Loss of brother at Pearl Harbor haunts Pointer

By Donna Walker Staff Writer

Winnifred M. Weyhing of Grosse Pointe City is haunted by the thought that her brother may not have been killed inmediately in the explosions that ripped apart the USS Arizona at Pearl Harbor on Dec. 7. 1941.

She has heard survivors and rescuers say that for a short time after the ship sank to the bottom of the 30-foot-deep harbor, knocking could be heard coming from inside the twisted

"The thought that he might have been one of the sailors who were knocking horrifies me," she said, sitting on the couch in her living room amid photos, news clippings, Life magazines and other Pearl Harbor remembrances she has collected over the past 50 years.

Her brother, U.S. Navy Ensign Ben Raymond Marsh Jr., was the first Grosse Pointe resident to die in World War II. He

Marsh was one of 1,154 aboard the Arizona who died during the Japanese attack, his sister said. Some history books say 1,102 were lost, but she insists it was 1,154. Eighty-eight bodies were recovered, but only six were identified, Weyhing said. The rest are entombed in the underwater wreckage, and she believes her brother is among them.

Marsh was born Oct. 11, 1916, in Lansing, to Ben Marsh Sr. and Marjorie B. Marsh. His sister, Winnifred, was born 15 months earlier.

"I was very close to my brother," she said. "We were raised like twins. My mother designed children's clothes, and she would make matching outfits for us.'

Frances Jean, was born, and in 1926, Richard, the youngest of the Marsh children, was born.

Their family moved to Rivard Avenue in Grosse Pointe City in 1928.

Ben Marsh Jr. attended Grosse Pointe High School and became friends with George Ghesquiere and Steven T. Ma-

"They were the 'three musketeers' - they did everything together - and anyone of their generation will remember that," Weyhing said. All three distinguished themselves in basketball and track, and Ghesquiere was also a high school football star.

Ghesquiere became a career Navv man, and was on board the USS Lexington on Dec. 7, Weyling said. The ship was preparing to pull into Pearl Harbor when its skipper saw the smoke and Japanese planes overhead. The ship headed back to sea where it waited out the attack.

When the Lexington finally anchored in Pearl Harbor, Ghesquiere searched the local Grosse Pointe Park Mayor Palmer T. Heenan received valuable assistance from two young aides at the Nov. 18 council meeting. The mayor said he needed help leading the Pledge of Allegiance, so his grandchildren, Erin Jane, 8, and Palmer T. III, 5, children of Sarah and Palmer T. Heenan Jr., of the City, showed him how the pledge is done. The mayor's wife and proud grandmother is Jayne Heenan.

Heenan invited the children or grandchildren of council members and other city officials to come to a meeting and help with this most important task.

Hubbell engineering is Farms' main man

By Donna Walker

Staff Writer Grosse Pointe Farms is one step closer to having better water mains.

The city council has awarded a contract to Hubbell, Roth & Clark Inc. consulting engineers to provide design and construction inspection services for the water main replacements that are part of the city's capital improvement program.

The council adopted a $950,000 revenue bond issue July 15 to fund improvements to its water delivery and sewage system, including: updating electrical equipment in the sewage plant, acquiring automation equipment for the sewage plant, and replacing water mains and sewer lines.

Hubbell studied the city's repair records to determine the scope and estimate the construction costs of the water main replacement project.

The company gave highest priority to the water mains at seven sites, based on their age and repair history. They are located under: 1) Lewiston, between Grosse Pointe Boulevard and Charlevoix; 2) Cloverly, between Chalfonte and Webster; 3)Lothrop, between Chalfonte and Beaupre; 4) Belanger, between Beaupre and Chalfonte; 5) Moross, between Mack and Chalfonte; 6) Oldbrook; 7) Beverly, between Lakeshore and Grosse Pointe Boulevard.

The firm estimated the cost of the project will be $585,000, including engineering, taking bids, construction administration and inspection.

The Farms is saving money by doing the construction administration and layout itself, said City Manager Richard Solak at the Nov. 11 council meeting. Hubbell wanted $13,520 to perform those du-

The city is also getting a break on the cost of preparing the plans and specifications, Solak said.

"I asked them (Hubbell) to sharpen their pencils and give us the lowest possible price, and I think they did," he said.

The firm charges a percentage of the net construction cost of a project for preparing plans and specifications. Normally, it's 8.52 percent for a $500,000 project, according to a chart Hubbell sent to the city administration. Hubbell estimated the net construction costs to be $520,000, but is charging the city only 6.8 percent, or $35,360 for plans and specifica-

It is also charging the city $16,500 for full-time construction inspection.

Solak said that a clause will be inserted into the construction contracts that will require contractors to pay the cost of the construction inspections if they do not finish their work within 44 days after starting.

Thomas E. Biehl, P.E., vice president-principal of Hubbell, Roth & Clark, told Solak in a letter dated Nov. 1 that his company was prepared to begin immediately on the design of the project, and that he anticipated that the plans and specifications would be ready for bidding no later than Feb. 1,

"This would allow construction to commence in early March, should you so desire.

Hubbell estimated that the improvements to the water and sewer lines should be good for about 50 years and that the equipment acquired for the sewage plant should be useful for about 20 years.

Struggling SMART sends SOS to Pointes, hints bus line could close

Staff Writer

If the suburbs don't start contributing their fair share, the Suburban Mobility Authority for Regional Transportation which provides bus service to the Pointes and six counties may fold by April.

That's the gist of an informational packet that SMART recently sent to the five Grosse Pointes.

However, SMART did not şay what each suburb's fair share should be.

About 1,150 people board SMART buses each day in the Grosse Pointes, and about 550 of them live in the Grosse Pointes, said John Sajovec, assistant director of operations for SMART. He said the figures are based on two separate studies that were conducted in 1987 and have been adjusted annually ever since.

Included in the packets that were sent to the cities were a cover letter by SMART Chairman Sam J. Petitto; a memo from SMART Acting General Manager James L. Aho to the authority's board of directors; and SMART's new 11 page strategic plan entitled, "FU-TURE SMART: Preparing Our Transit System for the Change It Needs".

In the memo, Aho said that if things don't change, SMART will have a $7.7 million deficit by June 30, 1992. The deficit will grow by $5.2 million in fiscal year 1993, and by $6.4 million in fiscal year 1994, he said. He blamed the $7.7 million deficit on the following:

 Farebox revenue estimates have fallen by some $700,000 due to an approximate 6 percent decline in ridership on SMART's fixed route services.

 Approximately $300,000 in budgeted local funding contributions are not expected to be forthcoming.

 Projected financial assistance from the state will be $1.3 million below the original budget estimate.

· Costs have increased by $1.8 million for fuel, labor arbitration and legal fees, labor contract settlements, vehicle liability and workers' compensation claims and environmental compliance requirements.

 Instead of having a $1 million surplus at the end of fiscal vear 1991, as it had planned, SMART found itself with a $3 million deficit which was carried over into the current fiscal year. The deficit was caused by cuts in state aid, labor contract settlements and litigation costs, bad debts, and extraordinarily high vehicle liability and workers' compensation costs.

"I have taken steps to reduce the salary and fringe benefit costs of the authority's professional stall have made other administrative cost reductions which together total nearly $400,000," Aho said. "We will continue to look at other areas of potential cost transit system. savings. However, it is clear that additional revenues will be needed to cure the $7.7 million

According to the strategic plan, the following five goals are crucial to SMART's survival: consolidate SMART with the Detroit Department of Transportation (D-DOT) system; establish a dedicated revenue system for mass transit; promote use of mass transit; coordinate with transportation providers other than D-DOT to avoid duplication of service; and make the transit system work better for those who need

Currently, D-DOT riders must transfer to SMART buses to go to the suburbs, and SMART riders must transfer to D-DOT buses to reach most De troit locations.

Combining the two systems would accomplish the following, according to SMART's strategic plan: Provide an annual savings of up to 20 percent of the current combined $185 million SMART/D-DOT budget; give riders fewer transfers and more bus routes; allow larger bulk purchases of buses, spare parts and equipment which would save money; allow the bureaucracy to be cut in half (including accounting systems, federal and state reports and government applications); and afford the opportunity for more coherent planning of the area's mass

Also, it would give bus drivers fewer "dead head" miles. Currently, once a SMART driver has made the last run of the day to Detroit, he or she has to drive the bus back to its garage in Clinton Township. Under a combined system, the driver could park the bus at the closest terminal, regardless of whether it was formerly a D-

"Without consolidation," the report says, "our transit future is bleak. Beginning in January, SMART alone would face mas sive cuts in personnel and ser vices - cuts as high as 75 per cent - just to make it through 1992. The region would need to either accept a system with only skeletal service - at best - or shut the entire system down as early as April of 1992."

Detroit Mayor Coleman Young has said that he would oppose consolidation unless the suburbs contribute to SMART, because he doesn't want Detroiters to fund bus service for Currently, SMART receives 62 percent of its funding from the state; 22 percent from fares; and 16 percent from the federal government.

None of the Grosse Pointes contribute to SMART directly, according to representatives from those cities. The representatives include Woods City Administrator/Clerk Chester Petersen, Farms City Manager Richard Solak, Shores Village Manager/Trustee Michael Kenyon, Grosse Pointe City Manager/Clerk Thomas W. Kressbach, and Park City Manager Clerk Dale M. Krajniak.

They said the information packets would be made available to their respective councils for review. However, there is nothing for the councils to act upon, because SMART made no specific monetary request, just an implied, general one.

"We can no longer expect to live on state and federal funds alone," the strategic plan says. "It is time for local governments to step up and establish a stable, dedicated source of funding, so that our transist system can concentrate on serv ing the public."

Pettito, SMART chairman, said the request was purposely left vague.

"We don't have a particular remedy that will solve our problems," he said. "We're open for suggestions"

He said the packets were mainly to educate officials in the areas SMART serves about the problems the transit system is facing, and that he will meet soon with county and city officials in the areas that SMART serves to get their suggestions. SMART serves Wayne, Ma comb, Oakland, Monroe, Livingston and St. Clair counties

Keep warm by giving

The gray days are back and we have to get a jump on them before allowing ourselves to be dragged down by another of our midwestern winters. Sometimes we dig ourselves in so deep that it takes five long months to crawl out of the doldrums.

Not all of us are fortunate enough to be able to cut our losses and head south until the sun returns to these climes. Each year we have to renew our efforts to keep depression at bay and find ways to give meaning to each day.

I have been watching the ways different people cope with these long winters and survive with smiles intact. One of the most successful means of survival when we can't get out of the state is to get out of ourselves. It is a time of year when we can give of ourselves and know that we are needed and appreciated more than at any other time.

We don't have to drive very far to see poverty and loneliness. There are countless ways to offer our help and very little excuse for not giving in some way. Holidays are particularly difficult for families who are struggling and whether we give of our time, our checkbooks or become involved on a personal level, most of us can reach out to another human being.

One couple of our acquaintance had a unique way of giving to their friends. They invited a respected oncologist to come to their home to talk to their friends over a cup of coffee. The group found the speaker extremely informative and receptive to questions. This couple is dedicated to a cause and is taking action in their mission to pass along information, hoping that others will take up the banner and move forward in spreading more seeds of knowledge.

Other friends of ours spend an afternoon a week taking their pets to local nursing homes. A 97-year-old pal of mine has told me how much it means to her and the others to touch and cradle these loving creatures. They anticipate the visits with joy. It takes so little to bring a tiny measure of comfort to another person and the rewards are evidenced in the smiles returned.

There is much to be grateful for this year. Globally we have witnessed extraordinary historical events in the Soviet Union and other Eastern bloc countries. Several hostages have been released and we have reason to believe that the nightmare will soon be over for the remaining men still in captivity. The war in the Gulf is over and though there is still much to be accomplished there and in other parts of the world, the guns are silent.

It is easy to crawl under our warm covers in this tiny pocket of the country called Grosse Pointe, but let us not forget how very fortunate we are and pause to acknowledge our myriad blessings of Patrick Buchanan and David Duke challenge President Bush in the presidential primaries, will these two ultraconservative Republicans run in the Michigan presidential primary on March

Will Michigan primary lure Bush's rivals?

It's apparently too early to say but Duke's adviser said last week he planned to run in several states, and perhaps in Michigan, "to keep the issues alive and ... have some influence on the process."

If either Buchanan or Duke runs in Michigan, or they both do, that challenge to a sitting president would increase the interest as well as the competition in the Republican half of the state's presidential primary.

If a GOP challenge to President Bush materializes and a half dozen or more Democrats enter their party's contest, a good-sized turnout could be expected from both parties.

That assumes, however, that Michiganians get the message they have to register

Opinion

as either Republicans or Democrats 30 days before the March 17 election in order to qualify to vote on that date.

Buchanan, a nationally syndicated political columnist and former aide to President Reagan, is regarded as a likely candidate in the first primary in New Hampshire. Republicans there make "a big distinction" between Buchanan and Duke, according to Hugh Gregg, a former GOP governor of the state. As a result, he sees many more Republicans backing Buchanan than Duke.

A New York Times dispatch last week said GOP support for Buchanan is increasing as an expression of protest against the president's failure to pay sufficient attention to the economic slump that has now hit New Hampshire.

In addition, the state's largest newspaper, The Manchester Union Leader, has strongly urged Buchanan to get into the race to challenge the president and his "disastrous course of accommodation with the implacable liberal Democratic opposition," the Times reported.

Buchanan appears to be a neo-isolationist, with his "America First" program. But he does appeal to ultraconservatives as well as people in economic straits when he calls for more attention to domestic problems, including the economy, and scoffs at Bush's plan for "a new

In Michigan, little public support has been expressed for Duke, but some conservatives have spoken up for Buchanan.

Yet Duke might be able to use the racist and populist appeals he voiced in Louisiana to make the same kind of race in Michigan that Gov. George Wallace of Alabama made in winning this state's Democratic presidential primary in 1968. Some observers contend Wallace also got help from GOP "cross-over" voters seeking to muddy the Democrats' political waters. It was the threat of a repetition of such a "cross-over" that led the Democratic National Committee to limit Democratic primaries to registered Democrats.

Actually, in Michigan it would be possible for cross-over Democrats to embarrass the GOP by registering in that party to vote for one of Bush's challengers. The presidential primary registration does not affect voters' choices of party tickets in the regular state primary or general elec-

However, Buchanan might benefit in Michigan from a protest vote based on a theme he has discussed in his columns. It is that the president has been so immersed in foreign affairs that he hasn't given sufficient attention to domestic issues, and especially the economy.

That's a major theme that also emerges from the political appeals being sounded by the potential Democratic candidates. It's an issue that could cause trouble for the president in Michigan, especially if the economy has not improved by March Nationally, that issue already has hurt Bush. His approval rating fell below 50 percent for the first time last week in a poll by Cable News Network and Time magazine.

A 'Let's Pretend' millage game

Grosse Pointe town meeting called by the school board last week Taplayed a game of "Let's Pretend" for the benefit of the proposed renewal of school and library millages on Feb. 11.

The group of perhaps 50 people consisting of civic leaders, educators, concerned parents and just plain taxpayers was assigned to four sections to ponder ways of making sure that all views are heard and all questions are answered before the millage renewal election.

To achieve those aims, each section was assigned a special role.

One section pretended to be the "true blue" people with children in the public school system who vote "yes" in almost every millage election. Another group represented the loyal opposition that al-

Why Feb. 11?

oters in the Grosse Pointe School District will go to the polls earlier than the school board desired when they vote Feb. 11 in the school and library millage renewal election.

Why?

Because the county election commission prohibits another election within 30 days of the state's presidential primary which is scheduled for March 17. That means the school board had to plan its election in the first part of February, the last part of April or even later.

The board picked the earlier date because it would give the board more time to notify employees under union contracts who would be laid off in the event the millage renewals are defeated.

The earlier date also would give the board more time to plan a second vote in the event the first renewal effort fails.

most always votes "no" in school and library millage elections.

A third section took the view of people with no children in the public schools who tend to be millage backers. The fourth group represented the swing voters who sometimes vote for millages and sometimes vote against them.

In separate meetings, the groups sought to understand why people in each opinion category felt the way they did about school and library proposals - and then probed for the best ways to answer the questions critics had raised.

One of the questions put to the four groups resulted in a resounding "no" for a special millage to meet such school needs as providing better handicapped access to offices and buildings and improving conditions on the district's playing fields.

By mid-December, the board will officially adopt its plan for a Feb. 11 election on the millage renewal proposals and make its decision about whether to impose any special millage.

Nobody really said so but the memories of the April 1989 defeat of a combined ballot proposal calling for a renewal as well as an increase no doubt contributed to the sentiment against seeking any additional millage this time.

For the schools, however, the 1989 millage proposals had a happy ending. Both were approved by big margins in one of the largest turnouts in recent memory when they were presented as separate issues in the annual meeting in June.

Like the 1989 proposals, however, the school board will seek authorization on Feb. 11 to impose up to 27.55 mills for the schools and 1.30 mills for the library and will calculate the exact millages to be imposed at a later date.

Not the best way

To the Editor:

Your Nov. 14 article about the traffic problem on Moran Road may be misinterpreted.

It is true that the latest Goodel-Givas traffic study includes counting the 24hour traffic volume on some of the north/south and east/west streets.

However, Goodel-Grivas has not been hired to determine the "best way" to divert Hill business traffic away from the surrounding residential streets.

Instead, Goodel-Grivas will report the raw traffic counts to the city council who will use that information in evaluating the council's two-year traffic experiment in which Mc-Millan Road has been reduced to one-way traffic with an intended increase on other streets.

Ordinarily, licensed professional traffic engineers collect data, identify problems, study alternative solutions and recommend changes. Such was the case in Goodel's comprehensive two-volume 220-page engineering study reported to the council in 1985.

The council chose to disregard the conclusions and recommendations of the comprehensive 1985 engineering study and has not requested Goodel to update that study. The data now being collected by Goodel will help the council make a political decision in response to lobbying efforts of certain residents seeking to divert traffic from their street and should not be confused with a professionally engineered solution to the Farms' real or perceived traffic problems.

It's still a date of infamy

or Americans old enough to remember what happened at Pearl Harbor, Dec. 7, 1941, still remains after 50 years "a date which will live in infamy.

That is how President Franklin D. Roosevelt described the Japanese surprise attack when he called on Congress the next day to declare war against Japan.

Whether or not the Japanese tried to warn this country in advance, as they now claim to have done, many Americans still find it difficult to forget and forgive

We remember not only Pearl Harbor but the atrocities inflicted by the Japanese forces on U.S. prisoners during the Bataan Death March, on civilians and military personnel in prisoner-of-war camps and on the Asian nations that were subjugated.

Some of us fear that Japan's pre-war goal of setting up a Greater East Asian Co-Prosperity Sphere through military conquest now is being achieved not only in Asia but in the Western world through Japan's tough imposition of its new economic might.

In the winter issue of Foreign Affairs quarterly, Richard Holbrooke, former assistant secretary of state for East Asian and Pacific affairs, acknowledges that "the U.S.-Japanese relationship is increasingly filled with friction, resentment and mutual recrimination." As he points out, American displeasure with Japan is well-documented but the Japanese now are frustrated and angry because they feel the United States "no longer has the right to make seemingly endless demands based on obligations' arising from the past.

As a solution, he recommends that both sides "change certain attitudes deeply engraved into their national subconscious." That means the United States should accept Japan's new independent foreign policy and Japan should accept equality of market access.

Those are obviously worthwhile goals for both sides but they will be difficult to achieve as long as Americans still remember Pearl Harbor — and the Japanese remember Hiroshima and Nagasaki.

Leave message after the beep

Telephone answering machines do more than take messages. We have one that responds to more commands than the average teenager.

We can program it to answer a call after two rings or four rings. If we're home, we can monitor the caller's voice or we can shut him up and save him for later.

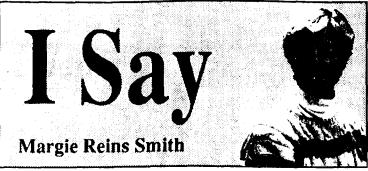

It provides two messages: one for the first 25-or-so callers; another for the late-comers who call after the message tape is

When we get home, the machine winks at us if it has some messages, then backs up and repeats only the ones we haven't listened to yet.

Best of all - we don't have to come home to listen to the messages. We can call this technological wonder, punch in a code, then listen to all that have accumulated since we left. A humanoid voice even announces, "Message total: 15." Or whatever.

I can even call home, punch in still another code, then eavesdrop on what's going on in the house. If nobody is home, I hear the kitchen clock ticking, the faucet dripping, and the ice-maker giving birth to a new litter of cubes. I can tell when the children have left the house without turning off the

My children have devised still more creative uses for this versatile machine.

One daughter calls it while I'm at work and leaves subliminal suggestions for me.

"Hello Mom. I'll be home early today and I'll eat dinner before I go to swimming (chicken stir-fry). I'll pick up the clothes (tossed green salad) from the cleaners. (Buy shampoo, Ranch dressing) May I borrow the car this weekend (Mom: fill gas tank) to drive to Ann Arbor?'

Another daughter and I are able to communicate for an entire evening, even though we're both out - each at different places.

She calls the answering machine. "It's 8:15. I'm at Carrie's," she'll say. "I need a ride home at 11:30.

I call in; retrieve her message; leave one for her. "Stay there. I'll pick you up at

She dials home later and gets my message. We connect at Carrie's at 11:45.

One of my friends carries on conplicated one-way conversations with my dog.

"Hello Ashley," she says. "I know your humans are monitoring this call. Go get your mother, bite her on the foot and drag her to the phone. This is important.'

The dog listens, head cocked. I have also discovered that my furniture looks better if I call home after I get to work in the morning and yell at the dog to get off the sofa.

If I had phoned home midmorning a few weeks ago to monitor the household creaks and drips and ticks, I might have overheard a conversation between the two or more petty marauding sleazoids who pried open my garage door and helped themselves to assorted TV sets, stereo equipment and jewelry.

In this case, subliminal stuff would not have been appropriate. I would have screamed some superliminal stuff:

"PUT THAT DOWN. "DIDN'T ANYONE EVER TELL YOU TO KEEP YOUR COTTON-PICKIN' HANDS OFF THINGS THAT DON'T BELONG TO YOU? WHAT WOULD YOUR MOTHER SAY IF SHE COULD SEE YOU NOW?

"GET OUT OF MY HOUSE.

The house is wired now. In order to keep a TV on the shelf, I've enlisted the aid of some sophisticated technology: infrared beams and sirens and electronic devices and round-the-clock monitoring.

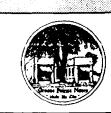

So, if you DEPRAVED TWO-BIT SLEAZEBALL KLEPTO-MANIACAL JERKS are feeling guilty and want to return my stuff, tiptoe up to the front porch and set it down gently. Drop the Michigan ring, the Walkman, and the gold chains in the mailbox. Don't touch anything.

And - by the way - you forgot the answering machine.

Work aplenty, but no committee

Nick Kachman always knows where he'll be the first Tuesday of the month. He was just hoping this month that he wouldn't be sitting at the table all by himself.

Tuesday was the last meeting of the Michigan Air Pollution Control Commission, killed by executive order of Gov. Engler. There was a full agenda and the commission had a job to do.

But the rumor as we went to press was that commission members who are employed in the state's agriculture and health departments had been told not to show up, so there wouldn't be a quorum. It was just one meeting, and the last one at that, but Kachman was spending time last week to make sure it was held. Kachman, of Grosse Pointe Farms, has been a member of the commission for a long time. Now the assistant director for air and water pollution control for General Motors, he was appointed to the state commission by Gov. Milliken. And he's not taking the death of the commission lightly.

Not only did the commission provide a forum for citizen input, in Kachman's view it provided some political protection for the governor that will disappear in the current, very controversial, DNR reorganiza-

"There are three places to discharge man's inefficiency: the air, the water, and the land," he said last week. "We (the commission) were a protective step between the DNR and the governor. I don't know if he's thought of that.

'He could always say (when permits were denied) that the commission stopped it. If there are any major problems now, they'll be at his doorstep."

There were plenty of requests before the commission Tuesday, items that will have to be delayed while the DNR prepares new ways to handle the permitting procedures. In addition to a number of small companies wanting discharge permits, the city of Madison Heights was questioning whether the south Oakland incinerator authority ought even to be operating its outmoded, small incinerator in a residential area.

Kachman praised the quality of citizen participation in the permitting process, mentioning, by way of example, the Midland residents who forced Dow to clean up its act.

"There are often two or three busloads of people at our meetings," he said. "People are very well informed."

There are, of course, some attempts under way to stop the governor's steamroller. A lawsuit testing the constitutionality of his executive orders has been filed and a temporary injunction may allow the commission to continue meeting until the judge has issued a ruling.

Even if the orders are allowed to stand, Kachman doesn't see the complete end of citizen input. The DNR will have to hold public hearings, he says. But the concern about undue influence being brought to bear on DNR staff is real. Kachman doesn't think the staff will succumb. "This staff is one of the best in the country on air and water pollution control," he said. 'They're knowledgeable and "If someone leans on them to get relief they shouldn't have, the staff will rebel. They'll be on guard. There will be trouble if influence is sought.'

Sadly, though, Kachman sees the new system having to rely on whistleblowers and leaks to the press, which is no way to run a government.

"We should have recourse, a public hearing process, and everything should be disclosed," he said.

Amen to that.

A curious thing is happening with the symbolism surrounding those yellow ribbons. Hometown America, chest-thumpingly patriotic about our boys in the Gulf last winter, still has lots of sodden yellow bows tied to signposts and trees.

What to do with these sagging reminders of times nearly forgotten?

A letter to the editor in another paper a week or so ago put a new twist on the old theme of keeping the ribbons flying until the war was over. The writer asked people to keep the ribbons until there are no more American military personnel stationed overseas. Any-

As a follower of the homefront Gulf War debate, I recognized the name (thus the political bent) of the writer. I've made no secret of the fact that I thought we should have kept the boys (and girls) home in the first place; the letterwriter had hewed to the opposite school of thought, considering our muscle-flexing to be a good thing.

This shift in attitude serves as a reminder that the positions of the American Right and the American Left are a lot more blurred than meets the eye. They actually agree on some issues (though not always for the same reasons). Militarism just might be one of them.

The Left wants the troops home for reasons of compassion, international fellowship, peace and cooperation. Although the Right has traditionally insisted on military strength as protection, there is also a substantial segment of conservatives who are now isolationists. That seems to mean that the troops should come home so we can concentrate our efforts and money right here, instead of always saving the bacon of some ungrateful third party.

Wouldn't it be an interesting change to the face of politics if voters united on such issues instead of following outmoded and artificial party lines? The Right and Left might be surprised to find themselves agreeing on some family and crime issues, too, if they look past the

Just look at Hugh Culik of the Farms, who some months ago described himself to me as a raging liberal, but who stays home with the children because he and his wife believe it's important to have a parent around all the time.

Needs help

To the Editor:

I know you have received numerous letters on the proposed Kroger/Maire School project, and here is another.

As I stood in line for 25 minutes waiting to pay for my groceries, I was privy to every other shopper's complaints and conversations.

I do not mind waiting in line, but after parking two blocks away, fighting through the aisles, moving other shoppers' carts and assisting the elderly who could not maneuver through the crowded store, I vowed to never return.

I moved to Grosse Pointe two years ago because my husband was born and raised here. My westside friends ask me if it was difficult adjusting to the move. I absolutely adore living in Grosse Pointe. The people are friendly, the service in the shops is excellent and the neighborhood feeling is very warm. We own a business in Grosse Pointe and on the west side and I drive back to Grosse Pointe to do all my shopping and errands.

Pearl Harbor redux

This didn't happen in 1941. It was 1969, January, and my husband and I were on our honeymoon at the old Haelkalani Hotel, right on Waikiki Beach, not far from Pearl Harbor.

It was Sunday morning, shortly after dawn, and my early-rising husband had gotten up to take a stroll along the lovely beach.

All of a sudden he heard the sound of Zero airplanes, a sound he recognized instantly, and looking up, he saw six of them in formation, Japanese Rising Sun symbols and all, fly low off the beach and head right toward Pearl Harbor.

For a quick moment, before he gathered his thoughts, he thought, "Good God! They've come back!"

Later that day we read in the paper they were shooting film for "Tora! Tora! Tora!" That was a morning stroll

(Except for an occasional visit to Somerset Mall.)

I would like to know why the Kroger expansion has been such a tremendous ordeal. The first visit I paid to the Kercheval Kroger is still vivid in my memory. I thought to myself "this is an establishment in Grosse Pointe?" a community which recognizes the beautification of each city by awarding businesses for their efforts.

I understand the parents are concerned for their children. Yet, wouldn't they like their children to see something better than the current parking lot and rear of the store? You must admit, it needs some help.

Am I missing a key element in the decision to not proceed with this healthy project? It seems quite simple. I realize many people want to keep Grosse Pointe a secret, but do you think people will drive from Birmingham to do their grocery shopping at the new Kroger? Of course not, but improve it for the people of port the other stores, is money that is kept in our community.

It is possible to maintain the charming attributes of Grosse Pointe while keeping up with the times. If we do not preserve our city, it may not continue to be the clandestine hamlet that we quietly claim.

To the Editor:

Regarding your editorial in the Nov. 14 issue about college in Grosse Pointe, I believe if more publicity were given to the Wayne County Community College classes at Grosse Pointe (South) High, it would attract more people from the Pointes to attend, and the college would increase the number of classes available.

The current curriculum is limited but could be expanded if more students were interested.

I have taken two classes at the high school and I'm tion to warrant more classes.

Lester Maurer Grosse Pointe Farms Farms EMS

To the Editor:

Your article on Nov. 27 about the Farms switching to a private ambulance service was not salutary enough to the Farms city administration.

We, the Citizens for Advanced Life Support in Grosse Pointe Farms, applaud the efforts of our city to bring the total advanced life support package to its residents.

The subject of mutual aid among the cities cannot possibly present the problem as presented in the article. It is hard to imagine that any of our sister cities would turn away enhanced emergency service from Grosse Pointe Farms if so needed. Clearly, it is in the best interests of all cities to support the Farms new ser vice.

Finally, we find it trou-' bling that the newly introduced "Echo" could ade " quately serve Grosse Pointe Farms from its suggested locations in the farily corners of the Pointes." Emergency response time would be severely ham." pered to our citizens under this plan.

Constitution The delegates at the Constitutional Convention in Philadelphia did not put a Bill of Rights in the Constitution that they drafted for submission to the people of the 13 states. Some of the delegates wanted such a bill included, and George Mason, Edmund Randolph and Elbridge Gerry felt so strongly about its omission that they declined to sign the Constitution on Sept. 17, 1787. Some delegates thought that since the new national government was a government of delegated powers, it would have no powers except those specified and that, therefore, no reown bills of rights, a national bill might conflict with state law and cause problems.

Others feared that if specific rights were listed, it would be assumed that any omissions had been deliberate. Still others felt that consideration of a Bill of Rights could wait.

The majority, including James Madison, thought the immediate task was to create a national government that would work, because the national government created by the Articles of Confederation had proved feeble and ineffec-

State Democrats fear losing control

The Democratic state house speaker last week exhibited just how afraid Democrats are of losing the 24-year, entrenched power stemming from their control of the House.

An angry and scared Speaker Lew Dodak sought retribution against Republican members for insisting that legislators turn down the pay raises recommended for them for this year and next, and further, for our call for the House budget to be opened to public scrutiny.

Last week Dodak, without warning and openly boasting to two of our House members he was doing it to get back at us, closed our personnel office and the operation which copies and prints materials for our members to distribute to other members or to constituents.

We fear for what may happen to our personnel files, to the file of the staff aide who has the alcohol problem, or the one with whatever problem that has a right to remain private. Will those files be used politically?

And what about printing? Previously, with two small shops, all proposed printing was reviewed by the opposing party's top staff to assure no blatantly political or scurrilous material was printed or mailed at state expense. What do Democrats plan to print and mail at taxpayer expense that they won't let us review in advance?

Lew Dodak can be a nice guy. But he is desperate. He fears 1992 will be the year that Republicans, aided by the reapportionment of legislative districts, will wrest control of the Michigan House from the entrenched, power-hungry, abusive Democratic majority.

I live in Grosse Pointe Farms. I graduated from Grosse Pointe South High. I am one of you and I have AIDS. I have been struggling with HIV-related conditions for more than five years. For two of those years I have had AIDS. My name is Peter "Tad" Miller and I am 28 years old.

Thank you, Donna Walker and Grosse Pointe News, for telling my story. Thanks also to Perry Drugs for hanging up the poster of the little girl saying have AIDS. Please help."

Call it what we will - the fact is that we are faced with a plague. One that deserves a great deal more attention. There are many things that eneed to start happening now. We have been in severe denial. Things are worse than what we had originally assessed. There is hope but it may slowly fade, descend into holocaust.

"One nation under God indivisible with liberty and justice for all," including people with with AIDS. America, have we forgotten the intentions of our founding fathers? Do we need to re-evaluate our priorities and take an honest look at ourselves? Have we abused our freedoms and neglected our responsibilities?

John B. Wilk

John B. Wilk of Lexington, formerly of the Grosse Pointe area, died Saturday, Nov. 30, 1991 while on vacation with his family at their Nags Head, N.C., home.

He was 67.

For more than 45 years, Mr. Wilk was respected for his keen knowledge in the area of plastic molds and the application of plastics in the automotive business. He was employed by United Technologies Automotive in Detroit at the time of his death.

Born in the coal mining town of Kempton, Md., Wilk moved with his family to Detroit and attended Denby High School. After graduating he joined the Navy and served with distinction until he was discharged at the end of World War II.

Mr. Wilk started his career in the plastics business after he left the Navy, when plastics were looked upon as having limited applications and growth

He started as an apprentice tool and die maker and was eventually part owner of Major Mold and Die Co. From there, Mr. Wilk went on to help start U.S. Steel's plastics division in the early 1970s.

In the late 1970s, he moved to Chrysler's Molded Plastic Products division, and after that worked for Sheller Globe Co. in Iowa City, Iowa, until it was acquired by United Technologies Automotive.

He returned to the Detroit area in 1987 to work for the local division of United Technologies Automotive.

Mr. Wilk never forgot his humble background and retained his love of nature and the outdoors. With his wife and daughter, he traveled the world, visiting such places as Thailand, Singapore, China and Europe.

He is survived by his wife, Mary Jane; daughter, Elizabeth; sons, John, Mark, Daniel and Christopher; and seven grandchildren.

He will be cremated and his ashes will be cast to sea off the coast of North Carolina.

Grace (Gay) K. Martin

A memorial Eucharist will be held at 2 p.m. Saturday, Dec. 14, at St. Michael's Episcopal Church in Grosse Pointe Woods for Grace (Gay) K. Martin, 90, a former long-time resident of Grosse Pointe Woods.

She died of heart failure in Bethesda, Md., on Nov. 27, 1991.

The widow of Col. Darwin D. Martin, Mrs. Martin was a resident of Grosse Pointe Woods from 1955 to 1984.

Born in Detroit, she and her husband were married in 1924 shortly after his graduation from the United States Military Academy at West Point.

Except for two periods during World War II, Mrs. Martin accompanied her husband to his assignments which included posts in Hawaii, Japan, Panama and the Philippines, as well as a number in the United States.

States.

During the Korean War, when Col. Martin was on the staff of Gen. Douglas MacArthur and later, Gen. Matthew Ridgeway, Mrs. Martin worked for the judge-advocate for the military district of Tokyo and as a volunteer for programs for the wounded.

Earlier, she had done legal work for the Army in Hawaii and the Philippines.

After Col. Martin's retirement in 1954, the couple moved to Michigan, where Mrs. Martin was one of the founders of the Little Thrift Shop at St. Michael's.

She is survived by her daughters, Mrs. Robert E. Dingeman of San Diego, Calif.; and Mrs. Charles Youngs of St. Clair Shores; son, Darwin D. Martin Jr. of Fairfax County, Va.; brother, Royal G. Kronberg of East Detroit; sister, Mrs. William G. Bishop of Attica; nine grandchildren; and 10 great-grandchildren.

Russell G.

Breckenridge Services were held Friday,

Nov. 29, at the A.H. Peters Funeral Home for Russell G. Breckenridge, 88, of Grosse Pointe Woods. He died Nov. 26, 1991, at Bon Secours Hospital in Grosse Pointe City.

Mr. Breckenridge was born in Ripley, Ontario, and moved to Detroit in 1922. He was a well-known farrier (blacksmith) in the Detroit area, and shoed horses throughout the metropolitan region.

He and his son, John, established the Russell Breckenridge Co., one of three horseshoe manufacturing companies in the United States.

He is survived by his son, John Breckenridge of Grosse Pointe City; daughter, Cecelia Krausmann of Grosse Pointe City; 11 grandchildren and 21 great grandchildren.

Memorial contributions may be made to Lions Head Hospital in Lions Head, Ontario.

David Livingstone Seeber

A memorial service was held Tuesday, Dec. 3, 1991, at St. Paul's Church in Fairfield, Conn. for David Livingstone Seeber, 60, of Fairfield. He died Nov. 22, 1991, in Hershey, Pa.

Mr. Seeber was born in Detroit and raised in Grosse Pointe Farms. He attended Cranbrook School in Bloomfield Hills and Trinity College in Hartford, Conn., where he was a member of Delta Psi.

He was district sales manager for Columbia Steel Casting Co. in Portland, Ore.; past director of the National Limestone Institute; director of the National Stone Association; and active in the Empire State Concrete & Aggregate Producers Association and the Pennsylvania Aggregate and Conrete Association.

Mr. Seeber was a member of the Black Rock Yacht Club for more than 25 years.

He is survived by his wife, Joan Kemp Seeber of Fairfield, Conn.; son, Edward Kemp Seeber of Stratford, Conn.; daughters, Dede Seeber Boyd of Chicago, and Louise Taylor Seeber of Fairfield, Conn.; two grand-daughters; and brothers, Robert Seeber of Grosse Pointe Farms and John Seeber of Auburn Hille

Hills. He was preceded in death by his parents, Taylor H. Seeber and Marjorie I. Seeber.

Memorial contributions may be made in his name to the Fairfield High School Scholarship Fund, c/o Headmaster's Office, Melville Avenue, Fairfield, Conn. 06430.

hat's in a car name? Eagle flies, Buzzard's a bummer

Oldsmobile is preparing after the holidays to introduce its new Achieva, the Lansingbased division's version of General Motors' new N-body, which replaces the Cutlass Calais. Buick has already introduced its N-body (Skylark), as has Pontiac (Grand Am).

A new 120-hp 2.3-liter Quad OHC four is standard powerplant for the Achieva and antilock braking is standard on the new Olds compact. Redesigned from the ground up, the Achieva lineup includes an aggressive Sport Coupe powered by a 180-hp Quad 4 multi-valve engine. Engine options include two levels of Quad 4, rated at 160 hp and 180 hp, or a 3.3 liter V-6. Five-speed manual or three-speed automatic transmissions are offered.

In short, the Achieva is Oldsmobile's vision of the thoroughly modern compact family car, with something for everyone in a range of well-designed, smart-looking sedans which fea-ture flush glass, split grille and smooth, rounded contours. No problem there, but what about the name? Buick and Pontiac stuck with tried-and-true monickers, but Oldsmobile opted for a made-up, if familiar-sounding, new name.

One cannot quarrel with cutting down on the number of Cadillac has confounded its critics as its Allante's made-up name has established itself. The Allante will be next year's Indianapolis 500 Pace Car, the sixth Cadillac to play that role and the first since 1973, Cadillac LaSalles paced the 500 in 1927, 1934 and 1937 and a Cadillac V-12 paced the race in cars that carry the "Cutlass" name, but why "Achieva?" Oldsmobile explains: "In advanced research efforts, the new Achieva name has hit the intended mark by communicating a compact, dependable, nimble and responsive automobile. It appeals strongly to all age groups.'

'Achieva" is not in the tradition of American car names, but rather seems to derive from the Japanese practice in recent years of giving new models names which are made up but are strongly reminiscent of words with positive connota-

Thus, Honda created a new

Acura (accurate) division which markets the Integra (integrity). Nissan created the Infiniti line (I guess infinity is positive) and Toyota came up with Lexus, the root of which brings to mind both dictionaries and law. (Particularly law. Mead Data Central challenged Toyota's use of "Lexus," perhaps concerned that lawyers would mistakenly go to Toyota to subscribe to Mead's "Lexis" computerized legal data service. The dispute has since been resolved.)

Chevrolet also stirred threats of legal action from an Italian handgun maker to naming a new model "Beretta."

Making up names for cars is

By Richard Wright

nothing new, of course - Chevrolet's Chevette, Corvair and Chevelle, for example, and Cadillac's Allante. These words were neutral when invented. But names of things that already exist have meanings and connotations and selecting them is an important art.

Compared with some of the great automotive names of the past, like Bearcat and Thunderbird, Terraplane and Blackhawk, Roadmaster and Rocket 88, modern names seem sterile and less adventurous.

Auto firms suspect you might not want a car named "Dog" or "Worm" and that's why we never see such names. Mustang or Jaguar, Eagle or Hawk, yes, but not Hyena or Buzzard. Viper is fine, but not Garter

Would you buy a car with a name like Mongoose Civique or Utopian Turtletop? Ford Motor Co. doubted it and rejected these suggestions from poet Marianne Moore in favor of Edsel.

In fact, using the boss' name was the rule in earlier days of the auto industry, as most names of car lines are those of the man who made the car. We are surrounded by rolling reminders of Henry Ford, David Buick, Ransom Olds, Louis Chevrolet, Walter P. Chrysler and John and Horace Dodge, automotive pioneers all.

Gone from production, but still seen on our streets from time to time are reminders of the Studebaker brothers. Charles Nash, James Packard, Henry J. Kaiser and Joseph Frazer, John Z. DeLorean, Malcolm Bricklin and Earl "Mad Man" Muntz. (The Hudson was not named after its creator. Roy Chapin, who prudently dubbed it in honor of its major financial backer, department store owner Joseph L. Hudson.)

From Europe, nameplates remind us of Louis Renault, Armand Peugeot, Karl Benz, Gottlieb Daimler, Adam Opel, C.S. Rolls and Henry Royce, Ferdinand Porsche (who designed the Volkswagen), Herbert Austin, Andre Citroen, the Maserati brothers and the late Enzo Ferrari.

And if you go to an automotive museum or concours d'elegance, you will see the names of Fred Duesenberg, E.L. Cord, Harry Stutz and Ettore Bugatti immortalized. among many others.

The Honda perpetuates the name of Japan's great automotive pioneer, Soichiro Honda. who died recently, and with a slight change Toyota carries the name of its founding family, Toyoda. (The family thought "Toyota" would be easier to pronounce than "Toyoda" and maybe it is in Japanese, but most Americans pronounce both the same way.)

Detroit automotive pioneer Henry Leland named the cars he created after heroes in history, Antoine de Le Mothe Cadillac, founder of Detroit, and President Abraham Lincoln.

Some makes carry the name of their factory, such as BMW, which means Bavarian Motor Works. Fiat started as an acronym for Italian words which meant "Italian Automobile Factory in Torino."

For years, Soviet leaders rode in ZIS limousines, for "Factory in the Name of Stalin." After Stalin was downgraded, the car became the ZIL. The "L" which replaced Stalin's "S" was in honor of Ivan Likhachev, a former director of the plant and a Russian automotive pioneer after the Revolution.

Studebaker named a car after the great Notre Dame football coach Knute Rockne, but he was killed in a plane crash in 1931, shortly before the car made its debut in 1932.

Many names get used more than once. The current Eagle is at least the fifth unrelated car to bear that name. And the Ranger, Pacer and Citation all saw service as model names of Edsel before becoming models of Ford, AMC and Chevrolet in more modern times.

There have been some very odd names. A Swiss manufacturer served up the Martini from 1897 to 1934 and another Swiss firm run by partners named Pickard and Pictet marketed the Pic-Pic from 1906 to 1924.

Here in the United States, a company in Owego, N.Y., built the O-We-Go in 1914.

And in Detroit, Autoparts Manufacturing Co. introduced a car in 1912 called the Dodo. It never got off the ground.

Former Park Councilman Clark praised

Former Grosse Pointe Park Councilman Daniel Clark, who was defeated for re-election, was praised by the mayor and council at its first meeting Nov. 19 following the Nov. 5 vote.

Clark - an outspoken proponent of the district court proposal for the Park, which was also defeated - was running for his second four-year term. He was edged out of office by new Councilman Robert Klacza, who garnered 1,831

Master plan public hearing in Shores tonight

A public hearing on Grosse Pointe Shores' proposed new master plan will be held tonight, Thursday, Dec. 5, at 7 p.m. at the village hall.

The public hearing is being conducted by the planning commission. The proposed master plan cost $24,000 to develop with the help of an outside con-heard a presentation by Kelly Boll, a diver who went in search of the Spanish galleon Nuestra Senora de Atocha.

The Atocha set sail from Havana, Cuba in 1622 en route to Spain. The ship's hull was laden with more than 40 tons of silver and gold. It also carried 20 bronze cannons, more than 3,000 emeralds and 256 passengers.

As the ship approached the Florida Keys, a raging hurricane tore its hull apart and scattered the treasure across the ocean floor. For many years, treasure hunters searched to recover the lost galleon, but with no success.

Finally, in 1985, after a 16year expedition led by Florida treasure hunter Mel Fisher, the Atocha and her treasures were discovered.

Boll was among Fisher's crew when the Atocha was located. She worked as an archeologist and a diver.

Boll shared her experiences with the fourth-grade students and displayed some of the artifacts that she had collected during the expedition. The artifacts included a silver coin, musket balls, pieces of pottery and porcelain and ballast stones from the Atocha's hull.

When you need emergency care, come to Bon Secours Hospital. Every one of our emergency physicians is board-certified and specially trained in emergency medicine. Each has had advanced cardiac life-support training as well. And all of our emergency room nurses have long-term experience in the emergency department.

To make your emergency care even better, we've expanded our Emergency Department: four new general treatment rooms, a mini-laboratory and radiology room right on site, and additional orthopedics and gynecology specialty rooms. We have pediatricians and obstetricians on-staff 24 hours a day, and we've doubled the size of the triage area so we can treat you faster. Plus we're adding more state-of-the-art equipment to the department, including new cardiac telemetry units which will enable us to monitor up to 20 critical patients even while they're being transported to different areas of the hospital for necessary testing.

All of these improvements, combined with the most qualified emergency staff in Michigan, mean outstanding care for you and your family. And that's our ultimate goal. In fact, we won't stand for anything less.

Supervised teen party turns ugly

A supervised party spelled trouble for a Woods man and his 18-year-old son Nov. 28 when at least half a dozen unknown youths crashed the af-

Police were called to a dis-Turbance at a home in the 700 block of North Renaud at 1:27 ya.m. Upon arrival, they learned that six uninvited youths had attended the party in the basement and were picking fights. When the father and his son asked the youths to leave, they complied but became angry and yowed to return with 30 friends, the residents told police.

A half hour later, the six intruders — and possibly others returned but were unable to get into the house because the doors were locked. One of the youths smashed the window of the side door to the house.

Police saw a carload of youths driving away. The youths were stopped nearby on Wedgewood. The driver's shirt had been used to cover the car's license plate, police said.

Six youths were in the car. Five were from Detroit, and one was a Harper Woods resident. They ranged in age from 16 to 18. One of the youths had a bloody hand. He told police he cut himself when he broke the door window at the Woods home with his fist. He refused medical attention.

Also, the driver's side window of a car that was parked in the street in front of the home was smashed. The car belonged to a neighbor across the street. The youths denied knowledge of the broken car window.

Residents named to committee on Neff Park use

Seven residents were named last week to the select committee studying possible uses of the former Whiteley house and property that Grosse Pointe City purchased last summer to expand Neff Park.

Appointed to the committee were Mary S. Benfer, Charles R. Emery and Mary Russo, all Lakeland residents; Michael P. Kramer and Edward Harrah. University residents; and Julie Strabel of Rathbone and Jonathan N. Wayman of Rivard.

The committee is chaired by Councilman Carl Rashid Jr. Council members Peter Waldmeir and Lisa R. Bradley are also on the committee.

The city paid $895,000 for the property, which abuts the park at the foot of Lakeland. Nearby residents fear the property may be used for more intensive purposes, such as for city offices or a community center, and would increase traffic on Lakeland.

City officials, however, say the park's only entrance will remain on Jefferson. Mayor Lorenzo Browning created the committee to study possible uses of the property. He has said that no plans for the property have yet been proposed.

waste" was a popular slogan intended to induce young people to stay in school. It might well be used for retirees also, to urge them to keep learning, to keep active, to stay in the mainstream of life. With the accumulated skills acquired over their working years, their practical good sense gained from a lifetime of experience and patience gleaned from dealing with problems that had no easy solutions, they have much to offer to others and much to build on if they have an urge to keep learning.

Locally, opportunities to volunteer abound. Schools, hospitals, nursing homes, political organizations, fundraisers - all need help, particularly in these days of tight budgets.

The same may be said for continuing education, learning new skills or just pursuing an interest. The Grosse Pointe schools offer many choices in Adult Education courses.

You can even combine education with travel and recreation. Elderhostel, with headquarters in Boston, issues four catalogs a year containing information on courses offered at universities and colleges throughout the United States, Canada and abroad. It is a unique program. The courses usually begin on Sunday and end on Friday. Students are housed either on campus or at nearby motels at a nominal rate. There are no exams and evening recreation is usually provided.

If you don't want to travel far from home, some 30 colleges in Michigan offer courses sponsored by Elderhostel, some of them as close as Madonna University in Farmington said. "I've always had that detective-like knack.'

For instance, he recently ran into former Gov. James Blanchard outside a downtown law office. Munce learned that Blanchard now works out of a Detroit office in the same building housing a law firm with which former State Supreme Court Justice Dennis Archer and the man Blanchard picked to replace him, Conrad Mallett Jr., were associated.

(See Munce's "Musings" for more details.)

The Detroit Legal News, published by the Bradley M. Thompson family, was founded in 1895 and is the only daily legal newspaper in Michigan.

Back in 1970, Munce was burned out and tired from 25 years in the advertising business, so he got out.

"If you're going to do something," he said, "do it right and with a smile.'

He found he was no longer smiling. "I was 50 and needed a change," he said.

A friend told him to see someone at the Detroit Legal News, and he landed a position that rekindled his enthusiasm.

The move also led him to a business idea that eventually grossed some $5 million during the 17 years he ran it.

While at the Detroit Legal News, he came up with the idea of providing lawyers with a videotaping service, called Legal Tapes Inc.

It was the first videotaping company in Michigan, he said, 'and we made millions. I had three crews.'

His company would provide videotapes of scenes in criminal or civil cases or of other evidence. The business skyrocketed, Munce said, until the last few years when others got into the act. He recently sold the business.

Munce began his career in journalism as a student at Michigan State College in 1938-40. At the time he was the Detroit Times' campus correspondent. However, after he wrote an article for the Times without first getting it cleared by a dean, the college banned him from doing anymore stories on school property.

World War II interrupted his education. He was called up in September 1941 and went into the Marines, where he served for five years, reaching the rank of captain.

He saw a lot of bloodshed in the Pacific and spent three months commanding a battalion during the occupation of bombed-out Nagasaki following the Japanese surrender.

"It gave me a zest for life when you see how quickly it is snuffed out," he said. "I said, 'My god, I'm going to live every day and squeeze every ounce

He's kept the promise he made to himself some 50 years

On Dec. 7, 1941, Munce was on furlough in Detroit when he heard about the attack on Pearl Harbor. He called the nearest Marine recruiter, who told him to finish the remaining two days of his leave before reporting for duty.

"We were all caught up in the fervor those days," he said. "It was a crusade. You were convinced the Germans were lying off the coast.

There was no questioning like you've had with these other wars."

After the war, he worked for the State Department for a while, traveling to Tehran and Instanbul, but he couldn't get by on the pay. So he took a full-time job at the Detroit Times, attending law school at night for two years.

From there, he joined General Motors' public relations department, and then left GM to begin a quarter-century career in advertising, first as a copy writer at McManus, John and Adams (now D'Arcy, Masius, Benton and Bowles) and later as a media research supervisor at J. Walter Thomp-

He brought a lot of recognition to himself and the Detroit Legal News during his tenure. Under his efforts, the paper received accolades from legal associations, as well as the nonlawyer support groups, such as the Detroit Legal Secretaries Association and Association of Legal Assistants.

'I've gone out and PR-ed the paper," he said.

Munce has earned a lot of respect and recognition from the legal community. Today, Dec. 5, he is being honored by the Detroit Bar Association at the annual bench-bar awards luncheon at Cobo Hall.

He edited and sold more than 8,000 copies of the Michigan Criminal Reference book.

His writings are not limited to the legal field.

He wrote, directed, produced and acted in productions at Players, St. Dunstan's and Fine Arts Society theaters. He is also a member of the Marine Corps Redcoats (Oldtimers) and Nomads travel club.

In addition to using his meter, Nagler's knowledge of the "sunny 16" rule assured him this perfectly exposed sunny-day picture of the barn at Northville's Mayberry State Park.

Sunny 16' rule can save you grief

Have you ever ruined a roll of slow-speed film because you forgot to set back the ASA from that fast roll you shot indoors the previous night? Or have you found yourself not knowing how to expose your picture because you didn't change your battery and it just died?

Well, a little knowledge about a handy photographic rule can be of great value in such situations. The rule is called "sunny 16" and here's how it works.

On a sunny day, set your aperture at f-16 and your shutter speed at the number closest to the ASA of the film you are using and a perfect exposure is vours.

For example, if you're shooting Kodachrome 64 on a sunny day, an exposure of f-16 at 1/60 second will result in a properly exposed shot.

Keep in mind that any other combination of aperture and shutter speed will work for the same film. For instance, f-11 at 1/125 second or f-8 at 1/250 second will produce the identical exposure as the original f-16 at 1/60. Just use the combination you want to get the desired depth-of-field and "stopping power" in your picture.

By Monte Nagler

Using a faster film? The same "sunny 16" rule applies. ASA 400 film requires f-16 at 1/500 second, ASA 1000 film is f-16 at 1/1000 second, etc.

You may ask: "What if it's not sunny?" Well, here's where vou use your best judgment. If it's bright overcast outside, open up one f-stop. So, if you're using Kodachrome 64, set your camera at 1-11 at 1/60 second or any compatible combination. If it's normal overcast, open up two f-stops. Heavy overcast or open shade - three f-stops.

See how simple it is? And you don't have to resort to the 'sunny 16" rule only when your meter isn't working. Use it as a means of checking up on your meter so that you'll know you've set the proper ASA and that your meter is performing satisfactorily.

Understanding the rule of "sunny 16" will ensure wellexposed photographs which will surely give you a sunny disposi-

Local reunion firm: No worry, mates

Grosse Pointe Park resident Susan Petersmarck, president of Class Reunions Plus, said her company is in business and planning to remain.

Recent unfavorable publicity involving an Illinois-based firm that went out of business, leaving class organizers out of money and out of luck, has created problems for the local company.

Petersmarck assures classes currently working with her company as well as potential customers: "We're local, we're bonded, and in the six years we've been in business, we've never cancelled a reunion.'

Petersmarck added that her company will not book more reunions than it can handle, about 50 a year. "A committee that contacts us works with me, not hired representatives who earn commissions based on the number of reunions they can book," she said. "We offer a more personal approach and I'm involved throughout the process."

For more information about Class Reunions Plus, call 824-8550 or write to P.O. Box 1171,

Karaoke gives shower singers the trill of a lifetime

Trying to think of a stocking stuffer or something different to do at night or a new way to embarrass yourself at your company Christmas party? Then karaoke may be the an-

What is karaoke? It's a hightech sing-along machine that gets its name from a Japanese word meaning "empty orches-

Some karaoke machines use casette tapes, some use compact discs and some use laser discs, but they all work pretty much the same way. They eliminate the lead vocals on the recording, but leave the background vocals and music.

The machines have a microphone so that anyone can replace the lead singer; most systems have a song list of more than 800 titles to choose from

Some systems are equipped with a video monitor that flashes the lyrics, and some have the capability to change the key of the song to match the singer's voice.

Karaoke machines are too large to fit inside a Christmas stocking, but some of the devices have cassette and/or videotape recording capabilities. So you can record you favorite song and then give a copy of it to your favorite someone for Mack's owner, John Carlisle. "I think everyone has a latent de sire to sing in public.'

Jimmy Mack's, like other es tablishments that have karaoke, holds contests, with a prize going to the best singer And occasionally, even on a non-contest night, the crowd will ask a singer to perform an encore, Carlisle said.

"But I like ordinary singers the best," he said. "It's fun to see ordinary people get up and sing like they do in the shower or in their cars. It's fun for them and for everyone who's watching them." He said he doesn't allow booing or heckling.

"If someone starts doing that, one of the staff members will go up to that person and ask him to cut it out, because it takes a lot of courage for someone to get up and sing," Carlisle said.

The karaoke machine brings some repeat customers to Jimmy Mack's and draws others who might not otherwise have visited the bar, Carlisle said. However, he said it's a trade-off, because he has to shut down his pool tables. which take in about $100 a

"But it's nice to have something different, and for a place like Jimmy Mack's, which is a sports bar, it adds a new dimension to what we have to offer," Carlisle said.

Two of the top manufacturers in the karaoke business are Sony and Pioneer.

Carlisle bought his machine from Lorio-Ross Entertainment, which sells and rents Sony DKKaraoke systems.

Lido's on the Lake, located on Jefferson in St. Clair Shores, rents a DKKaraoke system from Lorio-Ross. It's upstairs, in the Crow's Nest, and is available from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m., Tuesday through Saturday.

"It has been a great improvement for our business," said Lido's general manager John Vicari.

The Pointe Cafe, located on Mack between Moross and Cadieux in Detroit, rents a karaoke machine and two emcees from Karaoke Spotlight, a division of Mount Clemens-based Zycron Productions, which sells and rents Pioneer systems.

Saturday - from 9 p.m. to 2 a.m. - is karaoke night at the Pointe Cafe.

"After 10 p.m., it's wall-to-wall people," said Pointe Cafe owner Tom Cerwin. "It wasn't like that before (karaoke), at least not on Saturday nights."

The Pointe Cafe has a karaoke contest every Saturday. The best performer wins a dinner for two, and originality

"Last Saturday, for most originality, we had a guy stand on his head while singing and one guy wore a long wig," Cerwin said.

Stephanie Elaine Samuel, a sales agent and host for Karaoke Spotlight, said that other clients, like Trolley's in Detroit, hold eight-week contests. Nightly winners receive a prize ($20 or a bottle of champagne, usually) and advance to the final round, which is held at the end of eight weeks. The finalsnight winner usually goes home with a cash prize or a vacation trip, she said.

hospitals and morgues, looking for his old pal, Marsh. Weyhing said Ghesquiere, who died several years ago, told her of his futile search. Marsh, a tall, lanky lad, graduated from Grosse Pointe High School in 1934. He attended the University of Wyoming and later the University of Michigan. In his junior year at U of M he received an appointment to the First Officers' Training Program at the Naval Academy in Annapolis.

On May 5, 1941, he was commissioned an ensign in the U.S. Navy Reserve and less than a month later, reported for duty and more training aboard the USS Tangiers near Vallejo, Calif.

The last time his parents saw him alive, Weyhing said, was on Sept. 26, 1941. He was on leave and vacationed with them at Yosemite National Park from Sept. 24 to Sept. 26. He then shipped out on the USS Arkansas for a training cruise to Guantanamo, Cuba Colon and the Canal Zone she said.

Marsh was assigned to the Arizona on Nov. 4, 1941. He , visited the USS Lexington while in Honolulu, and by chance found his friend, George Ghesquiere, Weyhing said.

Weyhing was married and pregnant with her second child on the "infamous day" President Franklin Delano Roosevelt told the country that Pearl Harbor had been attacked.

'At first, we didn't know what to think. We couldn't conceive of the destruction because we had no idea what the destruction was," she said.

Her family somehow obtained the Dec. 7 edition of the Honolulu Star-Bulletin. The newspaper reported, "Six known dead, 21 injured at emergency hospital.

"We didn't know how bad it really was, because that's the only information we had for several days," Weyhing said.

On Dec. 12, five days after the attack, her parents received a telegram from Rear Afim. Chester W. Nimtz, chief of the Navy's bureau of navigation, saying that her brother had died aboard the Arizona and that if at all possible, the Navy would recover his body.

Weyhing said she learned that soon after the attack, divers attempted to rescue trapped survivors and retrieve bodies from the Arizona. However, two divers died in the at-

"They (the divers) didn't know if the Japanese were going to come back, so they had to abandon the search," she said.

In addition to his family, Marsh left behind a sweetheart in California and many friends.

"He was a fabulous person," Weyhing said. "We didn't know how many people of all ages that he touched. After his death, we had parents of his friends visit us. He was kind, thoughtful and conscientious. and had a rapport with all age groups.

His death brought her family closer together, but changed the course of each of their lives, she said.

Her father, an executive engineer with Michigan Bell Telephone Co., was among the first to register for the draft. He wasn't accepted because he was too old - 55. However, he served on the draft board, promoted war bond sales, helped establish a USO unit, and was instrumental in raising funds for the USS Arizona Memorial, which is constructed crosswise over the sunken ship.

Her mother could not sleep at night, and worked on her hobby of jewelry making until the wee hours of the morning. Before Dec. 7, she was active in the British war relief effort through Gusse Pointe Memorial Church. After Pearl Harbor, she became active in the U.S. war effort.

Frances Jean Marsh Bergmann, Weyhing's younger sister, gave up a promising career as a commercial artist to work as a riveter for Briggs Manufacturing Co., which did defense work. Later, she was promoted to instructor and then foreman.

Richard B. Marsh received an appointment to the U.S. Naval Academy in Annapolis in 1944, following in his brother's footsteps.

Weyhing said she kept her feelings about her brother's death inside, until she was alone in the hospital after the birth of her baby.

"The doctor told me that the baby looked distressed, and asked me if I had been under any stress. That's when I realized that my brother's death had affected not only myself, but my baby, because I had kept my feelings inside," she said.

Over the years, Marsh has received many posthumous honors. In September 1943 a naval destroyer escort, built by the Defoe shipbuilding company in Bay City, was named after him. His mother christened the USS Marsh, which was decommissioned about six years ago, Weyhing said.

On May 31, 1962, after her mother's death, Weyhing and her father were invited by the secretary of the Navy to attend the dedication of the Pearl Harbor Memorial in Hawaii.

her coffee table is a scrapbook devoted to her brother, who was killed in the Japanese at-

At dinner, she was seated next to Navy Cmdr. Alan Shapley. He was probably the last survivor to see her brother alive, and told her what happened the morning of Dec. 7.

Shapley said he and Marsh were leaving the ship to play golf and were in the ward room of the Arizona when the first wave of Japanese bombers flew overhead. The two men went up to the bridge and found Adm. Isaac Kidd dead.

Because so many officers were on weekend passes, Shapley was second in command. He turned to Marsh and said, "This puts me in command of the ship. I must sound battle

Marsh said, "My station is in the engine room." and rushed below.

At 8:05 a.m., the second wave of bombers scored a direct hit down the ship's funnel, causing the powder magazines to explode. Within eight min utes, the Arizona sank to the bottom of the harbor.

Shapley told Weyhing that he was blown off the bridge into the water, which was covered with burning oil. He swam to clear water where enemy planes tried to shoot him. He said he spent many exhausting hours diving below the surface to escape detection and finally reached the shore farthest from Ford Island.

"Cmdr. Shapley was such a fine person and gentleman," Weyhing said. "I've thought about what he said often and I remember every word he said."

Fifty years after Pearl Harbor, Weyhing is still learning about what happened during the attack. She recently read that the bodies of Arizona sailors and their personal effects landed on other ships, such was the force of the blast.

"It's 1991, and it still horrifies me," she said, her eyes welling with tears that refused to fall.

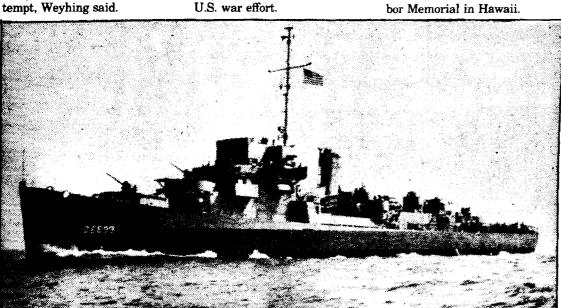

She said her family holds no ill feelings toward the Japanese people.

"I think we feel that at Hiro shima and Nagasaki, we more than retaliated. They did a horrible thing to us, but we did a horrible thing to them, killing thousands of people with the atomic bomb. That was a horrible thing that we did," she said.

She said that she will spend Dec. 7 at home. Her brother Richard, who lives in Grosse Pointe Farms, will be in Hawaii. He's been invited by President George Bush to attend a 50th anniversary ceremony at Pearl Harbor. The ceremony will start at 7:55 a.m., above the watery tomb of the men of the Arizona.

hospitals and morgues, looking for his old pal, Marsh. Weyhing said Ghesquiere, who died several years ago, told her of his futile search. Marsh, a tall, lanky lad, graduated from Grosse Pointe High School in 1934. He attended the University of Wyoming and later the University of Michigan. In his junior year at U of M he received an appointment to the First Officers' Training Program at the Naval Academy in Annapolis.

On May 5, 1941, he was commissioned an ensign in the U.S. Navy Reserve and less than a month later, reported for duty and more training aboard the USS Tangiers near Vallejo, Calif.

The last time his parents saw him alive, Weyhing said, was on Sept. 26, 1941. He was on leave and vacationed with them at Yosemite National Park from Sept. 24 to Sept. 26. He then shipped out on the USS Arkansas for a training cruise to Guantanamo, Cuba Colon and the Canal Zone, she said.

Marsh was assigned to the Arizona on Nov. 4, 1941. He visited the USS Lexington while in Honolulu, and by chance found his friend, George Ghesquiere, Weyhing said.

Weyhing was married and pregnant with her second child on the "infamous day" President Franklin Delano Roosevelt told the country that Pearl Harbor had been attacked.

"At first, we didn't know what to think. We couldn't conceive of the destruction because we had no idea what the destruction was," she said.

Her family somehow obtained the Dec. 7 edition of the Honolulu Star-Bulletin. The newspaper reported, "Six known dead, 21 injured at emergency hospital."

"We didn't know how bad it really was, because that's the only information we had for several days," Weyhing said.

On Dec. 12, five days after the attack, her parents received a telegram from Rear Afim. Chester W. Nimtz, chief of the Navy's bureau of navigation, saying that her brother had died aboard the Arizona and that if at all possible, the Navy would recover his body.

Weyhing said she learned that soon after the attack, divers attempted to rescue trapped survivors and retrieve bodies from the Arizona. However, two divers died in the attempt, Weyhing said.

In this photo, Ben Marsh Jr. (wearing a sailor suit designed by his mother) and his sister Winnifred are 3 and 4 years old, respectively.

"They (the divers) didn't know if the Japanese were going to come back, so they had to abandon the search," she said.

In addition to his family, Marsh left behind a sweetheart in California and many friends.

"He was a fabulous person," Weyhing said. "We didn't know how many people of all ages that he touched. After his death, we had parents of his friends visit us. He was kind, thoughtful and conscientious, and had a rapport with all age groups."

His death brought her family closer together, but changed the course of each of their lives, she said.

Her father, an executive engineer with Michigan Bell Telephone Co., was among the first to register for the draft. He wasn't accepted because he was too old — 55. However, he served on the draft board, promoted war bond sales, helped establish a USO unit, and was instrumental in raising funds for the USS Arizona Memorial, which is constructed crosswise over the sunken ship.

Her mother could not sleep at night, and worked on her hobby of jewelry-making until the wee hours of the morning. Before Dec. 7, she was active in the British war relief effort through Grosse Pointe Memorial Church. After Pearl Harbor, she became active in the U.S. war effort. Frances Jean Marsh Bergmann, Weyhing's younger sister, gave up a promising career as a commercial artist to work as a riveter for Briggs Manufacturing Co., which did defense work. Later, she was promoted to instructor and then foreman.

Richard B. Marsh received an appointment to the U.S. Naval Academy in Annapolis in 1944, following in his brother's footsteps.

Weyhing said she kept her feelings about her brother's death inside, until she was alone in the hospital after the birth of her baby.

The doctor told me that the baby looked distressed, and asked me if I had been under any stress. That's when I realized that my brother's death had affected not only myself, but my baby, because I had kept my feelings inside," she said.

Over the years, Marsh has received many posthumous honors. In September 1943 a naval destroyer escort, built by the Defoe shipbuilding company in Bay City, was named after him. His mother christened the USS Marsh, which was decommissioned about six years ago, Weyhing said.

On May 31, 1962, after her mother's death, Weyhing and her father were invited by the secretary of the Navy to attend the dedication of the Pearl Harbor Memorial in Hawaii.

Winnifred Weyhing holds an old Life Magazine featuring stories about Pearl Harbor. On her coffee table is a scrapbook devoted to her brother, who was killed in the Japanese attack.

At dinner, she was seated next to Navy Cmdr. Alan Shapley. He was probably the last survivor to see her brother alive, and told her what happened the morning of Dec. 7.

Shapley said he and Marsh were leaving the ship to play golf and were in the ward room of the Arizona when the first wave of Japanese bombers flew overhead. The two men went up to the bridge and found Adm. Isaac Kidd dead.

Because so many officers were on weekend passes, Shapley was second in command. He turned to Marsh and said, "This puts me in command of the ship. I must sound battle stations."

Marsh said, "My station is in the engine room," and rushed below.

At 8:05 a.m., the second wave of bombers scored a direct hit down the ship's funnel, causing the powder magazines to explode. Within eight min utes, the Arizona sank to the bottom of the harbor.

Shapley told Weyhing that he was blown off the bridge into the water, which was covered with burning oil. He swam to clear water where enemy planes tried to shoot him. He said he spent many exhausting hours diving below the surface to escape detection and finally reached the shore farthest from Ford Island.

"Cmdr. Shapley was such a fine person and gentleman," Weyhing said. "I've thought about what he said often and I remember every word he said."

Fifty years after Pearl Harbor, Weyhing is still learning about what happened during the attack. She recently read that the bodies of Arizona sailors and their personal effects landed on other ships, such was the force of the blast.

"It's 1991, and it still horrifies me," she said, her eyes welling with tears that refused to fall.

She said her family holds no ill feelings toward the Japanese people.

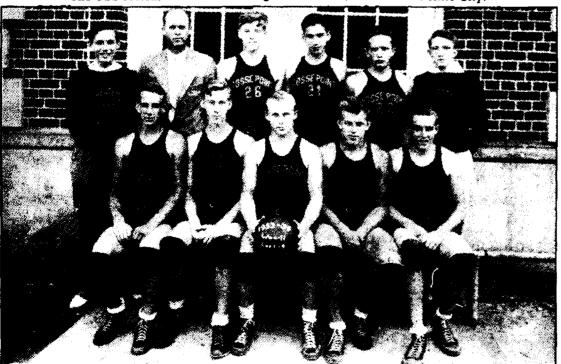

"I think we feel that at Hiro shima and Nagasaki, we more than retaliated. They did a horrible thing to us, but we did a horrible thing to them, killing thousands of people with the atomic bomb. That was a horrible thing that we did," she said.

She said that she will spend Dec. 7 at home. Her brother Richard, who lives in Grosse Pointe Farms, will be in Hawaii. He's been invited by President George Bush to attend a 50th anniversary ceremony at Pearl Harbor. The ceremony will start at 7:55 a.m., above the watery tomb of the men of the Arizona.

HAVE A PLEASANT TRY AT PERFECTION " .. Bridge by Woody Boyd 🛧 🕈 💠 😓

At Harvard they inquire about your knowledge. At Yale your family's net worth and at Princeton your parentage.

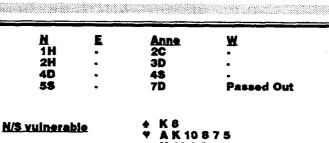

In our bridge society status and rank are often determined by a somewhat similar silly inspection. Who have you played with? How many points have you and how sophisticated is your bidding system?

It is therefore refreshing and a joyous moment when one comes along who simply query's you whether you'd like to play. Such was the occasion five Friday's back when at Judy Thomas' suggestion Anne Roberts and I put our skills to work to determine whether a successful partnership was possible. No phoney fan fair, keep it simple and down the middle was mutually agreed to and I was exceptionally impressed with her proficiency. Reluctantly I must tell you that if I had set a better example on a couple of occasions our score would have been more rewarding. Not even my good friend Jack Danaher who always has a difficult time mustering enough power to open eleven plus H.C.P. would have bid this one even in third seat, but I chose to do so in second.

K10986 AJ987 Diamond Void 1098

Later Anne lightly chided me whether such a bid was standard American or something I'd dug up from the dark ages? The excuse I boosted was a poor defense as this wasn't the kind of hand one should take liberties with.

All of this is nothing but an overture to a splendid hand that Anne bid and played to perfection. It truly supports the technique that the better the shape and high card texture the slower the partnership goes as long as their calls are

After her reverse which showed a power house and my support of her second suit she was on her way to a partnership in paradise. All that was now needed as you can see was her advance Que bid of spades and my confirmation of second round control and the good grandy was gainable.

Her play for thirteen was commendable as she immediately realized that her hand had to be established as the master. Even a four/two club break and three/one trump split she could handle, but when one ruff set up clubs and diamonds divided two/two (41% probability) she was home coasting with abundant applause from her partner.

The Pastor's Corner

One community

By the Rev. V. Bruce Rigdon Grosse Pointe Memorial Church

There are times when I wonder about it all - about the fact that people seem to believe what the churches appear to deny.

How can anyone really believe that the good news of the Gospel is that God has made us all one by reconciling us to Himself in Christ when the Christian community continues to live in divided churches?

Does anyone really think that Christianity will make a positive difference in the world when Roman Catholic Croates and Serbian Orthodox peoples murder and kill one another in Yugoslavia or Roman Catholics and Protestants do the same in Northern Ireland?

For that matter, does the relative indifference of churches toward each other in American towns and cities excite the human heart about the unity and love which the Gospel brings?

In the presence of the Babe of Bethlehem, peoples as different as shepherds and magi were embraced by a common love and became actors in the drama of God's redemptive grace. Standing before the crucified Lord, Jews and gentiles, men and women, slaves and free were/are reconciled to God and one another.

In the joy of the resurrected Lord, the spirit of God called into being that new community in which all walls were broken down in order that all should see and know the power of God's love. I guess that is the wonder of it all, that God's love continues to produce faith and change lives despite our churches' failures to demonstrate the community without walls which we try to proclaim.

What I really want for Christmas this year is that the children of Grosse Pointe should grow up knowing that there is one Christian community in their town, that you can find it in parish churches with many different traditions - Reformed, Anglican, Roman Catholic, Baptist, Lutheran, Orthodox — but that each is an expression of the same divine love and each helps the others to carry out one ministry and mission to our city and the world.

Wishing won't make this happen, but praying and working together will.

Anybody for trying again this Christmas?

According to Ellen J. Preisman, executive director, the Reuther Center is often the first stop for elderly people who are having difficulties, whether it's hunger and homelessness or isolation and loneliness.

She said because the agency is small, the individual attention and support it provides often work to the advantage of the frail and fearful older people who seek aid at the center.

Faith Lutheran Soup Kitchen, 897 Philip at Jefferson, in Detroit, has been helping people in the Jefferson/ Chalmers community for nine years by serving meals on Mondays through Thursdays the last week of each month. The kitchen provides between 1,200 and 1,600 meals a week. Pris Vanhorne, Linda Finger and Julie Scott, all Grosse Pointers, do the cooking for the program.

"The people served are neighborhood people who are caught in circumstances beyond their control, brought on either by their own actions - or often due to environment, lack of education and training and other things beyond their control," said Sharon Schmidt, wife of the Rev. Ronald W. Schmidt, pastor of Faith Lutheran Church. "No matter. They still need help."

The program is supported by cash and food donations from local churches, individuals and organizations. Volunteers are members of Faith Lutheran and five or six other Grosse Pointe churches and neighborhood residents.

Schmidt said that the church also tends to spiritual needs of the people it feeds by offering an opportunity for Bible study after the meals.

Success story

A few years ago, Bruce Johnson was homeless. A crack cocaine user and an alcohol abuser, he had lost everything.

He came to the soup kitchen at Faith Lutheran Church for meals. He began attending the church's Bible study group and has been able to regain control of his life and rebuild his self-esteem. He is now married and owns his own home repair business.

Johnson serves as the Minister of Nurture at Faith Church, helping people who are homeless and hungry as he once was.

Johnson leads a community Bible study group and helps Grosse Pointers Barbara Whitney, Janet Vande Wyngarde and Sharon Schmidt lead soup kitchen Bible groups.

Johnson also runs a recreation program on Friday nights and a homeless min-istry on Monday afternoons, where he provides referrals for people who need shelter, medical treatment, food, clothing and

The Grosse Pointe unit of the Herb Society of America announced its newest project at a recent party hosted by Laura and Ned Evans: a garden to be planted on the grounds of the Grosse Pointe Academy.

The garden, designed to enhance the surrounding buildings and grounds, will be used as an educational tool for students and will be open to the public upon completion.

Consultant for the project is Bill Whetstone of Greater Detroit Landscaping Co. The garden will be shaped like a Gothic stained glass window much like the windows in the academy's chapel. Brick walkways will form the frames of the window.

Anyone who would like to make a donation to the garden in honor of someone, or in memory of a loved one, should call Pat Cardellio at 881-1857.

Video studies life, times and music of Wild Bill Davison

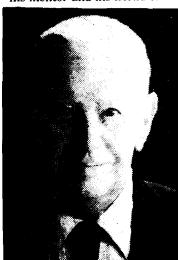

By Ronald J. Bemas Staff Writer

It all started with Wild Bill Davison's teeth.

In his early 80s, Davison noticed his gums were receding and his teeth were getting loose. To most people, that would be just another part of the aging process, but to a jazz cornetist, it meant the end of a career.

And with no money coming in, it meant Davison was doomed to be another forgotten star who, despite having recorded more than 800 albums, would live out his life in pov-

Tom Saunders, a Grosse Pointe jazz legend who probably knew Davison better than anyone else, felt he had to help. Saunders didn't want his idol, his mentor and his friend to come to that sad end.

"He called me his illegitimate adopted son," Saunders said of the man he knew for 25 years. "His wife said we were twins born 30 years apart. We had the same personalities and we always knew how to make each other laugh.'

But the question was, "How could he help?

Together with his friend Tim Rocha, Saunders came up with a two-part plan. Part one; Put together a special concert featuring Wild Bill, Saunders and other jazz artists, videotape it and sell it, with a portion of the money going to Davison.

But finding a large enough concert venue that was affordable was a bigger problem than they realized. So they decided to do the second project, "Wild Bill Davison: His Life, His Times, His Music" - a documentary on Davison - first. It would involve commentary, interviews and, of course, music.

Rocha, who had been with WJBK-TV2 in Detroit for several years, took his expertise in video production and Saunders, who knew the subject better than any interviewer they could hire, to Santa Barbara, Calif. in January 1989 for four days of interviews. They left with six hours of taped remembrances from the then 83-year-

They got the interviews none too soon: Davison died in November of that year.

The 100-minute documentary traces Davison's childhood, when he first played bugle calls on a piece of garden hose with a funnel on one end, through mid-American clubs, to Chicago where he sometimes played for Al Capone during Prohibition. It also highlights his 12 1/2 years with Eddie Condon's club "It was almost a steady job," Davison said.

Davison tells his own story in a language that is as gritty as his playing. Saunders, who has made his living in front of a microphone, is equally at home as an interviewer.

The film was edited by Grosse Pointer Jim Bruzzese.

"We're real proud of what we've got here," Saunders said. Saunders, a local boy who graduated from Grosse Pointe High School in the late 50s, is closely tied to Davison, so the video was a labor of love.

Tom Saunders

Wild Bill Davison and Tom Saunders played together for years.

"I first heard Wild Bill on a recording when I was 9 years old and ever since then I wanted to play like him,' Saunders said. "He had the sassiest horn in jazz.'

Saunders, like Wild Bill, his instrument was the cornet despite his elementary school band teacher's recommendation that he take up the violin. His style was Dixieland jazz, and he was all the rage in Grosse Pointe during the 50s.

He met his idol in 1960 in Toronto and first played with him four years later in Detroit.

Saunders was performing at a Detroit nightclub and the owner, who knew Saunders idolized Davison, drove over to another Detroit club where Davison was playing and brought him back to meet Saunders.

"I heard this searing horn take my head off and I knew it couldn't be anyone else," Saunders said. "I turned around and there he was.'

They played together often after that, and Saunders now leads the Wild Bill Davison Legacy Jazz Band.

Saunders said that the changes in the world have brought a change in jazz, which created a need for an innovative way, like the tape, to help finance jazz's living legends. After Davison's death, the contract was re-written so his widow gets what Davison would have received.

'Jazz has changed, there's nothing steady anymore. I play in festivals all over the world and I thank God I can do that, but a lot of guys can't," Saunders said. And he laments the demise of the nightclub scene.

"A lot of the places I've played are closed," he said. "Or are parking lots. That's a shame because playing jazz is all trial and error, so where does a young guy go to be bad? Where does he go to try out his sound?" Saunders' Dixieland Jazz Band has played locally for years, as well as at jazz festivals in Switzerland, Germany, Denmark, Ireland and England, and it's those markets. a well as Japan (where Davison is a national hero) that he hopes to tap with the video.

Jazz publications have praised the video and sales have been brisk in the short time it's been available. Orders are taken by calling 1-800-531. 7444 and locally it can be purchased at Village Records & Tapes. The cost is $39.95.

DSO report:

Mozart series ends in glory: December now brings holiday programs

By Alex Suczek Special Writer

There was a special significance to the Thanksgiving weekend concerts that transcended the announced aim of celebrating the bicentennial of Mozart's death. Not only was it an outstanding performance throughout, the program also provided an unusual perspective on the growth of the composer's genius in his short life.

To open the concert, maestro Neeme Jarvi chose to perform four of the six movements of Divertimento in D major K.

320b. It is a common practice with this work because the result is a form resembling the composer's early symphonies. This was paired before intermission with an even earlier work, the Concerto for Violin No. 4 in G major. Both were performed with a freshness and lighthearted quality suitable for these comparatively youthful creations. Still reminiscent of Haydn and reflecting their debt to the baroque, they are expressions of the naive genius demonstrating his incredible facility with the music of his time but not yet bearing his unique mark.

In both, Jarvi and the orchestra maintained the delicacy of style that these works require.

They were airy and refreshing. As soloist for the concerto. the young violinist Cho-Liang Lin set the style with agility and a pure, flawless tone. His cadenzas particularly sparkled with a cascade of notes that bubbled exuberantly forth. And the orchestra did a remarkable job of supporting and joining this delightful outpouring.

One could almost sense the still innocent joy of life being experienced by the energetic and gifted young composer as he wrote and performed these works two centuries ago.

Moving then to the profound Symphony No. 40 in G minor, Jarvi and the orchestra dramatized the growth, maturity and emotional range that Mozart had achieved in little more than another decade of this life. This is a work that reflects experience with grief, passion, triumph and deep disappointment. It is an extremely, sometimes even frightening piece of music. In it, Mozart achieved his own unique musical iden-

Its impact seemed even to make the orchestra sound different. The strings particularly developed a richness and depth of sound that were lacking in the first two works. There was a passion and a sense of life's drama throughout the work, especially the drama of the rapid passage of the composer's life, from the innocence of his youth to the maturity of his genius. For his usual encore, Jarvi chose to provide a poignant look back with a reprise of the charming, Haydnesque minuet from the Divertimento that had opened the program. It was like an echo of life's innocence.

This week, Orchestra Hall brings back memories of its vears as "The Paradise Theatre" with a Friday evening concert by Jazz headliners Dizzy Gillespie and Cab Calloway.

Next week the Christmas concerts begin with Holiday Pops and a sing-along led by Mitch Miller with the Detroit Symphony Chorus.

For the balance of the month, the DSO moves to the Fox Theatre to accompany Dance Detroit in the annual presentation of Tchaikovsky's ever popular Christmas fantasy, the "Nutcracker Ballet." These performances continue from Friday, Dec. 13 through Sunday, Dec. 29.

DSO associate conductor Leslie B. Dunner leads the orchestra in the Dec. 13-15 and 26-29 performances and Michael Krajewski leads the Dec. 17-22 performances.

The DSO's 1990 performances of "The Nutcracker" at the Fox Theatre drew more than 65,000 people for 15 shows, and it is expected that with six additional performances this year, more than 100,000 will attend.

Culminating the year will be what is fast becoming a gala tradition, a New Year's Eve Night in Vienna concert led by Neeme Jarvi. That evening concludes with dancing on the stage, and considering the achievements of our orchestra this year both artistically and in resourcefulness for survival, there is a lot to dance about.

Ticket prices range from $17 to $24; matinees half price for children 12 and under and seniors 60 and over and are available at all Ticketmaster centers, Hudson's Harmony House and Sound Warehouse; or by calling Ticketmaster at 645-6666. Discounts are available for groups of 10 or more.

Wiggles loves a parade

Grosse Pointe puppeteer/ventriloquist Bernie Marquis and his puppet. Wiggles, made their international debut Thursday morning on the CBS-TV "All American Thanksgiving Parade" program. The three-hour special was seen locally on WJBK-TV Channel 2. Wiggles appeared with Alan Campbell, who plays assistant attorney Derek on 'Jake and the Fat Man," and Erin Moriarty of "48 Hours." The three were at the Santa Claus Parade in Toronto and Wiggles helped introduce the big guy himself. Wiggles is an elf with extremely large ears that he can wiggle — thus his name. He is the main character in a proposed animated 30-minute film created by Marquis. No stranger to show business, Marquis. 42. has professionally played Santa throughout the Metro Detroit area for more than 20 years. This is his first venture into professional ventriloquism. The parade was seen by an estimated 35 million people. Above from left are Campbell, Wiggles and Marquis.

In time for the holidays two stunning animated films

By Marian Trainor Special Writer

In keeping with the festive holiday season, two animated films add to the enjoyment and delight of this most joyful of times. Completely different in theme and story, both are outstanding presentations.

'Fievel Goes West'

Top-notch animation, plenty of action and a story that's easy to follow make the return of Fievel - the captivating little mouse who made such a hit in 'An American Tail" - every bit as good as its predecessor.

In "An American Tail" we followed the adventures of the Mousekewitz family which made its way from Czarist Russia to America firmly believing that they would find the streets paved with cheese.

In "Fievel Goes West" we see the family living a miserable hand-to-mouth existence in a New York City tenement and longing for a better life.

Young Fievel, whose voice is again supplied by Phillip Glasser's piping, boyish tones, dreams of becoming a wild west lawman like his idol, the legendary canine Wylie Burp. His sister Tanya (Cathy Cavadiny) yearns to be a singer.

A smooth-talking violent cat, Cat-R-Waul, has his gang of thugs attack and destroy the tenement where the mice live. They escape through the sewer system in a scene that reaches new heights in animation.

Later, Cat-R-Waul persuades

all the mice to go West where life is better and all cats are friendly. But his concern is a ruse designed to ensnare the entire mouse community in a giant mousetrap. John Cleese, the voice of Cat-R-Waul, gives the sales pitch just the right

Fievel overhears the plotting on the train trip west but falls off before he can warn every-tone of supercilious villainy.

Along with his friend Tiger, Fievel is determined to locate sheriff Wylie Burp, who turns out to be a broken-down, looselimbed dog which has given up. James Stewart is Burp's voice - an inspired piece of casting and easily the most outstanding match of voice and character in a film that has several excellent matches, including Amy Irving as Kitty, a sultry chanteuse, and Dom DeLuise

Check this list twice when shopping for book lovers

Every year since I've been old enough to read and write I begin my wish list early in the holiday season of books I would particularly like to find under my tree. This fun tradition has already been instilled in my grown son, and together we present our wish lists to our husband and father, who is so very kind about providing us with luscious surprises. I have yet to outgrow my childish glee and enthusiasm for books as gifts, and I don't think I ever will.

I'll share my wish list with you in the hope that it will stimulate all book lovers far and wide to do the same with their families and friends. The lists are marvelously handy in cutting down the tedious wear-and-tear of Christmas shopping as well as offering helpful guidelines when trying to choose among a multitude of books so enticingly displayed upon bookstore shelves and tables. Also, they eliminate the annoyance of returning unwanted books after Christmas.

I have a short list of books that I really want badly. Of course, there are scads of others I'd like to have but I must be reasonable and not go off the deep end. The six titles I've chosen reflect my various interests - four non-fiction and two fiction. All of the titles have been published since fall in Detroit, keeps the blues tradition alive with the Blues Disciples every Wednesday. The group plays a mix of jump blues and swing, borrowing from Duke Ellington and Louis Armstrong. For more informaand should be available at most book stores.

To begin with, I'd like to find "Brave Companions: Portraits in History" by David McCullough (Prentice Hall/$20) under my tree Christmas morning. It is an eclectic collection of 17 historical essays on prominent Americans such as Louis Agassiz, Charles Lindbergh, Beryl Markham, Conrad Richter and others. Richard Lederer's "The Miracle of Language" (Pocket Books/$20) is an admiring paean to our most human accomplishments - the ability to read and write. Doris Grumbach, the author of numerous novels, has written a journal of her 70th year, "Coming Into the End Zone: A Memoir" (W.W. Norton/$19.95). Of very personal interest is "Chelsea: The Story of a Signal Dog" by Paul Ogden (Little, Brown/$18.95) which is about a trained dog which helps the hearing-impaired. The author and his wife have established Canine Companions for Independence, a dog training center, in Santa Rosa, Calif.

In fiction, two titles stand out. Because of my long reading acquaintance with British writer William Trevor, I'm looking forward to his latest book, "Two Lives: Reading Turgenev/My House in Umbria" (Viking/$21.95). These are two mirroring narratives about emotionally scarred women who find consolation in the written word. To satisfy my thirst for mystery there's "Evidence of Blood" by Thomas H. Cook (Putnam/$1995), a crime novel involving a writer returning to his hometown to solve a 40-year-old murder.

Now that I've expressed my preferences for a bookish Christmas, I've a strong desire to pass on my many blessings to those less fortunate - especially children. Most needy families, particularly in today's tight economy, do not have the money to buy luxury items, like books, for their children. Therefore, I would like to draw attention to two praiseworthy endeavors, one in Detroit and the other in Alpena, which are making it possible to distribute new books to needy youngsters age 7 and under in time for Christmas.

The Gift of Books program, sponsored by the Detroit Free Press, is going into its fifth year of supporting children's literacy by presenting donated books to disadvantaged children. The program has performed miracles in reaching out into the metropolitan area and untold numbers of children have happily gone home with their eagerly anticipated books. Maggie Rees of Grosse Pointe will be the soprano soloist when the Fort Street Chorale and Chamber Orchestra perform Handel's "Messiah" at Fort Street Presbyterian Church Saturday, Dec. 7 at 7 p.m. and Sunday, Dec. 8 at 5

Rees' singing career began at age 16, when she was selected as the youngest member ever of the Michigan Opera Theatre Ensemble. Singing engagements have taken her around the country, including work at the Music Academy of the West in Santa Barbara, the Manhattan School of Music, the British Embassy in Washington, D.C., and the Colorado Summer Music Festival, where she portrayed Mable in "The Pirates of Penzance," and Josephine in "H.M.S. Pinafore."

In 1986, Rees won the Quest for Excellence Vocal Competition in Detroit. The Michigan Legislature honored her with a joint resolution praising her as Tickets for "Messiah" performances are $10. For information, call the church at 961-4533. The church is located at 631 W. Fort Street between Second and Third streets.

Benefit scheduled

The Vocal Resource Center will host its first benefit for the Art Center Music School, 3975 Cass Avenue, on Sunday, Dec.

Community businesses and individuals have joined the cause and shown support for the school, which was established in 1922 to serve the community through affordable music education.

The school's instructors are the best in the Midwest, with degrees from Julliard, the University of Michigan, the Cincinnati College Conservatory of Music and several other institutions. They have agreed to accept lower fees for lessons in an effort to keep costs down. # A surprising, wonderful 'Wizard of Oz'

By Marian Trainor Special Writer

A special feature has been added to an all-time favorite classic in Worth Gardner's production of "The Wizard of Oz," playing at the Birmingham Theatre through Dec. 15.

Gardner, who produced and choreographed the show, has included the story of its author, L. Frank Baum, who not only narrates the story, but plays a big part in it.

As played by William Brown, the excerpts from Baum's life, add to the fun. We see him as a loquacious writer who wonders out loud what should be included in the story, consulting with the characters all the

When we first meet him, he is being brow beaten by his publisher, W.W. West (Darren Matthias) who later turns up as the Wicked Witch of the West. Dressed in black and waving an umbrella, he is equally mean in both roles. "I'll get you," he shouts at Baum.

The first character Baum draws on is Dorothy, who is on stage rocking her beloved Toto. He begins by narrating a description of the flat grayness of Kansas to which Dorothy responds with "Somewhere Over the Rainbow."

Well, just as in the book and the movie, a cyclonic wind comes up and Dorothy and her bed go flying upstage in clouds of green smoke and land in Oz. Unfortunately, her bed falls on the sister of the Wicked Witch of the West which stirs her ire. Bewildered and scared, Dorothy wants to go back home.

The way home is the Yellow Brick Road, ingeniously staged, which leads her to the Scarecrow, the Tin Man and the with all their familiar

When they reach Emerald City where the Wizard of Oz lives, they are greeted in a colorful ensemble number complete with a balloon-flying wiz-

The production is brought to life by a notable cast. Diane Della Piazza is an adorable Dorothy. She is short and cute with a knockout voice.

John Schiappa is a riot as the wobbly scarecrow; Howard Kay's Tin Man, who needs frequent oil, beseeches everyone in a Jack Haley voice to help him, and Bob Arnold is endearing as the Cowardly Lion.

A surprise switch is the Wicked Witch of the West, who is played by a man. Matthias plays him like a villain in an old-time movie.

And it was a pleasure to meet Baum. Brown presents him as a likable — if vacillating - writer.

Although there are no surprises in the storyline, the play gains suspense from the many tricks producer Gardner has in store for the audience, and who or what will pop up through one of the many trap doors on the Yellow Brick Road.

A talented ensemble brings to life the munchkins, the Snarly Tree and the flying monkeys, all of which make this production an original theatrical event, not merely an imitation of the movie.

This is a very special "Wizard of Oz." As a matter of fact, if you have only seen it on a video, it is a must.

Attic begins food drive

"Thursday's Child," opening next week at the Attic Theatre, was written by former Detroit playwright Julie Jensen and is a provocative comedy about a middle-aged mom struggling with mid-life and a possible pregnancy. During the run of the play, the theater will collect food for homeless people who are struggling for survival.

Beginning Wednesday, Dec. 11, and continuing through the play's closing on Sunday, Jan. 5, the Attic will offer two tickets for the price of one with every donation of at least two items of canned or packaged food. The donations will go to the Detroit/Wayne County Union of the Homeless, which is waging a campaign to help the homeless occupy the city's abandoned public housing.

During the recent weekend performances of "Brigadista," Stephen Wade in "Banjo Dancing," and the Elvin Jones Jazz Machine, the Attic offered various ticket discounts for every donated item of food. The response was so enormous that the Attic and the union decided to expand the food drive for the full run of a play. As many as 250 persons donated some 15 cases of goods.

For more information, call the Attic at 875-8285.

Rattlesnake Club hosts caroling

Detroit's Rattlesnake Club is calling all merry gentlemen and women - to form a choir of angels for The Salvation Army's 24th Annual Christmas Sing-A-Long on Wednesday, Dec. 11 from 11:30 a.m. to 3

The "Army of Good Cheer" luncheon will feature a variety of "heavenly" hosts leading Santa's helpers through rousing renditions of yuletide favorites. Detroit-area celebrities will conduct the sing-a-long, seeking additional Christmas cheer through musical challenges between tables.

Rattlesnake Club proprietor Jimmy Schmidt will also pull a few surprises out of Santa's bag for the 1991 Christmas sing. In addition, The Salvation Army brass ensemble will provide musical accompaniment for the caroling.

Last year's Christmas Sing-A-Long, which was held at the London Chop House, raised more than $18,000 to support The Salvation Army's services to the needy.

"The Salvation Army is pleased to be working with Jimmy Schmidt and The Rattlesnake Club to continue this long standing Detroit tradi-tion," said Lt. Colonel Clarence W. Harvey, divisional commander of The Salvation Army.

Reservations for the 24th annual "Army of Good Cheer" luncheon can be made by calling The Rattlesnake Club at 567-4400. The Rattlesnake Club is located within the River Place complex, off Jos. Campau, along Detroit's river-the film from being just a child's film, but it will bring out the child in everyone.

Beauty and the Beast'

From its opening scene showing a shimmering vista of the Beast's castle looming up from behind a nearly 3-D forest, Walt Disney's "Beauty and the Beast" never fails to dazzle.

A Disney Pictures release, it is a triumph. It was a standout at this year's New York Film Festival and there is a strong possibility it will be the first animated feature nominated for an Oscar as Best Picture.

Enchantment is at the heart of the story. A selfish prince (Robby Benson provides the voice) is turned into a monstrous beast by a witch and condemned to live under the curse until he can love and be loved. The heroine is a beautiful young woman named Belle who loves books and, unlike Sleeping Beauty who stayed asleep until awakened by a prince and Cinderella who waited for a prince to find her, doesn't mope around daydreaming of the day her prince will come. A much more practical girl, she sings, "There must be more than this provincial life.'

Belle is pursued by Gaston, a steroid-filled macho man, who is the town bully and braggart. Belle's rejection infuriates him.

The story gets into gear when Belle's eccentric father, a would-be inventor, gets lost in the woods and approaches the Beast's castle seeking shelter. The enraged Beast throws him into a dungeon.

When Belle tracks him down, she begs the Beast to free him, offering to take his place. In addition to the Beast, the castle is inhabited by previously human objects - Lumiere, the candelabra (voice by Jerry Orbach); a teapot (voice by Angela Lansbury); a clock (David Ogden Stiers); and an armoire (Jo Ann Worley) not to mention a cute-as-can-be cup with a broken rim named Chip.

The Beast's animated furniture convinces him that Belle could be the one to break the spell and turn him back into the handsome prince once again. When the curse is broken, those pieces of furniture become people, too. As the Beast starts to win her affection, Gaston gets wind of him and organizes the townspeople and off they go to attack the castle and kill the Beast.

"Beauty and the Beast" beautifully delivers the message that true beauty shows not to the eye but to the heart. It is truly a film of the ages, for

Thanks for the memories

The fall sports season is over but plenty of memories re-

Our local high school teams and athletes provided thrills right to the end. What better way to close out the year than to have two state champions in swimming? Grosse Pointe North freshman Christine Jamerino was first in two events at the state Class A meet and Grosse Pointe South junior Kim Higel was a fraction of a second away from the state 100-yard backstroke record, as she successfully defended her title in the Several other swimmers from North and South also did well in the state meet.

It was a good year all-around for the athletes from our four high schools in the Pointes.

North and South's football teams were competitive in every game. Neither one made the state playoffs, but it wasn't for a lack of effort.

The victory over previously-undefeated Fraser was probably the highlight of the year for North. South will look at its 23-13 victory over Sterling Heights Ford with fond memories. The Falcons came back to knock powerful Washington Eisenhower out of the state Class AA playoffs, making the Blue Devils' win even more impressive.

Both teams gave a good account of themselves in North's 7-6 victory in the showdown between the crosstown rivals.

Injuries kept University Liggett School from having a winning record, but the Knights played hard in every game and wound up the season with a victory over Hamtramck.

The girls tennis teams at all four schools had their moments of glory. North, South and ULS were all ranked in the top 10 in the state and the Lady Knights finished third in the Class A state meet and had an individual champion in Heather Heidel, who wound up the year with a 30-0 re-

Star of the Sea's tennis team won the Catholic League Intersectional title with a 6-0 record.

North, South and ULS each enjoyed success in cross country. South's boys and girls teams won the Macomb Area Conference White Division championships and the Lady Devils took first in the regional. North's girls and South's boys also qualified for the team race at the state meet.

Jennifer Miller of ULS finished fourth in the girls Class C state meet.

South's soccer team won the MAC White championship with a thrilling 4-3 victory over North, but the Norsemen came back to beat the Blue Devils, 2-1, in the first round of the state tournament. An earlier meeting between the two teams ended in a tie.

ULS went to the regional final in soccer before bowing to a strong Riverview Gabriel Richard team.

Girls basketball fans got to see two of the best players in the state whenever South stepped on the court. Rival coaches had nothing but praise for the Lady Devils' Angela Drake and Stephanie Coddens, who led South to a 14-0 finish in the MAC White. Anyone who missed the Drake-Coddens show can catch it again next year. They're both iuniors.

The Lady Norsemen basketball team had an up-and-down season, but their fans won't forget the regular-season finale

SPORTS ULS' Berri gets All- State nod

Sports Editor

University Liggett School soccer coach David Backhurst had only one complaint about

Richard Berri. "I wish I'd had two of him," Backhurst said of the senior forward, who earned Class C-D first team All-State honors on the squad selected by the Michigan High School Soccer Coaches Association. "Then I could have used him at sweeper or stopper, too.'

Two of Berri's teammates also received All-State recognition. Goalkeeper Vince Harkins earned a spot on the second team and defender Alex Crenshaw received honorable men-

University Liggett School's Richard Berri displays the form that made him an All-State soccer player.

Backhurst knows Berri's value as a defender. He was the stopper for the Knights during his sophomore year and played the sweeper role as a junior. He received All-State honorable mention a year ago.

"I knew Richard played forward on a club soccer team in the spring and he led the team in goals," Backhurst said. "We needed some scoring and I felt we had some other kids who could play defense."

The move turned out to be a stroke of genius for Backhurst. Berri led ULS in scoring with 23 goals and nine assists and was a key factor in the Knights' 10-7-4 record and No. 5 ranking in the final Class C-D state poll.

"That's the second-highest goal total in my 10 years of coaching," Backhurst said. "Richard uses his speed, aggressiveness and strength. He has a good low, hard shot.'

Berri was a steady performer all season, but was at his versatile best in the Knights' 1-1 tie with eventual state Class B champion Detroit Country Day.

"He started the game at forward and when we went ahead 1-0 I brought him back on defense to mark Country Day's Chris Castillo, who had been driving us crazy," Backhurst said. "They tied us, but Castillo didn't figure in the play. Richard had him pretty well frustrated.'

Berri made a strong showing in the state tournament, scoring three times in ULS' victory over Lutheran East in the district final and notching the Knights' only goal in the loss to Riverview Gabriel Richard in the regional final.

Berri would like to continue playing soccer in college.

"Right now he's preparing a videotape of his highlights to send to some colleges he's interested in," Backhurst said. "I think he can play in college because he's an aggressive, solidly-built kid."

Harkins has been ULS' regular goalkeeper for two seasons and this year finished with a 1.25 goals-against-average and six shutouts. He played all but 20 minutes of the Knights' 21

"This was the second-best defensive record we've had since I've been here and Vince was instrumental in that," Back-hurst said. "He came up big on many occasions.'

Harkins is one of two goalies in his age group named to the Olympic development squad.

"He made a commitment to be a goaltender after his freshman year," Backhurst said. "He plays on a select indoor team and has attended several goalkeeping camps.'

Backhurst said his junior netminder has the three qualities necessary to be a solid

"First, he has good quickness and reactions," the coach said. "Second, he's willing to throw his body around. He's the most acrobatic keeper I've had. And he's fearless. Some goalies will dive after a ball as a last resort, but Vince seems to enjoy it. Third, he has good soft hands.'

Crenshaw has been on the ULS varsity for four seasons and was solid along the back

"He's always been dependable, whether we play him as the stopper or the sweeper," Backhurst said. "He has good skills, especially heading the ball. He's willing to head a ball to get it out of danger, rather than let it drop to the ground

Crenshaw is an all-around athlete, who also plays hockey and lacrosse. He is also an accomplished violinist.

"Ĥe has a lot of things going for him," Backhurst noted.

"We were all over them for the last five minutes of that period," Abraham said.

Brian Quinn gave North an insurance goal during a power play with 5:29 left in the game.

Paul Megler opened the scoring for the Norsemen at 3:29 of the first period, but Notre Dame tied the score less than two minutes later. The Irish then scored two quick goals at the start of the second period.

"We just came out flat," Abraham said. "I don't understand it. Notre Dame is a hardworking team."

Goalie Chuck Schervish made several important saves to keep the game close until his North teammates turned on the firepower.

Abraham praised the line of Megler, Quinn and Joey

"They showed the ability to create scoring opportunities, the coach said. "They read the ice well and seem to be able to find each other with their pas-while Stevenson had a two-man advantage.

'We're going to work on our discipline because the penalties really hurt us," LaLonde said. "Stevenson provided the best competition we've had this season and we played well at times, but everybody had a few downfalls.

"In some cases we tried to be a little too fancy. Kids tried to do too much - make one more move to impress the people in the stands because it was our first home game.'

South, now 2-1, trailed 4-1 before scoring the last two goals.

Brian Crane, Eric Lindsay and Kevin Watt were the Blue Devils' marksmen.

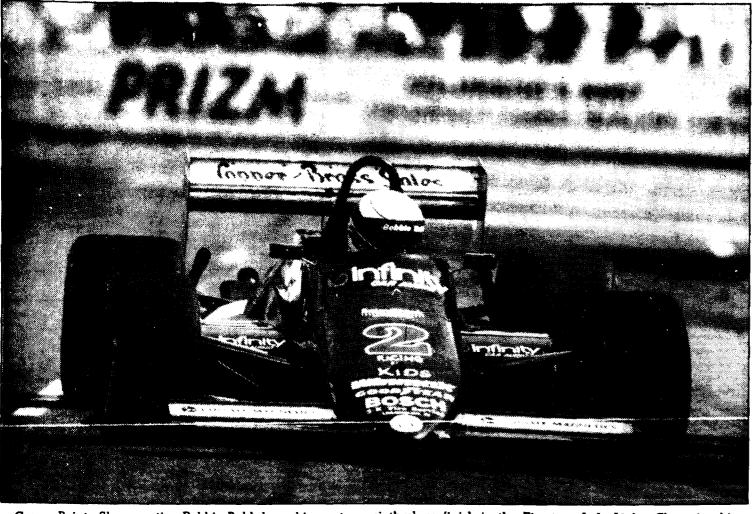

Goalie Jason Hall played a strong game for South.

'There wasn't a lot he could do on the goals," LaLonde said. "You could almost call them before they were scored.'

Grosse Pointe Shores native Robbie Buhl drove his car to a sixth-place finish in the Firestone Indy Lights Championship

Trouble plagues Buhl to the end

The instant shifts from highs to lows in auto racing were never more evident than in the Firestone Indy Lights Championship Series finale at Laguna Seca in Monterey, Calif., when Robbie Buhl, starting from the pole position, was taken out by Mark Smith on the second turn of the lead lap.

In a second, the anxious optimism of a prospective win for the Grosse Pointe Shores driver was replaced by the painful reality that the race and a trouble-plagued season were over.

"I had a hard time accepting that the race was over." Buhl said. "We had a very good car set up. I had a good start and was protecting my line against P.J. Jones on the outside when Smith tried to pass on the inside. There didn't appear to be enough room for him to make that move.

Unable to negotiate the turn, Smith hit Buhl and sent him into Jones. Buhl and Jones both spun out, while Smith, having used Buhl's car as a cushion, was able to continue in the race. Jones, whose car was relatively undamaged, returned to the race, but Buhl could not continue.

With a strong showing at Laguna Seca, Buhl had hoped to finish as high as third in the final standings. However, he had to accept sixth place with 110 points and $100,000 prize

While his mood was understandably dark following the race, Buhl was characteristically optimistic upon his return to Detroit.

"If you want to make a career out of this business, you have to look at the positive aspects of each season. Take away our shock absorber problems in the first half of the season and we would have been near the top all season," he

"As it was, in the second half, we were the most consistently quick car in qualifying with two poles, three seconds and one third-place start in the last six races. That is a good platform to move from.

'Our plan is to go for the championship in the Indy Light Series in 1992 while aligning ourselves with a front-running Indy Car team. By 1993, I hope to earn a seat in a competitive Indy Car.

District champs

Head coach Peter Burling, whose Big Red squad finished with a 15-8 record in 1991, expects Smucker to have an immediate impact on Denison's success.

Skiers can choose a long or short trip

With thousands of miles of trails in Michigan, cross-country skiers can choose a short trip through a nearby golf course or a long weekend at a resort.

But first-time skiers should set aside time to take a crosscountry ski lesson before heading out on any trail, according to AAA Michigan.

"Experts say a first-time skier expends two to three times more energy than an experienced skier," said Peter Erickson, AAA Michigan club services director. "That's why many people try the sport, find it too difficult and give up. First-timers can quickly learn the basics and have a lot more fun out on the trails by taking lessons.'

Lessons and rental equipment are offered at dozens of private resorts and state and local parks statewide.

In addition, the Northern Michigan Nordic Ski Council will offer free trail passes and half-hour group lessons Sunday, Jan. 5 during "Ski the Trails Free Day."

Would-be skiers who don't want to wait until then should expect to pay $12 for a group lesson and twice that for private tutoring. "Don't borrow equipment from a friend for your first time out," Erickson said. "Chances are it won't fit correctly and will hamper your progress. "It's best to rent equipment from a cross-country ski shop or area where a knowledgeable staff member can select the appropriate boots, skis and poles based on your height, weight, fitness and ability. Pay particular attention to the boots. They must be comfortable and snug but allow you to wiggle your toes."

Beginners should stick to groomed and marked trails, which are available at more than 100 Michigan locations including Porcupine Mountains State Park in the Upper Peninsula, Pere Marquette State Forest near Cadillac, Corsair Trails near Tawas City and the Huron-Clinton Metroparks in the Detroit area.

In addition, two-thirds of Michigan's 44 downhill ski areas provide cross-country ski

Injuries a pain for Knights

University-Liggett School's hockey team was ready to conduct auditions for right wings before its game with Southgate Anderson last week.

"We had the right side of all three lines gone," said Knights' coach John Fowler after his injury riddled team dropped a 7-0 decision to the Titans in a nonleague game.

To make matters worse, senior defenseman Bill Robb contracted mononucleosis and is out of the ULS lineup indefi-

"We needed a vacation after that," Fowler said. "Now we're going to get ourselves organized and start winning again. You work as a team to beat another team.'

Things didn't get any easier for the Knights after their loss to Southgate. They were scheduled to face defending state Class C-D champion Craphrook

"We'll try a few different things against Cranbrook,' Fowler promised.

ULS started slowly against Southgate, but did show some improvement defensively as the game progressed.

'We lost the first period badly, we got a little better in the second and we shut them out in the third period," Fowler said. "We made some progress (Blackhawks).

'Anderson is a very good team and they came out hitting on all eight cylinders."

Fowler said he had no timetable on Robb's return. "If the doctor says he can't play until January or February, then we'll take him back then," the coach said. "The most important thing is his

Holly protects, ivy brings joy — and mistletoe gets a bad rap

of Holly" and "The Holly and the Ivy" are sung this time of year as a reminder that Christmas is a wonderful opportunity to bring the outdoors in and make our houses festive with green boughs and the scent of

Somewhere in the dim past, the early pagan people of Europe brought sprays of native holly into their dwellings so that the tiny, friendly sprites and gnomes of the forest might find refuge from the wintry cold and wind. The thought was one of kindness and cheer, so the use of holly as an indoor winter decoration began. Long before the Christian era, holly was used in various pagan rites from Norway to the Mediterranean and from the Balkans to the British Isles.

The festival of the Saturnalia in honor of Saturn, the god of harvest, took place at the time of the winter solstice when days are short and darkness comes early and lingers long. It was an occasion for revelry, and holly branches were given as gifts to signify love and friendship, and great quantities of it were used to decorate houses. It was a natural transition for the early Christians to adopt this cheerful custom as part of the observance of Christmas which comes at the same season of the year.

The Druids used holly in their rites and ceremonies long before the Romans came to England.

Now, the custom of decorating with holly and evergreens is so universal that regardless of what other plant material is available, holly is the preferred decoration in many parts of the world. Holly was used inside the house and ivy was used to festoon doors and windows on the outside.

Holly has a large place in superstition, legend, folklore, song and story. Pliny wrote, "If the holly tree be planted about the house it keepeth away ill spells or enchantments and defendeth the house from light-

The followers of Zoroaster believe that the holly tree casts no shadows, and the face of a newborn child is sprinkled with a tea made from holly bark to bring good fortune.

Holly is the modern form of the old English word "hollen" and is not derived from the word "holy," which has a different origin. There are many surnames which are derived from the word "holly," such as Holmes. And the number of place names, such as Hollywood, are legion. Through the centuries holly has found a secure place in human sentiment.

Ivy is a native of Europe and Asia. In ancient Greece it was called "cissos" and was the personification of joy and affection. Even today, ivy is hung over the doors of taverns and wine shops because in ancient times it was dedicated to the wine god Dionysus. It is used in holiday decorations as the symbol of the conviviality and festive part of the Christmas season.

It was a common belief in the Dark Ages that mistletoe did not grow from seeds but from bird droppings, because it is only found in the tops of trees and never on the ground. Mistletoe was sacred to all the ancient Celtic and Teutonic peoples. In Druid ceremonies the mistletoe was given to the people to take home and hang from the ceilings to ward off evil spirits. Mistletoe is still used in homes at Christmas and has its own connotations of love and friendship.

It is true, even now, that there is a certain joy and festivity when fragrant vines and boughs are brought into the house. In Victorian times this was called "bringing home Christmas.

At first churches frowned upon this pagan ritual of decorating for Christmas but it wasn't long before they, too, were decked with greens. In defense of this practice, Isaiah

"The glory of Lebanon shall come unto thee, the fir tree, the pine tree and the box together, to beautify the place of my sanctuary.

In some of the old carols, holly and ivy are linked together and sometimes appear in antagonism to each other. In medieval times holly was considered a man's plant, and ivy, which clings, was a woman's plant. Songs and poems debate as to which should dominate.

Under the influence of Christian thought, holly became sacred and ivy faded from the scene, being considered pagan. Holly was a symbol of the burning bush, and of the Vir-

The bright red berries of holly spoke of the drops of blood which the crown of thorns drew from the brow of Christ, as they had much earlier been the blood of Baldur, the ill-fated god of Valhalla. After a long time, holly and ivy were again united in song but still "the holly bears the crown."

Mistletoe, too, has a long, upand-down association with Christmas and is a wonderful example of purely pagan rites being incorporated into Christian custom.

In ancient Britain, cutting the mistletoe was a ceremony of great importance and was done by the Druid priest, garbed in white, who used a golden sickle. Sacrifices to the gods were made and the mistletoe was distributed to the people to decorate their homes. Sprigs were hung over doors as protection and as a curative for any members of the family who might be ailing. In Scandinavian mythology mistletoe is implicated in the death of Bal-

A comparatively modern tradition regarding mistletoe is that while it is delightful in the house, it would be very wicked to bring it into a church since it has such a long history of pagan use. Today, mistletoe is never used in churches.

Ironically, the proper Victorians gave mistletoe its modern kissing ceremony. This, too, is a throwback to ancient times when mistletoe was imbued with magic powers. It was originally a fertility symbol, but the Victorians gave it the symbolic meaning of "surmounting difficulty.'

Everywhere we look, homes and shops and churches and public buildings are decorated for the holidays with fragrant greens (or even plastic ones which LOOK fragrant) and the festive feeling of Christmas is once again cheering our hearts.

Dress up your wall with a sconce

In the true spirit of the holidays, what could be more welcome than a gift you make yourself? Particularly if it's something as handsome as this authentic Colonial-style wall

And instead of giving just one, why not make a pair of them to be hung on either side of a mirror or above the fireplace?

Like its early 18th century counterpart, the candle holder is designed to hang on a peg bracket which is mounted on the wall. The sconce is made of western softwood lumber, so it's easy to cut and shape. It sands to a smooth finish.

And when it's sealed and waxed, the wood takes on the same warm tones and handrubbed look as the original.

This sconce is exceptionally easy to build. All you need to get started is a saw, an electric drill, a screwdriver and a 3-foot length of 1 by 8. You will also need some sandpaper, glue, three 1-1/2 inch wood screws, two wooden buttons (optional), a 2-1/2 inch decorative wood peg, and a mountable metal candle holder (available at most hardware and craft stores).

Cut a 17-inch length from the 1 by 8. Trim the sides so they taper from full width (7-1/ 4 inches at the bottom to 2-1/2 inches at the top. Round the edges, as shown. Mark the center of the board 1-1/2 inches from the top and drill a 3/4 inch hole for the peg.

Cut an 8-1/2 inch length of 1 by 8 for the base. Before attaching the base to the back, sand all edges (except the back edge of the base) until they're round and smooth.

Position the back on the base so it's centered from side to side, then inset it 3/4 inches from the back edge. This allows the sconce to hang vertically when it's installed.

On the bottom of the base. measure in 1-1/8 inches and drill three screw holes through the base and into the back. Apply glue to the joint and attach with screws. Screws may be countersunk for a more finished appearance.

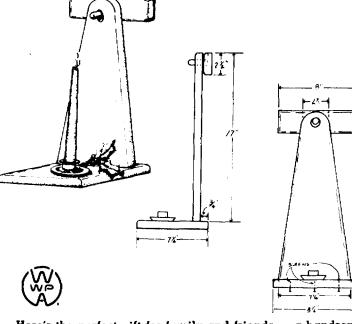

Cut an 8 inch length of 1 by 8 for the wall bracket and trim it to 2-1/2 inches wide. Round and sand all edges. To install the peg, locate the center of the board and drill a 3/8-inch-deep hole the same diameter as the base of the peg.

Apply glue and insert the peg. Drill mounting screw holes on either side of the peg. If you plan to attach wooden buttons after it's installed, counterbore the screw holes to a depth of 1/ 4 inches.

To finish the project, sand until smooth, then apply one or two coats of low-gloss polyurethane varnish. (A maple-toned stain may be used before varnishing.) After the varnish is dry, sand thoroughly, then apply a coat of paste wax.

Attach the metal candlestick holder at least two inches in front of the back.

For more home project ideas, write to Western Wood Products Association, Dept. HI-1191, 522 S.W. Fifth Ave., Portland, Ore. 97204-2122. Ask for a free list of publications featuring a wide selection of plans.

Here's the perfect gift for family and friends - a handsome Colonial-style wall sconce you can make yourself. The only tools you'll need are a saw, an electric drill and a screw-

Oh, that brut

Discover how to be a connoisseur in "Champagne and Brut Tasting" on Wednesday, Dec. 11, at 7:30 p.m. at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial. Taste and evaluate six different French champagnes. Brut champagne can range from very dry to sweet. In keeping with the holiday spirit, enjoy appetizers, a roaring fire and Christmas music.

The class is $30 a person.

The wine seminar group meets on the second Wednesday of each month at 7:30 p.m.: to explore a wide and varied selection of wines through tasting, lectures, films and group discussion. The next session will review "Port Tasting" on Jan. 8.

Gifts for the homeowner — and cat — who has everything

By Ronald J. Bernas Staff Writer

Holiday shopping can begin in earnest, now that you've polished off the Thanksgiving leftovers. But if you don't want to fight the crowds at the mauls, er, malls, catalog shopping may be just the thing for you.

And, really, what do you get for that homeowner who has everything? Heath Co., a mail order firm specializing in electronic gadgets, offers in its Home Automation catalog several "low-cost solutions to everyday situations" designed to please the most discriminating, or the laziest, person on your list.

Tired of opening your draperies in the morning and closing them at night? Do you always grab the open cord when you want to close the drapes? Take heart, you can have "the best in total drapery control" for those unruly window dressings with a remote-control drapery handler complete with a timer. A nine-foot drapery control bar with a free demonstration/installation video costs $399.95

Imagine if you will: you're lying in bed and you don't want to get up to turn off the lights downstairs. Don't fret, just reach for the remote control. Don't walk into a dark house - turn the lights on from your garage with a remote in your car. You can brighten and dim lamps from up to 150 feet away. All this for just $39.99.

Frustrated that you can't control the family room VCR from the kitchen? With the Powermid system, you can take care of that. For $49.99 you get a pyramid-shaped transmitter and receiver and, aligned properly, and with good aim on your part, you can fast forward to the good scenes from three rooms away, or turn up the stereo or change the television channel.

With the Rabbit and the Gemini, you can watch a movie being played on the living room VCR on your bedroom television. It's just $119.95; about half the cost of a new VCR for the bedroom television.

All those remote controls, along with your VCR, stereo and television remotes can be replaced by one with an X-10 system. A what?

"X-10 is a line carrier-operated control system that gives you control of lights and appliances from anywhere in your house or apartment," the catalog says. "Now, from a single remote you can control your TV, VCR, stereo, lamps, fans, outdoor lights and more. . . Just imagine, one press of a button and you can turn on your TV and VCR, start a videotape, dim the lights and pop the popcorn. The best part is you've done it all from your favorite chair.'

All that sloth for the low, low price of $119.95. But you still have to get up and get the popcorn. And you have to feed it to yourself.

There's also a gizmo that will turn any telephone into a remote control, and you can call home and jack the heat up, or turn off that iron you left on.

Next time you redo your bathroom, include the Ultra-Valve which mixes the hot and cold water in your shower or bathtub to the temperature (from 70 degrees to 112 degrees) you select. It's just $649.95.

Speaking of water, there's the Automatic Water Controller which attaches to any faucet in the home. It automatically turns the water on when it senses movement underneath the device. It's a mere $69.95 and runs on four AA batteries, which aren't included.

For $119.95 you can own the Walk-N-Talk cordless telephone and radio headset which allows you to listen to your favorite tunes while making and receiving telephone calls, all without using your hands. A receiver attaches to your belt and the headphone with mouthpiece plugs into it. And if you're bored, you can put it on and pretend you're working the drive-through window at Mc-Donald's.

Tired of being the one taking the videos and never being in them? "In The Picture" can put you in the picture. Mount the videocamera on a tripod along with the $299.95 In The Picture, strap a sensor to your belt and the camera will rotate to wherever you and your belt happen to be. Vanity, thy name is Big Brother.

An electronic cat door will offer your feline more independence - just what it needs - for $149.95.

Unleashed dogs can be a nuisance when you're jogging or out for a leisurely stroll, but they can be kept at bay with a $29.95 Dazer. It's sort of a dog whistle in reverse, emitting a sound only dogs can hear and hate. There are alarms of all kinds, one of which will even call you if something bad happens (temperature drops, power outage, flood, pestilence), one that barks, and one that detects heat and motion at 60 feet. For more information on Heath's Home Automation catalog, call 1-800-253-0570.

Homearama opens tomorrow

When the doors open to the 13 new homes on display at Homearama Holiday 1991 on Friday, Dec. 6, visitors will be asked to name their favorite. Their votes will determine the winner of "The People's Choice Award."

Each of the homes contains exclusive features. Also, each home has its own floor plan, plus designerplanned furnishings and complete landscaping.

The homes, constructed by members of the Builders Association of Southeastern Michigan (BASM), will be open daily Dec. 6-22 in the Hiverbridge Subdivision, located south of Nine Mile Road, east of Novi Road in Novi. The homes are valued in the $200,000 to $250,000 range. All of the homes offer ideas and the designs are highlighted in a plan book that is included in the $5 admission.

Detroit Edison, Standard Rederal Bank and Consumers Power offices offer discount coupons that are good Monday through Friday. Hours are 4 to 10 p.m. Monday through Friday, and from noon to 10 p.m. Saturday and Sunday.

There is free parking and refreshments can be purchased at the site. For more information, call 737-4478.

PRAYER TO ST. CLARE

Say 9 Hail Marys a day for 9 days. The 9th day, publish this ad and 3 wishes will be granted. Also, thanks to The Holy Spirit Infant Child of Prague, St. PROFESSIONAL Sound Jude and St. Anne. D.M.

101 PRAYERS

PRAYER to St. Clare. Pray nine Haif Marys once a day, for nine days. On the 9th day publish this prayer & wish for three things. Even though you don't have faith, your prayers will be answered.

PRAYER TO THE HOLY SPIRIT

Holy Spirit, you who make me see everything and who shows me the way to reach my ideal. You, who give me the Divine Gift to forgive and forget the wrong that is done to me and you who are in all instances of my life with me. I, in this short dialogue want to thank you for everything and confirm once more that I never want to be separated from you no matter how great the material desires may be. I want to be with you and my loved ones in your perpetual glory.

Amen Thank you for your love towards me and my loved ones. Pray this prayer three consecutive days without asking your wish, after third day your wish will be granted, no matter how difficult it may be. Then promise to publish this prayer as soon as your favor has been granted. Thank you for favors received. S.J.S.

THREE cats- neutered and declawed- & 1 kitten. Guaranteed. 882-3054.

PLEASE DON'T DELAY! SPAY or NEUTER

YOUR PET TODAY! An altered pet is a healthier and happier companion. Also, it spares you the grief and pain of having puppies and kittens destroved when no homes can be found. Countless numbers of sweet, innocent little ones are euthanized every day in shelters across the country because a pet wasn't spaved or neutered, if we cut down on the numbers of unwented litters being born, we will also cut down on the number of abandoned, lost and unwanted animals to destroy. WE WILL BE HAPPY TO PROVIDE ADVICE as well as a LIST OF ECONOMICAL

Christmas Tree Safety Tips

One of the joys of Christmas is choosing and decorating a tree. all part of tradition, but you dles are beginning to drop. should remember safety comes first when putting up your tree.

Christmas is a smart safety pre- soon, set the tree in a pail of wa-gins to dry out rapidly, becoming a fire hazard within your home.

Other precautions to keep your tree from drying out too fast begin when you choose a tree. Check to see if the tree is strongly clinging to its needles. This indicates the tree has not begun to dry out. Give the tree a little Lights, tinsel and ornaments are shake as well to see whether nee-

Setting up ter water penetration. If you your tree only a few days before don't plan to decorate the tree caution. Once a tree is cut, it be. ter and store it in the coolest area of your house.

Most of us have a special area to place our tree. Make sure this area is not near fireplaces, candles or heaters. It is also a good idea to keep your tree out of direct sunlight. The tree can be placed in a pail or kettle filled with water, sand or gravel. If your tree is placed with sand or gravel, you need to add water regularly.

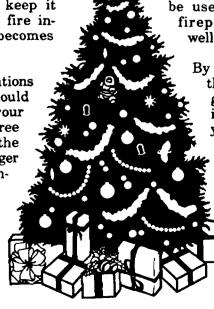

Once you bring your tree home it Another way to keep your tree moist and healthy is by spray misting the needles with tepid water daily. Floral preservatives or a special Christmas tree preservative can also be added to the water to retain freshness.

Although many families like to should be kept in water keep their tree up after the New Year, this is not a good idea. A tree begins to dry out, even after all the precautions to keep it fresh. The danger of a fire increases as the tree becomes dryer.

As soon as all the decorations are taken down, you should remove the tree from your home. No part of the tree should be discarded in the fireplace due to the danger of flying sparks and chimney fires.

One last item: Christmas greenery that is cut fresh from evergreen trees and shrubs
