversity, loss, pain, separation and sickness.

Paul says, "Rejoice . . . in all circumstances" (1 Thessalonians 5:16). He does not say for all circumstances.

It is a way of saying that even though we are dealing with adversity or loss or grief — in the middle of that — we are able to laugh. And that, I think, is a gift of God's grace. It is a way of reminding ourselves that the world does not end when we suffer a setback. It is a way of saying that if we can laugh in those circumstances and find some element of humor there, we can also feel that God does not desert

It is not what happens to us in life, it is our attitude toward what happens that makes all the difference. I am not saying that humor is the only answer or that all of your problems will vanish if you laugh. They won't.

What will result, however, when you learn to spot some humor in your difficulties, is a new perspective that will help you deal with them. Bill Cosby said, "If you can find humor in anything, you can survive it." I believe that.

When we can find some humor in our upsets, frequently they no longer seem quite so large or as overwhelming as they once did. Laughter expands our vision. It often gives us a new way of seeing our situation and lets us see more than "our problem'

Tears of sadness turn us inward; we cry and feel sorry for ourselves. Laughter, on the other hand, focuses us outward. Crying is important and it should not be suppressed. It can be very cleansing. But at some point in our upsets — in our pain - continued crying may not be the healthiest thing for

The writer of the Book of Proverbs says, "Laughter is the best medicine" (17:22). We must begin to put what we cry about in perspective so that we can get on with our life. Tears cannot do that. Laughter can.

Humor is a gift from God for us to use as we face our own adversities in life, and anybody who does not take and use this wonderful gift to "develop a laugh lifestyle" is missing out on some real fun.

St. John Hospital's Fontbonne Auxiliary for 20 years and has recently been nominated for a board position. She also serves on the boards for MOT and the Michigan Cancer Foundation.

"How else do you spend your time," Schoenith said, "if you're not working full time or mothering full time?"

Stephanie Germack of Grosse Pointe Farms said involvement in charity work gives her a feeling of satisfaction if she believes in the cause. "I can't raise money for something if my heart isn't in it," she said. "I never get involved in politics.

"Perhaps some of our pictures appear (in newspapers) too often, but we work hard to get new people involved in chairmanships.'

Germack is founder and president of the Pope John Paul II Foundation of Michigan. She has been chairman of Fontbonne Auxiliary's White Christmas Ball and several of its fashion shows. She has served on the board for the Michigan Cancer Foundation and was a co-founder of the Circle of Fellows nine years ago. She has been involved in fundraisers for Boys and Girls Clubs of Southeastern Michigan, Hospice of Southeastern Michigan, the DIA, MOT and four Bal Polonaises. She's on the board of Antiquaries and is a past president of the DSO's women's association. She was chairman of University Liggett School's antiques show and the Henry Ford Museum antique show.

"Why do I do this?" said Mary Lamparter of Grosse Pointe Shores. "I feel that I'm fortunate to live where I live. It's part of paying back. It's giving back to the community. I wouldn't feel whole unless I could do this."

Lamparter said her whole lifestyle is built around charity

Childbirth seminar at Bon Secours

Bon Secours Hospital's Birth-Care Unit and Mead Johnson's Nutritional Division will sponsor a "Mind Over Labor" seminar on Thirsday, Feb 21 at the Northfiled Hilton, 5500 Crooks Road at I-75, in Troy.

The seminar, aimed at childbirth and perinatal professionals, will be held from 7:45 a.m. to 430 p.m. Carl Jones, author of the international bestseller, "Mind Over Labor," will discuss various benefits and methods of teaching guided imagery (or visualization) for a healthier, less painful birth.

He will offer tips on:

She served twice as chairman of the Lexus Gold Cup Polo Match, a Junior League of Detroit benefit for Sibley House. She and her husband will be honorary chairs for the Northeast Guidance Center's summer fundraiser, Art on the Pointe. Competition, pressure

"The success of the function the previous year is often what makes people want to attend the next year," Ahee said, noting that the Souper Summer Celebration raised $135,000 last year. "Of course, we want to do better this year.'

"We're all wrestling with competition for the charity dollar, especially the publicly funded charities like the museum," said Schoenith. "The problem is how to get people to come. You look for a new hook, a new location, a new theme or food or format.'

Lamparter credits the success of last December's White Christmas Ball, in part, to the addition of a new category of after-dinner tickets.

Schoenith said that because of the economy and the war, people are scaling back on charity donations and charity functions. "Many people are on hold. They wait until the last minute to

"Some events are so good, they'll always be successful," Meade said. "But we've been auctioned to death recently. It's time for alternate activities."

Lamparter said that money is getting more difficult to raise. "I get embarrassed asking the same people again and again," she said, "to underwrite functions; to donate prizes for auctions; to advertise in programs; and to attend. Some are personal friends. It's even harder when I truly like the people and socialize with them. But the fabulous thing about Detroit is how generous people are. Some never turn you down.

How they organize

Like corporate executives, charity chairs are skillful organ-

Meade said she organizes her various activities with a notebook of her own design, with a page for each day, divided into sections for charity duties, meetings, personal activities, places to stop, and so on.

All the women said they use month-at-a-glance calendars to organize and remind themselves of appointments and meetings. Austin pins notes to herself to her lapel and sticks reminders on her pillow.

Germack said being chairman of an event is often easier than being on the committee. "I've learned tact and diplomacy and how to handle volunteers. There's some jobs nobody wants. I've learned how to budget my time. I've learned not to do two or three big functions during the year. You just can't kill yourself. Now I take one big job and two or three committee jobs each year," she said.

Lie said she has a messy desk and wishes she had a secretary because she doesn't type.

Schoenith and Lie try to have all their charity activities completed by 3:30, when their children come home from school.

A bowl of popcorn, a video and thou — a night for lovers

By Ronald J. Bernas Staff Writer

Love means never having to say you're sorry for renting a tape your mate didn't like. And there's no better night than tonight, Valentine's Day, to make a bowl of popcorn, light a fire, wrap yourself in a blanket and watch a videotape with someone you love. Yuppies call it "cocooning. Real people call it "a relaxing evening.

What follows is a biased, incomplete list of movies about love. Although most films have love as some part of their package, these films deal primarily with that thing that most people are afraid to talk about.

"Pretty Woman," just out on videocassette, is what romance is all about -amodern-day Cinderella story. There's not many surprises here, and the formulaic story should have been boring, but it's the chemistry between Richard Gere as the zillionaire tycoon and Julia Roberts as the surprisingly moral $20 hooker that makes it work. It also made it the biggest grossing film of last year and, also, Disney's biggest hit ever.

'Crossing Delancey" is another film in which the ending is never in doubt, but it's not the destination that's exciting, it's the ride. Amy Irving sparkles as an uptown bookstore owner trying to balance her fascination with the erudite world of the literati and the old-world ways of her upbringing. Peter Riegert plays the pickle store owner Irving's grandmother fixes her up with through a matchmaker. A good and honest man, Riegert is exactly what Irving is trying to flee, but can't. The funniest scenes come from the cynical way director Joan Micklin Silver pokes fun at the selfimportant, pretentious art world figures. Look for a hilarious cameo by Rosemary

"Delancey" was billed as "The 'Moonstruck' of 1988." "Moonstruck" was the previous year's Oscar-winning romantic comedy with a cast equal to its marvelous script. Cher won an Academy Award (not, however, totally deserved) playing an uptight widow who couldn't bring herself to marry her fiance after meeting his passionate younger brother. The new man, Nicholas Cage, brings her to life over pasta and opera. But it isn't just their love that is shown by the John Patrick Shanley script - everybody gets his witty examination of their relationships. It's a film for all but the youngest people.

Perhaps the two most unlikely lovers ever captured on film were "Harold and Maude." Death-obsessed, 20-year-old Harold (Bud Cort) meets life-obsessed 79-yearold Maude (Ruth Gordon) and they become friends and more. The reactions of local authority figures to their engagement are as hilarious as Harold's attempts at suicide and his fixed-up dates. This black comedy is not for everybody, though.

uan a man and a woman be friends? That is the question asked by Rob Reiner in his hilarious "When Harry Met Sally..." Covering a span of 12 years, the film charts the relationship of Harry (Billy Crystal) and Sally (Meg Ryan). First enemies, then friends, then lovers then enemies and finally husband and wife, the anfilm won best picture of 1977 (ick, look at those clothes) and Keaton won best actress and started a fashion trend.

swer to the question is: "Well, maybe." Taken apart, the film is a conglomeration of Woody Allen rip-offs, but as a whole, it's a meaningful look at modern relationships.

Speaking of Woody Allen, which of his movies isn't about love? Arguably the best of his romantic films is "Annie Hall." This film asks and answers the questions only Woody Allen can ask and answer: "Can intelligent, complex people rise above the baloney involved in getting a relationship off the ground?" and "What is wrong with the person I'm seeing? She must be loony because she's interested in me." Expect Allen's trademarks - his love of New York and his hatred of L.A. And, of course, there's his biting observation. When he walks up to a seemingly happy couple to ask why they're so happy, the man replies, T'm shallow and have no opinions and nothing to say." She says, "Me too." The in love with Darryl Hannah, an astronomer who comes to town to chart a comet. Martin's problem with telling her of his love is that he is sure she'll reject him because of his huge nose. It's a pretty savvy updating of "Cyrano de Bergerac" full of witty dialogue and good slapstick comedy. A movie for lovers who like to laugh.

Pure, unconsummated love is one of the most beautiful of movie themes, but with the exception of "Edward Scissorhands," which isn't available on tape yet, nobody does it well anymore. Dig deep in the files for the following films.

"Casablanca" may be the most famous of all these films. How many times have you watched the final "You have to get on that plane, Ilsa" scene. How many parodies of it have there been? What makes the movie so great is that even though you have seen it so many times, it's still effective, thanks to Humphrey Bogart and Ingrid Bergman.

It's frightening to think that Ronald Reagan was originally going to play the lead. This is one of those rare films that works well as an action film, a political intrigue film and a romance. Something for every-

Paul Henreid is the guy Bogart is telling Bergman to get on the plane with. But in "Now, Voyager" he is the man who never gets the girl, despite their undying love for each other. And what a girl — Bette Davis. Why the cardboard Henreid ever got such great roles is beyond me, but playing off Davis, he almost clicks. This is the movie in which he lights two cigarettes and gives her one. This is also the movie where Davis tells him, "Don't let's ask for the moon, we have the stars," when he says he can't leave his wife. Feminists would hate this movie: He ends the film with a wealthy wife and Davis declaring undying love for him while she gets to raise his problem child alone. But it does work. Performances by Claude Rains (who never turned in a bad one) and Gladys Cooper are excellent. Those who thought Davis could only play hard women will be

"Shall We Dance?" Anna asks the King in what is probably one of the most sensuous screen romances where the two lovers never even kiss. "The King and I" is so good not only because of the story, but because of the legendary performance by Yul Brynner and the equally marvelous acting by the underrated Deborah Kerr. Their love is more real and more romantic than the subplot in which a man gives his life for his lover. And it also has one of the best scores Rogers and Hammerstein — or anyone, for that matter — ever wrote.

When one talks of how love can go wrong, the names of Heathcliff and Kathy should come up. Very, very loosely based on the novel of the same name, "Wuthering Heights" is a dark, moody tearjerker turned out in 1939, the "Golden Year of Movies," when another love story, "Gone With the Wind," and films like "Mr Smith Goes to Washington," "The Wizard of Oz," and "The Women" were released. Laurence Olivier and Merle Oberon had legendary fights during the making of the film, but the final product is what is important. And what a product.

I would be remiss if I didn't mention (gag) "Somewhere in Time," filmed on Macinac Island with Jane Seymour and Christopher Reeve. It's a terrible movie with a great score. But it's one of those love stories that women can't resist. Reeve travels back in time and falls in love with Seymour only to come back to the present day, then die pining away for her. But it ends happily when they are (gag) reunited among the clouds in heaven. Rent it only when every other film in the video store is

DSO report

Composer says that haiku and dinosaurs are his inspirations

By Alex Suczek Special Writer

In the most positive sense of the TV talk show format, composer Lawrence Rapchak brought exactly that conversational, informative and entertaining atmosphere to Orchestra Hall stage last Thursday evening. Featured speaker of the pre-concert talk, he charmed his 7 p.m. audience of a couple of hundred and greatly heightened their anticipation of the evening's concert.

Rapchak is an articulate and genial speaker whose impres-

He inspired increased respect for Saint-Saens as a romantic period child prodigy even more "prodigious" than Mozart, and for the anguished genius of Shostakovich responding to inquisitorial treatment by Joseph Stalin. It helped explain why the violin concerto on the program could not be published while Stalin lived, and opened access to its musical meaning. His comments about the other composers on the program almost eclipsed Rapchak's real reason for being there — the world premiere of his new work "Sinfonia Antiqua" performed by Neeme Jarvi and the DSO. Here, too, his commentary was eagerly attended.

While he acknowledged a debt to the antique sinfonia form of the baroque era, it was his reference to the sparse, transparent quality of Japanese Haiku poetry that provided one of the best guides for listening to his work. Forewarned not to try to detect the baroque influence, the listener could be more receptive to the impressionistic quality of the music. It is much more understandable in relation to Rapchak's explanation that the Japverse to paint an intense picture was the stimulus that helped him find his musical voice as a composer.

Somehow, the fact that he also wore a tie decorated with dinosaurs completed the image of a unique creative figure. He also demonstrated his quick and gracious wit by alerting the audience that "tomorrow's tie will be decorated with tyrannosaurus

His music, as promised, proved to be highly accessible and evocative of the same mood inspired by Haiku. Rapchak achieved it in a musical style that is totally abstract, without a single hummable melody, yet delicately beautiful in mood and impact.

Jarvi and the DSO did the work great credit with a clear and effective performance. This was predicted in advance by the composer, who, in his talk, praised the DSO highly for what he had already heard in rehearsal.

With the prologue, the rest of the concert was doubled in im-

Violinist Nadia Salerno-Sonnenberg delivered a highly charged and energetic performance of the Shostakovich Violin Concerto No. 1. The soloist and conductor, both working from scores, gave an impassioned reading of the mournful opening movement. The scherzo that follows was equally anguished, but frenzied, too, and the violinist set a tempo suited to a wild dance of death. One can only speculate that this kind of image was in Shostakovich's mind when he wrote this music following the Stalin purges.

A startling contrast followed in the stately passacaglia movement where, like Rapchak, Shostakovich used an ancient form in bold and modern strokes, followed by an exceptionally long and moving cadenza.

Certainly the technical highlight of the evening was Salerno-Sonnenberg's performance of this cadenza with unbelievably beautiful tone, clarity and phrasing of the fiendishly difficult double stops and arpeggios. But the playing was even more fiendish in the presto finale with a rhythmic pulse so forceful and pervasive that listeners were visibly bobbing, and audibly tapping their feet. It was no surprise that the audience cheered during the long ovation that followed.

After all that modern drama, it was a refreshing change to get harmonies that you could sink your teeth into. Symphony No. 3 in C minor, the "Organ" by Saint Saens, was a welcome way to end the evening. It was especially so as an occasion to greet the eminent head of the organ department at the University of Michigan, Marilyn Mason, as so-

As Rapchak had cued us in his comments, Saint Saens' genius was clearly perceived in the beautifully structured music, a sparkling four-hand piano obligato and an artfully understated introduction of the organ in the second movement. We were similarly prepared for Jarvi, Mason and the orchestra to pull out all the stops for the last movement. They did and earned an ovation equal to the one before. The lack of a pipe organ in the hall occasioned the use of an exceptionally fine electric. The difference was a minor concern at the level of the organ's prominence in this work.

Jarvi continued his tradition of playing encores for the cheering audience with the fugal movement from Symphony No. 4 by American composer Charles Ives. The excellence of the rapport between Jarvi and the orchestra was amply evident even in this extra treat after the end of the program. It's a pleasure that symphony goers are not always privileged to enjoy on such a regular basis.

Once again Jarvi will pass the baton for this week's performances. On the podium will be

English conductor John Eliot Gardiner with a program of Haydn's Symphony No. 52, Mozart's Piano Concerto No. 15 and Elgar's Symphony No. 2. Soloist for these concerts will be pianist Jeffrey Kahane. Performance times are 8 p.m. tonight and Friday, and 8:30 p.m. Saturday. Speaker for the pre-concert talk tonight is music critic Lawrence B. Johnson. Easing fear of flying

It is significant that in 1990 there were still 25 million people who shared a fear of flying. Some are frightened to the point of refusing to fly. For many it is simply a distinct discomfort when in the unnatural state of being aloft in an

For those of you who suffer this discomfort, I offer the following tips:

1. To minimize stress, prepare for your trip well in advance. Get your ticket and reconfirm early and request seats and boarding passes in advance. If possible, request seats over the wing or toward the front of the aircraft where the ride will be smoother and quieter. Also, try to get an aisle seat. Pack, or at least lay out the items you plan to pack, several days before departure to avoid the last minute panic of what to bring and what not to bring.

2. Plan to arrive at the airport an hour to an hour and a half before your scheduled departure. Check in immediately. Spend your waiting time relaxing. Browse in the airport shops, get a cup of coffee or take the time at the newsstand choosing a book that will keep your attention throughout the flight.

3. Once in flight relax as fully as you can. There really is nothing else to do but read a good book or watch the movie. Try to enjoy it.

Following is a description of many of the unnerving aircraft noises you may hear. Understanding what is happening will put some of your unease at rest:

Typically, on boarding, there is the soft hum of the external air conditioning or heating system. Once boarding is complete, the door is shut and you will hear noises from the lower cargo compartment as the ground crew completes loading baggage. When the loading is finished you will hear the slam of the cargo door as it is shut.

When the airplane switches to its own internal heating and cooling system and the external system is disconnected, you will hear a much different hum or whine. In humid weather you may even notice some fog coming from the air vents. It is fog — not smoke. At this point, depending upon the size and type of airplane, the startup may be very quiet or it may make a "poof" noise as the engines are engaged. When you hear a continuous low whine you know the jet engines are running.

At many airport gates, the airplane has to be "pushed back" by a tractor. Unlike an automobile, the plane can't back up. During this time, there are some sideways pressures on the wheels, making thumps and groans as the airplane begins to move and make turns.

Upon reaching the runway, the engines will rev up and the takeoff roll begins. As the airplane gains speed and approaches flight, the weight comes off the wheels and noises tend to disappear until the aircraft is airborne. Then the landing gear is retracted with the whirring of electric motors and the clunk of the wheels being locked into place. Following this, there will be the whirring of the flaps being retracted in increments. Adjusting the flaps permits the airplane to take off and land more efficiently.

The ordinary in-flight sounds are those of the engines and of air passing over the plane. Occasionally, when turning or changing altitude, there may be slight differences in engine noise, just as there will be when cruising altitude is

About 100 miles before your destination, the plane will begin its descent through a reduction in the engine power settings. This will result in decreased engine noise. You will hear the flaps being extended and the landing gear being lowered.

The landing itself will create a solid "thunk" as the wheels touch down. This is often followed by an increase in sound as the engine thrust is "reversed" to slow the plane. Then the groaning of the wheels and brakes will be heard as the plane turns off the runway and arrives at the terminal.

If you would like to investigate this subject more fully, Simon and Schuster has published a book, audio and video cassette program called "Help for the Fearful Flyer."

Whatever you do, once you leave the airport be extra careful in traffic. That will be the most hazardous part of your trip.

The funny and fast-paced Second City Touring Company, the country's No. 1 improvisational comedy group, returns to the Attic Theatre for a limited engagement in February as part of the Attic Theatre's Guest Artist Se-

Chair lift

Performances are on Friday and Saturday, Feb. 22 and 23 at 7:30 p.m. and 10 p.m. and on Sunday, Feb. 24 at 7 p.m. All tickets are $19.50.

Advance reservations are strongly suggested. Tickets are available at the Attic Theatre box office at 875-8284 and Ticketmaster outlets at 645-6666.

The Second City was founded in Chicago nearly 30 years ago as an improvisational nightclub act. It gained overnight success and now has three stages, two in Chicago and one in Toronto.

A television group, SCTV, was added in 1973, and since then four touring companies have formed to keep pace with the group's popularity.

Competition for the touring company is fierce. Performers must pass rigorous auditions showing their quick wit and ability to improvise with other players. Many of those performers graduate to one of the Second City permanent stages and from there move up to work in movies, television and nightclubs. Performers whose careers began at Second City include Alan Alda, Ed Asner, Joan Rivers, Mike Nichols, John Belushi, Bill Murray and many more.

Attic Conservatory goes on the road

The Attic Theatre Conservatory announces its lineup of winter 1991 classes at the Attic, as well as its new program for area theater groups.

In addition to acting, scene study, improvisation and auditioning techniques, which will be offered at the Attic Theatre, the conservatory will also provide one- or two-day workshops for interested groups in improvisation, stage combat and auditioning techniques.

The conservatory classes begin this month, and can be scheduled at a group's convenience.

'We would like to make ourselves viable to community theaters as a source of new knowledge and techniques," said Wayne David Parker, the conservatory director.

For information on classes and workshops, call the Attic Theatre Conservatory at 875-8285.

Too many chances

Go ahead, drink. Go ahead, smoke that cigarette. Please, learn how to be an adult by drinking at a party or smoking behind the school building. It won't hurt you. Besides, the code of conduct for athletes at North and South almost allows you to do so.

True, the Grosse Pointe school system's Student Conduct and Discipline for Athletics details the consequences of an athlete abusing drugs, tobacco or alcohol, but it is a lenient and unbalanced, yet restricted, document.

Athletes who drink or smoke once — and are caught — are not kicked off the team. Drink or smoke again — and get caught - and you're still on the team.

Naturally, some athletes are going to challenge this policy and manipulate it to their benefit. However, drink or smoke a third time — and get caught and you're finally booted from the team.

Wow, three times until a coach or an administrator can remove you from a team. The first two times an athlete gets caught, he or she is still on the team, yet can't participate in any games - but can practice if the coach allows it. The guilty party must also undergo counseling.

I find fault with this policy, which was adopted from the Hazelden-Cork Foundation of Minnesota in April 1987. At that time the policy was a grand idea; now, however, it's obsolete and needs to be trashed.

On page two of the five-page policy, it states that an athlete can be booted from the team if he or she has two unexcused absences from practice. So if you sleep in once or twice, or you don't tell the coach you were fishing instead of running the half mile, you can rightfully be dismissed. But drink a couple of times and while the conduct is not accepted, it is tolerated because the school system's code of conduct says

An athlete is a gifted person who has made the team. Isn't that a first opportunity? Then if you get caught drinking one time, it should be punishable by immediate dismissal from the team. But no. You get another opportunity to dry out and/or butt out. In fact, the school allows you to use its counselor, and you don't have to pay for it.

There are many strong, talented athletes sitting in the stands who were not good enough to win a spot on the team. But one of the people who made the team is out smoking or drinking, gets caught and still remains on the squad. The innocent person in the bleachers would love to play, but was denied the opportunity. Instead, a smoker or drinker continues to pull the jersey over the head and play.

North hockey coach Mike Manzella wanted to dismiss two kids from his team after they were caught drinking in the school parking lot. Manzella resigned as coach after the administration, including North athletic director Tom Gauerke, wouldn't support his decision. A day later, he dropped his resignation and agreed to come back for the remainder of the season. But he and several other coaches remain upset because they have to put up with too much guff from their players. Manzella, and any other coach in the system, should be able to broom the kids. They can cut kids from the tryouts at the beginning of the season, so why aren't they given the same authority throughout the season? Because the policy dictates it and seems to put more emphasis on attendance than on drinking or smoking infractions.

ULS Knights to rejoin Metro Conference in 1992

University Liggett School will jump back into the Metro Conference beginning in the fall of

Since 1980, the Knights' sports teams have enjoyed great success in the Michigan Independent Athletic Conference (MIAC), but now it's time to play again in the league founded by ULS athletic director Bob Wood, and Hamtramck's Art May.

Conference from 1968 to 1979, before shifting to the MIAC.

"We left the Metro Conference because it was apparent that we were about to embark on a major philosophy change and we were seeing that we were not competitive with the other schools," said Wood, who recalled it took almost a year to develop the original six-team conference.

"We were getting beaten 28-0 at the half in football and 32-4 ULS competed in the Metro in the first quarter of a basketball game, so we decided to withdraw and begin play in the MIAC in the fall of '80.

The new Metro Conference, which will be broken into two divisions, will sport 10 teams, including five Lutheran schools, three public schools and two private schools. The first meeting for aligning the teams took place Feb. 13. "I'm very excited and our coaches are cautiously optimistic about the move," said Wood. There is a concern among some of the coaches that we'll have some trouble being competitive, but then again we're looking forward to the challenge.

The challenges will come against Lutheran East, Lutheran West, Lutheran Westland, Lutheran North, Lutheran Northwest, Hamtramck, Harper Woods, Clarenceville and Cranbrook.

ULS will remain an independent competitor in tennis, ice hockey, swimming, field hockey and lacrosse.

"By joining the Metro Conference we are providing our athletes with additional athletic challenges," Wood said. "We feel our superior academic programs and athletic facilities have attracted student-athletes who have once again made ULS competitive, and we want to provide those athletes with a Metro Conference challenge.'

Muriel Brock, who coached girls' field hockey for more than 30 years for the Knights and still handles the scheduling of field hockey and girls' lacrosse, was glad to see the move.

"It was important that it happened," she said. "I'm very happy to see them go back into it mainly because it's a league that will be competitive. We won't necessarily reign on top anymore, but that's not what we're looking for.

"What we're looking for is a good exchange in all the sports. It was a good move for the quality of competition that the kids needed."

Head basketball coach Chuck Wright, whose teams have won four straight MIAC championships, also supports the move.

'We really never should have dropped out, but I understand why we did," Wright said. "By going back to the Metro Conference, we will be forced to keep pressure on our school and coaches to keep our level up, and that's healthy. This will give us virtually zero breathers on the schedule and force us to be the best we can be every day."

Wright. "We put very little emphasis on winning and stress camaraderie and a good time. In fact, we probably forget if we won or not when we come home from a tournament, but we know who had the most fun.'

The Old Devils, made up of lawyers, doctors, entreprenuers and marketing specialists, practice once a week and try to play in at least one tournament a month. They will compete in a two-game series Feb. 15-18 against the Canadian military base at Val Cartier, Quebec, and will return home to play in Fraser and Waterford, before heading to places such as St. Louis, Toronto, Sarnia, Amherstburg and possibly California.

The team name is only five years old, but the idea of playing has been around since the mid-70s, when the nucleus of guys would meet at Austin High School and play.

"A number of guys have played as kids and have gone through the amateur ranks, and some of them have even gotten as far as junior hockey," Wright said. "We used to skate at Austin after their team was done and that's how it started. We formalized our team as a senior men's league in 1975.'

That's when the team used to play in Berkley's winter league, and the spring leagues in St. Clair Shores and Grosse Pointe.

"We still can't get enough of hockey," said McCowell, a manufacturer's rep. "This is like a fantasy and it never, never stops. It doesn't look like the NHL, but it's fun and we maintain our competitiveness and enjoy everything that goes with it." And what goes with it can't be

"This gives a group of guys, who normally wouldn't be to gether to begin with, the chance to get together," said Wright. "The times we have on the ice are fun, but we have even more fun off the ice and let me tell you, the banter in the locker room is a kick, too," said Mca great aerobic workout and it's a better workout than you'd get anywhere else; plus, I don't care how old you are, those juices of competition are still flowing. You get on the ice and instantly feel that edge kick in.

Wright and McCowell started the team, but they have Andre Boulanger to thank for getting them involved in the Quebec hockey scene.

"Andre took a bunch of Old Devils with him to play in an all-star game and won it," Wright said. "And since then we've gone back every year.'

Each Old Devil is responsible for financing his own trip, practice and game. All the expenses are paid out-of-pocket, and unlike some of the teams the Devils play, there is not a team

"We do it because we crave hockey and exercise," said Mc-Cowell. "My wife let's me indulge in it because she knows how important it is to me, and I think that's the feeling with all the guys. We've become great friends, and if we ever had to give it up, I don't know what I'd miss more, the competition or the participation in the locker room.

But for now nobody has to worry about giving it up. The Old Devils will continue to travel; in fact, this year is probably their most ambitious agenda, and they will still be the most fun-loving group of guys aged 35-

"We have always tried to put a limitation on our pursuit of winning," said McCowell. "We have always loved competition and right now playing is a way for us to live a dream and fantasize. We didn't put our team together just to win. We want fun and happiness and guys who can present the right chemistry for the team.'

And that's banter, competition, exercise and dreaming. "And what better way to get all of that than playing with a group of friends who have one thing in common?" Wright Cowell. "We do this because it's asked.

South held a 37-33 edge at the half, but trailed 48-44 at the end of three quarters, thanks to a cold shooting spell and some questionable officiating.

'Some of the officiating was a bit suspect," said Petrouleas.
"But we had our opportunities to win and should have.'

South went to the free throw line 13 times, compared to Anchor Bay's 36 trips.

"We kind of hurt ourselves in the third quarter because we didn't execute at all," Petrouleas

Tom Eckert paced the Devils with 17 points, and co-captain Bill Leins added 15 points. Mike McLaughlin had a dozen points, and Blair Hess had 11 rebounds and a couple blocked shots. Paul Deisinger had seven rebounds coming off the bench.

After two days of practice and adjustments without Gramling, South trounced the Fraser Ramblers behind the 16-point, six-rebound performance of Hess.

"We had enough time to work on some things without Timmy and the kids reacted and executed well," Petrouleas said. "We had 20 assists, so that tells you we were really moving the ball all night."

Eckert and Leins had five assists each, and McLaughlin, who scored 14 points, had four as-

Mike Armstrong had 13 points and 10 rebounds.

"We're three games back, but we have to take care of our own business and not worry about the other teams," Petrouleas said. "We're honing ourselves and gearing for the remainder of the season.

Volleyball

In a match-up of league leaders Feb. 4, the South volleyball team was too strong for the Lady Tars of Anchor Bay.

"That is, without a doubt, the best match we played all year long," said Coach Cindy Sharpe after her team moved into first place with a 15-8, 15-5 victory. We dominated the net and constantly had them scrambling to play defense and took them out

"We've been playing a lot better and now we've just got to continue playing aggressively," said Sharpe.

Angela Drake led South with eight kills and four blocks for points, and Emilie Ayrault, Ashley Moran and Sue McGahey combined for 12 kills. Sue Faremouth had 16 assists for the Lady Devils.

At Fraser Feb. 6, South avenged its only league loss by dropping Fraser, 15-9, 15-10.

But it was a whole lot closer than that," Sharpe said. "Fraser played great defense and dug out every ball we hit, but we kept hitting and stayed on the attack and just waited for Fraser to break down.'

blocks for points sparked South, as did Tina Higel's six kills and nine service points. Ayrault had five kills and Faremouth had 22 assists.

Wrestling

Brion Czaiczynski (171), Frank Voelker (heavyweight) and Jon Ostrowski (145) will all wrestle in the individual regional tournament Feb. 16 at Troy.

Czaiczynski and Ostrowski took third place in the Feb. 9 district meet at Anchor Bay, while Voelker, who had the only South pin of the day, took fourth.

South, losers of four straight, fell to 10-7-1 overall and $5.6-\overline{1}$ in the Michigan Metro East league after losses to Cabrini (5-4) and Catholic Central (4-2).

After a scoreless first period, South trailed 3-1 after two periods. Tom Rait scored for South.

In the third period, South fell behind 4-1 before a three-goal spurt tied the score at 4-4. Rajt got his second of the night, and Brad Warezak and Todd Frederickson rounded out the three unanswered goals.

"We talked about going out in the third period and just playing hard for 15 minutes, win or lose," McCauley said.

But, with 1:43 left, South goalie Jason Hall made an initial stop of a shot, but let the puck trickle over the line, giving the Monarchs the win.

South beat Stevenson, 116-66, but lost to Ann Arbor Pioneer, ranked No. 5, 118-68.

In the win over Stevenson, the medley relay team of Brenn Schoenherr, Ted Stedem, Andy Walter and John Nickles took first, as did the team's No. 1 diver, Chad Hepner. Rob Bacon took the 200 individual medley, and Fritz Ollison won the 200 freestyle.

Walter won the 100 butterfly, while Tim Jogan won the 100 freestyle and Stedem took the 100 backstroke.

Despite the loss Feb. 9 at home against Pioneer, Stedem won the 200 individual medley and the 100 breaststroke, while Walter won the 50 freestyle. Jogan won the 500 freestyle and Jim Bellanca swam a state-cut time in the 200 backstroke.

Norsemen hockey team making a move

By Rob Fulton

It's definitely too late to consider reaching the .500 mark on the seesant but it's not too late for a Norsemen rush.

North, with a lowly 4-12-1 record, pushed its non-losing streak to two games after tying and beating Ann Arbor Pioneer last week

At home Feb. 8, North got outs from John Ferguson and Gary Corona to tie Pioneer, 2-2, and two days later beat Pioneer, 3.2. when Billy Bufalino statumed home the game-winmuc coal with a blistering slap shot from the point.

"The kids are doing just fine said Norsemen coach Mike Manzella, whose team had jost four straight before the tie.

"We're cooking now and we're on a roll," he said with some sarcasm in his voice.

Manzella knows his team isn't very strong and has been plagued with suspensions and other problems all season long. Now, however, it's time to think about the playoffs.

"We're relieved and happy, but we've got to start making a mose immediately." Manzella said. "We don't have any time to try to hone our game. We think our schedule should favor us controller tournament time, because we have played a brutal schedule with no breaks on it at all. At 125 pounds, North's Keith Giannico could be the state's top wrestler. He's certainly the district's best.

With two pins and two decisions in four matches Feb. 9. Giannico claimed first place at 125 pounds, qualifying for the regional meet at Troy Feb. 16.

"I think Keith has a great shot at winning the state meet," said Norsemen coach Art Roberts. "He's got a great record and has wrestled well all season

Giannico is 48-2 overall and has won six tournaments.

Joining him on the trip to the regionals will be third-place finisher Reid O'Brien (119).

By Rob Fulton

Sports Editor South swimming coach Fred Michalik doesn't like to beat oppenents badly - especially North — because he knows what goes around comes around.

But he'll take the Deads' recent 118-68 thrashing of North and keep right on going.

"We aren't trying to look back

"At first glance, I didn't want to go with the lineup I did," he Michalik, whose team is 5-3 said, "but I had to because we overall. "I don't like beating needed to find out where the guys belong and where they can be best used down the stretch." Michalik discovered some things, but North coach Les Roddis was fully aware of what to expect. 'We knew going in that we wouldn't be able to compete with their top four swimmers," he said of South's Tim Jogan, Ted Stedem, Andy Walter and Jim Bellanca. "Before the meet we talked about trying to swim against the clock, because that's the only thing that was going to hurt us, and giving an honest effort. We also talked about support and spirit for the other guys on the team and I can honestly say we got all three of those things during that meet.'

Roddis and the Norsemen also got their first league loss after four meets. Overall, North is 4-4.

"I think we're doing very well considering we lost 11 guys from last year's team," Roddis said. Seven of those swimmers graduated, and four of them, for one reason or another, have left the

"I'm a little bitter about Craig Williams leaving the team, Roddis said about the 1990 state qualifier who is now playing basketball. "I have nothing against him wanting to play basketball, but I don't think that's where his talent lies.'

North had only three firstplace finishers, which included Charlie Roddis (100 butterfly), Steve Williams (500 free) and John Galvin (100 breaststroke). Roddis also finished second in the 100 backstroke to South's Stedem, but it was fast enough to qualify him for the state meet.

Others faring well for North were Rusty Milne (3rd, 100 free, 4th, 100 backstroke), and Graham Sisk (4th, 200 I.M.).

South got things started quickly with a clean sweep in the 200 medley relay, 200 freestyle, 200 individual medley and 50 freestyle, just before Chad Hepner took first in the diving competition.

Bellanca, Stedem, Walter and John Nickles won the medley relay, while Jogan won the 200 free and Stedem took the 200 I.M. Junior Chris Nelson won the 50 free. Jogan went on to win the 100 butterfly for South, while Nelson took the 100 free. Chuck Ruifrok kept South going with a second in the 500 free, and Stedem and Rob Bacon won the 100 back and 100 breaststroke, respectively.

Jogan, Nelson, Brenn Schoenherr and Tim Harmount teamed to win the 200 free relay, and Fritz Ollison, Nelson, Harmount and Schoenherr won the 400 free relay. "I'm happy we won, sure," said Michalik. "But we've got a long way to go. We need guys who want to dedicate themselves to at least 26 weeks of swimming and not just 12. We're not out of shape, but we've been having guys taking four and five day weekends and a few weeks off, instead of swimming and that hurts us as a team.'

And North, with the fewest swimmers of any team in the Macomb Area Conference White Division, is making great strides.

"I'm not happy with our overall record," Roddis said. "But I can't do anything about it. The kids are swimming the best they can and they've taken giant steps in progress compared to the first day we walked into the season - and that's what I'm

Knights' hockey team closes home schedule with 2 wins

The University Liggett School hockey team closed out its regular-season home schedule by defeating Livonia Churchill, 5-2, and Detroit Country Day School, ULS, the defending Class B-C-D state champ, is now rated No. 7 in the state and sport an 11-5-3 record.

Alex Crenshaw converted a pass from John Maycock at the 5:02 mark of the second period that gave the Knights a 3-2 lead over Churchill. It was Crenshaw's fourth game-winning goal of the season. Goalie Chris Eldridge got the win in net.

Eric Kisskalt and Andy Van-Deweghe put the game away with third period goals. Maycock and VanDeweghe scored in the first period, with junior defenseman Bill Robb assisting on both goals.

Against DCDS Feb. 10 at McCann Rink, 10 different Knights figured in the scoring.

Leading the attack was Van-Deweghe, whose hat trick gave him 28 goals for the season, as ULS outshot the Yellowjackets, 44-11.

Freshman Omar Sawaf slammed the puck past a fallen DCDS goaltender at 10:50 of the first period, and junior Stefan Teitge slipped in the next two goals to give ULS a 4-0 lead midway through two periods.

ture, the Knights went down to Knights lifted their record to 8-8defeat twice last week.

ULS lost at Oakland Christian, 79-69, and was crushed by Country Day, the No. 1 team in Class B, 93-43.

The loss to Oakland Christian dropped the Knights into a firstplace tie with Oakland and Southfield Christian. All three teams are 3-1 in the Michigan Independent Athletic Conference.

The Lancers kept constant pressure on ULS, and the Knights never got untracked, falling behind by as many as 20 points. Brent McMahon led ULS with 28 points, and DeDan Milton had 25 points.

"Our ball handling and the game's quick tempo did us in," said ULS coach Chuck Wright. "We did nothing well on either end of the floor. Oakland was more prepared and more motivated than we were."

The Knights' record fell to 7-7 with the DCDS hammering.

The Yellowjackets, led by Chris Webber, pulled away from ULS after taking an 18-12 firstquarter lead.

"We lost our discipline after the first quarter," Wright said. "We simply began giving up too many transition buckets and made things easy for DCDS."

Webber led all scorers with 25 points. McMahon led the Knights with 12 points and Milton chipped in with 10 points.

Volleyball

With a 15-4, 16-14, 15-6 win over South Lake, the Lady

Sophomore outside hitter Meredith Korneffel led the ULS attack with 11 kills, and senior back-court specialist Lynn Sinkel had 39 passes. Other standouts included Martina Jerant, with six kills, and Natasha Levy with 43 sets.

Earlier in the week, ULS placed fourth in the eight-team Detroit Country Day School Tournament. ULS swept Southfield Christian, 15-10, 15-11, split with St. Agatha, 15-3, 10-15 and DCDS, 5-15, 16-14, and lost to Greenhills, 3-15, 6-15.

ULS also lost to Dominican, 12-15, 11-15.

In the final home meet of the season, ULS lost, 102-55, to Country Day.

Jon Sieber and Anita Warner took first and second, respectively, in the 500 freestyle. Sieber and Warner also teamed up with Beth Weyling and Abby McIntyre to clock a 1:50 in the 200 freestyle relay.

In the 100 backstroke, Katie Tompkins swam a 1:15 and joined teammates Ali Bararsani. Wendy Nystrom and Brenth Jahnke in the 400 freestyle.

Sean Gardella took second in the 100 freestyle in 1:04, and Lesley Thomas, Margo Metcalfe, Megan Prost and Bararsani had a fine swim in the 200 medley relay. Tracy Howard had a 1:30 in the 100 breaststroke.

The red patch, which allows the skiers an all-area pass, was attained by Karen Drummy, Courtney Kastner, Patrick Spain, Monique Abi Raji, Sumeet Karnik and Kristen Perry. The black patch is the most difficult to acquire and takes many miles on the skis to perfect. John Spain and Kasey Perry passed the test to earn the black patch.

In a Dec. 27 trip to Mount Brighton for the season opener, red patches were earned by Margaret Agnone, Emily Fleury, Tara Lewis and Brad and Lauren Klein. Attaining the mini-pass were Patrick Spain, Roslie Vitale, Graeger Smith, Nelson Ropke, Kristy Rogers, Tina DiLaura, Sarah Easlick, Lindsay Hawkins, Greg Ryan, Marla Cummings, Steven and Abby Burrows, Annalisa Romano, Annie Peacock, Erin Fletcher and Lauren Rashid.

Up in smoke: Dealing with a home fire — before and after

By Linda Parker Special Writer

The clock in the kitchen stopped at 3:18 a.m. on New Year's Eve.

Arkie Hudkins opened his eyes and listened, trying to identify the crackling noise. The sound was coming from the laundry chute. Hudkins went down to the first floor and smelled smoke. Then he opened the basement door and saw "a wall of

Within minutes Hudkins and his wife, Terry Brooks, stood shivering on their front lawn watching the firemen fight the blaze that was roaring through their house on Cloverly in Grosse Pointe Farms.

The three high-pressure hoses sent "dishes, jewelry, paper — everything — flying through the air," Hudkins said.

"It was an angry fire, I could see it at the front door," Brooks added.

Neighbors gathered. Sandy and Walter Fisher and Maryann Petz brought coffee, gloves, a blanket and a jogging suit.

"They weren't just watching a carnival show, they were there to help," Hudkins said. "Every question they asked was related to what can we do to make this easier for you?'

"It was somebody taking charge, somebody handling small, but important details, Brooks added.

Firemen from five cities quickly and professionally stopped the flames, which had started in the basement in the circuit breaker box and caused some $300,000 damage.

It was 7 a.m. when the couple re-entered their home. Hudkins, an editorial cartoonist for the Grosse Pointe News and other publications, and Brooks, a partner in charge of health care at Dykema Gossett, found that all their clothes smelled of smoke.

Their furniture and belongings were either wet, broken or dirty. Although they were mentally and physically exhausted, Hudkins and Brooks knew there was a lot of work to be done.

'If a home is totally destroyed by a fire, it is hard to remember details such as identifying what piece of jewelry the now-melted clump of gold and silver was.'

Jan Miller Claims coordinator J.A. Versical & Associates

"We were staring at things in disbelief, but our minds were still working," Brooks said.

It was a nightmare. But the smoothly efficient professional help they got from that day on is helping to return their lives to Hudkins contacted his insurance agent. An adjuster arrived at the home to assess the damage. He also explained the many forms that had to be filled out.

"We have the insureds start compiling a list of damaged property," said Jan Miller, claims coordinator at J.A. Versical & Associates. She recommends that people make a videotape of the contents of their home and store the tape off the premises.

"If a home is totally destroyed by a fire, it is hard to remember details such as identifying what piece of jewelry the now-melted clump of gold and silver was," she said. She also recommends that a "replacement-cost guarantee on contents and dwelling" clause be written into the policy.

"The average cost is $30 annually. It is well worth the extra money," Miller said.

The insurance company and the homeowner settle on a dollar figure for both the repairs to the home and the contents. The insurance company's responsibility is financial reimbursement. It is up to the homeowner to hire a contractor and a cleaning company. In some cases, however, an insurance agent will recommend several available sources.

Hudkins called Burton Bros. General Contractors in Southfield, specialists in fire repairs.

"They came in and knew just what to do," Hudkins said.

The contractors immediately began securing the home against further weather damage. They also brought in an ozone machine to clean the air and hooked up temporary electricity to pump the water out.

"After the emergency is over, we will come back and formally bid on the job," said Ken Christenson, a partner at Burton Bros. If the owner is satisfied with the bid, the contractor will start to repair the building.

"We are paid by the homeowner, not by the insurance company. We don't get paid unless the owner is satisfied with our work," Christenson said.

Although Brooks returned to her practice, Hudkins put his cartoons on hold and now goes to his home every day. "The men are not just doing a job, they really take pride in their work. They really care," Hudkins said.

Brooks came back to the house one week after the fire to make a decision on repair work for the bathroom. She said she had to hold back her tears.

"I went upstairs and all of a sudden it hit me - there was a fire here," she said, adding that the workers were sensitive to her emotions. "They wanted to show me all the work they had done. Work they were doing to give me back my home."

Several cleaning services were also called and work daily alongside the contractors and the insurance adjuster. Venus Cleaners, Detroit, is in charge of the couples' clothes and drapes, and Guaranteed Furniture Service, Berkley, is responsible for cleaning the furniture.

Each item is cataloged before it is taken away to be cleaned.

"Several of our friends offered their homes, but we decided to stay in a hotel," Hudkins said. "We were told it would be approximately three months before we could return to the house."

Woodn't she just love a new fir coat?

Stumped about what to get there will be no more of her neeher for Valentine's Day? Why not surprise her with a genuine full length fir coat?

Think of it. With a few pieces of wood and some basic carpentry skills, you can give her the gift she's been pining for. And you won't have to go out on a limb financially.

Imagine the look on her face when she opens your package on Valentine's Day. Think of her tears of joy as she picks splinters from her fingers. Think how proud you'll feel as the two of you go out for dinner and she lumbers along at your side. And pieces are cut from 1x4s.

dling about that old cloth coat.

But there are some disadvantages. She may be declared a spotted owl habitat and ordered to be left standing. And while you won't have to worry about moths, woodpeckers and termites could be a problem.

The coat's knot difficult to make. All you'll need is 14 lengths of 1x4 fir for the front, back and sides (for petite sizes, use 1x3s) and eight lengths of 1x4 fir for the set-in sleeves. The front and back yokes are made from 1x6s and the shoulder from fir bark or a pine bough. Many people say the pine bough looks like a fox scarf, although the color wood detract from that

Using an old coat - maybe that despised cloth number — as a pattern, cut the lumber to length. Assemble the pieces as shown, using two-inch hinges for maximum flexibility. If a collar is desired, attach it with a good waterproof adhesive.

If possible, arrange for a fitting before finishing the hem and sleeves. A too-hasty cut gift of her dreams, for less than could mean the difference be-

The optional collar is made tween haute couture and kindling for a back yard wienie roast. But don't worry about wrecking the surprise; even if you told her what you were doing, she wouldn't believe it.

She'd just think you have a warped sense of humor.

Three-inch metal hasps, gold or silver, make attractive and practical fasteners for the front closing. Tiny diamond-studded padlocks provide a nice touch, but for absolutely the last word in accessorizing, include a live squirrel.

And there yew have it. The

Low-voltage lights help you get decked out

Many homeowners are familiar with the benefits that lowvoltage outdoor lighting provides around the home, but did you know it's just as easy to install the lights on decks?

The first step is to develop an outdoor lighting deck plan. You'll need to determine the types and number of fixtures for the deck, as well as where you want to mount the power pack and how much cable you'll need to complete the installation. "The best time to lay cable is before you attach the decking planks to the joists," says Philip L. Kinzer, marketing manager for Malibu low-voltage lights. "Try feeding the low-voltage cable through the joists or beneath them, but leave enough slack to make it easier for you to connect the lights later on.

When you're ready to install the lights, drill a small hole in the deck surface and use a wire coat hanger or pliers to put the cable above the floor level. Then turn the power pack on and connect your lights. Once you're pleased with the lighting effect, permanently mount the lights.

You also can hide the cable by mounting it under railings or benches. To install lights on steps, try running the cable beneath the steps or along the bottom of the steps.

Until a few years ago, mounting low-voltage lights on decks was a formidable task. Now, with the full range of surfacemounting accessories available, installation is much easier. In fact, you can mount tier lights, mushroom lights, shaded tiers and globe lights on posts, corners or walls of the house, as well as on walls, fences and deck surfaces. Wood deck lights are the perfect choice for use under benches, steps and railings.

According to Kinzer, one of the most popular new deck lighting accessories is a remote on/off switch that lets you independently control lights anywhere along the low-voltage cable line. It instantly turns selected deck lights on and off from different locations on the deck without the need to walk to the power pack.

BUTTON FIX - I hate sewing buttons on my clothes. On inexpensive blouses, the buttons have been sewn on by machine with a little bit of thread showing. If I pull on the loose thread, the button falls off. To prevent this, I put a small dab of white glue on each button before I wear the garment, this ensures that the buttons stay on longer. Eulalie G., Ft. Lupton, Colo.

BEDROOM FLASHLIGHT - I have several grandchildren, and we also have a lot of overnight guests. I have learned that placing a flashlight by the bed is an adventure for the young and security for all ages.

The use of the flashlight in the middle of the night prevents a bright light from awakening others, yet provides a small light for those unfamiliar with the floor plan of our house. Gloria N., Ozark, Mo.

BABY BOTTLES — I just know that my hint will save a lot of parents the trouble of baby-bottle nipples and caps getting ruined or lost in the dishwasher. I put them in a small hosiery bag (made to wash hosiery in a washing machine) and secure them by tying the bag to the top rack of my dishwasher.

My doctor says the heat from the water and the drying cycle do the cleaning for me since I don't have to sterilize them the old-fashioned way anymore. Irene P., Albertyville, Ala.

Paint & Household by Bob D'Angelo

Q. I recently painted my basement floor (concrete), and it's beginning to peel. What should I

A. Often, hardeners added to concrete will prevent good adhesion. Also, concrete contains alkali which is drawn to the surface by water. When the water evaporates, they leave a crystallized substance called effloresce which pushes against the paint film and causes peeling.

An additional problem with concrete is that grease, oil, dirt and wax tend to soak in and are difficult to remove. If they are present when the floor is painted, it can cause peeling. Also, moisture seeping up through the concrete will contribute to poor paint adhesion. The solution to this dilemma is to first remove the paint by scraping. Then clean the floor with hot water and a strong detergent such as MEX. Once the floor is clean, use a 10 percent solution of muriatic acid and water to etch the surface. When painting with water-based paint, use phosphoric acid instead of muriatic. Allow the solution to stay on for 10 or 15 minutes before rinsing, and allow the floor to completely dry. When the floor is properly etched, it should resemble fine sandpaper and will allow a better paint bond.

Use an alkali-resistant primer before repainting, and don't forget the proper eye and hand protection.

Q. I have a tongue and groove cedar sided house which had turned black in a very short time. What can I do to restore it to its natural color, and prevent future discoloration?

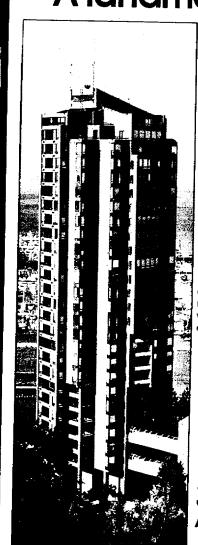

A. Unprotected wood starts to discolor immediately after being cut down, and in order to maintain the same color as new, it is necessary to apply stain to it. Stains also contain wood preservers which will enhance the life of the wood.

Cedar is soft wood which, because of the tannic acid contained in the wood, will keep the wood for many, many years. This tannic acid, however, is the cause for some of the discoloring. Another cause of discoloration would be if the end grain of the pieces of cedar are not sealed (varnish), moisture will be drained up into the wood, darkening

Finally, there's the main culprit of wood discoloring, mildew. Applying household bleach to the surface will successfully kill the mildew and power washing will bring back the wood to its natural color, but only temporarily until you can put a protective coat on it.

NOVENA TO ST. JUDE May the Sacred Heart of Jesus be adored, glorified, loved and preserved throughout the world now and forever. Oh, Sacred Heart of Jesus, pray for us. Workers of miracles, pray for us. St. Jude, helper of the hopeless, pray for us.

Say this prayer 9 times a day. By the 8th day your prayer will be answered. It has never been known to fail, never. Publication must be promised. Thanks St. Jude for prayer answered. Special thanks to our Mother of Perpetual Help. J.A..

O HOLY St. Jude, apostle and martyr, great in virtue and rich in miracles; near kinsman of Jesus Christ, faithful Intercessor of all who invoke your special patronage in time of need. To you I have recourse from the depth of my heart and humbly beg to whom God has given such great power to come to my assistance. Help me in my present and urgent position. In return I promise to make your name known and cause you to be invoked. Say 3 Our Father's, say 3 Hail Mary's, say 3 Glorias. St. Jude pray for us and all who invoke your aid. Amen. 203 HELP WANTED DENTAL/MEDICAL

$3,000 IN BONUSES IS NO SMALL CHANGE.

There are a lot of big changes taking place at Henry Ford Hospital. To help us staff newly added critical care beds and other critical areas, we're offering Adult Med/Surg, ER, PACU, and Adult Critical Care nurses $3,000 in first year bonuses. To qualify, you need at least one year of hospital-based experience in one of these areas within the last two years, and you must be hired between January 6 and February 28 of 1991 for a full-time position.

You'll find that Henry Ford Hospital has changed a lot more than our bonuses. Our long term plan for change is providing nurses with higher levels of practice, respect, support, education and authority. Our salaries are also among the highest in the region, and our comprehensive benefits include 4.5 weeks of paid time off and on-site child care.

If you'd like additional details or would like to learn what other big changes are taking place at Henry Ford Hospital, call Nursing Employment at (313) 876-1506, Henry Ford Hospital, Clara Ford Pavilion, 2nd Floor, 2799 W. Grand Blvd., Detroit, MI 48202. An Equal Opportunity/Affirmative Action
