

Green (1.76) acres may be subdivided in Farms

By Donna Walker
Staff Writer

Elizabeth Lepard of Grosse Pointe Farms is sure her garage once housed a horse and a cow, as well as chauffeurs. There are hooks for saddles and farm equipment along the walls, and living quarters upstairs.

She also believes that the previous owners spent the summer nights sans air conditioning on the secluded sleeping porch on the second floor, and that they liked to have their hired help close at hand — wall buzzers throughout the house are linked to the kitchen and maids' quarters.

Lepard is also adamant when she says that the three-story (four if you count the basement), 72-year-old Tudor-style home with its 17-plus rooms and 1.76 acres of grounds is not too much for one person to maintain.

After all, she said, she's done it for years.

However, there is one thing that she's not certain about, and that is the future of the property, located at 237 Ridge Road in Grosse Pointe Farms.

Lepard accepted an offer from W. James Mast in April to purchase the property. Mast wants to tear down the existing house and subdivide the property into either four or five lots.

The only way he can fit five lots on the property, he said, is by creating a cul-de-sac off Stephens Road. He would put three houses around the cul-de-sac and two houses on the Ridge Road side, and the lots would range in size from 11,000 to 18,000 square feet. However, he needs a variance from the Grosse Pointe Farms Planning Commission to create a cul-de-sac.

Mast said that the closing of the sale will take place on or before Aug. 15, variance or no variance.

"I don't want to see them tear down the house," Lepard said. "That would be a shame. But my son wants me to go live with him in New Mexico as soon as possible, and I need to get my things in order."

She said that she was fortunate to get Mast's offer, because she hadn't even put the property on the market when he made the bid.

Lepard and her husband, the late Dr. Cecil Lepard, bought the house and lot in the fall of 1945, she said. They bought the house from Mr. and Mrs. Henry Stephens Jr. Stephens's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Stephens Sr., owned a large stretch of property from Lakeshore to Charlevoix, and Mrs. Stephens had the house built for their son when he got married.

Stephens Road is named after their family.

Lepard's daughter, Robin, and son, Jeremy, grew up at 237 Ridge, and had plenty of room to run around. And as the adjoining area filled with homes on smaller lots, neighbors appreciated the Lepard's green space more and more.

Jan Hulme, who lives on Stephens, said, "It's too bad to see that green space go."

However, Hulme said that she wouldn't mind if Mast constructed up to four houses on

Septic systems cause stink along lakefront in Shores

Trustee claims affluent effluents entering lake

By John Minnis
Assistant Editor

Septic systems are causing a stink in Grosse Pointe Shores — both literally and figuratively.

Two lakefront property owners in the Shores, including Village Trustee Patricia Galvin, are crying foul about the fact that there is no sewer line running along the front of their properties on the east side of Lakeshore.

The nearest sewer access for the properties is 122 to 276 feet away.

"I'm just asking for what my neighbors have across the street," Galvin said. "All I'm asking is let me hook up to something, not go digging (down the street) for a block."

"I don't have anything to hook up to. It (a sewer line) is not coming up and meeting me like everybody else has."

The malodorous issue arose at a recent Shores council meeting when Galvin and neighbors Carl and Marian Larson, of the 800 block of Lakeshore, asked that the village provide at its expense a sewer line in front of their homes so they can disconnect their septic systems and hook up to the sanitary sewer system.

In response to Galvin and the Larsons' request, the village administration and public works committee made an exhaustive search of city records, building permits and minutes of council and commission meetings to learn the history of sewer availability along Lakeshore north of Vernier and to determine if there is a precedent requiring the village to provide a sewer hookup in front of the properties in question.

The research indicated that no such precedent exists, said John Huetteman III, chairman of the public works committee, when he presented the findings at the June 18 council meeting.

"There's no obligation of the village to extend the sewer system as requested," he said. "Nothing was spared in trying to research the entire situation."

But the research did find that the village paid for a sewer line from 830 to 844 Lakeshore in 1974 so that four properties could connect to the nearest crossover arm. The line was an emergency measure, according to village officials, due to the high lake level at the time that was forcing the residents' septic systems to back up into their homes.

"Never mind the history," responded Marian Larson. "That doesn't prove anything. I don't care about the history."

In 1930, the village built a combined sanitary and storm sewer line along Lakeshore from Crestwood south to Larned Lane, where it then discharged into the lake. Before the sewer line was installed, all homes on the lake side of Lakeshore were connected to septic tanks. After the sewer line was constructed, a few homes hooked into it.

In 1953, the village disconnected the discharge pipe into the lake and continued the sewer line down Lakeshore to Fordcroft, and then up Cook Road to the Wayne County interceptor, which leads to the Detroit sewage treatment plant.

At this time, the village also extended the sewer line up Lakeshore to the Edsel and Eleanor Ford property.

Because the line was constructed on the west side of Lakeshore, where most of the new development was expected and the ground conditions were better for a sewer line, six crossover arms were laid beneath Lakeshore to access the lakefront properties.

The crossovers were evenly spaced. Some property owners were fortunate to have a crossover in front of their prop-

Cooler caper at Pier Park

A 35-year-old Detroit man turned his back on his cooler at the Farms' Pier Park about 7 p.m. June 20 and someone swiped it.

Another Park user, however, saw four teenagers about 14 or 15 take the cooler, which was found discarded behind the boat house.

Taken from the cooler were a fifth of vodka, three wine coolers, silverware and two submarine sandwiches.

Windemere homeowners dispute sign

A Windemere subdivision homeowner took matters into his own claw hammer June 23 and started tearing down a Russell Homes sign.

According to a Grosse Pointe Farms police report, the homeowner was going at the sign with his hammer at 2:09 p.m. when Richard Russell Jr. came skidding up in his station wagon. The resulting investigation revealed a history of miscommunication and misunderstanding.

The homeowners association has had an ongoing dispute with the builder, Russell Homes, concerning the placement of a sign reading "Presenting Windemere Place by Russell Homes." The sign is on property owned by the homeowners association, police said.

On June 21, the homeowner with the claw hammer asked Richard Russell Sr. on behalf of the homeowners association to remove the sign. Russell Sr. agreed and had the sign taken down.

Russell Jr., however, was not aware that Russell Sr. had had the sign removed and he had it replaced.

The homeowner, not aware that the sign had been removed and replaced, thought Russell Sr. was refusing to take the sign down and took matters into his hands and, believing he was acting on behalf of the homeowners association, began prying away at the sign when Russell Jr. arrived.

Russell Jr. wishes to prosecute, police said.

Homes burgled

Two homes in the 1800 block of Littlestone in Grosse Pointe Woods were burglarized sometime overnight June 21-22.

One home was entered when someone removed a screen from an unlocked window. Only the first floor was searched, resulting in the theft of the resident's purse.

A burglar got into the second home by cutting a screen and raising a family-room window. It was not known if anything was taken.

A story about Alinosi French Ice Cream and Candy Co. in last week's paper should have said that councilman Ted Bidigare was absent from the July 17 Grosse Pointe Woods City Council meeting because of the death of his father.

The name of Scott Partridge was inadvertently excluded last week from the list of graduates from Grosse Pointe South.

Last week's announcement about the concert Sunday, June 30, at Patterson Park, featuring Tom Saunders, should have said that it begins at 7 p.m.

Drive-in stunt still works

Even though drive-in theaters are almost extinct, teenagers today still get a chance to do some car-trunk smuggling now and then.

A resident on Shorecrest Circle at the northern end of Grosse Pointe Shores called police June 4 to report that she had just seen a 1991 maroon Cadillac stop in front of her home. Two teenage boys jumped out of the car and clambered into the trunk and the car took off again, she said.

A Shores officer, having been a teenager himself once, figured the driver of the car was probably going to try to smuggle two friends into the nearby Grosse Pointe Woods municipal park.

The Shores officer went to the park, and sure enough, the park guard said a youth who was alone in a maroon Cadillac had just "driven" through the gate. The Shores officer checked the car's license plate and found it was registered to a Shores resident, who was notified of the incident.

Here's the scoop at Jumps

Jumps Restaurant on the Hill in Grosse Pointe Farms may be selling ice cream outdoors this summer.

Art Bokatzian, Jumps owner, wants to sell cones from a cart in front of the restaurant's building on Kercheval just north of McMillan. He also wants to put up to five portable tables with umbrellas and chairs between the sidewalk and curb for patrons to use.

The tables and chairs would be stored inside at night, he said, and ice cream would be sold outdoors from noon to 8 p.m., seven days a week.

Bokatzian got approval from the Farms city council on June 17 to sell ice cream outdoors for 30 days with the condition that his plans are approved by the public safety department and the health department.

When the 30 days are up, the Farms council will review Bokatzian's outdoor operation and vote on giving him an extension.

Bokatzian said he hopes to have the tables, chairs and the approval of the health and public safety departments within the next two weeks. He said he'd like to open the ice cream stand the weekend of July 6.

The restaurant already sells ice cream indoors.

Planned Harper Woods pumping station is a site for sore neighbors

By Donna Walker
Staff Writer

The plan to clean up the Milk River Drain is hitting closer to home for residents who live near Grosse Pointe Woods' city hall, and they don't like it.

The Milk River Inter-County Drain Board says that it has to install an underground pumping station somewhere in the vicinity of Manchester, Allard, Mack and Cook roads in Grosse Pointe Woods to send sanitary sewage from Harper Woods to Detroit.

For more than 30 years, Harper Woods, like Grosse Pointe Woods, has sent both its sanitary sewage and storm water to the Milk River Pumping Station, from which it is piped to the Detroit Wastewater Treatment Plant.

The new underground pumping station (to be called the Harper Woods Pumping Station) will take care of most of the sanitary sewage from Harper Woods that the Milk River Pumping Station currently handles.

The less sanitary sewage that is sent to the Milk River Pumping Station, the less there will be in the Milk River Drain during heavy rains, when the Milk River Pumping Station's retention basin overflows.

That's why the proposed Harper Woods Pumping Station is an important part of the board's plan to clean up the Milk River, said James Murray, Wayne County public works director and secretary of the three-member Milk River Inter-County Drain Board.

The other members are Michael Gregg of the Michigan Department of Agriculture and Macomb County Public Works Commissioner Thomas S. Welsh.

At an informational meeting at Assumption Greek Orthodox Church in St. Clair Shores on Monday, Murray told Woods residents that the board is considering at least eight sites for the project, and that it plans to consider others before a final determination is made.

The board's choices include a residential lot on Allard Road, a residential lot on Manchester, a gas station on Allard at Mack, an alley between the Allard Road lot and the gas station, Grosse Pointe Woods' city hall property, Ghesquiere Park property, Monteith School property, and underneath Mack medians.

Murray said that a hole 35 feet deep and approximately 50 feet in diameter will have to be dug at whatever site is chosen. The hole would be filled with pumping equipment, concrete and sand. On the surface would be a concrete cover, and two access points. The access points — one for workers, one for equipment — could be made flush to the ground and covered with locked manhole covers.

All of this could be hidden, he said, by shrubbery and other landscaping.

"If the site that is selected is in a residential neighborhood, we could put a (fake) house over the site, to make it blend in with the rest of the neighborhood," Murray said. "That's not unheard of."

The drain board would hire a landscaping company to take care of the house in the summer and someone to shovel the walk in the winter, Murray said.

The pumping station would take about three months to install, Murray said, and it would not cause noise and odor problems once it is in place.

There is a pumping station similar in size to the one that is being proposed on Greater Mack about a half mile north of 12 Mile Road, Murray said. Residents can visit that pump station to see if there is a noise or odor problem. However, he warned that the pumping station doesn't look like much, that it's just a concrete slab.

"There's really been no effort to hide that one," Murray said. "The one that we're going to build will be much nicer, and we want your (residents') input in designing how it will look once it's installed."

Murray said that the project should not cause neighbors' basements to flood, or result in structural damage to their homes. But if neighbors can prove that is has, or even that it's probable that the project caused such problems, they will be compensated, Murray said.

Murray said that he would rather have the pump station put on public property, such as the school site, or city hall, or the gas station, instead of on a residential lot.

However, the Michigan Department of Natural Resources (DNR) requires the drain board to look at all possible sites.

The drain board is trying to acquire a loan at 2 percent interest from the federal government to pay for 85 percent of the estimated $25 million Milk River improvement plan.

To qualify for the loan, the Milk River Drain Board has to show the DNR the most cost effective site for the Harper Woods Pumping Station. If it would be cheaper to condemn a house and relocate a family, rather than acquiring school property for the pumping station, the DNR wants to know about it.

That's why Murray is considering several locations, including residential sites.

"Just because you don't want me to consider (a site)," Murray said, "does not mean I won't consider it."

He also promised to meet regularly with residents to talk about the project as it progresses.

reses. The drain board was originally required to put the entire Milk River improvement project (including, among other things, the retention basin near Marter Road and the Harper Woods pumping station) out for bids on June 28.

On Monday, the DNR agreed to let the drain board divide the project. Everything but the Harper Woods Pumping Station will go out for bids June 28.

This will give the drain board more time to study sites for facility.

Murray will make his site recommendation to the drain board by the end of September, he said, and the drain board will make the final selection in October. The DNR will review the board's selection in November, and if it approves, the project can be put out for bids next winter, Murray said.

The entire Milk River improvement plan must be operational by 1994. That's when the drain board's DNR permit to discharge combined sewage overflow into the Milk River expires.

Judy Ramberger believes the Harper Woods pumping station is necessary. She just doesn't want it next to her house.

Ramberger lives on Allard Road, and the drain board is thinking about buying the house that is between hers and a gas station on Mack. The house is for sale, and the drain board has taken an option on it. If the drain board buys the house, it will have to tear it down to make room for the pumping station.

John Barbour, owner of the house, said he has no problem with selling the property to the drain board. He just wishes the board would make up its mind soon.

"I'm pretty scared that my house will be shaken down," Ramberger said after Monday's meeting. "They're thinking about putting that thing 17 feet away from my house and 35 feet down. I can accommodate dust and dirt, but I worked real hard and my husband worked real hard to improve our home, and I'm afraid they're going to shake it down."

Sharon VanDenBrouck and her husband, Larry Wilson, live around the block from Ramberger, on Manchester. Their home is one of the sites that is being considered by the drain board.

VanDenBrouck said that they've been in their house for two years, and they don't want to move.

"It took us two years to find a place that fit all of our requirements, including a very large yard for our son," VanDenBrouck said. "Relocation would be pretty overwhelming at this point, and it would be pretty stressful to do all over again."

The drain board will hold another informational meeting for residents regarding the Harper Woods Pumping Station at 7 p.m. Monday, July 15, at the Grosse Pointe Woods Community Center. Anyone interested is invited to attend.

Mission accomplished, recycling group curtails its activities

By Ronald J. Bernas
Staff Writer

Grosse Pointe Citizens for Recycling has done its job so well it may soon be out of business.

When the group was formed in September 1989, the sole purpose was to get the cities to institute curbside recycling in the five Pointes and Harper Woods. Next week, four Pointes and Harper Woods begin curbside recycling, joining Grosse Pointe Woods, which began in October.

Members at last week's meeting approved a recommendation from the board that the group become a monitoring and educational organization, keeping an eye on the progress of the fledgling curbside program.

"Grosse Pointe Citizens for Recycling was formed to get recycling in the Pointes — it starts next week, we have achieved that goal," said Leah Vartanian, vice president of the group. "We're hoping that the recycling goes well, but we feel we need to watch it as it progresses."

That monitoring process will include observing the cities to see that curbside recycling is going as planned and attending the Grosse Pointes-Clinton Refuse Disposal Authority meetings.

The organization hasn't been as active in recent months, with the beginning of curbside recycling in the Woods and the opening of a recycling drop-off center in Grosse Pointe Park eliminating the need for the monthly dropoffs the group used to organize.

Members of the group also approved a recommendation paring the board from 12 members to seven. The new board will consist of the current off-cers, a government liaison, an education chair and a member at large. The new board will meet no fewer than five times a year.

The group will continue its community education, with a new focus to be determined by the new board. Members will continue to receive a newsletter. The cities will be apprised of all new recycling developments, including where to buy recycled products.

After Oct. 1, the board may ask members to vote on whether to remain organized, or to disband and turn their activities over to another local group concerned with the environment. The vote must take place no later than October 1992.

Members at the meeting said perhaps the group should change its direction and focus on household toxic wastes and composting. Those ideas will be discussed by the board.

Grosse Pointe Woods Mayor Robert Novitke wrote a letter to the group, asking that it continue in a watchdog capacity for a while.

"I think they've really been the catalyst for the cities doing what they've done and we need to keep them in place for a while," Novitke said.

Without the organization's efforts to educate the public about recycling, the response to the cities' programs would not have been as good, he added.

In addition, he said the group is in a better position to inform the cities about recycled products. The Woods is hoping to do its part in creating a market for products made with recycled materials.

In other recycling news, Saturday, June 29, will be the last regular monthly dropoff day for the Detroit East Area Residents (DEAR) recycling center at the Cannon Recreation Center parking lot at E. Warren and Bluehill.

Begun and operated by 170 volunteers for the past 21 months, the center has served more than 500 households from 23 zip codes.

According to a statement issued by the center, "It is time that a permanent recycling center be opened and run by the city to provide service and jobs. The volunteers urge recycling patrons to write to the Detroit City Council, the Department of Public Works and the Greater Detroit Resource Recovery Authority to demand that the city open a recycling center on the far east side of Detroit (particularly as the city has allocated the monies for such a center)."

Also on June 29, the Cannon Recreation Center will be a dropoff for a special household waste collection from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

The household hazardous waste collection will accept household batteries, fluorescent light bulbs, motor oil, pesticides, herbicides, furniture and metal polishes, paints and paint thinners, wood preservatives and other flammable, corrosive and poisonous chemicals.

Items in unlabeled containers, unknown materials, commercially generated materials, radioactive materials, smoke detectors, explosive and any other shock-sensitive material will not be accepted.

For more information on Grosse Pointe Citizens for Recycling, call 881-9588. For information on DEAR, call 876-0146 or 886-INFO.

the property, as long as he made them fit in with the existing neighborhood.

But she objects to Mast's plan to construct a cul-de-sac on an established street.

"I don't see why he can't follow the existing contours of the streets, and put up two houses facing Stephens and two houses facing Ridge," Hulme said.

She was one of five residents who spoke against Mast's plan at the Farms city council meeting June 17.

Other Stephens residents said they didn't want a cul-de-sac on their block for safety reasons. The cul-de-sac would empty into an existing home's driveway where children sometimes play, they said.

Tish Colett, president of the Grosse Pointe Farms Historical Commission, said that she and the commission do not want to see the property subdivided at all.

"But our hands are tied," she said. The Farms, she explained, does not have an ordinance that would allow the city to save historically or architecturally significant homes.

She said Leopard's house is not recognized as being historically or architecturally significant anyway. The commission traced the builder, and found out that he wasn't famous. However, a case could be made that the home is historically significant because the Stephens were a prominent family in Grosse Pointe Farms.

"But it takes time to make a case like that, and we don't have enough time or the necessary ordinance," Colett said.

The historical commission would like to see such an ordinance passed, "but before we can get an ordinance, we need to educate people in the community. They must be informed about the architectural significance of our neighborhoods. We tend to take the older structures for granted because we see them everyday, and because we think they'll always be around. But they may not be."

Colett said the commission is in the process of giving historical recognition to Richard School, Grosse Pointe South, the water filtration plant, Cottage Hospital and other public buildings in Grosse Pointe Farms in an attempt to increase public awareness of the architectural gems in the city.

In its effort to save those gems, the commission also recently got the council to consider amending the section of the Farms building code that deals with the demolition of buildings.

The amendment requires the owner of the property to apply for a demolition permit, and for the written application to be posted at city hall for a minimum of 10 days before the structure can be demolished.

This would give the historical commission time to seek a court injunction if it thought the property in question was historically or architecturally significant, Colett said.

The Farms city council will consider the amendment at its July 15 meeting. It will also continue the public hearing on Mast's site plan and his request for a variance for the proposed cul-de-sac.

The council decided at the last meeting to postpone voting on the site plan and variance request so that the city engineer could study the plans more thoroughly.

Also on the July 15 agenda is a public hearing on an amendment to the city's nuisance ordinance.

If passed, the amendment would affect all builders in the city. It basically calls for the person who is in charge of the building or demolishing a structure within the city to keep the site as clean and attractive as possible.

For example, it says that the builder or wrecker must provide receptacles that are large enough to handle all the debris that is generated from the work, and that the receptacles must be taken to a licensed refuse disposal authority at least once a week for emptying. It also requires the builder or wrecker to, among other things, sweep debris from the site off nearby roads and sidewalks.

Free speech faces threats new and old

Freedom of speech and the press still faces threats on many fronts even though this year will mark the 200th anniversary of the Dec. 15, 1791, date on which the Bill of Rights became effective.

Some of the traditional threats emerge from academe where efforts to impose "politically correct" thinking come from both the left and the right.

In such cases, faculty members and students often take strong issue with speakers or subject matter and insist their own ideological commitment makes it impossible for them to listen, let alone accept, other viewpoints on certain subjects, which is hardly the spirit of free inquiry we expect on campus.

Other traditional threats stem from organizations and groups which lobby for their own interests and attack critics in the media and in public life as un-American simply because they disagree with these organizations and their aims.

And sometimes the threats are new ones from the government in both Washington and Lansing which attempt to deny free speech on abortion issues to those who serve the poor on government subsidies. Or as Justice Harry A. Blackmun put it in a dissenting view in the recent Rust vs. Sullivan case:

The "court for the first time upholds viewpoint-based suppression of speech solely because it is imposed on those dependent upon the government for economic support."

In effect, the majority opinion upheld the federal regulations that require family planning clinics that receive government funds to omit from their advice to their clients any positive recommendation with respect to abortion.

Instead, they are to advise their clients that abortion is not considered an appropriate method of family planning. And if the clinics continue to provide the information on abortion sought by their clients, they have been warned they will promptly lose their government aid.

That view not only appears to run counter to the constitutional prohibition against interference with free speech but also appears to invade the private doctor-patient relationship the medical profession has so jealously and appropriately guarded over the years.

Now the state of Michigan is following in the steps of the federal government, according to a brief report in the Detroit Free Press last week. The story said that state health and welfare agencies, following the Supreme Court's decision in the Rust vs. Sullivan case, are enforcing a similar ban on free speech.

Under the new state policy, clinics, hospitals and local health departments receiving state funds for family planning are prohibited from telling women about abortion or even telling them where to learn about it. Like the federal ruling, it appears to violate the spirit of the very first amendment to the Constitution that guarantees free speech and a free press.

"This (high court ruling) says he who takes the king's shilling becomes the king's mouthpiece," according to Harvard Law School Professor Kathleen Sullivan. "That really is a step backwards toward a day when the government could use its leverage to bribe people to say . . . things that it couldn't bludgeon them into saying."

Several congressmen are seeking to reverse the high court's action in the name of free speech, in defense of the inviolability of the private doctor-patient relationship and in the name of fairness to women who ought to be permitted to make their own choices on these matters.

In addition, the House Appropriations Committee in Washington, after citing its concerns about free speech, voted last week to deny the Bush administration funds to carry out the ban on counseling at federally supported family planning clinics.

In taking this action by a 35-20 vote, the majority won the support of six committee members with strong anti-abortion records — three Democrats and three Republicans. In voting to lift the ban, Rep. David Obey, Wisconsin Democrat who is one of the six, said the ban is "absurd and obscene in terms of the people's right to know."

While some anti-abortion leaders may have gone too far by attacking free speech, they still could get the funds to finance the counseling ban by a vote of Congress or perhaps by virtue of a presidential veto if the House committee's action is approved.

Whatever the future holds, the deeply divisive abortion issue now has been broadened into a new test of the right of free speech.

Juvenile beats murder rap

The controversial ruling which will enable a confessed teenage killer of a Grosse Pointe Farms man to avoid prison raises a good many questions.

Among them surely are the following: Does the law that requires a sentence of life in prison for anyone convicted of first-degree murder serve its real purpose when a judge in a juvenile case has no other alternative to a life imprisonment sentence than to order a fairly brief period of education and rehabilitation for him as a juvenile?

In this case, in ruling that the murderer remain a ward of the Department of Social Services until he is 21, was the judge putting a higher priority on the right of the criminal to be given the opportunity of rehabilitation than on the right of society to be protected?

If the sentencing reports from the killer's probation officer, the Department of Social Services, a clinical psychologist and a psychiatrist all agree that a juvenile should be sentenced as a juvenile in such a case, does a prosecutor acting on behalf of the victim stand much chance of prevailing if he offers other expert witnesses to testify in support of a sentence as an adult?

If prison still is regarded as punishment for a killer and as a deterrent to crime in general, how can society avoid leaving the impression with a young felon that life is cheap and punishment distant if he goes free at age 21 even though he has confessed to murder?

And isn't there something to be said for more uniform punishment for similar crimes by people who are facing different judges in the same level of court?

What has been the experience of other juveniles who have become wards of the Department of Social Services after having committed a murder or even a lesser felony? Have many been rehabilitated or have most gone on to a further life of crime?

Three more minors who are accused of participating in the murder of the Farms man on the public streets of Detroit still face sentencing but the general questions also apply to their cases. Two others face trial as adults because they were 17 and 18 at the time the crime was committed.

Grosse Pointers will have an interest, we are sure, in following developments in these other cases as they come up. And perhaps the handling of these cases will even offer some hints as to possible answers to the questions we have posed.

Parade right!

The celebrations of the U.S. victory in the Persian Gulf have now lasted longer than the war itself but it still is appropriate for the Grosse Pointe community to stage its own "Salute America" parade on July 4 to pay tribute to the local men and women who served in Operation Desert Storm.

The brevity of the war did not diminish the risk of failure and disaster nor the courage of those who fought nor the sacrifice of those who were wounded and killed, as John Hughes put it recently in the Christian Science Monitor.

Those facts apparently were recognized in a recent Time/CNN public opinion poll in which more than three out of four people questioned said the war was worth fighting and 89 percent felt that Americans should be proud of what the fighting men and women accomplished. We think those figures also reflect the feelings of Pointers.

And who doesn't love a parade?

Is state tax cut out for '92?

Even after the 1991 budget deal reached by Gov. John Engler and the state Legislature, the outlook for a balanced budget in 1992 is still dismal — and the prospect of any property tax cut has almost disappeared.

True, the deal for 1991 required more spending than the governor originally requested for the arts and for the commerce and labor departments but it also resulted in a carryover of a deficit that is approaching $1 billion as bargaining begins on the 1992 budget.

That led Mark Hornbeck of The Detroit News in his report from Lansing to comment: "The gloomy budget picture suggests that tax cuts are out of the question."

He based that prediction on the difficulty that Engler will have in getting the Democrats to "dramatically reduce programs and services and then put up $300 million for a tax cut." The first year of the governor's three-year, 20 percent property tax reduction plan was supposed to begin in 1992.

So nobody is really happy with the overall results achieved to date. The special interests whose appropriations were sharply trimmed didn't like what was agreed to any better than did the conservative governor and his cohorts who wanted sharper spending cuts and even a property tax reduction next year.

And the Democrats are in even worse shape since they want more spending but lack the courage to propose any tax increase in light of the public's current distaste for any kind of revenue enhancement.

However, under the circumstances, economic recovery, even though it's hardly on Michigan's horizon, looks like a better bet for any future improvement in the state's revenue balances than the "smoke and mirrors" approach to budget balancing that was used this year.

Wonderful experience

To the Editor:
We are writing to thank the child care class of Grosse Pointe South High School (1989/90 and 1990/91). The class director is Phyllis Henry. Her assistants are Jill Raymond, Marija Farnsworth and all of the South High students who took the course.

Our daughter, Annie, has Down's Syndrome. These teachers and future teachers gave her a wonderful "normal" pre-school experience during the past two years. Annie benefited a great deal from participating in the class. Her speech improved from being with children having normal language development, and her behavior improved from socializing with children her age.

We are grateful to everyone who was involved with the class for their patience with Annie. We know that it was not always easy to give her that extra guidance with a roomful of preschoolers.

We will always remember your kindness and Annie will never forget the lessons she learned from you. Thanks again.

SAC?

To the Editor:
We are writing to clarify information presented in an article which appeared in the May 23 issue of the Grosse Pointe News regarding the approval of a donation by the Woods council to the SAC² "Spring Break" weekend. We are concerned that the article might have left the reader with the impression that SAC² had insufficient funds to pay for the expenses incurred in the Spring Break effort, an event which encouraged citizens to participate in an alcohol-free weekend.

Please let us assure the community that SAC² is not now, nor has it ever been, in a deficit position.

During its 10-year history, the organization has always been fiscally responsible. We never plan an event or publish materials without a budget established and money in our treasury to cover expenses.

The Substance Abuse Community Council of Grosse Pointe is a registered non-profit organization which relies on the community for its financial support. Made up entirely of volunteers, the council has no administrative costs or overhead and with a very limited budget has worked hard to make citizens aware of the issues and problems related to the use of alcohol and other drugs. For these efforts we have received national recognition and awards.

We are very grateful to those who supported Spring Break, not only the Woods council, but other municipalities, organizations and individuals throughout the community who believed in Spring Break and contributed to its success.

Learning to play a round

Some of the toys of my childhood are indelibly imprinted on my mind.

I can still see myself opening up an elongated box on Christmas Eve at my grandparents' house. Inside was the most beautiful doll I had ever seen in my young life. Its eyes were a shimmering blue and they opened and closed like a real person's.

Years later when I was a skinny adolescent with stringy hair, my parents bought me a toy typewriter. It had a circular disk which you had to turn to get each letter in place before striking. It was a tedious procesure to type a single sentence, but I thought it was wonderful. Long after I stopped using it, I found it hard to give away.

Then for my 16th birthday, my parents bought me a portable stereo. It was bulky, but it could be packed up like a suitcase and carried around. With money from babysitting, I amassed an impressive collection of records and albums, which I gave to my middle brother after I got married.

The other day, he saw the stereo in the garage. He asked if he could have it because he can't play any of those old records on his equipment. He promised to keep it in the family. I gave it to him.

There were no more toys, of course, with passage into adulthood. Until last Christmas. I couldn't believe my eyes.

There, next to the decorated tree was a complete set of golf clubs. For years I had been saying I was going to take up the game and my husband called my bluff.

I Say

It was awesome, all right. The bag is dark blue leather, the towel that attaches to the bag is light blue, the umbrella is white and all of the clubs match, of course. The woods are covered with blue and white knitted booties.

It came with a bag of tees (white) and a box of golf balls (white with a daisy on each one). For women, it said on the box. I had no idea there was such a thing — golf balls for women — until my brother-in-law, for whom golf is the Holy Grail, explained that the difference is in the density.

Well, the sight of this wondrous toy for adults triggered a laughing fit, a very nervous laughing fit. First, it didn't come with an instruction booklet. Second, I had never set foot on a golf course in my life. Third, I would feel like an impostor, toting a set of clubs that made me look like I knew what I was doing.

Understand, there is a difference between talking about taking up the game and actually doing it. It's not in my nature to tackle anything by doing it.

I have to read about it, study it, examine it, analyze it, talk to other people about it, and practice doing it before I have confidence enough for the real thing. This process could take a year.

So my husband, who has been at it for two years, and I signed up for lessons. The instructor's name was Breezy. That was his nickname. His real name was No Mercy.

During the first lesson, I was feeling very vulnerable, convinced that I would never be able to aim a skinny stick with a small mass at the bottom at an even smaller ball and actually hit it.

I asked Breezy if there were people who could not learn how to golf, no matter how many lessons they had. Yes, he said, there were people who were unteachable. Oh, great.

There was the time I swung too hard, missed the ball and pirouetted on one foot. Breezy asked if I was ballet dancing or golfing. Let's see if you can do that again, he goaded. No Mercy.

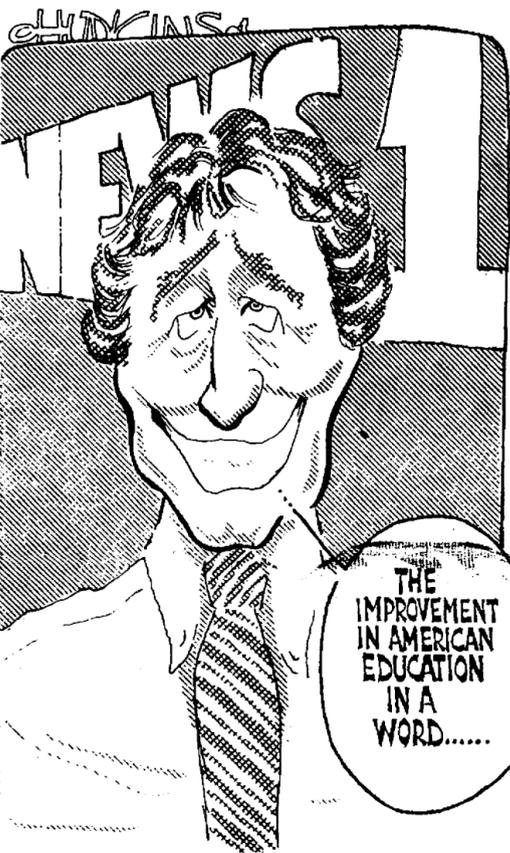

I practice at least three times a week. I developed blisters at the base of my ring finger on both hands which turned into callouses and have now become hard bumps below the surface. At the beginning I had tendinitis which made driving a car and working at my computer a real challenge.

I still haven't been on a golf course. Friends ask me when I'm coming out to play. Next year, I think. Besides, my mother bought me a book, "Golf for Women." I have to read that first.

Happy surprises with morning coffee

One of the pleasures of working at home with only a technological link to the office is that when the paper comes out, I'm as surprised as the rest of the readers.

Nancy Parmenter

True, shop talk and schmoozing keep me up on the actual news and the office gossip, but the features are uncharted territory. And it's fun reading about — for instance — Grosse Pointers adopting a Romanian baby, or what goes on in the minds of independent bookstore owners.

So, right along with the rest of Grosse Pointe, I'm thinking:

How about those Arsenalts! Imagine having 17 kids! Imagine having 17 kids who aren't at war with one another!

Somehow their children seemed to pair off and become quick friends, and a lucky thing for Mom and Dad, too, because what would they have done if their blended family had followed the statistical likelihood of refusing to blend smoothly? Sort of like gravy with 17 recalcitrant lumps.

As a veteran stepmother, I know the difficulties from personal experience. I also know plenty of families who've had much more painful experiences than I, psychological problems, acting out — why, there are whole counseling services based on helping stepfamilies.

Having been through the war and come out intact, I also know that there are happy endings and wonderful relationships that evolve from the strife. But I can only be impressed when a family manages to work it out without all the sturm und drang.

How about that Ed Deeb? President Bush is doing the right thing to recognize individual efforts in the community, and he couldn't have picked a more worthy recipient for the Point of Light.

In fact, Grosse Pointe is a mother lode of light points. If anyone knows the secret to why people in these five tiny burghs labor so hard in the community vineyard, they should spread it around. Must be something in the water.

But there's a curious thing about the American psyche: No matter how worthy volunteer work is to society or how satisfying a hobby is to the soul, they consistently take second place to paid work. Americans (more than other nationalities, I think) define themselves by their work.

So even a guy like Ed Deeb, with 13 newspaper column-inches of community service activities, if you met him for the first time and asked him what he does, I bet he'd mention the Food & Beverage Association.

But I think he's a philanthropist.

I loved that full-page ad listing all the colleges Grosse Pointe's seniors are heading to in the fall. Big schools, small schools, art schools, tech schools, northern schools, southern schools, private and public schools. I even found my alma mater, Mount Holyoke, on the list. I hope that young woman (women?) loves it as much as I do in retrospect.

That ad gives respect to the kids for their academic work, but it also sends a sort of shiver of excitement over me to think of the big life step they are all taking.

How about that Oleomargarine McLard? Oh, sorry, I guess I got carried away — but feature editor Margie Reins Smith swears to the Oleo part, at least.

As a pending grandmother, I took a particular interest in Smith's story on names. Not noted, however, was the fact that no matter what parents name a baby, someone will take it as a namesake.

When my son was born, we got into a stand off over which grandfather to name him for — and finally decided to name him James, as there were no Jims in the family on either side. Quickly got a note from my grandmother, thanking us for naming the baby after her favorite cousin.

I'm with Grosse Pointe in preferring traditional names. Nancy may have been nearly a bad name in the '40s, but it's also a six-generation tradition in my mother's family (that's counting a detour to my great-grandmother's cousin, little Nanny Riever, who is always referred to as little, though no currently living person ever saw her).

My cousin is a IV and my brother-in-law is a III, though as a proud maverick, he refuses to use it. I haven't generally called myself Nancy V (or VI), either, but it has a nice ring and would make an impression on people like Henry VIII.

Life has been a Lost Weekend — a whole month long. I refer to the Great Wallpaper Removal, of course.

We dived into it unknowingly and haven't come up for air since. If we had only known...

The house is about three-quarters of a century old and, now that we've counted the layers of wallpaper, we know it was redecorated on the average of every five years until 1965 — when Bob came along and said No Way.

This spring he bowed to the inevitable and we started scraping our way through layers of brown tweed paper, enlivened only by one crazy escape into rose trellis on black.

But you owners of charming old houses know that the real issue is that first you have to fix the roof, then repair the leaks and cracks, then paint the ceiling, then refinish the door that you started stripping a year ago, and, finally, find some way to get through the incredibly efficient wallpaper paste they used to use.

Not to mention actually picking out new paper.

Proud

To the Editor:
It is with appreciation and thanks that I commend the Grosse Pointe War Memorial board, Dr. Mark Weber, Terri Hearn, Janet Hooper and staff for making it possible to have the Persian Gulf Support Group at the War Memorial.

They have a committed, compassionate and caring staff. If we needed anything, all we had to do was ask and it was provided.

The lovely surroundings of the War Memorial encircled the group with a sense of warmth and security during a most difficult time in all of our lives.

It was a pleasure to watch the bonding and love that quickly formed between group members. The group consisted of families and friends of Grosse

Neilson appointed

Gov. John Engler has appointed Susan Bieke Neilson of Grosse Pointe Farms to the Third Circuit Court in Wayne County.

The seat was left vacant following the retirement of Judge Thomas Foley.

Neilson has been a partner with the law firm of Dickinson, Wright, Moon, Van Dusen & Freeman since 1986.

She earned a bachelor of arts degree from the University of Michigan in 1977 and graduated cum laude from the Wayne State University School of Law where she earned a juris doctor degree in 1980. She served as a member of the Wayne Law Review 1978-79.

Neilson is a member of the American Bar Association, the Michigan Bar Association, the Detroit Bar Association and the Michigan Defense Trial Counsel.

She must run in the general election in November 1992 in order to complete the balance of Foley's original term ending Jan. 1, 1997.

Girl robbed of necklaces

A 14-year-old girl was robbed of her necklaces June 16 in the 15100 block of Jefferson in the Park.

At 10:35 p.m., the girl was standing with another girl when some boys walked by and made comments to the girls. One of the boys then suddenly snatched the girl's necklaces and fled west on Jefferson and north on Ashland.

Leave sparklers at home, please

Those attending the Mack Avenue U.S.A. Fireworks Sunday, June 30, are being told to leave their own fireworks, including sparklers, at home.

Jack Patterson, Grosse Pointe Woods public safety director, said the ban on spectators having fireworks or sparklers is for the safety of all those attending.

Consideration for others will ensure that everyone has a good time, he said.

Last year, some 40,000 people attended the popular fireworks display. To get a good spot, it is recommended spectators arrive at Parcels field early, about 4 or 5 p.m. The field is at Mack and Vernier.

The rain date is Tuesday, July 2.

Pointe service people. The spectacular party given in honor of the service people and their families was an outpouring of love, honor and support for all the people involved.

It has been an experience I will never forget. As a facilitator of the group, I received much more than I gave. The group sessions have ended now, but the courage, love and patriotism exhibited in that group will stay with me forever. It makes me feel proud to be an American.

Think of it

To the Editor:
Thanks for reporting on the community meeting of the Maire PTO in the June 20 edition of the Grosse Pointe News. I attended the meeting, and I'm glad this information has been made available to the rest of the Pointe's residents.

Now we all can know how new policies by our school board may add to the atmosphere and ambience of our community. If they elect to sell part of Maire field to facilitate the expansion of the Kroger store in the Village, they will set a precedent that will have far-reaching ramifications for all Pointe residents. Think of it ... we could:

... develop Parcels field into a flea market with a 40-foot man in a tux to welcome those out-of-town contributors to our tax base (they may even come from Windsor).

... sell just the Kercheval end of South's athletic field for the development of a couple of fast-food restaurants (they are more profitable in groups) and save our students the trouble of going all the way home for lunch.

Of course we must think of our little ones — including my 4-year-old Lauren; wouldn't a putt-putt golf driving range be a nice addition to Elworthy Field? The nets for those long drives could be made from surplus military camo-net to provide for the esthetics of the neighborhood. And, to provide an additional return to the community, local Little League teams could receive a discount.

The list is endless. And, as our board sets precedents which could be utilized by other local governing bodies, it need not concern itself with being "hopeful that the sale of the property will provide adequate funds to cover" the community's part of the bill. By gosh, the Grosse Pointes have an AAA bond rating — we'll just borrow the money from our kids (after all, they are the beneficiaries).

By the way, just because they couldn't do it in Detroit with the Ford Auditorium doesn't mean we can't pull it off here — we're tough ... we're Grosse Pointers.

I must end here, I have a couple of things I need to run out and pick up: Lauren and I will need a pair of those reinforced-fanny sailing shorts from Thomas's for the Giant Water Slide at the City Park, a "No Public Parking" sign for my driveway and a "Real Estate Guide for Macomb and St. Clair Counties."

Kroger

To the Editor:
Kroger's expanding in the Village? Why? There is plenty of room at Kroger's Moross and Mack store for expansion.

Perhaps some attention to this store and more security in their parking lot would be a better answer than Village expansion. Grosse Pointe would benefit more by getting rid of the discount stores in the Mack and 7 area and building a large Kroger's to rival the wonderful Farmer Jack on 9 Mile.

1914 Chevrolet touring car stored in garage to be restored

'14 Chev Baby Grand touring car; low miles, runs good; body needs some work; best offer.

It sat unused in a garage in Harper Woods for 50 years before Pinky Randall of Houghton Lake heard about it, took a look at it and confirmed that it was indeed a historic Chevrolet, and bought it.

The car is a 1914 Chevrolet "Baby Grand" H-4 touring car. It was purchased new by Charles Young, who lived in the house where the car was stored in what is now called Harper Woods but was then called Half Way. Young used the car to drive to church on Sunday's so it has only 4,535 miles on the odometer.

Randall, a collector who owns more than 30 classic Chevrolets, said Young's grandson, who lives in Sedona, Ariz., searched for someone who would appreciate the car and found Pinky through a car collectors' publication. A granddaughter of the owner still lives here.

Chevrolet Division of General Motors has offered to help renovate the car and put it in running order by November, the 80th anniversary of the Chevrolet car. Chevrolet also staged a ceremony at the Young home in Harper Woods to show the car to the world.

Among visitors was Christian Blickenstorfer, charge d'affaires at the Swiss Embassy in Washington. He was interested because Louis Chevrolet was a native of Switzerland and because he wanted to let folks in the Detroit area know that Switzerland is marking its 700th year as a nation. It was 700 years ago that William Tell was forced to shoot an apple off his son's head because Tell refused to pay respect to the hat of a local despot named Gessler. Tell and other local farmers overthrew Gessler and Switzerland has been doing well ever since.

provided some background on the historic car, but neither he nor Randall would say how much Randall paid for it. An Old Cars Price Guide indicates that a 1914 Chevrolet H-4 tourer in 'good' condition is worth about $5,000. Restored to 'excellent' condition, its value will jump to around $20,000.

This car was the first to bear the Chevrolet "bow tie" logo. It cost $875, is powered by a four-cylinder overhead-valve Mason engine which is started with a crank (an electrical system was optional at an extra $125), has a wheelbase of 104 inches, weighs 2,500 pounds and is gray with black chassis and fenders. It was also available in plum or green.

Chevrolet actually began production in 1912 of a larger car called the Classic, a 120-inch wheelbase luxury car with a 299-cubic-inch six cylinder engine, the biggest Chevrolet engine until introduction of the 348-cubic-inch V-8 in 1958. It sold for $2,250 and 2,999 were built. This was the car Louis Chevrolet designed, because he liked fine luxury cars. But his partner William Durant, founder of General Motors, wanted a small, light car that could be produced and sold in large volume.

So he designed the H-4 Royal Mail roadster and Baby Grand touring car. These lighter, lower-priced cars were historic because they led to Louis Chevrolet leaving the company that bore his name and they allowed Durant to regain the GM empire he had lost to the bankers in 1910.

William Durant, unlike most of the automotive pioneers, was not a tinkerer or an inventor. He was a salesman, who could, in the words of one associate, "charm the birds from the trees." Grandson of Michigan governor and a self-made millionaire in the horse-drawn carriage business, Durant did not like the new automobiles that were beginning to appear around his hometown of Flint around the turn of the century. They were noisy and smelly and they scared the farm animals.

This was not a reaction against something that might threaten his Durant-Dort Carriage Co., largest maker of horse-drawn carriages in the nation. He was a millionaire several times over because he did not fear innovation, he thrived on it. But he was not much impressed with the automobile, until he drove one built in 1904 by David Buick.

Buick was an innovative fellow who had made a fortune in the plumbing business, largely because he had figured out how to porcelainize cast iron for tubs and sinks. He began to manufacture gasoline engines in 1900 and decided to design an automobile. He tinkered a lot, but he never built cars commercially and his business floundered.

Durant drove a Buick prototype with a valve-in-head engine and was impressed. In 1904, Durant reorganized Buick Motor Co. and embarked on a remarkable adventure of empire building in which he created General Motors, lost it, created Chevrolet, took GM back, then lost it again.

After achieving success with the Buick car, Durant formed General Motors in New Jersey in 1908 and bought it Buick. With breathtaking speed, Durant's new GM acquired Oldsmobile, Cadillac and Oakland (later to become Pontiac), plus some supplier firms and a few lesser automakers. In its first year of existence, GM had put together all its current car-producing division except Chevrolet.

In its first two years, Durant had brought 30 firms into GM, including 11 automakers. But not all of his ventures were successful. He bought the Heany Electric Co., which was based on a patent for an electric light bulb held by John Albert Heany. General Electric sued and before the case was settled, Heany, his lawyer and patent office clerk were indicted on charges of falsifying the application. Heany was exonerated but the others went to jail and GM lost a lot of money.

GM was in a weakened financial condition and a bloc of Eastern bankers agreed to bail it out. But their terms were harsh. Durant would have to go. The bankers would receive a huge block of stock and would control the board of directors. A five-man committee would run GM and a Durant protegee, Charles Nash, would be president of GM. Durant had lost his empire in 1910, just two years after the creation of GM.

Down but not out, Durant formed a number of companies, including Chevrolet Motor Co. in partnership with Louis Chevrolet. Durant had met Louis and Arthur Chevrolet when the brothers came to America as part of a French racing team. Louis was the more aggressive and successful racer, so the prudent Durant hired Arthur as his chauffeur. While Chevrolet was visiting Europe in 1913, Durant designed the H-4 Royal Grand and the Baby Grand and put them into production as 1914 models. Chevrolet built 5,005 automobiles that year and almost 80 percent were the smaller cars.

Chevrolet was furious that Durant had tampered with the car that bore his name and he quit the company. That was a mistake. Durant's Chevrolets were a great sales success. With the profits, Durant bought up GM stock and by the directors' meeting of 1916, he had regained control of GM. Durant took the reins at GM again, fired Nash (who took over the Jeffrey Motor Co. and built Nash cars), brought Chevrolet into GM and a number of supplier firms (including one headed by Alfred P. Sloan), nominated Pierre du Pont to be chairman, and ordered construction of the General Motors Building on West Grand Boulevard in Detroit.

In fact, it was to be called the Durant Building and it has the initial "D" at each of its corners near the top in the manner of Napoleon, who decreed the letter "N" be put on buildings erected in Paris during his reign. But in 1920, Durant's bubble burst. Walter P. Chrysler quit the corporation, sales declined, inventories began mounting and Durant squandered his personal fortune in an attempt to bolster the GM stock price. Forced to sell at $9.50, he lost about $100 million of his own money. He resigned from GM on a Friday. GM stock opened Monday at $16.50.

What Durant had failed to do with his millions of dollars and stock market manipulations, he did by quitting. GM was turned around.

Local parade to salute America July 4

The "Salute America" parade will march down Lakeshore Thursday, July 4, beginning at 9:30 a.m.

The parade will begin at Moross and head to the Grosse Pointe War Memorial, where a brief ceremony will be held.

The parade is a special salute to the veterans of all wars, with a special emphasis on the local men and women who served in Operation Desert Storm. It is sponsored by the five Grosse Pointes, Harper Woods and the War Memorial.

The grand marshals will be Farms resident and WDIV anchorman Mort Crim and his wife, Irene.

"This is a very special Independence Day because of our recent involvement in the Persian Gulf," Crim said. "It is an honor for us to be asked to play such a visible role in the parade."

Parade highlights include several marching bands, many clowns, local Color Guard, free American flags for children, bicyclists, mounted police and several military vehicles. There will also be many floats, including a yellow ribbon float made by the Grosse Pointe War Memorial and mothers of soldiers who served in Operation Desert Storm.

There will also be military vehicles and a flyover by the U.S. Coast Guard Air Station Motor City search and rescue team in a Dolphin helicopter.

"I think it's fantastic," said Jason Fontella, a Grosse Pointe Persian Gulf veteran. "It's also fantastic that as a result of all the publicity we're getting, the Vietnam veterans and the veterans of other wars are finally getting the recognition they deserve."

After the parade the mayors will award trophies for the best float, best kazoo band, best marching band, best musical group, best service group and most original presentation of an antique car.

In addition to the street parade, a boat parade paralleling the route along Lakeshore is being planned. The Grosse Pointe Farms Boat Club, the Grosse Pointe Sail Club and the Grosse Pointe City Boat Club are in the process of organizing fleets for the parade.

Parking for parade spectators will be permitted in the curb lane all along the residential side of Lakeshore Road and intersecting local roads between 8:30 a.m. and noon, excluding Moross, Provençal, Kerby, Fisher, rose Terrace and Beverly roads, according to Robert Ferber, Farms director of public safety.

Detroit man found guilty

A 19-year-old Detroit man has been found guilty in the armed robbery of a 74-year-old Farms woman in her home Dec. 8.

Joe Bell Tolbert Jr. was convicted by a Detroit Recorder's Court jury Monday of armed robbery, burglary and committing a felony with a firearm. In a separate hearing, he pleaded guilty to a habitual offender charge.

He also faces burglary and theft charges in Detroit.

Tolbert is one of two men who kicked in the door of the Farms woman's home on Lothrop at 5:51 a.m. One of the men held a letter opener to the woman's neck and demanded $1,000.

While the woman was getting money from a strongbox, one of the men saw a gun in the box and grabbed it. He then put it to her head, cocked the hammer and told her they would have to kill her.

The men then locked the woman in the bathroom and ransacked the house. Taken were cash, wedding rings, a color television, two videocassette recorders and the handgun.

Farms police said Tolbert is suspected in similar burglaries in Detroit. The methods were similar: doors kicked in and elderly women confronted and assaulted.

Sentencing is tentatively set for July 12. Armed robbery carries a maximum sentence of life in prison.

erty, but others were required to provide a sewer line from their homes to Lakeshore and then up or down Lakeshore to the nearest crossover arm if they wanted to disconnect their septic systems.

Other property owners paid to have a pipe buried under Lakeshore to access the sewer line on the west side of the road.

Currently, 10 of the 45 properties on the lake side of Lakeshore still rely on septic tanks. Other than the four properties assisted by the village in 1974, all owners have paid to run a line to the nearest crossover arm, according to village records.

As is the case with all properties, the owners were and are required to pay for running the line from their homes out to the street. Galvin and the Larsons said they expect to do the same.

The village argues that it shouldn't provide a line for Galvin and the Larsons when the other property owners had to pay their own way, even if it meant burying pipe along Lakeshore.

Galvin pointed out that the village has provided new sewer and water lines along Lochmoor and Colonial Road to replace a faulty combined sewer system, and the village plans to spend $750,000 to do the same along Vernier Road next year.

She said the village was willing to pay to correct past mistakes in those cases, and it should be willing to do so for the Lakeshore residents on the east side of the boulevard.

Galvin has been on the village council for 13 years and has been a resident of the Shores for 20 years. She said she has asked for a sewer line in the past and that the former village manager had told her that a sewer line would eventually be installed on her side of Lakeshore.

In the past, according to the village, an offer was made to run a sewer line through properties east of Lakeshore with the property owners and village sharing the costs, but the property owners refused to participate.

While the Wayne County Environmental Health Code of 1977 requires that all properties within 500 feet of a sanitary sewer line connect to it, the county has not mandated such hookups unless a septic system fails, said Ralph Houghton, village attorney.

Glen Brown, county environmental health director, said the county does not have the resources to force all septic system owners to hook up to sewer systems when they are available. He said the county does respond, however, when a septic system is malfunctioning and threatening the environment or dumping effluents into the lake.

Galvin said a public health official has been to her home to look at her situation. She said the septic system at her 87-year-old home has failed.

"We're in a very bad situation in this home," she said. "The methane gas is debilitating."

"I can't spend money redoing an antiquated system. Actually, I can now smell the sewage."

Residents reported sewage was flowing into the lake and that the smell was unbelievable. Galvin agreed.

"We've been blaming the Milk River," she said, referring to the combined sewage overflows in the river during storms, "but it's us."

"We as residents don't want anyone discharging into the lake."

One resident, who asked not to be identified, believed the village is missing the point. He said it should not be so concerned about who pays as it should be about stopping pollution. He believed that by assisting the property owners in connecting to the sewer line, the village would be making a good investment in the environment.

Marian Larson said it would cost her $28,000 to hook up to the sewer line.

Village engineers said the distance from the Larsons' southern property line to the nearest crossover is 276 feet. At an estimated cost of $40 a foot for installing the required sewer line and $1,500 for a manhole, the cost to the Larsons to hook up to the nearest crossover would be $12,540, according to village estimates.

This does not include the substantial cost of the sewer work required on the property itself, such as running a line to the road and rerouting the former septic system.

It would cost Galvin $6,380 to run a sewer line the 122 feet from her property line to the nearest crossover arm.

The market values of the Lakeshore properties are $600,000 and up, according to village assessment records.

The village indicated that the best approach would be for Galvin and the Larsons to share the cost of running a line to the crossover.

Boring under Lakeshore for the 190 feet required would cost $80 a foot, or $18,200, according to village estimates.

But Galvin and the Larsons don't want to pay for any line paralleling Lakeshore.

"I think we should have a place to hook up to like everybody else has," Marian Larson said, "not pay $28,000 to go digging down the road."

Galvin expressed surprise that the village was balking at picking up the tab for the sewer line extension.

"I thought this would be taken in stride. I never thought it would be an issue," said Galvin, a lawyer. "I never planned to go to court, but I will."

She pointed out that she and the Larsons have paid sewage fees all these years and not benefited from the service. The village countered that the residents paid the fees because they were still much cheaper than hooking up to the sewer system.

At the meeting, Galvin moved that the village provide a sewer line to her and the Larsons' properties, as well as any other parcel that is on the east side of Lakeshore. The motioned died for lack of support.

"I haven't lost faith," Galvin said after the meeting. "I'll certainly not give up. I think we will prevail."

She said she has begun calling public agencies, such as the county health department, state Department of Natural Resources and the Environmental Protection Agency, to inform them of the pollution problems the septic systems are creating.

Some of the large estates along the east side of Lakeshore in the Shores have septic systems that discharge sewage into the lake, she said.

"There is discharging in the lake," she said. "There's no doubt in my mind."

Galvin is also considering filing a class action suit on behalf of all the Lakeshore residents on septic systems.

"I don't want to belittle my community. I love my community," she said. "But historically what we've been doing is reprehensible."

A poll of city officials in the other Points indicates that the Shores is the only community with properties still using septic systems.

She said it is very difficult for her as a village council member to raise a stink and call in outside agencies, but she said not to speak up would have been worse.

"They (fellow elected officials) don't have to like me," she said. "The residents elected me. I work for them."

Dry cleaner pressed, gives refund

A Mack dry cleaner in the Woods finally gave a disgruntled customer restitution last week, but not before being pressed.

When a 33-year-old California woman went to pick up a shirt, she was not satisfied with the results. When she demanded restitution, an argument ensued.

The dry cleaner's manager asked for a chance to restore the color to the shirt, but the woman demanded restitution and reached over the counter and began punching the cash register keys, which made the register inoperable.

The woman was paid for the shirt.

Concept of nursing homes changing; emphasis on rehabilitation

"Grow old along with me/
The best is yet to be! The last of life for which the first was made..." (Robbie Ben Erza).

These words are part of a love plea which, in that context, made growing older a happy prospect, secure and serene, sustained by love and companionship. A poet's dream. Sometimes it happens but sometimes the realities of life intervene and we are left alone and lonely, dependent on the kindness of strangers, when the fragility of age weakens our ability to take care of ourselves.

Perhaps that will mean moving from familiar surroundings to a nursing home. For some, that is a frightening decision stemming from a misconception about what a concerned nursing home can provide.

While it is true that many people are likely to spend some time in a nursing home, it's a myth that most old people will spend the last years of their lives there.

The whole concept of a nursing home is undergoing a much-needed metamorphosis, according to the New England Journal of Medicine. Among other improvements, rehabilitation will be emphasized with the view that older people may be able to return home.

To accomplish that goal, these institutions must serve a variety of needs for the elderly and their families. Rather than being a last resort, where elderly people passively live out their final years, nursing homes should foster patient independence and self-sufficiency in a variety of situations.

Nursing homes are often the only recourse for elderly people who may need post-hospital care following a disabling illness, such as a stroke, or an accident, such as a hip fracture, or who need day care while other members of the household work. Their needs are quite different from those of permanent residents.

The Journal article concludes that a critical first step in designing long-term care is to set some straight-forward goals — improving patients' functional abilities when possible, providing services to compensate for disabilities when necessary, and doing so in such a way that people can live lives as meaningful as their condition permits and be reasonably satisfied with the quality and cost of the therapy services.

Nursing homes offering comprehensive care are designed to put theory into practice. They demonstrate the range of both inpatient and outpatient specialized service that nursing homes must offer to serve the needs of a growing elderly population.

Among them are: a chronic medical care unit for patients with ongoing ailments that require intensive medical help; a rehabilitation center; a skilled nursing facility, geared toward long-term residents; and an assessment center to provide comprehensive evaluation.

First-rate residential facilities should have an ongoing rehabilitation program staffed by physical and occupational therapists, frequent physician involvement and a vigorous activities program.

Pleasant surroundings and good nutritious food are a must.

Everyone hopes that he or she will never need custodial care, but with added years, it becomes increasingly possible not only for ourselves but for those who we may at some time be responsible for, such as an aged parent.

If the person for whom you are responsible lives with you or near you, then the problem of finding the right facility for them is a matter of visiting various nursing homes, checking them out and talking to professionals who have had some experience in what to look for.

But suppose that an ailing parent or grandparent lives miles away and is suddenly injured or becomes ill and it is impossible for you to go to them?

A relatively new service called geriatric care or case management can come to your rescue.

A case manager can act as your stand-in, and arrange for hospitalization if necessary and find a nursing home when the patient is discharged.

Prime Time

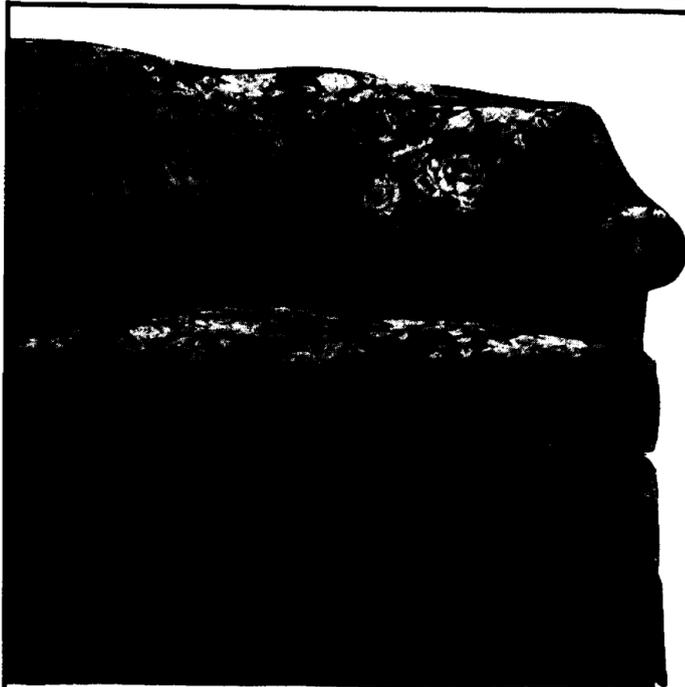

By Marian Trainor

Services vary. If the patient does not need to go to a nursing home the case manager can arrange for support services that enable the parent or grandparent to live independently. They are there to help in a crisis, to provide counseling, to arrange and monitor outside services, such as housecleaning or meal preparation, to line up transportation or to help with shopping or scheduling visits to the doctor.

Qualifications for a case manager include a graduate degree in social work, psychology or gerontology, plus licensing.

McMillan Brothers make house calls to ease office pains

By Donna Walker
Staff Writer

If your job is a pain in the neck, or the back, or the wrist, your office furniture might be to blame.

A person can acquire back and neck trouble by sitting on a chair that is too high or too low, or whose back doesn't support the sitter's spine properly.

Also, a worker can develop carpal tunnel syndrome in the wrist if his or her desk, chair and keyboard are not well situated.

These kinds of conditions not only hurt employees, they hurt employers as well through lower productivity and workers' compensation suits arising from failure to use furniture that is ergonomically designed.

"Ergonomics is a buzz word that has been floating around in the auto industry for a while, and more recently in our industry," said Marty McMillan, one of the owners of McMillan Brothers Inc., a company located in Detroit's New Center Area that sells office furniture, systems and supplies. "It means the relationship of the body to the work surface and the task at hand."

The McMillan brothers — Marty, Tim, Joe and Steve, Grosse Pointers all — think of themselves as problem solvers. They enjoy going into a customer's workplace and helping to create an office that uses ergonomically designed furniture and equipment, makes the most of available space, and looks good.

One of their favorite and newer items is a "hugger chair." The chair back is split in half vertically, and the space between the two concave sections lets the sitter's spine move freely. The space can be widened or shortened for comfort with the turn of a knob.

Also, the concave shape hugs and supports the sitter no matter which way he or she moves. The person can lean back, lean forward or sit upright in the chair, and his or her back will still be supported.

In addition, the height of the hugger seat can be adjusted from the sitting position at the touch of a button.

How much does a chair like that cost? About $549, said Steve McMillan.

That may seem like a lot of money, but "a chair in the grand scheme of things is a small investment compared to the lack of employee productivity and the possibility of injury down the road," he said.

The McMillans can also help employers use their office space more effectively. They have a designer on staff who has a degree from the American Society of Interior Design. She can go into an empty office with her computer, type in the dimensions of the room and furniture options, and give the client several different layouts from which to choose.

"People get scared when they hear the term 'space planner,'" Marty McMillan said. "They think it costs a lot of money, but using a space planner actually saves money."

"The rent that's charged for office space now is incredible," said Tim McMillan, "so you want to utilize every inch possible."

McMillan Brothers Inc. was founded 14 years ago by Joe and Tim McMillan. Joe worked for a competitor and was in charge of office supplies. Tim worked for another company on the office supply end. They decided that together, they could form an excellent company, and Steve and Marty signed on to help out.

In the beginning, the company had one desk, four employees (the brothers), a 1,500 square-foot warehouse and one phone.

"One brother would drive the van and another would be setting up furniture in the back of the truck on the way to the job," Steve McMillan said.

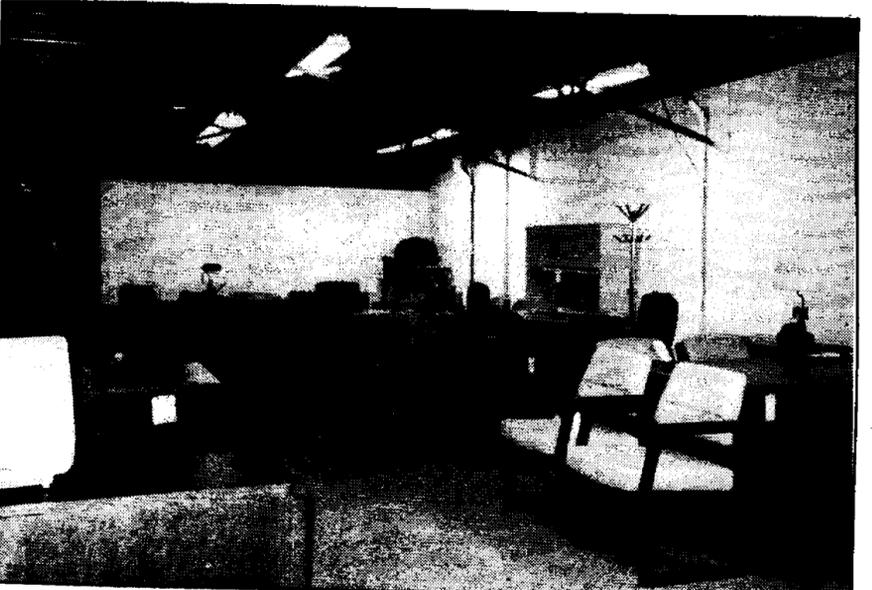

Now they have 17 employees and a 25,000-square-foot warehouse that they're thinking about expanding. Their catalog contains more than 26,000 items, from paper clips to acoustical panels to executive furniture. They also have a library full of catalogs from suppliers all over the country, from which they can order specialty items, such as custom made desks and marble tables.

Joe, 38, of Grosse Pointe City, is president of McMillan Brothers Inc. Tim, 40, of Grosse Pointe Park, is vice president. Marty, 34, of Grosse Pointe Park, is secretary, and Steve, 31, also of the Park, is treasurer. Their sister, Susan McMillan, 31, of Grosse Pointe Farms, also works for the company and is supervisor of accounts receivable.

The McMillan Brothers opened for the new showroom has office and lobby furniture to fit any budget.

Working together, they said, has been rewarding.

"We have a diversity of opinion and mind that makes it work," Tim McMillan said.

"Where one person has a weakness, another has a strength."

Of their early days in business, he said, "We worked incredible hours back then, and I don't think we could have done it with anyone but family, because you just can't ask people to work the hours that we did."

What the McMillans do ask their employees to do is to think of the company as a team, and customers as kin.

That's the key to McMillan Brothers' success, Tim McMillan said. "Customers appreciate that kind of service," he said, "and when you do something correctly, people respond to it."

McMillan Brothers has a working showroom, meaning that company employees use some of the furniture and equipment that's on display. And they can tell quickly whether they have a certain item in stock with their computerized inventory system.

Customers can fax in supply orders and have them delivered the same or the next day. The company also rents and leases office furniture and equipment.

McMillan Brothers Inc. is located at 253 E. Milwaukee, in Detroit's New Center area. For information, call 875-DESK.

"I felt civilized again. We had a party every night on the ship. And I taught the crew to play canasta. Our return included passage through the Panama Canal, which is incredibly beautiful."

India, Galloway says, is a hard land. The monsoon season can bring 25 inches of rain in 24 hours. In one of the family's "homes," aggressive rhesus monkeys standing 3 feet tall would come right up on the front porch.

The family was frequently sick. She once made milk for a baby by mixing Nestles powder with rust-hued water from the boiler on the train in which they were traveling — the only boiled water she could find. An American friend died of lockjaw contracted in the hospital where she and Galloway had just delivered their infant sons.

"Paul was born in Poona during my husband's first sabbatical to study art in India," she says. "Our younger son, Angus, was 1 month old when we returned to a different part of the country seven years later for a second sabbatical. On the ship, I had to wash his diapers by hand in a sink and hang them around the cabin to dry."

Benares is considered one of the holiest cities in India, she explains. It may also be one of the hottest, with daytime temperatures rising to 125 degrees.

To escape the heat, Galloway, whose family was one of only two American families in the crowded religious center, took her children into the mountains to Darjeeling. There they became acquainted with a princess, who invited them to visit her for a weekend. "We met her father, the maharaja. He was a painter who also had an enormous orchid collection," she says.

Detroit, with its contrasts of wealth and poverty, reminded her of India when she came here from Milwaukee in the late-1960s to join the fine arts faculty at Wayne State University, Galloway says. In Milwaukee she had been an assistant professor in housing and design at the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee.

"I had accepted that job without asking which class I'd be teaching," she says. "When I learned 10 days before the beginning of the semester that it was textile design, I was agast — I had no experience."

"I hurried to the library and began reading. At the end of the term I told my students the story about my preparations."

The University of Wisconsin closed the housing and design program in Milwaukee in 1969, and Galloway was chosen for a position with WSU. She bought the second home she looked at in Grosse Pointe, she says, in spite of the Realtor's warning that the owner was a "poor housekeeper." A colleague had sent her a map of the metropolitan area before her move with locations of neighborhoods marked where members of the department lived.

Galloway never considered anything that wasn't close to the water. "I grew up on Staten Island and I have always loved to fish," she says. "We used to go after crayfish. We also dug clams, which my mother put in the best red chowder in the world. I've never been able to duplicate it."

A handmade replica of a two-masted whaling ship sits atop a heavy china cabinet in Galloway's dining room. It was built by her grandfather, who once captained a whaler. Ornate silver pieces share shelf space in the cabinet with porcelain from

Copenhagen. A naughty beige toy monkey refuses to sit up straight in the rattan highchair Galloway purchased in the Far East after her second trip to India.

Large, healthy plants soak up light in the windows on one wall. Deep red and soft green glass bottles perch on sills just above them. Shells with baroque edges and rocks with colorful quartz-like outgrowths share space with art with an Indian flavor.

Lace curtains decorate the kitchen and door windows. "I lectured against them for years," she admits. "But when I saw these in windows in Austria, I thought they were charming and bought several pairs." The kitchen will soon be the site of her annual preparation of preserves and compote. Chutney created with home-grown peaches won Galloway a blue ribbon at the Michigan State Fair a few seasons ago.

In the center of the dining room is a highly polished fruit-wood table which Galloway refinished a couple of summers ago. There are tables and candlesticks in the living room which she fashioned from favorite woods.

The chandelier recently fell on the waxed, satin surface of the dining room table and gouged it. Galloway shrugs it off. Her present concerns are redecorating the second floor, tending her expanding garden and recovering from grading close to 100 papers from undergraduate students this past spring. By the end of the month she'll be fishing in upstate New York with her daughter Deena's 10-year-old, Annie.

"She's at a difficult age," Galloway says. "I was glad to hear she liked to fish. It will give us something to do together."

Now a needlepoint expert and innovator and a respected teacher of interior design, Galloway recalls some of her own difficult ages. When she enrolled at Cornell University at age 17, she had yet to decide if she should pursue a career in music or fine arts. "I was a mezzo-soprano and had done a lot of singing, including on the radio," she says.

That was after the Staten Island Tottenville High School student was kicked out of the choir, with the suggestion that she get some voice instruction.

Six months and several lessons later she made a triumphant return to the choral group and performed several solos. Fate — in the form of stage fright — soon influenced her career choice. "I once performed and didn't remember a thing about it. I blacked out from fear," she says.

She took some time away from Cornell (where the male student population was 15,000 compared with 1,500 young women, she recalls approvingly) and enrolled in the Ozenfant School of Fine Arts in New York City. In addition to a certificate, she came away with new friendships and an appreciation for older students with a wider range of experiences.

Her academic achievements eventually would include a bachelor of fine arts degree from the College of Architecture, and a master's from the College of Human Ecology, Housing and Design at Cornell.

Before it was subjected to refinishing, Galloway's dining table spent a couple of years as a repository for boxes and drawers of beads and stones which were linked together into dramatic necklaces and earrings. The jewelry was displayed and sold in the Detroit Institute of Arts Museum Shop; in Dublin, Ohio; at the museum shop in Milwaukee; and in Ithaca, N.Y. Her extraordinary needlepoint creations, ranging from pillows to wall hangings, have been seen by art lovers as far away as Memphis, Tenn.; Madison, Wis., and Chicago.

This fall Galloway plans to remain active at WSU, working with graduate students in interior design. It is certain she'll avoid grading papers in the future. It is equally certain she'll continue to find interesting outlets for her talent and intellect.

"I'm impulsive, I'm influenced by whatever I see," she says.

Eyes on the Classics sets sights on automotive design

By Margie Reins Smith
Feature Editor

No fair looking under the hoods of the automobiles in this car show.

"It's the only car show in the world that celebrates automobile design," said Dr. Philip Hessburg, president of Grosse Pointe Ophthalmology, founder and chairman of the board of the Detroit Institute of Ophthalmology.

"This show concentrates on the car as an aesthetic entity, rather than an engineering success. The car is a thing of beauty here."

The fourth annual Eyes on the Classics, a fundraiser for the Detroit Institute of Ophthalmology, will be Sunday, June 30, from 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. on the grounds of the Edsel & Eleanor Ford Estate.

The Detroit Institute of Ophthalmology is a non-profit organization dedicated to the preservation of vision through education, research and support for the visually impaired.

Eyes on the Classics got its modest start four years ago. A couple of DIO board members (Al Ricca, Mary Lynn and Dick Ruzzin, and Hessburg) put it together in about six weeks. The first show was held on the grounds of the Grosse Pointe Academy. It earned $40,000 for the DIO.

The second year brought profits of $70,000.

The third annual Eyes on the Classics moved to the Ford estate and added an awards dinner and dance and an art exhibit. The proceeds dipped a bit — to $50,000.

But the event grew more popular each year, Hessburg said, because it was a unique fundraising idea, because it focused on automotive design, and because it sustained a high level of excellence.

"It filled a niche," Hessburg said. "There are very few good new fundraising ideas. The Festival of Trees was one. People are tired of the same old chicken and peas dinners."

Edsel & Eleanor Ford Estate is site for Detroit Institute of Ophthalmology fundraiser

Hessburg said the committee hopes to raise $100,000 this year. He expects 5,000 people to attend the Sunday auto show. The other events (awards dinner/dance and brunch) have only a limited number of tickets. Hessburg expects they will be sold out.

This year, Eyes on the Classics has taken the "sight" theme farther than ever before.

The site for the show is a sight for sore eyes. The grounds of the Edsel & Eleanor Ford Estate, with its trees, gardens and a view of Lake St. Clair, will serve as the setting for a serpentine arrangement of 192 privately owned classic, historic and specialty vehicles.

The cars will range from rare antiques to the latest concept vehicles from the world's best known design studios.

A truck class has been added this year, featuring vintage trucks.

Also on display will be 20 each of the finest cars designed by Sergio Pininfarina and the late Harley Earl; concept cars from Chrysler, Ford, General Motors and ASC Inc.; more than 100 pieces of original artwork by automotive designers and artists; and student exhibits from the automotive design departments at the Center for Creative Studies and the Art Center College of Art Design in Pasadena, Calif.

All awards are made of crystal. "We chose crystal because it represents the eye institute," Hessburg said. "Crystal refracts light."

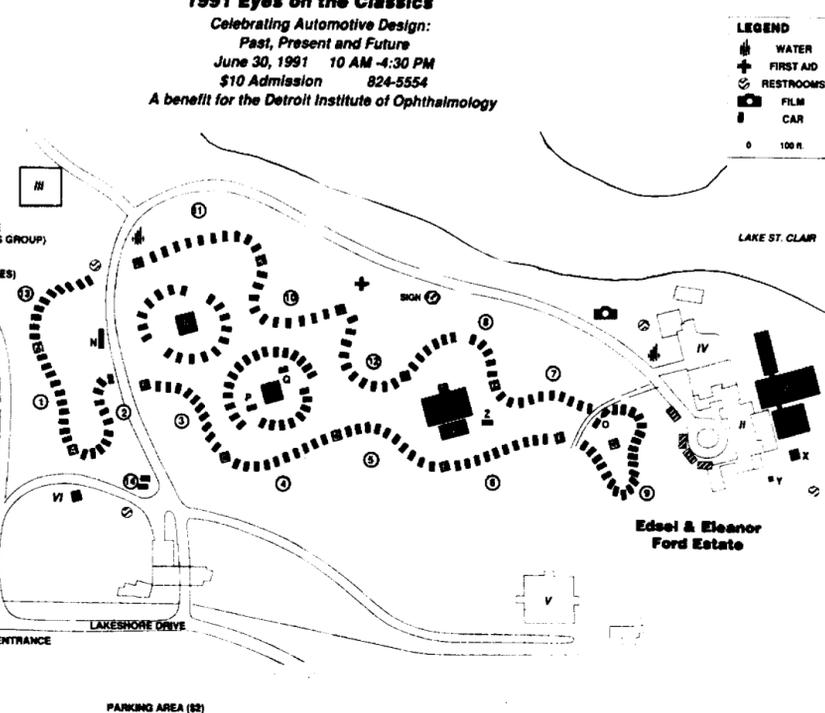

A jury of auto designers will select the Best of Show car from the 192 on display and also pick three award-winning cars in each of 13 classes. The public will choose the winner of the People's Choice Award.

In addition, the vice presidents of design for the Big Three — Thomas C. Gale of Chrysler, John J. Tel-nack Jr. of Ford and Charles M. Jordan of GM — will present awards for exceptional automobile design to three outstanding cars and specialty vehicles.

A group of visually impaired young adults will judge the muscle car class, by feel. They're members of the DIO's Friends of Vision Youth Group, one of the institute's four support groups for the visually impaired.

An elegant, black-tie awards dinner and dance, "Vision Honored," will be held on the evening before the show, Saturday, June 29, at the Chrysler Technology Center in Auburn Hills. The reception and awards presentation will begin at 6 p.m.; dinner will be at 8; dancing to the Jack Morgan and Russ Morgan Orchestra and enter-

Engagements

Prevost-Cosnowski

Anne Prevost of St. Clair Shores has announced the engagement of her daughter, Carolyn Anne Prevost, to Robert Cosnowski of Grosse Pointe, son of Jean Cosnowski of Roseville and the late Walter J. Cosnowski Sr. The bride is also the daughter of the late Byron J. Prevost. A June wedding is planned.

Prevost is a graduate of Wayne State University, where she earned a bachelor of science degree in nursing. She is a nurse at St. John Hospital.

Cosnowski is a graduate of Wayne State University, where he earned a bachelor of science degree in business. He owns his own business in Westland.

Martha Patterson Hein
Hein-Watson

Dr. and Mrs. Gerhardt A. Hein of Grosse Pointe Farms have announced the engagement of their daughter, Martha Patterson Hein, to Glenn Michael Watson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gerald A. Watson of Midland. A September wedding is planned.

Hein earned a bachelor of arts degree in actuarial mathematics from the University of Michigan. She is a consultant with Coopers & Lybrand.

Watson earned a bachelor of arts degree in economics from the University of Michigan. He is vice president in the investment banking division of First of Michigan Corp.

Fine Arts Society

Exchange Club invites kids to court

The Exchange Club of Grosse Pointe/St. Clair Shores recently provided an opportunity for sixth grade students from Brownell Middle School to see, firsthand, America's legal systems in action.

Approximately 80 students visited the courtroom of Judge Matthew Rumora in Grosse Pointe Farms, where they observed several cases involving shoplifting, speeding, and larceny.

A demonstration of a portable breathalyzer used in arresting drunk drivers was also given by public safety officer Jack Patterson. After the courtroom proceedings, Farms attorney Debbie O'Brien, public defender Dean Valente, and Judge Rumora answered questions from the students.

The program, called "My Day In Court," is provided by Exchange Clubs as a public service. Sixth-graders are selected based on the assumption that children of this age are old enough to understand and attentively observe the courtroom drama.

Each student was given a certificate for his or her participation in the experience.

"Many people today tend to show apathy and a lack of understanding of the importance and operation of the criminal justice system," Rumora said. "The 'My Day In Court' program offered by the Exchange Clubs shows students early on how the system works and its importance to the maintenance of the American way of life."

Widow's Organization

The next meeting of the Widow's Organization will be an ice cream social on Wednesday, July 10, starting at 7:30 p.m. in the Dearborn Civic Center.

There will be card playing and bunco, with a prize for every four women. Ice cream, cake and pop will be served. The charge is $1.

Garden Council selects gardens for annual tour

The Council of Grosse Pointe Garden Clubs has selected Friday, July 19, Saturday, July 20, and Sunday, July 21, as dates for its 18th annual garden tour. Hours will be from 1 to 5 p.m. each day, rain or shine.

The presale price of tickets is $6 and they may be purchased by calling the ticket chairpersons: Barbara Malley, 885-8241; Joyce Blumenstock, 882-8078; or Ann Cook, 882-9874. Tickets will also be available at Cavanaugh's Office Supplies Inc., 16839 Kercheval; Grosse Pointe Florists, 174 Kerby Road; Hollywood Pharmacy, 20853 Mack Ave.; Maskell Hardware, 17020 Mack Ave.; and the Garden Center room at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial, 32 Lakeshore on Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays from 10 to 4 p.m.

The price of tickets on days of the tour is $8. They may be purchased at the gardens during tour hours only, 1-5 p.m. A brochure describing each garden and a map with garden locations will accompany each ticket.

There are six private gardens on this year's tour. They are the Boresch Garden, 282 Kercheval; the Sullivan Garden, 241 Hillcrest; the Guillaumin Garden, 1545 Fairholm; the Mills Garden, 85 Woodland Shore Drive; the Wilt Garden, 25 Woodland Shore Drive; and the Tech Garden, 76 Sunningdale.

The Trial Gardens at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial will also be open for view. No ticket is required for the Trial Gardens.

Complimentary refreshments will be served at the Mills Garden each day, courtesy of the tour committee. As an added attraction, crafts from the Upstairs Shop of the Detroit Garden Center will also be on sale.

The Council of Grosse Pointe Garden Clubs is composed of representatives of 17 garden clubs. For the past 43 years, education, conservation and beautification have been the prime concerns of the council.

More than $8,000 has been allotted for beautification of Grosse Pointe this year. This money was made possible from last year's tour.

The general tour chairman is Lucille Grenzke. Co-chairman is Mary Lou Boresch. Others on the committee are: Elizabeth Ledyard, treasurer, assisted by Dorothy Smith; Joyce Blumenstock, Barbara Malley and Ann Cook, tickets; Marie Mainwaring, hostess; Mary Jane Starnes and Mary Lou Boresch, publicity; Pointe Garden Club, refreshments; Ann Scott, posters;

Roma Thrasher, flags; Jane Reuther, correspondence; George Vincent, map.

As an expression of gratitude, the tour committee will have a cocktail party at the home of Douglass and Margaret Borden for those who have opened their gardens for the tour. Coordinator for the party is Betty Sorenson.

Comfort

By Sister Elaine Hartnett
Cottage Hospice

When a person dies, the survivors' lives are changed forever. The hurt is so deep and so painful, they sometimes wonder if they can survive the loss.

To be of comfort to someone who is grieving is a rewarding experience, a fine ministry of love. However, too often, family and friends of a grieving person move out of their life at the very time they need the most support.

Grieving is hard work and it takes many months for the survivor to work through the process. Blessed are those who had people around who would walk the road with them.

How to be of comfort

- Listen with your heart. Grieving is a matter of the heart rather than the head. Listening to the feelings of the bereaved is most important, permitting the sorrow to surface and the pain to be openly expressed. Invite all feelings to surface and listen through the silences. Your being there is more important than knowing what to say.

- Accept all expressions of grief without censoring. Often there are aggressive feelings expressed, including anger, resentment, guilt and shame. Sometimes the bereaved feel cheated by God. Let them be angry. God understands grief.

- Don't try to fix the pain. Bereavement is painful. There must be pain before there can be healing. The most difficult thing to learn about comforting is to permit the bereaved to live their own pain.

- Permit the bereaved an opportunity to talk openly about the loved one. This is a vital part of the healing process.

- Remain available. Send a card, make a phone call, stop for a visit, but in some way let the bereaved know you continue to think about them as the months pass.

Eventually grief does end and there is a return of purpose and meaning to life.

CROP Walk winners

Members of the fourth grade class at Grosse Pointe Memorial Church claimed their prize recently — a giant white paper shoe with pink shoelaces. The class brought in more money than other Sunday School classes that participated in the annual CROP Walk on April 14.

The CROP Walk raises money which is used by Church World Service for international, national and local hunger-prevention projects.

HAVE A PLEASANT TRY AT PERFECTION
BRIDGE BY WOODY BOYD ♠♥♦♣

One of the seldom heard from wonders of today's world of experts is the brilliant, but peppery Michael Moss of Manhattan on the Hudson. Twenty some years ago, he was a front page celebrity winning a slew of regional and national titles and on two occasions representing the United States in World class play. His proficiency hasn't diminished an inch, but he's rearranged his interests as his love for what happens daily on Wall and Broad keeps him very much involved. In spite of this, he still often dabbles at duplicate and can sometimes even be found in one of the famous "Four Hundred" club games.

"The little beast" as playing acquaintances jestingly named him many years ago is still one of our foremost performers. He is absolutely fearless at the table and this boldness is held in splendor by his peers for it is confoundably difficult to deduce and the results he achieves are seldom equaled.

We may see him here this summer as his son Brad will be a member of the U.S. team that will play this August in Ann Arbor. The occasion is the World Junior Team Championship which will pit our young players (age 18-25) against the same from sixteen other countries in a grueling five day match. This event will be open to the public August 16-22 at the U of M Student Union and well worth kibitzing as you will witness some exceptionally fine bridge.

I can't remember seeing Mike in as much trouble as he was with this one. As my readers can see, he's off four clubs, a diamond and a heart if the opponents can find them for the bidding was typically aggressive which is his style. Of course, if the defense falters, there's always a chance and Michael did everything possible to help them immensely by diverting their defensive efforts in the wrong direction.

Mike won East's spade nine with the king false carding his ten as he wanted to encourage the defense to continue that suit. When the dummy came down he had perceived his weakness which had to be dealt with immediately before the defense could conclude that clubs were their coffer. At trick 2, a low heart to dummy's king! Who in the world would play a club from the dummy at trick 3?

Mike Moss would and did! Naturally East ducked thinking declarer was going to miss-guess the K-J holding. West won his queen and continued the spade 4, dummy's jack, east queen and taken by declarer's ace. Now Mike played a small diamond to dummy's jack won by east king. Erroneously believing that his spades were established he played the spade five; lead directing asking his partner West to play a club after winning the spade ten. What a shock it was when Mike won the ten and played a diamond to dummy's ace and a heart back to his ace/ten successfully finessing east queen. In all the fraudulent Mr. Moss won three spades, three hearts and three diamonds before his opponents could claim the last two clubs.

New theater company is long on commitment, short on cash

By Ronald J. Bernas
Staff Writer

With a name like Mary Martin you can't help but be dedicated to the theater.

And Martin, who has been directing Grosse Pointe South High School's theatrical productions for the last six years, is dedicated enough to give up her summer to start a new theatrical company.

Grosse Pointe Summer Stock is your typical fledgling theater company: it's staffed by people Martin has worked with in the past, rehearsals are shuffled from place to place to accommodate other groups, and it's slightly understaffed with people who love theater enough to give up their summer for no pay.

And like most other new theater groups it's in need of donations.

The money and the technical help have been trickling in, but more is always needed.

"I always wanted to start a theater company and I always have former students come back and say 'let's do a show this summer,'" Martin said.

So with the help of former students, her husband and her sister-in-law the tax lawyer, Grosse Pointe Summer Stock was formed. Its first production, Neil Simon's "Biloxi Blues," hits the boards at the Grosse Pointe Performing Arts Center at North High School Aug. 9-17.

The total crew and staff numbers about 20, about half of which are former students Martin has worked with. The remainder is made up of Wayne State University students she met while working on her master's degree, which she will complete this summer. There are also various and sundry other friends. All, though, are studying theater or will be when they start college in the fall.

The idea, Martin said, is to give theater hopefuls more experience and to expose them to new ideas and new people.

"They know so much, it's fun to watch them teach each other," Martin said. "I'm even learning a lot from them, because they're all bringing their own ideas with them."

She chose "Biloxi Blues," a hilarious, yet touching play about boot camp, because it's timely and because the actors would be playing characters their own age.

"That's very important, if you're going to learn about acting," Martin said.

"Everyone is so excited about this, the help is coming from all sides. I didn't realize how many people wanted to do something like this in the summer. With all the interest I've gotten I just know it's going to work."

Martin said the group is in need of lumber to build the set, army props or any information — including pictures or stories — about boot camp in the early 40s. A drill sergeant recently spent an evening giving tips of the trade to Matt Hart who is playing the mean-hearted Sgt. Toomey.

To help out, make a donation, or to get more information, call Martin at 885-8592, or write Grosse Pointe Summer Stock, 1249 Brys Drive, Grosse Pointe Woods, 48236.

DSO report:

Summer music and DSO are magical at Meadow Brook

By Alex Suczak
Special Writer

A symphony and a summer evening is a combination with its own special appeal. Add

Music

Neeme Jarvi conducting the DSO at Meadow Brook in a program that's rich in metaphors of nature and you can't miss.

Last Thursday's concert marked the second week of the Meadow Brook Festival's 28th season and certainly bodes well for the rest of the summer.

Opening with the suite from Aaron Copland's ballet "Billy The Kid," Jarvi set a sprightly American scene. His spontaneous conducting style gave the traditional cowboy themes a fresh and lively appeal.

A special feature of the program was the world premiere of Stanley Hollingsworth's Concerto for Violin and Orchestra (Lirico). The composer, who teaches at Oakland University, was commissioned to write the work by the Meadow Brook Festival with a grant from the Michigan Council for the Arts.

Described by Hollingsworth as an exposition of song forms, the concerto is a series of melodic lines that seem always just about to break into a familiar tune. Ranging from wistful and sentimental to cheerful and rhythmic, its changing moods are so evocative as to form a musical metaphor for what seemed like a lifetime of memories. It was played with elegant flair and tone by DSO concertmistress Emmanuelle Boisvert in a shimmering, form-fitting, pearlescent gown that was no less spectacular than the music.

Duke Ellington's "Solitude" in a lush arrangement by Richard Hayman followed the intermission. This proved to be a musical synonym for the sunset light that filtered through the trees around the Baldwin Pavilion. And Jarvi lavished on it the same intensely expressive interpretation that he gives every piece they play. The effect was both stimulating and nostalgic.

There is probably no more quintessentially outdoor music than Ferde Grofe's "Grand Canyon Suite" which closed the program. With this work, heard most frequently on disc and on the air, Jarvi and the DSO once again made a point for live performance. Their brisk tempos and flowing interpretation with no restraint in the re-tards and opulent phrasing made the work a new and satisfying experience. They also made the work's "Cloudburst" finale classical music's best simulation of a good old thunderstorm. And the audience didn't even get wet.

Little wonder that the magic of last season at Orchestra Hall is continuing at Meadow Brook. The ovation at the end of the concert brought two generous encores. The lively "Hoedown" from "Rodeo," another Copland ballet, only roused the audience more to win an up-tempo rendition of Sousa's "Stars and Stripes Forever." This practically had us marching in the aisles as the DSO's trio of piccolos shared their famous solo to cheers from the crowd.

Tonight Meadow Brook presents Detroit-bred pianist James Tocco and on Saturday, mezzo soprano Florence Quivar in all-Bernstein programs. Tickets and information are available by calling 377-2010.

Action saves a dull Costner in 'Robin Hood'

By Marian Trainor
Special Writer

One of the questions raised about Kevin Costner's "Robin Hood" is how it compares with Errol Flynn's 1938 swashbuckling version. After Flynn appeared in the role, his name became synonymous with the character. He imbued it with an energy, and inner expressive delight that made it truly his.

Costner's Robin is more contemplative. He is as much a thinker as he is a bold and brave adventurer.

As for the story, it is an exciting 2 1/2 hours of action, myth, history, romance and comedy. It also boasts an outstanding cast of supporting actors and a handsome 12th century look. While it does establish time and place, it has a political slant that is quite modern. It comes on strong for family, civil rights, feminism and religious and economic freedom.

The story begins in Jerusalem where Robin, after enduring years of imprisonment and torture, escapes and returns to England. He takes with him his trusted companion, Azeem (Morgan Freeman), a devoted Muslim Moor.

Robin's joy at returning home is short-lived. He discovers that his beloved homeland is under a siege of terror, his father has been brutally murdered and his family's castle has been looted and burned, with the lands appropriated by the evil sheriff of Nottingham (Alan Rickman).

Swearing vengeance, Robin retreats to Sherwood Forest where a band of renegade peasants are plotting to regain their land. In the meantime they live off the land and what they can steal from the noblemen.

After a skirmish with Little John (Nick Brimble) who demands that Robin prove his worth before he will let him into the band, and under the protests of Will Scarlett (Christian Slater), Robin is accepted. Soon after he announces that he has not come to join them but to lead them against the sheriff of Nottingham.

Under Robin's direction, the once quiet sanctuary of trees becomes a beehive of industry as the Merry Men strip trees of bark to make bows and arrows. Under his direction they learn to become excellent marksmen. They build hideouts in trees where they can retreat if the sheriff's men come looking for them, and camouflage hiding places underground with grass. It is amusing to see the bewildered Sheriff's men on horseback chase them into the forest and lose them as they dive into underground pits and pull strips of sod over themselves.

Another amusing scene shows Robin's first visit to Maid Marian (Mary Elizabeth Mastrantonio), who is not about to fall into his arms. She has

Chandos Digital CHAN 8985

Samuel Barber
Overture to School for Scandal Op. 5
First Symphony Op. 9
Amy Marcy Cheney Beach

Symphony in E minor Op. 32, Gaelic

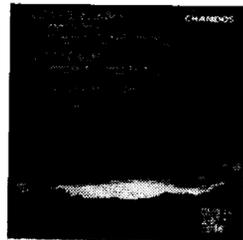

By Alex Suczak
Special Writer

The eagerly awaited first CD by the Detroit Symphony with Neeme Jarvi conducting has hit the record stores and radio stations with history-making impact.

Fans who heard most of this music in concert at Orchestra Hall last fall will find the recorded performances even more eloquent and lyrical.

The clarity and resonance of the sound is clearly in debt to the great acoustics of the hall, with acknowledgements to the special skill of Chandos' engineers in capturing it.

No less important and impressive is the program. Samuel Barber's "Overture to The School for Scandal" and First Symphony are acknowledged American masterworks that merit the attention of a new recording at this time, especially by an orchestra that appears to be entering a new golden era.

The Amy Beach Gaelic Symphony is the special treat, however. This refreshing and romantic work by an American woman who was entirely American-trained is sure to be a new discovery for many classical music fans.

Moreover, it does not deserve the relative obscurity in which it has been hidden for nearly a century. The delightful, bright performance on the CD will allow listeners to acquire the familiarity the work justly deserves.

This is an important recording in so many ways, in fact, that it is unimaginable for any DSO supporter not to want to add a copy to his or her collection. Meanwhile, other discophiles who are attracted by this tribute to American composition will discover to their pleasure that the DSO is an orchestra to keep an ear on.

Library lovers unite in a cozy reading room

Reading Rooms

Edited by Susan Allen Toth and John Coughlan
Doubleday. 486 pages. $27.50

Generally speaking, I do not much care for anthologies. Often these books are just an amorphous hodge-podge of miscellaneous writings gathered together at the whim of editors or compilers. However, in this case, I freely admit that I am delightfully impressed with "Reading Rooms" in whose pages America's foremost writers celebrate our public libraries with poems, stories, memoirs and essays.

Susan Allen Toth and John Coughlan, the editors, have done a masterful job in putting together a very interesting collection for the benefit of all book lovers and library devotees, and they certainly deserve our gratitude for producing such an entertaining bonanza. To quibble on a very minor point, there are several pieces included which I would not have chosen, for one reason or another, but I respect the fact that other people have different ideas and tastes.

Sixty-eight contributors fill this generous volume. Among those represented are Isaac Asimov, John Cheever, Annie Dillard, Hamlin Garland, Randall Jarrell, Stephen King, Sinclair Lewis, Henry Roth, Amy Tan, Eudora Welty, E. B. White, Edmund Wilson, and Richard Wright to mention a few. Here a marvelous variety of writers gives us a wide range of their impressions and experiences in libraries and of the far-ranging effects these magical encounters had on each writer.

Daniel J. Boorstein, the librarian of congress emeritus, says in his foreword: Readers "came to a place (the reading room) where, unlike most other places in late-twentieth-century America, their experience depended entirely on themselves — the book they selected, read (without breaks for commercials) at the pace they chose, for as long as they wished, and without background music. Here readers of all ages were fully independent persons, with the assistance only of a librarian to help them to be themselves."

"Reading Rooms" is imaginatively divided into nine intriguing sections: Small Town Libraries, City Libraries, The Librarian, Children in the Library, Love in the Library, Mystery and Murder in the Library, Laughter in the Library, Reading-Room Reveries, and Democracy in the Library. From this you can see the wide scope of the book, all the way from the serious to the light-hearted, with each section containing five to 13 pieces.

Eudora Welty's amusing memoir relates how at the age of 9 she was supported by her mother who confronted a straight-laced librarian and declared that Eudora "has my permission to read any book she wants from the shelves, children or adult." This episode so reminds me of a similar defiance by my mother who clashed with a narrow-minded supervisor at old Grosse Pointe Country Day School over my precocious reading habits.

Both Alfred Kazin and William Cole describe in reverent tones the majestic New York Public Library and how awed they were by the efficiency of the filing system in Room 315, presided over by an enormous Information Desk. E. B. White has two of his poems included: "A Library Lion Speaks" and "Reading Room." Meredith Willson's famous music score and words for "Marian the Librarian" from "The Music Man" are wonderfully preserved in this anthology.

Journalist-novelist Pete Hamill discusses how he was influenced by his early exposure to libraries: "The library taught me one thing that has survived and expanded through the course of my life: the love of books themselves as 'objects.' I came to love the feeling of a well-made book, the look of type on fine paper, the leathery worked splendor of certain bindings. I even loved the aroma of certain books, the smell of drying paper, the moldy fragrance of the past. This also has a context. I grew up as the oldest son of seven children of Irish immigrants; we were, I suppose, poor; there were always books in the house but none of them were fancy. The library allowed me to borrow the first beautiful things I ever took home. When I was not reading them, I would place them on tables, on the mantel-piece, against a window, just to be able to see them, to turn from dinner and glance at them from the next room. I hated to bring them back, and often borrowed some books three or four times a year, just to have them around. There are 10,000 books in my library, and it will keep growing until I die. This has exasperated my daughters, amused my friends and baffled my accountant. If I had not picked up this habit in the library long ago, I would have more money in the bank today; I would not be richer."

Sue Kaufman's "Summer Librarian" is a bittersweet tale of a romance between a librarian and a mysterious young man who frequents the reading room. Apparently, it is quite possible to have raging passions in a library that has nothing to do with books. The wonderful "Song of the Library Staff" by Sam Walter Foss, a well-deserved tribute to all librarians, is here as well as Steven Millhauser's "The Library of Morpheus," a haunting fantasy of a vast, imaginary library containing all the works, never actually published, by noted authors from the Grecian Era to the present time.

The last contribution, Archibald MacLeish's eloquent essay, "The Premise of Meaning," has the final word: "No, it is not the library, I think, that has become ridiculous by standing there against the dark with its books in order on its shelves. On the contrary, the library, almost alone of the great monuments of civilization, stands taller now than it ever did before. The city — our American city at least — decays. The nation loses its grandeur, becomes what we call a 'power,' a Pentagon, a store of missiles. The university is no longer always certain what it is. But the library remains: a silent and enduring affirmation that the great reports still speak, and not alone, but somehow all together — that, whatever else is chance and accident, the human mind, the mystery, still seems to remain."

Life of Brendan Behan is dramatized in musical at the Attic

"The principal thing to do in this world is to get something to eat and something to drink and somebody to love you."

That's one of Brendan Behan's philosophies as told in "Conversations with an Irish Rascal," a musical evening celebrating his life.

The play is the final production of the Attic Theatre's 1990-91 season and previews July 11-14. Opening night is Wednesday, July 17. The play runs through Sunday, Aug. 11.

A musical biography by Kathleen Kennedy, "Irish Rascal" is a joyous selection of Behan's own words taken from his books, poems and plays.

As one of Ireland's beloved writers — and storyteller, singer, house painter and rebel — Behan crafted into his works his passion for life and his love for the Irish people, their language and music.

"Irish Rascal" is a reflection of that passion. The hilarious, bawdy play gloriously chronicles Behan's life — a moving and entertaining journey through his early days and loves in Dublin, his involvement with the Irish Republican Army, his literary triumphs and his death at age 41 in 1964.

On stage spinning the tale is Behan himself, played by Glen Allen Pruett, a favorite among Attic audiences who has been seen in several of the theater's productions, including "Measure for Measure," "Bent" and "Dogman's Last Stand." Some of Ireland's most popular folk-songs make the experience a foot-stomping, hand-clapping good time.

Musicians Neil Woodward and Sally Horvath accompany Pruett on stage. Woodward, an accomplished musician who plays over a dozen instruments, is the show's music director. In "Irish Rascal," he plays a penny whistle and a variety of stringed instruments including a guitar and dulcimer.

"Irish Rascal" marks Sally Horvath's acting debut, although she is no stranger to Michigan's theater world. She has been music director for several productions, including "A Fine Harvest" by Detroit playwright William Moore.

"Rascal" marks the Attic directing debut of Dinah Lynch. An award-winning actress who has been involved with several Detroit theaters, Lynch appeared in three productions at the Attic this season: "Teibele and Her Demon," "A Doll House" and "Three Ways Home."

Performances of "Irish Rascal" are Wednesdays at 7 p.m.; Thursdays and Fridays at 8 p.m.; Saturdays at 5 and 9 p.m.; and Sundays at 2 and 7 p.m.

Scheduled events include an afterglow following the opening night performance on July 17; Talk Back, where audience members have the opportunity to ask questions of the actors, director, and production staff, following the July 24 performance; and an afternoon matinee on Wednesday, July 31 at 2 p.m.

To order tickets or for more information, contact the Attic Theatre box office at 875-8284. Visa and MasterCard accepted.

the Performing Arts (APA), a DIA Founders Society auxiliary.

Travel Trends

A deal's a deal

There are tens of thousands of words a month written about travel and tourism. So much is happening in the industry and it is happening so quickly, that it is often hard to keep up with it all. One thing's for certain, though. No matter what the condition of the current economy, no matter what the health of the travel industry, there will always be deals to be had and something new under the sun. Check out the following:

- TWA & Pan American Airlines are celebrating the 10th anniversary of their frequent-flyer programs by offering triple mileage for flights taken between now and Aug. 31.

- Now, as a visitor to Canada, you can receive a refund on the 7 percent "Goods and Services Tax" paid on most purchases and short-term accommodations. When you pass through duty free shops at land border crossings it will be necessary to complete a short questionnaire. You will receive your refund if you take the questionnaire and the original bills/receipts to one of the participating duty-free locations. Complete details are available through Duty Free/GST Rebate Information Center (416) 485-5885.

- The Choice Hotel chain, which includes Comfort Inns, Quality Inns, Clarion Hotels, Sleep, Rodeway, Econo Lodge and Friendship facilities, is currently offering seniors a 30 percent discount off all rates with advance reservations. You must be over 65 and be a member of American Association of Retired People (AARP).

- Those traveling first class on Virgin Atlantic Airlines will be pleased to learn that they will be provided with free round trip car service from the city to the airport in Boston, Philadelphia and New York.

- If you have not already heard, for the first time in years, many airlines are giving discounted rates to children traveling with full fare passengers. Check your local newspaper ads for details on who is doing what. As always, comparison shop.

- An ongoing program is being conducted by the Department of Transportation to evaluate the security of a number of airports outside the United States. It is unfortunate that the results of this study and others that I think affect the traveling public's safety are rarely published. It would be best to be able to make an informed decision when planning one's travels.

- Fifty-four participating hotels in the United States, Canada, Europe, Australia and Brazil, (30 Inter-Continental/Forum hotels, 11 Wyndham hotels and 13 upscale independent hotels and resorts) have combined forces to offer a new frequent-stay program called USA PLUS. Stay a total of nine nights at participating hotels and get a free air trip within the United States or to Europe. Details and membership applications are available at all participating hotels.

- A travel newsletter reader recently conducted an unofficial survey of currency exchange rates around London's Heathrow Airport. Results indicated that there could be as much as a 13 percent loss if dollars were exchanged for sterling at the wrong place. Be aware — different rates are offered at different banks in different locations. Wherever you are traveling, take steps to get the best exchange rate. Often rates are better at downtown banks than at the airport.

- Japan's Narita Express has recently begun offering a rail station within the air terminal featuring specially designed cars with extra room and baggage space. The train takes you directly to Tokyo's main train station and the Japan Rail Pass is valid for the trip.

- Call the Hotel-Motel Association of Illinois for its special guide offering summer weekend specials in the Chicago area, 312-236-3473. Also available from the Phoenix & Valley of the Sun Convention & Visitors Bureau is a list of summer packages at 23 of the area's finest resorts offered at excellent savings. The number is 602-254-6500.

Robin Hood

become a kind of warrior, a strong-minded woman who has been left alone to run her father's estate, which had been reduced to wretchedness by the sheriff.

Costner's prowess with the bow and arrow is an important feature of the film. There are some whizbang camera effects showing arrows in flight against an azure sky — flaming arrows that turn the forest into an inferno and arrows that mortally wound the enemy. One of the most effective shots features an arrow streaking through a forest toward a tree, filmed from the arrow itself. Originally a trailer, it was so effective in capturing the spirit of the story that it was included in the film.

The close-ups of battles with swords have a contemporary brutality common to many of our current violent films. But the action and suspense builds, making for a rousing and satisfying ending.

While Costner swings from the vines with the best of them, and excels with the bow and arrow, he is not the most scintillating Robin. He does, though, give the film a center from which it can spin its mad variations.

The acting all around is top-notch. Rickman shows once again he's one of film's baddest villains, and Freeman gives an authoritative performance. Slater, Brindle, Michael McShane as the comical Friar Tuck and Britain's renowned stage actress Geraldine McEwan all turn in excellent performances.

Mastrantonio departs from the usual interpretation of Maid Marian as a demure medieval maiden. She is more twentieth century; intelligent, strong-minded and capable of holding her own.

In many respects, this Robin Hood is not unlike the cliffhangers that were featured at the old Saturday matinees. It has a good guy, villains, breathtaking action sequences, and a maiden who is rescued by the hero. It is great fun and a perfect escape from reality.

'Kickboxer 2': Not engrossing, simply gross

By John Minnis
Assistant Editor

The original "Kickboxer" was a great film — at least when compared to its sequel, "Kickboxer 2." And the very dull Jean-Claude Van Damme, who starred in the original "Kickboxer," looks downright charismatic when compared to limp Sasha Mitchell, who plays the reluctant hero David Sloan.

In the sequel, Mitchell plays the brother of Kurt and Eric Sloan. Their failure to appear in "Kickboxer 2" is attributed in the script to the fact that they were killed by Tong Po (Michel Qissi), the only cast member to play in both "Kickboxer" films.

In the first "Kickboxer," Eric is paralyzed in a Korean kickboxing bout with Po. Kurt avenges his brother's beating by defeating Po, who then kills Kurt and Eric in Korea. We learn all this through flashbacks created for "Kickboxer 2" to explain the original characters' absence.

As the only surviving brother, David demands a fight with Po. It seems Po has burned David's kickboxing gym, killing both a young boy he had befriended and David's top student.

If it sounds familiar, it's because the original "Kickboxer" had the same plot.

The sequel even brings in Kurt's Korean mentor, Xian Chow, this time played by Dennis Chan, who comes to the United States to rehabilitate David Sloan after he was severely beaten by the thugs who set fire to his gym.

Rather than develop his own character, Chan tries to imitate the Chow character from the first "Kickboxer," and falls embarrassingly short of the task.

He's not alone. In fact, "Kickboxer 2" falls short in every category when compared to the original, and that's saying something because the first movie wasn't a cinematic winner either.

To overcome the thin, cliché-ridden plot and wooden acting, "Kickboxer 2" tries to engross the viewer with slow-motion fighting scenes. But the scenes do not feature highly skilled karate moves. Rather, they graphically show the fighters' faces beaten to pulp, with blood, sweat, phlegm and whatever else going in all directions. It's not engrossing, just gross.

It takes a sick mind to enjoy this type of gore and an even sicker mind to put it on film for public consumption.

Not only is it not recommended viewing at theater prices, it's also worth boycotting even when it becomes available through video rental at $2.

The producers of this film should not be encouraged.

If you like the soaps, this film's your dish

By Marian Trainor
Special Writer

In the hilarious new comedy "Soapdish," the frenetic two worlds of soap opera are examined, showing that what happens when off-camera hijinks collide with reality.

It's a little like Alice's trip down the rabbit hole. We're never sure where one begins and the other ends, but it's great fun.

The film delves wholeheartedly into the mental states of longtime soap opera stars and the show's creative team, which after years of experience believes that no plot development is too contrived if it helps raise the ratings. Garry Marshall, playing the network director, operates under the credo "I like two words. I like the word peppy, and I like the word cheap."

To that end we have Celeste (Sally Field), star of the popular show "The Sun Also Sets," serving up meals to the homeless in a soup kitchen; in prison in another scene clutching the bars of a cell, crying, "I'm guilty of love in the first degree" and in yet another segment involving a brain transplant in a restaurant.

The on-set melodramas are heightened by the behind-the-scenes machinations of her scheming, ferociously ambitious archrival Monatan Moorehead (Cathy Moriarty) and the show's quietly diabolical producer, David Barnes (Robert Downey Jr.) who has a fatal attraction for the brassy Moorehead. She promises all sorts of favours if he will make Celeste's character's life so miserable that Celeste will quit.

Celeste, not unaware that time is catching up, calls on her only friend, Rose (Whoopi Goldberg) the lead writer, for advice. Hoping to push her over the edge, Downey in a counter-attack recruits Jeffrey Anderson (Kevin Kline), a down-at-the heels actor appearing in a dinner theater production of "Death of a Salesman," to appear opposite Celeste. Kline is Celeste's former lover and co-star on the show. The real world intrudes into the reel world again when Celeste's angel-faced niece Lori Craven (Elisabeth Shue), an aspiring actress, is cast as a homeless mute in the soap opera.

Fans are so conditioned to seeing Sally Field as sweet and unguarded that when she rants and raves on the set it comes off as comedy rather than anger. A consummate actress, she turns in an outstanding performance in the way she makes the audience see the difference between her soap opera character's performed feelings and her real feelings.

Kline, one of the most accomplished comic actors in movies, lives up to that reputation. Battered by the same insecurities that plague Field, he covers them with an off-hand manner, witty one-liners and riotous innuendos. Jeffrey Anderson is Kline's funniest role since "A Fish Called Wanda," and he even makes the most of it even when he is seriously discussing his ambition to play a one-man "Hamlet," since he thinks all the play's action takes place in Hamlet's brain.

Goldberg gives a solid performance as Rose, who does battle with the writers, producers and executives to keep Celeste on top.

Moriarty plays her part in a particularly predatory manner, and Downey is good as the befuddled producer who can't understand why he is attracted to Moriarty.

Written by Robert Harling ("Steel Magnolias") and Andrew Bergman ("Blazing Saddles"), "Soapdish" makes for topnotch summer entertainment.

Let's talk

• Did you know that Central Michigan's football team will be playing at Michigan State Sept. 14? What do you mean who cares? I care. I'm a 1985 CMU graduate and I'll bet Central beats the Spartans, 21-17.

• If you haven't noticed, the football bleachers have been removed from Grosse Pointe South's campus. I'm looking forward to seeing what the new ones look like. Is there any possibility that lights will be put in?

• Does anyone really care what Michael Jordan and the Bulls think of the Pistons?

• Eight people died in Chicago's celebration after the Bulls won the NBA title. And Detroit's a bad city?

• I wish Grosse Pointe's Dave Bergman would get more playing time and at bats for the Tigers.

• Calling all rollerbladers, why don't you goof slow down at intersections?

• The Port Huron to Mackinac race is July 27, just one week after the Chicago to Mackinac race.

• Why do fans fight over foul balls?

• Karen Ehresman, a 1991 state hurdles champion from South, has decided to attend Stanford. She ran a season best 14.6 in the 100 meter hurdles and placed fourth in the Midwest Meet of Champions.

• Linda Morreale, P.R. Stark and Laura Keyt, all athletes at University Liggett School, won the Thelma Fox Murray Scholarship award. The scholarship honors the 1917 alumnae of Liggett School. Criteria for the award included integrity, humility, sense of humor, athletic achievement and academic excellence.

• Why doesn't ABC bring back "Monday Night Baseball"?

• Is there any other paper in the state that gives as much ink to the little league and soccer scores as the Grosse Pointe News does?

• Little league players may not know it, but playing at Ghesquiere Park is a treat.

• Why do parents yell at umpires or officials during games?

• I'm surprised more cars driving on Vernier haven't been hit by stray golf shots from the tees and fairways at the Lochmoor Club.

• It's time to give George Lathrop, the Grosse Pointe News' copy editor, a pat on the back for saving me, and everyone else, from embarrassment over misspellings and improper grammar.

• Congratulations to Frank Sumner and his Norsemen baseball team for advancing to the Class A state semifinals for the first time since 1980.

• Tommy Valentine of the Lochmoor Club will be among 150 golfers trying to tame "The Bear" at Grand Traverse Resort during the 76th annual AAA Michigan Open June 30-July 3. Good luck, Tommy.

• Jennifer Dube, a 1990 North graduate, was the Most Valuable Gymnast on the Michigan State University gymnastics team.

• Anthony Stefani, 8, won the Beverly Hills Racquet Club Country Day Tennis Open June 5. It was Anthony's second win in a SEMTA tournament in less than a month.

• May your summer be long, your pool be filled with cool water, and your ears be filled with one more shot of Ernie Harwell.

Lorenzini took more than a minute to select Rice

By Rob Fulton
Sports Editor

Nick Lorenzini sacrificed half his senior year at South, didn't go to the prom, missed his girlfriend and didn't spend any time with his buddies, but don't feel sorry for him.

Instead, remember him because some day he may be on the professional tennis circuit.

Lorenzini, who graduated from South two weeks ago with the rest of his class, had all of his credits after the first semester of the 1990-91 school year, so in January he opted to go to Florida. The hiatus from South wasn't an easy choice, but it was a necessary one.

"I only had to take one exam second semester and that was in Spanish," he said. "So I felt I'd just come back in May and take it."

He managed to get out early by doubling up during the first semester.

So instead of studying, going to parties, or just attending other sporting events at South, Lorenzini was in Florida. He wasn't there to lie on the beach, though.

He attended Gary Kesel's Tennis Academy, a very concentrated and respected camp, for five months to hone his game. Attending the camp not only polished his game but it brought him into contact with college coaches from Texas A&M, Texas, Penn State, Notre Dame and Rice. Lorenzini liked Rice's full scholarship offer, so he will attend that Houston school in the fall.

"I had to go to Florida to train because I felt I couldn't get in enough time up here," said Lorenzini. "I was able to get in more hours every day and that was the key."

Five hours a day, to be exact, and that didn't include the weightlifting, running and training seminars.

"I missed out on a lot of things," said Lorenzini, whose brother Lee is a full-scholarship tennis player at Purdue. "I don't know if people will ever understand how hard a decision it was to go to the academy, but it was a sacrifice I had to make."

And he doesn't regret it one bit.

"Right now I know I did the right thing," he said. "Even if I don't turn pro someday, I know that going to the camp was in my best interest."

Even if all they did was force feed you tennis?

"Yeah," he said. "It's a lot of hours and a lot of tennis, but if you want tennis as a career you have to dedicate your time to it."

"There were times I would ask myself 'is it for me?', and I think that's only natural. Besides, I wanted to dedicate my life to tennis and I wanted to see what it would be like to be dedicated to just one thing."

Lorenzini, 18, and one of the top 20 junior players in the nation, also turned his back on defending the 1990 No. 1 singles state championship he won while playing for South's Tom Berschback.

"I felt I was going to make a push for the national tournaments this summer, so I had to do something extra," he said. "I learned a lot at the camp. I learned to be aggressive, attack the net more and become a better offensive player."

While in Florida, Lorenzini played in three satellite tournaments. He had to qualify for each one because he didn't have enough points. He also participated in Miami's Junior Easter Bowl, where he advanced to the consolation semifinals, placing him in the top eight players.

"I learned a lot about responsibility, being on your own and how to cope when things get rough," Lorenzini said. "One thing I really missed was the 'team' atmosphere you get when playing for a high school program."

Nick Lorenzini has accepted a full scholarship to play tennis at Rice University this fall.

"I missed being with the team when we go to the state meet and stay in the hotel and just goof around."

But there was no goofing around in Florida.

"You have to be very serious about what you're doing because you wouldn't go to the camp if you didn't want to pursue a tennis career," said Lorenzini, who, if he's good enough, may enter the professional ranks after two years at Rice.

"Obviously, I want to go to college and get a good education," he said. "But I also want to win a lot of games. It's time for me to go for it. If I'm good enough after a couple years, sure I'd consider turning pro. But if you're not consistently on top, going pro wouldn't be worth it."

Wanderer takes JAM A

Decorating churches with flowers is an art spanning hundreds of years

With June the traditional month for weddings, the question of church floral decorations comes to the fore and proves to be more of a project than one might suppose.

Arranging flowers for churches is a very specialized art. Some churches rely on an experienced professional florist who is familiar with the church. Others depend on the talents of gifted members of the congregation.

Many things must be taken into consideration in selecting flowers for a church. Arrangements must be viewed from a considerable distance or in some instances must hold their own in front of an intricately carved altar or background of stained glass.

The arrangement must not be lost in a large space dominated by lofty arches and shadowy distances; it must indicate the appropriate occasion in the church calendar and it must emphasize and enhance the spiritual quality of the time and place. A large order, indeed.

Floral arrangements must be as carefully planned as the music provided by the choir and the organ. They, like the music, are one part of an all-around effect and must complement and supplement the service.

The practice of placing groupings of flowers in temples began in the sixth century with the Chinese Buddhists, but in all the religions of the world, flowers have been important symbols of worship for many centuries.

Long before the Christian era flowers were used as a part of worship. Festivals of ancient gods were always marked by the strewing of flower petals and the adorning of statues with wreaths. In medieval Europe sweet herbs and rushes were strewn on the floors of churches. Even after the Reformation when much of the imagery and symbolism was stripped from the churches, flowers were allowed to remain.

Some flowers have a special history and significance in religion. The lily, for instance, in Christian symbolism represents purity, and is the symbol of Easter and the Resurrection. It is the special flower of the Virgin Mary and during the Middle Ages, paintings of her almost always included a vase of lilies.

In the prehistoric Minoan period of Crete, about 3000 B.C., the lily was the sacred symbol of Britomartis, the Great Mother, and in ancient Greece it was the flower of Hera, goddess of the moon, earth, air, marriage, woman's life and childbirth, and in ancient Rome it was the emblem of Juno, goddess of light, sky, marriage and motherhood.

One of the most ancient of flowers with religious significance is the lotus, a tropical water lily, which has been held sacred in the Near and Far East since the beginning of many religious beliefs and has an uninterrupted symbolic history of more than 5,000 years. The Egyptian lotus, dedicated to Horus, god of the sun, was the solar symbol of fertility and therefore of the life-giving Nile, and it was the symbol of resurrection, since it closed its petals at night and sank to the bottom and rose to the surface of the water and opened its petals again in the morning.

The lotus was venerated in Assyria and Greece, where it was used in architectural ornaments, and in Persia where it was the symbol of light. In Nepal, Tatar and Tibet it was the emblem of mystery. It is revered by all Hindus because Brahma was born from a lotus flower. In India it is the symbol of Buddha. The eight-petaled lotus is the emblem of the past, present and future in both China and Japan, since it has buds, blossoms and seedpods at the same time.

Myrtle was in antiquity one of the plants sacred to all the people of the eastern Mediterranean. The ancient Hebrews revered it and covered the tent of the Tabernacle with blooming boughs. The Egyptians used it to symbolize Hathor, goddess of love and joy, and in Greece and Rome it was sacred to Aphrodite and Venus, the goddesses of love. Myrtle was the symbol of love and marriage, and Roman brides from then till now wear myrtle on their wedding days.

In the 16th century, when the Jesuits arrived in South America, they were amazed to find a blooming vine which they believed to be the same flower which, according to Christian legend, was seen growing on the cross in one of the visions of St. Francis of Assisi. They named it passion flower. The various parts of the flower are supposed to represent the symbols and instruments of Christ's passion.

When Francisco Pizarro arrived in Peru in 1532, he found the Inca Indians growing the giant sunflower which they venerated as the sacred image of their sun god. Sunflower seeds were sacred food, as they are today in many southwest Indian tribes.

It would seem, indeed, that flowers have always played an important part in worship services and in ceremonial occasions — especially joyful ones like weddings — in churches and temples throughout the world.

Host families sought

More than 180 French, Spanish and German exchange students, mostly boys, want to spend four weeks this summer experiencing American-style living and families are needed to host them.

The students have studied English for four to eight years, so it isn't necessary for the hosts to speak French, Spanish or German. Also their parents supply them with pocket money and pay for their transportation and insurances.

The exchange is sponsored by Nacel Cultural Exchanges which offers homestays abroad to American teens and which this year is bringing more than 6,000 teens and chaperones from Europe to live with families here, including 367 to Michigan.

In the reciprocal program, Nacel offers American teens the chance to live four weeks abroad as part of a French, Spanish or German family. The cost this year including transportation from Detroit ranges from $1,435 to $1,620.

The local Nacel representative is Phyllis Reeve. For more information, call her at 331-2378.

Gather plants for drying throughout the growing season

The best time to collect plant material for dried arrangements and crafts is when they are readily available — in other words, throughout the growing season.

Sandra Goeddeke-Richards, home horticulturist in Macomb County, said naturally dried materials — seed heads, pine cones, grasses — are harvested at the end of their growing season. Cattails should be picked after they fill out but before they turn brown and go soft and fluffy. Garden flowers to be dried need to be picked before they are in full bloom and then carefully dried and preserved for arranging later.

Most garden flowers can be dried, Richards said, though some colors come through the process better than others. She advises drying pink, yellow, white and light blue flowers. Red-colored flowers often go off-color and end up purplish.

Air drying is the simplest drying method. It works well with plants that have semi-dry flowers and stems that don't readily wilt, such as astible, baby's breath, Chinese lantern, chrysanthemum, cockscomb, coneflower (Rubeckia), goldenrod, heather, lavender, marigold, statice, strawflower, tansy and teasel.

Simply remove the foliage from the stems and tie flowers in bundles or hang separately

Flower	Heating Time (minutes)	Standing Time (hours)
African daisy	3	10
Aster	2-1/2	10
Calendula	2-1/2	10
Carnation	1	10
Clematis	3	10
Chrysanthemum	3	10
Daffodil	2-1/2	10

Delphinium (Larkspur)	4 to 5	10
Dianthus	2-1/2	24

Poppy	2-1/2 to 3	24

Zinnia	4 to 5	10

to dry upside down in a cool, dark, well-ventilated place for about three weeks. Insufficient air circulation will slow drying and perhaps permit mold to grow, and direct sun will fade flower colors.

Plant materials that wilt readily must be dried in a drying agent, or desiccant, which will also support them so they maintain their shapes as they dry. Richards recommends either a sand-borax mix or silica gel. Cat litter box filler, perlite, cornstarch, sawdust and cornmeal may also be used, but they don't give reliable results.

A mixture of two parts borax with one part fine sand is inexpensive and effective. Drying takes from four to 14 days, depending on the material being dried. To help flowers retain their original colors, add three tablespoons of uniodized salt to each quart of the mixture.

Silica gel is lighter than borax-sand and is especially effective for drying delicate flowers such as single roses. Drying usually takes two to seven days. Because drying occurs quickly, flowers tend to retain more of their original color. Hobbyists can purchase silica gel from garden centers, hobby and craft shops, and florists.

To use a desiccant, place 1/2 inch in the bottom of a container that's big enough to hold the materials you want to dry without overlapping them. After reinforcing and lengthening flower stems with florist sticks and wire and covering the wire with green or brown tape, place the flowers on the material.

Flat-faced flowers such as daisies may be placed face down — all others should be arranged face up. Gently sprinkle the drying agent around and over the flowers, being careful to retain the natural shape of the flowers. Add desiccant until the flower heads are covered. Cover the container and do not disturb it except to check a flower for dryness.

Drying is complete when flowers are crisp and dry but not brittle. The thickest parts are slowest to dry. You can remove flowers when the flower petals are completely dry and finish them by air drying.

To remove flowers, gently pour off the drying agent, then whisk away any remaining drying material with a soft brush.

An alternative to conventional drying with desiccants is to use a drying agent and a microwave oven. It takes only a few minutes and yields materials that are fresher-looking and more colorful than those obtained by other methods.

Use a microwave-safe container and stem materials and silica gel or borax-sand to support the flowers. Leave the container uncovered and place a cup of water in the oven before starting, to prevent excessive drying. Drying time varies with the material (see chart above). All flowers need a standing period after the drying time to finish drying and cooling.

To preserve dried flowers and to keep seed heads from shattering, you can spray them with ordinary hairspray, aerosol lacquer or sprays sold strictly for use as dried floral preservatives. Place dried flower arrangements out of direct sun — they fade quickly in a bright or sunny room.

For more information, contact the Macomb County CES toll-free number listed in your phone directory under Macomb County Government.

The Cooperative Extension Service programs are open to all without regard to race, color, national origin, sex or handicap.

Make planters mobile

Have you ever tried to move a large plant container and found it was too heavy to budge? Or relocated a planter only to discover that the decking under it had started to rot?

With these simple-to-build plant stands, moving heavy containers is easy. They will also keep the base of the planter off the deck, protecting the wood decking from moisture and possible damage.

For large containers, such as oak whisky-barrel planters, you will need four lengths of western softwood 2 by 4's, approximately 16 inches long. This will produce a finished stand about 17-1/2 inches square.

Before you start, measure the base of your planter to make sure the stand will fit. If the planter is round, the finished stand should be slightly smaller than the diameter of the container so the sides of the planter will rest securely on top of the stand. If the planter is square, the stand should be slightly larger than the base of the container.

Turn the 2 by 4's on edge to form a square, lapping them at the corners as shown. Join the 2 by 4's with two or three 3-inch galvanized nails per corner. To avoid splitting the wood, predrill the holes, using a drill bit slightly smaller than the nail.

You will need four heavy-duty casters to complete the project. Be sure to select a pivoting caster with a flat metal plate which can be screwed into the base of the frame. The plate will help reinforce the corner joint.

For smaller planters, use 2 by 2's to form the stand, end nailing the corners, as shown. For a 12-inch square stand, you will need four lengths of 2 by 2, 10-1/2 inches long, and four pivoting casters. Join the corners with two 2-1/2 inch galvanized nails per joint.

To help protect the wood, finish the stands with two or more applications of exterior stain or paint. Or use a water-repellent sealer. Western softwood lumber is easy to work with and extremely durable when properly finished.

For more outdoor projects you can build yourself, write to Western Wood Products Association, Dept. HI-591, Yeon Building, 522 SW Fifth Ave., Portland, Ore. 97204-2122.

Those pesky mosquitoes don't just bite

With summer, thoughts turn to going to the beach, cookouts, no school, fishing and other outdoor activities.

Unfortunately, sometimes the best-laid plans can be ruined by mosquitoes, and the mosquitoes of 1991 are as abundant as ever. Although these insects are pests and sometimes transmit diseases, they are also fascinating creatures.

Mosquitoes are like butterflies in that they have four stages to their life cycle; egg, larvae, pupae and adult. In fact, some of you might recall spending many summer days as a child splashing around the local ditch or swamp looking for frogs, turtles, dragonflies, and maybe even mosquito wigglers (larvae) and tumblers (pupae).

Michigan has more than 50 species of mosquitoes with many of them accomplishing incredible feats. For example, did you know that the marsh mosquito (Cooklettidia perturbans) actually spends 10-11 months as a larvae underwater attached to the root hairs of plants such as cattails?

They get their oxygen through the plant and live the winter months under the ice. The marsh mosquito annually hatches around the end of June in time for the 4th of July celebrations.

The marsh mosquito is unique in its ability to overwinter underneath the ice. Mosquitoes from the genus Cules and Anopheles overwinter as adults by hiding in hollow trees, barns, crawl spaces and any place else that affords them protection. These are the mosquitoes that harass us during an unseasonably warm March day.

Other mosquitoes such as the genus Aedes lay eggs that are so durable that they can survive on the ground through the winter (or many winters) and then hatch during the spring and summer when flooded by melting snow or heavy rains.

Some mosquitoes are beneficial. Larvae of mosquitoes in the genus Toxorhynchites are predaceous, even feeding on other mosquitoes. Unfortunately, these are not found in Michigan.

Only female mosquitoes bite. They need the protein in the blood for egg development.

The floodwater mosquitoes (Aedes vexans) will migrate long distances from their breeding places, often traveling five to 10 miles. Brackish water and run-off brine will often breed the salt-marsh mosquito (Aedes sollicitans) which is known to travel more than 40 miles just to get a blood meal.

To avoid mosquito annoyance, use repellents and wear light-colored clothes; mosquitoes are more attracted to dark areas.

Not all mosquito species attack humans. Some prefer birds, while others feed only on cold-blooded animals such as snakes and frogs. Some mosquitoes may acquire sufficient protein as larvae.

When you go mosquito hunting, don't forget to check items that hold small amounts of water such as tires, treeholes or cans. These small habitats can develop hundreds of mosquitoes every 10-14 days. It's also helpful not to cast a shadow over the stagnant water since this will alarm the larvae and cause them to dive to the bottom of the habitat.

Controlling a group of insects which are so adaptable, cunning, clever and ingenious is difficult not only for the homeowner, but also for trained professionals.

In an effort to share information on mosquito biology and control, the Michigan Mosquito Control Association (MMCA) was founded in 1986. This association conducts a yearly conference, publishes a quarterly newsletter, has an excellent reference library and a good assortment of videotapes concerning mosquitoes.

If you are interested in learning more about mosquitoes and their control, write MMCA, P.O. Box 366, Bay City, Mich 48707 or call (517) 755-5752.

Reduce mosquito populations

Mosquito larva or "wigglers" must live in water that stands five or more days to complete their growth and change into adult biting mosquitoes capable of transmitting disease. The number of mosquitoes in an area can be much reduced by removing standing water.

- Get rid of old tires, tin cans, drums, bottles or any water-holding containers.
- Fill in or drain any low places (puddles, ruts, etc.) in yard.
- Keep drains, ditches, and culverts clean of weeds and trash so water will drain properly.
- Keep eavestroughs clean of leaves and other debris.
- Cover trash containers to keep out rainwater.

- Repair leaky pipes and outside faucets.
- Empty plastic wading pool at least once a week and store it indoors when not in use.
- Fill in tree rot holes and hollow stumps that hold water with sand or concrete.
- Change the water in bird baths and plant pots or dip trays at least once each week.
- Store boats/canoes covered or upside down or remove rainwater weekly.
- Keep grass cut short and shrubbery well trimmed around the house so adult mosquitoes will not hide there.

The Anti-Cruelty Association wants you and your companion to have a safe Fourth of July. Please read the following article. Have a Happy Fourth!

Holiday Safety Tips

THE BOMBS bursting in air on the Fourth of July may make your heart swell with pride - and your pet's heart skip a beat. Animals don't understand that the loud noises and flashes of light are all in celebration. They may react by cowering, hiding and trembling in fear. Outdoor pets have been known to break through screen doors and leap over fences in attempts to escape the commotion. To ensure that your pets have a safe Fourth of July, follow these simple rules:

- Don't take dogs to places where there may be fireworks.
- If you won't be at home when fireworks are likely to go off, be sure your dog is inside.
- If you're at home with a scared dog, don't reinforce your pet's behavior by doling out the sympathy. Instead divert the dog's attention by practicing an obedience routine or playing a game of fetch.
- Make sure your dog is wearing an ID tag, just in case it escapes.

HELP I Wee a two cats who need a new home because the baby is allergic to us. We are neutered, playful and affectionate. Please call 885-1359.

LOVABLE dogs and cats need good homes. For adoption information call: Northern Suburbs Animal Welfare League Volunteer, Jeanette 773-6839.

PLEASE DON'T DELAY! SPAY or NEUTER YOUR PET TODAY!
An altered pet is a healthier and happier companion. Also, it spares you the grief and pain of having puppies and kittens destroyed when no homes can be found. Countless numbers of sweet, innocent little ones are euthanized every day in shelters across the country because a pet wasn't spayed or neutered. If we cut down on the numbers of unwanted litters being born, we will also cut down on the number of abandoned, lost and unwanted animals to destroy.

WE WILL BE HAPPY TO PROVIDE ADVICE as well as a LIST OF ECONOMIC SERVICE SOURCES
