

Park mayor, council, police recognize civilian heroes

By Donna Walker
Staff Writer

"This is the fun part about being on the (city) council," Grosse Pointe Park Mayor Palmer Heenan said. "Having people here who are better than we are and being able to honor them."

Heenan was referring to seven residents who received civil commendations from the department of public safety at last week's council meeting.

The awards were presented by public safety director Richard J. Caretti and Heenan.

Three of the recipients, Jane Furtaw, Rudolph Menchl and Patricia Roman, were honored for coming to the aid of a senior citizen and her son when their home caught fire Aug. 30. The fire, which may have been caused by lightning, started in the basement of the house, located next door to Roman's home on Kensington.

Jane Furtaw, the wife of public safety deputy director William Furtaw, heard lightning strike somewhere in the neighborhood, and told her husband, who notified his department. She then went across the street and saw that a neighbor's house was on fire.

Menchl and Roman also heard the lightning strike and saw the fire.

The senior citizen, who uses a walker, was inside the house. Menchl, Roman and Furtaw alerted her to the fire and helped her to safety before public safety officers arrived.

Furtaw, a registered nurse, noticed that the woman was showing signs of shock. Public safety emergency medical technicians immediately transported the woman to the hospital where she remained for several days.

Roman "continued her care and compassion for several weeks by offering her house as a place to stay for the woman and her son while their house was being repaired," Roman's commendation reads.

"This was a fire with a lot of heroes and heroines," Caretti said.

He also said to Furtaw, "Your husband has been working 'round the clock on our terrible crime (the murder of Phyllis Lenart at a bus stop Jan. 16) since it happened, and I'd like to thank you for giving of his time like that."

John Johnson of Detroit and Thomas Thompson, both of Detroit, were honored for their actions in apprehending a suspect last July 29.

Johnson, who lives on Kensington in Detroit, saw a bicycle being stolen from a garage on Kensington in the Park, and chased the thief.

Thompson was driving on Mack when he saw Johnson pursuing the male suspect. After stopping his vehicle and learning from Johnson what had happened, Thompson also gave chase. He caught the suspect several blocks away and held him until public safety officers arrived. The bicycle was recovered.

James Owens Nichols was honored for helping catch a suspect who was fleeing public safety officers on Nov. 29.

Nichols saw the man enter a garage and told the pursuing officers where he was hiding. The suspect was wanted on a felony warrant.

Edward Wiberding II, who was unable to attend the meeting, was honored for helping a public safety officer who was being beaten.

The officer was attempting to arrest a disorderly man June 9 when a second man struck the officer. While the officer struggled with the second man, the first man kicked him in the stomach.

Wiberding, who had been trying to calm the alleged assailants, pulled one of the men away from the officer. The officer then subdued the other suspect. Back-up officers arrived moments later.

"Like the mayor, I take great pleasure in recognizing the contributions people like you have made," Caretti said.

Each of the citizens honored received a framed certificate signed by Caretti.

8 city-owned lots in Park considered for development

By Donna Walker
Staff Writer

Grosse Pointe Park is considering selling eight city-owned lots to local developer Edward Schollenberger for $75,000.

Mayor Palmer Heenan told the audience at last week's council meeting that "$75,000 may seem like an extremely reasonable or low price, but I feel to get this property developed and on the tax rolls it's well worth the lower price."

He also noted that some communities offer tax breaks to businesses to encourage them to locate in their cities.

The low purchase price in this case would take the place of a tax subsidy, Heenan said.

Five of the lots are located on the southwest corner of Jefferson and Barrington, the site of the former Unocal service station. Schollenberger, general and managing partner of TXS Associates in the Park, refers to these lots as "Parcel B."

The Michigan National Bank branch on the southeast corner of Jefferson and Barrington separates Parcel B from "Parcel A." The latter parcel is vacant and consists of three adjacent lots on Pemberton. One of the lots (lot number number 354) fronts Jefferson.

Parcel A is 135 feet by 244.74 feet. Parcel B is 120 feet by 110 feet. All of the lots are zoned OS-1 Office Service. Homes and/or offices may be built in OS-1 districts, said Park City Manager/Clerk Dale Krajniak.

The city has owned the eight lots for several years, Krajniak said. It paid $50,000 for the Unocal site and $21,000 for the three Pemberton lots, he said.

Under Schollenberger's plan, a two-story, 2,000-square-foot Colonial home with attached garage would be built on the southernmost lot of Parcel A, facing Pemberton.

The home would be constructed of brick veneer and siding, to match the other homes in the neighborhood. It would act as a buffer, separating the existing homes from the office complex that Schollenberger would like to build on Jefferson.

Parcel B, the existing bank, and the other two lots in Parcel A "would be combined to create a unified development under separate ownership with shared improvements benefiting the bank and the proposed office buildings," according to Schollenberger's proposal.

A two-story, 7,000 square-foot office building with loading space, an enclosed trash area and a 27-car parking lot would be built on Parcel B.

To make the entire complex look unified and to make room for parking, Barrington would be closed at Jefferson. Access to Barrington would be available through the rear of the parking lot.

Vehicle approaches to the complex would be limited to Jefferson.

A two-story, 6,800-square-foot office building and 29-car parking lot would be built on the two remaining lots of Parcel A.

The office buildings would be made of brick veneer and siding, compatible with the look of the residential neighborhood.

Common landscaping and lighting would unite the buildings and landscaped berms would "soften the transition from the neighborhood and enhance the residential character of the site," Schollenberger said.

A brick wall would separate the houses between Pemberton and Barrington from the new complex. A brick screening wall would also be built on the western edge of Parcel B.

Schollenberger has asked Michigan National officials if they would be willing to remodel the exterior of the bank to match the new buildings.

Jim Carver, first vice president of the bank, said, "We're looking very favorably at doing

Millage renewal, budget separate issues

By John Minnis
Assistant Editor

The assumption that the projected increase in the Grosse Pointe school district's 1992 budget would result from the renewal of the 27.55 mills before voters Tuesday is incorrect.

The only link between the renewal and the proposed budget is that if the renewal is not passed, there will be no budget to discuss. Nearly all (97 percent) of the school district's operating revenues is at stake. Without the renewal, the schools will have no operating funds.

Of course, if the renewal were rejected by voters, the school board would have to schedule another millage election, perhaps as part of the school board election in June. The millage rate sought at that time would have to be determined by the school board.

Analysis

The confusion between the renewal and the projected budget, which reflects a 5.6 percent to 9 percent increase over last year, is a matter of timing.

Had this not been a renewal year, the district would still be proposing a 5.6 percent increase in its budget because of rising costs and salaries and the loss of funds resulting from state interference.

And even if the renewal were approved and the district does increase its budget by the proposed 5.6 percent, it would still be levying less than the total number of mills authorized by voters.

Christian Fenton, assistant superintendent of business affairs, is correct when he states that had the district been levying the full amount of mills available, then there would be no talk of a "tax increase."

Neighbor alerts Park police to burglary

A good Grosse Pointe Park neighbor helped police quickly catch a trio of suspected burglars Jan. 30.

At 10:52 p.m., a resident in the 1000 block of Somerset saw someone breaking into her neighbor's house and called police. The elderly resident of the home heard a noise and discovered an intruder. As she called police, officers were already arriving on the scene.

While responding, Park police saw a group of two men and a woman walking in the area. When other officers stopped to question the trio, one fled on foot, but was caught on Ashland south of Jefferson in Detroit.

All three were linked to the burglary. One suspect, a 33-year-old man who is known to Park police, and a 22-year-old woman have been arraigned on burglary charges. Park Municipal Judge Kirsten Frank set bond for the man at $50,000 cash and $25,000/10 percent for the woman. Both were taken to Wayne County Jail and were scheduled for preliminary examinations in the Park Municipal Court on Feb. 6.

The third suspect, a 16-year-old male, was turned over to Wayne County juvenile authorities.

Pointer of Interest

Dick Forton

By Ronald J. Bernas
Staff Writer

Grosse Pointe Park's Dick Forton is an artist. But his medium isn't the kind you'd find on museum walls.

Instead, Forton's works of art are more likely to be seen driving the streets of metro Detroit, attracting the attention of car enthusiasts everywhere they go.

Dick Forton

Forton's love affair with automobiles began when he was a child growing up at the Country Club of Detroit, where his father was head greenskeeper. Today he's one of the main movers and shakers in the hot rod arena.

Next weekend the 40th Miller Genuine Draft Autorama peels into Cobo Center, and not only is Forton the chair of this year's event, he's also one of the original founders of what has become the most prestigious hot rod show in America.

"I neglect my business and the guys here get mad sometimes," he said of his employees at Forton Mower, a lawn mower sales and service shop he's owned in St. Clair Shores for 27 years.

But the event is always worth the work. This year more than 600 souped up chopped down supercharged bad to the bone willys will be on display from 5 to 10 p.m. Friday, Feb. 14, 11 a.m. to 10 p.m., Saturday, Feb. 15, and 11 a.m. to 9 p.m. Sunday, Feb. 16. Cars come from across the country to

Woods, City officers help collar suspect

Grosse Pointe Woods, Grosse Pointe City and Detroit police departments assisted Harper Woods officers in catching a suspected purse snatcher Jan. 29.

The theft occurred at 7:35 a.m. at the gas station on the southeast corner of Vernier and Harper. The victim was a 24-year-old Harper Woods woman.

Following the snatching, a Woods officer heard a police broadcast stating that the suspect was heading east on Vernier into Grosse Pointe Woods. He was patrolling south on Mack when he spotted the suspect's car, which had a stolen rear license plate.

When the suspect spotted the officer following him at Mack and Bournemouthe, he accelerated to a high rate of speed. The officer radioed ahead to City police, who joined in the pursuit south on Mack.

At Fisher Road, the suspect switched to the other side of Mack and continued racing south in the northbound lanes. He tried to ditch pursuing police by pulling in and out of a gas station, got back onto Mack and then began swerving at and around other motorists. He fled west into Detroit.

He ran several lights and stop signs and then slammed into a New Baltimore man's pickup truck at Alter and Warren in Detroit. The fugitive's car spun around and was traveling backward when it struck a Honda driven by a City woman.

Neither motorist was seriously injured. City and Detroit officers said the fugitive apparently tried to get out of his car through a smashed out rear window. He was found lying on the trunk with his legs still in the car. He was dazed and bleeding from a cut lip.

Farms and Grosse Pointe Woods ambulances responded to the scene. The suspect was taken into custody by Harper Woods police.

The victim's purse was recovered from the suspect's car.

New beginnings

Grosse Pointe Farms officially began offering paramedic service on Monday after three years of study and discussion and letters by residents to the city council. Earlier this month the Farms approved hiring Ruehle's-St. Joseph Ambulance Co. The ambulance will be housed at Cottage Hospital which will also provide emergency room training for the paramedics. The city will save money and at the same time offer the highest level of service available. The Farms donated its two defibrillators, through Cottage Hospital, to the Harper Woods police department.

G.P. Cable plans to have new studio at War Memorial by year-end

By Ronald J. Bernas
Staff Writer

It really wasn't news — everyone knew Grosse Pointe Cable was planning on building a new studio at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial. But at a special meeting Monday, a timetable was finally announced.

The mayors of the five Pointes and Harper Woods, along with War Memorial representatives, were told that the proposed $450,000 studio should be under construction by spring and completed in December. Grosse Pointe Cable is funding the entire project.

The new studio means the community will have more opportunities to use cable facilities to make videos, tape meetings, and generally get more involved in local-origination programming. And it will offer an opportunity to generate more local programming to air on cable.

"Producing local-origination shows is part of the agreement with Comcast," said Mark Weber, president of the War Memorial Association. Comcast is the parent company of Grosse Pointe Cable, which is 75 percent owned by Harper Woods and four of the Pointes. Only Grosse Pointe Shores doesn't have a stake in Grosse Pointe Cable. The Shores is connected with Comcast of St. Clair Shores, but plans are under way to get it connected so it at least can have the local-origination programming.

The local-origination division is the community-service arm of Grosse Pointe Cable that allows non-profit organizations and the community at large to access the local-origination channels — channel 19, the educational channel, and channel 32, the local-origination channel.

Currently there are 21 hours of local programming a day, with much of it repeated several times a week.

The programming includes interview-type talk shows and exercise, gardening, craft and home improvement shows. Some of the big draws are the telecasts of the meetings of the Senior Men's Club of Grosse Pointe and the Economic Club of Detroit.

"We knew that in order to present local-origination cable shows that we would have to build a studio somewhere," said Amy Parvel, director of local-origination programming. "We had to move out of our studios at Seven and Mack when the construction (of Pointe Plaza) got under way. Since then we've been filming anywhere we can."

That means in a back room, in an unused corner, or even in someone's office. It also means that taping is unpredictable. Someone in the hall who doesn't know a show is being taped might yell, or walk into the taping room.

"We're limited as to what we can do," Parvel said.

The new building will boast two studios, one primarily for community access programming. At the Seven-Mack offices, there was only one filming studio which caused scheduling problems.

When Grosse Pointe Cable moved out of its offices, the business department was relocated in Grosse Pointe Park.

Parvel and Weber see a whole new opportunity for Grosse Pointe residents, community groups and schools to get involved with cable and programming. It will also allow them to film videos for their own purposes, free of charge.

In addition, locals who are interested in television production will have an opportunity to join the Community Television Volunteer Corps to assist with the production of existing programs as well as creating new programs. The committee, Parvel says, will be made up of people with an interest in quality programming and with experience in television.

"This is a very exciting time for the War Memorial and the people of the community," Weber said. "It's time we had a first class local-origination studio."

Parvel added: "This is something I've been dreaming about for a long time."

Those in the know comment on studios

If the response to the announcement of a new cable studio by those who use it is any indication, the facility won't lack users — or ideas for new shows.

Frances Schonenberg has hosted the Services for Older Citizens show for a little more than a year. She took over from the show's originator, Dr. Robert Booth, who hosted the show for four years. She is excited about the project.

"I think it's tremendous progress and it's good for the community," Schonenberg said. "It will mean improved quality for the shows. I'm looking forward to seeing more Grosse Pointe and Harper Woods people hosting shows."

Johanna Gilbert, host of "Johanna Gilbert Interviews" for nearly eight years, agrees.

She recently visited a cable studio in Williamsburg, Va., and said she was amazed at the number of volunteers who donated time to various shows. But then she realized that the reason there were so many volunteers was that there was a stable studio.

"Grosse Pointe Cable has never had that privilege," Gilbert said. "And it doesn't allow for a consistent taping schedule. But with the new studio, more people will be volunteering because they know they will be helping put out a quality show. I really think this is something that Grosse Pointe needs."

Dr. Julie Corbett is head of the television production studio at Grosse Pointe South which serves students at both Grosse Pointe high schools. In the three years of the studio's existence, the number of students taking television production classes has risen dramatically. Recently the school board approved a curriculum for a Television Production IV class. One of the requirements for that class is for students to work on a project with Grosse Pointe Cable.

"The studio here (at South) is used every day, heavily, and on the weekends when I can accommodate them," Corbett said. "The new studio will be a wonderful resource for the students and the community. It will also expand what we could expect of our students."

She did warn that the cable company must make careful plans to ensure the studio is equipped properly and that the equipment is updated periodically, or the studio won't be of much use to the community.

Dr. George Eddington, director of community education for the Grosse Pointe schools sees many opportunities for community education to use the new facility.

"We'd be very interested in looking into this further," Eddington said. "All kinds of things that we do at community education would lend themselves to local TV."

John Prost has hosted "Pointers with Prost" for some 10 years. He says the new studio is long overdue.

"I think what we want is to get more community input," Prost said. "With the new studio we'll have a lot more opportunity to do shows people will want to see."

Dick Kay, president of the War Memorial board, said, "This is a beautiful and wonderful addition to what we have at the War Memorial. It's great for the community."

Photos by Ronald J. Bernas

"Johanna Gilbert Interviews," starring Johanna Gilbert, right, is being filmed in a sitting room at the War Memorial. Here she interviews Joan Geisler. Come December, she will be able to tape her show in a new studio at the War Memorial.

ULS Headmaster Ripple resigns; board to search for replacement

By John Minnis
Assistant Editor

University Liggett School Headmaster G. Gary Ripple has resigned, effective at the end of this school year.

Ripple, who came to ULS in 1989, told the school board that this will be his last year as headmaster, according to a Jan. 22 letter to ULS parents from board President William W. Sheldon Jr.

Ripple's departure was mutually agreed upon by him and the board.

"He leaves with our respect, with our appreciation for his services to the school over the past three years and with our best wishes for a successful and fulfilling future," Sheldon told parents.

Ripple accepted the top post at the private school in December 1988 and began his duties there July 3, 1989.

In a letter to the faculty, Ripple said:

"We face new problems and new challenges — and we are blessed with new opportunities and the strong support of a dedicated school community. Committed as I am to the well-defined mission of ULS, I believe I have a special appreciation of the kind of leadership that will be required to achieve our goals.

"After full deliberation and careful exploration of the key issues, the board and I have come to the conclusion that the future as we see it, both near term and long term, calls for a headmaster whose skills and background are different than mine."

Ripple came to ULS from William and Mary College in Williamsburg, Va., where he served for nine years in admissions. He had a total of 21 years' experience in college admissions before accepting the headmaster post at ULS.

He is a 1964 graduate of Colgate University with a degree in English. He earned his master's degree in education from Pennsylvania State University and his doctorate in education administration from Ohio State University.

Anna Platt, board vice president, will chair the headmaster search committee. Sheldon said he is confident a new headmaster will be found and hired by the beginning of the 1992-93 school year.

THOSE WHO CHERISH AUTHENTICITY TEND TO LOOK DOWN ON ANYTHING LESS.

Let the games begin

It's that time again and we are ready. The cushions are puffed up on the sofas. Refreshments are in the cupboards and refrigerators. Couch potato heaven is about to commence.

The Olympics come around every four years and we are always eager for new heroes. Who will they be this year? Who will rank up there with Mark Spitz, Bonnie Blair, Carl Lewis, the USA hockey team of 1980 and so many more? Who will we invest our emotions with as we did with Debi Thomas and Dan Jensen? Will there ever be another to replace "Eddie the Eagle?" We are pumped up and our hearts have plenty of room for the adoption of new heroes.

There is a lyric to a popular song that states, "Everyone is searching for a hero. We all need someone to look up to." There are all types of heroes available to us when we immerse ourselves in the lives of those involved in the Olympics. Boone Arledge has taken us "up close and personal" to the homes and training grounds of many of the athletes, affording us intimate profiles of this wonderful breed of people.

We live vicariously through the portraits of these young athletes. We learn the names of family members and even the names of their pets. The Olympics are our fantasies come alive and we all become involved, whether as witnesses to history or spectators transported to a magic world where everyone is a winner and the daily dramas unfold before a magnificent backdrop. Our heroes take many forms. They can be the participants themselves or they might be the coaches or parents who drove to all the practices at dawn.

For a few brief days we have front row seats to view and appreciate excellence. We identify so closely with the athletes and their entourages that we celebrate their victories and suffer their defeats. We ally ourselves with individuals or teams and cheer from our living rooms. We feel the pain of the injuries and the lumps are in our throats as they stand on the podium to receive their medals. Goosebumps rise on our flesh and tears trace our cheeks as the national anthems are played.

We mainly support the athletes from our own country. However, the Olga Korbet and Katarina Witts have pulled at our heartstrings, too. There are few dry eyes at the opening ceremonies as the final runner makes his way up the steps to light the torch. And who cannot admit to feeling withdrawal pains at the closing ceremonies as we say farewell to people who have become family to us for a few cherished moments.

Patriotism is at an all-time high at the time of the Olympics. Once again nations vie for glory, but the competition is peaceful and eyes are bright, hopes are high. We appreciate these times all the more because of the long intervals between them. We arrange our schedules to ensure we will be near a television set for the events that interest us most. With cable involved this year, more choices will be available to us. We can careen down steep embankments, waltz on ice, see the finest slam dunks and body checks, or hold our breath while we watch a triple Lutz. Don't know about you, but I can hardly wait. Let the games begin!

that, but it still has to go through an approval process at the bank. It's still only tentative. Nothing has been signed yet."

Schollenberger said that Phase I would consist of the construction of the house. If the sale goes through soon, work can begin this spring and be completed by the end of the year, he said.

Phase II would involve closing Barrington at Jefferson, demolishing the Unocal building, constructing the first office building and parking lot, and remodeling the bank. If everything went according to schedule, construction would start this fall and end in the summer of 1993, Schollenberger said. Barrington would probably be closed at Jefferson in the spring of 1993, he said.

Phase III would involve constructing the Pemberton office building (which would face the bank) and the addition of more parking spaces and landscaping. Construction would begin next winter and be completed by January 1994, Schollenberger said.

The mayor and councilmembers said that they would like the Unocal station demolished around the same time the house is built. They instructed Krajniak and the city attorney to develop a purchase agreement that would make Phase II part of Phase I.

"I think the Unocal building should be torn down as part of Phase I," Councilman James E. Robson Jr. said. "Residents have been complaining for years that it's an eyesore and I think we should move forward."

The mayor asked what would happen to the property if Schollenberger decided to stop work before all three phases are completed. A few years ago, another developer proposed to build an office complex on the property, but the deal fell through, he recalled.

Schollenberger said he already has some prospective tenants for the office space.

"I can't tell you anything to assure you that this won't go off without any hitches," he said. "But I'm willing to make the financial commitment."

He said the office buildings will cost about $500,000 each, and that the house will cost about $250,000.

Krajniak and the city attorney were also told by the council to investigate the possibility of soil contamination at the sites. If the soil is contaminated, the previous owner would probably have to pay the cost of the cleanup, Krajniak said.

The underground fuel tanks were removed from the Unocal site when the city purchased it. Also, a gas station once occupied the site where the bank is now, Krajniak said.

The purchase agreement being drafted by Krajniak and the city attorney will be presented to the council for its review at an open meeting sometime in the near future.

On Dec. 19, the council published a notice in the Grosse Pointe News asking for purchase offers on the property.

Proposals were accepted through Jan. 10. Schollenberger's proposal was the only serious one the city received, Krajniak said.

What millage vote means to the Pointes

As the Feb. 11 date of our school millage renewal election nears, a sizable number of Grosse Pointe School District voters have expressed their doubts about voting yes.

In the editorial below, we will attempt to answer these doubts as factually and clearly as possible.

First, one letter writer says that it is her understanding that "with the renewal, a sizable raise will be granted to the education staffs of the schools."

Actually, the school district is in the third year of its teacher contract, which means that this year, as in the previous two, the Grosse Pointe district will pay a 7 percent increase to the teaching staff. The contract calls for that amount without reference to the renewal issue.

Grosse Pointe negotiated with 12 other school districts in the Michigan Education Association district which two years ago approved similar three-year contracts. In fact, Grosse Pointe was one of the last of the 13 to finally agree to the contract on which it won some minor concessions from the union but went along with the 7 percent approved by the other 12 districts.

A second letter says that MEAP scores "actually fell in some grades" in the local schools. That is true, but, as the Grosse Pointe News reported last Dec. 19, some scores also improved.

In addition, math scores were recorded on a totally new test that was not comparable to earlier tests. It even included some subjects that students had not yet covered in the Pointes.

A third criticism dealt with our contention that the schools would have to close unless the renewal levy is approved. Our comment was based on the fact that the entire school operating levy (along with most of the library levy) is up for renewal. So it can be said that no levy, no schools.

It is true, however, as some critics have contended, that the schools would keep operating for the rest of this year on the current levy and that it would be possible to have another election, perhaps at the time of the annual school board election in June, to test public opinion again.

In fact, some critics have advocated a defeat for the current levy while expressing the hope that the school board would come back a second time with a reduced millage proposal for the next three years.

That is a possibility — but one that would be damaging to the quality of the schools. Any reduction in revenue would require a reduction in the quality of education, through laying off teachers and enlarging class sizes at the very time that school population is growing again and through other economies in the operation.

Perhaps the most troubling of the questions raised is about the fact that approval of the renewal will mean an increase of 5.6 percent or 9 percent in taxes for the next school year.

We've sought to explain this matter but will try to do so again as simply as possible.

Actually, 53.7 percent of the current budget goes to teachers and librarians to pay their salaries and fringe benefits. With the rise of the cost-of-living, expenses are expected to rise an estimated 5.6 percent over this school year's expenditures.

That increase would come about because the district, under the contract cited above, must pay teachers another 7 percent, prepare to meet the expected increase in school population next fall by hiring additional teachers and meet other rising costs resulting from inflation.

In addition, the state of Michigan has in the last few years cut back on its state aid for school districts such as ours in Grosse Pointe. Two such cuts are under review in the courts through appeals by the Pointes and other out-of-formula districts.

If the appellants win their major case, which attempts to recapture from the state Social Security taxes paid on district employees, the local district will be able to keep its increase to 5.6 percent; if the case is lost, the increase will amount to 9 percent.

Despite the recession and the complaints about property taxes, we reiterate our view:

The request for the renewal of the school and library levies can be justified in order to maintain a quality public school system that not only offers excellent opportunities to our young people but helps maintain residential property values for the entire community.

Is Bush seeking too little?

Despite President Bush's attempt to cloak his State of the Union proposals in the patriotic battle dress of the Persian Gulf War, many listeners found his speech did not meet their expectations.

Bush sought to offer something for everyone — except the economists, as one New York Times writer said. But he emphasized proposals that would do more for his re-election than for the national economy and, perhaps as a consequence, did not win broad public approval in the polls.

Some Bush plans, such as proposed tax cuts, offered economic panaceas that could be both too little and too late because they could not become effective until the expected recovery arrives next fall and then could contribute to a revival of inflation.

While the president's call for further cuts in defense spending was generally applauded, the Democrats felt he didn't go far enough. They have their own plans for deep additional slashes in the Pentagon budget to help finance expanded spending on social needs.

In setting an arbitrary March 20 goal for congressional action on his short-term economic program, Bush seemed to be seeking new reasons for confrontation rather than cooperation with a Democratic Congress.

In fact, Democrats greeted the supposed deadline with disdain, contending that is not the way to work with Congress and pointing to differing Democratic views about ways to spur the economy and the time required to enact highly complicated economic measures into law.

News media merit a spanking

Critics have been busy taking the U.S. news media to the woodshed for a spanking for their treatment of Gov. Bill Clinton of Arkansas — and they deserve what they got.

A story first published by a national scandal-mongering newspaper has been given excessive attention by both the print and electronic media and has started a new national debate about what makes news in a presidential campaign.

What is especially shocking is the way some of the best newspapers in the land — including both of Detroit's dailies — gave the story Page 1 news and photo coverage without inquiring into the veracity of the person lodging the complaint.

Instead, it remained for Newsweek magazine to check out her story on the points that were verifiable. It turned out she was probably wrong on at least seven matters. That being the case, why should we accept her cash-for-trash story of the supposed affair as believable?

Apparently, it reflects the gullibility of the media in general and their willingness to believe sex allegations against a presidential candidate if neither the charges nor the denials can be proven.

Nor is he likely to win the Democratic Congress' approval of his revival of a controversial proposal to cut the capital-gains tax rate, unless he agrees to higher taxes on people in the upper income brackets.

Although delivering his speech extremely well, Bush appeared to be smug and even arrogant on occasion, as if he didn't remember that Congress is one of three co-equal branches of government — and must study his proposals before it disposes of them by revamping or rejecting them.

He did propose a number of worthwhile programs, such as another extension of unemployment benefits (borrowed from the Democrats after having vetoed it a year ago), revival of the 15 percent investment tax allowance and allowing a permanent research and development tax credit.

However, on such matters as improving the nation's health insurance and its schools, as well as facing up to its urban problems, the president had little of substance to propose except the appointment of a new commission on America's urban families.

Predictably, that promise failed to satisfy the nation's mayors who felt their needs were ignored and quickly proposed a $35 billion package of aid for their distressed big cities.

Because actions always speak louder than words, all of us will await with interest and concern the efforts of the Bush administration and the Democratic Congress to convert the State of the Union speech into something more meaningful than a campaign document.

To their credit, the editorial writers at both the Detroit News and the Free Press were themselves critical of the press coverage — but as is so often the case in such controversies, the news departments apparently do not read their own editorials, or, at least, don't follow their own advice.

We do not pretend to know whether the governor and his wife were telling the truth when they denied the accuser's story. But we think the charges are made of very thin cloth and deserve no more attention unless there is some real evidence the governor lied about his role.

In the meantime, the big dailies and the networks ought to get back to reporting what the candidates are saying out on the campaign trail not only in New Hampshire's lead-off presidential primary but in Michigan and the other states soon to have primaries of their own.

After all, the First Amendment was written to protect the media's right to report the news, not rumors about sexual misconduct and other trash that occupy time and space that the media ought to devote to serious issues.

Letters

Upgrade

To the Editor:

As a cardiac care nurse and mother, I have been reading with interest the recent articles concerning improving EMS services in the Grosse Pointes. Dr. McMillin's efforts to extend paramedic service to all of the Grosse Pointes deserves our full support.

We in Grosse Pointe Woods feel very secure knowing that paramedic service is available to all of our residents. I feel it is important that the remaining Pointes upgrade their basic service to advanced life support in order to assure everyone the most advanced service available.

This would involve all of our communities and neighbors working together to support a joint plan to ensure that our lives will be better protected.

I have seen, through my own experience, the lives advanced life support can save and look forward to the day when paramedics are the standard of care for our EMS services in all the Grosse Pointes.

To the Editor:

Yesterday I received a shocking pink colored card through the mail smilingly asking me to vote yes to renew school millage. The card was shocking, to say the least!

Right now the amount budgeted for schools in Grosse Pointe out of my taxes is nearly 71 percent of what we pay. In these times of financial distress, belts should be tightened. It is my understanding that with this renewal a sizable raise will be granted to the education staffs of the schools. Where would the extra money come from?

The answer is simple.

Hidden within this appeal for a renewal is the blatant fact that because property tax assessments went up in 1991 already, there is in place a 9 or 10 percent hike in tax dollars for schools.

True, our assessments are frozen for 1992, but nowhere is there relief in a drop in these assessments even though sales are declining rapidly, and the true value of properties in this area has declined.

My husband and I live on an income that does not rise — all around us the costs of living continue to rise — yet our income does not follow suit. Hence, we examined our budget and made cuts to sustain us through these troubled financial times. The school district should do likewise. They should also prove this to the taxpayers.

Voting yes to the renewal on Feb. 11 should be carefully considered. I probably will vote no.

Whaddya call your whatchamacallit?

The thing.
Flipper.
Puncher.
 That's a sampling of a scientific study conducted at the Grosse Pointe News recently in answer to the question: What do you call that thing you hold in your hand when you are watching TV and you want to change channels?
Clicker.
 A few — very few — called it a remote or remote control.

They were mostly young people — very young — who were born after these gizmos became a part of everyday life.
TV changer.
 The rest of us, it seems, show our disdain for this insidious control box by giving it a cutesy name.
The controller.
 That's exactly what it is — like The Enforcer. Anything powerful enough to alter airwaves is pretty scary. What if every time you hold one of these things in your hand and zap the screen, it alters your molecular structure?
 Of course, this suggestion comes from my vast knowledge of physics, the theory of relativity and the odds of falling out of bed during a full moon.
The selector.
 That's a no-nonsense name — rather genteel and somewhat British.

Gitchee-goomee.
 Cross my heart and hope to die, this nickname comes from a person in our production department who began his printing career in the days of hot lead when every line of type was set individually on a page. Gitchee-goomee. Has a nice ring to it. Almost like what my husband calls it.
Clicker-clacker.
 I like that. In fact, he's the one who inspired me to pursue this scholarly issue. I figured any adult in a responsible position with a reputable company who refers to the electronic wonder of the ages as a clicker-clacker has his priorities in order.

Channel changer.
Cable changer.
 All good working names. Honest. They say what they mean.

The TV, as in Where's the TV?
 Members of this family know exactly what that means.
 Most of these pet names were claimed by more than one person which shows we are on similar wave lengths. There was one name, however, that stood by itself.
Gerald.
 This is from one of our news reporters. It raises questions. He says it's what his brother-in-law calls it and it has become a family name. His brother-in-law says that's what it was called in the instruction booklet.
 And there you have it — a list of names from a relatively small group of people. If you have a pet name for your thing, call me at 882-0294 and I'll pass it on to the rest of the world.
 Now that I've done the legwork on this research, I'll leave it up to the sociologists to explain why so many of us refuse to call it a hand-held remote control. (The name is too remote, perhaps?)

 One last story about the zipper: It seems that an employee's mother was wrapping Christmas gifts, and without realizing it, included the remote control in a package she sent to her daughter in California.
 Of course, everyone in the family searched the house looking for it and finally had to accept that it was lost. That is, until after the daughter opened her gift. She called to thank her mother, but wondered why on earth she had sent a remote control.
 Those little things have a way of ending up in strange places. Which is probably a whole 'nuther topic.

Safe boaters

John S. Mathews of Grosse Pointe Farms is the new commander of the Grosse Pointe Power Squadron.
 Mathews holds all of the squadron's advanced grades in boating and navigation and is a professional boat captain.
 Also elected: John C. Bennett, executive officer; Franz J. Forster, education officer; Richard L. Sandifer, administrative officer; George E. Gerow, secretary; and George J.A. Heitmanis, treasurer.

The Grosse Pointe Power Squadron has more than 400 members and is a unit of the United States Power Squadrons, a national organization dedicated to safe boating through education.

Calling all cooks

The National Kidney Foundation of Michigan is currently recruiting cooks for the Great Chili Cook-Off.
 The annual event raises money for the foundation's patient services, research and education programs. It will take place on Saturday and Sunday, May 2 and 3, at the Wash-tenaw Farm Council grounds in Saline, near Ann Arbor.

Applications, along with registration fees of $50 or $25, will be accepted through Friday, March 13. Cooks will be selected by a lottery and cooks who are not chosen will get a refund.
 To get a registration form, call the National Kidney Foundation of Michigan at 1-800-482-1455.

Crime-stopper

Grosse Pointe Woods Councilman Bill Wilson noted, during Monday's meeting, that he hasn't had as many opportunities to accompany the "Woods" public safety officers on their nightly rounds — as has been his custom.

It's because the council is having too many evening meetings, he said.

Mayor Robert Novitke noted that crime in the Woods is down too.
 Perhaps there's a correlation between these two facts, quipped the mayor.

Ann and Leonard Schim

Golden anniversary

Ann and Leonard Schim celebrated 50 years of marriage on Jan. 31 by renewing their vows at St. Paul Evangelical Lutheran Church, followed by a dinner reception at the Lochmoor Club.

The Schims have lived in their present home in Grosse Pointe Woods for nearly 40 years and have raised four daughters, Judy, Diane, Nancy and Susan.

Made-in-Michigan cars and fiction

Yes! I have an American car! Built in America. American through and through. Parts, assembly, nameplate, all American. Michigan, even. Tires from Akron, I guess, but all the rest of it is Detroit-homegrown.
 It's a 1931 Model A Ford.
 The two modern cars that we use for daily driving are more ambiguous. The nameplates are American, but the origin is cloudy. Mexico, maybe.

Nancy Parmenter

But you know what? I don't care.
 I'd buy a Mercedes or a Honda. The only car I might boycott is Chrysler, and that's because of the chairman's non-stop, ill-considered lip.
 The anti-Japan fever he has helped to whip up (and, yes, some of Japan's politicians have contributed to it) is completely obscuring the facts: Japan buys more of our exports than any other country except Canada (Detroit Free Press, Jan. 27);
 Americans' perceptions of domestic cars haven't yet caught up to the quality improvements;
 The automobile parts industry is global. That's the current reality and the trend for the future. To deny it is to turn back the clock and actually to reduce the market.
 Of course Japan should open its markets and do away with excessive red tape. But our government can easily make that position clear without the emotional tantrums.

 There are plenty of economic reasons to decry Japan-bashing. But the bashing also has some sad psychological overtones.
 Americans are lashing out in desperate fear that our system is out of control, that we are in permanent decline, even in imminent danger of collapse.
 That desperation calls for action, any action, in fact, anything that even looks like action. So we embrace protectionism, deficit-busting tax cuts, war. Some of us embrace repressive ideologies.
 They're all manifestations of a circle-the-wagons mentality that pits "us" against an amorphous "them." Last year it was Iraqis and flagburners; this year, welfare recipients and the Japanese.

What scares me is the lack of responsible leadership. This country is drowning in red ink and social problems, and we waste our limited attention spans on vomiting and sexual peccadilloes.
 Writing in "When Society Becomes an Addict," Anne Wilson Schaefer says this confusion and lack of serious focus play a vital (and nefarious) role in our system:
 "(It keeps us powerless and controllable... no society is more controllable than a confused society. Politicians know this better than anyone, and that is why they use innuendos, veiled references, and out-and-out lies instead of speaking clearly and truthfully."
 "(It keeps us from taking responsibility for our own lives... (and) it keeps us busy. When we must spend all our time and energy trying to figure out what is going on, we have none left over for reflecting on the system, challenging it, or exploring alternatives to it."

 That's a dark view. But the charitable alternative, that our leaders simply have no ideas, is only marginally more heartening.

Got a call from Hugh Culik the other day. He's the faculty sponsor of the first-ever literary gazette at U of D Mercy. He wanted to toot the kids' horns, of course, but also had picked up on the fact that I like good writing.

The journal is called (SIC), a whimsical title for an eclectic little book that turns out to have some good, some less good, and some pedantic writing.

"Somebody told me that students can't write prose any more, which really irritated me," Culik said. "This is at least as good as a lot of the small magazines."

I can't speak to that, not being a reader of literary magazines, but some of these writers handle prose nicely and their stories are good enough to keep reading.

There's a moving essay on a personal experience with AIDS. There's a nice minimalist short story (Culik calls it "neo-Urdike" and it is) that is actually a chapter in what will be a novel, written by an older student employed in the auto industry.

Older students tend to have a built-in edge, Culik says. They've coped with some of life's difficulties — mortgages, marriage, jobs.

"One of the advantages of getting a little older is that you realize you're going to drop dead some day," he said. "I think writers have a certain fantasy of creating immortality for themselves.

 "Younger students haven't always experienced enough to write about."

Some of these have, however. If you're interested in seeing what today's college students can do, (SIC) is available at Third Coast Booksellers in the Park. It's a place that likes to encourage Michigan writers — and even has one on staff.

Stephen Dueweke's first novel, "Playing Soldiers in the Dark," will be out in April, published by Bagman Press. Dueweke says he's worked on the book through six versions since 1976.

The theme is controversial ("I admit I deliberately wanted it to be controversial," he says), but, to his surprise, audiences so far haven't been as shocked as he expected. Dueweke did two public readings last summer in Jim Monnig's courtyard, next door to Third Coast.

"Playing Soldiers" is about a 14-year-old boy who has a consensual affair with his physics teacher, a bit of a sensitive subject, but "very well written," Dueweke says with a delighted laugh. Dueweke harbors plenty of notions about immortality, linking himself with poetic traditions like T.S. Eliot and looking optimistically toward a writing career.

Look for his book at Third Coast with all the attendant hoop-la (soirees, minor publishing celebrities, signings) this spring.

Music scholarships offered

The music faculty of Marygrove College will audition students to receive scholarships for the 1992-93 year. Applications are available for students interested in pursuing a music degree at Marygrove College.

The awards for full-time students include a $1,000 scholarship renewable over a four-year period and two $500 scholarships, also renewable over a four-year period.

Auditions are open to voice, piano, organ, guitar or flute students.

For more information and an application, call Sue Vanderbeck at 862-8000, ext. 316.

EMS

To the Editor:

The letter from Frank A. Pesta Jan. 30 points up something that should be a concern to all Grosse Pointers.

Although Grosse Pointe Farms has joined Grosse Pointe Woods in providing advanced life support to its residents, Grosse Pointe Park, City and Shores still maintain the antiquated basic life support systems. In instances when mutual aid is required elsewhere, a resident in an ALS community may be serviced by a neighboring community with only basic life support.

Cardiac arrest victims who receive advanced life support within eight minutes of arresting have a 30 to 40 percent better chance of survival compared to those who do not receive advanced life support until later.

It is imperative that residents of all the Pointes insist on advanced life support.

Pointers in the Park, City and Shores are at risk, as are we all, until the EMS upgrade is across-the-board.

To the Editor:

The only responsible vote on Feb. 11 regarding the Grosse Pointe Public School System asking for a renewal of 28.6 mills is a firm no.

The fact is that because of increased assessments in property values, the residents will be paying an additional 9 percent in a time of the longest recession since the Depression.

Fact two is that teachers' salaries are already extremely high and a 7.9 percent increase in pay is not in line with our current economy.

The time has arrived for the board to act fiscally responsible.

Renewal

To the Editor:

After reading the rhetoric spewed forth by Mr. Steve Keller regarding the millage renewal efforts and "Renew in '92," as well as the editorial in the Grosse Pointe News calling for renewal, I would hope the efforts to educate the public would go beyond the normal practice of playing the broken record "schools will be forced to close" if this is not renewed.

At a time when many companies are forced to re-examine the way they do business, asking more from their employees with less money and staff, the school district elects to carry on with business as usual — just ask for a renewal. Just how much more do you expect from your taxpayers? How can a renewal cost have an end cost of 5.6 or possibly 9 percent more in total taxes?

Is the teaching staff oblivious to the harsh economic realities that plague this area? Do any of these people read a newspaper? Do they understand that the No. 1 reason business leaves this state is due to high operating costs (read taxes)?

Before the school district talks about cutting programs or shutting schools, perhaps they should take a strong look at the salaries of the staff and teachers. While I realize that "80 percent of the district's teachers have master's degrees or better," your article failed to mention what those salaries are — among the highest in the state — and certainly not bad for nine months' work.

Perhaps the school district should ask for voluntary help from the business community for ideas in cutting expenses while maximizing productivity.

Also not mentioned was the fact that MEAP scores actually fell in some grades this year. Yet we're assured things will remain "status quo" with a millage renewal. Obviously, the falling MEAP scores are the fault of the parents. If memory serves me right, after the last millage increase our school board wasted no time in increasing salaries by 7 percent per year for three years. Do they realize some people are getting by with no increases and even taking salary cuts. It must be great knowing that you'll get a better-than-average raise despite average or poorer performance or results. Ask for a pay-for-performance plan and watch the teachers scream about tenure.

Perhaps a more balanced story on the millage renewal effort, one that truly educates and dispels some of the misnomers, is what's needed. Let's answer some of the real questions about where the money is spent and spare the alarm.

Tired

To the Editor:

The Feb. 11 vote on a millage renewal for the Grosse Pointe schools isn't, as the board would like us to believe, just a renewal of an existing millage. Due to the increases in our property assessments, this is really an 8-1/2 to 9 percent tax increase.

I am tired of the board constantly expecting the taxpayers to give them a blank check to waste as they see fit.

A good example of this is their most recent teachers' contract settlement. They gave away 7 percent increases a year for three years which in reality is 22 percent over three years. This figure is scandalous in light of the average wage increases in today's business world, especially when you realize that the teachers' pay is for eight hours a day, 8-1/2 months a year, plus a benefit package that is fantastic.

I say we should vote down the millage renewal and force the board to return with a lower millage which truly reflects the increased assessments in our property values.

Nintendo

To the Editor:

The following letter was sent to Attorney General Frank J. Kelley and is reprinted at the request of the writer. It refers to a settlement of State of Michigan v. Nintendo of America Inc., an antitrust lawsuit filed by Kelley's office on behalf of Michigan Nintendo console purchasers, part of a nationwide settlement between Nintendo and the attorneys general of all 50 states and the District of Columbia.

Enclosed is the $5 Nintendo instant redemption certificate which you sent to me with your letter of Nov. 12.

Please be advised that at no time have force or fraud been used against me in any of my purchases of Nintendo products. In each and every case, my purchase decisions were made freely, and, I should add, pleasurably. In fact, the enjoyment these products have afforded me and my family has consistently far exceeded their cost.

The United States anti-trust laws penalize success and reward ineptitude. And ironically, the effect of such government-mandated competition is no different than that of government-mandated monopoly (postal services, utilities, etc.).

In both cases, inferior sellers are artificially permitted to remain in the market, consumers pay higher prices, smaller amounts of new wealth and jobs are created, and those who have political "pull" advance at the expense of those who don't.

In a free market, by contrast, inferior competitors are driven out, and new ones enter whenever a monopolist's price is raised too high. The consumer always wins, and the system promotes the best in man, not the worst.

Of course, the failure of companies like Nintendo to act on principle and demand complete freedom to set prices (however they choose) is also wrong.

In fact, it's only through their sanction that you attorneys general are able to concoct such false pretenses of justice as this "settlement" of "resale pricing policies" — in which the victim gets to deny wrongdoing while you redistribute his earnings to people who suffered no damages.

Without this sanction, you'd either have to outlaw Nintendo or stop interfering with the economy and start getting more results in matters like burgeoning rapes and car thefts.

In the long run, all you're "protecting" me from is better quality, lower prices and a higher standard of living. I don't need that kind of protection. What I need is the one thing you're giving me less of: protection from those who force or threaten or defraud me to act against my will. So stay out of the economy; your interference is unjust, and, with today's global markets, tribal and reactionary.

Justice requires that rewards accrue only to those who earn them. I have not earned the $5 settlement nor have I suffered any damages on account of Nintendo. Please make sure this $5 is returned to the stockholders of Nintendo, and don't ever force them or anybody else to pay me damages which I don't deserve. That is justice. That is what I pay you to uphold.

North student stars in 'BABES'

Lisa Wyrock, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Wyrock of Grosse Pointe Woods, is making her television debut on Detroit Channel 50's ongoing production of BABES (Beginning Alcohol and Addictions Basic Education Studies).

The 13-week series, funded by Blue Cross/Blue Shield of Michigan, the Fisher Foundation and Hartford Memorial Baptist Church, features live characters in real-life situations with realistic solutions.

Wyrock plays the character "Bows," and kitten, and through her part tries to nurture children in positive living skills and provide accurate information about the use and abuse of alcohol and other drugs.

"Ever since I can remember," she said, "I've wanted to be on television. My wish was granted last summer. Although being on set for 10 hours a day under hot lights in bulky, thick animal costumes with few breaks was anything but glamorous, I don't think I've done any work before that was so exciting."

She is a senior at Grosse Pointe North High School and has studied dance at the Angela Kennedy Dance Studio for more than 12 years and hopes to continue her studies after graduation.

BABES airs one episode a month. The series began in September. Check your local TV listings for times and dates.

Macon, Kwiatkowski win poster contest

The two winners of the "Girl Scouts Care for the Earth" poster contest from the Grosse Pointes are Ann Marie Macon and Emilia Kwiatkowski.

Ann Marie, a fifth grader at Monteith, won first place in the Junior Girl Scout category. She belongs to Troop 1903. Her parents are Connie and Gary Macon of the Farms.

Emilia, who won first place in the Cadette Girl Scout category, is in the seventh grade at Brownell. She is the daughter of Patti and Gary Kwiatkowski of the Woods. She is a member of Troop 2226.

The contest is sponsored by Girl Scouts of the U.S.A. and the National Museum of Women in the Arts. It serves as a kickoff for the national Girl Scout service project, "Girl Scouts Care for the Earth," in honor of the Girl Scouts 80th anniversary in 1992. As semi-finalists, the girls will receive a certificate of recognition from Girl Scouts of the U.S.A. Their names will be published in the spring issue of In Touch magazine. The Michigan Metro Girl Scout Council entered both posters in the national competition.

Proposed sandwich shop rejected; lack of parking cited

By Donna Walker
Staff Writer

Residents in the audience applauded Monday night when the Grosse Pointe Woods City Council voted against granting a parking variance for a proposed Subway Sub Shop.

John and Mary Miller, brother and sister, wanted to open the fast food restaurant at 20647 Mack, in a shopping strip just north of Van Antwerp. The strip already includes The Great Frame Up, Shrimp King, Time Out Video, Mason's Computers and Running World.

Subway would have occupied a vacant store between Mason's Computers and Time Out Video.

Because the Millers wanted to offer both dine-in and carry-out service, they needed six offstreet parking spaces to comply with the city's zoning ordinance. There are only two offstreet parking spaces near the store, which meant the Millers were lacking four offstreet parking spaces.

That's why they asked for a variance for four parking spaces.

"To me, it doesn't pose a serious parking problem because most customers will be picking up their food and leaving," said building inspector Melissa Mellen.

Jody Saum, a representative of the Subway Development Detroit office, spoke on behalf of the Millers. She said the chain has 6,200 franchises nationwide, and that their failure rate is less than 3 percent.

She said a regional representative would check the restaurant every 30 days to make sure it meets or exceeds the chain's standards of cleanliness, service and quality.

Saum also said that employees would pick up litter in the area around the building after peak times.

Of the approximately 20 people in attendance, none spoke in favor of the variance.

Eight residents from seven households on Van Antwerp urged the council to vote against the variance.

"I like Subway shops," said resident Joseph Brennan. "It's a good restaurant. They make a good sandwich. But this is the wrong location."

The shopping strip is located directly across the street from Parcels Middle School.

Residents opposed to the variance said that traffic to and from the shopping plaza would increase because of the restaurant, creating a safety hazard for children walking to and from school.

"I appreciate that Subway will pick up the refuse around the store," said Nancy York, "but when one of those kids gets hurt, who's going to pick up that?"

Rita and Peter Rausch wanted to know how far Subway would go in policing the area for litter. Their house is located next to the alley behind the shopping strip, and they've lived there for 25 years.

"The video store offers free popcorn when you rent a movie, and we find the popcorn boxes up and down our block," Peter Rausch said. "We also find beer cans on our lawn and whisky bottles in the alley."

He said he didn't want the added burden of having to pick up Subway wrappers from his lawn.

Residents said that a dumpster behind the shopping strip overflows with garbage on some days, and that they did not want a dumpster containing kitchen refuse in the alley, because it would attract rats.

Peter Rausch and Charles Michael said they have had their fences broken by inattentive drivers in the alley. They don't want any additional traffic in the alley, and they said they would like to see a steel wall erected between the commercial and residential properties.

If a restaurant does go into that area, Michael said he would rather it be an entirely dine-in facility.

"I think there'd be less traffic that way," he said.

Councilwoman Jean Rice, who has a history of opposing parking variances, asked if the council had granted a parking variance to any of the other stores located in that strip.

Building inspector Mellen said a variance had been given to the Great Frame Up, and that Shrimp King, which began operating in December, may ask for one in the near future.

Mayor Robert E. Novitke asked Mellen how Shrimp King got a certificate of occupancy if it needed a variance. She said she didn't know, that it was inspected by someone else.

Later, she said that she had been wrong, that Shrimp King was in compliance with the city's zoning ordinance.

Shrimp King, which has only a carry-out menu, did not need a parking variance because it has the proper number of offstreet parking spaces for take-out service, Mellen said. The number of required offstreet parking spaces is less for take-out restaurants than it is for dine-in establishments.

After listening to the residents, the council voted unanimously to deny the Millers' request.

"What can I say? I'm disappointed," John Miller said afterward. "We were under the impression it would be approved."

He said he did not know that the owners of the Alinosi French Ice Cream and Candy Co. shop across Vernier on Mack ran into a similar storm of controversy last summer when they wanted to open a dine-in and carry-out store, or that Joseph Bogosian of Josef's pastry shop had to fight this fall to keep the tables and chairs that he installed in his store without a variance.

"We may appeal it (the decision)," Miller said. "I don't know."

The owner of the shopping strip, who asked that her name be withheld, said, "This is a commercial strip, you can't change it. It's been a business district since the 1950s."

"I know parking is scarce, but it's always been that way. The problem is that there is a lot of rental property on Mack that is vacant. I know that residents pay a lot of taxes, but so do the commercial property owners. It's not fair that we have to pay high taxes on property that we can't rent out."

Saum said, "I don't understand why there is commercial real estate there if the city doesn't want that to be a business district. I think it's a city-wide problem that the council is going to have to solve."

The city is trying. Last year, Novitke formed the Mayor's Mack Avenue Business Study Committee to find ways to improve the business climate on Mack in the Woods. The committee is composed of council and business representatives and residents.

Councilman Thomas J. Fahrner said he plans to ask the committee at its next meeting to recommend to the council that no new businesses be allowed on Mack near Vernier until the parking issue is adequately resolved.

Haven't seen much of old sol lately, and that's good for your skin

The path of history is strewn with major obstacles: wars, natural disasters, poverty, unemployment — all difficult to deal with but not impossible to overcome.

Then there are the personal problems that impede progress; insignificant in comparison, but like a stone in a shoe they make day-to-day dealings difficult and divert attention from the need to cope with what really matters.

Undue concern with personal appearance is one of them. We spend time and money trying to look our best, which is OK. Looking good boosts our ego and enhances our mental health. When we feel good about ourselves we are better prepared to confront the major issues of life.

Many of the faults we find with ourselves can be remedied. We are displeased with our figure. Exercise and diet will give us new contours and curves. The first gray hair — Lady Clairol to the rescue. Wrinkles? Now there's a toughy. You can't steam them out. Creams and lotions sit on the surface and do nothing about filling in what looks to us like fissures.

Prime Time

By Marian Trainor

But according to a Johns Hopkins medical report, what so-called miracle remedies won't do, prevention will. It contends that most wrinkles are not a natural part of aging; that while skin, like other organs, is affected by the passing of time, 90 percent of the skin changes we associate with wrinkles are due to too much sun. And sunning is a habit you can curtail. Research shows that damage may even be partially reversed if further exposure is avoided.

The effects of sun on skin are not simply premature aging. Rather, skin that looks very old has undergone an entirely different process than skin that has aged naturally. Compare the skin on the back of your hand to the skin on the underside of your upper arm (an area usually protected from the sun). In most people the underarm skin will be softer and less wrinkled than the skin on the hands. The skin on the underside of your arm has mainly undergone changes naturally set in motion by your body's biological clock; the skin on your hand has been subject to cellular changes triggered by outside factors, primarily the sun.

Aged skin appears thin but relatively smooth and unblemished. Expression lines such as "smile creases" around the mouth are deepened and the skin is somewhat looser due to a loss of fat beneath it. In a laboratory, one can see under a microscope that the epidermis of such skin may have thinned, but the cells look normal.

Fortunately, halting the progress of damage from the sun is as simple as protecting your skin from its rays. New research suggests that past damage may not be irreparable. Animal studies have shown that the skin will partly restore itself if the sun is avoided or a sunscreen is used. At the least, sun protection measures avert further damage.

Moisturizers won't do it. The only over-the-counter cream or lotion that can help your skin to look more youthful is sunscreen. Moisturizers use various oils to temporarily trap water in the skin. Insufficient water content in the skin is what makes it dry. No study has ever found any long-term benefit derived from moisturizers in terms of slowing the aging process. However, in the short term (for a few hours) they can help your skin look and feel better.

Experts agree that one type of moisturizer will do for the entire body, and for both men and women. Benefits do not accrue as the price tag rises.

Also, the more perfumes, thickeners, colors and other ingredients in a moisturizer, the greater the likelihood of allergic reaction. Those with oilier skin should look for a light lotion. Older, drier skin will get the most benefit from a heavier cream.

Using a sunscreen to protect the skin from premature aging is a precaution worth taking. Wearing sunglasses to protect the eyes is another.

A few years ago, a team of researchers from Johns Hopkins conducted a study involving more than 800 fishermen from the Chesapeake Bay area and found that the incidence of cataracts in this group was three times greater than the national average. The likely culprit; the invisible but damaging ultraviolet radiation in the sun's rays. Further research, including a large-scale international study, has since confirmed this conclusion.

Fortunately, sunglasses provide simple and effective protection from these hazards. Ophthalmologist Sheila West says that wearing sunglasses is prudent, "but spending $100 or $200 for them is throwing money away." (Believe it or not there are some that cost that much.) She goes on: "You should be able to find a perfectly adequate pair for under $20. Don't be fooled by some companies' claims that their glasses improve the clarity of your vision. Only prescription lenses can do that."

Consult an ophthalmologist if your job or hobby keep you outside for hours at a stretch, or if you are fair-skinned and have blue or green eyes, or are elderly.

Protection from the sun is not just a summer precaution. There are many days in winter when there is glare from the sun and we are told that even on cloudy days there is some glare.

And then there are those who spend the winter in southern climes...

Senior men to meet Feb. 11

Al Warren

The Grosse Pointe Senior Men's Club will meet Tuesday, Feb. 11, at the War Memorial, 32 Lakeshore, at 11 a.m.

Al Warren, former vice president and chief labor negotiator for General Motors, will talk about "On Becoming a Senior." Bob Kennel is presenter.

Reserve by calling a member of the luncheon committee; phone numbers are listed in the newsletter.

The Valentine dinner party is Wednesday, Feb. 12, at 6:15 in the Fries Auditorium. It's BYOB, dinner is at 6:30 p.m. and The Macomers will perform at 8 p.m.

Substitute bowlers are still needed at the East Warren bowling alleys at 1 p.m. Thursdays.

AARP 3430 to meet Monday

The Grosse Pointe Chapter 3430 of the American Association of Retired Persons will meet on Monday, Feb. 10, at 1:30 p.m. at the Neighborhood Club, 17150 Waterloo in the City.

The program at 2 p.m. will feature Mary Ellen Busch, member of the Detroit Historical Society Guild, who will trace the history of some of the oldest streets in Detroit. She will also show slides.

Refreshments will follow the meeting. Mary Cross and Florine Holzen are hospitality co-chairs. Admission is 75 cents.

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING

Notice is hereby given that a Public Hearing will be held TUESDAY, February 18, 1992 at 7:30 P.M. by the City Council at the Municipal Offices, 17147 Maumee Avenue for review of Community Development projects to be submitted to Wayne County Office of the Community Development Block Grant Program. The City invites its citizens as well as individuals, representatives or neighborhood groups to submit ideas and comments concerning projects for the 1992 Application. Funds totaling approximately $60,000 will be available for approved 1992 projects.

Major crime in Shores lowest in at least 26 years

By John Minnis
Assistant Editor

Major crime in Grosse Pointe Shores last year was the lowest it's been in at least 26 years.

"It's the lowest its been since I've been here," said public safety chief Daniel Healy, who joined the Shores police department in 1965.

Only 20 major crimes were reported in the Shores in 1991, down 38 percent from the 32 reported in 1990.

Major, or part 1, index crimes are homicide, criminal sexual conduct, assault, robbery, burglary, larceny, auto theft and arson, according to FBI uniform crime reporting standards.

Healy said there is no single thing to which the low crime rate can be attributed. He said the Shores has a stronger police presence, and he credited residents for being more crime conscious and reporting incidents. He also said the neighboring cities have been doing a good job of holding crime down, which helps reduce the risk of crime in the Shores.

"We're just glad the numbers are down," he said. "We'll do our best to keep them that way."

He said he's hesitant to make a big deal about the low crime numbers because the crime rate could easily go the other way.

No cars were stolen in the Shores last year. In fact, no cars have been stolen in the Shores in any of the past four years for which the Grosse Pointe News has kept records.

There also have been no arsons, robberies, rapes or murders in the Shores in the past four years. One criminal sexual conduct incident was reported last year, but it was not a rape. One aggravated assault was reported last year. That was the June 28 incident where an 18-year-old Warren man shot at a bus. The man has since pleaded guilty to felonious assault and awaits sentencing.

There were five reported burglaries last year, down from eight in 1990.

Larcenies fell sharply, with only 13 in 1991, compared to 24 the year before. Ten of last year's involved losses of more than $200, compared with 20 large larcenies the year before. Five of the larceny cases were closed last year, including four of the $200-plus thefts.

While crime was down, arrests were up.

Shores officers made 410 arrests in 1991, compared with 340 the year before. Of the arrests, 15 were felony arrests, up from five felony arrests in 1990.

Fire runs were up from 48 in 1990 to 71 last year. Of the 1991 fire runs, 16 were house fires and 40 were false alarms.

Ambulance runs were down last year. Shores emergency medical technicians responded to 128 calls in 1991, compared with 142 the year before. Twenty-five of last year's emergency medical runs involved assisting other cities.

Vandalism was down from 24 incidents in 1990 to 16 last year.

Municipal court prosecutions were up, with 239 last year, compared to 137 the year before.

Checks of homes while residents were on vacation numbered 12,935 last year, up from 11,366 in 1990.

Public safety overtime hours continued to decline, with 886 1/4 overtime hours last year, down from 898 1/2 hours in 1990.

Pet program seeks volunteers

WANTED: Friendly dogs and cats, and their warm-hearted owners, who can spare one hour a week each month to visit lonely senior citizens in local nursing homes.

If this description fits you and your pet, the PETA-PET program of the Animal Welfare Society of Southeast Michigan wants you. PETA-PET is an animal visitation program, whose volunteers pay regular visits to nursing homes in the metro area.

PETA-PET volunteers bring their own animals, provided they are friendly, in good health, and have current vaccination records. The visits are scheduled one day a month, and last about an hour.

Animal visitation programs have proven to be beneficial in caring for the elderly, who especially enjoy the unconditional love an animal can offer.

Volunteers are needed to visit the Nightingale North Nursing Home in Sterling Heights; Bon Secours Nursing Care Center in St. Clair Shores; St. John Hospital Center in Harrison Township; A Friend's House in Warren; Cambridge East in Madison Heights; Cambridge North in Clawson; Romeo Nursing Home in Romeo; and Georgian East in Grosse Pointe.

If you would like to become involved in this worthwhile program, call Barb at the Animal Welfare Society, 751-2570.

When you need emergency care, come to Bon Secours Hospital. Every one of our emergency physicians is board-certified and specially trained in emergency medicine. Each has had advanced cardiac life-support training as well. And all of our emergency room nurses have long-term experience in the emergency department.

To make your emergency care even better, we've expanded our Emergency Department: four new general treatment rooms, a mini-laboratory and radiology room right on site, and additional orthopedics and gynecology specialty rooms. We have pediatricians and obstetricians available 24 hours a day, and we've doubled the size of the triage area so we can treat you faster. Plus we're adding more state-of-the-art equipment to the department, including new cardiac telemetry units which will enable us to monitor up to 20 critical patients even while they're being transported to different areas of the hospital for necessary testing.

All of these improvements, combined with the most qualified emergency staff in Michigan, means outstanding care for you and your family. And that's our ultimate goal. In fact, we won't stand for anything less.

Ellen Safran

Each week in this column, we will focus on the work of a student. It can be a poem, a drawing, a short story, a picture of a scientific experiment or a wood-working project, a book review.

The following story was written by Ellen Safran, who is in the fifth grade at Ferry School. She is the daughter of James and Linda Safran of Grosse Pointe Woods.

The Peculiar Pony

All I said was that I wanted a horse for Christmas, and suddenly added my own special request: a tall, beautiful Arabian mare with a silky, flowing mane.

Safran

On Christmas morning, much to my dismay, I found no horse. Of course, I didn't expect it to be under the tree, but I thought there would be a clue, a note, something. Then my father sent me outside to get some firewood. And there, standing rigid like a stone in the backyard, munching grass, was a horse.

Half-blinded by tears of happiness, I ran to it to throw my arms around its neck. But halfway, I stopped short.

In my tears and joy, I had not realized what the horse in front of me looked like.

It was a pony... Ponies are short! And fat! And this one was no exception.

Instead of the shiny black I'd dreamed of, he was whitish grey, with legs short and straight and charcoal grey, looking like they couldn't carry the slightest weight.

His face was small and chubby, with sad, blinking brown eyes.

Just then, the pony lumbered toward me, his flabby, hairy belly swaying from side to side. He nuzzled me, but I stood firmly. I didn't like (or didn't want to like) this small, fat creature. And I was sure he didn't like me.

My father rushed out, beaming. "Well, don't you love him? I saw him and just knew you'd love him, too."

How could I speak the truth and not hurt his feelings? I answered, "He's... okay," not admitting that, in actuality, I sort of fancied this strange little guy. But I can't ride him, I thought stubbornly, so I can't love him.

Over the next few weeks, I cared for him, but tried not to let myself get attached even though the pony tried and would not quit trying to win my affection.

He would nuzzle me, and nuzzle me, and nuzzle me. I started getting used to that broad nose tickling my shoulder. He would also plant sloppy, noisy kisses on my nose when I fed him.

When I turned him out to pasture, and tried to walk away, he would trot over and plant a kiss on me. Surprised, I would stumble to the ground. Sensing a new game, he would fall to the ground next to me and kiss me again.

All right, now I was hooked. I liked him.

One morning I went out to his pasture and he trotted over, and, of course, kissed me. For the first time, I reached into my pocket, pulled out a carrot, and fed it to him. Eagerly, he lipped it up and nuzzled my pockets, looking for more.

I laughed and rubbed his nose. "I think," I said thoughtfully, "I'll call you Faithful."

And that's exactly what he was for many years ahead.

Benjamin Wei

The following story was written by Benjamin Wei, who is in the fifth grade at Richard School. He is the son of Kuang and Weizen Wei of the Farms.

The Conference Call

One night, the week before Christmas, I received a call from my uncle who lived in San Francisco.

I picked the phone up after my father had got it. My grandparents were also on the phone and they lived in Taiwan (half the earth away). I wondered what was happening. How could three persons at three separate locations on the globe all talk together on the same line? It turned out to be a "conference call," my father told me later.

Both my uncle and grandpa asked whether I received my presents and if I liked them. I told them I've not opened my presents yet, but I am sure I'll like them because they always give me good presents. I spoke to my grandpa both in Chinese and English. I thanked him for a new award system. My grandpa now matches any awards my dad gives to me for a good report card (all E's). He reminded me to keep up the good work and I'll receive more awards.

Grandpa also asked why it was so difficult to call in. He tried to call us about six times that evening, and the line was always busy. My dad told him that was because my brother was talking on the phone with a friend for an hour. My uncle commented, "When you have a teenager at home, it's time to get a call-waiting service from the phone company." If we had that service, my brother would know someone is waiting to call in. Since my grandparents live so far away, I do not see them much. But I surely enjoy talking to them on the phone from time to time.

Peter Sullivan

The following story was written by Peter Sullivan, who is in the second grade at Maire School. He is the son of Pat and Peter Sullivan of the Park.

Mouse Story

Once there was a mouse and its family and they believed in Santa. But the other mouse families didn't. They would tease him.

Peter Sullivan

He told his mom. She said, "Just ignore them." So he did, but when it was Christmas Eve Santa came to town. They put the Christmas tree up and hung the decorations up and hung their stockings up and when the clock struck twelve, little mouse got up and he heard Santa.

He ran downstairs and he said to Santa, "The other mice are teasing me and I don't like it."

"Well, they won't get any presents," Santa said. "They'll get ashes."

And when little mouse got up and his friends got up, his friends were mad but he wasn't mad and when he went to school it was show and tell. He raised his hand and the teacher called on him and his show and tell was from Santa and from that day on, they all believed in Santa.

Julie Padilla

The following story was written by Julie Padilla, a second grader at Maire School. Her parents are Suzi Padilla of the Park and Gerry Padilla of the City.

A Reindeer's Opinions

Sure, being one of Santa's reindeer has its advantages. But it has its downsides, too. Like once there was a blizzard and being Rudolph I had to lead the reindeer. Well, anyway it was a dark night.

Julie Padilla

"Blitzen and I can't pull through this!" "I understand," said Santa. "Rudolph!" they said.

So I came running as quick as I could. "What, Santa?"

"Rudolph, Vixen and Blitzen can't go through this one. Rudolph, we need you to lead the sleigh," said Santa.

And I said "Yes. I will help you. Then let's go."

"Rudolph, Vixen, Blitzen!" called the other reindeer.

"Ho, ho, ho!" Santa said as he hitched us up to the sleigh. Then he said, "Ready, team!"

"Ready," we said. Then he called our names! "Rudolph, Vixen, Blitzen, Dancer, Prancer and Comet!"

And we're off! And have a merry, merry Christmas!

Olivia V. Ambrogio

The following poem was written by 11-year-old Olivia V. Ambrogio, who is in the sixth grade at the Giving Tree Montessori School. Her parents are Anthony Ambrogio and Anca Vlasopolos of the City.

Ambrogio

Winter is a tall lady dressed in white. Her hair is white, her eyes are stony blue. She wears a glittering necklace of ice. She has a garden of snowflake flowers. She walks among the trees at night.

Her foot is soft and delicate. Winter's palace is made of ice. The only light it holds is the reflection off the cold white-blue.

She is reckless and wild. Yet she is soft and comforting. Snow is her pillow, ice her bed, Cold her heart.

Katie O'Brien

The following poem was written by Katie O'Brien, a first grader at Kerby Elementary School. She is the daughter of Kevin and Ann O'Brien of Grosse Pointe Farms.

O'Brien

Snow is falling. The snow is falling. It is quiet. You hear no birds or squirrels. When you're fast asleep Santa will creep Down the chimney.

Jacqueline Whelan

The following story was written by Jacqueline Whelan, who is in the sixth grade at Kerby School. She is the daughter of Joseph and Linda Whelan of Grosse Pointe Farms.

Snowy Snowflake's Adventure

One day when there was a blizzard, there were little snowflakes and icicles blowing everywhere. The storm lasted for seven days and seven nights!

One particular snowflake, named Snowy, was heading for a log cabin with creaking beams. She passed trees that shook like wet dogs. She landed on the window. Splat!

When the storm was over the children ran out of the cabin to go see what was on the window. "Hooray, let's play!" shouted the children.

In a wee, little voice, Snowy said, "Come and get me off the window!" They had a very good time with Snowy until the sun came out and Snowy started to melt. "Good bye, Snowy!" they said. "We love you!"

Pie in the eye

It took some pies in the face, but classroom assistant Mark Sabella, left, and math teacher Dennis Hawhee helped raise $276 on Jan. 10 for the homeless. Pierce Middle School students paid 50 cents for the privilege of creaming their favorite teacher or assistant. Other students paid 25 cents a basketball shot from half court. If they made the shot, they won $5. Also, pizza, donated by Tony Buscemi, sold for a $1 a slice.

The fundraiser was put on by teacher Gina Francis' Advisor/Advisoree (A²) homeroom class.

Marston is semifinalist

Christopher Marston of Grosse Pointe South High School has been chosen as a semifinalist in the Coca-Cola Scholars Program from more than 92,000 applicants nationwide.

Semifinalists must complete a biographical questionnaire, two personal recommendations, a school report and an essay. This material will be screened by the Foundation's Program Review Committee in early March. Following the committee's selection of 150 scholars, the students will attend the national competition in Atlanta in April where they will compete for designation as a national or regional Coca-Cola scholar. The 50 national scholars will receive awards of $5,000 a year and 100 regional scholars will receive $1,000 a year, both renewable for up to four years.

Local students make Cricket

Parcells Middle School students Evan Rouls, 12, and Eric Bonten, 11, both of Grosse Pointe Woods, have their names printed in the February issue of Cricket.

Rouls received an honorable mention and Bonten a second prize in the November Cricket League international writing competition in which entrants were asked to write about a memorable Thanksgiving.

See stars

Students 5 to 12 are invited to participate in a special Winter Astronomy Day Camp during a no-school day for the public schools.

The day camp is on Monday, Feb. 17, from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial. Instructors for the day are from the Living Science Foundation staff.

Bring your slippers and learn the winter constellations in the star lab planetarium. Students should wear comfortable indoor and outdoor clothing and bring a sack lunch. Snacks will be provided.

The camp is $40 a person. For more information, call 881-7511.

Sisk wins scholarship

Graham Sisk of Grosse Pointe Woods took second place worth $1,050 in the competitive art scholarship at Siena Heights College in Adrian. He is a senior at North High School.

To participate in the competition, Sisk registered for a portfolio review, which consisted of up to three pieces of his artwork, representing a broad spectrum of visual creativity.

McGarvey wins geography bee

Michael McGarvey, a fifth grade student at Trombly Elementary School, won the school-level competition of the National Geography Bee on Dec. 12, giving him and a chance at a $25,000 college scholarship.

The school-level bee, at which students answered oral questions on geography, was the first round in the fourth annual National Geography Bee, which is sponsored by Amtrak and National Geographic World, the National Geographic Society's magazine for children.

The society with its co-sponsors will provide an all-expenses-paid trip to Washington, D.C., for state champions and their teacher escorts to participate in the National Geography Bee national championship on May 20 and 21. The first-place national winner will receive a $25,000 college scholarship; the second-place winner, a $15,000 scholarship; and the third-place winner, a $10,000 scholarship.

The National Geographic Society developed the National Geography Bee in response to a growing concern about the lack of geographic knowledge among young people in the United States. A 10-country Gallup survey conducted for the society in 1988 and 1989 found that people in the United States ages 18 to 24 — the youngest group surveyed — knew less about geography than young people in any of the other countries in the survey.

2 new sedans help raise (yes, raise) Buick's market share

According to their window stickers, the difference between a '92 Buick Park Avenue Ultra and a new LeSabre is about $7,000.

In other words, you can either buy a supercharged 205-HP Ultra sedan with touring suspension, power front seats, remote keyless entry, passenger-side temperature controls, headlight-sensitive rearview mirror and leather-trimmed seats.

Or you can buy a LeSabre sedan with 3.8-liter V-6, soft velour-covered seats, leather-wrapped steering wheel, traction control, ABS brakes, automatic transmission and air conditioning, plus 7/10 of a Pontiac Sunbird.

Both add to $31,000 and some change.

The Ultra is stiff and sturdy and very fast. The LeSabre is softer, lighter and fast enough.

Both new sedans are bringing smiles to the faces of Buick dealers. Buyers around the country are making the General Motors Division an anomaly in the industry as Buick was the only make from the traditional Big Three to increase its share of the total market in the 1991 model year.

And Buick total sales were up for the past calendar year, riding on the strength of Roadmaster and Park Avenue sales.

Our test periods with the Park Avenue Ultra and restyled LeSabre began in the unseasonably mild, gray weather of early January. It concluded during the days of endless snowfalls, blocks of ice, mounds of frozen wet stuff and glistening, ridged streets.

It was the '92 LeSabre, which Buick introduced to the buying public last summer, that really took it on the chin. And the GM H-body did as well or better than any 4-wheel-drive or sport utility on the road, grinding its way through drifts, navigating narrow and slippery roadways, stopping and going on cue.

While the ABS brakes were useful, it was Buick's traction control option that impressed us the most. Traction control works like ABS brakes — in fact, it works with the ABS brakes — in that the system monitors wheel spin and makes adjustments accordingly. Say, for example, you are accelerating from a stoplight. Your right front tire is on ice, while the left front tire has found dry pavement. Power from the engine will cause the right tractionless wheel to spin, until the traction sensors cause the brakes to be applied. The result is that power is evenly distributed between the two driving wheels.

The device makes an odd whining noise to let the driver know it is kicking in (in some models, a traction control gauge lights on the instrument panel). The handling of the car is the real proof of the pudding, though. In Buick's words, "Traction control is designed to enhance vehicle control during acceleration below 30 mph and is especially effective when poor road conditions are encountered." I'll second that.

In addition to its handsome (if conservative) looks, we liked the LeSabre's Grand Touring suspension, its quick-clearing rear-window defogger, the smooth and quiet computer-controlled four-speed automatic transmission, the soft velour upholstery and the rather old-fashioned, substantial outside door handles.

Big brother Park Avenue Ultra had passenger-side temperature controls which might be superfluous to some but are likely to encourage peace in a family where some like it hot and some like to be cool. The Ultra automatically locks its doors when the transmission is moved from "park." More on this later. The supercharged 3800 V-6 is very responsive.

Here's a neat feature: The radio stays on after the car is turned off and the key removed from the ignition. It's the opening of the door that shuts it off.

Supercharged '92 Buick Park Avenue Ultra is right at home with the many luxury cars at Arriva Ristorante across the street from GM Tech Center

We thought that rather nice in the Ultra and missed it in the LeSabre.

The Ultra, with its slick leather-trimmed seats, had fancier instrumentation, including digital readouts for temperature inside and outside the vehicle. Both vehicles had remote keyless entry systems that allow one to lock and unlock the doors and open the trunk with a squeeze on the little black hand-held transmitter, which uses radio frequency signals to accomplish its tasks from up to 30 feet away. Buick says it operates like a garage door opener.

Skylark also new for '92

Attention, Central Casting/Production: Do Not, repeat, Do Not line up a car with transmission-activated automatic door locks for any gangster or other shoot-'em-up films. Signed, Cranky Autos Columnist in Grosse Pointe.

This feature — the one that locks all the car doors once the vehicle is shifted out of park — belongs at the top of the "most aggravating" list. Ahead of motorized passive belts, even. My desire to open the driver's door whenever I want to easily surpasses my need to keep passersby or even family members from climbing in without permission.

The Buick Skylark GS, a $19,427 compact sedan we recently drove, insisted on locking me in.

Otherwise, the newly redesigned N-body (as in Olds Achieva and Pontiac Grand Am) is a car that grows on you. I'll admit to not liking the teal-and-gray GS coupe at Buick's preview last fall. The performance model, with 3300 V-6 engine and sport suspension, felt neither sporty nor very quick.

Our little sedan started life as a $15,555 Gran Sport, with 3.3-liter engine, automatic transmission, ABS brakes, split folding rear seat and the locking doors. By the time its assemblers in Lansing were done, it featured an additional $3,400

Buick LeSabre with traction control and antilock brakes conquered the weather with style and comfort in the big snow of '92.

Buick Skylark GS grille may have been inspired by the '39 Buick, but this is not the Buick your father drove.

in options, including a compact disc player ($414), air conditioning, power driver's seat, dual electric remote mirrors and remote keyless entry system that opens doors when the key fob is squeezed and pointed in the proper direction.

The instrument panel is well laid-out and easy to read, especially at night. During the day, you might be distracted by the swooping lines of the dashboard, which looks a little like the plastic had melted. Anyway, it is definitely more modern in its lines than most, including its sister cars from Olds and Pontiac.

The Skylark's exterior styling can touch off serious disagreements, with some viewing it as distinctive (or weird), others as weird (well, distinctive). Buick says the unusual vertical-bar was inspired by the '39 Buick, certainly a handsome model to emulate.

"There isn't a flat panel on the Skylark," says Wayne Kady, chief of the Buick design studio for Skylark. "So many of the cars you see on the road today are bland or neutral. These cars have, we hope, a shape that entertains you."

A friend grouched that the side panels swoop up sharply to the rear and look like a Saturn. "Don't you like Saturns?"

"Yeah, they're OK." Sounds like Kady succeeded in designing a car that is neither bland nor neutral.

Despite recent reforms, consumers don't believe food labels

by Marys Dee Craig
Special Writer
Mary Ann went all out to lose the weight that she put on during her long-planned trip back to her home state. So she hopped for a box of sweet tasting diet bars.

She ate the diet bars instead of breakfast and lunch, paying no attention to the nutrition information listed on the label. After all, weren't they called diet bars," she thought.

Not until her third 275-calorie sugary meal did she read the nutrition panel on the label. The two top ingredients were fat and sugar. She began to question whether eating the bars was the right way to go.

Jim, a widower, discovered that his blood pressure was sky-rocketing. Aside from medication, his physician prescribed a low-fat, low-salt diet and an appointment with the hospital dietitian.

Jim was eating canned soups daily because preparation was quick and easy. The dietitian helped him understand labels on canned goods and boxes. He was amazed to learn that he was consuming more than half his daily quota of salt in just the soup.

Surveys conducted by the Food and Drug Administration show that nearly four out of five people look at the ingredients lists on labels. More than two out of three report looking at labels for substances they want to avoid for health reasons. If people continue to take an active interest in nutrition, it will be due to public confidence in the information they receive.

Fully 40 percent of the consumers say they doubt what they read on food labels. When food producers mislead customers through inaccurate claims about their products on labels, Americans have every right to throw up their hands in confusion and disgust.

Gail Levey, spokesperson for the American Dietetic Association, asserts, "For someone with chronic heart disease, hypertension or diabetes, the current manufacturer's labels can be downright dangerous."

For example, Stouffer's Lean Cuisine is boastfully advertised as containing "never more than a gram of sodium." But sodium is measured in smaller units than a gram, namely, milligrams (thousandth of a gram). Some of Stouffer's diet delights contain upward of half the amount of sodium permitted each day for the usual salt-restricted diet.

Deceit on labels has existed — if not grown — during the past decade. The federal government decided to take a nap when the FDA removed its long ban on health claims on food labels.

Dr. Louis Sullivan, secretary of health and human services, instructed the FDA to revamp the label rules. After hearings were conducted across the country, Congress passed and the president signed the Nutrition Labeling and Education Act of 1990 into law.

Dr. David Kessler recently became head of the FDA. He declared that consumers should be able to tell what they are eating by reading the labels.

Currently, many processed foods list the ingredients on the label in descending order of weight, not calorie value. This can be highly deceptive for the consumer when a nutrient such as fat is light in weight.

The FDA reports that only about half the dollar volume of food products regulated by the agency carry nutrition labeling (information useful in making healthy food choices). Nutrition labels are not required by law when a health claim is not made or the food is not fortified. Under current regulations, if the manufacturer displays nutrition information, FDA guidelines must be followed.

Nutrition information can be a powerful tool for educating the public about healthy and unhealthy foods.

The FDA is responding to the serious need for consumers — especially those on restricted diets for health reasons — to receive appropriate nutritional information.

The agency is in the process of proposing rules for health messages which will become mandatory Nov. 8.

As a result, four major adverse relationships between nutrients and health have been proposed to be required on the nutrition panel of labels:

- Fat and heart disease
- Fat and cancer
- Sodium and high blood pressure
- Calcium and osteoporosis

The present labeling system now appearing in stores has serious flaws. Recommendations from groups in the public interest are, however, reflected in the proposals being developed by the FDA. Some of these are:

1. Require nutrition labeling for all processed foods.
2. List amounts of cholesterol, saturated fat, total calories from fat, complex carbohydrates, sugar and fiber.
3. Use the new Reference Daily Intakes and Values (RDI/DRV), not the outdated U.S. Recommended Daily Allowances, to show percent of daily requirements of a nutrient.
4. Regulate serving size and units for reporting nutrients in food.
5. Provide definitions of descriptors such as "lite," "lean," "high," "low" and "reduced" as a claim for fat, sugar, calcium and fiber.
6. Set trigger points limiting amounts of saturated fat, sugar, salt or cholesterol if a claim and descriptor appear.

Briefly, food labels should be changed to contain information which has significant bearing on public health. Information on vitamins and protein is secondary to including amounts of fat and saturated fat, cholesterol, sodium, sugars and dietary fiber. It is critical that the list of ingredients report the kinds of fat as well as the total fat.

The same applies to reporting the total amount of sweeteners added to the products separate from the complex carbohydrates. Fats and sugars have ways of sneaking into processed foods to enhance taste.

Chivalry dead? Not in Trombly's Medieval Festival

It's not often that a student bows or curtsys before a teacher, but Todd Whitefleet received that rare honor Friday at Trombly Elementary School's Medieval Festival.

Whitefleet, a third grade teacher, was king of the realm. Sue Dempsey, a fifth grade teacher, was queen. Together, they presided over a day of medieval games, crafts, and revelry.

He and Dempsey came up with the idea for a school-wide medieval festival in December, said Whitefleet, who was decked out in a royal-purple robe and golden crown.

The festival featured lessons in reading, writing, language, music and other creative arts, including painting and paper-making.

In January, the school's third, fourth and fifth-grade classes began reading literature set in medieval times, Whitefleet said.

Third-graders read "The Reluctant Dragon." Fourth-graders read "The Whipping Boy" and "The Apple and the Arrow," and fifth-graders read "Max and Me and the Time Machine," Whitefleet said.

The younger grades had medieval stories read to them, he said.

"We read a book about 'The Apple and the Arrow,' fourth-grader Dan Grano said. "It was set in the country of Sweden, but it wasn't called Sweden back then. The people there were unhappy and wanted to get rid of the king, so they had a war on New Year's Day. William Tell won the war, and all of the little countries banded together and became the country that is now called Sweden."

He said he liked the book. Ezra Spence, also a fourth-grader, said he enjoyed the festival because "it's a half day and there's really no work. And I learned I like sword fighting."

Daniel Horstkotte, another fourth-grader, said he was pleased because he learned how to use juggling sticks.

Making juggling sticks was one of the crafts students could learn to do in Trombly's cafeteria on festival day. They consist of three sticks with weighted ends, and can be seen in Michael Jackson's new video, "Remember the Time."

To use them, a person holds a juggling stick in each hand and bats the third stick back and forth between the two.

Bill Wrobel, whose son Patrick is a first-grader at Trombly, taught students how to make and use juggling sticks. He also played a wooden flute.

"I've been involved in the Renaissance Festival (in Holly as a strolling entertainer) and in wassail feasts for several years," he said.

Like most of the teachers and students, Wrobel wore a Renaissance costume. However, his looked more authentic than most. He wore black boots, black tights, and a metallic coat called a "cote hardie." From its sleeves hung long black ribbons, called tipits. He also wore a black hood, a bib called a liripipe, and faux gem-covered belt.

"People in medieval times often spent most of their money on their belts. The amount of jewels on their belts indicated how wealthy they were," he said.

In addition to juggling sticks, students learned how to make paper and potpourri balls and create pomanders out of oranges.

"We're actually recycling paper, because we're using paper that was shredded in the office," said art teacher Bob Thies. "But it's the same method people would use to make paper out of roots."

At the end of the festival, each teacher presented two students to be knighted by King Whitefleet.

The students were selected on the basis of how chivalrous they were, according to the Trombly Code of Chivalry.

The code, which was written in calligraphy and placed in the school's showcase for all to see, said:

"Chivalry is a code which outlines a way of life for a person hoping to achieve knighthood. Chivalry is evident in playing fair.

"Chivalry is being gentle toward the weaker. Chivalry is being generous and understanding. Chivalrous people defend their honor and their word.

"They are mild, humble and kind. They are loyal to their Manor and superiors.

"A knight promises to be worthy, valiant and humble. A knight must learn to obey, so he will know how to command."

The following lords and ladies were knighted by King Whitefleet, and were to receive certificates at a later date:

Fifth-graders Billy Crawford, Tori Rumpf, Jeff Maxwell and Chris Cassidy; fourth-graders Jessica Brady, Joseph Genovesi, Amanda Brankovic and Angela Moustardas; third-graders Erika Dickson, Lauren Padilla, Robbie McCurdy and Chris Young; second-graders Brinna Jones, Erin Broucker, Katherine Braun and Ryan Haas; and first-graders Anne Osburn, Robbie Porter, Andrew Wrobel and Jack Hancock.

"This is the first time that we've had this, and the teachers and students are already talking about having a festival next year," said principal Jean Rusing. "It's an experience the children will never forget."

Donald R. Ford

Services were held Saturday, Feb. 1, at Bethesda-by-the-Sea Episcopal Church in Palm Beach for Donald R. Ford, 63, of Palm Beach, Fla. A former 5-year resident of Grosse Pointe Shores, he died Jan. 29, 1992, at his home.

Mr. Ford was the founder, former president and chief executive officer of Boyne Products Inc., a multi-state manufacturer of automotive electrical devices.

The company, which eventually became part of United Technologies Inc., was an innovator in the design and manufacture of automotive safety devices. It was the world's largest producer of turn signals, manufacturing almost all of those in use in the United States and selling a significant percentage worldwide through foreign licenses.

Mr. Ford invented the automotive hazard warning signal. He held several product patents and was involved in the design and construction of Boyne's factories.

He and his wife, Jeanne, owned Lancer Arabians Inc., one of the largest Arabian horse breeding companies in the United States. They imported purebred Egyptian Arabian horses, and their company bred many national champions.

Mr. Ford served as both officer and director of the Arabian Horse Registry of America for 14 years. He was also director of the World Arabian Horse Organization and a founding director of the Arabian Horse Trust.

In Michigan, Mr. Ford served as junior and senior warden of St. Michael's Episcopal Church and of the Cathedral Chapter in Detroit. In Florida, Mr. Ford operated Skyway Airlines, developed residential property and was active in the preservation of historical properties.

Active in Republican politics, Mr. Ford was one of Palm Beach County's two delegates to the last National Republican Convention in Dallas.

He was a board member of the Palm Beach County chapter of the American Red Cross and a former member of the Palm Beach Round Table. He contributed significantly to

Donald R. Ford

Palm Beach-area charities.

Mr. Ford is survived by his wife, Jeanne Jacques Ford; sons, Jacques Ford, D.V.M., of Ocala, Fla., and U.S. Associate Deputy Attorney General Rex J. Ford of Washington, D.C.; daughter, Laura Ford Petrash of Sherman, Texas; five grandchildren; and his brother, Arthur J. Ford of Lorain, Ohio.

Memorial contributions may be made to the Palm Beach chapter of the American Red Cross, 425 Fern Street, West Palm Beach, Fla. 33402. Interment was in White Chapel Cemetery in Troy.

Dr. James Edward Van Eck

Services were held Jan. 15 at the Chas Verheyden Inc. funeral home in Grosse Pointe Woods for Dr. James Edward Van Eck, 74, of Grosse Pointe Farms. He died Jan. 11, 1992, at Saratoga Community Hospital in Detroit.

Born in Muskegon, Dr. Van Eck received his bachelor's degree from Wayne State University and his medical degree from the Wayne State School of Medicine in 1943.

After an internship at Grace Hospital, Dr. Van Eck served as an Army physician and surgeon in Japan from 1945 to 1947.

He joined Saratoga's staff in 1947 and later served on the hospital's board of trustees and as assistant chief of staff. A general practitioner, he performed general surgery at the hospital until his retirement in 1983.

He also had a family practice for many years on Detroit's east side.

Dr. Van Eck's hobbies included antique cars and rebuilding and playing a 13 rank pipe organ.

He is survived by his wife, Cornelia J. (Van Apeldoorn) Van Eck; daughter, Carol Lynne Van Eck; son, James E. Van Eck Jr.; a grandson; sisters, Thelma Vernier and Joyce DeVries; and brothers, Gerald, Erwin, Maynard, Lester and Philip. He was preceded in death by his brother, Donald, and his parents, Maynard and Grace Van Eck.

Interment was in Cadillac Memorial Gardens East Cemetery in Clinton Township. Memorial contributions may be made to Back to God Hour, 6555 W. College Drive, Palos Heights, Ill. 60463-9983; or the American Heart Association of Michigan, 16310 W. 12 Mile Road, Southfield, Mich. 48076.

Ben J. McLachlan

A memorial service was held Jan. 27 at the Warren Assembly of God Church for Ben J. McLachlan of Grosse Pointe City. He died Jan. 25, 1992, at Bon Secours Hospital in Grosse Pointe City.

Mr. McLachlan was vice president of Michigan Northern Electrotype Co. and served in New Guinea and the Philip-ines as a technical sergeant in the Air Force during World War II.

He is survived by his wife, Dorothy; daughters, Barbara Woolley of St. Clair Shores and Sandra Slavik of Castle Rock, Colo.; son, Charles of Grosse Pointe Woods; sisters, Margaret Smothers of Grosse Pointe Woods and Rene Lee of Ivoryton, Conn.; and five grandchildren.

Arrangements were handled by the A.H. Peters Funeral Home in Grosse Pointe Woods. Memorial contributions may be made to the Michigan Cancer Foundation.

Alica A. (DeDona) Ardito

Services were held Jan. 30 at St. Clare of Montefalco Church in Grosse Pointe Park for Alice A. (DeDona) Ardito, 86, of Grosse Pointe Farms. She died Jan. 28, 1992, at St. John-Bon Secours Senior Community Center in Detroit.

Born in Detroit, Mrs. Ardito was a homemaker.

She is survived by her daughters, Norma Burnham, Frances Fredal and Dorothy Bloomhuff; 16 grandchildren; eight great-grandchildren; sisters, Lina Tremonti and Silvia Sala; and brother, Tito DeDona.

Arrangements were handled by the Chas Verheyden Inc. funeral home in Grosse Pointe Park. Interment was in Mount Olivet Cemetery in Detroit.

Memorial contributions may be made to Bon Secours Hospital in Grosse Pointe City.

Edna (Kelso) Strale

Services were held Monday, Feb. 3, at the A.H. Peters Funeral Home in Grosse Pointe Woods for Edna (Kelso) Strale, 81, of Grosse Pointe Woods. She died of pneumonia on Jan. 31, 1992, at Henry Ford Continuing Care Center-Belmont in Harper Woods.

Mrs. Strale was a homemaker and a volunteer. She was a member of St. Michael's Episcopal Church in Grosse Pointe Woods and was a former member of its auxiliary.

She is survived by her husband, Homer; daughter, Nancy Haskew of Orlando, Fla.; three grandchildren; two great-grandchildren; sister, Lenore Dueweke; and brother, Dr. Richard Kelso. She was preceded in death by her son, Robert.

Interment was in Roseland Park Cemetery in Berkley.

To better serve you, we've built on four new additions to our Emergency Room.

An Experienced Emergency Team.

Having a Henry Ford Health System physician team in the Cottage Emergency Room brings years of valuable critical care experience to the comfortable and familiar surroundings of your own neighborhood hospital. These physicians all are specially trained or board certified in Emergency Medicine.

The Team That Works For You.

When you or someone close to you needs Emergency care, it is comforting to know that our team of physicians, emergency care nurses and technologists, is ready to respond at any time, day or night.

Their advanced emergency and critical care expertise is supported and enhanced by admitting personnel and patient advocates who put the needs and concerns of the patient and family first — by answering questions and keeping you informed during those difficult times.

Matching The Team With The Technology.

In the coming year, Cottage Hospital will continue to improve its Emergency service to the community by enhancing its facility and expanding its capabilities while treating each patient with the privacy and dignity you should expect from your neighborhood hospital.

During the construction, access to the Emergency Room will be made easier than ever, with specially designated parking just outside our doors on Kercheval Avenue.

The Right Care When You Need It.

If further care is needed, the full resources of Cottage Hospital and Henry Ford Health System are available to you.

For referral to a Cottage Hospital physician, call 881-1800.

Library plans read aloud

An old-fashioned weekly read aloud series at the Grosse Pointe Central Library will offer a cozy escape from cold winter afternoons for young people in fourth grade and up.

Helen Gregory, head of youth services, will read the first installment of Salmon Rushdie's novel, "Haroun and the Sea of Stories," on Wednesday, Feb. 12, at 4 p.m. in the exhibition room. Each Wednesday for the next nine weeks, Gregory will read an hour-long segment of the novel.

Rushdie, who is currently in exile from his native Iran, wrote "Haroun and the Sea of Stories" for his young son while the family was in hiding from the regime of Iran's Ayatollah Khomeini.

The book is autobiographical at the outset with Haroun as a young boy growing up in the Sad City. He and his family are the only happy people living there. Because they are happy, his mother sings to him and his father tells him fantastic stories.

Helen Gregory, head of youth services for the Grosse Pointe Public Libraries, will exchange her guitar for a copy of Salmon Rushdie's novel, "Haroun and the Sea of Stories," for a 10-week read aloud series.

One day after listening to the complaints of an unhappy neighbor, his mother stops singing and soon after, leaves. As she departs, she asks Haroun's father, "What good are your stories?" Haroun becomes angry with the situation and echoes his mother's question, "What good are your stories?"

At this point, the story ceases to parallel the lives of the Rushdie family and takes one fantastic turn after another as Haroun experiences a series of exotic adventures reminiscent of the Arabian Nights tales.

Each week listeners will be brought up to date on the story, treated to another exciting installment and left with a "cliff hanger" ending.

No reservations are necessary. For more information, call Helen Gregory at 343-2082.

Kiska to talk about movers, shakers

Detroit News columnist Tim Kiska, author of "Detroit's Power and Personalities," will speak about his book and his experiences rubbing shoulders with Detroit's movers and shakers on Wednesday, Feb. 12, at 7:30 p.m. in Cleminson Hall at Grosse Pointe South High School.

Kiska is the second of four local authors to appear in a new adult program series Author! Author! sponsored by the Friends of the Grosse Pointe Public Library and other community groups.

Kiska has spent more than 20 years as a local journalist, gathering information and anecdotes about the people who make Detroit tick. His appearance is co-sponsored by the Grosse Pointe War Memorial. A book-signing will follow the program. Copies of "Detroit's Powers and Personalities" may be purchased at the book-signing.

All four Author! Author! programs will be held in Cleminson Hall, the original library of Grosse Pointe South High School. The Grosse Pointe Historical Society will co-sponsor Joe Grimm, author of "Michigan Memories," on March 4, and the Neighborhood Club will co-sponsor fitness writer Bill Laitner, author of "The Detroit Diet," May 21.

Woods fills commission posts

By Donna Walker
Staff Writer

Once again, Grosse Pointe Woods residents have demonstrated their commitment to the city by agreeing to serve on its commissions.

On Jan. 6, the city council appointed Jane Bodeau to fill a vacancy on the Senior Citizens Commission, and reappointed 26 residents to that and other commissions. Bodeau will serve a two-year term.

Reappointed to the Beautification Commission were Barbara Hayes, Linda Ingalls, Mary Mitts and Eric Steiner. Their terms expire Jan. 1, 1995.

Allan Adams was reappointed to the Community Development Block Grant Citizens' Advisory Commission, and John Hammel will continue serving on the Historical Commission. Their terms also expire Jan. 1, 1995.

Thomas Sullivan was reappointed to the Local Officer's Compensation Commission. His term on the commission will expire Jan. 1, 1997.

The Senior Citizens Commission retained the following members: Janet Davidson, Susan Ellison and Thomas Vaughn, whose terms will expire Jan. 1, 1995; and Brian Howe, Magdalen Jocque, Irene Sutton and Betty Rusnach, whose terms will expire Jan. 1, 1993.

Mark Melvin will continue to serve on the Board of Review until 1995.

Reappointed to the Citizens Recreation Commission were Loretta Altobelli, John Boni and Dorothy Savage, who will serve until Jan. 1, 1995.

The Community Tree Commission retained Barbara Hayes, Sandra Kedich and Neena Roumell. Their terms will expire Jan. 1, 1995.

Daniel Lenahan will serve on the Insurance Commission, George Koueiter Jr. will work on the Parking Commission, and Allen Dickinson, Robert Frederick and Philip Patanis will remain on the Planning Commission until Jan. 1, 1995.

Margaret Potter, one of the audience members, asked Mayor Robert E. Novitke if all the commission members live in Grosse Pointe Woods.

"Almost all of them do," Novitke replied. He said that to his knowledge, all of the people who were up for appointment or reappointment that night live in the Woods. However, he said some commission members whose terms had not yet expired were non-residents.

"Why is that," Potter asked. "I thought the purpose of these commissions was to get residents involved in city government."

The mayor said the purpose of the commissions is to help the council make informed decisions about what is happening in the community and that candidates are chosen on the basis of their expertise and dedication. There is no rule stating that commission members must live in the city, he said.

Councilwoman Jean Rice said there are several non-residents on the Senior Citizens Commission.

"They represent large groups of seniors," she said, such as Services for Older Citizens, whose membership is not confined to the Woods.

The Senior Citizens Commission has had non-residents since its formation five years ago, she said, "and we think it has worked very well."

The city administrator's office later said that Senior Citizens Commission member Brian Howe of Grosse Pointe City is the only person who was reappointed who does reside in Grosse Pointe Woods, and that there are three other commission members who do not live in the Woods.

Caregiving talk planned

"Caring for Aging Relatives" will be the topic of a program at St. Clare of Montefalco Church in Grosse Pointe Park on Wednesday, Feb. 12.

Social workers Sharon Klein of ABC Home Health Care and Hazel Maxwell of A Friend's House Adult Day Care Center, will address the physical, emotional and financial stress of caregiving, changing family dynamics and community resources available to assist caregiving efforts.

Sponsored by the St. Clare Adult Continuing Education Committee, the program will be held in the faculty lounge of St. Clare School, from 7:30 to 9 p.m. The cost is $3.

St. Clare of Montefalco Church is located on Mack at Whittier in Grosse Pointe Park.

Trade you: Pointer's organization helps firms think Europe

By Ronald J. Bernas
Staff Writer

It started out as a way to take part in one of the world's most glamorous sports, but as it developed, it became a way to make U.S. goods more available in the world market.

Four years ago Grosse Pointe resident Robin Lepard read that the Michigan Department of Travel was on a mission to encourage more tourists to vacation in the state. Lepard, who travels a lot and is, she says, a project person, took it upon herself to try to help.

She started by attempting to persuade Michigan-based companies to sponsor a car in the General Motors Euro Series, a support race for the Formula I. There isn't a Michigan, or even a United States, entry in the series which, in Europe, is populated by princes and nobility.

"Over there it's a sport for kings," Lepard said. "It has a television audience of 100 million worldwide and there's no United States entry. I thought wouldn't it be great if we could get a car in the series and advertise travel in Michigan. It would be great publicity, especially because it would be the first American car in the series."

Convinced that she had a good idea, she wrote to Gov.

John Engler and Sen. Donald Riegle, detailing her plan. She received letters of support from both.

Then she sent a letter to former U.S. Secretary of Commerce Robert A. Mosbacher, who wrote back and said that she was narrowing her focus too much. He encouraged her to promote American goods and services in general.

"As a steadfast proponent of exporting U.S. products and services, I applaud your innovative efforts. We wish you every success in your initiative to encourage a global business attitude," Mosbacher wrote.

Encouraged by Mosbacher's support, Lepard founded American Products and Services Worldwide Inc., a non-profit organization which encourages American businesses to expand their markets overseas by familiarizing themselves with the international marketplace.

She called executives in Michigan and New York asking for donations. The response was overwhelming.

"Everyone said, 'Sure I'll support it. How much do you need?'" Lepard said. "They think the whole idea's terrific."

The first official event American Products will host is a May 10 black tie fundraiser in Washington, D.C. The second is a seminar in Barcelona, Spain, in September and October.

"We'll have workshops showing businesses how to get involved in the European market," she said. "They're confused and frightened about selling to Europe. We're going to be a network that members of APSW can come to for information on how to expand into Europe."

The seminar will include talks by international business leaders and worldwide industrial giants on how a company can best expand its business overseas.

It's not cheap to join the organization. Membership costs $5,000 which includes advertising of the company name and financing for the seminar, among other perks.

And Lepard urges people to get in on the ground floor.

"APSW is going to be very big by the end of 1992 — even by next summer, people are going to know who we are," she said.

Lepard may be right. Although she has no background in business, she says she's a born organizer, as witnessed by the fact that she formed APSW, solicited donations, scheduled a seminar and lined up speakers in just six weeks.

She hasn't abandoned the idea of getting a car in the Euroseries — she's still trying to get Michigan to support an entry — but that goal has become incidental to APSW.

Ironically, the only organization or business that hasn't sent even a letter of support back to Lepard is the agency that prompted her to start APSW — the Michigan Department of Travel.

For more information on American Products and Services Worldwide, write P.O. Box 36121, Grosse Pointe, 48236.

Meathe retires

Smith, Hinchman & Grylls Associates, Inc., the nation's oldest architectural, engineering, and planning firm, has announced the retirement of its long-time chief executive officer and the election of a successor.

Philip J. Meathe, FAIA, of Grosse Pointe, who joined the firm in 1969 and became chief executive officer in 1971 and chairman in 1974, retired Jan. 24. He will be succeeded as CEO by Arnold Mikon, AIA, who also joined the firm in 1969 and became chief operating officer in 1989. He was elected president in 1990, a title he will retain.

During Meathe's 21 years at the helm, the firm pioneered a construction management system that substantially reduces the time and cost of designing and building major projects.

The company also grew from its Detroit base to work around the world from additional offices in Washington, Phoenix, Toronto, Ann Arbor, Chicago and Dallas. It specializes in designing industrial complexes, medical facilities and research, office and educational buildings.

Meathe, a graduate of the University of Michigan, has been honored during his career by the AIA and its Detroit chapter, the Michigan Society of Architects, the Engineering Society of Detroit, University of Michigan, Greater Detroit Chamber of Commerce, Boy Scouts of America, United Foundation and University of Detroit.

T. Neal Combs, former chief executive officer of Fruehauf Corp., joined the law firm of Leonard Marsh Hurt Terry & Blinn. Combs, of Grosse Pointe Farms, will conduct his practice in the Dallas, Texas and Washington, D.C., offices of the firm with a particular focus on representing companies and industry groups in corporate and federal administrative law matters.

Vision Service Plan of Columbus recently appointed Detroit advertising executive Frank Couzens III to its board of trustees. Couzens, of Grosse Pointe Farms, has several years of advertising and marketing experience and is responsible for the national Volkswagen account at DDB Needham.

Couzens

Gov. John Engler appointed Frank P. McBride Jr. of Grosse Pointe Shores to a three-year term as commissioner to the Michigan Department of Natural Resources Waterways Division. McBride served approximately four years on the commission in the early 1980s. McBride is president of Frank P. McBride Jr. Inc., an independent insurance agency in St. Clair Shores. He is also heard regularly on WJR Radio reporting on boating and other outdoor events. The Waterways Commission is responsible for the acquisition, design, construction and operation of Michigan's 74 harbors of refuge and the approximately 800 public access sites throughout the state.

Former Grosse Pointer Phoebe Wall Howard has become a political reporter at The Des Moines Register. She joined the staff in early December to cover the legislature and the presidential campaign. Howard previously worked as a state reporter at the Arkansas Gazette in Little Rock. She received her bachelor of journalism degree from the University of Missouri-Columbia in 1988.

Price Waterhouse recently appointed Richard O. Connell to the advisory board of Price Waterhouse Investment Advisers. Connell, who is a tax partner with the Detroit office, will continue to work with local clients and to serve as regional managing partner of Price Waterhouse Personal Financial Services units in Detroit and the Great Lakes region.

Local chamber to spotlight careers

The Metro East Chamber of Commerce, through its community relations committee, will sponsor "Spotlight on Careers," a career night on Wednesday, Feb. 12, from 6 to 9 p.m. at Fraser High School, Garfield, south of 15 Mile.

The event is designed for middle school, junior high school and senior high school students in the chamber's ninety-city service area, however, students from other communities are welcome to attend.

Parents are encouraged to attend with the students, and teachers are also welcome. It is an opportunity for middle and junior high school students to study the various career opportunities and make decisions on study plans for high school and gives high school students information that they need on making career decisions and college plans.

There will be a wide variety of participants from business and industry, the professions, service careers, the military, law enforcement, and representatives from the various colleges and universities.

For more information, call the chamber office at 777-2441.

Hot rods and cars have always been part — if not all — of Forton's life, starting when he attended Pierce school.

"Down the street was Lee's Hot Rod Shop and in the window they had Hot Rod magazine," Forton said. "They didn't sell it on the newsstands so I'd go there to get it. It infected me for the rest of my life."

His first car? A 1930 Ford coupe he bought for $35 and then spent more than $700 to renovate.

"You couldn't do that car today for $7,000," he said. He chopped the top, removed the fenders and re-set the body lower on the frame, all in the family garage on the grounds of the Country Club of Detroit.

It's still on the road today, he said, but some car enthusiasts down the line replaced the fenders and raised the body.

But Forton wasn't upset. "Oh, we recycle these cars forever," he said.

It's his 1940 Ford convertible — the car he drove without a windshield for a while and only put a top on so he could drive it in the winter and which he dismantled four other cars to rebuild — that he wants back. He paid $75 for it when he first bought it.

"I know where it is," he said. "And I know it's the one I did because of the way I made the top."

He graduated from Grosse Pointe High School — only because he did so well in shop classes, he said.

"I'm not a good paper person," he said. "I'm good with my hands."

In 1954, while he was still in high school, he formed The Tappet Tickers of Grosse Pointe, a hot rod club that at one time boasted 40 members. The group still exists today, under the name the Competition Specialists Auto Club, and it still has five of its original members. Forton has his group jacket, but it no longer fits his 56-year-old frame.

"Have you ever seen the movie 'American Graffiti'?" he asked. "All the members from my club could have stepped into the parts in that movie."

They would drag race on Eight Mile, near the farmland that is now Eastland Mall.

"It wasn't anything dangerous," he said. "We wouldn't go very far, we'd max out at 60 or 70 miles an hour then slow down. That was all that was needed. None of my friends did drugs, very few drank. What we were into was the cars."

Dick Forton has loved hot rods since he was a child and saw Hot Rod magazine in the window of Lee's Hot Rod Shop in Grosse Pointe Park. Next weekend, he is the chair of the 1992 Autorama at Cobo Center.

And the cruising down Woodward, over by Ted's Drive-in movie theater. And of course they'd get ticketed. Generally for speeding or excessive noise.

"It got to the point that we had to build a drag strip," he said.

So several area car clubs got together and formed the Michigan Hot Rod Association for the express purpose of building a drag strip to get the cars off the streets.

Autorama, first held in the fieldhouse at the University of Detroit, was designed to raise money to help build the drag strip. As things turned out, Autorama outlived the strip.

Much to Forton's delight, the first Autorama was the subject of a feature article in Hot Rod magazine.

He's done just about everything at the Autoramas. He's taken tickets, squeegeed water away after the cars were washed, straightened ropes, judged cars and chaired the event several times. It's a labor of love. Autorama was for many years the largest car show in the world — ask Guinness, it was in his book of records. And there are five times as many cars as at the North American Auto Show.

The hot rod association purchased a mile of land in New Baltimore and built a quarter-mile track. Forton remembers stealing the gravel off the side of the road to make the cement. Anyone who helped build it got free passes.

It was completed in late 1956, but because of the weather it wasn't used until the spring of 1957. It was a huge success.

"We charged $3 to run the car," he said. "That was for all day; we'd have competitions and eliminations and trophies for the winners. We had cars lined up down the road for miles."

Because of poor legal advice, the strip eventually closed, after being subsidized by several Autoramas. But it's still there and Forton thinks it could still be used.

In addition to the Autorama, the MHRA helps support the hot rod circuit. About 20 years ago the group purchased a trailer and fitted it with every type of welding equipment the members could think of. They take the trailer to national hot rod events and repair cars, free of charge.

"We have everyone working on that trailer," he said. "And they're not all mechanics, either. We have businessmen and anyone else who's good with their hands. We're all enthusiasts."

Forton has four children, one of whom has Forton's dream job — designing cars.

But Forton will always be designing and re-designing his own cars — as evidenced by the 1926 Ford in his garage. He's got all the pieces together; now he's just tinkering. And he will be for a long time.

House burgled

A home in the 600 block of North Oxford in Grosse Pointe Woods was burglarized Sunday, Feb. 2, while the residents slept.

The thief got into the home sometime between 2 a.m. and 7 a.m. by cutting a rear porch screen and pushing open the window. Once inside, the intruder pried open a closet door and took a large quantity of antique silver pieces and monogrammed flatware. The burglar also took a fifth of scotch.

Fearlessly speaking: Toastmasters Club helps people communicate on and off the cuff

By Margie Reins Smith
Feature Editor

Sybil Jacques of Grosse Pointe Shores remembers her first bout of stage fright. She was 19 years old.

"The minister at my church called on me to say the Lord's Prayer," she said. "I was so nervous I forgot it. I'm basically a shy person."

Shy or not, speaking in front of a group — whether it's 10 people or 100 or 500 — is almost certain to create a high degree of anxiety in most of us. Neville Pack of Grosse Pointe Woods said that polls indicate public speaking is near the top of the list of most of our greatest fears. Pack is executive director of the Automotive Market Council for the Society of Plastics industry. He's also chairman of the Automotive Plastics Committee. He makes presentations and speaks to small groups of people every day and he speaks to an audience of from 100 to 200 people several times a year.

Not long ago, Pack was preparing to speak at a press conference. He had already placed his notes on a lower shelf of the podium. Unfortunately, someone put a glass of water beside the notes, and he knocked it over.

"The water dribbled on my shoes throughout the press conference," he said. "But I kept on, as if nothing was happening."

Only the people on the dais observed the widening puddle at Pack's feet.

He credits his composure to skills he learned and practiced in the Toastmasters Club. He's been a member for about 10 years.

"Toastmasters can help almost everybody," Pack said. "It can help the very shy person and the person who is blessed with public speaking skills but wants to enhance and increase those skills."

Katherine Morrin is the new president of the Grosse Pointe chapter of Toastmasters. She's been a member for seven years.

"I always wanted to be a speaker," she said. Morrin gives motivational speeches to a variety of groups. She spoke to a diabetic support group recently about nurturing themselves. She spoke to the Older Women's League on touching.

She conducted a seminar for the American Business Women's Association about the problems women encounter in the marketplace.

Morrin said most Toastmasters have specific reasons for joining the club.

"Some people are scared to death," she said. "It might take a year before they give their first icebreaker speech. Others join in order to polish their speaking skills, then they move on. Others stay for many years. Still others achieve their goals, leave, then return later. And of course we have a long-term corps of regulars."

Jacques said many Toastmasters join the group with a specific goal in mind.

"They are career people who are in sales and they need to learn how to make presentations. They get the confidence they need, then move on," she said.

Jacques has been a member of the club for two years. She gave her 10th speech at a recent meeting, a 10-minute prepared talk titled "Great Lakes Diversion," complete with an attention-getting opening statement, visual aids, quotes, well-researched facts and figures, appropriate gestures, good eye contact and a well-modulated, yet assertive, authoritative tone of voice.

Another Toastmaster was appointed to provide a constructive evaluation of Jacques' speech. A second member kept track of the time she talked (four minutes too long) and still another Toastmaster was assigned the task of counting the times Jacques said "ah" (none).

"I'm from the old school," Jacques said, "when women stayed home, raised kids and didn't go out into the business world. When I started to get active in the community I was asked to be on some boards. I was also asked to speak."

"After being on the back burner so long, I experienced stage fright."

Jacques said her first speech was before a group of 200 professional people.

"I did it," she said, with a smile of accomplishment.

"The only thing I forgot — I should have had a glass of water nearby. My mouth was so dry."

Toastmasters International is a non-profit, non-partisan, non-sectarian educational organization of Toastmasters clubs throughout the world. Local Toastmasters clubs provide opportunities to develop skill in listening, thinking, speaking and leading, by giving members a chance to participate in a series of oral communication projects, constructive evaluations and leadership experiences.

The group also presents seminars for the public on such topics as parliamentary procedure and speechcraft.

The Grosse Pointe Toastmasters Club meets at 7:30 p.m. on the second and fourth Mondays in the library at Brownell Middle School. There are about 30 members, Morrin said, and each meeting draws about a dozen people. Dues are $40 a year and include textbooks.

All clubs conduct their meetings within the guidelines prescribed by Toastmasters International and each meeting has a written agenda and includes a variety of opportunities for club members to speak.

Some tasks are short and simple, such as leading the Symphony Women's Association plans fashion show benefit

The Grosse Pointe Symphony Women's Association will hold a luncheon and fashion show on Thursday, Feb. 20, at the Lochmoor Club. A social hour will begin at 11:30 a.m.; lunch will be served at noon.

Marilyn Coticchio is chairman of the fundraiser. Nancy Caputo is in charge of reservations and seating and Ninette Tocco is in charge of table decorations, which she says will be spring flowers in shades of pink, green and yellow.

Other members of the committee are Dorothea Vermeulen, prizes; Catherine Tocco, favors; Louise Lee, mailing; and Ida Mae Massnick, publicity.

Models will include Mado Lie, Olga Turney, Louise Lee, Nancy Milewski, Molly Flinterman, Elsa Schumacher, June Hosbein, Johanna Gilbert, De Shaheen and Sylvia Rutkowski.

Audrey Jennings will provide music for the fashion show.

For reservations, call 885-4846 or 884-5515.

Tribute: An evening of dinner, dancing and a silent auction, called a Tribute to the Michigan Cancer Foundation, will be held on Friday, Feb. 7, at Penna's of Sterling Heights.

Dinner will include beef tenderloin and cherries jubilee; dancing will be to the music of Full House; and the auction will include sports equipment, jewelry, and gourmet dinners.

Tickets are $60. Proceeds will go to services for cancer patients in eastern Wayne and Macomb counties.

Call 294-4430 for more information.

They've got art: The 501-member volunteer committee of the Founders Society Detroit Institute of Arts is in its 30th year. Last year, volunteers gave 55,346 hours of service.

'Preludes East' begins third decade of musicales

The Volunteer Council of the Detroit Symphony Orchestra Hall will present three luncheon musicales, "Preludes East," at 12:15 p.m. at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial on Friday, Feb. 28; Friday, April 3; and Friday, May 8.

"Preludes" is a series of mid-day concerts designed to promote and present the musicians of the Detroit Symphony Orchestra in an intimate concert atmosphere.

The musicales, which are open to the public, help promote community awareness of the DSO; encourage attendance at symphony concerts; afford an acquaintance with the performer and his instrument; and provide an ideal way in which to widen one's knowledge of music literature.

The Detroit Woodwind Quintet opens the series on Feb. 28, with Paul Ganson, bassoon; Shelley Heron, oboe; Jeffery Zook, flute; Laurence Liberson, clarinet; and Corbin Wagner, French horn.

On April 3, Stephen Edwards, double bass, will be accompanied by Donna Edwards, piano; Deborah Edwards, violin; Linton Bodwin, bass; Marshall Hutchinson, bass; and Craig Rifel, bass.

The season closes May 8, with Grosse Pointer Marcy Chanteaux, cello, and members of the DSO cello section.

Heading this popular series, now in its 21st year, is general chairman Mary Baynert. Volunteer Council members on the committee include: Nancy Caputo, Marie Carpenter, Audrey France, Ann Lawson, Lenore Marshall, Ida Mae Massnick, Marilyn Schneider, Ann Simpson, Mahie Skaff and Dorothea Vermeulen.

Each performance includes a luncheon at 12:15 p.m., followed by the concert. The cost for the entire series is $40. Individual tickets may be purchased for $17.50; concert-only tickets are $5.

Worship

By the Rev. Walter A. Schmidt
First English Lutheran Church

Those of us who use the three-year lectionary series of Bible reading at worship have, over the past two weeks, found ourselves first of all at the synagogue in Nazareth, as Jesus delivers his first sermon before his hometown congregation, and secondly at the temple in Jerusalem, as we celebrated the Presentation of our Lord.

Now each of those events in and of themselves are very important, but I would like to suggest a common thread that we see in both these lessons and, for that matter, throughout the Scriptures. That common thread is the importance and centrality of worship for the child of God.

In Nazareth we are told that Jesus went to the synagogue on the sabbath day, as was his custom. (Luke 4:16) Plus, in the story of the Presentation at Jerusalem we are told, "Guided by the Spirit, Simeon came into the temple," (Luke 2:27) and "Anna never left the temple but worshipped there with fasting and prayer night and day." (Luke 2:37)

In reality, the entirety of Scripture focuses attention upon worship. From creation, with its goal of the hallowing of the Sabbath, to the instruction for the building of the tabernacle, to Solomon's temple, to the rebuilding of the temple after the exile, to the rise of the synagogue, to the "house" churches in the book of Acts, one cannot miss the importance of the necessity of regular worship.

Why is worship stressed so much? Why is it so important?

The answer is that worship is that unique communion between God and us, his people. Worship is where God gives to us his love, his care, his grace, his sacraments, his saving word. Worship is where we give to God the honor, the glory, the thanks and the praise.

Worship is our service to God. The word liturgy literally means "the work of the people." Worship is where we can truly show our love to God — in fact, the only way in which we can expressly show our love to God.

When we reach out that hand of love and care to one another, that certainly is God-pleasing and is an important part of what it means to be a child of God. But that is the second great commandment, i.e. that we are to love our neighbor as ourself.

The way we fulfill that first great commandment, i.e. that we are to "love God with our whole heart, soul, mind and strength," is through worship and devotion.

In fact, the Bible suggests that love for one another flows first of all from God's love for us and secondly from our love to God. Without God's love for us and our response of love to him, it is like trying to grow fruit on a branch that has broken off from the main vine.

The Northeast Guidance Center is sponsoring its fourth annual art contest for youngsters 14 and under. The theme is "I Like Me."

In its search for colorful drawings which show what it's like when children feel good about themselves, the center is offering cash prizes to the winners — 25 silver dollars for first place; 15 silver dollars for second place; and 10 silver dollars for third place.

In addition, the first-place winner's art will be used on local billboards in the fall of 1992.

Children should submit a drawing on 8 1/2 by 11-inch paper, using three bright colors plus black. They should show what it's like when they feel good about themselves and should include the words "I Like Me" in the drawing.

On the back of the drawing, print the child's name, age, address, phone number, school and grade and the parent or guardian's name.

Send by Friday, Feb. 21, to Art Contest, Northeast Guidance Center, 13340 E. Warren, Detroit, 48215.

Northeast Guidance Center is a community mental health agency serving people in north-east Detroit, Harper Woods and the Grosse Pointes with programs for children, adolescents and adults. Consultation, education and prevention services are also provided. The guidance center is supported through fees for service, charitable donations, a contract with the Detroit-Wayne County Community Mental Health Board and other grants and contracts. Fees are based on the clients' ability to pay.

Caregiver support group to meet

A Helping Hand, a free monthly support group for individuals caring for older relatives at home, will meet on Tuesday, Feb. 11, from 7 to 9 p.m. at A Friend's House Adult Day Care Center in Warren, 28111 Imperial Drive, one block east of Hoover and one block south of 12 Mile. Sharon Klein of ABC Home Health Care will discuss "Caring for In-laws."

A Helping Hand is a service of A Friend's House and provides an opportunity for caregivers to share common problems and helpful information about caring for frail elderly or infirm family members at home.

For information, call 751-6260.

Safety for children who are home alone

"Home Alone," an evening workshop for parents concerned about the safety and comfort of their children when they are home alone, will be held Tuesday, Feb. 11, from 6:30 to 9 p.m. at the Warren office of Catholic Services of Macomb, 12434 Twelve Mile.

Tracey Chartier will share tips about activities, safety and emergency resources. The fee is $25 a couple. For information, call 558-7551.

Patient advocate law to be explained

Diane Fenske, St. John Hospital's director of social work and discharge planning, and Sarah Thompson, staff attorney, will discuss the new act that allows Michigan residents over 18 to appoint a patient advocate to make medical treatment decisions for them if they become too ill to make decisions for themselves.

The free program is sponsored by St. John Hospital and Medical Center. To register, call 1-800-237-5646 weekdays from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Baptist church plans dinner for men, boys

The Grosse Pointe Baptist Church will hold its annual Men and Boy's Buck Dinner on Friday, Feb. 21, at 6:30 p.m. at the church. The dinner features venison furnished by the church's successful hunters.

The Sojourners, a men's quartet, will provide a special challenging and exciting message.

Tickets are $6.50 for men; $3.50 for boys. Reservations may be made by calling the church office at 881-3343.

Grosse Pointe Baptist Church is located at 21336 Mack, in Grosse Pointe Woods.

Program on asthma

A three-week program designed to help asthmatic children from 7 to 13 and their parents will be offered beginning Thursday, Feb. 6, at 7 p.m. at St. John Hospital and Medical Center, 22101 Moross at Mack, one mile east of I-94.

Cost of the series is $25 and class size is limited. To register, call 1-800-237-5646 weekdays from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Presbyterian Women hold program on icons

Presbyterian Women will hold its annual Agape Breakfast on Tuesday, Feb. 18, beginning at 9:30 a.m. in the Fellowship Hall of Grosse Pointe Memorial Church.

The Rev. V. Bruce Rigdon, pastor of Memorial Church, will present a discussion on religious icons — their theology, how they are painted and how they are used in the life of Eastern Orthodox Christians.

A $2 donation is suggested. For reservations, call the church office at 882-5330.

Help for alcohol, substance abusers

The following is a list of weekly free support groups at The Oxford Institute, an alcohol and substance abuse rehabilitation center located at 825 W. Drahn Road in Oxford. It is affiliated with Detroit's St. John Hospital and Medical Center.

Camp Fire needs volunteers to work with kids

Camp Fire needs volunteer leaders to share experiences and skills with children in small group situations. Camp Fire boys and girls, from kindergarten through high school, are active, alert young people involved in a variety of non-competitive activities including self-reliance courses, camping, community service and crafts.

Corey Van Fleet, Camp Fire executive director, explains: "We train all Camp Fire leaders, assisting them to become more comfortable leading a group of children. Camp Fire provides the skills training necessary for leaders to assist youth in coping with the world. Volunteers are needed who want to enrich their own lives by working with youth."

Camp Fire Detroit area council serves young people and their families in Wayne, Oakland, Macomb and Livingston counties. Volunteers are needed from throughout southeastern Michigan.

For further information about becoming a Camp Fire volunteer, call Van Fleet at 559-5840. Camp Fire Detroit Area Council is a United Way Agency.

Maybe another way of looking at this issue of the centrality and importance of worship is to ask ourselves whether we can really maintain a signification relationship with someone whom we only see on Christmas and Easter? Think about it.

Lastly, in our hectic, fast-paced world, maybe those who do not have time for worship need it most of all. Is there not something special about being slowed down for an hour so that God can fill us with his love and peace, his strength, and if you worship regularly, you know what I mean. If not, why not give it a try? You have nothing to lose except an hour — and God gives you 168 of those every week. You have much to gain.

HAVE A PLEASANT TRY AT PERFECTION
BRIDGE BY WOODY BOYD ♠♥♦♣

One of the first misconceptions a novice must correct is that luck is a common commodity that is scattered indiscriminately among all players. Actually it tends to be concentrated among those who have done their homework, the better players and the best.

How often have you witnessed the envious which is usually the untrained say, "Oh, she was just lucky!" Chances are it wasn't luck at all. Just a good player applying a probability percentage to a problem. Let's today dispel with the misgiving that "playing percentages" are a complex mathematical calculation that only a genius can put successfully to work. The application of "playing percentages" is another way of saying that where there are two ways to do something, it is better to select the way which offers you the best chance. Percentages or odds should be employed only when there are no other better clues as to the distribution of cards. For instance, if you and your dummy hold seven cards in a given suit, the table of probabilities tells us that the six missing will divide as follows: (4-2) 48%, (3-3) 36%, (5-1) 15%, (6-0) 1%; of the time. If your left hand opponent has over-called in that suit (unless his bid is artificial) you can be sure that the above probability has no value for he is a heavy favorite to hold at least five and maybe all six of the missing cards.

Few bridge players memorize the total table of probabilities because only a dedicated player is so motivated. Yet it is important to have some understanding. For what it is worth here follows the more common.

2 Known Hands	2 Hidden Hands	Division of Missing	%
9 cards	4 cards	3-1	50
		2-2	41
		4-0	9
8 cards	5 cards	3-2	68
		4-1	28
		5-0	4
7 cards	6 cards	4-2	48
		3-3	36
		5-1	15
6 cards	7 cards	6-0	1
		4-3	62
		5-2	31
		7-0	Less than 1

Much easier to just remember this. An even number of missing cards tends to break unevenly and an odd number tends to break evenly and the total table supports this certainty.

Here is an excellent hand I kibitzed last fall that displays the important value of "playing percentages."

Many would have bid two no trump on North's second call, but this has a flaw with no diamond stopper. I like two clubs, but only if I'm playing with a reasonable partner. The remaining bids save the last one was picture perfect and the work of a superb pair. North's final call was a wee bit ambitious, but you can't bash success and thirteen tricks were there with correct technique.

Declarer ruffed the diamond king and dummy was entered with the spade king for another diamond ruff. At trick 4 a small club to the ten and the last diamond is led. At this point, declarer has a decision to make. He may ruff with the heart seven, cash the trump ace and return to dummy with a second club to the king. Or he may trump the last diamond with his ace and return to dummy with a small trump. The first line of play fails if an opponent has a singleton club. (Six missing 5-1 split is a 15% probability) The second line fails if trumps break 4-1. (Five missing 4-1 split is a 28% probability) With no clue declarer went with the "percentage play." Ruffed dummy's last diamond with his heart seven, played the trump ace and re-entered dummy with a second club. Now he drew trumps (4-1 split) and pitched dummy's third spade on his long club for thirteen winners.

Know that less than half of the field played the small slam some making only twelve tricks. Today's two champions were the only pair in the grandy and properly rewarded with a top.

THE SISTERS OF ST. JOSEPH had a dream: to establish a hospital in Detroit. That dream was St. John Hospital and Medical Center (SJH&MC).

In May, we will mark forty years of patient care. But long before our doors opened, the men and women of the Guild and Fontbonne Auxiliary were hard at work with the Sisters to make us a reality.

Since the late 1940s, these two organizations have raised millions of dollars for St. John to further our work and to better meet the needs of the community we serve. We owe a debt of immeasurable gratitude to all Fontbonne and Guild members — both past and present — and to Sr. Verence McQuade, SSJ, who provided leadership and direction to both organizations for twenty years.

Through the continued dedication and loyalty we have come to rely on from members of the Fontbonne Auxiliary and Guild, now under the direction of Sr. Jacquie Wetherholt, SSJ, we look forward to community service for the next forty years — and beyond.

Thank you Guild!
Thank you

'Cruisin' Detroit' makes a pit stop at the Attic

Audiences will get a rollicking ride down the Motor City's streets when "Cruisin' Detroit ... the Hard Way" premieres at the Attic Theatre's New Center stage Feb. 7, at 8 p.m.

Directed and co-produced by Annette Madias, Cruisin' Detroit is a montage of the best skits, monologues and brief one-act plays from three recent shows by the critically acclaimed Detroit Playwrights Initiative. The productions — "Detroit Stories," "Cruisin' Woodward" and "Jingle Bells the Hard Way" — played to American Theater Critics Association as one of the four best plays produced outside New York during the 1986-87 season. Carney has had several plays produced in New York, Los Angeles and at the Boardhead/Michigan Public Theater in Lansing, where her "Photographic Memory" won the Lansing State Journal award for best new play of the year for 1988. Carney's "Lib" will be produced this summer at Los Angeles' Friends and Artists Theater.

"Cruisin' Detroit" features an ensemble cast of local talent, including Donna DiSante of Grosse Pointe Farms, who performed on the Attic's first Greektown stage and is returning to the theater after 14 years to debut on the New Center stage.

The production will also bring together several of the actors who performed in the original Detroit Playwrights Initiative productions: Heidi Guthrie of Grosse Pointe Woods, Peter Bellanca of Grosse Pointe Park, Keegan Key of Detroit and Frank Keils of Oak Park.

Detroit jazz musician Ralph Koziarski will be on stage accompanying each vignette with sax, clarinet, flute and drums, infusing the entire production with the rhythms of the streets.

An afterglow reception in the theater's lobby will follow the performance. A Talk Back forum, in which audience members are given the opportunity to ask questions of the cast, director and production staff, is scheduled for Thursday, Feb. 13, following the performance.

Show times for the remainder of the play's run are 8 p.m. Thursdays and Fridays; 5 p.m. and 9 p.m. Saturdays and 2 p.m. Sundays. Ticket prices range from $10-$27. For Thursday night and Sunday matinee performances, the Attic is offering two tickets for the price of one with every donation of at least two items of canned or packaged food. Donations will go to the Detroit/Wayne County Union of the Homeless.

To order tickets or for more information, phone the Attic's box office at 875-8284. For group sales, phone 875-8295.

Dust off the tuba and pucker up, Millie, they're striking up a band

By Ronald J. Bernas
Staff Writer

Before car phones and conference calls and cable television, families used to do things together. They would gather the clan, walk down the road to the park and listen to the band in the gazebo.

That's the idea that has been bouncing around like a melody in Richard J. Temkow's head for several years. About three months ago, he started working to make it a reality.

"I feel that there's an opportunity and a need in the Grosse Pointes for hearing good music," said Temkow, who lives in Grosse Pointe Shores. "Good Sousa music along with some Glenn Miller and even the old warhorses, like overtures. I think people want to hear that music."

So he formed The Great Lakes Concert Band and is looking for a few good musicians. Well, OK, a lot of better-than-average musicians.

"Ideally, I'd like a group of 60 or 65 people who know how to play both classical and swing," he said. "The individuals need to be accomplished, but there won't be any auditions. I'm talking about people who aren't professional musicians, but who have dedicated their lives to their instruments. The people who played when they were young, but for some reason became doctors or dentists."

Or CPAs, like Temkow, who plays the clarinet.

"And, he wants to pay the musicians."

"It's just a token amount," he said. "No one is going to get rich. We just wanted to reimburse them for their out-of-pocket costs, like gas and slide oil and things like that."

He hopes to get funding from the Pointes and local businesses, which would get a plug from the announcer during the concert.

"Kind of like what Garrison Keillor says Lake Wobegon is like," he said.

Temkow's hoping people would be willing to pitch in and serve on the board — which currently stands at four members but will eventually consist of 10. And he's going to need to borrow the music. And maybe a few music stands.

He's not worried about whether a wide-ranging audience is waiting for a group like this. He knows he'll attract the older crowd, those who remember hearing Glenn Miller the first time, and he hopes to reach the younger audience, who hear only electronic music when they turn on their Walkmans.

The first concert will be in the summer, if all goes well. The first rehearsal will be Monday, Feb. 24, at Parcels Middle School.

For more information, call Temkow at 881-1780, or write to The Great Lakes Concert Band, c/o Richard J. Temkow, 21420 Mack Avenue, St. Clair Shores, 48080.

sold-out audiences and rave reviews at 1515 Broadway, the Detroit Repertory Theatre and Ferndale's Magic Bag Theatre Cafe.

Running through March 1, this Attic production takes audiences on an offbeat tour of that side of Detroit that the mayor's office would never approve. The suburban couple stranded "south of Eight Mile," the hard-bitten cop, a culturally divided Chaldean woman, an aged Tigers' fan — all represent the sights and sounds, heart and soul of the "unofficial" Detroit. Taken together, the vignettes offer glimpses into the city that are often hilarious, sometimes poignant and always on the mark.

The writers, described as the "new voices" of regional theater, are local playwrights Kim Carney, Stephen Mack Jones, Janet Pound and Frank Provenzano. They are members of the Detroit Playwrights Initiative, a workshop and collective founded by Provenzano in 1990 with a grant from the Detroit Council for the Arts.

They may be new voices, but few of these writers are new to Detroit theater. Jones won national attention with his "Back in the World," an Attic production that was selected by the

Romantic music for Valentines

Pianist Ruth Burczyk will present a program of the "Great Romantics" featuring the well-known compositions of Brahms, Chopin, and Liszt at Detroit's Metropolitan Methodist Church, 8000 Woodward, on Friday, Feb. 14 at 8 p.m.

Burczyk is on the faculty of the Interlochen Arts Camp as well as a past president of the Detroit Musicians League. She has been named Michigan Teacher of the Year by the Michigan Music Teachers Association, and is an adjudicator of the National Guild of Piano Teachers. She is a life member of the Tuesday Musicales of Detroit and the Four Octave Club, and an honorary member of the St. Clair Music Study Club.

Burczyk currently serves on the state board of directors of the Michigan Music Teacher Association and she maintains a private teaching studio where she instructs a large class of piano students in Grosse Pointe.

Metropolitan Church is located on Woodward five blocks north of Grand Boulevard. There is ample lighted and supervised free parking adjacent to the church. Call 875-7070 for additional information during regular business hours. A reception, where the public may greet the artist, follows the program.

Comic Valentine arrives at Hilberry Theatre Feb. 14

"Arms and the Man," George Bernard Shaw's satire of love and war, opens at the Hilberry Theatre on Friday, Feb. 14 at 8 p.m.

This comic valentine centers around the chaos that ensues when Raina, a young romantic girl, gives shelter to a seemingly cowardly and pragmatic soldier with a fondness for chocolate creams. Their conflicting philosophies concerning the nature of love and war form the basis for one of Shaw's wittiest and most endearing comedies.

Set in late 19th-century Bulgaria during the Serbian War, the colorful characters and locales were later transformed by Oskar Straus into the operetta "The Chocolate Soldier."

"Arms and the Man" is directed by Margaret Spear, who staged last year's critically acclaimed "Peer Gynt" at the Hilberry. Roxanne Wellington, Peter Toran, Thorsten Kaye, Janet Clarkson, Nancy Lipschultz, Michael S. Ouimet, Henry Lide and Christopher Newman comprise the eight-member cast.

The period sets and costumes are designed by Monika Essen and Brian Timmer. Lighting

DSO report:

Prokofiev would have been proud

By Alex Suzek
Special Writer

On Prokofiev's only visit to Detroit around 1930 when he performed for Pro Musica, the composer was not impressed, according to comments he made in a letter about the trip. He would surely have changed his mind last Thursday if he had been here to hear the DSO play a concert devoted to three of his most memorable compositions.

Music

Music director Neeme Jarvi, following strict chronological protocol, began with the composer's Symphony No. 1, jestfully named "Classical" by Prokofiev and which delighted him when it stuck. It did so, however, because it is also appropriate. Using the symphonies of Haydn as a model, he plays with the classical form in a thoroughly modern and witty way. It is a work filled with exuberance, frivolity and humor and Jarvi and the orchestra certainly played it that way.

Even the uninitiated listener, who might not recognize Prokofiev's many musical jokes, could not help smiling at the clever surprises that occur. Moreover, the performance was a delight throughout, culminating in the molto vivace last movement which Jarvi took to the extreme.

It is a musical filigree as intricate and elegant as the lace in Haydn's cuff, although the entire coat is a modern cut, and the filigree was emphasized by wonderfully precise and mannered playing by the orchestra.

It was a superb performance that sparkled with brilliance and wit.

The second work was composed during Prokofiev's extended period in the West. His fairy tale opera, "The Love For Three Oranges," premiered, in fact, in Chicago and the suite from that opera, which was the next work on the program, captures the storytelling flair of the music.

From the first notes it is overwhelmingly clear that the listener is in for a journey

The Ice

By Louis Charbonneau

Donald I. Fine Inc. 336 pages. $19.95

A native Detroit who now lives in California, Louis Charbonneau is the author of "The Ice," a novel of Antarctica. With 20 other books to his credit, he is particularly engrossing with his latest effort because of its powerful imaginative scope.

Whether the book is a product of creative imagination or actual experience, or maybe some of both, I do not know, but I was nonetheless overwhelmed by his visual images of the South Pole. While reading this book during our recent wintry blast of snow and chill winds, I shivered as I vicariously explored the blinding white tundra and glaring ice in which his characters play their roles amid this impressive and awesome backdrop. Never for a minute is the mesmerized reader allowed to forget that he is battling the hostile elements, the rigid nature of the sea, the capricious weather, and all the dangers of life upon a glacier.

Several threads run throughout the plot and eventually interweave to bring us to the inevitable shocking conclusion. First, there is Dr. Kathy McNeely, a young marine biologist whose major concern in this ice station is the penguins, whose colonies are being decimated at an alarming rate by a mysterious oil spill.

Her Soviet colleague, Alex Volkov, is a member of an international team trying to rescue dying, oil-soaked birds while also investigating the source of the spill.

Then, there is handsome Brian Hurley, a devil-may-care dogsledder who is determined to conquer Hartsook Glacier with his intrepid team of nine huskies. Another thread links a group of American scientists at the Palmer Station to which Dr. McNeely is attached. Carl Jeffers, Kathy's fatherly mentor, and Hank Forbes, a helicopter pilot, have important roles in this tale of deceit and greed.

Last, but not least, is the sinister TERCO, a giant conglomerate whose prying tentacles reach out to despoil the environment in a secret hunt for the oil and minerals encased in the icy depths of Antarctica.

Kathy and Brian begin a troubled romance. However, they are united in their mutual concern for the endangered penguins as well as one of the sled dogs, Survivor, which suffers a broken leg but still manages to play a key role in spite of its injury. There are a number of attempted murders, mostly disguised as "accidents," which provoke the attention of the Palmer Station personnel as well as their Soviet collaborators. In this joint endeavor, the Americans and the Russians combine forces against the unforgiving Antarctica which continually attacks them with below-zero temperatures and gusty winds.

Suspense mounts as TERCO races the scientists to stake a claim for wealth, disregarding the importance of environmental protection. Indeed, Antarctica is suffering from the effects of a diminished ozone layer while the penguin colonies are struggling to survive against the dreadful oil spills.

Charbonneau is masterly in his presentation of the wonders as well as the perils of Antarctica, and we are never permitted to overlook the lurking presence of hazards always existing in this inhospitable part of our globe. Kathy McNeely, Brian Hurley, Alex Volkov, and all the others connected with the ice station, struggle valiantly against the evil forces of corporate industry against the majestic splendor of an icy world. In this battle against brutal weather, we are held in suspense until the end. This book is a real page-turner with a crucial message: The protection of nature and the environment is of utmost importance. Charbonneau succeeds marvelously in merging his thrilling plot with serious information.

MOT community outreach continues

The Michigan Opera Theatre community programs department has planned an active season this winter highlighted by an appearance at the Cayman International Music Festival on Grand Cayman Island and performances at The Michigan Theatre in Jackson, sponsored by Consumers Power. The department is under the leadership of Karen V. DiChiera, director of community programs.

Five artists from Michigan Opera Theatre's community programs department arrived on Grand Cayman Island last month to participate in the third annual Cayman International Music Festival. On Tuesday, Jan. 22, they were honored guests at a ball held at the mansion of Governor and Mrs. Scott. They displayed their talents on Friday, Jan. 24, at Harquail Theatre, performing a musical medley entitled "Broadway Babies and Phantoms."

The singers also donated performances at two primary schools on the island; CCC Primary School in Georgetown, and West Bay Primary School in West Bay. Students were entertained by Michigan Opera Theatre's delightful production of the Seymour Barab opera "Little Red Riding Hood." Wrapping up the week, the group joined other festival guest artists in a concert finale on Sunday, Jan. 26.

The Consumers Power Foundation has awarded a grant to Michigan Opera Theatre which will assist the opera company in bringing two performances to the Jackson area as part of the MOT's "Art is for Us!" series.

The first offering, on Saturday, Feb. 1, was "Everything's Coming Up Broadway," a revue featuring the works of composers Leonard Bernstein, Cole Porter, Stephen Sondheim, Andrew Lloyd Webber and the teams of Alain Boubil and Claude-Michel Schonberg, Alan Jay Lerner and Frederick Loewe, and Rodgers and Hammerstein.

Concluding the series on Saturday, March 7, will be the one-act Richard Berent-Douglas Braverman opera, "Cheering Up a Princess," commissioned by the department of community programs. This musical adventure demonstrates how the library can be a valuable friend.

John W. Clark, president of the foundation, said, "The Consumers Power Foundation is pleased to be involved in this project which helps a statewide organization and provides a benefit to our employees and the communities we serve." The Consumers Power Foundation is chaired by William T. McCormick, chairman of Consumers Power Co.

Local activities and outstate tours will occupy much of the busy department's time this season. Artists of the company will appear in many schools and public venues in the northern Lower Peninsula the week of Feb. 24. Appearing with the Southfield Symphony Orchestra, MOT singers will perform select Broadway numbers on March 8 at 8 p.m. Traveling to the Marquis Theatre in Northville, the troupe will present "Broadway Melodies" from March 27-April 11. The company will be in residence at St. Clair Community College on March 31 for a performance workshop and two performances of "Broadway Melodies." Returning to Ann Arbor, the cast will perform "Cheering Up a Princess" at the Kerrytown Concert House on April 3 and 4. A special performance of "Cheering Up a Princess" is scheduled for April 22 at the Detroit Public Library Main Branch.

For a complete schedule of activities for Michigan Opera Theatre's department of community programs through the spring and bookings call Dolores Tobis at 874-7894.

through a fantasy world. Prokofiev's startling changes in melodic and harmonic direction are driven by powerful rhythmic forces that conjure images of magical action. It is easily rendered banal by a less than masterful performance, but this one was not less than anything. Jarvi conveyed all the fascination and suspense of the story that is in this music

Wine seminar

Local wine connoisseur, Bonnie Delsener leads the War Memorial's wine seminar group in reviewing "California's Great Cabernet Sauvignon" on Wednesday, Feb. 12, at 7:30 p.m.

The group will discuss California's long history with cabernet, and how its wines compare to the world's best.

To join the group, which meets the second Wednesday of each month to explore a wide and varied selection of wines through tasting, lectures, films, and group discussion, call 881-7511. Advance registration is required. Class fee is $27 a person. Fees may vary according to the price of the wines.

Memorabilia sought

The Motown Historical Museum is creating an exhibition "The Magic Behind the Magic: The Musicians of Motown" for Black History month.

The exhibit will feature the musicians of the 1960s and '70s who helped to create the Motown sound.

According to Esther Gordy Edwards, president, "The musicians made such great contributions to the development of Motown, we thought that Black History month was a significant time to launch this exhibition that pays tribute to their outstanding contributions."

The Motown Museum is seeking photographs, memorabilia, newspaper clippings, and instruments of, or used by, Motown musicians. Anyone who has materials they would be willing to donate to the museum should call 875-2264.

and the orchestra produced a performance that stood on its own as drama — powerful, fanciful and arresting.

As it turned out, these two presentations were only prelude to the main event. "Alexander Nevsky," Opus 78, is a suite for mezzo soprano, orchestra and chorus of cantata dimensions. Adapted by the composer from his score for the renowned film by the great Eisenstein, it has the pictorial quality of the greatest film music yet transcends that genre in its sophistication and originality.

As in the "Classical Symphony," Prokofiev created in the Nevsky music an impression of another period, this time medieval, to represent the invading Teutonic knights, but as in the symphony, his music is no imitation. It is real, original Prokofiev and modern.

The work's Russian patriotic character, however, is the dominant feature. Written after the composer had come home to Russia and was faced with the criticism of "The Commissars," it has strong overtones of devotion to Mother Russia and readiness to die for her.

The choral parts pose a special challenge. No quantity of American singers can produce the vibrant, penetrating sound of a genuine Russian chorus. Nonetheless, Eric Freudigman's Symphony came excitingly close.

Moreover, they sang the hymns, chants and stirring marches with conviction and clarity of enunciation that made it possible even to follow the Russian text (if you could).

Perhaps the closest to a Russian tone quality was achieved by mezzo soprano Christine Cairns in the deeply moving solo eulogy, "The Field of the Dead." Her rich voice was true and steady as she intoned the moving verse with deep passion.

True to form, Jarvi responded to cheers from the audience with a repeat of "The Battle on Ice" chorus.

Tonight, Jarvi opens a series of four performances this weekend repeated Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoon. The attractions are: the world premiere of a new concerto for orchestra by Ann Arbor composer Leslie Bassett, the Haydn "Concerto for Cello" in C major with DSO cellist Marcy Chanteaux and the ever-popular and imaginative suite "The Planets" by Gustav Holst. For tickets and performance times, call the box office, 833-3700.

Tickets are $22 for adults and $20 for students and senior citizens and may be obtained at the center's box office or charged to Visa/MasterCard by calling 286-2222. Macomb center is located on the center campus of Macomb Community College at Hall (M-59) and Garfield roads in Clinton Township.

Meadow Brook presents Ty Cobb play

The Michigan premiere of "Cobb," Lee Blessing's play about famous Detroit Tiger Ty Cobb, will open at Meadow Brook Theatre Thursday, Feb. 13, for a four-week run closing Sunday, March 8. The theater is located on the campus of Oakland University near Rochester.

For times and ticket information, call 377-3300. Group reservations may be arranged by calling 370-3316.

Cobb was the first player inducted into the Baseball Hall of Fame. He had a lifetime batting average of .367 and 4,191 hits. His record of 96 stolen bases in one season lasted for 47 years. His record for being thrown out of 38 games in one season (1915) lasted much longer, until 1982. For the first three decades of the twentieth century, Tyus Raymond Cobb — known as the "Georgia Peach" — led the field in hitting, base stealing and run making. (He played for the Detroit Tigers from 1905 to 1920 and was a player/manager from 1921 to 1926.) All but one year of his professional baseball career was spent in Detroit.

In the play Cobb accuses the audience of trying to forget him. His life story is pieced together by three characters representing different stages in Cobb's lifetime: the 20-year-old Peach, the 40-year-old Ty and the 70-year-old Mr. Cobb. The characters present different sides and memories of the complex ballplayer.

During the play, Cobb's thoughts are frequently interrupted by black ballplayer Oscar Charleston. Charleston was nicknamed the "Black Cobb" because of his fierce playing ability and volatile temper in the Negro League. Cobb and Charleston never faced each other on the playing field.

According to Blessing, "My play is more about Ty Cobb than baseball. He was a very, very bitter man. But he was driven to be the best."

Blessing is also the author of the internationally acclaimed "A Walk in the Woods" which was produced at Meadow Brook Theatre in 1990.

Stephen Daley will portray Mr. Cobb, the oldest of the three Cobbs. Daley last appeared at Meadow Brook as Eddie in "A View from the Bridge."

Michael James Laird returns to Meadow Brook as the middle-aged Ty. Laird has been seen at Meadow Brook as Jack the social worker in "The Boys Next Door" and Honeyman in "A Walk in the Woods."

Eric Hissom will appear as The Peach, the 20-year-old Cobb. Hissom appeared as Barry in "The Boys Next Door" at Meadow Brook.

Daryl Edwards is making his Meadow Brook debut in the role of Oscar Charleston. Edwards has appeared in a variety of theatrical productions as well as films and television.

John Ulmer returns to Meadow Brook to direct "Cobb."

Meadow Brook Theatre is a non-profit, cultural program of Oakland University.

Youtheatre announces 10 new spring shows

Youtheatre at the Detroit Institute of Arts opens its spring season with a special Black History Month event on Saturday, Feb. 29, called "Freedom Train," a dramatic musical based on the life of Harriet Tubman.

New York's Theatreworks/USA uses dance, dialogue, mime and music of the period to tell the story of a woman who escaped slavery by following the perilous route known as the Underground Railroad. Tubman became one of the railroad's most celebrated "conductors," making the trip repeatedly as she guided more than 300 slaves to freedom.

With its warmth and humor, "Freedom Train" is a universal story that celebrates the human spirit.

Tickets are $6 for adults or children; $5 for groups of 10 or more. Performances are at 11 a.m. and 2 p.m. in the museum auditorium. "Freedom Train" is recommended for ages 9 and older and is a Girl Scout Salute show.

Youtheatre will offer nine additional shows from March through May, beginning with recording artist and cable TV troubadour Red Grammer, who invites youngsters to sing along with him. This is the first of the season's three Wiggle Club shows for children age 3 and older. Special Wiggle Club memberships for all three shows are $15, including admission, membership card and button.

Other shows are as follows:

- March 14 "Red Grammer" (age 3 and older/Wiggle Club show)

- March 21 "Ishangi's Africa" (age 9 and older/Boy Scout Salute Day)

- March 28 "Dinosaurs" (age 5 and older/Cub Scout Salute Day)

- April 4 "Class Clown" (age 9 and older/Girl Scout/Boy Scout Salute Day)

- April 11 "Hansel and Gretel" (age 5 and older)

- April 18 and 25 "Rabbits, Rabbits & Riddles" (age 3 and older/Wiggle Club show)

- May 2 "A Perfect Balance" (age 5 and older)

- May 8 "Rory & The Rainbow Rocket Band" (age 3 and older/Wiggle Club show)

- May 16 and 23 "Sleeping Beauty" (age 5 and older/Brownie Salute Day)

Except for Wiggle Club performances, the minimum age for Youtheatre admission is 5, and children under 12 must be accompanied by an adult.

These fully staged shows are $6 each. Discounts are available for groups of 10 or more. Season coupon books good for 10 admissions to your choice of shows are available at $50, a $10 savings. Tickets are available in person at the DIA ticket office; MasterCard and Visa are accepted for phone orders. Call 833-2323.

Other Youtheatre services are:

- Youtheatre special Salute Days honoring young people and adults involved with service and community organizations — Girl Scouts, Brownies, Boy Scouts and Cub Scouts.

- Youtheatre birthday party packages celebrate a special occasion. The packages — $60 for 10 youngsters and one adult or $90 for 15 youngsters and two adults — include theater tickets for the chosen performance, party invitations, favors, the celebrant's name on a theater lobby sign, a salute from the stage and a birthday present from the cast and crew.

- To serve the educational community, Youtheatre provides a full season of curriculum-related performances touring Michigan schools and communities, as well as a "Field Trip to Broadway" for metropolitan area school groups, with performances in the museum auditorium during the school week.

War Memorial sponsors trips abroad

Grosse Pointe Community Education and Jan Arndt's Skylight Travels announce two cultural tours for winter and spring. "London Theatre Trip" will take place March 5-12; "Spring Enchantment" will be April 28 - May 12.

Features of the $999 package are two theater tickets (including "Miss Saigon"), hotel for six nights, round trip air, London "tube" pass, backstage theater tour, admission to the Theatre Museum, Queen's Gallery and Museum of the Moving Image, portage, breakfast daily and a farewell dinner.

"Spring Enchantment" will visit the Netherlands, Belgium, Luxembourg, and Germany, with four nights in West Berlin.

The trip will include a visit to eastern Germany as it existed behind "the wall" and a unique opportunity to view the magnificent spring flowers.

Complete package includes round trip regularly-scheduled air, portage, breakfast daily, full itinerary of sightseeing, some dinners, multi-night stays to eliminate daily packing and unpacking, and visits to areas not usually included in packages.

Call 881-2200 or 343-2178 for complete details and flyer.

Audition Notices

High school and college-aged musicians in the Detroit area will have the opportunity to audition for the 1992 summer season of the Boston University Tanglewood Institute and the Boston University School of Music on Friday, Feb. 28, from 2 to 7 p.m. at the Institute of Music and Dance, 200 E. Kirby. The Institute offers two, four, six, and eight week programs for instrumentalists, pianists, vocalists, and composers at Tanglewood, the summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The school of music offers a full range of flexible programs for career-oriented musicians on both the graduate and undergraduate levels. Interested musicians should contact Jennifer Hedberg at 651-7591 after 6 p.m. for further information.

Auditions will be held for Tennessee Williams' "The Glass Menagerie," produced by the Greenfield Village Theatre Company directed by Mary Bremer. No appointment is necessary and readings will be from the script. All roles are available and actors should acquaint themselves with the script.

Auditions are Monday, Feb. 10, at 7 p.m. at the Henry Ford Museum Theatre. The show runs April 3 through May 9. No one under 18 will be allowed to read. For more information, call 271-1620, ext. 405.

'Charlotte's Web' performed

East Detroit Civic Theatre in cooperation with East Detroit Parks and Recreation will present "Charlotte's Web" at the East Detroit Recreation Center, 16600 Stephens one block east of Gratiot.

Showtimes are Thursday, Feb. 6 at 4:30 p.m.; Friday, Feb. 7 at 7:30 p.m., and Saturday, Feb. 8 at 11 a.m. and 2 p.m. Tickets are $3.

For more information, call 778-5374 or 772-6429.

Gaylords star in new musical comedy, 'Famiglia'

"Famiglia," a hilarious new musical about three generations of an Italian-American family, starring the singing comedy team of Ron Gaylord and Burt Holiday, will premiere Feb. 11-12 at the Macomb Center for the Performing Arts.

Showtime is 8 p.m. both evenings.

Funny but sensitive, "Famiglia" was written by Ron Gaylord Fredianelli and is directed by Paul Aberasturi. A cast of 30 actors and singers, including popular vocalist Sandra Mandella, will join Gaylord and his veteran comedy partner Holiday, to present the first all-new Broadway-type musical to debut in Macomb County.

The original score for "Famiglia," which is Italian for "family" in case you missed the connection, was written by Ron Gaylord Fredianelli, with arrangements by Motown's Dave Vandepitte. Music will be performed by the Johnny Trudell Orchestra.

Tickets are $18 with students and seniors $16. They are on sale at Macomb Center for the Performing Arts and Bonaldi's Gift Shop, both in Clinton Township, and at Arriva Italia Ristorante in Warren.

For information, call Carol Fratacangeli at 313-286-2022 or Sam Locricchio at 313-573-8100.

'Shining Through' is a tense, romantic Nazi spy thriller

By Ronald J. Bernas
Staff Writer

Let's be perfectly honest. I had planned to like "Shining Through."

I won't miss a Nazi spy movie if I can help it and I would pay to watch Melanie Griffiths read names at random out of a telephone book, so when the two were combined I knew it was something I'd like.

And despite a plot hole here and there, I liked it. I really, really, liked it.

The credits say the film is based on Susan Issacs' charming comic/female empowerment/Nazi spy/love story (read one you've read 'em all, literally) of the same name, but it is such a departure that if you changed the characters' names, Issacs couldn't even sue for plagiarism.

Griffiths plays Linda Voss, a secretary for a large international New York law firm during the early 1940s. No dummy, but because her degree is from the Queens Secretarial College and not Vassar, she's perceived as being less than a person. But she speaks German, having been taught by her grandmother, and that makes her useful to her boss, Ed Leland (Michael Douglas), whose job is to gather information on the German war machine from recent refugees.

Voss' other secret is that she's half Jewish and has a few relatives still in Germany which makes her feel the war more than other Americans. When a highly placed spy is killed, Voss campaigns for and gets the job of a cook in the house of a high-ranking Nazi in Berlin. Her German, which is spoken with the accent of a Berlin butcher's wife, is her entry to the country.

She screws up, but lands in a higher-up's house as a nanny, and that's when things really get out of her control.

Fans of Issacs will be disappointed because the book, which would have made a wonderful movie, has so much more. But the film takes the spirit — if not the heart — of the book and presents it without apologies.

Her successes come from tips she stole while watching bad spy movies.

The book's Voss begins as a mealy-mouthed nothing whose intelligence shines through as she learns to lead with her head, not her heart. The film's Voss is already sure of herself when the movie begins and as time goes on, she errs because she leads with her heart.

The movie, written and directed by David Seltzer, is a glowing tribute to bad old Nazi movies. And its tension is not diminished despite the fact that the movie is told as a flashback by the 70-ish Voss.

Griffiths, as Voss, is as much an extension of the character she got an Oscar nomination for in "Working Girl" as it is a variation of that role. She's charming, frail, funny, sexy and compelling.

Michael Douglas, despite his top billing, does little more than wait in train stations and is only competent as Leland. He's good as the hard businessman, but when he has to be charming he falls short. It's Griffiths' eyes that carry their romantic scenes.

Supporting performances by Joely Richardson as a spy who aids Voss and Liam Neeson as one of the most charming Nazis in recent memory are quite good. And Sir John Gielgud puts in a cameo as an irascible spy.

One caveat — don't watch the commercials or the trailers in the theaters too closely, or you'll have a plot twist ruined for you.

"Shining Through" has everything a movie could want, tension, romance, comedy and one hell of a totally unbelievable (but extremely effective) ending. It's more than a diversion, it's a darn good film.

Acting makes for tasty 'Fried Green Tomatoes'

By Marian Trainor
Special Writer

"Fried Green Tomatoes" is a four-star production and we're not just talking ratings. The film is an accolade to the four principal performers who make it so special.

Set in the small Alabama town of Whistle Stop, it has all the southern charm that made "Steel Magnolias," and "Driving Miss Daisy" irresistible.

Like "Steel Magnolias" it centers on four women, and how their friendship works to see them through good times and bad. What makes their interaction so intriguing is how different each one is from the other. In spite of these differences they forge an endearing relationship that affects the lives of all of them.

Based on a book by Alabama-born Fannie Flagg, who also wrote the screenplay, it faithfully captures the full flavor of life in a small Southern town. You feel the slow, leisurely pace. You share social activities such as the wedding party that spills onto the lawn with tables laden with food.

You hear the minister ranting about sin at the local tavern and witness a bombastic, no-nonsense judge dismiss a murder case and berate the prosecutor for wasting the court's time. And you meet the local characters, like the burly police officer and the southern gentleman who needs a drink in the morning to stop shaking.

They all figure in the story told in retrospect by Ninny Tredgoode (Jessica Tandy), a resident of a nursing home. The story is told in fragments, much like a serial, to Evelyn Crouch (Kathy Bates) while her husband is visiting his aunt.

Ninny weaves a tale about a local murder that shook the town. She is not only an en-thrilling storyteller, she is also a clever one. With no visitors of her own, she keeps Evelyn coming and the audience on edge by ending each segment at a crucial point that leaves Evelyn and the audience anxious to know what happens next. Through her eyes we meet rebellious, tom-boyish Iddie as a gangly 10-year-old all gussied up for a wedding. She's proud of herself and pleased when everyone tells her how pretty she looks, except one oafish boy who laughs at her.

In a fit of temper she throws all of her finery out the window and heads for refuge in a tree where her older brother goes to comfort her. He tells her the story of how the oyster that held a pearl became special because someone had put a grain of sand in it. He becomes Iddie's hero and she follows him everywhere, until a tragedy strikes.

Not until her next visit does Evelyn hear more about Iddie, now grown and played by Mary Stuart Masterson. Still rebellious, she hangs around the tavern playing cards and rides the railroad cars and throws out cans of food to the hobos who live beside the tracks.

Iddie's mother, hoping that her friend, Ruth (Mary Louise Parker), can help Iddie change her ways, invites her to spend the summer. Ruth is gentle, patient and kind.

At first Iddie refuses to have anything to do with her. But when Ruth surprises her by going along with her on a train excursion, accompanys her to the tavern, and generally proves that she will not give up, the girls become friends.

As Ninny's story unfolds, Evelyn becomes more than a listener. She confides her own story to Ninny and now we have two narratives, one set in the past and one in the present.

Evelyn has reached a point in her life when she looks in the mirror and doesn't like what she sees but doesn't know what to do about it. She's too heavy, but can't stop eating. She's upset with her husband because he appears to have replaced her with television sports. Self-improvement classes don't help. She turns to Ninny for counsel.

Tandy gives another top-drawer performance as the twinkling Ninny. Masterson, as the high spirited Iddie, delivers an original characterization. Parker creates a sympathetic, long-suffering Ruth, and Bates successfully injects high comedy in her role as the matronly Evelyn who wants to put some life in her marriage.

'Kuffs' is fun

By Marian Trainor
Special Writer

A lightweight comedy played out against some violent action, "Kuffs" is engaging entertainment because of its star, Christian Slater.

From the beginning when he faces the audience and lets them in on what he is thinking in a friendly, conversational manner, you get the impression that here is a guy that's going to be fun to watch for a couple of hours — and he is.

As George Kuffs, we first see him dancing with his sexy girlfriend (Milla Jovovich) in her spacious apartment. It's a beautifully executed routine, graceful, seductive — a pleasure to watch.

The story begins when George goes to San Francisco to borrow money from his brother (Bruce Boxleitner) who owns a private security agency in an area where the police department can't handle the crime alone. The only problem is, if crime continues to rise, the agency doesn't get paid.

It's not an easy job attempting to outwit the sharpies who are trying to force local business people to sell so they can control the area. One of their targets is the security business. After his brother is killed for refusing to sell, George takes over.

No one wants him as boss; neither the police chief, the community nor a two-ton officer who had also planned to buy the business. To show how lightly they regard him, they insist that a career officer (Tony Goldwyn) go with him on patrol. Kuffs' only objective is to nail the guy who killed his brother. Goldwyn thinks they should pay some attention to the firms they are hired to protect. Next to Slater, a giant St. Bernard is the funniest actor in the film. It doesn't have a big part but makes the most of it.

While "Kuffs," like many movies these days, features violence, it is first and last a comedy. Even the violent scenes are put-ons and there has been much more blood and gore in other films of the same genre. Slater appears to be having fun with the part and his light hearted approach makes it fun for the viewer, too.

South standout dives into select company

By Chuck Klonke
Sports Editor

During the fall, Grosse Pointe South junior Chad Hepner is a hard-nosed running back on the Blue Devils' football team.

As soon as that season is over, Hepner slips out of the pads and becomes one of the premier high school divers in the state.

It's a double that isn't often found in high school athletics.

"I've had some other divers who played football, but it is an unusual combination," said Don David, who coaches South's divers.

There aren't a lot of similarities between diving and carrying a football, but some conditioning pays off for both sports.

"The running he does for football helps his diving," David said. "That's probably the biggest asset that comes from football. The running gives him strong legs."

Hepner agreed.

"Balance is a big thing in both sports," he said. "And the power training I do for football strengthens my legs. It helps me jump higher off the board so there's more time to complete the dive."

Hepner, who played football for the Grosse Pointe Red Barons and made South's varsity as a freshman, chose diving when he was looking for a sport to occupy his time during the winter.

"I wanted to compete in a sport during the winter," he said. "I went to the North-South girls meet when I was a freshman and diving looked interesting. I thought I'd give it a try."

Hepner wasn't an immediate hit on the diving board.

"It took him a while to get so he could walk down the board without falling off," David said with a smile. "It isn't as easy as it looks. Finally, at the end of his freshman year, I thought, 'He might not be too bad.' It wasn't until last year that I thought I really had something. Once he got his hurdle down, everything clicked. He progressed quickly after that."

David doesn't think Hepner's progress was hampered by his late start in the sport.

"The younger a diver is the more he has to change as he develops physically," David said. "When Chad started he was almost at his present height, so he learned from a point that hasn't changed and so he developed quicker."

Hepner finished 15th in last year's Class A state meet and he and David both expect him to improve on that performance in this year's competition.

"When I started winning meets last year it gave me more confidence," Hepner said. "Then I spent a lot of time in the spring and summer learning new dives. That way I didn't have to spend practice time this fall learning dives. I could just work on the ones I use in meets."

Hepner has scored in the high 200s in every meet this season. He had a personal best of 289 points in South's dual meet with Roseville last month.

"I've been consistent and I've done well with the forward 2 1/2 pike," Hepner said. "It's a dive with a high degree of difficulty."

Hepner hasn't had much competition from his opponents, but that hasn't hindered his scoring.

"I judge myself on how well I dive, not how the other divers are doing," he said.

Hepner's ace in the hole for the state meet is a reverse 2 1/2 that he's been working to perfect.

"That has one of the highest degrees of difficulty and you need something like that if you're going to finish high in the state," Hepner said. "That's my first goal, to make the top 12 and dive in the finals."

David said that Hepner's consistency could make him a state champion.

"He's able to hit all 11 of his dives consistently," the coach said. "All you need is one bad dive to spoil an otherwise good performance. That doesn't happen to Chad. I've had only three divers in 15 years of working with high school divers that had that potential."

David thinks the sky is the limit for Hepner if he decides to concentrate on diving after high school.

"He's what all the colleges are looking for," David said. "If he's dedicated to diving, I can program him to the Olympic trials in 1996. It's all up to him. He has the athletic ability and the attitude that he'll have no problem competing in Division I."

Hepner is still undecided about whether football or diving is in his future, but he's leaning in one direction.

"I haven't made a decision yet, but lately I've been thinking a lot more about diving."

Steady sophs spark North skaters

Dan Abraham couldn't be happier with the way his Grosse Pointe North hockey team is playing these days.

"It seems like we're really pulling together as a team," the first-year coach said after the Norsemen tied a strong Livonia Stevenson team 3-3 and beat Detroit Country Day 3-1.

"We're reaching a peak now and if we keep our enthusiasm, we'll win a lot more games in February and March."

They each had a goal and an assist against Stevenson. Sucher scored twice and Quinn collected three assists against Country Day.

"They've been shooting more lately," Abraham said. "They pass the puck so well that sometimes there's a tendency to do too much of that. Jeff (assistant coach Jeff Henchel) and I felt they should go to the net more. Now they're doing such a good job of creating opportunities."

Quinn leads the Norsemen in scoring with 24 points and Sucher is second with 21.

North's Gary Corona opened the scoring against Country Day at 13:17 of the first period with Quinn and Mike Klubuchar drawing assists.

The Yellowjackets scored the only goal of the second period, but Sucher broke the tie at 6:01 of the third period and gave the Norsemen an insurance goal with 3:28 left.

"The line of Quinn, Sucher and Paul Megler made some unbelievable plays in that game," Abraham said.

Brian Quinn

"We miss Pete Megler (who's out with an injury), but those four have been moving the puck up the ice, they clear the area in front of the net, they take the body and they know when to step up and pinch," Abraham said.

Goaltender Chuck Schervish played another strong game for North.

"He's been the backbone of our team," Abraham said.

Quinn opened the scoring against Stevenson with an unassisted goal at 6:58 of the first period, but the Spartans answered with two first-period goals.

Jensen tied the game with an assist from Sucher at 3:06 of the second period, but Stevenson regained the lead at 7:08. Sucher scored the equalizer from Quinn with 44 seconds remaining in the second period.

"We weren't intimidated by Stevenson's state ranking," Abraham said.

North improved to 8-6-1 overall.

North JV, freshmen do well in tourney

By Justin Fines
Special Writer

Grosse Pointe North's junior varsity and freshman volleyball teams wrapped up an impressive week with strong showings in North's JV tournament.

The Lady Norsemen's JV squad won seven matches, including a 15-0, 15-11 victory over Port Huron Northern in the championship match.

North is now 19-0 against JV foes.

"We've already been through one rotation of the MAC White Division and have played well," said coach Charles Buhagiar. "Grosse Pointe South and Romeo were the toughest teams we played so we'll have to be on our toes the next time around."

Buhagiar gave special credit to Jody Costello, Tricia Morrow, Jennifer Wirsing, Anne Maliszewski, Kristen Loeher, Lindsay Mergos, Erin Peters, Laura Root and Maureen Zolich for their efforts.

"They all came in and played their part," he said.

North's freshmen finished in a three-way tie for fourth place in the tournament.

Lynette Pone, Tara Chevalier, Jennifer Rio and Karyn

Clark-Ried played well for the ninth-graders in the tournament.

Earlier in the week, the freshmen beat Anchor Bay 15-3, 4-15, 18-16 and downed Mount Clemens 15-7, 15-5.

"Vinnie Lapianna, Lindsay Purdy and Monica Rader combined strong serving streaks to put us over the top against Anchor Bay," Francis said.

Intensity carries North past volleyball foe

Intensity was the key to Grosse Pointe North's impressive volleyball victory over state-ranked Fraser last week.

"The girls stayed pumped the whole match," said coach Leslie Harwood after the Lady Norsemen posted a 15-11, 15-9 victory over the Ramblers, who were ranked 14th in Class A in the latest coaches' poll.

"Mentally, we were ready the whole time. If that wasn't the best we've played this year, it was close to it."

Senior Stephanie Gore had her best performance for the Lady Norsemen with 17 hits, seven kills, eight blocks and three saves. She also served four points.

"She always works hard on her blocking, but she's never connected as many times as she did in this match," Harwood said. "Some of her hits could have turned the match around."

Amy Sacka and Tricia Campau also had strong all-around performances and they scored 100 percent in their setting. Sacka also had six blocks, seven hits and one kill.

Serving was another factor in North's victory, which pushed the Lady Norsemen to 4-2 in the Macomb Area Conference White Division and 14-4 overall.

"We missed only three serves in the two games," Harwood said.

Melissa Drouillard served eight points, while Jenny Shapiro connected on 100 percent of her serves and scored seven points, three of them aces. Missy Bania served five points and Campau had four.

North will compete in the 25-team Wayne State Invitational on Saturday, Feb. 8.

Knights knock off a rated rival

By John Miskelly
Special Writer

Home cooking hadn't been very tasty for the University Liggett School basketball team until it met the Leelanau School last week.

The Knights, with six home dates in January, had dropped three in a row until their come-from-behind 59-48 victory over the Indians, who had been ranked in the top 10 in the state in Class D.

"This is a huge win," said coach Chuck Wright. "Any win is going to be big."

ULS, which was down 23-13 at halftime, erased the 10-point deficit with a strong second half, although Wright made no significant changes. Solid execution and concentration contributed to the turnaround, he said.

Leelanau's version of the twin towers, 6-foot-7 Saron Lincoln and 6-6 freshman Mack Perkins, helped the Indians dominate the first half. Lincoln finished with 17 points, 10 rebounds and two blocks, while Perkins had 12 points and six rebounds.

ULS clamped down defensively on Lincoln in the second half, keeping him out of the paint where he had been so effective before the intermission.

"We're stressing defense and rebounding the rest of the year," Wright said.

Senior Ken Hubbard, who scored 23 points, and freshman Joey Grant, who collected 12, were standouts for the Knights. Hubbard hit 17 of 22 free-throw attempts. Masai Wa-Omari also played well for ULS, as he pulled down five rebounds and hit two critical free throws.

"I've probably stifled (Grant) too much," Wright said. "It's time for me to let him loose."

Grant's aggressive play was one of the keys for ULS as it took control of the game and went ahead early in the final quarter. The teams combined for 54 points in the fourth quarter, with the Knights scoring 33 as a result of patience and a good offensive flow.

In an earlier game, ULS had a seven-point lead evaporate as Bloomfield Hills Roper came back for a 36-34 victory.

The Knights scored only two points in the fourth quarter in falling to their third straight defeat.

Offense wasn't the only problem, though.

"We lost our defensive intensity, too," Wright said.

Senior Jason Drook, who had five rebounds, played well in the losing cause.

There's plenty of action under the boards as Grosse Pointe North's Adam Lowry (25) and a teammate battle L'Anse Creuse North's Mike Spratt for a rebound.

Knights split pair on Milwaukee trip

The only thing the weekend hockey series between University Liggett School and the University School of Milwaukee didn't provide was a pair of close finishes.

"The two games were just the opposite," said Knights coach John Fowler after his team came home with a split. USM took the opener 7-1, but ULS bounced back to win 5-1 in the second game.

"In the first game their goalie played out of his mind," Fowler continued. "We were getting a lot of chances, but whenever I looked up at the scoreboard I'd see 'ULS 0.' We weren't getting outplayed by any means."

A defensive lapse in the final minute of the first period gave the Wildcats a 1-0 lead. USM added two more goals in the second period.

"We had good chances in the second period, but either got stoned by the goalie or missed the net," Fowler said. "Then we had to take some chances in the third period and it translated into goals for them."

Freshman Jim Bologna scored the Knights' only goal at 2:46 of the third period, with assists from Jamie Brock and Andy VanDeweghe.

"Bologna played a great game," Fowler said. "He moved up to replace Alex Crenshaw for the game."

Things went a lot smoother for the Knights the following night as they jumped in front on first-period goals by Eric Kiskalt and Omar Sawaf.

Kiskalt opened the scoring at 6:45 on an assist from VanDeweghe. John Maycock and Stefan Teitge set up Sawaf's goal at 9:26.

After a scoreless second period, defenseman Bill Robb gave ULS a 3-0 lead at 3:16 of the third period.

"That was a very critical goal," Fowler said. "We said between periods that whoever got the next goal would be in a great position. We played with incredible emotion."

USM scored at 10:45 to cut the lead to 3-1, but the Wildcats pulled their goalie for an extra attacker and ULS capitalized with an empty-net goal by Teitge from Jay Ricci.

VanDeweghe, with assists from Teitge and Kiskalt, sealed the win on a goal with three seconds remaining.

Junior Chris Eldridge played a strong game in goal for the Knights, turning away 21 shots, including 16 in the third period.

"It was a great series," Fowler said. "They're 14-2 and ranked No. 6 in Wisconsin. There was a lot of good up-and-down hockey and very few penalties."

USM is coached by former NHL player Lowell MacDonald, who had a brief stint with the Red Wings early in his career.

South skaters bounce back strong

Grosse Pointe South's hockey team bounced back strong after one of its most disappointing performances of the season.

"It was nice to come back like this after the Southgate game (a 3-2 defeat)," said Blue Devils' coach John LaLonde after his team's 6-3 victory over Wyandotte.

"We played so well (against Wyandotte). Their goalie was outstanding or the score would have been much higher. We must have outshot them three-to-one. We dominated the game and we forechecked well."

South emerged from the first period with a 3-2 lead on two of Tom Rajt's three goals and one by Kevin Brennan. Brennan snapped a 2-2 tie with 2:15 remaining in the period.

Defenseman David Auld scored South's only second-period goal at 1:38 to boost the Blue Devils' lead to 4-2.

Wyandotte scored early in the third period, but South answered with goals by Rajt and Carl Melchoir.

Kevin Watt had two assists and Brian Crane, Auld, Todd Frederickson, Ted Hanawalt, Marcel Chagnon and Kris Hoglund collected one apiece.

"I could name a lot of players who did well," LaLonde said. "Rajt had the hat trick and Brennan and Crane did a fine job. I could mention Frederickson every game. He doesn't get on the score sheet as much as some people, but I'm not afraid to put him on the ice in any situation."

The victory improved the Blue Devils' overall record to 10-4.

Ford got strong performances off the bench from Chris Thomas, Brandon Lemley and Tony Juncaj in the second quarter.

"Our first-line players played with theirs, but the bench was the difference," Petrouleas said. "Brett and David Ptasznik were both out so our bench was a little thin. They outscored us 20-3 off the bench."

Ford's lead eventually reached 22 points late in the fourth quarter.

McLaughlin topped South with 18 points and Mike Armstrong tossed in 12, all in the second half.

Sophomore Paul Gentile started at guard and played well in place of Recht.

"He had to step into a tough role and he had a real good game," Petrouleas said. "We asked him to do certain things and he did them."

North halts skid in OT win

A week off couldn't have come at a better time for Grosse Pointe North's basketball team.

"At first I didn't like having the open date in our schedule, but now we have a week to add some things to our offense for the second half of the season," said coach George Olman. "I think the extra practice time will help us, especially since we're coming off a victory."

The Norsemen ended a three-game losing streak with a 51-49 overtime victory over Anchor Bay and they don't play again until they host Fraser on Friday.

"That was the closest we've come in a long time to playing well for a whole game," Olman said.

His only complaint concerned the last two minutes of the fourth quarter when North let a five-point lead slip away. Anchor Bay, which made 10 of 13 free throws in the quarter, hit a pair with three seconds left to force the extra period.

"We took some bad shots in the last two minutes," Olman said. "It shouldn't have gone into overtime."

The Norsemen quickly shook off that lapse and jumped ahead early in the extra period.

Adam Lowry led North with 13 points and nine rebounds. D.J. Reynolds tossed in 12 points and Matt Westbrook, Kurt Rheume and Mike Haskell combined for 21.

"Those three gave us some outside scoring," Olman said.

The Norsemen also got good efforts off the bench from Dan Devlin and Matt Peters.

"We cut our turnovers down," Olman said. "We have to hold on to the ball better and do the things we want defensively if we're going to win."

North overcame foul trouble encountered by Adam Korzeniewski, who has been a stand-out defensively and on the boards for the Norsemen in the last several games.

"He's been playing super and he probably had to sit for three quarters," Olman said.

North is 6-5 overall and 2-3 in the Macomb Area Conference White Division.

Earlier in the week, the Norsemen's skid continued with a 52-45 loss to L'Anse Creuse North.

The third period was North's downfall as the Crusaders ran up a 20-5 edge to overcome the Norsemen's 28-22 halftime advantage.

"It was turnovers again," Olman said. "They were scoring against our offense, not our defense."

Grosse Pointe North was within four points with less than two minutes remaining, but the Norsemen committed key turnovers on two straight possessions.

Reynolds led Grosse Pointe North with 12 points, Lowry and Korzeniewski each scored nine and Haskell added eight.

Korzeniewski, Haskell and Jason Rio each had strong defensive performances.

No one is escaping the blame for the two consecutive defeats that Grosse Pointe South's basketball team absorbed last week.

"We haven't done a good job of protecting our defensive basket," said coach George Petrouleas after a 70-67 loss to Utica that came on the heels of a 68-46 setback at the hands of Sterling Heights Ford.

Both were Macomb Area Conference White Division games, putting a severe crimp in the Blue Devils' title hopes. South is 2-2 in the league and 6-4 overall.

South Sports

"Some of it is my fault for not getting on their case more," Petrouleas said. "Fifty percent of the game is emotional. You can't beat good teams if you're not emotionally ready to play. The kids are in good spirits and I'm confident we'll bounce back."

South led Utica 32-29 at half.

time, but after three quarters the Blue Devils trailed by three points. South tied the game in the fourth quarter, but again fell behind by three points. The Chiefs forced a turnover and blocked a shot by the Blue Devils down the stretch to preserve the win. Utica hit nine straight free throws in the last three minutes.

Giannico defeats champion

Keith Giannico didn't compete in the Macomb County Invitational, but the Grosse Pointe North senior can stake a claim to the county's 130-pound wrestling championship.

The unbeaten Giannico took a 5-4 decision over Warren Woods-Tower's John Sickles-steel, the 130-pound champion in the Macomb Invitational, to highlight the Norsemen's 55-12 victory over the Titans.

Giannico got an escape with about 30 seconds remaining to get the victory.

Woods-Tower forfeited several matches, but North's Brian Kerber (125), Tony Romolino (145) and Dan Skuce (140) each won on pins.

Earlier in the week, the Norsemen rolled past Chippewa Valley 43-16 in a Macomb Area Conference meet.

Devils' coach John LaLonde after his team's 6-3 victory over Wyandotte.

"I could name a lot of players who did well," LaLonde said. "Rajt had the hat trick and Brennan and Crane did a fine job. I could mention Frederickson every game. He doesn't get on the score sheet as much as some people, but I'm not afraid to put him on the ice in any situation."

The victory improved the Blue Devils' overall record to 10-4.

Ford got strong performances off the bench from Chris Thomas, Brandon Lemley and Tony Juncaj in the second quarter.

"Our first-line players played with theirs, but the bench was the difference," Petrouleas said. "Brett and David Ptasznik were both out so our bench was a little thin. They outscored us 20-3 off the bench."

Ford's lead eventually reached 22 points late in the fourth quarter.

McLaughlin topped South with 18 points and Mike Armstrong tossed in 12, all in the second half.

Sophomore Paul Gentile started at guard and played well in place of Recht.

"He had to step into a tough role and he had a real good game," Petrouleas said. "We asked him to do certain things and he did them."

Grosse Pointe swimmers honored

Certificates and trophies were awarded to members of the City of Grosse Pointe swim team at the squad's annual awards banquet.

Trophies were given to the swimmers who earned the most points in their age group. They included Janice Cassetta and H.J. Richardson in 8-and-under; Kelly O'Hara and Robby Thiel in 10-and-under; Lindsay Sandercott and Tom Leto in 12-and-under; Ashley Wolter and Cory Winger in 14-and-under; and Anita Warner and Jim Bellanca in 17-and-under.

Bellanca broke two City pool records in the backstroke and breaststroke in the Lakefront Swimming Association finals hosted by the Grosse Pointe City team.

Christine Shine and Brian LeRoy won most improved swimmer trophies and Wolter received the team high point trophy.

Earning best attendance trophies were Andrea Nadeau in 8-and-under; Tim Leto and Ben Semmler in 10-and-under; Anne Morris in 12-and-under; Yvonne Zola in 14-and-under; and Anastasia Hryhorczuk in 17-and-under.

All the swimmers were given certificates of participation.

The Norbs (that's the team's nickname) were coached by Ann Rice, Greg Corbett and Craig Winger. They finished first in the association's annual Relay Meet and placed fifth in the dual meet and final standings.

Local gymnast qualifies for state competition

Marla Cummings of the Grosse Pointe Gymnastics Club can start planning for a trip to the U.S. Gymnastics Federation state meet.

Cummings, a Level 8 gymnast, recorded an all-around score of 31.9 in a sectional meet at Farmington Hills, which qualifies her for the state competition in April. She just missed the 32.0 score that would have qualified her for the regional meet.

Cummings had a sixth place finish with a score of 8.10 on parallel bars.

Grosse Pointe Gymnastics' Level 6 girls also made a strong showing in the meet. Katie Lutfy scored 9.0 in vault to earn a third place in the Children's Division. Amanda Lindow was 10th in floor exercise with a 7.80 and 10th in all-around with a 31.1 score.

In the Level 6 Junior Division, Katy Addison was sixth in floor exercise (8.50) and ninth on bars (8.30).

The Level 5 squad was fourth in the team competition.

In the Children's Division, Lindsey White was 16th of 90 competitors with an all-around score of 33.05. Brooke Borden's total score of 32.45 included a top 10 finish of 8.75 on bars.

Other top all-around scores were Suzi Blackwell, 31.75; Karin Polis, 31.30; and Kira Hinds, 31.45 in the Children's

Short Stops

Division. Bianca Bommarito posted 32.15 in the Junior Division.

DATE ADDED: The Wellness Roll at the Joe, an inline and roller skating program at Joe Louis Arena, has added Wednesday, Feb. 19, to its schedule.

Other dates are Tuesday, Feb. 11, and Thursday, Feb. 27. Skating is from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m.

For more information, call 824-0011.

KNIGHTS TIE: University Liggett School's junior varsity hockey team played to a 3-3 tie with the league-leading St. Clair Shores Rebels.

Fran Blake, Cliff Magreta and Jeff Backhurst scored the ULS goals, while captain Chris Abiragi had two assists.

The tie left the Knights with a 4-6-2 record.

Two Norsemen make the cut

Over the long course, a pair of underclassmen are doing an outstanding job for Grosse Pointe North's swimming team.

Freshman Brett Collins and sophomore Steve Williams have both qualified for the State Class A meet in the 500-yard freestyle.

"Those two are exceptional swimmers," said coach Les Roddis. "And they'll be even more terrific when they grow up. Now they're getting by on pure talent and desire. As they get stronger, they'll be even better."

"They've paid their dues, too. They've trained hard so everything they've done is because they've earned it. All the credit for their improvement has to go to (assistant coach) Mike O'Connor. His motivation and work with them has been a big factor."

Williams' qualifying time was a 4:54.3 and Collins' top effort was a 4:57.4 in North's recent 135-50 victory over Sterling Heights.

Last week, the Norsemen posted their fourth consecutive victory with a 127-57 triumph over Roseville.

Williams won the 200 individual medley in 2:20.25 and the 100 breaststroke in 1:13.27 to lead the way in the Macomb Area Conference American Division meet. North also got firsts from John Galvin, 100 freestyle, 2:04.24; Steve Chevalier, diving, 172.95 points; Graham Sisk, 100 butterfly, 1:06.28; Charlie Roddis, 100 freestyle, 55.87; Rusty Milne, 500 freestyle, 5:24; and Paul Swan, 100 backstroke, 1:08.41.

North swept Roseville in the relays. J.P. Gamrat, Chris Ditty, Rick Marcolini and Emmett DeGuvera won the 200 medley relay in 1:58.19; Collins, Gamrat, Roddis and Williams took the 200 freestyle relay in 1:39.4; and Chris Janutol, Milne, Marcolini and Roddis won the 400 freestyle relay in 3:55.25.

North also got personal bests from Dennis Lex in the 200 and 100 freestyle events, Janutol in the 200 freestyle and 100 backstroke, Ditty in the 200 IM, Swan and Marcolini in the 100 butterfly and Rob Ament in the 50 freestyle.

Earlier in the week, North beat University of Detroit Jesuit 101-84 in a non-leaguer.

Individual firsts were taken by Williams, 200 freestyle, 1:56.4; Chevalier, diving, 175.1 points for a personal best; Milne, 500 freestyle, 5:24.43; and Roddis, who won the 100 butterfly in 56.24 and the 100 backstroke in 58.05.

North won the 200 medley relay in 1:51.7 with the team of Gamrat, Galvin, Roddis and Milne.

Personal bests were recorded by Jeff Dungan in the 200 IM, Ditty in the 50 freestyle, Paul Reaser in the 100 butterfly, Chris George in diving, Collins in the 100 backstroke and Galvin in the 100 breaststroke.

"We had a lot of seconds and thirds in that meet," said coach Roddis. "That's a big part of our strength in dual meets."

Charlie Roddis and Williams each took two firsts in North's 135-50 victory over Sterling Heights. Roddis won the 100 butterfly in 55.81 and the 100 backstroke in 58.34. Williams took the 200 freestyle in 1:54.48 and the 100 freestyle in 55.21.

Other individual winners were DeGuvera, 50 freestyle, 26.45; Chevalier, diving, 174.85 points; Collins, 500 freestyle, 4:57.4; and Reaser, 100 breaststroke, 1:13.9. The Norsemen swept the three relays. Gamrat, Ditty, Reaser and Milne posted a 1:57.01 in the 200 medley; Ditty, Ament, Jeff Laethem and Sisk won the 200 in 1:48.29 and Williams, Milne, Roddis and Collins had a winning time of 3:37.8 in the 400.

Ament swam his best time in the breaststroke and Laethem won a swimoff for fourth place in the 50 freestyle, bettering his earlier time by 1 1/2 seconds.

Roddis had firsts in the 100 butterfly (56.53) and the 100 backstroke (59.41) to highlight North's 118-67 victory over Warren Woods-Tower. Brett Collins won the 200 freestyle in 1:55.7; Williams took the 500 freestyle in 5:00.3 and Galvin had a winning time of 1:13.32 in the breaststroke.

Gamrat, Galvin, Roddis and Mike Collins won the 200 medley relay in 1:52.58; Dungan, Galvin, Mike Collins and Reaser took the 200 freestyle relay in 1:43.39; and Williams, Brett Collins, Reaser and Roddis won the 400 freestyle relay in 3:38.66.

Other top performances were turned in by Swan in the 200 IM; Gamrat in the 100 freestyle; Ryan Gallagher in the 500 freestyle; Lex in the breaststroke; and DeGuvera in the 50 freestyle and two relays.

South wrestler avenges earlier loss

L'Anse Creuse North's Marty Plucinski doesn't have anything on Grosse Pointe South wrestler Scott Cairo anymore.

Cairo avenged a loss to Plucinski in the Macomb County Invitational when he beat him 4-3 to highlight the Blue Devils' 43-29 victory over the Crusaders in a Macomb Area Conference White Division meet.

"Scott was sixth in the county meet and Plucinski was fourth, but this time Scott led throughout the match," said South coach Larry Carr. "He's been wrestling well for us."

Cairo, who wrestles at 140 pounds, also posted a 4-1 victory in South's 43-20 non-league win over Brother Rice.

South's other winners against LCN were Steve Bunchek, who had a 51-second fall at 103; Paul Kelley, a 10-2 decision at 119; Mark Francese, a pin in 1:23 at 125; Jesse Culver, a fall at 3:27 in the 171-pound bout; Rich Reynolds, a pin in 1:33 at 189; and heavyweight Don Leal, who pinned his opponent in 15 seconds.

The victory over Brother Rice had pins by Kelley in 30 seconds at 112 and a 27-second fall by Francese at 125. Other South victories were an 11-2 decision by Chris Gianino at 145; a 13-5 verdict for Dan Klaasen at 152; a pin in 1:33 by Rob Sharrow at 160; and Culver's pin in 1:57 at 171. Leal wrestled to a 2-2 draw in the heavyweight match.

South also dropped a 54-10 decision to Owosso in non-league competition. Gianino won 14-2 at 145 pounds and Reynolds had a 38-second fall at 189.

The Blue Devils are 9-6 overall and 3-2 in the league.

All sports copy is due by 10 a.m. Monday.

South gets act together in dual meet

Grosse Pointe South's volleyball team got back on the beam last week in its Macomb Area Conference White Division match with L'Anse Creuse North.

"We finally came out of the doldrums and played with some real good intensity," said coach Cindy Sharpe after the Lady Devils overpowered the Crusaders 15-5, 15-3.

"Hopefully, this will continue. We've been stressing team play even more than usual and it seemed to pay off."

The victory, coupled with an earlier 15-7, 15-10 triumph over Romeo in a makeup of a postponed match, boosted South's record to 17-1 overall and 7-0 in the MAC White. The Lady Devils are ranked eighth in the state in Class A.

Angela Drake had 11 kills against L'Anse Creuse North, while teammates Stephanie Coddens and Sue McGahey had five and four, respectively. Sue Faremouth had 16 assists.

Sharpe also praised the work of Vicky Spicer.

"She did a real good job in the back row against L'Anse Creuse," the coach said.

Drake and Coddens each had four kills against Romeo and McGahey added three. Faremouth collected 14 assists.

South will play in the 24-team Wayne State Invitational on Saturday.

Freshman rewriting ULS record board

It hasn't taken long for University Liggett's Betsy Belenky to make her mark on the school's swimming record board.

Belenky, a freshman, set two varsity records last week in helping the Knights' co-ed swim team win two dual meets.

She had a record time of 2:23.16 in winning the 200-yard individual medley in a 106-63 victory over South Lake. Belenky also won the 100 butterfly in 1:04.97 and swam on two winning relays.

She also made her presence felt in ULS' 106-56 victory over Ann Arbor Greenhills. She broke the school record in the 100 backstroke with a 1:07.89 clocking and was second to teammate Beth Weyhing in the butterfly. Once again, Belenky swam on two winning relays.

Sean Gardella and Jon Sieber were also double winners for ULS in the South Lake meet. Gardella took the 100 freestyle in 1:03.13 and the 100 breaststroke in 1:16.58. Sieber won the 200 freestyle in 2:01 and the 500 in 5:35.15.

Anita Warner took first in the 50 freestyle in 27.99.

ULS swept the relays. Katie

Tompkins, Gardella, Belenky and Warner won the 200 medley in 2:02.33; Gardella, Weyhing, Anne Petz and Sieber had a winning time of 1:52.1 in the 200 freestyle; and Warner, Weyhing, Belenky and Sieber combined for a 4:07.36 in the 400 freestyle.

Weyhing was runner-up to Belenky in the butterfly with a 1:05.16 and Tompkins took second in the backstroke in 1:13.44.

Weyhing was a double-winner in the Greenhills meet as she took the 50 freestyle in 26.57. Other individual winners against the Gryphons were Sieber, 200 freestyle, 2:01.62; Gardella, 100 breaststroke, 1:16.2; and Warner, 500 freestyle, 5:42.63.

The Knights again swept the relays. Belenky, Gardella, Weyhing and Sieber won the 200 medley in 2:01.04; Gardella, Warner, Petz and Walter Gasser took the 200 freestyle in 1:53.86; and Warner, Weyhing, Belenky and Sieber swam a 4:12.18 in the 400 freestyle.

Gardella had a strong second-place effort of 1:01.34 in the 100 freestyle.

Don't own a rototiller? Then consider container gardening

By John Minnis
 Assistant Editor

If you always wanted to try gardening but were turned off by the size of the commitment, then think small. Think container gardening.

Container gardening — planting in flower boxes or pots — may be just the thing for those whose idea of fun does not include renting a rototiller and spending hours at back-breaking weed pulling.

"Container gardening is becoming more popular," said Mike Bovio, who will teach container gardening for the Grosse Pointe Community Education Department in a class next week. He is a Michigan certified nurseryman and is nursery manager for English Gardens lawn and garden supply in West Bloomfield.

The class will provide information on planning, planting and maintaining flowers and

types of containers and maintenance will be discussed.

Not only is container gardening the answer for residents without a lot of space for a garden, it's great for adding color to non-plantable areas, such as at poolside and on decks, porches and patios.

Annuals work best in containers, Bovio said, because perennials won't survive the winter in an above-ground environment as they would in an open-ground bed.

Herbs are popular in containers, Bovio said, as are vegetables. Just about any dwarf variety of veggie will work, Bovio said. Some people plant cherry tomatoes and peppers and some find room for full-sized tomatoes.

Annuals should be planted close together, allowing just enough space for root development. Vegetables, however, need more space. Tomatoes, for example, need a lot of room so that sunlight can reach the fruit.

Two areas of concern are the soil and watering. Bovio said the most common problem with container gardening is inadequate drainage. A completely sealed container causes water to quickly build up in the bottom, resulting in root rot. Drain holes are a must.

Also, good, porous potting soil is required. Yard dirt should never be used because it will clump and compact and not drain properly.

After planting, regular maintenance is limited to watering and feeding. Fertilizing is crucial, Bovio said, because the container's soil is limited and nutrients get used up.

More information on container gardening can be obtained directly from Bovio or by attending his class at Barnes school, Room 204, from 7 to 9 p.m. on Tuesday, Feb. 11. The course fee is $7. Call the Community Education Department at 343-2178 for more information.

Container combinations

Sunny locations:

- Geraniums ringed with petunias
- Parsley or pepper plants with an edge of low-growing dwarf marigolds, dwarf zinnias or alyssum
- Medium-sized striped zinnias, edged with Thunbergia zinnias
- Salvia fringed with cascade petunias

Shady locations:

- Begonias centered with a few large impatiens
- Wax begonias circled with alyssum
- Coleus center ringed with lobelia and alyssum
- Begonia ringed with lobelia and alyssum

Vegetables:

- Patio or other container-variety tomatoes with a ring of leaf lettuce
- A trellis supporting one or two small-variety cucumbers with a pot edging of cabbage
- One zucchini squash plant edged with lettuce
- Cherry tomatoes with a pot border of spinach or lettuce

Herbs:

- Chives, lettuce and basil planted in separate clumps in the same pot
- Rosemary, thyme and sage (fragrant herbs) planted in separate clumps

Evergreen

Grosse Pointe North's Class of 1991 donated 12 evergreen trees to the school. The trees line the median of the school's main drive. The class also gave $250 to the Class of '95 to help it get started on the homecoming. Shown are Gail Marlow, class president; Beth Weber, secretary; Aimee Argel, treasurer; Karen Clein, class adviser; and accepting the monetary donation is Tom Gauerke, athletic director.

Landscape workshop planned

"The Low Maintenance Landscape," a one-day training workshop designed for south-east Michigan homeowners, has been scheduled for Saturday, Feb. 29, at the Southfield Convention Center, Days Hotel from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

The workshop features keynote speakers Doug Chapman, horticulturist-director of Dow Gardens; Pamela Harper, author of "Designing with Perennials"; Dr. Warren Wagner, author of "Michigan Trees"; and Margaret Thele, a landscape designer.

Speakers and small group workshops led by master gardeners, professional gardeners and garden designers from sponsoring firms will help participants select the right trees and shrubs, combine plants in pleasing ways and find and plant landscape elements.

A registration fee of $85 includes all handouts and lunch. Mail your registration to Perennial Favorites, 120 Lorbeta, Waterford, Mich. 48328, or call 1-313-681-7850.

A showing of original one-of-a-kind furniture designs, maquettes and interior design models by students at the Center for Creative Studies will be hosted by Zeising Associates at the Michigan Design Center in Troy, from Feb. 27 through March 31.

The Michigan Design Center is at 1700 Stutz Drive in Troy. Zeising Associates is located just inside the north entrance. For information, call 872-3118, ext. 284.

Builders to meet

How to enhance your company's growth and profitability will be the topic on Thursday, Feb. 13, at the general membership meeting of the Builders Association of Southeastern Michigan.

Darin Powers, president of the Powers Group, and an expert in consulting, training and development, will discuss the latest in processes, systems and tools designed to make your company customer-driven.

You will learn time-saving tips on sending and receiving calls, how to build better rapport with customers and how to handle difficult people with greater ease.

The seminar will be held at Penna's of Sterling Heights, 38400 Van Dyke (between 17 Mile and Metro Parkway). The program will begin at 6 p.m. with table-top displays and a cash bar. Dinner will be served from 7 to 8 p.m. and the program will conclude at 9 p.m.

The cost is $25 for members, and $40 for non members.

Construction stable

The number of new residential construction projects in Michigan was stable in November, reflecting a 1.3 percent improvement compared to the same time last year.

Despite the increase in housing starts, however, the total value was down by 4.7 percent, according to Thomas Caterino, 1992 president of the Michigan Association of Home Builders.

The association of builders, based in Lansing, comprises 8,800 member companies representing more than 400,000 people in the home building/construction industry, with 36 local home builder associations throughout the state.

Hillside house

A controlled flow of light and space is the distinct feature of the tropical Monroe. The entry is a landing instead of a hall.

A flight of steps climbs up to the vaulted living room that runs the full width of the house. Large windows at either end make this a bright, airy space, while a door leads out to the large back deck.

A flow-through kitchen to one side serves both the living room and the small dining area in a glassed alcove looking out on the deck. Informal meals can be served across the long counter that separates the eating area from the kitchen work space.

Beyond the kitchen, the feel of the house becomes more traditional, with three bedrooms, a bath and utility room/den off a long hall. All of these rooms have tall windows to maximize light and ventilation. The largest of the bedrooms is a master suite with its own private bath, vanity, walk-in closet, and exterior door to the back deck.

Storage is limited on the main floor, but a second flight of stairs from the entry landing leads down to the garage, which is tucked below the living room and could accommodate a work bench, shelves or even a wine cellar.

The Monroe was designed to fit on a hillside. With its split-level entrance, and below-decks garage, the house can be turned to fit on almost any sloping lot.

For a study kit of the Monroe (228-31), send $7.50 to Today's Home, P.O. Box 2832-T Eugene, Ore. 97402. Be sure to specify plan name and number when ordering.

101 PRAYERS

NOVENA TO ST. JUDE May the Sacred Heart of Jesus be adored, glorified, loved and preserved throughout the world now and forever. Oh, Sacred Heart of Jesus, pray for us. Worker of miracles, pray for us. St. Jude, helper of the hopeless, pray for us. Say this prayer 9 times a day. By the 8th day your prayer will be answered. It has never been known to fail, never. Publication must be promised. Thanks St. Jude for prayer answered. Special thanks to our Mother of Perpetual Help. V.M.

101 PRAYERS

PRAYER TO THE HOLY SPIRIT Holy Spirit, you who make me see everything and who shows me the way to reach my ideal. You, who give me the Divine Gift to forgive and forget the wrong that is done to me and you who are in all instances of my life with me. I, in this short dialogue want to thank you for everything and confirm once more that I never want to be separated from you no matter how great the material desires may be. I want to be with you and my loved ones in your perpetual glory. Amen.

Thank you for your love towards me and my loved ones. Pray this prayer three consecutive days without asking your wish, after third day your wish will be granted, no matter how difficult it may be. Then promise to publish this prayer as soon as your favor has been granted. Thank you for favors received. M.C.

500 ANIMALS ADOPT A PET
LOVABLE dogs and cats need good homes. For adoption information call: Northern Suburbs Animal Welfare League Volunteer. 754-8741, 463-7422.

PLEASE DON'T DELAY!
SPAY OR NEUTER YOUR PET TODAY!
An altered pet is a healthier and happier companion. Also, it spares you the grief and pain of having puppies and kittens destroyed when no homes can be found. Countless numbers of sweet, innocent little ones are euthanized every day in shelters across the country because a pet wasn't spayed or neutered. If we cut down on the numbers of unwanted litters being born, we will also cut down on the number of abandoned, lost and unwanted animals to destroy.

WE WILL BE HAPPY TO PROVIDE ADVICE as well as a LIST OF ECONOMICAL SERVICE SOURCES

HOW TO USE THE HOMEBUYER GRID

Select your preferred location, price or style of home. The listings will show the address, bedroom/bath, description of home, price, and telephone number. REALTORS and OPEN SUNDAYS will be indicated in bold.

Welcome to the Real Estate Resource!

In an effort to make your search for that next house easier, the Grosse Pointe News is initiating a new page where you can find in a few minutes what the market is offering today, in the five Grosse Pointes, St. Clair Shores, Harper Woods, Detroit and other municipalities. This source will pinpoint what the up-to-date price of a property is, what are its features and when it will be available for viewing.

Don't Miss Your Opportunity

Here's the opportunity you've been waiting for. It's your chance to advertise in the one resource that area buyers will be consulting when they're ready to take action. Along with your advertisement, readers will find informative articles on buying and selling real estate. Be a part of the Real Estate Resource page being featured weekly in the...
