Audrey Lawrie was furious over the work performed in her backyard last week by Detroit Edison tree trimmers.

Her complaint isn't new.

Rapid response clears gasoline from sewer; source a mystery

By Donna Walker Staff Writer

Workers at sewage pumping stations in the Grosse Pointes and St. Clair Shores acted quickly to dissipate gasoline that infilitrated the waste stream recently.

About 7:30 a.m. Friday, Dec. 27, an employee at the Wayne County Kerby Road Pumping Station on Kerby at Chalfonte called the Farms public safety department to report that there was a strong gasoline odor coming from the station, which pumps sewage to Detroit for treatment.

The public safety department told employees at the pumping station to keep all the doors and windows open and to contact police if the odor got worse. Officers then alerted the Michigan Department of Natural Resources, the Environmental Protection Agency and other nearby pumping stations about the problem.

The odor was also detected at the Macomb County Chapaton Pumping Station on Nine Mile at Jefferson and at the Northeast Pumping Station on Marter in St. Clair Shores, said Ken Cloft, supervisor of the Chapaton station.

Bob Vandermellen, supervisor of the Milk River Pumping Station in Grosse Pointe Woods, said he was asked by the Farms public safety department to investigate the odor at

House fire fatal to Farms man

A 40-year-old Farms man died Jan. 5 as the result of a fire in his home.

Jay Baggot was pronounced dead at St. John Hospital at 11:35 p.m.

Firefighters from the Farms and City responded at 9:55 p.m. to a fire in a two-family home in the 300 block of Hillcrest. An older woman who lived in the upstairs flat escaped without injury, but Baggot, who lived in the lower flat, could not be accounted for.

Once inside, firefighters found fire and smoke coming from the first-floor living room. They found Baggot unconscious but alive in the kitchen. Woods paramedics took him to St. John Hospital.

The cause of the fire is still under investigation, but Farms investigators said it may have been the result of careless smoking.

The home was not equipped with smoke detectors.

the Kerby Road station. After consulting with St. Clair Shores officials, he determined that the spill started in that city and was under the jurisdiction of the South Macomb Sanitation District. There are three separate sewer jurisdictions in St. Clair Shores: the Macomb County Drain Commission district, the South Macomb Sanitation District, and the City of St. Clair Shores Sewage District, said John Tavalieri, who is department foreman of the latter district. Workers from all three districts, as well as the St. Clair Shores fire department, responded to the emergency, he

They found that the amount of gasoline or gasoline deriva-tives in the 72-inch sewer line was 50 parts per million, which is on the low end of the explodanger scale, Tavalieri said.

The emergency personnel poured a biodegradable emulsifying agent into the sewer, he said, to raise the flash point of the gasoline so that it was almost impossible for it to explode. The chemical also caused the gasoline to sink and disperse, he said.

Within an hour and 15 minutes, the amount of gasoline in the sewer line was down to zero parts per million.

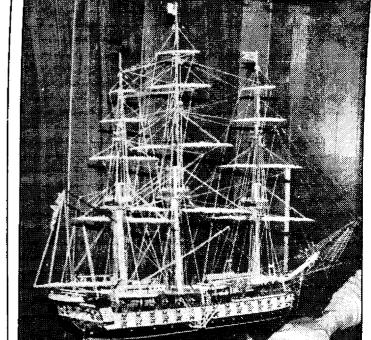

"There could have still been parts per billion, but my instruments don't go down that far," Tavalieri said.

He said the spill's point of origin was traced to the first manhole west of Jefferson on Marter Road in St. Clair Shores. However, the source of the spill is a mystery.

Tavlieri said there was no evidence that the manhole cover had been lifted. If gasoline were dumped directly into the manhole, the polluter would have had to have lifted the cover, he said.

St. Clair Shores Fire Marshall Fred Eccles said that the spill could have been caused by a leaky automobile gas tank, "but more than likely it was purposely dumped.'

Someone guilty of illegally dumping a hazardous material, such as gasoline or oil, can be fined up to $10,000 a day, according to state Department of Natural Resources codes, and is also subject to local ordinances, Eccles said. A St. Clair Shores ordinance makes the dumping of a hazardous material punishable by a $500-a-day fine.

Konsler suggested that perhaps Petersen stays until Woods finds replacement

By Donna Walker Staff Writer

Chester E. Petersen has been named interim city administrafor-clerk by the Grosse Pointe Woods City Council. Petersen, who retired Dec. 31 after 30 years as city administrator-clerk, agreed Monday to stay on until a replacement for him can be found.

"Basically, this will be a reduction in Chester's work week, but he will be doing the same things he's always done, with a few minor exceptions," said Mayor Robert E. Novitke. Petersen may be asked to attend night meetings, but not as many as before he retired, Novitke said. Under his agreement with the city, Petersen will receive a salary and worker's compensation coverage. He receives other benefits as part of his retirement package.

On the days when he is not working, Petersen's duties will be performed by Phillip H. Belcher, assistant city administrator, and Louise Warnke, deputy city clerk.

The council, sitting as the committee-of-the-whole, had considered naming Warnke city clerk, thus splitting the city administrator-clerk position in two. However, the committee decided to wait until a new city administrator is named, to find out if he or she wants the posi-

The committee-of-the-whole is composed of the six councilmembers and the mayor and is a more informal body than the council. When the council wants to discuss something freely, without having to use Robert's Rules of Order, it meets as the committee-of-thewhole. The committee cannot make any binding decisions; it can only make recommendations to the council.

Councilman Ted Bidigare, chair of the selection committee, updated the committee-ofthe whole on the search for a new city administrator-clerk. He said that so far, the selection committee has received eight resumes and there is at least one other person who he knows of who is interested in the position.

The selection committee's job is to narrow the candidates to a "workable number," maybe four or five, Novitke said. The council will then review their resumes and interview the finalists, he said.

Interviews will begin Monday, Jan. 27, the committee-ofthe-whole decided.

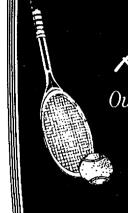

If the council is not satisfied with the interviews, it may advertise for a city administratorclerk, Novitke said.

So far, the selection committee has only approached local people about the position. It has not placed a help-wanted ad anywhere.

In addition to being named interim city administratorclerk, Petersen was named city administrator emeritus by the council on Monday.

Novitke said it's an honorary title which may include a few perks, such as an annual invitation to the city's Christmas party and a permanent park

"We wanted to do something special for Chester in recognition of all he's done for the city," Novitke said.

A building authority to coordinate the financing of the proposed $2 million renovation of the Grosse Pointe Park city hall and police offices was created by the city council Dec. 17.

Such an authority is required by law when seeking certain types of financing, such as mu-nicipal bonds. The authority will present a financing proposal to the council for its approval at a future date.

Construction dates have not yet been set.

The renovation of the municipal complex will include making it handicapped-accessible. An elevator in an atrium connecting the city hall and public safety building will be part of the project.

The fire hall will be converted into public safety offices, including modern jail cells, and a garage will be built to house the fire trucks and ambulances. The department of public works yard is being moved to a former bump shop at Wayburn and Jefferson that was purchased by the city.

The architect for the project is Louis G. Redstone Associates

Named to the building an thority were City Manager Dale Krajniak, city comptroller Peter Dobrzeniecki and city attorney Herold McC. Deason.

State tax cut could damage local schools

The question that all three groups pressing for property tax cuts in Michigan have not answered satisfactorily is how the state would meet its needs with reduced revenues.

Last year's sharp cuts in state support for services ranging from welfare to aid to the arts already have had a serious impact in Michigan. If a property tax cut were approved, the state government would have even less revenue to distribute, and no doubt would have to cut deeper into the bone of state services.

Without state reimbursement to the schools and local governments, the Pointes would apparently lose substantial revenues by passage of a property tax cut since assessments on Pointe property have been increasing at rates ranging from about 8 to 12 percent a year, or well above the limits the current tax cut plans propose.

This year state property assessments

Vol. 53, No.2, January 9, 1991, Page 6A

were frozen by legislative action so the pending tax cut proposals, if approved, would not become effective until next year. But then, to escape a damaging revenue loss, the Grosse Pointe school system could be forced to boost its tax rate which is not yet at its authorized level.

In its plan, the Taxpayers Association of Michigan proposes to give property owners a refund or tax credit of 30 percent of the local school operating taxes they pay, phased in over five years. It seeks a petition drive to put the issue on the November ballot.

The association apparently would not provide any automatic reimbursement for school districts' loss of revenue. It did say the state could pay for the property tax refunds and for its proposed increase in the personal income tax exemption from

$2,100 to $3,000 through the growth in other tax revenues, such as from the sales tax. In these times, however, that appears

Gov. John Engler would limit property assessment increases to 3 percent a year but reimburse local school districts for lost revenues. The Democrats would put a 5 percent cap on property assessment boosts but would also reimburse local districts from higher taxes on business. Petition drives are under way for both of these plans.

But where would the state get the additional revenues to reimburse the school districts and local governments before the tax cuts produce their expected economic recovery and improved tax yields?

The Taxpayers Association hopes funds would come from growth in revenues from current tax sources, such as the sales tax. But unless the sales tax were increased, which would require a constitutional amendment, it would be unlikely to boost revenues enough to offset the property tax cuts.

True, the property tax is unfair because in effect it is a tax on capital, which in this case is the taxpayer's property. But bad as it is, the property tax does finance the public schools and most city and county expenses.

Unless some replacement is provided, the major effect of any property tax cut would be to cripple the schools as well as local governments at a time when the state is pressing for better schools and better-educated graduates to meet the needs of the future.

We, too, dislike the property tax, and the annual increases in the Pointes, but unless the revenues of the public schools and local governments are protected, the proposed property tax cuts ought to be rejected.

Nor are we convinced by the argument that a property tax cut would jump-start the Michigan economy to the extent that increased revenues from other tax sources would immediately boost the state's total tax take. To us that sounds like more voodoo economics.

'92 outlook is only half good s we look ahead to 1992, optimists tend to see good things on the horizon while pessimists tend to emphasize the bad outlook.

Strangely enough, as we look ahead this year it is our own country that raises many of the doubts about the future. It is the economy's poor performance and its rather dismal outlook that prompt that view, of course.

It is the future of manufacturing that seems to offer the dimmest outlook. In more and more industries, U.S. manufacturers have simply been running behind foreign competitors both in quality and sales — with a resulting loss of U.S. jobs.

Surprisingly, the stock market soared in the closing days of the old year and thus produced an excellent year for most market investors. Yet unless the economy begins to pick up, the market, too, may become a victim of recession.

But abroad, where we have seen so many threats of war, uprisings and other disasters in recent years, the outlook probably is better than at any time since before World War Π .

The allied victory in the Persian Gulf, the end of the cold war, the dissolution of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, the reunification of Germany, the tiny steps toward a Mideast settlement and even the off-again, on-again cease-fire in Yugoslavia's civil war all offer some hope that the nations of the globe can continue to escape a full-scale world war.

Even the current uncertainty over who will control the button on the old USSR's nuclear stockpile looks better than the former fear that the USSR at any time might order a nuclear strike or a seizure of some militarily weak but geopolitically important part of the globe.

So perhaps President Bush can be forgiven if he prefers to look across the water rather than at the home front when he considers the immediate future and, more specifically, his chances for re-elec-

His stock at home continues to plummet, although his trip to Asia to seek to enlarge U.S. markets abroad may bring him dividends. It could even net him more support at home, assuming positive results from his appeal to our overseas friends to open more markets to more U.S. goods.

From the start, he sought to picture his trip as an important way to deal with the domestic problem of unemployment. He was right, of course, that increased exports can prompt more jobs at home, even though that close connection often escapes the jobless.

But it is too early to know whether the president's trip to Japan and his other appeals to open markets to more U.S. goods will prompt beneficial results or just cause another delay in any meaningful solution to the problem.

Meanwhile, the plight of the poor, unemployed and other dependents in this country tends to grow worse, even though the weather bureau has modified its earlier forecast of a long, cold winter.

So, at best, we conclude our glass of optimism is only half full as we enter 1992. However, the hope that springs eternal also raises the prospect that this winter of our discontent soon will be followed by the glorious summer of economic recov-

Hit and run

To the Editor:

I would like to transmit a message to the person who ran over our 14-yearold cat in front of our house on Saturday, Jan. 4, between noon and 1 p.m.

It can be said that there is no novelty in stupidity and reckless driving. However, I am surprised and appalled at your lack of courageousness and stunted sense of responsibility in failing to own up to your accident.

That is, if what occurred was even an accident. Given the scene and circumstances of our cat's death, you must have been either driving very fast, preoccupied with something other than the road ahead, or being willfully malicious. If the latter is the case, there's no need for you to read any further; go back to whatever you were doing - like pulling the wings off flies.

Tiger tax

To the Editor:

The Tiger tax bill (HB 5300), which is supported by state Rep. Tracey Yokich (D-St. Clair Shores), doesn't sound like a bill that should be supported wholeheartedly.

I read that if this bill is rejected, Mr. Monaghan will move the Tigers out of Michigan. Well, if the Tigers' owner and executives have to stoop to blackmail. then maybe we're better without them. However, they should stay.

State Sen. Gil DiNello (D-Eastpointe) has strongly argued against this legislation. One reason is that 70 percent of the revenue for a new stadium would come from business transactions outside of Detroit. State Sen. John Kelly (D-Detroit) had attempted amending the bill to list renovation as a ballot option, but I've always believed in the right of the people to vote on tax proposals, 345 which I believe is why Yokich supported it. How- 1973 ever, I'm in agreement gait with Senator DiNello's stance and supported Senator Kelly's efforts. I disapprove of the Tiger tax aspect of HB 5300, because the legislation doesn't require the cost of the stadium project to be detailed on the ballot. I believe the side people of Wayne County should know the costs that they may be voting on.

If Yokich supports this legislation without the people knowing the costs involved, then Yokich is wrong in supporting what can lead to blank check writing or unlimited spending.

ow that the Big Ten has admitted Penn State to its hallowed membership, perhaps the conference should be renamed the Little Eleven.

With all due credit to past peformances of Big Ten teams, the conference has fallen on hard times when it comes to playing football outside its own league, especially in bowl games.

In season-ending bowl games, Michigan, the Big Ten champion, disappointed its fans by falling to Washington. But the rest of the record was also bleak:

Thanks for the stories, Laura

A lot has been said in the media recently about how the natural beauty and native population of what is now the United States were greatly injured by the Europeans who immigrated to the new world (beginning with Columbus) and continued to move west.

It's good that we are re-examining history, but we should not portray all of those colonists as evil land robbers who were out to get Native Ameri-

That would not do justice to the average, honest people who settled what is now the Midwest and West. People who weren't looking for trouble, just a fertile piece of land where they could grow crops and raise their families.

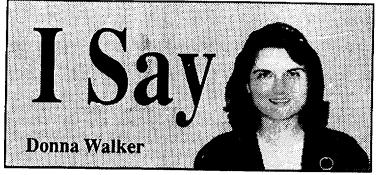

People like Charles Ingalls. Ingalls, a farmer and jack-ofall-trades, moved his family farther west by covered wagon several times from 1870 to the early 1880s under the Homestead Act of 1862.

Under the act, a man could apply for a tract of 160 acres of land and if he lived and farmed there for five years, the land was his. It was the U.S. government's way of providing an incentive for people to settle in the West.

The Ingallses started out in Pepin, Wis., and eventually settled in DeSmet, S.D. The hardships, pain and joy they experienced as pioneers were captured by Ingalls' daughter, Laura Ingalls Wilder, in her "Little House" series of children's books.

The title of the second book in her series of nine, "Little House on the Prairie," was also the name of a television series produced by and starring the late Michael Landon.

However, the books and show (which can still be seen in reruns) are very different. Only the names of characters and the wholesome values conveyed in each are the same.

For instance, Wilder's older sister, Mary, was blinded by scarlet fever as a child. On TV, she got married, ran a school for the blind and had a baby. In real life she did none of those things.

Although libraries do not classify Wilder's books as autobiographies, they are the story of her life - from her earliest memories to her marriage to Almanzo James Wilder at the age of 18 and their first four years of matrimony.

I've been a fan of Wilder's since I read her first book, "Little House in the Big Woods," at the age of 6.

She was born in 1867, 100 years before me, and I've always been fascinated by the changes that have occurred in the world in the span of our

At the age when I was playing with Barbies and watching "Sesame Street," she was play-ing with a rag doll in a oneroom log cabin. She didn't have a TV or even a radio, but she had something that was probably a lot nicer. The music of her father's fiddle.

In addition to Wilder's books, I've bought several that have been written about her over the sites, but I didn't realize how popular she was in the metro Detroit area until recently, when I attended a program about her at the Roseville Public Library.

The speaker was William T. Anderson, 35, of Lapeer, who read Wilder's books as a boy.

Like most fans, he wanted to know what happened to Wilder and her family after the point where the books stopped. Wilder, who was 65 when her first book was published, was 22 at the end of her last book, "The First Four Years." She lived to be 90, and Anderson wanted to know what happened in those 68 unaccounted-for years.

He wrote to people she had known and the towns where she had lived, and even corresponded with her only child, Rose Wilder Lane, who died in

Lane, who helped her mother break into the writing business, was a world-traveler and an accomplished journalist and novelist. She wrote the first biography of Henry Ford and was a Vietnam War correspondent for Woman's Day magazine at the age of 78.

Anderson's program was held on a rainy night and I expected I'd be the only one there, but there were more than 30 people in the audience. They had come from all over - Romeo, Clinton Township, East Detroit and, I suspect, even from Grosse Pointe.

We saw slides of Wilder's family, her homesteads, and items in the various museums devoted to her.

One woman explained Wilder's popularity this way: 'Children read her books for the vivid stories and then reread them as adults for the history and facts she packed into them. You can keep re-reading her books and each time find new things you had missed be-

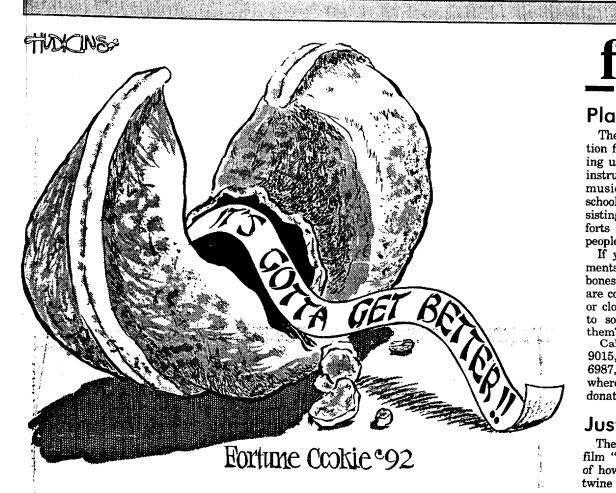

Wilder's books are available at the Grosse Pointe Library. Anderson has written several books about the Ingalls and the Wilders. His book, "Laura Ingalls Wilder Country," 1988, with color photos of her home sites and black and white photos of her family, is available at the Grosse Pointe Library.

Michigan: Long on lakes, short on chasms

Talking with out-of-town company, between cooing at the baby and glooming about the economy, somehow the Au Sable River came up.

You know, that famed scenic northern Michigan canoeing river that everyone knows

"Where's that?" asked our guests from Ohio. "Never heard of it. Does it have anything to do with the famous Ausable Chasm?'

Hmmm. Never heard of it. But with a name like chasm, it couldn't be in Michigan. This state has its wonders, but they're more in the dune and lake category than chasm. Unless you count the famous limestone chasm, er, quarry, at Rogers City.

People in Michigan get excited about waterfalls in the UP, falls as small as Tahquamenon or Miner's (and a lot smaller, too). With few rapids rougher than a Class I, we tend to think land gradations of more than 10 feet are a pretty big deal.

There was a minor flurry a couple of years ago when the DNR "discovered" two waterfalls in the Lower Peninsula. No Niagaras, these, I can imagine, if they went unnoticed through a century-and-a-half of exploitation and development. It was probably one of those discoveries like Columbus made, that everyone local ready knew about, but just hadn't publicized properly.

Advertising is everything. Well, to get back to the Au Sable/Ausable, no one was real sure about it, so out came the reference books, without which no gathering at our house is complete. The Chasm turned out to be in New York, on a short river that flows into Lake Champlain.

That explains it. New York is a hotbed of waterfalls and chasms, starting with Niagara. Millions of tourists also visit Watkins Glen, some to see car racing, but lots of others to walk through the canvon. It's beautiful — but we were perversely enamored of a decayed town about five miles away, with its own waterfall only 8 feet shorter than Niagara.

Maybe it was the real diner where we ate oatmeal for breakfast and listened to the locals jaw about their rundown town. But more than likely, it was the waterfall that thundered down right into someone's back yard.

Riverfront property, with a vengeance. Montour Falls crashes over the escarpment and unaccountably takes an immediate 90degree turn. As everywhere else, the rich folk in the town bought up the most desirable frontage, and the resulting mansions along the two streets that formed a T intersection at the falls were known as "the glorious T."

When Louis Philippe (whom everyone used to know about) was in exile in America during Napoleon's reign, he sketched the falls, a sketch that now hangs (more or less immortally) in the Louvre. But nobody reeither Louis Philippe or Montour Falls.

Such is the fleeting nature of

The same conversation about economic gloom also charged the media with being responsible for the recession.

Now, maybe I'm just being sensitive here, but I don't think it's my fault. Or Jane Bryant Quinn's.

The media can be faulted on one thing, though, and that is failure to give context to the economic discussion. Writing about joblessness does in fact increase the gloom, but it doesn't cause joblessness in the first place.

Public officials and the media are equally derelict in their scare talk about the economy because they both understand economic forces better than they explain them. (That's the charitable view, which assumes that experts actually understand the economy.)

I speak of the way politicians manipulate plant closings and downsizings and overseas-movings, blaming problems on everyone but ourselves and acting (for their own political purposes) as though the economy will never, ever recover. And the media let them get away with it.

"These jobs are gone forever," they intone, as if the number of jobs were fixed immuta-

That's baloney. Because, even though things are tough right now, we will eventually recover and do other jobs.

After all, New England no doubt thought its economy was ruined forever when the textile mins moved to the South hair a century ago and the shoe industry moved overseas in the '60s. Michigan probably believed it had shot its economic wad when the last commercial timber was cut 100 years ago.

Those of you who received books for Christmas, as I did, are still enjoying the holiday bonanza weeks later. A Christmas stocking worthy of the name always contains a couple of good books.

My favorite of the moment is "PrairyErth," by William Least Heat-Moon, a writer I admire greatly, even if he does have a misplaced hyphen.

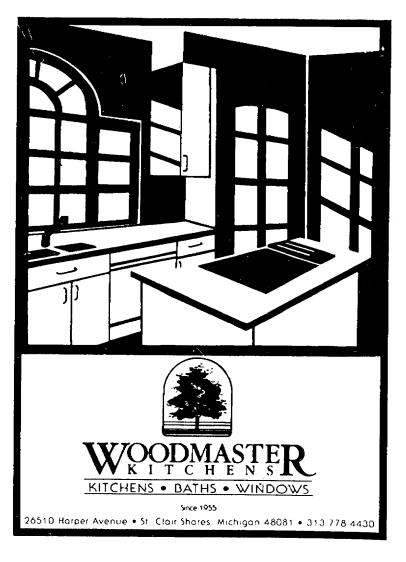

With Heat-Moon, it isn't the plot that counts; in the case of "PrairyErth," there is no plot. It's all in the words.

Consider this, and know that you have never plumbed the depths of a county courthouse before:

"Under that bell tower, five generations have been probated, adjudicated, arbitrated, had their property evaluated and assessed, been registered and wedded and divorced, have come to ask in drought and grasshopper years for hominy, sorghum syrup, dried apples; on the front steps, they've seen their farms and houses go under the sheriff's gavel, and inside they've been locked up and set free, and a few have come to know themselves better here than in any church: scratched raggedly into the paint above the steel jail door (Dante into the Inferno): PRAY AS YOU ENTER."

Courthouse as a microcosm, a hub, even, of life.

Now that's good writing.

Freedom of speech, press, assembly, petition protects our other rights

This is the fifth in a series of articles about the Bill of Rights, courtesy of the Commission on the Bicentennial of the U.S.

In addition to guaranteeing people religious freedom, the First Amendment provides in part that "Congress shall make no law . . . abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press, or the right of the people peaceably to assemble, and to petition the Government for a redress of grievances.

In these few words, the First Amendment lays down the essential principles necessary to ensure the protection of other important rights. This is so because with the freedom to speak freely, write freely, hold meetings and present demands to the government, people could ultimately have used the political process to secure all of the other freedoms protected by the Bill of Rights. Obviously, however, it would have taken some time and much political debate to accomplish all of this.

The First Amendment guarantees of free speech and a free press are two of the most familiar guarantees in the Bill of Rights. Perhaps the reason that the framers listed freedom of speech before freedom of the press was that, in their time, the print media was not as pervasive as it is today.

In the late 18th century, people were commonly kept informed both in town meetings and in informal neighborhood gatherings, where they discussed the problems that were foremost in their minds. They believed that free speech and a free press were imperative to a government of "We the Peo-

The guarantees of freedom of assembly and the right to petition the government are also important. The guarantee of freedom of assembly allows citizens to meet to discuss issues of concern to them without government interference. The framers included this guarantee because, under colonial rule, public meetings had often been subject to police control; indeed, even today, in some countries, no meeting can be held by more than three people without first obtaining a permit — like a parade permit — from local authorities

The right to petition the government guarantees citizens the right to complain to public officials about social and economic problems, and to express their opinion as to what government should do to solve them. The framers included guarantee because citizens had formerly been punished for petitioning the government, regardless of how respectfully their petitions may have been

Although freedom of speech. press, assembly and petition are of critical importance in a democratic society, the First Amendment describes these rights only in general terms. Accordingly, the precise meaning of these guarantees has generated controversy over the years. (The guarantee of freedom of speech has raised difficult questions about the extent to which government can regulate speech to promote public safety, welfare and morals. The right to free speech is not absolute: as Justice Holmes once observed, even "(t)he most stringent protection of free speech would not protect a man in falsely shouting fire in a theater and causing a panic' (Schenck vs. United States, 249 U.S. (1919)).

Thus, for example, the Supreme Court has ruled that government can regulate speech that is directed to incite, and is likely to incite, imminent lawless action (Brandenburg vs. Ohio, 395 U.S. 444 (1969)), speech that is likely to cause serious damage to national security (Haig vs. Agee, 453 U.S. 280 (1981)), and materials that are obscene (Miller vs. California, 413 U.S. 15 have also been raised as to what qualifies as protected speech and what does not. In this regard, certain kinds of conduct have been deemed sufficiently "expressive" to merit First Amendment protection.

In interpreting the free speech guarantee, questions

Thus, the Supreme Court recently overturned a state conviction for burning the American flag, ruling that, although the burning of the flag is deeply offensive to many Americans, it is also expressive conduct entitled to First Amendment protection in certain circumstances (United States vs. Eichman, 110 S. Ct. 2404 (1990)).

The First Amendment guarantee of freedom of the press has required the courts to balance the media's right to gather and disseminate information against other important public interests

The Supreme Court has struck down court orders that prohibited the press from publishing accounts of confessions or admissions that implicated a criminal defendant (Nebraska Press Association vs. Stuart, 427 U.S. 539 (1976)) or barred the press from the courtroom (Richmond Newspapers, Inc. vs. Virginia, 448 U.S. 555 (1980)), but has rejected arguments that the First Amendment permits newspaper reporters to withhold information about confidential news sources in grand jury proceedings (Branzburg vs. Hayes, 408 U.S. 665 (1972)), or grants them immunity from lawfully issued search warrants (Zurcher vs. Stanford Daily, 436 U.S. 547 (1978)).

The court has also provided members of the media with some protection from potentially devastating lawsuits by limiting the circumstances under which the press may be sued for libel.

For example, if someone who is a "public figure" sues the press for libel, it is not enough to prove that the reporter was negligent; the public figure must prove that the reporter made the libelous statement with actual malice or a reckless disregard for the truth (New York Times Co. vs. Sullivan,

Almost too quiet

After several hundred loads of laundry, myriad trips to the grocery store, the bank and the gas station, changes of plans and menus, not to mention revolving beds, they're gone. Thousands of gallons of hot water and shampoo have flowed down the drain, Ma Bell has been taxed to the max, Pa Edison is rejoicing over the wattage consumed at our house with the hair dryers, electric razors, dish and clothes washing, etc. And yet I feel like this place is empty. I can almost hear myself think again and I'm not even enjoying the treasure hunt for things like scissors and Scotch tape that usually follows these family gatherings.

It's hard to sort out the things I won't miss from the things I will in the aftermath of the holiday confusion. I will not miss the blaring music that assaults my senses and reverberates throughout the house. However, I will miss the games we played changing tapes, discs and radio stations whenever a person with different musical tastes entered the room, which was often several times an hour. I will not miss the same game played with the thermostat, because my husband and I keep that one going like a marathon. I will not miss having an empty gas tank and strange tunes coming from my car radio. Guess I'm lucky that my car is once again actually in the driveway waiting for me. I will not miss the cold showers as I played martyr and agreed to go last.

I will miss the parade of family and friends that filled the house for a few brief moments this holiday. I will miss the gatherings around the dinner table and the laughter. I will miss the playful kidding between siblings and the sneaking out the door for last-minute Santa surprises. I will miss the helping hands, always ready in the kitchen and in any way I asked, and often when I didn't have to ask. I will miss the new sons-inlaw who are such a delightful addition to our family. Their humor is another added bonus and their laughter is infectious.

And, for every load of laundry and meal prepared, there was a basket of hugs and smiles. The fireplace always had a fresh fire laid, the humidifier was refilled without asking and the tradeoffs seemed more than fair. Was it just a little over a week ago? Then why are my cheeks still wet when I think about those days of chaos? Those are happy tears and I have to admit I still miss 'em. Hurry back kids!

376 U.S. 254 (1964)).

The court has rejected arguments, however, that the media industry is entitled to absolute immunity in such cases

Like the First Amendment guarantee of freedom of speech, the guarantees of freedom of assembly and the right to petition the government are also subject to narrow limitations. For example, the Supreme Court has ruled that a state may constitutionally place reasonable time, place and manner restrictions on meetings and demonstrations on public property, provided that those restrictions are not imposed in a discriminatory manner. (Cox vs. New Hampshire 312 U.S. 569 (1941)).

In addition, the court has held that - provided that the restrictions are not overly burdensome - the government Juga may constitutionally ban sound, if trucks that make "loud and in the raucous" noises (Kovacs vs. Cooper, 336 U.S. 77 (1949)) or 9-3 noisy demonstrations that disrupt school sessions (Grayned); vs. Rockford, 408 U.S. 104 (1972)).

Throughout our history, ef-2 forts have been made to accom-di modate the First Amendment's guarantees of free speech, press, assembly and petition with the competing interests of an ordered society. By and large, the balance has been with struck strongly in favor of preserving the rights that are esit sential to the continued success. and vitality of our democracy, our

Is that for real, or is it some mere GM junk?" asked a middleaged man at the gasoline station where I was pumping fuel into a sleek, shiny bluegreen 1992 Saturn SL1 fourdor sedan.

'It's very nice," I said. "It's for real."

could have taken issue with the, "GM junk" remark, but General Motors has not over the years distinguished itself in the subcompact market, where it brought us first the Chevrole Vega, then the Chevette I viewed the Saturn with skepticim for many years. But I am a believer now.

'GM first started talking about the Saturn project in 1982. The car was finally intro-Med for the 1991 movel year, inid reports of serious produc-tion problems. The plastic body panels - doors, / fenders, marter panels and fascias ere not fitting correctly, reports said. But these problems e not unusual for a new model startup, et alone a and new car line.

How well did Saturn succeed with its stated goal of building small car that would be competitive with apanese small girs? Extremely well.

The Saturn $L1 test car, not top-of-the-line model, is surprisingly roomy, very smooth, very tight feeling, very comfortable. Handling is excellent and performance is brisk and peppy, even though the test vehicle was powered by Saturn's single-overhead-cam, eight-valve 1.9-liter aluminum four cylinder engine rated at 85 horsepower. Providing higher performance for SL2 (a higher-line sedan) and the SC (sport coupe) is a dual-cam, 16-valve version of the 1.9, which puts out 124 horsepower.

The car does not have a GM feel. If you did not know what you were driving, you would think it was a Japanese car. Which was apparently Saturn's

And Saturns are like a Japanese cars in another way: Owners seem to like them a lot.

"An independent study by J.D. Power & Associates ranks Saturn as the best nameplate in the 'basic small' car segment for the overall ownership experience - satisfaction with the retailer and the car," said a Saturn spokesman. "Both internal and external surveys show that Saturn owners are very satisfied.'

They also reveal that 65 percent of Saturn buyers said they would probably have purchased a non-GM vehicle had the Saturn not been available and 45 percent said they would have bought a foreign make. Research also shows that some 20 percent of Saturn owners are first-time new-car buyers.

Saturn said the median age of its buyers is 38, three out of four are college educated, and median annual income is close to $50,000. This profile, the spokesman said, is typical of the import buyer.

Because the Saturn was introduced in 1991, changes are minimal for '92, but an improved powertrain-mounting system reduces noise and vibration, a complaint of many drivers of '91 models. A new "torque-axis mount absorbs the firing forces of the engine more effectively," a spokesman said. The engine in the Saturn SL1 is still a bit noisier than those of much of the competition, but it is not out of line.

The test vehicle had a fivespeed manual shift that is precise and pops into gear with a satisfying click. The engine and transmissions are made by Saturn, and the very smooth and precise five-speed is one of the elements that makes the car feel Japanese.

One of the most interesting features of all Saturns is their steel spaceframe/plastic body panel construction, a la the Lumina APV minivan and, before that, the Pontiac Fiero. Dent-resistant, recyclable plastic panels are used on doors, fenders, quarter panels and fascias, those areas most prone to damage and corrosion. Galvanized metal is used in the lower spaceframe and underbody to further minimize rust.

Conscious of the fit-and-finish reputation of the Japanese, Saturn developed one of the most advanced paint systems in the world to apply a high-solids, waterborne paint with a highgloss clearcoat finish which is very resistant to sunlight fade, chemicals and gravel chipping.

1992 Saturn SL1

Plus, it looks terrific.

Standard equipment on all '92 Saturns includes 60/40 split folding rear seats for expanded cargo carrying capability, variable-effort speed-sensitive power-assisted steering, adjustable steering column, rear window defroster, AM/FM stereo radio, tachometer, trip odometer, stainless steel exhaust system and remote trunk and fuel filler door release. Options include four-speed automatic with four-wheel disc brakes. power sunroof and air conditioning.

The car is easy to get in and out of, seats are very comfortable, gauges and controls are easy to see and convenient to use. Under-the-hood maintenance is designed to be easy and convenient. All fluids can be checked from one spot and oil and transmission dipsticks are color-coded.

Base price ranges from $8,195 to $14,000.

From the start, Saturn promised a lot and skeptics (including me) doubted it could deliver.

It did.

Pontiac Salsa

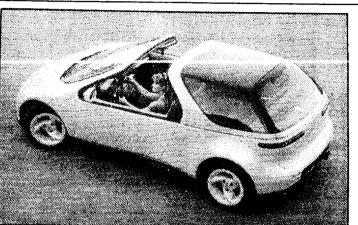

What's fluorescent orange, fun-loving and conforms to all weather conditions?

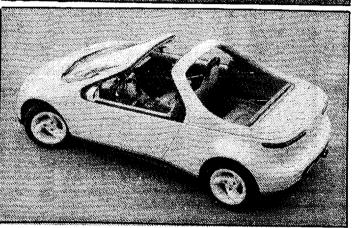

No, not the cotton socks your aunt in Boston sent you for Christmas. It's the Salsa, Pontiac's concept vehicle for 1992. And it'll be on display at the North American International Auto Show at Cobo Center Jan. 11-19.

Designed from the inside out, the California-born vehicle seats three across in the rear and two up front. Its building-block approach to design begins with a brightorange core vehicle with steel roll bar on which three exterior roof modules can be installed. Thus, it's a convertible, panel delivery vehicle or hatchback, as the mood or need strikes.

Wide and short, Salsa measures 70 inches at both front and rear tires, and 155.6 inches in overall length (compared with 180.7 inches for the Sunbird coupe).

ALFA ROMEO PROTEO TO MAKE NORTH AMERICAN UNVEILING IN DETROIT

Developed in 18 months by fully computerized design systems (CAD design), the Alfa Romeo Proteo is slated to make its North American introduction at the 1992 NAIAS.

The Alfa Romeo concept car was conceived as a fairly small, two-seater performance sports car (4.15 m long, 1.81 m wide).

A cross between a coupe and convertible, the Proteo was designed with a completely automatic system to remove the roof and store it out of sight in a special compartment. The hydraulic system also is capable of reassembling the roof automatically.

The vehicle has a transverse six cylinder, 2,959 cc. 24valve naturally aspirated engine, with three-way catalytic converter and lambda sensor.

The Proteo's glass surface — the single roof/rear window and side window unit — was built with special "Solextra" solar control glass, cutting the solar energy transmitted inside the car to 40 to 42 percent, compared to 63 percent achieved through the use of normal tinted glass.

DETROIT TO VIEW NORTH AMERICAN UNVEILING OF NISSAN'S FUTURE ELECTRIC VEHICLE

Detroit will see the North American introduction of Nissan's new Future Electric Vehicle (FEV) at the 1992 NAIAS.

The FEV is an urban family car that can be re-charged to 40 percent capacity in six minutes and 100 percent capacity in under 15 minutes, one-fifth to one-fourth the time of conventional systems. The concept vehicle is a 2 + 2 coupe with sufficient range for normal daily urban usage. It has creature comforts and conveniences to which car buyers are accustomed, including ample interior and luggage space. The FEV was specifically designed as an electric vehicle and features an aerodynamic design.

Powered by an advanced high torque electric motor, the coupe provides performance comparable to today's high mileage economy cars. It boasts a top speed of 81 mph and a cruising range of 100 miles at approximately 45 mph. The FEV's advanced Super Quick Charging battery system, weighing only half as much as conventional electric car batteries, not only reduces re-charging time, but cuts vehicle weight and increases range.

Waiting for the grouch to mellow? Don't count on it

Two items of interest. One involves the theory that essentially we are what we were; in other words, years add no pluses to our personality. The other is one more caveat about cigarette smoking - as if more warnings were needed. Nevertheless, women should be particularly interested in this one.

Although liquor ads have had great success pushing their product with the slogan "improves with age," the same may not be true when it comes to people. A long-term personality study conducted over the past decade among almost 10,000 people ranging in age from 35 to 84 shows that personalities don't change appreciably with age. Will the grouchy individual mellow with age? Not likely.

Research has found that the common belief that growing older is inevitably accompanied by personality changes is a myth. The fact is you are likely to age much the way you've lived so far. The impatient, short-tempered individual will probably remain so: the laidback, easy-going person will retain those traits as he or she grows older. In fact, personality has proven to be one of the few constants in life.

Personality is only one aspect of the new field of adult development, which examines how life-changes affect the psyche of the individual and how individuals adapt and grow with experience. Psychologists have found that personality can be defined in terms of five characteristics: neuroticism, extraversion, openness, agreeableness and conscientiousness.

Focusing on these traits, psychologists have been able to study individuals over time, measuring their perceptions of themselves as well as the perceptions of others close to them. They found that most people will behave over time in ways that are characteristic for them. In fact, "the process of personality change and maturation is essentially completed by age 30," says Robert R. McCrae of the National Institute on Aging (NIA) and one of the leading researchers in the field of adult development.

The question is, if you are dissatisfied with some aspect of your personality, are you stuck with it? "One moral seems clear," says McCrae. "We should not wait to outgrow undesirable characteristics, for without intervention, they are unlikely to change by themselves.'

At any age, if you are seriously unhappy with yourself, you should consider talking to a therapist; psychotherapy has been shown to alter undesirable personality traits.

Personality stability can be helpful in planning for the future, especially as one confronts the major events that accompany growing older: retirement, children leaving home, possible illness or death of a spouse or other loved ones, increasing health concerns.

For example, the gregarious business person who travels often and works most weekends is probably not going to be content settling into a routine of golf after retirement. The hobby buff who spends all his free time at home in the garden is not likely to enjoy a hec-and visits to far-flung friends during the increased leisure of later years.

As McCrae and his colleague, Dr. Paul Costa Jr., say in their book, "Personality and Adulthood," the question to ask is not how personality is changed by life experience, but how it shapes lives and gives them order, continuity and predictability, as well as creating change.

Turning to smoking, it is believed that cigarette smoke causes yellow discoloration in gray or white hair. The sticky tar residue that becomes airborne in smoke clings to hair and alters its natural color.

Cigarettes may not be the only culprit. Many dandruff shampoos also contain tar, in addition to other chemicals that can stain hair yellow. These elements bind to hair of all shades; one just doesn't see any color change with dark hair, thanks to its heavy pigment. But as people age, the number of cells that produce pigment in the base of the hair shaft decreases. Without that pigment, the hair turns white and is most vulnerable to discoloration.

To restore natural color, avoid exposure to the offending chemical, be it from cigarettes or shampoo, and eventually the discoloration will grow out. Many shampoo companies have products that do not stain and this will be indicated on the label. If it's cigarettes that are turning your hair an unnatural. yellow, that's just one more reason to give them up.

NOW YOU CAN ENJOY A UNIQUE LISTENING EXPERIENCE WITH ALL THE NEW REXTON K-AMP™ HEARING AID THAT AMPLIFIES ONLY THE QUIET SOUNDS.

Understanding in noisy environments is a major problem experienced by many hearing aid wearers. INTRODUCING GENTLE CHIROPRACTIC!

birthday party Dec. 27 at Bon Secours Nursing Care Center in St. Clair Shores. Born in Cambuslang, a small village 30 miles outside of Glasgow, Scotland, she came to America as a young woman and worked as a nanny for a prominent Grosse Pointe family. She cared for three generations of children in that family and lived in Grosse Pointe for nearly 70 years. In her younger years, she was an expert knitter. She is known among the Bon

Secours staff and residents for her soft brogue and amusing observations.

Hi, I'm Dr. Mary Quarnstorm. Perhaps gentleness in chiropractic is a concept to you; it was to me before I began the six years of college training necessary for my doctorate degree. During those six years I learned the precise locations where light pressure can bring chiropractic relief to pain.

In addition to my doctorate, I am a Chiropractic Sports Physician, as well as certified in both impairment rating and ergonomics (man's relationship to his work). I have completed courses in advanced Orthopedics and Neurology. Even now I attended nationwide seminars to stay current on the advances in this rapidly changing field a weekend each month.

If you have hesitated visiting a chiropractor, perhaps you didn't know about this gentle or "soft touch" technique. It has been effective treating:

Back Pain Neck Pain Numbness

Headaches Arthritis Bursitis

Shoulder Pain Arm/Leg Pain Hip Pain

Painful Joints Stiffness Cold

And, because most insurance companies recognize and cover Chiropractic care, your treatment may be at little or no cost to you according to the limits of your insurance policy.

St. John Hospital and Medical Center announces today's gentler ways to eliminate kidney stones.

tarting January 1992, St. John Hospital and Medical Center plans to offer laser surgery in addition to its existing sound wave method of treating kidney stones. Both treatments reduce the discomfort and recovery time associated with conventional surgery. • Specially trained doctors will use gentle pulses of laser light to break up kidney stones and allow them to pass naturally. • The procedure is relatively easy and offers a much quicker return to normal activities than with many other methods of treatment. In fact, many patients are discharged the same day and fully recuperated within 24 hours. • Find out more about how a tiny laser beam can make kidney stones disappear. Grosse Pointe City police are investigating a hit-and-run traffic incident that seriously injured a pedestrian about 9:30 p.m. Dec. 27.

The victim, a 26-year-old Detroit man, was loading items into the trunk of his car, which was parked on Mack between Lincoln and Fisher roads, Detective Dennis Van Dale said, when a a car traveling east on Mack swerved and struck the left rear of the victim's car.

The driver did not stop, Van Dale said.

Witnesses gave public safety officers a description of the vehicle, and police caught up with the suspected driver about five minutes after the accident, Van Dale said.

The victim was taken to St. John Hospital where he was in guarded condition Tuesday, Jan. 7, Van Dale said. The suspected driver is a 32-year-old Detroit man. Van Dale said he has not been formally charged with any crime, although he may be in the future. A memorial service was held for John A. McDougal on Sunday, Jan. 5, at his home on Harbor Island. He died of cancer Dec. 28, 1991, at his home in Detroit.

An inventor and engineer, Mr. McDougal was born in 1921 in New Lexington, Ohio, where his father and grandfather were country doctors.

As a boy, Mr. McDougal spent three summers with his uncle, General Motors inventor Charles F. Kettering, and was greatly influenced by him.

Mr. McDougal received his bachelor of science degree in mechanical engineering from Cornell University in 1943.

He served in the Army during World War II, starting as a private and rising to the rank of captain. He saw combat duty in Europe.

Before the war, Mr. Mc-Dougal had worked for General Motors for a summer as a machinist's helper. He returned to the company as a junior engineer, working in the AC Spark Plug Division in Flint. He left the company as an assistant chief engineer in 1968 to join Linayer Corp. in Detroit as vice president.

One of a circle of inventors, Mr. McDougal originated his electronic octane concept while at Linayer. The company's major product was an exhaust gas analyzer that it licensed to Chrylser Corp.

Of Mr. McDougal's 31 patents, 12 belong to General Motors. One of those patents was for the first cruise control manufactured by General Motors, which was the first transistorized automobile control system. He also patented ceramic armor for military applications and invented Electronic Octane Knock Control.

In the past several years, many automobile companies have entered into licensing agreements with Mr. McDougal for his knock sensor technology patents. The companies include Ford, Chrysler, Porsche, Peugeot, Bosch, Volkswagen, Audi, Saab and Volvo.

Mr. McDougal was a member of the Inventors' Council of Michigan, Inventors' Association of Metropolitan Detroit, Society of Automotive Engineers, Harbor Island Yacht Club, National Society of Professional Engineers, American Defense Preparedness Association, Great Lakes Skeptics, Michigan Society of Professional Engineers, Beta Theta Pi, and was a past member of Who's Who Among Automotive

But that was after he completed a residency in radiation oncology at the Cross Cancer Institute in Edmonton, Alberta, Canada.

But he didn't earn his M.D. in Canada. Rather, he got it from Cambridge in England. He said he came to this side of the Atlantic because he wanted to see how North American doctors and researchers did things - which is sometimes quite different from techniques used in the United Kingdom.

Once here, he was offered several top positions and, well, the rest is history.

"One thing led to another," he said. "We liked it here, so we stayed."

Once at Harper, he found his colleagues were evenly split between westsiders and eastsiders. He checked out both areas of metro Detroit and settled for the ambience and convenience to downtown that the Pointes

"I was pleasantly surprised by Detroit," he said. "Its name is far worse than its actuality."

Porter was born in Sierre Leone, West Africa, his father's homeland. His mother is from Denmark.

"I have a multi-cultural heritage," he said. He grew up in East Africa and Europe.

How did he get to such a high position in the medical field at such a young age? When prodded, he may admit that his abilities, expertise and education had something to do with it. But being the modest type, he said he was just at the right place at the right time, or that he was the last one out of the room.

Having worked in both Canada and the United States, Porter was asked about the national health-care debate now raging here. He said that U.S. health-care is superb, but he realizes that high costs and the lack of a national program prevent many from being able to take advantage of it.

We would be far better off to pick the best parts of the Canadian and U.S. health-care systems when coming up with a new plan, he said.

Even though he is head of the department, he said he is merely part of a team. And the goal for his team is an ambitious one: He wants Harper to become the top radiation oncology facility in the country not only for the medical community but also for the patients.

"My policy is everybody's special," he said. "When you're dealing with cancer, you're dealing with a fairly traumatic

Prop Art: Yes, they have bananas — 6 feet hig Prices vary depending on the

By Donna Walker Staff Writer

Where do 6-foot-tall bananas, 10-foot-tall car mufflers and giant dalmatians come from?

Lots of places around the country, but locally, such offbeat objects are produced in Prop Art Studio, located on East Grand Boulevard near Jefferson in Detroit.

The studio is owned and operated by Michael Stapleton, 32, of Grosse Pointe Woods, and Ralph Skinner, 43, of Grosse Pointe Park.

They make props of all sizes for advertising agencies, theaters, museums, auto shows and shopping malls, among others. They also make parade floats.

For a Society of Automotive Engineers convention a few years ago, they made a rocky landscape on which a Jeep was perched. The rocks were actually painted plastic foam.

'We're hired by a lot of exhibit companies," Stapleton said. "They're good at building platforms, the hard edges and shiny surfaces, but when it comes to creating an environment, they can't do it, because they're not artists. We are, and we can make it look like an environment.'

Stapleton and Skinner's work can be seen at the Museum of African American History in Detroit. For the "Underground Railroad in Michigan" exhibit, they created a three-dimensional, lifesize display depicting a runaway slave family hiding in a barn. The figures in the display wear historically accurate clothing.

Other examples of their work include a 12-foot-diameter stage that looked like a giant red and orange yo-yo (made for a Duncan Yo-Yo display); a 4-foot wide tri-fold wallet for a Michigan lottery commercial; a bed with a tombstone headboard for an AIDS public service announcement; and the pillars and capitals that decorate the Detroit Institute of Arts Museum Shop at Twelve Oaks Mall in Novi.

The capitals, made of plastic' foam, were copied from the blueprints of the capitals that adorn the exterior of the DIA,

Most of their props are made out of plastic foam, Stapleton said, but they also work in steel, wood and fiberglass.

Customers can have a special coating put on the plastic foam to make it harder, but the foam itself is pretty durable, Stapleton said. Most of the self-propelled floats they make do not have the special coating. However, they recommend it for objects that are going to be left outside permanently or stepped on over a long period.

Stapleton draws all of the blueprints for customers, but otherwise, he and Skinner divide the work equally.

"We both can sculpt, we both can paint, and both of us can draw figures and come up with concepts," Stapleton said.

For larger projects, such as floats, they hire freelance artists from local colleges, Staple-

Recently, Prop Art built a Christmas float for a candy company. The float featured a gingerbread house and several giant gumdrops, hard candies and cupcakes.

"I'll design and make the first gumdrop, but I'm not going to sit around sculpting 25 gumdrops," Stapleton said. 'We're the brains of this operation, so we hire freelancers to do it."

Skinner said, "Mike and I used to be the guys sculpting the 25 gumballs. But after a while, we said this isn't fun anymore, so we decided to go into business for ourselves.

Before opening Prop Art four years ago, Skinner and Stapleton worked for an art studio building floats.

"We wanted to build sets for movies, exhibits and props for all uses, in addition to making floats," Stapleton said.

So Prop Art was born. Skin-ner and Stapleton set up shop in a warehouse that was built in 1909 as a charging station for electric cars. Most recently, it served as a sound studio for an advertising agency.

Many times, when a customer orders a prop, he doesn't want to keep it. He only wants to use it once —for example, in a commercial - and then get rid of it because he has no place to store it.

In some cases, Prop Art will only charge the customer an appearance fee and will retain ownership of the object. Or, when a customer who has bought an object is going to throw it away after limited use, Stapleton or Skinner will ask the customer if Prop Art can retrieve it.

Their studio is decorated with such cast-offs, like Big Bird and the 4-foot dalmatians which were left over from two separate floats, or the palm trees, which are available for rent, or the smiling crocodile head.

Skinner, who used to work for Hudson's, said he and Stapleton have built 100 floats between them. Stapleton said it usually takes five to six weeks to design, construct and deliver

Each week in this column, we will focus on the work of a student. It can be a poem, a drawing, a short story, a picture of a scientific experiment or a woodworking project, a book review.

The Gift

It was a sunny morning as Sara woke up.

"Yippeee," exclaimed Sara. "What's so yippee?' asked her mom. "It's Christmas in 10 days." Then her mom started to cry 'What's wrong?"

Shirilla asked Sara.

"I don't have a present for you," answered her mom. "Oh, that is bad, Mom. You usually buy one thing for me," said Sara. "But I didn't have enough money," (they're kind of poor) replied her mom. Later the next day Sara was not feeling well. "Mom, I do not feel good," cried Sara.

"Come lay down," replied

"I do not feel good. I do not feel good," moaned Sara. Sara was moaning like a dog that got hit by a car. Her mom ran to the phone to call the doctor. She ran as fast as a cheetah chasing its prey. Right when she got there she called. When the doctor came it was 11 p.m. and Sara was worse. Her mom was sitting by the bed when the doctor knocked.

"Darling I will be right back," said her mom. She led the doctor to Sara's room.

"Interesting, interesting. I do not really know what it is. We will have to take her to the hospital.'

They brought her to the hospital. The doctors and nurses did not know what was wrong.

It was Christmas Eve and she was getting better. Her temperature was 99 when she fell asleep. The next day when she woke up she was better. Her mom walked in and exclaimed "Happy Christmas! You're better. I guess you did get a Christmas present."

"What's that?" Sara asked. "You're better. That's the Christmas present," answered her mom. "Let's go home. I have some more presents.'

They went home and had a happy Christmas.

"Did they ever find out what I had?" asked Sara.

"No," answered her mom. "It just was a gift of health.'

Kelley visits

Michigan Attorney General Frank Kelley, right, addressed South High School students recently on the 200th anniversary of the Bill of Rights - the first 10 amendments to the U.S. Constitution. Others expected to address South students on the Bill of Rights include state William Bryant and Rep. state Sen. John Kelly. The lectures were arranged by Gene Matecun, social studies department chair.

St. Nicholas

Our Lady Star of the Sea Elementary enjoyed a surprise visitor on Dec. 6. In honor of his liturgical calendar feast day, St. Nicholas answered a few questions, received many thank-yous for the treats he had left in the children's shoes and even observed a spelling test in progress. Above, Marisa Ventimiglia took advantage of the opportunity to share a secret.

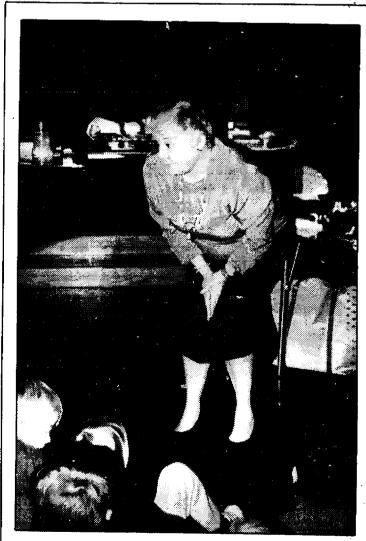

Turkey trotters

More than 400 enthusiastic students ran on the streets adjacent to St. Clare of Montefalco school in the annual Turkey Trot, making it the largest in the four years of the school spirit run. Each student's goal was to finish the race — the turkey for top prize was merely a bonus. The winners were Paul Chateau and Candice Owens for first and second grades; Ben Blackwell and Melissa Moultrie for third and fourth; Peter Clark and Meghan McGahey for fifth and sixth grades; and Todd Wheeler and Patricia Casaceli for seventh and eighth grades.

Clothing drive

The Grosse Pointe Academy held its annual Thanksgiving Clothing Drive during the week of Nov. 19-22. Students and their families donated more than 100 bags of clothing for the Capuchin Community Center. The clothes will be distributed to families and individuals in need throughout the Detroit area.

'Twas the night' for stories

Children at The Grosse Pointe Academy were delightfully entertained recently by Florence Dinghy Sharp, the great-great-grandaughter of Clement Moore, the author of "The Night Before Christmas."

Sharp has been a special education teacher in Farmington for 40 years and is recognized as a pioneer in remedial education for young children.

Hobbies and crafts provide relaxation, change of pace

By Margie Reins Smith Feature Editor

January is National Hobby Month, but Bill De Galan of Grosse Pointe Farms doesn't need any encouragement, as became evident when he tried to list all of his hobbies.

"Let's see," he said, as he knelt and settled comfortably on the floor between a sofa and a coffee table in the family room he built himself. Constructing the room was a hobby

A 12-year-old bright green and yellow parakeet, Billy, rattled around a cage on the coffee table. (Could Billy be listed as a hobby?)

The bird chattered on. Some of its vocabulary was clearly unsuitable for a family newspaper. De Galan apologized.

"Let's see, I got started building model cars. Then there was the HO gauge model railroad; my houseboat; model shipbuilding; bike riding; and gardening," he said.

ing," he said.
"Then of course I go a little crazy every year around Christmas time with decorations."

He pointed to a 6-foot tall white Christmas tree he made from two smaller trees and decorated with thousands of tiny white lights, silver ornaments and icycles. He opened his wallet and pulled out a photograph of the elaborate Christmas light display in his front yard. He described how he came up with the idea, then designed and implemented the lighted flagpole tree which has become a landmark and a tradition at the Farms' Pier Park for the last 14 years.

"Then, there's the electrical gadgets . . . "

De Galan pointed to a panel on the family room wall, with switches and buttons to control the lights in the back yard, garage, porch and barbecue area and the lights and sound system in the family room.

De Galan was vice president of Detroit Plastic Products until he retired six years ago. He was trained as a mechanical and electrical engineer, graduating from the University of Detroit in the late '40s.

He's a firm believer in the value of hobbies.

"My hobbies are relaxing because they're different from my work. They're a change of pace," he said.

De Galan has put 1,400 miles on a bike which he got a year ago. "I use the bike to pedal off excess energy. My previous bike had 8,000 miles on it," he said. "In the summer, I ride five times a week, eight to 12 miles each time. Not all at once. Sometimes I stop and sit on Lakeshore and watch the water."

The model ships De Galan has built are clearly the most spectacular and the most visible products of his 75 years of hobby-hopping.

"Model building is a wonderful way to relax," he said.
The Hobby Industry of Amer-

The Hobby Industry of America (HIA) is a 52-year-old trade association of 2,400 manufacturers, wholesalers, retailers and designers of craft and hobby supplies, publications and services. According to an HIA survey last year, 77 percent of American households have at least one member engaged in at least one craft or hobby. That's up 13 percent from 1988.

Susan Brandt, director of communications for the HIA, said any leisure-time activity that people do with their hands can be called a craft.

n be called a craft. "Take, for instance, the child who makes a chain with colored construction paper; the student who creates a diaorama for a social studies class; the man who makes soap carvings. These are all crafts," she said.

De Galan started building models when he was a child. "My father's hobby was making things. My two sons also build models," he said.

Models of three square-rigged sailing ships, the Cutty Sark, the Flying Fish and the Constitution, are his most elaborate and detailed showpieces.

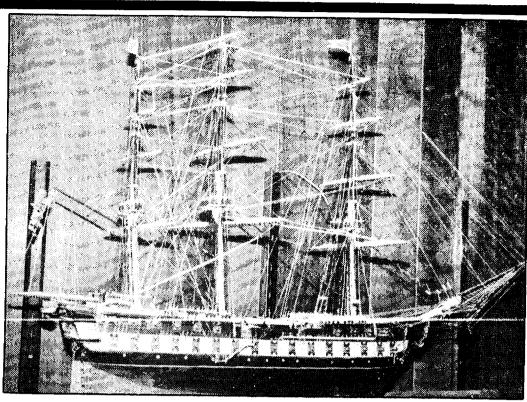

De Galan is a stickler for detail. The large ships are not made from kits, he said. They were constructed piece by piece, painstakingly, carefully, from drawings that were purchased in a hobby shop. He hand-crafts each portion of the ship, using tweezers, tiny calipers, miniature drills and files and sanders and grinders. "The tools are almost like dentists' tools," he said.

"I made those lifeboats," he said, pointing to four tiny boats lashed to the sides of the Constitution. "But I bought the cannons in a hobby shop. The masts and yardarms are made from dowel pins, which I sanded and filed and tapered myself. The rigging is made from thread. I bought a miniature American flag, but I made the other flags."

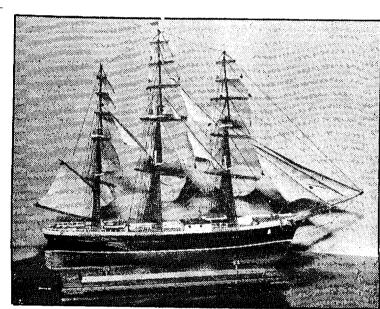

The ship's rails were purchased, but De Galan sanded and steamed them until they were the proper shape and scale. The copper coating on the ship's keel is made from tiny rectangular copper sheets, hammered into place.

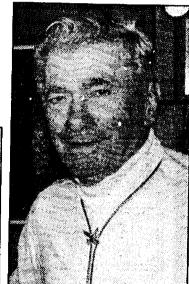

De Galan does extensive research on the ships he builds, and he strives for authenticity.

See HOBBIES, page 3B

Bill De Galan, right, has many hobbies, including model building. The square-rigged sailing vessels shown above and below are two of his projects. De Galan's model of the Constitution, above, was constructed from 1974-1976, from drawings purchased at a hobby shop. He did extensive research — even asked a friend to take photographs of the real Constitution — in order to make the model as authentic as possible.

'Model building is a wonderful way to relax.'

Once in a blue moon a declarer will make an elementary play that at the time seems spartan. Then when the recapitulation is complete it becomes evident that what seemed standard was in fact the act of a very remarkable mind. That presents the question of whether one of far reaching intellectual power can make a simple play or is it the act of a genius who initiates the simple play at the appropriate moment to achieve a successful result?

Al Sheinwold gave me a hand that I'm passing along to you. Was the only declarer who brought home the contract making a simple decision or was it the play of a genius?

Only one declarer found the winning play and this was a pretty good game. Did he make a reasonably simple play or was it the work of a genius?

This extraordinary declarer knew that if clubs broke five/two and East won the diamond finesse he would be a winner if he could seduce West into continuing the suit. If the out clubs were four/three it didn't matter as long as West didn't look somewhere else for the setting trick. Declarer's club jack accom-

DSO report:

Party at Jarvi's house — what a way to usher in the new year

By Alex Suczek Special Writer

New Year's Eve at Orchestra Hall. Music of the whole Strauss family. Dancing on stage. Complimentary champagne. Party favors. Neeme Jarvi conducting. An evening the whole family could enjoy.

The crowd at the door and the sold-out signs draw com-ments of "Hey, cool" from the younger generation. Inside, the festive audience charged the air with anticipation.

To call it a concert doesn't do it justice. It is a rite that reaffirms the immortality and exuberance of Vienna's most famous composing family's music. Images of grace and beauty dance in imaginations as the orchestra plays these scintillating works - music that transcends the burden of over familiarity and sounds as fresh and engaging as the day it was first heard.

It is no wonder that the waltzes, polkas, operettas and other music by the Strausses have been leading their own Top 40 parade for more than 100 years. Played by a fine orchestra led by a great conductor, they have a life of their

Anyone who has watched the Vienna Philharmonic New Year's concert on television knows the music and how good it can sound. But TV is no substitute for the live experience and Jarvi and the DSO in the flesh really make something special happen.

Faces smile in recognition and nod in tempo as the orchestra swings into the familiar strains of "Fledermaus." Yet as easy as this music is to enjoy, it is nonetheless sophisticated and satisfying, and a challenge to play well, especially since it vas written with wit and humor as well as excellent form

The maestro's now familiar and much appreciated stage presence lends itself to the fun. Playfully keeping the orchestra on its toes, he gives free reign to his gift for tempo and dynamics that create a refreshing

Jarvi's good spirits and humor are evident when he, in turn, is surprised by the mistire of the blank pistol in the "Bandit's Galop." With a spontathe performance to neous gesture of questioning "watch him - he's in rare form resignation toward the abashed who have an urge to try imitating some of the pros' fancy footwork in three-four time. Most, however, are more than willing to sit back and enjoy watching the graceful, whirling movement of this fast-moving and exhilarating dance.

But even the dancers are not exempt from unexpected changes in tempo - which they handled with expertise and barely a wink of recognition to each other.

Notwithstanding the seeming familiarity of the Strauss repertoire, there are program surprises, too: a Russian March, and Jockey, French, and Peasant's polkas before returning to the familiar territory of the "Gypsy Baron," "Artist's Life' and "Blue Danube" waltzes.

When the audience claps in rhythm with the main theme of the concluding "Radetzky March," it may be prompted by familiarity with the Vienna TV broadcast. But it could as easily be another spontaneous response to music that is so infectious it simply begs for participation.

Needless to wonder whether there would be an encore. The cheers and applause refused to die until maestro stepped up and lifted his baton again for a rousing, night-before-the-game performance of the "Michigan Fight Song."

It's an easy transition then to dancing on stage to the music of Detroit's own Mack Pitt Band, with party hats and the traditional singing of "Auld Lang Syne." And by the time the last guests have bid Orchestra Hall goodnight soon after 1, ... a.m., there is no question that this is a very civilized and satisfying way to welcome a new year. It's a good party, too.

The DSO resumes Thursday evening concerts tonight. This week's program will be re-peated Friday and Saturday evenings and offers "Sinfonietta for Strings" and Symphony No. 4 by French composer Albert Rousell, the Bruch violin concerto with soloist Os-car Shumsky and "Hungarian Rhapsody No. 2" by Franz Liszt. Golden Lion premieres new comedy

The tradition of first-run entertainment continues at the Golden Lion Dinner Theatre, when "The Last Great British Sex Farce Ever!" premieres on Friday, Jan. 10, and runs Friday and Saturday evenings through Saturday, Feb. 22. The fast-paced comedy is the third production of the dinner theater season by Dennis Wickline Productions Inc. at the restau-

The play is set in the fictional Torrey Inn located in Clare, Mich. Sam and Bridgitt, the owners of the motel, have just changed the decor of the inn to lure a British television crew into spending at least a month, and a lot of money, at the inn. The one complication is the motel's one permanent resident, Mona MacGoohan, who happens to entertain gentlemen on a frequent and financial basis. Archibald Cavendish, the British television director, arrives on the scene. Mona immediately seizes upon the opportunity to "entertain" the gentleman, as Archie's wife, Morticia, and then his girlfriend, Ophelia, arrive at the inn unexpectedly. With six doors on the set and continual entrances and exists, fast-paced comedy is soon the result.

The comedy is under the direction of Kim Marlinga who portrayed Anna in "The King and I" at the Golden Lion during November and December. She is also an accomplished tions. Golden Lion veteran Jane Vreeland appears as Morticia Cavendish, and Madeline Alexander completes the cast

Price for the evening is $24.95 which includes dinner, located in Detroit at 22380 Moross, near Mack, in Detroit across from St. John Hospital. For further information and reservations, call 886-2420.

Second City highlights Attic Theatre Guest Artist Series

A comedy tradition that is just as fresh and innovative today as it was 30 years ago is coming again to the Attic Theatre. The irreverent satire of The Second City Touring Company returns Jan. 10-12 and 17-19 as part of the Attic's Guest Artist Series.

Performances of Second City are on Friday, Jan. 10 and 17, at 8 p.m.; Saturday, Jan. 11 and 18, at 7 and 10 p.m.; and Sunday, Jan. 12 and 19, at 7 p.m. Tickets are $19.50 for Friday and Saturday performances and $16.50 for Sunday performances. Advance reservations for Second City are strongly suggested as last year's shows quickly sold out. To purchase tickets or for more information, call the Attic Theatre box office at 875-8284 or Ticketmaster outlets at 645-6666.

Additionally, Second City's schedule includes a student matinee on Tuesday, Jan. 14, at 10 a.m. Tickets are $8. For more information, contact Deb McGarvah at 875-8295.

Members of The Second City will also teach workshops on comedic improvisational techniques on Tuesday, Jan. 14, and Wednesday, Jan. 15, in conjunction with the Attic Theatre Conservatory. Each workshop lasts three hours and consists of two 90-minute sessions. Each session costs $50 and is limited to 15 people. Registration is on a first-come-firstTheatre administrative office at 875-8285.

Second City was founded in Chicago in 1959 as an improvisational nightclub act. It gained overnight success and now has three stages - two in Chicago and one in Toronto. Today, five touring companies perform in the United States and Canada year-round.

In 1973, a Canadian television group called SCTV was created as an offshoot of Second City. The series appeared in 55 U.S. cities and was syndicated throughout Canada.

Now the country's premier improvisational group, Second City has been a major influence on the comedy seen on televi-sion shows like "Saturday Night Live" and in films such as "Animal House" and "Ghostbusters," all of which starred former Second City

Nothing stuffy about this librarian's romantic novels

The Evening Redness
By Lawrence Clark Powell
Capra Press. 436 pages. $22.95

The sub-title of this new book is "The Collected Four Novels of Lawrence Clark Powell with Notes on His Writing — 1930-50." I was surprised to come across this type of work because I had always associated the author with the world of books. His many earlier works, all of which deal exclusively with libraries, reading, book collecting, and kindred matters, rest proudly upon my shelves. As the long-time librarian, now retired, of the UCLA Library in Los Angeles, Powell has won acclaim for his nurturing and guardianship of that great institution.

However, as he turned 70, he says that "three of these works collected here were written during my seventies when the evening redness lit the sky." Apparently, Powell had for a long time had the urge to write about scenes of his young adulthood which took place in Europe and in the American Southwest. His professional duties prevented him the leisure of carrying out his fond dream to put his experiences on paper in fiction form.

As Powell explains in his "Notes," "this tetralogy is a single work, encompassing one writer's creative lifetime." The first short novel, "The Blue Train," is a clever variation on a single theme: a young man's discovery that all loves are different. Jack Burgoyne, the narrator, is spending a couple of years in France working toward his graduate degree in science. Here he meets and loves five women consecutively; each of the bittersweet affairs gives him a different slant on the wiles of women. The Blue Train, running from Paris to Rome, provides the connecting thread throughout the five sub-plots involving Burgoyne and his romances, who arrive and depart from his life with predictable regularity.

"The River Between" relates the deepening attraction between a middle-aged professor, Dr. Carl Graham, and a young student, Claudia Carter, who meet in a southwestern university. She approaches him for a taped interview as part of her master's thesis in communications. During their intensive interviews, Carl finds that he is losing his former inhibitions about speaking frankly of his past while Claudia grows ever more enraptured by the professor.

Eventually, they depart on a motor trip to the mountains where he owns a simple cabin, a retreat to which he retires to relax and meditate. There Carl tells Claudia of his ardent affair with Pipa, a militant environmentalist who is heavily involved with government and industrial big-wigs. This past affair provides a counterpoint to the growing love between the professor and the student which finds ultimate consumation on a mountaintop.

The third short novel, "El Morro," concerns William Stone, a forest ranger delegated to be the guide for Arla Bay during her tour of Arizona and other archaeological sites in the Southwest. As she is especially interested in Indian artifacts, Stone, with his experience and knowledge, is able to show her burial grounds. Their growing attraction mounts, in spite of occasional raspiness between them, until it reaches a final crescendo in the picturesque Zuni mountains.

"Portrait of My Father," semi-autobiographical in style, is a retrospective examination of Powell's father, a noted refrigeration specialist. The narrator opens: "Born on the Potomac, raised on Pacific shores and schooled on the banks of the Seine, and employed in the river and sea ports of Europe, my health and long life came from nearness to living water. And so when faced with the task of completing the biography of my father, whose final form had eluded me for nearly half a century, I came back to the city of my youth and there took a room in an old hotel overlooking the river, determined to bring the elements together in what might prove to be the last thing I wrote." Back in Paris, our hero meets a young woman, Meg Graeme, who offers him the encouragement and inspiration to proceed with his father's biography. In his pursuit of his father's past, the narrator uncovers some confounding facts about his elusive sire, facts which make the father a more human figure than do the narrator's boyhood memories of the 50-year old man who died prematurely.

Powell is a magnificent writer skilled in using a paintbrush of colorful words to create unbelievably lovely scenes of the Southwest as well as views of France. His novels reveal passion, intellectual awareness, and environmental concerns which are harmoniously blended together to form gripping stories of people thrown together by the capriciousness of fate. Although he is a learned librarian and teacher, Powell is no stuffy dweller beneath the ivy walls of academe; his loves, joys, and aspirations sing from his pages.

RSVP 'yes' to see the old- fashioned 'Father of the Bride'

By Marian Trainor Special Writer

The first question that comes to mind about "Father of the Bride" is "How in the world can Steve Martin successfully play a role made sacred by the hallowed Spencer Tracy, who created it in the 1950 version?"

Don't worry. Martin does very well in this updated production that retains all of the charm and irresistible sweetness of the original. And Martin fans will be delighted to know that this is no retread; he has redefined the part and made it his own, proving again that he is one of the movies' best comic actors. He brings honesty, subtlety and intelligence to the film as the father of a 1991 bride.

The story begins with George Banks (Steve Martin) sprawled in a chair surveying the ruins of his daughter's wedding reception and recounting his experiences leading up to the event. In flashback he shows us the small town in southern California where he lives. He loves it because it never changes. (He hates change.) He goes on to show us his house, landscaped and furnished to his liking (it's spectacular with Christmas lights on it). He talks about his wonderful family, particularly his daughter Annie (Kimberly Williams).

He likes everything about his life. Poor George. He doesn't know that there is a disturbing surprise waiting for him inside that will forever change his personal Shangrila.

His wife Nina (Diane Keaton) and son Matty (Kevin Culkin) are all aglow. Annie is home. She has just returned from a master's program in Italy where she has been studying architecture. When she appears at the head of the stairs and slides down the bannister into George's arms, as she did when she was a little girl, it is a magic moment.

But George's elation soon turns to hysteria when Annie announces that she has found the man of her dreams in Italy and is going to marry him. She might just as well have dropped a bomb. The father of the bride begins an odyssey most people can identify with along the path to the altar.

Some of the best scenes involve Banks' dealings with Franck (Martin Short) the wedding coordinator who treats him like an errant child when he objects to having his furniture moved out of the house to make room for elaborate table settings and decorations, along with new landscaping and swans floating in the pool.

We all know how deftly Martin handles comedy, but he does well with sentiment, too. The opening scene in which he recalls every stage of Annie's growth, his heart-to-heart talks with her and their one-on-one basketball games, drips with sentiment.

Keaton is nicely restrained as the patient wife who runs interference between George and Annie. Williams as Annie, played by Elizabeth Taylor in the original film, is a radiant bride and does a spirited job of making the movie modern in tone. She is insulted when the groom-to-be gives her a blender to mark the eighth month of their meeting because she thinks he is trying to fit her into the role of a homemaker.

Culkin, Annie's little brother Matty, has the same screenstealing confidence as his older brother Macaulay.

Director Charles Shyer gives Martin plenty of room to make the film a laugh-littered walk down the aisle and the screenplay is recycling at its best. The material has been successfully refurbished with new jokes and new attitudes, but the earlier film's most memorable moments have been preserved.

An old-fashioned story, "Father of the Bride" is the embodiment of every dad and rates an unchallenged, "I do."

'Black Robe' is moving tale of Indians, Jesuits

By Marian Trainor

Special Writer "Black Robe" brings to the screen a realistic account of the North American Indians who roamed the forests in 17th century Canada, their mistrust of the European colonists and one man's struggle to convert them to Christianity.

Based on a meticulously researched book by Brian Moore, who also wrote the screen play, and directed by Bruce Beresford ("Driving Miss Daisy"), the film is a complex, intensely focused portrayal of Indian culture unlike others that have been presented; much different, even, than Kevin Costner's

'Dances with Wolves. The Indians are totally removed from civilization and resent anything or anyone who tries to change them, particularly the Jesuit priests who in their fervor have tried to convert them to Christianity and have been martyred for their zeal. The Indians live and die governed by superstitions, signs and dreams.

In Quebec, well aware of the Indian mindset, a young Jesuit priest, Father Laforgue (Lothaire Bluteau) is getting ready to travel by canoe to an icy Canadian outpost to replace a priest who has lost his life trying to convert the Hurons.

A group of Algonquins agree to act as guides in return for knives and cookware. From the start the Indians are antagonistic and suspicious of the priest, whom they call Black Robe.

When Laforgue reads words they have seen him write, he is labeled a demon and when he prays over a dead baby, he is accused of trying to steal the child's spirit. Finally, when savvy, cynical Chief Chomina (August Shellenberg) has a dream of a raven (interpreted by the soothsayer to be Black Robe), the Indians abandon him on an island to die.

Later Chomina has second thoughts about offending the Dutch by not keeping the bargain to escort Laforgue to the Hurons and returns to the island with his tribe to rescue him. They are ambushed by a rival tribe and some of them are killed while others are taken prisoner to be slowly tortured to death. Among them are Father Laforgue, Chomina and Chomina's beautiful daughter. They escape and La-forgue eventually makes it to the outpost where he is met with more suspicion and antag-

"Black Robe" is fascinatingly unsentimental in its depiction of the spiritual and perceptual gulf that separates Laforgue from his native North American guides. The account of their journey chronicles both the physical hardship endured by the priest and his escorts and the spiritual growth that comes from his experience with them.

He arrives at the land of the Hurons weak and exhausted but strong in spirit. He has seen that the men he once thought to be savages possess practical intelligence and that their faith in the gods of their ancestors is as strong as his own in the Christian God. He has begun to temper his asceticism with humility.

The splendor and the peril of the ice-bound Canadian wilderness are captured in the superb cinematography, adding depth and authenticity to the film.

A nice touch, and also in a way a relief from the barrenness, are the shots that occasionally flash back to the life led by Laforgue before he became a priest. We see the marble halls of the luxurious home where he was raised.

Bluteau, a French-Canadian actor, gives a striking performance as the devout Laforgue.

He is supported by a large cast of Quebecois and Native Americans which adds another dimension of authenticity to a film that steadfastly avoids sentiment and cliches.

"Black Robe" is a distinctive, off-beat film that both illuminates history and gives it an immediacy that captures our attention and admiration.

It's a child's game, but it's also good advice. Bon Secours was the first hospital in the Detroit area to offer single-room maternity care. This alternative to traditional childbirth allows the mother-to-be to stay in the same warm, comfortable room throughout her delivery. We call it BirthCare, and when we first introduced it, other hospitals were still wheeling their laboring mothers from one room to another.

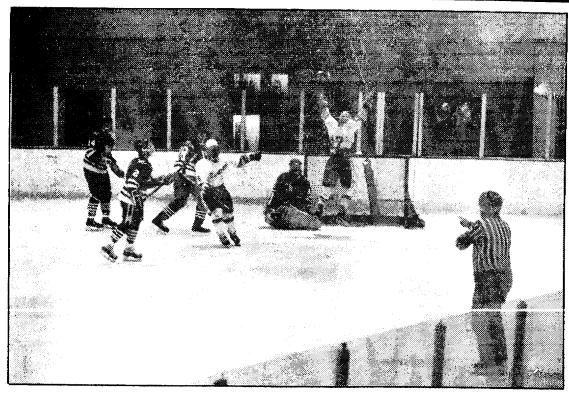

We thought it was a good idea to design a delivery around the mother, not a delivery around the hospital. That's why BirthCare has become so popular. And that's why a lot of women have chosen Bon Secours as their hospital. Maybe you should, too.

Grosse Pointe North's Gary Corona (17) celebrates his goal with nine seconds remaining in the first period of last weekend's game with Port Huron.

Comeback falls short

By Chuck Klonke Sports Editor

Grosse Pointe North hockey coach Dan Abraham couldn't help casting a few envious glances toward the Port Huron bench, which was jammed to overflowing.

"Two more players - that would really help us," Abraham said after the Norsemen dropped a 7-6 decision to the Big Reds in a Michigan Metro High School Hockey League game.

"Our kids have worked hard and they've spent a lot of time on conditioning, but we have a really small team. We don't get the kids out for hockey like Port Huron does. If the kids don't play on the high school team they have to drive an hour and a half to play. That's why they have 70-some kids come out for the team."

Abraham, in his first season as North's coach, hopes the team's success this season will out for the squad next year.

The Norsemen scored twice within 10 seconds late in the third period to cut Port Huron's lead to a single goal, but couldn't get the equalizer.

North was trailing 7-4 after Port Huron's Erich Huegli scored with 1:57 left. Then Abraham pulled goalie Jason Chevalier for a sixth attacker. North took a time out to set up a play and eight seconds later, Mike Klobuchar tallied for the Norsemen. Brian Quinn made it 7-6 with 1:39 left in the game.

"Those two goals were just like we draw it on the board in practice," said assistant coach Jeff Henchel. "Everybody was positioned just perfectly.

Port Huron's John Keyser opened the scoring ~ 5:55 of the first period and orris Hall gave the Big Reds a 2-0 lead at 13:04. North's Gary Corona scored off a pass from Klobuchar with nine seconds left in the first period to cut the lead to 2-1.

Joey Sucher's high shot from just inside the blue line tied the score 11 seconds into the second period and after Chevalier made two outstanding saves to preserve the tie, Jeff Jensen gave the Norsemen a 3-2 lead with another long shot at 6:21.

Hall scored a shorthanded goal with 1:30 remaining in the second period to pull the Big Reds back into a tie, but Quinn scored off Dom Tocco's rebound to put North ahead 4-3 at 13:46. The lead was short-lived as Keyser notched his second goal of the game with 13 seconds left in the period.

South's Dowe showed how its done in goal

By Chuck Klonke Sports Editor

Don Patta knew Grosse Pointe South's goaltending would remain in good hands when he graduated two years

"I'd heard about Cris Dowe before his freshman year," said Patta, now the Blue Devils' assistant soccer coach. "I'd heard there was this good goalie, who had played in Europe.'

When Patta graduated, Dowe stepped right in and has been a fixture in South's net. Dowe played so well this year in leading the Blue Devils to a 15-3-1 record and the Macomb Area Conference White Division championship that he was named to the First All-State Team selected by the Michigan High School Soccer Coaches Association.

South midfielder Richard Weinberg made the Second All-State Team and sweeper Jamie Mertz received honorable men-

"Cris matured so much since his freshman year," Patta said. "He sees the field well and makes decisions on whether to come out of the net or to stay back. He also knows who he's going to pass to when he does have the ball."

Although he's only about 5feet-8, Dowe has a very strong leg and booted the Blue Devils out of danger many a time this

"We had a lot of big guys up front so Cris would kick the ball past midfield and they'd head it down into the other team's zone," Patta said.

Dowe has plenty of self-confidence and that translates into some solid play on the field.

"He has a little bit of an attitude, but that's not all bad," Patta said. "That's what makes him aggressive. And it gives him an edge on the competition."

Dowe has a busy off-season ahead of him.

He was named to the Michigan State Youth Soccer Association's Olympic Development team, which will represent Michigan in inter-state and regional competition. The players will be evaluated for possible selection to teams representing the United States in international competition. Grosse Pointe North's John Woods is also on the squad.

The under-17 team will compete in the Dallas Cup tournament next spring. Last spring the Michigan squad was runner-up in the National State Select Championships in Las Cruces, N.M. Dowe started three of the five games, including the final.

"The competition he'll get there could move him that extra step from being a very good goalkeeper to a great one,' Patta said.

Weinberg was a co-captain on the Blue Devils' squad this season and the club's leading scorer. He recorded four hat

"He had an uncanny ability to head the ball," Patta said. "He's so tall and does it with such accuracy it led to many goals. When I played goalie in practice I was mystified by some of the things he could do with headers."

Mertz, also a senior co-captain, was as valuable to South with his mental skills as his physical ones.

"The sweeper has to do a lot of communication with the people in front of him and Jamie was excellent at that," Patta

Sports Middle school squads have perfect seasons

University Liggett School's success in girls tennis and field hockey should continue for several seasons, judging from the performances of this year's middle school squads.

The girls tennis team posted a 12-0 record for its second consecutive perfect season and the field hockey team was 8-0 in the regular season and had four victories and a tie in tournament play.

Depth was the strength of the ULS tennis team. All four singles players and six doubles teams dominated most of their opponents.

No. 1 singles player Brooke Wright, a seventh-grader, had a 7-4 record against some of Metro Detroit's best 14 and under players. Four girls, Dana Mertz, Kendall Wrigley, Libby FitzSimons and Emily Fleury, were undefeated in match play.

"The girls had great spirit and camaraderie," said Coach Jeffrey Bond. "It was a wonderful season in all ways.'

Team members were eighthgraders Elizabeth Broderick, Anne Corona, Becky D'Arcy, Maggie Durant, Lily Ling, Sara Mitchell and Theresa Oney; seventh-graders Leslie Allen, Anne Clark, FitzSimons, Fleury, Dana Howbert, Mertz, Katy Spicer and Wright; and sixth-grader Wrigley.

ULS' field hockey team outscored the opposition 40-0. The tie was a scoreless deadlock.

ULS defeated a pair of Ohio schools known for their strong field hockey programs. It beat Maumee Valley Day School 3-0 and blanked Ottawa Junior High 1-0. In a six-team tournament at Kingswood School, ULS outscored the opponents 9-

Tricia Thurber was the scoring leader with 14 goals. Others who scored were Shera Teitge, who had eight goals, Abbey Fox seven, Abby Tompkins six, Karin Salden four, and Kristin Wright one. Mieke Teitge was the ULS goalie.

"It is quite unusual for a middle school team to be so dominant," said coach Romilly

Stackpoole. "I'm really proud of what my girls accomplished."

Other members of the field hockey team were Vanessa

Madrazo, Leah Kaplan, Anne Platt, Kara Feemster, Melanie Buhalis, Anne Magreta, Christina Simon and Catriona Watt.

Coach Jeffrey Bond (front right) poses with his University Liggett Middle School girls tennis team, which posted its second consecutive undefeated season. The squad was 12-0, bringing its two-year record to 26-0.

Port Huron dominated the final period, as the Big Reds did a good job of stopping North's rushes at the blue line.

Michigan winters provide snowmobiler's paradise

Michigan, with the nation's highest number of registered snowmobiles and the thirdhighest number of trail miles, is a snowmobiler's paradise.

"If Michigan's 4,900 miles of snowmobile trails were laid end to end, they would stretch farther than the distance from Detroit to Panama City in South America," said Jerry Basch, AAA Michigan community safety services manager. "And Michigan ranks third in all of North America, behind Ontario and Quebec, in the number of registered snowmobiles (206,000).

Snowmobiling is big business in Michigan, with enthusiasts spending between $150 million and $200 million annually on lodging, snowmobile fuel, oil and equipment, clothing, food and refreshments.

More sledders return here each year, since approximately $1.7 million of the state gas tax and $750,000 to $1 million in snowmobile registration fees are spent annually to maintain. improve and expand Michigan trails.

"This year, more connector trails have been opened, allowing snowmobilers to travel almost entirely across the state," Basch said. "This linked network of trails has made it more common for snowmobilers to cover more than 100 miles each

But along with the pleasures of snowmobiling comes the danger of accidents for those who don't follow local ordinances and don't drive responsibly. During the winter of 1989-90, the last period for which data is available, 377 snowmobile accidents were reported in Michigan. They resulted in nine fatalities, 313 injuries and 85 cases of property damage. Alcohol was a known factor in six of the nine fatal accidents.

"Two of the greatest dangers to snowmobilers are operating a sled under the influence of alcohol and driving with reckless speed," Basch said.

AAA Michigan offers the following safety tips for a pleasurable and safe snowmobiling · Avoid alcohol before and while snowmobiling.

 Never follow another snowmobile too closely. Snow and sleet that sprays from the machine ahead could impair visi-

• Don't snowmobile alone in wilderness areas. • Carry a first-aid kit, compass, map, matches, an aluminum foil-type blanket that reflects heat back to the body, snacks and dry socks.

 Dress warmly and avoid loose clothing that could tangle in equipment.

 Maintain reasonable speeds that allow constant control of the vehicle.

• Stay on marked trails or on the right shoulder of the road where allowed. Watch for fences, tree stumps and stretched wire that may be concealed by snow.

Norsemen get two firsts at Fordson

Grosse Pointe North senior Keith Giannico "tossed a shutout" in the Dearborn Fordson Invitational wrestling meet last weekend.

Giannico wasn't scored on in three matches as he took the individual championship at 130 to help the Norsemen finish third in the 12-team tournament.

"He wrestled well, but he usually doesn't give up much," said North coach Art Roberts.

Giannico, who lost a close match in the second round of the state meet to the eventual runner-up, was one of two individual North champions at Fordson. Dave Sandercott also took first at 103 pounds.

Giannico beat a Livonia Churchill wrestler 6-0 in the championship match. Earlier, he won on a fall in 3:25 and recorded a 13-0 decision.

"We're in a lot of tough tournaments this year, so Keith will see most of the best wrestlers in his weight class," Roberts said. "That will help him prepare for the state - which is what it's all about."

Sandercott, a sophomore, also made an impressive showing at Fordson.

He opened by pinning his opponent in 3:48, beat a good wrestler from Grosse Ile 6-5 in the semifinals and defeated a Fordson wrestler 10-5 in the championship match.

"He really overpowered the kid in the finals," Roberts said. "Dave's a hard-worker.'

Roberts said he was pleasantly surprised by a pair of sophomores who finished third.

Dave Zoltowski lost 8-7 in the semis, but came back to pin his next two opponents at 112. Jeff Rizzo took a 9-1 victory in the consolation final at 119 and played a key role in the Norsemen's third-place finish.

"We were in a battle for second, third and fourth and we thought we might need an extra team point," Roberts explained. "Jeff was leading 7-0 in the last minute of his final match, so we told him to let the kid go and gamble that he could get a takedown. He got the takedown with about 15 seconds to go.'

North also had fourth-place finishes from Dan Skuce (135), Tony Romolino (145) and Joe Geibel (152).

Grosse Ile, which finished second in the state Class B dual competition last year, took first place and Fordson nipped North by a point and a half for second. Dearborn Divine Child was fourth. North hosts crosstown rival Grosse Pointe South tonight at 6:30 in the first Macomb Area Conference match for each school.

The Norsemen will compete in the Troy Invitational on Saturday. Action begins at 10 a.m.

Canadiens 3, USA Rangers 2

Goals: Aaron Ascencio 3 (Canadiens). Assists: Blair Ridder 2, Billy Gmeicomments: The Canadiens, who had three other goals disallowed, dominated the game. The defense, led by Chris Smith, Steve Dely, Jack Ryan, Tim Kelly and Martin Krall, played well in front of winning goalie C.J. Williamson.

Canadiens 3, SCS Raiders 2

Goals: Billy Gmeiner, Aaron Ascencio, Alex Fedirko (Canadiens); S. Szymczak, R. Korte (Raiders).

Assists: Blair Ridder, Steve Dely, Fedirko, Ascencio (Canadiens).

Comments: The Canadiens scored twice in the third period for the win. Ritter broke a 2-2 tie with 1:58 left in regulation. The Raiders had tied the score with 2:37 to play. C.J. Williamson was the winning goalie.

Canadiens 3, Port Huron Kiwanis

Goals: Aaron Ascencio, Chris Smith, Blair Ridder (Canadiens).

Assists: Alex Fedirko, Ascencio, Adam Whitehead (Canadiens).

Comments: The Canadiens scored twice in the first period and led 3-1 until Port Huron scored with 27 seconds left in the game. The Canadiens' Bill Gmeiner was stopped on a penalty shot. Crosse Pointe's defense did a good job of stopping the bigger Port Huron squad.

Canadiens 2, Canucks 0

Comments: The Canadiens advanced to the Christmas Tournament finals at Grosse Pointe Community Rink with the shutout. Steve Dely, Jack Ryan, Krall and Jason Campbell played solid defense in front of goalie C.J. William-son. Smith, Ridder, Ascencio, Adam Whitehead and Fedirko kept the pressure on the Canucks, resulting in two third-period goals. The Canucks' defense was led by Dan Nikisch, Mike Gellasch and Matt Gorczyca. Goalie Joe Messina

South bows in semifinals Experience gave Livonia Stevenson the slight edge it needed over Grosse Pointe

South when the two schools met in the semifinal round of the Temperance Bedford volleyball tournament. "They're a very experienced team and they have one of the best setters in the state, who controlled play for them," said Lady Devils coach Cindy Sharpe after the Spartans defeated South 15-4, 11-15, 15-9. "When two evenly matched teams are playing, it comes down to whoever has the most nerve and we got a little shy in the semifinals." The defeat was disappointing because the Lady Devils beat

Stevenson 15-7, 16-14 in pool play. In fact, South breezed through its four pool matches without losing a game and was the top seed in the playoff

Sharpe felt her team might have been affected by some officials' calls in the second meeting with Stevenson.

"Different officials call carrying the ball differently than others," she said. "Some call it real tight and others don't. It's something the kids have to adjust to, but I didn't think to warn my kids that things might be called differently than they were earlier in the day."

South opened pool play with a 15-4, 15-7 victory over Monroe, then beat Ida 15-4, 15-9. After their sweep of Stevenson, the Lady Devils wound up the preliminary round with a 15-1, 15-4 trouncing of Ann Arbor

South Sports

"It was a real strong tournament," Sharpe said. "Hanover-Horton is No. 1 in Class C and Bedford should be ranked in Class A. They're better than we are right now, but we can play with any of the other teams in the tournament."

Angela Drake and Stephanie Coddens played well at the net for South and each had 30 kills. Drake also had 16 blocks for points.

Sue McGahey had 13 ace serves and Sue Faremouth collected 83 assists in the tourna-

To refinance or not to refinance? It's worth checking out.

By Ronald J. Bernas Staff Writer

Lately, whenever Anne C. Boyle, mortgage counselor at Standard Federal Bank's Grosse Pointe Farms office, picks up the telephone, someone on the other end wants to talk refinancing.

As interest rates fell sharply toward the end of 1991, more and more homeowners paying off mortgages at 10 1/2 percent and higher flooded banks and lending institutions to refinance their homes at a lower

Cheryl Shelson Gauss, senior vice president of mortgage lending at Republic Bank S.E. in Grosse Pointe Farms, said that of all the mortgage work the institution has done in the last year, nearly 70 percent involved refinancing.

Although refinancing will save many homeowners a lot of money, there are other cases when it won't. Refinancing is easy, but there are some things homeowners should do to make sure they get the best deal, according to mortgage experts.

"What most people don't understand is that refinancing is just like getting another mortgage and that it can cost as much," Boyle said.

Application fees, closing fees, title work and points paid on the mortgage can run nearly $1,000.

Boyle said if homeowners bring in their original title insurance policy and a survey of the property — as long as no permanent changes have been made - the cost will come down significantly.

Gauss said most of the information that is needed for refinancing is only good for 60 days. After that, it is necessary to get new information, even if your job, income or address haven't changed.

It behooves people to shop around to find the best answer for their particular needs. Some banks now offer refinancing deals -Republic Bank S.E., for instance, offers refinancing for $750. There is no advantage - with the possible exception of dealing with a friendly face — to going back to the bank that handled the original mortgage.

"Consumers are so savvy these days they are willing to shop around and ask questions," said Frances Twiddy, a certified financial planner and financial adviser who owns her own company, Frances Twiddy, CFP and Associates. "Look closely at the points you have to pay and ask about any other hidden costs.

Interest rates have been dropping steadily for six months and most fixed-rate mortgages now average around 8 1/4 percent and adjustable rate mortgage are at

The rule of thumb is that if you won't reduce your interest rate by at least two percentage points, refinancing is not a good idea. But that doesn't always hold

"Everyone is unique and individual in their needs," Gauss said. "There is no set rule for anyone. And it's not uncommon to tell them not to refinance, although most people will find they save money if they

For example, people with one-year adjustable rate mortgages may save a bundle, depending on how the refinancing is accomplished. Again, it's best to shop around.

"If you're not going to stay in the house for more than two or three years, don't bother to refinance, unless you want to do it on an adjustable rate," Boyle said. "You have to balance the costs up front with the time and the money to see if you'd come out ahead. Chances are, with the rates what they are, you will."

Gauss said that if you shop around, ask questions and figure out the savings; the answer to "should I refinance?" should be a simple one.

"It's really all numbers," she said. "It's very easy and it should be clear enough." Twiddy offers the following suggestions to potential refinancers:

• Get on the bandwagon now. There isn't a lot of room for interest rates to drop further and those who hesitate may miss

• If you start the process and the interest rates change, you may be eligible for the lower (or forced to take the higher) rate. Each institution has a different policy; ask how your bank handles rate changes.

• Go to a reputable lender, one with which you are comfortable. If you don't get complete answers to all your questions, go

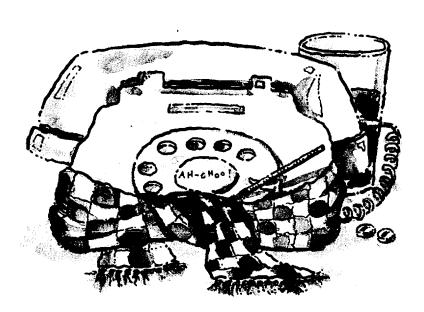

• Don't keep up with the Joneses. Don't get into anything you're leery of. Even though an adjustable rate can save a lot of money, if you're more comfortable with a fixed rate, then go that route.

 Ask how long it will take to refinance your house. Republic Bank and Standard Federal are taking a little over a month because the appraisers are overwhelmed.

Twiddy adds that it might be a convenient time to get a line of credit on your home equity, because all the information will be up-to-date.

So if you're thinking about refinancing, the best advice is to ask a lot of questions, and to start now.

12 new year's resolutions for healthier finances

Most people start off the new year with lots of good resolutions - and a drawer full of bills. Along with those promises to lose 10 pounds, quit smoking and exercise regularly, focus on a health plan for your finances this year as well.

Michael Kelly of the Michigan Credit Union League suggests 12 new year's resolutions that will put you on the path toward better financial health. Resolve to:

· Get a handle on your finances. Don't let them become unmanageable and end up controlling you.

• Write down your financial goals and set up an annual budget - putting it down on paper commits you to a new plan of action for 1992.

· Analyze your saving and spending habits and shape them to advance your goals.

• Pay yourself first. Save a certain amount or percentage of each paycheck and add to your nest egg regularly.

Reduce interest expenses by paying off short-term, highinterest debt.

• Switch to a lower interest, low-fee credit card and plan to pay the full balance owed each

• Shop around for a financial institution, such as a credit union, that offers lower service fees and higher returns on sav-

• Compare prices and quality before you buy.

It's easy to make more floor space available in your closet with this easy-to-build mobile shoe caddy. It rolls into full view while you use it, then out of sight when you're through. You can build it yourself with a few feet of western softwood lumber and a couple of hours at your workbench.

Dress shoes, tennis shoes, loafers. High heels, low heels, boots. Even a few pairs of shoes soon add up to an unmanageable storage problem in a small or medium-size closet.

But there is an alternative to this wall-to-wall clutter. A mobile shoe caddy, made of western softwood lumber, will house up to 16 pairs of shoes in minimum space. The cart rolls out of the closet to make selecting or storing shoes easy, then rolls out of sight when not in use.

This convenient storage unit is surprisingly simple to build, requiring only a saw, hammer, screwdriver and an electric drill. All you need are 6 feet of 1x10, 12 feet of 1x4 and 3/4inch doweling and four casters.

Cut two lengths of 1x10 for the ends, each 20 inches long. Then cut the top of both 1x10s at an angle so the back measures 20 inches long and the front measures 18 inches.

Using a 3/4-inch drill bit, drill matching holes one inch inside the front edge of both end pieces, and one inch down from the top. Space the 1/4-inch-deep holes about 4-1/2 inches apart. (To make sure you don't drill the holes too deep, use electrical tape to mark 1/4 inch on your drill bit.) Cut handholds in each end as shown, using a 3/4-inch or 1inch bit to form the rounded

Cut a 23-1/2 inch length of 1x10 for the base; glue and nail it between the ends, flush with the bottom, using 2-inch finishing nails or 1-1/2 inch screws. Cut four lengths of 3/4-inch doweling, each 24 inches long. Glue the ends before inserting in the holes.

Turn the caddy on its face, then glue and nail two 25-inch lengths of 1x4 across the back, top and bottom.

Cut three 23-1/2 inch lengths of 1x4 for the shelves. Measure up 4 inches from the base and install the first shelf flush with the back of the cart, using glue and nails or screws. Install remaining shelves, spacing them

Santa cruises the Hill

Who was that bearded man cruising the Hill Christmas Eve morning in a bright red, motorized sleigh? It was Santa and a helper, of course.

One would have thought Santa had better things to do just hours before setting out to deliver gifts to all good little girls and boys, but there he was, waving and ho-hoing up and down Kercheval.

WATERFRONT DREAMERS DEAR DREAMER:

Have you ever dreamed of living on the water? Imagine this view - ships passing, seaguits, ducks, wil-dire, brilliant sunrises. Let us make your dream

Dreams begin with Reality: something that can happen. See why 20 homeowners made it happen. We invite you to visit a small residential development on Lake St. Clair with a San Francisco theme — three story brownstone townhomes.

This home has a state of the art kitchen, master bathroom. (custom designed by "Puffs") and a two car garage to drive into your home at main entry level. Special features include: two fireplaces (one shares master bedroom, between these master bedroom, bathroom) two or three bedrooms walk out activities or bedroom with sliding door wall to patio, large full deck off kitchen and living room, and a third level vista deck off master bedroom.

Take advantage of a "million dollar view" on the lake at only one third the price. This summer we resold one home for $450,000. We now have the opportunity to offer this fantastic value for only $339,000 — bank appraisals are for much more!

The owner of this home has been transferred out of state and will consider trade-in toward purchase-a car, boat, marketable land.

Adopt A Pet Today!

People plus Pets

Medical experts say people with pets are less likely to suffer from stress-related diseases than people who live without the healthy companionship of a loving animal. These findings come as no surprise to pet owners. They know how much a good friend adds to their lives. So give yourself some of the best medicine available. Bring a dog or cat home, and enjoy your new pet in good health.

This Is It!

So, you've found that perfect house? But wait! Don't jump into anything before checking out a few more things:

- Compare the asking price of the house with houses of similar size in the area.
 You might want to have the house appraised to help you make an offer.
- It might be smart to have an engineer or construction company inspect the house. These people can determine the house's soundness and the adequacy of
- its heating, plumbing, wiring and insulation. If a lot of work needs to be done, get an estimate—the seller may reduce the asking price.
- Check the fit of all doors and windows.
 Test the water pressure of sinks, tubs and showers.
- Examine the gutters. Do the downspouts lead water away from the house? They should.
- Make a thorough examination of the basement. Some sellers may try to hide water seepage damage.
- · Find out what's under the carpet. Will
- you be pleasantly surprised with hardwood floors or disappointed with damaged, cracked flooring?
- If the seller can't provide recent certification that the house is free of termites and other pests, have a professional check it.
- Ask how old the roof is. If repairs need to be done, the work can be quite costly.
- Check out the yard. Will you need to do a lot of work to get it the way you want it? If you're house hunting in the winter, sax to see pictures of the yard in
- If any appliances will stay with the house, turn them on to see if they really work. Dirty dishes in the dishwasher doesn't necessarily mean it works—it could be a disguise. The time it takes to check these items can save you thousands of dollars in the long run. Request that all manuals and warranty information be given to you at the time of sale.
- Ask about average utility bills and tax rates. These numbers will be important when determining if you can afford the house and all of its monthly bills. Also find out about zoning restrictions.
- Talk to people currently living in the area. Ask what they like best and least about the area. This will also tell you how friendly your neighbors would be.

The list of things to check can be endless. If you still need some help, ask a family member or friend with home-buying experience to take a look. Their past experience can make a world of difference!

Good Luck!
