Group urges less use of pesticides as studies find growing cancer link

They call themselves the Pesticide Education Team.

The three women are part of a joint task force of the League of Women Voters and the Grosse Pointe Citizens for Recycling.

Fran Schonenberg, Leah Vartanian and Marlene Harle have been studying the use of pesticides and have come up with a plea: Stop or reduce the use of pesticides on your lawns and gardens.

When a friend's dog died of sinus cancer, Schonenberg wondered how much of the dog's fatal illness was due to the chemicals being sprayed on the lawn. That prompted the formation of the task force.

The group uncovered some startling findings. They discovered that research is beginning to show a correlation between pesticides and cancer and other diseases in children and pets.

The LWV sent a survey to local veterinarians asking them if they've seen any increase in Most veterinarians surveyed said they ask if pesticides have been sprayed recently when confronted with a dog that has certain symptoms, like vomiting, skin rashes or irritated feet. Some said they have seen increases in cancer among certain breeds of dogs.

"I didn't know too much about pesticides," Vartanian Vartanian said. "But when you get into it you see how pervasive they are.

To begin with, Vartanian discovered that "pesticide" is a generic term that applies to all herbicides, fungicides and insecticides.

She also discovered that many lawn fertilizers have pesticides in them. She believes they're unnecessary.

"Fertilizers simply feed your lawn, there's no need to add pesticides to a fertilizer," she

"The point is that we're practicing overkill most of the time," Harle said.

Vartanian agrees.

'Everybody's afraid of these bugs, but do they really have them?" Vartanian asked. "We don't have to prevent (insect infestation), we can wait until it happens and still treat it effectively.'

"People need to realize there are repercussions to what they do," Harle said.

In addition to symptoms found in animals, pesticides move into the groundwater and leach into the lakes where we get our fish and drinking wa-

Sometimes a lawn will react against chemicals and the soil can become barren.

And perhaps most importantly, insects have the ability. to mutate and become immune to some chemicals.

"We're creating superbugs," Vartanian said.

But what can be done? Vartanian, Schonenberg and Harle run pesticide-free households and they say it's easy.

Last 2 get probation; no one to serve time for Gravel's murder

Ben Gravel Jr. said he's not sure what's worse: the murder of his father two years ago by a group of teens who wanted his car, or what happened afterward.

Of the six teenagers charged in the Feb. 8, 1990, ambushmurder of Grosse Pointe Farms businessman Benjamin Gravel, 53, not one will spend time in prison.

On March 25, Recorder's Court Chief Judge Dalton A. Roberson sentenced Gregory Brown and Willie Hobbs, both 18, as juveniles and named them wards of the state. They will be held at the W.J. Maxey Center for juveniles in Whitmore Lake until they turn 21 or officials determine they have been rehabilitated.

They were part of a gang of teens which dragged a large tree branch across Clairpointe near Jefferson in Detroit in a bid to steal a car so they could go to a party.

Gravel, who was returning home from the Bayview Yacht Club at 10:10 p.m., stopped his car to move the tree. When he got out the gang attempted to rob him. One of them shot him as he got back in his car and sped away.

Assistant prosecutor Jim Gonzales has recommended that the sentences be appealed. He had wanted Brown and Hobbs sentenced as adults which would have meant 10 to 25 years in jail.

The decision to appeal will be made by the prosecutor's office within a month, Gonzales said. "The ultimate insult was that we weren't allowed to hear the final verdict in court,' Gravel said. The sentencing was originally set for 2 p.m. but Roberson moved it up to 9 a.m. Gravel believes it was done to avoid the media. The case attracted attention not only for its randomness, but also for the sentences that were handed down:

• Kermit Haynes, who was 16 at the time of the incident, admitted killing Gravel and pleaded guilty to first-degree murder. He was sentenced to invenile probation and place in the custody of the state until he turns 21. The sentence was handed down despite two different court psychologists' reports which said Haynes was a dangerous person and would probably never be rehabilitated. Gonzales said Haynes' file will be reviewed by Roberson this month to determine if he is being rehabilitated.

She gazed around at the brickcolored paneling, the comfortable sofa, the few framed works of art and decorative touches, mostly Oriental pieces, that gave the room its subdued, restful feeling.

"Carl Jung was a psychiatrist; born the last part of the 1800s; died in the 1960s; a close associate of Sigmund Freud," she said.

"Freud said that infantile sexuality was the root of all problems. Jung, however, said that a religious drive is an important point for most people. He was one of the few psychologists who recognized the role of the Divine or the Spirit or some higher power.

"Jung said this religious drive doesn't hit us until we're over 35. Until then, most people do what society expects them to do. They go to school; pursue a career; marry; have children.

The plan — called the Okotie-Eboh plan — was supposed to go into effect for the commissioner elections in November.

Last Tuesday, the court told the Wayne County Apportionment Commission to adopt a new plan by April 7 for redrawing the county commission's 15 districts. The plan has to be filed by April 9 with the court for review.

The court said that the attorneys for Palmer T. Heenan, Park mayor, and Edward H. McNamara, Wayne County executive, had shown that it's Following nine months of review and evaluation, the council concluded that there is still a need to inform the public about the complex issues related to the use of alcohol and other drugs. An ad hoc committee was formed last spring to assess the organization and how it could best respond to the concerns of the Grosse Pointe community.

Committee members determined that providing residents with current factual information about alcohol/drugs and the problems related to their use is a viable goal and a need which is not being met systematically by any other organiza-

The information presented and discussed in these publications is intended to heighten public awareness of alcohol/ drug issues.

In addition, printed resources containing current, accurate alcohol/drug information will be gathered and made available to those interested. The council will also provide, upon request, appropriate resource materials for alcohol/drug prevention program offered throughout the community.

Although the national trend among like community action groups has been to focus attention on teenage drinking and use of other drugs, during its 10-year history SAC² has always been concerned about the alcohol/drug problems which exist in all age groups.

Research by experts in the field indicates that excessive drinking, smoking and drug use within the teenage population is a reflection of excessive use and acceptance of alcohol, tobacco and other mood-altering drugs throughout society. The ad hoc committee recommended that SAC² continue to present issues related to all segments of society.

Election of officers will take place at the organization's annual meeting. The slate includes: president, Ruth Zinn; vice president, Mary Ellen Bleakley; recording secretary, Arlene Creech; treasurer, Greg Dodds; and corresponding secretary, Terrie McLauchlan.

The Substance Abuse Community Council of Grosse Pointe was incorporated as a non-profit organization in October 1982, one of the first community action groups concerned with alcohol/drug problems to form in the state of Michigan.

SAC² is composed of members who represent a cross section of the community. The council is made up solely of volunteers, has no paid staff, no office space or other administrative costs. Its budget relies on contributions from individuals, community organizations and foundations.

Patient Advocates: A voice for you when you need it

By Maureen McNuity Staff Writer

Maude Lamkin was concerned about what would happen to her if her health deteriorated so badly that she no longer could speak for herself.

After being in and out of hospitals for several heart attacks, Lamkin, 69, saw first-hand the various treatments that modern medical technology offered and knew that there were some artificial means of life support that she would not want for herself.

About four months ago, Lamkin, who lives in Detroit, asked her daughter, Geri Skovranko, of Mount Clemens, to be her voice in the hospital should she become physically or mentally incapacitated.

Skovranko, a former nurse and now patient representative at Cottage Hospital in Grosse Pointe Farms, had also grown increasingly worried about her mother's health and readily agreed to legally represent her.

Skovranko and her mother who are being admitted of their signed documents called Designation of Patient Advocate which gave Skovranko the legal authority to make all decisions regarding care, custody and medical treatment of her mother.

"So often, family members don't want to think about it or discuss it," Skovranko said. "But then something happens and the family comes to the hospital and they get scared because they're not sure what they should do. And even after making a decision, they sometimes regret what they did.

"I didn't want, at some later time, to make the wrong decision regarding my mother and regret it."

Attorney Michael Cumming, of Clark, Klein & Beaumont in Detroit, said because of federal legislation that went into effect last December, all hospitals and nursing homes receiving Medicare or Medicaid funds are now required to advise patients right to have a patient advocate.

"A person can appoint a patient advocate there (in the hospital), but obviously it's better to have that taken care of before getting to the hospital," Cumming said.

Upon entering the hospital, patients are also given the option to make "Advance Directives" sometimes called a Living Will, where they specify how far they want physicians to go to keep them alive.

"For example," Cumming said, "some people may want artificial respiration but not artificial hydration or nutrition, or vice-versa. People generally have their own emotions on these things but they are very sensitive to those three areas.'

However, Cumming said, unless they spell out those directives in their Designation of Patient Advocate document, those directions regarding their medical care are not currently enforceable in Michigan courts. Cumming, of Grosse Pointe Park, said he's written about 300 Designation of Patient Advocate documents, which cost less than $50, since the state passed legislation in December 1990 allowing people to designate a patient advocate.

The patient advocate enters the picture when a patient's attending physician and another physician, either a medical doctor or psychiatrist, agree in writing that the patient is unable to participate in medical decisions.

"The physicians and hospitals are bound by two things when that happens: the instructions of the patient advocate and sound medical practice," Cumming said. "If there's a dispute, the patient advocate can take it to Probate Court."

Ideally, as in the case of Skovranko and her mother, communication between the patient and his or her advocate will be open and clear as to what the patient wants. Family members and the patient's family physician should also be informed of the decision and copies of the document should be sent to the patient's attorney.

"What this does," Skovranko said, "is give people a chance to the patient may not be doing so well and they don't know what talk ahead of time instead of feeling bad later.

"So often I see family members come into the hospital and Mom or Dad wants concerning how far to go. Sometimes they end up feeling really guilty about what they've done." All of that can be avoided, said Skovranko, if family members, friends or companions talk to each other ahead of time and a patient advocate is designated.

"It gives people a chance to talk about what to do in an emergency before an emergency really happens," said.

Instead of hiring an attorney to draft a Designation of Patient Advocate document, people can send for a standard form, along with a $2 check or money order, by writing to:

Patient Advocate P.O. Box 950

Patient Advocate vs. Living Will: In Michigan, a legal difference ing that while the Designation between the the Designation of

Based on his own practice, said attorney Michael Cumming, whose areas of expertise include estate planning, pro-bate and tax law, people who once made out a Living Will now are designating a patient advocate as part of their comprehensive estate planning.

"People revise them very carefully and make sure they're very artfully drafted to make sure they're taken care of in the way they want to be taken care of," Cumming said. "Each document is usually customdrafted. That's the reason people go to a lawyer to draft a satisfied with the form that you can send away for."

Cumming said the difference between a Patient Advocate designation and a Living Will, which is a written document that lists specifically what kind of medical treatment the patient does or does not want done, is that a Living Will is merely an expression of intentions regarding how one wants to be treated when they can no longer speak on their own behalf.

"In Michigan, the Living Will is not enforceable at all and no hospital or doctor has to follow it," said Cumming, add-of Patient Advocate is tending to replace the Living Will in Michigan because of enforceability, many states do enforce Living Wills, including Florida and many other southern states which have large senior citizen populations.

But Patient Advocate documents are also widely recognized and enforced in most states, Cumming said, should a medical problem occur outside of one's home state.

David Solbelson, legal counsel to the House Judiciary Committee and House Subcommittee on Death and Dying, believes there is no comparison Patient Advocate document and the Living Will and is hoping that a legislative bill currently pending in the State House will make Living Wills legally enforceable. "The focus of the two documents is very different," Solbelson said. "The Patient Advocate document gives the decision-making power to another person. There are a lot of people who are 80 or 85 and older and they don't have anyone who they're willing to trust with those kind of medical decisions.

"People also commonly appoint their spouse as their advocate but even then, the spouse isn't always sure what to do because in our society, death and these kinds of decisions are not something we're comfortable talking about.'

Sobelson said many older people don't even know anyone who they could appoint as their advocate, so in a state like Michigan, they have no legal options.

Michigan is one of only five states in the nation which currently do not recognize Living Wills as binding legal documents.

"Another problem with the Designation of Patient Advocate document," said Sobelson, is that the patient advocate can bow out of the agreement any time and the patient and advocate don't even have to know each other. The Living Will keeps the decision-making power with the individual."

Public and private hearings were held recently by the House Judiciary Committee and House Subcommittee on Death and Dying on bills ranging from passing a Living Will statute to a Senate-passed bill criminalizing assisted suicide, as in the recent Jack Kevorkian case, making it a fouryear felony.

"The Senate-passed bill prohibiting assisted suicide does not clearly define what assisted suicide is," said Sobelson. "If that bill were to pass, it might make it a felony crime for physicians, hospitals and individuals to comply with the terms of a Living Will. This is why, Michigan needs to have a Living Will statute on the books.

"The way the bill is written now, it could be construed that removing a life support system in compliance with a Living Will is assisted suicide."

Though they are not scheduled yet, further hearings will probably be held, said Sobelson; adding that there are some major groups of experts who are very involved in these issues who have not yet been heard

The Park did not put the asbestos removal project out for bids because it is such a specialized field of work, and because Pointe Environmental Services' bid was competitive with the amount that the Park has paid for asbestos removal in the past, said Dale Krajniak, city manager-clerk.

The city paid another company $6,900 two years ago to have asbestos wrapped pipes removed from the boiler-mechanical room of the department of public works' garage, he said. "And that was for a far less amount of asbestoswrapped pipe," he said.

Pointe Environmental Services Inc. was recommended to the city by Redstone Architects, the company that drafted the plans for renovating the old fire station, he said.

The contract with Pointe Environmental specifically outlines how the asbestos will be removed and treated. It also says that all of the asbestos that is removed will be double bagged and taken to a certified landfill by a licensed transporter. The Park will receive certificates of disposal from the landfill within five days of the job's completion.

Krajniak said the work will take about four days and should begin by Monday, April

Wayne County. Hamtramck and Highland Park do not have enough residents to comprise their own district, so they must be combined with Detroit, which completely surrounds them, he said.

The same holds true for the Grosse Pointes and Harper Woods, he said. Together, they do not have enough residents to form a complete district, so they must be combined with neighboring Detroit.

"There has to be at least two combined districts," Smith said. "The question is, how many more are you going to create? There is no need to split the Grosse Pointes, which are really one community, into two districts when they don't even have enough residents for one district," Smith said.

He argued that the Grosse Pointes are one community because they share the same school district, public library and civic organizations. He also said that the five Grosse Pointes operate a joint probation department, share police and fire radio services, and have mutual aid agreements. Furthermore, he said, they participate collectively in a refuse disposal authority and jointly administer several county and federal block grant programs.

Heenan also requested that the Supreme Court throw out the Okotie-Eboh plan on the grounds that it would dilute the voting strength of Park residents on county commission is-

Park residents would comprise only 9 percent of the 2nd District under the Okotie-Eboh plan; 91 percent would be made up of Detroit residents. This would violate the federal statute that says everyone's vote must be weighted equally, Heenan argued, because the concerns of the suburban residents would be subordinate to the concerns of the city of Detroit in the 2nd District.

Heenan and McNamara petitioned the Supreme Court to review the case in January, after the state Court of Appeals denied their request to have the Okotie-Eboh plan thrown

The Court of Appeals said it would not hear the case because the attorneys for Heenan and McNamara did not produce sufficient grounds for re-

"That was kind of disappointing, because the court really didn't explain why our grounds for review were deficient," Smith said.

Two weeks ago, the Supreme Court asked the attorneys representing Heenan and Mc-Namara to present oral arguments in the case last Tuesday. The court announced its decision to send the apportionment commission back to the drawing board that afternoon.

The apportionment commission met at 1:30 p.m. Monday in the Detroit City-County Building to begin hearing ideas for a new plan.

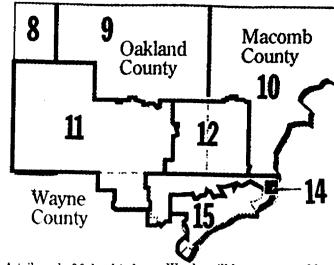

"We mainly discussed procedure," said Wayne County Prosecuting Attorney John D. O'-Hair, a member of the apportionment commission. "It appeared that not all interested parties had been notified of the meeting. The commission members had been notified, and word had gotten out to some people, but not to everyone it should have.'

Because of that, the commission decided not to hear any proposals for a new plan until 1:30 p.m. today, April 2.

"We have gleaned every court document to find the names of people who were interested in this before, and we have sent notices to them about the meeting," O'Hair said.

The meeting will be held in the auditorium on the 13th floor of the Detroit City-County Building and is open to the Service of PA

Revised congressional districts

A tribunal of federal judges recently redrew the boundary lines of congressional district in the state. District 14, comprising Detroit and Grosse Pointe Woods and Shores and Harper Woods, will be represented by John Conyers and District 15 will be Barbara-Rose Collins' new district, encompassing eastside Detroit and Grosse Pointe Park, City and Farms.

Reactions to court order

By Donna Walker Staff Writer

We were absolutely delighted," said James A. Smith, attorney for Grosse Pointe Park Mayor Palmer T. Heenan. "It's not over, because the commission still has some work to do, but it was a tremendous result. The court did just what we wanted it to do.

Heenan said, "I'm so appreciative of the fact that the court understood our viewpoint, and I'm very hopeful that the commission will permit us to be with our natural constituency when they draw up the new plan.

"I have nothing against the commission. They felt that they did the best they could. I'm just hopeful that in the future they'll be more receptive to the spirit of the

Michael Duggan, assistant Wayne County executive, said, "We're very pleased with the ruling. The court made it clear that there have to be some basic standards when reapportioning districts."

David Cavanagh, 1st District commissioner, said, "Naturally, I'm anxious to see the results of the new plan. This whole process of apportioning districts is very confusing to voters. There's no rhyme or reason to it. It's just the art of political compromise.'

Wayne County Prosecutor John D. O'Hair is a member of the apportionment commission. He said that he has always been opposed to the Okotie-Eboh plan and that the only reason he voted for it last September was so that he could ask the commission to reconsider adopting the plan. Under parliamentary procedure, he said, a person can't ask for an adopted motion to be reconsidered unless he was part of the majority that adopted the motion.

After the plan was adopted, none of the other commission members supported O'Hair's request to have it reconsidered, he said.

"I was opposed to the plan from the beginning," O'Hair said, "so I am pleased that the court decided to send it back to the commission for consideration. The court found that the plan as adopted was fatally flawed in respect to the law.'

He said that he was against the plan because it unnecessarily fractured some communities. Also, he said that he thought the adoption procedure was abused by the commission.

"It was my impression," he said, "that the plan had been formulated by a few members of the commission and that it was basically a done deal. The plan was adopted in such a way that it precluded substantive participation from the public."
Wayne County Clerk

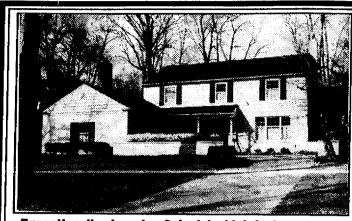

James R. Killeen, chair of the Wayne County Appor-tionment Commission, did not return phone calls. Juliette Okotie-Eboh, vice chair and the Democratic Party appointee to the apportionment commission, and Wendy Lamb, the Republican Party appointee to the commission, also did not return phone calls. They formulated the bipartisan Okotie-Eboh plan which the state Supreme Court said did not contain enough whole commissioner districts within Detroit.

In addition to O'Hair, Killeen, Okotie-Eboh and Lamb, the apportionment commission includes Marya V. Sieminski, chief deputy county clerk, and Raymond J. Wojtowicz, county treas-nce again a congressional redistricting plan has given the Pointes the shaft, this time for the benefit of two Democratic members of Congress from Detroit.

GOP Pointes get the shaft in districting

As announced last week by three federal judges, the plan supposedly favored the Republicans but it obviously did not give any consideration to the Pointes which have consistently voted Republican down through the years.

True, the Democrats appear likely to give up the two congressional seats the state will lose this year, but the plan will make the Republican Pointes tiny minorities in the districts of two incumbent congressmen, Reps. Barbara-Rose Collins and John Conyers of Detroit.

The 1992 plan announced last week is even more unfavorable to the Pointes than the controversial 1982 reapportionment. Under that plan, the Park and the City were shifted into the 13th District now represented by Barbara-Rose Collins, while the Farms, Shores and Woods were left in the 14th District represented by Dennis Hertel.

In the new District 15, Collins keeps the Park and the City and will pick up Grosse Pointe Farms while Conyers, whose current 1st District does not in-

This newspaper, and a number of

he Grosse Pointes have scored a victory in their second attempt to defeat a Wayne County redistricting plan that would have shifted Grosse Pointe Park into the 2nd county commissioner district.

The Pointes lost their first attack on the plan in the Court of Appeals but last week the state Supreme Court overturned the Wayne County Apportionment Commission's redistricting plan which would have separated the Park from the rest of the Pointe communities in the 1st Dis-

In its decision, the court told the apportionment commission to redraw the 15 commissioner districts by April 10. The early deadline is required in order to have the new plan in effect well before the August primary.

In effect, the court ruled that through their attorneys, the appellants, Palmer T. Heenan, Park mayor, Edward H. McPointe officials, had campaigned for reuniting the Pointes into one district, preferably one made up of other suburban communities. Instead, the Pointes once more were split up and this time made

one in court

Namara, Wayne County executive, and David Cavanagh, 1st District commissioner, had shown that it would be possible to create more whole districts in the city of Detroit than the commission put into its original plan.

McNamara had also charged that the original map was drawn to make re-election difficult for his staunchest downriver supporters on the Wayne County Board of Commissioners. That move was regarded as an attempt by Mayor Coleman Young and his apportionment commission allies to reduce McNamara's political clout.

Whatever the original intent of the apportionment commission, we hope it now can respect the wishes of the Pointes to remain unified in one county commissioner district. The supreme court, thanks to the successful appeals, has given the Pointes powerful support for their view. Let's hope it prevails.

minor appendages to two districts lying chiefly in Detroit.

As a consequence, the new 15th District will include some of the poorest people in the state in Detroit as well as some of the wealthiest, who can be found in Grosse Pointe Shores. A community of interest? Hardly.

The new 15th District, which appears to be a clear example of gerrymandering, is shaped like a hand gun, as the map published in the news columns of today's issue of the Grosse Pointe News makes clear. It surely can be regarded as a gun pointed at the Pointes, in our view.

Democrat Dennis Hertel, the current 14th District congressman, will have to run in another district, because his home in Harper Woods and much of his current district, are in Conyer's new district. He no doubt will run in the 12th District in which Democratic Rep. Sander Levin of Southfield also will be seeking re-election.

Democratic Rep. David Bonior will hang on to all of his Macomb County district, including all of St. Clair Shores and will gain all of St. Clair County. He will also retain Lake Township, which is a part of St. Clair Shores but lies in Macomb County.

The gerrymandering of the Pointes in the congressional redistricting offers further evidence to support our view that the five Pointe municipalities would have more clout on many fronts, and especially in future reapportionments, if they were, in fact, unified into one city.

It won't happen this year but it could happen in the next decade. And it should.

No accountability for murder? he record was finally completed last week for the six Detroit youths charged with the murder of Grosse Pointe Farms businessman Benjamin Gravel on Feb. 8, 1990, but it does not prove that justice was served. The last two of the six to be charged pleaded guilty to second degree murder and were sentenced to juvenile probation by Recorder's Court Chief Judge Dalton Roberson who had handled the cases of the other four. Such a sentence for the last two of the murderous crew had been forecast after Roberson earlier had sentenced to juvenile probation both Cortez Miller, 17, who admitted he brought the gun to the attempted holdup, and Kermit Haynes, 19, who confessed he had fired the shot that killed Gravel.

I wo other participants who were tried as adults were found not guilty of firstdegree murder in October 1991 by a Detroit Recorder's jury.

What these developments mean is that unless they commit another crime, the four confessed and convicted murderers will join the acquitted pair on the streets when they become 21, despite their complicity in a killing committed when the victim didn't stop his car on their de-

In sentencing Gregory Brown, 18, and Willie Hobbs, also 18, Judge Roberson in his written opinion said last week that both "are amenable to treatment in the juvenile system.'

In view of Roberson's cavalier attitude in imposing earlier sentences in the case, we do not know what his comment means. For example, before remanding Haynes to custody as a juvenile, Roberson rejected the recommendations of two court psychologists.

or only the second time in history, one school, the University of Michigan, has entered the Final Four of NCAA hockey and basketball tournaments in the same season. Michigan did it before, too, in 1964.

Michigan's Fabulous Five freshmen captured most of the local sports headlines as they gained the Final Four by defeating Ohio State Sunday at the Southeast Regional basketball tournament in Lexington, Ky.

But the same day the Wolverine hockey team nosed out defending national champion Northern Michigan to reach the NCAA Final Four of hockey, although the team will have to share honors with two other semifinalists from this state, Michigan State and Lake Superior State.

nile custody, the Grosse Pointe News recommended that in murder cases the law be revised to give judges more discretion in sentencing. Currently, judges now have only two alternatives in first degree murder cases: to sentence convicted killers to life if they are regarded as adults or to remand them to the custody of the Department of Social Services until they are 21 if they are considered juveniles.

Since Roberson and some other judges are reluctant to put juveniles in jail for life, whatever their crime, we advocated then, and we still advocate today, the revision of the state law to give judges discretion to sentence juveniles to long terms but not necessarily life in capital crime cases.

The reason? We reiterate our September comment: It is a miscarriage of justice for the four young men who have admitted complicity in the murder of Benjamin Gravel to be permitted to go free at 21 unless they break the law again.

Justice and society demand a stiffer punishment for murder. We agree with Wayne County Prosecutor John O'Hair when he says such sentences "tell the criminal element in our community that at times there's no accountability for murder."

and Michigan State will face Lake Superior State tonight (Thursday) in Albany, N.Y., site of this week's finals.

With due credit to the Michigan's Fabulous Five freshmen, it took a junior substitute to make it possible for the Wolverines to move into the Final Four of the NCAA basketball tournament in Minneapolis next weekend.

When starter Chris Webber got into foul trouble in the regional semifinals against Oklahoma State, it was Eric Riley, a 7-foot junior, who came in to score 15 points and save the Fabulous Five from defeat.

Now it's on to Minneapolis where on Saturday the Fabulous Five will face Cincinnati, the team that earlier knocked Michigan State out of the running. For once, Michigan State will be rooting for Michigan with the rest of the state.

Cooper is a treasure

To the Editor:

I am sure I speak for many parents and students at Grosse Pointe North High School when I say how much Dick Cooper, photographer extraordinaire, means to us.

As my first child prepares to graduate, I want to express my gratitude to this man who has a special place in our hearts. At each awards ceremony, our children are given packets which are overflowing with action and still shots taken throughout the season.

I have four-years' worth of memories thanks to the many photographs Dick took at school events. The pictures will be treasured for years to come.

Dick's enthusiasm and his love for the students are so obivous as he chats with them and takes pictures. I have never been at a North event without seeing Coop's smiling face and ready camera!

Teen club

To the Editor:

What is there to do in the Grosse Pointe area for teens these days?

Locally, there's no teen clubs or arcades. Teenagers are forced to give and attend house parties or hotel/ hall parties.

For some, teens parties get out of hand because of alcochol, drugs or just plain "getting crazy." Then the police storm in and break it up, illegal or not. The people from those brokenup parties end up driving around, cruising, endlessly or even worse racing with other ex-partygoers on Mack, Lakeshore or other streets.

The teens of Grosse Pointe need something other to do to stay out of trouble.

What Grosse Pointe teens need is some sort of teen dance club like C.J. Barrymore's or Jamz. We need some place to have, fun without getting into trouble.

Scouts are gems

Susanne Kennedy of Grosse Pointe Woods had the sinking feeling that she would never see her wedding diamond again.

Then Boy Scout Troop No. 34

Phil and Kevin (she didn't get their last names) are custodians at Parcells, and they searched for the diamond for several weeks, Kennedy said. They flushed the pool and checked the filters, but couldn't find the gem.

Then on March 10, at 9:30 p.m., Kennedy got a call from one of the custodians. He said that some scouts had found the diamond stuck between two tiles on the side of the pool.

"I don't know if it was a Boy Scout who found it, or a troop leader, but I want to thank them and do something nice for them," she said.

Someone called us last week. Wondered what those little green domed things were next to the curb on the curve of Woodland Shores in Grosse Pointe Shores.

Justice center has new man, new image inactive, local churches turned

The great news is that the Racial Justice Center is back in business. For almost two months, new executive director Bill Weld-Wallis has been brainstorming, talking, mailing, phoning, writing, meeting, and shaking a lot of hands.

And he isn't about to stop. As we talked, every time he mentioned names and facts, I wrote them down - and every time I mentioned people, he wrote them down. Weld-Wallis wants to know everyone in Grosse Pointe and beyond.

The tough news is that Weld-Wallis has to prove himself fast. The Racial Justice Center was virtually dead and now has to overcome its old lethargic image. And, like most nonprofits, the director's salary (and, of course, the programing) depend upon fundraising.

Right now, the center is in the classic bind: no funds because there's no program, and no program because there are no funds. So Weld-Wallis has to make believers of the commun-principals, whom he characterizes as "very open, especially to cultural interaction." Although the program is still in the brainstorming stage, Weld-Wallis sees the schools as perhaps the most important field. He envisions a fullblown project of cultural exploration, with storytellers and puppet shows, exchange days and sister relationships with Detroit. schools - all in place by fall.

And all voluntary. He said he is impressed with the success of the schools' cultural exchange program, France Backto-Back, and would like to model on it.

Weld-Wallis said he believes he was selected from among 90 applicants for executive director because of his background in racial conciliation and his experience in organizing an institution in disarray.

He worked from 1983 to 1991 as executive director of the Jesuit Volunteer Corps:Midwest, a large nonprofit that lacked organization when he arrived. He recruited volunteers, organized the staff, and instituted new fundraising approaches.

Weld-Wallis is an active member of the Church of the Messiah, an inner-city Episcopal church that is committed to a mission of racial conciliation.

He and his wife and children have lived on East Grand Boulevard for 15 years. "I was young and idealistic when I moved there, and I guess I was making a statement then," he "Now there's lots more realism and cynicism about it, but that's where I live, where my friends and neighbors are. I wouldn't move.

Grosse Pointe's Christ Church has a partnership with Messiah that Weld-Wallis says has been enriching for both churches.

'We're not there to save the world; we're just ordinary people," he said.

He believes that Grosse Pointers would find a lot in common with many in Detroit with the many professional. middle-class people in the Jefferson-Chalmers area, for example. He doesn't foresee Grosse Pointe becoming racially mixed, but pointed out that it is already ethnically mixed, with growing Jewish and Asian populations.

So watch for new programs, a new board, new ideas, maybe even a new name (it's too confrontational, he says). And watch for Bill Weld-Wallis he's the blond whirlwind with the glasses and the suit and the nice smile.

And, yes, watch for the Martin Luther King Essay Contest it's coming back.

Well, it didn't take the suburbs long to say a flat-out "no" to helping support regional cultural institutions that happen to be located in Detroit. On Monday it was proposed by Coleman Young's budget committee, and on Tuesday it was rejected by suburban leaders. River Rouge Mayor Dan Cooney said it plain as day: "I apif the concept is 'can River Rouge help pay?' then initially preciate them being there, but I would have to say no." So there you have it. Culture is fine as long as we aren't expected to pay for it. But we might be willing to pay for a ballpark. Sheesh

They'd better hope their refusal doesn't inspire Mayor Young to fling a little mud in their eye and say "no" to SMART and a regional bus authority. Again.

A note from reader Shirley Anderson, who is unhappy with the look of the trees in Harper Woods (a "science fiction" landscape). She points out that one of the reasons people recycle is to save trees — which then lose 30 years' growth when utility line clearance demands a drastic trim.

The irony is inescapable. But I'm sure Edison thinks I'm bashing.

OK, I'll try to be fair. Given that we all demand reliable electricity and that Edison has the legal right to clear its lines of all obstructions - and given that trees are an emotional subject - what should we realistically expect the company to do?

I think Edison overreacted to the criticism from last summer's outages. The trimming is more drastic than necessary. But beyond that, the company might try offering free tree removal and free or at-cost replacement with small trees and bushes.

Further, Edison should be working toward a line-burying program. Since easements are expensive to buy, why not try offering a swap for the back yard easement?

To the Editor:

I am writing regarding your article "The recycling update" (Feb. 20). I agree that after the first six months of the program's launch, it has proved successful in that the cities of Grosse Pointe are saving money, attracting increased participation, and cutting down environmental haz-

Because each city pays per ton of garbage incinerated, the less sent to the incinerator the lower the bill will be. In 1990, before curbside recycling began, the city sent 4,700 tons to the incinerator and the bill was over $200,000. Now, as a result of the program, there has been a drop of almost 1,900 tons sent to the incinerator. By cutting the number of tons of wash sent to the incinerator nearly in half, the bill paid by the city was cut as well.

Because of the fact that the program consists of curbside pickup, it is very convenient for residents to participate. Before the program began, many people may have wanted to recycle but were not willing to collect and haul the recyclables to the dumpster previously located at Liggett that collected newspapers. Now, with the curbside service, there is no reason not to participate in the cleanup effort. By the recently released figures of participation, more and more people seem to be realizing how easy the new program has made recycling.

The program has not only been a success as far as saving money and participation, but has also helped the environment. By recycling newspapers, plastic and glass, trees are saved and the ground is cleaned up as well. In the article, you mentioned Indian Summer where the yard waste is sent. I think that turning grass clippings and leaves back out a's dirt and soil is great for the environment, because instead of trash, it is turned into a positive supplement that can go into the ground.

I believe the plan is a good one because the participants are helping to save the environment first and are saving money second. I encourage everyone to do their part and recy-

Support

To the Editor:

The following letter was sent to the War Memorial and is being reprinted here at the request of the writer.

Since we have moved from Grosse Pointe recently, we will be unable to attend the May 25 Memorial Day service. However, we wanted to express our appreciation for all the War Memorial has done to support members of the families of those who served in Operation Desert Storm. My wife and I were in San Diego with our son in January 1991, shortly before our son's ship left for the Persian Gulf. I remember how concerned he personally was, after some of the comments that were made on the floor of the House of the Senate by some our elected representatives, that the efforts of our soldiers and sailors would not have the support of our country.

We were able to let him know that across the country there was widespread support and in particular when we were able to offer him the tangible proof of support of his community, Grosse Pointe, it made his stay in the Gulf that much easier. Thus, I want to thank you for all of your efforts.

When our son recently called, one of the first things he mentioned was that he received your letter indicating that you would be unveiling the bronze plaque. To say the least, he was excited that the War Memorial continues to support those who served in this successful venture.

As a small token of our continued support for the War Memorial, I am enclosing a contribution to the War Memorial. Best wishes.

Special friend

To the Editor:

On Monday, March 9, my best friend, Sarah Mebus-Holder, her 2-year-old daughter and my 15-month-old daughter had just begun our 10-hour drive home to Grosse Pointe from a visit with her mother in the Pocono Mountains in Pennsylvania when I glanced over at Sarah in the driver's seat and noticed out of the corner of my eye my 15month-old having a seizure in her car seat.

Never having dealt with seizures before, I first thought she had choked on an object and began to perform the Heimlich maneuver and the steps for a choking child on her.

These steps did not help her and she just continued the seizure for up to five minutes - all this happening on the side of a Pennsylvania highway.

During this time, Sarah stood on the highway flagging down cars and semitrucks, asking every person who stopped if they were a doctor.

Once the seizure stopped, my daughter went limp, turned blue and appeared to have stopped breathing. After testing to see if her breath was hitting my face, I felt nothing and immediately began rescue breathing. After the two breaths in her nose and mouth, her color came back but she was still not awake.

During this horrifying ordeal, Sarah had been arranging with a trucker to meet an ambulance at the next exit, which we did and were then taken to Hazelton General Hospital in Hazelton, Pa.

After my daughter, Erika, was diagnosed with the roseola virus and with experiencing a febrile seizure brought on by a rapid increase in temperature, she was released and we drove back to the Pocono Mountains to Sarah's mothers house.

We stayed there for five days while Sarah and her mother helped me battle with Erika's 105 degree temperature every four hours for four straight days.

I could not have made it through this ordeal without the strength, dedication, time and love of Sarah and her mother.

After many calls to Dr. Landers here in Grosse Pointe and two more trips to the emergency room, we finally stabilized Erika and on Friday, March 13, we drove the 10 hours home.

Since my daughter's seizure, I have tried to think of a special way to thank my best friend for being there for Erika and me and for helping me through the worst week of my life.

Our society already is living with false morals with no regard to rules. Giving a legal green light to legalized assisted suicide, the legal system will have achieved legalizing murder, with no boundaries or end.

Symphony To the Editor:

Grosse Pointers are so lucky! Your community has the scenic beauty of Lake St. Clair, beautiful homes, but it also has a wonderful symphony and talented ballet corps.

My 8-year-old daughter and I were guests at the March 22 Grosse Pointe Symphony performance and were astonished to read in the program of the cooperative relationship between the Grosse Pointe War Memorial, business and the symphony.

It would appear this spirit of cooperation and support of young artists (the dancers from the War Memorial, Mary Ellen Cooper teacher, and the Nester Scholarship winner, Julie Evans), resulted in such a large, enthusiastic audience.

I was particularly impressed that a program would be structured around young people. And they certainly justified that confidence by the artistry and discipline of their performance.

Thank you to the Grosse Reinte Symphony, and all individuals and organizations for a most enjoyable afternoon.

Keep Italian

To the Editor:

am a freshman at Grosse Pointe South High School. As a second generation Italian, on my mother's side, I am so thrilled to be taking Italian at South this year, under the excellent tutelage of Senora Tarania. To be learning Italia, and be spoken to in that language by a teacher who has a wonderful accept and is transferring it on to us, is really education at its finest.

t wasn't until I had already started this class,
however, that I found out that only Italian I was offered at South, and in the future I will have to go to North if I wish to pursue the study of the Italian language. Do you know how unfair this is, and how unrealistic?

Students who have tried to commute between the schools, have found that they arrive 10 to 15 minutes late each class period if they arrive at all, since many times we would be at the mercy of another student's driving. If the driver was absent or just didn't go to that class on a particular day, where would that

If I had known when I signed up for Italian I that it wasn't going to be offered at South beyond this first year, I would not have chosen it, since I do want four years of one language to really give me a good solid foundation in a foreign language.

Most of the students in my Italian class feel the same way I do. We have been treated unfairly by the school system, and feel the school system can and should rectify it, by continuing Italian classes at South until our group has completed our studies. If they wish to discontinue Italian in the future, why are they still offering Italian I (only) next year? What sense does that make? Anyone who takes just one year of a language can't possibly be doing it

My parents have voted for the millage increases and school board members, supported the school system, and now we need the school system to help us! I may be only 14, but I can see the politics involved in all!this. For example, Japanese and Russian are offered at South, and there are only a couple of students in each of those classes, but they will be continued. Why? Because it's good "advertising" to be able to say, "Grosse Pointe schools teach Japanese and Russian." Let's face it: How prestigious is it to say they offer Italian?

But what should matter if you are talking about good sound education is not just what "sounds" good, but meeting the demands of your community. There are 15 students who are enrolled in Italian II for next year, and there would be others from last year's Italian I class who would take Italian II if it were being offered at South.

That should count for more than the couple of students who are interested in Japanese. Yet, I have heard that the Board of Education is subsidizing the cost of teaching Japanese, so all of the expense for it doesn't have to come out of South's budget. Why can't the board help subsidize Italian in the same way, if for no other reason than it was the school's fault that we were not informed it wasn't to be continued at South? Why should we students be penalized for that?

I hope I will be able to continue studying the Italian language in the convenience of my own high school. I have written this letter in the hope it will be seen by people of influence who can do some good. My parents have so far written to the assistant superintendent, the principal of South, and the school board members, asking for their help. Everyone tells them about the necessity of cuts due to the budget. What about the necessity of following through on a commitment to the students of the community?

Thank you for this opportunity to voice my disappointment at what I consider to be politics winning out over what's right.

Rude awakening

I don't want to get all bent out of shape over petty things. However, I do admit to being perplexed, vexed, annoyed and therefore I must have twisted knickers to some degree. I'm trying not to overreact to things that bug me, so I will simply say I'm puzzled at certain attitudes I see around me.

For instance, why do some people feel they are so important that they can bulldoze their way through stoplights, checkout lines, movie lines, etc.? What kind of person has the arrogance to stampede others for his own benefit? It's not only our elected officials and others in positions of authority who abuse power. We witness these character flaws in our daily lives.

Horns blare if we don't sprint from a stop sign or signal light. Shoppers line up at express lanes in our supermarkets with five times the allotted quotas in their baskets. Most of us willingly offer to let people move ahead of us if they are waiting with only one or two items. Emergencies are acceptable excuses, but arrogance is not a reason to take advantage of the kindness of others.

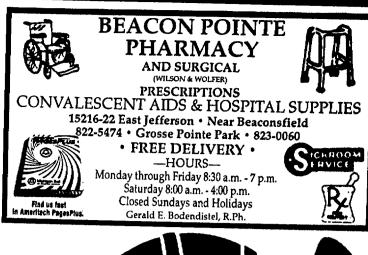

I have yet to see a valid excuse for rudeness. And don't we feel better if we help someone to reach something from a top shelf in the store, hold open a door or return a shopping cart to its designated area? How many times do we see someone bend over to pick up a piece of discarded paper instead of stepping over it? Not often. It's just little everyday stuff, but if we attended to ordinary kindnesses the big irritants would never become so formidable as to overwhelm us.

Moving along in my litany of things that bug me. Why do national fundraisers that we generously support reward us by bombarding us with an avalanche of mail? I cannot help but wonder at the incredible waste of money spent on postage. I have complained to many of these charities over the years and have seen little reduction in such practices. Smaller donations might reflect the dissatisfaction of contributors in the future; perhaps then the message will be received.

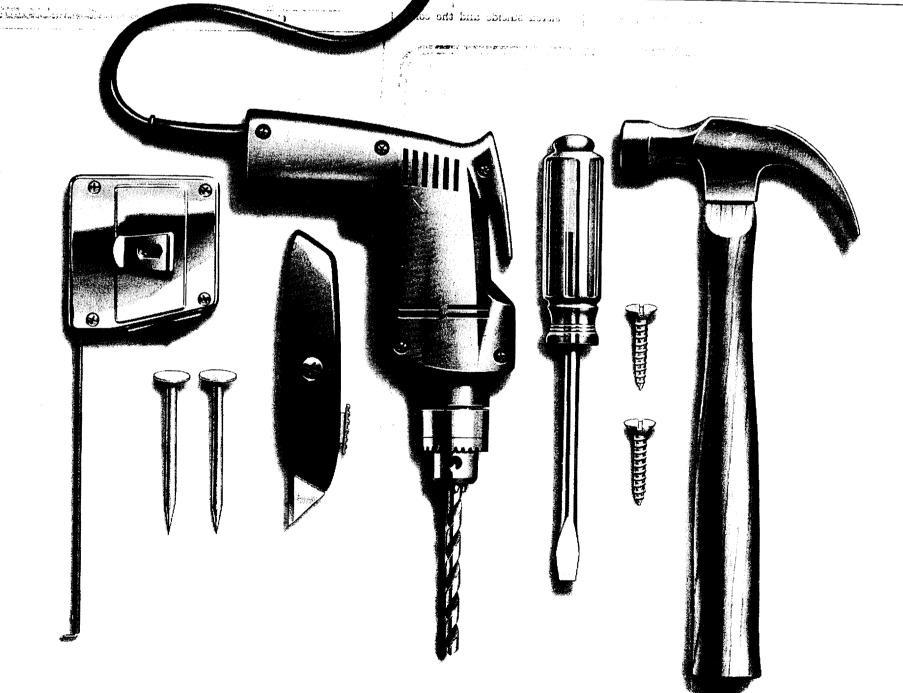

Furthermore, chronic tardiness really frosts me. Of course there are exceptions, but the person who is consistently late offends me. The message received is that my time is not as precious as yours. You attempt to diminish me by your rudeness and I realize that I am not very important on your list of priorities.

Thankfully, one last word for the week. I love meeting people and I like to form my own opinion about those whom I meet. What I don't want to know, before or after a person is introduced to me, is what club affiliations that person has, his salary, who his parents were and other labels that appear important to the one making the introduction. I'll do my own research if and when I choose, thanks.

Two women were robbed at what they believed was gunpoint at 1:30 p.m. March 26 outside a store in the 18900 block of Mack in Grosse Pointe

The women were standing near the entry-exit doors on the south side of the building when a man approached them. Using his right hand, he pressed an object against waist of one of the women and said, "If you

The second woman said she gave the suspect her purse because she feared for her friend's life.

The suspect then fled south from the parking lot.

Student Spotlight

Holly Edwards

Each week in this column, we focus on the work of a student. It can be a poem, a drawing, a short story, a picture of a scientific experiment or a woodworking project, a book review.

The following poem was written by Holly Edwards, 8, a second-grader at Monteith Elementary School. She is the daughter of Bill and Becky Edwards of Grosse Pointe Farms.

A Good Friend Is

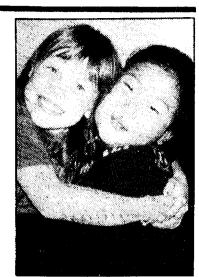

A good friend is someone who is fun to be with.

A good friend is kind.

A good friend likes to share. My good friend is Jessica Wayland. And she is all of these things.

I've known Jessica since I was 3 years old, and we have never been in a fight.

We like to play Legos and Jessica and Holly trade stamps. We always agree

what to do.

This summer, we're going to camp together and I can't wait!

ennifer Sutton

The following true story was written by Jennifer Sutton, 10 who is in the fifth grade at Ferry Elementary School. Her parents are Anna and Terry Sutton of Grosse Pointe Woods.

Jake Goes to School

It was a dark, dismal morning and I had just arrived at Ferry School. Ms. A., my teacher, had just arrived at school, too. And there was a white, shaggy, dirty dog standing on the lonely curb. Ms. A. went across the street

OLD GARAGES RAISED AND RECONDITIONED

As you get older, sawing ogs turns to counting sheep

'Among the ironies of life is he one related to sleep. When ou were young it was easy to ep through the night. If ere was a problem, it was iving to get up before you inted to. The alarm always ng too soon.

When it did, you reluctantly ragged yourself out of your ırm bed, mentally promising urself that when your work-3 days were over, that tyranal alarm would be the first your work mementos to go. That was long ago and far way and the old alarm has ung been silenced. But now there is a new dictator to rouse ou – nature. You discover that you have no more control over your sleep then when you were governed by the clock. What you didn't know as that was one gets older, sleep gets progressively more difficult past 50 who regularly sleeps a solid eight hours every night. As a matter of fact, experts in the field agree that you do not need as much sleep as you did when you were young. Babies sleep 18 or more hours a day. Teenagers can sleep 12 to

and that it is the rare person

15 hours at a stretch. But as you get older, you can't sleep for long periods because you don't need to. The only way you can tell how much sleep you need is by asking yourself how you feel. If you can't seem to function properly unless you've had seven hours of sleep, then you need seven. There are great individual differences in sleep requirements and only you can decide what is right for you.

Worrying about sleep is probably the No. 1 cause of insomnia. If you crawl into bed thinking "now I must get right to sleep," you are almost guaranteed an hour or so of wakefulness. So forget about it. When you go to bed, remind yourself that even if you just lie there

Exercise is also important —

nothing will help you sleep bet-

without sleeping, you'll get plenty of rest, and sleeping isn't all that important.

Mental attitude is critical. When you go to bed, you should try to turn off the worrying center in your brain. When you are in bed, there is no sense in turning your mental attention to financial. health or any other kind of problem. Time enough to solve them when you're up and about.

Try to clear your mind of troubles. Think about a vacation you're planning, the flowers in your garden, the pleasant dinner you had. Think about anything that gives you peace of mind.

There are two aids to achieving peace of mind - one is quiet, the other is distraction. Some people sleep best when the room is nearly silent. Others like to turn the radio on low and listen to Mantovanitype music all night. The music distracts them so that they can't think about personal problems, yet it isn't interesting enough to require full attention.

A comfortable bed and pillow are absolute necessities. Some people like a big, heavy feather stuffed pillow. Others like a light foam rubber pillow. The proper pillow can make a world of difference.

Two things that are important in a bed are its size and the firmness of the mattress.

ter. Do it earlier in the day and you'll find you sleep better on the days you exercise. Before going to bed, you might eat a snack or drink a glass of milk. Anything you eat will call for a little extra blood flow to your stomach which will pull some blood from your brain. That's the reason so many of us get sleepy after a heavy lunch or dinner. Health food enthusiasts claim that food containing tryptophane, a protein, will help a person sleep well. Milk and meat both contain tryptohane

Some people find that a little wine or a glass of beer at bedtime helps them sleep. Since alcohol is a sedative, it probably will help, but be careful not to take too much. If you do there's a rebound effect; you fall asleep quickly but awaken in an hour or two, wide-eyed and alert.

Perhaps you have tried all of these methods, but you still can't sleep. First of all, make sure it's your bedtime. As we grow older, we increasingly become creatures of habit. We get sleepy at certain times in the evening.

Most of us find that no matter what time we go to bed, we awaken at the same hour every morning. If you're used to going to bed at 11 p.m. you probably won't be able to get to sleep at 10:30 and you may be past your best go to sleep time by 11:30. Try to go to bed at a regular time. ment.

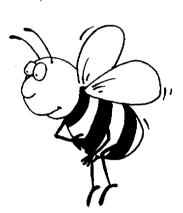

The final program, on April 9 is a "Portrait of Eleanor Anderson," a 92-year-old woman who will address the importance of good mental health. Panelists will include Nancy Maxwell, activities director, Alexander Nursing Home; Professor Elizabeth Olson, WSU Institute of Gerontology; and Janet Hankin, a professor of sociology at WSU.

that a collective unconscious also exists for all human beings without regard to race, gender or ethnicity, Loomis said. Jung believed that we all share this collective unconscious and each of us is living an archetypal pattern of behaviors.

Many archetypes are reflected in myths, fairy tales, legends, art and music, Loomis said. Some examples are the person who is a rigid perfectionist; the long-suffering wife; the self-sacrificing father; the boy who never grows up.

"Jung said our unconscious speaks to us through dreams, emotionally-charged memories and emotions," she said.

"The bottom line in therapy," Loomis cautioned, "is the rapport between the client and the therapist. The critical factors are the two personalities regardless of the therapist's orientation or academic credentials.'

Jungian analysis is not for everyone, Loomis said. "A person would not come to see me unless he or she believes in a higher force. And this doesn't eliminate free will."

Jungian analysts are not a dime a dozen. Loomis said she knows of one other woman practicing in Michigan and two who are in training. Many therapists are Jungians at heart, however, and social workers and psychologists may embrace the philosophy of Jung, but may not be trained in his brand of therapy.

Loomis grew up in Detroit and graduated from Michigan State University in 1950 with a journalism degree. She landed a job with The Detroit News. writing radio, TV and night club reviews.

"It was a great job for a young woman," she said.

She married Robert Loomis in 1951 and they moved to Chi-

"When we moved back to Grosse Pointe, the children ranged from pre-kindergarten to high school and I realized how much all those college educations were going to cost.

"I did some substitute teaching and I started thinking about getting a master's degree and a teachers' certificate.'

In the late 60s, Loomis was teaching Sunday school at Christ Church Grosse Pointe. The minister brought in some people to do a workshop for Sunday school teachers. They were versed in Jungian psychology.

"I didn't know anything about Jung, but after the training session, I felt Jung had been writing for me.'

Loomis was eager to explore the teachings of Jung, so she attended some conferences and workshops. She was working toward a master's degree in English at the time, so she took some psychology courses as el-

"The psychology classes were exciting," she said. "They were giving me life. They were energizing.'

Because of the lack of Jungian analysts in the Detroit area, Loomis had to travel back and forth to Chicago for more study. "I did a lot of flying back and forth. I did an internship at Wyandotte General Hospital and I also worked in family, child and individual counseling at various places."

She earned a master's degree in English in 1974; a master's degree in psychology in the late 70s; and a Ph.D. in psychology

While I was in graduate school, I got a teaching fellowship which paid my tuition at Wayne," she said. "I didn't have to keep dipping into the family coffers and that was a big help.'

Loomis attended the C.G. Jung Institute in Chicago and earned a post-graduate degree in 1982. She opened an office at 17150 Kercheval in the Village, ("my husband owns the building") and began her career as a therapist.

"I see about 30 clients a week," she said.

She keeps one day clear for writing. "I have so many ideas bubbling up in my head, I have to set aside time to write. I have to make it a discipline."

Loomis has written her first book, "Dancing the Wheel of Psychological Types," and is working on another, "Her Father's Daughter.'

"It will look at the myth underlying the father-daughter relationsip and how it's manifested in women's lives," she

The Center for Jung Studies of Detroit, with its headquarters in the same building as Loomis' office, is a nonprofit educational organization which disseminates the psychology of Jung. Run by volunteers, the center offers courses, films, discussions, workshops and lectures about Jungian psychology and operates a bookstore featuring works about Jung.

Loomis said about 100 members from the metropolitan Detroit area pay annual dues of $35. "They're teachers, therapists, businessmen, retirees, young and old. They're people who have an affinity for Jungian psychology. Most are well educated. We have a lot of college professors. Some are in analysis, but not all. It's a forum for new ideas.

Asked what critics say about Jungian psychology, Loomis thought a bit: "They say it's too mystical.

"We don't feel this is a bad thing. We'll never be mainstream because of that.

"While I was a psychology student, an adviser told me not to tell anyone I was interested in Jung - or my professors would crucify me. We (Jungians) deal with the spirit, which can't be measured.

One of the points Jung made, Loomis said, is also true for

"Sixty to 70 percent of his practice was normal people. They were people without serious pathology. This is true for me, too. Most of the people I see would be considered very successful. They're doctors, lawyers, nuns, mothers, artists, musicians, and so on.

'They've said, 'Is this all there is?' like the title of the song by Peggy Lee. They have recognzied there must be more

The next lecture and workshop conducted by the Center for Jung Studies of Detroit will be this weekend at Christ Church Grosse Pointe. "Pilgrimage of the Heart: The Path of Romantic Love" will be presented by John R. Haule on Friday, April 3, from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. The workshop will take place Saturday, April 4, from 9:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. Haule is a former assistant professor of religion and culture at Northeastern University and is on the faculty of the C.G. Officers surround house Grosse Pointe Park public safety officers spent almost four hours on March 27 trying to calm a man in his 20s who was violently upset over a family problem, Sgt. Steve Johnson said.

A caller told the public safety department dispatcher at 2:52 a.m. that the suspect had struck his brother with a wooden rod and that he was acting violent toward other members of the family.

Officers responded to the scene and learned that the suspect had a history of violent behavior and that he had used knives as weapons in the past.

Because of his history and because there were knives in the house, the officers treated the incident like a barricaded suspect situation and surrounded the house, Johnson

"We wanted to localize the situation to as small an area as possible," Johnson said. "The suspect didn't indicate that he wanted to leave, but in case he did, we wanted to be in position to: catch him: We didn't want him running loose as upset as he was.'

The suspect's family remained in the house with him, but the suspect was not holding them hostage, Johnson said.

The officers left at 6:40 a.m., after calming the suspect and convincing him to talk with his therapist, Johnson said.

Light clipped

Someone stole the barber pole and light fixture that were attached to the outside of a barbershop in the 21100 block of Mack, one of the owners told Grosse Pointe Woods public safety officers.

The owner said the items were taken sometime between 3:30 p.m. March 21 and 8 a.m. March 24. He said the light was valued at $600 and that about $200 in damage had been done to the shop's aluminum siding and an electrical

New Mazda RX-7 packs more pep — but it'll cost you

he automotive press. Location, ocation, location, as they say n real estate when describing he three most important qualiies of a piece of property.

So Mazda picked the glamorus and very proper Ritz Carlon in Dearborn for the introuction of its new RX-7 sports car. And we came by the dozens. Not that we wouldn't have gone elsewhere to view the very sleek, very impressive roary-engine-powered two-seater.

But at the Ritz Carlton, the lowers are always fresh, the offee and muffins were delicious and every seat was taken limited-edition Porsche 959. in the meeting room where the sunburst-yellow '93 RX-7 shared floor space with a cute little brilliant black Mazda Miata.

The Ritz Carlton was appropriate in a more subtle way. The expensive hostelry was where we learned that the RX-7 has moved out of the neighborhood of many would-be buyers. A 15 percent increase in the price over the previous model puts it at about $31,300 (plus luxury tax), beyond the reach of many who might have been able to scrape together $27,000. More than half - 52 percent to be exact - of those former buyers, Mazda officials said, were women.

Many of these loyal RX-7 fans are going to have to snag some hefty raises, or they will slip out of the market. The average household income projected for the new target market is something like $91,000. Mazda officials added, without raising an eyebrow. The male segment of the market may grow to 80 percent.

"The 'New Mazda' is the company we have become,' said Clark Vitulli, chief operating officer of Mazda Motor of America Inc. "The evolution began back in 1988 with the MVP minivan and the Protege subcompact.

This third generation of RX-7 is pure sports car - our flagship sports car.'

Lighter and more powerful, the '93 RX-7 offers only one engine: Mazda's 13B two-rotor engine with sequential twin turbochargers. That translates to 255 hp at 6,500 rpm and 217 ft-lbs torque at 5,000 rpm. On the road, look for 0-60 mph acceleration in 4.9 seconds.

Mazda says it developed sequential turbo technology for a three-rotor engine in the Cosmo, a luxury car sold by parent company Toyo Kogyo in Japan. Porsche, it says, is the only other auto maker to employ sequential turbos. They were under the hoods of the

In the past, there were two routes to greater engine output: one or two small turbochargers or one big one. When two small ones are used, they operate simultaneously, each using the exhaust from one side of, say, a V-6 engine, Mazda says. One is always working and the other comes into play when needed at higher speeds. A single large turbo characteristically produces a lot of horsepower at high rpms, but has the weakness of little low-end response.

Mazda says in its new RX-7 STT system, the primary turbocharger operates all the time, using exhaust from each of the two rotors. It's small and very responsive to engine output. The secondary turbo kicks in at higher engine rpms and goes all the way to the red line. Flat spots in acceleration are eliminated when the engine control computer momentarily diverts some exhaust pressure to the secondary turbo, so it's up and running (pre-spinning at 100,000 rpms!) by the split-second when it's actually put into service.

The styling of the third-generation RX-7 was shared by Mazda's Yokohama, Japan, and Irvine, Calif., studios. Program manager Takaharu Kobayakawa proudly told reporters the finished product "looks like its muscles are showing through its skin."

Design teams referred to the results of 3-D aerodynamic simulation on one of Mazda's two Cray supercomputers. This is the company out of the Minneapolis area that recently announced new software that allows engineers to run stress 'tests" on automotive engines by putting design information into a program. The catch with Cray's fantastic programs: One must own a Cray supercomputer, which can run into several hundred thousand dollars.

Rotary styling, as Mazda calls it, allows the RX-7 engine to sit behind the front axle. The front-mid-engine layout shortens the length of the hood and helps the sports car achieve its 50:50 weight distribution. It also claims an 11:1 power-toweight ratio.

num hood and plastic headlamp system, is 240 pounds lighter than its predecessor. It's also slightly shorter in overall length on a shorter wheelbase, is lower to the ground and has a wider front track. ABS brakes and driver side airbag are standard in '93. EPA numbers with the 5-speed manual are 17 mpg city, 25 mpg highway. A 4-speed automatic is available.

The RX-7 will be offered in one model with two option packages: the performance R1 ($1,000) and the touring package ($3,000). The R1 includes dual oil coolers, special tires and an aero package that reduces front and rear lift at higher speeds. The touring package offers leather seating surfaces, cruise control, power sunroof and a special speaker

Buick dealer adopts one- price, no-dickering system

By Jenny King Special Writer

Jeffrey Buick-Nissan is doing away with its annual spring Green Tag Sale. In fact, the Roseville dealership is putting the lid on all sales.

That's right, says general sales manager Rodger Lau. Summer tent sales, model-year close-outs, new-model specials, inventory reductions: All are history at 30800 Gratiot.

The green tags Lau's staff set inside the windshields of all the dealership's new Buicks and Nissans a couple of weeks ago launched the beginning of a different way of doing business.

"We're going to a one-price or menu-pricing system," explains the 13-year dealership veteran. "From now on, the price of a new car is not negotiable. Whatever final figure appears on a car's green tag is what the customer is going to pay.

pay.
"The only variable affecting the price will be any factory rebates."

Lau says the one-price approach is unusual for a Buick dealership. At Saturn, it's factory policy. And dealers selling less expensive lines of cars sometimes use one price. But Buick, traditionally the last step in climbing through the General Motors hierarchy en route to a Cadillac, hasn't done this kind of marketing.

"I spent a lot of time studying the concept," Lau says. "I talked with a variety of people in the business, I visited dealerships which were using one price and I tested the idea on our sales staff."

Lau admits he expected his sales people to pan the idea. After all, they had been compensated by a commission based on the sale price of each car they delivered.

Would they be willing to focus on professional selling and customer service instead of the bottom line? Would they settle for pay based on the numbers of cars sold instead of how much they could get for each one? Would they be patient long enough for the new approach to take hold, instead of sacrificing occasional profits just to get some sales on board?

"They couldn't wait to get started," Lau reports. "They loved the concept."

Price, he says, frequently makes the retail auto business an unpleasant one. We've all heard consumers say they rank visiting a dealership just below going to the dentist. Lau says it's tough on the sales staff, too.

Customers come in loaded for bear. All they want to discuss is price. Many have shopped other outlets and they're armed with figures: the most money one dealer says he'll give on a trade, and the lowest another dealer says she'll sell a specific new model for.

Time out, says Lau. Any dealership has the right to make a profit. And, when questioned, customers agree that's fair. There are no free lunches.

"The customer often is so price-oriented, he or she doesn't even look at the various models, doesn't buy the one that best suits his or her transportation needs," he says. "They get it home and a spouse doesn't like the color, the vehicle is too small, the trim package is wrong, they don't like the performance."

Prior to one price, Jeffrey Buick-Nissan did everything by the books. A floor control plan made certain every customer and every salesperson were accounted for. Dealership greeters would welcome individuals to the showroom and the sales staff took turns waiting on anyone who wasn't already the customer of a colleague. That helped eliminate several sales people ganging up on a lone walk-in. Or having customers quietly slip through the cracks because no one followed up on

People often were so up-tight they were rude to the greeters, no matter how cordial, helpful and non-threatening they were. Staff personnel telephoned every sales and service customer to check on satisfaction. No stone was left unturned. Except money.

"Price has become a stumbling block for both customers and sales people," Lau says. "Price is not the most important thing."

It's getting the right vehicle, it's getting good service after the sale, it's knowing people at the dealership, it's finding the best way to finance, it's deciding whether to buy or lease, he continues. These are the factors that affect customer loyalty—the things that bring people back to a business and prompt them to refer friends and family, he says.

"I'm 99 percent sure the oneprice approach will work for us," Lau says. "Right now we are kind of a laboratory experiment for other Tamaroff dealerships."

The first night the new oneprice tags appeared sales were fairly good. Customers may have been startled, but they were willing to give it a try. Then there was the exception that Lau hopes will prove the rule: "One gentleman said he felt cheated because he couldn't haggle over price." Riegle to speak to chamber

Sen. Donald W. Riegle will be the speaker at the general monthly meeting of the Metro East Chamber of Commerce, which will be Thursday, April 16, at 11:30 a.m. at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial's Crystal Ballroom, 32 Lakeshore in Grosse Pointe Farms.

The topic will be his proposed legislation, Senate Resolution

Tickets for the luncheon are $15 a person and reservations are requested by April 10. The general public is invited to attend. Reservations may be made at the chamber office, 27601 Jefferson, St. Clair Shores, one block south of 11 Mile, or by calling 777-2741.

Featuring Dr. Minu Kashef, chief of Obstetrics and Gynecology at St. John Hospital and Medical Center. Dr. Kashef, a board-certified obstetrician and gynecologist, performed the first laparoscopic hysterectomy at St. John Hospital and Medical Center. He has practiced in the Detroit/Grosse Pointe area for 16 years.

Q: I've been hearing about a new way of performing a hysterectomy. What does it involve?

A: Traditionally, a total hysterectomy (removal of the uterus and the ovaries) has been performed by making a large incision in the abdomen. through which the organs are removed.

A relatively new procedure. laparoscopic hysterectomy, uses a laparoscope, a slender telescope-like instrument that's inserted into a very small incision in the abdomen. The laparoscope guides the surgeon in separating the uterus, which can then be removed through the vagina.

Q: What are the benefits of laparoscopic hysterectomy?

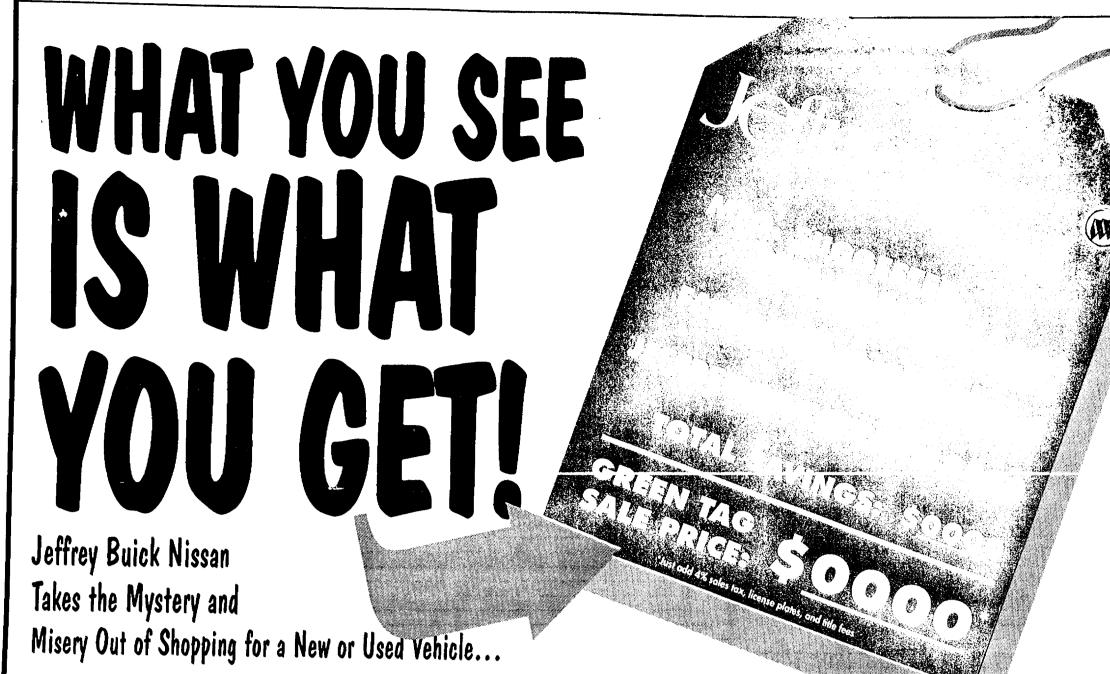

A: Because the incisions are smaller, there is less bleeding, less scarring and less discomfort. And the woman's hospital stay and recovery time are drastically reduced. With traditional hysterectomy, patients usually spend about five days in the hospital and it takes up to six weeks to recover.

With the laparoscopic method, women often go home after two days and often feel "back to normal" in a week's time.

Q: Is the laparoscope being used in other gynecological surgeries?

A: Yes, and often in conjunction with the laser. They're being used to treat endometriosis, pelvic pain, sometimes benign tumors in the uterus, and for infertility surgery. The laser works as very accurate cutting tool, and it controls the bleeding and coagulates the blood at the same time.

Vorkshop helps people recover from divorce eature Editor When Glenn Howland was divorced several years ago, he needed to talk about his pain.

"I had a lot of anger. I needed to learn how to deal with this anger,' he said. "Many people don't see how devastating divorce is. It's often more devastating than watching a parent die. More devastating than open heart surgery."

In addition to the anger, people who are in the process of a divorce are often depressed and frightened and suffer from low self-esteem. Problems with alcohol or chemicals or problems with co-dependency - may compound the grief they feel.

Howland said he talked about his divorce to his friends, who were kind and supportive.

"But after awhile, friends get tired of hearing about your divorce. They're not all getting divorced. You get tired of talking about it to them, too," he said.

"But you're not finished talk-

Howland attended a divorce recovery workshop that changed his life. "It impacted my life in such a positive way that I went through the workshop again and became a

Howland brought the concept to Grosse Pointe. Eastside Divorce Recovery Workshop is offered three times a year at Grosse Pointe United Church, 240 Chalfonte in Grosse Pointe Farms. Howland is a member of the church and serves as the workshop's coordinator, but the ecumenical program is open to

The Eastside Divorce Recovery Workshop was presented in fall and winter sessions. The spring session begins Tuesday, April 28, at the church.

Sessions run eight weeks for 2 1/ 2 hours Tuesday evenings. The whole group hears a speaker during the first part of the evening; then they break up into smaller groups led by facilitators, to discuss specific topics, including anger and depression, co-dependency, getting your ex in focus, finding forgiveness, dating and remarriage, single parenting and personal freedom.

The seminar is designed as a non-denominational, non-judgmental healing atmosphere for people who are contemplating divorce, going through a divorce or recovering from a divorce. The recovery process sometimes takes three to five years, Howland said.

"I didn't want to spend the rest of my life being hurt and angry. I wanted to go forward," said Karen of Grosse Pointe, who wished to remain anonymous for this article.

Karen had been to Alanon meetings. She was seeing a therapist. But the workshop, because it was a supportive group of people dealing with the same problems she was facing, was extremely helpful.

"Assuming responsibility (for the divorce) was an important issue for me. Divorce is not one person's fault. It's easy to blame your ex," she said.

"After being married 24 years, you tend not to have your own personality," said Mary Knight of Harper Woods. "You need to go out and find a new group. When you get divorced it's awfully comfortable to stay home. It's difficult to meet new people. I enjoy the social aspect of this group. My kids have seen the change in me.'

Nancy Neily of Grosse Pointe Park said several people from the workshop met at each other's homes during the Christmas holidays, which are unusually stressful times for newly divorced people. "We all needed to heal-ourselves."

It was a positive step," she said. Bill Symons of East Detroit said he walked into the first meeting of the workshop dressed in a suit and tie and had no idea what to expect. "I walked in the door to see 60 or 80 women and three men. But I stayed.

'After that first session I realized I was better off than some and a whole lot better than I thought I was."

He wore jeans to the second session, he said. "I belonged to some social singles groups like Parents Without Partners. But they were for entertainment. I was looking for communication. The workshop helped me get through some bad weeks.'

The first few times the program was presented, it attracted mostly women, Howland said. "Women are more willing to admit they have problems and women are more willing to help each other," he said.

"Now it's about 60 percent women and 40 percent men on the west side and about 80 percent women, 20 percent men on the east side."

Ages range from 20 to 70 and the time married ranges from 18 months to 30 years.

Ruth Van Leuven of St. Clair Shores has been divorced for more than three years. "I dragged my friend to the first meeting because I thought she needed some help. I didn't think I needed to be there, but I found a lot of people had been divorced for several years. I was finally able to let go because of the workshop. I did the forgiving that needed to be done. I got beyond being inwardly focused."

Van Leuven said 500 people showed up for the first session on the west side. About 60 people attended the fall session at Grosse Pointe United Church. About 25 people attended the winter session.

"It helps to find other people in the same situation you're in. They understand. It gives you a tremendous boost; then you can help others," she said.

Knight has attended the workshop several times. "Each time you're at a different stage (in the recovery process) and you hear different things," she said.

Howland said Grosse Pointe United Church deserves a pat on the back for sponsoring the work. shops. "They're giving us financial support, a place to meet and a lot of emotional back-up. One out of every two couples gets divorced today. This church saw a need and did something about it."

Howland and Karen are anxious to get the word out to people who might be interested in attending the next session.

"I wish people would check this out. Attend two meetings, then decide," Karen said.

"It really helps. It helps a lot," Howland said. "We know there's a need for this because on the day of the huge snowstorm, eight people showed up."

The next session of the Eastside Divorce Recovery Workshop will run from 7 to 9:30 p.m. on eight Tuesdays, from April 28 through June 16 at Grosse Pointe United Church. Dave Carpenter will lead the seminar. Carpenter has a background in psychology, theology and counseling.

Child care will be provided for children under 5. The cost is $40 and scholarships are available. Call 884-3075 to register.

HAVE A PLEASANT TRY AT PERFECTION BRIDGE BY WOODY BOYD & V & &

Seldom is opportunity labeled that way. You must create a commodity and then find the occasion to put it to use.

As set forth in my contract, the publisher allows me to write one column each leap year promoting my goods and services. Today I will do so for I have high hopes that this endeavor will generate a tidal wave of want for the bridge service I'm soon to introduce.

All you have to do is call your congressman and your tax dollars will be put to work teaching you bridge and in turn that will hopefully line my pockets after pay-off with lots of wampum.

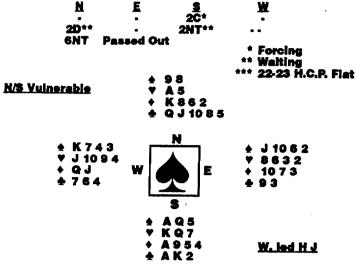

The idea came to me after many calls to Ma Bell, other utilities and services I require. How often have you made such a call to find that you had a ten minute wait as the only attendant on duty has taken "a break" or is tied up with another inquiry. Thank God for Ma Bell, they just don't leave you in limbo. They always pipe in some pleasing music to wile your time away. I'll bet I've listened to everything Mozart ever wrote as that's their play. You want Gershwin, call Edison. Soft rock, try Dayton Hudson's line. I'm not too thrilled with Consumers Power as their attendants usually keep the musical interludes to under a minute as they seem to be more prompt about handling such matters. Blue Cross calls will save you the cost of a symphony ticket. Their number gives you a super two hour musical, but it's displeasing to have an unknown voice interrupting your music appreciation telling you that you're only two dozen moments away from reaching one of their attendants. Nothing unsettles me more though than settling down to the strings of Montavani on Delta Airlines Reservations and have some lovely attendant butt in to sell me a super savings seat to Salt Lake City and Seattle. Of course my favorite was John Sununu. I used to call every so often to check on the president's progress. John would always have the media and a few hundred idiots ahead of me, but that gave me a chance to listen to everything Benny Goodman ever played at his Carnegie Hall concerts as he was John's favorite. Those were some of the best hours I ever spent on the phone.

Finally I asked myself why the America Federation of Musicians should get all of the residual benefits when I could offer an original service at a greatly reduced price. So "Learn to play bridge while you wait" was conceived by this columnist. Research indicated that our elected officials on the Potomac receive over nine million and some calls each year. If statistics are correct and ninetyeight percent of that number wait in space in deadly silence for an hour and fifty-four minutes, you can imagine what I could teach in that time. The opportunity was uncalculatable.

Even though my old bridge playing pal Senator Shifty M. Nicklesnitcher was voted off the Potomac in November of ninety, I knew he knew the corruptibuffonery of the capitol. Naturally his cut was outrageous and after our honest and august body of congressman took their take I estimated a net for myself before taxes of twenty-four cents on the dollar. Not surprisingly everyone signed up and an appropriation was passed as both houses wanted to keep our tax dollars flowing.

Here's how it works. Take anyone of our senators as an example. His seventh secretary in charge of constituent contacts, who also happens to be his sister-inlaw's daughter takes a typical call. She announces that her lord high executioner of frugal and honest spending is in committee caring for our best interests, but if the constituent would like to wait, she would punch up Bridge By Woody Boyd. Today's hand is a simple sample. I describe the four participants pasteboards, give the bidding and critique the best way declarer can play the contract to achieve success

I then inform my bewildered, but maybe somewhat amused caller that the bidding is modern standard American. Next I explain that when the dummy comes down declarer should count his winners and losers before playing to the first trick. There are five clubs, two diamonds, three hearts and a spade for eleven sure winners. The twelfth must come from the out diamonds dividing 3/2 (68% probability) or the spade king on side (50% probability).

Recognize you've got to keep it exciting for you know not who you're talking to and once the light goes off you've lost them. I think the caller should also be notified before any instruction that the service is free in the event they wish to stay on the line for a while.

Next you emphasize that the diamond should be tried first by playing a low one from each hand at trick two. This accommodates two possibilities in the later play. When you regain the lead at trick 3 you can test the diamonds by playing the ace or king. If both opponents follow to the second one, you know they're breaking favorably. If not, you know you can throw a diamond and a spade on dummy's long clubs and still as a last resort try the spade finesse. Not the spade first for if it loses, you can never test the diamonds.

Please call your congressman often!

One out of nine women will develop breast cancer sometime during her life. For women, breast cancer is one of the leading causes of cancer deaths, second only to lung cancer.

Race for the Cure is a series of road races to promote awareness and early detection of breast cancer. Many groups hold fundraisers to fight cancer, but few are specifically devoted to breast cancer.

Detroit's very own Race for the Cure, one of 24 such races around the country this year, will be held at the Detroit Zoo beginning at 9 a.m. Saturday, April 11.

You don't even have to run to participate. Age and athletic ability are not important. Gender is. The 5K race is for women only.

"It's not just a race for trained runners," said Jane Hoey of Grosse Pointe, chairman of the event. "It's for anyone - mothers, daughters, friends. It's especially for breast cancer survivors to celebrate their victory."

Saturday's event is actually a 5K run OR a 5K walk whatever suits your fancy. That's a tad more than three miles. There's also a one mile fun walk for men and women of all ages and abilities.

The whole thing is a benefit for the Susan G. Komen Breast Cancer Foundation and the Meyer L. Prentis Comprehensive Cancer Center of Metropolitan Detroit. Both institutions will use the proceeds for breast cancer research; for promoting awareness, education and early detection of the disease; and for funding mammograms for lowincome women.

The benefit is dedicated to the memory of Alexa Kraft, a Detroit runner who died of breast cancer at the age of 39.

Entry forms are available at all Pier 1 Imports and all New Balance dealers; or call the Michigan Cancer Foundation at 833-0710, ext. 245; or the Motor City Striders hotline at 5441 11

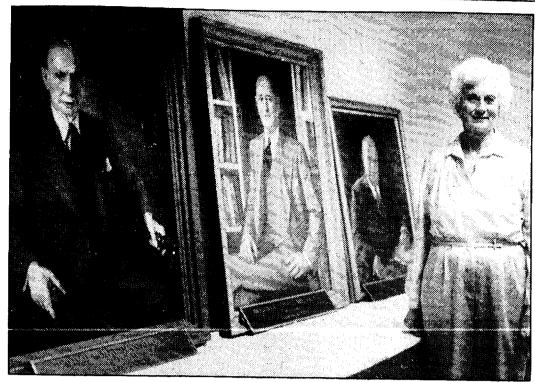

If you pre-register by Friday, April 3, the cost is $12; if you register on the day of the race, it's $15. The 5K race begins at 9 a.m. and loops around the Zoo property and adjacent streets in Huntington Woods; the one-mile fun walk begins at 9:10 a.m. and takes place on the Zoo grounds. Registration is from 7:30 to 8:30 a.m.

Hoey said that the goal is for everyone to have a good time and feel good about helping in the battle against breast can-

Volunteers offer companionship, assistance with personal care and activities of daily living and bereavement support for terminally-ill cancer patients. Volunteers may also help with clerical duties and special projects.

"Volunteers provide us with help that we couldn't otherwise offer or afford," said Cathy Dominici, volunteer coordinator, "but in nearly every case, the experience is rewarding for the volunteer as well."

A six-week training period will be held on Thursdays from ers in Michigan's nature areas.

Refreshments will precede

The goodness of God

The Rev. Walter A. Schmidt First English Lutheran Church

At First English Lutheran Church we have been following a preaching series on the Lord's Prayer throughout the season of Lent. In addition to the beauty and completeness of this prayer which our Lord taught us, one thing that has impressed me over and over again is the overwhelming goodness and generosity of God.

Whether we talk about God working his will in our broken world, or providing our daily bread or our forgiveness of sin, this prayer drives us right back to the goodness and generosity of our heavenly Father.

In fact, if we would but slow down, stop and think, we would realize that everything we have, everything we enjoy, everything we need for daily life is ultimately a gift of God. In our hectic work-a-day world as we put in long hours to earn our daily bread and the necessities of life, it is very easy for us to forget that every good and perfect gift can be traced back to the hand of God.

While we work hard to provide ourselves and our families that which we need to sustain life, or if we are retired and living off our pensions which are a result of many years of effort, we need to remind ourselves that it is God who has not only given us hands to work with and minds to think with, but all of the natural resources which we use to provide our food, clothing, shelter, transportation and so on.

Plus, of course, our very lives are a gift of God. The list of God's goodness and mercy goes on. We have not yet mentioned that gift of a savior, Jesus Christ. The season of Lent is traditionally a time when we reflect upon His great sacrifice for us upon the cross and His glorious resurrection which gives that gift of life to His people.

We have not mentioned God's gift of the spirit, or his sacraments, or his word, or his church, or that peace and strength that comes from knowing that we are His and that He walks with us each and every step of our

In a few weeks Christians from all over the world will join together in celebrating the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead and the newness of life for all of God's people. In a few weeks the farmers will be out in their fields, planting those crops which will be harvested this summer and fall, a harvest that will be food for you and me. Plus, we do not even need to wait for local crops. Just look around your grocery store the next time you do your shopping. You will find ample stocks imported from around the world. New spring fashions are in the stores; new construction is starting up after the lull of winter; the spring flowers are peeking through the still cold earth.

Yes, God is very good to us. We have much for which to be thankful. May we never take those many blessings for granted but always "praise God from whom all blessings flow."

A story about Julie Winter, a Pillsbury Bake-Off Cooking and Baking Contest finalist, on page 1B of the March 12 issue, included a recipe for Gingerbread Scones that contained a mistake. The recipe should call for 1 3/4 cups all-purpose flour. Here's the entire recipe

Gingerbread Scones with Lemon Breakfast Cream

Scones

- 1/4 cup sugar 3/4 cups all-purpose flour
- Quaker Oats cup (quick or old-fashioned, uncooked) 4 t baking powder
- t ground ginger 1/2 t ground cinnamon 1/4 t ground nutmeg (op-
- tional) 1/8 t ground cloves cup (5-1/3 tablespoons) margarine
- 1/3 cup skim milk 1/3 cup dried currants or
- raisins 2 egg whites, slightly beaten

2 tablespoons molasses

Lemon Breakfast Cream 3/4 cup part-skim ri-

cotta cheese 2 T frozen lemonade concentrate, thawed

Heat oven to 425 degrees. Reserve 1 t of sugar; combine remaining sugar with next 7 ingredients, mixing well. Cut in margarine until crumbly. Add combined milk, currants, egg whites and molasses, mixing just until moistened. Turn out onto lightly floured surface; knead gently 5 to 10 times. Pat dough to 3/4-inch thickness. Cut with 2-1/2-inch heart-shaped or round biscuit cutter. Place on ungreased cookie sheet. Sprinkle tops with reserved 1 t sugar. Bake 9 to 11 minutes or until golden brown.

Place ricotta cheese and lemon concentrate in blender container or food processor bowl; cover. Blend on high speed or process until smooth. Serve with warm scones. Makes 10 scones.

The mighty Atlantic sails again through brush of local artist

By Ronald J. Bernas Staff Writer

Ships have always been a part of Robert McGreevy's life.

In Belfast, Northern Ireland, where he was born, his father and uncle worked in the shipyards and helped build the Edmund Fitzgerald. His grandfather worked in the Harland and Wolff shipyard building the

So it's only natural that McGreevy would paint ships. It's in his blood, he says.

"My painting's gone through different periods but it's always come back to ships," he said.

While he's been a painter as long as he can remember, and a model ship builder from his early youth, McGreevy has only been selling his paintings commercially for about 12 years.

He had painted for his own pleasure and only after several people expressed interest in buying his work did he begin

Every weekend McGreevy, a commercial artist for Chrysler goes to his studio in Port Sanilac to paint.

"It's a beautiful place up there," he said. "It's so rich with shipping history. There are wrecks up there from all ages; it's fascinating.'

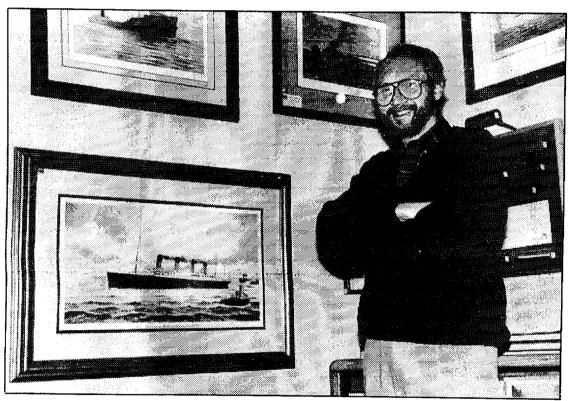

About once a year he comes out with a new print.

"I paint many more than that, but I generally come out with a new work once a year," he said. "The trouble with painting ships is that they sit in water. I have no problems rendering the boat, but the water gives me a lot of trouble. I've scrapped more paintings because I couldn't get the water

This year, at a showing on Saturday, April 11, at Gallery in the Woods, McGreevy will unveil his latest work, The Atlantic. It will be printed and available for sale next month.

The striking watercolor is the culmination of two years of research and painting, he says.

The work shows the huge steamer coming into the Detroit River from Lake Erie. It's a jumbled scene of several small boats going into and out of port as The Atlantic steams its way through the middle, forcing other boats to make

Robert McGreevy, right is surrounded by some of his work. Above is a pencil rendering of the last moments of The Atlantic. The mighty passenger ship is on the left, it was struck by the Ogdensburg in 1852.

"I tried to give it a grimy feel, too," McGreevy said. "The waterfront would have been heavy with smoke from the coal or the wood they burned and the big, black billows from the steamships added to it." Researching the history of the vessel proved difficult.

"She was started in 1848 and launched in '49," McGreevy either.

aren't too many wooden boats around to look at,

"Back then, wooden boats weren't built to last 40 or 50 years," he said. "In fact,20 years was pushing it. They didn't last because they rotted

And there weren't any blueprints available because boats weren't built to pre-made plans. Instead, there were specifications that they had to meet. If a boat was to be 260 feet long as The Atlantic was — it had to be so many feet wide. Its wooden paddle wheels were 30 feet in diameter.

One of the largest ships of its kind, it was built in Marine City and was used as a passenger ship traveling from Buffalo - where the last railroads ended - to Detroit. It was owned by the Michigan Central Railroad.

A $1 steerage ticket would allow a traveler access to the deck - the same place where livestock was carried. The highest class ticket was $10 and included a cabin and food. The trip from Detroit to Buffalo took 16 hours.

McGreevy chose to paint The Atlantic for a couple of reasons. One is because he has always wanted to do an early scene of the Detroit River.

Another was the discovery of the wreckage of The Atlantic two years ago on the bottom of Lake Erie. This summer, barring any legal challenges, divers will begin salvage operations to recover artifacts from the ship.

The Atlantic is an American ship, but when it sank in 1852 after being hit by the Odgensburg, it settled on the bottom of the lake in Canadian waters. The Michigan DNR has issued a salvage permit, but Canadian authorities are challenging it.

"It's generating a lot of publicity and people will hear a lot about it this summer," he said. And that means an interested market for his print.

"It's incredible to think that this ship that was built 140 years ago has stayed underwater virtually as it sank," he said. "It's an important part of our local history.'

McGreevy's April 11 show is called Passenger Ships of the Great Lakes and will include six pieces in addition to The Atlantic. Several of the paintings he will exhibit have never been printed.

McGreevy will be at the gallery opening from 1 to 3 p.m. For more information, call Gallery in the Woods at 881-5353. Gallery in the Woods offers varied fare

DSO report:

Pianist, guest conductor give excellent concert

By Alex Suzcek Special Writer

Giving impeccable performances of two drastically different major works, guest conductor Jerzy Semkow and pianist Richard Goode provided last week's DSO audiences with one of the season's high points.

Long a favorite in Detroit, Semkow was here for only a two-week stay, but reminded us once again of his outstanding skill and rapport with our orchestra. Meanwhile, the experience of hearing pianist Richard Goode perform Mozart's Piano Concerto No. 20 in D minor defied the praiseful powers of the written word.

This native New Yorker, a product of the Mannes College of Music and Philadelphia's famed Curtis Institute, enjoys a worldwide reputation as a brilliant interpreter of music of the classical period. Last Thursday evening he transcended that fame in his performance of one of the greatest piano concertos of all time. Mozart's 20th was written in a period when the composer made his most dramatic breakthroughs in exploring the technical range of the piano concerto. With new-found technical power, he achieved a level of artistic expression and impact that has probably never been exceeded. Its emotional range rivals the drama of opera, especially "Don Giovanni," which the foreboding, minor-key themes of the first and last movements invariably call to mind. Yet these give way frequently to tender, Mozartian play, especially in solo piano responses to the brooding orchestral segments, seeming to simulate life's contrasting experiences of joy and tragedy, congeniality and solitude.

Goode had totally responsive support from Semkow and the orchestra in expressing each changing mood with profound insight and technically superb execution. As the musical context switched between the ominous tutti and the cheerful solo segments, each transition was seamless and perfectly expressed. The utter clarity and perfection of Goode's phrasing and incredibly fast runs and trills were no less than breathtaking.

One could have left the hall in total satisfaction as the final

Pride and love bring forth a revealing family odyssey

Unto The Sons By Gay Talese Knopf. 635 pages. $25

To digress a bit: There is nothing I like better than a gift certificate and immediately redeeming it at a book shop. Just recently I was joyfully confronted with a wide variety of delectable choices upon the shelves, and I prolonged making the final selection in order to draw out the pleasure of choosing. Eventually, Gay Talese's "Unto The Sons," an autobiographical memoir of several generations of his Italian family, won, and I happily walked out with it firmly under my arm.

It was not an easy escape. I had a trying session with the book shop clerk who had stubbornly insisted the book rightly belonged in the fiction section where I had found it. Even after I tried, patiently, to convince her that this volume definitely belonged in the non-fiction area, I had to retreat, annoyed and defeated, with my prize.

It was not my first experience with an uncertain book shop clerk by any means, and I am appalled, at times, with their careless attitude toward books - they treat books as just mere merchandise. The selling of books deserves something a whole lot better than indifference and disrepect on the part of book shop personnel. I recall with horror an incident some years ago in Grosse Pointe when one supposedly intelligent clerk vainly hunted for Richard Adams' bestselling novel, "Watership Down" in, of all places, the marine section of the book shop. Needless to say, that clerk did

"Unto The Sons" is a delightful hefty book, filled to overflowing with absorbing stories of the author's family, in particular Domenico, Gaetano, and Joseph Talese (respectively the great-grandfather, grandfather, and father of Gay Talese). The patriarch of this colorful clan was Domenico Talese, a landowner in Maida, a small village in southern Italy. He was deeply influenced by the Roman Catholic Church and the feudal customs prevalent in this backwater. Gaetano, his son and the author's grandfather, for whom he was named, was a restless wanderer who came to America, that shining land full of promise across the sea, in the 1880's to work in a Pennsylvania factory. He returned to Maida only occasionally to visit his wife and family. Joseph, Gaetano's son, learned the tailoring trade after being apprenticed with his uncle. There he shared the thoughts and aspirations of his older cousin, Antonio Cristiani, who dreamed constantly of breaking away from his father's dominance and fleeing to Paris, the mecca of all tailors.

Gay Talese wields a wide brush with vivid colors in depicting the different historical eras in which his ancestors and relatives lived. We see the Napoleonic period where King Joseph Murat of Naples peripherally intrudes upon the lives of Domenico Talese and his clan in povertystricken southern Italy. Also, we watch Antonio Cristiani's involvement, as an Italian soldier during WWII, during the battles against the Allied armies swarming up the Italian boot to drive out the Nazis.

Too, we see Joseph Talese, Antonio's cousin, living in Ocean City, N.J., and operating his own successful tailoring and dry-cleaning establishment. Even though he has proudly become an American citizen, Joseph still has twinges of guilt when he volunteers for warden duty because he agonizes over the fate of his relatives overseas being overrun by the approaching American army.

Born in the 1930's, both Gay Talese and his younger sister grow up in Ocean City under the influence of their Italian-born father and Italian-American mother who pass on to their children the stories that have been handed down for generations, giving a kind of continuity to their family past. Gay, a sensitive young man, is very much aware of his father's grave concerns, and he is imbued with family pride, a pride which has brought forth this rich family odys-

In some critical quarters, this book has been rapped for having too many large dollops of information embedded in its pages. This information is deemed irrelevant to some readers who argue that these massive nuggets of facts impede the smooth narrative movement. I disagree. Reading about the WWII battles, the eccentric founder of the asbestos factory in Pennsylvania, Antonio Cristiani's tailoring experiences both in Maida and Paris, plus several other lengthy episodes, all defined for me the tenor and times of which the Talese generations lived. It is a massive piece of work, this book, but I feel that these descriptive inserts are valuable in educating the reader to what really happened to the Taleses during their lifetimes.

For 10 years Gay Talese was a reporter for the New York Times, and during the 60s and 70s he wrote seven books. He started research for "Unto The Sons" in 1981, traveling to Italy to further explore his roots. His latest book is an outpouring of love and appreciation for his forebears, and he has succeeded in producing a grand opus worthy of a long shelf-life. Although his background is Italian, Talese's words should induce a sense of personal satisfaction in the hearts of immigrants and their children from other corners of the world.

An exhibition that asks the question "How do we define art?" will be on view at the Detroit Artists Market through Jim Luckey, an architect with Smith, Hinchman & Grylls and a member of the Artists Market exhibition committee, selected work from the studios of Barbara Moon Boertzel, Margo Delidow, David Gach, Lynn Galbreath, Claudia St. Peter and Jon Shelton for inclusion in the exhibition.

The exhibition challenges the distinction traditionally made in Western art between "craft" and "art" by taking the little things, the ordinary things, of everyday life and confronting the viewer.

Is art the process of the viewer's interaction with the artists? Is craft a matter of function? Does a work have to be non-functional to be art? Several of the artists represented make use of found objects, tools and unexpected materials to define their works of art.

Boetzel is a Cranbrook fiber artist who incorporates a variety of materials in the fabric of her pieces. Delidow explores the notion of furniture that doesn't function and tools rendered useless by hanging. Gach creates lamps from materials that previously had an industrial function and makes them into domestic objects. Galbreath is a painter whose decorative, painted surfaces present multi-layered symbolism. St.

Peter creates paintings that juxtapose ordinary objects to seize the viewer's attention. Shelton is a printmaker from the University of Michigan for whom his own tools often become the work of art.

The Detroit Artists Market is located at 1452 Randolph in downtown Detroit's Harmonie Park and is open Tuesday through Saturday from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. For more information call 962-0337.

WSU colloquium honors writer/scholar Walter Benjamin

"The Visual Arts in a Technological Age," a colloquium to commemorate the centenary of the birth of Walter Benjamin, will be held Saturday, April 4, in the Community Arts Auditorium at Wayne State Univer-

The all-day event will feature scholars from across the country who will discuss the writing of Benjamin, considered one of the 20th century's most influential thinkers in the field of visual studies.

"We are pleased to continue our long tradition of leadership in the arts by presenting the Walter Benjamin colloquium, the first public event funded with income from the W. Hawkins Ferry Endowment," says David Magidson, dean of the college of fine, performing and communication arts. "I am particularly pleased that the larger arts community will benefit as well as our students."

The originality and importance of Benjamin's thought. and the continuing resonance of his writing for scholars and artists alike, make Benjamin a necessary first subject, says Jeffrey Abt, chairman of the department of art and art history and co-sponsor the colloquium.

"He sets the tone for future programs funded by the endowment for 20th century art history and criticism," Abt says.

Benjamin was a scholar whose interests ranged across a variety of fields and the colloquium reflects this diversity. Speakers include university faculty with expertise in art and art criticism, film history, film theory and criticism, library criticism, contemporary art and criticism, and contemporary cultural theory and criticism.

The program for the day includes lectures on Benjamin's work and its importance to later work.

Registration is $5 for the general public, $4 for faculty and staff and $2 for students. For information about registration, hotel discount, restaurants and parking, call the art and art history department at 577-2980.

'White Men': Double dribble drivel

By Ronald J. Bernas Staff Writer

In a marketplace of so-called women's movies ("Steel Magnolias," "Fried Green Tomatoes," "Beauty and the Beast") it's nice to see a movie made by, about and for men.

That's until about halfway through "White Men Can't Jump." Then you understand why a movie like this doesn't make for big box-office draw.

It's like a basketball game that starts out gangbusters, but falls apart after the half. If it were a basketball game the stands would have been empty by the end.

The alleged story centers on the pickup games played in the ghettos of Los Angeles and the hustling that accompanies Wesley Snipes is fantastic as hotdog hoopster Sidney Deane, who is the best player on that or any court and isn't shy about saying so. He shoots cutdowns and mother jokes as quickly as he drives through the hole to the basket.

Enter Billy Hoyle, played by Woody Harrelson. He's a dumblooking white boy who, much to the surprise of the blacks on the court, can play basketball pretty well.

Both men are little boys with patient women waiting for them on the courtside. Sidney's wife wants him to quit hustling basketball, get a real job and move them out of the ghetto. Billy's girlfriend Gloria (Rosie Perez) wants him to earn enough money to pay off the gamblers they owe and then get a job.

But neither man is ready to grow up.

The only time the movie comes to life is on the basketball court. The shots, the talk (although too foul for youngsters) and the games themselves are as exciting as any NCAA tournament contest.

But off the court the movie falls apart. There is no real story. Let's put it this way: Any movie that builds to a character having a spot on the television game show "Jeopardy!" has serious problems.

While the movie comes alive when Snipes is on the court, it screen. Her Latin sexuality, temper and biting humor make her eminently watchable. Teaming her with Snipes would have given the film a real jolt of energy, but instead, she's Harrelson's partner.

Harrelson is very funny as Woody the bartender on television's "Cheers" but here, he's just a little brother trying to play with the big boys. He has a nice jump shot, though.

The story by Ron Shelton, who wrote "Bull Durham," tries to illuminate the difference between men and women and blacks and whites, but all attempts at raising consciousness land as heavy as an air-

Thanks to Kavner, it's wonderful 'Life'

By Marian Trainor Special Writer

Enthusiasm, sincerity and just plain honest sentiment fuel "This Is My Life" - a flight into the clouds of frustration that hang heavy over a single mother as she attempts to balance being the best mother possible and her need to have a life and career of her own in show business. It is this quandary that drives Dottie Engels (Julie Kavner), mother of teenage Erica (Samantha Mathis) and Opal (Gaby Hoffman) to cry out, "You spend 16 years trying to make them happy and they can't bear for you to have three months of happinecessary absence from home. They like the way it is but they vearn for the way it was for them before she became a ce-

It is understandable why they miss her. Warm-hearted, loving, always ready with a joke; every day with her was a fun day.

When we first meet Dottie she is holding a group of women enthralled in the makeup department of the store where she works. She has a line that never stops and a wit to go with it. Although she's a top saleswoman, she has other plans for herself - she wants to be a standup comedian.

When Dottie's aunt dies and leaves Dottie her house, she immediately sells it and uses the money to support the girls while she makes the rounds of various clubs.

She gets a few one-night stands in clubs where performers are not paid and live on hope that someone will spot them and promote them. The man they hope will drop by is Arnold Moss (Dan Ackroyd) who supposedly is the best agent in the business.

When he sees Dottie's act, he is impressed by how well-received she is by the audience and signs her immediately.

Under his guidance, she becomes a success. She makes it big in California, Vegas and on the Johnny Carson Show.

It's great for her but back home there is discontent. The girls resent her absence and her use of family incidents in her jokes. She defends herself, stating that "part of being an artist is using things that come from your life."

When Dottie goes on tour she arranges a series of baby sitters for the girls, all of whom are would-be comedians who have never made the grade. They provide some funny segments when they insist on trying out their acts on the girls.

Even as she leaves the girls in New York because she doesn't want to take them out of school, there is never a doubt that Dottie is a caring mother. She keeps track of them by phone and never fails to tell them how much she loves and misses them. When they still complain, she reminds them that this is what they had all wanted.

The charm of this film is that it never turns into a singles act. Even the minor characters are sharply drawn. Dottie's kids get equal time, and in fact two of the most memorable scenes belong to them.

Nora Ephron, co-producer of "The Fisher King" and screenwriter of the Oscar-nominated films "Silkwood" and "When Harry Met Sally," scores a hit with her first effort as director. The film has humor, warmth and delightful dialogue.

Her attention to detail and insight into the needs and feelings of her characters brings the film right into the mainstream of the problems of the modern one-parent family and the choices a single mother must make when she is on her

'The Glass Menagerie' staged at Henry Ford Museum

The hopes and dreams of one American family are hauntingly portrayed in Tennessee Williams' classic, "The Glass Menagerie," playing at Henry Ford Museum Theater April 3-

The drama unfolds as worldtraveler Tom Wingfield looks back on his life with two women who have created worlds of their own. His devoted but domineering mother Amanda is a fading Southern belle who lives in a kinder, gentler past. His delicate semiinvalid sister Laura lives to daydream and care for her fragile collection of glass animals.

Real life is dreary and mundane for the Wingfields until a charismatic gentleman caller comes to dinner and turns their world upside-down.

opened on Broadway in 1945 with legendary actress Laurette Taylor in the role of Amanda. The drama launched Williams on a highly successful career and was named best play by the New York Drama Critics' Circle. It has been revived several times on the New York movement came to its highly moving ending. However, a drastically different experience was in store.

The symphonies of Anton Bruckner have been subjects of controversy and speculation for a century. Long, incredibly complex and difficult to follow, they never won for the composer the enthusiastic response enjoyed by Bruckner's contemporary, Brahms - much to Bruckner's disappointment and Even Bruckner's Fourth, performed at this concert, belies its subtitle, "Romantic," and has its detractors. An analogy sometimes used to describe it is to call it "Architectural." Like a great building such as a cathedral, it is massive, awe inspiring, rich in detail and in a musically creative sense, immobile. The ideas, though developed in variations, end up going nowhere.

This does not necessarily detract from the fact that Bruckner has achieved powerful impact and impressive orchestral effects and coloration. It may, in fact, reflect a world in which it is increasingly difficult to bring a concept to a conclusion - a sense of distraction and frustration.

Certainly when Bruckner masterfully employs the full forces of the orchestra with the brass blaring glorious fanfares, there is a sense of the wrath of God descending. And when the strings and winds softly echo each other's melodic phases, hope for happiness and fulfillment is in the air. Whatever the true intent and nature of this massive work, it offers a major challenge for great musicians to make them clear and meaningful to the listener, as well as to themselves.

Semkow's meticulous and exhaustive direction of the Fourth provided major insights into the work as well as an overwhelming demonstration of high quality orchestral power. And it took wonderful advantage of Orchestra Hall's marvelous acoustics. It was a major achievement, especially for a 60-minute work, and provided greatly heightened appreciation of the profound and mystifying qualities of Bruckner's work.

The performance remained an endurance test as well, bringing to mind an apocryphal joke about this and one other late 19th century Austrian composer: When Richard Strauss got stuck for inspiration, he would write a little waltz. If Bruckner got stuck, on the other hand, he'd write "da Capo." (Roughly translated, that means "Play it again, Sam.")

A pops program under the able baton of Eric Kunzel is being offered tonight, Friday and Saturday evenings, and Sunday afternoon. Selections from "Camelot," "Gigi," "Paint Your Wagon," "Brigadoon" and "My Fair Lady" are the fare.

The classical series resumes Thursday, April 9, when Neeme Jarvi and pianist Bella Davidovich perform Concert Overture "Count Robert of Paris" by Parker, Piano Concerto No. 2 by Chopin and Symphony No. 6 by Dvorak. For tickets and times call 833-3700.

VanDeweghe has been a model of consistency for the Knights since his freshman season when he scored 31 goals and collected 31 assists.

He had 34 goals and 54 assists as a sophomore when ULS won the Class B state championship, followed with 29 goals and 30 assists as a junior and capped his high school career this season with 24 goals and 37 assists.

"Andy's biggest attribute is his desire to win and his determination," Fowler said. "He's one of those players who works hard in practice to improve on his weaknesses, not on his strengths. He'll work on a new shot or a new move to put on a defenseman.'

The solidly-built Van-Deweghe scored the majority of his goals from around the net, but this year he also developed a good slap shot from the left wing.
"He's tough to move when he's around the crease," Fowler said. "He does a good job of crashing to the net on the power play.' VanDeweghe was just as happy to set up one of his linemates as he was to score a goal himself. "He worked hard to set up someone else," Fowler said. "He took pride in making a pass that led to a goal." VanDeweghe scored three game-winning goals this season and played with a controlled aggressiveness, accumulating only 20 penalty minutes.

VanDeweghe, who'll continue his hockey career at Lake Forest (Ill.) College, finished 10th on the all-time state scoring list with 270 points.

Troy trips South

Most members of Grosse Pointe South's girls soccer team had to make a couple of adjustments during their first game against Troy.

"A lot of the girls have only had a week of practice since volleyball season ended so they've been adjusting from using their hands to using their feet and from playing on a hard floor to playing on a muddy field," said Lady Devils coach Tom Caranicholas.

South dropped its non-league opener to Troy, 4-2, but Caranicholas saw several signs of encouragement.

"We controlled the game for the last 25 or 30 minutes, but just couldn't put the ball over the goal line," he said. "We had one girl shoot a foot wide when she had the goalie beat and one of our freshmen hesitated a second when the ball was a foot from the line and it gave the defender time to knock it away.'

South's Vicky Spicer opened the scoring, but Troy came back to tie the game at 1-1. Stephanie Coddens broke the deadlock for the Lady Devils, but the Colts came back to score the next three goals.

"We lost our opener 10-0 to Plymouth Salem last year and that was a real eye-opener," Caranicholas said. "We have some things to work on this year, too, but I expect us to improve with more playing. Some of the girls told me during the game that they just felt 'out of

Among the South standouts were goalkeeper Allison Lang, sweeper Kathy Grenzke and right wing Kathy Schrage.

"Allison must have made 20 saves, including a penalty shot," Caranicholas said.

The coach was also delighted with the varsity debut of right halfback Laura Ness.

"She was very impressive for a freshman playing her first game," he said. "She's not very big, but she has a lot of speed and determination."

Star splits with Cabrini

Star of the Sea's softball team stepped up in class for its opener this week and the Tunas had a successful debut.

"(Allen Park) Cabrini is a Class B school and it usually has a pretty good team, so we're encouraged," said Star coach Bert Caloia after the Tunas won the first game of the non-league doubleheader 7-6 and bowed 11-0 in the second contest.

Senior Jeanne Caloia pitched a three-hitter in the opener and struck out five. การกรีน " ลาการ

"She got a little tired at the end and walked a couple batters. That's when Cabrini scored its runs," said the coach. "Emily Faber made a nice catch in center field to rob them of a hit in the last inning." Star used a five-run fifth inning to take a lead it never relinguished.

A pair of young players, sophomore Cathie Colby and freshman Laura Faber, had good games for the Tunas

"Cathie caught her first game and did a real good job," said Bert Caloia, "and Laura was on base every time up."

Numbers are down in ULS track

Elizabeth Jamett and Philip Langford, the girls track coaches at University Liggett School, will have to create a mountain of team spirt if the Lady Knights are going to win many meets this year.

The ULS squad had a record low turnout of 12 girls at its opening practices last month. That means most of the athletes will be required to compete in four events.

That heavy duty is nothing new for senior Jennifer Miller, who has been the leading pointgetter since her freshman season. Miller has averaged 18.8 points a meet for the last three years. She set school records in 3,200-meter run (11:33); 1,600 (5:19); and 800 (2:25) last season. She can also run a leg of the 3,200 relay or compete in each of the hurdles.

Ify Obianwu, a co-captain with Miller, is expected to do well in the sprints with personal bests of 13.1 in the 100 and 27.7 in the 200. She will also anchor the 400 and 800 relays. Obianwu has a best of 63.5 in the 400-meter dash.

Also returning from the 1991 team are Natalie Hubbard, Jamila Hoard, Carla Caputo, Cybell Codish, Crystal Martin, Sonia Eden and Kita Beasley. Newcomers are Anne Jagger, Kate Blake and the lone freshman, Mindi Timmins.

Goolsbee and Schamberger were allowed to compete for Germany in the world championship and finished 11th. That puts them in a good position for a return to the world championships and a possible berth on the Olympic team in 1994.

Their rousing original dance to "Yellow Rose of Texas," and their sultry and exciting interpretation of music from the sound track of "The Untouchables" for their free dance served notice that they are an excellent ice dancing pair.

April 2, 1992 Grosse Pointe News Layoff can't slow Farms mom on the slopes

By Chuck Klonke Sports Editor

Anne Knudson-Fitzpatrick didn't ski as much as she usually does this season, but when she did get an opportunity, the Grosse Pointe Farms mother of two young children was almost as good as ever.

Knudson-Fitzpatrick recently returned from Killington, Vt., where she took first place in Class A and third place in the Elite division at the Coors Light Eastern Championships.

"I didn't expect to go back east to ski this year but I got the invitation to compete because of what I did last year, so I decided I'd give it a shot," she

This had been a trying winter for Knudson-Fitzpatrick, who was a dominant performer on the eastern ski racing circuit before moving to the Farms in 1990. She sprained her ankle last fall in a nonskiing accident. But just as the ankle healed and she was ready to resume skiing, her 20month-old daughter, Tess, became seriously ill and was hospitalized for two weeks.

"She's fine now, but when your kids are sick, nothing else matters," Knudson-Fitzpatrick

"I didn't have the opportunity to ski much this year - I went to Boyne Mountain twice - but I played some tennis and worked out in the health club and got enough confidence to tackle the slopes again.'

Knudson-Fitzpatrick also had another hurdle to overcome. She celebrated her 40th birthday this winter and knew she'd be skiing against women who were nearly half her age.

"They put me in Class A because I hadn't skied much this winter, but that was OK. I was just glad to be racing again. I enjoy the camaraderie with the other skiers," she said.

"When I went out there I just wanted to finish in the top 10, but on my second run I got my old confidence back and then I wanted to do even better. All I had to do was get my timing back - setting up for the next gate and finding the fastest line down the hill," Knudson-Fitzpatrick said.

After winning Class A, Knudson-Fitzpatrick was bumped up to the Elite, where she had competed for several years, and took third place.

"It was special because nobody expected it," she said. The other racers had been skiing all year. I know I can do better with more time on the slopes. If nothing else, it makes me want to come back again next year.'

Next year will be a busy one for Knudson-Fitzpatrick. In addition to her racing, she'll be watching her son, 6-year-old Ryan, who took third place in a recent race at Boyne Mountain.

"He was the youngest one in his division," said the proud mom. "He looks like a natural. He's better than I was at his

Walkers hit stride to aid MS research

Jim Elliot of Grosse Pointe is willing to walk great lengths for his wife — like 20 kilome-

Elliot has put together a challenge team of seven walkers who will participate in the Super Cities Walk on Sunday, April 5, to benefit multiple sclerosis research and services offered by the Michigan Chapter of the National Multiple Sclerosis Society.

Elliot's wife, Donna, was diagnosed with the disease shortly before their wedding in June 1989, and she hopes to cover the course herself in her motorized cart if weather per-Elliot's team of walkers is called "Meechie's Milers." Donna's nickname is Meechie.

"(The walk) is a wonderful way of people bonding together and is demonstrative of the human spirit," Jim Elliot said. Each walker is asked to raise funds by recruiting sponsors to pledge money for each kilometer completed.

There will be walks in six cities, including Grosse Pointe, during the first weekend in April. Walkers in Grand Rapids and Kalamazoo get things started on Saturday. On Sunday there will be walks in Birmingham, Flushing and Lansing, in addition to the one in Grosse Pointe, which begins at 9 a.m. at Grosse Pointe South High School. Registration is at 8 a.m.

The walk includes rest stops stocked with high-energy snacks, a picnic lunch with entertainment, medical volunteers and "sag wagons" to pick up tired walkers.

Anyone interested in walking, making pledges or volunteering for the Super Cities Walk should call the Michigan Chapter of the National Multiple Sclerosis Society at 350-0020 or 1-800-247-7382.

and Andy have played together for two years now and they fed off each other well."

Kisskalt has all the skills necessary to remain one of the top high school players in the state.

"He has exceptional speed and a tremendous desire to Fowler said. ""He has good puck sense and is a great stickhandler. He can skate around almost any defenseman - it will take a great play to stop him one-on-one.'

Êldridge's statistics weren't quite as impressive as the ones he compiled as a sophomore, but the junior netminder was still instrumental in the Knights' 13-12-3 campaign.

Eldridge stopped 328 of 382 shots, a save percentage of .858. His goals-against average was 3.58.

"Chris knows the technical aspects of goaltending," Fowler said. "He's a perfectionist who hates to give up a goal. He makes the big save when you need it and he's also a good practice goalie."

Fowler said the competition with Tom Best, also a junior, has improved both ULS netminders.

"Chris is well-balanced on his skates," Fowler said. "It's tough to get him out of posi-Lion. That's something that comes natural, although (assistant coach) John Murphy has really helped our goalies with their technique."

Robb has been an honorable mention selection each of the last two seasons. This year was a struggle for the 6-foot, 175pound senior because he had reconstructive knee surgery last June. Then as soon as he rounded into form, he contracted mononucleosis and missed eight games.

Despite the setbacks, Robb had nine goals and 18 assists and shared Most Valuable Player honors with Kisskalt.

"Bill has always been good in our zone, but his offensive skills have improved tremendously since he was a freshman," Fowler said. "Now he's capable of making the Paul Coffey-type rush out of our end."

Robb, who was the Knights' Most Improved Player as a sophomore, was one of the team's captains this year.

Maycock has been ULS' second-line center for three seasons and this year collected hine goals and 19 assists.

"John had a lot of bad luck this year," Fowler said. "His play was better than his statistics would indicate. There were a lot of games I didn't even notice him. That happens when a player isn't making mistakes."

Maycock has scored some important goals for the Knights, including the winner in ULS' regional victory over defending state champion Cran-

'John is fast, tall and a good playmaker and faceoff man,' Fowler said. "He's an intelligent players We awarded him the 1990 trophy, which goes to the player who best exemplifies the characteristics of our championship team."

Teitge, who compiled a 3.722 grade-point average, has posted impressive statistics in the classroom and on the ice. This year he had 19 goals and 21 assists, while playing right wing on the second line.

"Stefan is a crafty, classy player," Fowler said. "He's a good playmaker, who always the right time."

Teitge also scored some important goals, among them the tying goal in the 4-3 victory over Cranbrook in the regional.

Teitge is one of several academic standouts on the ULS

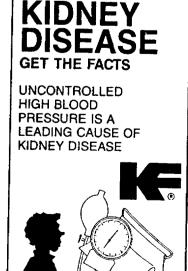

"We have four guys - Robb, Maycock, Alex Crenshaw and Teitge — who are taking Latin 5," Fowler said. "Sometimes I wonder how I'm going to communicate with people like that."

here are some condos for under $100,000 Pssst

By John Minnis

Piku Management Co. probably has the best-kept secret in St. Clair Shores — brand new condominiums for under $100,000.

The two-bedroom units, known as "ranch villas," are being built on Masonic, just a block from Jefferson and the Shores' Memorial Park.

North Shore Villas is what the city planners call a "planned cluster residential community." A total of 40 units will be built — comprising 10 ranch-style buildings with four units each.

"It's unique for St. Clair Shores," said builder Chris Piku. His father, Frank Piku, is the developer for the 37-year-old family

Piku Managment was able to buy 5-1/2 acres from the neighboring St. Clair Shores Community Education site and, under strict city planners' supervision, is developing the ranch-style, cluster-home neighborhood.

"It was one of the largest pieces of land to became available in St. Clair Shores in over 10 years,' Chris Piku said.

The site is within walking distance of the lake, a grocery store and the St. Clair Shores public golf course, also on Masonic.

He said the homes are built so that they blend in with the neighborhood. His father added that they fit in so well that many people don't even know they're there which means home shoppers are not likely to accidently discover them on a Sunday drive.

"It's good in that it doesn't stand out as something that does not belong in the neighborhood," Chris Piku said.

There is a single entrance off Masonic into the neighborhood, which means no through traffic and greater security, Frank Piku said.

There are five floor plans to choose from, and all units have two bedrooms and full basements.

Chris Piku said he had originally hoped to get by with a couple of plans, but he found customers wanted flexibilty.

"We adapted," he said, "and that

Other options are available at no cost - such as opening a wall between the kitchen and living room or choosing a flat instead of a cathedral ceiling.

"We're really building custom homes," he said.

Most of the units have a one-car attached garage. A few homes are available with two-car garages.

Besides the bedrooms and basement, each home features a dining room, living room and kitchen with eating space. Floor-plan choices include two baths and a first-floor laundry.

Of course, buyers have all the choices of new-home purchasers, such as carpeting, tile and lino-

He said many buyers are emptynesters moving out of bigger homes. They know they're downsizing, but they've collected a lot of belongings over the years, and that's where the full basements come in handy.

The basements can also be used for an extra bath, bedroom, recreation room or den, he said.

And not only are the interest rates lower right now, so is the price of the North Shore Villas.

The single-car garage model starts at $93,900, while the deluxe one-car unit goes for $99,900. Both prices have been discounted $5,000.

For the additional $6,000 cost of the deluxe home, features worth $7,290 individually are included, such as extra cabinets; appliances; carpeting, tile and fixture upgrades; and central air condition-

"The best time to buy is right interest ra now," he said, "while interest rates are low."

Chris Piku said that if anyone has a question about any of his projects, all he has to do is drive a few miles to his next site. That's the advantage of going with a local, established builder, he said.

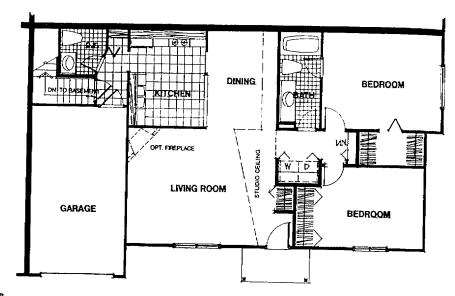

"We do stand behind our projects," he said.

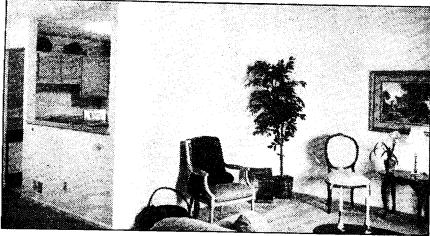

His father said that condominium living has many advantages, such as no yard or exterior maintenance, no snow shoveling, tight security and the ability to leave for extended periods without having to worry about who's taking care of the yard.

With 20 percent down, a buyer can move into the $93,900 home with payments of $729 a month on a 15-year, 8.25 percent mortgage, or $652 for a 20-year, 8.5 percent mortage.

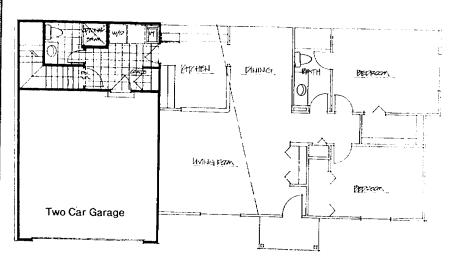

The association fee for maintenance, insurance and management is about $85 a month.

North Shore Villas is between Harper and Jefferson on Masonic in St. Clair Shores. Open house hours are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. week days and 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. on weekends. Piku Management can be reached at 293-6760.

The interior of the ranch-style North Shore Villas cluster home condominiums is bright and offers many options to buyers.

Violets: Only flowers to become politically correct

Spring and winter sometimes seem to be contending for first place this time of year but we all know that spring will actually prevail.

The flowers of April, in the various flower calendars of the world, are wistaria, daisy, cherry blossom and willow. The willow is the Chinese symbol of resurgent spring, and those along the lake shore are already misted in faint green.

Wildflowers will soon be making their appearance in the woods and field with hepatica, spring beauty, trailing arbutus and bloodroot, to name a few.

Violets are perhaps the only spring wildflower to ever become a political symbol. In 1814 during Napoleon's exile on the island of Elba, the French Bonapartists chose the violet as their emblem. Napoleon was nicknamed Caporal Violet, the little flower that returns with spring, and France was soon flooded with postcards picturing bunches of violets.

This seemed innocent enough at first glance, but close inspection would reveal that the flowers pictured concealed the faces of Napoleon, Maria Louise and their 3-yearold son Charles, the king of Rome. On and off, for many years, the French government fought by decree any reproduction of the violet, the symbol of the Bonapartists. This violet campaign finally died down about 1880, and the famous violet postcards are now collector's items.

There are many varieties of violets in many shades of blue, lavender, purple and white and they come in many sizes, some scented and some not. In the Edwardian period, bunches of Parma violets were very fashionable and everyone wore them pinned to lapels, collars or muffs. Violet perfume was also in great demand and it was during this period that the perfume house of Coty introduced "Violet Sec," its most popular perfume.

Most people don't realize that pansies are really violets and the product of many years of hybridization, but a spring garden would hardly be complete without them. Their almost human little faces have earned them many names, some quite endearing, such as hartsease, little grandmothers, johnny-jump-up and lady's de-

It is recorded that when Cadillac first came to Detroit in 1701 he brought with him from Quebec a gardener whose duty it was to lay out gardens and orchards.

But in early spring in woods and fields and along the shore of the lake, thousands of wildflowers provided a natural garden which must have been very beautiful. Violets and columbine, dogwood and shadbush, and many other plants were here then and still reappear every spring whenever urban sprawl has not prevailed.

Antiques by Ralph & Terry Kovel

'Rabbit ware' multiplies in value

Antiques with personality are always in demand. Unusual figurines or teapots, toys, worn teddy bears and even some types of dinnerware are high-priced because they have "charm."

One very expensive type of dish that attracts buyers is known as "rabbit ware." The border is made of colorful sponged flowers and leaves. The center design is a scene showing humanized rabbits at play. Some are in a garden with frogs and cabbages; some are driving cars; some are reading or shopping or playing golf, croquet, cricket or baseball. Designs are red, blue and green with brown or gray rabbits.

The dishes were probably made for children and may be part of a full set including mugs, plates and a platter. The maker is unknown, but the car pictured on some of the dishes suggests a date of about 1900. The rabbit platter is worth $1,250; the plate, $850.

Q. How can I tell if my tufted velvet Victorian sofa is 25 years old or 125 years old? It has a narrow mahogany frame with small roses carved at the top of the center section.

A. Many years ago, we purchased an old sofa at a house sale. After making several demands, we asked to slit the back of the upholstery at the bottom covering of the seat so we could see the wooden frame near the legs. We agreed to pay the full asking price if the sofa proved to be an antique. If it was a recent reproduction, we did not want it.

The owner was so concerned, she left the room while we "operated." The hand-tool marks on the frame and the method of joining the leg proved it was old, and we bought it. That is probably the only way to be sure of the age of your sofa. Wait until it is in need of new upholstery and examine the frame.

Copies of Victorian sofas have been made for over 100 years. It is easy to be fooled unless the type of stuffing, fabrics and the bare frame are considered. One easy clue: There should be more than one set of tack holes in the frame if it has been used for over 100 years. Each time it is re-covered, there is a new set of holes.

Fine antiques need proper care. For a copy of the Kovel's booklet, "Taking Care of Textiles," send $2 and a long, stamped (52 cents), self-addressed envelope to Kovels, P.O. Box 22900, Beachwood, Ohio 44122.

Household Help by John Amantea

Q. I have constructed several sets of wall shelves out of pine, and I'm now experiencing problems with the stain. The stain I applied is a dark Early American color, and it looks all blotchy and unattractive. I have only stained one shelf, because I don't want the others to look the same. What can I do to make the shelves come out OK?

A. Staining pine can be a potential problem, as you have already discovered. Maple, birch and fir can also cause problems.

There is hope for getting these woods to look good by following a few steps:

• Sand uniformly so that all the exposed wood is sanded with the same grit of sandpaper. If you sand an area with finer paper than the rest, it will stain a lighter color.

• Use shellac, thinned with two parts alcohol, before you actually apply stain. As an alternative, you can obtain advice from your local hardware or paint store about using a "stain controller." You won't get as dark a color after using a stain controller, so experiment first. For a darker color, you can try to thin the stain controller and apply several coats of stain for your finished job.

Q. I have dark paneling (not wood) in my hall. I want to paint over it. Can I paint this type of paneling, or is it a big mistake?

A. There are many factors to consider before you decide to paint your paneling. Although you did mention that your paneling is not a wood material, there is a potential for painting. The surface to be painted should not be of laminated material, otherwise the paint will not adhere to the surface. Instead, if you choose to paint, the external appearance should be smooth and basically free of gloss or sheen.

If the above criteria are met, painting is possible.

HELP FEED THE HUNGRY

Gleaners Community Food Bank distributes food to over 180 Southeast Michigan church pantries soup kitchens, and emergency shelters. These agencies provide 155,000 meals a week to the needy. Our agencies report that the number of hungry and poor people has increased. Gleaner appreciates the continued community-wide support in our efforts in feeding the hungry.

The simple facts cry out with eloquence . . .

- One in five American children lives in povert.
- The United States ranks eighteenth in the world in infant mortality.
- Women who do not eat well during pregnancy have 30 to 40 percent more low-birth-weight infants.
- Babies born underweight are more likely to have permanent physical defects or to be mentally retarded.
- More than half of those living in poverty are children.

If you are unable to use this grocery bag for your food donations, you can still feed the hungry by clipping the coupon shown here and buying a case of food for the needy through Gleaners. All donations will be acknowledged.

Use this coupon to Help Feed the Hungry. Gleaners Community Food Bank will use your donations to purchase the cases of food you select and distribute them at no cost to over 180 soup kitchens, church pantries, and emergency shelters.
