Farms family fosters friendship for sake of peace in Ireland

By Donna Walker Staff Writer

Ciera Phillips, a 17-year-old ambassador from Northern Ireland, describes her homeland as being "rustic, very green and very still."

However, that stillness is often shattered by bombings and other violence wreaked by terrorists on both sides of the centuries-old strife between Protestants and Catholics in Northern Ireland.

And that's why Phillips and 17-year-old Tanya Greaves, also from Northern Ireland, are staying for six weeks with Maureen and Mark Anthony of Grosse Pointe Farms and their children, Brian, 8, Erin, 6, and Mary Beth, 4.

The Anthonys, Phillips and Greaves are participating in the Children's Friendship Project for Northern Ireland (CFPNI). The 5-year-old group hopes to bring peace to Northern Ireland by trying to build friendships between its Protestant and Catholic young people.

Under the program, two teenagers (between the ages of 14 and 17) from Northern Ireland are paired — one Protestant and one Catholic - and placed with a host family in the United States for six weeks.

"This experience," CFPNI literature states, "allows them to witness for themselves that people of different religious and cultural backgrounds can and do live in peace and harmony with one another . . . that there is another way of life."

Maureen Anthony heard about CFPNI last year and decided that she wanted to become a host parent. She almost changed her mind when she found out that she would have to pay for the students' roundtrip airfare. However, she was able to raise the money through CFPNI fundraisers.

and the generosity of many local residents and groups which bought CFPNI cookbooks and raffle tickets from Anthony.

Phillips, a blue-eyed, auburnhaired resident of Omagh, a fairly large city in Northern Ireland, and Greaves, a darkhaired, dark-eyed girl from Enniskillen, a fishing town of about 13,000 people, arrived in Michigan on July 6, and will be going home on Aug. 16.

Sitting side by side on Anthony's living room couch on a sweltering summer day, the girls look like typical American teenagers and seem to be good friends. Softspoken and a little shy, they look to each other for guidance when asked a question by a reporter, and often answer with a laugh or a giggle. But there's no laughing or

Police escort

The Grosse Pointe Farms-City-Park baseball team got a grand escort from the Farms police department last Thursday as it headed to Kentucky to play in the Ohio Valley Regional Babe Ruth Baseball Tournament. The team beat Niles July 24 to win the state championship and a bid to the regional tournament. It was the team's first state title since 1984.

Pointe profiles: We're well-paid, highly educated

By John Minnis Assistant Editor

It may come as no surprise to most that the Pointes are made up of predominantly college-educated professionals or managers in high-income households.

A "Community Profile" of each of the five Grosse Pointes - among all 143 communities in Wayne County - was recently released by the county's Department of Jobs & Economic Development.

Timothy A. Johnson, director of the department's marketing/ communications division, said the county was assisted by an outside consultant and a partial grant from the state Department of Commerce, he said.

The community profiles were put together by combing 1990 census data and reports from other agencies and county departments.

"Basically, they are for developers and businesses thinking of locating or expanding in Wayne County," Johnson said. "They are to help in their decision-making."

The profiles include everything from population now and in the year 2010 to school spending to total tax rates. The profiles include useful data not only for the business leader. but also for those interested in buying a home in the Pointes.

The profiles indicate that the drop in the Pointes' population since 1980 will continue over the next two decades. In 2010, all the Pointes except the Shores are expected to show a further decline.

The Shores population is expected to grow from it present level of 2,955 to 3,175 in 2010. Based on the Regional Development Forecast 1990 by the Southeast Michigan Council of Governments (SEMCOG), the projections indicate that the additional 220 inhabitants in the Shores 20 years from now will be distributed among some 300 additional Shores households.

"Grosse Pointe is synonymous with wealth and affluence." the profiles of the Pointes note. "Once renowned for the many estates and mansions of the prominent families of the industrial pioneers of Detroit and Wayne County, many of the large estates have given way to housing development on a more modest scale though still retaining the luxurious-

War drums were sounding across Europe and Asia when Martin F. Owens Jr. graduated from Grosse Pointe High School in 1938. The United States was not yet involved.

SEMCOG proposes air-traffic plan

By Ronald J. Bernas

Staff Writer A draft study of air traffic in seven southeast Michigan counties has determined that Detroit City Airport should have a longer runway to make the airport safer and more productive.

But before you form another group opposed to airport expansion, there are some things SEMCOG, the agency which conducted the study, wants people to know. "The study does not propose any expansion nor does it sav a longer runway is feasible politically or economically," Gail Kaess, vice chair for SEM-COG and also a Grosse Pointe Farms councilwoman. "All it says is that the traffic at the airport justifies a longer runway to help it meet the general aviation needs of the area for the years to come."

The recommendation is part of a larger document which was written at the request of SEM-COG. Funded by a grant from the FAA, the study looked at selected air traffic in the seven counties SEMCOG serves. Those counties are Wayne, Washtenaw, St. Clair, Oakland. Monroe, Macomb and Livings-

But the plan, according to Theresa Klaasen, founder of the City Airport Opposition Association, is flawed and skewed in a way that negates any recommendations it makes.

The report studied only general aviation, which consists of all air traffic except commercial.

"The focus of the plan is that much like the road system and the traffic system, there is an aviation system, and we have to look at it like a system,' said Carmine Palombo, transportation program manager for SEMCOG, "because what you do at one airport does affect another airport."

The study was commissioned to help SEMCOG develop a regional policy for airports and air traffic and provide the general direction for aviation in the area to develop.

"The study does not at all support the plan for expansion at Detroit City Airport," Palombo said. "I haven't seen it and I don't know what it is. What we're saying in this report is that there is technical justification that the airport have a runway of up to 7,000

Currently the runway is 5,600 feet.

The technical justification comes from plugging figures as to types and weights of aircraft, lengths of trips and various other factors affecting the airport, into an FAA formula. A 7,000-foot runway would allow the airport to be used up to its potential as determined by the FAA formula, Palombo said. Kaess recently discussed the study with members of the City Airport Opposition Association. They were upset that the airport at Selfridge Air National Guard Base was not included in the study. They said the airport is a fully functioning facility which can be at least shared with other air traffic, and that the roads leading to it are large enough and any additional planes landing could easily be absorbed with not much additional noise.

"By disregarding Selfridge, it makes for SEMCOG a terribly skewed and faulty plan," Klaasen said.

She said studies show most of the need for an airport will be in Macomb County where Selfridge is located and that the planes take off and land over Lake St. Clair, making the area around the airport safer and quieter. Klaasen also disputes the figures that led to the recommendation for a 7,000-foot runway. Another study commissioned by her group shows different computations using different fig-

Kaess said public input on the study is encouraged — Klaasen says it's a necessity.

Although people can send their comments to SEMCOG at 660 Plaza Drive, Suite 1900, Detroit, 48226, they can deliver them personally at a public hearing at 9:30 a.m. Aug. 20 at the group's Plaza Drive offices. Another hearing will be held Aug. 28 before the Transportation Advisory Council which will make a formal recommendation - to accept or reject the study - to SEMCOG's executive committee, which will act on that recommendation on Sept. 27.

Pointers Joe and Mollie Beyer sadly close Pontchartrain Wine Cellars

Assistant Editor

Farms residents Joe and Mollie Beyer saw 34 years of their lives come to a sad end last week with the closing of the Pontchartrain Wine Cellars.

The Beyers were forced to file for Chapter 7 bankruptcy July 31 after they were unable to get a loan to carry them through the economic hard times sweeping downtown businesses and restaurants.

"We invested all the money we could," Joe Beyer said.

Thus the Wine Cellars, founded in 1935, joined the death list of other downtown restaurants that have been forced to close, including the London Chop House, Money Tree, On Stage and Lansdowne.

The Caucus Club (Chapter 11) and Jimmy's on Woodward (Chapter 7) also have filed for bankruptcy recently.

"The business activity down here at night was just missing," Beyer. "We couldn't sustain it with just the lunch business"

He agreed that the problems at his restaurant were not unique, that all the downtown restaurants were suffering from

Three Mile, other streets to get repairs

Mayor Palmer Heenan kept his word to Three Mile resident Bruce Mazzola: Three Mile will be repayed this year.

The city council recently awarded the repaving contract to Holloway Construction, which submitted the lowest bid of $152,192. The streets to be resurfaced are Three Mile from Mack to Jefferson and Somerset from St. Paul to Jefferson.

Ward & Van Nuck Inc. was awarded the contract for chip seal work on Park Lane, Edgemont Park and Maumee. A portion of Harvard may receive a chip seal coating if funds, permit.

In June, Mazzola petitioned the council to have his street repaved. He said his street had been on the list to be resurfaced for years, but each year the work on Three Mile was postponed. Heenan promised Mazzola Three Mile would be repaved this year.

Work should begin immediately, said City Manager Dale Krajniak.

'New co-manager' makes dough, robs pizza store

The Little Caesar's Pizza outlet on Mack in the Woods was robbed at gunpoint Aug. 2 by a man who purported to be the store's new co-manager.

The store's co-manager on duty at the time, a 20-year-old East Detroit man, told police that a man entered the store at 10:30 p.m. and introduced himself as "Mike." He said he was the new co-manager and that he was to help open the store in the morning.

As he talked to the co-manager, he revealed a lot of know-ledge about the nizza business and how the store operated. He even knew the names of em-complete. "We don't have the energy to start another restaurant," Joe Beyer said.

The couple bought the Wine Cellars in 1971 from Joan O'-Connor, daughter of the restaurant's founder, the late Harold Borgman. Beyer had managed the business since the spring of 1957.

The Wine Cellars first opened in 1935 at its original location on Wayne Street. In 1956, it moved to new quarters in a circa 1882 building at 234 W. Larned, just east of Washington Boulevard.

Every year, the Wine Cellars closed for two weeks for vacations, but this time when the restaurant shut down for vacation July 1, it turned out to be for good. Beyer had to call his 29 employees last week to give them the bad news.

"It's been a rough, emotional ordeal," he said.

The Pontchartrain Wine Cellars founder, Borgman, is credited with inventing Cold Duck, a drink made of two parts dry burgundy and one part champagne — an old German concoction. After Borgman first mixed it at his eatery in 1940, it became a house specialty right up to the restaurant's final days.

A trustee will be named to sell off the restaurant's stock of wines, probably to the public, but don't expect to buy a bottle of the famous Cold Duck. While sparkling wines were once hot sellers across the country, they never held up well in a bottle, Beyer said. "We still made ours one at a time," he said.

Clearly saddened by the closing, Beyer told the Detroit Free Press' Molly Abraham: "I'll give you your lead line: After 51 years, the Pontchartrain Wine Cellars has served its last Cold Duck."

Store owner may have chairs pulled out from under him

Grosse Pointe Woods may force Joseph Bogosian, owner of Josef's French Pastry Shop, to remove the five tables and 12 chairs from his store, located at 21150 Mack at Brys.

Last week, Bogosian received a letter from the city administrator's office informing him that he had been selling food for consumption on his store's premises in violation of a portion of the City Code of 1975.

According to the code, a retail store that sells food for consumption on the premises must have one off-street parking space for each employee who is working during peak hours, and one off-street parking space for each 200 square feet of gross floor space (including storage areas). The parking spaces must be within 300 feet of the

The parking requirements for "take-out" stores (where customers buy food to eat elsewhere) are less stringent. The premise is that "eat-in" customers tie up parking spaces for a longer period of time than "take-out" customers do.

Josef's doesn't have any offstreet parking spaces, according to Chester Petersen, Grosse Pointe Woods city administrator-clerk. It does, however, have three metered curb parking spaces on the side of its building, as well as three on the other side of Brys and several metered curb spots on Mack, alongside a vacant lot between Brys and Aline.

Josef's has been at the Mack location since 1971. When Bogosian applied for a business license at that time, he was told he didn't have enough off-street parking spaces to have an "eatin" store. He didn't even have enough for a take-out store, but the city council granted him a variance to offer take-outs, Petersen said.

Bogosian claims that he doesn't intentionally sell food for consumption on his premises. He has tables and chairs in the store, he said, for customers who get tired while waiting for their number to be cailed. He also needs the tables and chairs, he said, for brides, so that they have somewhere to sit while looking through cake books and placing their orders.

"Very few of my customers sit down and have a cup of coffee or eat something that they've purchased," Bogosian said. "But if a customer does that, I'm not going to chase her out of the store and tell her she has to go eat in her car. That's not right. I guess I could put up a sign on the tables saying you can't eat here. But c'mon, that's not right either. That's no way to treat your custom-

So Bogosian wrote a letter to the Woods zoning board of appeals, asking for a variance that would allow him to keep his tables and chairs and permit him to sell food and beverages for consumption on the

In the letter, Bogosian asked the board to consider the following: "We have been in business for 20 years in the city of Grosse Pointe Woods and have always had tables and chairs of some sort. It has been part of my decor since 1971.

"We remodeled the store four years ago to follow with the Colonial theme of Grosse Pointe Woods. In doing so we decorated the interior like the European pastry shops are with small tables and chairs.

"Please keep in mind that 90 to 95 percent of our business is in the retail sales of baked goods for off-premises consump-

"We are in no way comparable to a full service restaurant. We do not service the tables. Everything is purchased over the counter.

Bogosian also said in the letter, "Please be assured that we were not aware of the city zoning ordinance concerning consumption on the premises of food or refreshments.

The Woods council decided on Monday to hold a public hearing on Bogosian's variance request on Sept. 9. Before the vote, Councilman Thomas Fahrner said, "I just have to get something off my chest."

Fahrner said he took exception to Bogosian's claim that he didn't know he was in violation of city code. Fahrner said that four years ago, he went into Josef's just after it had been remodeled. He saw the tables and chairs, and informed Bogosian that he was in violation of the city code at that time.

Bogosian said that he didn't recall that conversation with Fahrner, and that when the city building inspector came out to check the remodeling job, he didn't mention anything about the tables and chairs.

If the zoning board of appeals doesn't grant Bogosian a variance, he may have to remove the tables and seats.

Josef's is one of five food stores in the Woods that recently received letters from the city saying they were in violation of city code because they were operating eat-in businesses when they were only authorized for take-out.

The letters were sent out following an inspection by Petersen of all eateries in Grosse Pointe Woods. He was checking up on allegations made during a public hearing on a variance request by Alinosi French Ice Cream and Candy Co. last month.

Steve DiMaggio, one of the owners of Alinosi, wanted to install a soda fountain with seats around it at the store's new location in the Woods. He was three off-street parking spaces shy of being able to operate an eat-in business. The variance was denied because three of the seven board members said it would be a safety hazard.

Citing the city parking commission's negative recommendation and a traffic study done by the public safety department, the three board members said that an eat-in Alinosi outlet would attract young people and pedestrians to the busy intersection of Mack and Vernier, adding to the traffic problem in that area.

Councilman Bill Wilson said during the hearing that it wasn't fair to deny Alinosi's request when businesses in the Woods that were denied seats installed them anyway and had never been ticketed.

Park man allegedly flashes wrong person

A 32-year-old Grosse Pointe Park man allegedly exposed himself to the wrong person at Windmill Pointe Park recently.

According to police, a woman was swimming in the park's pool at 12:38 p.m. July 20 when the Park man allegedly exposed himself several times. The man was arrested as he attempted to leave the park.

The woman who witnessed the incident turned out to be an off-duty police officer.

Mania, Hugo's Deli, On a Roll. TCBY Yogurt and Josef's French Pastry Shop were issued business licenses for takeout only, but had seats and tables, indicating that they were selling food for consumption on the premises.

After Petersen sent out the letters, Yogurt Mania, Hugo's Deli and TCBY Yogurt presented documents showing that they had acquired more offstreet parking by re-lining their parking lots so that they had more spaces and by leasing spaces from nearby stores.

On A Roll deli appears to have gone out of business, Petersen said. On recent visits, its doors have been locked and its phone has been disconnected.

Girl Scouts break new ground

By Ronald J. Bernas Staff Writer

A group of 14 Girl Scouts is attending a special day camp this summer that's designed to expose them to career opportunities - not clay ashtrays.

"Lab Coats and Microscopes" is the first camp of its kind for the Michigan Metro Girl Scout Council and although the focus is on getting girls interested in science and laboratory work. the most important thing is that they have fun.

"Technically it's part of the Girl Scouts day camp program - they meet from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. every day - but it's very different," said Wendy A. Hanson, communications coordinator for the council.

First of all, the program is for older girls, 12 to 14, Hanson said. Older girls, she said, won't go to a day camp with younger girls because they want to associate with girls their own age, and participate in programs geared for their takes place at the University of Michigan campus in Dearborn. "This is exciting for these kids," Hanson said. And indeed, the hubbub from the students as they worked on their experiments showed they were having fun. The girls were swabbing each other, the desks, the floor and the chalk board, obtaining bacteria samples to grow cultures for study. They made bacteria cultures and put them in milk and the next day ate their homemade yogurt. They made four-story terrariums - including insects, plants and fish out of plastic two-liter soda bottles. They collected water samples from the Rouge River and examined them. They extracted pigment from plants and tie-dyed shirts. They made telescopes and had a star party one evening.

"We wanted to get the girls into the laboratory to see real live women scientists," Hanson said. "We wanted to show them that normal-looking women can be scientists. We wanted to provide a role model."

Grosse Pointe Park's Anne Pieper is one of the girls in the program.

"I think it's great because it's a lot of fun," Pieper said. "There's a lot of hands-on experience and we get to do a lot of experiments. I'm interested in science and it's good that I'm able to do some of these things.'

By tuning in on your own emotions and asking yourself some important questions as you "read" a photograph, you'll gain insight and technical skills that will certainly help in taking your own pictures.

Begin by trying to determine the subject or main theme of the photograph. Does it move you and how do you respond to it? How do you suppose the photographer felt about it?

Study the lighting. Is it harsh or soft? What direction is it coming irom and what time of day do you think it was? Ask yourself what might happen to the picture if the light were different.

How about camera position near or far, low angle or high? Why do you think the photographer used a particular camera position and what does it do for the picture? How might another camera location affect the photograph?

What lens do you think was used and why? Was it wide-angle, normal, or perhaps a tele-

Generator theft suspects caught

The July severe thunder storm brought out the best and worst in people.

At 10:35 p.m. July 9, two days after the storm, Grosse Pointe Shores police received a report that a generator had just been stolen from a home on Lochmoor near Lakeshore.

Police spotted the suspects' vehicle heading north at speeds up to 75 mph. A Shores officer gave pursuit as the suspects turned onto Marter Road in St. Clair Shores.

The suspects sped through side streets in St. Clair Shores and Grosse Pointe Woods, failing to slow down for stop signs and traffic lights, including those at Mack and Harper. Because of the suspects' reckless and dangerous driving, the Shores officer said he backed off, hoping the suspects would slow down

He kept the car in sight as it came to a dead end on Elizabeth near I-94 in St. Clair Shores.

The suspects drove through a front vard in the Elizabeth cul de sac and abandoned their vehicle in a rear yard.

When the Shores officer got to the car, the suspects had fled. St. Clair Shores officers arrived and began searching the area. About 100 feet from the car, officers found one of the suspects, a 22-year-old Warren man, hiding in bushes. He was arrested.

He provided a description of the two other suspects - a 28year-old Phoenix woman and a 22-year-old Detroit man. He said they fled across I-94.

St. Clair Shores, Harper Woods and East Detroit police were notified. A short time later, an East Detroit officer spotted the two remaining suspects walking at Toepfer and Gratiot. They were arrested. The Warren man had an outstanding misdemeanor warrant for failure to appear in court and a felony warrant for burglary in Warren. He was turned over to Warren police.

The Phoenix woman was wanted on a drunk driving warrant and was turned over to Clinton Township police.

The Detroit man was remanded to the Macomb County

South has top JA company — again

By Ronald J. Bernas Staff Writer

The Grosse Pointe South High School Junior Achievement company doesn't have any hang up about success for the second year in a row it was named Company of the Year by the Detroit and Southeastern Michigan JA council.

The Hang Ups, as the group is known, was chosen for the honor based on the fact that the company made a good profit, the books were complete and well-kept and the product offered was useful.

"Our product was anodized aluminum hangers," said John Jacob Itchon, who was the company's president last year and vice president the previous year. Anodizing, he said, makes the hangers shiny.

The hangers were sold to family members and door-todoor, Itchon said.

The company ended the year with profits of approximately

"It's actually a lot harder than I thought to keep books," he said. "I thought you just had to write stuff down, but it's not that easy."

The members of the company meet every Monday evening in South's basement. Staffers get 80 cents for a night's work; officers get $1.25. In addition to the huge salary, Itchon said he joined the group because he thought it would look good on a college application.

"But I stuck with it because I think it's kind of fun," he said. "A lot of my friends are in the group."

Itchon will be a senior next vear and plans to continue his participation in JA.

"Hopefully they'll be the same people in it and a few new ones, too," he said.

the step a client would hesitate to take alone. Yet, one doesn't want to build a project where the client is intimidated. And there has to be chemistry. I had a client once say to me, "I love you, Bernard, but you wouldn't be here if you weren't good". That says it all.

ON BUDGETS

They're very important. With a new client, one has to talk money. I do that by asking what they want and what they think they can accomplish this time out. I believe we should never fill spaces with compromise. It should always be valid for the room and if the budget does not allow it, I advise them to wait. I try to have clients buy those things with which they will have growth.

has occurred in the last 15 years. Those of us who were in the profession prior to that, you must remember, had no showrooms to work from. We showed pictures! But the Michigan Design Center worked. In the busy season, I am there two to three times a week. To have all the major sources under one roof is terribly important. I am not tripping all over the map in my car, which I hate to do anyway. Report lauds quality of life in the Pointes rosse Pointe residents who tend to be proud of their community will find in the profile of the Pointes put together by the Wayne County Department of Jobs & Economic Development both words and statistics to support their opinion.

The profile concedes that many "large estates have given way to housing development of a more modest scale" but adds that the community still retains "the luxuriousness of a fine residential area with all the accoutrements of fine living, such as select shops, good schools, community centers, libraries, hospitals and church-

Based on the census statistics, that description of the Pointes tends to reflect the residents' own view of the community, although some people seek better social services, a fairer tax system and other reforms aimed at further improving the quality of life here.

Yet the county report also calls attention to some of the anomalies that show up in comparisons of the separate profiles of the five Pointes. One is the continuing decline in the Pointe population at the same time that the number of housing units continues to increase.

Thus the 1980 census reported 19,037 housing units in the Pointes while the 1990 figures rose to 19,163 and the projection for 2010, or 20 years ahead, is for 19,615. At the same time, the population that dipped from 52,099 in 1980 to 49,300 in 1990 is projected at 44,425 in the year 2010.

Those shifts illustrate the decline in the size of the family and explain in part the continuing decrease in the school population in the Grosse Pointe School District. Yet a stable if slightly declining population does contribute to a community's sense of well-being.

It's no secret, however, that the Pointes are getting older. The median age rose from 38 in 1980 to 39 in 1990. The Shores reported the highest median age, 43.5, while the Park was the "youngest' Pointe with a median age of 34.4 years.

The details of the profiles of each of the Pointe communities are reported by John Minnis in a Page 1 story in today's issue of the Grosse Pointe News along with a chart that shows the comparisons between the Pointe municipalities.

The information will be of interest and possible use to businessmen, developers, real estate firms, real estate purchasers. school officials and others concerned with changes and trends in the Pointes in the last decade.

To nobody's surprise, the Shores still is the wealthiest of the Pointes, with average household income of $121,149, as contrasted with $79,879 for all the Pointes. and an average home sale of $342,340 in 1989 as contrasted with an average of $209,956 in all the Pointes.

Yet both the City and the Farms exceeded the Shores in their percentages of residents with four years of college. The City and Farms figure was 51 percent, as contrasted with 46 percent in the Shores and 45 percent in all the Pointes.

At a time when Michigan's unemployment rate is still among the highest in the nation, the jobless rate in the Pointes as reported in the census was 2.41 percent with the Park having the highest rate of 3.4 percent and the Shores with the lowest at only nine-tenths of 1 per-

Those statistics showing the high percentages of college graduates, the excellent residential property values and the low jobless rates in the Pointes contribute to the general public satisfaction with the quality of living in the community.

True, life is not always perfect here and most of us no doubt could find room for improvements. But with excellent municipal services, a low crime rate and the advantages of the "fine residential area" the county report describes, the popularity of life in the Pointes is understandable.

And it is good to learn that even the statistics support the local pride in the Where's the loyal opposition?

There is the loyal opposition? That's the question with less than 15 months to go before the 1992 presidential election.

The problem is two-fold. President Bush remains so popular that many observers, even including some Democrats, are already conceding him the election. But, even worse, no well-known Democrat has yet ventured into the campaign, although several are testing the political waters.

The result is that the voice of the loyal opposition is difficult to hear. Yet that lack of a single voice also deprives the American people of public discussion of the issues that ought to be taking place as we approach another general election.

True, Democratic leaders decry the president's lack of attention to domestic issues. But they can't seem to concentrate their fire on specifics so that they can offer a domestic program of their own.

Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell seems to have the right idea. That is for Congress to pass legislation to deal with the major issues despite Bush's warning he will veto most or even all of them. But in that event the American people would see and hear what the Democrats have in mind - get the opportunity to assess the GOP response.

But until the Democrats get their act together, the president can even set the agenda for the campaign which is what he and his aides sought to do last week at a campaign planning session at Camp

In a follow-up, the president indicated publicly that, barring any health problems, he was ready to run and planning to do so. And he produced an updated report indicating his health is excellent, despite his recent worldwide travels and hectic schedules.

So that seems to leave it up to the Democrats to provide a candidate who can speak for the loyal opposition and perhaps for a wider audience that feels the Bush administration is so concerned about foreign problems it ignores major problems at home.

A bit of balm for the arts

ov. John Engler finally has offered a bit of balm for the suffering patrons of the arts in Michigan.

In advance of an "arts summit" with 13 prominent arts patrons, the governor was said to have agreed to provide some state funding for the arts, especially for the major institutions such as the Detroit Institute of Arts.

That still leaves the funding of grants to individual artists and some smaller arts organizations outside the pale although the governor apparently is willing to establish a new version of the Michigan Council for the Arts, which he had abolished earlier.

The mildly optimistic report on Engler's shift in position came just after the DIA announced further cutbacks in personnel. programs and service as a result of the reductions in state appropriations for the current year.

However, an idea that could improve financing of the major cultural institutions was revived last week when The Detroit News came to the support of a regional or area-wide funding program.

Mayor Coleman Young has always objected to any sharing of city control over what he calls the jewels in Detroit's crown, but if lack of adequate state support threatened to close them, he might be forced to change his mind.

We think the suburbs also could be persuaded to support a small additional tax to benefit the cultural institutions if that method of raising funds were the last resort to prevent them from closing.

The unsuccessful 1st District GOP nomince for the state Senate last fall, Philip Tannian, advocated a regional organization to finance Detroit's cultural institutions but neither the proposal nor his candidacy won strong support at that time.

Now, however, the time for a regional approach may have come.

District court

To the Editor:

While I run the risk of appearing self-serving as I am a candidate for the Grosse Pointe Park City Council, I feel the need to urge that a balanced view of the facts be addressed as we consider the creation of a district court in the Park. Recent developments concern me as it appears that the issues have become personalized.

As vice chairman of the Park planning commission, I have to address many important disputes. The planning commission, by its very nature, plays a pivotal role in resolving disputes brought before it by the city council. I have always tried to look at the facts and to judge issues on their merit.

There is an old saying, when you can't attack the facts, attack the person." It saddens me that the district court issue has been personalized in a recent letter to the editor published Aug. 1. Rather than address the relative merits of this important issue, the letter chose to focus on selfdescribed personal divisions on the city council. This issue is not a contest of wills, but what is best for Grosse Pointe Park. I am confident that when the facts are known, the controversy will go away and the interests of Grosse Pointe Park will be best served.

More letters on page 8A

That the issue has been personalized is made all the more apparent by the simple fact that only one person was singled out for attack in the letter when it was a majority of the council that insisted that all sides be present for a balanced discussion of the issue. It is also important to remember that the city council approved the establishment of a district court in the Park 15 months ago.

Grosse Pointe Park citizens have reason to expect a higher level of performance when important issues are being discussed.

Inadequate parking

To the Editor:

Reportedly, the cause is inadequate parking space to support businesses, and the kamikaze attitude of expired meter enforcers. I find no fault with the latter. If you refuse to drop a coin in the meter, you asked for it.

Fans don't say no despite Bo espite Bo Schembechler's imperious demands, Metro Detroiters still are willing to help finance a new Tiger stadium.

That's the news from a new poll taken by the Detroit News that finds a solid majority of 56 percent saying they would vote yes on a proposal to let Wavne County finance and build the new ballpark the Tiger management seeks.

Even so, however, 62 percent of the respondents to another question said they thought the Tigers were asking too much aid from local government in building the structure.

' If Bo continues his bullying tactics, the Tigers obviously will not be able to retain the loyalty of their fans. And the public does have a real interest in the ballpark.

The point is that to justify issuing county bonds to help finance the ballpark. County Executive Edward McNamara and Mayor Coleman Young must make the case that such an investment would benefit the public. They seek to do so by citing the "economic generation" the ballpark would provide on the Woodward site they want but Schembechler opposes.

At some point, the Tigers also must themselves make clear the proportion of the total cost they will bear. Otherwise, even the long-time supporters of the Tigers may say, "Let them go."

Ironing bored

There isn't anything that is at the same time more tedious and yet more satisfying than ironing.

There's something daunting about that pile of clothes gathering cat hair on the floor that keeps me from plunging into it. But as the pile slowly - very slowly, for I am a terrible ironer with a terrible iron disappears and I look at the clean, more-or-less pressed row of shirts hanging neatly on hangers, I have a sense of pride that frightens me.

The hatred of ironing - or shall I say the putting off of ironing - has a long and colorful history in my family.

When I was little my mother used to iron all the time. With five kids, of course she ironed all the time. She had a bluegray bottle fitted with a sprinkler-like top that she'd dampen the clothes with and then iron. As kids will do, we found other, more productive ways to use that bottle - the only problem was that it didn't squirt far enough to give the squirter a good head start.

If a thorough search of your drawers and closets, your brothers' drawers and closets, your sisters' drawers and closets and the dirty clothes hamper failed to turn up the favorite shirt you couldn't leave the house without, the only place it could possibly be was in the basement - the ironing pile.

It was time then to make a decision: Change strategies and wear "this crappy old shirt because you didn't iron, mom" or, even worse, iron it yourself.

As a boy growing up in the days before it was politically correct (and necessary) for a man to do his own ironing and cooking and cleaning, and women (so we were told by previous generations) loved stuff like that, I was perfectly within my right to ask my sisters if they would do it.

Of course, as often happens in large families, the minute you ask a favor, you have to be prepared with some sort of carrot. You know, doing the dishes the next time it was her turn or promising to forget some skeleton in her closet that you were saving for a rainy day.

The bargaining never bothered me - when they offered to do it free of charge, you knew something big was coming down.

When they weren't home, there was always "Please, Mom, I can't do it as good as you do, I'll ruin it," said with just a touch of tears in the voice. That approach appealed on several levels — not only was mom happy to still be needed, and praised for one of her skills but she was practical: A poor ironing job could not only ruin the shirt, but it could ruin the iron, too. (That approach worked longer than it had any right to.)

As we got older and had part-time jobs, mom announced she would no longer be buying our clothes. It was up to us she couldn't win, she said - to decide what we wanted to wear. Her only caveat: "If you buy all cotton things, you're ironing it yourself."

Fine with me, I said as I ran off and purchased a pair of 100 percent cotton pants. My last.

Friends of mine will deny I own an iron. But I do, and I use it practically every day, because there's never enough time (and no one to bargain with) to attack the whole pile.

But on a recent rainy Sunday, my good old-fashioned guilt at watching a television movie when I really should be cleaning something or writing someone or going somewhere worked on my psyche and I set up a little station in front of the television and tilted fullsteam at my ironing.

Some items practically ironed themselves, the wrinkles disappearing with but one pass of the iron. Other items took work, and despite the most careful lining up of seams and sprinkling of fabric, more wrinkles (and tree-shaped creases in my pants) appeared than were in the garment before. And then there were the items that melted, no matter how delicately I pressed.

There's a greater truth here somewhere, I thought at the time. But I couldn't figure it

The movie ended before the ironing did. So I closed up shop. I put the neat items in the closet and the un-ironed items back in a pile on the floor, like a sourdough starter. I couldn't imagine what my life (let alone the spare room) would be like without a little pile of clothes beckoning me.

It might be nice, not having something on my conscience all the time. But I've made it this far all right. Better not chance

Two Grosse Pointe teenagers have had a successful summer, pageant-wise

Karin Mueller, daughter of Wolfgang and Sigrid Mueller of Grosse Pointe City, has been chosen to participate in the 1991 Miss Michigan Teen All American pageant. The event will take place in the ballroom of the Northfield Hilton on Saturday and Sunday, Aug. 31 and Sept. 1.

The winner of the pageant will represent Michigan at the 14th annual Miss Teen All American pageant in Miami next summer.

Mueller attends Grosse Pointe South High School; she's on the honor roll; she enjoys ballet, piano, reading, listening to the radio and taking walks.

Her sponsors include

Drummy Oldsmobile Inc., Lakeshore Optimist Club of Grosse Pointe, the Greenhouse, Demorest Enterprises International Inc., Al's Appliance, Roney & Co., Jeffrey H. Taylor, Sutton Maisone, Cavanaugh's Office Supplies, Craig Kostecke, Mary and Alan Shank, Village Shoes, Zakoor Novelty

Co. and The Merry Mouse Inc. Nicole Kim of Grosse Pointe Woods was the third runner-up in the 1991 Michigan Miss

T.E.E.N., held on July 24. Kim was named a top achiever in the scholastic competition portion of the pageant.

Auction call

Belgian consul Elizabeth A. Stevens of Grosse Pointe, has been named an honorary chairman of Family Service of Detroit and Wayne County's third annual Family Fest Auction.

The dinner and auctions raise funds to provide counseling, education and support services to disadvantaged clients at the Mack and Warren office as well as offices in Dearborn, Livonia, Trenton and Detroit.

The Family Fest Auction will be held at Roma's of Livonia on Wednesday, Nov. 20. Tickets are $50 a person.

Donations of new merchandise for the auction would be warmly welcomed. Donation and ticket inquiries may be made by calling 961-1584 during business hours.

Boo to balloons

According to Target Earth, a publication put out by the East Michigan Environmental Action Council, balloon launches ате а по-по

For many years, people have been celebrating special events by releasing large numbers of halloons.

"The effect may be lovely at the moment," says Target "but wha it goes up, do come down, and approximately D percent of the balloons released return to earth intact where they present problems for wildlife, especially marine wildlife."

Florida passed a law in 1989 making it unlawful to release large numbers of lighter-thanair balloons. Connecticut followed suit in 1990. California, New Jersey and Delaware are pondering similar prohibitions.

Writing carries with it a responsibility

It's curious, but true, that written material takes on an aura of truth and definition that is lacking in the spoken word. Gone are the ambiguities of tone and expression and gesture; all that remain are the cold words.

Small wonder that previous employers are reluctant to analyze a former employee in writing; or that lovers agonize for exactly the right words, when a sigh and a glance would suffice in person.

The actual print bestows credibility, justified or not.

Isak Dinesen writes memorably of this phenomenon in "Out of Africa":

One of the native workers on Baronesa Blixen's (Dinesen's) farm finds himself embroiled in a dispute, both legal and ethical (which are more or less the same in the native mind), and asks her to write down the circumstances for his deposition. The convolutions of his history entangle him hopelessly, forcing him to backtrack to figure it out. But eventually he gets it to his satisfaction and the words are written permanently.

"The document now became Jogona's great treasure... He made a little leather bag for it, embroidered with beads, and hung it on a strap round his neck. From time to time, mostly on Sunday mornings, he would suddenly appear in my door, lift the bag off and take out the paper to have it read to him. . . The importance of the account was not lessened but augmented with time, as if to Jogona the greatest wonder about it was that it did not change. The past, which had been so difficult to bring to memory, and that had probably seemed to be changing every time it was thought of, had here been caught, conquered and pinned down before his eyes. It had become History; with it there was now no variableness . . . "

What a responsibility it is to write.

Bob and I have dwelt in a netherworld of bad dreams since routine tests this summer showed he had prostate cancer. It has been a test of all our beliefs about life, death and the American medical system.

Fortunately, because he was having regular checkups, the tumor was discovered early and he has every chance of a total recovery. But the Big C hasn't lost any of its power to terrify.

Prostate cancer is in the news lately, as an Ann Arbor doctor has been conducting a lengthy study evaluating several screening methods. What he is quantifying was already known to many practicing urologists: The conventional fingertip exam through the rectum isn't a reliable early-detection method. Doctors like Bob's urologist, Dr. Bob DiLoreto, have been using ultrasound and blood tests for some time. Dr. D., tenacious as a bulldog, has been on Bob's case every six months for four y uspicious, but unable to be priain. Till now

As many as 75 percent of all men over 60 have prostate cancer, usually very slow-growing, usually without any symptoms. Shakes you in your shoes, doesn't it? But, guys, the doctor won't find it if you don't go for a test.

Kabba update: Oftimes a huge-scale tragedy simply overwhelms and numbs us with its magnitude. It is easier to relate to one starving child than to read statistics about the starvation of millions.

So it is with Kabba Jalloh. Readers have taken this young stranger to their hearts.

When last we heard of Kabba, the African agriculture student was in intensive care, suffering from an obscure autoimmune disease. Since I wrote about him in May, his friend, Ken Van Dellen, has driven out to Iowa to visit him.

Like a sad "good-news, badnews," Kabba's life has changed, but not necessarily improved. Van Dellen reports that Kabba is off the respirator and out of intensive care, but, in his weakened state, has been invaded by tuberculosis. Now he's in isolation. His plight continues to touch friends who may not even know him. A kind-hearted reader told me a few weeks ago that his story had "brought her to her knees."

Kabba has not given up. This young man, bowed by the trials of Job, has kept up his spirits. I do not know Kabba well enough to say whether his steadfastness is to be credited to his Islamic background, with its resignation to kismet, or to the trust in deliverance of the Christianity he has adopted, or to the resurgent optimism of a naturally sunny nature.

But I'm pretty sure he'd like to receive cards. Send them to Kabba Jalloh, c/o Dordt College, Sioux Center, Iowa 51250.

Off-the-Grid update: Time has shown, since the big July storm, that Michiganders have some gripes. Charges are flying that Edison didn't trim trees, didn't clean up fast enough, didn't warn people of the dan-

It all comes down to three things, in my view: The storm is a powerful argument for buried power lines; the United States needs a better energy policy; and you and I have to do a better job of conserving.

Off-the-Grid Day is Aug. 10 - that's next week. It's a day when you can turn off the juice and join people all across the country in making your protest. If enough people really do it, it'll make a statement.

Even if a lot of people don't switch off the power, you can still enjoy your sense of autonomy. And remember what Sally Hanley wrote a couple of weeks ago about the pleasures of making love by candlelight. Let's bring some romance back into our lives!

One way is to unplug the air conditioner and get a ceiling fan. Some models only use as much juice as a 15-watt lightbulb. They bring the temperature down 10-12 degrees, which is all the cooling you should ask of AC anyway.

And, don't look now, but I think that's Humphrey Bogart over there in the corner.

Idealism/frustration

It started out as a reunion over lunch. My friend's daughter was home for the summer and I hadn't seen her in a long time. She is an extremely bright young woman and I always enjoy her company and hearing about what she is doing.

We exchanged pleasantries and minor gossip and the conversation quickly turned. This lady doesn't waste her time on small talk. I asked her how her job was going and her eyes flashed with anger as she began to tell me about her experiences as a third grade teacher in Baltimore County, Md. She was quick to say that in her opinion the conditions she was about to describe permeated the educational system across the United States.

The children in my young friend's school are equally divided racially. When she examined the home environments of the students, no differentiation was evident based on the race of the parents.

The word apathy was used over and over in her efforts to enlighten me about the appalling conditions in the school system. Fifty percent of the children become dropouts. Only eight of the 26 students in her classroom came from two-parent homes. The closed minds and blank faces presented a challenge that she was hopeful of meeting. Now she is not only frustrated, but deeply concerned for the future of this country's educational system.

She feels there is a real prejudice against teachers and that parents perceive them as babysitters who bake cookies with their children and put up pretty bulletin boards.

Why, I asked, if her life is so full of frustration, does she continue to teach? She quickly replied that she wants this country to remain sound. She is swimming against the current in an attempt to mold young minds. She says she is concerned for her own future as well as the outlook for subsequent generations. She wants to live in a world where people can cope and where she feels confident passing the torch through the strength and depth of our educational system.

My young friend will not remain in the teaching profession much longer. She has been well educated, graduating at the top of her class from a major university. She also has a master's degree in education and plans to earn a master's in business. A young Republican, she was angered recently by a speech our president made, blaming teachers for poor education. Where, she asked, is he getting his information?

She is in town for the summer and would like some substantive suggestions concerning ways she might attack these problems. She isn't interested in hearing about birth control. She wants your thoughts if you have a meaningful, pragmatic approach to these problems. If you think you have something to say to her, you might drop her a line with your name and phone number to The Loft, Grosse Pointe News, 96 Kercheval, Grosse Pointe Farms, 48236.

When I questioned her about her ideas for possible solutions to the problems, she didn't balk. She cited studies that have been made in South American countries and the subsequent programs now being offered in that region. They include pre- and post-natal counseling, quality day care, and courses on parenting for the first five years of a child's life. Parents are given tapes on developing language skills. How can a child learn if he or she can't speak?

My young friend told me of a visit to her school by some enlisted men who had served in Desert Storm. The occasion was Flag Day and the site was only a short distance from where our national anthem had been composed. My friend had an enormous lump in her throat and was profoundly moved by the ceremony. Her students not only did not know the words to the "Star Spangled Banner," but groaned at the whole idea of having to stand and sing.

This teacher doesn't feel that the children are incapable of learning. She feels there is neither motivation nor stimulation. This generation has been raised by television with little exposure to things beyond the seductive screen. She wishes she had the money to buy a cable network. She is heavily involved with the computer curriculum for the school system and knows that it is possible to have interacting programming. It is entirely feasible to create a system wherein the individual student can interact with the cable system.

If you want to get her back up, just suggest that the hot shots on Wall Street work under more stress than the average inner-city teacher. She would challenge anyone on the comparative degree of job difficulty.

low our merchants to survive, thrive and contribute to the tax base.

Many analogies come to mind, and perhaps the most appropriate is a comparison to a cancer.

But first, let me back up a bit. We are blessed with wall-to-wall commercial properties along Mack Avenue in the Woods. Almost all struggle to survive because of insufficient parking space. We need their services and products to keep our community vibrant.

Now, back to the cancer thing. What if we physically removed 5 or 10 percent of these long vacant buildings and replaced them with landscaped parking areas? Perhaps the city, or the Mack Avenue Business Association could finance this corrective surgery. Parking fees (either metered or monthly) would eventually offset the cost of demolition and clearing and paving these lots. In any case, it would be a painful and expensive proposition. But an absolutely necessary one, if the whole is to survive.

Another, but much, much less attractive, solution would be to reclaim those beautiful center islands that face vacant store after vacant store with a parking island a la Woodward Avenue in Ferndale. (I told you that I really didn't like this option.)

Honestly, folks, don't you agree that sacrificing a few vacant store fronts would allow the remaining businesses to thrive? It would be income for the Woods' tax department, better traffic control for the public safety department, profit for business owners, and convenience for every one of us who appreciate and deserve a competitive, vigorous and thriving selection of quality shops along Mack Avenue in the Woods.

One caveat please. Let's not repeat what happened at Mack and Anita. At that location, a beautiful, historic relic of a bank building was demolished years ago and replaced with a fenced-in field of weeds. Lord, what a trashing of valuable space. And they told the ice cream folks that there is no land available for parking.

Tax cut?

To the Editor:

Here we go again, another property tax plan. One that I think is nothing but propaganda and lacks true heart in giving homeowners any serious tax relief.

The Democrat-controlled state House of Representatives approved what they called a property tax cut plan, which I view as an actual tax shift plan that will not help, and is only to make the Democrats look like they really care about lowering taxes.

Tracey Yokich, who has only one bill passed so far (which encourages senior citizens to work for free — anti-labor), believes it will provide tax relief. I don't.

The numbers I have seen in several newspapers show the middle-class homeowner saving a couple hundred dollars. However, consider two things: 1. increasing assessment values and 2. eliminating industrial tax abatements.

Many candidates (including Yokich) last year promised to help homeowners by reducing and/or controlling the rate of rising assessment values. This proposed tax shift plan doesn't do anything in reducing/controlling assessment values. Therefore, the possible savings will probably be eaten away by this year's assessment increases

The tax shift will eliminate industrial tax abatements, which encourage and attract industrial business. The effect I see is that industrial firms will send their business elsewhere, and further develop service jobs over industrial iobs. When the number of industrial jobs falls in the state, the tax burden will be thrown right back to the homeowners, and maybe even when industries suffer during times of recession.

I would like to make two more comments. 1. This plan doesn't improve education or increase educational funds.

So, Tracey Yokich, stop messing with educational funds to make you look good. It's not a tax cut — but a tax shift. The sales tax proposal three years ago made more sense.

2. In Yokich's newsletter (July 1991), she states that part of paying for this plan is covered by our Republican Gov. John Engler's proposed termination of some state contracts. So, in effect, Yokich and the Democrats are using Engler's ideas to reduce state spending to cover their tax shift plan — so where are the budget savings?

Wake up, Yokich and other Democrats; seriously help homeowners by reducing property taxes directly, not by shifts, controlling assessment rate increases, and helping our industries, not hurting them.

As another paper stated: "Don't give us promises, but action."

I think the people of St. Clair Shores, East Detroit, and Lake Township made a mistake in electing Yokich. She has done very little, if anything, for the benefit of District 74.

Disgusted

To the Editor:

I was disgusted to read the self-serving letter by Vern Ausherman, and the Grosse Pointe News' slanted editorial regarding the recent Park council meeting.

Councilman Dan Clark motioned to table the discussion of Ed Brady's district court report because Judge Kirsten Frank was not present to offer an opposing viewpoint.

The motion temporarily postponed Mr. Brady's report, and ensured a balanced presentation in the future by making sure the pro and con positions will be stated at the same meet-

Mayor Heenan's invitation to Mr. Brady to speak at a time when Judge Frank was unavailable says a lot about the mayor's "free flow of information." Apparently, it must be when he wants it, without opposition.

The state mandates that cities have district courts. The Grosse Pointes (and East Detroit) still have municipal courts. Therefore, the Grosse Pointe court system must change.

Putting this issue to a vote of the people will only postpone the inevitable. and waste money. A pointless delay and extra costs will not change the fact that the state mandates a district court. We have elected this council to act in our stead.

With a balanced presentation of the facts, I have no doubt that it will resolve questions of site and cost, etc. The question of whether change will come, though, is moot.

Vern Ausherman is running for re-election. Printing his letter in your paper didn't just give him free political advertising. It gave him a self-righteous soapbox of insinuations on which to stand, with one arm around the mayor and the other pointed at Clark, one of the sour members of the council who dared to disagree with the mayor.

None of the other dissenting members of the council were named in Ausherman's letter, yet Dan Clark's name came up a dozen times. Do you think we got the message?

Councilman Dan Clark is a man of intelligence and good character. He has offered his time and energy to serve our community on an unpaid seat on the council.

Since his election, Councilman Clark's concern for our neighborhood has resulted in tangible improvements. He is closely involved with the TIFA committee, which has financed home and street improvements. Crime has dropped. Many local businesses have improved their properties, I believe due to the optimistic climate fostered by the support of people like Councilman Clark.

I certainly will not let the political cronyism, evident in Ausherman's letter, muddy the facts. Councilman Clark is an outstanding example of what political service is all about. He has my confidence, and my

Jean R. Murawski Grosse Pointe Park Politics

To the Editor:

I feel compelled to respond to Park Councilman Vern Aushermans' Aug. 1 letter to the Grosse Pointe

In the letter, Mr. Ausherman lightly touched upon the subject of the establishment of a district court in Grosse Pointe Park, which he apparently supports.

The rest of the rather lengthy letter was a selfserving analysis of the state of politics on the Grosse Pointe Park City Council. The inspiration for the councilman's letter, at least on the surface, was a tabling action at the July 22 council meeting. After reading Ausherman's letter, I found it difficult to believe we were both at that meeting.

At the risk of boring those who are above politics and don't take legislative political squabbles as seriously as some elected officials, I will attempt to separate the chicken feathers from the chicken salad found in Mr. Ausherman's letter.

To begin with, Mayor Heenan, without advising most of the members of the council, invited Mr. Ed Brady to the July 22 meeting. According to the published agenda placed before the council, Mr. Brady was to make a presentation on the subject of the district court system.

Correctly adhering to council rules, Councilman Daniel Clark made a motion to table Mr. Brady's presentation. I seconded Mr. Clark's motion.

After a most unfortunate temper tantrum by the mayor of Grosse Pointe Park, the council voted on Mr. Clark's motion, and it was passed.

Council members voting in favor of the motion to table did so for a variety of reasons. The bottom line, though, was that all were adult and professional enough to indicate they simply were not prepared for Mr. Brady's presenta-

Mayor Heenan's Coleman Young-like reaction to the council's refusal to bend to his will leaves me personally disappointed in an old friend.

In regard to the council's tabling action on July 22, it should be noted that like all approved motions to table, the postponed subject can be placed on the agenda of subsequent council meetings. To characterize the tabling of the Brady presentation as "appalling" and "shutting down the free flow of information," as Mr. Heenan and Mr. Ausherman have, is pure contrived political pap. And the protracted, self-righteous outrage portended by Mr. Ausherman serves no purpose and quite frankly concerns me.

And that, as Paul Harvey would say, is the rest of the story, and hopefully the end of the story. It is now time for the Park council to move on and do what it does best; serve in the interest of one great

James E. Robson Jr. Councilman Grosse Pointe Park

To the Editor:

I have been quoted in the last two editions of the Grosse Pointe News as criticizing four members of the Grosse Pointe Park Council for their efforts to stop debate and public consideration of whether Grosse Pointe Park should be the only city in the Pointes to have a district court.

For the benefit of those not privy to the private deliberations of the four councilmen, I would like to explain what is at stake for the residents of Grosse Pointe Park and why I am opposed to the current course taken by the council.

The Park council is well on its way to saddling Grosse Pointe Park with a new state district court. The council asked the state legislature over a year ago to enact legislation to enable the Park to do away with its municipal court and adopt a district court. This may come as a surprise to most Park residents since the council has taken this action with a minimum of public debate.

The actions of the four councilmen at a recent council meeting to stop the presentation of views on this issue by a speaker invited by Mayor Palmer Heenan confirm that a majority of the council does not want any information on this issue to reach the residents of the Park.

If the four councilmen are so confident that a district court is good for Grosse Pointe Park, why are they so fearful of putting the facts before the public?

As a candidate for the Park council, and as a resident of the Park, I am dismayed to see that city government can be manipulated and maneuvered behind closed doors, particularly when much is at stake.

A district court would add a whole new level of bureaucracy to Grosse Pointe Park. It would cost the residents of Grosse Pointe Park several hundred thousand dollars a year in added administrative expenses and other costs, totally eliminating the successful cost-cutting in city administration led by the mayor in recent

These costs could only be financed by a tax increase, a cut in city services, or both. I believe that Park residents are entitled to hear and to consider in a public referendum whether a district court is worth it.

SOC was closed for one day only, Aug. 1, when movers worked late into the afternoon transporting equipment from SOC's long-time residence at Ferry School to Barnes.

Eddington commended the competency of the staff, which was already hard at work amid still-unopened boxes, when he spoke at Food and Friendship's get-acquainted with Barnes pizza party. He spoke highly of the many hours of work which SOC's volunteers have contributed in a variety of ways to schoolchildren, older adults, and to community projects.

Eddington also mentioned the board of trustees' commitment to fulfilling the objective of the organization. Services for Older Citizens is dedicated to helping older citizens of the five Grosse Pointes and Harper Woods maintain their lives in independence and in dignity.

Marge Nixon, coordinator of volunteers of the Grosse Pointe Public Schools, posted a message signed by David King, principal of Ferry School. In a verse format he wished the seniors, "Good luck ... not Goodbye" and told them, "You've helped us learn at Ferry. Your time with us was golden.'

Nixon also delivered a book made by Ferry students in which all the grades graphically portrayed their high esteem for their departing SOC friends.

Eating alone has no place on a healthful menu

In a recent poll of 1,000 households in the Los Angeles area, it was found that one in three families do not regularly sit down and eat together.

Those who remember the time when dinner was a focal point of the day will be disturbed by these figures. There were strict rules about the family being present and on time for the evening meal. Often preparations began early in the day. Favorite dishes, some taking hours to cook, were brought to the table steaming hot. Dinner was a symbol of family un-

But children are not the only ones who often eat alone. Many senior citizens also end up by themselves at mealtime. And the isolation can prove damaging to the quality of their diets.

Sometimes there are other factors that prevent older people from taking in adequate amounts of nutrients, whether they live alone or not. A special report in the Tufts University Diet and Nutrition Letter points out some of them.

Sponsored by the Detroit Science Center, would-be astronomers, both young and old, will have a hands-on opportunity to view stars, planets, constellations and other astronomical wonders through powerful telescopic equipment.

A variety of 6-inch and 8inch telescopes will be available, with explanations and technical assistance provided by astronomers Norbert Vance and Karl Stumf, and Wayne State University's Society of Physics students.

Vance is an instructor and technician at the Eastern Michigan University Observatory. Stumf, a local astronomy fanatic and frequent speaker at the Detroit Science Center, will bring along his 14-inch telescope for optimal viewing.

"Stargazing in the Park" is a free Detroit Science Center event for members and nonmembers. Visitors must pay the regular $2 admission to Metro Beach Metropark.

Throughout the year, the Detroit Science Center, a private, non-profit Michigan Corp., serves the community by providing unique science education opportunities for families and school groups.

Located at the corner of John R and Warren Avenue, the Detroit Science Center is open Tuesday-Friday from 9 a.m.- 2 p.m. and Saturday and Sunday from noon to 5 p.m.

BirthCare at Bon Secours.

It's a child's game, but it's also good advice.

Bon Secours was the first hospital in the Detroit area to offer single-room maternity care. This alternative to traditional childbirth allows the mother-to-be to stay in the same warm, comfortable room throughout her delivery. We call it BirthCare, and when we first introduced it, other hospitals were still wheeling their laboring mothers from one room to another.

We thought it was a good idea to design a delivery around the mother, not a delivery around the hospital. That's why BirthCare has become so popular. And that's why a lot of women have chosen Bon Secours as their hospital. Maybe you should, too

For more information about BirthCare, a tour of the unit, or referrals to qualified obstetricians who can answer questions about your pregnancy, call 779-7911.

For peace, quiet and history, check out Elmwood Cemetery

By Ronald J. Bernas Staff Writer

If you're looking for something different to fill the summer days and want to get in touch with Michigan's and Grosse Pointe's past, a trip to Elmwood Cemetery may be just the ticket.

Established in 1846, the 86acre cemetery located on Mc-Dougal and Lafayette is the oldest operating non-religious cemetery in Detroit. There are more than 50,000 people buried there, with about 5,000 plots still available for sale and 9,000 purchased, waiting for burial.

As you get closer to its center, you have a hard time believing you're surrounded by busy expressways.

You won't find it hard to believe that you're surrounded by history, though.

The names on the markers some elaborate monoliths, others beautiful in their simplicity - are names we use every day in Detroit and Grosse Pointe.

Chenes, Brushes, Lodges, Woodbridges, Buhls, Goebels and Strohs - the names of streets, parks, expressways, buildings and beers.

The cemetery, under the direction of its board of trustees and the city of Detroit, has created a series of walking tours bringing its history to life.

Although visitors can take the tour by themselves, it

When the war ended, Owens decided to take advantage of the GI bill which paid for college. He enrolled at Michigan State University in 1946, studying history and political science. He earned a teaching certificate.

Owens met his future wife, Patricia Lawrie of East Lansing, who was majoring in language and later earned a master's in education. They were married in 1949; he graduated in 1950.

The couple moved to Grosse Pointe Woods and Owens accepted a job as yellow pages service representative for Michigan Bell. Five years later he went to work for the Detroit Free Press as an advertising executive, where he remained until he retired in 1981.

There were three dailies then The Detroit Times, Detroit News and Detroit Free Pres and competition for advertising dollars was intense. "At one time. Detroit was an evening newspaper town," he said. "Now evening newspapers are dead."

He became involved with organizing a 50th class reunion of Grosse Pointe High, and in December 1988 about 100 people, of whom 70 were classmates, got together. They combined their class of June 1938 with the January graduating class which totaled 210 people. Many of them were killed in the war.

He and his wife plan to remain in Grosse Pointe, his home since 1934. He remembers when his parents and two brothers moved to a house on Oxford Road. "One of the reasons they brought me here was because they wanted a historical department." said Miller, who used to work at Forest Lawn. "They wanted someone who knew the cemetery business and had a background in history.'

Miller has compiled a walking tour that includes the gravesites of seven former governors who are buried in the cemetery, a black history tour, a tour of former U.S. senators and, most recently, a tour of Civil War generals.

Each tour, which is free, includes a book which has a brief history of the gravesites to be visited and a map pinpointing their location.

Several of the generals on the Civil War tour have ancestors whose names are still prominent in the Pointes. There's Russell A. Alger, Henry Boynton Clitz, Gustaves Adolphus DeRussy and Henry Martin Duffield, among others. "This place is just crammed full of history," Miller said.

The cemetery itself is as historically important as the people buried there. A small pond is all that remains of Parents Creek, renamed Bloody Run Creek after the Indian massacre of 1763. And it's probably the only place within Detroit's city limits you can see a blue

umina could be successor to all-American Impala

A couple of years ago I got fired from a newspaper (which shall remain nameless, but apparently had close business office ties to General Motors) for writing a column that nominated the Toyota Camry to replace the recently retired Chevrolet Impala as the new all-American, apple-pie, see-the-USA car.

The Camry seemed to have all the attributes that made the Impala an American classic pleasant, non-controversial styling, lots of room, a good bal-

body and chassis are

ment; and its use of box-

ance of economy and performance and solid value at a reasonable price.

I was wrong, because the Camry was outsold among family cars by Ford Taurus (an excellent car which I had ruled out because it looked so, well, foreign). In fact, the Honda Accord outsold both Taurus and Camry. And before you call me traitor, remember that the majority of Accords and Camrys are built in the United States.

But you're right, they are not really American, Detroit-style American. So I took my reprimand in good spirit and began pondering the situation. It did seem like the successor to the role of the Impala should probably be a Chevrolet. I, and many of my colleagues, came to Detroit from "Chivvy country," roughly defined as that part of the Midwest and South outside the big cities. My grandfather drove a Chevy, which he called a "Chivvy." (He never called his car a "car," he called it 'my machine."

The Caprice Classic, which shared body and platform with the Impala, had become something of a luxury car, as had the Impala, which doesn't seem in the same spirit as the early Impalas.

So I was pleased to drive a Chevrolet Lumina Euro sedan and Lumina Z34 coupe. The New to the Chevy Lumina line for '91 is performance-oriented Z34 coupe.

Lumina may indeed be the successor to the Impala, as it has many of that car's characteristics. (Don't be fooled by the designation "Euro." In Detroit, Euro usually means the car's trim is not bright metal. The pean, it is a very American it designed the Lumina, as the Taurus has moved into No. 1 spot in sales among Detroit makers (Honda Accord is still the leader) and it has some nice touches, although it is much more conservative in its styling than the Taurus.

Lumina Euro is not very Euro-

> The performance-oriented Z34 coupe is new to the Lumina lineup this year. It's Chevrolet's version of the GM10 coupe and, as such, takes the spot formerly filled by the Monte Carlo. It shares platform and Twin Dual Cam V-6 engine with the Pontiac Grand Prix GTP and the Olds Cutlass Supreme.

Chevrolet very much had the

Ford Taurus on its mind when

The new 3.4-liter 24-valve V-6 in the Z34 has an iron block and aluminum heads, puts out 210 horsepower and supplies power to the front wheels through a five-speed Getrag transmission which was beefed up to work specifically with this engine. The test car had an optional four-speed automatic, which was smooth and seemed well-suited to this torquey engine.

The Lumina Z34 is not as flashy as the Grand Prix GTP, but styling makes it clear that this car is something special. Special front and rear fascia, and extended rear spoiler, hood louvres, ground effects and a special graphics package distinguish the Z34 from common Luminas (Luminae?).

The Lumina Euro four-door sedan is a very nice package, a sensible blend of family sedan with some sporty touches, including a fuel-injected 3.1-liter V-6 which is widely used in GM cars and from which the multi-valve 2.4-liter Twin Dual Cam was derived. Three-speed automatic transmission is standard on all Luminas except the Z34, which offers four-speed automatic with overdrive as an option.

All Luminas have as standard equipment four-wheel power disc brakes, rack-and-pinion steering, and AM/FM stereo with digital clock.

Euro models have special trim, a sport suspension package and air conditioning as standard equipment.

Base prices start at $12,670 for the Lumina four, $14,795 for the Euro V-6 and $17,275 for the Z34 coupe.

What? You think Taurus deserves the title of all-American car by reason of its styling leadership and its solid sales? Well, the Impala was always good-looking and usually conservative (dull, some said) in its styling. It was never a styling leader and many of the cars whose styling Ford led with its "jellybean" shape are European and Japanese. Chevrolet never paid much attention to Europe, except to black out its trim, and joined forces with Japan. What about Honda Accord? Come on, I don't want to get fired again.

Sales of Honda Accords and Acura Legends were up the first six months of 1991. but the company's overall first-half total was off from 1990 (down to 399,120 from 434,257). Honda's Civic and Prelude nameplates sagged, as did Acura Integra sales.

Honda of America Manufacturing is adding Accord production to the Civic operation at its East Liberty, Ohio, plant. Previously, Accords were assembled only at HAM's Marysville plant.

Meanwhile, Honda has signed an agreement for the distribution of its automobiles in Czechoslovakia. The agreement with Prague-based FINTRACO anticipates sales of 200 units through the end of this year. Sales of 1,000 units annually are forecast for 1992 and beyond. Hondas already are being sold in Hungary, Poland, the Soviet Union and Yugoslavia.

New student enrollment at North High

Students who expect to enroll at Grosse Pointe North High School for the first time may do so Monday, Aug. 12, or Monday, Aug. 19.

This includes young people transferring from parochial or private schools or those who have recently moved into the Grosse Pointe School District.

Call the office of the assistant principal, Thomas Teetaert, at 343-2205 to schedule an appointment.

Those enrolling are requested to bring a birth certificate and a copy of their previous school record, if one is available. If not, a copy of their latest report card would be helpful in making the appropriate course selections.

South begins new student enrollment

A special eight-day summer enrollment period has been established for students who are new to the Grosse Pointe South High School attendance area, said Russell P. Luttinen, assistant principal-student services.

A counselor will be on duty at South Aug. 12-15 and Aug. 19-22 for the purpose to assist new students with the selection of their courses for the 1991-92 school year.

Enrollment hours will be from 8 a.m. to noon and from 1 to 4 p.m. on each of the eight days with the exception of Thursday, Aug. 22, when enrollments will end at 10 a.m.

"We have spread the eight enrollment days over a twoweek period to try to accommodate parents of new students who might be on vacation one of the two weeks," Luttinen said.

High school students who are new to the Grosse Pointe South High School attendance area should call Nancy Nordstrom at 343-2151 to schedule an enrollment conference.

Students and/or parents should bring a transcript of grades from the school attended previously, or the last report card if it is not possible to get a transcript in time. Health records are also needed at the time of enrollment.

Wilcox receives Adams award

Scott Wilcox was presented the first Fred W. Adams award during the Parcells Honors Program in June by Mary Grace Adams.

The award, in memory of Grosse Pointe board of education trustee Fred W. Adams, will be presented to the 8th grader who has best exemplified the renaissance spirit, leadership and humanitarian values Adams modeled in his lifetime of service to education.

During his 8th grade year, Wilcox was an honor student, a member of a school district committee developing materials for the revised middle school advisory program, participated as a presenter in a staff workshop for that program and contributed to the school newspaper. In addition, he recently earned his Eagle Scout rank.

A proposed gravity-based sloping sewer system in Grosse Pointe Woods would be favored by the Milk River Inter-County Drain Board if engineers say it won't cause flooded basements. the board decided at its July 23 meeting in the Woods community center.

The board says it needs to route sanitary sewage from Harper Woods away from the Milk River Pumping Station on Marter Road, where it is currently sent, in order to clean up the Milk River channel that extends from the pumping station to Lake St. Clair.

The sewage can be re-routed three ways:

1. Existing, underground sewer pipe can be tilted so that gravity takes the sewage from Harper Woods, through Grosse Pointe Woods, to a main sewer line that feeds into the Detroit Wastewater Treatment Plant.

2. An underground pumping station could be installed on residential property in the vicinity of Mack, Manchester and Allard roads in Grosse Pointe Woods. The station would pump Harper Woods' sanitary sewage through existing sewer pipes to the main line, which would carry the waste to the Detroit treatment plant.

3. Instead of putting it on residential property, the pumping station could be installed on commercial or municipal property in the vicinity of Mack, Allard, Manchester and Cook roads.

The drain board has drafted the following policy, according James Murray, Wayne County public works director and board secretary: it's first choice would be to install a gravity flow system: however, if the board's engineers say a gravity system wouldn't work or would cause basements to flood, then the board would try to put an underground pumping station on commercial property. The board would only endorse putting a pumping station on residential property as a last resort, Murray said.

The board's engineers had been considering putting a pumping station on residential property that was for sale on Allard Road, or on a homesite on Manchester Road. Other sites they were considering included Ghesquiere Park, Woods city hall property, commercial lots along Mack and Monteith School property.

Murray's assistant, Jeanna Paluzzi, told residents on July 15 that the board's engineers had narrowed the focus of their study to three choices: constructing a gravity flow system. or putting a pumping station on either Monteith School property or on an easement behind recommendation will be, Murthe BP Gas Station on Mack.

A member of the drain board's staff and the board's engineers will meet with concerned residents at 7 p.m. on Aug. 12 at the Grosse Pointe Woods Community Center. Murray said that the pros and cons of each alternative will be discussed. By then, the staff and engineers will know which alternative they will recommend to the drain board and will tell residents what that uck, good police work lead to arrest in bus shooting incident in Shores istant Editor A little luck followed by ome good police work by a hores officer resulted in a Varren man being charged vith felonious assault for shootng at a vehicle on Lakeshore une 28.

Armand David Saroli, 18, of Warren, was arraigned July 24 n charges of assault with inent to commit murder and commission of a crime with a rearm.

Farms Municipal Judge Matthew Rumora, who is filling in at the Shores court until a judge can be appointed to fill the vacancy, set bond at $100,000 cash or surety. Saroli was bound over to Wayne County Circuit Court following his preliminary exam Aug. 1.

On June 28 at 11:30 p.m., an East Detroit man was driving his mobile home - a converted 1972 Dodge school bus - east on Jefferson at Fisher Road when he engaged in a verbal exchange with four youths in a Mustang convertible. According to police reports, one of the youths allegedly made a hand gesture at the East Detroit man, who responded verbally.

The exchange continued eastbound on Lakeshore. While within the Shores village limits, Saroli, the front seat passenger in the Mustang, allegedly pulled out a dark-colored semiautomatic handgun and waved it at the East Detroit

The Mustang then pulled in behind the bus and Saroli allegedly fired four or five shots into the rear of the bus. The Mustang then turned off on a side street, and neither the East Detroit man nor his passengers -11 adults and eight children got a license plate number.

The East Detroit man later drove the bus to the Shores police station, where two bullets were dug out the sheet metal in the rear of the bus and one slug was found lying on the Shores police Sgt. Daniel Fronczak said that with so many people in the bus, it was amazing no one was struck by a bullet.

A lucky break came in the case when a relative of some of the passengers on the bus, who works at a fast-food restaurant in Warren, overheard some customers bragging about shooting at a bus.

One of the customers was trying to get her to go out with him, so he gave her his beeper number, Fronczak said. She reported what she heard to police and gave them the customer's beeper number.

Shores public safety officer Robert Bensinger, who investigated the case, called the beeper number. When the youth returned the call, Bensinger identified himself and asked the youth what he knew about the Mustang and shots fired at the bus.

take the blame himself, gave Bensinger information that led to Saroli and the others who were in the Mustang at the

The handgun, a 9mm Sig-Sauer, was later recovered when a juvenile got into trouble with it in an unrelated incident in Macomb County.

Saroli has a history of prior convictions. In October 1990, he pleaded guilty to burglary of a pay phone and was given a $700 fine and a year's probation. In December 1990, he pleaded guilty to larceny of $100 or less and was fined $800 and jailed for seven days.

Fronczak credited Bensinger with good police work in investigating the case.

If antique dealer buys wrong, he just keeps it

Any number of things might captivate a first-time visitor crossing the threshold of Bieker and Stein Antiques on Mack in Grosse Pointe Park: It could be the mountain lion crouched on the rolltop desk at the far end of the store or the 1,800 pound, 6-foot-tall gargoyle standing guard near the door or the lifesize early 19th century wooden statue of St. Augustine and the beggar at the left.

Or the intricately carved Chinese dragon furniture. Or the linen press, a carved mahogany cabinet, made for the Fisher family. Or the Civil War harness maker's bench.

The next thing a visitor might notice is there is no musty, dusty smell that is prevalent in most antique shops.

And everything is carefully arranged to display its best angle. Different eras and cultures

A Balinese gong and an African gambling device co-exist with a Queen Anne dining room set. A bronze candelabra complements some soda fountain stools.

The owner of this world, Bill Bieker, said that after nearly three decades in the business, it's still exciting and equally important: "I get paid to do what I like to do.

It was always a toss-up, he said, from the time he was a youngster, whether he would be involved with exotic animals, antiques or the art world. So he combined the three, added a few other categories. and says: "Most of my dreams have come true.'

Antiques were a natural. He grew up with them at home and at his grandparents' house. And the natural world always held a fascination for him, he

"When I was a kid. I was always dragging home snakes and lizards," he said.

His interest led him to study at the Cranbrook Institute of Science, which helped him later when he raised exotic animals, including birds, reptiles, insects and various rare dogs, like the Chinese crested dogs he acquired from the estate of Gypsy Rose Lee, Peruvian Inca orchid dogs or the Brussels griffin.

Bieker moved to San Francisco after he graduated from Farmington High School in 1960 and opened his first store, the Palace Museum, on Market Street. He sold museum art, fossils, feathers, shells and minerals.

In the back of the store, he opened Wizard's Emerald City, a work-studio where he assembled large pieces, like a shell and feather mirror he did for a theatrical show. Bieker's training with the Franklin Village Players helped him in San Francisco, where he designed shows and did stage makeup.

He closed the Palace Museum in 1965 and opened Villa Iris Imports in Chinatown. The store specialized in Italian majolica, jade and Venetian glass.

He continued to operate the store when he moved back to Michigan in 1980, and finally sold it in 1990. "It was wearing me out, going back and forth," he said.

While he was in California, he studied at the San Francisco College of Arts and Crafts, but he said he always had a natural talent for painting and res-

The impetus to move back was his family, Bieker said, which he describes as exceptionally close. He opened Billy Magic's Antique Restoration on East Warren. "As my collection escalated, I outgrew myself," he said.

In 1985. Bieker opened Bieker and Stein at 15414 Mack. It was ideal, he said. He could live upstairs, there was plenty of parking and a restaurant on the corner that brings customers into his store.

The Stein in the corporate name is his sister Susan, whom he bought out in 1988, but who remains as accountant of the business. Another sister, Karen Laskowski, and his mother. June Bieker, also work at the Bieker's philosophy is simple: "I can't second-guess the public and I refuse to be trendy. I can only buy what I like and occasionally I make an error in judgment, but that's OK, because I can keep it.'

The store is open from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. every day except Sunday and Wednesday when it's closed. On weekends he stays open to 9 p.m.

Bieker does restoration in the back work room, including porcelain and pottery repair, stripping, refinishing, upholstery, ornate frame casting, trompe l'oeil, oil painting restoration and faux finishes.

Bieker said he does a lot of work for the Jeff Fontana studios in Royal Oak. He does restoration or faux finishes in homes, "as long as I'm allowed freedom. I won't take a job where the person tells me exactly what to do.'

Most of the pieces in the store are 100 to 200 years old, Bieker said, but he carries items from the 1920s and '30s as long as they are good quality. He is knowledgeable about all of his antiques and he can give a history of each piece.

He shops at the major auctions in San Francisco, St. Louis, Chicago, New York and Georgia and keeps up with what's on the market from trade magazines and a network of friends who call him when they see something he collects.

That's how he bought the bed he sleeps in, a Chinese dragon opium bed from the late 18th century that is carved teak wood. It took four people, he said, to lift the wooden canopy onto the posts.

To get away from it all, Bieker paints, hikes and fishes. He also has an extensive seashell collection which he keeps in a Chinese dragon cabinet.

Bieker said he'd like to open a store in Traverse City within the next five to 10 years. His brother Bob lives there. He'd also like to visit the Amazon rain forest.

Meanwhile, he said, "I'm very happy doing what I'm doing.'

He has items for sale from $20 to $30,000 and he takes Visa, Mastercard, "the whole works." The telephone number is 886-7544.

Bieker bought this Chinese dragon opium bed for his own use. It's late 18th century, carved teak wood.

Former Grosse Pointe Farms resident Clarice Dowdle, president of CWD Marketing Services Inc., won an Emmy award for creating and co-producing an Atlanta, Ga. television special, "The $25,000 Family 2 Family Challenge." The show, in its third year, has raised $75,000 for local charities including The Red Cross, the Alzheimer's Foundation, Camp Sunshine and the Task Force for the Homeless.

Blair S. Osborn of Grosse Pointe Park was appointed to first vice president of commercial finance at Comerica Inc. Osborn received a bachelor of business administration degree in 1973 and a master of business administration degree in 1980, both from the University of Michigan. He joined the company in 1978 as a commercial loan analyst and held various positions before becoming a vice president in 1986.

Krista Greiner has joined the Grosse Pointe Farms Kelly Assisted Living office as supervisor. She previously was a health care consultant recruiter for American/SCI., Inc. She attended Northwood Institute and earned a bachelor's degree in business management.

Steven Olchowski, M.D., is the new president of the Wayne County Medical Society for the 1991-92 term. As president, Olchowski will preside over the activities of the 4,000-member physician's professional association. He is a resident of Grosse Pointe Shores and has a private practice in colon, rectal and general surgery. He is on staff at Bon Secours, Cottage, St. John and Harper hospitals.

the strife in Northern Ireland. Greaves and Phillips said that in their towns, Protestants and Catholics do get along for the most part.

"We go to separate schools," says Greaves, who is Protestant, "but I have lots of Catholic friends."

"Where I live it's not so much of a big deal," says Phillips, who is Catholic, "but in Belfast, it's a lot different. You can't go out there alone at night.

It's not uncommon, they say, for the nightly news to carry a story about a bombing in Belfast or a nearby town.

One time, Greaves softly says, one of her friends was injured in a bus bombing.

"That stays with you," she says. "It's always in the back of your mind that something could happen to you. And when you're away from home, you worry about your family - that something might happen to them while you're gone."

The girls say that they met for the first time in May, at a CFPNI session.

Phillips says she heard that the girl she was going to be paired with was nice.

"Someone really told you that?" Greaves says, laughing. "Yes, and they were right," comes the reply.

"Well, I heard that she (Phillips) was tall," Greaves says, "but (at 5 feet 7 inches) she's not as tall as I thought she was.

This is their first visit to the United States. A CFPNI director told Phillips that all Irish and American kids have in common is the English lan-

"Boy, was she wrong," Phillips says.

They have malls where Phillips lives, only they're smaller. But then again, she says, Northern Ireland is a smaller country.

And they have popcorn in Northern Ireland, too. Only, over there, they put sugar on it instead of salt. Greaves found that out the hard way when she went to the movies here. Her reaction? "Yuck! It was terrible."

Phillips says her cousin participated in the CFPNI program last year, and told her it was great. Greaves heard rave reviews about the program from a friend who had participated in it. So Phillips and Greaves decided to apply.

They had to write letters saying why they wanted to participate.

"I think everyone writes the same letter," Phillips confesses. "That it's a good idea, bringing Protestants and Catholics together, and all that.'

On Sundays, the Anthonys and the girls alternate between going to a Catholic and a Protestant church.

They've also spent a week in northern Michigan, gone to BobLo Island, and spent countless hours at the Farms' Pier Park, where Greaves has been working on a suntan and Phillips has learned to swim and

The girls have also "seen just about every movie that's out right now," Anthony says.

Phillips says that "going to the cinema" is one of her favorite things to do at home. American films are popular in Northern Ireland, but the movies have usually been out in the United States for six months or coming out," she says.

Phillips is in the equivalent of 11th grade and Greaves is in the equivalent of 12th grade. They say that they're not sure what careers they want to go into, only that they want to go to university (or, as Americans would say, to college). They also say that they will keep in touch after their American holiday is over.

Anthony hopes to visit Northern Ireland this November, and meet up with the girls at a reunion CFPNI is hosting in Belfast for the Irish teens, their families and their host families.

Peggy Barrett, U.S. president of CFPNI, said that more than 3,000 American families have hosted teens from Northern Ireland since the program's inception five years ago.

"And many of the children and their families at home remain friends," Barrett said. "This program isn't just about building friendships between Catholic and Protestant children, it's about building friendships between their whole families.'

Four burglaries, two attempts in the Farms

Four burglaries and two attempts were reported in Grosse Pointe Farms last week, and police believe the incidents are related.

In the four burglaries, someone entered the homes through unlocked garage and house doors and took cash from wallets and purses located nearby, usually on kitchen counters or

Detroit Review Club will celebrate its first century

By Margle Reins Smith Feature Editor

The Detroit Review Club was founded in 1891. Benjamin Harrison was president of the United States. The Gibson Girl was the epitome of feminine

"It started as a women's literary club," said Ida Mae Massnick, past president. She has been a member since the 1950s. Best-selling authors of the 1890s included Henrik Ibsen, Oscar Wilde, Rudyard Kipling, Mark Twain and Herman Melville. Arthur Conan Doyle was writing mystery stories about a detective named Sherlock Holmes.

"A few of the women in the club thought they could also do some philanthropic projects for the poor people in Detroit," Massnick said. "So they got involved in some social reforms."

"The club was started by the wife of a lake captain," said Helen Hopping, also a past president. "She thought women should improve their minds further their educations." Hopping has been a member of the club for 57 years.

The Detroit Review Club was one of the charter members of the Federated Women's Clubs of Metropolitan Detroit (formerly known as the Detroit Federation of Women's Clubs) and is the only one of the original clubs still in the federation. In the '40s and '50s - during the heyday of women's clubs -133 clubs belonged to the federation. Today there are 36.

The Detroit Review Club will celebrate its 100th anniversary on Wednesday, Oct. 9, with a big birthday party at the Grosse Pointe Yacht Club. Invitations will not only go to the 103 current members, but to the presidents of all clubs in the federation and to many other women's organizations in the Detroit area.

Barbara Bush and Michelle Engler have been invited. Detroit Mayor Coleman Young has been asked to proclaim Oct. 9 Detroit Review Club Day. One hundred years is something to celebrate.

DRC women of the 1890s were activists for their time. They campaigned for better conditions in women's prisons. They initiated a program that provided graham crackers and milk for undernourished school children, a project which has evolved into today's free school lunch program, Massnick said.

In the '20s and '30s, the women shifted emphasis from social reform activities to fundraising projects and cultural and social pursuits. They met every month at the Women's City Club for lunch and a program.

They put together fundraisers such as fashion shows and teas to raise money for a variety of educational, cultural. civic and social projects.

In 1990, for instance, the group raised $3,200, which it donated to 12 local charities: The Detroit Science Center. The Detroit Zoo, COTS, Capuchin Community Center, Children's Hospital, Goodwill Industries, the Salvation Army. ney said. "I told him he needed to be sponsored by two current members. I never heard from him again.

"I remember the teas," Hopping said. "We always had beautiful food. The Detroit Review Club was one of the most elegant clubs in Detroit.'

Bon Secours opens gift shop at Nursing Care Center

The women of the Bon Secours Nursing Care Center Auxiliary will host a grand opening celebration on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, Aug. 7, 8 and 9, of the newly expanded Bon Secours Gift Shop-East, located in the Bon Secours Nursing Care Center, 26001 E. Jefferson, St. Clair Shores.

"Since its opening in 1985, the shop has quadrupled in sales and recently doubled in size," said gift shop buyer Jeanne Meathe of Grosse Pointe Farms. "When we opened six years ago, there were only about 10 of us, bare walls and a limited amount of funds. Now we have 140 volunteers in the auxiliary and an extremely successful shop which has raised approximately $300,000 for the Bon Secours Nursing Care Center."

In addition to the gift shop sales, the auxiliary also hosts Christmas Fair Extraordinaire every year to raise funds for the Nursing Care Center.

"The fair is a very popular event in the area," said gift shop buyer Grace Kennedy of Grosse Pointe Farms. "Last year, $60,000 was raised from the fair alone."

This year the fair will be lithographs in this area." held on Saturday and Sunday, Nov. 9 and 10, in the Nursing Care Center atrium.

"Among the unique items sold at the shop is a selection of citrus tea from our gourmet section," said Betsy Martin of Grosse Pointe Woods, newlyelected gift shop manager. "We are the only retail shop in the country that sells this special brand of tea. And we're the biggest sellers of Hibel prints and

Other items available in the shop include designer jewelry, crystal and china. Gorham. Landes and Wallace International silver, Baldwin brass, Wildwood lamps, brand name lingerie, small furniture items. Kaiser porcelain dolls, specially designed centerpieces and floral arrangements created on request, and more.

"We're also really excited about our beautiful new foyer

- located off the circle driveway at the Nursing Care Center," Meathe said. "Everything has come together very well thanks to the hard work of all the volunteers who run the shop. It's definitely a full-time job. We're running a business; a very successful business."

The grand opening will be from 10 a.m. 5 p.m. each day. Light refreshments will be served, and there will be a drawing for special discounts.

The newly expanded Bon Secours Gift Shop-East, located in the Bon Secours Nursing Care Center, 28001 E. Jefferson, St. Clair Shores, opens Wednesday, Aug. 7.

Families Anonymous offers free help

Drug abuse is a pervasive problem in today's society, disrupting the life of the drug abuser, and devastating and destroying family relationships. The daily stresses of living coupled with family pressures or problems may lead family members to drug abuse as a way of "coping." To relieve the distressing effects on the family, an exploration of the behavior patterns of all the family members is necessary.

Families Anonymous is a self-help group for families of drug abusers and people with behavioral problems. FA was founded in 1971 by a group of Los Angeles families and is based on the 12-step recovery program of Alcoholics Anonymous. When a young person is in trouble, the whole family is also in trouble and needs help. The purpose of the group is to help the family, not the drug abuser. Members include parents of chronic truants, runaways, drug users and social drop-outs of all ages.

There are groups meeting in almost every state and several other countries. At meetings, members find that they are no longer alone and can learn how families in similar situations have dealt with their problems.

Members use first names only. Meetings begin with basic FA readings, followed by discussion of a topic chosen by the leader for the evening. It is a program of a spiritual nature, but is not religious. Anyone who feels that he or she might benefit from an FA meeting is welcome. No prior arrangements are necessary.

Families Anonymous is a non-profit organization which does not solicit outside funding. There are no dues or fees. FA meets at the Grosse Pointe Memorial Church, 16 Lakeshore, Grosse Pointe Farms, on Wednesdays from 7:30 to 9 p.m. in the Youth Lounge on the third floor.

HAVE A PLEASANT TRY AT PERFECTION 2. BRIDGE BY WOODY BOYD ♠♥♦♠

Alfred Sheinwold has been for over four decades one of bridge's celebrated champions on this continent and abroad. Even at eighty, he's shoulders above most in brilliant play and his daily column has been one of the most popular features published in newspapers for more years than I can remember. Sometime back, I read one of his sage statements about a bridge player's most important qualities. It was profound and well worth repeating for my readers.

The successful bridge players most effective weapons are judgement, technique and concentration, but a lapse in concentration can dull the sharp edge of judgement or nullify flawless technique."

Mario Franco, one of Italy's great stars of yesterday tells a tragic story about one of France's world renowned experts who lost his focus and the momentous consequence he endured from such split second negligence.

It was Cannes, 1960, the European Championships last day of play. Mario was partnered with his favorite Pierre Albarran against Roger Trezel and

The play was a laydown for thirteen tricks, but the bidding deserves interpretation as it was well presented to describe each player's holding. Roger's four diamond call announced a leviathan sized heart fit and first round control. Few of the experts make cue bids above the level of three that don't show an ace or a void. Four spades by South said partner I have a superb overcall and I'm looking for more, otherwise I'd only have bid game in hearts. Five clubs by North was a second cue bid and promised a spade fit otherwise he'd have bid six hearts. Now, a grandy was on and perfectly natural. Fortunately Mario didn't hold both the missing heart cards or he might have found that lead, giving his partner a ruff at trick one.

Now, to the ending and declarers descent to Hell for that is what it was, a faux pas call of capacious proportions. After Mario's lead and the dummy came into view, Marcel Peters took only a moment, exposed his hand and armounced his line of play for the whole deck. Unfortunately he called for "a club", at trick one and the contract was set. He had intended saying "club ace" but the words didn't come out like that and when a ruling was called for, the Director determined in favor of the defense. His rational was that with three options, the cards couldn't speak for themselves and though declarer's intention was obvious, his call had to stand. This was a fine line as in a gentleman's game no claim to the contrary would have been made, but his was a championship of great proportions and there is a difference. Marcel apologized to his partner and graciously accepted the decision. The grandy would have netted them +1510. They lost the tournament by 1040 points as in those days results were determined by actual score.

Review

"It's always been a helping group. The women who started the club did it because they wanted to keep up on news and not just stay home," she said.

"Everything they do is first lass. Elegant, We're concerne about all types of charity."

The Detroit Review Club has purchased furnishings for a senior citizens' home, has taken groups of children to BobLo Island and has contributed countless volunteer hours during both wo. d wars. Massnick said that many social improvements in Detroit were brought about by the persistence of the club women - the establishment of a juvenile court system, improved streetcar service, improved sanitation in city alleys, the installation of fire escapes in public schools, better inspection procedures in local factories, and a more equitable system for establishing guardianships for minor child-

She remembers when a speaker cancelled at the last minute, just before a DRC meeting. The program chairman made a quick phone call to David DiChiera, director of Michigan Opera Theatre.

"DiChiera dropped everything and came over to speak to us," she said. "He arrived on such short notice, he was still dressed in blue jeans and a Tshirt, which is not his style."

Mullaney said she thinks the club's reputation and prestige prompted DiChiera to race to a meeting on such short notice.

ick said that in addition to furthering the philanthropic interests of its members, the club's purpose is to provide opportunities for members' continuing educational and social fulfillment.

"The Detroit Review Club was like a sorority," Massnick said, as she reminisced about the last few decades. "We all loved each other. There was no friction that I know of."

Massnick and her committee have begun working on the dozens of details that will make their 100th anniversary celebration one to remember: the birthday cakes - one for each table; entertainment by a group of youngsters called Sterling Silver; pink invitations designed by Massnick; pink carnation corsages; door prizes; vintage gowns from the Gibson Girl era which will be modeled by Bernice Daoust, Linda Mush, Lucy Simmons and Dana Warren; the wine; the publicity; table favors and decorations.

After all, 100 years is pretty special.

It's music of the people, by the people and for the people

By Ronald J. Bernas Staff Writer

For several years Grosse Pointe's Ralph Miller wanted to start a community summer band. It would put on old-fashioned, lemonade-in-the-gazebo kind of concerts you would listen to while you fanned yourself with your boater.

But today people take the fun out of updating homey ideas like that by insisting on fundraisers and boards of trustees and bylaws, and Miller just didn't feel it would work.

Then he got an idea - let an established organization handle the operational details, which would leave the running of the band to him. So he approached George Eddington, director of community education for the Grosse Pointe schools, who thought it was a great idea.

Miller's brainchild, the Grosse Pointe Community Band, is now in its fourth year and has some 60 members this season who range in age from junior high to senior citizens, equal numbers of men and women, who come together just for the joy of playing.

"I played the flute in high school and a little bit in college, but I hadn't touched it since, oh, gosh, not since 1955," said Jean Weber, an original member of the group. "I heard about the band, and I just wanted to see if I could still do

She found that yes, she could still do it.

"It's sort of like riding a bicycle," she said. "You forget the music, but you don't forget your fingering.'

You don't forget old friends. either. Two women who joined the band realized they had played together in junior high school and brought pictures to the group's next rehearsal to prove it.

The musicians pay $15 and the band is run as a community education class. In the summer, the band numbers about 60; in the winter, the number is smaller, around 45.

"I had originally thought of only forming a summer band to give college students a chance to play when they came home for the summer," Miller said. "But after the second summer there was so much interest we started up again in the spring.'

The dedication of the musicians still amazes Miller.

"They come in at all musical levels, and in five rehearsals, we do what it takes me a whole semester to do in school." he said. Miller is the band and orchestra teacher at Grosse Pointe North and South.

"They take all their music home and take it very seriously," he said. "Because those people are there to play.' Weber is one of those dedicated people.

"I wouldn't miss it for anything," she said. "I plan my other activities around my Tuesday nights, I just love it."

And then there's Larry Channell, whose 15th wedding anniversary is Tuesday, Aug. 13, the day before the band's summer concert. He'll spend most of the evening practicing with the trumpet section, not at home with his wife, Mariann.

"She's very supportive and she knows how much it means to me that I am able to play," Channel said.

A manager of systems planning at Chrysler, Channell is another member who had stopped playing his instrument - the trumpet - regularly after he graduated from high

"I love music and I play the piano and the synthesizer and have a computer that composes music," he said. "But this is a great opportunity to play in an ensemble."

Another trumpeter, Ron Jimison, a systems design engineer with Ameritech Information Systems, hates to admit that he's been playing trumpet for 30 years.

Boy. I should be better than what I am," Jimison said. He originally entered the University of Michigan with an eye toward teaching music, but when the reality of the tight job market for music teachers set in, he switched majors. But his love for music didn't

"I've always liked to play and I had just moved into the area when I heard about the band and I thought it would be a great opportunity," he said.

He'd done ensemble work before, but with a symphony repertoire, which he admits, for a trumpeter, can be, well, less than challenging.

"As a trumpeter, you can be playing a Mozart piece and count 205 measures of rest, play a half-note and then rest again," he said.

The concert band is heavy on

Miller says he's been lucky that the musicians who have signed up for the band have created a good mixture of instruments. But when there are more French horns, for instance, he'll include a piece like Brahms' "Horns A-Hunting," which features the French horn

The pieces Miller chooses are based on the talent available there are no auditions, anyone can join, regardless of their playing ability - but he always gives his musicians a challenge, and they appreciate it.

"Ralph has done an excellent job," Channell said. "He always gives us a few pieces we really have to work at, and he keeps us going. He doesn't let us get away with much.' Miller said one of the great joys of conducting the band is the looks on the members' faces when they hear the applause.

"I've been conducting for so long that I take for granted standing in front of an audience, but many of the band members are really nervous going up there," he said. "And the look on their faces when they hear the applause, or they get a standing ovation, is really something to see."

The next Grosse Pointe Community Band concert is at 7:30 p.m., Wednesday, Aug. 14, on the lawn in front of Grosse Pointe South High School. (In case of rain it will be moved to the auditorium.) It will include marches, "Horns A-Hunting," a suite of English music, and a medley of songs from "The Sound of Music.'

The concert is free. Don't forget to bring your boater.

Stratford's final productions of the season maintain the high standards set in the early stages this year.

Artistic Director David William has mined real gold in Stratford's stage adaptation of "Treasure Island."

The thrill and sense of adventure we all experienced as youngsters on first reading Robert Louis Stevenson's classic come rushing back as the familiar plot unfolds in this world premiere of Elliot Hayes' expertly crafted dramatization.

One by one, the memorable figures of Jim Hawkins, Long John Silver, Blind Pew, even Silver's parrot, Captain Flint, and all the rest materialize from the shadows of memory into vivid substance - more real and more gripping than

Meanwhile, the stagecraft and special effects almost transcend the limitations of the live stage. From the opening scene where skeleton-like ghosts of Jim's dreams give the audience a start, there's a powerful suspension of disbelief that we are at the Admiral Benbow, on the deck of the Hispaniola or on the pirates' tropical island engaged in a battle to the death over Blackbeard's fabled treasure. The techniques of stagecraft keep you breathless and on the edge of your seat to the

Especially effective are the simulated mast, yardarm and crow's nest towering above the stage. They easily establish the illusion that you are on the Hispaniola at sea. When the crew scrambles up the ratlines, sets the sail and strikes it in a storm and slides head first down the rigging with dizzying speed, you wonder how many were swept overboard.

High points of the action occur in all the key scenes that anyone who has read the story is sure to recall. Billy Bone's death following his brutal brawl with Black Dog and the pirate gang's rage over Jim's escape with the map bring the excitement to fever pitch early on as the rough furnishings of the Admiral Benbow Inn crashing off the stage piece by piece to fall at the feet of the front row audience.

And capitivated as one becomes watching Silver ingratiate himself with Squire Trelawney, it is easy to believe that his real live parrot itself is crying out "pieces of eight" right on cue.

If ever there was an example of totally successful casting on a large scale, this has to be it. Each of the 23 men and one woman on stage is right in his part and the leads bring exciting identities to the familiar figures they portray. In addition, they happily avoid stereo-

Some bring new enhancement to their roles. Rod Menzies' Captain Smollett, for example, is an inspired idealization of the stalwart English sea captain, a pillar of integrity and resolve, honorable. principled and fearless in his loyalty to his duty and his country. It is a thrill when, as the loyal group is fired on by the pirates aboard the ship, Smollett refuses patriotically to strike the Union Jack fluttering above the fort although it marks the target. You want to

On the villainous side, Edward Atienza appears early as the sinister Blind Pew, then later doubles delightfully as Benn Gunn, instrument of salvation for the beleaguered treasure hunters. Atienza's ingenuous and exuberant impersonation of the castaway is one of the show's brightest characterizations. Everyone shares his glee and fear of Silver, as he wriggles, dances and chortles while revealing the secrets that help defeat the pirates.

Most wonderful of all is the complete fulfillment of the spirit of one of the great stories of all time in a performance that is as exciting and satisfying as the origional and refreshingly free of pretentious histrionics. Its appeal is on many levels and to all ages or better - to the whole family, which is obviously what director Williams had in mind when he gambled on converting such a familiar classic to the stage.

Well, he won. There is probably no better or more spellbinding entertainment for all ages to enjoy together currently available live or otherwise. There is certainly no better attraction for introducing the young to live theater. Williams to be presented several times a week on the Festival stage through Nov. 9.

must have though of that, too.

'Knight of the Burning Pestle'

Francis Beaumont's "Knight of the Burning Pestle" is a youthful frolic with a wit and ingenuity that have brought it an enduring and well-earned popularity. Completed and first performed in London during Shakespeare's life, its burlesque of chivalry, romantic love and theatrical conventions has continued to find appreciative audiences (and performers) to this day.

But there is no question that a company as capable as Stratford's brings exceptional scope to this play. Cast largely from the young company and performed at the Tom Patt Theatre, "Knight" is a refreshing experience in which nothing can be taken seriously, except the laughter.

Beaumont's device of having the grocer, his wife and their apprentice rise from the audience to criticize and alter the course of the play creates an atmosphere of audience participation in which anything goes.

So it is no surprise when the most frivolous character in the cast, Mr. Merrythought, dances off the stage to flirt with and kiss the foot of a startled and slightly embarrassed lady in the front row. Sort of a Jacobean "Hellzapoppin."

George the grocer and Nell his wife personify a 20th century North American identity as played by Eric Donkin and Susan Wright. Stepping into the period style of the play, they carry the whole charade off grandly. Like contemporary TV addicts, they have no idea how to behave in the theater and make a perfectly hilarious nuisance of themselves. While

Brian Bedford teaches Ann Baggley in "School For Wives." the actors try to present a romantic comedy, George and Nell bribe and cajole them into interpolating scenes of knight errantry for the grocer's ap-

The action moves rapidly and preposterously through a threeagainst-one sword fight, Rafe overcoming a giant in battle, Rafe resisting an exotic seduction, a fake funeral and a satirical maypole dance while the love story continues as it can.

prentice, Rafe, to play.

And when all is done, there hardly seems anthing left to satirize, leaving only the message that love and merriment overcome all evil.

It is a highly enjoyable if mindless theater piece that rewards its audience with ample amusement. There is a special level of interest in the fact that this is a new production based on a presentation of the same play last season. This year's version is, if anything, even funnier with new creative touches from the same director (Bernard Hopkins) as last year and a largely new cast.

Overall, the main difference is that they have made the humor more contemporary. An example is the traditional song and dance finale in which the music and performers lurch from Jacobean formality to rap and soul and back again, to the genuine delight of everyone. It is very much an evening for those who need a break from taking their theater seriously.

'School for Wives'

The announcement that Brian Bedford will star in a comedy - one of Moliere's will do - is enough to draw an appreciative crowd. Stratford's newly opened "School for Wives" does just that and the crowd is amply rewarded.

This satiric comedy by the great social commentator of France in the time of the Sun King is a biting parody of the male chauvinism of its time. Bedford extracts every possible laugh from the frustration of Albert Millaire in his failure to train his young ward to be his innocent, ignorant and faithful Brittle and brilliantly witty, the play is a dated period piece reflective of the glittering intellectual and cultural decadence of its era. The performance fits this superbly. It is stylized and affected even to the patterned rhymes of the versified text and especially in the highly mannered acting.

Bedford's exquisite timing and exaggerated grimacing highlight the satire to the point of being painfully funny.

Versatile veal can be served in a number of tasty ways

Veal's versatility can't be beat. Veal can be elegant enough for the most special occasions or just right for a budget-wise weeknight meal, depending upon the cut and cooking method. Veal fits the healthful, uncomplicated way we're cooking and eating today because it is naturally lean, delicious and easy to prepare.

Veal achieved its greatest popularity in Italy, esteemed as a delicate meat since biblical times. Since the Renaissance it was valued in France, Germany, Austria, Holland and throughout Europe, where the high price of meat never dissuaded connoisseurs from enjoying it. The word veal is from the Latin "vitellus," which became in Middle English, "veel."

In the United States, veal was popular especially in the South and Midwest, but it was often overcooked. When German and Italian immigrants arrived in the late 19th and early 20th centuries, a craving for veal developed in the eastern cities, and schnitzels and veal scallopine became popular. It is a very popular entree in Italian and French restaurants where adaptation of Old World recipes has resulted in dishes like veal Parmesan and veal francese.

Veal is lean, nutritious and modern. It is considered a "nutrient dense" food. That's a term nutritionists use to describe a food that provides more of a day's requirement of essential nutrients than it contributes to a day's calorie intake.

A 3 ounce cooked and trimmed serving of veal contributes: 60 percent of the U.S. recommended daily allowance for protein, 36 percent of the daily niacin requirement, 29 percent of the daily zinc requirement and 24 percent of the daily requirement for vitamin B-12.

The same 3 ounce serving contains only 5.6 grams of fat. Not many meats, including poultry and fish, can lay claim to such a low fat content.

The cholesterol content of a 3 ounce serving of veal is 100 milligrams or one-third the daily recommended maximum of 300 milligrams. It can easily fit into a diet based on the recommendation of the American Heart Association.

Veal may be either refrigerated or frozen at home, and careful storage will ensure that the veal you purchase remains at peak quality.

Add tomatoes with liquid (breaking up tomatoes with spoon) wine, and enough water (about 3/4 cup) to cover ingredients. Stir in garlic, thyme and pepper. Cover and simmer 45 minutes. Add mushrooms and reserved onions. Continue cooking 25 minutes or until veal and vegetables are tender. Dissolve cornstarch in 1 tablespoon cold water. Stir into veal. Bring to boil. Stir until sauce is thickened and clear. Garnish with chopped parsley. Serves six.

The rest of the cast are largely foils to all this though each provides an important and distinctive personality. Ann Baggley as Agnes, the ward, is arch in her innocent capacity to confound and obstruct Albert's plans for her. And Ann Wright hits just the right blend of self interest and subservience as the maid Georgette in carrying out his orders as long as she gets her tip.

As Horace, Agnes' young lover, Colm Feore has light duty compared to his other assignments this season (Hamlet and Benedick in "Much Ado"). But for the fact that he cuts a very suitable romantic figure courting Agnes, one might regard this role as less than challenging for his talents, but it must be fun to play, just as his performance is fun to watch.

Above all, Bedford gives a masterful and exhaustive demonstration of the art of playing comedy to the fullest. Moreover, for the romantics in the crowd, the play ends with young love conquering all.

Keeping in touch

"ET phone home," but be sure not to do it from your hotel room.

The mystery of phoning long distance from your hotel room continues. Whether you are in Paris, Palestine or Paducah, such calls can, and most often do, involve huge surcharges.

Everyone who has ever placed long distance calls from an overseas hotel has a favorite horror story. I am no exception. My first long distance phoning experience was when I placed a call from a hotel room in Athens to my home at the time in Jeddah, Saudi Arabia. I had forgotten some relatively insignificant detail and decided to call and take care of it. What a surprise at checkout when I discovered my five-minute phone call was as much as my room cost.

First, foremost and always check with the front desk clerk regarding your hotel's long distance phoning policy. Understand it completely before making any calls from your room. One would think that you could avoid surcharges on the bill by dialing direct. Not so. In fact a direct call from your room should be the last resort when calling from domestic or foreign hotels because it puts billing in the hands of the hoteliers. What you want to avoid at all costs is making calls that are charged to your hotel room.

When traveling within the United States, check with the hotel and see if it has "950" service from its rooms. Dialing 950 will let you tap your long distance carrier's lines with a single access charge. You dial 950 and the carrier's code. Once you have dialed through to 950, you can keep making calls without hanging up and avoid additional access charges.

You can, of course, always go to the lobby and use a pay phone. This is perhaps the easiest, if not always the most convenient, way to approach long distance telephoning from a hotel. It has been estimated that you can save 70 to 80 percent on long distance calls by using the phone in the lobby. This will work best if you have a phone credit card or are placing a collect call. If you travel a great deal and call home frequently from within the United States, check into the possibility of a personal 800 number. You can keep the number to yourself and use it while traveling. This is often the most economical method of keeping in touch, especially if you can make your calls after 5 p.m.

Before leaving on an international trip, call your long distance carrier for dialing codes and instructions. Be certain to get as much detail as you can on how to place your calls. Since it will be next to impossible to find out how to do it once you are out of the country, it is imperative you have the information with you when you leave. Make credit-card or collect calls through your long distance carrier and you will keep your costs down. Many of the larger cities in Europe have special international phone centers which have public phones. There are telephone operators right there who can assist you in placing your call. Because of the time difference between Europe and the United States, you may find that a stop at one of these phone centers during the day will be more convenient than calling from your Calls from the United States to a foreign country are always less expensive than from the foreign country to the United States. Since the best defense is a good offense, whenever possible, plan to have your family phone you during your travels. Give them a detailed itinerary with places, dates, phone numbers and work out a preplanned call schedule. Verify the time differences between your hometown and the country you are traveling in and check rates with the long distance operator. Plan your call schedule accordingly. Be certain you are in your room at the appointed time and be prepared for the call with a list of the things you want to discuss. Taking these steps in advance of your trip will save you time and money, as well as a great deal of frustration.

Summer Music Festival ends with a symphonic boom

A traditional pops concert by the Grosse Pointe Symphony, accompanied by a fireworks display, will be the grand finale of the 34th Summer Music Festival at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial on Monday, Aug. 12.

The performance will take place on the lakeside grounds of the War Memorial at 32 Lakeshore Drive, Grosse Pointe Farms. Grounds are open at 6:30 p.m. and patrons are welcome to bring their own picnic supplies or purchase a picnic supper for $7.50 from the War Memorial. Picnic suppers must be reserved by Friday, Aug. 9.

For the first time, the Grosse Pointe War Memorial has joined with another non-profit organization, Cottage Hospital, to co-sponsor the concert.

"Cottage Hospital has long been a supporter of community programs and events, and we are very pleased to help continue the tradition of the popular Grosse Pointe Symphony concerts at the War Memorial. said Greg Vasse, executive vice president and chief executive officer of Cottage Hospital. "The program is one that we feel all ages can enjoy, offering a variety of classics from Strauss to Cole Porter in addition to a spectacular fireworks display.'

"We are very excited about

Cottage Hospital's co-sponsorship of this concert and hopeful that this relationship will grow in the years to come," said Mark Weber, president of the War Memorial. "With the help of corporate and individual sponsors we can continue to bring high quality programming to the community.'

Felix Resnick, musical director of the Grosse Pointe Symphony, begins his 33rd season with the organization. He has conducted the Detroit Symphony Orchestra on several occasions, both at the Meadow Brook Music Festival and at the Ford Auditorium. In addition, Resnick recently conducted the DSO in several special concerts at Orchestra Hall. Resnick has been recognized by the American Symphony Orchestra League for his "original and adventurous programming.'

to Mackinac—on The Great W sper Taking a journey—

Special Writer

Bayview Yacht Club's 67th annual Port Huron to Mackinac Race offered something for all. Warren Jones, owner of Grosse Pointe's Thomas Hardware, a sailing supply store. participated in his 44th race.

Jones' yacht, The Great Whisper, set sail Saturday, July 27, with a crew of 12: Todd Jones, Walter Bernard, Drew McSkimming, Peter Wenzler, Andrew Walton, Rich Hunt, John Augsperger, Greg Andrews, Billy Greenlee, David Wysocki, Jones and me. The following is an account of one crew's view of the race:

Saturday,

10:00 a.m. — Fine-tuned sailors emerge from beneath boat decks to make final preparations. Port Huron remains in a bit of a frenzy from the previous night's send-off party. The crew of The Great Whisper is busily loading food, beverages and gear onto the boat that will be home for the next three days.

10:30 - The Great Whisper is loaded and ready to depart; however, the crew is missing one key ingredient - boat owner Warren Jones.

11:00 - The lines are cast away as the boat and crew set out to sea amid the sweet sounds of bagpipes and the sight of wives and girlfriends bidding final farewells.

11:30 - Cleaving the crowded waters at the mouth of the St. Clair River, Jones wheels the vessel under the Blue Water Bridge. To the starboard beam George Gerow and Ed Palms' yacht, Fast Company out of the GPYC, provides. a friendly escort.

Noon - The engine is shut down and crew members jump into the cool waters of Lake Huron. Rags are disbursed and the crew goes to work washing the bottom of the boat. This reduces the friction between the boat's hull and the passing water in hopes of achieving more speed.

12:15 p.m. — At a crew meeting, Peter Wenzler and Todd Jones, the two primary helmsmen, divide the crew into two watches. It is determined that the first watch will consist of Wenzler, Greenlee, Andrews, Walton, Warren Jones and myself. This group will be known as Team A and will be on watch for the first four hours. Team B consisting of Todd Jones, Bernard, McSkimming, Hunt, Augspurger and Wysocki, will take the next fourhour shift and the teams will alternate each four hours.

12:40 - Jones moves the boat into position near the starting line under the power of a Medium-One headsail. Minutes before the start the boat is in good position to gain a quick jump on the competition and get into "clean air" — a clear path of wind that is not deflected or disturbed by boats above you to windward.

12:45 - The starting gun blasts and the 19 boats in our class begin the 259-nauticalmile journey to Mackinac.

4:00 p.m. — Twenty-two miles have been logged by Team A up the Michigan shore. It has been an easy watch as the boat remains on the same port track.

5:00 - The yacht Sassy, the largest boat in the fleet at 78 feet, passes us to leeward.

7:30 to 8:00 - Shrimp is served with dinner, which consists of filet mignon, potatoes, and corn bread. The crew is fed and Team A takes over the watch.

8:15 - As we pass the yacht Tar Baby, owned by a friend of Jones, our skipper emerges with a train whistle and vigorously begins blowing while advising Tar Baby's crew to turn around and go home.

9:10 - The sun has set as we near Harbor Beach. To all sailors' delight, the night sky is red, highlighting mountainous cumulus clouds over the distant shore. Wind speed is between 6 and 7 knots, boat speed of the Great Whisper is nearing 5 knots as we head in a direction varying from north to 30 degrees.

9:13 - Lights on board are starting to dim so power is switched from battery one to battery two.

9:22 - A golden orange ball erupts from the watery horizon, splitting the paths of up- and down-bound freighters. The full moon will be the fleet's only natural light until sunrise.

10:00 - Engine is started to charge batteries. 11:00 - Engine shut down.

11:40 — As the wind begins to die it is becoming increasingly difficult to keep the boat heading north. As we are now west of the rhumb line (straightest course to destination) the call is made to set the half-ounce spinnaker and head east. The spinnaker fills momentarily and then collapses.

11:52 - Spinnaker is taken down and replaced by a Light-One headsail.

Midnight - Team B takes over watch. Sunday,

4:00 a.m. - Team A awakens to find that the wind has yet to pick up and the boat has only traveled six miles since midnight. Team B goes below for a well-deserved rest.

4:15 - The early morning air starts to freshen and the boat responds by climbing from 2 knots to better than 4 knots.

6:15 - As the sun rises, the smell of bacon fills the air from below, where breakfast is being served. The Great Whisper is now on the rhumb line and the decision is made to tack to starboard and head north.

7:40 — The wind builds to 12 knots and a sail change back to the Medium-One is ordered.

8:01 - We are now side-byside with the class PHRF B boat Rapier. Jones once again reaches for his train whistle and advises the owner to vist Thomas Hardware next week and purchase some new equipment.

12:01 p.m. - Watch is returned to Team A as boat continues on starboard tack at 3.7 knots.

12:30 - Sail change back to Light-One.

2:40 — Boat tacks to port heading in a northeasterly direction back toward rhumb some crew members to become restless. Arguments and namecalling begin, mostly as entertainment for the other crew members.

report comes over the radio. The Great Whisper is mentioned in same company with two J-44s, generally much faster boats than ours. Morale remains high as Team B takes the first boat to round Cove Island light buoy in class PHRF D. Crew sets up half-ounce spinnaker for a close reach.

3:44 — Diversion, out of the Bayview Yacht Club, becomes the second boat to round the light in class PHRF D. The Great Whisper owes Diversion 9 seconds per mile or 38-1/2 minutes in corrected time.

4:20 — Spinnaker is brought. down and replaced with Light-One headsail as rain continues.

5:30 — Three-quarter-ounce spinnaker set. Boat is now doing 7 knots as the morning light reddens the sky.

6:00-6:45 - Multiple sail changes. Spinnaker peel 3:40 - The Great Whisper is (change) from 3/4 to brand new sail that had never been used before. Although new spinnaker was fast, the look of the sail made the crew skeptical and the skipper ordered another peel to the 1 1/2 ounce chute. Yacht Diversion spotted.

6:50 - Staysail set up. 10:50 - Growing concern over other competition besides Diversion. Dotsy, for one, which rounded the mark an hour and 17 minutes behind us, was the defending PHRF D boat and also took first overall last year.

11:15 - Staying as close to windward as possible, we clear the shallow waters of Duck Is-

2:15 p.m. - Boat speed is now hitting highs of 10.6 knots. 3:15 - Jones orders sail change as wind speed increases. After many arguments between crew and owner, headsail is put up and spinnaker taken down.

3:25 — Spinnaker is put back up after crew convinces owner. 5:45 — Pin in steering is on verge of coming lose. Luckily, Walton discovers problem in 6:02 - Pole releases yet another time and the force of the wind pulling the spinnaker in front of the boat causes the bow to submerge 2 feet below the suface. A wave of green water rushes back to the cockpit. The spinnaker is quickly taken down and sent below to be repacked. Billy Greenlee comes up with the idea of flying the spinnaker with the pole upside down, leaving no way for the pole to release under pressure.

6:10 - Spinnaker back up and flying.

8:26 — The Great Whisper crosses the finish line as the first-place boat in its class. A stopwatch monitors the passing minutes until Diversion finishes.

Wall murals can make a child's room unique, colorful

Staff Writer

The best rooms for children are those designed by children - or by those who are young at heart.

Although she's 52 and a grandmother, Yvonne Bright Strem has a youthful enthusiasm about her new business, Wall Murals by Yvonne, and she's creating some of the best children's rooms around.

Although she's been everything from a car salesman to an owner of a pre-school, she says she's always had the heart of an artist. She has done a lot of commissioned work - ink drawings of houses, portraits and the like - but it's only recently she's decided to give that artist's heart a workout.

"After years of being encouraged by my friends and family to utilize the talents I have, I finally decided to listen," Strem said.

She's been commissioned to create several personalized, one-of-a-kind wall murals in the Detroit and Ann Arbor areas. Strem's ideas come from the

"If there's a book they always read, and there's a character in it they like, or if there's a favorite place they always go to, those are the places I get my material from," she said.

She's also taken cues from stuffed animals, the circus and other diversions that interest children. She researches until she finds just the right species or type to suit the space.

She works closely with the parents and designs her work specifically for the home, taking into consideration the likes of the child, the style of the home and the space she has to work with.

Often, she includes other pieces of art - or photographs - in her designs as she recently did for her young grandson Rocco Winchester Nugent.

Rocco is the son of her daughter Shemane and rock star Ted Nugent, who's a big game hunter. On their travels, they purchased some whimsical, hand carved animal heads - zebras, monkeys, tigers and giraffes - and they were incorporated into a mural that covers an entire 8- by 20-foot wall.

"It was just perfect for them," Strem said. "The parents are world travelers, and their mural needed just the right touch to suit them. The carved heads were that touch." Radiators and electrical outlet plates become part of the mural, not an impediment to its beauty.

Strem has a background in early childhood development and once ran her own preschool, so she has a special understanding of what children want and need.

"If children surround themselves with art and enjoy it, they will grow up to enjoy it more," she said.

But there are certain subjects she avoids.

"I won't accept any commissions from people who want scary or morbid subjects," she said. "Children don't need that kind of stimulation. They need positive, upbeat surroundings." Customers can expect to pay anywhere from $200 to $2,000 culty of the work.

"I don't know where this will take me." Strem said of her new business, "but I know it feels good, it feels comfortable.

and it's right for me." Strem can be reached at 468-3288 or 468-5039.

fight indoor air pollution

By Stephanie Stubbs AIA News Service

While efforts to "clean up the air" a generation ago focused on car exhaust, factories and industrial plants polluting the outdoors, today's concerns are shifting to indoor air pollution. Synthetic building materials and furnishings can release chemicals into the indoors.

Making sure that our buildings don't leak air in order to save energy means that the same air can sit within a building for a long time.

These factors considered together contribute to a phenomenon called "sick building syndrome," whose symptoms include headaches, nausea, eye irritation, breathing difficulties and rashes.

In a 1989 report to Congress, the Environmental Protection Agency stated that "indoor air pollution represents a major portion of the public's exposure to air pollution and may pose serious acute and chronic health risks."

Architects and engineers are rapidly incorporating building strategies that can reduce indoor pollution potentials. These strategies range from mechanical systems that more quickly replace fresh air to specifying nonpolluting paints and carpet adhesives. It appears that these professionals may be able to get some additional assitance from a little green friend, the com-

As a case in point, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) long has used plants to help remove pollutants. The plants do so mostly through their root systems, but they also employ a filter system of tiny holes in their leaves.

Much of NASA's work in this area is under the direction of Dr. Bill Wolverton, senior research scientist at NASA's John C. Stennis Space Center in Mississippi. Wolverton, an environmental engineer, has studied plants and pollution treatment for 20 years in his quest to develop regenerative life-support systems for future space stations.

His study released last year, Interior Landscape Plants for Indoor Air Pollution Abatement," may contain good news for earth-bound people as well.

In the study, Wolverton repeatedly placed ordinary potted house plants into sealed plexiglass chambers. He then injected large amounts of one of the three of the most common pollutants found in indoor air benzene, formaldehyde, or trichloroehylene (TCE) - into the air inside each chamber.

These rather exotic-sounding number of materials commonly types of pollutants. English ivy found in the office and in the absorbs benzene efficiently; aloe home, including household cleaners, water repellents, adhesives for floors and carpets, paints, plastics and dry cleaning chemicals.

Wolverton then measured air samples from each chamber some 24 hours later. The plants had removed significant amounts of the pollutants; some had cleared 90 percent of a particular pollutant from the chamber air.

Just a handful of the most popular types of houseplants have been tested, of course, but some species seem extremely

> The jury still is out on which plants work best for different densities of pollutants, as well as on how to make plants work best within a given space. As a ballpark figure, The Foliage for Clean Air Council recommends one potted plant per 100 square feet of floor space.

With its careful attention to

This two-bedroom, two-bath modern cottage has an oldfashioned flavor blended with features that are pure 20th cen-

The exterior is an eclectic mixture of textures of old and new. Two of the three front gables peak over fishscale shingles, the kind remembered from the old place back home. The bay windows are topped in metal for additional visual impact, and the remainder of the exterior is stucco.

The entry porch is recessed, as is the third of the home's gables, which is constructed of open latticework.

The "great room" concept begins in the entry hall, which opens to a dining area with sliding door access to a rear patio. The natural flow leads to a generously proportioned living area, where a fireplace and handy woodbox share access to the patio with an oversized window and sliding glass door.

The efficient kitchen consolidates food preparation and clean-up areas by function, saving steps and time. Brightened by a bay window and skylight, it's distinguished by an island that doubles as an eating bar and food preparation counter with sink.

Close by is a spacious storage pantry and separate utility room, which provides access to the two-car garage and its accompanying workshop/storage spot. The garage and shop have a rear door and window, keeping those dark garage blues at bay.

The master suite and second bedroom occupy the opposite end of the home, down a hall lined with extra closet space and a stairway to the attic. which can be used for more stowage or converted to a third bedroom or office.

Overlooking the patio, the suite has a matched pair of vertical windows and a sliding

Botany your bag? Here's a rare treat

Rare early issues of Curtis Botanical Magazine will be on display through Aug. 31 in the Rare Book Room of the Detroit Main Library, 5201 Woodward in the Cultural Center. Rare Book Room hours are Tuesday through Saturday, 1 - 5 p.m.

First published in 1787, Curtis Botanical Magazine is the oldest continuously published journal with color illustrations. Every illustration in every copy of the magazine was painstakingly colored by hand until as recently as 1948 when color offset printing was finally adopted by the editors. The Detroit Public Library's run of the magazine is complete through 1986. and is one of the few such runs in existence today.

Also included in the exhibit is a complete set of William Curtis' landmark work, "Flora Londinensis," which appeared between 1777 and 1798.

For more information, call the Rare Book Department at 833-1476 or community relations at 833-4042.

An Exclusive St. Clair Single Family Development With Its Own Private Harbor On The Beautiful St. Clair River

CHARG

20 Single Family Lots with Boatslips

Diamond Cove is the ideal location for boating enthusiasts and is only minutes from the city of St. Clair, the quaint community traditionally noted for the distinguished St. Clair Inn. Diamond Cove is less than an hour commute north of Detroit.

Every homeowner has a private 50 foot boatslip located in a quiet harbor offset 300 feet from the St. Clair River.

There are over 2 acres of beautifully landscaped common grounds including a boardwalk, river observation area, paved streets with curbs and gutters, and inground sprinkler systems.

Homesite topography provides 100-120 foot frontages and lower level walk-outs. The design and construction of each home is controlled to assure architectural compatibility.

Exclusive waterfront living offers a unique lifestyle opportunity, so visit us soon or call . .

Recycling makes a difference

What does the topic of recycling have to do with fishing anyway? Relatively little on the surface. Or so it would

But when you consider that recycling of society's waste has an awful lot to do with a cleaner environment and when you consider that good fishing depends on a clean environment for its very existence, then you can see that the two are closely linked.

It's been predicted that many areas in our state will, if present trends continue, run out of landfill space by the end of this decade. Estimates are that the recycling of everyday waste can reduce the amount of waste going to those landfills by as much as 20 percent.

Here are some little-known facts on recycling:

• Every Sunday, more than 500.000 trees across the country are used to produce the 88 percent of newspapers which are never recycled.

- Americans go through some 2.5 million plastic bottles every hour and only a few of those bottles ever get recycled.
- Americans throw away enough glass bottles and jars every two weeks to fill the 1,350-foot tall twin towers of New York's World Trade Center.
- American consumers and industry throw away enough aluminum to rebuild our nation's entire commercial airfleet every three months.
- Every year Americans dispose of 24 million tons of grass clippings and dead leaves which could easily be composted to conserve dwindling landfill space.

• We, as a nation, throw away enough iron and steel to continuously supply all of the country's automakers.

• In Michigan alone, residents throw out sufficient trash to fill the Pontiac Silverdome to its brim almost every day.

Recycling alone isn't the answer to Michigan's waste disposal problem, but it's definitely a step in the right direction. It's an easy habit to get into and you'll be amazed at the difference it makes.

For more information and a free brochure on recycling, contact the Environmental Defense Fund, 257 Park Avenue South, New York, N.Y. 10010, Or write The Resource Recovery section of the DNR at Box 30028, Lansing, Mich. 48909.

This Is It!

So, you've found that perfect house? But wait! Don't jump into anything before checking out a few more things:

- · Compare the asking price of the house with houses of similar size in the area. You might want to have the house appraised to help you make an offer.
- · It might be smart to have an engineer or construction company inspect the house. These people can determine the house's soundness and the adequacy of - its heating, plumbing, wiring and insulation. If a lot of work needs to be done, get an estimate—the seller may reduce the asking price.
- Check the fit of all doors and windows. Test the water pressure of sinks, tubs and showers.
- Examine the gutters. Do the downspouts lead water away from the house? They should.
- Make a thorough examination of the basement. Some sellers may try to hide water seepage damage.
- · Find out what's under the carpet. Will you be pleasantly surprised with hardwood floors or disappointed with damaged, cracked flooring?

- If the seller can't provide recent certification that the house is free of termites and other pests, have a professional
- Ask how old the roof is. If repairs need to be done, the work can be quite costly.
- Check out the yard. Will you need to do a lot of work to get it the way you want it? If you're house hunting in the winter, ask to see pictures of the yard in the summer.
- If any appliances will stay with the house, turn them on to see if they really work. Dirty dishes in the dishwasher doesn't necessarily mean it works-it could be a disguise. The time it takes to check these items can save you thousands of dollars in the long run. Request that all manuals and warranty information be given to you at the time of sale.

Description

Ask about average utility bills and tax rates. These numbers will be important when determining if you can afford the house and all of its monthly bills. Also find out about zoning restrictions.

Talk to people currently living in the area. Ask what they like best and least about the area. This will also tell you how friendly your neighbors would be.

The list of things to check can be endless. If you still need some help, ask a family member or friend with home-buying experience to take a look. Their past experience can make a world of difference!

Good Luck!

Welcome to the Real Estate Resource!

In an effort to make your search for that next house easier, the Grosse Pointe News is initiating a new page where you can find in a few minutes what the market is offering today, in the five Grosse Pointes, St. Clair Shores, Harper Woods, Detroit and other municipalities. This source will pinpoint what the up-todate price of a property is, what are its features and when it will be available for viewing.
