Farms to weigh switch to private ambulance service

By Donna Walker
Staff Writer

Grosse Pointe Farms is seriously considering getting out of the ambulance business.

Farms City Manager Richard Solak said that he will present a proposal to the city council on Monday, Dec. 9, that would privatize the city's ambulance service.

Under the proposal, the city would hire Ruehle's/St. Joseph's Hospital Ambulance Co. to handle its emergency medical services (EMS) program. If the council approves the proposal at the meeting, Ruehle's could take over the city's EMS program early next year, Solak said.

This would benefit the city in several ways, he said. First of all, he said it would give the Farms paramedics — the highest level of ambulance service available.

The Michigan Department of Public Health recognizes three levels of ambulance service. The lowest level, currently used in the Farms, is basic life support.

Under the basic life support system, the ambulance is manned by a licensed medical first responder (the driver) and a licensed basic emergency medical technician (EMT), who can administer sophisticated first aid treatment. A basic EMT can also be trained and licensed by the state to use an automatic defibrillator to deliver shocks to a cardiac patient in an effort to stabilize the patient's heart rate. The Farms has this capability.

The second level of ambulance service is limited advanced life support. Under this system, the ambulance is manned by a driver and an EMT-specialist who can administer intravenous fluids and advanced airway maintenance (intubation) in addition to doing everything a basic EMT can do.

The third level of service is advanced life support. Only at this level are the emergency personnel known as paramedics. The ambulance has more sophisticated equipment and is manned by a driver and a paramedic. The paramedic is trained to use electrocardiogram equipment and administer drugs, and is in constant contact with a physician in the emergency room of the hospital.

Solak said that under the proposal, Ruehle's would provide the city with an ambulance, paramedics and attendants (drivers), and they would be stationed at Cottage Hospital in the Farms. The hospital would provide Ruehle's with medical supplies, a place to store the ambulance, a direct telephone line, and give the ambulance attendants sleeping quarters and four hours of emergency medical training during each 24-hour shift, Solak said.

Although the ambulance service would be housed at Cottage, an emergency room physician at St. John Hospital in Detroit would monitor readings from the ambulance's Life Pak 10 defibrillator/monitor with built-in non-invasive pacemaker option. The device broadcasts the patient's heart rhythm and other vital signs directly to the emergency room physician so that he or she can tell the paramedic what needs to be done.

Currently, the Farms takes patients to either Cottage, St. John or Bon Secours hospital, depending on the patient's choice. Ruehle's would continue to offer that choice under the proposed agreement, Solak said.

ambulance service would pay for itself, Solak said.

The city's ambulance is 14 years old and will need to be replaced next year if the Farms keeps the EMS program in-house, Solak said.

"That could cost anywhere from $70,000 to $100,000," he said.

The city would also save overtime and training costs for three of its public safety officers if it hired a private EMS company, Solak said.

Currently, the city has nine public safety specialists who are trained firefighters and basic EMTs. They are permanently assigned to fire and ambulance duty. Also, three public safety officers, who are trained in police and fire procedures and are EMT certified, are assigned to ambulance duty for a year at a time.

If the city goes with a private ambulance company, those three public safety officers would be put back on police duty and would not have to remain EMT certified, saving the city training costs, Solak said. He said it cost the city more than $10,000 last year in overtime and course fees to keep three public safety officers EMT certified.

No one would be laid off under the proposal, Solak said. The nine public safety specialists would still be assigned to fire and rescue duty. However, when a public safety officer retires or leaves the department, he or she may not be replaced, Solak said.

"Once we lose two people through natural attrition, this thing should be a wash (pay for itself)," Solak said.

The city has been investigating ways to improve its ambulance service for several years, in response to residents' requests, Solak said.

Early this year, the city administration started calling ambulance companies for bids. The administration also consulted local hospitals and inquired about how much it would cost to obtain the service from Grosse Pointe Woods, the only Pointe that has paramedics.

Another alternative that was considered was the Echo system, which is being proposed by Dr. Ronald Laskowski,

'Echo' paramedic system considered

By John Minnis

Dr. Ronald Laskowski, emergency room director at Bon Secours Hospital, thinks he has a better idea for providing paramedic service in the Pointes.

Unlike Grosse Pointe Farms, which is considering hiring a private ambulance company to provide paramedics, Laskowski thinks a two-tiered emergency response system, called the Echo plan, operated jointly by the local hospitals and Pointe public safety departments can provide the highest level of emergency medical response — paramedics.

Paramedics can administer certain drugs, place IVs, provide advanced airway management (intubate) and operate a defibrillator/electrocardiogram unit.

Also, because Harper Woods is part of the Pointes' mutual aid agreement, it would be welcome to become part of the two-tiered emergency response system, Laskowski said.

He believes that with the hospitals, possibly their foundations and the cities sharing the expense under his plan, paramedic service can be provided in the City, Farms, Park and Shores for not much more than it would cost just the Farms to hire a private ambulance company.

The Farms is considering contracting Ruehle's/St. Joseph's Hospital Ambulance Co. to provide advanced life support (paramedic) emergency medical service.

The proposed Ruehle's contract will be presented to the Farms council at its Dec. 9 meeting.

Laskowski said the cost to the Farms to hire Ruehle's — as presented to the agency that regulates paramedic services in Wayne County and of which Laskowski is a member — would be $114,000.

He said the cost of providing the two-tier emergency medical response to the four Pointes which do not now have paramedics would be less than $200,000.

"I think we can provide an excellent service at reasonable costs," he said.

Shores Trustee John Huette- man III, who has been working with Laskowski for the past six months on the Echo plan, said that the Shores and other Pointe communities have wanted to upgrade their ambulance services, but the cost for each city to go to paramedics has been prohibitive. The Echo plan makes advanced life support in the Pointes financially feasible, he said.

"I think it's a wonderful opportunity," he said. "We can take what it would cost just one city (to upgrade to paramedics) and spread it around so all benefit."

William Furtaw, Park deputy director of public safety, said that his department likes what it has heard about he plan so far.

"Based on what (Laskowski) has told us, we're very, very interested," he said. "It's absolutely perfect for our situation. It doesn't change our operation except to augment it."

Huette- man said that with the support of Laskowski and Dr. Anthony Southall, head of emergency medicine at St. John Hospital, he is confident a good plan can be developed.

Southall is the medical director for the Woods and Shores emergency medical services.

Laskowski is the medical director for the Park.

"Those two people know ambulance services inside out," Huette- man said.

"We just figured if anyone deserves an advanced medical service, it's the Grosse Pointes," he said, "and if we

Pointer of Interest Conrad Koski

By Donna Walker
Staff Writer

Conrad Koski, 46, of Grosse Pointe Farms, executive vice president and treasurer of First of Michigan Corp., will never forget his eighth Christmas.

The year was 1953. On Nov. 22, his father, Detroit Police Officer Conrad Koski Sr., and his partner were killed in a car accident as they were driving up north on a hunting trip.

"It was the largest funeral in Detroit up until that time, because two officers had been killed," Koski said.

He and his younger brother and sisters, ages 6, 4, and 2, lived on the east side of Detroit with their mother, Irene Koski, but he said the house seemed empty without his father.

A few days before Christmas, a Detroit police officer came to the door.

"I remember the buttons on his coat, and how shiny they were," Koski said.

The officer gave his mother a large, plain cardboard box. Koski said he wanted to know what was inside the box, but his mother wouldn't tell him. She just took it up to her bedroom.

Money was tight that year, but Santa Claus still brought presents for the children.

"The way things were, we were happy to get anything," Koski said, "and I remember getting new underwear and a box of Sanders hard candy."

can give it to them, we should. This Echo unit makes it within reach."

Currently, only Grosse Pointe Woods has paramedic service, which is financed by an extra tax levied on Woods property owners.

The other Pointes and Harper Woods provide basic life support emergency medical service. Those trained in basic life support are called emergency medical technicians (EMTs). Also, the Shores, Park and Farms EMTs are trained to use an automatic defibrillator unit, which provides an electrical shock to stabilize a cardiac patient's heart.

The Park also provides ambulance service to the City.

Under Laskowski's two-tiered plan, a paramedic Echo unit would respond to Priority I and II calls, which normally require a paramedic's advanced training.

Priority I calls involve life-threatening situations, such as cardiac arrest or possibly stroke. Priority II calls include shortness of breath, asthma attacks, seizures, allergic reactions and drug overdoses, which also may be classified Priority I depending on the drug and circumstances.

Laskowski said dispatchers already screen calls by priority, though some extra training would be required if the Echo system were put into operation.

Laskowski believes two paramedic Echo units would be needed to cover the Pointes and Harper Woods, if it opts into the plan. He said Harper Woods has not yet been consulted on its willingness to join the Echo system.

One Echo unit — which merely means a one-person, non-transporting vehicle — would be stationed in the southwestern area of the Pointes, near the Park and City, and the other would be in the northwest to be accessible to the Farms, Shores and Harper Woods, and as a backup unit for the Woods' paramedics.

He said the details haven't been worked out yet, but added that the paramedic Echo units would be strategically placed so that they can respond as quickly as city ambulances to any calls in the areas specified.

The Echo unit would be some type of utility vehicle, such as a GMC Jimmy or Ford Ranger. The Echo vehicle would contain the paramedic's equipment, such as a defibrillator/heart monitoring unit, drug supplies, IV equipment, intubator and a radio for contact to the hospital and the city ambulance.

When a call requiring a paramedic is received, the paramedic and city ambulance respond simultaneously. If the patient requires advanced life support treatment, the paramedic rides in the city ambulance to the hospital.

If advanced life support is not needed, the paramedic returns to the Echo station, which could be at any of the public safety departments, hospitals or other locations.

The cities' EMTs and ambulances would continue to respond to all emergency medical calls, and would do so alone if they are not Priority I or II runs.

The Farms rejected the Echo plan, according to City Manager Richard Solak, because it felt confusion would result from paramedic and city EMTs arriving at a scene at different times.

Laskowski discounted that fear, saying, "You are really looking at the same response time."

He said the paramedics' training, which is ongoing to meet recertification requirements, would be provided by the participating hospitals and would be done while they are off-duty.

The equipment costs to the cities participating in the Echo, two-tiered system would be minimal. Additional equipment, such as a radio, may have to be added to the ambulances so that they could be certified as advanced life support rigs, and it would be a one-time expense.

Both the Shores and Park have new, modular ambulances.

Laskowski said the Echo system could be put in place even if the Farms went its own way with a private paramedic service.

"I don't think it hampers our plan at all," he said.

One problem the Farms faces in going with a private service is that it would no longer be part of the Pointe-Harper Woods mutual aid agreement as far as emergency medical services are concerned. Under the agreement, the Pointes and Harper Woods provide backup service for each other if a city's ambulance is already on a call when another call comes in.

The agreement states that mutual aid is limited to cities that maintain their own emergency medical services through their fire or public safety departments. The City's contract with the Park is covered under the agreement.

Before Ruehle's can operate in the Farms, it must have a mutual aid provider.

Laskowski said meetings are scheduled early next month with hospital and city officials. Once a two-tier emergency medical plan is approved, he said the Echo paramedic units could be available for runs within a short time.

Not only would paramedics be provided under the Echo plan, but each of the participating cities' basic EMTs would receive additional training so that their skills could be upgraded to enable them to work with paramedics, he said.

Also, Bon Secours has a vigorous paramedic training program, which will provide many highly qualified paramedics to choose from, he said. Bon Secours recently had the highest paramedic graduation rate in the state, he said.

A control board consisting of city, hospital and citizen members would oversee the selection and hiring of paramedics and the overall operation of the Echo system.

Laskowski and Huetteman both said that they are looking for a system that will work to the benefit of all the Pointes. They said it is important that the cities get together to negotiate a workable plan.

"If we have the want and desire," Huetteman said, "this could be a go in months. We want to do it right, but we also want to get it done. It's a win, win, win situation."

emergency room director at Bon Secours Hospital and a member of the Detroit-East Medical Authority, Solak said.

Under the Echo system, the Park, City, Farms, Shores and Harper Woods would keep their basic EMT systems and local hospitals would provide paramedic Echo units on the southwestern and northwestern sides of the Pointes. The Echo unit would consist of a utility vehicle equipped with a defibrillator/heart monitoring unit, drug supplies, a two-way radio and other specialized equipment.

Public safety dispatchers would prioritize emergency calls. If advanced life support were needed, both the city's EMT unit and an Echo unit would be sent to the scene. The paramedic would work inside the city's ambulance and an EMT would drive the paramedic's utility vehicle back to the Echo station.

If advanced life support is not needed, only the EMT unit would be dispatched to the scene.

In September, the Farms council formed an ad-hoc committee to study the alternatives, including keeping the ambulance system in-house. The committee members, Mayor Gregg Berendt (who was a councilman at the time), and councilmembers Gail Kaess and John Crowley, decided in October that Ruehle's had the best offer, and directed Solak to come up with the draft contract he will present to the full council Dec. 9.

Of the five ambulance companies that bid on the service, Ruehle's quoted the lowest price, Solak said, but he refused to disclose the figure.

However, Laskowski said that the cost, as revealed to the Detroit-East Medical Authority recently when Ruehle's sought a license to operate in Wayne County, was $114,000.

The Detroit-East Medical Authority is made up of representatives from hospitals on the east side of Detroit and regulates ambulance services to make sure they comply with the rules of local hospitals.

Solak said the committee ruled out the Echo system because it felt that there could be some confusion in dispatching two units to emergencies that require advanced life support.

"This way, we'll have a paramedic respond to every emergency, and we know that we'll have good response time," Solak said.

However, Laskowski said the response time would be the same with the Echo system.

Currently, Grosse Pointe Farms does not charge a resident when he or she uses its ambulance service.

Farms Public Safety Director Robert Ferber said that under the proposed plan, Ruehle's would bill the resident's insurance company for use of the ambulance, but the resident would not be charged. Ruehle's would waive the resident's insurance deductible, or the entire fee if the resident does not have insurance, Ferber said.

However, that could change, he said, because a formal contract with Ruehle's has yet to be negotiated.

If the Farms hires Ruehle's, it could interfere with the Grosse Pointe/Harper Woods mutual aid system. Under the system, if the Farms needs help handling an emergency, one of the other Pointes or Harper Woods may send a backup unit, and vice versa.

Solak said that hiring a private ambulance company will not interfere with that system. However, public safety officers in the other Pointes are not so sure.

According to a June 11, 1987, addendum to the Pointes-Harper Woods mutual aid agreement that was first drafted in 1959, an emergency medical system must be maintained by each city's fire or public safety department to qualify for mutual aid.

Offenders find out eggsactly how the justice system works

By Ronald J. Bernas
Staff Writer

Four Pierce Middle School students were on trial last week for egg abuse and neglect as part of a multi-disciplinary project.

Two students were charged with abandoning their egg babies, one young mother was charged with abuse and a third young criminal, dubbed by prosecutors as "The Jovial Egg Killer," was charged with first-degree egg abuse for intentionally harming another student's egg.

The project was an extension of the school's pre-parenthood unit. All Grosse Pointe middle schools give their seventh grade students an egg which they are to treat as their child for a three-day period. If they need to leave the egg they have to get a babysitter - they cannot leave it unattended.

"The reasoning is to give the students some idea of parental responsibility," said Valerie C. Moran, life-skills teacher.

Although there were several cases of intentional abuse and neglect, as well as cases of accidental neglect over the three days of parenthood, Moran chose three cases to try.

"The idea behind the trial is to get the middle school students introduced to the court procedure," Moran said.

Moran, who is also on the Grosse Pointe Park council, used her connections to bring in people who could make the trials real for the students.

Grosse Pointe Park municipal judge Kirsten Frank - who has overseen other high-profile trials lately such as The People vs. The Big Bad Wolf and The Three Bears vs. Goldilocks - sat as judge. Wayne County prosecuting attorney Gary Wilson was the people's attorney and the defense attorney was Grosse Pointe Park's Dean Valente.

Hedda Hart and Katherine Hollidge were charged with leaving their children, Camille and Bernard, in the nursery in the school's computer lab while they went to lunch.

"We were only gone less than a minute," Hart testified. "And when we went back Mrs. Avery was putting them in her closet."

When the students saw the eggs were in Avery's protective custody, they told Moran, who acted as a protective services representative.

Because of the girls' quick response and because they followed the proper procedures in reporting the egg-napping, the jury found the two girls not guilty.

Becky Padilla was on trial for accidental injury to her egg which cracked when she knocked over the basket the egg was in as she reached for the telephone.

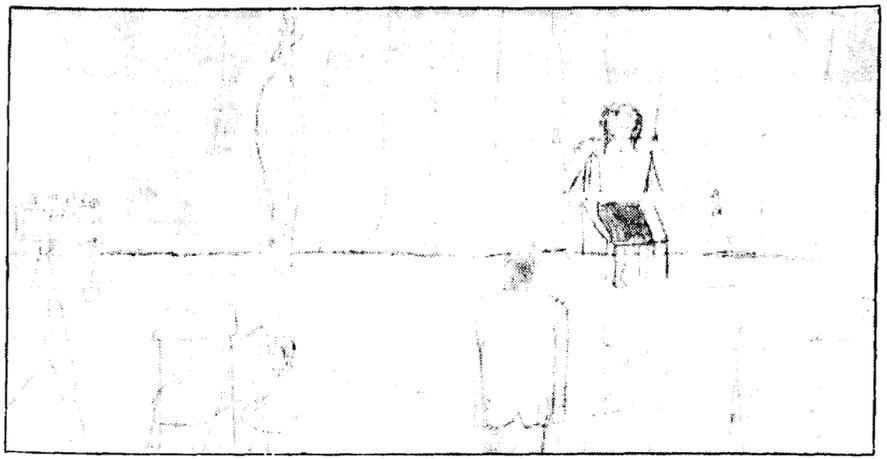

The jury found her guilty, but because the jury was not given proper instructions on the differences between accidental harm and reckless harm, Frank overturned the verdict.

The most colorful case was that of Colin Darke, "The Jovial Egg Killer."

Witnesses say that Darke, an eighth grader, intentionally harmed Boody Miller, another student's egg, then laughed about it.

The mother, Melissa Miller, was unable to testify but Troy Otto, who was with Miller when the incident occurred, said Darke intentionally harmed the egg which was still in egg-stensive care at Bon Secours Hospital. Sgt. James Smith of the Grosse Pointe Park police gave graphic testimony as to the egg's wounds and described its condition as "scrambled."

Smith testified that Darke gave several different versions of what happened that caused the injuries, but on the stand Darke testified, "We were horsing around, I bumped into her and she crushed the baby."

Drawing by Ryan Miller and art students made courtroom drawings of the proceedings.

"It shows how several departments can work well together, and I think everyone learned something and had fun, too," Moran said.

Darke was found not guilty, partly because officer Smith did not identify himself as a police officer when he questioned Darke and because the mother didn't testify.

The project was also an experiment - and a successful one, Moran said - in the middle school's new interdisciplinary planning. Not only was the life-skills department involved, the social studies department studied the court system, the technology department videotaped the trials, journalism students covered the story, English students wrote essays on the theme of the trials - that actions have consequences

Park woman's purse snatched in the City

A purse belonging to a 46-year-old Park woman was snatched by a man holding the door for her at a restaurant on Mack in the City.

The incident occurred at 7:57 p.m. Nov. 22. A man came up behind the woman as she was about to enter the restaurant. He held the door for her, and as she walked through the doorway, the man grabbed her purse, almost knocking her to the ground, according to City police.

The man then fled west to a waiting getaway car.

Later that night, at 2:40 a.m., the woman heard a car running in her driveway. She peeked out the bedroom window, and saw a car similar to the purse snatchers' vehicle backing out of her driveway. She called Park police, but they were unable to find the suspects.

The doors to the Park woman's car had been unlocked. A remote car-door locking unit and her car and house keys were in her purse when it was stolen.

Sailboard's owner sought

Do you know where your sailboard is?

Park police recovered what they believe is a stolen sailboard last July 2, but no one has yet claimed it.

The board manufacturer is Mistral, but the rest of the details police must get from the rightful owner before he can sail off with the board.

The sailboard was recovered in the Park, but it may have been stolen in the Petoskey-Harbor Springs area, police said.

If you know anything about the sailboard's owner, call the Park detective bureau at 822-7400.

Kelly bill gets tough on carjackers

By John Minnis
Assistant Editor

The Gravel case was a travesty, according to Grosse Pointe Sen. John Kelly, whose bill designed to crack down on carjackers cleared the state Senate on Nov. 12.

Kelly

"If this bill were law," he said, "all (those involved in the killing of Benjamin Gravel) would be doing a minimum of 10 years and we wouldn't be discussing the travesty that's occurred."

Gravel, 53, of Grosse Pointe Farms was killed Feb. 8, 1990, while he was driving on Clairpointe in Detroit. Of the six individuals charged in the slaying, two juveniles received probation until the age of 21, two adults were acquitted, and two juveniles face sentencing on second-degree murder charges. It is possible they, too, will get probation.

The youths said they needed a car to go to a party. The Gravel case was a predecessor of what was to become known as carjacking, a crime which has plagued Detroit since summer.

"These people are urban terrorists," Kelly said. "We have to take a serious approach to that."

Kelly's Senate Bill 507 is the main legislation in a nine-bill auto piracy package that was approved 20-13 in the Senate. The package now awaits action by the House.

"These bills are a response to a phenomenon where more than 800 people have had their automobiles stolen in our metropolitan areas under threat of force in the past couple of months," Kelly said. "We have to send the message that if you do the crime and get caught, we will get a conviction, and when we get the conviction, you will do time."

He said people convicted of carjacking at gunpoint under current laws can receive life terms, but few have drawn any sentence at all because the victims must prove beyond a reasonable doubt that a real gun or weapon was used and that their lives were in danger.

SB 507 reduces the level of threat that must be proved, making it easier to convict people of auto piracy, Kelly said.

The bill's amendment to the state penal code reads:

"A person, whether armed or unarmed, who by force or violence, or by threat of force or violence, or by putting in fear, robs, steals, or takes a motor vehicle ... from another person, in the presence of that person or the presence of a passenger or any other person in lawful possession of the motor vehicle, is guilty of auto piracy, a felony, and shall be punished by imprisonment for life, or for any term of years but not less than 10 years."

The eight companion bills revise current law to include auto piracy in the list of crimes in the juvenile code and allow juveniles who are at least 15 years old to be tried as adults for carjacking.

Two of the juveniles in the Gravel killing were also charged as adults and had pleaded guilty to first-degree murder but were sentenced as juveniles by Detroit Recorder's Chief Judge Dalton A. Roberson.

Kelly said his carjacking package, which he calls the "Gravel Memorial Act," would have prevented the travesties in the sentencing of the Gravel defendants from occurring.

"The bill makes it a mandatory 10 years," Kelly said. "The judge's hands are tied. It does not give the judge discretion to do what Roberson did."

But it is the mandatory minimum sentence that could kill Kelley's carjacking package now in the House Judiciary Committee headed by Rep. Perry Bullard.

David Cahill, legal council to the judiciary committee, said mandatory minimum sentencing has not been generally included in Michigan law because it ties the judge's hands, leads to more prison overcrowding and results in more trials and fewer pleas.

He said the Senate bill could be approved if its backers agree to take out the mandatory 10 years and just go with a maximum sentence of life in prison with no minimum mandatory sentence.

Schools elude 'Robin Hood' for awhile

While most of Michigan's other wealthy school districts are mailing big checks to the state that will be forwarded to poorer school districts, the Pointes are watching and waiting.

Last Friday was the day the wealthy districts had to send checks in the amount of half the business property growth taxes. Those checks will then be passed onto the poorer districts.

The measure is part of a Don't count your money at bus stop

Don't count your money until the bus ride's done. That's the lesson learned by one man in the Park recently.

The 36-year-old man's money was taken while he counted it at a bus stop at Jefferson and Maryland at 1:25 p.m. Nov. 21. The man was counting five $1 bills when another man came up and asked for change. He then grabbed the bills out of the commuter's hands and fled on foot into Detroit.

state financing plan meant to close the gap in per-pupil spending state-wide. Opponents of the plan call it "Robin Hood" legislation.

But the Pointes, because they operate under a winter tax collection, don't have to mail that check until May 15.

The check should amount to $150,000 to $170,000. But at least one official is hoping it's a check the state will never have a chance to endorse.

Christian Fenton, assistant superintendent for business affairs, said the schools are waiting and watching what's happening in other districts.

For example, in Macomb County, a court injunction has temporarily stalled the plan and other districts have threatened not to pay.

"We're not involved in any of the gymnastics of whether to pay or not to pay," Fenton said. "We're waiting to see how the other lawsuits come out."

Whatever happens, the board will certainly discuss the payment next year, closer to the May 15 deadline.

No great joy for Engler on Thanksgiving

John Engler's first year as governor has not been a happy one for either the governor himself or the people of Michigan. That means it's not likely to be a very pleasant Thanksgiving for the governor or many other Michiganders.

A Detroit News public opinion poll shows that more than half of Michigan residents disapprove of the job the new governor has done in his first year, even though six in 10 Michiganders support his most controversial move, eliminating General Assistance for 82,000 people.

And a new poll by Public Sector Consultants in Lansing, as reported by the Detroit Free Press, finds that 47 percent of the public disapprove of Engler's performance and only 44 percent approve. Those figures represented a further decline in the governor's popularity since a June poll by the same organization.

Those poll figures hardly justify the governor's claim that when he pares state programs to the bone, he is just carrying out the mandate of the people that he won in his narrow 1990 victory.

In the Detroit News poll, Engler got his strongest support in suburban Detroit with 44 percent giving him an approval rating to 41 percent outstate and 17 percent in Detroit. However, we suspect the Pointes, which voted him about a third of his 1990 victory margin, still would give him better than a 50 percent approval rating today.

True, Engler usually got his way with the Republican state Senate but that's to be expected from his old colleagues. In the House, however, even some of the GOP minority are restive, as they proved last week in voting against Engler's reorganization of the Department of Natural Resources.

It's not just what Engler has done to state spending that has hurt him with the general public. It's the way he and his aides have cut and slashed at programs affecting people lacking the political clout to fight back.

Nor has his administration sold the public it is offering viable alternatives or even effective emergency programs to people who suddenly are left with reduced welfare payments or the ending of their General Assistance grants.

Engler's long hassle with the supporters of the arts in the Detroit metro area has not helped him either. The cutbacks have created the impression that the administration fails to recognize that cultural activities not only contribute to the quality of life in the entire state but serve as an attraction to business as well.

The effects of the welfare and arts cutbacks have been especially heavy in Detroit. That means the budget slashes support the view that the administration has joined the "Detroit-bashing" corps of legislators from outstate Michigan who have little sympathy for the city's problems.

However, the major reason for the public criticism of the GOP governor probably stems from the belief held by a majority of the people that the state is still slogging along in a recession. The Detroit News poll showed that 64 percent of the Republicans who responded, as well as 90 percent of the Democratic respondents, see the Michigan economy as "bad."

Chief executives, whether presidents or governors, tend to catch much of the blame whenever hard times strike the nation or the state. Engler, however, has three more years to go before he faces reelection while Bush has only a year left to oversee the repair of the economy.

That means the chances are good that the recession will be well behind us by the time Engler goes to the voters again in 1994. The distance of that election also gives him time to reform his hardball image and perhaps even find the word "compassion" in his political vocabulary.

At the moment, however, the Republican governor does not have too many reasons to be thankful as he nears the end of his first year in office, except, perhaps, to realize it could have been worse.

Time for peace on arts front

New cuts in staff and services by the Detroit Institute of Arts illustrate the need for an early peace settlement between the Engler administration and Michigan's cultural leaders.

The new DIA cutbacks, which stemmed directly from the recent state reduction of $6.8 million, or 41 percent of the DIA budget, will require the laying off of 84 staff members, shortening public visiting hours and canceling some major exhibits already scheduled.

Several points can be made about the fund cutback and the message that accompanied it. The budget reductions were bad enough by themselves, but then the governor insisted on telling the DIA where it should spend its remaining money.

He obviously knows little and cares less about culture and the arts but some weeks ago he threatened to remove the entire remaining state subsidy of $16.4 million from the budget if the DIA went ahead with plans for closing on weekdays, thus eliminating children's trips to the museum and other services.

The point is that in response the DIA now has had to lay off 84 staff members, some of whom are no doubt in guard and maintenance jobs, but some of whom are experienced professionals without whom no top-rated museum can function.

Overall, the governor vetoed $129 million from the state budget, including a cut of $1.9 million for the Detroit Symphony Orchestra, which will, however, still get $1.76 million in state aid if the equity package survives. He also trimmed $250,000 intended for the Grand Rapids symphony and close to $3 million from funding for other local symphony programs around the state.

Engler explained that his budget wound up as "a taxpayer's budget of responsibility, compassion and opportunity," but it is difficult to believe much compassion was shown for the poor and needy.

Furthermore, he even approved a $5.2 million increase for the Legislature and $383,000 more funding for the governor's office. Such increases hardly square with the governor's comment about responsibility, but, instead, lend credence to the belief the administration hit hardest at the poor, clustered in the Detroit area, and at the state's arts and cultural programs.

The DIA recently reported that it has been successful in winning a larger proportion of private support. While in 1984 it relied on state funds for 73 percent of its budget, it cut its 1991 reliance on the state to 51 percent.

The other 49 percent came from a variety of sources, including $1.9 million in dues from about 41,000 members. Contributions did rise substantially but not enough to protect the museum from further cutbacks to keep within its budget.

The sad tale of the underfunding of the state's cultural institutions shows again that it's time the governor and the leaders of the arts and cultural institutions begin to wage peace.

Quotation

To the Editor:

As publishers of "The Quotations of Mayor Coleman A. Young," we found your editorial Oct. 31 criticizing the book a little off base. It seems you chose to vilify the book based on what it's not instead of what it is.

Yes, it's true that, as you stated, the book doesn't contain some of Mayor Young's most recent comments about the new Detroit baseball stadium or Gov. John Engler.

It's also true that some sections, particularly the one on the "hostile suburbs," may have been shorter than the The Grosse Pointe News would have liked. But based on this type of negative criteria, the book could also be criticized for not including Mayor Young's astrological sign or some of his favorite recipes.

The fact is "The Quotations of Mayor Coleman A. Young" was never meant to be an in-depth biographical study. It's simply a collection of some of his most memorable and controversial statements on a variety of topics.

The dozens of newspapers and radio stations which have given positive reviews to "Quotations" (and the thousands of people who have purchased it) have had no difficulty accepting the book on that level.

As to the profanity contained in "Quotations," a cursory review of the other books on Detroit's best-seller list shows a liberal use of the same kind of words. However, unlike novels that gratuitously use profanity, the accurate representation of Mayor Young's comments (obscenities and all) is essential for a true picture of how the mayor thinks and speaks.

At the Droog Press, we feel it's unfortunate that you totally missed the spirit and aim of the book. We think it will make people laugh and make them think.

One of the best reviews came from a reporter for ORBIT magazine who wrote, "After reading the entire compilation, you might find yourself having a strange respect for this controversial politician." We think most objective readers will have the same reaction.

Unfair

To the Editor:

I think the War Memorial is unfair about their dances and maybe other things. The reason I think it's unfair is because you have to go through a lot of trouble just to go to a two-to three-hour dance.

For September, October and now November, I've been trying to get an identification card and a ticket. My mom works and doesn't come home until about 4:45 and it takes about 15 minutes to get there.

For me, it was like this

What was it like to interview someone who has AIDS? People have been asking me that ever since I interviewed Peter "Tad" Miller of Grosse Pointe Farms for a story that appeared in last week's paper. Well, to answer the question, it was sad, frightening and inspiring.

Sad, because Miller has so many things he wants to accomplish and so little time in which to do them. He's trying to pack 70 years of dreams into a lifetime that may not last 30, and he's doing it on energy reserves that are far weaker than in his pre-HIV days. (HIV is the virus that causes AIDS.) It's also sad because his HIV infection may have been prevented had he practiced "safer sex" or abstained from sexual intercourse. He knew the dangers of having sex without a latex condom and spermicide, but he ignored them.

What's sadder still is that there are people out there who are also ignoring the dangers. I read recently that some high schoolers are using plastic sandwich bags and rubber bands in place of condoms. They've chosen to have sex before marriage, but they are too embarrassed to buy and use latex condoms and spermicide. They're risking their lives and they don't seem to care.

I wasn't frightened by Miller.

Donna Walker

He was nice, very open and easy to talk to. What frightened me was the thought of my own mortality. Miller is only 28 years old. The same age as my fiancé; four years older than I am.

In the United States, the average life expectancy for men is 71 years and for women it's 78 years, according to the 1989

American Medical Association "Home Medical Encyclopedia." However, there are no guarantees that any of us will live that long.

If a disease doesn't get you, a car accident or some guy with a gun in a post office or a rock dropped on your car from a freeway overpass might. That's scary, especially for people like me, who put off until tomorrow what can be done today.

Tomorrow may never come. Miller is very aware of that fact, and for that reason, he may accomplish more in the time he has left than the procrastinators of this world ever will, even if they live to be 100.

While talking with Miller and his mother, I wondered how people would treat me if I were diagnosed as being HIV positive. Would my friends and co-workers shun me? His family has stood by him, but would mine? Would my fiancé leave me, and if he was HIV positive, how would I treat him?

I think that if you love someone, you stick by that person, and my fiancé said he believes "till death do us part" kicks in as soon as a marriage proposal is made and accepted. Hearing that was comforting, but you never really know what will happen until it happens to you, and that to me is frightening.

I found Miller to be a very inspiring individual. Sure, he's made some mistakes — but who hasn't? He's the first to admit his, and if he had his life to live over, he'd do some things differently, he said. But he's doing his best with what he has left.

"All you can do is your best," he said. "No one can ask you to do anything more than that."

It's a simple message, one that is probably as old as time itself, but one that people need to hear. If you have lemons, make lemonade, but don't kick yourself if you can't make champagne.

Miller is trying to make lemonade, and to me, that's inspiring.

Go blue

David Boring, University Liggett School's business manager, is a graduate of Ohio State University.

Last week, Boring got fired up about the University of Michigan-Ohio State University football extravaganza coming up on the weekend.

Boring commandeered the flagpole at ULS and hoisted Ohio State's flag.

Some ULS students who are die-hard maize and blue fans, lowered the scarlet and gray to half staff and ran up the block M in its place.

And if that wasn't bad enough — Boring's son, Bradley, along with the rest of his fifth grade class — captured Boring and held him hostage while they played a recording of "Hail to the Victors."

And if THAT wasn't bad enough, the maize and blue trounced the scarlet and gray 31-3.

Thanks, Mom

Erik Mathews, a senior at Grosse Pointe South High School, won two tickets to the Fox Theatre to see "The Music of Andrew Lloyd Webber" starring Michael Crawford.

It's HOW he won them that irks his mother, Judy Mathews of Grosse Pointe Farms.

"He was doing some chores for me. I had my radio tuned to my station, WNIC, which was giving away some super-duper tickets: main floor, center, front, including a reception at The Whitney afterward to meet the cast. Erik dialed in at the right time and won two tickets."

He was nice enough to turn over the tickets he already had to Mom and Dad.

Erik and Kelly Gray, also a senior at South, enjoyed the show up front and close. Then they went to the Whitney, shook hands with Crawford and got some autographs.

Judy and Chuck Mathews huffed and puffed their way up the steps to the nosebleed section of the balcony, enjoyed the show, then went home.

"Hey, he was listening to MY radio station," she said, with a smile. "He would never tune in to WNIC."

Thanks, doc

Marilyn Pillsbury of Grosse Pointe City thinks Dr. Christopher Platz of the Animal Hospital of Grosse Pointe Park deserves a pat on the back.

Platz took time to go along with the fantasy and spend some time with the second graders at St. Clare of Montefalco School.

He fixed the noise-maker on a stuffed pot-bellied pig that the class calls its mascot.

He did surgery, in fact. He opened up the pig, removed the broken part, put in a new part, sutured it all up, and returned it to the class.

Chalk one up for the people

Disgusted as Americans may be with the political process, the current program-slashing in Michigan is no time to opt out of the process completely.

Changes under way in the Department of Natural Resources, for instance, seem to strike at the very heart of citizen participation by eliminating the forum for public hearings on environmental issues. But, conversely, they also offer an opportunity for grassroots politicking. That is, call your legislator.

especially since they don't always do the same thing.

It might mean people have written off politics as an insiders' game. And, since Lansing isn't in very good odor with a lot of people, that's more than likely it.

But the citizen may have more influence at the state level than at the national. And Michigan citizens should be plenty mad at the way the governor has pre-empted the political process, acting before talking, and cutting off opportunity even from those who agree with him that the DNR needs some streamlining.

When we talked to Kelly and Bryant two weeks ago about Engler's one-man axing of 19 DNR boards, they were fuming.

"I don't support it at all," said Bryant. "It's a bad idea." He said he's not only angry at the process, but at its effect. "We may not need all 19 boards, but we certainly need air and water (pollution control boards)."

Kelly, on the other hand, thinks the reorganization is a good idea, but the process was ham-handed.

And it was. Citizens already feel left out of the decision-making; Engler's style in making cuts (in welfare and cultural support as well as environment) only makes it worse.

Grassroots politics cuts two ways. Grosse Pointers are justifiably proud of themselves for organizing a curbside recycling program from the ground up. Now many plastics and metals, newsprint, yard waste and more are kept out of the incinerator.

But the incinerator ash is still classified as a hazardous waste.

Do people in Grosse Pointe know that the residents of Lenox Township, a mere 20 miles away, are fighting the good fight to keep a landfill for Grosse Pointe's incinerator ash out of their neighborhood? BEV Industries of Mount Clemens has completed the first steps toward opening an "ash monofill" at 28 Mile Road and Gratiot.

It'll be the second landfill in the township, which four years ago taxed itself voluntarily to raise $500,000 for legal and engineering fees to fight the first one. They say they'll do it again.

Sure, the ash has to be buried somewhere, but this sad story illustrates the disposal problems that plague the country. Even when people try hard to do the right thing, there are repercussions beyond what they can even guess.

People and animals in Punta Arenas, Chile, are going blind because their home is located directly beneath the hole in the world's ozone layer. They don't use much air conditioning — they're too poor and it isn't very hot. They don't use much hair spray or non-stick cooking oil or deodorant.

But because we and other developed nations seem to think our personal fate hangs on using aerosol instead of pump dispensers and keeping our homes and offices and cars so cold in summer that we have to wear sweaters — somebody in Chile is losing his sight.

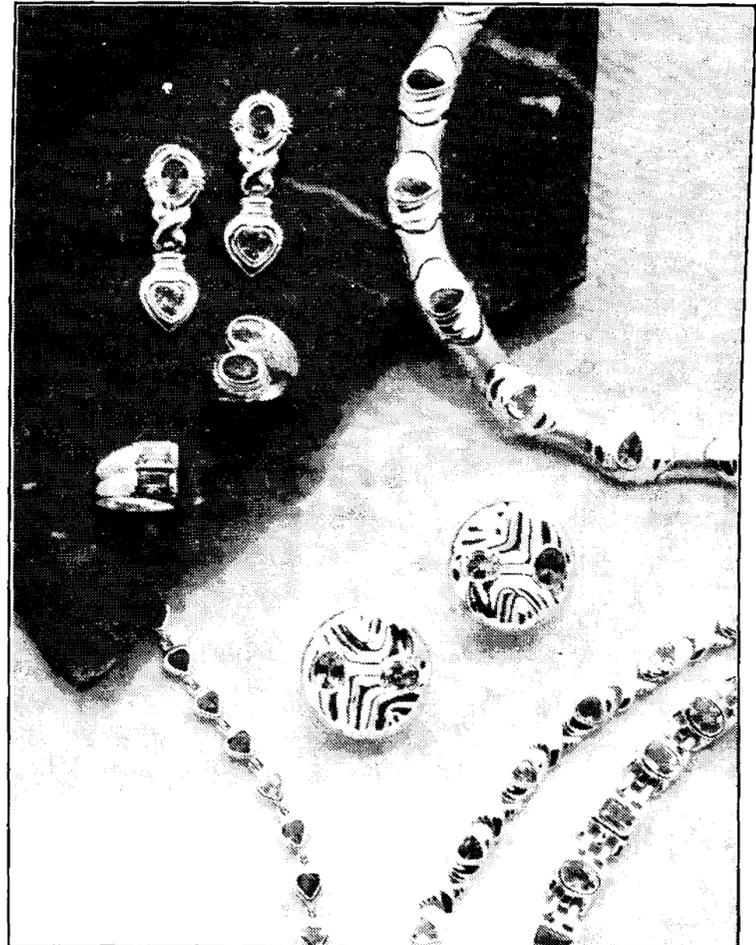

Think about it.

Speaking of how attitudes toward bankruptcy have changed over recent decades (as we were discussing only two short weeks ago), here's a bit from an 1889 newspaper:

Last week, Gov. Engler rescinded one of his controversial executive orders (changing the way pollution cleanups are handled) after committees in the Senate and House introduced resolutions calling it unconstitutional. The resolutions never even reached full legislative discussion; they didn't need to — the governor apparently saw which way the wind was blowing.

That legislative rebellion probably arose because lawmakers resented Engler's stepping on their prerogatives, but calls from constituents didn't hurt. And the effect is that the governor gave up on one effort to run the DNR show by himself.

Grosse Pointe's representatives say they don't hear all that often from their constituents.

Does that mean the folks agree with everything Bill Bryant and John Kelly do? That would be pretty amazing.

Load up with Vista — move out with Talon

WEST BRANCH, Mich. — The late-afternoon sun creates long, thin birch shadows across northbound I-75. They resemble bars. Jail bars. That's where I could wind up if I act on my fantasy of the moment: stealing the silvery blue Plymouth Colt Vista AWD wagon I am evaluating.

How do I look in stripes. I wonder, peering into the rear-view mirror.

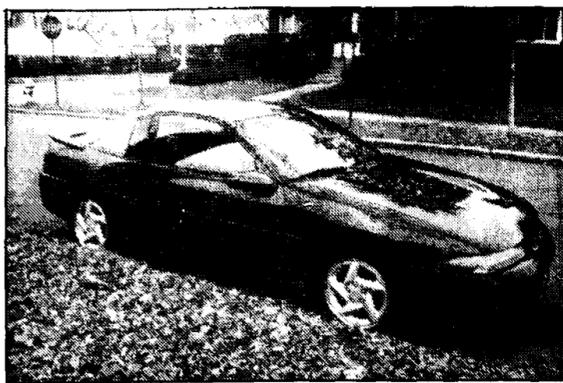

This is a perfect vehicle. It's fun to drive, it's economical, it's roomy, it's versatile, it's very comfortable and it's not so stylish that your neighbors will be too envious to talk to you.

The five-passenger Colt Vista, "all new for '92," was designed by Chrysler — and built by Mitsubishi — for folks who prefer a mini-minivan. The new silhouette is a great improvement on the former Vista wagon that looked just plain awkward, as if it couldn't make up its mind whether it wanted to be a tiny truck or a station wagon.

The '92 version resembles the Japanese concept vehicles seen in photos coming out of the Tokyo Auto Show or in drawings in trade publications. The kind of odd-looking cartoon vehicles you figure could never come to production: weird, futuristic, out of balance — too tall, not long enough.

Surprise! They were intending to build some of them all along, and here it is!

The Colt Vista wagon is great for those multi-stop errand days when in a few hours you spend all the money it took you weeks to earn. It's here you appreciate the vehicle's ease of handling, the excellent visibility through large glass areas and the fact that you can slide in and out of the seat without climbing up, as in a truck, or dropping down, as in a sport coupe and many sedans. The floor is flat. There's plenty of leg room up front; not so much for rear-seat passengers. The rear seat can be removed to provide 79 cubic feet of cargo space. The split seat backs fold forward, to enlarge the behind-seat cargo area. There's a van-style sliding second door on the passenger side, and only a front door on the driver's side, a feature I found irritating, but in the case of vans, apparently a solid side reinforces the vehicle and keeps it from flexing. It also means the driver has to load parcels of any size on the opposite side of the vehicle.

Eagle Talon looks like a muscle car and that is exactly what it is.

The Plymouth Colt Vista has a sliding rear door on passenger side, none on driver's side.

A 1.8-liter fuel-injected 16-valve four is the standard engine in both the front-drive and all-wheel-drive Vista models. Standard transmission is a five-speed manual with overdrive.

There is an optional 2.4-liter single-overhead-cam four with five-speed manual. A four-speed automatic is available with either engine.

The 1.8-liter engine is rated at 113 hp at 6,000 rpm reaching maximum torque at 4,500 rpm. The optional 2.4-liter four develops 116 hp at 5,000 rpm, and hits peak torque at only 3,500 rpm.

The AWD Vista has on-demand all-wheel-drive, which adds some 250 pounds to its curb weight.

The northern-Michigan-bound Vista cruised comfortably in fifth gear at highway speeds. The engine, running at about 3,000 rpm, was audible but never seeming to be working very hard. Mileage was between 26 mpg and 30 mpg.

The manual transaxle shifted easily. Acceleration was good. The wagon has no trouble keeping up with traffic. We decided not to find out if it would be able to outrun a state trooper, and returned it on schedule to Chrysler. Price tag on the AWD Vista with the 2.4-liter engine is $13,469 — an affordable option to prison. Its EPA numbers are 19 mpg city/24 mpg highway.

Eagle Talon

"You'll love the Talon," a colleague said. "It reminds me of a muscle car."

Driving north out Woodward Avenue one Saturday afternoon, a dark-blue Cadillac sedan pulled up alongside the red pocket rocket. A young man in the passenger seat motioned me to put down my window.

"We love your car," he called out, undoubtedly wondering why someone of his mother's generation was at the wheel of the all-wheel-drive, 16-valve, turbocharged sports coupe. (There were several moments when I wondered why, too. But then, it also was curious that two young guys were driving a middle-aged type's luxury sedan.)

"It's OK," I called back. "But it surges a lot."

"Probably the turbo," he responded as the Caddy pulled away in traffic.

Then, of course, it ceased surging.

They say time and tide wait for no one. Please add to that the turbo Eagle Talon. With automatic transmission, one doesn't realize how quickly it's passing through its gears en route to 80 mph. The Talon hated Mack Avenue where 25 mph is the posted limit and the Grosse Pointe Woods police are intent on enforcing it.

Bearing down onto I-75 from Big Beaver one evening, it gave the impression of playing one of those video games in which you're driving and the highway is disappearing beneath you at an eerie speed.

The Eagle Talon also goes to market as the Plymouth Laser and the Mitsubishi Eclipse. These nameplates all are built at the Chrysler-Mitsubishi Diamond-Star operation in Normal, Ill.

The base Talon is tamer than the TSi turbocharged version. Its standard 2.0 liter, 16-valve engine develops a respectable 135 hp. Respectable, but that contrasts with a nose-thumping 203 hp for the turbo 2.0-liter (both front-drive and all-wheel-drive models).

EPA fuel economy numbers for the turbo with automatic transmission and all-wheel drive are 18 city/21 highway.

A major complaint for this driver is the blind spot created by the B-pillar, the shoulder belt and the seat back. Together, they make it impossible to look over the left shoulder and see anything. The driver is totally reliant on the lefthand sideview mirror. Visibility over the right shoulder is fine.

The ignition area is well-lighted, a great help in the dark. Thanks, Chrysler. The instrument panel looks neat at night, although it has an odd droop to its right-hand end, looking like someone left the plastic in the oven too long and it began to melt.

The Talon has wonderful jack-o-lantern headlights that add to its handsome exterior and are a better design than the pop-up ones found on many wedge-shaped coupes. Chrysler says Talon's new look for '92 includes headlamps, new front fenders, new hood and tail-lamps, a rear spoiler, new front and rear fascia treatment and aluminum wheels.

The Talon TSi AWD features all-wheel drive that operates automatically when the axles begin to slip. The system distributes a higher portion of power to the axle with the most traction, allowing the slipping wheels to regain traction. The talon is priced at $17,390.

Maybe if those guys trade in that Cadillac...

Teen drinking

To the Editor:
I am writing to express my and other teenagers' opinion on the local news of Grosse Pointe students drinking. I hope that, if shared with others, it will point out a problem that is condemning the youth of Grosse Pointe.
Ninety-five percent of Grosse Pointe South seniors have tried drinking once; 81 percent have had a drink in the last 30 days; 60 percent have had five or more drinks in a row in the last two weeks, according to a University of Michigan research study. The findings on the alcohol uses common to Grosse Pointe students were stunning.
Unfortunately, it's true. Many parents and school officials try to stop the alcoholic flow among teenagers, but, in my opinion, it doesn't matter what they do or say, teenagers are still going to drink.

The simple fact is that teenagers in Grosse Pointe are drinking excessively. According to Lloyd Johnston's student drinking research project, Grosse Pointe seniors are drinking 28 percent more than the national average of 57 percent.
Many teachers and parents know and feel that it is wrong, and are trying to do something about it. For example, when they took to the thought of "what I do, my child will do," they established "Spring Break in Grosse Pointe" and "Practice What You Preach."
The "Spring Break in Grosse Pointe" said that for a certain weekend over spring break, parents won't drink, in hopes that the children will see that they can still have a good time.

With "Practice What You Preach," more than 700 adults attended a seminar that basically said that, again, if you don't regularly drink, then your child won't either. Both are nice ideas, but, as you can see, neither of them did much.
Now, it is a question of what to do. The Grosse Pointe South school team has accepted the fact that kids are drinking, and so established Safe Rides. Safe Rides basically guarantees a person who is either intoxicated or a person who is left to ride with a drunk friend, a safe ride home.
Throughout the years, parents have also been trying to cope with the fact that kids are drinking, and are concerned with our safety. As a result, many times at the beginning of the school year parents and their students sign pre-arranged contracts stating that if he or she were to get drunk at a party, they can always call home for a ride, no questions asked. This, in the opinion of many teenagers, is a good alternative to a bad situation.
Unfortunately, neither of the two are working very well. According to Susan Pearce (South counselor), one in three seniors have driven after drinking and one in six have driven after consuming five drinks in a row. It is a stunning fact that not much can be done about.

In conclusion, there isn't anything that parents and teachers can do about student drinking. It is proven to be a problem that will remain as an "unsolved mystery" into the future.

collectively, to focus on senior citizens and to help provide the care needed to make life better and brighter.
Eldercare is not a household word, but I maintain, as more people age and find themselves needing help, this is a term that will become more popular. This is especially true as, in the not-too-distant future, the number of persons age 85 plus, is expected to triple.
It is in sharing ideas, concerns and information that we hope to meet the challenge. All citizens are encouraged to get on the bandwagon and become involved in eldercare no matter what your age or vocation.

Involvement can start with something as simple as identifying an older relative, friend or neighbor, who routinely needs just a little of your time. That personal phone call or delivery of a meal or providing a ride to the supermarket or doctor's office are ways to show that you care.
Or you can contact your nearest Area Agency on Aging for ideas — an agency which coordinates services for the elderly in your community.
Getting involved — we can make a difference.

Poignant reminder

I had an unexpected and enforced detour from my routine recently. I contracted a nasty virus that refused to loosen its grip and so it was determined that more aggressive therapy was indicated, i.e., a few days in the hospital. Actually, my stay was uneventful for the most part and for that I am grateful. Because I wasn't feeling all that terrible, I was able to be an observer rather than a helpless victim at the mercy of others.
What impressed me most about my brief sojourn was the quality of care I received at Bon Secours. Staff members from the emergency room, through nurses, therapists, lab technicians, residents, interns and my own doctors, all without exception, were caring and thorough. Several times a day clergy and volunteers would pop their heads in the door to inquire as to my needs or desires.
There is even room service available to meet the individual needs of patients, from someone to play cards with or set up a VCR to someone to just listen to your concerns — a nice touch. Not once did I feel intruded upon by these caring people. Whoever is responsible for the training of these dedicated individuals ought to be commended for a job well done.
As so often happens with the coincidences of life, I turned to the local cable channel when I was looking for a way to unwind after my arrival home. The interview I stumbled upon was with Henry De Vries, CEO of Bon Secours, and I was naturally interested to hear about what had been going on and the plans for the future of the hospital. We are so fortunate in this community to have three fine hospitals within a stone's throw of our homes, each offering a wide variety of services and quality care.
There are many, many reasons why we Grosse Pointers feel catered to and spoiled, but let's not forget that a great deal of commitment, education and volunteer hours are expended on our behalf to sustain and enrich the privileges we have here. My brief stay in the hospital was a poignant reminder of the powerful impact these concerned people can have on the lives of many of us and I am grateful to each of them.

The leaders in Emergency medicine. We'll stand for

If ads can promote alcohol, there are ways to 'sell' sobriety

Shortly after completing a course in substance abuse education, a counselor in Dearborn met with a student who told her he was worried about STD.

She drew a blank. She had learned about LSD... PCP... was STD some new hallucinogen?

When asked, the boy replied, "No, I mean STD — sexually transmitted disease." Being a counselor or a parent or a child seems to get more complicated and more frightening every day.

Already feeling overwhelmed and unsure of what to do, each day's headlines raise our level of anxiety: substance abuse, child abuse, random violence, and now a renewed awareness of the dangers of sexual experimentation, because of Magic Johnson's announcement that he is HIV positive. Is there anything we can do, other than worry or pray?

I believe there is. For although we receive new information about each of these crises in discrete "sound bites" or stories, for adolescents these dangers are closely related — both in terms of what encourages and what discourages their spread. That means that we don't have to invent separate solutions for each of these difficult problems — the same interventions are effective for dealing with a variety of issues.

For example, statistics show a high correlation between the age at which young people begin to drink and the age at which they become sexually active. Those "under the influence" are also much more likely to have unplanned, unwanted and unprotected sex.

In fact, many young people will tell you that getting drunk is interpreted (by young males in particular) as being an unspoken desire to have sex while maintaining "deniability" the next day. And obviously, this type of sexual behavior increases vulnerability to pregnancy and sexually transmitted diseases.

What encourages both adolescent substance abuse and sexual experimentation is a desire to know and experience everything, to be accepted and liked, to be free and feel good. Advertisers know this. That's why they link beer with bikinis, parties, lots of friends and lots of laughter.

What discourages both behaviors is the reluctance to hurt or be hurt, to be disappointed or thought to be stupid, to lose control of oneself or one's life. Advertisers also know this. That's why you'll never see Spuds McKenzie alone, vomiting, or HIV positive.

I'm only being slightly facetious. I think we have a lot to learn from advertisers. I think that, as well-meaning adults, we have too often focused on negatives and scare tactics to persuade young people not to engage in dangerous behaviors. We do that because those things work on us.

But young people don't always think like we do (as anyone who has ever lived with a teenager can attest). They are capable of believing simultaneously that this moment is the only thing that matters, and that this moment will never end. In this context, saying, "But I thought you wanted to get good grades and go to college!" is meaningless.

Well, don't they want to get good grades and go to college? Of course they do. And they want to please you and get away from you, and be adults and be absolutely irresponsible, and be safe and take as many risks as possible.

So how do we accept those realities and work with them, instead of working against them? We need to devise ways to make sobriety and sexual abstinence as attractive as drunkenness and promiscuity.

Impossible, you say? Again, let's take our cue from advertisers. They have managed to make drinking and smoking cigarettes glamorous and sexy, despite more than 20 years of warnings about their links to cancer, accidents and addiction. When public pressure becomes too great, they launch campaigns urging people to know "when to say when" (thus appealing to their sense of responsibility) and encouraging designated drivers (appealing to young people's loyalty to friends).

Sober thoughts

Interestingly, though, neither of those campaigns discourages drunkenness. By remaining consciously vague about just how much is too much (when you get sick? fall down?) and by implying that as long as you don't drive you are drinking responsibly, these companies can continue to expand the number of occasions and the amounts you are encouraged to drink and still claim to be responsible.

I have even seen ads where advertisers take credit for being environmentalists because their beer cans are recyclable. Obviously, now the more you drink the more you are helping preserve the environment!

Please don't miss my point. I'm not saying that the alcohol beverage industry is the villain. I'm saying that they are wonderfully creative when it comes to selling products whose negative effects are well known, and we need to learn from them if we wish to counteract them. Let me give you a couple of examples.

Recent research has shown that elementary school-aged children who watch large numbers of sports programs on the weekend are much more likely to have positive attitudes about beer and much more likely to say they think they will drink when they get older than are those children who watch less sports programming.

Does that mean that we shouldn't allow our children to watch TV sports? Of course not. In fact, forbidding it would probably make it more attractive, and that's the kind of "negative selling" I think we've done too much of in the past.

Children — and especially adolescents — have well-honed radar when it comes to hypocreason to have hope for the future. Let's use that idealism and those enthusiasms in a positive way. There are many youth groups that encourage positive activity and support sobriety and sexual restraint. Let's support them.

Grosse Pointe schools recently revised their athletic code to increasingly emphasize staying healthy by not using any mind-altering chemical. All parents must sign a card agreeing to abide by that code before their student can participate in athletics. Use that as an opportunity to state your support of that standard and your respect and belief in your child's ability to live by that code.

The Grosse Pointe War Memorial is sponsoring a new initiative which will allow high school juniors and seniors to plan activities for themselves and the rest of the community. It is an opportunity for young people to take risks, be part of a group, feel useful and competent, and have fun without drinking or using other drugs.

Unlike similar initiatives in the past, I think it has a chance to be successful because it will be student organized and centered — not an adult's idea of what is fun. It's an example of selling sobriety and other healthy behaviors in the only package that I think will work: by making it "cool."

Susan Pearce is the student assistance program coordinator for the Grosse Pointe schools.

Morton Salt awarded bid

When it snows it pours — at least in Grosse Pointe Park this winter.

The city council has awarded Morton Salt this year's contract to provide road salt. Morton was the low bidder at $27.30 a ton.

The Park purchased 909 tons of salt last winter. If the city purchases that much salt again this year, the cost would be $24,815.70.

James Ellison, public services director, said it would be fine with him if no salt is required this year. He said a small order of salt is kept on hand, and the salt is then ordered as demand dictates.

When you need emergency care, come to Bon Secours Hospital. Every one of our emergency physicians is board-certified and specially trained in emergency medicine. Each has had advanced cardiac life-support training as well. And all of our emergency room nurses have long-term experience in the emergency department.

To make your emergency care even better, we've expanded our Emergency Department: four new general treatment rooms, a mini-laboratory and radiology room right on site, and additional orthopedics and gynecology specialty rooms. We have pediatricians and obstetricians on-staff 24 hours a day, and we've doubled the size of the triage area so we can treat you faster. Plus we're adding more state-of-the-art equipment to the department, including new cardiac telemetry units which will enable us to monitor up to 20 critical patients even while they're being transported to different areas of the hospital for necessary testing.

All of these improvements, combined with the most qualified emergency staff in Michigan, mean outstanding care for you and your family. And that's our ultimate goal. In fact, we won't stand for anything less.

Arthur R. Jennings

A mass was held for Arthur R. Jennings, 72, of Grosse Pointe Woods at the A.H. Peters Funeral Home in Grosse Pointe Woods on Thursday, Nov. 21. He died of heart failure on Nov. 18, 1991, in Grosse Pointe Woods.

Mr. Jennings retired as vice president of administration at ANR Pipeline Co. in 1981 after 20 years of service.

He received his bachelor's degree from Wayne State University and began his career in 1942, when he joined the U.S. War Department as chief of the classification and wage division. In 1948, he joined Ethyl Corp. as director of personnel.

The eyes have it; here's how to make sure they keep it

Our eyes are the windows to our world. Through them we see all things bright and beautiful — the face of loved ones, nature's grandeur, works of art in all their forms and, yes, the diversion of television. Our eyes are more precious than jewels, and, just as we would fear the loss of fine jewels, so do we worry that the thief of time could steal our precious sense of sight.

As we grow older, our bodies undergo changes that sometimes limit normal activities. The visual system is no exception; many disorders and diseases of the eye are associated with the process of aging. On the plus side, new medical, surgical and optical techniques make it possible for physicians to help people to continue to enjoy good vision as they grow older.

Ophthalmologists frequently repair or even replace parts of the eye, allowing older people to continue their normal activities. Some fail to seek medical attention because they think diminishing eyesight cannot be corrected. That's unfortunate because many eye problems can be treated if detected early.

This is particularly true of glaucoma, an eye condition that must be diagnosed early if treatment is to be successful. It involves a simple and painless examination. The ophthalmologist measures the eye pressure, examines the optic nerve, and may perform additional testing if the suspicion of glaucoma is high.

If glaucoma is diagnosed, loss of sight can be slowed or prevented with medical, surgical or laser therapy. Sometimes the pressure can be lowered with eye drops or pills.

Another problem to watch out for is cataracts. This common disorder develops when the lens in the eye becomes cloudy. Some types develop slowly while others progress rapidly.

In the United States, half the population over the age of 40 has some degree of visual impairment because of cataracts. And by the age of 60, some 75 percent of Americans have cataracts, whether mild or severe. Currently, the only effective treatment for cataracts is surgery, but fewer than 15 percent of cataract sufferers are sufficiently impaired to require an operation.

In many instances, cataracts progress rapidly, and early surgery may be recommended. In most cases, however, cataracts develop very slowly, and surgery may well be postponed or never become necessary.

The first symptom of most cataracts is a decrease in visual acuity. Everything becomes dimmer, as though your glasses were in need of cleaning. Paradoxically, your vision may be worse in very bright light, because light causes the pupil to contract. Since most cataracts form in the center of the lens, contraction of your pupil will restrict your vision to the portion of the lens most severely affected by the cataract.

If you have such symptoms, consult your ophthalmologist. If your physician diagnoses cataracts, don't worry unduly; they are an ubiquitous and normal part of aging. Changing your glasses may help temporarily, and in some patients dilating drops are beneficial.

If your cataracts progress to the point that you are forced to give up something that is important to you, you may want to consider surgery. Otherwise, if you can still take part in your favorite activities, it is possible to delay surgery indefinitely. Many people do.

There are a few tricks that make it easier to live with cata-tracts. Either too much light, or too little, may cause vision problems if you have cataracts. When you are indoors, make sure you have plenty of light. When you go out into the sunshine, wear sunglasses with yellow-tinted lenses. Incandescent light is generally better than fluorescent light if you have vision problems. When you watch television, don't have a light in front you; it will only produce a distracting glare.

Another vision problem is a detached retina. Retina detachment affects one out of every 10,000 people annually in the United States. It's a serious disorder they may strike at any age, although it tends to occur more often in middle-aged or older individuals. It is most likely to develop in people who are nearsighted or in those whose relatives have had a history of retinal detachments. Middle-aged and older persons may see black spots, called "floaters," and flashes of light in their field of vision. In most cases, these symptoms do not portend serious problems, but sometimes they may indicate substantial shrinkage of the vitreous humor, causing tears in the eyes.

In such cases, a comprehensive eye examination by an ophthalmologist is necessary to check the inside of the eyes for tears. This should be done as soon as symptoms develop because fresh retinal tears may be treatable without surgery before they develop into a more severe retina detachment.

The watchword, then, in preserving your precious gift of sight is to follow through on any symptom that something may be wrong by visiting your ophthalmologist, both for reassurance and prevention.

Osteoporosis volunteers needed

An estimated 25 million Americans — 80 percent of them women — suffer from osteoporosis, a condition characterized by the loss of bone mass, fragile bones and an increased risk of fractures, particularly of the hip, wrist and spine.

Volunteers are needed to participate in a two-year study to determine the effectiveness of a new drug which may reduce the rate of bone loss and increase bone strength in some patients with osteoporosis.

Doctors are looking for women who are postmenopausal by at least five years, between 60 and 85 years old and who are in good general health but have low bone density (osteoporosis).

All study-related care, including tests, will be provided free. For more information, call Pat Ortega at 876-7135.

United Way honoree

Employees and students of the Grosse Pointe Public School System contributed $25,480 to the 1991 United Way Torch Drive, an increase of 30 percent over last year's contributions.

United Way named Fran Bergamo, secretary in the superintendent's office, "Outstanding Coordinator," honoring her for special efforts made in connection toward the 1991 Pacesetter campaign.

Bergamo

The school system had agreed to serve as a Pacesetter this year, holding an intense 10-day drive in order to set a standard for contributions by other school systems.

Parcells Middle School students made the largest contribution to the campaign, raising $1,778 with a dance sponsored by the student council. Students at Ferry and Trombly Elementary Schools raised money by using nickels to vote on whether principal Dave King and teacher Eric Frakes should save or shave their newly acquired beards. King's beard was saved; Frakes' beard was shaved.

Santa Shop at South

The sophomore class at Grosse Pointe South High School will hold its annual Santa Shop on Thursday and Friday Dec. 4 and 5, in Cleminson Hall.

Baked goods, homemade candy, crafts, jewelry and stocking stuffers will be on sale along with South seat cushions for sports events and decals for car windows.

Hours are 8 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. on Dec. 4 and 8 to 3:30 p.m. on Dec. 5.

Back to France

The 1991-92 Grosse Pointe French Back-to-Back class prepares for its foreign exchange this spring with the students of Les Chesney, France. Veterans of previous year's classes, bilingual counselor Darcey Mellen-Sullivan, left, and teacher Nancy Schwarz, will again accompany the students to France. Jack McMahon, right, Richard Elementary School principal, will be the host for the French students. Eight Grosse Pointe elementary schools are participating.

Students excel on Advanced Placement

Thirty students at Grosse Pointe South High School have been recognized by the College Board for exceptional achievement on the college-level Advanced Placement examinations conducted in May.

Only about 10 percent of the 359,000 students who took AP examinations last spring qualified for formal recognition.

The College Board recognizes three levels of achievement — the AP Scholar with Distinction, the AP Scholar with Honor and the AP Scholar.

At South, seven students qualified for the AP Scholar with Distinction award by earning grades of 3.0 or above on five or more AP exams with an average exam grade of at least 3.5. They are Sara Bayko, Christopher Cassell, Yasemin Kasim, Jennifer Khalifah, Spitzley, Joyce Stuckey and Emily Votruba.

Seventeen students qualified for the AP Scholar with Honor award by earning grades of 3.0 or above on four or more AP examinations, with an average exam grade of at least 3.25. They are Matthew Hart, Scott Partridge, Donald Pata, Jacqueline Reid, Christopher Schilling, Benjamin Temkow and Colton Weatherston. In addition, Daniel Morath of Grosse Pointe, a student at De La Salle Collegiate, was honored in this category.

Sixteen students qualified for the AP Scholar Award by completing three or more AP examinations with grades of 3.0 or higher. They are Sara Bayko, Christopher Cassell, Yasemin Kasim, Jennifer Khalifah, Christopher Marston, Kevin McCracken, Ashley Moran, John Morreale, Joel Peterson, Emily Prokop, Robert Reynolds, Jennifer Schultz, Mary Srebernak, Edwin Stedem, Suzanne Trojanowski and Christine Zani.

AP examinations, which students take in May after completing college-level courses, are graded on a five-point scale with five being the highest. Most of the nation's colleges and universities award credit and placement for grades of 3.0 or higher, and more than 1,200 institutions award a year of credit to students with a sufficient number of qualifying grades. There are 29 AP examinations in 16 disciplines, each with multiple-choice and essay and problem-solving questions.

The College Board is a national, nonprofit membership association of more than 2,800 schools and agencies in higher and secondary education committed to promoting educational opportunity and improving academic standards. The board sponsors programs in guidance, assessment, admissions, placement, financial aid, and credit by examination to assist in the school-to-college transition of some 4 million students each year.

North math students qualify

Five Grosse Pointe North High School students have qualified for the second part of the 35th annual Michigan Mathematics Prize Competition sponsored by the Michigan Section of the Mathematical Association of America.

They are Jeremy Cieslak, William Duell, Hardy Kim, Eric Oman and Daniel Weber.

Students qualified by placing among the top 923 out of 18,055 participants in an examination given at 452 schools across the state in October. The qualifiers will compete by taking another exam in December.

The 100 students with the highest combined scores will be invited to a banquet at Lawrence Technological University in February and the top 50 will receive college scholarships ranging from $350 to more than $2,000.

Weavers

Nancy Swartz' second grade class at Richard Elementary School is weaving belts with authentic looms used by Native Americans. The children will use the belts, along with other projects, for a presentation depicting Native American life.

Teacher to host workshop

Wisam Kazaleh Sirdenis of Grosse Pointe Park, a coordinator in the department of multilingual education in the Oak Park School District, will conduct a workshop titled, "Second Languages Infused With Cross-Cultural Enrichment." The workshop will be held at the 39th annual Northeast Conference on the Teaching of Foreign Languages, scheduled for April 2-5 in New York City. The conference, whose theme is "Languages for a Multicultural World in Transition," will consist of more than 100 workshops and presentations. It will focus on ways in which educators might respond to the recent global changes which have made international literacy a more immediately pressing need.

Bookmarks

South to hold eighth alumni day, Dec. 13

The eighth annual Alumni Day, sponsored jointly by Grosse Pointe South High School and the South Mothers' Club, will be held Thursday, Dec. 19, in South's gymnasium.

Alumni Day has been designed by South's counseling and guidance department to assist South students in making the transition from high school to college as smooth as possible.

Recent South high graduates, in cooperation with the admissions officials of their respective colleges, will return to South to share their new college experiences with present juniors and seniors.

A college fair format, similar to College Night, will be used. Each college represented will be assigned a table in the gymnasium. Freshmen and sophomores will sit behind the tables and field questions about college life on that school's campus.

Seniors will be excused from classes on a voluntary basis from 12:35 to 1:15 p.m. Juniors will be excused from classes on a voluntary basis from 1:25 to 2:10 p.m.

The students may choose the three or four colleges in which they are most interested and spend their time visiting the representatives from those schools in the gymnasium. Students who elect to participate in the Alumni Day program must stay in the gymnasium for the full time allotted.

"Because this program supplements the official college information already available to South students through College Night and visits with college representatives, we expect high student interest," said Russell P. Luttinen, assistant principal at South.

To assist students with the program, Teresa Lloyd, South's career counselor, has prepared a list of questions students should be thinking about before leaving home for college.

Lloyd and the Mothers' Club have planned a luncheon for the visitors, South faculty members and other guests from 11 a.m. to noon in Cleminson Hall. At the informal luncheon, students can discuss their recent college experiences with South faculty members to give them feedback about their preparation for college.

South alumni who can help with the program should call 886-2799.

ULS sponsors food drive

The junior class at University Liggett School will sponsor a holiday food basket drive for Casa Maria, a service organization which assists needy young people and their families who live in the Corktown community near Tiger Stadium.

ULS' goal is to collect at least 1,000 cans or boxes of food to fill 600 holiday food baskets. Appropriate foods are canned soup, vegetables, fruit, cranberry sauce, sweet potatoes or boxed potatoes, rice, stuffing, pudding and gelatin dessert.

Food can be dropped off in the arts wing at the ULS upper school, 1045 Cook Road. For more information on assisting Casa Maria, call Lauree Emery at 884-4444.

Ebright honored

Robin Ebright, a senior at Grosse Pointe South High School, was one of 21 Michigan students honored for excellence in written English by the National Council of Teachers of English. She is one of only 709 students nationwide so honored.

The students earned recognition through the 1991 Achievement Awards in Writing, an annual event in which students are judged on samples of their best prose or verse and on impromptu essays written under supervision.

Her name will be published in a booklet, which is sent to directors of admissions at 3,000 two- and four-year colleges, and to state supervisors of English and NCTE leaders.

Molly is frightened and alone. Fortunately, help is just inches away.

Molly needs your help. She was brought to us by someone who found her shivering in an alley between two garbage cans. Perhaps, like many stray animals, Molly was abandoned by her owner. But chances are she never had one.

Sadly, Molly's story is not unique. The Michigan Humane Society is filled with cage upon cage of animals who have been abandoned, abused, or are simply unwanted.

But with your help, these otherwise tragic stories can have happy endings. Because every time you make a donation, you're making a difference in the life of at least one animal.

You could be feeding a litter of kittens for a month. You could be sending out the rescue vehicle that saves three dogs from freezing to death. Or you could be helping prosecute a case of animal cruelty. Your donation can also help buy these homeless animals what they need most: The chance of adoption.

So in this season of giving, please give Molly and others like her that chance. The Michigan Humane Society is filled with so many animals in such desperate need of help.

But when you send in your donation, help is on its way.

Laid-off exec turns unkind cut into slice of the action

By Tyler M. Steben
Special Writer

Many Grosse Pointers are among those who have lost their jobs because of the downturn in the economy. And since most companies aren't hiring during these tough times, it is difficult for executives who lose their jobs to find a comparable position.

But some dispossessed employees are taking matters into their own hands, giving up their plush offices for something a little closer to home: They are starting their own companies in their residences.

One such executive is Sheila Osann. A resident of the Park, she felt she had little choice but to start her own business about a year and a half ago. Osann had been community relations manager for a large solid waste disposal company until her job was eliminated because of organizational restructuring.

While looking for another full-time corporate position, Osann enjoyed handling a few minor projects for various small organizations. After a good deal of fruitless job hunting, the occupational counselor she was consulting suggested she consider starting her own business.

Today, Osann Creative Services has undertaken recycling education programs for the Woods and Shores, as well as a community relations program for Pontiac General Hospital.

Osann said the transition from the corporate world to running her own company has had its high and low points.

"The commute is great," she said. "I walk from breakfast into my study — about 20 feet. I also really enjoy deciding how I'll spend my day. I'm the one who pulls the strings."

"A friend, who started his own business last summer, called me this past week. He said he figured out he was down to his last $200 in the world. A client who owed him a sizable amount of money was late in paying. When you own your own business, things often fluctuate like that."

Being a woman who owns and runs a business has also presented some challenges.

"Some people don't take you seriously," she said. "They'll find out you spend your days at home and just assume you don't do any work."

"Just the other night my son had the evening off from his job, and I asked, 'So, who's fixing dinner tonight?' He suggested I fix supper since I'd be home — even though I am usually still working in my office until after my husband gets home from work. In his mind, if mom is home, she could do the cooking."

Osann also said that many women don't have sufficient credit to obtain a loan to finance starting a new business, because often the family assets are not in the woman's name.

Osann finds out about possible clients through the many professional and volunteer groups to which she belongs. Her activities also provide her with a network of colleagues she can consult — and who also consult her — whenever questions about running a business arise.

"There's an even exchange

Sheila Osann began her own business at home after her managerial position was eliminated when the company she worked for underwent a restructuring.

that occurs between many of the small businesses," Osann said. "Individually, it may be hard to accomplish something, but together we can."

Frequently she will join forces with another small business to complete a project.

Even with the inevitable ups and downs, Osann thinks the time is right for experienced people to venture into their own businesses.

"The economic situation right now is good for start-ups," she said. "The corporations that cut jobs end up looking outside their organization to people like me for services to be performed."

"The professional who has experience can offer a quality product and individualized attention at a price well below that of large corporations which offer the same services, because the overhead is much lower."

The following year, a few days before Christmas, a police officer again came to the door and gave Koski's mother a plain brown box. By that time, Koski had caught on.

"I knew there were presents inside for us and that we wouldn't see them until Christmas," Koski said.

The boxes were from the Old Newsboys' Goodfellows, an organization that was, at the time, made up of men who worked or had worked in the newspaper industry. Since then, the organization has opened its membership to women and people from all walks of life, but the group's mission has remained the same for 78 years: "to ensure that no child goes without a Christmas."

"I'll always be grateful to the Old Newsboys," Koski said, "because if it wasn't for them, we wouldn't have had a Christmas the two years that we received their packages."

Despite the family's financial hardship, Koski said his mother made sure that he and his siblings received a good, Catholic education. He attended St. Jude Elementary School and got his first job when he was 10.

"Paperboys were supposed to be 12, but I somehow managed to get a paper route when I was 10," Koski said. "I delivered the Detroit Times."

He went on to deliver The Detroit News and the Detroit Free Press, but gave up his routes to work at Bidigare's Hardware Store on Detroit's east side while attending Notre Dame High School. He worked at Bidigare's for about five years, including his first two years of college.

From the time he was little, Koski had wanted to be an engineer because he loved math and science. However, during his first semester at Lawrence Institute of Technology (now Lawrence Technological University), he realized he had an aptitude for accounting and changed his major. In 1967, he graduated with a bachelor's degree in accounting.

That year, he married his first wife, Karen. They divorced six years ago and have two children, Matthew, who is a graduate of Michigan State University and works for Coopers & Lybrand, and Kristin, who is a junior at MSU studying to be a teacher.

After receiving his bachelor's degree, Koski went to work as an accountant for Arthur Young & Co. in Detroit, and entered the MBA program at Wayne State University. He dropped out of the program to study for the Certified Public Accountant test, because he figured being a CPA would take him further than a master's degree. He passed the test.

In 1972, he joined First of Michigan Corp. in Detroit as an accountant.

"During my later years at Arthur Young and here, at First of Michigan, I would see police officers selling newspapers for the Old Newsboys. I thought of what they did for me, and I decided to contribute to them, and that I would give more as I moved up (the career ladder)," he said.

An acquaintance encouraged him to apply for membership in the Old Newsboys, and he became a member in 1978. In 1985, he was president of the organization and he is currently a member of the executive board, chairman of the purchasing committee and co-chairman of the special allocations committee.

Electronics store burgled

An electronics store in the 19300 block of Mack in Grosse Pointe Woods was broken into for the second time within a week.

A rock was thrown through the front door glass of the store about 4 a.m. Nov. 25. A week earlier, on Nov. 18 at 3:27 a.m., a cement block had been thrown through the door.

Police responding to the alarm in the most recent incident listed the following items missing: a record turntable, two telephones, a portable radio, a CD changer, a CD/tape player, a combination TV/VCR and two camcorders.

Similar items were taken during the previous burglary.

Conrad Koski holds an Old Newsboys' gift package. A 10-year old girl would receive the items shown, except for the dolls. They are given to girls ages 5-8.

Currently a member of the executive board, chairman of the purchasing committee and co-chairman of the special allocations committee.

"This is a very sincere pay-back for me," Koski said. "I look at what I have and what my kids have and I am grateful, and feel that I have to give something back to the community."

Being an Old Newsboy is a year-long job, Koski said. Toward the end of November, the group starts to ask suppliers for samples of toys, books and clothing for Christmas the following year. So right now, they're asking for samples for 1992, he said.

Final orders are placed by the middle of March. Koski said, for delivery in August. When the orders come in, they are stored in a donated warehouse in Detroit.

Workers sort the merchandise and then pack the items in cardboard boxes. Koski said he is proud of the evolution of the box. Instead of a plain brown box, children now receive white boxes that have a festive red design.

The packages vary according to the age and sex of the recipients.

This year's package for 7-year-old boys includes: a pair of jeans, a sweatshirt, three pairs of socks, four pairs of underwear, two books, a pair of gloves, a dental kit (including toothbrush, toothpaste and dental floss), and a bag of hard candy.

Girls who are 10 years old receive a pair of jeans, a heavy T-shirt, a hat and scarf set, two books and a dental kit.

In addition to the normal package, girls 5-8 receive a separate box containing a doll.

"These dolls amaze me," Koski said. "We bought 11,000 dolls for this year, and when we got them, they were naked, except for a pair of white panties and shoes, and each one looked alike. Then we gave them to different organizations, and they gave them to their members to dress. Now, each doll has its own personality."

Each organization was asked to pick one or two of its better dressed dolls, and the winners are showcased at the Renaissance Center in the Jefferson Avenue atrium between towers 100 and 200. They include a "Norma" Schwartzkopf, a Shirley Temple, a construction worker, a glittery princess, a Raggedy Ann, and countless brides.

Each fall, the Old Newsboys sends information forms to the Detroit schools for children to take home to their parents. The form asks, in a dignified manner, if the student's parent or parents are on some form of public assistance.

"We only give packages to children ages 5 to 13 who are on some form of aid," Koski explained.

The form also asks which police precinct the family lives in. When the forms are returned to the Old Newsboys, the information is entered into a computer. That way, the organization knows how many packages by age and sex each police precinct needs.

The packages are delivered to the police precincts starting in September, and the police department mails a postcard to each family, telling them that their package is ready to be picked up. The packages are no longer delivered.

Last year, the Old Newsboys served 39,000 children. This year, it will serve 40,000, and next year, the number may have to increase to 43,000 because of the economic climate, Koski said.

This year, the average cost per package is $21, he said.

The amount of items in each package is never decreased, he said. If the organization has to put together 43,000 packages next year, it won't make the packages smaller.

"We'll just work harder to raise more money," Koski said.

Old Newsboys members pay dues to fund overhead expenses, including publicity. Each December, it sells newspapers and asks the public for donations to pay for the gift packages. Every dollar raised is spent on the Christmas packages and the Old Newsboys' other programs to aid underprivileged children. Each year the group sends children to summer camp, and gives them school shoes and dental care.

This year's newspaper sale will be held Monday, Dec. 2, from 11 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. on Detroit streetcorners. The Old Newsboys hope to raise $950,000.

When he's not working on First of Michigan or Old Newsboys business, Koski said he likes to spend time with his wife, Loraine McLain Koski, at their cabin in northern Michigan. They were married in 1987 and are expecting a baby in February.

Koski also enjoys researching his family history. A member of the Polish Genealogical Society of Michigan, he has traced his family back to his grandfather, who came from Poland to Ellis Island when he was 16 years old at the beginning of this century and shortened the family name from Kossakowski to Koski.

The name of the ship his grandfather sailed on was the Princess Irene.

"I think that's ironic, because my mother's name is Irene. But I'm sure my father had no idea that that was the name of the ship his father had sailed on," Koski said.

In the future, he'd like to go to Utah and see if the Mormons, who have extensive genealogical files, have any information on his family, and then he'd like to visit Poland, he said.

He also has another goal, albeit an unrealistic one.

"Wouldn't it be great if the Old Newsboys could go out of business because of the lack of need," he said.

'Sounds of Christmas' to ring out at local churches

Historical Society's fundraiser to greet holidays with musical afternoon for whole family

By Margie Reins Smith
Feature Editor

William H. Ouellette of Grosse Pointe Park has a vision: a documentary video tracing Grosse Pointe's history. Ouellette is a member of the board of directors of the Grosse Pointe Historical Society.

"I see a format like the recent PBS Civil War series, but on a smaller scale. I see a plan using old photographs, old maps and drawings and music and narration," Ouellette said. "We'll interview some older people who remember Grosse Pointe in the old days. The project will take tremendous planning and paper work."

William H. Ouellette

Lisa Gandelot of Grosse Pointe Farms, former president and current honorary board member of the Grosse Pointe Historical Society, said the video project will take a year or more to plan, coordinate and complete. A member of the society has volunteered to take a week's vacation to do the actual filming.

"We will need members of the community to come forth with docuuments, photos, surveys and abstracts to share — to fill in the missing pieces of Grosse Pointe history," she said.

When completed, Ouellette said the film will be used in schools and historical programs and copies will be available for sale.

Gandelot and Ouellette are co-chairmen of the Historical Society's fourth annual holiday fundraiser, the "Sounds of Christmas."

Musical sounds of Christmas will reverberate around the Pointes on Sunday, Dec. 8, at two historic churches and a historic home in the City, with proceeds from the fundraiser going to the Grosse Pointe Historical Society for the video documentary project. The Men's and Girls' Choirs at Christ Church Grosse Pointe will present holiday music at Christ Church, 61 Grosse Pointe Blvd., under the direction of D. Frederic DeHaven, beginning at 3 p.m.

A Christmas sing-along including two musical groups, "Noteworthy" and "The Grunyons," will be presented at Grosse Pointe Memorial Church at 4 p.m. William De Turk, Memorial Church's musical director, will lead the sing-along.

Noteworthy is a singing group made up of 17 Grosse Pointe women. The Grunyons are a group of men who sing and perform throughout the metropolitan Detroit area.

For those who purchase benefactor, patron and friends tickets to the fundraiser, the historic 1927 French Norman Grosse Pointe home of Kathy and Ronald G. Forster will be open for an afterglow from 5 to 7 p.m., after the concert.

"We're pleased to be able to include the Forster's special house as part of our fundraiser," Gandelot said.

Kathy Forster said the house was designed by architect Wallace Frost in 1925 and completed in 1927. It was one of two built at the same time for two brothers, Edgar and Julian Bowen, officers of the Ferry-Morse Seed Co.

The three-story, six-bedroom house has dozens of noteworthy features: leaded glass windows, patterned plaster work, imported tiles, intricate brick patterns in the fireplaces, elaborate cornices, steel and brass hinges, marble baseboards and its focal point: a magnificent curved stone staircase.

The Forsters have searched the Burton Collection at the Detroit Public Library to get as much information about the site and the house as possible.

"We were told that the second floor was laid out so that each bathroom was joined only to its bedroom — so the help would never see family members in their night-clothes," Kathy Forster said with a smile. "The garden also has good soil because the owners were seed company executives. The original landscape plan included a rose garden and a formal peony garden."

Ouellette and Gandelot hope the prospect of seeing this historic home will encourage "Sounds of Christmas" supporters to purchase tickets for benefactors, patrons or friends — which include an afterglow at the Forsters' house. The committee expects 90 to 135 people at the afterglow.

Tickets are $15 for individuals; $35 for families; $100 for friends; $250 for patrons; and $500 for benefactors.

General admission tickets are available at Grosse Pointe Florist, Village Records and Tapes and at the door. Friends, patrons and benefactors tickets, which include the afterglow, are available by calling Peter Robbins at 886-5519.

"It's important to raise funds for the Historical Society," Gandelot said, "but this is also a wonderful opportunity to start the Christmas season with a low-key day with family and friends."

The Grosse Pointe Historical Society was founded in 1945 and reorganized in 1980. It is dedicated to recognizing the historical significance of the Grosse Pointes by enhancing public awareness of the community's history and recording and preserving historically significant structures.

The society's collection is temporarily housed in Ferry Elementary School, 748 Roslyn Road, Grosse Pointe Woods, and is open to the public on Tuesdays and Wednesdays from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Phone number is 884-7010.

Honorary chairmen for "Sounds of Christmas" are Mr. and Mrs. William Y. Gard.

Serving as hosts and hostesses will be Mr. and Mrs. Alfred B. Moran II, Mr. and Mrs. Ronald G. Forster, and Peter L. Robbins. Other chairmen are Mrs. Charles W. Davis Jr., Mrs. Edward E. Donaldson, Mrs. James Klein, Mrs. Robert M. Malecek, Mrs. Leon Mandel and Mrs. Peter Ruffner.

Hosts and hostesses for the afterglow of the Grosse Pointe Historical Society's annual fundraiser are Ronald G. and Kathy Forster, left, and Peter Robbins. The post-concert party will be held at the Forsters' home.

Bridge

"HAVE A PLEASANT TRY AT PERFECTION" BRIDGE BY WOODY BOYD ♠♥♦♣

"I keep six honest serving-men, they taught me all I knew. Their names are what and why and when and how and where and who"...Rudyard Kipling

Best that one asks some questions about bridge than to know all the answers so today's column will be devoted to our first quiz. If the explanations cause contention write it off to style as even the experts don't always agree.

I. As South...neither vulnerable

| | | | | | | | |
|------|-----|----|--------|----|----|----|---|
| 1095 | AK4 | J9 | A10984 | ♠ | W | N | E |
| | | | | 2C | 1S | 2D | |
| | | | | | | | ? |

Some Fancy Dan might bid two hearts, but this could land you in an inferior three no trump contract missing a good slam. Change the hearts to KQ4 and your bid is 2NT. As the cards are 1 like three spades as your hand embraces quick taking tricks.

II. As South...vulnerable

| | | | | | | | |
|----|--------|-----|-----|---|----|----|---|
| A5 | 109872 | KQJ | 752 | ♠ | W | N | E |
| | | | | | 1S | 2H | |
| | | | | | | | ? |

There's only one bid, two spades. Your partner has over-called vulnerable. All you're trying to determine is how good his bid is. The que bid by you asks that and also alerts him to the fact that even though you originally passed, you have a marvelous hand in support of hearts. Any bid other than three hearts by him go to game unless he beats you to it.

III. As South...E/W vulnerable

| | | | | | | | |
|------|----|-----|-------|-----|---|-----|---|
| 1098 | K2 | QJ9 | A9865 | ♠ | W | N | E |
| | | | | 1NT | | DBL | |
| | | | | | | | ? |

Show no emotion even though you're exceedingly pleased. In tempo pass and feel confident that if West runs to the two level the carnage could be equally monumental. Maybe as much as 800.

IV. As South...neither vulnerable

| | | | | | | | |
|------|-------|---|-------|---|---|----|----|
| A107 | K1098 | 6 | Q9874 | ♠ | W | N | E |
| | | | | | | 1C | 1D |
| | | | | | | | ? |

Some may bid the two diamonds, but your cards don't qualify for that call. Even though you originally passed and have a monstrous club fit with 9 H.C.P. Just bid one heart. If partner has a third seat minimum game is no go so don't entertain such aspirations unless he can bid again.

V. As South...vulnerable

| | | | | | | | |
|--------|-------|----|---|----|---|-----|---|
| KJ9752 | AK107 | KQ | 8 | ♠ | W | N | E |
| | | | | 1S | | 1NT | |
| | | | | | | | ? |

This particular shape has cost many partnerships an excellent game contract in hearts because the opening bidder felt it was more important to rebid his six card spade suit then show the other major. If you were dead minimum in third seat I might agree, but not with this one. If partners on top with hearts you have a good play for game. Bid two hearts.

VI. As South...vulnerable

| | | | | | | | |
|---------|-----|-----|---|----|---|----|---|
| AQ10874 | A52 | J97 | Q | ♠ | W | N | E |
| | | | | 1S | | 2D | |
| | | | | | | | ? |

This hand opposite a responder bidding both minors has merit. When partner bid three clubs, he told you he wanted to be in game. Your second bid told him you were minimum. Now tell him your maximum/minimum. Bid four diamonds. Slam is possible.

VII. As South...neither vulnerable

| | | | | | | | |
|------|--------|---|-----|-----|---|----|---|
| J986 | AJ9874 | A | Q10 | ♠ | W | N | E |
| | | | | 1NT | | 2C | |
| | | | | 2S | | 3H | |
| | | | | 4C | | 4D | |
| | | | | 4H | | | ? |

You might ask what kind of bidding is this? Fair question, but don't be doubtful. You're witnessing one of North America's finest partnerships describing their H.C.P. weight and shape. With both majors five/four or better never transfer. Best to explore a four card major fit. Three hearts is a slam try by South in support of spades. The next three calls show controls. If you're sitting South your next bid should be six spades. Seven is out of the realm of probable unless you correctly guess the major lady's or drop them, not likely. North's hand.

Goodfellows: More than 100 needy families in the Grosse Pointes will have a merrier Christmas this year because of the efforts of the Grosse Pointe Lions Club and the Grosse Pointe Woods Lions Club.

The Lions will hold a Goodfellows newspaper drive on Monday, Dec. 2, to raise money for Christmas food baskets for needy Pointers.

Richard Dossin, chairman of the drive for the Grosse Pointe Lions, said this will be the 59th consecutive year his club has sold newspapers. Ed Goosen, chairman of the Grosse Pointe Woods Lions, said his club has been participating in the fundraiser since 1957.

Many people think there aren't needy families in Grosse Pointe, but former Park Fire Chief Phillip Costa said there definitely are families who need food baskets. Costa has helped identify these families for many years.

The two Lions Clubs have about 30 members each and are part of an international service club that has more than 1.4 million members in 160 countries.

To make a direct donation to the newspaper drive, send a check to the Grosse Pointe Lions, P.O. Box 36160, Grosse Pointe Farms, 48236.

The Pastor's Corner Filled, but unfulfilled

Grosse Pointe Memorial Church

As the holidays are fast approaching, many of us are seeing our calendars filling up with office parties, concerts, family gatherings and shopping excursions. Our days are filled with the extra responsibilities of holiday preparations. Our minds are filled with lists and items to remember not to forget. Even our refrigerators are filled with leftover turkey, cider and holiday cookies. While many of us feel our lives are filled, we may also feel a bit unfulfilled.

The experience of being filled but unfulfilled is one that Christian author Henri Nouwen describes in his book, "Making All Things New."

"Our lives often seem like overpacked suitcases bursting at the seams. In fact, we are almost always aware of being behind schedule. There is a nagging sense that there are unfinished tasks, unfulfilled promises, unrealized proposals. There is always something else that we should have remembered, done or said. There are always people we did not speak to, write to, or visit. Thus, although we are very busy, we also have lingering feelings of never really fulfilling our obligations," Nouwen writes.

It is in the midst of our busy and filled lives that Nouwen invites us to live a spiritual life. The spiritual life involves shifting the point of gravity, relocating the center of attention and changing our priorities. The center is a loving relationship with the Lord.

One of the first steps to finding fulfillment in the busyness of our lives is to make room for moments of solitude each day. A few minutes of sitting in silence, listening to God, and repeating a short prayer can soothe our hearts and minds.

It is my hope and prayer that you and I will experience spiritual fulfillment as we draw closer to our Lord in the busy weeks ahead.

St. Clare Church program to help cope with holidays

"Coping with the Holidays" is a special program scheduled at St. Clare of Montefalco Church in Grosse Pointe Park on Wednesday, Dec. 4.

For many people, the holidays are a time of joy with family and friends. For others, holidays can be a time of sadness. Memories of past celebrations collide with the realities of the present — extended illness, stress or loss of a loved one.

Sister Pat McDonald will review strategies for coping with the mixed emotions which can often accompany the holidays. McDonald is vice president of special projects at Macomb Family Services, and has been a practitioner in the mental health field for more than 15 years.

The program will be from 7:30 to 9 p.m. in the faculty lounge of St. Clare School. The cost is $3.

St. Clare of Montefalco is located on Mack at Whittier in Grosse Pointe Park. For additional information, call 885-4960.

Singles will tour historic churches

The Single Way, a group of interdenominational Christian singles, is sponsoring a tour of some of the area's churches on Saturday, Nov. 30. After dinner, the group will visit the Whitney restaurant in Detroit for dessert.

Trip cost is approximately $20 and a $7.50 deposit is required by Friday, Nov. 29.

The group will meet to form car pools at 4 p.m. in the parking lot beside Hardee's restaurant at Van Dyke and 13 Mile in Warren. Activities of the group are open to Christians of all ages. For more information, or for a calendar of other group events, call 776-5535.

Pointer honored for volunteerism

Ten health care volunteers, including Ellen Smith of Grosse Pointe, received special recognition at the annual

Thanks for Giving luncheon on Nov. 12 at the Grand Manor at Fair Lane in Dearborn. Chuck Gaidica, WDIV-TV weatherman, served as honorary chairman for the event.

The honorees were selected by a panel of judges who reviewed written nominations submitted by volunteer services directors.

When Smith came to St. John Home Health Care Services, she already had 30 years of volunteer experience, the last 14 in a Florida hospital helping prepare payrolls for employees in the gift shop. During the last two years, Smith has logged more than 1,000 volunteer hours.

Tuesday Musicale to present annual Christmas concert

The Tuesday Musicale of Greater Detroit will present its annual Christmas concert Dec. 3, at 10:30 a.m., at Metropolitan United Methodist Church, 8000 Woodward in Detroit.

A wide variety of artists and ensembles will participate in the concert, one of the highlights of the season. Jeanne Hurst, well-known organist, will open the program with "Scherzo" by Gabriel Verstraegen. This will be followed by a group of vocal solos and duets by Anna Speck, soprano, and Frank Hull, baritone, accompanied at the piano by Fontaine Laing.

The concert will mark the debut of the newly-formed Tuesday Musicale Chamber Orchestra, conducted by Morris Hochberg, violinist and former assistant concertmaster of the Detroit Symphony Orchestra. Under his direction the group will perform two famous works for strings, the "Christmas Concerto" by Archangelo Corelli and "St. Paul's Suite" by Gustave Holst.

As in previous Christmas programs, the Tuesday Musicale chorale ensemble will offer a group of seasonal choral selections. This group, which is conducted by Mary Pardee, will also feature Dorothy Ignasiak, soloist; Wendy Pardee, piccolo; and Frances Wilson, accompanist.

Gale Dramer, organist at Metropolitan United Methodist Church, will also provide seasonal selections on the church's pipe organ, one of the largest instruments of its kind in the world.

The chairman of the day for the concert will be Ignasiak, and the two general program chairmen will be Virginia Shover and Josephine Howes.

The speaker for the day was Joanna Charles, president of Michigan Women in Communications and a member of the ad hoc committee for the Michigan Women's Historical Center in Lansing.

The next meeting will be the Christmas tea from 3-5 p.m. on Sunday, Dec. 8, at the home of Nancy Kline in Grosse Pointe Farms.

All 50 states and the District of Columbia were represented.

Garden Club makes decorations

Afterward, there will be a workshop to make Christmas decorations for St. Anne's Convalescent Center.

The conference was sponsored by the National Council of State Garden Clubs with funding from Shell Oil Co.

The 1991 conference continued a tradition of national meetings held to launch two-year educational programs dealing with specific environmental concerns. Past conferences have dealt with hazardous household waste, solid waste management, groundwater protection and land use.

Garden club members will share information from the sessions with fellow garden club members and the public. Local, state and regional follow-up conferences are planned by garden club federations. As environmental awareness chairman for the Federated Garden Clubs of Michigan Inc., Kuhlman will play a leadership role.

The Grosse Pointe South High School Mother's Club will hold a holiday walk, featuring a fundraising tour of six Grosse Pointe homes decorated for the holidays, on Thursday, Dec. 12, from 11 a.m. to 7 p.m.

Proceeds from the fundraiser will benefit the Mother's Club's scholarship endowment fund, established last June to benefit Grosse Pointe students who need financial aid for college.

The homes on the tour include:

The Cassin home on Windmill Pointe Drive, built in 1923 for William Harris, actress Julie Harris' grandfather. The home was designed by Albert Kahn and once included an organ loft in the living room.

The Neuman home on Cloverly is another Albert Kahn design, an Italian Renaissance style built in 1929. The home's courtyard (great hall) is a miniature replica of the DIA's Kresge Court.

The Rohde home on Lewis-with a white picket fence, was built in 1939. A special feature of the home is its children's playhouse.

The Peslar home on Lewiston was designed in 1928 by architect Wallace Frost and features a dramatic entry with a balcony overlooking the living room.

The Quilter home on Stephens is a center entrance Colonial built in 1959 and features a 20-foot foyer with a spiral staircase.

The Schipper home on Sycamore was built in the late 1980s on the site of the old Seyburn estate. It overlooks Lake St. Clair and features a sunken living room and a fireplace in the den which is surrounded by imported tile.

Tickets for the tour are $10 and may be purchased at The Pointe Pedlar, E.J. Hickey Co., The Fruit Tree, Pointe Video and the Grosse Pointe War Memorial.

You've demolished the Thanksgiving turkey, the dishes are done, you're foot-balled out and the relatives are getting on your nerves. Time to pop in a video.

The following is an incomplete, totally biased list of movies about families that are available on video. Not all are family movies, mind you, but rather contain family themes. And some of the films will make your family seem not so dysfunctional after all.

"Life With Father" is a charming comedy about the Day family at the turn of the century. Father is William Powell at his most delightful as the irascible, lovable, penny-pinching, unbaptized patriarch who is the only one who thinks he's in charge of the family. Irene Dunne is Powell's equal as his not-so-ditsy wife. Elizabeth Taylor is sweet and prim and thin in a pre-love-goddess role. Not much happens, so it's a good one to watch while gossiping about family members who have left already.

"My Man Godfrey" is more timely today perhaps than when it was made in 1936. Godfrey is a "forgotten man" — a homeless person — picked up as an item in a society scavenger hunt. He teaches the ultra-rich Bullock family the true meaning of life, and learns a few lessons along the way, himself. Again, the suave William Powell stars, this time paired with a young and somewhat annoying Carole Lombard. The supporting cast is also excellent, and keeps the predictable story going at a fast clip.

The same outsider-moves-in-and-heals-broken-family theme is done with music and a lot more whimsy in "Mary Poppins." When the Banks family hires Mary, the practically perfect nanny, she turns the family upside down with her friend, Bert the chimney sweep, and his friends, who include dancing cartoon penguins. The 2 1/2-hour movie gets more charming by the minute without becoming cloying. And who can resist that music? Every song, from "I Love to Laugh" to "Feed the Birds," is super-califragilisticexpialidocious, and there's no question why it won an Oscar. Nor is there a question why Julie Andrews did, either.

Another, newer movie, with the same theme is former Grosse Pointer John Hughes' "Uncle Buck." Written for and directed around John Candy's enormous comic talent, the film is a perfect vehicle for him, even if the script is overly-long and extremely silly. Even if you just watch it for the scene in which Candy stands up to his niece's principal, it's worth it. Watch that scene twice, you'll be laughing too hard the first time to fully appreciate it. Barry Levinson's "Avalon" shows how time, television and the suburbs have destroyed America. The semi-autobiographical film is a charmer with a great ensemble cast. It's the kind of film that makes you long for your grandparents' days when, even if it was inconvenient, your whole family lived with you because that was the way things were done. It may have been terrible, but this film makes it seem lovely.

"Parenthood" is a film that you watch and say, "Thank God my family isn't like that," but deep down you know it is. Functional and dysfunctional branches of the same family act and interact, learning something from each other. A little on the long side and, strangely enough, missing a heart. But it's still good for a light dessert.

Chances are not all the family will like Woody Allen's "Hannah and her Sisters," so you might want to watch it alone after everyone's gone home. It has the same Allen humor you know and love (or know and hate) but with a heart and warmth that fills you like a rum toddy. Michael Caine and Diane Wiest won Oscars for their supporting performances. It's really one of Allen's best.

"Staying Together" is a sleeper film about three brothers whose reign as the popular, uncrowned princes of a small town comes abruptly to an end. When dad faces a midlife crisis and sells the family business, the business the boys had staked their futures on, they all are forced to turn within and go forward. It's a quiet, heart-warming film that has an honest family feel.

And while we're on brothers, today's men's movement was invented for people like the Trask men in "East of Eden." James Dean gives a performance that made him a star as Cal, the young man who did everything to gain his father's love. Grosse Pointe's own Julie Harris is his sanctimonious brother's girlfriend whom he ends up with. A very compelling film.

Want to feel guilty for stuffing yourself silly? Watch Henry Fonda in "The Grapes of Wrath," another film based on a John Steinbeck book. Although it's a wonderful film with more packed into it than what's in 10 of today's, it's definitely not a feel-good film.

In "On Golden Pond" Fonda plays a knight in shining armor to Katherine Hepburn's loving wife. Teamed for the only time with his daughter, Jane, it's a parent-doesn't-understand-child-until-it's-almost-too-late movie, but the performances take the film beyond the predictable and into the heart.

Television's "Hard Copy" might air an episode about people like the Hubbard family in Lillian Hellman's "The Little Foxes." Greed and corruption run in the veins of this family held together by a ruthless Bette Davis. Legend has it that Hellman didn't like Davis' portrayal of Regina, but it works, if you can get past those three-quarter hats she insists on wearing — oh, that's her hair?

And there could be an Oprah show for people like "The Magnificent Ambersons." The Orson Welles film chronicles the fall of a once-proud family. Critics say it's one of the best films ever made, and it has the typical Welles camera angles and an incredible set that seems to get larger as the family becomes more defeated. Several questions come to mind when watching the film, which gets better the second time around: "Who was that, the father or the brother? What did that mean? Why did Agnes Moorehead waste her talent on 'Bewitched?'"

If the theme of "Ambersons" is of a family which can't change with the times, the theme of "La Cage Aux Folles" is that the times can change what constitutes a family — in this case, a transvestite, an aging homosexual and his son conceived during a one-night stand. The complications occur when the son announces his engagement to a girl who happens to be the daughter of the man who's head of France's Union for Moral Order. Everything that can go wrong does in this classic French farce. Not as satisfying as the Jerry Herman musical based on the film, but a whole lot of fun. It's in French with easy-to-read English subtitles.

Then there's the family in "Cat on a Hot Tin Roof" made up of people with names like Big Daddy, Gooper, Sister Woman and Brick. Elizabeth Taylor is the title feline trying to enliven her marriage with the sexually ambivalent Paul Newman. Despite the happy sappy '50s ending, the film weaves a web from which the viewer can't escape — and that's no mendacity.

And speaking of "The Family," there's the Corleones in Francis Ford Coppola's "The Godfather" and its two sequels. Together, they have been hailed as three of the best movies ever made. Funny, touching, violent and completely engrossing, Coppola's epic gets its heart from the love, hate and betrayal of its family members.

The older you get, the better "The Sound of Music" gets. The Von Trapp family, led by Christopher Plummer and, again, nanny Julie Andrews, finds fame and freedom from fascists while singing some of the best music written for a Broadway show. (It's surpassed only by their "The King and I.") Corny as Kansas, but undeniably entertaining, it's one to see over and over again.

DSO report

Concerts honor Mozart; new CD has fine French flavor

By Alex Sucek
Special Writer

The Detroit Symphony Orchestra joined the rest of the music world last week in recognizing the Mozart Bicentennial. The opening salvo was more dignified than festive, however. It was a DSO-sponsored recital by Spanish pianist Alicia De Larrocha featuring two of the composer's more elegantly mannered sonatas.

De Larrocha's playing is certainly equal to this music. Every embellishment was perfectly accented. The fast movements were sprightly with full retention of form and expression. The slow movements, as for example the cantabile in K. 330, were tender songs with touching aff.

cha, in fact, spun silvery lace in Mozart's K. 283 (G major) and K. 330 (C major) sonatas. It is most likely, however, that these works were written to use in teaching highly talented amateurs and this is borne out by the fact that they are more suited to the salon than the concert hall, especially when performed with De Larrocha's genteel restraint. The overall impact was to wish for a more intimate salon or the performance of a knuckle-busting chord on the keyboard to break the spell.

With Schubert's B flat major sonata, which the tragic composer wrote at the very end of his life, the effect was similar, though to a lesser degree. The second movement Andante is a rich and eloquent movement of the kind at which De Larrocha is most skilled. She sustained the line of the musical phrase and development throughout, building to a restrained but highly intense climax. It was only with her second encore in response to generous applause that there was fire. But even here in the "Ritual Fire Dance" by De Falla, the effect was more like glowing embers.

It took Thursday evening's concert by the orchestra with conductor Raymond Leppard and soprano Arleen Auger to illustrate just how thrilling the best of Mozart, superbly performed, can be. Leppard's and the orchestra's brisk attack in the opening notes of the Haffner Symphony established at once their mastery of Mozart — bright energy, witty style and brilliant invention alternating with interludes of mystery that occur often in much of Mozart's orchestral music. In the presto, which Leppard took prestissimo, the sparkling phrases came through clear and bright to the great credit of the DSO strings.

It seemed impossible to top, yet soprano Auger did just that. Opening her performance with the concerto-like "Exsultate, Jubilate," she displayed an exalted and near faultless Mozartian soprano. Her voice is sublime, clear as crystal, light and flexible yet with power to spare. There was not a false or unpleasant sound in her entire performance.

The gorgeous phrases of the "Exsultate" soared as though into the sun. Her brief vocal cadenzas in the spaces Mozart left for them were elegantly graceful and thrilling. And her rendering of the "Alleluiah" finale was absolutely joyous as well as a triumph of vocal beauty.

Equally inspiring were her performances of the Countess' two arias from "Marriage of Figaro" — "Porgi Amor" and "Deh vieni, non tardar." She became the Countess in flesh and blood, expressing the bittersweet sentiments of those lovely arias with sublime vocal expressions of love and sadness.

It seemed almost superfluous to continue the concert after such artistry, except that Leppard showed off our orchestra to excellent advantage with a forceful and commanding performance of the "Jupiter" Symphony to bring the program to a highly satisfying conclusion.

This week's three performances continuing the Mozart celebration, are scheduled for Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoon. Music director Jarvi returns with violinist Cho-Liang Lin to present the Divertimento in D major, Concerto No. 4 in G major, and the Symphony No. 40. For tickets and times, call 833-3700.

The second CD by Neeme Jarvi leading the DSO, released only two weeks ago, is in another world musically. Offering two works by Albert Roussel (Symphony No. 3 and "Bacchus et Ariane" Suite No. 2) and two by Maurice Ravel ("La Valse" and "Bolero"), it explores a French musical idiom almost 150 years younger than Mozart's.

The performances are equal in quality and impact to the live versions in concert last season and the recording is up to Chandos' familiar excellence. But the opportunity to listen repeatedly to the rarely performed Roussel is especially appealing in providing an opportunity to gauge how enduring its appeal may be and explore the cohesiveness and flow of Roussel's musical ideas.

Ravel's innovative creations of "La Valse" and "Bolero" have lasting dramatic appeal that is amply fulfilled in this performance. It is surely superfluous to mention that for any DSO fan who enjoys French musical impressionism and neoclassicism, this disc is probably a must. CHAN 8966.

Michigan is fifth in sugar production — how sweet it is

The United States sugarbeet industry is one of the most efficient and experienced food producers in the world. The whole process of converting beets to sugar takes approximately eight hours. The labor required to process one ton of sugarbeets today is 5 percent of what it was 25 years ago, because of advances in technology. Michigan sugarbeet growers are the lowest-cost producers in the nation.

An early attempt to grow sugarbeets in Michigan was made in 1839 by Lucius Lyon, a skilled potato grower. Lyon's beet growing plan was successful, but his manufacturing method was a failure.

Almost 60 years later another attempt was made when, on Oct. 17, 1898, the Pioneer

Michigan Factory opened in the state's Thumb area. On opening day 34 tons of beets were processed and the Michigan sugar industry was born — a proud state heritage.

In 1906, the firm's name was changed to Michigan Sugar Co. and it acquired six factories in the Thumb area. Since then it has become the leading sugar producer in the state.

Michigan is the country's fifth largest producer of beet sugar. Michigan Sugar Co. produces nearly 70 percent of the sugar refined in Michigan, and is the state's only American-owned sugar processor.

Molasses and sugarbeet pulp are byproducts of the sugarbeets. Molasses is used primarily in the fermentation industry for the manufacture of citric acid, yeast, antibiotics and other products, including animal feed. Sugarbeet pulp is pressed to remove excess water and then dried in large revolving drums. The pulp is pelletized and shipped to market as top-quality, nutritious livestock feed.

Sugar contains only 16 calories per teaspoon. It accounts for 12 percent of our total caloric intake. Sugar consumption at the level of 15 percent to 17 percent of our total calories is considered moderate by the Food and Drug Administration. Sugar is a significant source of dietary carbohydrates, which are the body's primary energy source.

Americans love the naturally sweet taste of real sugar. Whether dusted lightly on homemade cookies and cakes, sprinkled atop fresh fruit, in candies, or in a cup of coffee or tea, refined sugar is one of the purest commercially produced organic substances known. And at only 16 calories per teaspoon, sugar is a healthy bargain.

You won't soon forget 'Cape Fear'

By Marian Trainor
Special Writer

A psychological thriller can be more chillingly terrifying than a film that features mayhem and shattering special effects. "Silence of the Lambs" achieved that end but it pales when compared to Martin Scorsese's "Cape Fear."

A lurid throat-grabber, driven by unbridled fury and in a small southern town to taunt and drive Sam Bowden (Nick Nolte), his wife, Leigh (Jessica Lange), and their 15-year-old daughter, Danielle (Juliette Lewis), to the edge of self-destruction.

Just out of prison after serving 14 years, Cady confronts Bowden, who barely remembers him, with, "I'm going to teach you about loss."

Bowden was the lawyer who defended him in a rape case and Cady blames him not only for the 14 years he lost but for the loss of his wife and daughter who have been told he is dead.

Illiterate when he was confined, Cady learned to read and progressed well enough to study the Bible and to read law — a classic example of a brilliant but devious and twisted mind.

From his study of the law he realizes that Bowden did not play fair with him during the trial. Bowden was so revolted by the brutality of Cady's crime that he held back evidence that would have reduced his sentence. Now Cady is poised to bring Bowden to his level because, as he says, "Every man has to go through hell to reach his paradise."

He begins by stalking Bowden in a way that Bowden has no way of stopping and quickly moves to more serious harassment.

The film quickly progresses toward more evil, ending in a stunning climax aboard a houseboat on Cape Fear.

DeNiro's Cady takes its place alongside Travis Bickle from "Taxi Driver" and Jake La Motta from "Raging Bull." He is the personification of all that is frighteningly evil.

Lange as Leigh lends depth to a woman who resents her losses and compromises over the years, and finds herself intrigued by Cady. Lewis, as Danielle, through whom the story is told, plays a bewildered 14-year-old who responds helplessly to Cady's sly seduction in a scene that is taut with tension.

Robert Mitchum, who played Cady in the original film, and Gregory Peck, who played Bowden, have cameo roles.

Scorsese's skill as a filmmaker is notably displayed in the account of the family's mounting fear — doors double-locked, shutters snapped, drapes yanked. For diversion he heightens the effects with ghostly trays of negatives and occasional clips in black and white.

"Cape Fear" is more an experience than it is entertainment. Nevertheless, it is an extraordinary film that you won't soon forget. Scorsese won't allow you to.

mesmerizing tension, the film pursues its brutal and vengeful theme to a grim but inevitable end.

Sadistic and shocking, "Cape Fear" at the same time pursues themes of justice, retribution and the price that can be exacted when an individual, even with the best of intentions, bends the rules.

Much of the film's fascination stems from how devious and at the same time how resourceful the mind of a psychopath can be in planning and executing carefully laid plans to slowly destroy a victim.

The psychopath is Max Cady (Robert DeNiro), who appears

'Thursday's Child' opens at Attic Theatre

"Thursday's Child," a provocative comedy by Julie Jensen about middle-aged parenting in the 90s, will have its Michigan premiere at the Attic Theatre on Thursday, Dec. 5. Directed by Dinah Lynch and sponsored by Target Stores and CKLW-AM, the show runs through Jan. 5.

"Thursday's Child" is Jensen's response to middle age from a woman's perspective. The action takes place on a Thursday in the lives of the Bradshaw family. George Anni, played by the Attic Theatre's artistic director Lavinia Moyer, is a 44-year-old mother of three and head of the family, despite what her husband Ken (played by Jim Porterfield) and their children may think.

The day starts off with the usual events: 8-year-old Marcy (Dana Acheson) fills the washing machine with fish and water for her "fish without light" experiment; 15-year-old Kenny (David Bourke) begs money from Mom and torments his 16-year-old sister Kenna Lou (Jamie Moyer), while she talks on the phone and changes clothes.

But this is not a normal day for George Ann. In between getting Ken and the kids off to school and grocery shopping, she has a doctor's appointment which will tell her if the blue stick from the home pregnancy test is accurate.

As the day turns into evening and tensions increase while waiting for the test results, George Ann finds herself in the midst of unsolicited advice from her mother (Dorothy Gray) and verses from Hallmark Cards from her best friend, Glenna Waters (Mary Brenner).

Reared in Beaver, Utah, Jensen spent several years in Michigan, teaching creative writing in the English department at Wayne State University. She also ran a small experimental theater called The Grand Circus Exchange. In 1977 she received her Ph.D. in theater from Wayne State. She is now pursuing a full-time career in Los Angeles.

"Thursday's Child" is Lynch's second directorial effort at the Attic Theatre. Last season she debuted with "Conversations with an Irish Rascal." Lynch is currently the director of the Attic Theatre Conservatory as well as a faculty member at Wayne State University.

Joining Moyer on stage is her real-life daughter Jamie who makes her professional acting debut as Kenna Lou Bradshaw.

Preview week for "Thursday's Child" is Dec. 5-7 at 8 p.m., and Dec. 8 at 2 p.m. Opening night is Dec. 11, after which the performance schedule is Wednesdays at 7 p.m.; Thursdays and Fridays at 8 p.m.; Saturdays at 5 and 9 p.m.; and Sundays at 2 and 7 p.m. There will be no performances on Christmas Day. The 7 p.m. shows on Sunday, Dec. 29 and Jan. 5, are reserved for group sales only. Tickets range from $10 to $27.

Scheduled events include an afterglow reception catered by The Whitney on Dec. 11, and Talk Back on Dec. 18, where audience members have the opportunity to ask questions of the actors, director and production staff.

To order tickets or for more information, call the Attic Theatre box office at 875-8284. For group sales rates, contact Deb McGarvah at 875-8285.

Andiamo Italia Has Earned All A's: Ambience, Aldo, Amore...

If you are looking for a new experience in fine dining...one that not only wets the palate with gourmet cuisine, but also incomparable modern surroundings, you must try Andiamo Italia. At this culinary masterpiece you can savor the finest old-world cuisine in a modern-day atmosphere and bask in the gorgeous ambience while enjoying beautiful piano music in the background.

Most people never forget their first taste of exquisite Italian cuisine. It's a rare joy to the palate and soul that indelibly lingers in the memory of human senses. Chefs able to prepare such ambrosia soon attain celebrity status in the world of epicurean dining. And true masters of the art become legends.

To savor the food and meet such a legend face-to-face, lunch or dinner at Andiamo Italia in Warren is absolutely essential.

That's where you'll find the fabled chef Mr. Aldo and the incomparable dishes for which he has become famous throughout the Detroit area for the past 40 years.

"There aren't many Italian chefs of his caliber in the entire country," said Joe Vicari, who has been the new owner and manager of Andiamo Italia for the past year. "In this business, it is no exaggeration at all to say that Aldo is a living legend."

Fact is, Joe Vicari wanted to name the restaurant after Aldo once he'd taken it over from the previous owner in 1991. "Aldo was flattered, but insisted that the name we had was a good one, and that he'd be very satisfied just to be the master chef here," Joe said.

When a culinary artist such as Aldo feels this way about cooking for the new Andiamo Italia, you know there's a whole new ambience and character to the place.

"We want to make this a great Italian restaurant, known for three things," said Mr. Vicari. "First, for our friendliness and pleasant atmosphere, secondly for the quality and authenticity of our food, and then for our affordability."

To make sure the first requirement is fulfilled, Joe made adjustments throughout the staff.

"Every customer has to feel welcome, important and the center of attention for their stay in our restaurant," said Mr. Vicari. "Without that factor, we can't survive. Neither can we expect to stay in business without the very best food.

That's why I'm so glad that Aldo has chosen to be part of Andiamo Italia."

Many younger diners may not know that Aldo is a real Italian chef. As in originally from northern Italy Italian. He came to the U.S. in 1948 at the age of 25, worked as a chef for the famous Lombardi's at Seven Mile & Harper for years, then opened his own restaurant, appropriately named Aldo's. It was so good that it was chosen as one of the top 159 Italian restaurants in the entire world. He closed it with a sad heart a short time ago and retired because he could find no one to take it over who would put the same heart and soul into its food and service that he had.

Those fans who drove miles and miles from all over the metro area to savor his fresh and uniquely prepared dishes were equally disappointed. Until now. Andiamo Italia has drawn the great Aldo out of retirement and into their kitchen.

"This business is in my blood," said Aldo. "I can't give it up. And this place is right now one of the best Italian restaurants in town."

If you know Aldo, you know the qualification isn't necessary. You'll also know that his food is a big factor in that claim. It's about as far removed from buffet tub Mostecolli as Italian can get.

"Human beings begin to eat with their eyes," Aldo reminds us. "Properly cooked and prepared Italian cuisine is not only wonderful to taste, it's beautiful to see." The perfect combination of the two is what Aldo feels is key to any Italian restaurant's success:

"A restaurant and chef should feel proud to serve the food they create...and they should never serve any dish which they would not like to see and be served themselves. That's why we take such care here at Andiamo Italia."

To that end, many of the restaurant's foods are prepared in-house, and many of those especially for an individual order. For example, all meats are carved to Aldo's demands from the complete side of meat. All pastas, breads and desserts are fresh-made right at Andiamo Italia. So are the sauces...as each order is received. That means the sauce for your dish is prepared especially for you, and not ladled from a pot. Even the pizza is an Aldo spectacular.

"The first pizza in Detroit was created by Aldo in the 1950's when he was at Lombardi's," said Joe. "He's never revealed the secret to anyone...except us!"

If you get the impression that Aldo's talents have provided Andiamo Italia with a wide-ranging and toothsome menu, you're absolutely right. You'll find fish, chicken, lamb, beef and pork entrees in variety along with terrific salads for both the lunch and dinner crowds.

Should your taste crave something special which you don't see on the menu, just mention it to Aldo. He'll not only make it up specially for you, but he'll stop by your table to make sure it met your palate's expectations. The real beauty of such infinite choice and uncompromising quality is that you can sample it all at highly competitive prices.

"Our lunches are about $5.95, and for dinner, a party of two can usually enjoy a cocktail with their meal and still get out for $40 or less," Joe said. "Believe me, we're right in the same ballpark with all of the moderately priced chain-style restaurants for any meal you'd like to guess we just do it better."

Think of it: "The Chain" or a real legend. When you get down to it, there's really no choice at all. Not when the legend of Aldo stands ready at Andiamo Italia, 7096 E. 14 Mile Road, Warren, Michigan 48092, or call 268-3200 for information or reservations.

Ciao!

As an added temptation, Andiamo Italia warmly invites those interested in experiencing the true taste of Italy to mention this article when making reservations for lunch or dinner and a complimentary appetizer is on the house!

Higel, Jamerino bring swim titles to Pointes

By Chuck Klonke
Sports Editor

What is Christine Jamerino going to do for an encore?

That's a question many high school swimming fans are asking today after the Grosse Pointe North freshman won two individual events and was part of a second-place relay team at the state Class A swimming championships at Eastern Michigan University.

"I can't remember any freshmen winning two events at the state meet," said Mike O'Connor, Jamerino's coach at North and at the Pointe Aquatics club.

Jamerino nipped Grosse Pointe South's Kim Higel, a teammate at Pointe Aquatics, in the 200-yard individual medley and swam to an easy victory in the 100 breaststroke. Her efforts helped the Lady Norsemen finish fifth in the team standings with 97 points.

Higel, a junior, won the 100 backstroke and was second in the 200 IM. Higel repeated as the backstroke champion and just missed the state record.

O'Connor admitted he was a bit surprised by Jamerino's double victory.

"I thought she had a fair chance at winning the breaststroke, but I didn't know if she could beat Kim in the IM," O'Connor said.

Jamerino was seeded fifth in the IM and swam in one of the outside lanes. She trailed after the butterfly and backstroke legs, but "swam away from everybody in the breaststroke," according to her coach.

Higel, who was unable to see Jamerino from her lane, made a strong charge in the freestyle leg, but Jamerino held on for the victory. Her winning time was 2:07.29.

It was easier in the breaststroke, where Jamerino swam a 1:05.08 and made the cut for the U.S. Open meet in Minnesota this weekend.

"Being able to swim the breaststroke is a God-given talent," O'Connor said. "A lot of kids have trouble kicking correctly. Christine is a real strong girl and she's become a hard worker."

"Most of the top breaststrokers don't swim other events real well, but that's where Christine is different."

Jamerino qualified for the state meet in nine events.

Higel had a winning time of 56.93 in the backstroke. She won the event last year in 57.45.

"Kim missed the state record and the Olympic cut by three-hundredths of a second," said South coach Fred Michalik. "There were some Olympic officials at the meet and she tried to do everything to conform to Olympic rules and that might have cost her the state record."

Olympic rules require that a swimmer's entire foot must be in the water at the start of the backstroke. State high school rules, however, require that only the heels be in the water.

"That hurt Kim a little bit at the start of the race," Michalik said.

Higel trailed through the first 50 yards, caught up to the leaders at the 75-yard mark and pulled away in the final 25.

"She always has a very strong second half race," Michalik noted.

North's 200 medley relay team of Lidia Szabo, Jamerino, Jennifer Paolucci and Suzette Atrasz set a school record with its second-place time of 1:49.95. Birmingham Seaholm's winning time was 1:48.87.

Szabo started swimming backstroke on the relay after the season began.

"We were looking for a backstroker and we thought that since Lidia's pretty fast in the freestyle, we'd try flipping her over," O'Connor said with a chuckle. "She's turned out to be pretty good."

Jamerino put North in the lead in her breaststroke leg.

"She was just like a vacuum cleaner," O'Connor said.

Paolucci held the lead during the butterfly leg, but Seaholm's Nici Tallarom just edged Atrasz in the freestyle portion of the race.

North got a fourth place from Szabo in the 500 freestyle. She swam a 5:11.74 after a previous best of 5:20.

The Lady Norsemen's 400 freestyle relay team of Szabo, Paolucci, Heidi Milne and Ja-merino was sixth in 3:41.97.

Paolucci was eighth in the 100 butterfly in 59.52 and Atrasz took an eighth in the breaststroke in 1:08.02.

"Jennifer's time in the finals was fifth overall, but she didn't swim real well in the preliminaries and was in the consolation heat," O'Connor noted.

South also got a strong effort from freshman Stefanie La-Fond, who was 11th in the 50 freestyle.

"She moved up a place in the finals," Michalik said. "It was a good experience for a freshman."

Two Ann Arbor schools dominated the team scoring. Pioneer was first with 152 points, followed by Huron with 142. Bloomfield Hills Lahser was third with 123 and Seaholm grabbed the fourth spot with 105 points.

"We didn't have any divers," O'Connor said. "If we had been able to pick up some points in diving, we'd have finished ahead of Seaholm. But I'm really pleased with our whole team. They did real well."

Michalik felt his team, which won the Macomb Area Conference American Division championship a week ago, learned something at the state meet.

"We just missed qualifying two of our relay teams and I think some of our younger kids realize now that they have to do more than just 12 or 13 weeks of swimming in high school to compete at the state level," he said. "A lot of them have decided to swim for Pointe Aquatics in the next session."

Knights skate to tie with strong UP foe

By John Miskelly
Special Writer

People differ over the meaning of a tie game. Most fans who packed University Liggett's McCann Arena last week for the Knights' showdown with Calumet think it's the best thing that could have happened as the two teams put on a stirring offensive show.

The Copper Kings, making a weekend trip to the Detroit area for games with ULS and Cranbrook, arrived with a contingent of fans, parents and students to challenge the Knights, who had scored 10 goals in their season opener.

"We knew this game would be a lot more physical and faster," said ULS coach John Fowler, comparing Calumet to his team's first opponent, Bloomfield Hills Andover.

Goals came in bunches and the Knights and Copper Kings played to a 5-5 tie.

ULS came out with strong offensive pressure and sophomore Omar Sawaf scored at 1:47 of the first period on a perfect pass from John Maycock. Freshman defenseman Tom Waldron drew the other assist.

ULS dominated the period until Copper Kings' forward Jason Rintala scored on a breakaway as time ran out. The goal was allowed after a short discussion between the officials and timekeeper.

ULS continued with its offensive surge in the second period. Andy VanDeweghe scored with assists from Eric Kisskalt and Alex Crenshaw 16 seconds into the period.

Mike Whelan scored from Stefan Tietge and defenseman Bill Robb, less than two minutes later to give the Knights a 3-1 advantage.

"Part of our strength is that we can score with anybody out there," Fowler said, noting that his team had five different scorers.

The Knights peppered Calumet goalie Jon Giachino with 33 shots. The Copper Kings had 37 shots in return and came back twice from two-goal deficits.

Midway through the second period, Calumet's Marc Pomroy beat ULS goalie Chris Eldridge on a two-on-one break. Defenseman Bryan Rost tied the game when he broke in on Tom Best, who played the second half in goal for the Knights.

Crenshaw scored a power-play goal early in the third period to give ULS a 4-3 lead. Shortly after Crenshaw's goal, Giachino was caught out of position when he played the puck in the corner and Maycock scored for the Knights.

Sixteen seconds after Maycock gave ULS a two-goal advantage, Damon Beiring scored for Calumet and Pomroy collected his second of the game less than a minute later to tie the score, 5-5.

"(Calumet) is laden with talent," Fowler said. "Our boys rose to the occasion."

North nipped in district

Many high school basketball teams would be happy with a 12-9 record, but Grosse Pointe North's girls squad wasn't satisfied.

"I'm sure a lot of teams would be glad to have our record, but we have higher expectations than that," said Lady Norsemen coach Gary Bennett.

North's season ended last week with a heartbreaking 42-41 loss to Detroit Finney in the state Class A district tournament at Grosse Pointe South.

"There were several times when we had between two and four offensive rebounds and didn't score," Bennett said. "All we would have needed was one of those and we'd have won the game."

The Lady Norsemen hurt themselves with a poor start.

Finney raced to a 16-8 lead at the end of the first quarter and the Highlanders extended the margin to 25-14 at half-time.

Alana Hansen, who led North with 20 points, notched 10 points in the third quarter, including two three-pointers, to bring the Lady Norsemen within six points after three periods.

"Alana took more of a scoring role as the season went on," Bennett said. "We'll be looking to her for that next season, too. She's our best pure shooter. This was her best game."

Hansen shot 50 percent (9-for-18) from the field, but North shot only 33 percent as a team.

"I don't know why we started so slowly," Bennett said. "I was pleased with the way they worked to come back, but we shouldn't have been in such a deep hole to begin with."

with 11 rebounds and three steals.

Regina, which beat Grosse Pointe South in the district opener and downed Detroit Kettering in the second game, advanced to the regional with a 54-32 victory over Finney.

Farms mom still going strong on ski circuit

By Chuck Klonke
Sports Editor

Anne Knudson-Fitzpatrick doesn't believe in acting her age.

The 39-year-old Grosse Pointe Farms woman is still going strong on the national ski racing circuits at a time when many competitors her age have retired to the bunny slopes.

"I have to fight to be in the top five now, where I used to be able to finish in the top three in national events all the time," Knudson-Fitzpatrick said. "It isn't as easy as it was, but I'm not going to give up. It keeps you honest, strong, young — and humble."

There have been times when the mother of two young children has wondered if she wasn't out of her class. One instance was the Citizens National Ski Racing Championships in Jackson Hole, Wyo., in 1988.

"I was at the top of the slope getting ready to race an 18-year-old girl from West Germany," Knudson-Fitzpatrick said. "I was thinking, 'What am I doing here? It's almost time you quit.' All I wanted to do was get this over with and go home."

"Then I thought to myself, 'Hey, you've been through childbirth. That takes more strength than going down a hill. You can do anything.' I beat her and came in eighth overall. So much of sports is mental — being in the right frame of mind."

That same year, Knudson-Fitzpatrick had another big moment.

She was competing in the Silver Series regional at Hunter Mountain in New York and had reached the finals. Unfortunately, she was paired against a racer who had a handicap of almost nine seconds.

"The girl dogged it in her earlier race," Knudson-Fitzpatrick said. "Giving up that much time in a short race was like giving her a head start of almost a third of the way. It was discouraging, but I had my dad along for the weekend and I talked to him before the race. He told me not to say I didn't give my all. I had one of my best races and won. I gave the trophy to my dad."

The victory also earned Knudson-Fitzpatrick a trip to Innsbruck, Austria, where she skied the Olympic course.

Knudson-Fitzpatrick said her parents, who are now doing executive Peace Corps work in Czechoslovakia, encouraged her to ski, but didn't push her into the sport.

She had the chance to train with the U.S. Olympic team when she was 16, but it would have meant leaving school.

"My parents told me the decision was mine," Knudson-Fitzpatrick recalled. "I wanted to live a normal life. I wanted to finish high school and have a social life. I wanted to go to my high school prom. I didn't want to be so focused on skiing that I couldn't have friends or other interests. I would have had to give up all of that for the slim chance of making the Olympic team."

"I'll think about it during an Olympic year, and have a little tinge of regret, but I wouldn't give up what I have — a great husband and two wonderful kids. I have everything I want."

Knudson-Fitzpatrick admitted that she might not enjoy skiing as much today if she had dedicated her entire life to the sport.

She competes in the Metropolitan Detroit Ski Council events and last year was runner-up in the Veteran A division.

"That was very satisfying because I felt I had something to prove with this being my first year racing in Michigan," Knudson-Fitzpatrick said.

The family moved to Grosse Pointe Farms in October 1990, when Knudson-Fitzpatrick's husband Brian received a job transfer.

She also competed in events in the East and it was nothing for her to pile her kids into the car and make the trek to Vermont for a weekend race.

This year Knudson-Fitzpatrick will get a late start with her racing. She has her right leg in a walking cast, but it isn't the result of a ski injury. It was a freak accident that occurred when she stepped off a curb.

"It's just a temporary setback," she insisted. "Maybe I was supposed to slow down for a while. There's a lot of conditioning I can do while I'm in the cast."

Knudson-Fitzpatrick stays in shape by playing tennis, volleyball and racquetball. During the summer she plays on two softball teams.

"I've always felt you have to get in shape for the sport, not use the sport to get in shape," she said. "You have to be ready to perform your best. If you're not going to do your best, why bother?"

Knudson-Fitzpatrick's husband prefers golf to skiing, but he attends many of her races. Her son Ryan, 6, loves skiing and she thinks her 18-month-old daughter Tess is also going to be a skier.

"I don't ever want my kids to think they're being pushed into skiing, but I'll do whatever I can to help them," Knudson-Fitzpatrick said. "If they're going to take it seriously they have to train. I've trained all my life and that's why I've been competitive."

It isn't only on the ski slopes that she's competitive.

Knudson-Fitzpatrick silenced the doubters at her job with Georgia-Pacific, where she sold more than $50 million worth of lumber. Then she turned to a new challenge, building and operating a Nautilus fitness center in Princeton, N.J. Once again she proved the doubters wrong.

Whether it's on the ski slope or in the business world, when someone questions Knudson-Fitzpatrick's ability it just makes her try harder.

So when she says her ankle injury is only a temporary setback and won't keep her from skiing this season, believe her. She'll be on the slopes in January.

Anne Knudson-Fitzpatrick is a study in concentration and perfect skiing form as she goes through a gate in the Jeep Challenge series last winter in Stowe, Vt.

North's JV squad ties for MAC title

By Justin Fines
Special Writer
Grosse Pointe North's junior varsity girls basketball team finished the season in a first-place tie with Anchor Bay for the Macomb Area Conference White Division championship.

Hamilton added 15 points and nine rebounds. Erin Peters held North's defense together and played well all season.

"(Anchor Bay) was the biggest non-Grosse Pointe South game we played," Comfort said.

North Sports

"The girls played very, very well," said head coach Bob Comfort after the Lady Norsemen beat Anchor Bay and Fraser in their final two games. North's only division loss came to Anchor Bay early in the season.

North ended the season with an easy victory over Fraser to finish 13-1 in the division and 17-3 overall.

Jenny Champine had 12 points and five rebounds against Fraser.

"The first time we played Anchor Bay they had an easy win, but we came back the second time and won by nine points," Comfort said.

North's Jody Costello had 18 points and teammate Tanya

"Jody Costello, Lindsay Merjos, Erin Peters, Kim Moore, Tanya Hamilton and Jenny Champine were all leaders," Comfort said. "And with five returning freshmen, I'm sure we'll have another good season next year."

Norsemen learn lesson

Grosse Pointe North's hockey team learned a valuable lesson during the third period of its 6-3 victory over Wyandotte last weekend.

"We found out what we have to do to win games," coach Dan Abraham said after the Norsemen erupted for five goals in the third period to overcome a 3-1 deficit.

"We don't have any stars on this team. We have to work as a unit if we're going to be successful."

Joey Sucher started North's outburst with nine minutes left in the third period and ended it with an empty-net goal in the final minute. In between Sucher's two goals, Brian Quinn, Gary Corona and Mike Klobuchar also scored.

"Everybody had opportunities in the third period," Abraham said. "We didn't sit back and wait for things to happen like we did in the first two periods. We're a blue-collar team. We have to work for everything we get. We won't blow teams out, but we won't get blown out, either."

Brad Marshall scored a second-period goal for North, which got excellent goaltending from Jason Chevalier.

"He really challenged the shooters," Abraham said.

North opened the season with a 6-3 loss to Port Huron Northern.

"That's a good hockey team," Abraham said.

Klobuchar scored twice for the Norsemen and Marshall collected the other goal.

North struggled in the second period against the Huskies and trailed 5-1 going into the final period. The Norsemen blanked Northern until it scored its final goal into an empty net after goalie Chuck Schervish, who played a strong game, was pulled for a sixth attacker.

Crane hoists South skaters

Brian Crane paced Grosse Pointe South's hockey team to a pair of non-league victories last week.

Crane scored four goals in the season-opening 7-1 victory over Notre Dame, then scored the winner with about five minutes remaining in the third period to give the Blue Devils a 4-3 victory over Port Huron Northern.

"Brian is really a special person," said South coach John LaLonde. "He has one of the hardest, most accurate shots I've seen for someone his age. He gets his shot away in the blink of an eye, too."

Kevin Watt, who assisted on Crane's goal, Marcel Chagnon and defenseman David Auld also scored for South in the Northern game.

Auld's goal was the first of his high-school career.

Watt and Chagnon were both playing with new linemates when they scored.

"Paul Haddad and Jim Andary were out with injuries, so I had to juggle the lines," LaLonde said. "We moved Watt from the second line to the first and Chagnon up to the second and both played pretty well."

South jumped out to a 3-1 lead over the Huskies, but several penalties in the second period enabled Northern to tie the game at 3-3.

"We totally dominated the game until we ran into some penalties," LaLonde said. "Then we got back on track in the third period. Our rookie goalie, Andy Brewer, really rose to the occasion when we were shorthanded and our penalty-killing units — Crane and Tom Rajt, Watt and Todd Frederickson and Kevin Brenner and Chagnon — all played well."

LaLonde said his veteran defensemen also played well against Northern.

South started slowly against Notre Dame, which was playing its first game since dropping the sport 14 years ago because it was too costly.

"Notre Dame played very well for a new team," LaLonde said. "They were very tenacious and made us work for everything we got."

South led 2-0 early in the second period, but the Irish's Kevin Stempin cut the lead in half, scoring his team's only goal at 6:47 of the second period.

The Blue Devils increased their lead to 4-1 after two periods.

Watt had two goals for South and Rajt added the other one.

"We got excellent goaltending in that game from Jason Hall," LaLonde said. "The thing that bothered me most was that only two lines figured in the scoring."

Notre Dame got strong efforts from freshman goalie Mike VanLacken and defenseman Vic Krese.

The pickle ornament was considered one of the most special tree decorations by families in Germany. For good luck it was always the last ornament to be hung on the Christmas tree. When the children were allowed to view the decorated tree on Christmas morning they would begin gleefully searching for the pickle ornament for they knew that whoever found that special ornament first would receive an extra little gift left by St. Nicholas for the most observant child

Park beautification commission awards playscape organizers

Seven organizers of the huge playscape project at Patterson Park were honored by the Grosse Pointe Park Beautification Commission at its annual awards night Nov. 13.

Bruce and Gigi Wyman, James and Kate Butler and Ron and Ann Porter received Civic Awards for originating the playscape idea and seeing it through to successful completion. Peri Craig received the same award for her relentless fundraising efforts.

Also receiving Civic Awards were Clare O'Dell, who annually decorates the Park's lampposts with wreaths; the Grosse Pointe Men's Garden Club for its work at Pierce Middle and Defer Elementary schools (president Sheldon Flynn accepted the award), and the Council for the Grosse Pointe Garden Clubs for its continuing grants to the Park beautification commission.

This year, fewer residential awards were bestowed. Commission chair Lynn Crissman said the city was divided into five districts, and each district was limited to no more than six awards.

"You should be very proud of your awards," she said. "You've been chosen from a very competitive field."

The Residential Award winners, by street, were:

The Residential Awards were given to those homeowners who enhanced the appearance of their homes through landscaping, floral displays, renovation or restoration and preservation and maintenance.

Robert Ramsey, awards chairman, said the Commercial Awards went to eight businesses that significantly improved the exterior of their properties.

Commercial Award winners were Grosse Pointe Cable; Past, Presents and Future; Janet's Lunch; Grosse Pointe Reliques; Park Place Liquor; Beaupre Studio Inc.; Tom's Steamer; and Third Coast Booksellers.

Park Mayor Palmer Heenan praised the commission members for their efforts to beautify the city.

"They are so wonderful," he said. "They are the first of so many volunteers that do so much for this city. They give us the ambience we have."

Some of the award recipients received the beautification commission's new decorative tile. This year, it features the Tompkins Community Center at Windmill Pointe Park.

The tile is available at City Hall for $6, said commission vice chair A. Pat Deck. A framed tile will cost extra, when available.

YOU HELPED MAKE A DREAM COME TRUE

On behalf of the children of Grosse Pointe Park we thank you for your support of The Playscape In The Park. We are indeed fortunate to live in a community such as this one which is as generous and progressive as it is. It takes hundreds of people to come together in body and spirit to bring a dream into reality and that is what happened in Grosse Pointe Park in 1991! Because of the sheer numbers of you who contributed financially, voluntarily or both, listing everyone individually is simply impossible. We would not want to risk omitting even one person. Your contribution, in whatever form, should bring you great pride and should give your children and grandchildren great joy.

Thank you everyone.

SHELBY

SECOND FLOOR PLAN

MAIN FLOOR PLAN

Farmhouse updated

The Shelby features a simple and pleasant design which combines the best of the leisurely mode of the past with the practical elements of the present. Offering 3,150 square feet of living space on two floors, the Shelby offers both privacy and luxury.

The home is essentially a modern reinterpretation of the classic farmhouse. Here, the traditional front porch has been turned into an extensive and attractive porch/deck which extends more than halfway around the home. This feature is very much in keeping with the use of space in the interior.

A glass-inset front door off the porch opens into a classic entryway with a coat closet. The spacious stairwell is located here. A corner archway to the visitor's left leads into the comfortable living room, with a full bay window and a fireplace with a built-in wood box.

The large archway to the visitor's right in the entryway leads into the traditional separate dining room, which offers large windows and another full bay window. A doorway gives easy access to the large kitchen, which offers fully built-in appliances, multiple storage spaces, a breakfast bar, a separate large pantry and a light-filled breakfast nook. The walls of the nook are almost totally of glass, and doors lead out onto the deck and nook.

This exceptional and impressive kitchen/nook area may also be entered through a doorway above. To the visitor's right there is a door to the downstairs lavatory, which also offers a door leading out onto the porch.

Above the kitchen is an outstanding family room area. This dynamic space features large windows and a set of French doors leading onto the porch. The room is designed to allow the addition of a wood stove, or perhaps another fireplace, should the owners desire. Also located here are a generous storage area, a cloak closet, and a doorway leading back into the entryway. This lower floor includes 1,546 square feet of living space.

The classic stairwell, with a full center landing, gives out onto a traditional full hall. There are two storage areas off the hall. To the visitor's left are four large bedrooms, each with large closets and generous windows.

An outstanding feature on this floor is the presence of two full baths in this area, each located between two bedrooms, with access from both. These two baths each feature double rooms. The first with twin sinks and large mirrors, the second with the toilet and tub/shower.

To the visitor's left off the stairwell is the easy-to-use full laundry room (complete with window and counter space) and the entrance to the crowning touch, the master suite.

The sleeping area of the master suite includes a full bay window. A luxurious open space off the sleeping area, separated by cleverly used angled walls, boasts a large walk-in closet, a linen closet, and the door to the private lavatory, which includes an oversize shower.

The private upper floor offers 1,604 square feet of space. The Shelby's exterior is a pleasing combination of stucco, traditional wood or metal railings on the extensive porch, and effectively used gable roofs, with a dormer offsetting the over-all design.

Practical, luxurious and comfortable, the Shelby is a home for all climates, locations and activities.

For a study kit of the Shelby (206-06), send $7.50 to Today's Home, P.O. Box 2832-T Eugene, Ore. 97402. Be sure to specify plan name and number when ordering.

Furniture at a discount

Former Grosse Pointe resident Kate Gladchun has published a 71-page guide, "The Fine Furniture and Furnishings Discount Shopping Guide."

Gladchun, who graduated from Star of the Sea High School, is an interior designer.

"Many people know about discount furniture buying, but to my knowledge, no one has put together all the information necessary to effectively shop for particular items or the best price," she said.

The guide is intended to save hundreds, or even thousands, of dollars by buying furniture and furnishings through discount resources available to the general public.

The guide is $10 plus $2 for shipping and handling, if mailed, and is available through Resources, Inc., P.O. Box 973, Bloomfield Hills, Mich. 48303-0973. Or call Gladchun at 644-3440.

Lauren Garvey of Grosse Pointe was one of 300 children who auditioned for a chance to co-host the 65th Annual Michigan Thanksgiving Parade airing Nov. 28 at 9 a.m. on WDIV-TV, Channel 4.

The Grosse Pointe Academy student, shown in the Channel 4 lobby, tried out in hopes of being selected to do color commentary with the WDIV Newsbeat team.

Protect your pet from cold, dangerous weather

The Michigan Humane Society reminds pet owners that cold weather and pets don't mix. Weather forecasters predict unseasonably cold weather throughout the winter months, which means extra care needs to be taken to protect all pets.

The indoor dog requires only a few precautions when traveling outdoors for short periods of time. If the indoor dog is a short-haired breed and goes for a walk, be sure to protect it from the cold with a coat or sweater. Always keep a towel on hand to dry the dog, including its feet, when it enters the house. Slush and salt deposits from sidewalks and streets can cause paw and skin irritation.

The society discourages pet owners from keeping dogs outdoors anytime, but especially during the winter months when a dog outdoors needs special attention. Following are some common sense approaches to caring for the outdoor dog in winter.

- Be sure the doghouse is in good repair. Fix any leaks or gaps that might let moisture or wind enter.

- Elevate the doghouse so that it is 4 to 6 inches from the ground. Any moisture that does enter the doghouse will be able to dry if the house is elevated.
- Place a flap over the door of the doghouse to prevent drafts.

- Place the house so that it faces southeast and away from prevailing winds.

- Use clean straw as an insulating and bedding material. When straw becomes wet it loses its insulating properties, so be sure to change the straw frequently.

- Increase the pet's intake of food to help maintain the animal's body temperature.

- Keep fresh food and water available for the animal at all times, and replace if either becomes frozen.

- When the temperature or wind chill falls below 0 degrees F consider bringing the pet indoors into warm surroundings. A basement or a heated porch will help to maintain the animal's body temperature. Do not house the outdoor dog in a warm portion of the house, because extremes in temperatures can be harmful.

DOGS & CATS PUPPIES & KITTENS
Available for adoption. Home Veterinary Service. 22931 14 Mile Rd, St. Clair Shores, 790-0233.

LOVABLE dogs and cats need good homes. For adoption information call: Northern Suburbs Animal Welfare League Volunteer. 754-8741, 464-4984

PLEASE DON'T DELAY! SPAY OR NEUTER YOUR PET TODAY!

An altered pet is a healthier and happier companion. Also, it spares you the grief and pain of having puppies and kittens destroyed when no homes can be found. Countless numbers of sweet, innocent little ones are euthanized every day in shelters across the country because a pet wasn't spayed or neutered. If we cut down on the numbers of unwanted litters being born, we will also cut down on the number of abandoned, lost and unwanted animals to destroy.

WELCOMING THE NEWEST FAMILY MEMBER — There's not a more perfect holiday gift than a doll that can be loved for years, such as Christina from Balica.

More than mistletoe, eggnog and roasted turkey, the holidays represent good times and family fun.

Cooking, decorating, shopping and gift wrapping are all experiences little girls look forward to sharing with their mothers year after year. The holidays play an important part in the passing of traditions and the strengthening of bonds between a mother and daughter. That influence becomes apparent while watching a child playing with her favorite doll.

"Besides her mother, a young girl's best friend is often her favorite doll," says Lori Grupp, vice president of marketing for Balica Dolls. "Dolls are the perfect holiday gift. With dolls, a girl can express emotions and share experiences."

Dolls also play an important role in a young girl's growth. Child developmentalists agree that dolls are a great way to encourage the creative play that parents know is so important.

"Having a doll to play with stimulates more interpersonal play than trucks or cars," says Barbara Bowman, Dean of the Erickson Institute for the Advanced Study of Child Development.

Children play with dolls as if they were people, creating relationships and conversations as well as reinforcing the values learned in real life.

Bowman says young girls often assume the role of the mother in their interaction with dolls. They feed, dress, bathe and talk to her just as a mother would to a child.

According to Grupp, that may be the reason infant and baby dolls are so popular with younger girls, who more often re-create the mother-daughter relationship.

"As soon as you give a girl a doll, she will hug her, talk to her and try to feed her," Grupp says. "Girls spend hours pretending to be the grown-up for a change."

Grupp says that's why the Balica line continues to be popular. "The dolls allow girls to pretend and play. Each girl gives her doll a personality and establishes a relationship."

Balica dolls are designed in Rodental, Germany, by world-famous dollmaker Brigitte Zapf. Each doll is the result of highly-skilled craftsmanship, with eyes that open and close, detailed clothing and life-like faces. Many of the dolls have soft hair that can be washed and styled, and each is covered by a two-year limited warranty.

A Balica doll is the perfect addition to the family this holiday season. They are available in major catalogs, toy stores and mass merchandise stores.

Even the pop-up flash fires automatically if the scene is too dim or if you need "fill flash" for a backlit subject. You can be push-button creative, too — a "mode" button lets you shoot panoramas and night scenes, snapshots off your TV set, or red-eye reduction flash pictures.

Some shooting tips: Use the self-timer to get yourself into the picture with the kids. Keep the camera handy wherever the action is to get the best candid shots. Snap group photos quickly so people look most natural. Use the 30-80mm zoom (plus macro) lens to get closeup portrait shots. When photographing small children, get down to their height for better frame-filling photos. And most importantly, keep plenty of film handy, especially some of today's "faster" films if you're shooting indoors a lot.

Christmas safety tips to ensure a Happy New Year

THIS CHRISTMAS, offer a gift of security and peace of mind in a Sentry Security Chest, UL rated for fire safety for $35.

Chestnuts roasting on an open fire... lighted trees and decorations... burning candles — some of the things that make the holiday season special can actually increase the risk of fire in your home.

The fact is that every 50 seconds there's a household fire in this country. So, to minimize the danger in your home, it is a good idea to follow these simple guidelines, offered by Sentry Group, maker of Sentry Fire Safe® products, for handling potential hazards and enjoying a firesafe Christmas:

- Make sure to keep your Christmas tree away from all sources of heat, such as radiators and stoves. If you buy a real tree, purchase one that's been freshly cut, and be sure to water it every day.

- Avoid overloading electrical outlets. Check Christmas lights for damage to the plug or wires, and replace broken or burned-out bulbs with new ones of the same wattage.

- If you have a fireplace, make sure that the chimney is cleaned regularly to eliminate dangerous build-up of soot and ash. Be sure to keep all flammable items, including Christmas stockings and discarded wrapping paper, well away from the flames.

Since the risk of fire is greater than usual at Christmastime, it's a good time to think about fire protection as well as prevention. That way, even if fire does strike, you can keep family heirlooms, tax records, proofs of ownership, and other important documents from going up in smoke.

Your best safeguard of these vital records and keepsakes is to store them in a safe, fire or storage unit rated for fire resistance by Underwriters Laboratories (UL). Sentry manufactures a line of UL rated fire resistant products in a variety of sizes and at affordable prices ranging from $35 to $150.

Make this a safe Christmas by taking a few fire prevention precautions and offering your loved ones a gift of security that offers peace of mind and keeps on giving after the holiday season.

Making cleanup fun for kids

A TIP FOR PARENTS — During the holidays and beyond: Make cleaning up part of your child's play by encouraging make-believe games. For example, picking up plastic LEGO bricks isn't a chore if your child transforms the LEGO Brick Vac, a child powered sweeper, into a fabulous all-terrain vehicle.

The wristwatch, once a folly, now a functional necessity

Have you ever stopped to think about the small device that rests upon your wrist? This piece of jewelry, functional as it may be, governs a great portion of our lives, yet it is something we all seem to take for granted.

Even though man's life has been dictated by the passing of time for thousands of years, it was only at the beginning of the century that the wristwatch became a popular accessory. Even as late as 1917, the wristwatch was still defined as a "fashionable folly."

The first appearance of a wristwatch can be traced back to 1571, when the Earl of Leicester — a favorite of Elizabeth I — is reported to have presented the Queen with a little watch that could be fastened onto a wrist-strap.

The famous French philosopher and mathematician Blaise Pascal (1623-1662) is also said to have worn a watch tied on an armband. Though quite unusual for a man, the wristwatch was popular among mothers and nannies between the 17th and 19th centuries — the precious jewel was safer from young children's fingers than the traditional watch worn around the neck.

From the very start, women encouraged the introduction of the wristwatch, helping develop its more decorative side. In 1868, the Swiss watchmakers Patek Philippe created the first lady's wristwatch, expressly designed for Countess Kocewicz of Poland. The company's first complicated watch

The extensive use of wristwatches during the Boer War (1899-1902) and the First World War (1914-1918) proved the wristwatch was also extremely functional, saving lives as well as time. Instead of wasting time pulling a watch out of their pockets, soldiers would just cast a quick glance at their wrists.

As this year marks Switzerland's 700th anniversary, it is worth noting that many of the Swiss watch inventions we now consider standard were developed by Patek Philippe, one of the finest Swiss watch houses. For example, the keyless watch (1842), the second hand (1847), the first complicated watch (1915) and the stop watch (1927) are all part of the company's legacy. In 1989, to celebrate its 150th anniversary, Patek Philippe created the world's most complicated timepiece — one which performs 35 horological functions, 33 of which are complications.

Time has been an element in human life since man first walked the earth. Then, he looked to the environment — the sun, the moon, and the stars — to record the passage of time. So, when you next glance down to check the time, take a moment to contemplate how something which was regarded as a folly is now a functional necessity.

JEWELRY, THE IDEAL GIFT WHOSE BEAUTY LASTS — earrings, bracelets, pins, necklaces...lovely fashions created in gold, pearls, diamonds, colored stones...all available at your local jeweler at prices to fit every pocketbook.

Jewelry: The ideal holiday gift

It's that time of year when you're looking for the perfect gift...something beautiful...one whose beauty lasts...and one whose price fits your pocketbook. Jewelry is ideal. There's a perfect piece of jewelry for everyone.

For example, are you looking for a gift for someone just beginning her jewelry wardrobe? Think about a pair of diamond stud earrings...they come in every size and every price. Later on, you can dress up these studs with any number of earring "jacket" designs which dramatically change the look of the studs.

For that person you think "has everything"...nobody has too much jewelry. Bracelets, earrings, rings and pins are designed with gold, pearls, diamonds and colored stones.

A "jacket" for her tennis bracelet will give it a completely different look...a new diamond anniversary ring will certainly bring a smile to any woman's face.

Jewelers of America (JA), the national association devoted to consumer information, suggests that anyone looking for that "ideal" gift should visit his or her local jeweler. He or she has a selection of beautiful jewelry within every price range and will be happy to answer any questions.

And, JA will send — free of charge — a series of pamphlets with tips and guidelines for buying jewelry. Write to Jewelers of America, 1185 Avenue of the Americas, New York, NY 10020. Dept. MGG.

This holiday season: First the person, then the gift

It's always a relief to have holiday shopping over and done with; even if you realize that the gifts you have chosen aren't really up to par, it's still nice to have shopping out of the way.

However, when the big day arrives, the gifts you gave are being opened, and you look at the expressions on the faces of those who are opening your gifts — you begin to wish that you had bought that person something he or she would really enjoy, instead of an item that hollers, "I am a last-minute gift!"

Shopping does not have to be a hassle; it can be an extremely rewarding experience. When you purchase a gift which you are positive your loved one, co-worker or friend will cherish, a feeling of overwhelming gratification will be the result.

This season, try not to purchase a gift that you think a person will like. Do your research and know that the gift you give will be loved.

Here are a few ideas on how to accomplish this:

- Start early. No more "week before Christmas" shopping.
- Ask relatives or friends what the person really wants and needs.
- Find out the person's hobbies and interests.
- Go shopping with the person and pay attention to everything he or she admires but will not buy.
- Certificates for pampering gifts, such as a massage, facial, manicure, pedicure, or a day at the health spa, are perfect presents. People usually won't splurge on such luxuries, but love receiving them as gifts.

• A beautiful dish containing a healthy portion of a favorite food is always a great treat.

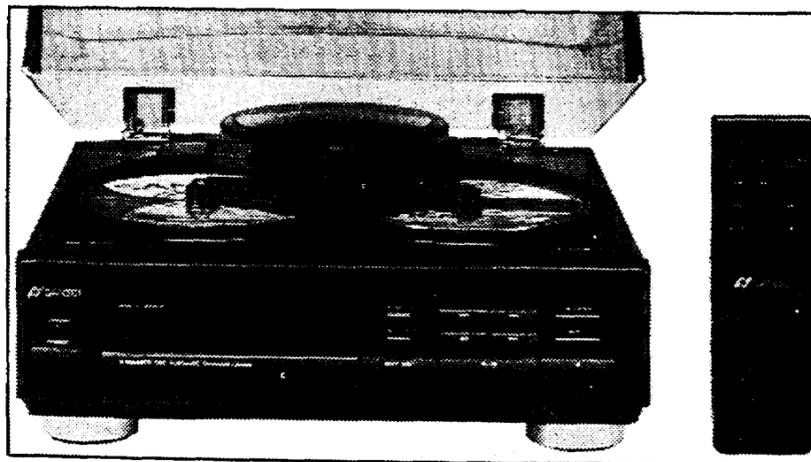

• Ask yourself these questions: What does the person adore but feel may be too luxurious to spend hard earned money on? Or what does he or she desperately need but hasn't found the time to buy?

• Gifts as practical as blank cassette tapes for the music buff, or film for the shutter bug may seem boring, but will no doubt be what the recipient will use and appreciate.

• Consider presenting tickets to a play, show, or something more out of the ordinary. (If the person has an interest in cars, why not take him or her to an auto show?)

When you see an item, a place, an event — anything that causes a particular person to come to mind — that's the moment to start thinking about a gift that would make them happy.

No matter how unusual a person's fancy may be, remember that you are buying a gift to please that person, and if it is what they want or need — and it's in accordance with your budget and schedule — give the person you care about a gift that will never be forgotten.

HOLIDAY CALLS FOR ADAM — A perfect gift for that special someone who has everything, PhoneMate's ADAM (All-Digital Answering Machine) offers state-of-the-art features that allow busy individuals to skip, repeat and save specific messages at the touch of a button. In addition, the unit announces the time and day calls were received, and allows users to scan messages 30 percent slower than normal for taking notes. Ideal for the person on the run, ADAM also transfers messages to other numbers, including car phones and pagers.

Wrapped up thinking about holiday gift ideas for friends and family? The latest in telephone answering machines and cordless phones may answer your call for the ideal gift.

With a wide variety of features and styles available, choosing the right model can be a challenge. PhoneMate, a telecommunications industry leader, offers some suggestions to help find the most suitable models for those on your shopping list.

PAM (Private Answering Machine), one of PhoneMate's newest products, is perfect for teenagers, roommates, home offices and small businesses. When linked with a primary answering machine through a phone jack, this compact unit enhances privacy by eliminating the need to go through others' messages to collect one's own.

Upon reaching the main answering machine, callers simply enter a prescribed code, such as "7#," which forwards them to the desired individual's PAM unit. Up to three PAM units and one primary answering machine can be combined on a single phone line to form a household message center.

PAM also offers several advanced features, including one-touch operation, which saves, erases and rewinds messages at the touch of a button.

Advanced all-digital

For the friend or relative who has everything, PhoneMate recommends ADAM, the All-Digital Answering Machine. The first fully featured all-digital answering device available, ADAM uses digital signal processing, the same technology found in voice mail computers.

This sleek, contemporary unit offers several features which retrieve and organize messages easily. For example, with "Instant Access," users can locate specific messages without rewinding or resetting, similar to selecting a song on a compact disc.

"Message Control" allows users to skip, repeat and save individual messages at the touch of a button. And for taking notes, "Variable Speed Playback" permits recordings to be scanned 30 percent slower than normal.

Those on the go will find ADAM's "Message Transfer" function especially helpful — it forwards messages to any pre-programmed number, including car phones and pagers.

Additional conveniences include extension pick-up, which stops the machine when the call is answered from an extension phone; time/day stamp, which announces when calls were received; and handset message retrieval for listening to messages through the privacy of the phone handset.

ADAM comes complete with an integrated telephone which features 20-station autodial.

Contemporary cordless

Chances are, busy moms, teens and home office workers will put cordless telephones at the top of their wish lists. For callers who want the convenience of a cordless with the clear reception of a conventional phone, PhoneMate suggests two of the most sophisticated cordless phones on the market — Models 2910 and 2650.

The 2910 incorporates "SecureCall," a highly advanced feature which scrambles the signals between the handset and base unit to prevent others from listening in through other cordless phones, scanners or baby monitors.

Both the 2910 and 2650 feature "Ultra Clear Noise Reduction Circuit," which significantly reduces background noise, providing the clearest reception available in a cordless phone.

In addition, the 2910 is equipped with "Optimum Channel Memory," which selects and remembers the clearest available frequency from 10 channels. The unit also doubles as a household intercom by switching to intercom mode when users send a signal to the base unit (or cordless handset) and the paged party answers.

Ideal for home office and small business use, the 2910 features a speakerphone and three-party conference capabilities.

The 2650 includes an integrated answering machine, designed so that several operations can be performed through the handset. Such functions include remote handset message retrieval and call screening, and memo/conversation record. The unit also offers one-touch operation, as well as beeperless remote to retrieve messages from most touch-tone phones.

PhoneMate's 2910 and 2650 carry suggested retail prices of $219.95 and $199.95, respectively.

PAM retails for $129.95, and ADAM has a suggested retail price of $249.00.

PhoneMate, Inc., designs, engineers and markets proprietary telecommunications products for home, professional office and small business use. Its products are available in consumer electronics and department stores nationwide.

PhoneMate is a wholly owned subsidiary of Japan-based Asahi Corp., whose major shareholder is Casio Computer Corp.

BLAST AWAY with Bucky O'Hare — Bucky O'Hare, a fearless, heroic rabbit, and his crew from outer-space battle to defend the "aniverse" from their arch-rival, the Evil Toad Menace. Action figures, made by Hasbro, sell for approximately $5 each.

Great toys at great prices

Rabbits from outer-space, wrestlers, dolls that talk, pirates, trucks and miniature collectible dolls are some of the hottest toys this holiday season. But there's no need to empty your wallet while trying to find the perfect toys for children. There are plenty of great buys to be found for $10 and less.

Bucky O'Hare action figures are a cast of wacky and bizarre characters from outer-space. Bucky and crew are out to save their "aniverse" from the Evil Toad Menace. Figures sell for approximately $5 each.

New dolls for 1991 include Tell Me Tots, the little baby dolls with a big doll feature: they talk. Tell Me Tots say short, child-like phrases including "Love you" and "Bye-Bye." These miniature friends are available in eight different white or black styles and sell for $10 each.

Eco-warriors enter the ranks of G.I. Joe this season. These environmentally concerned Joes are out to protect Earth's delicate ecological system from toxic contamination by Cobra forces. These figures, which come with water-squirting accessories, show battle damage when hit with toxic waste (cold water) and are restored by dipping them in anti-tox (warm water). Figures are approximately $5 each.

The popular Cabbage Patch Kids, now available in pocket-sized versions with poseable arms and legs, are perfect stocking stuffers. Twelve different figurines are available and sell for approximately $4 each.

World Wrestling Federation offers a whole new assortment of WWF action figures and accessories. Thanks to spring-activated arms and legs, each figure recreates the maneuver for which his namesake is known, such as the Ultimate Warrior and his Ultimate Slam. Figures are approximately $6 each. Accessories include a recreation of "Damian," Jake "the Snake" Roberts' snake, for $8, and also an inflatable WWF Bop Bag for $8.

Prancing into its ninth year as a continued favorite is My Little Pony, with many collectible ponies under $10. Sweet Talkin' Pony can say three different sentences like "I love you" or "I'm pretty" when her sides are gently squeezed. Sweet Talkin' Pony sells for approximately $10.

Scurvy pirates and noble adventurers quest for lost riches in swashbuckling tales with the Pirates of Dark Water. Figures, based on the Hanna-Barbera animated series, are approximately $5 each.

L'il Babies are miniature dolls randomly packaged in brightly colored bags, so girls never know which of the 48 styles they have selected. L'il Babies sell for approximately $1.25 each and are great for collecting and trading.

Preschoolers will be rolling along with the big, easy-to-push trucks and trailers of My First Tonka Truck 'N Trailers. Three different trucks with separate trailers come with two play figures and sell for approximately $8 each.

In addition to dozens of tasty recipes, this unique book has 65 humorous illustrations from the pen of talented cartoonist Horne, whose drawings are sure to bring a smile.

Wild Game Cookbook is divided into ten recipe sections: Big Game Delights; Small Game Tummy Fillers; Winged Creatures; Fish And Other Water Critters; Liquid Concoctions; Vegetable Treats; Nuts, Seeds, Blossoms; Fruits And Berries; Breads, Butters, Sauces, Puddings, Too; and Hodgepodge.

Dempsey, a life-long outdoorsman and adventurer to whose memory Wild Game Cookbook is dedicated, did not live long enough to see this edition in print. He gathered the recipes for more than 40 years. His "Secrets of Hunters and Trappers" are shared in Wild Game Cookbook, along with tips on tanning, making soap, and preparing game for various forms of cooking.

To order Wild Game Cookbook, send a $12 check or money order (cost of shipping included) to UCS PRESS, 3531 W. Glendale Ave., Suite 202, Phoenix, AZ 85051. Send $11 for each additional book ordered.

Score points with that special youngster on your holiday list

NBA basketball trading cards are a holiday gift idea sure to score points with that special youngster on your holiday shopping list. Whether your child is a card collector or simply a sports fan, NBA Hoops™ basketball cards make the perfect gift.

Starting new hobbies

Collecting NBA basketball cards is a great hobby for youngsters because it's fun, easy to start and educational. To begin collecting, all your child needs is a pack of NBA Hoops cards. The fun then begins for your child as he or she learns how to trade in an effort to acquire all of his or her favorite players.

Collecting NBA basketball cards is also the best way to learn more about the many great players of the NBA. In addition to featuring a full-color action photograph on the front, each card also includes statistics and career highlights on the flip-side.

A gift that lasts

Although there are many good reasons for collecting basketball cards, the best reason is that with each new season an entire new series of cards becomes available and your child can continue to grow his or her collection.

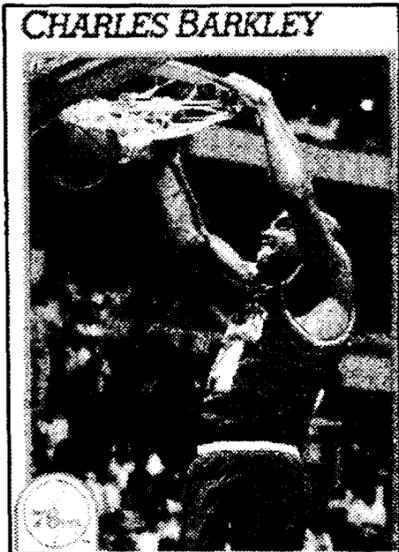

Here are a few ideas to add a touch of NBA Hoops basketball to your child's holiday:

• NBA Hoops Superstar Set — For $12.95, Sears and JCPenney are offering a special limited edition 100 card set featuring the NBA's top players.

• NBA Hoops Wax Pack — For a suggested retail price of 55 cents, toss a wax pack of 15 NBA Hoops cards in as a stocking stuffer. Larger packs of 47 cards are available for a suggested retail price of $1.49. Available at hobby shops, toy stores, supermarkets, convenience stores and most drug stores.

• NBA Hoops Collector's Kit — For a suggested retail price of $13.99, you can start your child on the fun road to NBA basketball cards collecting. The kit features 50 premiere edition NBA Hoops cards, an NBA Hoops Collector's Album 3-ring binder, a selection of plastic protector pages, and a 20-page illustrated guide about basketball card collecting. Available at most toy stores and hobby shops.

FOR ONLY 55 CENTS, toss a wax pack of 15 NBA Hoops™ basketball cards in as a stocking stuffer, and your child could get a Charles Barkley card.

A guide to holiday tipping and gift-giving

It's easy for your holiday gift list to grow to enormous proportions when you start adding all the "other" people in your life: the gardener, the newsboy, the mailman and the babysitter, to name a few. To whom should you give, and how much is appropriate? Liz Claiborne Cosmetics surveyed 100 professionals to find out what the guidelines were in their industries, and what they thought was a really great gift. Then they asked 200 men and women across the country what they do in those gray-area situations.

Mail carriers are government employees, and they aren't supposed to be tipped. The postmaster general suggests writing a letter to your carrier's supervisor, which will be entered into his or her permanent record. However, two mail carriers reported receiving highly unusual gifts. One was presented with a pile of junk mail he had delivered during the year, and another was given a watch (he took that as a hint that perhaps he was late a few times!).

Hairdressers, cleaning services, babysitters, news delivery services and doormen welcome tips or gifts any time during the year. It is always appropriate. The type or size of gift is completely up to the individual, but a minimum of $25 is suggested. One hair can be re-used in any room of the house.

There's also a specially packaged 1 oz. Liz Claiborne Fragrance eau de toilette for $24, and a 1.7 oz. Claiborne Holiday Cologne Spray for $20. They're all wrapped in spirited, colorful boxes and they're perfect for whenever you want to give something both personalized and appropriate.

To whom do you give? When 200 people were asked what they usually give, more than half of all respondents said they regularly give Christmas gifts or tips to hairdressers, mail carriers, cleaning professionals, newspaper delivery people and co-workers. Thirty-three percent give to teachers, business vendors, clergy, handymen and employers.

How much do you give? There were substantial differences around the country. People in Los Angeles are very big tippers, often giving hundreds of dollars. People in the Midwest and Southwest generally give no more than $25.

Mid- and Southwesterners also give gifts such as fragrance, fashion accessories, household items and liquor, rather than cash, while people on both coasts are more likely to give cash.

A colorist reported getting cat food, another received a bluefish, and yet another was presented with a blank check — which he did not accept. A newsboy said he once got a peanut butter and jelly sandwich, and a maid said the most unusual (and least liked) gift she got was a bottle of Mop 'n Glo!

Teachers and clergy often get small gifts during the holidays, and that's fine, as long as they're kept small, under $25. Fragrance, mugs and tree ornaments topped the list as the most popular gifts. A comfortable, free-spirited fragrance like Liz Claiborne is appropriate for day or evening wear, and is a great choice for gift giving.

Business vendors appreciate getting gifts during the holidays, but not at other times of the year. A food basket or gift certificate is a good choice.

The right stuff: After finding that professionals in most industries frequently — and gladly — receive fragrance, fashion or household items, Liz Claiborne packed up five Gridkits for women, priced from $35 to $66, and three Christmas Gear gifts for men, priced from $32.50 to $40. Each has different combinations of Liz Claiborne Fragrance and fashion accessories, in a wire grid basket that

Get fit faster with dual-action exercise

Looking for the perfect gift for people who want to make fitness a part of their lives, but who have a hard time fitting a club workout into their hectic schedules? Try fitness equipment that gives them twice the benefit from every workout, in the comfort of their own home: dual-action exercise equipment. It's designed to maximize exercise by working both upper and lower body muscle groups in a single session. These machines are fast becoming one of the most popular forms of both home and health club exercise.

You might be familiar with dual-action stationary cycles, but the latest innovation is dual-action stairclimbers, like Precor's 730e Dual-Action Climber. Stairclimbers already offer a great low-impact exercise for the large muscle groups of the lower body. When you incorporate upper body exercise into a stairclimber workout by using your arm, shoulder and chest muscles, you'll burn calories faster than while cycling, running or doing calisthenics.

The 730e makes exercise easy — you determine how much leg and arm movement you want by pushing or pulling on the ergonomically designed handlebars at your own pace. The result? All the large muscle groups of your body are actively involved in the workout — and that provides optimum aerobic and muscle-toning benefits. Look for dual-action exercise equipment at your local specialty fitness equipment retailer.

THE HOLIDAY GIFT that makes exercise easy year round and provides a total body workout: Precor's 730e Dual-Action Climber.

Make your eggnog a unique treat for all

The holidays are right around the corner, so whether you're planning a large extravaganza, a quaint get-together, or a small family gathering, spice up the occasion with the traditional festive drink: eggnog. With a touch of distinction, you can turn this all-time favorite into a personal secret!

The Gourmet's Guide to Mixed Drinks by Thomas Cowan (Quill) is an excellent reference for the domestic or professional bartender, the experimenter or the dabbler. It is the source for the Whiskey Eggnog and Baltimore Eggnog recipes reproduced below.

WHISKEY EGGNOG

- 2-3 oz bourbon or rye
- 1 tsp sugar
- 1 egg
- Milk
- Nutmeg

Shake all ingredients, except the milk, with ice and strain into a collins glass. Top with milk and sprinkle with nutmeg.

BALTIMORE EGGNOG

This eggnog is a favorite at parties. The recipe below is for one drink only, but the measurements in parentheses will make about thirty servings.

- 1 oz brandy (1 pt)
- 1 oz rum (½ pt)
- 1 oz madeira (½ pt)
- 1 egg (12)
- 1 tsp sugar (2 cups)
- ¼ milk or 2 oz heavy cream (3 pt)
- Nutmeg

Shake with ice, and strain into a collins glass or a highball glass. If heavy cream is used, you may want to top the drink with milk. Dust the surface with lots of nutmeg.

Don't forget the teetotalers! The Non-Alcoholic Pocket Bartender's Guide, by Jill Cox (Fireside Books), contains delicious drinks for those who choose not to consume alcohol.

Everyone should be able to enjoy eggnog; here are two recipes that contain no alcohol:

ORANGE NOG

- 1 part orange juice
- 1 egg, beaten
- 1 tsp sugar
- Dash of angostura bitters
- Drop of vanilla extract

Put all ingredients in a blender and whiz until smooth. Chill and serve.

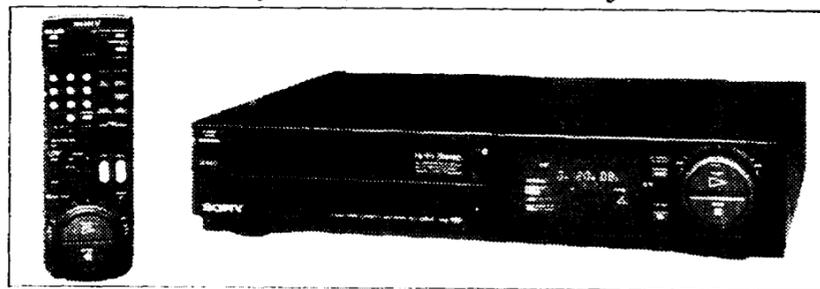

EGGNOGGIN PLUS

- 300 ml (1¼ cups) milk, chilled
- 1 egg
- ¼ tsp vanilla extract
- 2 tbsps sugar
- Pinch of ground nutmeg to decorate

Mix all ingredients, except nutmeg, in a blender at high speed until frothy. Pour into a glass and sprinkle with ground nutmeg.

Eggnog is a traditional drink that no Christmas should be without. With an added twist of something unique, your eggnog will be dramatically different from all the rest!

Stock a tool box for a personal yet practical gift

WHETHER THE RECIPIENT IS A HE OR A SHE, a tool box makes a great holiday gift. Include some tools, art, sewing or hobby supplies...whatever fits the interest of the person you're giving it to. Rubbermaid's Roughneck® Tool Boxes are of tough plastic so they won't rust or dent and can be used indoors or out.

Everyone likes to receive Christmas stockings or holiday gifts selected especially for them. Here's a variation that's just as personal and even more practical: a tool box containing, in addition to tools, a few fun items that fit the recipient's interests or hobbies.

Roughneck® Tool Boxes by Rubbermaid come in six different models, any of which can be personalized for all do-it-yourself persuasions. For example, ask yourself if you have people like these on your shopping list:

• Home handyperson — A large tool box with multiple compartments can replace the old, rusty one currently in use. Add some specialized tools and a set of Roughneck™ Small Parts Bins.

• Just out of the nest — Treat someone moving into a first apartment with a tool box stocked with basic tools for home repairs, plus an assortment of picture hangers, nails and screws, and maybe a book or video on home organization.

• Mom's or dad's helper — The boy or girl who likes to tag along on work projects makes a great candidate for a small 12" tool box that's just right for starter projects. Stock it with small tools and perhaps a modelmaking kit.

• New car owner — Fill a tool box with wrenches, fuses and other auto supplies, or make up a road kit with flashlight, flares, road maps and maybe a book on weekend getaways.

• Proud home buyer — Whether it's a new home or a fixer-upper, home buyers will welcome a tool box holding basic tools and helpful extras. How about including an "I.O.U." note promising to assist in hanging curtains, wallpapering or refinishing floors?

• Hobbyist — Is he or she into railroading, woodworking, needlepoint or gardening? These hobbies all have their own tools and supplies. Stock a tool box with a few appropriate ones and a gift certificate from their favorite hobby store or a subscription to a hobby magazine.

Another nice thing about a tool box gift is that you can add to the supplies when other special dates arise during the year...birthdays, Mother's Day, Father's Day and other events.

Rubbermaid's tool boxes are tough and durable; handy pull out trays hold supplies in multiple compartments. Look for the Roughneck® Tool Box in hardware departments of mass merchandise, discount, hardware and home center stores.

PERHAPS MORE THAN ANY OTHER COLLECTIBLE, dolls are acquired because of the feelings they evoke. "Justin" is one of the expressive baby dolls designed by award-winning artist Yolanda Bello.

Oh, those beautiful dolls!

Whether considered childhood companions or cherished collectibles, dolls have played an important role in civilized cultures for hundreds of years.

The tradition of using dolls as playthings dates back to 2,000 B.C. when the ancient Egyptians made dolls of wood or fabric, some with movable joints and extra clothing. Dollmaking also thrived during the Greek and Roman Empires.

During the Renaissance, European nobles commissioned life-sized dolls, or mannequins, to keep up with the latest fashions. It wasn't until relatively modern times — and the development of a prosperous middle class — that the use of dolls as children's toys found wide acceptance in Europe and later America.

Today, millions of Americans never outgrow their enthusiasm for dolls. The number of adults involved in doll collecting started rising about 10 years ago, prompting a sharp increase in dolls created specifically for this purpose. Primarily made of porcelain, these dolls are intended for display, and many are issued in limited-edition thematic series.

One of the most sought-after contemporary doll series on the market is Yolanda's Picture-Perfect Babies, designed by leading doll artist Yolanda Bello, and available from the Ashton-Drake Galleries.

Dolls in this collection are frequently listed among the best-selling in the country, and four of Bello's porcelain babies — "Michael," "Amanda,"

"Jennifer," and "Heather" — have earned first place in Doll Achievement awards from the National Association of Limited Edition Dealers (NALED) in 1991, 1989, 1988 and 1987, respectively.

In addition, prices for the six dolls which are no longer in production have appreciated significantly on the secondary market. "Jason," the first doll in the series, was originally issued in 1986 for $48. An August 1991 survey of selected dealers across the country revealed that the doll has been selling at retail for an average of $887. A later doll in the series, "Amanda," was available through 1988 for $63. According to the survey, it is now selling for an average of $133.

Ashton-Drake recently announced the latest and last doll in this series: "Danielle." However, collectors can look forward to the debut of a new series of Bello baby dolls called Moments to Remember. It starts with "Justin," a brown-haired boy wearing a sailor outfit.

Other children are also the subject of series, such as The International Festival of Toys and Tots by Kathy Barry-Hippensteel, which features toddlers from around the world dressed in traditional clothing; and Down the Garden Path by Patricia Coffey, a suite of dolls capturing the heartwarming qualities of little girls.

Other artists have found inspiration in the pages of children's literature. For example, Dianna Effner has designed dolls based on the boys and girls in Mother Goose.

And fashion still plays an important part in the contemporary market through dolls that capture the costumes of different eras. Stepping Out and Yearbook Memories — both sculpted by Roger Akers and costumed by Stephanie Gerardi — are two series that focus on the clothing and lifestyles of yesterday.

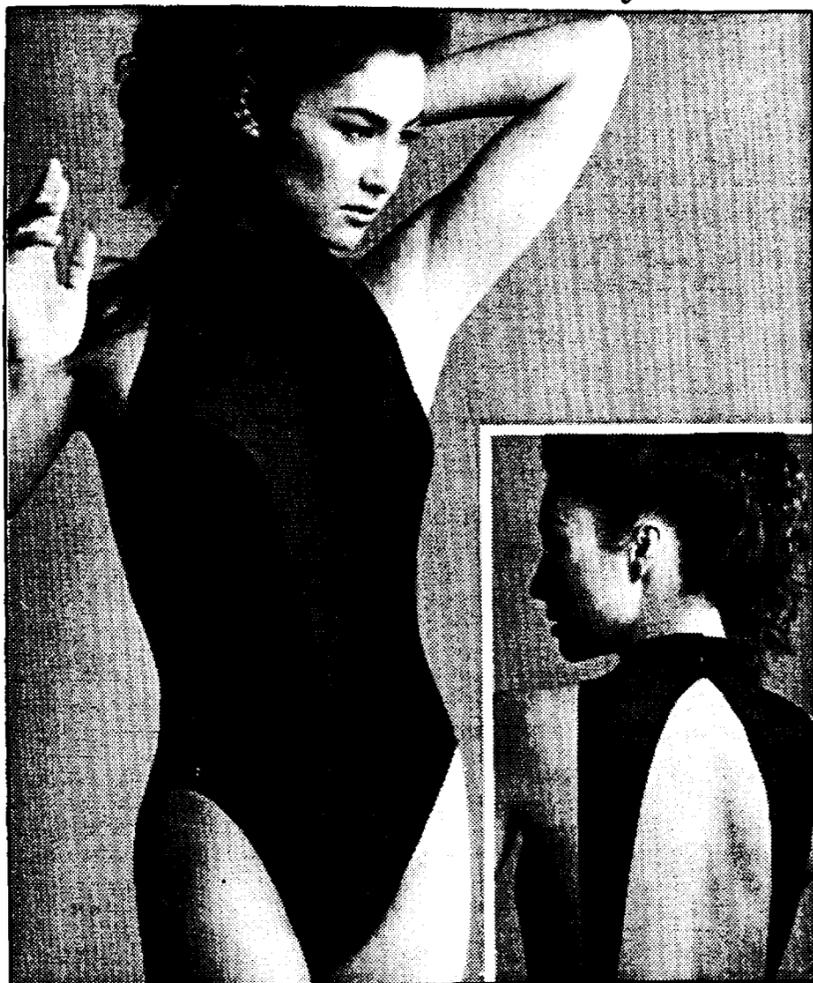

Regardless of theme or age, however, all dolls have one thing in common: their ability to touch the human heart. Perhaps more than any other collectible, dolls are acquired because of an emotional response. Collectors may buy a doll because it reminds them of one they used to own as a child; or it may resemble a favorite friend or relative. That's why dolls have endured for almost 4,000 years.

To learn more about collectible dolls, write for "The Pleasure of Their Company: The Story of Doll Collecting," Ashton-Drake Galleries, 9200 N. Maryland, Dept. M, Niles, IL, 60648.

DOLL COLLECTING is a fast-growing hobby, attracting millions of adults who have never outgrown their enthusiasm for dolls like "Rosemary."

Turkey stuffing is one of those time-honored and treasured holiday foods that often go unchanged from holiday to holiday, from generation to generation. Chances are, during this holiday season, family cooks all over America will be preparing turkey stuffing from recipes their mothers, grandmothers or even great-grandmothers passed along. But for adventuresome holiday cooks, there's a wonderful unique "twist" to add to any favorite stuffing recipe that's sure to become an instant classic!

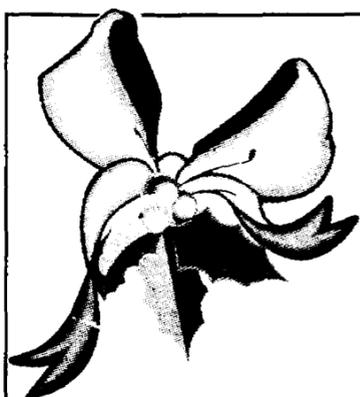

Pretzels! Just think of it — no fat, no added sugar and no cholesterol make pretzels a wonderful "guilt-free" addition to grandma's classic recipe. Although many Americans are increasingly concerned about fat and cholesterol intake, pretzel fans can relax. Leading cooking experts and nutritionists favor pretzels because they contain no fat, no added sugar and no cholesterol.

Snyder's of Hanover has been in the pretzel business for 65 years and has developed a mistake-proof pretzel stuffing recipe featuring their popular Sourdough Hard Pretzels. Best of all, these pretzels add a delightful and unexpected sourdough flavor pretzel fans know and love, without added fat or sugar.

Sample Sourdough Hard Pretzels in your favorite recipe, or try the Snyder's of Hanover recipe specially created for sourdough pretzels.

- 6 oz. pkg long grain wild rice prepared according to pkg. directions
- 8 oz. sliced fresh mushrooms, sautéed
- 1 medium onion, chopped, sautéed
- 12 oz. pkg. link sausages, browned and cut into 1/2" pieces
- 2 cups Snyder's of Hanover Sourdough Hard Pretzels (salted or unsalted), broken into 1/2" pieces, crumbs removed
- 3 cups bread sticks, croutons, or 1 small pkg. stuffing croutons Celery seed, salt, pepper, sage to taste

Combine all the above in a very large bowl and fill turkey cavities. Spoon remaining stuffing in a casserole and baste with pan drippings or chicken broth. Cover with foil and place in the oven 1 hour before serving. For crispy stuffing, remove foil for 10-15 minutes.

Science and art meet in desktop publishing

FOR THE DESKTOP PUBLISHER NEW TO GRAPHICS, Metro ImageBase® has introduced an exciting new package: ImageBasics. Covering a range of topics, ImageBasics is a perfect introduction to electronic clip art. Topics include business graphics, newsletter images, people, sports and more. This all-new collection of 42 electronic art images is priced at $59.95 for the Macintosh® version and $69.95 for the PC (dual media) version.

Ever since Gutenberg invented the printing press, publishing and democracy have grown together: The greater the number of people with access to a press, the greater the number of ideas in circulation — among them, the philosophy of equality. Today, with the arrival of desktop publishing, the personal computer may be the real great equalizer, since anyone can create his own magazine or newspaper for comparatively little cost, from his own desk.

But what about the artwork and graphics that make publications look official and designed? The need for artwork to liven up the visual monotony of the printed word is even more important today than in the time of illuminated manuscripts.

The latest innovation, which will likely become the latest necessity, is electronic art. Drawings and graphics are electronically reproduced on diskettes which are compatible with both Macintosh® and IBM® systems.

Metro ImageBase®, a division of Metro Creative Graphics, sells diskettes organized by subject, such as The Four Seasons, ReportMaker, Travel, People, Food, Nine to Five, and thirteen others. Each disk has 100 or more images from which to choose, and each image can be cropped, reduced, or enlarged by the user.

Electronic art will interest everyone from the executive who wants to jazz up his brilliant proposal, to the restaurateur creating his own menus, or the bride-to-be designing her wedding invitations. Each volume sells for only $145.

For the desktop publisher new to graphics, Metro ImageBase has just introduced an exciting new package: ImageBasics. Covering a range of topics, including business graphics, newsletter images, people, sports and more, ImageBasics is a perfect introduction to electronic clip art. This all-new collection of 42 electronic art images is priced at $59.95 for the Macintosh version and $69.95 for the PC (dual media) version.

It's as easy as

GAMES ARE YEAR 'ROUND FUN FOR ALL AGES! Mark and Cyndee move brightly-colored wooden snail game pieces down the garden path of Snail's Pace Race from Ravensburger.

Your child has been subjected to thousands of television commercials, each vying for a share of your wallet this holiday season. How can you as a parent be sure that the game you purchase is a good value — in more than financial terms? What points should you consider as you roam the aisles of your local toy store? And most important of all, will your child have fun playing the game?

Game playing brings children, family and friends together for loads of conversation, laughter and good fun — that's why board games figure high on kids' wish lists for birthdays, holidays and other special occasions.

"Mommy! Daddy! Want to play a game?" Playing board games with children provides excellent opportunities for parents to become involved in their children's development. Says Dr. Brian Sutton-Smith of the University of Pennsylvania Graduate School of Education, "Parents who participate in their children's play are better equipped to select and match toys to each child's interests and abilities."

Besides being fun, games are also an entertaining way to teach children new skills, such as color recognition, matching objects, or following rules. Scott Marley, contributing editor of Games magazine explains, "All good games are educational, often in ways that are overlooked. Preschoolers learn to concentrate and to follow instructions from simple games. Older children increase their coordination from physical games, and practice memory, logical reasoning, and planning ahead from games of strategy."

Ruth B. Roufberg, toy consultant and researcher on play related learning, asks three questions of every game she reviews:

1. Does the game match the child's interests and abilities?

Three-year-olds are just learning the basics of game play. For instance, Snail's Pace Race teaches children how to roll a die and take turns — and every player is declared a winner.

At ages five and six, many children are ready for competitive play. Games such as Race to the Roof from Ravensburger introduce the element of surprise: Will I lose a turn? Will I get sent back to the start?

Children ages eight to ten are interested in playing games on an equal level with mom and dad. A challenging family game such as aMAZEing Labvrinth evens out the playing field for all ages with an enjoyable exchange of laughter.

2. Is the game fun to play again and again?

The easiest way to determine if children would enjoy a game is to ask! Trust their experiences in playing with their friends.

The best games are the ones with repeat play value. Each round of play should be fresh and interesting. For instance, Ravensburger's What's My Name has a two-sided playing board, "secret" dice, and requires the individual players to think up clues, making each game a new experience.

3. Are the game board and playing pieces durable enough to survive long-term play?

Parents need to consider the quality of a product when selecting a game.

The box should be sturdy enough to be used as storage for the game pieces in between play time. A high-quality product should have both wooden playing pieces and a wipeable board surface for sticky fingerprints. In addition, the game manufacturer should offer free replacement of missing game pieces.

By considering these three questions when deciding which board game to buy, whatever the occasion, a parent or relative will be sure to choose one that is both age- and skill-appropriate. If you remember that learning can be entertaining, your children will get the most important benefit from playing quality board games — fun that builds skills.

For more information on the games mentioned in this article, visit your local specialty toy retailer or call Ravensburger toll-free at (800) 631-1272.

Holiday fun in the palm of your hand

AFTER A LONG DAY IN HIS WORKSHOP, Santa sits down for a quick game of Super Monaco GP™ on Sega's 32-color portable handheld video game system: Game Gear. Topping most of Santa's wish lists this year, Game Gear even converts to a high-quality color portable TV.

The children (and parents!) are nestled, all snug in their beds, as visions of video games dance in their heads.

Once again, video games will top most wish lists this holiday season. And color handheld portable video games will be the system of choice for players of all ages and those on the go.

"Portability means video game fans can play wherever they want — commuting on the train, flying in planes or when visiting a relative during the holiday season," says Robert Botch, marketing director for leading game maker, Sega™ of America. "Color portables like Game Gear are especially popular. After all, who wants to play in black and white, when you can have realistic color images?"

Technological advances have greatly improved today's portable color video games over the older, more basic black and white systems.

Indeed, Sega's newly introduced Game Gear has the clear edge with the most advanced technology at an affordable price.

What makes Game Gear the best handheld video game system? The New York Times recently called Game Gear "The newest, most advanced system offering sharper graphics and better games." And Associated Press labeled Game Gear "a 32-color wonderful experience."

Several attributes have earned Game Gear these accolades, making it the choice gift for children and adults alike. First of all, it's a more sophisticated system with 32 on-screen colors, compared to Game Boy's two-color, black and white, capability.

It also has a back-lit screen that enables game play even in total darkness. For extra fun, two players can even hook up their Game Gears to play competitively against each other.

It's a color TV, too!

Perhaps the most exciting option among color handhelds is the TV tuner option, transforming the system into a high quality portable color TV.

Sega is the only manufacturer that makes this option available at an affordable price. Both the Game Gear system and TV tuner option total approximately $260, while similar packages retail for more than $400. This makes Game Gear a perfect hi-tech gift for mom or dad, as well as the kids.

"This holiday season, people are looking very seriously to get the best value for their money," says Botch. "Game Gear gives them both a video game system and a color TV for less than a comparable stand-alone portable color TV would cost. You can't beat it for portable entertainment."

An ideal travel toy

Portables like Game Gear are perfect for traveling and are a great way to pass the time or catch the news while commuting on a train or bus. As for business or family trips, Game Gear is an ideal carry-along for airplane or car travel.

An auto adaptor or rechargeable battery pack are available to cut down on battery use, making game play very affordable and accessible.

Games for all

A variety of more than 25 games for all different interests is available on Game Gear. Leaderboard Golf™, Chess Master™ and Clutch Hitter Baseball™ make game play fun and challenging for adults.

Kids will get excited by Super Monaco GP™, a high-speed car racing game, G-LOC™, a fighter pilot game and Revenge of Drancon™, an intricate role-playing action game.

The whole family will enjoy Mickey Mouse Starring in the Castle of Illusion™, Joe Montana Football™ and Columns™, a puzzle game that comes with the system.

Offering diversity at a good value, Game Gear is a sure-fire hit as a gift for the young — and the young at heart.

A unique gift he'll love

It's difficult to find anything original or unique these days; it seems as though many gift items are either a too-trendy copy of something else or far too common. So, this season, what is the key to selecting something that is definitely out of the ordinary?

When giving a gift or making a purchase for yourself, originality, practicality, beauty and suitability are the keys to a good buy. These three factors can be well taken care of with NFL, MLB and NBA Pro Sports Buckles, which include Super Bowl, World Series, and NBA Championship editions.

These buckles are fantastic gifts for people with varying interests: For the sports fanatic, the sports buckles will undoubtedly be a hit. All teams are available and the buckles are all officially licensed by the NFL, MLB or NBA, individually numbered, and they come with a certificate of registration.

There's even a Buckle of the Month

Club, where one or more teams per month can be collected at a much lower price than in most shops.

For the collector, these buckles are a wise investment, because only 10,000 of each are ever sold; then a new design is introduced, which makes the sold-out version increase in value. (Remember what happened to the value of baseball cards!) Since this edition of collectible buckles has a very limited distribution, they are difficult to find.

The person who believes that the uniqueness of an item is what puts it in a class by itself will be interested to know that the Sports Buckles can be used as a paperweight, an item of clothing, (they look great with jeans!) or as a display on a shelf or desk — and they won't wear out like hats or souvenirs.

Each buckle is made with semi-precious pewter, is individually numbered and is hand enameled in each team's colors.

Make this holiday season a truly special one. Gift idea, collector's item or souvenir — the Pro Sport Buckle can be used for any of these, plus so much more.

For more information on all team buckles, contact Cornerstone Buckles, 535 Lakewood Circle, Washington, WV 26181; (304) 863-5085.

You can't beat our frames. But you can beat the holiday rush.

The holiday rush will soon be on. So there's no time like the present to frame that special present. Or find it, for that matter. At The Great Frame Up. You can easily frame it yourself. The same day, for less. And we'll help. Or we'll frame it for you—before Christmas. And you still save. There are plenty of special frames for special presents. But to save money—and holiday hassles—frame now. And give later.

"Reel" collectibles capture favorite movie memories

MAGICAL MOVIE MOMENTS are captured forever in limited-edition collectibles inspired by big-screen classics such as "Gone With the Wind," "The King and I," "The Wizard of Oz" and "My Fair Lady."

America's love affair with motion pictures doesn't end when the credits roll and the lights come up. Limited-edition collectibles inspired by big-screen classics have given film buffs a way to make their favorite movie moments last long after the final reel.

Collector's plates are one of the most popular limited-edition artforms for movie collectibles. There are more than 20 movie-themed series included in the U.S. listings for The Bradford Exchange, the world's largest trading center for limited-edition plates. The earliest series listed on the exchange began in 1977 and featured scenes from "The Wizard of Oz." This perennial favorite is also the subject of a second collection: The Wizard of Oz: A National Treasure.

The latter series has recently premiered in honor of the film's selection by the Library of Congress as one of the original 25 classics listed as American treasures in the National Film Registry. The National Treasure series starts with "Follow the Yellow Brick Road," a plate that portrays Dorothy and Toto as they begin their journey to Oz.

Other feature films which have been captured on porcelain plates include "Oklahoma," "The Sound of Music," "Casablanca," "Singin' in the Rain," and "Mary Poppins." In addition, "Cinderella," "Fantasia," "Snow White," and "Sleeping Beauty" are among the roster of animated Disney pictures to inspire plate series.

The eternal appeal of Scarlett O'Hara and Rhett Butler has helped to make collectibles re-creating scenes from "Gone With the Wind" among the most sought after. This cinematic masterpiece is the focus of no less than three plate series, the latest of which is entitled Gone With the Wind: Critic's Choice. The initial issue, called "Marry Me, Scarlett!" shows Scarlett and Rhett embracing as she breathlessly agrees to accept his proposal of marriage.

film graces the top of "Scarlett at Twelve Oaks," a porcelain music box available from Ardleigh Elliott. It depicts Scarlett O'Hara holding court at a picnic at neighboring Twelve Oaks. Surrounded by suitors waiting to carry out her every whim, Scarlett is glowing with pleasure at being the center of attention. Musical accompaniment is provided by the well-known notes of "Tara's Theme."

In the collectible doll category, Ashton-Drake Galleries has debuted reproductions of several characters from vintage Hollywood musicals. From "The King and I," the waltzing duo of Deborah Kerr as Anna and Yul Brynner as the King of Siam is re-created in "Shall We Dance," the first set of porcelain dolls to be endorsed by the Estates of Rodgers and Hammerstein.

The King's regal outfit shines with embroidered metallic trim and is accented by "golden" jewelry. Anna's shimmering satin gown features net oversleeves with tiny rhinestones and her hair is gathered in a snood, sparkling with silver bugle beading.

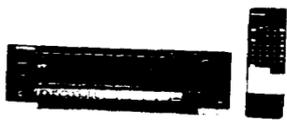

The elegance and grace that characterized the film version of "My Fair Lady" is also evident in the portrait doll of Audrey Hepburn that launched the doll collection of the same name. Authorized by the actress, "Eliza Doolittle at Ascot" wears a gown made from Chantilly lace over satin, trimmed with black-and-white striped grosgrain ribbon. Accessories include a matching lace and tulle parasol and a wide-brimmed hat lavishly decorated with plumes, fabric flowers and striped ribbon.

Unlike more fragile memorabilia (such as posters and photographs), limited-edition plates, dolls and music boxes won't tear or fade with time. The characters and scenes they capture will remain as vivid as when they first appeared on screen, assuring these collectibles a starring role as long as there are happy endings in Hollywood.

Board games make great gifts for just about everyone

To help sort your way through the myriad of board games available in toy, book and department stores, here's a rundown of some of the best games on the market:

For adults and young adults, SongBurst provides a trip down rock & roll's memory lane. The first game to feature the actual lyrics from such classic artists as The Beatles, Chuck Berry and The Doors, SongBurst asks players to complete famous lines from great songs and answer some tough trivia questions.

Brand new for 1991, SongBurst offers plenty of fun for music fans as they compete to show off their rock & roll knowledge — and their singing voices. Suggested retail price is about $30.

Balderdash has been one of America's favorite games since its introduction in 1988. There's good reason for its success — it's a truly funny game that can loosen up any gathering.

Players bluff one another by creating definitions for 2,500 real, but very strange-sounding words, like "cagmag," "findrinny" and "banstickle." Points are awarded for a correct answer as well as a good bluff. Accumulating points and moving around the board are the stated objects of the game, but the real point of playing Balderdash is to generate laughter. On that score, this game's a winner. Suggested retail price is $30.

Clever Endeavor has an unusual and appealing twist. Thousands of Americans, from students to surgeons, created "The Game Of Clever Clues" by submitting clues that describe a particular person, place or thing. Each card offers six clues, which are read aloud one at a time. Everyone competes to guess, and the player who comes up with the correct answer first scores. The fewer clues you need, the more you score.

A game which rewards quick thinking and a healthy sense of humor, Clever Endeavor won the prestigious Parents' Choice Award for outstanding board game. Suggested retail price is about $30.

Hedbanz is an off the wall new game in which players take on the identity of a person, place or thing. There's one catch — your identity is displayed on a card worn on your forehead, visible to everyone in the room but you. It's your job to discover your true identity by asking questions of other players. You might say it's a case of using your head to find out what's on your head.

Hedbanz is fast moving, unpredictable and very, very funny. It retails for about $30.

The Games Gang's Sentence Cube Game is an updated version of an old favorite. Players spill out word cubes and try to make sentences, sometimes serious and sometimes very silly.

Just reintroduced, Sentence Cube Game is great fun for everyone in the family. And with the newly added twist of team play, it's better than ever. The price is right too, about $17.

Pictionary Party Edition is a new way to enjoy one of America's all-time best games. A sturdy carrying case turns into a reusable dry-erase easel, allowing up to 32 people to get in on the fun. It's the perfect gift for the Pictionary lover on your gift list. Suggested retail price is $32.

The reintroduction of an old favorite, and a new junior version of a current hit, highlight hot new kids' games for 1991.

Husker Du? (Danish for "Do You Remember?") has been popular around the world for more than two decades. It's finally back in the States, with fresh new packaging. The classic memory game asks players to remember the location of 18 sets of pictures randomly scattered on the game board. Because the wheel of pictures can be rotated for each game, memorizing the board is virtually impossible. It's a great way for youngsters to sharpen their memories, and have a good time while they're at it. Suggested retail price is $10.

Finally, Balderdash Junior captures the hilarity of the above-mentioned Balderdash in a version just for kids. The words, which include such gems as "ichiboo," "towilly" and "mohohoo" are just as funny, and a few well-thought out wrinkles make the game easier for youngsters to play.

Balderdash Junior is a perfect tool for parents to help sharpen youngsters' verbal skills and imaginations. Don't let the kids in on the game's educational benefits; they'll be too busy laughing. Suggested retail price is about $13.

CHRISTMAS IS A SEASON OF GIVING, so why not give a gift that will be remembered for years to come? Cultured pearl gifts for Christmas, such as necklaces, bracelets, earrings and cuff links, are all available at most fine jewelry stores.

Ho-Ho-Ho and a merry Christmas to all. This holiday season, enjoy festive gatherings and Yuletide fun. Christmas is that special season filled with tradition and special gifts for loved ones. This year, give a timeless gift of cultured pearl jewelry to those close to your heart.

Finding the perfect gift for each person on your Christmas list can be easy, if you think cultured pearls. They are both beautiful and affordable, a classic gift for men and women, young and old.

A single strand of pearls will melt the heart of any woman this holiday season. From choker to opera lengths, this gift is considered a staple of a woman's wardrobe. Or give cultured pearl bracelets, brooches or earrings. They come in many styles and price ranges; their versatility knows no limits.

Pearl gifts for a man may include pearl tie clips, studs, collar bars and cuff links. All are a tasteful and affordable means of showing that holiday spirit.

There are several factors to consider when choosing cultured pearl jewelry. To ensure the best value for your gift-giving budget, go to a reputable jeweler with a knowledge of cultured pearls. Then view the pearls in terms of lustre, surface cleanliness, shape, color and size.

Lustre is the most important factor in judging high quality pearls. Lustre is the quality of light reflected and refracted from the pearl. Pearls are considered to be highly lustrous when they seem to glow with an inner light, and objects are reflected bright and sharp from their surface. Dull, lifeless or chalky-looking pearls should be avoided. The most lustrous pearls are the most valuable.

The next most important factor is what jewelers call "cleanliness." Cleanliness refers to the quality of the surface of the pearl. Most real pearls are not perfectly smooth and sometimes have what look like tiny pin pricks on the surface. These do not detract from the beauty of the pearl and are acceptable. What must be avoided are pearls with disfiguring spots, cracks or chips.

Pearls can come in almost any shape. The three basic classifications are spherical (round), symmetrical and baroque. The ideal shape of a cultured pearl is considered spherical. Few real pearls achieve such perfection because pearls are created in nature. Most cultured pearls range from slightly to obviously off-round. Examples of non-round symmetrical pearls are the teardrop shaped and the pear-shaped. Irregular and unsymmetrical shaped pearls are called baroque.

All pearls have a basic body color. These colors range from white to black, and everything in between. The most common colors are cream, white and pink. When buying pearls it is important to consider the skin tone and hair color of the wearer. Rose or pink pearls are suggested for fair skinned people or blonds, while cream is better for darker complexions and hair.

Size is another important factor to consider when choosing cultured pearl jewelry. Pearls are measured in millimeters. Six and a half to seven and a half millimeters are the most common.

All other factors being the same, the larger the pearl, the more it will cost. When making that important choice, be sure not to base your decision solely on the size of the pearls. Lustre, surface cleanliness, shape and color are all very important qualities.

To keep your pearls looking like new for generations, proper care is a must. Pearls should be kept free of perspiration, cosmetics and dust. Pay special attention to avoid direct exposure of pearls to perfume or hair spray. Care should be taken to gently cleanse pearls with a soft damp cloth on a regular basis. It also is advisable to have pearl necklaces restrung about once a year. With proper care, cultured pearl jewelry may be handed down for many generations, to become a cherished family heirloom.

'Tis the season to give a gift that will be prized for a lifetime. 'Tis the season to give cultured pearls.

"HOME THEATER" features big performance coupled with contemporary styling for a high-tech package. The performance includes features such as advanced stereo sound with surround sound speakers and picture tube technology that results in a crisp, big-screen image. This new 32-inch direct-view Zenith features a high-performance Bose sound system.

Enjoy the theater...at home

"Home theater" has become a watchword of video/audio entertainment, as equipment has become more sophisticated and consumers seek a theater-like experience in their own homes.

"Television technology has gotten so good that you can have your own theater at home with a big-screen TV and stereo sound. Real-life video and audio action is right there," says Bruce Huber, vice president of marketing for Zenith, the only U.S.-owned television set manufacturer.

Sales of direct-view TVs with screen sizes of 27 inches and larger and projection TVs with screen sizes greater than 45 inches are expected to increase significantly over the next three years. "The concept of 'home theater' has been growing," says Huber. "A bigger picture with terrific stereo sound brings the theater experience into the home."

Today's TV technology gives a bright, sharp, big-picture image, and new built-in "surround sound" technology controls sound so that it perfectly matches the video action. The result is more lifelike realism, because on-screen and off-screen sound is delivered accurately, "just as the producer of the program intended it to be," Huber says.

As TV technology has improved, cabinet designs have turned from sharp corners and deeply set picture tubes. Instead, today's TVs are distinguished by soft edges and sweeping shapes for an advanced appearance that enhances high-tech performance. "The look is sleek and modern," says Huber. "The look combines with performance to complete the home theater package."

Today's VCRs easier to use

Industry estimates say that as many as half of all VCR owners in the U.S. don't know how to program them. Many people, it seems, set their VCRs to record a football game and end up with a video of the ballet, or perhaps their VCR clock seems determined to flash "12:00."

Many VCRs are now easier to use. Zenith's newest models, for example, include new easy programming technology.

"These VCRs don't assume that the viewer knows how to program a VCR," says John Coffin, Zenith's video products manager. New programming software requires only that the viewer know when the program will be broadcast and the channel on which it will be broadcast.

Rather than selecting programs from a series of option lists on the television screen, the viewer programs selections in a simple question and answer sequence. The new system asks a series of questions such as "What channel is the program on?" and "What time does the program start?"

The latest VCRs also feature a unique Message Center on the VCR deck that tells what the VCR is doing. Large letter messages such as "play," "fast forward" and "rewind" appear on the deck. Other operating messages include "no cassette" and "set clock." Message Centers also have done away with the infamous flashing "12:00" that has plagued VCR users for years. Instead, the viewer simply sees "set clock" on the VCR. There's no frustrating mystery to setting the clock. The viewer only needs to answer the simple "What time is it?" and "Is it AM or PM?" on the screen.

"There's no need to wade through a series of screens that offer several options at once," says Coffin. "Programming is easier than ever."

WHAT'S IN DEMAND IN CONSUMER ELECTRONICS? How about VCRs that are easy to program. Manufacturers are trying to take the gibberish out of programming instructions. New VCRs from Zenith, for example, don't assume that the operator knows how to program a VCR. A message center on the VCR's control panel tells the operator what the VCR is doing and runs through a series of simple question and answer sections to record programs and handle previously frustrating exercises such as setting the clock.

What you always wanted for Christmas

A HI-FI SYSTEM WITH A CD JUKEBOX makes a perfect holiday gift — Perfect for today's lifestyle because they provide room-filling sound and are small enough to fit on a shelf or table-top, mini hi-fi systems had only one drawback: They couldn't include a CD changer because none were small enough to fit. Now Sansui has invented one, and it's built into their MC-3000 ensemble, which sells for less than $700. Designed like the familiar record changer, the 5-disc "Robot" CD changer uses a precision over-arm to move the CDs into and out of the play position. In addition to being the smallest CD jukebox, the MC-3000 offers a host of other hi-fi features. Its receiver has sound ambience, live sound mic mixing, five preset equalizations, bass boost, and 24 station presets (18 FM, 6 AM) with station call, preset scan, and auto/manual tuning. A full-logic, dual auto-reverse cassette deck with Dolby B & C noise reduction and normal and high-speed dubbing, 2-way speaker system, and a full-function remote are also included.

For the music collector

THE GIFT OF MUSIC... This holiday season, ringside seats for great performances by some of America's most renowned superstars are as close as your VCR. Sony Music Video offers a variety of home video releases that will make perfect gifts for any music lover on your list. Some titles to explore include "Johnny Mathis: Home For Christmas," a collection of traditional and contemporary Christmas carols interpreted in the unique musical style of Johnny Mathis; "Tony Bennett Live: Watch What Happens," a brand new, made for home video concert performance that features highlights from this living legend's illustrious 40-year recording career; and "Songs Of The Civil War," a must-have collector's item for any Civil War buff that features modern interpretations of historical songs by some of today's biggest artists, including Richie Havens, Waylon Jennings and Kathy Mattea. These videos can be found at your local video retail outlet and carry a suggested retail price of $19.98.

Innovative audio technologies: The latest in autosound systems

The digital revolution, the dominant force in audio today, is beginning to drive sales of car audio equipment.

In that portion of the multi-billion-dollar U.S. autosound market that takes place following the purchase of a new or used car, compact disc (CD) players and multi-disc changers are among the hottest product categories. Seeking to simulate the high-quality stereo sound they already enjoy via their home entertainment systems, consumers want that same pure fidelity when they're on a trip or trapped in a commuter traffic jam.

Total car CD sales will soon top a million units annually, according to the Electronic Industries Association's Consumer Electronics Group (EIA/CEG). After buying CD equipment, consumers frequently turn their attention to replacing and upgrading their other car audio components, including speakers and amplifiers, in order to get the full enjoyment from compact disc technology.

Although CD players and changers seem to be attracting much of the publicity these days, the factory-installed cassette player is the most common audio playback medium in automobiles. According to a recent survey by the Car Audio Specialists Association/Vehicle Security Association (CASA/VSA), two-thirds of all vehicles sold by the big three U.S. automakers in the 1990 model year came equipped with factory-installed cassette units — a figure that would be even higher if the rest of new car sales were factored in.

The American consumer has a wide range of choices when it comes to deciding what autosound system to buy and whether to opt for factory-installed equipment, installation after purchasing the car, or some combination of the two.

The introduction in the months to come of innovative audio technologies such as digital audio tape (DAT) and digital compact cassette (DCC) carries with it exciting implications for car audio. Both systems will be able to deliver CD-quality music for on-the-go entertainment. And DCC will have the additional advantage of being able to play standard analog cassettes as well as the new, smaller digital variety.

So whether you plan to assemble a state-of-the-art car audio system or just want to improve what you currently have, visit your local autosound or consumer electronics retailer for more information and a demonstration. With Americans spending more time in their automobiles these days, it makes perfect sense to take your favorite music with you and enjoy it on a quality audio system.

Art as a gift: To one Western artist, it comes naturally

Who is Howard Terpning? He's the artist thought by some to be the Western artist whose name and art will endure 100 years from now. The focal point of his art — and much of his life — is the Plains Indian.

Terpning's reputation continues to grow at the same time that the idea of giving art as a gift is also becoming increasingly popular. Terpning's art publisher, The Greenwich Workshop, points out that, when given as a gift, art is personal, unique and lasting. It's also highly collectible, the company notes, citing Howard Terpning's work as an example.

Born in Oak Park, Ill., in 1927 and trained at the Chicago Academy of Fine Art and the American Academy of Art, Terpning saw his career evolving as an illustrator. He quickly rose to the top ranks, becoming especially well known for movie posters that included The Sound of Music, Dr. Zhivago, A Man for All Seasons and Cleopatra.

Encouraged by friends, he gradually realized he could make it as a fine artist. Soon, he traded the frenzy of New York for a studio in Arizona.

In the two decades since that decision, Terpning has spent much of his time with various Indian tribes. He has learned their history, absorbed their culture, explored their sacred lands. All that he experienced he carried back to his studio. Through the paintings he has created there, Terpning invites the viewer to understand and appreciate the beauty and virtue of Indian life.

Distinguished career

A review of a few of Terpning's accomplishments helps account for his broad acclaim within the art community:

- In 1979, he was elected a member of the prestigious Cowboy Artists of America (CAA). He went on to serve as president and as a member of the board of the Phoenix Art Museum, where the CAA stages its annual show and sale.

- His peers in the CAA have awarded him the Colt Award for the best collection in the show five times. And, he's received 16 additional gold and silver awards for oil and mixed media — more than any other artist.

- Once again, at the most recent CAA show, Terpning was the talk of the event. He sold all four of his paintings at prices up to $135,000 each.

- Since 1978, Terpning has frequently exhibited at the National Academy of Western Art (NAWA), and in 1980 he received the NAWA Gold Medal for oil. The following year he received the Prix de West, conferred by the NAWA Boards of Trustees.

- In 1990, he won the largest prize of its type — the $250,000 Hubbard Art Award for Excellence — in competition with 38 other artists, all of whom had been nominated and screened by an international jury.

For the past 10 years, Terpning has had limited edition fine art prints published exclusively by The Greenwich Workshop. The company also published the artist's recently-released limited edition book, The Storyteller. All 1500 copies sold out...at $950 each.

Terpning's renown is worldwide, as his works have been displayed as far afield as the Grand Palais in Paris and the American Western Art Show in Beijing.

LEADER OF MEN is Howard Terpning's sensitive portrait of a Crow Indian chieftain of the 1850s. Limited edition prints, such as this one from the artist's publisher, The Greenwich Workshop, provide a gift alternative that is unique, personal and lasting.
