

DirectoRecycle — it's back, and this year it's bigger than ever

A phone book can be used to find telephone numbers or seating arrangements at local stadiums, prove Superman's strength and prop up crooked tables. But perhaps the best use for an old phone book is to recycle it.

Last year, Ameritech Publishing Inc. (API) launched a pilot directory recycling program in the Pointes called DirectoRecycle. Eight tons of outdated phone books were collected in September and October. Those books became mulch and insulation instead of 26 cubic yards of stinking, rotting landfill.

Starting last week, API and Kroger joined forces to launch this year's program which they hope will be bigger and better. They're expecting at least 10 tons of old phone books. At 17 trees per ton, that's nearly 200 trees saved.

The collection campaign coincides nicely with the delivery of the 1991-92 Detroit Yellow Pages and Grosse Pointe Neighborhood PagesPlus directories.

Kroger stores throughout the state — including the one in the Village, the one on Mack and Moross, the one on Marter Road and the Harper and 8 Mile store — have placed bins in their parking lots for collection of the old directories.

"The Kroger Co. is actively participating in the development of comprehensive community solid waste management plans that emphasize source reduction and recycling," said Joel Greenisen, president of the Michigan marketing area of The Kroger Co. "Clearly, there is no single and simple way to solve our waste problems. The only way we can successfully deal with this very complex challenge is through strategies similar to those being introduced by Ameritech Publishing to recycle directories into usable products."

Since December 1989, when the DirectoRecycle program began in Wisconsin, the company has been changing the materials in the books to make them more recycling-friendly.

Dawn Pauli, of API, said the company now binds its books with water-soluble glue and prints with soy-based, not petroleum-based inks.

She added that the company is now starting to print some books on recycled paper. Of the 450 different directories the company publishes in Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Ohio and Wisconsin, 16 are now printed completely on recycled paper.

The Nu-Wool Co. of Jenison, Mich., will turn the new directories into insulation and mulch for hydroseeding.

The bins will be open through Monday, Sept. 30.

Park may be split off into 2nd county district

By John Minnis
Assistant Editor

The Pointes will no longer be united in a single county commission district under a proposed reapportionment plan that shoves the Park into the 2nd District.

Currently, the five Grosse Pointes and Harper Woods are in the 1st Commission District represented by David Cavanaugh of Grosse Pointe Woods.

Under a plan submitted to the Wayne County Reapportionment Commission, the Park would become part of the 2nd Commission District represented by Bernard Parker of Detroit. The other four Pointes and Harper Woods would remain in the 1st District, along with 89,858 Detroit residents.

The bipartisan plan was submitted Aug. 16 by reapportionment commission vice chair Dr. Juliette Okotie-Eboh, the Democratic Party appointee, and Wendy Lamb of Lincoln Park, the Republican appointee to the reapportionment commission.

There were no representatives from the Pointes at the reapportionment commission meeting, which appeared to be attended mostly by minority-group leaders.

When it was pointed out to Okotie-Eboh and Lamb that their reapportionment plan splits the Grosse Pointe community, they were unconcerned.

'I can't look at it that way. It would not be fair to Republicans in western Wayne County.'

Wendy Lamb
GOP appointee
Reapportionment commission

"They are five distinct communities," Okotie-Eboh said. She reasoned that since the entire city of Grosse Pointe Park would be split off, no community would be divided.

Responding to the contention that the Pointes consider themselves one community, even though they are five separate cities, Lamb said, "I can't look at it that way. It would not be fair to Republicans in western Wayne County."

She said her bipartisan plan allows for two Republican county commission seats in northwestern Wayne County, Districts 9 and 10, and possibly two other GOP seats. Currently there is one Republican county commissioner, Maurice Breen, of District 10, Plymouth.

Lamb said the bipartisan plan was not drawn to favor either party. She said her and Okotie-Eboh's No. 1 goal was to draft a plan that could withstand court challenges — specifically, that it meets the standards of the federal Voting Rights Act of 1983.

Basically, the act calls for one person, one vote, meaning that the commission districts should be equal in population. Also, the act prohibits the drawing of district boundaries in such a way that minority groups are prevented from having a reasonable opportunity to

Decision on Bon Secours' new parking lot expected Monday

By John Minnis
Assistant Editor

The question of whether to allow Bon Secours Hospital to raze seven of eight houses it owns on Cadieux to build a new parking lot will be considered by Grosse Pointe City officials next Monday night.

Next week's special meeting was called after the council, sitting as a planning commission and board of zoning appeals, listened to hospital officials and residents during a three-hour public hearing last Monday night.

Councilwoman Myrna Smith, who made the motion to postpone the decision for a week, said the council needed more time to consider the information provided and the comments made by residents.

A large number of residents attended Monday's public hearing, held at the Neighborhood Club. Many residents spoke on the matter; several were opposed to the hospital's plans.

Bon Secours plans to build a below-grade, 112-space parking lot on the east side of Cadieux between Jefferson and Maumee. Over the past several years, it has purchased the eight homes between the Village Condominiums on Jefferson and the hospital's emergency entrance.

The hospital cannot build on the eighth property — the one next to the emergency entrance — because of a living trust that allows the residents to live there as long as they like.

Before Bon Secours can build a new parking lot, it must have the property rezoned from residential to parking. It also needs some setback variances.

Nearby residents have opposed the demolition of homes for more hospital parking.

Notre Dame resident Donald Schilke, whose back yard abuts hospital property, said he suffers from the noise and smell from the hospital. He complained of noise from snow-removal equipment during all hours of the night, and he said the incinerator emitted an odor.

"The hospital is very arrogant toward its neighbors," he said. "It has not been a good neighbor."

But Dorothy Whitted, who lives in the Village Condominiums, said the hospital has been good a neighbor. She said she has not experienced the problems other neighbors complained about, and that she is even notified by the hospital when there will be construction activity or tree spraying.

"I'm the closest to it, the most affected," she said, "and I'm all for it."

The residents' comments were taken after a lengthy slide presentation by Bon Secours Chief Executive Officer Henry DeVries and Mike Serilla, assistant vice president of operations.

The presentation traced some of Bon Secours' history and the reasons why more parking is needed. The results of hospital-commissioned parking and traffic studies were also presented.

The traffic study showed a modest increase over the past 10 years. The parking study reported that Bon Secours' proposed parking lot should meet its requirements over the next 10 years and possibly eliminate the need for hospital users to seek street parking, such as on Cadieux.

Residents questioned hospital and city officials on whether Bon Secours will again need to expand parking in 10 years. The officials responded that it is impossible to predict what parking needs will be that far into the future.

City planning consultant Brandon Rogers said he had reviewed the hospital's plans and studies and looked personally at Bon Secours' existing parking lots, as well as the hospital-leased spaces in the Village and at the Unitarian Church.

He said he agrees that there is a need for more parking at the hospital. Further, he found that a parking lot could be designed that would be unobtrusive in the neighborhood. He recommended the rezoning be approved.

"It can be designed compatible with adjacent land use without adverse effects," he said.

He said his landscape architect met with the hospital's landscaper and went over all

Why should you donate again this year to the Jerry Lewis Labor Day Telethon to aid the fight against muscular dystrophy? For the kids.

That's what Grosse Pointe Shores resident Kyle Mitchell tells everyone when asked that question.

"I think the important thing," he said, "is they help kids."

Mitchell, 53, understands muscular dystrophy and children. He's taught elementary school in the Roseville School District for 23 years, and he also has a form of MD.

As he does every year, Mitchell will conduct a hop-a-thon at his school to raise money for Jerry's kids, and the Muscular Dystrophy Association will show the kids a video on MD.

He even brings in a wheelchair, walkers and other appliances for the kids to use so they can learn the hardships the handicapped have to endure.

Hertel condemns USSR coup

After serving nine years as chair of the Ad Hoc Committee on the Baltic States, Congressman Dennis Hertel (D-Harper Woods) has taken an early stand in condemning the militaristic coup in the Soviet Union.

"As quickly as the movement for democratic reform swept Europe, the world is now faced with the threat of military rule and the defeat of democracy in the Soviet Union," Hertel said. "The many lives lost in hopes of achieving democratic political reform, strengthened economic freedom and arms control should not be in vain. The weight of this tragedy not only affects the people of the captive nations but of all the world."

Through his position as chair of the Ad Hoc Committee on the Baltic States, Hertel has led the congressional initiative in aiding the efforts of the captive nations to attain freedom.

"Gorbachev's removal from power is disturbing and is a step backward from the progress made in the decline of the Cold War," Hertel said. "Military rule will surely extinguish all previous pursuits of freedom. I urge the people of the Soviet Union to hold fast to the ideals of democracy in this time of crisis."

19th century architecture in Detroit explored

Romanesque revival, Gothic revival and beaux arts architecture and how they are reflected in Detroit buildings will be the subject of a four-week slide lecture and tour presented by the Detroit Historical Department on Saturday, Sept. 7, 14, 21 and 28. Registrations for the series are being accepted now.

Art and architectural historian Michael Farrell will trace the evolution of the three architectural movements in Europe, America and Detroit.

In the history of American architecture, the 19th century represented a coming of age in terms of a more permanent form of building. It was an era that saw the "battle of the styles" as public and private patrons moved beyond Federal and Greek revival toward a new appreciation of contemporary European trends.

In England, then the most powerful economic and political force in the world, the Gothic revival became the national style and eventually a model for Americans and Detroiters to emulate.

European schools taught aspiring American architects, and one, Henry Hobson Richardson, returned home to initiate the first uniquely American style, although based on European precedents, the Romanesque revival. This new style became the model for train stations and churches in Detroit.

Paris was the center of world art by the last quarter of the century and provided an education for artists, sculptors, and architects. The School of Fine Arts (Ecole des Beaux Arts) gave to designers an archaeological correctness to building designs based on ancient and Italian Renaissance models.

McKim, Meade, and White in New York and John Scott and Albert Kahn in Detroit would build banks and grand public buildings in this new style.

A bus tour of significant buildings in downtown Detroit reflecting Gothic, Romanesque revival and beaux arts styles will follow a slide lecture. The fee for the series is $50 for Detroit Historical Society members and $60 for non-members. For further information and to register, call Lori Naples at 833-1419.

Corrections

Corrections will be printed on this page every week. If there is an error of fact in any story, call the newsroom at 882-0294.

In the Aug. 8 chart containing profile data of all the Pointes, the total state equalized valuation should have been listed as $470.5 million.

A photograph about Safety Town that appeared Aug. 15 showed Scott Hummel, and not Thomas Light, receiving a diploma from Jack Patterson, director of public safety for Grosse Pointe Woods.

Tour Indian museum

The Great Lakes Indian Museum, which features exhibits tracing the history of the Great Lakes/Woodland Indians from before the arrival of European settlers to the present, will be the subject of a Saturday, Aug. 24, tour sponsored by the Detroit Historical Department.

Located at Historic Fort Wayne, the museum is within walking distance of the site of the Fort Wayne Mound which dates from 750 A.D. and is the last surviving Indian burial mound in the Detroit area. Exhibits in the museum feature items from one of the area's most extensive collections of Woodland Indian artifacts.

The tour begins at noon at the Detroit Historical Museum, 5401 Woodward at Kirby. Cost for the tour is $15 for Detroit Historical Society members and $17 for non-members, and includes a picnic lunch. For further information or to register, contact Lori Naples at 833-1419.

Milk River cleanup moves ahead, retention basin bids OK'd

By Donna Walker
Staff Writer

Work continues to progress on two fronts in the Milk River Combined Sewer Overflow cleanup project.

• On the Harper Woods sewage front:

The Milk River Inter-County Drain Board on Aug. 14 said that a gravity-flow sewer system is its preferred method for diverting Harper Woods' sanitary sewage from the Milk River Pumping Station, located on Marter Road in Grosse Pointe Woods.

A public hearing will be held regarding the drain board's choice at 1:30 p.m. Tuesday, Sept. 17 in the Grosse Pointe Woods City Council chambers. Depending on reaction from the public, the drain board may or may not officially adopt the gravity-flow sewer system alternative.

Other alternatives the board has been looking at involve building an underground pumping station to divert Harper Woods' sanitary sewage from the Milk River Pumping Station.

Proposed sites for the underground pumping station include residential lots on Allard and Manchester roads, an alley that runs between those homes and the BP Gas Station on Mack Avenue, Ghesquiere Park property, Monteith school property, and underneath Mack Avenue medians.

The Allard and Manchester sites have been controversial, because they involve buying or condemning a house so that the pumping station could be installed on the property, and because residents don't want a pumping station as a neighbor. Even though most of the pumping station would be underground, there would still be some equipment and access holes for workers above ground, and workers would be at the site every day to monitor and maintain the station.

A gravity-flow system would make an underground pumping station unnecessary, said James Murray, secretary of the Milk River Inter-County Drain Board and director of the Wayne County Department of Public Works.

A gravity-flow system would involve installing a sloping sewer line running from the west side of Mack Avenue, just south of the Pointe Electronics building, down Cook Road to the Grosse Pointe Interceptor, a 72-inch diameter pipe that runs along Chalfonte Avenue, said Lawrence Pate of Pate, Hirn & Bogue, consulting engineers to the drain board.

Sewage in the Grosse Pointe Interceptor flows south to the Detroit wastewater treatment facility.

The new sewer line would run south of and parallel to an existing sewer that runs under Cook Road. The existing sewer hooks up to a line that runs parallel to the Grosse Pointe Interceptor from Cook Road to Torrey Road. Sewage in the existing line flows north along Chalfonte, through the Torrey Road Pumping Station, to the Milk River Pumping Station, and then back down through the Grosse Pointe Interceptor.

The proposed sewer, by hooking up directly to the Grosse Pointe Interceptor, would bypass the Torrey Road and Milk River pumping stations.

The sloping sewer system should not cause basements to flood, Pate said, and if the sewer backs up, valves will open, directing Harper Woods' sanitary sewage back to the system that exists now until the problem can be corrected.

After the drain board officially selects an alternative — gravity-flow system or pumping station — it will submit its plans to the Michigan Department of Natural Resources for approval. Murray said that the DNR will probably approve the drain board's choice.

Construction on the project will probably begin next June, Murray said. Pate said that workers will probably start digging near Monteith School, where the sewer will be at its greatest depth, and then work their way up to Mack Avenue. Sections of the south side of Cook Road will be blocked during construction, as shafts will have to be built in the roadway every 500 feet so that workers can access the underground tunnel, Pate said.

Work between Kings Court

East and Chalfonte would be done during summer vacation to avoid impeding Monteith school traffic, Pate said.

The drain board will have to acquire an easement from the owners of the Pointe Electronics property, Murray said, for meters and other equipment. Still, the equipment should be less obtrusive than pumping station equipment would be, he said. Construction of the sloping sewer system will cost an estimated $1.96 million, Murray said. Of that, $100,000 will go for the acquisition of an easement from Pointe Electronics.

According to estimates by the drain board's engineers, the most expensive alternative is to install a pumping station on Monteith school property. That would cost an estimated $2.26 million, of which $17,500 would go for land acquisition.

Three of the alternatives are cheaper than the gravity flow system, Murray said. The Manchester residential site would cost an estimated $1.79 million, the Allard residential site an estimated $1.89 million, and the site behind the BP Gas Station on Mack an estimated $1.92 million.

However, Murray said that the approximate $200,000 difference between those sites and the gravity-flow system would be a small price to pay to satisfy the public.

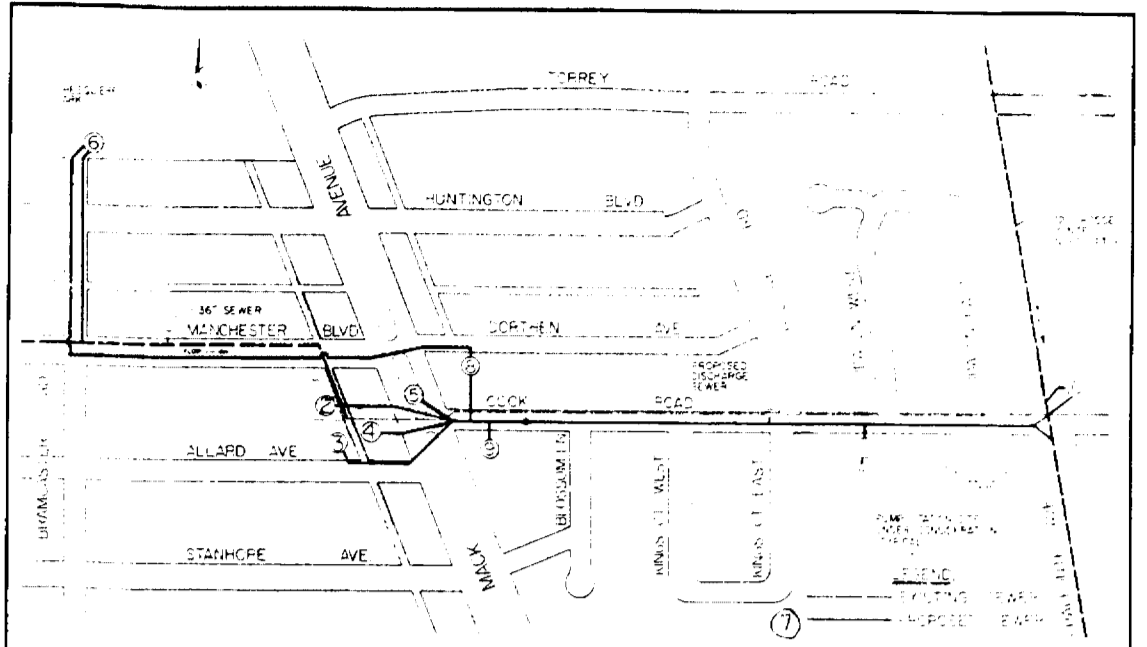

• On the Milk River retention basin front:

The Milk River Inter-County Drain Board on Aug. 14 awarded the contract for replacing the retention basin in back of the Milk River Pumping Station to Spence Brothers of Saginaw, for an amount not to exceed $18,047,000.

Five companies bid on the project and Spence Brothers had the lowest bid.

The companies were asked to submit bids for two sets of plans for the project.

The base plan, which was drawn up by the project engineers, McNamee, Porter & Seely, calls for a 15-inch thick concrete cover to be placed over the 18.8-million gallon retention basin, and for roads and landscaping to be placed on top of the cover.

Proposed pumping station sites and proposed gravity flow sewer.

1. Monteith School site
2. Manchester site
3. Allard site
4. Easement behind BP Gas Station
5. Mack Avenue medians
6. Ghesquiere Park site
7. Gravity connect to intercept
8. Vacant property at rear of Mobil Gas Station on Mack
9. Bank site on Mack
10. Liggett School site

The alternate plan, developed by the Grosse Pointe Woods city engineer in an attempt to save money, calls for an 8-inch thick concrete cover over most of the basin. The cover would not be landscaped and a service drive would only go over one end of the basin, where the concrete would be 15 inches thick.

Spence Brothers said that the base proposal would cost $18,047,000 and the alternate proposal would cost $17,747,000.

The drain board will meet with the Grosse Pointe Woods City Council and construction committee before deciding which proposal to adopt. The board's choice will then be subject to DNR approval.

Murray said that the drain board should have the DNR's decision by mid September, and that if all goes well, construction on the retention basin will begin this fall and be completed by the fall of 1992.

Murray said that he would be willing to go with the alternate proposal.

"Even though my preference is to build a thicker slab," he said, "I would like to bow to the wishes of the local community."

The estimated cost of the entire Milk River Combined Sewer Overflow cleanup plan — which consists of the retention basin, installing a system for directing Harper Woods' sanitary sewage away from the Milk River pumping station, chlorinating sewage that is discharged into the Milk River drainage ditch, dredging the ditch, installing a system to circulate fresh water through the ditch, repairing cracks in existing sewers, and disconnecting downspouts in Grosse Pointe Woods and Harper Woods — is $28 million, said Jeanna Paluzzi, division compliance director of the Wayne County Department of Public Works, and Murray's assistant.

The bulk of the project — rerouting Harper Woods' sanitary sewage and constructing the retention basin — may be eligible for low interest (2 percent) revolving loans from the state. The drain board is working fast to make sure that all the necessary paper work for those projects is completed by Dec. 1, the deadline given by the state. After that time, the interest rate could rise, Murray said.

The rest of the project would be funded through conventional loans, Murray said.

Grosse Pointe Woods will pay the lion's share of the cost of the combined sewage overflow cleanup plan, 60 percent. Harper Woods will pay 35 percent, St. Clair Shores and Wayne County will pay the remaining 5 percent.

The Milk River Inter-County Drain Board consists of Wayne County's drain officer (Murray), a representative from the Michigan Department of Agriculture (Michael Gregg), and Macomb County's drain officer (Thomas S. Welsh, Macomb County public works commissioner, for whom Walter Mathes, Macomb County deputy public works commissioner, substituted at the Aug. 14 drain board meeting).

Farms fights 'comp' costs by going to self-insurance

By Donna Walker
Staff Writer

Grosse Pointe Farms is getting into the insurance business.

For the past several years, the Farms has been paying premiums to the Accident Fund of Michigan to insure the city against workers compensation claims. However, the city's last premium jumped 36 percent.

"That caused us to look at alternate ways to insure ourselves," said John M. Lamerato, Farms controller.

He and the city's insurance committee found that the city could save approximately $80,000 a year by going to self-insurance.

The city council approved the switch to self-insurance on Monday. Starting next month, the Farms will provide its own workers compensation insurance.

The self-insurance program will work like this, Lamerato said: The city will create an Insurance Retention Fund of approximately $200,000 and use interest from the fund to pay workers' compensation claims.

A third-party administrator hired by the city will service claims and provide loss control measures.

The city will purchase some outside insurance to protect its Insurance Retention Fund. With the outside insurance, the city will only have to pay a maximum of $375,000 per occurrence.

For example, if three public safety officers are injured during a hold-up, the city will pay a maximum of $375,000. Everything over that deductible will be paid for by the outside insurance company.

Over the next two years, the Farms will continue to budget the same amount for insurance (approximately $142,600) that it had been allocating previously. It will use that money to pay workers compensation claims, the third-party administrator's salary and outside insurance premiums. Whatever money that's left will be deposited into the Insurance Retention Fund.

The fund should reach approximately $200,000 in two years. After that, the city should be able to slash its insurance budget by about $80,000, Lamerato said.

The city council on Monday agreed to hire Creative Risk Management as the third-party administrator for one year at $19,005, and to obtain outside insurance through the Employers Reinsurance Corp. for two years at $20,935 a year.

The change in insurance carriers will not affect the coverage of the city's approximately 160 full-time and part-time employees, Lamerato said.

Golden Dragon gets Farms' approval to move into former Topsiders

By Donna Walker
Staff Writer

Grosse Pointe Farms may have a Chinese restaurant soon. Brothers Wing Kau Tom and Yee Tom want to open a restaurant serving Chinese and American cuisine and liquor at 18700 Mack, the site of the former Topsiders restaurant and bar.

The Toms said they will lease the building from Virginia S. Jeffries, and plan to give it an Oriental look. Their plans call for decorating the restaurant in traditional Chinese colors (red, emerald green and black), putting wooden Oriental screens in the windows and a red, back-lit awning around three sides of the building.

Members of the Farms city council said they were worried that the awning would be too bright.

However, the Toms' designer said that the effect will be more of a soft glow. The only part of the awning that will be lighted, he said, will be the restaurant's name, The Golden Dragon, a couple of characters from the Chinese alphabet, and the words "carry out" on the side. The rest of the 4-foot-wide awning will be canvas and will not light up.

The building will have two entrances, the Toms said. The front entrance will be for dine-in customers and the side entrance will be for carry-out. The parking lot will be in the rear and will be lighted by floodlights attached to the back of the building.

The Farms council approved the Toms' site plans on Monday, with the condition that the city be able to regulate the brightness of the awning for the neighbors' sake.

The city council also approved the transfer of Topsiders' liquor license to Wing Yee Food Services, the Toms' company. However, the council denied the dancing and late food service (2:30 a.m. to 4 a.m.) portions of the Toms' liquor license application.

"We need Chinese food in the area. We don't need a place to dance," said Councilwoman Gail Kaess in rejecting the request.

The liquor license application must now be approved by the state. The Toms' also need approval from the health department and a business license from the Farms before they can open. That usually takes 60 to 90 days, Public Safety Director Robert Ferber said.

Wing Kau Tom said that he and his brother would like to open as soon as possible, and that tentatively, their hours will be 11 a.m. to midnight Monday through Thursday, 11 a.m. to 2 a.m. Friday and Saturday, and noon to 10 p.m. on Sunday.

Wing Yee Food Services operates two other Chinese-American restaurants in the metro Detroit area. The Sizzling Wok is located in Universal Mall in Warren and the Saiwoo restaurant is located in downtown Detroit.

"It's my way of introducing a lesson on handicaps," he said. "Perhaps one day they will have less fear if something happens to them."

Mitchell has a form of MD that affects his hands and feet, though the disease is in remission now. He has full mobility, but the effects of MD are noticeable in his hands.

He said he does not offer the children explanations, but if they ask specific questions, he answers them.

"I feel they deserve an answer to any question they ask," he said. "More and more today, we have to give kids understanding as well as information."

He also pointed out that kids are more accepting than adults, who have learned prejudices.

He has a 48-year-old sister in Florida who also has the same form of MD, though she's more severely affected. He said the MDA has been very helpful to her, and the funds raised by the Jerry Lewis telethon help make it possible for MD sufferers to get much-needed care.

"The adults need help," Mitchell said, "but it is the kids. The kids are the ones who need help the most."

His entire career has been devoted to children. He began teaching the sixth grade, but one year he was given the choice of teaching kindergarten or not working at all. So he began teaching the 5-year-olds — one class in the morning and another class in the afternoon at another school.

He said it was hard work, and it was a challenge to keep the children interested. Each day he had to pack up all his supplies and lesson aids and haul them to another school.

"Teaching kindergarten was a marvelous experience," he said. "It was very rewarding."

He now teaches first grade. He hasn't lost his enthusiasm for teaching, though he can't help feel for children from dysfunctional families — which he fears are more common today.

"It's frustrating at times," he said. "I get frustrated when there's nothing I can do. I constantly fight to get help for my kids."

As a teacher, he is possessive toward the children in his class.

"They're my kids," he emphasizes.

Though Mitchell has been engaged a couple of times, he never married. He does have what he calls a "foster son," though that's not entirely accurate.

A couple of years ago, one of his former students showed up at his door and didn't have anywhere to go. He's been living with Mitchell since. He is now 21.

Pointes would get shaft in district plan

Once more the Democrats who control Wayne County political offices are trying to give the Republican Grosse Pointes the shaft.

It is true the so-called bipartisan redistricting plan offered to the Wayne County Apportionment Commission Friday was co-authored by Wendy Lamb, the sole GOP representative on the commission, but she apparently was of no help to the Pointes.

Instead, the plan, which Ms. Lamb herself described as bipartisan, was co-authored by Dr. Juliette Okotie-Eboh, the commission's Democratic vice-chairman, and it would trim the Pointes' proportion of the 1st District population and reduce their chances of helping elect a GOP commissioner.

Under the plan, Grosse Pointe Park would be shoved out of the 1st District and into the even more strongly Democratic 2nd District which is dominated by Detroit voters.

Under the current apportionment, the

Pointes constitute 32 percent of the district's population. Under the proposed plan, they would account for only 26 percent of the district's population. And the Park would comprise only about 9 percent of the 2nd District's population.

Prior to adoption of the Wayne County charter, the Pointes had their own county commissioner, but when adoption of the charter in the early 1980s cut the commission from 30 to 15 members, the Pointes lacked the population to constitute an entire district.

But the current proposal, if adopted by the full commission, would further trim the Pointes' clout in the 1st District and leave the Park a small GOP minority representation in the 2nd District.

The redistricting became necessary because the 1990 census figures showed a drop in the Wayne County population. Under the new census, the 1st District currently counts 154,061 people as contrasted with the 140,779 required to accommodate a smaller county population.

True, it was easy to move the Park out of the 1st District because its population of 12,857 residents accounts for almost all the 13,282 difference between the district's current population and the new goal of the apportionment commission.

But, like the 1982 reapportionment of congressional seats that was engineered by the Democratic majority in the state Legislature, this move would cut into the GOP representation from the Pointes in a politically divided district.

One effect surely would be to make it even more difficult for a Republican to win the 1st District commissioner's seat held by Democrat David Cavanagh of the Woods.

And despite the apportionment commission's pledge to draw the district lines "without regard to partisan political advantage," politics obviously is playing its usual role in this process.

Even prior to the session, Commissioner Lamb of Lincoln Park appeared to be more interested in winning a second GOP seat for western Wayne County Republicans on the county board than in doing anything to strengthen GOP chances in the 1st District.

Her plan accomplishes her goal but apparently it was achieved at the expense of the Grosse Pointe Republicans in the 1st District.

Any way we look at it, we find Commissioner Lamb's so-called bipartisan plan a poor deal for the Pointes. It is also an unwarranted rebuff from a GOP commissioner for Grosse Pointe Republicans who gave GOP Gov. John Engler about one-third of his winning margin in last November's election.

If Grosse Pointe Republicans and officials of the five Pointe municipalities could get their act together, they still might be able to influence the final reapportionment plan which must be adopted by Sept. 27.

If they could agree among themselves, they could present a new plan before the Sept. 6 deadline for submitting reapportionment proposals. And they could start objecting to the current plan as early as the next commission hearing on Friday, Aug. 23.

Another endangered species?

Are public libraries becoming another endangered species? Not yet, perhaps, but the future outlook for public libraries is not good.

There is much evidence to indicate that in a national recession, public libraries and their many services are taking a hard hit from economizing public officials.

In the Pointes, even a highly educated and motivated public has voted twice in recent years to reject library expansion plans, which librarians and their backers had sought in order to keep services at a high standard.

Yet the Pointes also have devoted public library supporters both in the professional and nonprofessional ranks. One who certainly qualifies in the latter category is Margit Jackson, who served as an alternate delegate to the recent White House Conference on Library and Information Services in Washington, D.C.

A CPA by profession and the treasurer of the Edsel & Eleanor Ford House, she earlier had been active in the Michigan conference that planned the state's participation in the White House meeting. In the Pointes, she has been a library booster in the strategic planning process and as an on-site budget committee member.

While she welcomes the increased attention such a conference brings to the libraries' cause, Ms. Jackson deplors the fact that hardly a day goes by that we don't read of a library closing, reducing services or cutting hours it is open.

As a consequence, she is concerned about how library supporters can convince the public officials responsible, as well as the taxpayers, that libraries are necessary even in these times.

She noted that while the White House conference ruled out any discussion of additional federal financing of libraries, which was among the top priorities of the Michigan delegation, she believes state library funding needs to be more creative, including such ideas as having libraries set up more partnerships with business and industry and providing them with resource services.

She fully endorses such conference recommendations as those to develop library services that would attract more middle and high school students and to establish national data bases that would link libraries to increased sharing of information.

But unless libraries get the resources and support they need not only from federal, state and local governments but from the public, too, she fears "traditional library collections and even the buildings of today will be inadequate to service the needs of tomorrow."

In our view, that's an appropriate warning for the Pointes as well as the state of Michigan and the nation itself that public libraries are indeed an endangered species.

Vote on courts a good idea

The Grosse Park City Council should be commended for reaching agreement on a plan to let the voters help them decide whether they want to replace the current municipal court with a district court.

It's a controversial move and one that should be adopted only if it has public support. It isn't enough to ask the state Legislature to permit the council to go ahead with the adoption of the district court without much public input.

Hotels say no

Among the obstacles faced by backers of a new baseball stadium for the Detroit Tigers is the unyielding opposition of area hotels and motels.

The owners, managers and employees of the area's hotels and motels are campaigning against a proposal to raise existing hotel/motel taxes by 5 percent to help finance the bond issue needed to build a city-county stadium.

The industry makes a good point. It already is depressed and the increased tax would place the Detroit industry second only to New York hotels in the percentage of tax levied on room rates.

The impressive opposition ought to persuade the county and city to seek new sources of revenue that would not be as damaging to the private enterprises involved. It also should remind Tigers management if it really wants a new stadium here, it had better be ready to offer more support itself if it expects the public to finance the balance.

Now if the proposal clears the early legal and administrative hurdles, the people will have a chance to discuss it in an advisory referendum and consider it as an issue in the November election to fill three council seats.

We still hope the voters will come to a negative conclusion, however.

It may be, as the proponents of a 1-Pointe district court contend, that the proposed adoption of the plan would attract other Pointe governments into the district court over a period of time. But wouldn't it be better to win them all over now and spread the responsibility to all five Pointes?

The cost factor has been the major stumbling block to the Pointe governments' approval in the past. According to the critics, the municipal court is a big revenue producer for the municipality, although Sen. John Kelly of Grosse Pointe Woods, a district court backer, says not a single district court loses money.

However, the critics ignore the benefits of the district court. A major one is that Pointe residents would have cases which do not qualify for municipal court, especially civil suits involving between $1,500 and $10,000, handled in the Pointes' own district court rather than in a downtown Detroit district court.

We still believe the merits of a 5-Pointe district court offer important offsets to any loss of revenue for the Pointe governments. But a 1-Pointe district court appears to be too heavy a responsibility for any one Pointe government at this time.

Library

To the Editor:
After the recent defeat of the proposal to construct a central library on a new site, it is most likely that no new site will ever be approved by residents affected.

I may have missed it, but did anyone suggest the most obvious solution to the space shortage? Why not construct another floor where the lower floor has a two-story ceiling?

Brainchild

To the Editor:
Thanks to Ron Bernas and the Grosse Pointe News for the wonderful article on the Grosse Pointe Community Band Aug. 8.

The story neglected to mention one person, however, who should be given credit as being the real "brainchild" behind the Grosse Pointe Community Band.

Without the persistence and support of my wife, Yvonne Begian, the band never would have been formed. Yvonne's input regarding programming and maintaining a proper rehearsal atmosphere has also been invaluable to me and the band.

In addition, recognition should go to each member of the band. They are a pleasure to work with.

SEMCOG

To the Editor:
Last week the Grosse Pointe News reported that the Grosse Pointe Park City Council had taken action to join the Southeast Michigan Council of Governments (SEMCOG). Before making a permanent commitment to SEMCOG, I would hope that the council would consider and address the following concerns:

1. SEMCOG's stated mission is to dictate policies and prescribe plans to resolve perceived problems of cities within its power. Recently, SEMCOG announced its policy in favor of Detroit City Airport expansion. By joining SEMCOG, Grosse Pointe Park would be conceding policy-making authority to a governmental organization that does not necessarily represent the best interests of Grosse Pointe Park.

2. Voters will not find SEMCOG officials on the ballot - SEMCOG's membership is not elected by public vote. Thus, like other bureaucratic agencies in government, SEMCOG is not directly responsible or accountable to the people.

3. SEMCOG is duplicative of other governments and governmental agencies such as county governments and the Municipal League.

4. The number of delegates to SEMCOG's executive committee, which controls SEMCOG, is apparently based on population and, accordingly, gives much more weight to more populous areas such as the city of Detroit. Thus, policies that are advocated by such areas, such as airport expansion, become the policies of SEMCOG.

There may indeed be instances where regional cooperation would be beneficial to resolve local problems, but, unless its fundamental flaws can be fixed, SEMCOG is not the right organization in this instance.

Cleanliness is next to teenliness

Raising a teenage girl requires about 18,000 gallons of water a month.

I lived with three teenage girls and I know.

In the good old days, I had to lurk behind the sandbox after dinner. I'd highjack the little dirtballs and carry them, kicking and squalling, into the house and plop them in a bathtub full of warm water.

I had to add bubbles and colorful sponges and washcloths decorated like puppets and soaps shaped like animals and dozens of floating toys to keep them happy and immersed long enough to come clean.

I even hung around and read stuff like "Ickle Bickle Robin" aloud, using a high whiney voice for mama robin and a low gruff voice for papa robin.

The children got to having so much fun I had to drag them, kicking and squalling, out of the tub.

Around age 13, girls discover hot water.

They walk into the family bathroom shortly after their thirteenth birthday, lock the door, and don't come out for any appreciable length of time until they're ready for college orientation.

They crack open the door now and then to order more shampoo and conditioner and soap and lotion and Clearasil

I Say

Margie Reins Smith

and deodorant and bath powder and hairbrushes and combs and curling irons and hair dryers.

And fresh towels. Lots of fresh towels.

Teenage girls shower a lot. At 12 gallons a minute, each 20-minute shower uses 240 gallons of hot water. Each girl takes a shower and washes her hair twice a day, minimum.

In a home with three girls, that's a 1,440 gallon-a-day habit, just for maintenance.

Each teenager uses three towels per shower — two for the bod, one for the hair.

Towels, of course, are one-use-only items, after which they are crumpled and dropped on the bathroom floor.

The laundry fairy picks up these towels, washes them, fluffs them dry, folds them and returns them, magically, to the linen closet.

Let's see, three teenage girls, two showers a day, three towels per shower, that's 18 towels a day for the laundry fairy — about 6,570 dirty towels a year.

During the summer, when all three girls are members of a swimming team that practices twice a day, each one uses two beach towels daily. Summer is the laundry fairy's busy season.

Each load of laundry requires 50 gallons of water. With three loads of towels a day, that's another 150 gallons of water a day — down the drain.

That's just towels.

There are also clothes — clothes that teenage girls actually wear, and soil; clothes they just try on, look in the mirror at, change their minds about, and discard; clothes they loan to their friends that the friends actually wear, and soil; clothes that the friends just try on, look in the mirror at, change their minds about, and discard.

Another three loads a day for three kids and their friends. Another 150 gallons.

The laundry fairy also washes clothing that belongs to the friends. There are the borrowed items that my kids actually wear; also the borrowed items that my kids just try on. Another 100 gallons.

It was high tide at the Smiths for many years.

Everybody does her own laundry now because a few years ago, the laundry fairy threw a tantrum and quit.

Extended family

Jay and Carol Hackleman of Grosse Pointe Park recently attended the first national Hackleman family reunion in Rushville, Ind.

The first Hackleman came to America 242 years ago, in 1749, and settled in Pennsylvania.

The three-day reunion attracted 50 Hackleman families from 19 states. Many met for the first time to share stories, photographs, documents and family lore.

Blood drive

The American Red Cross needs blood during this busy Labor Day holiday.

The Ritz-Carlton in Dearborn will join WJR Radio and the Detroit Tigers on Saturday, Aug. 31, for a special blood drive.

Every donor who gives blood between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. will get a pair of free tickets to the Saturday, Sept. 21 Tiger game with Milwaukee and a certificate for a $65 room rate at the Ritz-Carlton on the day of the game. Hey, the Ritz is even throwing in rides to and from Tiger Stadium for a measly $5 a person.

During the day of the blood drive, WJR's Jimmy Barrett will broadcast from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. from the hotel. Blood donors will also be eligible for a drawing to pick the person who will throw the ceremonial first pitch at the Sept. 21 game.

To make an appointment to donate blood, call the American Red Cross at 274-5450.

Refuge

Little puffs of wind waves gently kissing the shore

Strong rocks safely maintaining the boundaries of the lake

Tall trees, like close friends in a huddle, banking the shoreline

Now and then a dot of orange announcing the progression of the seasons and the coming of autumn

The only noises are the squeaking hinges of the dock, the waves being welcomed by the rocky shore and an occasional bird sharing the joy of the day.

This is one of the special days on Lake Wallenpaupack

The water is a deep clear blue and fish can be seen skimming the bottom twenty feet from the shore

The sky is brilliant lapis lazuli with just a few brushstrokes of clouds, as if put on the canvas by a painter for contrast

Now and then a boat can be seen in the distance, but it is so far away it appears part of a setting, noiseless and unobtrusive

This lake, this place, are all a part of God's unique gift to our family

It is a balm, soothing and comforting, shielding us, temporarily, from the wounds of our everyday lives

We embrace it with enormous gratitude.

Good thing we caught the TV news the other day, showing the new, correct way to open a wine bottle.

We can put our new information together with the bad news about lead crystal and enjoy the fruit of the grape in the cheap glasses.

Those of you who failed to thoroughly peruse your May issue of the Tufts University Diet & Nutrition Newsletter can catch up now:

The lead that makes lead crystal so beautifully sparkling leeches out into your drink in a matter of minutes. Wine or spirits stored over time in a crystal decanter take on lead levels equaling those that poisoned the ancient Romans. And the level of lead in wine served in crystal goblets is high enough that the newsletter warns not to use the good glasses every day.

The Waterford company has also found that some people actually feed the baby from its lead crystal baby bottles. Now that's decadent. And poisonous.

Decadent is in the eye of the beholder. A friend thinks owning two houses is decadent, but sees nothing wrong with having a VCR at both places. Now that's decadent.

But not as decadent as crystal baby bottles.

Did anybody manage to do without electricity completely on Aug. 10? Bob and I certainly feel a good protest was in order (we have to do something to get the government to pay attention to conservation), but we weren't 100 percent, either.

We heated water for tea at breakfast. Oh, yeah, we had some toast, too. And in the evening, Bob watched a game on TV.

That's not too bad. But what we really ought to do is unplug our inefficient upright freezer. It's a conservationist's nightmare.

I've had some good news of Kabba Jalloh. Only days after writing of his latest misfortune, I learned that he is out of isolation. (Tuberculosis is treated much more humanely these days.)

The young exchange student still must undergo therapy for his wasted muscles, but the medical people have gotten his autoimmune disease under control. Kabba hopes to leave the hospital soon, start to make up the spring classes he couldn't finish — and even plan for a winter studying exotic plants in Florida.

Way to go, Kabba!

Trying to write with a recuperating hyperactive in the same room is a real challenge. We saw a mouse this morning, a cute little guy, nosing around by the antique icebox (lead-lined — imagine the neurological effects on the family that used to eat its contents daily).

Bob's too kind-hearted to set a trap unless it becomes absolutely necessary. He'd rather entice the little fellow to leave.

So he opened the door and waited. A big fly flew in. Bob flapped a yardstick in the corner as a mouse-encourager. Nothing happened.

Now he's sitting there armed with a yardstick and a flyswatter, waiting for Godot. The man has too much time on his hands.

Bad news on the incinerator front. A chart published in a daily paper shows Grosse Pointes' incinerator to be the single worst source of mercury in the state.

That we were having emission problems isn't new. But with all the fuss being raised about Detroit's incinerator emissions, it was a surprise to find that Grosse Pointes' emissions were more than three times as high (2.19 tons per year compared to .60 tons).

It's clear that we have to do something. Obviously the battery recycling isn't thorough enough or there is another source of mercury going in with the trash. Now we are taking refuse from several other communities, who may — or may not — have a system to remove batteries from the waste stream.

Incinerators are, I think, a necessary part of our system of waste disposal. The Grosse Pointes and their partners are doing their part with recycling and composting in order to reduce the waste stream.

Getting manufacturers to cut down on packaging is important, too, but isn't as directly in our power to control. But the incinerator is. We can regulate pretty well what goes in, how we contain the emissions, and how we dispose of the ash.

We need to do a better job.

On a happier note, I just received my first French chain letter. It sure sounds authentic: A fellow named Joe Million won 40,000 pounds as a result of it (and lost it again when he broke the chain). But it's a stringent chain, requiring 20 copies to be sent out at once.

Yikes, I'm not sure I have 20 amis et partenaires!

Consider yourself a recipient, dear reader, and pass it along. Remember, "N'envoyez pas d'argent, car le hasard n'a pas de prix."

Ain't it the truth.

Disheartened

To the Editor:

Another patch of yesterday is soon to be gone forever. I can't believe how saddened I've been at Jacobson's announcing they will open Sundays.

My little girl memories of Sunday were always church, then an all-day swimfest at the park in summer and, in winter, church and catechism then a scurried jaunt home so we could squeeze our frosted toes through the heat vent and cozily curl up to Bill Kennedy's showtime, all the while the waft of something scrumptious cooked for Sunday dinner. It was all just so simple (rather Norman Rockwellish, thinking back) but I'm still touched by its happy recollection.

And to be perfectly honest, I must confess also to many a Sunday possessing a pervasive, seemingly endless boredom, but so what.

In today's crazed, impersonal, fast-forwarded world of fax machines and microwaves, car phones and computers, I would think a handful of boredom would be welcome and maybe just what the doctor ordered!

It was sad enough when the malls went so decadently greedy 20 years ago or so. But at least in "our little town" The Village, for the most part, still held on to that semblance of tradition where, for 24 wee hours, one could view the world all silent and stilled in a "day of rest" and you could relax, regroup and stop to smell the roses (secure in the knowledge that "business as usual" was just one little tomorrow away.)

To this day I find a happiness and respect for the little merchant whose door reads: Closed on Sunday. As irony would have it I wrote two years ago to compliment Jake's on the wonderful Santa they had and further commended them for their closed-Sunday policy which I erroneously assumed would forever remain thus.

Of course, it's not that I don't realize I simply don't have to shop there on Sunday and, assuredly, I won't. It's the whole meaningful tradition I hate to see lost.

Like a preservationist hates to see a significant relic give way to a wrecking ball. Like so many of us who remember the grandness of Hudson's downtown and were saddened by its unbelievable demise.

In a dog-eat-dog world, there is a certain comfort and security in a lasting tradition. And I suppose the bottom line for me is dreaming this not-so-little-dream that my children might know all I know of happiness and more, and that all the recollections I hold dear could be theirs also to withdraw from their memory banks.

And while I'm droning on here I might hasten to add that beyond the loss of tradition, bad-timing is also an issue here. In a time when all of our collective consciences should be raised about giving this weary old planet of ours a break and conserving energy, Jacobson's is calling its employees (who previously most likely enjoyed having one solid day off to be able to make plans for) to drive in from various distances, while they (Jake's) fire up their furnaces (or A/C), click on the lights, turn on the registers and pay all the overhead for a few hours.

What a waste. Wouldn't it be more sensible, ecological and economical to just stay open til 8 p.m. during the week, if need be?

Well, there you have it — my unasked for 2 cents on the matter. I view the whole thing as the loss of one of the truly last vestiges of a tradition and the crumbling of the class act I always thought Jacobson's to be.

I'd like to dream that an avalanche of letters such as mine could be the key that would lock up Jacobson's Sunday doors again. But, sadly, I know that won't be. God, I'm starting to worry that I'm a Martian from another planet or maybe just the corniest of throwbacks from another generation since I am seemingly the only one this bothers. I wish it didn't. (I'm considering analysis.)

And so while the rest of the world around me shops till it drops, I'll put the kettle on for a peaceful cup of tea and say a silent little prayer that: Families find times to get together again; the Earth untaps new energy supplies for itself to make up for the overload; and that maybe — just maybe — the wonder of Christmas, at least, might always remain sacred!

Summer treats

To the Editor:

Before the summer disappears, I'd like to comment on one of its greatest pleasures here in Grosse Pointe — the many free concerts open to the public.

With the sponsorship of many organizations, Village Records and Tapes and the Grosse Pointe Village Association have put on yet another series of Music on the Plaza concerts in the Village. As in other years, the variety of quality entertainment was terrific, the sound and seating were fine. And the weather was glorious, to say the least. Thanks to all involved.

Another series in the area is the Concerts in the Park, sponsored by the Grosse Pointe Park Recreation Commission and city council, and held at Patterson Park. There's still time for Pointers to catch the last of the monthly concerts, Sunday, Aug. 25, from 7 to 8:30. It's particularly good to see the Park opening its facilities to residents of other Pointes. Thanks for the graciousness, and example of community solidarity.

Other free music opportunities this summer have included the military band concert at the War Memorial, the Grosse Pointe Community Band show at Grosse Pointe South, and countless carillon concerts.

Thanks to the thoughtfulness of many community-minded people, willing to work hard and plan for success, the summer has been a treat. We've really had something to sing about. Here's hoping next year will be even more fun.

Response

To the Editor:

I would like to help ease, if I can, some of William Scott Burke's concerns about Bon Secours Hospital as set forth in his Aug. 15 letter to the editor.

As a 10-year, two-day-a-week volunteer at Bon Secours, I speak from a standpoint of some knowledge of the operation of this facility.

Burke's concerns seem to be three in number: 1) Expansion of parking around the hospital; 2) Its tax-exempt status; and 3) Rising costs of both health care and taxes.

Parking requirements rise in direct proportion to patient-use of the hospital — naturally. If Burke has lived nearby for 30-odd years as he says, he has seen Bon Secours grow from its beginning as a 10-bed nursing home to its present status as a major, 320-bed hospital. That means expanded parking requirements. Also Bon Secours, with most of its sister institutions, has encouraged expansion of outpatient use of hospital facilities, as against room care, in an effort to help contain the rising health costs that bother Burke — along with all the rest of us.

As a volunteer assigned to physical therapy and cardiopulmonary departments, I am in excellent position to observe the growth of outpatient care in these two departments — particularly physical therapy.

It's real, and all these patients need parking.

Burke knows more about the precise number of parking places and court-validation of the numbers than I do. And he's obviously stood by and counted the number of valet parking (35) and handicapped parking (10) places. I think the handicapped places need no justification. This is a common necessity today at most hospitals.

As to valet parking, this, too, is a rising need. With all 10 handicapped places taken (as they seemingly always are), what would a handicapped person do to get in the front door other than have his/her car parked by a valet? Incidentally, valet parking is available at most hospitals today. Otherwise a chaotic situation would arise.

Burke deplors the fact that the Bon Secours pharmacy and cafeteria are "open to the general public in competition with tax paying businesses in the city..." The pharmacy happens to be the closest available for patients leaving the hospital and needing prescriptions filled. Also, it offers substantial discounts to seniors. The cafeteria's "general public" is represented by wives, husbands, mothers, fathers, relatives and friends of patients, who need something to eat.

The rest are doctors, nurses, therapists, aides, volunteers and other employees. The cafeteria exists largely for their benefit.

If Burke doubts this, I would be delighted to have him meet me on a Monday or Thursday — my days "on" — and be my guest at lunch. I'd like to have him count the non-qualified types he can find there.

I don't like to defend rising health costs, because I pay them just as Burke does. But I should point out that if it were not for the volunteers at Bon Secours — more than 650 — costs would be at least as much higher as it would cost to replace these individuals.

Burke finds that all these parking spaces take otherwise tax-paying properties off the tax rolls. And the pharmacy and cafeteria compete with private, tax-paying businesses. But Burke acknowledges that Bon Secours Hospital is the "largest employer in all the Pointes and Harper Woods." Doesn't Burke agree that this adds up to a quite substantial payroll? That all pay taxes — income and every other kind? That they live, shop and buy in the local market? That while the hospital is not a profit center, it is the area's most important economic center?

And all of this is in addition to Bon Secours' presence as a nearby health care and healing facility, which is invaluable to every resident in time of need.

To settle his tax and parking concerns, would Burke rather move Bon Secours out, and replace it with manufacturing facilities? It wouldn't lessen the parking necessities, but the whole operation would be taxable. However, I wouldn't recommend it for heart by-pass surgery.

R.M.S. Titanic, leaving Belfast for Sea trials, 2nd April 1912

Deciding to focus on the esthetics of the ship rather than the tragedy of her sinking, Robert McGreevy's latest painting shows in form and accuracy why the Titanic is considered to be the most perfectly proportioned vessel ever built.

Known for his attention to detail, Robert McGreevy has had each part meticulously studied to accurately depict the line that ran the length of the Titanic's hull.

This may be your last chance to buy Peugeot, Sterling

There are now two fewer choices available to the American new-car buyer, as the French automaker Peugeot and the British Rover Group announced they would drop out of the U.S. market to concentrate on their European sales efforts.

The two nameplates, Peugeot and Sterling, gave up the ghost for much the same reason — despite the excellence of their automobiles, they never really caught on in the United States.

Peugeot's best sales year in this market was 1984, when it sold 20,000 cars for the first and only time. More than 80 percent of its sales were diesel cars and after the General Motors diesel problems killed the market for everyone, Peugeot sales dropped rapidly. By 1990, sales fell to 4,200.

Sterling's best year in the United States was its first, 1987, when it sold more than 14,000 units. It never came close to that again. Sales in 1990 barely topped 4,000, and this year's pace is well below that.

Both nameplates were probably knocked out of the U.S. market by Japanese competition more than European or American, specifically by the new high-level luxury cars from Toyota (Lexus), Nissan (Infiniti) and Honda (Acura). This was particularly ironic in the case of Sterling, because it was a British-built car based on Honda's Acura Legend.

Peugeot was one of the earlier imports, coming in during the mid-'50s wave of Volkswagen Beetle mania and George Romney's campaign on behalf of American Motors' Rambler against the "gas-guzzling dinosaurs."

Like the VW Beetle, that earliest Peugeot to come into the United States was a design left over from the '30s, a handsome little car with flaring fenders and solid construction. "The best value of any import," said the late Bob Lienert, an expert on the growing import market who would later become editor of Automotive News.

Autos

By Richard Wright

Though not well-known in the United States, Peugeot is the third-largest European automaker. Long known for well-crafted cars of solid value, it is the oldest company still producing cars under its original name. The Peugeot family, which started in the textile business in the early 1800s, began building cars in 1889.

Peugeot debuted its 405 sedan in the United States, its last entry in this market, 100 years later in 1989. It had been voted Car of the Year by the European motor press. I had been a fan of the Peugeot 505 and its predecessors, but the 405 quickly became my favorite import. Few buyers agreed and sales in the United States were disappointing from the start.

The 405 is modern, high tech, very European, very stylish. For its price (1991 base starts at $15,490) the Peugeot 405 is hard to beat. In performance, design, comfort, ride and handling, it is in a league with Volvo, Saab, Audi and the lower range of Mercedes-Benz and BMW. And it is French. Or should I say, but it is French.

Americans have never taken French cars very seriously, although Europeans do. Both Peugeot and Renault are best-selling cars in Europe. The more expensive Citroen, owned by Peugeot, is the favored car of French politicians and generals and eccentric geniuses in the United States and elsewhere.

French cars hit their peak in the United States during the '50s, when imports were beginning to sell but were not taken seriously by Detroit, which viewed them as the province of radicals, flakes and college professors. Most imports sold in the '50s were Volkswagen Beetles, but in a very distant second place was the Renault Dauphine, a chic little four-door sedan with rear air-cooled engine that probably had more to do with the Peugeot 405's lack of sales success here than is immediately evident.

The Dauphine was endearing, but only to those who did not own one. They gave their owners a lot of trouble and the French maker had put together a dealer network which seemed dedicated to the idea that it would not be selling these cars long.

So many people had had experiences with the Dauphine that when Peugeot came in with a higher-quality and higher-fashion car, few went for it. The prevailing American attitude then and now seemed to be, "What do the French know about building cars?" In fact, the French know a lot about making cars.

Many historians credit the first automobile to a Frenchman, Nicolas Cugnot, who in 1769 fitted a wagon with a steam engine, fired it up and ran it across a field to become the first person to build and operate a motor vehicle. Cugnot ran his vehicle into a wall, the world's first auto accident. Legend has it that he was arrested for his trouble, the world's first moving violation.

The first internal combustion engine was built in 1860 by Etienne Lenoir in France. Armond Peugeot and his brothers began building cars in 1889 and Louis Renault in 1898. In fact, there were a number of car makers in France years before Ransom Olds and Henry Ford began building cars in the United States.

Andre Citroen began building cars in 1919 and introduced one of the auto industry's milestone cars in 1934, the Traction Avant (front-wheel drive). Etore Bugatti built some of the grandest cars in history in France, including the Royale that Tom Monaghan paid $8.1 million for a few years ago.

Cars from Germany, Japan and Sweden are automotively correct now in fashionable circles, but I have long been a fan of French and British cars. Italian too. So I am sorry to see the Sterling go also, although it did lack one thing that makes British cars endearing — it was not the least bit eccentric. This was undoubtedly because of its Japanese heritage.

The Sterling was an excellent, high-performing and comfortable sedan as might be expected of a car designed by Honda and built by Rover. Rover had long built luxury cars in Britain, and occasionally exported them to the United States, especially in the late '50s and early '60s when a sizable part of the population was in revolt against Detroit's "insolent chariots" and "gas-guzzling dinosaurs" and would buy anything from Europe. Not from Japan yet, "made in Japan" still meant cheap and tinny. But most Rovers were a bit too British for most Americans.

Once while driving a Rover 3500 in the United Kingdom, I had to pull off the road at dusk

The Pininfarina-styled Peugeot 405 was the last new model from the French maker to come to the United States.

Sterling 827 Si Oxford Edition combined solid Honda design with British styling and comfort touches.

to conduct a search for the headlamp switch, which was inexplicably located on the steering column below the dashboard. But the Rover 3500 was an excellent car, a good performer with one of the few V-8s made in the United Kingdom.

Then, of course, all British cars in those earlier years were haunted by the "Prince of Darkness," the title earned by Lucas for its wiring. The Prince of Darkness is a myth that still pops up from time to time, although Lucas long ago sold off the offending units and no longer makes wiring for British cars. (In fact, it more recently produced components for the much-praised Patriot missile.)

The Sterling did have some quality problems after its introduction in 1987. Those were largely solved, but the combination of problems with the fact that this was a British car hurt sales. If it had been a Honda, it probably would not have been damaging. But Americans don't think the British know much about cars either. Again, not true.

Most of the Sterling organization in the United States will remain with what will become a parts and service operation to accommodate Sterling owners and the 134 dealers the company had, which still have about 1,000 cars in inventory.

The 151 Peugeot dealers in the United States have about 1,400 new cars in inventory, so if you want something a little different, this may be your last chance to pick up a Peugeot or a Sterling.

If you are worried about buying an "orphan," consider the Studebaker. Or the Hudson. Or the Packard. After Studebaker announced it was ceasing production, the car's value dropped sharply. Now, if they are in good condition, they are worth more than they were new.

How to calculate what it costs to operate your automobile

Although operating a car consumes a large part of the average family's annual expenses, few car owners could tell you how much it actually costs them. The Michigan Association of CPAs offers the following guidelines to help you calculate just how much your car costs you and how to cut some of the expenses.

To obtain a realistic estimate of your annual operating costs, you must take into account expenses associated with registration, licensing, inspection fees and insurance. The last item is especially important. Insurance costs include the premiums you pay for liability, comprehensive and collision insurance. The price you pay for auto insurance depends on a number of factors including your age and sex, where you live, your driving record and the type of car you are insuring.

There seems to be no end to the rise in auto insurance rates, but there are some steps you can take to reduce the cost. First of all, you can buy the right car. The model you are insuring has a big impact on how much you will pay. Basically, your premium is affected by how well your car can withstand a crash, how expensive it is to repair, how enticing it is to thieves and how likely it is to encourage speeding.

Because small cars don't hold up as well in a crash, they generally cost more to insure than large cars. Foreign cars require a higher premium than American cars because foreign parts cost more. Sports cars and luxury models are the cars of choice for thieves, so expect to pay higher premiums if your taste leans toward these models.

Another step you can take to reduce your insurance costs is to increase your deductible. Raising your deductible from $200 to $500 can result in a lower premium. You might also consider dropping collision coverage on older cars.

In calculating the cost of owning a car, be sure to consider depreciation — the amount by which your car's value will decline during a specific period. To determine depreciation, subtract the trade-in value you project for your car from its purchase price. Divide the difference by the number of years you plan to keep the car.

The amount you spend for gas is related to how much you drive and the kind of car you drive. For an exact accounting of your costs for gas, record the amount you pay each time you buy gas. Divide your total monthly miles by the number of miles per gallon your car gets and multiply this figure by the average cost for a gallon of gas.

When you calculate your costs for maintenance and repair, include major repairs, ongoing maintenance such as oil changes and the cost of any service required under your new car warranty.

To lower the cost of driving your car, experts suggest you follow your car manufacturer's recommended tune-up program. Keep a log of gas mileage and when it drops, have the car checked. Keeping your tires inflated properly, and accelerating and decelerating slowly and smoothly can also save you money.

CPAs add that, depending on where you live and work and how you drive your car, tools, parking and even traffic tickets may also represent significant expenses and should be factored into your annual car costs.

Is your car vacation-ready?

Cars are a lot like people. When they're healthy, they feel like taking on the world. When they're not, they can put a damper on an otherwise wonderful vacation.

Symptoms of automotive ailments, such as a thumping tire or noisy brakes, often are omens of trouble you want to avoid.

Sometimes your only warning will come as a result of a preventive maintenance checkup.

On vehicles built since the mid-80s, electronic and computerized components may require a preventive diagnostic checkup to be sure all systems are working properly.

Here, from the Car Care Council, is a 10-point checklist. This, with the help of your automotive service shop, can help prevent annoying and expensive trouble on the road.

Check all fluids.

IV. Battery/Electrical System

Summer Festival ends with a bang

The Grosse Pointe Symphony performed before a crowd of nearly 1,400 people at the final concert of the Grosse Pointe War Memorial's Summer Music Festival on Aug. 12. The concert, co-sponsored by Cottage Hospital, was followed by a display of fireworks over Lake St. Clair.

"We were very happy with the whole concert series, especially the Grosse Pointe Symphony concert," said Mark Weber, president of the War Memorial. "The weather was perfect, the concert was superb and we had the biggest crowd ever."

Libraries must begin to plan now for tomorrow's needs

By Ronald J. Bernas
Staff Writer

If the country's libraries are going to continue to be part of the nation's social fabric in the next century, it's imperative that those in charge take steps now to ensure that people in the year 2000 and beyond will still have access to information they will need.

That's the goal the nearly 1,000 delegates at the July 9-13 White House Conference on Library and Information Services held in Washington, D.C., charged the libraries of the country to achieve. It's a charge the delegates gave with only a little direction — a statement of policy for the government to work toward.

RA/UDAA case in the Farms

The practice of stealing a car from its occupant at gunpoint — known as RA/UDAA — that has been widely reported in Detroit recently, occurred Aug. 8 in Grosse Pointe Farms.

At 11:33 p.m., two Park teens, ages 16 and 17, were getting into their 1989 Suzuki off-road vehicle in a restaurant parking lot in the 18400 block of Mack when a man walked up, put a gun to the teen driver's head and told him to get out of the car.

The gunman pulled the driver out of the car as the passenger got out. The man then drove off with the vehicle and was last seen eastbound on Mack.

Neither of the youths was injured.

Twenty-two minutes later, Detroit police discovered the vehicle in Baldock Park at Chandler Park Drive and Canyon. The vehicle had rolled over behind a hill and was resting on the driver's side. It was heavily damaged and no longer driveable. The robber had fled.

A Detroit canine unit was brought in, but was unable to track the gunman.

Grosse Pointe Farms resident Margit Jackson attended the conference as an alternate delegate. She was also a member of the state conference held in May which helped come up with issues for the national convention. Delegates were divided into four groups: Library professionals, friends and trustees of libraries, government and the general public. The number of delegates from each state was determined by its population.

U.S. territories and Native Americans had their own delegations.

Jackson, a CPA who is treasurer of the Edsel & Eleanor Ford House, went as a member of the general public category. She has an interest in libraries, served on the Grosse Pointe

Motorist snatches shopper's purse

A man driving a car through the parking lot at the southwest corner of Mack and Moross Aug. 16 shortly after noon snatched a purse from a woman who was loading her purchases into her car.

The man was driving slowly through the parking lot in a silver-gray Ford Tempo. The woman told police that when the man got next to her, he reached out and grabbed the purse from the child's seat of her shopping cart and sped away.

Antique show, sale

Two Grosse Pointe residents will display items at the Antique Show and Sale at Universal Mall, Dequindre at 12 Mile, Thursday through Sunday, Sept. 5-8.

They are Debbie Russell of the Farms and Ed Berry of the Woods.

Hours are 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. Thursday through Saturday and noon to 5 p.m. on Sunday. There is no admission charge.

schools' strategic planning committee and the library's on-site budgeting committee.

Of the more than 100 topics the conference members discussed and formed policies on, there were three overwhelming themes: improving literacy, increasing productivity and enhancing democracy.

The delegates voted on several suggested statements of public policy that they hoped the government would work toward:

- Eliminate illiteracy in the United States before the turn of the century.
- Expand the definition of literacy to include everything a person will need to be a productive member of the work force in the 21st century.
- Ensure that all people have easy access to the broadest and deepest range of information possible.
- Ensure that all Americans have access to the libraries where that information is available.
- Encourage the business

Joyriders borrow boats at Neff

Someone enjoyed boat rides at Neff Park last weekend — unfortunately, with other people's boats.

On Aug. 17, a City resident reported that someone had used and damaged his boat while he was away.

A day earlier, another resident said someone took his boat on a joyride. The owner said the boat was returned to the wrong well and a fire extinguisher and emergency day-chemicals were missing.

community to form partnerships with the libraries to aid both — businesses could pay the library for research services of librarians.

"We cannot take our libraries for granted," Jackson said. "But the libraries are not the kind of thing people get excited about. Mention libraries and everybody goes 'ho-hum.'"

And it is that attitude that has contributed to the closing of libraries across the state and the country. Nationally, government funding for libraries and their programs has been on a steady decline, until this year when it rose slightly.

The "ho-hum" attitude is reflected in the Pointes, too, where since 1987 voters have turned down two millage campaigns to fund expanded libraries.

And that's the reason the conference was called.

The libraries, Jackson said, must market their services aggressively and bring more people through their doors and once again create a nation of readers. Libraries must create programs, the convention said, to bring in younger readers.

A democracy can only work if the electorate is well-informed and literate. But the government is also obligated to make the information available to its people, the delegation said. National data bases must be formed so all people are able to access them.

The next step in the process is for each state to reconvene its delegation later this year to look at the recommendations and to start plans where they can implement them statewide.

One major issue the convention did not look at specifically was funding the new programs. They felt some of the other issues were more important at this time.

It was the second national conference on libraries. The first was held in 1979 and at that time it was agreed that in 10 years another would need to be held. It took a few extra years before the 1991 conference was organized.

Jackson participated because she feels the libraries are a vital part of the nation and must continue to be viable for the future of the country.

"When I was growing up the library was always there and we always went there, it was just something you did," she said. "We need to make sure that they're there in the coming years."

INTRODUCING THE RE-DESIGNED, RE-CALIBRATED, RE-ENGINEERED, RE-INVENTED BMW 3-SERIES.

In today's volatile economy, people of means are asking a question that should alarm in the world's automobile makers:

"Exactly what is it that makes this car worth the money?"

The new BMW 325i sports sedan welcomes such scrutiny. Because not only does it embody BMW's traditional passion for driving, it also offers an entirely new set of more practical-minded virtues: namely efficiency, durability, safety and ease of maintenance. To name a few.

BMW'S IMPACT-ACTIVATED SAFETY SYSTEM

The new BMW 325i sedan is built on the premise that driving should be fun. But, at the same time, driving safely is infinitely more satisfying.

The best defense, of course, is a car that has been designed to help you avoid accidents in the first place. So the 325i offers a firm grip of the road, responsive steering and quick acceleration, as well as our latest-generation antilock brakes.

The new 325i is also prepared for that which you can't avoid. In the event of a frontal collision, it is designed to launch an entire sequence of events to help minimize injuries.

Hydraulic bumpers absorb part of the initial impact energy, while a system of "crush tubes" absorbs yet more. The seat belts tighten their grip. Three sensors trigger the driver's-side airbag. The interior lights are turned on and all the doors are automatically unlocked, to aid passengers in escape or rescue.

THE NEXT BEST THING TO A CAR THAT MAINTAINS ITSELF.

At the heart of the new 325i lies a new 189-hp, 24-valve engine that is so highly advanced, it demands very little regular maintenance beyond the simple act of changing the oil, filters and plugs.

The sophisticated electronics of the 325i incorporate a "black box" system that can play back past engine events for the BMW technician, and in so doing, point out problems that could otherwise be difficult to detect. Or even describe.

When it comes to comfort, the 325i is now even longer, taller and wider than before. It offers firmly supported seats. Even a unique microfiltration system that can remove dust and pollen, and most odors, from interior air.

The 325i also offers the comfort of a 4 year/50,000-mile, bumper-to-bumper warranty. A Roadside Assistance plan that you can call upon any day, on any road or highway in the U.S.A. And, perhaps most remarkably, an MSRP of only $27,990.

If you would like to obtain literature on the new 3-Series, we strongly suggest that you visit your nearest authorized BMW dealer. While you're there, you'll be able to take an invigorating test drive. You'll see exactly how the 325i not only raises the standard for the sports sedan, it redefines the class.

Social Security critics fail to understand its changing role

As the years pass, time seems to play tricks on us. Often the days drag but the years fly by. We are often surprised when we are reminded that it's time to celebrate a yearly event or fulfill an obligation when it seems as though it was just yesterday that we had done so. Perhaps that is why we were taken aback by a story in a local newspaper announcing that next year was election year. It seemed like the dust had just settled from the last one.

Nevertheless, it was a welcome reminder that as older citizens there is much to be gained by keeping up with the news concerning possible candidates, their qualifications and their priorities.

Older Americans represent a major chunk of the voting population. As a group they can, by being enlightened voters, protect what they have and keep their benefits in line with the economy.

Fair and concerned legislation will become increasingly important in view of what appears to be a trend toward a critical view of benefits received now by older citizens. Never mind that many live at the poverty level, and that even those with private pensions are finding it difficult to maintain themselves because of inflation. But there are dissenters who believe that too much is being done for the older population.

Elizabeth Ann Kutz argues in a book "The Benefits of Old Age" (University of Chicago Press), "No problem occurs in old age that does not occur in other age groups whether it be poverty, mental or physical disability, isolation or malnutrition."

Prime Time

By Marian Trainor

Be that as it may, young people have many years ahead to better their lot. All that older citizens have is the here and now.

Implicit in such arguments against benefits for senior citizens is the rising rate of Social Security taxes. It is true that the increasing number of older citizens and the decline in the ranks of younger workers puts a strain on Social Security but it is also true that older citizens are not the only beneficiaries of Social Security. It includes other segments of the population. The support of dependent children is an example. This excellent benefit comes out of Social Security funds. Such a benefit is right and proper. The only question that might be asked is this: Should such benefits come from Social Security or would it be better if they came from a tax-supported fund?

Social Security is after all a trust fund. Workers who have paid into it should expect to reap the benefits of those contributions at retirement age. When Social Security entitlements are shifted from one program to another the fund is diffused, making it difficult to honor its first obligation.

Another factor which critics of old-age benefits might consider is that if benefits for retirees are seriously cut then families might have to support them. This is not a happy proposition to ponder. Such a situation would be demeaning to older people and place a burden on the young generation who in inflationary times have a difficult time supporting themselves and their families even with both spouses working. Better for all to contribute to Social Security while working toward ways and means of creative funding and more efficient disbursements of funds but not curtailment.

Another concern of older citizens is funding of schools. Bond issues and millages for schools are being defeated regularly. The elder electorate has been blamed for these defeats by school officials and young adults. There is no doubt that schools need additional support. But taxes on older people are becoming excessive and burdensome. When it comes to older taxpayers who vote against increases, shouldn't the question be asked: All of their working lives they have built and supported schools; shouldn't they have a tax break now in view of curtailed incomes?

Perhaps both schools and older citizens would get a better break if school taxes were tied to income rather than property value. There are older affluent citizens who could afford to contribute more to education but it seems unfair to make it difficult for those with less to hang onto their homes because of increased taxes. It is a touchy subject but one that needs exploration, consideration and new solutions.

and collecting great numbers of retirement checks. Actuaries have estimated that a single year added to the life expectancy or subtracted for early retirement could increase long-term Social Security costs by more than a third.

Former Social Security Commissioner Stanford G. Ross said that people don't understand the way Social Security works and how it has evolved into a broad social — instead of retirement — program. They must recognize today's payroll tax for what it is — a tax not just to support the elderly but also the disabled, sick and their dependents.

Seniors offered home safety check

Calvary Center's chore department has begun a new program to identify safety hazards in the homes of older adults.

Qualified home repair staff will complete a 16-point checklist and correct any identified hazards.

Checklist points consist of the following: security items, such as adequate exterior lighting and window locks; fire items, such as frayed cords and fusebox hazards; and miscellaneous items, such as wobbly furniture.

The free checklist can be completed within 30 minutes.

To qualify, you must be 60 or older and live in the Grosse Pointes, Harper Woods, or the area of Detroit bounded by Alter Road and Kelly. Calvary's chore department is partially funded by the Detroit Area Agency on Aging.

To sign up for the program, or for more information, call Calvary Center at 881-3374.

The $25 registration fee includes dinner and entertainment on Friday, breakfast and lunch on Saturday, and all workshops and materials. A Saturday-only rate is $20.

Her ride is part of the Pedal for Power North-South Ride, and she will join 75 other bicyclists on the 1,612 mile, three-week trip Sept. 21-Oct. 13.

Otul, who has been a staff member of Assumption's exercise program since 1978, said: "I feel Assumption has given so much to me and the community. I would love to give something back."

A portion of the proceeds will also go toward Bicyclists' Educational and Legal Foundation. To pledge a donation, call the center, 21800 Marter Road, 779-6111.

Fight spiraling costs of prescription drugs

If the cost of prescription medicines is breaking your health care budget, you are not alone. Consider the fiscal nightmare facing University of Michigan pharmacist Richard F. de Leon.

As director of Pharmacy Services for U-M Hospitals, de Leon must find a way to absorb the cost of two new prescription medications — one to stimulate the growth of human bone marrow and a second to cure a potentially fatal infection. Each drug costs thousands of dollars per dose.

"While they only will be used by a few patients, these two drugs alone have the potential to double U-M Hospitals' $18 million annual expenditure for pharmaceuticals," said de Leon, associate dean for clinical sciences and associate professor in the U-M College of Pharmacy.

According to de Leon, pharmacists worry that the high cost of new drugs created with sophisticated genetic engineering technology — combined with average annual price increases of 10 percent to 15 percent for existing drugs — could push the United States into a system of rationed health care.

"These new drugs represent a revolution in hospital therapy, but who's going to pay for them?" he asked. "If we cannot afford to treat everyone with these new medications, who should decide which patients get treated?"

Although consumers will ultimately pick up the tab for spiraling prices, de Leon says they have little control over how much prescription medicines cost. "The problem is there's no mechanism in place to regulate prices, particularly for new medications," he said. "Pharmaceutical manufacturers base their pricing on a variety of conditions, including market potential and whether there is any direct competition for the product."

Pharmaceutical manufacturers maintain it costs an average of $300 million in research and development costs to bring a new drug to market, according to de Leon. "It certainly is true that R&D costs are rising every day, and pharmaceutical firms must include those costs in product pricing," he said.

De Leon is critical of the billions of dollars pharmaceutical manufacturers spend annually on sales representatives and promotional campaigns for specific drugs aimed at physicians and pharmacists.

"In 1986, the pharmaceutical industry spent $5 billion on advertising and marketing. Some of this marketing effort takes the form of sweepstakes, contests, frequent prescriber promotions and free samples," de Leon said.

"Physicians have no economic incentive to consider low-cost alternatives when they prescribe a medication. Indeed, many prescribers aren't aware how much patients or their insurance companies must pay for these drugs. Those who are best informed often ask that a generic equivalent be dispensed, rather than a more expensive proprietary product."

Community pharmacists are in a good position to help consumers economize as much as possible with prescription medications, says de Leon. But first, consumers must be aware of drug pricing and be willing to complain when prices go up. Here's what de Leon says consumers can do:

- If you are concerned about prescription drug prices and marketing practices, contact your state and federal legislators.

- Let your physician and pharmacist know about your concern — whether or not you have prescription insurance coverage.

- Keep a written record of all your prescription medications and how much they cost. Take it with you to every office visit. If your physician prescribes something other than your usual medication for the same condition, ask why or ask your pharmacist to check for you.

- When you select a pharmacy, choose one that maintains a permanent record of all medicines prescribed for you and your family. Insist that the pharmacist, instead of a store clerk, give you the medication and answer questions about its use and interactions.

- Ask your pharmacist if a generic or less expensive alternative medication is available.

- Ask your doctor if you are eligible for special financial assistance programs created by some pharmaceutical manufacturers to help low-income patients afford expensive medications.

- Be aware that direct marketing to consumers through television and magazine advertisements, like recent campaigns for allergy medicines, puts you in the position of asking your doctor to prescribe a certain product. Follow your doctor's guidance, rather than pressuring him or her for a particular medication.

elect a candidate of their choice, according to Hurricane Hardaway, principal attorney with the Wayne County corporation counsel.

"We think it's an equitable plan," Okotie-Eboh said. "It's a bipartisan plan."
Due to the decline in population since the 1980 census, the 15 county commission districts must be redrawn based on the 1990 census figures. In 1980, the county's population was 2,337,981; by 1990, the population had fallen to 2,111,687, a loss of 226,294 residents.

The population loss — predominantly in Detroit — means the average population of each district has to be reduced from the 155,865 residents in 1980 to 140,779 now, an average reduction of 15,086 people per district.

The 1st District, which includes a portion of Detroit, currently has 154,061 residents, which means it will have to be cut by roughly 13,282 residents.

Under the bipartisan reapportionment plan, the Park's 12,857 residents will be spun off to bolster Detroit's 2nd District, which now stops at Alter and Mack. The redrawn boundary, if approved, will be moved east to Cadioux.

Currently, the five Pointes' 49,195 Wayne County residents make up 32 percent of the 1st Commission District. Under the bipartisan plan, the 36,338 residents from the four remaining Pointes would make up 26 percent of the 138,996 residents in the redrawn 1st District.

Under a state Supreme Court ruling in 1982, the population of county commission districts cannot vary more than 11.9 percent. The population of the new 1st District under the bipartisan plan falls within the allowable range.

Park residents would make up a mere 9 percent of the 139,011 residents in the 2nd District as proposed in the bipartisan reapportionment plan.

The Park has the highest proportion of Democrats among the Pointes.

In 1990, Democrat Cavanagh failed to win any of the Pointes except the Park, where he triumphed by an eight-vote margin. Overall, he had 5,070 more votes than his challenger.

When asked if she considered taking Detroiters instead of Park residents out of the 1st District to supplement the 2nd District, Lamb said that may have jeopardized possible Republican seats in western Wayne County.

If the five Pointes were to remain in the shrunken 1st District, they would make up 35 percent of the district's population; including Harper Woods' 14,903 residents, the 1st District's suburban residents would make up 46 percent of the district.

Considering the suburban communities' consistent high voter-turnout, a 1st District including the five Pointes and Harper Woods could have become a suburban dominated seat.

Okotie-Eboh said her and Lamb's plan is just a proposal. They said there will be modifications and changes. At the same time, the apportionment commission will be considering other plans as well.

So far, the bipartisan plan and a Hispanic Coalition plan have been the only proposals submitted. Others are expected to be presented during the coming weeks.

The apportionment commission has until Sept. 27 to submit a reapportionment plan to the county clerk and secretary of state. The deadline for submitting reapportionment proposals to the commission is Sept. 6.

The next meeting is Friday, Aug. 23, at 1 p.m. in room B-57 — in the basement near the cafeteria — in the City-County Building at Woodward and Jefferson.

Youth IDs available at War Memorial

The Grosse Pointe War Memorial has scheduled dates when students can obtain a photo identification card, which is needed to purchase a ticket to any of its youth dances or to participate in Ski Hi.

Photo IDs can be purchased on Thursday, Aug. 22, Friday, Aug. 23, or Saturday, Aug. 24 from 2 to 4 p.m. The cost is $3 a person, and students must bring some identification, such as a school schedule or report card, library card, or park pass. The first youth dance, for students in grades 6-8 who reside or attend school in Grosse Pointe, is a Back-to-School Dance on Friday, Sept. 20, followed by a Halloween Dance on Friday, Oct. 25.

For more information on youth activities, call the Youth Hotline at 881-8160, or call the War Memorial at 881-7511, Monday through Saturday, 9 a.m. to 9 p.m.

the details. When they were done, they had a plan that both were satisfied with, Rogers said, and a plan that will cost the hospital considerably more to complete.

The plan calls for heavy screening with landscaping and a brick wall along Cadioux. Evergreens and park benches will be placed between the existing sycamores.

"It's designed so that when you drive by," Rogers said, "you can't tell it's a parking lot."

Other residents were concerned about the tax dollars that will be lost when Bon Secours, a non-profit institution, converts the property to hospital use.

When the homes are taken off the tax rolls, the City will lose, at current rates, $5,628. The hospital, however, has agreed to increase its service fee to the city by the amount of taxes lost.

Councilwoman Smith asked if the county and schools would be compensated in some way for the $17,806 they're losing. DeVries said no.

Councilman Peter Waldmeir asked if the hospital would consider increasing its contribution to the community. DeVries said he will look at increasing the hospital's service fee to the city.

Park resident and architect William Kessler, who lives on Cadioux, called for a spirit of cooperation.

"I think the parking issue is inevitable," he said. "Our best bet is to do it well. ... That's the best we can hope for. They own the property."

Group robs electronics store in Woods

Several pieces of electronics equipment were stolen July 31 from the Radio Shack on Mack in the Woods while the two store employees were distracted.

According to police reports, six people in three groups of two entered the store at 3:30 p.m. While some of them kept the store's two employees busy, others took two fax machines, a scanner and a phone.

He urged hospital and city officials to make sure that they provide a unique and handsome streetscape that will be pleasing to the residents and community.

Next Monday's special meeting of the council will be at 7:30 p.m. at City Hall.

House entered, money taken

A Woods resident in the 500 block of Peachtree awoke on the morning of Aug. 2 and discovered someone had entered her house during the night and taken money from her wallet.

She found the door to the garage to the house half open and the overhead garage door up. There were no signs of forced entry. She told police someone had taken money from her wallet, which was in her purse on a dining room chair.

She said she heard a noise downstairs shortly after midnight, but dismissed it.

Garage burgled

A garage in the 2200 block of East Eight Mile in the Woods was broken into sometime between 7 p.m. Aug. 3 and 6:45 a.m. the following morning.

Taken were four wheel covers from a 1985 Cadillac, a Craftsman lawn mower and a Black & Decker electric edger.

Senator visits

St. John Hospital and Medical Center gave U.S. Sen. Donald Riegle a first hand look at its neonatal intensive care unit recently. St. John is the only hospital in Detroit's eastern metropolitan area equipped and staffed to care for premature babies and other newborns with serious health problems.

Riegle is gathering information from health care providers on legislation proposing to replace Medicaid with an employer-sponsored program providing adequate, affordable health insurance for every citizen.

Of the nearly 500 babies admitted to St. John Hospital's 30-bed NICU each year, 40 percent are covered by Medicaid.

40-year businesses sought

In celebration of the city's 40th anniversary, the St. Clair Shores Historical Commission has undertaken a special project to commemorate those businesses which have been in continuous operation within the city since 1951.

Businesses that meet the criterion will be recognized by the commission and awarded a special 40th anniversary commemorative certificate.

To be eligible for nomination, a business must have been in continuous operation since 1951 under the same name, though not necessarily at the same location.

If your business meets the criterion, contact the St. Clair Shores Public Library, 22500 Eleven Mile, telephone 771-9021, to register. The St. Clair Shores Historical Commission will make the final selection and will award the certificate.

In addition the Historical Commission will sponsor a historical photographic exhibit on display at the St. Clair Shores Public Library and City Hall. The commission has also published a special limited edition historical keepsake, copies of which are available at the public library.

The present day city of St. Clair Shores was originally part of Orange Township which was created in 1837. In 1843 the township's name was changed from Orange to Erin. Erin Township was split in 1911 with the eastern half becoming Lake Township. Then in 1925 the major part of Lake Township was incorporated as the village of St. Clair Shores. Finally, in 1951, St. Clair Shores adopted its present charter and officially became a city.

Samaritan receives award

Samaritan Health Center of Detroit is one of three hospitals that has received a 1991 Michigan Hospital Association Community Service Award.

Samaritan was cited for its Churches Intervention Project (CIP), a church-based community outreach program aimed at helping individuals overcome substance abuse through prevention, education, training and problem assistance.

The program is based upon the premise that chemical dependency is a disease that can be prevented and overcome. The program does not follow or promote the doctrine of any organized religion or church. It is offered through Detroit churches that have met program guidelines, including the consent of the church's pastor.

The model provides goals, a framework and training specific to each church's needs and resources. Samaritan's CIP substance abuse and prevention specialists offer consultation and assistance.

Muskegon General Hospital in Muskegon and Riverside Osteopathic Hospital in Trenton are the two other Michigan hospitals receiving community service awards.

Each year the Michigan Hospital Association, a state association that represents almost 200 Michigan hospitals through education, advocacy and communication, recognizes hospitals in the state for outstanding contributions to the health and welfare of their communities.

EMT honored

Emergency Medical Technicians Educational Systems Inc. of Grosse Pointe recently presented its first Dr. Ronald P. Laskowski, "Award for Excellence in Emergency Medical Care" to Michael Cupit of East Detroit. Cupit, a Universal Ambulance EMT since 1988, was honored for his outstanding professionalism and clinical expertise while undergoing training offered by EMT Educational Systems at Bon Secours Hospital. He will receive a scholarship for the EMT Educational Systems advanced paramedic program.

The scholarship award program was implemented this year in honor of Laskowski, director of Bon Secours Hospital's Emergency Services Department and EMT Educational Systems. Laskowski has offered classes and clinical training for emergency medical technicians at Bon Secours since 1989.

The Grosse Pointe Farms Beautification Advisory Commission is looking for nominations for the 1991 Beautification Awards Program.

For more information, call the city office at 885-6600 and leave your name and phone number. A commission member will return your call as soon as possible.

Driver damages Neff Park gates

An unknown motorist ran into the gates at Neff Park Aug. 19, but caused little damage.

At 12:55 a.m., the park guard was making his rounds when he noticed the park gates were damaged. Police said that for unknown reasons, someone drove into the closed and locked gates at the City's municipal park at Lakeland and Jefferson.

Police said department of public works employees were able to repair the gates using welding equipment.

Advertising your difference

By Raymond L. Harshman
Michigan District Director
U.S. Small Business Administration

Advertise the advantages of your business by emphasizing how your service or product differs from its competitors. The distinctive features of your product or service will appeal to customers and give them more incentives to buy from you.

To develop an effective advertising strategy: first, evaluate the benefits that competitors are offering to attract their customers. Second, examine the most current market research that is available about your customers. Look for areas where you offer something unique or something more than the competition offers.

Advantages that can be advertised and promoted are of two types: the unique qualities of your business and the ability to fulfill a specific customer need. An example of the first type of advantage is having several business locations.

While this may be the result of your growth plan, you can use it in your advertising strategy. Because of multiple locations, you offer convenience and better distribution of your product or service.

Here are other examples of advertising approaches, based on the unique qualities of a business:

"Established in 1924" shows longevity in the marketplace and provides potential customers with a sense of security about your product. This type of distinction will be particularly effective if new competitors have entered the market.

"Find everything you need in one place" suggests to the customer that it is not necessary to visit several stores to find what is needed. If your business covers many aspects of an industry, say so.

"We specialize in widgets" indicates that you are an expert. You offer the most complete knowledge about the product and any special product parts.

"Over one million satisfied customers" implies acceptance by your customers.

The second type of advantage that can be advertised depends on appealing to customers needs. Such an approach indicates that you really care about your customers and are willing to cater to their interests. Examples of this approach are:

"Quicker service" indicates fast and efficient service. If your market research indicates that your customers value their time, implement a plan to increase the speed of your customer service.

"Open early/late" or "open weekends" provides extra flexibility for customers with busy schedules or who work long hours.

"Satisfaction guaranteed" or "satisfaction, or your money back" suggests a commitment to your product or service and provides customers with an added sense of confidence. Not everyone in the market is willing to take on this type of obligation and it can be extremely effective.

"Customer support service" implies that you are concerned about customer satisfaction and are willing to offer services to help please your customers.

"Free delivery" will be especially attractive to customers who do not want to transport their purchase, especially if it is something large like furniture or a television.

Identify and advertise the unique aspects of your business. They will help you to attract new customers, increase sales volume, and achieve the growth objectives of your business.

If you have a question about small business, call the SBA at (313) 226-6075.

Double vision

Singles seek companionship through clubs, ads

By Margie Reins Smith
 Feature Editor

WHAT HAPPENED TO ALL THE NICE GUYS? I'm not into spandex, cheap thrills or the bar scene. I am attractive, unpretentious, professional, single white female, 28, Catholic, seeking tall single white male 27-35. He should be attractive, down-to-earth, intelligent professional who enjoys spending time with family, friends, dining out and traveling. Reply with letter and photo.

ATTRACTIVE YOUNG CHRISTIAN MAN, 5'9", 150 lbs., brown hair/eyes, seeks young Christian woman, 20-30, who enjoys music and the outdoors. Reply with phone/photo.

adults are adrift, so to speak. Those who have been married awhile or are older are more socially isolated because they've been part of a "couples" network for so long. They often have to rebuild social contacts from the ground up.

Carole Kirby is a psychotherapist in private practice who works with individuals, couples, families and groups. Many of her clients are single adults and single parents.

"After college, it's very hard to meet people," Kirby said. "There aren't as many natural situations for people to come together any more. We're isolated in our apartments or our homes. We get in our cars; go to work; get back in our cars; come home. We don't have extended families, church activities, community centers and such."

Kirby also said that unfortunately, there is often some shame about being single.

She advises single people to develop their own interests and to live lives as fully as possible.

"A single person shouldn't think of himself as half a person just because he's single," Kirby said.

"I encourage people to join organizations and activities that they enjoy, whether it's bowling or sailing or signing up for a class or becoming part of a recycling committee. Not a phony interest. It should be genuine. Sooner or later they'll bump into someone.

"I also encourage single people to initiate outings with friends — with couples and other singles. Singles are often reluctant to do that.

"I also encourage singles to do things alone."

Organizations specifically for single people, Kirby said, are OK, but they often emphasize single-ness

I WOULD LIKE TO MEET an attractive white female 25-35. She should love life, laughter, music, long walks, quiet times, conversation, dancing, romantic evenings. Weight should be proportionate to height. Send letter and photograph.

LUSCIOUS PETITE BLONDE WIDOW looking for younger man, 25-30, for dancing partner, traveling companion, intelligent conversation, possible long-term commitment. Must love animals and children.

I AM NOT MARRIAGE-MINDED. I'm looking for a sincere single man with time for conversation, caring, commitment. A divorced or widowed white male in his 30s who likes gourmet cooking, theater, non-alcoholic evenings and long weekend trips. I'm a 32-year-old never-married attorney who has time on her hands and nobody to share it with. Reply with photo and letter. Convince me you're the best choice.

YOUNG SINGLE MAN SEEKS MIDDLE-AGED financially secure non-smoking attractive slim married professional woman for mutually beneficial nights on the town and more. Must have sense of adventure.

SHAPELY DIVORCED WHITE FEMALE WITH NO CHILDREN seeks attractive unmarried gentleman 40-55 with no dependents for honest friendship and maybe more. If this intrigues you, reply with photo.

ATTRACTIVE, SINCERE CHRISTIAN male, 23 years old, never married, 5'11", 175 lbs., brown hair, blue eyes. Likes tennis, baseball, football, hockey, jazz, TV watching. Looking for friendship and possible lasting commitment. Downriver area. Send phone number.

WANTED: WIDOWER OR DIVORCED GENTLEMAN 60 or over who is financially secure, no dependents, free to travel, interested in monogamous relationship. No photo necessary.

Singles ads (like these fictitious ones) often emphasize physical attributes, according to Carole Kirby, psychotherapist. She urges those who place or respond to ads to exercise caution.

instead of an activity or interest. "The problem with singles is they're often 'on the hunt' and don't really enjoy the activity," she said.

Kirby has mixed feelings about advertising for companionship.

"I know it's difficult to meet others, but ads tend to objectify people. They describe a person's looks and age and weight and height. Not his or her personality. You have to be careful. You have to screen people," she cautioned.

Kirby also encourages divorced people to take care of the grieving and learning from their past experience before rushing into dating.

"This doesn't mean not to socialize," she said. "Just don't make any lifetime commitments in a hurry. It takes one to three years to get over a major loss."

Nonetheless, singles organizations are plentiful.

Elusive, however. We tried to track down a half dozen organizations that are made up primarily of single adults and have meetings or activities in Grosse Pointe and on the east side. We were able to get in touch with three organizations.

Selective Singles

Jacklyn Rolf is coordinator of Selective Singles, a 2-year-old Farmington Hills-based organization of more than 650 singles. She said the organization just formed 11 satellite groups, including groups in Grosse Pointe, St. Clair Shores, Warren and Mount Clemens.

Rolf published a book several years ago that lists more than 100 singles organizations in the Detroit area.

"The book is out of date," she said. "Singles groups don't hold up. People meet each other and quit."

Rolf described herself as a counselor who works with people over 35 who are divorced, widowed, separated or are going through transitions in their lives.

Selective Singles is not a support group, she said.

"It's strictly a social group — mostly composed of college educated, career-oriented single people. I found there were no singles organizations for professional people. Nothing for people who don't want to go to bars," she said.

"Two years ago, I placed ads in several Detroit area newspapers asking if anyone like this was interested in forming a singles group. I planned on inviting those who responded to a meeting.

"I had to have three meetings. About 150 people answered the ad."

Selective Singles evolved from those meetings. The satellite groups meet every three months at local restaurants. Dues are $25 a year.

Rolf said members organize social events around activities like cards or board games or conversation or discussions — usually on Sunday afternoons. The host or hostess decides how many people can be accommodated.

Efforts are made to keep the ratio of men and women 50-50, she said. If the host plans an event for 30 people, for instance, he or she no longer takes reservations from women after 15 women have signed up.

"And the women always sign up early, bless their hearts," Rolf said. "Men have to be prodded."

Selective Singles divides members into three age groups: 21-35; 36-50; 51 and up. Activities specify age groups, but they're only used as guidelines. Rolf said any member may attend any party.

"More than 50 percent of our members are between the ages of 33 and 55," she said.

For information about Selective Singles, call Ramona at 884-2986, or Mary Lou at 886-0465.

Sailing Singles

Marleen Spaulding, membership chairman for Sailing Singles, said the group is not a dating club.

"It's a social organization made up primarily of people who like sailing. Many lasting friendships have been formed here — and they're not necessarily 'dating' relationships," she said.

Sailing Singles has about 350 members from all parts of the metro Detroit area. "Average age is 45," Spaulding said, "but we have members from 35 to 60. We have a few more women than men. Most are divorced, widows or widowers. A few have never married. About 60 members own boats."

Sailing Singles meets the second Thursday of the month at Bonnie Brook Golf Club, Eight Mile and Telegraph in Detroit. There's usually a speaker — something about sailing or travel — then a social hour.

Spaulding said the organization offers sailing lessons in the spring and a variety of activities year-round.

"We have a happy hour at different establishments once a month, after work. Members volunteer to host parties and activities in their homes. And we go to baseball games, the opera, and on canoe and ski trips," she said. The group holds several summer sailing weekends, called rendezvous, where boats cruise to such places as the Detroit Boat Club, or to the Thames River or the Belle River in Canada.

Sailing Singles holds an annual Commodore's Ball at the Detroit Yacht Club in April that draws about 150 people.

Initiation fee is $10; dues are $30 a year. The newsletter keeps members abreast of events. For more information about Sailing Singles, call Spaulding at 271-0456.

The Single Way

Tom Nawrot, president of The Single Way, a Christian inter-denominational singles organization, said the group of 25 to 40 men and women seeks a four-fold balance to their lives with a combination of spiritual, social, mental and physical activities.

"Tonight, for instance, we're going to play wallyball. Tomorrow night we're having a prayer and share meeting," he said. The sharing refers to communication and conversation among participants.

Nawrot said The Single Way has no dues, no roster, no requirements except that participants be committed Christian singles. About half of those who attend meetings are formerly married; half have never married, he said. Eighty percent are in the mid-20 to mid-40 age range; the rest are mid-40s to mid-60s.

"We have no dances. No gambling. No alcoholic beverages," he said. "And 80 to 90 percent of our activities include members' children and teenagers."

"The group offers encouraging, uplifting fellowship for singles looking for Christian fellowship."

Anyone interested in The Single Way should call 776-5535.

Bridge

HAVE A PLEASANT TRY AT PERFECTION
BRIDGE BY WOODY BOYD ♠♥♦♣

No one as far as I know has ever collected the hundred best played hands. This would be a noble stroke for anyone willing to stand the challenge of selecting and separating, but the finished product if properly edited would be an extremely entertaining read.

One of those hands that would surely qualify was played by an unproclaimed master of the game at the world championship in Buenos Aires in 1965. You will remember that event particularly as it was the scene of the unfortunate Reese/Shapiro incident which stunned the bridge world. Partnered with the far western star, Kelsey Peterson, today's celebrity was a surprise selection to the North American team that also included Peter Leventritt, Howard Schenken, Dorothy Hayden and B.J. Becker.

Ivan Erdos was born in Budapest in 1924, moved to England before the war and came to America in 1951 where he settled in San Diego. His catapult to fame and glory was meteoric winning his first national event in '59 and '62, but before his untimely death in 1967, he had captured two world class titles. The success of the Erdos/Peterson partnership between 1962-'67, was phenomenal, but in Buenos Aires in '65, they were still players of limited world class consideration. At that classic confrontation, Erdos especially demonstrated amazing talent and one of the significant reasons the North American sextet finished second just behind the Italian Blue Team who conquered their eighth consecutive championship.

A word about the bidding which seems mystic to we lay players of standard American methods. While curious it was just a series of forcing bids that perfectly described their hands.

The spectator gallery following the Americans in the open room were convinced that Erdos had gone off the deep end on this one. In fact, Richard Fry, the commentator flatly acknowledged that Erdos had no play for twelve tricks.

In theory, there were two spade losers and the simplest way to eliminate one was to find the diamond king on side for a pitch. As one can see, it wasn't and therefore Erdos could win only eleven tricks. Early into the play, Ivan concluded that it was much more likely that the key red king was with East so he devised an alternate strategy against the best defense to make his slam. He won the opening lead with dummy's king. Tricks 2 and 3 he pulled trumps. Tricks 4 and 5, he cashed the club ace and ruffed a club in dummy. East's failure to follow was a silent admission that he started with nine cards in spades and diamonds so West could have no more than six in those two suits. Hence it was much more likely the diamond king was with East than West. Trick 6, a small spade to his queen and when that won he had luckily found the ace coupled with the red king. If so, he had East squeezed so he cashed the club queen and ran his remaining hearts to arrive at this four card ending as shown above.

On the lead of the last trump (heart five) dummy discards the spade eight and East is helpless. Impassively he threw the diamond ten, but Erdos who had carefully noted all discards wasn't fooled. He led a diamond and went up with the ace felling the unguarded king and the diamond queen is number twelve. Conversely if East had thrown the spade ten, Ivan would have played a spade forcing East to win and return a diamond for the perfect ending.

Beautiful, you could have done it too, but you must think about these kinds of plays and reason the hand as Erdos did.

CCS, DIA, DSO, CAA and MOT to be served a la carte

At least one downtown Detroit restaurant, Opus One at 565 Larned, will make a commitment to Michigan arts and cultural organizations. Opus One will sponsor a five-week fundraiser in September and October.

During each of the five weeks, the restaurant will donate 50 percent of food revenues from a la carte dinners served Mondays through Fridays to a different arts organization: The Center for Creative Studies from Sept. 9-13; the Detroit Institute of Arts, Sept. 16-20; the Detroit Symphony Orchestra, Sept. 23-27; Cranbrook Academy of Art, Sept. 30-Oct. 4; and Michigan Opera Theatre, Oct. 7-11.

And Opus One's ambiance will change each week. First, students from the Center for Creative Studies will display their work — then the DIA will loan art from its exhibits — then DSO musicians will perform — then Cranbrook Academy of Arts students will display their work — then MOT performers will entertain.

"By bringing art and music into Opus One, we're able to provide our patrons with a taste of the magnificent culture that our community has to offer, and at the same time alert them to the serious financial problems that have arisen," said Jim Kokas, one of the owners of Opus One.

"We're all aware of how the reduction in state funding for the arts has hurt several great institutions in our community. It's now up to the business community to help them survive. Our goal is to set an example for other businesses to follow."

In addition, a special fundraiser, Opus for the Arts, will be held on Friday, Sept. 6, at Opus One to kick off the five-week fundraising effort. Tickets for the evening are $100 each. Call 961-7766 for information or to make reservations.

What's cooking? The Regina Alumni Association has compiled a cookbook made up of recipes from alumni, students, faculty, family and friends. More than 280 recipes are included — plus $4.25 worth of brand name manufacturers' coupons.

Proceeds will go to the establishment of a fund to provide financial aid for Regina students.

All this for $6. Call Jan, 882-8033, or Regina High School, 526-0220, to purchase a cookbook.

Seasons greetings: It's never too early to begin planning for Christmas.

The Detroit Historical Society's traditional holiday party will take place on Friday, Dec. 6, at the Detroit Historical Museum. It will feature opportunities to shop for unusual holiday gifts from the museum's shop as well as from local antique shops and boutiques. There also will be a multi-course gourmet meal and an exhibition of toys from the Detroit Antique Toy Museum.

Co-chairmen for the fundraiser are Mrs. A. Council Darling III, William R. Chapin and Mrs. Arnold V. Raft.

Tickets are $250 a person for benefactors. For information, call William Zoufal at 833-7937.

Hug a tree: A recent "Save the Trees" benefit in Harbor Springs was sponsored by the Little Traverse Conservancy, a non-profit organization dedicated to protecting the natural diversity and beauty of northern Michigan.

Some Grosse Pointers who attended were Michael and Beth Fisher and Brooke C. Howenstein.

The benefit council of The Little Traverse Conservancy consists of a group of young adults who are working to raise awareness of — and money for — the Conservancy. They seek to maintain the unspoiled beauty of the area by preserving environmentally sensitive land and scenic areas which are obtained by the Conservancy through donation, purchase or bequest.

Celebration: The Detroit chapter of the National Organization for Women will celebrate Women's Equality Day and the 71st anniversary of women's suffrage on Monday, Aug. 26.

A buffet dinner will be held at Las Brisas restaurant in Detroit from 5:30 to 8 p.m.

Four Feminist of the Year awards will be presented during the evening, as well as two Special Recognition awards and a Special Memorial award.

Grosse Pointer Bess Bonnier will provide keyboard entertainment.

Detroit NOW was begun in 1969 by a group of women who were concerned about sexism and women's rights. The purpose of the group is to take action to bring women into full participation in the mainstream of American society, exercising all rights and responsibilities in equal partnership with men.

Award recipients are: State Rep. Joe Young Sr., Jan Ben Dor, Jacquelin Washington, Lyna Hunter, Janet Good and the Michigan ACLU. A Special Memorial award will be presented to Anne R. Davidson Seeger.

NOW addresses issues that concern women in the fields of education, employment, reproductive rights, lesbian rights, ERA, child care, homemakers' rights, older women's rights and more.

Tickets for the dinner are $25 and may be ordered by calling 835-5033, 345-9644, or 273-7400, or by writing to Detroit NOW, P.O. Box 19670, Detroit 48219.

Corn, apples aplenty, but where's the beef?

By Ada Shinerberger

MSU Food Marketing Specialist August shoppers will find sweet corn costing less than it did last year while beef will cost more than it did last month.

Why? Ample sweet corn production in Michigan, New York, Illinois, Colorado and Washington is squeezing a market already saturated. As for beef, the latest Cattle on Feed report issued by the U.S. Department of Agriculture shows only 8 percent more cattle on feed than last year on July 1, compared to trade predictions of a 12 percent gain. That was enough to stampede the market, if not the cattle.

Meanwhile, poultry prices are steady but weak, so look for continuing specials, especially on dark meat.

Other items offering deals this summer include various kinds of melons. The hot, dry summer has provided ideal growing conditions for melons in Michigan and elsewhere. Look for deals on western cantaloupe and honeydew. Watermelons — attractively priced for several months — may be increasing in price beginning this month.

There are two points to keep in mind while shopping for produce this month: There are more fresh, locally grown fruits and vegetables available during August than any other month; and this year's harvest season is two weeks ahead of a normal season.

Michigan is already picking PaulaRed apples. This crisp, firm, juicy, flavorful apple has most of the superior qualities of a fall apple. This year's crop is limited so they won't be available beyond the end of August. The 1991 Michigan apple crop has been estimated by the USDA at slightly over 17 million bushels. That's about 5 percent less than last year's crop and one of the smallest in recent years.

The pear harvest has also started and will likely be finished long before the usual end-of-October completion.

Look for increased supplies of all salad vegetables (and resulting lower prices) this month. Be alert for specials on processed vegetables as wholesalers try to move the 1990 pack.

Hospice seeks volunteers

Cranbrook Hospice Care is seeking volunteers to provide support for terminally ill patients and their families in their own homes. Volunteers are vital to Cranbrook Hospice Care's comprehensive in-home program dedicated to allowing individuals to live their final months or days pain-free, with quality, dignity and comfort.

For the past eleven years, Cranbrook Hospice Care has used a holistic multi-disciplinary approach to meeting the physical, emotional, spiritual and social needs of each patient and family. The team consists of doctors, nurses, social workers, home health aides, clergy and volunteers.

Volunteers are trained and professionally supervised to provide direct care, respite and support for family members, bereavement care, and all types of program and staff support. Additional volunteer opportunities exist in fundraising, newsletter publication, public relations and a speakers' bureau.

A volunteer orientation session has been scheduled for Monday, Sept. 16, from 6 to 9 p.m. at the Cranbrook Hospice Care office, 2555 Crooks Road, Troy, just south of Big Beaver Road. A month-long training program will follow. For further information, or to register for training, call Nancy McHugh at 643-8855.

DSOH needs docents

Are you a retired classroom teacher, musician or sophisticated concertgoer? Are you looking for something exciting to do with your free time?

Detroit Symphony Orchestra Hall is launching a recruitment drive for volunteer docents for its 1991-92 season. The docent program is part of a ticket distribution program for Detroit and metropolitan schools, sponsored by the Ford Motor Co.

DSOH docents are trained volunteers who offer their skills to assist young music students in high schools throughout metropolitan Detroit. Docents receive weekly training sessions concerning upcoming symphony programs, music, and composers. Docents then visit schools where they present and discuss this information with students. Docents, students and teachers then attend complimentary DSO concerts or open rehearsals.

The docent program is designed to assist students in acquiring broader knowledge of concert preparation and performance.

Anyone interested in becoming a docent should call the DSOH Education Department at 962-1000.

holds regular meetings on the second Monday of each month at various locations in eastern Wayne and Macomb counties.

The Mothers of Multiples Club was formed to educate parents and expectant parents of multiples about the special aspects of rearing multiples; to enable mothers of multiples to better cope with the unique pleasures and problems through group meetings and activities, professional speakers and peer support; to draw on the experiences and resources of others; to make available research and educational materials relating to multiples; and to take an active interest in the rearing of multiples.

Membership dues are $12 annually. The group publishes a monthly newsletter and holds clothing sales, family picnics, a "Mom's night out at a restaurant," and other social and educational activities.

Steppest thou backe in tyme at the Renaissance festiuale

By Ronald J. Bernas
Staff Writer

Webster says the Renaissance was a time of rebirth, a great revival of art, literature and learning in Europe dating from the 14th century and running through the 16th century.

Detroiters discuss the renaissance of their city, which dates from the opening of the Renaissance Center and continues through today.

And then there's Holly's Renaissance Festival, a time of revelry, running every August and September for the last 12 years.

Where else can you get turkey drumsticks and eat them as Charles Laughton did as King Henry VIII? Where else can you fight knights, stomp grapes, search for a gryphon and listen to a real mermaid sing songs of love?

Then there's the entertainment. Singers, jugglers, court jesters, dancers and theatrical events. And The Accordion Juggle of Death is not something you see enough of to be bored by.

And you can't help but love a place that pays a man to sit in the stocks all day and hurl insults at everyone who walks by and then provides rotten tomatoes for the insultees to hurl back.

The 12th Annual Michigan Renaissance Festival is expected to be one of the biggest, judging from advance ticket sales, said Peggy Burkhard, spokesperson for the privately owned company.

"Last year there were 161,000 people who showed up and we're expecting close to 185,000 this year," Burkhard said. "Traditionally, the festival does better in years when the economy is down because people stay closer to home and Queen Katheryne and King Edward reign over the merriment at the Twelfth Annual Michigan Renaissance Festival every weekend through Sept. 29 in Holly.

Games, food and crafts await the more than 185,000 revelers expected this year.

take advantage of what's around them."

What's around them when they get to Holly is 11 acres of woods and trails leading from the pubs to the privies (don't call them bathrooms) to the prison where you can lock anyone up for any reason and he can't get out until he does what you want him to.

There are more than 130 shops displaying all sorts of crafts and there's three jousting shows daily. Don't expect to keep to yourself; more than 200 entertainers are paid to wander the grounds and keep your spirits up. For the quieter reveler, there's a chess match with living pieces.

The six remaining weekends have special themes — Renaissance Romance, in which the King and Queen renew their vows is Aug. 24-25; Fool's Fantasy features silly games Aug. 31 and Sept. 1-2; Brave knights in armor take part in the Tournament of Chivalry, Sept. 7-8; Music and Dance gets you singing for your supper Sept. 14-15; Scottish competitions are Sept. 21-22 during the Highland Fling; and grape-stomping is the attraction Sept. 28-29 at the Country Wine Affair.

It may take awhile, but you can get there from here. Take 75 north to Exit 106, (M-54 to Grand Blanc) stay in the left lane, go two blocks and turn left on Dixie Highway south. Go two miles and it's on the right.

Parking is free. Admission for adults is $9.95 at the gate and $8.75 in advance; children are $4.95 at the gate and $4 in advance. Children under 5 are free. The festival runs from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. rain or shine.

'Bingo' is fun for the whole family

By Marian Trainor
Special Writer

Dogs and kids have always been big attention-getters in films. "Bingo" not only features both but adds a little local color. In an exciting ending, a crucial football game that will determine the National Football League champion is played at the Pontiac Silverdome.

There's a lot of action before that happens and most of it revolves around the star of this tongue-in-cheek comedy, Bingo, a feisty Heinz 57 variety mutt whose devotion to "his boy" takes him on a journey not fit for a dog.

But then Bingo is no ordinary dog. He's not only smarter and craftier than the villains he encounters, but he operates with such cunning that we know he is definitely in the top percentile of dog intelligence.

Bingo's basic education began in a dog and pony show where he was trained to fetch props for the show dogs and their owners. Commanded to get water, he picks up the pail, pads off to the water spigot, turns it once and carries the pail back.

He has one hangup. He is afraid of fire. When one of the dogs gets hurt, he is drafted as a replacement and commanded to jump through a flaming hoop. He backs away but, in the process, causes a fire that destroys the tent, bringing his show biz career to an abrupt end.

On the road and on his own, it doesn't take Bingo long to find an outlet for his exceptional talents. He sees a boy floating face downward in a stream. He not only pulls him out but tries to resuscitate him by pushing hard on his chest with his paws. When that doesn't work, he climbs the embankment and jumps on the boy's chest. The boy, Chucky (Robert J. Steinmiller Jr.), survives and boy and dog adopt each other.

The problem is Chucky's father, who hates dogs with a passion. That means Chucky has to keep him under wraps.

The dog and his boy become separated so it's on the road again as Bingo tries to find Chucky.

His pilgrimage is interrupted by some incidents, of course, from which Bingo emerges a hero.

"Bingo" is an outrageously off-beat, funny film. It is a riot to see Bingo at the wheel of a truck, barking out his testimony at the court trial and wheedling his way into people's lives. Not only does he perform amazing feats but one can almost read what he is thinking in his intelligent, expressive face.

Steinmiller is appealing as the boy Bingo adopts. His devotion and attachment to his dog are as strong as Bingo's attachment to him.

Adults will enjoy "Bingo" for its sophisticated humor. School age children will delight in Bingo's antics. Younger children may be put off by a prison knife fight and Bingo being engulfed in fire.

But generally, "Bingo" hits the jackpot.

Attic announces '91-'92 season

The Attic Theatre celebrates two special events in September — the opening of its 1991-92 mainstage series and its 16th year as Detroit's leading professional resident theater.

The Attic upholds its tradition of presenting innovative works by creating a topically diverse, multi-cultural line-up.

The six mainstage plays are "The Misanthrope" by Moliere (Sept. 26 - Oct. 27), "Thursday's Child" by Julie Jensen (Dec. 5 - Jan. 5), "Abundance" by Beth Henley (Jan. 30 - March 1), "A View from the Bridge" by Arthur Miller (March 19 - April 19), "Love and Anger" by George F. Walker (May 14 - June 14), and "Painting it Red" by Steven Dietz (July 16 - Aug. 16).

"Thursday's Child" replaces Bill Harris' "Boo!," which was originally scheduled in the December/January time slot. "Boo!," a newly created musical, was the most expensive play of the season. As a result of budget cuts, it was decided to replace "Boo!" with the less expensive production, "Thursday's Child."

"Thursday's Child," by Michigan playwright Julie Jensen, traces a day in the life of George Ann, head of the Bradshaw family. On this day, there are the usual science projects and begging money from mom. But this is not a normal day for George Ann. She thinks she's pregnant. This delightful family comedy crackles with the wit and wisdom of the middle-aged.

To purchase season tickets or for more information on the Attic's 1991-92 season, call the Attic Theatre box office at (313) 875-8284. Visa and Mastercard accepted.

Robert J. Steinmiller Jr. stars with his friend in "Bingo."

DFT presents 'The Vanishing'

For one weekend only, Aug. 23-25, the Detroit Institute of Arts' Detroit Film Theatre (DFT) series will present the exclusive engagement of "The Vanishing," the highly-acclaimed new suspense film from Dutch director George Sluizer.

Described by Judy Stone of the San Francisco Chronicle as an unforgettable thriller, "The Vanishing" tells the gripping and unsettling tale of a young couple on vacation in France, who suddenly find themselves plunged into a dark and terrifying mystery. The film's conclusion is so startling that it led the Los Angeles Times' Michael Wilmington to write "It's unlikely that any audience will soon forget the last two minutes of this movie."

Showtimes for "The Vanishing" are 7 and 9:30 p.m. on Friday and Saturday, and 4 and 7 p.m. on Sunday. Tickets, at $5 general admission and $4 for students with full-time I.D., are available in advance at the DIA ticket office or at the door.

The DFT's Crystal Gallery Cafe is open one hour before each performance for light snacks, freshly baked pastries, and a wide selection of teas, coffees and other beverages.

For more information or to obtain a new season schedule, call the ticket office at 833-2323, from 9:30 a.m. until 5 p.m. daily.

The charming Cole Porter musical comedy features such show-stoppers as, "Too Darn Hot," "So In Love," and "Brush Up Your Shakespeare." "Kiss Me Kate" will be presented with nearly all the original cast from the Stony Creek Performances.

The production is presented in conjunction with the Richmond Good Old Days Festival. Shows will be Sept. 5 - 8 at 8 p.m. Tickets are $8, $6 for seniors and students. Advanced purchases are suggested and tickets can be reserved by calling Itonica at 313-727-1033. The Richmond Center for the Performing Arts is located on the corner of Churchill and Parker in Richmond. The phone number is 313-727-9518.

Raspberries sure are a nice way to take your vitamins

Fresh raspberries can add sparkle to any meal and delight the diner. The raspberry—rich and sweet—seems to characterize, for many of us, summer rapture. The good news is that Michigan farm fresh raspberries are available from about Aug. 25 through Sept. 30.

Raspberries are often regarded as a dessert fruit par excellence, and can be eaten with either sugar or cream. They are used to make desserts, jam, compotes, jellies, fermented drinks and liqueurs. And raspberry juice can be used to flavor ice cream and sorbets.

America yielded a large genus of wild raspberries to the early colonists who nevertheless imported their European variety, R. idaeus for cultivation. The American red raspberry, R. i. strigosus, was known in Massachusetts as early as 1621. The name derives from an earlier word, "raspis," and was first recorded as raspberry in the early 17th century.

The raspberry has been known since prehistoric times and the ancients attributed its origin to "divine intervention." According to lore, it seems that the nymph Ida pricked her finger while picking berries for the young Jupiter and thus raspberries, which had been white until then, turned red.

Nutritionally, raspberries top all the berries. They lead all fresh foods in fully digestible elements and are almost completely assimilated by the body during digestion. They provide completely usable energy, with very high amounts of vitamin A, C, B-1, B-2, and B-6. They are extraordinarily rich in manganese and potassium. Manganese is essential to the fertility process. Raspberries, along with mangos and avocados, are the richest sources of copper in fresh foods.

You can pick fresh raspberries at the following locations:

Altermatt's Berry and Vegetable Farm — 16580 25 Mile Road, Washington, 4 1/2 miles east of Van Dyke on the corner of Romeo Plank and 25 Mile Road. (313) 781-3428.

Blake's Orchard and Cider Mill — 17985 Armada Center Road, three miles west of Armada. (313) 784-5343.

Sattler's Coon Creek Orchard and Cider Mill — 78777 Coon Creek Road, four miles northwest of Armada. (313) 784-5062.

The best way to sanity is to pave the road with laughter

Let's face it, life is complicated, stressful and simply too serious.

One's overall well-being is molded by attitudes and actions. Wellness is a labyrinth of physical, emotional, social, intellectual and spiritual forces. These are all rolled into one by our thoughts and actions.

Developing a sense of humor is necessary in completing the wellness puzzle. The best remedy in lifting spirits is to find humor in things that others ignore, laughing at situations others may find annoying.

Historically, the display of laughter in public was considered inappropriate, sinful and tasteless, yet in the '50s humor started being used as a beneficial tool in the health care field.

However, there were still potential benefits not yet explored. Currently physicians and psychiatrists, as well as others in the health field, are becoming increasingly aware of humor's value and applicability.

There has been increased implementation of humor in the hospital setting in recent years. Recent studies have proven that a good sense of humor in the right setting produces dramatic physiologic changes in the patient. For example, the blood pressure often drops, the digestive tract becomes more efficient, the blood cells increase their affinity for oxygenation, and the muscular system is more prepared for relaxation.

Yet none of these benefits compare with the true potential that humor can bring to the patient. While it is recognized that stress can often cripple the hospitalized patient, we tend to ignore the obvious curative measures. Medications and machinery are essential aspects of modern medicine, but humor's value in response to stress is clearly the preferred treatment.

Humor can often counteract the effects of a long-standing or acute stressor, relieving the damage on the autonomic nervous system stress often imposes.

The ability to laugh at yourself, along with the mistakes you may have made along the way, is pivotal if you truly wish to enjoy life. It is important to note that the quality of life is augmented and longevity increased in proportion to this ability.

As a health and wellness specialist, I have seen humor's critical impact on an individual's overall wellness. What still amazes me is how strong our convictions are on this matter. While it may be true that there is still little understanding of the processes that spur such healing, the results are plain to see.

In order for any person to change, the deepest levels of behavior must be addressed. A change in attitude requires the whole body acting in concert with the mind. Never forget that psychologic and physiologic changes seem to run hand in hand. Humor has the capacity to keep us vibrant and full of will power, more apt to accept fault and to forgive other's shortcomings.

It is as if to say that the best medicine for anger is laughter, and that the greatest antidote for anger is celebration. The next time a situation arises when you feel out of control, a good belly laugh may indeed be the best remedy.

Here are a few recommendations on how to expand humor's impact on your life:

- 1) Begin a scrapbook full of cartoons, articles or even jokes that you can write down. The joy you receive from this book can be obtained anytime; you may even enjoy sharing it with another person who feels down.

2) Create a "humor shelf" at home full of videos, audiotapes and books that are guaranteed to elevate your spirits. Many wonderful books are available; free at your local library.

3) Inactivity breeds depression. If you feel down, go see a comedy at a local theater. Sharing your laughter with hundreds of people makes the experience more meaningful.

4) Release the limits that people place upon you. There is nothing wrong with grown persons playing on a swing set, if that is what makes them happy. Spontaneous behavior is the hallmark of a secure person.

5) Find people that want the same things you do. If you surround yourself with miserable people, quite often you feel that way too. Remember, the world laughs together, but you always cry alone. Become a part of the happy world.

The need for laughter becomes increasingly vital as you age. An aging body needs rejuvenation if it is to be able to stand up to the test of time. Perhaps all we need to do is remember the vitality of our youth, when the world was magical. And perhaps by this, maybe only by this, can we feel young again.

Bagging your bags

Okay, one more time. What do you do when you get to your destination and your luggage doesn't?

Statistics show that about seven out of every 1,000 U.S. airline passengers arrive at their destination, only to find that their luggage has mysteriously disappeared, been damaged or pilfered. When you think about the number of passengers carried by today's wide bodied jets and the number of wide bodied jets landing and taking off from hub airports, you have to wonder how the airlines do as well as they do.

When you get there and your bag doesn't, immediately file a missing bag report. Do not leave the airport until you have done so. Most airlines have a baggage service desk in or near the baggage claim area of the airport. Most airlines have personnel manning the desk when they have flights landing and baggage arriving. If you arrive without your suitcase and your airline's baggage service desk is closed, check with the skycap or go to the airline's ticket counter and request assistance.

When you find the agent working on lost baggage, you will have to produce the passenger coupon from your flight along with your baggage claim checks. You will also be asked to supply information regarding the color and style of the missing bags along with a description of the contents. This is important. If your bag is really lost you will want to recover as much of the value of the missing goods as possible.

The information from your tickets and baggage claim checks will help the agent trace the missing bag. Usually the bag is located within 24 hours, you are notified by phone and the bag is delivered to you none the worse for wear. If you have not received your bag within three days, the chances of getting it back are considerably diminished. Although the airlines have different policies regarding lost luggage, most continue to search for 30 to 90 days.

If your luggage is not found after 90 days you may begin negotiations with the airline, much like you would negotiate with your insurance company. The airline may request a notarized list of the contents of the bag. They will want the original cost and the ages of everything you have listed. You might even be asked for receipts for some of the items listed. Each airline's procedures are a bit different. They will give you instructions as to what they want you to do. Always be realistic in reporting the value of lost items as the airline can and often will reject inflated claims.

Airlines accept no liability for jewelry, furs, cash or more than one camera in a bag. They will not accept liability for damage to fragile items. If you travel with a musical instrument or any other item of considerable value, either carry it with you or purchase separate insurance for the item. Remember all this when you are packing. If you must travel with expensive jewelry, keep it with you. If you keep it with you, don't put down the bag or purse that you are carrying in it.

Airlines have a liability limit of $1,250 per passenger for lost, damaged or delayed baggage on domestic flights. This is a per-person limit, not a per-bag amount, and it is rare that this much is collected from a carrier. If you are traveling internationally the liability is limited to $9.07 per pound. Take a moment to figure what settlement you will get if your 40-pound bag is lost. It seems that times have changed since this law was passed in 1929. You can purchase excess valuation coverage to increase the airline's liability, but it's rather expensive. Check with your travel agent. It is also possible to purchase baggage insurance at airport insurance counters. Comparison shop.

Just what will you do until your bag is found? Gone are the days when the airlines would dash off a check for a passenger to buy a new dress or suit. You will find that many airlines have toiletry kits or they may give you a few dollars to buy the essentials. For this reason, it is a good idea to carry your essentials — including a change of clothes.

Michigan forts steeped in the lore of yesteryear

Michigan forts stand willing to share their secrets with visitors who can dream.

If these forts could talk, AAA Michigan suggests there would be tales of Indian skirmishes and fur traders, battles with foreign governments, winter struggles to stay warm and summer picnics on the parade ground.

There are four forts in Michigan, each with dreams to share: Fort Wilkins in Copper Harbor at the tip of the Keweenaw Peninsula; Fort Michilimackinac at Mackinaw City; Fort Mackinac on Mackinac Island; and Detroit's Fort Wayne on the banks of the Detroit River.

All have been restored to show what they looked like while guarding the frontiers of Michigan, some featuring close-order drills for visitors, musket firing and authentic costumes. A closer look at the history of these forts reveals:

- Fort Wilkins State Park: Rich mineral deposits at Copper Harbor prompted a push for exploration, but Chippewa Indians held title to the land, temporarily thwarting copper mining.

The issue was resolved in 1842, but an influx of miners and speculators, along with the refusal by the Chippewas to give up holdings on Isle Royale, prompted fears of a breakdown in law and order.

To protect the growing mining community from possible Indian attack, Secretary of War William Wilkins had the fort built in 1844 at the Upper Peninsula site.

When the threat of Indian attacks did not materialize, the troops were reassigned two years later to serve in the Mexican War.

- Fort Michilimackinac: In 1715, French soldiers and a group of civilian artisans and farmers settled on the south shore of the Straits of Mackinac and built Fort Michilimackinac. For nearly 50 years the fort was the most important fur-gathering center in the Great Lakes.

But Montreal fell to British troops in 1760 and a year later the Union Jack was flying over Fort Michilimackinac following the British victory in the so-called French and Indian War.

Unhappy with their treatment by the British, Ottawa Chief Pontiac led an Indian uprising on June 2, 1763, capturing the fort temporarily. When the American Revolution began in 1776, the British abandoned the fort and dismantled and moved most of its buildings seven miles across the Straits to Mackinac Island.

- Fort Mackinac: This former British and American outpost is located on a bluff 150 feet above the Straits of Mackinac.

It was settled by the British in 1781, but the peace treaty of 1783 at the close of the American Revolution placed the new fort on the American side of the northern boundary of the United States.

American troops took over in 1796, but victory was short-lived. During the War of 1812, British troops recaptured Fort Mackinac, but held it only until 1815 when American forces again returned, ending British rule for good.

- Fort Wayne: Built in the mid-1840s amid fears of a Canadian-American conflict, Fort Wayne has never seen combat, but it has witnessed a lot of history. It was a Civil War mustering post, a home for mechanized units of World War I and a center for Army vehicle contracts and acquisitions in World War II. It was named for Gen. Anthony Wayne, Revolutionary War hero and commander of the American force that defeated the Indians at Fallen Timbers, Ohio, in 1794.

The sprawling complex contains restored buildings such as a Spanish-American War guardhouse, built in 1889 complete with bunks, prison cells and exercise yard; the original barracks built in 1848, and a 900-year-old Indian burial site.

High Point

Dearborn Long Course Swimming Meet held June 28-30. Atraz and Shelden were the girl and boy first-place finishers in the 9-10 age group. F-C-P baseball team eliminated

Grosse Pointe Farms-City Park, the Michigan 13-15-year-old Babe Ruth State Champions, opened the 10-team Ohio Valley Regional at the University of Kentucky Aug. 2 by defeating Youngstown, the defending national champs, 3-2.

But the team lost its next two games and was eliminated from the tournament.

Mike Formolo's infield grounder scored Andy Crowley with the winning run in the team's opening game. Paul Gentile pitched a three-hit complete game and was awarded the MVP plaque for the game.

The team took on Southern Indiana in game two, but blew a 4-1 lead and the game, losing, 13-10.

The F-C-P team jumped out to a 4-1 lead on RBIs by Geoff Prysak and Crowley. Poor defense then allowed Indiana to take a 7-4 lead. GPFPC stormed back on hits by Karl Davids, Paul Coyro and Corey Geer to tie the game at 7-7. Indiana then scored its final six runs on only two hits, but GPFPC pulled to within three runs and had the bases loaded with no outs when the rally ended with a 13-10 defeat. Only two of Indiana's 13 runs were earned.

GPFPC was knocked out of the regional in game three, losing to Lexington Northern, 7-4.

Northern opened a five-run lead with the help of some poor GPFPC fielding, but GPFPC cut the lead to 5-4 on Ryan Messacar's two-run single.

Dual championship

The Dodgers won the playoffs and series baseball championships in the Farms-City Park league. Front row, Ryan Messacar, Mark Campbell, Andy Donnelly, Galen Dossin, Billy Shepard, Dan Paul and Rusty Woodruff. Pointes are perfect place for sale-ing, treasure hunters find

By Donna Walker
Staff Writer

On a bright August morning, Alex Bylica of East Detroit was looking for funny Christmas gifts to give, Sam Palazzola of St. Clair Shores was searching for baseball cards and Carolyn Pettiford of Detroit was trying to find items to fill her country kitchen.

No, they weren't at the local mall. They were poking through stuff in the coolness of a Grosse Pointe Shores garage, at one of the many garage sales that were held in the Pointes last Friday.

If you want to unload things you don't use anymore and make some money at the same time, if you want to meet your neighbors or if you're looking for great buys, then nothing beats a garage sale, both customers and proprietors agree.

"I've been going to garage sales for 20 years, and I think they're wonderful," Pettiford said. "You used to be able to get a lot of good jewelry at them. For example, I've gotten a lot of 14 karat gold at garage sales. But people are getting wiser."

"You can still get great things at a garage sale, though. They're wonderful for baby clothes and toys, and young couples just starting out can pick up lots of things to fill their house or apartment."

Grosse Pointe garage sales have a reputation for being very good. Years ago, when the Grosse Pointe News was sold at the news office a day earlier than subscribers received the paper at home, people would line up outside the building to get a copy, so they would be among the first to find bargains and garage sales in the classified section.

"Grosse Pointe has a certain reputation," Pettiford said.

"I've been to garage sales out in Sterling Heights, and they were nice, but not as nice as the ones here. I like going to garage sales in Grosse Pointe because it's kind of an older, more traditional community and you can find more traditional things here, things that look like they came out of 'Country Living Magazine.' That's the kind of stuff I like."

Robert and Harriet Redlin of Lochmoor were the proprietors of the garage sale where Pettiford found a vine wreath, Bylica found a colorful umbrella hat and where Palazzola (who said he had been to seven garage sales that day — and it was only 10:15 a.m.) learned that he had missed a large box of baseball cards by about a half hour. A woman bought the entire box for her daughter, Harriet Redlin said.

"And why shouldn't she have," Palazzola good-naturedly replied.

Other things for sale included a wooden captain's chair, a rack of ties (50 cents each), old Christmas ornaments, a drop-leaf table ($85), decorative pillows, assorted kitchen items, children's clothing, paintings, games and toys.

"We were going to put more out," Harriet Redlin said, "but yesterday, when we were getting everything ready, a woman came to the door and said that she couldn't come tomorrow, could she look through everything today? I said that everything was in the basement and that we were in the process of getting it ready for sale, but that she was welcome to look at it."

The woman bought $300 worth of merchandise, Redlin said.

"I could tell she was a dealer," Redlin said, "but I didn't care. That's why I'm holding this sale, to sell things, and she paid the asking price. She didn't try to dicker at all."

Dickering is something that garage sale operators should expect, Redlin and Pettiford agreed.

"But you have to do it nicely," Pettiford said. "You ask, 'is this price negotiable?' If it is, fine. But if it isn't, you know."

Proprietors can also expect customers to show up early.

Redlin advertised that her sale would open at 9 a.m. Friday, Aug. 9. The earliest customer was the woman who showed up at Redlin's door on Thursday. The runners-up were the customers who came at 7:50 a.m. Friday.

"But we weren't annoyed because we were ready for them," said Redlin, adding that she has held three or four garage sales in her day.

Pettiford advised that "if you don't want customers to come early, you should advertise 'absolutely no prior sales.'"

However, there are gutsy people out there who will still show up early.

One woman who recently held a garage sale in Grosse Pointe Park and who wished to remain anonymous, said she sent customers away who showed up an hour early and told them to come back later when she was open.

"That really annoyed me that they would do that," she said, "especially since I specifically advertised no early sales."

In addition to being open to price haggling and prepared for early customers, garage sale proprietors might want to consider these tips:

- Wash, iron, and polish the items you will be selling and display similar items together on racks and tables. "Make it attractive," Redlin said.

- Be friendly — another tip from Redlin.

- Never leave your cash box unattended, or someone may tend to it for you. Only keep enough singles and silver in your cash box to make change; deposit money from sales in a safe place in your house throughout the day. That tip came from Mary Tocco of Grosse Pointe Woods, who held a garage sale Aug. 2. The sale was supposed to run through Aug. 3, but it was so successful, she said, that she sold out of most everything by 2 p.m. Aug. 2 and had to shut down.

- Price items as you clean out your closets. If you throw everything into a pile to price later, it just makes for more work, Tocco said.

- When pricing items, consider the price you paid for them new, what they sell for new today, how long you've had the item and its sentimental value. "Then remember that you're holding a garage sale, and that the traffic won't bear high prices," Redlin said.

Tocco said that she's found that children's clothes that are in good condition (no stains or holes) will usually sell for about half their price new.

- Limit the hours of your sale, said Robin Fisher of Grosse Pointe Farms, who held a garage sale two weeks ago.

"We limited our sale to one day and it only went for three hours. That's the secret. Garage sales are usually busiest in the first hour, and then you spend most of the day just sitting around," she said.

- Have a friend or relative conduct the sale with you. "It's more fun to do it with someone else," Redlin said.

- Expect the unexpected. Redlin was using a wooden lattice in her garage to separate her garden tools from the items that were on display. "Someone asked if they could buy the lattice," Redlin said. "I hadn't planned on selling it, but I said sure, why not? I didn't really need it and if they could get some pleasure from it, why not?"

- If you'd really like to get rid of something but feel guilty about putting it up for sale for sentimental reasons, just remember you can't take it with you. And if your children refuse to part with old toys they've outgrown, do what Tocco did. Bribe them.

"I explained to my son that some kids would love to have these things that he wasn't using anymore, but that their families couldn't afford to buy them new, so he would be helping them," Tocco said. "I also told him that if he sold some of his old toys we could use the money to buy something that he'd play with now, like a Nintendo game."

- Finally, remember that there are a lot of charitable organizations like the St. Vincent de Paul Society — that could use your unwanted items.

Holocaust museum intended to disturb

By Amy Gray Light
AIA News Service

Although most museums celebrate our lives and achievements, the U.S. Holocaust Memorial Museum, now under construction in Washington, D.C., has a different message.

The Holocaust Museum is unique in that it bears witness to one of the darkest chapters in modern history — the systematic extermination by the Nazis of 12 million Jews, Gypsies, Slavs, homosexuals, handicapped persons, and other so-called "undesirables" during World War II.

Established in 1980 by an act of Congress, the museum is dedicated to the remembrance of the Holocaust through commemoration of the dead, and through education of present and future generations to minimize the chance of recurrence of such a horrific event.

Scheduled to open in April 1993, the museum will tell the complex and multidimensional story of the Holocaust through authentic artifacts, photographs, and audiovisual testimony of survivors.

Prominently situated adjacent to the National Mall on almost two acres of land donated by the federal government, the Holocaust Museum will be a major facility, totaling 311,000 square feet between 14th Street and Raoul Wallenberg Place.

Architect James Ingo Freed of Pei Cobb Freed & Partners in New York City designed the building in association with the Washington-based architecture firm of Nottor Finegold & Alexander Inc., Freed's "purposefully disquieting," building alludes to the Jewish ghettos, concentration camps and German construction of the 1930s.

The architect's design will indeed play a profound role in conveying to the visitor what the exhibits and educational programs cannot. The architecture supports the Holocaust story with its vocabulary of abstract symbolism and mean, rough materials of brick, steel, granite and concrete.

The museum's central gathering place is the Hall of Witness, a 7,500-square-foot space constructed of brick and steel. The hall expresses the rupture of civilized behavior with an ominously cracked interior granite wall, and a similar crack in the floor, skewing the space as if it had been twisted by an earthquake.

The floor's singular fissure of glass block allows natural light to filter from a warped skylight through to the concourse level. Exposed beams, boarded windows, metal gates, and pyramidal towers reinforce the sense that the Holocaust is "an event that must be viscerally disturbing in order to be fully perceived," says Freed.

Visitors will sense historical reality from the very start; upon admission they will be issued an ID card with the name of someone, of their own age and gender, who lived during the Holocaust.

During the exhibit tour visitors will be able to update their cards to receive additional information on that person. After the tour, visitors will be able to go to the Learning Center to explore deeper, more intimate aspects of their person's stories.

Permanent exhibitions on the fourth, third and second floors form the core of the building, which the visitor will tour in a concise, defined manner, descending in a downward spiral. Towers housing other parts of the exhibit on each floor are reached by crossing glass block bridges.

After touring the exhibit, visitors may go to two theaters, the Learning Center or the hexagonal Hall of Remembrance.

Plans for the museum project were fortunately timed. The search for artifacts began at a time in European political history when it became possible to make loan agreements. The Polish government has allowed the Holocaust Museum to borrow artifacts that never before had left their sites.

DALMATIAN adult male, AKC registered. Moving, must find loving home. 885-3857.

PLEASE DON'T DELAY! SPAY or NEUTER YOUR PET TODAY! An altered pet is a healthier and happier companion. Also, it spares you the grief and pain of having puppies and kittens destroyed when no homes can be found. Countless numbers of sweet, innocent little ones are euthanized every day in shelters across the country because a pet wasn't spayed or neutered. If we cut down on the numbers of unwanted litters being born, we will also cut down on the number of abandoned, lost and unwanted animals to destroy.
