

Marriage secrets, dating mystique may lie in 'Great Sexpectations'

By Donna Walker
Staff Writer

Have you heard of the battle of the sexes? Well, there's no such thing, at least not among husbands and wives, according to a recent study conducted by D'Arcy Masius Benton & Bowles in Bloomfield Hills.

The advertising agency surveyed approximately 1,400 single and married people nationwide to learn their views on life, love, marriage and sex in the 1990s.

The study, called "Great Sexpectations," revealed some interesting things, including the fact that men and women — especially married men and women — seem to genuinely like each other.

"That's one of the things that surprised me, and it has nothing to do with my personal life, but with my perspective as a researcher," said Dann Balesky of Grosse Pointe Farms, vice president and group research director at the agency. "Men and women like each other a lot more than I expected, given the high rate of divorce."

In the study, questionnaires were mailed to 2,000 men and women across the country, and about 70 percent responded, said Charles Stannard, senior vice president and director of the research and marketing department at the agency.

The study was divided into four major sections: "Today's facts of married life"; "The sexual revolution . . . around the house"; "Why are singles staying single longer? Clues?"; and "Jobs. Is sex type casting still rampant in the '90s?"

In the first section, respondents were presented with a list of 75 adjectives, including "active, pessimistic, creative, sexy, selfish," and asked to rate themselves and their spouses on a 0-10 scale, with 0 meaning "not like me at all" and 10 meaning "describes me perfectly."

Married women saw themselves as a little warmer than men, and men saw themselves as being a little more self-centered than women. However, for the most part, they described each other in the same way. Instead of trashing each other, husbands and wives called each other honest, dependable, sensible, practical, stable, mature, serious and down to earth. From that, the researchers concluded that husbands and wives like each other.

Other findings include:

- Married men and women generally agree what constitutes the good life. At the top of the list are a happy marriage, to be loved, to be respected, having a comfortable retirement, children, good friends and a secure and interesting job.
- Husbands and wives think more highly of their spouses than their spouses think of themselves.

Everything but the kitchen sink

That's the feeling of a lot of parents these days as they help their children get ready for college. Melissa Bologna, 20, packs her trunk for her third year at Siena Heights College in Adrian. Pencils and notebooks aside, a microwave is considered, in some quarters, a necessity, along with the coffee maker, radio and other electrical marvels. The daughter of Jim and Patti Bologna of Grosse Pointe City, she is majoring in English.

Gunman in Gravel killing gets probation, no prison

By John Minnis
Assistant Editor

Susan Gravel gasped. She had just heard Detroit Recorder's Chief Judge Dalton A. Roberson sentence the juvenile gunman who killed her husband to probation and place him in the custody of the state Department of Social Services until he is 21.

"This is just ridiculous," she said after the Aug. 28 sentencing. "It's a clear message that life is cheap."

Kermit Haynes, 18, who was 16 at the time, pleaded guilty to first-degree murder in the Feb. 8, 1990, killing of Benjamin Gravel, 53. Haynes admitted that he was the one who fatally shot Gravel.

He was the second confessed killer to be sentenced as a juvenile in the incident.

On June 17, Cortez Miller, 16, who was 15 when Gravel was killed, also was sentenced to the custody of the DSS until he turns 21. He was on probation for drug trafficking at the time of the killing.

Miller and Haynes were among four juveniles and two adults who tried to steal Gravel's car at gunpoint while he was on his way to his Farms home from the Bayview Yacht Club on Detroit's east side at 10:10 p.m.

"You can't let those juvenile offenders get off," Gravel said. "The judge has to take a stand."

She said that by failing to impose prison sentences on the two juveniles, the judge is telling youths in Detroit that they can do anything they want without fear of punishment.

She had hoped that Haynes would be sentenced as an adult — which would have meant life in prison — because he was close to being an adult at the time of the killing, had a criminal history and had fired the bullet that killed her husband.

Recorder's Court psychologist Robert Bartz, in his presentencing report, described Haynes as a dangerous human being, sadistic, amoral and a person who shows all the classic signs of a psychopath. He said that even with the best efforts of the DSS to help Haynes, his prognosis is poor.

Another psychologist, Dr. Karen Clark, said Haynes shows violent tendencies and described him as vicious and assaultive.

At the time of the Gravel murder, Clark continued, Haynes' actions were intentional and premeditated and he understood that someone could be killed.

She said she had no indication whether Haynes could be rehabilitated.

Roberson, however, said the prosecution failed to prove that Haynes should be sentenced as an adult. He said state law mandates that the court sentence 15- and 16-year-olds as juveniles unless the prosecution proves that the case should be handled otherwise.

Roberson ruled that placing Haynes on juvenile probation

Pointer of Interest Zora Arkus-Duntov

By Donna Walker

Zora Arkus-Duntov's Grosse Pointe Woods home is filled with automotive awards — design awards from Ford Motor Co. and General Motors, racing awards from speedways in the United States and Europe, automobile restoration awards, and plaques from Corvette clubs across the country, honoring him as the "Father of the Corvette."

And on Monday, Sept. 30, he will receive another award to add to his collection. He will be inducted into the Automotive Hall of Fame at an awards banquet at the Westin Hotel in Detroit.

The Automotive Hall of Fame was founded in 1939 to recognize outstanding individual achievement in the automotive industry, to preserve and commemorate automotive history and to create a tribute to all those who have worked to build the industry.

In automobile circles, Arkus-Duntov is best known for transforming Chevrolet's Corvette from a ho-hum vehicle with a small engine to a high performance sports car during his 22 years with GM.

However, he said that his first love has always been motorcycles.

"In my opinion, the motorcycle is the best thing invented for a man," said Arkus-Duntov, in his thick Russian accent. "When you steer a motorcycle, you steer by leaning one way or another."

It's the integration of man and machine, the feeling of being part of the motorcycle, that he said he likes. And throughout his career, he said he has tried to create cars in which that feeling can be duplicated.

Arkus-Duntov was born in Belgium in 1909. His parents, natives of Russia, were students at a university in Belgium. His father was studying mining engineering, and his mother was studying botany and zoology.

After he was born, they moved back to Leningrad, where his father got a job in a mine and where his brother was born seven years later.

When Arkus-Duntov was 14,

Lake swimming to be studied; safety a concern

Whether to create a lake swimming area at the Grosse Pointe Shores municipal park will continue to be studied over the winter.

Shores Trustee Patricia Galvin, chair of the parks and harbor committee, said at the council's Aug. 27 meeting that safety remains a key concern.

Last month, two residents presented about 100 petition signatures to the council asking that lake swimming be reinstated. This year, Shores officials banned swimming in the lake off the north breakwall because they could not guarantee safety.

The depth of the water and height of the breakwall make it almost impossible for emergency personnel to rescue someone from the lake, and currently there is no way for the ambulance to get near the breakwall where swimming had been allowed.

Responding to the residents' requests, the parks and harbor and public works committees began last month to look at a proposal for lake swimming from a deck at the curved bay area at the northwest corner of the park.

Galvin said resident Leon Sehyon, head of the Pointes' marine rescue dive team, checked the lake bottom in the bay area and found a lot of debris that would be dangerous to swimmers. The debris would have to be removed before swimming could be allowed.

Trustee N. William O'Keefe, head of the insurance committee, pointed out that safety remained a concern because it would still be difficult to pull floundering swimmers from the lake.

Galvin said there remained many factors to study and that lake swimming will continue to be examined during the winter.

Woods gets new building inspector

Grosse Pointe Woods has a new building inspector.

Melissa Mellen started on Monday, Aug. 19 and will work part-time, 9 a.m.-4 p.m. Monday, Thursday, and Friday. Earl Wakely, who retired as full-time building inspector earlier this year, will continue to work part-time, on Tuesday and Wednesday.

Mellen, who lives in the village of Romeo, graduated from Michigan State University in 1975 with a bachelor's degree in bio-chemistry. She also holds three associate degrees from Oakland Community College, in architectural drafting, industrial drafting, and tax assessment administration.

She worked in Oakland County's tax equalization department for 10 years, as a tax assessor in Oakland Township for two years, and most recently as a tax assessor in Washington Township for one year.

Boy robs boy of bicycle

A boy 11-13 is being sought in the Aug. 27 theft of a 9-year-old Farms boy's bicycle in the parking lot at Mack and Morris in the Farms.

The Farms boy told police that at 5:15 p.m. he was standing near his bike, which was secured with a chain when another boy approached him. The stranger took off a blue bicycle chain that was hanging around his neck, swung it in the air and told the Farms boy that if he didn't give him his bike, he would hit him in the head.

The Farms boy, fearing the other boy would hurt him, unlocked his bike and gave it to the stranger, who then rode it around the nearby stores a few times before riding away.

Scouts canoe Canadian wilderness

Eight Boy Scouts and four leaders left the conveniences of Grosse Pointe Aug. 11 to explore the lakes and streams of Ontario's Quetico Park.

Six days later, they returned, stronger and renewed by the "benevolent spirit" known to the area's native inhabitants, the Ojibwe Indians.

The group traveled nearly 60 miles, traversing 13 lakes, two rivers, a creek, and 13 portages.

Along the way, they saw a waterfall and spotted plenty of wildlife, including moose, eagles, otters, beavers and a bear, which attempted to share one of their campsites.

Joe Meinig of the Woods, scoutmaster of Troop 479 and a veteran of many canoe trips, made sure it was a learning experience. Everyone participated in planning the route and menu and worked as a team in carrying the gear in the canoes and on the portage trails.

Peter Ellison of the Woods, who enters college at Michigan Tech this month, enjoyed the trip as a finale to six years of camping and high-adventure trips with the Scouts.

For Craig and Alex Tracy and their father, Mike, formerly of the Woods, now living near Howell, the trip provided an opportunity to renew friendships.

Nathan Pierantoni of the Woods and Jonathon Opdyke and his father, Bill, of the Woods, enjoyed the fishing. Smallmouth bass, walleye and northern pike were among their catches.

Chris Frey of the Farms and Sean Stevenson of the Woods and several of the others abandoned their tents one night to sleep under the stars on a small island near the main campsite. They were rewarded by a spectacular display of the Aurora Borealis.

Chris' father, Bill, enjoyed the peace and tranquility of the wilderness and the song of the loons. Marshall Swanson of the Woods found the trip better than he expected. Next time he said he hopes for a trip twice as long.

For more information on Troop 479, call Meinig at 882-6614 or come to a meeting in the girls gym at Parcels Middle School Mondays at 7:45 p.m.

Just attend the annual Grosse Pointe Shores Improvement Foundation picnic on Sunday, Sept. 8, where once again, residents will be able to "dunk a cop" at the dunk tank, as well as join in a raffle, an antique car show and games for the kids. Chili dogs and other goodies will be available.

Invitations went out to all Shores residents. Foundation President Barbara Willett said tickets will be available at the gate. The cost is $5 for adults, $3 for children.

She said some 600 people are expected to attend this year, including a lot of grandchildren and grandparents, because once again the picnic is on Grandparents' Day.

The picnic runs from 1 to 5 p.m.

Author merges Indian mysticism with Jung's theories

By Ronald J. Bernas
Staff Writer

Grosse Pointe City's Mary E. Loomis believes each person she comes in contact with has something to teach her.

That's why she thinks she was brought into contact several years ago with Native American medicine man Harley Swiftdeer. He was speaking at a seminar on Indian mysticism in Dearborn and what he said struck a responsive chord in her.

"I was listening to him talk and I was thinking 'it's making sense to me, but I'm not sure why,'" she said.

What Swiftdeer was talking about was the ancient Medicine Wheel, a way of organizing life, feelings and emotions, and ways to use that philosophy to learn more about oneself.

It wasn't until later that Loomis, a Jungian analyst since 1976 who practices out of Robert Loomis and Associates in Grosse Pointe City, realized the correlation between what she learned from Swiftdeer and what she learned while earning her Ph.D. in cognitive psychology from Wayne State.

She recently wrote a book, "Dancing the Wheel of Psychological Types," which explains her theories of the similarities between the Native American mysticism and Jung's theories of individuation and typology.

Where Freud looks at the adult through his infant sexuality, Jung looks at the adult through the religious dimension, Loomis said. There is a respect for the spiritual part of the person, no matter what religion that person is.

"And with Jung, the mystery that heals is love," she said. "There has to be a respect for the other person's soul."

Compare that with the Native American belief that all things are related — humans are related to rocks and to water and to the animals and to the Earth.

That relationship can be shown in the Medicine Wheel and its relatives, such as the Mind Wheel or the Emotions Wheel.

"What I liked about the idea of the wheel is that it has no beginning or no end," she said.

The four elements — air, fire, water and Earth — can be matched up with emotions and aspects of personality — for example wisdom, enlightenment, innocence and insight — and understanding the wheels and the way they interact can lead to a greater understanding of the way the individual interacts. The center of the circle — where one is equidistant from all forces — is the place one should strive to be, according to the Native American idea.

Loomis' book represents the first time the traditions and philosophies have been written down; previously, they had been oral traditions, handed down from generation to generation.

Although the philosophies are not new, combining them is. And Loomis says colleges and universities are noticing a surge in interest in Jung's theories and methods.

One example is the mania over Robert Bly's male consciousness-raising book, "Iron John."

"People are looking for something other than surface meaning," she said.

Loomis said the book may not be for everyone who is on a path toward self-knowledge, but those with a background in Jung, or those to whom the idea appeals, could be helped. Jungian analysts might also find it of use in their work, she said.

Loomis is also the co-author of the Singer-Loomis Inventory of Personality now in its third edition.

"Dancing the Wheel of Psychological Types" is $14.95 and is available at Third Coast Booksellers, 15129 Kercheval.

After a summer filled with delays, Farms workers are on the road again

By Donna Walker
Staff Writer

Five roads in Grosse Pointe Farms should be repaved and have new curbs by the end of September — if all goes well, said Joe Leonard, assistant public service director.

The roads are Fisher (from Kercheval to Chalfonte), McKinley (from Ridge to Kercheval), Radnor Circle, Beacon Hill and Elizabeth. The roads will be worked on in that order, and the project should be completed by Sept. 20, barring unforeseen problems, Leonard said.

Construction on Fisher was expected to begin on Sept. 6, "but I haven't confirmed that yet with the contractors," he said.

The city had hoped to have McKinley finished by the time school started, but a six-week strike by concrete truck drivers this summer fouled up construction schedules all over the state, Leonard said.

Curbs and sidewalks were replaced on Beacon Hill beginning Aug. 1, Leonard said. The work was done at that time, he said, to coincide with the replacement of a water main under Beacon Hill. The street will be repaved after work on Radnor Circle is completed, he said.

The concrete and paving work will cost the Farms an estimated $119,000, Leonard said. Grosse Pointe City will pay for paving and curb work that is done on its side of Fisher Road. Chris Bremer, Grosse Pointe City assistant city manager, said the city doesn't know yet what its share of the project will cost, but that it has a ball park figure of $21,000 to $25,000.

"It's a much needed improvement," she said of the Fisher Road work. The City has had money budgeted for the Fisher Road work for a few years, Bremer said. However, the City had to wait for the Farms to budget money for the project, she said, "because you can't pave half a road."

Asked how the Farms decides which roads will be repaved, Leonard said that each March, after the frost is out of the ground, someone from the public service department drives through the Farms, rating roads on their roughness, 1 through 6. A very smooth road will be rated a 1, and a very rough road will be rated a 6.

On rougher roads, the surveyor will get out and walk up and down the road to determine the extent and cause of the problem, Leonard said.

Usually, all of the roads are rated by the same person, he said, so that they are judged by the same standards. "What is smooth to one person may be very smooth to another person," he explained.

After the study is complete, someone else from the department conducts an independent study, and the results of the two are compared.

Streets that have a 5 or a 6 are repaired as soon as there are funds available. The city also takes into account phone calls and letters it receives from residents about pot holes when determining which roads will be repaved, Leonard said.

Woods man acquitted of embezzlement

By John Minnis
Assistant Editor

Randall Letcavage of Grosse Pointe Woods was found not guilty Aug. 27 on a charge of embezzling $5,000 from a former St. Clair Shores couple.

On Oct. 25, 1990, state Attorney General Frank J. Kelley brought the embezzlement charge against Letcavage. He was arraigned in Grosse Pointe Municipal Court and bound over to Wayne County Circuit Court.

He pleaded innocent to the charge.

Letcavage's attorney, Charles E. Raymond, said, following his client's acquittal, that the state failed to prove its case.

"This was a nothing case," he said. "The money was always there."

Richard Koenigsnecht, the assistant attorney general handling the case, merely said the defendant was acquitted, and would not comment further on Wayne County Circuit

Judge Phillip J. Jourdan's decision.

He said there will be no appeal. "That's it," he said. "The case is over."

The former St. Clair Shores couple, who asked not to be identified, alleged that in 1986 they had given Letcavage, an investment counselor, $5,000 to invest in a mutual fund, but that he never put the money in the fund.

His lawyer argued at the preliminary examination in the Park court last year that no time deadline was given for Letcavage to invest the funds and embezzlement did not occur merely because the funds were not immediately invested. In December 1988, Letcavage paid the couple back with a $6,500 personal check. Raymond said that in his 38 years of practicing law he has never seen such a big deal made out of an insignificant case. He said the case should never have made it to court, that it should have been thrown out and that it did not warrant media attention.

He said that as a taxpayer

he objected to the state attorney's office wasting money on bad, nothing cases.

In an unrelated civil case, Letcavage faces five counts brought by four of his clients. The civil counts range from securities fraud to acting as a real estate agent in Michigan without a license.

The civil trial is scheduled for Nov. 4 before Circuit Judge Lucile A. Watts.

he got an after-school job as a chauffeur's assistant. His job was to crank the engine to start the car. He'd also go along for the ride, sitting beside the driver on the outside of the car, and hopping down to push the car out of the mud or snow every time it got stuck.

Asked how old he was when he learned to drive, Arkus-Duntov smiled and then said, as if ready to share a secret, "Do you mean legally or illegally?"

His first time behind the wheel was illegal. He did not have a license, nor permission to use the car, and he was only 14. But one day, he took the chauffeur's car out for a joy ride without him knowing.

"I did well," he said. "I didn't get stuck or anything."

He said he was 18 when he drove for the first time, legally.

Arkus-Duntov said he wanted a motorcycle more than a car. He saved his chauffeur's assistant money and bought a motorcycle engine.

"I was going to build a motorcycle," he said, "but my father dissuaded me from this and made me give the engine back."

Eager to study electronics at a technical institute in Russia, Arkus-Duntov said he "did some finagaling" and made himself a year older on his school records, allowing him to enter the institute a year early.

He studied at the institute for a year and then, in 1926, joined his parents, who had moved to Germany.

Arkus-Duntov enrolled in the University of Frankfurt, changed his major to mechanical engineering, and then changed colleges. He graduated from the Institute of Charlotenburg in 1934.

After graduation, he worked for several German automotive firms and was commissioned to design a supercharger, which appeared on numerous small cars throughout central Europe. He also worked as a consultant for several Belgian and French firms, and served with the French Air Force in early World War II.

While in Paris, he met a young dancer named Elfi. They were married in 1940, and were living in France when the Nazi occupation began.

In 1941, Arkus-Duntov obtained an emergency visa to enter the United States as a defense contractor. He took Elfi with him and they moved to New York. One of the things he did as a defense consultant, he said, was help design mine sweepers.

In 1942, he founded Ardu Mechanical Corp. in New York, where he manufactured aircraft parts and designed something for which he became somewhat famous — the Ardu cylinder head for the Ford "flat head" 100 horsepower V8 engine. His cylinder head boosted the performance of the engine, which was used in Ford trucks until 1949. The Ardu cylinder was also used in the British Alford J2 sports car and in many custom-built American racing cars and hot rods.

When the first Chevrolet Corvette was unveiled in New York in 1953, Arkus-Duntov was there. He said he was impressed with the car's body, but disappointed when he looked under the hood and found a standard six-cylinder engine and two-speed automatic transmission. He thought the car should have a bigger engine and more "muscle," and wrote Chevrolet's research and development department, telling them so.

He was hired by Chevrolet later that year, and he and Elfi moved to St. Clair Shores in the fall of 1953. Arkus-Duntov didn't get to work directly on the Corvette until 1956. However, during those three years, while working on other projects, he convinced the director of the research and development department to start focusing on cars for more youth-minded people — people who saw customized, souped-up cars in magazines and wanted a hot rod of their own.

"That is my proudest accomplishment," he said, "to be essential in providing the swing of young people from Ford to Chevrolet."

From 1956 until his retirement in 1975, Arkus-Duntov worked on perfecting the Corvette. He turned it into a true sports car by adding engines that were increasingly larger and more efficient. He was also instrumental in designing a four-speed manual transmission, a fuel injection system, retractable headlights, a four-speed all synchromesh gearbox and an independent suspension system for the Corvette.

The car was so much a part of him, and he of it, that people began calling the Corvette "The Marque of Zora," and Arkus-Duntov "Mr. Corvette" and "the father of the Corvette."

Arkus-Duntov also raced Corvettes and other cars, and still has his old helmets and black leather racing shoes. Friction from the gas pedal, brake and clutch burned holes in the soles. He retired from racing in his mid 60s, having earned two class honors at Le Mans and setting a record for the Pike's Peak climb.

Arkus-Duntov and his wife moved to Grosse Pointe Woods in 1961. Since his retirement from Chevrolet, he has worked as an engineering consultant to automobile companies worldwide. He is a member of the Society of Automotive Engineers and various Corvette clubs across the country.

He said his favorite Corvette was a 1974 model he drove for many years. He now drives a bright yellow '91 Corvette.

At the end of an interview, it's customary to ask the interviewee if there's anything the reporter should have asked, but didn't.

"Well I'm an old man," Arkus-Duntov said with a smile. "I've lived a long life. Of course there are things we didn't cover."

However, when he calls himself an old man, he says it's only figuratively. For he'll always be a young hot-rodder at heart.

Does leniency toward killers serve justice?

A second juvenile who pleaded guilty to murdering Grosse Pointe Farms businessman Benjamin Gravel in February 1990 apparently will escape prison unless he seriously violates his probation.

Instead, the juvenile who fired the fatal shot, like his companion who provided the weapon, will be remanded to the custody of the state Department of Social Services (DSS) until he reaches the age of 21 in less than three years.

Yet the leniency granted to the two juveniles apparently results as much from a recently enacted state law that requires life sentences for adults convicted of first-degree murder as it does from a "soft on crime" attitude toward juveniles by circuit judges involved in such cases.

With the passage of the tough murder sentencing requirement, the Legislature left judges only two real alternatives in sentencing juveniles convicted of first degree murder.

If judges consider the juveniles as adults, they are required to sentence them to life. In considering defendants as juveniles, however, judges must remand them to DSS jurisdiction until they reach 21.

In fact, those were the only alternatives faced by Detroit Recorder's Chief Judge Dalton A. Roberson for the second time in the case involving the murder of Gravel, who was shot to death on Clairpointe in

Opinion

Detroit while enroute to his Farms home from the Bayview Yacht Club on Feb. 8, 1990.

So, even though he was facing the actual killer, Kermit Haynes, who had pleaded guilty to first degree murder and had been identified in testimony as the juvenile who fired the gun, Judge Roberson placed Haynes on probation and remanded him to DSS custody.

It is true that by putting Haynes on probation, Judge Roberson also made the juvenile subject to life imprisonment as an adult in the event he violates the terms of his probation by committing a crime calling for a prison sentence of at least one year.

Yet that still appears to Gravel's family and his friends and many other residents of the Pointes to be too lenient a punishment for a premeditated murder to which Haynes in effect confessed by pleading guilty.

True, that sentence was no surprise to followers of the case because Judge Roberson had imposed a similar sentence June 17 on Cortez Miller, another juvenile charged in the case who had been on probation for drug trafficking at the time he was involved in the killing.

Two other juveniles are still to be sentenced but their fates will be determined after they testify, as they have agreed to do, against two other young men who will be tried as adults later this fall.

Under the circumstances of this crime and the evidence indicating it was premeditated, we still might have expected the imposition of the harsher of the two penalties available in such cases.

That is especially true in view of the reports Judge Roberson had received from court psychologists prior to the sentencing. John Minnis reports their findings elsewhere in the Grosse Pointe News today, but two samples indicate their opinions.

One psychologist, Robert Bartz, said Haynes is a dangerous human being and shows all the classic signs of a psychopath. The other, Dr. Karen Clark, said Haynes had been an assaultive discipline problem in the youth home and shows violent tendencies.

Yet Roberson said the prosecution had failed to prove that Haynes should be sentenced as an adult and noted that the law requires that the court sentence those 16 and under as juveniles unless the prosecution proves otherwise.

This apparently is the pattern being set under the new law. The Detroit News reported last week that only three of a dozen juveniles of 15 or 16 who have been convicted of first-degree murder since the new law was passed have been sentenced as adults. Roberson, the News reported, has handled four of the nine remaining cases — and placed all four on juvenile probation.

Roberson's preference for probation in such cases surely raises the question of whether the 1988 law achieves its purpose, especially when it comes into play in the sentencing of juvenile criminals.

In capital punishment states, prosecutors often find it so difficult to persuade jurors to convict persons charged with capital offenses — in effect requiring juries to make the decision as to whether the defendant lives or dies — that they tend to file lesser charges on which conviction is more certain.

In view of that experience, is Michigan's new law in effect encouraging murder by juveniles who have reason to believe that if apprehended, they can beat the rap because of judicial reluctance to sentence them to life imprisonment?

If that is actually happening, as the record seems to indicate, then shouldn't the law be revised to require not only rehabilitation but stiff punishment, and not necessarily life imprisonment, in all cases of juveniles who commit murder?

Surely the present law does not seem to serve as a deterrent to juveniles and sends the wrong message to all young people attracted to crime.

In view of the lenient sentences imposed, it is no wonder that Gravel's widow greeted the Haynes' sentencing with the comment: "This is just ridiculous. It's a clear message that life is cheap."

Many other residents of the Pointes are likely to join her in that same shocked and angry reaction to what appears to have been a miscarriage of justice.

Are mayors seeing goblins?

Lined up like ducks in a row, the five mayors of the Grosse Pointes now have come out unanimously in opposition to any kind of a district court in the Grosse Pointes.

Their position means they not only oppose the proposed Park district court to be voted on in November. They also oppose attempts to revive the 5-Pointe district court plan.

Yet Herbert D. Levitt, regional administrator with the State Court Administrative Office, told a recent Park council meeting and, in effect, all five mayors he thought they were "seeing goblins" — and he wasn't referring to Halloween.

What are the "goblins" that the mayors

Fighting back

Aided by three friendly Democrats, the Grosse Pointes last week began fighting back against a proposed "bipartisan" county districting plan that would move the Park out of the 1st Commissioner District.

The Democratic trio, all members of the county commission who had their own reasons for opposing the bipartisan plan, came in with a "minimal change" proposal that supported the Pointes' desire to remain united in the 1st District.

The Park council last week also took action on this battle front by unanimously approving a resolution calling upon the districting commission to keep the Park in the 1st District with the other Pointes.

So the Republican Pointes still have a good chance of remaining in the present 1st District, thanks in part to three Democrats on the county commission.

Protests counterproductive

If Michigan is to become an early stop in the Operation Rescue campaign, as some supporters claim, its state sponsors ought to note an adverse reaction to the recent anti-abortion demonstrations in Wichita, Kan.

The reaction came from the Wichita Eagle, the city's only daily newspaper, which said, as the latest protests began:

"It's a shame that just as local pro-life leaders are beginning to understand the dangers and divisiveness of confrontation, the national leaders will be tempted to escalate it."

The paper's editorial made four major points:

- "It is not a peaceful tactic to physically occupy space to which someone else has a legal right. It is intimidation.
- "The issue of abortion is not going to be settled in the streets of Wichita. It will be settled in the courts and voting booths, claim they see?

We can identify two of them: higher costs and loss of local control. Those are buzzwords that arouse local officials everywhere.

What Shores President Edmund M. Brady Jr. means by cost and loss of local control, as his remarks to the Park council indicated, is that the Pointes' municipal governments would lose some, if not all, of the profit each now makes on its municipal court as well as control over the costs and staffing of a district court.

Nobody said so but some observers feel that what the mayors really fear is that a popular district judge serving all the Pointes could become a political powerhouse whose activities would tend to dwarf those of the mayors and council members.

The arguments about cost, loss of local control and the possibility of a "political czar" in a district judge's post might also explain Park Mayor Palmer Heenan's conversion to the opposition.

When he first sought the mayoral office in 1983, he ran in support of "a district court controlled by Grosse Pointe Park residents." Now, he explains, times have changed and he has "more seasoning" in office and more facts at hand.

Before conceding the cost argument to the foes of a 5-district court, we would prefer to see more research into the pros and cons of the issue. But we still believe the district court ought to be an "all or nothing" proposition. That means we oppose the proposal for a single Pointe, the Park, to try to undertake a district court.

In our view, a Park district court might even provide the "goblins" that that our mayors profess to see.

as appropriate in a democracy.

- "Free speech is not the issue, nor has it been since Operation Rescue has arrived. No one is being denied the right to peaceful protest.

- "If violence occurs, understand what started it. Under Judge Kelly's order, police and marshalls are charged with maintaining access. They are doing that by establishing police lines and cordons on private property. Any contact that occurs between officials and protesters clearly will be initiated by the protesters."

Without directly saying so, the editorial obviously advises protesters that their illegal blockades of access to legal abortion clinics are becoming counterproductive. It's a message the state and national leaders of Operation Rescue ought to heed.

Judge Thomas

To the Editor:

The forthcoming confirmation hearings on the nomination of Judge Clarence Thomas to the Supreme Court hold considerable interest for me for two reasons: (1) I have not been able so far to make up my mind about this unusual man and his fitness for the court; (2) He has enunciated considerable interest in the "natural rights of man" and, therefore, the natural law.

When was the last time you even heard of the natural law as a consideration to be brought into a Supreme Court confirmation hearing? I predict you'll be hearing plenty about it in Thomas' hearing. The venue for its introduction into the hearings, of course, will be the efforts of the questioners to elicit some insight into Thomas' stand on abortion — specifically, Roe-Wade.

In the July 29 Wall Street Journal's Op-ed section, Boston journalist Philip F. Lawler, writing on the civil disobedience involved in the Wichita, Kan., anti-abortion protests, brings the natural law into his discussion. He writes: "Medical science can establish that human life begins at conception, but even that fact does not settle the issue."

He continues: "In days past, jurists settled such apodictic questions by appeal to the principles of natural law, which undergird the language of our Constitution... On the one hand, critics of Judge Thomas point with alarm to his embrace of natural-law reasoning. On the other, leaders of Operation Rescue invoke the natural law to justify their defiance of a judicial injunction."

If life truly begins at conception — which I ardently believe — then 99 percent of all abortions are an affront to, and a serious violation of, the natural law. The remaining 1 percent are that percentage of all abortions involving rape or incest, which require separate judgment.

Planned Parenthood, NOW and the ACLU, the unholy trio of the heavily politicized abortion issue, have effectively smothered all moral consideration of this social disaster to date. Few persons — altogether too few — advert to the fact that every abortion is one more murdered child. Since Roe-Wade in 1973, more than 26 million American children have been killed through legal abortion. By

The times they are a'changing

Someone once said: I don't want to be riding in a limousine when the revolution comes.

Well, if I had my druthers, I didn't want to be on vacation during the Russian revolution.

There we were, traveling around the periphery of the Lower Peninsula — up Lake Michigan and down Lake Huron — when the coup began. It became an obsession to buy the morning and afternoon paper and to turn on CNN the minute we checked into a motel.

About halfway through the trip, my husband began to grouse that he was getting tired of CNN. He'd want to go to breakfast and I'd want to watch the news from Moscow a little longer.

But I don't mean to trivialize the momentous events occurring on the other side of the world. It has to be the most incredible of all of the incredible things that have been happening in the last couple of years. In fact, it's almost too much to comprehend anymore.

When we traveled through eastern Europe five years ago, a guide reminded us that most of the people there didn't know what life was like before Communism. The majority were under 45 and many of them, without being members of the party, were indoctrinated with Communist ideology.

I remember the sociology professor from Warsaw whose wife arranged to have a birthday cake for my husband sent to the hotel. It was no small feat — she couldn't call up a bakery and place an order. The cake was a delicious torte and her husband refused to take any money for her trouble.

He didn't think, he told a few of us, that there would be any significant changes in the government during his lifetime, but he had great hopes that his child would one day live in a free society. I gave him a hug when we parted and silently hoped he would get his wish.

I am so happy for him now. It's a wonderful thing for a parent to know that his dreams for his children will be realized and it's even better to know that perhaps the parent, too, will reap some of the benefits.

The most visible symbol of the empire crumbling, of course, was the dismantling of the Berlin Wall. Was there anyone, including those who were born after the wall went up, who didn't feel the powerful emotion of this event?

It has all been so fantastic that I wonder what my father would have to say about everything that has happened. He died unexpectedly a few months before we visited Poland, where he was born. He came to this country as a young boy, one year before the Russian revolution of 1917.

He read voraciously until he lost his eyesight. Then he prided himself on keeping up with what was going on in the world by listening to news programs on radio and TV throughout the day. And he loved to discuss current events.

Would he be as incredulous as I am or would he be satisfied that good has once again triumphed, and always has and will, which was his thinking.

And I wonder what my maternal grandfather would say about what's been going on. He was a bear of a man who, as a Polish conscript, served in the Russian cavalry. He, like my father and other immigrants, was fiercely patriotic and proud to be an American. I bet he would view the changes in the world today with some colorful expletives that would mask his intense pride in his heritage.

I think of them, the people I loved who are no longer living, whenever something major happens, like the birth of a baby in the family or a marriage or, in this case, an event of global proportions.

We are living in extraordinary times. We are in the front row of history, thanks to electronics, and we're able to watch it as it's occurring. It wasn't that long ago that it took a week or two for news from other parts of the world to reach us.

Truly amazing. I'm glad to be here. I can't wait to see what happens next.

Special delivery

Two great aunts, Fernanda and Aurora Hart of Grosse Pointe Farms, are delighted with their new nephew, Daniel Joseph Hart. They're pleased with his arrival and with his special "escorts."

Little Daniel was getting himself in gear — getting ready to be born — early in the morning on Thursday, Aug. 29. Mom and Dad, John and Maria Hart, were hurrying to Bon Secours Hospital. Dad-to-be was leaning just-a-teensy-bit too heavily on the gas pedal.

Ever-vigilant, the Grosse Pointe Woods police were in earnest pursuit.

Once the officer learned the nature of the situation, however, he escorted the Harts to the "boundary" of Grosse Pointe Woods.

Did he drop them there? No way, said Fernanda and Aurora Hart. The officer called ahead and arranged for a Grosse Pointe City scout car to continue the escort service.

Daniel Joseph arrived at 3:17 a.m.

The Harts didn't have time to get the names or badge numbers of the special escorts. Daniel's great aunts want to know who they were so they can thank them personally.

Give blood

The need for blood in southeastern Michigan is still critical, according to the Red Cross.

Wanna help? Get over to Cottage Hospital, 159 Kercheval in Grosse Pointe Farms, between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. on Monday, Sept. 9 and give some blood.

More grist for the airport mill

If ever an issue cried out for a regional approach, it's airport expansion. Officials in several counties have been riding off in all directions for more than a year now, with still no solution in sight.

The only thing that's clear is that residents everywhere want the airport somewhere else. That's a real change from the '60s, when the modernization of City Airport was hailed as a convenience for the east side.

SEMCOG is our area's only nod to a regional approach, but even SEMCOG took too narrow a view this time. It failed to look another few miles north — to Flint.

Flint is just as close to the northern side of the Detroit metro area (where much of Detroit's growth is occurring) as Metro Airport is. Flint already has an airport — and it already has expansion plans under way.

In fact, although we don't read much about it here, Flint's Bishop Airport plans to spend $34 million to lure travelers from Metro.

Consider these plans, explained in a June issue of the Port Huron Times Herald, and keep in mind that anyone with access to I-75 or US 23 or who lives north of about 20 Mile, can get to Flint in an hour without driving through downtown traffic.

Bishop Airport officials plan to double its capacity by mid-1993. By the year 2000, they expect 400,000 passengers to fly from Flint.

"If we have the service that's needed, people are going to use this airport instead of fighting the congestion to Detroit," airport manager James Rice told the Times Herald.

Bishop already has good location, easy access (at the confluence of three expressways), the easy convenience of parking that is found in smaller airports, and service by five airlines. The expansion will add two airlines and many new flights. Rice says the fares will be competitive (perhaps even cheaper).

The funding is already in place. According to one official, the stagnant economy in the Flint area prompted voters to do what voters elsewhere are reluctant to do — approve tax money for expansion.

SEMCOG is certainly aware of Flint's plans. In fact, its transportation program manager told the Times Herald that whatever happens at Bishop will have an impact on southeastern Michigan's needs.

But SEMCOG hasn't particularly publicized Bishop's plans, either. I would argue that those plans are germane to the public discussion.

When the Hemlock Society met in Grosse Pointe back in May to discuss assisted suicide and — in particular — the Bertram Harper murder trial, no one would have predicted the coming wild popularity of "Final Exit."

This little book on assisted suicide, a combination philosophy, how-to, and political statement, was written by Hemlock's founder and president, Derek Humphry. It isn't the first book he's written on the subject, but it's certainly his first on the New York Times best-seller list.

The controversial book has caught fire, and now Humphry is making the rounds of the talk shows.

Its popularity doesn't mean that great numbers of Americans are planning to commit suicide, or that Humphry wants them to, as some critics have charged. It does mean that many Americans are afraid of the technological advances in medicine that now are able to keep patients alive far beyond any natural life.

Talking about giving up electricity a couple of weeks ago — here's something to think about on the flip side. The low-tech way isn't always environmentally better, and one example of that is the electric shaver.

In only one week, you would use as much power to heat water for lather shaving as you would use in a year to run an electric shaver. And, of course, you save water, too, with the electric shaver.

This is from my ever-faithful environmental desk calendar, which also brings you news on the ant front.

To deter ants, squeeze a lemon onto their trail and leave the peel there. Ants absolutely don't like lemon.

I tested this in my garden path, where the ants aggressively run up my legs when I go by to water the flowers. We dropped leftover lemons from our iced tea there for several days, and the ants really did avoid them. Of course, since it was outside, they just made new trails out of their hill. But I think it would work in a kitchen.

Ants also reportedly dislike talcum, chalk, damp coffee grounds, bonemeal and cayenne pepper. But I can't vouch personally for those.

Nancy Parmenter

In fact, there's a trend against airports in residential areas. About six years ago, McKinley Airport (near Utica and 14 Mile roads) not only ceased operation, but was sold off for condo development. You probably couldn't fly a model plane there now.

That happened in spite of substantial backing for expansion from industry, owners of private planes, and the federal government that would have funded more than 90 percent of the project.

Airport rhetoric fills the air, from supporters and opponents of expansion at City, at Selridge, at St. Clair County's airport off Gratiot near Port Huron. Now SEMCOG has weighed in with a report on future aviation needs in its seven-county area (a report that infuriated expansion opponents).

Sign up for exercise

The Grosse Pointe War Memorial is offering several exercise classes this fall, including Jacki's Aerobic Dancing, and two new classes — Body Fit and Vitality Plus.

Body Fit is a re-entry/beginners exercise program focusing on low intensity aerobics, toning, stretching and deep relaxation. It includes all the components for a complete workout.

The class is held on Mondays and Wednesdays, 10:30 to 11:30 a.m., Sept. 16 - Nov. 6. Instructor Joan Thornton, is AFAA and IDEA certified, has a degree in exercise science, and is a Vital Options Exercise instructor. The cost of the class is $52 for eight weeks (16 sessions).

Vitality Plus: Low Impact, is a "fat burning" energetic workout that conditions the cardiovascular system while reducing fat stored in the body. The fast-paced, fun fitness hour incorporates aerobics, stretching and toning, and is designed to strengthen the abdominals, increase flexibility, and relax the neck.

The class is held on either Mondays and Wednesdays 6:30 to 7:30 p.m., Sept. 16 - Nov. 6, or Saturdays, 9 to 10 a.m., Sept. 21 - Nov. 9. Vitality Plus is taught by Jane Barry. The cost is $52 for 16 Monday/Wednesday sessions, or $26 for eight Saturday sessions.

The War Memorial is also offering Jacki's Aerobic Dancing, a complete exercise program which tones and firms skeletal muscles while strengthening the cardiovascular system. All of the exercise routines are choreographed with simple, safe dance steps.

Martha Popovich leads the class, held Mondays and Thursdays, 8:45 to 9:45 a.m. from Sept. 9 - Dec. 2. The cost is $40 for 12 sessions, $75 for 24 sessions, and a discounted $60 for those 62 and over for 24 sessions.

For more information on any of the exercise classes, call 881-7511.

Letting go

Devoted, caring parents can't help it. When our children marry we fall victim to a panoramic review of that person's entire life under our care and tutelage. Letting go can be one of the toughest lessons a parent can learn and some never succeed. Having had two weddings in our family within the past 10 months, I have come to the following conclusions:

There is no species of human who can cause as much pain or evoke as much joy as a daughter. She is your past, your present, and your link to the future. We hold tenaciously to that link. A daughter can almost always read your mind. I think that if a mother can understand her daughter she can accept and understand herself. A daughter embodies her mother's dreams. She is a tremendous emotional investment, paying enormous dividends.

The process of letting go is extremely difficult for parents who have been fortunate enough to have their children in close proximity for most of their lives. They have been spoiled by the daily contact and the unconscious realization that they are still connected and perhaps even needed by their progeny.

Then one day your child marries or moves away for a better job and the impact is not so much a stunning blow as a subtle, creeping void. Perhaps there is more going on here than is evident on the surface. Is this a signal of the passing of time and a process of evolution — a time to move ahead with our lives and not blame abandonment by our children for own shortcomings? You bet; it's a distinct possibility. No longer are we able to hide behind excuses that we might be needed, putting off moving ahead with our own agenda.

Tough love comes in many forms. We are most familiar with it in terms of parents administering tough love to their children. Maybe we should practice it on ourselves, allowing the space necessary to build a bridge across the generation gap.

Letters

contrast, between 1918 and 1975 — 57 years — 23 million persons died in Russia's Stalin labor camps. The figures are those of the International Association of the Victims of Communism.

The unholy trio just alluded to have succeeded in establishing their pro-abortion movement as a "pro-choice" activity. But this "right to choose" is applied indiscriminately and irresponsibly by a remarkably large segment of pregnant women. Overwhelmingly, Americans oppose abortion as a means of birth control. Yet today an estimated 40 percent of all abortions are repeat procedures. That's birth control by abortion. Also a substantial number use abortion for gender selection.

It will be wholesome for all American citizens if the Thomas confirmation hearings bring forth an enlarged discussion of the natural law, a discussion which will necessarily involve the divine law from which the natural law proceeds. If Judge Thomas is confirmed, it will be of intense interest to see how he would render opinions that, for a refreshing change, would reflect the viewpoints of the founding fathers concerning divine law, natural law, and the civil law as modified by both.

Incidentally, while I have the floor, I should mention that the last time I offered an abortion opinion in these pages, I was treated to a response from a non-admirer. She spent her whole letter in an argumentum ad hominum assault on me. She asked why instead of ranting about abortion I didn't do something about the "crack babies being born to a life of hell thanks in part right-to-life people."

Should my new-found booster be reading this, I would like to assure her I agree with her and I am trying to do something about it. I'm officer and director of three inner-city social agencies, two dedicated to sheltering and helping children of mothers on drugs, who stand in danger of AIDS infection. And I'm a hospital volunteer two days a week.

Any of the unholy trio doing more to act responsibly to lessen the "necessity" of abortion, as they see it?

- Single men have a much higher opinion of themselves than single women have of men. However, single women think single men are sexier than the men themselves think they are.
- Single women have high opinions of themselves. However, single men said that women are less honest, dependable, considerate, supportive and sensible than the women see themselves.
- Single men think single women are much more interested in having a good sex life than the women say they are.
- Sexual typecasting lives on. Both men and women say they would prefer men in traditional "male" jobs such as firefighter, police officer or plumber. Both sexes prefer a woman in the roll of nurse, secretary or housekeeper.
- Married women still do most of the cooking, dishwashing, laundry, floor washing, vacuuming, grocery shopping and child disciplining and supervising in their households. Married men still do most of the household repairs and lawn work, and make most of the decisions regarding investments, insurance and banking. However, they want to make some changes.

Wives said they would like to reduce their bill-paying responsibility by 8 percent while increasing decisions on investments by 3 percent and on insurance purchases by 1 percent. They'd also like to cut back on deciding to obtain a credit card by 2 percent and opening a checking account by 2 percent.

Husbands said they would like to increase their cooking chores by 4 percent, dishwashing by 2 percent, laundering by 7 percent, grocery shopping by 3 percent, dealing with their children's schools by 11 percent, approving children's friends by 4 percent, planning children's meals by 5 percent, helping with their homework by 6 percent and supervising their TV viewing by 7 percent.

- Single men said that when they marry, they plan to do more household chores than husbands said they would like to do. Single men said they would like to do 41 percent of the cooking, 46 percent of the dishwashing, 41 percent of the laundry, 42 percent of the vacuuming, 38 percent of the mopping, and 49 percent of the grocery shopping.

Married men said that they would like to do 23 percent of the cooking, 26 percent of the dishwashing, 20 percent of the laundry, 28 percent of the vacuuming, 24 percent of the mopping, and 31 percent of the grocery shopping.

"One of the implications of this study," Balesky said, "is that women aren't as liberated as men would like to think. Women say that they do most of the household chores, and they're generally right. My wife works, and I know I could do a lot more around the house than I do."

A not-so-surprising finding of the study is that married men and women have the opposite sex pegged better than singles do. Single men and women think that there is a dark side to the opposite sex, one that is not so appealing.

"Really, it's kind of the mystique of dating," Balesky said. "It's that period in the beginning of a relationship when you're unsure of each other and trying to figure each other out that speaks to that dark side."

However, that darkness "begins to lighten up as people get to know each other," he said.

The researchers conducted the study to provide advertisers with useful marketing information.

For example, the shift in men's attitudes about household chores will probably have a major effect on advertising for household products, which is currently aimed at women, Stannard said. It also suggests a continued growth in door-to-door services, such as food delivery and dry cleaning.

"When it's the husband's turn to cook, he may just decide to order something in, like a pizza," Stannard said.

The agency has combined the results of the survey into a book which costs $200. The four sections may be purchased separately, for $50 each.

For information about purchasing the study, call D'arcy Masius Benton & Bowles at 258-8600, or address inquiries to the agency's Research and Marketing Department, 74 West Long Lake Road, Suite 4, P.O. Box 811, Bloomfield Hills, Mich. 48303.

Killing

was in the best interest of the public's welfare and security and in the best interest of Haynes.

If sentenced as adults for first-degree murder, Haynes and Miller would have received mandatory life in prison sentences. Haynes also was charged with assault with intent to rob and committing a felony with a firearm, offenses that carry adult sentences of up to life in prison and a mandatory two years in prison, respectively.

In sentencing Haynes, Roberson said that if he commits a felony or misdemeanor carrying a sentence of more than a year while he is on probation, the court will automatically impose the full adult sentences.

Haynes' probation will end and he will be free when he turns 21 in less than three years.

As in the Miller sentencing, Marc Hart, the assistant prosecutor handling the case, said Haynes' sentencing will be appealed.

"His sentence defies logic," Hart said. "It's an affront to those people who place their confidence in the courts, and it makes an absolute mockery of the very basic rule of law that the punishment should fit the crime."

Two other juveniles in the case have yet to be sentenced.

Willie Hobbs, 17, and Gregory Brown, 18 — who were both 16 years old at the time of the killing — have pleaded guilty to second-degree murder. The lesser pleas were allowed in exchange for their testimony in the trials of the two adults — Rico Searcy, 19, and Christopher Sims, 20, who were 17 and 18, respectively, at the time of the slaying.

The trials of the adults have yet to begin. Hobbs and Brown not be sentenced until they have completed their testimony in the adults' trials.

Gravel was shot as he was driving on Clairpointe from the yacht club to Jefferson. The gang of six had thrown a tree limb across the road. When Gravel stopped at the obstruction, he saw the youths running toward him. As Gravel sped away, Haynes fired at the car. One of the bullets struck Gravel in the chest.

He lost consciousness as he neared Jefferson, where his car struck another car and a bus. He died at 11:21 p.m., about an hour after being shot, at St. John Hospital. He was a well-liked and respected resident and business owner in the Farms.

Detroit detectives were able to unravel the case when some of the youths involved went to buy more bullets, which they purchased at a cost of $12 for 50 shells.

Police said the youths were trying to steal Gravel's car because they wanted transportation to go to a party.

Psychologists on Haynes

On Aug. 28, Chief Recorder's Judge Dalton A. Roberson ruled that it was in the best interest of the public's welfare and safety that Kermit Haynes, 18, the gunman who killed Farms resident Benjamin Gravel, be sentenced as a juvenile instead of receiving life in prison for first-degree murder as an adult.

Haynes was 16 when he shot and killed Gravel, 53, on Feb. 8, 1990. He will be on probation and a ward of the Department of Social Services until he turns 21 in less than three years.

This is what court psychologists had to say about Haynes in their presentencing reports.

Robert Bartz, Recorder's Court psychologist, said Haynes:

- Is a dangerous human being.
  - Feels important when creating fear in others.
  - Is sadistic.
  - Takes pleasure in intimidating others.
  - Is amoral.
  - Shows all the classic signs of a psychopath.
- Bartz concluded that Haynes' prognosis is poor even with the best of help from the DSS.
- Dr. Karen Clark said Haynes:
- Was an assaultive discipline problem.
  - Shows violent tendencies.
  - Understood at the time of the murder that someone could be killed.
  - Was goal-directed on the night of the murder and his actions were intentional and premeditated.
  - Is vicious, assaultive and violent.
  - Is rebellious toward society's rules.
  - Doesn't care about the consequences of his actions.

Clark concluded that she had no indication whether Haynes could be rehabilitated.

Haynes was four months shy of his 17th birthday when he killed Gravel. As a 17-year-old, he would have been sentenced as an adult to mandatory life in prison if convicted of first-degree murder.

Research works.

Indulging your edifice complex

Amateur photographers will often think about dabbling in architectural photography with its sophisticated view cameras, perspective control, etc., only to get cold feet and end up shooting the kids in the back yard again.

But remember that you're not shooting for Architectural Digest, and many exciting and refreshing pictures can be yours with the equipment you currently own. Keep a keen eye open for the numerous structures you encounter every day.

The Detroit area is full of varied architectural subjects from the dynamic Renaissance Center to an old barn on a decaying farm. Greenfield Village and Cranbrook offer endless opportunities and because Michigan enjoys the four seasons, each architectural subject presents itself in a different mood at these different times of the year.

Architectural photography is an excellent subject with which to experiment with abstracts. Imagine how creative you can be with the steel gridwork in a building under construction or with a pattern of textured brickwork.

Don't overlook details either such as a single window, unusual doorway, or rocker on a nostalgic front porch. Remember, a detail helps "tell the story" of the whole.

Your viewing mask will help you to "see" numerous photographic possibilities, too.

As in most photography, morning and afternoon light will give maximum impact to your shots. And don't forget nighttime photos of floodlit buildings and fountains for a totally different look.

You may be thinking, what about distortion in architectural photography? Don't worry — only the pros are concerned with this. On the contrary, distortion in buildings and other structures can add a certain mystique to your shot. Distortion can give your picture a special aesthetic quality not obtained in professional architectural photography.

New sprinklers in Shores to help keep lakeside green

This will be the last year that brown, parched grass will mar the otherwise beautiful landscaping along the lake in Grosse Pointe Shores.

The Shores Improvement

Foundation has agreed to foot the $25,000 bill to install sprinklers along the lake side of Lakeshore. Currently, the Shores has sprinklers on the median.

Like the median system, the lakeside sprinklers will be fed with lake water. The Shores plans to upgrade its pumping facilities at the municipal park so that water can be provided to the additional sprinklers.

In other foundation business, President Barbara Willett said street signs are still available for purchase. She said 10 out of the 39 interior street signs have been purchased.

For $500, a resident, family or group of residents can purchase a street sign and have it dedicated to a loved one. The signs are similar to those on Lakeshore, but interior signposts do not have lamps.

Information on the lakeshore sprinkler project and street signs will be available at booths at the foundation's annual picnic at the Shores municipal park on Sunday, Sept. 8, from 1 to 5 p.m.

Ron Lamparter will man the sprinkler booth, and Ginny Rice will field questions on street signs.

SMART cuts bus routes

By Ronald J. Bernas
Staff Writer

Bus passengers who normally take SMART's Jefferson Route 630 have found themselves waiting much longer at the bus stop since Tuesday. The transportation company has eliminated most of the mid day service on that route.

"What we found when we were looking at our budget for next year was that we weren't exactly going to make ends meet," said Robert Campbell, manager of schedules and service evaluation for SMART (the Suburban Mobility Authority for Regional Transportation).

"When we looked at what we could do to save money we looked to changing routes that don't have a good ridership," he said.

The 630 route had only a handful of riders during the day, he added.

The route will continue its morning and afternoon rush hour schedules, but will eliminate nearly all hourly service between the two rush hours.

Some slack will be picked up by Jefferson Route 635 which follows almost the same course, Campbell said.

Changes will also be seen in the 610 and 615 routes along Kercheval, Campbell said.

There will still be two trips per hour, but they will be evenly spaced at 30-minute intervals. Sunday service on those routes also will be eliminated, because of low ridership.

No changes will be made on the 620 and 625 routes on Charlevoix.

CODE NO. 7-02

AMENDMENT TO NUISANCE ORDINANCE

ORDINANCE NO. 311

After slaving over a hot squad car, cops like vans and cycles

When 1991 Chevrolet Caprice police-package cars started showing up on the streets last spring, it caused us to wonder what women and men who spend their work days in patrol cars like to drive off-duty. And what some of them think about their new "beat" wheels.

The officer on the phone at Chicago police headquarters was stunned. "I can't do that," he responded to the inquiry. "We've got 11,906 officers on the force — plus 1,401 civilians and 1,169 crossing guards. I can't tell you what everyone drives."

The inquirer had wanted some direction. The questions, stated perhaps too broadly, had been: "What do police officers drive as their personal vehicles?"

In particular, what do the officers assigned to squad cars climb into at the end of the shift? Which are the vehicles of choice for these men and women who spend up to eight straight hours a day driving city streets, answering calls, keeping watch and getting leg cramps?

Two answers were most common: "You see everything out there in our parking lot," and, "I drive a truck (van/sport utility)."

The officers who answered police station phones around the greater-Chicago area tended to have some years in on the force. Before their desk jobs, though, they had done time on the streets. Most have left their wild and crazy years behind them and now are family men and women with kids to transport or hobbies that required larger, more sensible vehicles like vans and sport utilities. But they remain car and truck fans and know what's going on in the market.

Lansing was digging out from an early-spring snowfall of 14 heavy, wet inches the morning Lt. Keith Smith answered the phone. He said he was glad he has a Chevrolet S-10 Blazer with four-wheel drive. Smith also owns a new Buick Park Avenue. His wife drives a Toyota.

"I'm a car fanatic," he said. "My father drove Buicks — I guess that's why I do. You kind of inherit your tastes from your parents."

Smith said he started buying sport utilities years ago. The collection included an International Harvester Scout "until they weren't around any longer." His Chevy S-109 Blazer is five years old and only has 14,000 miles on the odometer. It's a special-purpose vehicle. He said he enjoys his '91 Park Avenue because it's roomy inside and easy to drive.

The chief at Lansing is restoring a 1967 Corvette, Smith reported. Other colleagues favor trucks for towing and fast cars for racing.

Up in the 14th-Jefferson Precinct, Sgt. Jim Brown answered the phone. He drives a GMC full-size van for towing a big trailer and transporting the Staffordshire terriers he shows.

"Our people drive everything — Corvettes to Cadillacs and Lincolns," he said. On an officer's salary? "Many of them have other jobs," he replied.

Any car nuts on the staff? He recommended patrolman Kenny Johnson.

Various forms of racing have consumed Johnson's energies for years. "I guess you could call me a diehard gearhead," he said.

Johnson bought his first car back in the mid 1960s. "It was a '63 Mercury with chrome wheels and a 390-cubic-inch engine," he said.

With his son, Johnson has been involved in quarter-midget racing. "He drove, I worked on the one-cylinder cars," he said. His own vehicle is a full-size Ford window van, which he uses for towing the small racing cars. It has a customized bumper sticker that reads: "Have you hugged your kid's race car today?"

If he could have any car, he said, he'd like a Lincoln Mark VII LSC sport coupe, a Shelby AC Cobra or the Chrysler 300 he saw at the Chicago Auto Show.

"I remember when police officers drove Plymouth Belvideres with no power steering and no air conditioning," he said. "We didn't get air until sometime in the 1970s. They told us it was better for us to keep the windows open so we could hear street noises," he said, laughing.

Sgt. Jack Studlo with the Naperville Police Department also remembers hot Chicago days and nights spent patrolling in cars with the windows down. The heat came in from the streets, from the car's engine and from the police radios, he said.

"It was the dealers and the manufacturers who really pushed the issue of air-conditioning," said the 23-year veteran. "They said they wanted us to order air to improve the cars' resale values." Now most cars have air and AM/FM stereo radios.

Cruisers are offices for the patrolmen, he said. Naperville encourages its people to do the routine paper work in their cars instead of waiting to come into a building. It keeps them on their beats, he explained. The indoors people had air-conditioned offices, he said. The patrolmen should have them, too.

While 1991 Chevrolet Caprices are beginning to show up as big, aerodynamic patrol cars, they are relative newcomers in a competitive fleet market. Virtually all of the officers recalled years and years of Dodge Diplomats, plus occasional full-size Fords. Squad car purchases were based on state-level decisions which revolved around price. Chrysler, usually the winner, no longer builds a big rear-drive passenger car.

"The Dodge was probably the most comfortable, although handling may have been better with Fords and Chevys," Studlo said. "Police officers have to like to drive."

The Naperville sergeant currently has a Ford Aerostar minivan. He said he has always owned Fords — and has had a motorcycle or two. "They're a great way to unwind. When you're driving a motorcycle, you don't think about anything else," he said. In Chicago's 25th-Central, Officer Pat Tode is a cycle enthusiast. He's an active member of the Blue Knights, a police officers' cycle club, the man on the precinct desk said.

At police headquarters in Winnetka, Sgt. Patty McConnell drives a blue Ford Mustang convertible, and Lt. Joe Sumner thinks he's Michael Jordan.

Sumner recently took delivery of a sleek black 1991 four-door S-Blazer with running boards, accent stripe, power moonroof and gray leather seats. Sumner said he was shopping for a new vehicle for his wife at C. Frank Chevrolet in Highland Park when salesman Rich Stratton showed him the Blazer. Just like the one the Chicago Bulls basketball star had fallen in love with earlier in the year.

"Joe's partner came in the following week and he bought an S-Blazer," Stratton said. "We sell to a number of police officers. They buy everything from trucks to Corvettes."

Sumner's not the total impulse buyer he might appear. He said he checked out the competition, including the new Ford Explorer, which he found attractive. Price, rebate and the floor-mounted four-wheel-drive option switch convinced him to go with the Chevy, he said.

Sumner's wife will stay in her Chevy Astro Van, salesman Stratton said. "Putting Joe in the Blazer made more sense financially," he reasoned. And the lieutenant doesn't seem too disappointed.

Armed robbery in the Farms

A 62-year-old real estate broker was robbed at gunpoint of his wallet and bank bag Aug. 21 as he got out of his car behind his office in the 18400 block of Mack in the Farms.

The broker had just gotten back from the bank at 4:19 p.m. when he was approached by the gunman.

He pointed a blue-steel revolver at the broker and said "give me your wallet and that bag." The broker complied and the robber fled on foot.

Police do not believe the man was followed from the bank.

Elder abuse: Is it happening to someone you know?

Abuse, whether directed at the young or the elderly, is a fact of life so repugnant that we turn our thoughts away when it occurs.

Yet it is impossible to ignore when hardly a day goes by that we aren't confronted with a story of child abuse in the newspaper, with details so revolting that we can't bear to finish reading the article.

Less publicized is the abuse of elderly persons, but it exists.

Statistics show that the majority of abused elderly persons are females over the age of 75, the frail elderly with physical or mental disabilities, and those who are unable to provide for their own needs, including their own protection.

The majority of the abused live with those who are mistreating them, and they are frequently reluctant or unwilling to report the situation.

Not everyone is lucky enough to have a loving person look out for them. Old people usually don't report the abuse because they don't want more trouble.

Frequently the elder abuse is financial and is difficult to detect because elderly persons often give money to their children willingly or offer assistance when their children have financial problems.

Also, many elderly people make informal arrangements allowing their caregivers to handle the banking and other financial matters.

A survey found financial abuse was reported in 40 percent of the cases studied.

If you are concerned this might be happening to someone you care about, there are signs to look for, such as depletion of an elderly person's retirement savings.

Other indications are the cashing of pension checks without prior authorization by the elderly person, an overdrawn account that the elderly person did not know about, or a discrepancy between the person's standard of living and his or her financial assets.

Prime Time

By Marian Trainor

There are many other kinds of elder abuse. It has been defined as any action by a person of trust — a friend, family member, neighbor or caregiver — that causes harm to a senior.

It can involve physical violence. Pushing, shaking, hitting, sexually molesting or rough handling are examples of physical abuse.

It can involve over-medication. Or it can be psychological, such as treating elderly people like children, bullying them or calling them names.

Abusers may be addicted to drugs or alcohol or have psychological hangups. They may be dependent on the income of the abused and may be middle-aged or elderly themselves.

For seniors living in institutions, abusers may be family members, visitors, other residents, nurses, orderlies or other staff members.

Elder abuse is not a comfortable thing to think about. Seniors may be afraid to report problems for fear of being called demanding, confused or senile.

Cuts, bruises, burns, untreated bed sores or poor hygiene may be signs that physical abuse is occurring.

Psychological abuse is harder to pinpoint. Symptoms may include withdrawal, depression, anxiety, fear of family members, friends or caregivers.

What can you do if you suspect elder abuse is happening to someone you know?

First, it is not necessary to have proof of mistreatment before seeking help. Counselors can try to resolve an abuse situation without laying blame.

Assault, theft, fraud, forgery, rape, forcible confinement and refusing to provide necessities are crimes and should be reported to the police.

If you suspect neglect of any sort, you can help by getting in touch with the appropriate agencies to find out what services are available, and then telling the senior.

Seniors have the right to refuse help when it is offered. They may be unwilling or unable to speak out against those who abuse them. In such situations, keep in touch with the senior, who may need your help later.

Many people believe that what happens in someone else's family is none of their business. Only you can decide whether you care enough for your neighbor to get the help that he or she needs.

Medigap reforms will ease health care confusion

Shopping for an insurance plan to supplement Medicare coverage will soon be almost as easy as shopping for a car. This is good news, according to Dr. Milford C. Maloney, president of the American Society of Internal Medicine. Medicare beneficiaries will finally be able to compare prices for similar kinds of policies and get the kind of coverage they want, he said. In addition, there will be fewer kinds of these policies to keep up with, easing the burden of paper work on everyone and leaving doctors more time to spend with patients managing their care, Maloney said.

As gaps, limits and deductibles in Medicare left more people with less health coverage, the insurance industry designed a new kind of insurance to supplement Medicare. It soon became common for senior citizens to have some kind of "Medigap" policy for additional coverage to fill the holes in Medicare.

Unfortunately, while many of these policies offer extended coverage at a reasonable price, there are many more that do not. In fact, some people have been talked into buying several policies — much more than they need — for fear of being financially wiped out by a catastrophic illness or injury. To make matters worse, there are thousands of companies, each marketing a different Medigap package, making it almost impossible for the average person to "shop around" for the best insurance value.

To cut through the confusion, Congress stepped in last year and ordered state insurance regulators to develop standardized Medigap policies. The National Association of Insurance Commissioners is fulfilling this order by coming up with 10 Medigap plans, which would offer a range of options over and above what Medicare will pay for. Prices of these various plans will probably depend on the extent of coverage — from a basic benefits package to more comprehensive policies, some of which include prescription drugs and hospital deductible coverage.

The core policy, as currently drafted, will cover the 20 percent of doctor fees that the patient must pay as "co-insurance." Additionally, the core policy pays for a limited supply of blood, hospital costs for 61 to 90 days (after a deductible, Medicare covers the first 60 days) and some hospitalization beyond 90 days.

In general, the other nine policies build on the core package, but each offers different options. All nine, for example, would pay the annual Medicare deductible for hospital care and medical emergencies during foreign travel. Three of the plans include prescription drug benefits, and two even include payment for preventive services, such as tests and vaccines.

Since the National Association of Insurance Commissioners doesn't have any legislative power, these "model" policies will next go to the states to be enacted into law. If the individual states fail to pass the law by Congress' deadline (one year for most states, two years in the few states with legislatures that only meet every other year) the Department of Health and Human Services must certify any Medigap policy written in a state that hasn't passed the association-approved models. After that, any insurance company in the state that sells an unapproved Medigap policy can be fined up to $25,000.

Right now, not all so-called Medigap policies available meet minimum standards set by the states — only those that contain the words "Medicare supplemental insurance" do. The American Society of Internal Medicine urges consumers to make sure their agents explain exactly what coverage they now have and what their new policy will cover. Check waiting periods for pre-existing conditions before changing policies. In many cases, one policy should provide all the supplemental coverage needed. And always check out the insurance company with the state insurance department and local Better Business Bureau before buying a new policy.

Can you retire early?

If you dream of calling it quits before the traditional retirement age of 65, you had better start planning early, advises the Michigan Association of CPAs.

The first step is calculating how much money you will need in retirement. A rule of thumb is that you will require about 70 percent of your current gross income to maintain the standard of living you now enjoy.

How will you achieve that 70 percent goal? The keystones of most people's retirement plans are Social Security, an employer pension, Individual Retirement Accounts (IRAs), Keoghs, 401(k) plans and personal investments.

If you plan to retire early, you should know that the youngest age at which you can collect Social Security is 62. You should also know that your age at retirement affects the size of your Social Security benefit. If you begin to collect at 62, your monthly check will be permanently set at 80 percent of the full benefit. You receive your full benefits only if you wait until you are 65 or older to retire.

The maximum monthly benefit a retired worker could expect to receive in 1991 is $1,022. For an estimate of how much you can expect to receive in your monthly benefit check, call the Social Security Administration at 800-234-5772 and ask for Form SS-7004, the Request for Earnings and Benefits Estimate Statement.

Pension payments vary from company to company. To get an idea of how much you can expect to receive when you retire, you should ask your company benefits counselor to figure this amount for you based on the job tenure you anticipate.

Another important source of retirement income is one of the tax-favored investment vehicles - including IRAs, Keoghs, and 401(k) plans. Although IRAs no longer provide a tax deduction for everyone, they still allow you to defer taxes on interest or dividend income in your plan. Keogh plans provide similar tax advantages for the self-employed. CPAs recommend employees take full advantage of 401(k) plans whenever possible.

The salary you contribute reduces your current taxable income and tax is deferred on investment earnings. Bear in mind that IRAs, Keoghs and 401(k) plans all come with stringent withdrawal restrictions that discourage you from suddenly deciding to use your retirement savings to take a long vacation. Your retirement nest egg grows quicker in these tax-favored investment plans because the earnings in these accounts are not taxed until withdrawn.

When you add up your Social Security benefits, company pension amounts and personal savings, you'll probably realize why the dream of an early retirement often remains just that - a dream. But with a careful plan that includes a lot of saving and some sacrifices during your working years, it can be done.

SOC parties at Barnes

Mary Evelyn Self, president of Services for Older Citizens (SOC), the board of trustees, and the staff welcomed the community to SOC's new quarters at Barnes school at a continental breakfast Aug. 24.

Juanita Gaynor and Fran Schonberg, who attended the opening, were among the more than 100 SOC volunteers, residents and community leaders who were there to celebrate this turning-point in SOC's 13-year history of service to older citizens in the five Grosse Pointes and Harper Woods.

Gaynor and Schonberg are typical of the many volunteers who donate their time and talents to the work of SOC.

Gaynor is one of the qualified volunteers who assists older residents of low and moderate incomes with the preparation of simple income tax returns.

Schonberg serves as coordinator and interviewer for the SOC show which is aired seven days a week on Grosse Pointe Cable, Channel 32. More than 200 volunteers of all ages assist with other SOC programs, like Meals at Home, Food and Friendship and Escort Services.

Also present at the open house were representatives of the Grosse Pointe Public Schools and hospital home health care and public safety programs. These and other agencies work in conjunction with SOC to assist in the support, encouragement and care necessary to help older residents when they are faced with critical changes in their lives.

Present at the continental breakfast were residents who have utilized SOC's programs or who have sought information regarding services for themselves, their families or neighbors. Staff from SOC's Senior Citizen Information service, partially funded through the Detroit Area Agency on Aging, were available to respond to questions.

Barnes school is located at 20090 Morningside in Grosse Pointe Woods. The phone number is 882-9600.

Learn about nutrition

"Diet and Nutrition in Your Second 50 Years" will be the topic discussed by the Beaumont Hospital Speakers Bureau at the Lutheran Center's Fall Senior Day, Wednesday, Sept. 11, from 12:30 to 2:30 p.m.

The Lutheran Center is located at 579 E. Nine Mile in Ferndale, four blocks east of Woodward.

Guests are invited to browse in the bookstore and to enjoy coffee, dessert and fellowship beginning at 12:30. The program begins at 1 p.m.

There is no charge for Senior Day, but those who want to attend are asked to notify the center at 541-0788 by Sept. 6.

Home health services available

He makes house calls to cut the hair of people who are unable to get out of their homes.

He's been cutting hair since he graduated from Green's Barber College in Detroit in the early '50s, but he says this is the first time he's heard of a service like his.

"I've always cut somebody's hair in their homes," said the Grosse Pointe Park resident. "But it was always friends; I never really catered to shut-ins. But then I thought it would be something that would be needed."

One classified ad in the Grosse Pointe News, and he had a client list of people who kept him snipping.

One customer's hair was down to his shoulders because he was confined to his home. Some customers tell Vandewalle he's their only link to the outside. Another client is simply too busy to spend time looking for an open barber shop when he's free.

"I cut his hair at all hours," Vandewalle said.

His battered green carrying case (it says Detroit College of Beauty on the side) contains his scissors, combs, brushes and razors — everything a good barbershop has except a chair that goes up and down, the candy cane pole outside and the year-old magazines.

Although his clients are mostly men, he's can do simpler women's cuts, too.

A haircut in a regular barbershop might cost about $15, but Vandewalle has expenses like gas and oil and car insurance to worry about, so he charges $20. But he's not averse to bargaining, depending on how much hair there is to cut.

He remembers the days — just after he graduated from Green's and was called to active duty in the Naval Reserve during the Korean War — when he charged his fellow shipmates 50 cents for haircuts.

"I was the only barber on board and I would sometimes cut hair right through the night, getting guys ready for Saturday morning's inspection," he said. "But I lost all my clients when we got to shore because the barbers in port were women."

Back in Michigan he worked at salons and barber shops until an illness forced him into semi-retirement. He's recovered now, but old-fashioned barber shop jobs are as scarce as — well, old-fashioned barber shops.

"And I'm not as fast as I used to be," he said. "In a barber shop you have to get people in and out. I've slowed down a little."

But, he says, he's still as sharp.

"With what I'm doing now, I can set my own schedule and it's real nice going to some of these people," he said. "Some of them tell me 'Boy, we're really glad we found you.'"

"It was just something I thought of one day. I didn't know there was such a need out there."

More than 100 people attended a reception to recognize a $300,000 gift from the Hellenic Educational Committee to support Wayne State University's Detroit Chair of Modern Greek Studies. ## Greek program at Wayne State receives gift

More than 100 members of the Greek community and friends of Wayne State University attended a reception and program recently to recognize a major gift from the Hellenic Educational Committee to the Department of Greek and Latin in the university's College of Liberal Arts.

The committee's $300,000 gift will help establish an endowment for the benefit of the Detroit Chair of Modern Greek Studies to support and assure the continued teaching and study of the modern Greek language and culture.

"This gift is believed to be the largest single gift in the humanities area at Wayne State in many years," said Kenneth Walters, chair of the Department of Greek and Latin and a Grosse Pointe Park resident.

The Detroit chair was officially established at Wayne State in 1989 with a contribution of more than $250,000 from more than 600 donors. Half of that amount was given by the Modern Greek Cultural Association of Detroit.

Wayne State is only one of six universities and colleges in North America that have endowments for modern Greek studies. The others are Harvard, Princeton, San Francisco University, New York University and the University of Florida.

Andrew Soves, son of Chris Soves, one of the original founders of the Hellenic Educational Committee, spoke about his father's dream to preserve the Greek language and his father's fundraising efforts for the university's Greek studies program.

The committee was founded in the 1930s to educate young immigrants from Greece in Greek language and culture. It solicited money from residents and business owners to create a Greek school. After the school was dropped, however, the committee continued to deposit the money from donations into the bank. The funds grew to $300,000, which the group donated to the Wayne State program.

Modern Greek was first taught at Wayne State during the 1950s, making the program one of the oldest in North America, Walters said.

Thieves took a working holiday in Farms

By Donna Walker
Staff Writer

Grosse Pointe Farms police are investigating five breaking and enterings that were reported over the Labor Day weekend. Four of the incidents occurred at residences; one happened at the Irish Coffee on Mack.

A resident on Lewiston told police that his house was robbed sometime between midnight and 7 a.m. Sunday, Sept. 1.

He found a window screen above his kitchen sink removed and cash was missing from his wife's purse, which was in the kitchen. His wife's wallet, checkbook and another purse that were in the kitchen were also missing. So was a radio that was sitting on the kitchen table.

The resident said he suspected something was amiss when he found the kitchen light on in the morning. He had turned it off before going to bed the night before.

On Beacon Hill, someone entered a home by slitting a screen in the rear door and unlocking it sometime between midnight and 10:30 a.m. Sunday, Sept. 1.

House burglarized

A home in the 1400 block of Bedford was burglarized of a telephone and an answering machine and some stereo equipment sometime between 5 and 9:20 p.m. Aug. 9.

Entry was made by forcing a rear door lock.

The homeowner said she had locked the screen door and left the inner door open for fresh air. She told police that money was missing from her wallet, which was on a desk in the kitchen.

On Merriweather, someone entered a home by cutting the screen on the sliding door of a sun porch and then unlocking the door. The interior doors of the home were left open.

The owner said the break-in must have occurred between midnight and 8 a.m. Sunday. The suspect didn't touch anything in the kitchen, but cash was missing from his wife's purse, which was on top of the bathroom vanity next to their bedroom. He said that he and his wife did not hear any strange noises during the night.

Another house on Beacon Hill was apparently hit this week. The owner told police that someone must have entered his house between 8:30 a.m. Saturday, Aug. 31, and 11:45 p.m. Monday, Sept. 2, through a broken window in his attached garage. The window had been broken the week before by his son and left unrepaired.

The police said drawers, cupboards and closets were open as though they had been rifled. The owner said a nickel-plated revolver was missing. The gun was a family heirloom and was not registered, he told police.

The Irish Coffee was robbed between 3 a.m. and 6:15 a.m. Tuesday, Sept. 3, an employee told police.

The front door was pried open and a cash drawer containing an undisclosed amount of money was missing. A 21-inch color television and between 10 and 20 bottles of liquor were also missing.

The owner later found the empty cash drawer and a fifth of Maui Tropical Schnapps liquor against the brick wall of Mr. C's Deli.

Man enters house through milk chute

A man wanted by Detroit police on a felony drug warrant entered his Park attorney's home by crawling through the milk chute Aug. 14.

The attorney's 14-year-old daughter confronted the intruder at 4:05 p.m. in the home in the 800 block of Barrington. The man threatened the teenager, Park police said.

Finally, someone at the home was able to call police, and the intruder was arrested in the home.

Burglar caught in the act

A Park resident in the 900 block of Balfour heard a noise at the bedroom window at 4:32 a.m. Aug. 11 and saw a burglar trying to enter the house.

The resident said the burglar was attempting to slide the window open. While the resident called police, the burglar went around to try the front door. When police arrived, the would-be thief took off on foot.

He was caught by assisting Grosse Pointe City police as he tried to flee through rear yards.

Researcher focuses on causes of cervical cancer

In the race to find a cause for cervical cancer, Grosse Pointe Park resident Wayne D. Lancaster found the right vehicle.

Lancaster, a professor in the Wayne State University School of Medicine, began his research on wart-causing viruses known as human papilloma viruses (HPV) in 1974 when it wasn't scientifically fashionable to do so. It paid off.

Now as an international authority on HPV as a factor in cervical cancer, Lancaster is in constant demand to discuss his research, which has become a standard.

Cancer is the No. 2 cause of death in women. "HPV," he said, "plays a major role in cervical cancer with about 15,000 new cases each year and 7,000 deaths annually, even though regular Pap testing is widespread."

Research completed by Lancaster and his colleagues made significant contributions to the discovery and identification of various HPV types and their association with premalignant lesions and cancers.

His early research at Case Western Reserve University medical school in 1981 provided the first reliable evidence of a connection between wart viruses and abnormal tissue cells in the cervix (cervical dysplasia), which can lead to cancer. This research was conducted with collaborators at Georgetown University and the National Institutes of Health.

In 1985, Lancaster, in collaboration with Bethesda Research Laboratories in Gaithersburg, Md., discovered a new HPV, type 31. His work during the past 15 years helped to identify and differentiate more than 60 types of human papilloma viruses.

At Georgetown in 1986, Lancaster, with Robert J. Kurman and A. Bennet Jensen, found traces of the virus in both primary and secondary tumors (metastasis), providing strong evidence that the virus plays an active role in cervical cancer. This was especially important since their other studies showed HPV was evident in 90 percent of all cervical dysplasias or cervical tissue abnormalities that may lead to cancer.

This new information caused concern because it linked a common virus to cancer. It also linked sex to cancer.

"Papilloma virus infection," Lancaster said, "is one of the most frequently recognized sexually transmitted diseases, with millions of new cases each year. The virus was believed to cause only genital warts and other benign growths but now is strongly associated with cervical cancer."

While at Georgetown he helped develop an FDA-approved test to identify these viruses. The test is gaining acceptance among gynecologists and is used with the Pap test.

In 1988 Lancaster's research contributed to studies which singled out a virus, type 18, which may cause fast-growing cancers, followed by types 16 and 31.

"Type 18" he said, "is associated with particularly fast-growing and dangerous cancers." The discovery helps identify women at great risk and promotes life-saving timely medical treatment.

Authors of the study are Lancaster at Wayne State, Drs. Durman and Jensen at Georgetown, Mark H. Schiffman of the National Cancer Institute, Richard Reid of Sinai Hospital in Detroit, plus Gary F. Temple and Attila T. Lorincz of Bethesda Research Laboratories.

Meanwhile, Lancaster, a professor in the departments of molecular biology and genetics, obstetrics and gynecology and the Center for Molecular Biology, continues his research. He is not an alarmist. He does say, however, that 20 percent to 25 percent of sexually active women have a latent viral infection, even though their Pap smears appear normal.

"While this may mean about 10 million women, only a small percentage will develop cervical lesions," he said, "and a smaller number, perhaps 15,000, will develop cancer. Fewer than half will survive."

Exploring a genetic predisposition toward cervical cancer is an important aspect of Lancaster's research. He is studying women with high-risk virus who can cope with it vs. women with high-risk virus who develop aggressive cancer. A genetic factor may govern the outcome of the infection.

"Experimental evidence with laboratory mice," he said "shows there may be factors specific to a strain of mouse that activates the virus after infection. Outside laboratories have shown that patients with a rare genetic defect may be susceptible to infection by HPV, a similar phenomenon."

Another area of his research studies shows how a virus induces malignancy. A physical interaction exists between its genetic information and chromosomes of the infected cell.

"When this occurs," Lancaster said, "viral genes begin to produce abnormal amounts of proteins that affect normal growth of cells."

He said the viral sequences that keep the production of these proteins at low levels have been identified recently, but in cancer these sequences are lost. "Therein lies, perhaps, the basis for a test because the interaction may require the presence of a specific piece of DNA in some women and not others," he said.

The professor's ultimate goal is to develop a test to identify women who would have a predisposition for cervical cancer if they were infected with high-risk viruses.

Lancaster received a bachelor of science degree with honors from Adrain College, a master of science degree with a major in biology and minor in chemistry from the University of Dayton and a Ph.D. with a major in microbiology and minor in biochemistry from Wayne. He has completed three postdoctoral research fellowships.

His most recent publications are a chapter on HPV in "Textbook of Human Virology" written with A. B. Jensen and "The Viral Role in Cervical and Liver Cancer" published in the journal Cancer.

A Michigan native, Lancaster spent much of his youth at Torch Lake, north of Traverse City, where he maintains a home. He and his wife, Lucie, are expecting their first child.

Storm fries police/fire equipment in Farms

By Donna Walker
Staff Writer

Lightning hit the Grosse Pointe Farms Public Safety Department about 5:30 p.m. Friday, Aug. 30, knocking out the department's electricity for almost 24 hours and causing approximately $75,000 in equipment damage, said Public Safety Director Robert Ferber.

"I was talking on the phone at the time," Ferber said, "and sparks came out of my phone.

And some of the firefighters were watching TV in the back, and it (the lightning) fried their TV."

The lightning also damaged an air conditioner and antennas, consoles and radio equipment used by the department.

The department broadcasts over three radio channels. The first channel is a community network channel used by all of the police departments in the Grosse Pointes and Harper Woods. The second channel is used only by police in the Farms, and the third channel is a community network channel used by all of the fire departments in the Grosse Pointes and Harper Woods.

The storm knocked out the Farms' ability to use the latter two channels for about 45 minutes, until back up equipment could be put in place, said Ron Koss, director of radio communications for the public safety departments in the Grosse Pointes and Harper Woods.

Service wasn't affected, Koss said, because police and fire calls could still be transmitted over the community-wide police network.

Ferber said that the building and antennas were grounded to protect them from lightning strikes.

"This was just a freak thing where the lightning exceeded our capacity to handle it," he said.

Koss said that the Farms is using old equipment to operate on the city-wide police and community-wide fire channels while waiting for word from the city's insurance department.

"Some of the equipment that was damaged is 20 years old," he said. "I don't know what they'll do in a case like that. Will they replace them with brand new radios, or have the damaged stuff repaired? I don't know."

Hubcap theft stirs chase; officer injured

The theft of hubcaps and a wheel at a Jefferson restaurant in St. Clair Shores Aug. 23 led to a high-speed chase in which a Pointe officer was hurt.

At 5:40 p.m., Grosse Pointe Shores police monitored a report of a theft in the parking lot of the Jefferson restaurant. A Shores officer stationed at Hampton Road saw the two suspects' vehicle, a red pickup, traveling south on Lakeshore.

When he pulled in behind the suspects' truck and activated the overhead emergency lights, the driver accelerated and the chase was on.

In the Farms, the driver made an abrupt turn west on Tonnacour, bouncing over the curb and lawn. At Kercheval, Farms police joined the chase.

The suspects fled north on Kercheval past Provençal, where the driver made a sudden U-turn as they approached the Kercheval deadend. The pickup jumped the northwest corner of the intersection and struck the Shores' new Mustang police car, causing damage to both vehicles and injuring the Mustang's driver, public safety officer Steve Poloni.

The pickup proceeded east on Provençal, raced past the stop sign at Lakeshore and headed north with a rear wheel blown out.

In the 500 block of Lakeshore, Farms, Shores and St. Clair Shores police cars blocked the pickup, which then veered over the median and stopped on southbound Lakeshore.

The driver of the vehicle and his passenger fled on foot into rear yards. The passenger, a 26-year-old Detroit man, and the driver, a 32-year-old Mount Clemens man, were caught, arrested and turned over to St. Clair Shores police on felony charges.

Both Shores and Farms police plan to bring further charges against the driver of the vehicle.

Police said the Mount Clemens man has an extensive criminal history.

Officer Poloni was treated at St. John Hospital for neck and back strain and released.

Alliance Francaise throws a party

The Alliance Francaise de Grosse Pointe held an Overture de la Saison on Aug. 27 at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Gary Drook. More than 150 people — the largest crowd ever for the organization's opening party — strolled the grounds sipping champagne and enjoying the music of Betty Peterson's string quartet. The Drook's home was the Show House for the Junior League of Detroit several years ago, so interested guests were treated to tours by designer Bernard Reilly.

Angie Rooks, a life member of the Alliance, was the chairman of the party. Among the guests were the French Honorary Consul Stephen Guittard and his wife, Dr. and Mrs. Kim Lie, Mrs. Anthony Vermeulen, Mrs. Russell Axson, Mr. and Mrs. George Vincent, Dr. and Mrs. John In-gall, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Drake, Mr. and Mrs. Marco Nobile, Mrs. George Roumell and Mrs. Mahie Skaff.

The Holiday Preview Benefit committee of the Junior League of Detroit is planning its annual fundraiser, which will be held at Jacobson's on Wednesday, Nov. 13.

drink and entertainment on Saturday, Sept. 7, at Period Details Studio on Cadieux. The event will benefit Blair Street Productions, a not-for-profit documentary film production company. Blair Street Productions is currently working on a film depicting the life of Henry and Dorothy Kraus, key players in the early labor movement and the sit-down strikes of the 1930s.

The benefit will include a silent art auction featuring the work of more than a dozen Michigan artists. Tickets are $40 a person.

Call 399-8515 for information.

Anyone for polo? The Junior League of Detroit will hold its third annual Lexus Gold Cup Polo Match and Auction on Sunday, Sept. 15, on the grounds of the Detroit Polo Club in Milford.

Proceeds from the event will benefit the continued restoration of Sibley House. The family event, dubbed "A Day in the Country," begins with a country-style buffet at 1 p.m., followed by a polo match from 2 to 4 p.m. A silent auction will be held throughout the day.

Dress is casual and guests are encouraged to bring lawn chairs, blankets and umbrellas. Tailgate picnics are welcome. Special entertainment will be provided for children.

Tickets are $30 a person for the lunch, match and auction, and must be purchased in advance; tickets for children under 16 are $15.

Tailgate tickets are $15 a person and include the match and auction. They may be purchased in advance or at the gate. Children under 16 are $7.50. For more information, call 881-0040 weekdays from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

House tour: The Detroit chapter of the American Institute of Architects will hold its seventh annual tour from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Sunday, Sept. 11. This year the six architecturally significant... perhaps controversial... homes are in the cities of Birmingham, Royal Oak, West Bloomfield and Bloomfield Township. Proceeds will be used by the AIA/Detroit chapter for scholarships and to support public awareness programs in the community.

Tickets for the tour are $15 a person. Shuttle service will be provided from Seaholm High School until 2:30 p.m.

Tickets may be purchased by mailing a check and a self-addressed stamped envelope to the AIA Detroit chapter, 553 East Jefferson, Detroit, 48226. A limited supply of tickets will be available on the day of the tour. For more information, call 965-4104.

— Margie Reins Smith

Angie Rooks, center, was chairman of the season-opening party for the Alliance Francaise on Aug. 27. The event was hosted by Mr. and Mrs. Gary Drook, far left and far right.

Lay Theological Academy to present 'Genesis'

The Lay Theological Academy is a new adventure in cooperative theological education for adults. A joint venture of six congregations, the academy will provide ecumenical educational opportunities for adults of all ages and backgrounds so that they might develop in faith, grow in Christian knowledge and become equipped for participation in world ministry.

"By combining our resources, we are now in a strong position to offer excellent courses to strengthen our laity for ministry as they seek to represent Christ where they live and work, raise children and vote, interact with people of differing religions and seek meaning for themselves," said the Rev. Edward A.M. Cobden of Christ Church Grosse Pointe.

"Growth and development in Christian faith is a lifelong process requiring an educational enterprise which is more than an isolated, non-sequential potpourri of classes. We need — and can now offer — coordinated and ordered learning."

The first course of the Lay Theological Academy this fall will be "Genesis," presented by Sister Joan Donovan on Tuesdays, from Sept. 10 to Sept. 24, from 7:30 to 9 p.m. at Our Lady Star of the Sea Catholic Church, 575 Ballantyne, in Grosse Pointe Shores.

The Lay Theological Academy's member congregations include Christ Church Grosse Pointe, Grosse Pointe Memorial Church, St. Paul Catholic Church, St. Paul Evangelical

Lutheran Church and Our Lady Star of the Sea Catholic Church.

The public is invited to participate.

For more information, call the Rev. Gordon Mikoski at 882-5330.

Grosse Pointe United Methodist Church to change Sunday schedule

Grosse Pointe United Methodist Church will adjust its Sunday morning worship schedule beginning Sunday, Sept. 8, to accommodate a "stand-alone Sunday School."

Rather than meeting during the service, Sunday School will be held between the services, allowing children and adults to attend worship service and Sunday School.

In an effort to stimulate an interest in faith issues and increase participants' knowledge of the Bible, Grosse Pointe United Methodist Church is following a trend toward stand-alone Sunday Schools that is evident across the nation, according to the Rev. Jack Manschreck, pastor.

The new schedule will be:
9 a.m. — first worship service
10 a.m. — fellowship
10:15 a.m. — Sunday School/study classes

Artist

"I wanted to be a lobsterman then. I was getting up at 4 a.m., hauling lobster traps. I painted in the evenings. I loved it. I was living by myself, in a barn house with a wood stove."

He made his first sale — to his aunt — for $5.

The Derbyshires' house is filled with his paintings. Many are scenes of Maine, but he has also painted impressions of northern Michigan, Canada and Pennsylvania and some of his favorite subjects are old Civil War sites near Gettysburg.

Other subject matter includes lighthouses, boats, seascapes, villages, landscapes, freighters, flowers and lots of interesting old, weather-beaten houses — some reminiscent of Andrew Wyeth. Derbyshire's family knew the Wyeths, he said.

Catherine Derbyshire said her husband's paintings are successful because he was a lobsterman. "He knows the coast, the ocean, the tides, the way the shore looks with the winter tide and the summer tide," she said.

Derbyshire's mother, Doris, was trained as an architect. She was also a painter and a potter. His father, Bill, was a neurophysiologist. They both taught pottery in Grosse Pointe in the '50s.

Except for what he learned from his parents, Derbyshire says he is self-taught.

Prolific, too. He numbers and names every painting and places a photograph of each one in an album. The latest painting is No. 1,732. Catherine Derbyshire adds stars beside the ones that have been sold.

"Some paintings are mine," Derbyshire said. "I won't sell them."

He has been a member of the Grosse Pointe Artists Association since the early 1960s and has exhibited his work at the association's art fairs and also at the Detroit Artists' Market, the Scarab Club, several local art galleries and some galleries in Maine. He's also had some one-man shows at the old Women's City Club, the Grosse Pointe Yacht Club and Lochmoor Club.

"Most of what he sells is by word of mouth," Catherine Derbyshire said. "People see his work at a show. They'll tell somebody about him or someone will call or come to the next show with a commission. Prices range from $50 to a couple of thousand dollars."

Neighborhood children often visit Derbyshire during the summer, when he paints on a back porch. Catherine Derbyshire said she answered some questions they asked about how much his paintings cost.

"I told them about commissions," she said. "I said people ask him to paint something specific and then pay him. The children got together and commissioned a painting of some flowers."

"He painted it for them. They paid with chocolate chip cookies."

Derbyshire also dabbles in still lifes and abstract paintings. And in what started as a joke, he once did a series of 12 flower paintings.

Catherine said when she and Michael started dating she told her hairdresser about him and mentioned that he was an artist.

"My hairdresser asked if he would paint some flowers on an old lampshade she had in her basement," recalled Catherine Derbyshire, smiling. "I said that well,

Fall Art Festival

The Grosse Pointe Artists Association will hold its 32nd annual Fall Art Festival from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Saturday, Sept. 14, on the grounds of the Grosse Pointe War Memorial and in the Fries Auditorium.

Michael Derbyshire will be the featured artist at the exhibit. In addition, more than 100 selected artists and craftsmen will exhibit their paintings, jewelry, leather goods, stained glass, sculpture, pottery, fabrics, drawings and more.

Entertainment, refreshments, raffles, balloons and demonstrations will also be available.

Admission is free. Parking is free.

asked you that."

"So Michael did a painting of flowers for her and named it 'Does He Do Flowers?'" Catherine Derbyshire said. "Then he did some more flower paintings and named them 'Flower No. 2,' 'Flower No. 3,' 'Flower No. 4' and so on."

Derbyshire has done some portraits, but he said nobody sees them. He won't sell portraits because they're paintings of people he knows.

"I love painting," Derbyshire said. "It's part of me now. I love reaching out and grabbing a piece of Maine and putting it in a painting. Some people see my paintings and get tears in their eyes because they love the scene so much. And every painting is part of my heart."

"There's two things I love," he said, "hockey and painting. One is wild and violent, the other peaceful and fulfilling. It's wonderful to make a living doing something I love."

What would not be a subject for his paintings?

Derbyshire thinks for a moment. "Cows." He laughs.

"I don't do cows."

uh, he does maritime scenes and landscapes. Not flowers.

"Later, when my hairdresser saw his work, she was embarrassed.

She said 'I can't believe I ever

Bridge

HAVE A PLEASANT TRY AT PERFECTION
BRIDGE BY WOODY BOYD ♠♥♦♣

"It is indeed a desirable merit to be commendably descended and a joy to do well what they did before you, but remember the glory belongs as much to your ancestors as you..." Pliny the Younger.

A.D. "Wick" Wilkinson was a very fine bridge player who many years ago sat in the best rubber games the Motor City could muster.

It is therefore high virtue that his son Warren should tread in his father's steps. Having had the pleasure of playing with A.D. and now his son, I am not yet ready to judge the better, but I certainly shall not starve upon Warren's performance when partnered as he is a credible task master.

Often the location of the twenty-six missing pasteboards is critical. If declarer can perceive their position, it is sometimes possible to develop a line of play that neutralizes their danger and turn a hopeless endeavor into success. Many players just don't take the required time to sort out such obstacles. Warren reads his opponents cards and danger signs well and this is an intuitive phenomena that many less gifted players lack. Test your ability on this one which Warren handled so well.

The dummy was less than expected, but West put North to the test by quickly crowding the bidding. Ten tricks were visibly in peril of being done under as declarer was off a heart, at least one club and two diamonds if East gained the lead. Warren immediately recognized that West had to be kept on lead and that might not be easy.

"In the world of bridge the important thing isn't to know more than all other opponents, but to know more at a given moment than the particular opponent at hand." Waldemar Von Zedtwitz.

At trick 2, declarer ruffed the heart continuation and made the foresightful play of a club to dummy's jack. East playing the king or queen wouldn't change the outcome. At trick 4 a spade to the ace and another club towards dummy which West was allowed to win with his queen. Warren carefully noted the fall of East's club ten and was inwardly pleased as he knew, at this early stage of play, West was end played and the contract accomplishable.

West made the best of his plight by playing the club 3, but the master was in charge and finessed West by playing the club nine. A diamond play by West would have been a give up and a heart gives declarer a sluff and a ruff. At trick 7, the club ace pitching a diamond loser and from here it was a coast down hill losing only a heart, a club and one diamond.

The Yiddish word Kibitzer is an onlooker who sometimes gives unwanted advice. On this occasion, Jack Danaher sat in that seat and during a lull in the post mortem when everyone had finished acclaiming Warren's fine play, he surprisingly announced that the contract could have been set. West could have countered declarer's effort by ducking the first two club plays. He then would have won the third club and both diamonds to go along with his first heart... Of course, that kind of talent at the same table on the same Sunday of play would qualify for Alan Truscott's column, not mine.

Michigan wine makes food just fine

Warner Vineyard's Michigan Brut Champagne and Fenn Valley Vineyard's 1989 Chancellor were selected as "Best of Show" white and red, respectively, in the Michigan State Fair wine competition last week.

It was the second year in a row that Fenn Valley's Chancellor has been awarded "Best of Show."

The annual competition is sponsored by the Michigan State Fair and organized by the Michigan Department of Agriculture's (MDA) Grape and Wine Industry Council (GWIC) to encourage and stimulate the continuing improvement in the quality of Michigan wines and to enrich the reputation of Michigan as a wine growing region.

"Michigan is fortunate to be home to an abundance of excellent wine," said MDA director and GWIC chairman Bill Schuette. "Michiganians should take advantage of this and take the opportunity to taste these Michigan-made stars. I am convinced that in the years to come, Michigan wine country will boast the finest wines in the world."

"The 1991 competition once again demonstrated that Michigan wine quality is excellent and, industry wide, the overall quality has never been better," said Stan Howell, judging superintendent for the competition. "The 'Best of Show' winners demonstrate that the cool climate production of Michigan grapes makes excellent fruit for sparkling wine and that careful grape production, vinification and oak aging have made Michigan capable of producing consistent red wines of the highest quality."

The competition was judged by a panel representing restaurants, distributors, retailers, other wine-related groups and the media. Joseph Schagrin, president of the International Taster's Guild, served as chief judge.

"I am so excited about the strides Michigan's wine industry has made," Schagrin said. "I am amazed and excited, especially about the quality of Michigan's sparkling wines. To produce this level of freshness and flavor in such a short time is a compliment to the bubbly wine maker of Michigan."

Table wines are another area where Michigan has taken giant steps in the last two years, Schagrin added.

A total of 112 wines were entered this year. In addition to the "Best of Show" awards, seven gold, 33 silver and 46 bronze medals were awarded.

The categories for judging in this year's competition included commercial (more than 50 cases produced), noncommercial (less than 50 cases) and specialty wines. The competition is open to vintners commercially licensed to produce wine in Michigan and which are in active commerce at the time of judging. All entries had to contain at least 75 percent Michigan-grown grapes or fruit.

Whether you are a gourmet or just enjoy experimenting in the kitchen, wine can add an exciting flavor to your food recipes, from simple dishes to exotic creations.

To bring zest and flavor to your cooking, try substituting a sparing amount of Michigan wine for a portion of liquid in your favorite recipe.

The marriage of food and wine has been recognized as a natural combination by those

Lovers and enemies close out Stratford's season

By Alex Suczak
Special Writer

The Stratford Festival presented its two final productions of the 1991 season last week. Like nearly everything this season, the two shows are brilliantly done, and offer a lot for post-curtain discussion.

summate performers, Gurney's remarkably perceptive and probing script takes over. There is no action and no need for it. The written messages read aloud with a style and feeling that will make any WASP feel right at home, conjures the pair's life stories vividly in every listener's mental eye.

The letters from their early years, particularly, recall growing up in an indulgent and privileged atmosphere like old Grosse Pointe. The teenage pranks, social gaffes, and youthful experiments with sex and alcohol all seem to have no penalty. Then there is the inevitable progression to private college (Andy goes to Yale) and study abroad (Melissa learns to paint in Florence after a stint at Sarah Lawrence).

Gurney fashions his two characters in contrasting guises to provide a deep insight into the real nature of the class they represent. Andy, scion of old — but earned — wealth, accepts the obligations that his father imposes to family, society and himself. Meanwhile, Melissa, spoiled heiress and product of a broken home, rebels against those disciplines with refreshing iconoclasm.

As they remain true to their roles, they don't get together quite often enough to fulfill the shared idea that they might be lovers and marry. And their correspondence, as it continues, is just ambiguous enough to create misunderstanding that leads Melissa to sublimate by becoming a famous artist and marrying a stock broker while Andy finds a conventional helpmate and becomes first a Washington lawyer, later a U.S. senator.

'Love Letters'

The power of the spoken word to captivate and move is demonstrated impressively in A.R. Gurney's two-person play, "Love Letters," already well into a too-short run at Stratford's Tom Patterson Theatre. Following his particular muse, Gurney writes about America's Eastern privileged world of wealth, boarding schools, Ivy League, protestant work ethic and rebellion against the smugness of it all.

In this play, which enjoyed a major success on Broadway only three years ago, his format is a friendship starting in the second grade that blossomed into a love affair through a life-long exchange of letters.

Reading the letters and revealing the story of their special but incomplete relationship are Pat Galloway as Melissa Gardner and Douglas Rain as Andrew "Andy" Makepeace Ladd III. With two such con-

Pat Galloway and Douglas Rain star in "Love Letters."

Even as they follow their separate paths, their letters continue with a lingering sense of the love and attraction that were always between them. Meanwhile, each endures the challenges of Melissa's divorce, alcoholism and loss of her artistic inspiration, and Andy's personal sacrifices to a political career, setting the right example for his sons and a marriage that is more businesslike than romantic.

Gurney presents each episode with a remarkable economy of words. The passage of years is indicated by rapid exchanges of successive Christmas greetings. The smugness of the Ladd family life is reflected with biting yet unintended satire in Andy's one turn at writing the family's annual Christmas letter to friends and relatives. (Wife Jane usually wrote it.)

It is then put into hilarious perspective by Melissa's scornful reply, threatening to come to dinner and "moon" the lot of them in revenge for his pomposity.

That they ultimately get together, in spite of the separateness of their ways, in a brief romance late in life, adds tremendous poignancy to their story. All the more so when the vulnerability of his political career forces Andy to interrupt the affair to squelch rumors in the news that he is "shacking up with an old girlfriend in New York." Meanwhile, Melissa's letters imply the emotional stress this creates in her already fragile state.

It is a lesson in dramatic power to see how engrossingly the story is told simply by having two fine actors seated pensively on stage, reading the key fragments of the correspondence. Like ghosts of years past, their images take form with rare humor, wit and passion and involve us deeply in their lifelong courtship.

A tug at our deepest sentiments comes at the end when, following Melissa's death, Andy finally acknowledges to himself, as he writes his sympathies to Melissa's mother, how deeply he needed and loved his "correspondent" and how much they affected each others' lives through a lifetime of love letters.

The beautiful ending leaves the audience with the tantalizing question of whether the relationship could have worked if they had not missed so many connections in the early years — food for talk long after the house lights come up.

This charming, often very funny and deeply moving play has a distressingly short run — only until Sept. 15. But its tender look at an unusual love, and the thoroughly in-character performances of two great pros, Galloway and Rain, are well worth an effort to get to one of the precious few remaining performances.

'An Enemy of the People'

It is hard to believe that the great Norwegian playwright Henrik Ibsen put this issue of social morality on stage more than 100 years ago. If anything, "Enemy of the People" is even more relevant today than when he wrote it.

Dr. Thomas Stockman, who is the subject of the title, could be any of a number of contemporary crusaders who are threatened, even attacked, for jeopardizing financial interests and private profit by exposing fraud, environmental pollution or political corruption. In Stockman's case, his brother leads their community in discrediting and denouncing his discovery that the water supply of their 19th century Norwegian town is polluted, endangering the lives of citizens and tourists in the town's economically important therapeutic baths.

The fact that out of this situation, Ibsen makes an exciting and suspenseful drama that still has meaning today, is only one of many remarkable facets of this play. With a rare understanding of human nature, Ibsen has made Stockman more than an idealistic hero. He is a complex product of his times whose weaknesses contribute to his martyrdom and make of him a tragic figure of Olympian proportions. The audience writhes in frustration as Stockman seals his own doom with an uncompromising attempt to indict not only the influential, but the whole town.

In addition, Ibsen's devotion to his art drove him to develop all his characters in full. Every supporting role draws deep interest as his or her motivations and corruptibility, or in a few cases, nobility, become painfully evident.

Julia Winder's Petra, the doctor's daughter, is inspiring in her loyal admiration for her father, and emulation of his idealism.

Peter Donaldson's newspaper editor, Hovstad, engenders genuine disgust as he jettisons his socialist ideals and panders to the establishment to save his publication from being put out of business.

And Nicholas Pennell's Peter Stockman, mayor of the town and Thomas' brother, portrays a complexity of motivations from defending his initiatives which gave rise to the problem in the first place, and protecting the near-term financial interests of the town, to displaying a vicious sibling rivalry and conniving, mean-spirited view of his brother's true motivations.

The confrontation of the brothers, in fact, almost eclipses the big moral issue of the play and is given enormous impact by the inspired performance of David Fox as Dr. Thomas Stockman. He glows with the warmth of a deeply loving and committed human being in the opening scenes as he entertains his liberal minded friends. He glows again with determination as he finds his suspicions about pollution confirmed and plans to save the town by exposing it.

But he reaches a peak of inspiration in his self righteousness and triumph as he wears his brother's prized badge of office, the mayoral hat, and puts him down, only a moment later to fall into stunned dismay as he realizes that all his supporters have abandoned him and his brother the mayor will squelch the expose.

The town's condemnation and abuse of the doctor to protect their pocketbooks and the inspiration of his family and one friend who stand by him set up the play for its unconventional ending. It also must leave every member of the audience wondering if he or she could jeopardize career, family, life itself, as the doctor does, because he knows what is right and acts on his conviction.

This four-star performance will continue at the Avon Theatre through Oct. 27. For tickets and information on all of Stratford's plays still going on, as well as accommodations and prices for groups and school matinees, call the festival's Detroit number, 964-4668.

Branagh continues brilliant career with stylish 'Dead Again'

By Marian Trainor
Special Writer

Irish-born Kenneth Branagh, who was nominated for two Oscars for directing and acting in detective thriller, period romance and comedy.

Based on a script by newcomer Scott Frank, the film rides along on the sort of implausible twists and turns that demand suspension of disbelief.

Set in Los Angeles in two distinctly different time periods, one filmed in black and white, the other in color, it is strongly based on belief in reincarnation.

Before the action begins, credits roll against shots of oversize headlines announcing that Margaret Strauss (Emma Thomas), a concert pianist, has been stabbed to death with scissors. The headlines continue, each one more sensational than the previous one naming her international conductor husband, Roman (Branagh) as the murderer.

His arrest, trial and conviction are duly noted and finally we see him on death row. As he takes the long walk to the death chamber, we see Margaret waiting at the end. When he reaches her, he pulls out a pair of scissors and stabs her. A piercing scream is heard. The screen goes black and the film moves into the present.

We meet Grace (also played by Thomas) at St. Audrey's

School for Boys, having no idea where she is or who she is. Beset by dreams of a murder 40 years ago, she is so traumatized, she is unable to speak.

Branagh, now playing Mike Church, a private eye, is hired to discover her identity. With no clues to go on, he accepts the help of an eccentric antique dealer, Madson (Derek Jacobi) who is also a hypnotist and is not above requesting his subjects to be on the lookout for valuable antiques in their travels backward into time. Through him Grace and Mike regress to their earlier lives under hypnosis, it is revealed that her nightmare is no fairy tale. There really was a Margaret and Roman Strauss. The question is could Grace and Mike be their reincarnated spirits?

As the dark truth about the Strauss marriage emerges, it begins to parallel the romance between Mike and Grace. Events come into focus that help to clarify the present, which seems also about to end in another brutal murder.

Another whom Mike turns to for help is an even more eccentrick character. Dr. Corty Carlisle (Robin Williams) is a psychiatrist who has been stripped of his license. He sits swathed like a swami in sweaters and scarves in a supermarket meat locker where he works.

Another key character is Gray Baker (Andy Garcia). It is he who directs Mike to Inga (Germany's icon of the cinema, Hanna Schygulla) who was a housekeeper for Margaret and Roman Strauss and who holds the key that unlocks the past to reveal Margaret's murderer. Both she and Garcia add dark, creepy flourishes to the 50-year-span of the film.

"Dead Again" is no run-of-the-mill movie. The balancing act between past and present, the shifting scenes that bring each era into focus, the moods, style and tone of each are so different that the grace with which the characters adapt is amazing.

The Margaret of the 40's is glamorous, charming, outgoing. Her alter ego, Grace, is a confused, frightened young woman who struggles to rid herself of ghosts that won't go away and allow her to function as a budding artist in the present.

The '40s Branagh is a composed, patrician, somewhat arrogant German who fled to Hollywood during World War II. He is in sharp contrast to the modern, somewhat ruffled private eye Branagh who is determined to unearth Thompson's past even when it becomes evident that he is dangerously embroiled in it.

Like all good whodunits, "Dead Again" has a surprise ending but one that fits right into the incidents that led up to it.

While the film is a coup de cinema for Branagh, much is contributed by his supporting cast, particularly his real-life wife Emma Thomas and friends from "Henry V" and his English based Renaissance Theatre Company.

Photographer Matthew Leonetti is to be commended for his work. The black and white scenes for the dreams and flashbacks are excellent. The soft and hazy colors of the present scenes are equally good.

It is this respect for the Hollywood of old that helps Branagh to make a warm, intelligent film a dazzling success.

North girls tennis team is off to a flying start this season

By Steve Stein
Sports Editor

The Grosse Pointe North girls tennis team took a ride on an emotional roller-coaster last year.

In their Class A regional tournament, the Lady Norsemen finished third, just one point behind runnerup Grosse Pointe South.

Only regional champ Grosse Pointe University Liggett and South qualified for the state meet and they did well. Liggett won the state title and South tied for ninth with West Bloomfield.

It was the first time in Karen Cooksey's three years as coach that North failed to earn a berth in the state meet. The Lady Norsemen finished in the top 10 in both previous appearances.

In Macomb Area Conference play, South lost only to Port Huron Northern and North and came in third.

Winning league championships — and qualifying for state tournaments — isn't everything in high school sports, however.

In another respect, Cooksey considered last year's squad "a very successful team because it pulled together. I hope and expect that will carry through to this year's team."

Cooksey is confident the team spirit will return because of the leadership of senior co-captains Rebecca Damm and Marimatha Barlow.

Despite losing six players to graduation, it looks like North hasn't skipped a beat from last fall.

Battling 90-plus temperatures and high humidity, the Lady Norsemen captured the championship of the eight-team Troy Invitational tournament Aug. 28.

North had players in all seven title matches, won four of them, and scored 36 points to run away with the crown. Last year, in their first appearance in the tourney, the Lady Norsemen won the title by just one point.

"I was extremely pleased with how we played, particularly for an early-season match," Cooksey said. "That was the first time we've been in all the finals of a tournament since I've been coach."

"It must have been 110 or 120 degrees on the courts but our girls didn't complain that much, even when they had three-set matches. It was ungodly hot."

Troy finished second with 20 points. Rochester was third with 19, Rochester Adams had 16, Lake Orion tallied 10, Birmingham Groves and Monroe seven each and Troy Athens had four.

The Lady Norsemen won two singles and two doubles titles. At No. 3 singles, sophomore Gretchen Sazama beat Amanda Ball of Troy for the championship. Ball won a four-hour match earlier in the tourney and couldn't continue after losing the first set to Sazama 6-0.

Barlow beat Tara Sievers of Adams 6-3, 6-3 for the No. 4 singles crown.

At No. 1 doubles, Damm and junior Natalia Rodriguez stopped Val Velilla and Anita Sabnis of Athens 6-0, 6-0 for the championship. Freshman Sara Granda and junior Kim Dornbrook teamed up to win the No. 3 doubles crown, beating Kathy Grimm and Carrie Busch of Rochester 3-6, 6-4, 6-4.

North's runnersup were sophomore Tricia Morrow at No. 1 singles; senior Shyla Strange at No. 2 singles; and juniors Monique Labadie and Lauren Fisher at No. 2 doubles. Morrow fell to Troy's Jill Bookholder 6-3, 6-2; Troy's Mara Endoy beat Strange 6-1, 6-2; and Nicole Maison and Michelle Bernat of Rochester beat Labadie and Fisher 6-7, 6-1, 6-2.

In their first action Aug. 24, the Lady Norsemen tied for the top spot in the Port Huron Northern Invitational with 15 points. The host team won the title in a tie-breaker.

Bloomfield Hills Lahser (12 points) and Grand Blanc (five) rounded out the four-team field.

Port Huron Northern lost just two players from its 1990 squad which finished in a five-way tie for second place in the Class A meet.

"The Port Huron Northern coach (Al Wright) said he was surprised about how strong a team we had considering the number of players we lost," Cooksey said.

Sazama won her flight (No. 3 singles) at Port Huron Northern and Barlow captured two of three matches at No. 4.

After the Labor Day holiday, North returned to action Wednesday when it hosted Grosse Pointe Star of the Sea.

South gets early taste of tougher schedule

By Steve Stein
Sports Editor

It'll be tough for the Grosse Pointe South boys soccer team to repeat its unprecedented success of last season.

But that doesn't bother second-year coach Mark Christensen.

Christensen and Athletic Director Jo Lake have put together a much more competitive schedule in an effort to keep the program rolling in the right direction.

There were only four seniors on last year's team, the best in school history. The Blue Devils finished 17-3, made it to the Class A district finals and were ranked No. 10 in the statewide coaches poll late in the season.

South had never advanced that far in the state tournament and it was the first time the Blue Devils were ranked.

The squad that defeated South in the district championship game — the Warren De La Salle Pilots — went on to win the state title. The Pilots beat the Blue Devils 5-3.

Grosse Pointe North beat South twice in Macomb Area Conference play 3-2 and 2-1, handing the Blue Devils their other two losses.

"We over-achieved," said Christensen, 32, a former Oakland University soccer star who played in four professional leagues.

With just five seniors among the 16 players on this year's team, South once again will be relying heavily on its younger talent.

The Blue Devils' beefed-up schedule began the weekend of Aug. 23-24 when they competed for the first time in the Country Day Invitational at Birmingham Detroit Country Day.

After opening with a 2-1 victory over Dearborn Edsel Ford (a Class A regional finalist in 1990), South blanked Northville 3-0. Northville was a Class A district champ last year.

Then came the invitational championship game against Country Day, a three-time defending state champion which is favored to make it four in a row this fall.

Country Day won 5-2 after taking a 2-0 lead in the first 10 minutes.

"The traditionally strong teams like Country Day know they have to turn it on when they play in a big game," Christensen said. "Our kids want to do that too, and they're ready to do it, but they're searching to find the button to turn it on."

"Our best days are ahead of us. When our young kids become seniors, they'll be well-equipped to handle every situation."

Also new to South's schedule are Detroit Catholic Central, a Class A regional finalist in 1990, and Dearborn Heights Crestwood, a Class A district winner last fall.

South's biggest challenge is to replace three graduated seniors — Jason Dritsan, John Ostrowski and Matt Smucker — who accounted for 80 percent of the team's scoring last year.

Christensen hopes Rick Weinberg and Mike Reynaert will pick up the slack.

Weinberg is a 6-foot-3 senior midfielder and team co-captain who is a three-year varsity player. The lanky Weinberg "always is getting his head or leg on the ball and he's a smart player, but we need more offense from him," Christensen said.

Weinberg scored three goals last year and Christensen is hoping he'll pour in at least 15 this fall.

Reynaert, a junior forward, started at midfield last year. He notched four goals 1990 and Christensen wants him to be the team's leading scorer this season.

"Mike is our best technical player," said Christensen.

South's goalie is 5-6 junior Chris Dowe. Christensen said Dowe was the only Grosse Pointe high school player who participated on a Michigan Olympic Development Team this summer.

Dowe split the keeper duties on the Under-16 1/2 squad which finished second in the national tournament for that age group.

Senior midfielder Paul Geist, who started at fullback last year, is an outstanding athlete with an impressive vertical leap for a 6-footer.

Back with the team healthy and fit is senior sweeper Jamie Mertz, the other co-captain. Mertz, who started as a sophomore, missed most of last season because of a groin injury.

Development project aims to rejuvenate cultural center

By Ronald J. Bemas
Staff Writer

In recent years, Detroit's residential renaissance has been concentrated along the riverfront. Upscale developments like Harbortown and Stroh's Riverplace have been filling up slowly but surely.

But Detroit's cultural center will soon have a moderate-priced residential development that its planners hope will spread those residents out.

Construction of the Lester Morgan Cultural Gardens Apartments was slated to get under way this week on 10 acres of land bordered by Warren Avenue, St. Antoine, Fredrick and Brush, just east of the Detroit Institute of Arts. It's a 127-unit townhouse complex that will cost $10.9 million. Detroit contributed $1.5 million to the project.

The development will consist of 33 three-bedroom and 94 two-bedroom townhouse units each with a two-car garage with automatic openers, 2 1/2 baths, central air, balconies, patios and monitored burglar alarms. The development also will include tennis courts, a community building and a children's playground.

The units will not be for sale and will rent at about $800 a month. "I think it's a ripe area for moderate-priced housing," said Cullen Dubose, president of Painia Development Corp., who is developing the project with Don Davis, chair of First Independence National Bank of Detroit. The pair purchased the land from the city of Detroit.

"You have the cultural center around it, your neighbor is the DIA, there's a park, there's Wayne State, there's a Farmer Jack. It's a great area, it just needs to be developed," Dubose said.

He said he recently completed a market study and found that the renters' market is out there — Wayne State and Medical Center employees are only a stone's throw from the project — it's just that the previous developments have been too expensive to bring people back into the city.

"A lot of people want to live in the city, but what choice do these people have, other than on the river," Dubose said.

"Those developments are very high priced."

Dubose stands behind the project and dismisses any comment that a huge development like Lester Morgan Cultural Gardens Apartments is a dangerous idea in a city everyone says is dying.

"I'm in real estate so I know the market and the only evidence I have that Detroit is dying comes from the media," Dubose said.

Originally named the Cultural Center Apartments, the project was renamed last week in honor of the late Lester Morgan, who was an educator at the University of Michigan and Washtenaw Community College and a top executive with Mayor Coleman Young's administration.

A political activist, Morgan was the founder of the City Residence Committee, which Detroit business leaders Cullen Dubose, president of Painia Development Corp., and Don Davis, chair of First Independence National Bank of Detroit, unveiled plans recently to build a 127-unit townhouse community in Detroit's cultural center, east of the Detroit Institute of Arts.

worked for equitable insurance rates for Detroit residents. He was an ardent supporter of the civil rights movement and a member of the NAACP, Detroit Cable Commission, Detroit Racing Commission, Old Newsboys Inc., and the executive committee of the 1st Congressional District. He died in 1984.

The Cooley Construction Co., was expected to begin work this week with completion targeted for August 1992.

Construction of the community is part of a comprehensive master plan for Detroit's cultural center which includes expansion of the Detroit Institute of Arts, as well as improvements to the Children's Museum, the Museum of African American History and the Center for Creative Studies.

"Our intent is to help revitalize an area that has a lot to offer," Dubose said. "And with that, help the city."

Renters, can you afford to buy a home? It might be easier than you think

It's the first of the month and you're writing a check for your monthly rent. Have you ever wondered just how much money you lose every month by paying someone else's mortgage payment?

Perhaps you don't think you can afford to buy. Although the thought of loan applications and financing requirements may seem overwhelming, buying a home is easier than you think.

First, you need to review your financial situation and estimate how much you can spend on housing each month, said James S. Bonadeo, president of the Builders Association of Southeastern Michigan.

A general rule of thumb: You should spend no more than 28 percent of your monthly gross income on your monthly mortgage payment.

Your mortgage includes principal, interest, taxes and insurance premiums. So, if your annual gross income is $40,000, you could spend up to $933 on housing each month.

How much should you expect to spend on monthly mortgage payments?

Your mortgage payment will be determined by your annual gross income, down payment, interest rates and the size of your loan. Mortgage payments vary according to the type of loan you obtain.

Down payments usually range from 5 percent to 25 percent of the total cost of the house. When setting aside money for your down payment, remember that you will also need cash for closing costs and possible "points" on your mortgage, Bonadeo advised.

Closing costs are the expenses incurred when you transfer ownership of the real estate. A point is a one-time service charge levied by the lender.

Clever use of space gives illusion of size

The Hailey is a long ranch house design, with two front-facing gables giving depth and visual variety to the main long roofline.

The front door leads into a formal living room separated from the rest of the house by an interior door.

Behind the living room lies the more relaxed family room/dining area, open to the kitchen on one side and the hearth and wood stove on the other. On sunny days, meals can be served outside on a deck accessible through the kitchen.

Kitchen counter space is conserved by a free-standing range and eating bar facing the dining area. This island serves as the breakfast nook for the house. A walk-in pantry to one side provides food storage.

From the family room, a long hall leads to the master suite at the opposite end of the house. A smaller bedroom, closets and a bath lie to one side of this hall toward the back of the house.

Toward the front is a third bedroom or den, plus a large utility room with sink, work area, washer and dryer. The master suite includes its own private bathroom and walk-in closet.

The garage is also at this end of the house, and includes separate spaces for wood storage, insulated pantry, refrigerator and freezer. The Hailey is not an extremely large house — under 2,000 square feet of living area — however, its separation of space and variety of environments give it the feeling and utility of a much more elaborate home.

For a study kit of the Hailey (207-16), send $7.50 to Today's Home, P.O. Box 2832-T Eugene, Ore. 97402. Be sure to specify plan name and number when ordering.

It's slow, but recovery is still coming

The economic recovery likely will "motor along" over the coming year, and housing markets nationwide are expected to improve, according to the latest monthly economic outlook by the National Association of Realtors.

Despite recent setbacks in job growth and orders for durable goods, the overall recovery is likely to continue, as long-term interest rates fall a bit further and the inflation scenario remains positive, the association reported.

The association pointed to the Federal Reserve Board's move to further ease monetary policy as a positive step toward keeping the recovery on track. In turn, continued gradual declines in long-term mortgage interest rates are helping to spur home construction and sales, association analysts said.

NAR chief economist John A. Tuccillo praised Alan Greenspan, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, for his evenhanded guidance at the Fed. However, Tuccillo noted that other economic policies are not always working in harmony with the Fed and sometimes have a negative influence on growth.

Tuccillo cited 1986 changes to the tax law, red tape surrounding the Resolution Trust Corp. and its ability to liquidate assets of failed thrifts, and proposals by Congress and the U.S. Treasury to impose onerous capital standards on secondary market agencies, as forces working against the recovery.

The outlook contains the following predictions for the real estate industry and economy in general for 1991 and 1992:

- Sales of existing single-family homes are expected to total 3.397 million units in 1991, rising 3.1 percent from last year. In 1992, a 5.3 percent increase to 3.576 million units is likely.

- Sales of new single-family homes are expected to total 504,000 units this year, down 5.5 percent from 1990. In 1992, a 12.3 percent increase to 566,000 units is expected.

- Interest rates for fixed-rate, 30-year mortgages are likely to average 9.4 percent this year and 9.1 percent next year, compared with 10.1 percent in 1990. One-year adjustable rate mortgages are likely to average 7.3 percent this year and 7.0 percent next year, compared with 8.4 percent last year.

- Real (inflation-adjusted) gross national product (the total value of the nation's goods and services) is expected to drop 0.2 percent this year, before increasing 2.9 percent in 1992. This compares with an annualized growth rate of 1.0 percent last year.

Lake level

Lake St. Clair at the end of July was at elevation 574.52 feet above the mean water level at Father Point, Quebec, or 34 inches above chart datum.

This was about 2 inches above what it was a year ago, and about 2 inches below one month ago.

The July monthly level of 574.64 feet was about 7 inches below the all-time average for July. The lake, however, remained about 23 inches below the all-time high July monthly mean level, which was recorded in 1986.

The forecast shows that at the end of August, the level of Lake St. Clair will be about 5 inches below what it was at the end of July. The level of the lake is expected to continue its seasonal decline into November.

The water level in January 1992, is expected to be about 7 inches above the long-term average for that month, or about 7 inches below what it was at the same time in 1991.

Deadline nears for annual drink contest

Contestants still have time to enter a non-alcoholic drink recipe and win $1,000 in AAA Michigan's 11th annual "Zero-Proof Mix-Off," but entries must be postmarked by Friday, Sept. 13 to qualify.

"A Bavarian Holiday" is the theme for the contest, which spotlights AAA Michigan's "First A Friend, Then A Host" alcohol-awareness campaign during the Christmas and New Year's holidays.

The non-alcoholic drink best capturing the mood and feeling of Bavaria's castles, snow-capped mountains and festivals earns its creator $1,000. Cash prizes also will be awarded for second through fourth-place.

Drinks will be rated on taste, appearance, originality of name and adherence to the theme. Winning recipes will be featured in the 1991 "Great Pretenders Party Guide" distributed free statewide in December. Preliminary judging of entries will be done at AAA Michigan headquarters. Twenty finalists will compete in person at the mix-off, Oct. 3 at the Bavarian Inn in Frankenmuth.

Mail entries to: "Zero-Proof Mix-Off," AAA Michigan Public Relations, 1 Auto Club Drive, Dearborn, MI 48126.

Woodworking

The Metro-Detroit Woodworking show Oct. 4-6 will feature machinery, power and hand tools, supplies, demonstrations, seminars, free workshops and more, for the woodworking enthusiast, homebuilder/remodeler, woodturner or carver at all levels of expertise - beginner, advanced or professional. It's at the Michigan Fairgrounds-Community Arts Exhibit Hall, 1120 W. State Fair. Admission is $6 for adults, children under 12 free. For more information, call 1-800-826-8257.

Sleep disorders explained

We spend about one-third of our lives sleeping ... or trying to get to sleep. Some of us fall asleep at the wrong time, for instance, at work. Sometimes our sleep is interrupted by the snoring of another.

Dr. Kevin Grady, medical director of the Sleep Disorders Center at St. John Hospital and Medical Center, said that of the vast numbers of sleep disorders, the following three are the most common.

"Number one - sleep apnea, which is the interruption of the breathing mechanism which may lead to changes in people's oxygen levels and heart rates," he said. "The next subset would be the people with insomnia. Those are the people who have difficulties falling asleep and those have a large variety of causes. Some of them may be medical and some of them may be psychological. And then the other subset that we see would be those with narcolepsy. Those are people who have difficulties staying awake."

Frequent sleepwalking, nightmares and restless leg movements are among the symptoms that should be evaluated by a doctor.

After a medical history and a physical exam are taken, patients may be monitored while they sleep to help determine what their specific sleep problem is.
