By Maureen McNulty
Staff Writer

Say what you please about Richard Nixon, but if you're a dad, you might want to say "thanks."

Yep. Thanks to Tricia and Julie's dad (President Nixon), Father's Day was officially adopted as a national holiday in 1972, a mere 62 years after it was proposed and 58 years after Mother's Day was proclaimed by President Woodrow Wilson.

Hmmm... that hardly seems fair.

And the hype that surrounds Mother's Day is conspicuously less for Father's Day.

Ask any florist, they'll tell you: Mother's Day is the biggest flower day of the year. Father's Day? Puh-leeze, they say. Maybe a token flower is bought for the old man. Red roses are given to living fathers and white roses honor the deceased.

cheap scotch... merchants say that's where the real money is.

But fathers should take heart. It isn't that they're not appreciated. They are. It's just that they don't have the instinct that mothers do to make us feel criminally guilty if we forget to buy gifts or say kind things to them every now and then.

There is a quiet nobility about fathers, from giving in to one of their bratty rug rats, who would cry and pout because dad wanted to watch a war movie instead of "Kimba-The White Lion," to patiently helping their sons build Pine-wood Derby cars for Cub Scouts.

In addition to children looking to their fathers for safety, security and guidance, daughters often base their criteria for a suitable husband on the qualities they see in their fathers. And sons will often grow to reflect not only their father's likeness but his character as well.

Poet laureate William Wordsworth had this to say about his father: "Father! — to God himself we cannot give a holier name."

Homer wrote: "Few sons are like their father, most are worse, few better than the father."

And speaking of famous Homers, how about Homer Simpson, who, tugged at first by his

They came — about 350 people — to enjoy the season's first concert in the Village last Thursday. And those who think police officers are getting younger might have given Matthew Triano of the Park a second look. The youngster kept track of the goings-on from his father's friend's police car, which was used to block traffic. ## Work on Woods sewer begins; key part of Milk River cleanup

By Donna Walker
Staff Writer

Kids and teachers aren't the only ones who have been eagerly awaiting the end of the school year.

So too has the Milk River Intercounty Drainage Board.

The board promised Grosse Pointe Woods and the Grosse Pointe school district that it would wait until the start of summer vacation to begin installing a new sewer line under Cook Road, from just west of Mack to Chalfonte in the Woods.

There are two schools on Cook in that area: Monteith elementary on the west side of Chalfonte, and University Liggett School on the east side of Chalfonte. Farther east is the Children's Home of Detroit.

Monteith and Liggett adjourned for the summer last week, and work on the sewer began Monday.

Construction between Chalfonte and Holiday will end no later than Aug. 22, before school starts in the fall, but the sewer won't be completed until January 1993, the drain board said.

The intersection of Cook and Chalfonte will be closed intermittently throughout construction.

Both sides of Cook will remain open during construction; however, the road will be open to local traffic only and the city is asking residents of Blossom Lane, Kings Court and Ida Lane to use detours to get to their homes and to avoid using Cook Road as much as possible.

Blossom Lane residents are asked to get to their homes from Mack, via Blossom Place.

Residents of Kings Court West are asked to take the following route to their homes: From Mack, turn east onto either Torrey, Huntington or Dorthen, then turn south onto Holiday, and take that road past Cook Road to Kings Court East, which loops around and becomes Kings Court West.

Residents of Ida Lane East are asked to take the same route, except when they get to Cook, they should turn east and take Cook to Ida Lane West, which becomes Ida Lane East.

The speed limit on Cook, Torrey and Holiday Roads will be reduced from 25 to 15 mph during construction, and the speed limit on Vernier and Mack will be reduced from 35 to 25 mph.

Construction vehicles will be limited to Cook, Mack, Vernier, Torrey and Holiday Roads, and workers won't be allowed to park their personal vehicles on residential streets — they must use University Liggett's parking lot, said Woods acting city administrator Phillip Belcher.

That's one of many provisos that the Grosse Pointe Woods City Council and planning commission urged to minimize the disruption to residents.

Other requests by the council and planning commission that were agreed to by the drain board include:

- Cleaning construction roads daily;
- Limiting construction hours to 7:30 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Saturday, and noon-6 p.m. Sundays (by city ordinance);
- Limiting pile driving operations to 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Saturday, and noon to 5 p.m. on Sundays;

- Ensuring that construction shafts are secured and well-lighted at night;

- Using noise controls on equipment when possible;

- No burning of construction waste;
- Video taping homes and other properties near the construction site before the work began, so that after the project is completed, the homeowner and drain board can determine if the construction caused any damage to the homeowner's property.

Joseph M. Callahan got a foot in the door at Automotive News the day he was wearing white cotton socks and sandals. Not that the broadcaster and veteran auto writer is extraordinarily casual; nor was the former Navy captain a hippie.

His sartorial statement to Pete Wemhoff, then the publisher of the esteemed weekly trade journal, was the result of a bad case of athlete's foot, he explained.

"I had been working the night shift at the Detroit Times," Callahan recalled. "I wanted to work days, and when I heard about an opening at Automotive News I went over as I was, in my white socks and sandals."

The opening, the reporter discovered, was for a copyreader. "I had no training in copyreading, but a colleague at the Times showed me how to make some funny squiggly lines that are part of the trade," Callahan said.

"After several weeks at Automotive News it was obvious I wasn't going to make it as a copyreader — I can't spell. Word got around the building that I was being let go. When Pete called me into his office to fire me, I told him he needed a reporter, not another copyreader.

Detective Steve Skinner of the Detroit Police Department's 5th Precinct needs help identifying some jewelry he thinks may have been stolen.

Skinner found the jewelry recently during a routine search through property bought by a pawn shop on East Warren in Detroit.

He said that while the jewelry may have been pawned by its rightful owner for some quick cash, there was reason to be suspicious of the person who turned it in.

Two of the items are from private schools in the east.

One is a tie tack that bears the name "Hill School Dial," the initials K.K., and the year 1920.

The other is a stickpin that says "Miss Madeira's School, 1906."

"That may be the year the school was founded, because it's part of the emblem," Skinner said.

Also pawned by the same person were a brooch with the initials W.T.E. and the date "6-7-69" and a pendant that looks like a fox tail.

Skinner said that by searching through private school directories at the Grosse Pointe Public Library, he learned that the Hill School for boys was located in Pottstown, Pa., and that Miss Madeira's School for girls was located in McLean, Va.

"When I read that the name of the Hill School's yearbook was 'the Dial,' I thought, 'Wow, I'm right on the dial,' so to speak," he said.

He then called the Hill School and learned that it had two students with the initials K.K. during 1920-23: Kenneth Kassler, who died in 1964, and Kenneth Kellogg, who died in 1925.

He also learned that Madeira and Hill students frequently got together for school dances.

"My best guess is that Mr. Kassler or Mr. Kellogg married someone from the Madeira School, and that the jewelry was handed down to their children," Skinner said.

He has been tracing the origins of jewelry taken in by pawn shops on Detroit's east side for nine years, starting as an offshoot of a burglary case he worked on as an evidence technician in 1983.

Retiring principal Kastran bids fond farewell to North students

By Maureen McNulty
Staff Writer

After 40 years in education, Grosse Pointe North principal Dr. John Kastran is taking a permanent summer vacation.

As North's seniors bid farewell to high school to face a new world of college and careers, so too will Kastran hang up his principal's garb in favor of an outfit more suitable for retirement — something for the Outback, perhaps, or a pair of loud golf pants.

"My wife and I plan to travel a great deal," Kastran said. "We're planning to spend about a month each in Australia, New Zealand and the Canadian Rockies. And we're both avid golfers, so I'm sure we'll do that."

"But we won't be going on any long trips for at least another six months," said Kastran, who also plans to shop around for a winter home somewhere in the Sunbelt.

Closer to home, Kastran and his wife, Connie, who also just retired as principal of Seminole Elementary School in Mount Clemens, plan to spend time visiting their five children and five grandchildren in Chicago, North Carolina and Plymouth.

"I bet we're the only two principals in the nation living in the same home, retiring at the same time and coming from schools that have been recognized for excellence by the state," Kastran said, referring to the Exemplary School Award that both North and Seminole received from the state. North was also recognized nationally.

Foremost on Kastran's mind during his final days as a teacher and administrator, however, were not retirement plans but changes he's seen in education and further advances he hopes to witness in his lifetime.

John Kastran

"I've seen a lot of water pass under the bridge," he said. "I've seen some changes come full-cycle. We're at the point now of mixing in what kids should learn with, hopefully, their understanding of why they need to learn it and how to relate it to their own experiences. Hopefully, we're mixing that with love and compassion."

Kastran hopes that more schools will emphasize Outcomes Based Education, which stresses "when" children will learn, not "whether" they will learn.

"The philosophy behind it is that if a student gets a low grade, the school should expand that student's opportunity for learning by offering the student time to improve that grade," Kastran said. "That process allows content mastery for students who have always been marginal."

"It may take six days for one child to learn something that it takes another child only three days to learn."

If nothing else, Kastran said, he hopes students leave school with the ability to think for themselves and with high self-esteem.

"I don't care if a kid leaves here and becomes a housewife as long as she or he is happy, has a good sense of self-esteem and uses his brain. That is the purpose of education," he said.

In the future, Kastran hopes schools will get away from textbooks and won't be restricted by the Gregorian calendar or traditional school hours. He also hopes they get away from tracking and letter grades and measure student's achievements by portfolios and oral demonstrations.

He also believes that community service hours and involvement in school activities should be part of high school requirements.

"I have every confidence that education in Grosse Pointe will move forward," he said. "If it doesn't, Grosse Pointe will suffer because the price of homes will go down."

Originally from Chicago, Kastran earned four degrees from Wayne State University and taught 16 years in Detroit schools, five years in the Warren Consolidated school system, 10 years in Mount Clemens and spent the last nine years at North. He's also taught at Eastern Michigan University and Macomb Community College.

After watching his ninth senior class graduate from North, Kastran said it was "very, very difficult" to say goodbye to all the students.

"It was difficult to keep my composure," he said. "I was very touched."

Kastran's last day at North is June 30.

Hold the Steak & Eggs and make it Boston Chicken

By Donna Walker
Staff Writer

The Steak & Egg Kitchen on Mack in Grosse Pointe Woods will be razed and a new building and upscale eatery will rise in its place, following a decision by the Grosse Pointe Woods City Council on Monday.

The council voted 5-2 to conditionally rezone the property from a restricted office (RO-1) district to a commercial district, allowing owner and local developer Edward J. Russell III to build a new restaurant on the property.

"We're happy, obviously, with the vote," Russell said, "and think it's a vote of confidence for ourselves as developers, and I'm excited because there seems to be a great deal of interest in Boston Chicken Rotisserie by people in the community."

Boston Chicken Rotisserie Inc. — an east-coast restaurant chain catering to a fairly affluent, health-conscious target market — has an agreement with Russell to lease the new restaurant once it's built.

Virtually everyone at the council meeting liked Russell's plan to spruce up the corner of Mack and Norwood and to replace the Steak & Egg Kitchen, which some referred to as a "greasy spoon," with a "classy" restaurant.

However, residents and councilmembers expressed two main fears: 1/That the business might operate 24-hours a day, as the Steak & Egg did, and 2/That an undesirable restaurant or business might move into the building should Boston Chicken fail at that location.

David Stanchak, senior vice president of Boston Chicken Rotisserie, said his company's restaurants close at 10 p.m., and open at 11 a.m. if they want to draw the lunch trade. Some of its restaurants only offer dinner and open about 4 p.m. None of them offer breakfast, he said.

City Attorney George Catlin said that the city can't legally limit the hours of operation of a commercial business (unless it is poses a public nuisance that can't be solved any other way except through city ordinance), because the business owner can accuse the city of infringing upon his or her civil rights, and sue the city for punitive damages.

"In my opinion, what will regulate this business is the clientele," Catlin said. "This is not a hot dog stand, and I would be surprised if it got more than two customers after 10 p.m."

Councilwoman Jean Rice suggested that Russell and Boston Rotisserie give the city a letter stating that the restaurant would close at 10 p.m.

"We have a family sitting here (Russell's) that's been in business for 50 years, with an absolutely impeccable record," she said. "Can't we have a letter saying the hours of operation will be until 10 p.m., and let the public know we have this letter? Then, if they don't do it, Mr. Russell and his family will certainly suffer some loss of reputation."

Russell agreed to give her such a letter within the next few days.

Many of the people at the meeting were concerned that the council would not be able to control future restaurants or businesses at that location, should Boston Rotisserie leave for some reason.

About five years ago, the property was rezoned from commercial to restricted office, because the planning commission at the time thought that the neighborhood surrounding the city offices should be quieter, a planning commission representative said.

Restaurants are not allowed in restricted office districts, but Steak & Egg was allowed to operate as a non-conforming use because it existed before the ordinance was changed.

The grandfather-clause stays with the building, not the business. So, another restaurant could open in the existing structure, as long as it was brought up to building, fire and health codes.

However, when a non-conforming building is torn down and replaced with a new building, the new structure must conform to the property's current zoning status.

If Russell's request to have the property rezoned back to commercial had been denied, any new structure on the property could only have been an office building.

The existing building has been vacant since January, when Diversified Hospitality Inc., the parent company of the Steak & Egg Kitchen, went bankrupt, Russell said.

He said he hasn't received rent since the beginning of the year on either of the two former Steak & Egg Kitchen properties he owns.

In addition to the Woods location, he owns the former Steak & Egg Kitchen on Jefferson in St. Clair Shores, which he has agreed to sell to National Coney Island. That agreement should be finalized within 30 days, he said.

Russell said he plans to retain ownership of the Woods property for a long time, and lease it out.

However, because the existing building has a small kitchen area, it would only be suitable for restaurants where the food goes from freezer to grill to plate.

"We have six feet of cooking space and zero prep space in the current building," Russell said. "We're restricted by the current building to a Steak & Egg type restaurant. It can't be fresh like Boston Chicken."

It would be very difficult to expand the kitchen area in the existing building, because the structure was built in sections, and the foundations are not level with each other, Russell said.

His attorney, Richard Scarfone, said that if Russell were only out for a profit, he would bring the existing building up to code and lease it to a restaurant similar to the Steak & Egg.

"But he's willing to pour more than a half a million dollars into this project to bring this upscale establishment to Grosse Pointe Woods," Scarfone said.

The new restaurant will have seats for 20 diners and will also offer carry-out items that do not lend themselves to in-car eating, Stanchak said.

There will be 11 parking spaces behind the restaurant, two less than the 13 required by city ordinance, but that should not pose a problem to surrounding businesses and residents because there is ample metered parking on the street, Woods building code official Melissa Mellen said in a memo to the council.

Phil Belcher, Woods acting city manager, said Russell must now request a parking variance from the council for the two off-street parking spaces that the site doesn't have.

Under the conditions of the rezoning, Russell must raze the existing building and construct a new one in accordance with his Site Plan B that was approved by the city's planning commission, parking commission, building department, Mayor's Mack Avenue Business Study Committee and city council.

Also, he must incorporate the recommendations of the city's landscape committee into his design.

Mayor Robert E. Novitke said he voted for the rezoning because he felt residents would be stuck with a restaurant whether or not it was approved, and that the real question was what kind of restaurant it would be.

"I would rather see this new development rather than the existing Steak & Egg," he said. Councilmen Peter Gilezan and Ted Bidigare voted against the rezoning.

"I want to make it clear that I have the utmost confidence in Mr. Russell, and likewise in Boston Chicken," Gilezan said. "But my decision is not reflecting today only, but tomorrow. As a bit of background, I was one of the architects of the rezoning of Mack in the 1980s, and I believe that predates the ownership of the property by the Russell family."

Bidigare also said that he was concerned about the inability of the city to control what goes into the new building under a commercial license, should Boston Chicken leave.

Councilman William Wilson, however, said that the city has some control over what goes in that location in the future, through parking and other ordinances, such as the one that limits the number of businesses in certain categories (beauty salons, for example) that can operate in the city.

Russell said the former Steak & Egg Kitchen on Mack will be demolished as soon as the proper permits can be pulled, and that the new Boston Chicken Rotisserie restaurant should be open by the end of September.

Holding on to a dream

The 800-foot boardwalk will cost about $80,000, and landscaping may bring the total cost of the project up to $140,000, McNeill said. The boardwalk will be funded entirely through donations received by the foundation, which has, so far, raised about $80,000, he said. Construction is scheduled to begin after Labor Day, he said.

Tickets for the reception are $35, or $50 for patron status. People who donate $100 or more will be acknowledged on a plaque on the boardwalk, McNeill said. For more information about the reception, call the Park city hall at 822-6200.

Passerby beats fire — literally

If not for the quick actions of a passerby, Grosse Pointe North High School's graduation stage might have gone up in flames the day before the ceremony.

A 21-year-old Woods resident was driving home on Morning-side about 2:15 p.m. June 10, when he saw the temporary stage on Grosse Pointe North's soccer field was afire.

He went to a home in the 500 block of Glen Arbor, and told the homeowner to call the public safety department.

Then he took a towel from his car, jumped over a fence and onto the field, and ran to the stage, where he beat the fire into submission with the towel, according to the public safety report.

When firefighters arrived, they made sure the fire was out.

The damage was limited to a 2-foot-by-4-foot scorched area just left of the center of the stage, and to a small hole that was burned into the carpeted side of the front stairs.

Officers believe the fire was arson. The fire had been fueled by a white towel and a one-gallon can of wax that had been left on the stage, and a silicone remover was used as an accelerant, according to the report.

Park trims millage hike, taxpayers get an unexpected break

By Donna Walker
Staff Writer

The Grosse Pointe Park City Council was getting ready to adopt a proposed millage increase recently when councilman Andrew Richner raised an important question.

Was the $35,000 the city is getting through a recent property sale included in the proposed 1992-93 budget, he asked. City comptroller Peter M.

Dobrzeński said no, because the city had so far only received a $5,000 deposit, and might not get the rest of the money until the beginning of July, which would be after the deadline for including items in the budget.

He said he planned to have the city hold the $35,000 in a savings account, once it receives the money, and then use it for the 1993-94 budget.

"Well, if the $35,000 was included in the 1992-93 budget, couldn't we lower the proposed millage increase by about half a percent?" Richner asked.

Dobrzeński said it was possible.

Councilwoman Valerie Moran asked if that would hurt the 1993-94 budget, and Dobrzeński said no.

The council then voted unanimously to adopt a 3.7 percent millage increase for the upcoming fiscal year, instead of the 4.2 percent increase it had proposed earlier.

Starting July 1, when the new fiscal year begins, Park homeowners will be charged 14.33 mills for the city's general operating budget, compared to the 13.82 mills they paid this year.

A Park homeowner with a $100,000 SEV home paid $1,382 in property taxes this fiscal year. Next fiscal year, because of state-frozen property assessments and the adopted millage increase, that homeowner will pay $1,433. If the council had adopted the earlier proposed increase, the homeowner would have paid $1,440 during the upcoming fiscal year.

The sale Richner was talking about involves a vacant, city-owned residential lot on Pemberton near Jefferson that the council has agreed to sell to local developer Ted Schollenberger, who plans to build a two-story Colonial-style home on the property.

As part of the deal, Schollenberger must raze the former Unocal service station on Jefferson, just south of Barrington, which the city owns.

Also, Schollenberger has a one-year-option to purchase the former Unocal site and two other empty lots on Pemberton and Jefferson that are owned by the city.

The council also adopted the Park's 1992-93 budget.

The general operating budget is $6,167,500, about $1.1 million less than it was this year.

Why the large decrease? Previously, the money for garbage collection and recycling had always been part of the general operating fund, but starting July 1, it will have a fund of its own, Dobrzeński said.

If the $1.1 million that has been allocated for garbage collection and recycling were included, the 1992-93 general operating fund would be about $143,000 less than this year's level.

The wrong stuff

Heaven knows I didn't mean to do it. If I had set aside time to attack this ghastly chore I never would have actually gotten around to it. A number of circumstances just happened and before I knew it I was trapped in my garage amid 18 years of debris.

Generally, I'm up and out of the house at a fairly respectable hour and can (subconsciously) avoid doing those jobs around the house that can be saved for a rainy day. Naturally, the rainy day comes and other priorities surface. We are admitted pack rats and on occasional weekends my husband and I have attempted to make some sense or order by rearranging the contents of the garage, but it was clearly time for a more serious effort.

One beautiful sunny morning last week I took my old car in for repairs, and the gas station mechanic said he would require the car all day. Back home, a repair man showed up two days before our appointment, and with this miracle I wasn't about to turn him away.

A few hours later my son received a call informing him that he wouldn't be needed at work that day. It was evident that I would spend much of the day at home. Thankfully, a friend called and asked me to go to lunch; heck yes, an escape hatch from the insanity around the house. (We have had a steady parade of workmen for the past three months, but that will be addressed at a later time.)

Suffice it to say I was ready to get away from the bedlam. However, one can only prolong lunch so long and I was deposited in my driveway after my brief respite. As I walked up the drive I saw that the entire parking area was covered with STUFF. Define stuff. Impossible, but I'll list some of the items my eyes embraced just before I reached for a broken lawn chair.

Newspapers and paper bags awaiting recycling; at least 15 hockey sticks, most of them broken; two lawn mowers; a leaf blower; an assortment of edgers, weed whackers and rakes with half of their teeth missing; lawn and gardening tools; a large, broken snow blower; several boxes of index cards in long metal cases from the '30s; old tables, aluminum chairs with half the webbing gone; chaises in the same condition; garden stakes, plain and with gawdy sunflowers winking at their tops; eight bags of rock salt (which we don't use because of the damage it does to our walk); evidence of larceny in the form of a large STOP sign (couldn't have been one of our children); plastic Christmas tree left over from a nursing home; various aerosol and paint cans, mostly rusted, necessitating a call to the city to find out the ecologically responsible way for disposal (separate in box, label contents and put out on regular trash pick-up day); air conditioners; luggage racks; bikes; old tires; smelly sleeping bag; various tarps; bookshelves; wheelbarrow; wagons; lumber; fire-place wood; a large variety of sports equipment; several lengths of shoe molding; a second refrigerator; every size and shape pot and basket; hoses; garbage cans; buckets; etc., etc., etc.; and one sunfish sailboat on its side.

All of the above was difficult if not impossible to ignore. I had no choice but to become involved. Either I attack this mess with a vengeance or it would all be returned to the garage. I jumped into old clothes and dove in. Four hours later we had an arrangement on our curb that would challenge the finest sculptors of modern art. And then the fun began. We retreated to our home to hide behind the curtains — like Gladys Kravitz from "Bewitched," — and to watch the trash pickers have at it.

In the darkness of night all of the sports equipment disappeared, except for the hockey net. I saw the woman who tossed it into her car the next morning and she is welcome to it. I wonder if she plans to crochet a new net! Ours was in strings.

Ninety-nine percent of the time I weed out my "stuff" carefully and box it for charity. On this occasion, I admit to rationalizing that the majority of objects to be pitched were worthless and, knowing the habits of those who case the curbsides on trash pick-up days, I was certain those things which could be deemed salvageable would be scooped up in haste. My suspicions were confirmed the following morning when I observed no less than five cars and trucks stop to settle on their selections. By the time the regular sanitation workers arrived, our curbside discards resembled the normal weekly residue.

Now you know — my neatnik facade is all a sham and although I appear to be organized on the surface, please don't peek in drawers or closets. However, there is a certain high to be experienced as one ruthlessly pitches out the old and tired trappings of our personal histories.

My husband was somewhat stunned when he walked through the garage and actually heard an echo that night. He is still somewhat in shock. I suspect that although he wanted to take part in the giant exorcism and be involved lest I throw out some of his "treasures," he is secretly glad it's over. I can only hope that I won't feel the urge to replace and will continue on this roll. For now, it feels great. Maybe I won't wait another 18 years.

And then I think of the attic and basement that are beckoning.

Too young to transport alcohol

Three Grosse Pointe youths were reminded recently that it's illegal for people under 21 to have alcohol in their vehicles, even if the bottles or cans are unopened.

Two of the boys were 16, and one was 15. One of the boys was driving a Ford van, in which the other two were passengers, when a Grosse Pointe City police officer pulled the vehicle over at Fisher and Maumee about 11 p.m. May 29 over a traffic violation.

The officer saw unopened cans of beer in the van, and issued the youths a "minors in possession" ticket.

Is broadcast talk show an aid to voters?

Has the electronic talk show, broadcast on television and radio, now become a basic part of national presidential campaigns?

And if so, does it serve the American public or chiefly the candidates and their managers?

Last week it became apparent that Ross Perot has forced the traditional campaigners for the presidency, George Bush and Bill Clinton, to follow the same talk-show trail that the Texas billionaire has been pursuing so effectively.

Several TV panel discussions last week-end by former presidential campaign advisers and newsmen covering the current campaign were instructive about the role and importance of the new political campaign tool.

Opinion

Most commentators agreed that Perot has found a new way to approach the American public through broadcast talk shows and that he has used them to make better personal contacts with the people than either Bush or Clinton has done.

Why?

Because the talk-show format offers private citizens better opportunities for direct personal contact with the presidential candidates via their call-ins than they think they are getting from any other campaign technique.

That means, the observers agreed, that citizens often bypass the news media which people feel "filter" their questions about their everyday problems to such an extent that the newsmen fail to elicit the answers the public wants to hear from the candidates.

In making a "connection" with the candidates, the people asking the call-in questions usually get answers that satisfy them for the moment — and yet often don't disclose much of any candidate's thinking or program.

However, most participants in the TV round-table discussions agreed that talk-show performances by presidential candidates are useful supplements to the hard news presented by serious newspapers and electronic news shows.

However, they also warned that it is easy for candidates to mislead their call-in questioners who usually lack both the opportunity for asking follow-up questions and the information needed to challenge the candidates' claims.

In other words, use of talk shows can be regarded as another development in broadcast campaigning that began in the 1930s when President Franklin D. delivered his radio "fireside chats" to the people, thereby bypassing the politicians and the print media.

If today's talk shows often replace the TV news "sound bites" from the campaign, perhaps it's because the 1992 campaign "sound bites" are down to an average of 9.8 seconds each as contrasted with 45 seconds in 1968.

To answer our own questions, yes, the talk show has become another acceptable way to help inform the people about the presidential campaign.

But, equally important, voters ought to be as skeptical about the replies they elicit from the candidates on talk shows as they are about the programmed responses they often hear in answer to the news media's questions.

A new threat to public schools

The resignation of Benno C. Schmidt, president of Yale, to become the head of a new national private school system has shaken the defenders of public education to the core.

What is planned is the building of 1,000 new, for-profit, private but technologically advanced schools that supposedly would serve as the model for revolutionary changes in U.S. education.

Fortunately, not everyone buys into the idea, even though it has acquired the prestige and services of the president of Yale.

We think, for example, it is likely that starting up the new private schools with partial public funding would further depress the hopes of raising the standards and improving student performance in the nation's inner city public schools.

The theory of those who buy the schools-of-choice idea is that the good schools — private, parochial or whatever — would stimulate competition in the inner city schools and force them to improve if they are to survive.

Yet the Whittle private schools would be pulling some of the best students out of the present public schools which would then be left with a generally poorer level of student as well as less financial support.

On a practical basis, how could such a move improve the public schools?

Russell Jacoby, an author who is teaching history at the University of California at Los Angeles this year, warns that the new schools, to earn a healthy bottom line, "must cut expenses by relying on computers and television."

As a consequence, he takes a dim view of a national chain of profit-making schools, which is what Whittle Communications and its backers really want to achieve through their so-called Edison Project.

It may well be profitable, if the enterprise can achieve savings from the elimination of some bureaucracies and the replacement of teachers with more technology.

But how many classroom teachers can be replaced by technology? And do the American people want to turn the public schools into commercial enterprises financed in part by investors who may have specific job training or other proposals in mind for the classroom?

Admittedly, public education is in trouble but we have serious doubts that Whittle Communications will achieve one of its goals, benefiting public education, unless it answers some of the questions its critics have raised.

Bleachers

To the Editor:

When the new bleachers at South were erected last summer, we thought we had succeeded in providing both the high school and community with safe, attractive seating and improved spectator viewing. Unfortunately, we discovered a number of code violations after completion of the project, and we have been trying to resolve these issues ever since.

We have met with state officials, local fire authorities, the manufacturer and builder and concerned students. It is our intent to comply with all regulations, including those governing barrier-free design, but complications arising from dealing with multiple regulatory agencies have resulted in longer delays than we anticipated.

Hopefully, we will be able to modify the bleachers before the fall football season begins. The school system will pay for any materials needed for barrier-free modifications. The contractor will pay all other costs, including any material needed to correct code violations.

The school system is extremely sensitive to the needs of the handicapped. We have altered exits and entrances, restroom facilities and locker rooms and installed elevators. Although our buildings are old and modifying them is often difficult, we are working as fast as time and money permit to make them accessible to handicapped students, parents and community residents.

Pledge

To the Editor:

I read in the June 11 Grosse Pointe News that Mr. Andrew Richner, my opponent in the Aug. 4 Republican primary, has given assurances he will resign from the Grosse Pointe Park city council if elected to the Wayne County Board of Commissioners. Truly, there is no other ethical alternative, and understanding that, I made the same pledge the day I declared my candidacy.

Making the pledge was for me a difficult but pragmatic decision. It has been an honor and privilege to serve on the Grosse Pointe Park city council with Mayor Palmer Heenan and a number of councilpersons for almost seven years now. It will not be easy to leave.

Yet clearly no mortal can fully focus on city and county concerns simultaneously. Even more clearly, the Grosse Pointes and Harper Woods have an abundance of talented, ethical and dedicated private citizens well-qualified to fill any council vacancy at any time.

James E. Robson
Grosse Pointe Park

Thank you

To the Editor:

I would like to thank the voters who decisively voted to follow the recommendation of the Grosse Pointe Board of Education to exempt ourselves from the state-mandated Schools of Choice plan.

It was energizing to witness voters with grown children, with school-age children and with no children rallying together on this important issue. This community support is needed to maintain the integrity of our schools. Thank you.

A battle joined

It is obviously early in Wayne County's political campaign but two Grosse Pointe Park councilmen already have started their battle to succeed County Commissioner David Cavanagh who is running for Wayne County clerk.

James E. Robson Jr. and Andrew Richner are among three candidates seeking the Republican nomination for the 1st District commissioner's post which, because of the recent Wayne County reapportionment, now seems more likely to go to a Republican.

A week ago, Richner wrote a letter to the editor of the Grosse Pointe News reminding readers he had said earlier that if elected commissioner, he would resign from the Grosse Pointe Park City Council.

This week, Robson wrote a letter to the editor saying he had made a similar announcement at the time he filed for the job.

With that point out of the way, perhaps both will find more important issues to debate before the Aug. 4 primary in which they also will compete against Frederick Kaess of Grosse Pointe Farms.

New hope for DIA's future

There is new optimism in the Detroit metro area about the future of the Detroit Institute of Arts and the other jewels in Detroit's cultural crown.

Some of it comes from the revived efforts of the DIA management to offset its loss of public funds by stepping up its campaign to raise an additional $1.6 million from private individual, corporate and foundation donors.

But some of the optimism stems from the renewed interest in setting up a regional organization to raise funds, perhaps by an area-wide cultural tax, to maintain Detroit's cultural institutions.

The purpose of raising the additional private funds for the DIA now is to restore some services at the city-owned museum but not to bring the museum up to its condition before the $6.8 million reduction in state contributions in 1991.

The DIA's additional funds will go first to paying for increased hours for opening the permanent collection to the visiting public but DIA Director Sam Sachs is also trying to find underwriters for free days at the museum.

Voluntary admissions now are charged but a sponsor could provide free Sunday entrance for a year with a contribution of $100,000 to $150,000, according to Sachs.

In the current recession, there is little likelihood that either the state or city of Detroit will provide any new aid to the DIA or the other cultural institutions such as the Detroit Symphony Orchestra, the public library and other museums.

Yet many people think the city could help itself and preserve its cultural jewels by agreeing to some form of regional organization to finance the museum and other Detroit cultural institutions.

That idea recently won the support of at least two members of the Detroit City Council, David Eberhard and Nicholas Hood, both of whom saw the city's hard times as requiring some new approach, such as regionalization, that could bring support from beyond the city limits.

At any rate, it is good news for the entire Detroit metropolitan area that constructive approaches for increasing both public support and private contributions are being proposed to preserve and make wider use of Detroit's cultural assets.

It's not all black and white

My family loves me (well, most of the time) and they worry about whether I'm happy and healthy and have enough friends and money and enjoy my job and my life in general.

That's why every time they saw a television for sale I got a call.

The reason they were so concerned is that I was probably the last person in America with only one television in my household. And that television was a black and white.

When I moved out, like most young adults, I went through my mom's house like a looter, taking kitchen utensils, furniture, sheets and towels so my apartment could at least look like home until I made it feel like home. And, of course, I scammed a television. It was the junky, 9-inch color model in the basement storage room. It wasn't pretty, but it worked.

And because I have more credit than sense I bought a VCR and hooked it up to that tiny telly. There was no way I was going to live without "All My Children" every day just because I had become an adult and moved out of the house.

It so happened that I was visiting my grandma the same day that television broadcast its last message and when I mentioned it, my grandma, who also loves me most of the time, gave me her 20-inch black and white television from her basement.

So I hooked it up to my VCR, threw out the old television (and later watched someone picking through the garbage take it home) and enjoyed my own little black and white theater.

There were great advantages to this television — it eliminated turning the color off when they broadcast colorized movies and it was big enough to see from across the room even without my glasses. But my family just shook their collective heads and worried.

They bombarded me with calls. Sometimes it was a message on the answering machine: "Big sale, TVs from $59. This weekend only." Or a "Ron, call me." When I called, I was told that someone's friend's cousin who I met at some party was having a garage sale and had a television and would I like to buy it before it went to the first bargain hunter.

Soon, grandma's television — it must have been at least 30 years old — started broadcasting only sound and I was once again left TV-less.

But not to fear. A friend had a tiny black and white television I could use for a few months. It renewed my faith in my engineering skills that I was able to hook up my VCR to a television that weighed less than it did and was made before videocassette recorders were commonly called VCRs and you weren't embarrassed to tell someone you owned a Beta.

things I want my television to do. Well, I'd like it to clean the bathroom, but there's nothing about that in the instruction booklet.

So now I sit on the couch and watch a lot of shows I really don't want to because I don't want to get off my butt to find the remote which was last seen in the vicinity of that chair I bought at someone's friend's cousin's garage sale. God alone knows what else is down there, but I'm not about to stick my hand beneath the cushions to find out.

And I've become a television junky, excited that I can now see the difference in eye colors on those commercials about tinted contacts and Mrs. Slocomb's often-changing hair color on PBS' "Are You Being Served?" — one of the better shows I discovered because I was lazy.

And it's a good thing I'm so addicted to television; I have to find something to fill my time now that my family doesn't call me anymore.

Prix competition

Catherine A. Kelly-Gehlert of Grosse Pointe Woods was one of 94 semi-finalists who competed for the title of Miss Grand Prix 1992 earlier this month.

The 28-year-old graduate of Central Michigan University has a master's degree in economics and works as a stock broker and personal financial planner.

Fifty years

Grosse Pointe Shores residents Judge James A. Hathaway and Carmelita Bach Hathaway will celebrate their 50th wedding anniversary on Saturday, June 20.

The couple married in Mapleton, Minn., on June 20, 1942, and have lived in Detroit and Grosse Pointe Shores. They have seven children and 26 grandchildren.

Four of their children, Thomas, Robert, Paul and Frank are Grosse Pointe residents; James Jr. lives in Vienna, Va.; Arthur, in Annapolis, Md.; and Carmelita Doyle, their only daughter, lives in Parkersburg, W. Va. All the children will be present at an anniversary Mass to be held at Our Lady Star of the Sea Catholic Church and at a reception afterward at the Grosse Pointe Yacht Club.

Judge Hathaway is a past president of the Detroit school board. He was elected to Detroit Recorders' Court in 1971 and currently serves on the Wayne County Circuit Court.

Starting at 9 a.m. on Wednesday, June 24, at the Fox Theatre, contestants will get a minute each on stage to lip sync to the music of Prince — or do whatever strikes their fancy.

The whole affair is open to the public.

Judges will be Gary Graff of the Freep, Susan Whitall of The Detroit News; Chris Edmonds of WNIC-FM and Steffie Kim of Harmony House. Asa ("I'm telling!") Aarons of WDIV-TV will be the emcee.

Judges will be looking for resemblance to the real Prince as well as performance and creativity.

The winner of the contest will get a round-trip ticket to Minneapolis, a room at the Radisson, a tour of Prince's recording studio, a complete set of Prince CDs, and a pair of tickets to the opening night performance and reception of the Joffrey Ballet on Thursday, June 25, at the Fox Theatre.

For more information about the contest, call 833-3700.

Tickets to the ballet are available through TicketMaster. Or call the Orchestra Hall box office at 833-3700.

Music

Here, Prince . . .

The Joffrey Ballet will present the world premiere of a new ballet with music by rock star Prince as part of its series of performances with the Detroit Symphony Orchestra. The ballet will be presented at the Fox Theatre June 25-28.

So . . . the DSO is holding a Prince look-alike contest.

Future comes a'callin' on the tradition-bound Pointes

It's pretty heady stuff, this futuring. It's also my guess that many of the officials involved in it are futuring reluctantly. It's human nature.

Nancy Parmenter

Back in early May, officials from all five Pointes and Harper Woods gathered to hear about the changing world from futurist Edward Barlow. Since that first shock therapy session, representatives from some of the cities have gotten together again for some more conversation and are now kicking the notion around in individual council meetings.

The idea originated in the Farms, though council members are now modestly declining to take all the credit for it. The point is to seek inter-city cooperation on joint projects, with the ultimate goal of keeping the neighborhood as nice a place to live as it is now.

That sounds simple. But in tradition-bound Grosse Pointe, leaving behind the old local-control ways isn't going to be easy. After all, each Pointe treasures an image of itself as different from the others. And autonomy is fun.

A friend who lives in the Park asked me a few days ago what I'm working on right now. So I told him about the six governments coming together to talk.

"Oh, are they going to merge?" he asked. Well, no. "Maybe they'll combine services," he suggested. No, not exactly.

"What, then?" They're going to talk. See if they might like to cooperate on something. There are some areas of common concern — senior citizens, the environment, stuff like that. Just talk.

"Oh." He sounded a bit disappointed. Then he brightened. "Considering that this is Grosse Pointe, I guess that's really something."

And he's right. It is. But, as I said, it won't be easy. Even as everybody spouts about changing paradigms, some councils asked if futurist Barlow could make personal visits to each individual council.

Now, folks, that's an old paradigm that ought to be smashed to smithereens. The round-the-mulberry-bush council circuit is one of the reasons people talk about merger in the first place.

The Grosse Pointe News has long favored greater cooperation among the cities. Indeed, it has favored some things not even under discussion now: a joint district court, joint police and fire service and, yes, even merger. But it has been suggested lately that the News' approval of the futuring idea has come on so strong as to frighten the politicians.

"We don't want to pressure anybody," said Farms councilwoman Gail Kaess. "There are some things we can cooperate on where we don't have to give up our autonomy."

Kaess chuckled as she remembered the brainstorming session where one city official suggested that the group discuss combining services. The idea fell into a chilly black hole.

But, Kaess pointed out, the idea is to look ahead. "All we ever do is react to problems," she said. "We never make time to look at the future and see where we want to be."

Of all the tradition-bound Pointes, one might think the Farms is the stodgiest. So it came as a big surprise to this writer that the Farms was the birthplace of the futuring proposal. What happened?

For one thing, there's been some turnover on the council. The older generation which presided over the good old days have been followed by some "young Turks"; the average age of the Farms council has fallen substantially in three years.

For another, councils everywhere — and the Farms is no exception — have seen their financial resources dwindle.

"Long-range planning only hits home when the economic landscape changes drastically, as it has in recent years," said councilman John Danaher, who has experienced economic landscape changes in the health care field and had to react to them as one of Cottage Hospital's vice presidents. "With the SEV freeze, all of a sudden, we don't have the dollars anymore."

New Farms manager Rich Solak plays into this picture too. "Rich has a good understanding of the way cities will have to change to deal with federal and state regulating bodies that are trying to take a shot at us," says Mayor Gregg Berendt.

Talk of taking a look at the future started several years ago in the back halls of Farms power, and took a long time to ripen. At first, it was just some people "throwing ideas around," as Berendt puts it. But Danaher and Kaess had come into contact with Barlow in their professional lives.

Barlow's message that old ways don't necessarily work in new times hit home. Danaher says he's been a convert since well before he was elected to council.

Currently, the several councils are considering whether to join in talks that have not yet been given shape. Those that join will appoint official representatives. Ultimately, though, many of the planning suggestions may come from citizen committees, which haven't been appointed yet.

"This will probably involve a couple hundred residents," Berendt estimated. "They'll look at ways to do things better cooperatively."

Gail Kaess: "Ideas that come from the people through the city officials will have greater acceptance."

The dream was to have something concrete to announce for next year's celebration of the birthdays of the Farms and the City, which by some sleight-of-hand coincide in July. Whether such a timetable is overly optimistic is really beside the point. What counts is that some people want to open their minds to new ways to improve their hometowns, whether it means working together a little or a lot, sharing services, merging, or just joining in a new cooperative attitude.

As Gregg Berendt says, "We're opening the door to a continued conversation."

A letter to the community

In a recent article in the Detroit Free Press I was asked if there is anything that greatly troubles me. My answer to the question was racism and the lack of tolerance for differences.

I told the Free Press that racism is the biggest single problem in the metropolitan area, as we live in one of the most racially and economically divided regions in the United States. And I told them that the problem starts with attitudes.

Then, within weeks of that interview, the officers charged in the Rodney King beating were acquitted and Los Angeles exploded.

It is because of this that I am pleased to lend my support to the Racial Justice Center of Grosse Pointe (RJC) as they revitalize their efforts around race relations in the Grosse Pointe community.

To quote Nancy Parmenter in a recent column in this paper: "The great news is that the Racial Justice Center is back in business." She continues by saying that the RJC is in "... the classic bind: no funds because there's no program, and no program because there are no funds." Many of you, I know, may be waiting for the Racial Justice Center to prove that it will once again play an important role in this community.

I think they are off to a great start and deserve our support. I hope you share my enthusiasm over their mission, which is to work for greater racial and ethnic reconciliation in our community.

In a few short months the new executive director, Bill Weld-Wallis, and the reconstituted board of directors have accomplished a great deal. Everything they are doing is at the initial stages, yet the list is impressive. To convince you of their renewed sense of mission, I would like to share some of their specific ideas and vision with you.

Education
In the last few months Bill has met with our superintendent of schools and with every public school principal in the Pointes. Questions were asked, information was gathered, and ideas were discussed.

These principals, almost without exception, had a common concern for their students. Bill tells me that one principal summarized the problem well when he said "... the students are not having a 'real world' experience. They are not getting the racial, cultural, and ethnic diversity they are going to need when they leave the Grosse Pointe area." Out of these discussions a proposal was developed with the active participation of the schools.

The Racial Justice Center is committed to having a program in place by the fall which will allow elementary students to have learning experiences which promote cultural diversity, and which will provide them with opportunities to get to know children of other racial and cultural backgrounds. Fine-tuning of this program will take place all summer.

Activities are planned for the other schools as well. In the middle schools the RJC is working with the school district and the middle school principals in an effort to provide some specific input for the "Building Bridges" program which the schools adopted this year.

"Building Bridges" is a daily, 20-minute program designed to encourage honest discussion and sharing among the students around a variety of topics. One of the areas of focus is the wider community in which the child lives. This provides the Racial Justice Center with a specific arena in which to introduce issues of racial and cultural diversity for student discussion.

In the high schools the RJC hopes to work with those faculty and administrators who are already doing some good work with the kids, such as taking some kids to "exchange days" sponsored by New Detroit, and other similar activities.

The center is working with the school administrations in an effort to build and expand upon these experiences by providing opportunities, for instance, for discussion before the "exchange day", and reflection after.

Other ideas, such as gathering Grosse Pointe and Detroit students to watch "Eyes on the Prize" together, are also being discussed. Additionally, the RJC has been asked to serve as a resource for events like Black History Month.

Community

The Racial Justice Center believes that it has a specific role to play in the community and civic arena. First, it is the role of the RJC to foster discussions around race relations in our community.

An example of this was the RJC sponsored May 14 presentation by the Southeast Michigan Council of Governments (SEMCOG). The presentation focused on the issue of "urban sprawl" and the social, political and economic cost for older communities in the Detroit area.

This type of event is designed to generate discussion around the relationship between Detroit and Grosse Pointe, as both communities are affected in some common ways by these issues. Any discussion like this is, in fact, a discussion about race relations.

Second, the Racial Justice Center has been asked to serve as a convener for the various city governments around issues of racial tensions and diversity. For instance, there has already been a request for some race-relations workshops for police officers. The RJC also hopes to work with various officials as they wrestle with the pace and methods of responding to problems and instituting change in our area.

And, as always, the RJC will respond to any incidents that arise which affect race-relations in our community. There have been some incidents of this nature already in the few months since the renewal of the center.

One was a housing discrimination case (referred to attorneys for investigation) and one was the Korte Avenue closing in Grosse Pointe Park. And, of course, the Racial Justice Center has been very active in responding to the events in Los Angeles.

Bill has been interviewed by many newspapers and he wrote a column for the Grosse Pointe News which many found helpful. In addition, I interviewed him on our station as we explored the city and suburban response to the events in Los Angeles.

Religious community

The Racial Justice Center was begun, as you know, through the combined efforts of many churches in response to the Detroit riots of 1967. Many of us still refer to the RJC as the Interfaith Center! Well, those roots remain very important to the RJC, and the support of the religious community is vital.

When Bill began his work in February many of his first calls were to local pastors. The response has been warm and enthusiastic! My own pastor, Dr. Bruce Rigen, is a big supporter, and my church, Grosse Pointe Memorial, recently sent the RJC a generous contribution.

Other churches have been equally supportive. When Dr. Rigen encouraged me to help by writing this letter I was want a centennial, they should contribute the money rather than the council deciding to spend our tax dollars on the event.

I hope that other residents of the City will let our council know that they are unhappy with such irresponsibility. Perhaps in the future they will listen to their constituents.

Paula Sarvis

more than happy to do so. In return, the RJC hosted a nationally known speaker on faith and justice issues on May 7. Many in the religious community were very excited about this event and the response to the talk was overwhelmingly positive.

The center is also exploring the possibility of sponsoring a class next winter through the Lay Theological Academy. This academy is a joint effort of St. Paul's Catholic Church, Christ Church-Grosse Pointe, Grosse Pointe Memorial Church, Our Lady Star of the Sea Church, St. Paul Evangelical Lutheran Church, and Jefferson Avenue Presbyterian Church.

In addition, the RJC hopes to be a resource to pastors in our community as they seek to address these difficult issues with their congregations.

Finally, the RJC Board is encouraged by new involvement from members of the Grosse Pointe Jewish community. This is yet one more manner in which old barriers are being broken down.

So, you can see that it is an understatement to say that the Racial Justice Center is back in business! I urge you to join with me and support their efforts to become a force for ethnic diversity, and racial understanding and reconciliation in our community.

We need groups like the Racial Justice Center of Grosse Pointe.

I ask that you consider becoming a member of this organization through a donation. In becoming a member you will be kept apprised of Racial Justice Center activities and programs.

Join me in helping to give the Racial Justice Center a chance to implement these new programs. We would welcome your participation.

Centennial

To the Editor:

Recently, I returned from winter in Florida to find that our city council (in the city of Grosse Pointe) had raised our tax rate by 6.9 percent. With our assessments frozen at the same level as last year, it was my hope that the council would take a close look at possible cost-cutting measures and hold the line on taxes.

Apparently other councils in the Grosse Pointes were a little more careful with their budgets. The Shores went down slightly, the Farms held at last year's rate, and the Park and Woods went up 2.9 percent and 4.9 percent respectively. Why couldn't the City have done as well instead of claiming "restraint" by having only raised our taxes 269 percent in the last 20 years?

Only one council member raised a question about the budget and actually voted against it. Councilwoman Myrna Smith, who has expressed concern at the 6.9 percent raise in taxes, was alone in having the courage to think first of her constituents. She also was outspoken about the hiring of a centennial coordinator by the Farms and City, given the fact that the position was never advertised, nor were candidates interviewed.

One of the items in the budget for next year was $20,000 for a centennial, part of a total $60,000 to be spent by the City and Farms for next year's joint centennial celebration. Myrna Smith, you will recall, offered to head up a centennial in 1989 and, having been denied by the council, provided a celebration at the city park, attended by 400 people, at no cost to the taxpayers. If the residents and merchants

Perot

To the Editor:

Your editorial in the June 4 issue headlined "Who is the real Ross Perot?" touched a subject of seemingly universal conversation at this time.

At lunch recently, at a table of eight Grosse Pointers, I proposed this question: "If you had to make your choice for the fall presidential election right now — before you left this table — who would it be?"

Ross Perot got eight votes that day. Why? Your editorial stated the public, to date, is uninformed about his program and stand on major issues.

Not quite true. I have heard him interviewed for an hour on "20-20" by Barbara Walters, not the softest touch in broadcast journalism. I heard him poked over on the Brinkley show, on "Today," on all the major nets.

As to stands and issues, I learned he regards the family as the basic building block of society and blames the deterioration of the two-parent family as the root cause of educational inferiority, welfare excesses, drug abuse, minority problems and a host of related problems.

Since hearing from him first on "family values" and "two parenthood" I now hear it every night from Quayle, Bush, Clinton and all their handlers.

He spoke out on homelessness. So the administration brought Jack Kemp off the bench and plugged his housing program — for the first time in three years.

You say Perot is "fuzzy about his future relations with Congress." Well, who isn't? The public demonstrates a perceived majority opinion on any issue — Congress takes its cue from its lunch bucket, be it the NRA, the American-Israeli lobby, the American Manufacturers Association, Planned Parenthood, the Japanese lobby.

The biggest lobbyists, controlling the biggest PACs, get into top Congressional offices without even wiping their feet. Congress gleefully votes against the will of its constituents.

Marilyn Quayle, on "Today," went into a state of shock and declared Perot is trying to "buy the presidency." Since the presidency is up for sale every four years, what's so shocking? Of much greater concern is, who is putting up the money for the sale?

In Perot's case it's his own dough. He owes nobody. The Reagan and Bush presidencies were bought with IOUs to the oil interests, banking interests, foreign trade interests, and are in the process of being redeemed — with such favors as the Gulf War, the S & L $500-billion bailout and others we all know about.

At one "fundraising" dinner a few weeks back, Bush handed out $9 million in IOUs — and carried home the money. So, how does Marilyn want it — Perot finances his own campaign and owes no favors. Bush and Clinton are knee-deep in IOUs — and owe influence and favors in a long string of states.

Your editorial concludes: "Our belief is that as time goes on, the public will read, hear and learn so much about Perot's many deficiencies they will conclude that he really lacks the high standards the nation sets for the presidency." Well now, do you really think this unusual man is all deficiencies and no good points?

You open your editorial by positing that this man has failed to address the issues, and the public knows nothing of his views and program.

That being true, how and where did you dig up enough information about this quiet man to conclude he's all shortcomings and no longcoming? Which candidate are you measuring him against?

I'll tell you one thing, if you hear him say "read my lips" — better reach for your wallet. The same for that other fellow who likes to use that phrase.

Maybe we should just wait until "the public reads, hears and learns" about Perot's deficiencies before we judge him on what we guess will turn up.

Drugs

To the Editor:
We are a society being destroyed by drugs. Its effects are everywhere — a litany of sorrows.

In the spirit of offering solutions with problems:

Commencing Jan. 1, 1994 anyone in possession of illegal narcotics will receive life imprisonment with no parole.

Sounds tough, but it's better than China where the penalty is death. (There is no Chinese drug problem.) We can expect a surge of arrests in the first year as people test the law. To accommodate the surge, since we have no extra prison space, funds used unsuccessfully for the interdiction of drugs can be diverted to incarceration. There are many military bases closing that would accommodate the problem, and stir local economies.

President Bush has committed $7 billion dollars to the "Drug War." It would take less than that to enforce the "Drug Peace." If one considers the current prison population, drugs have played a major role. As terms, paroles and other forces work upon the current prison population the crowding should diminish.

Does it have faults? Yes. Vengeful people or corrupt law enforcement officials could plant narcotics and remove the innocent from society. Addicts present a special problem. The lead time for the law should provide time for them to register in rehab programs.

You have an enlightened leadership. Can anyone come up with a better solution?

Blanche Fisk of Grosse Pointe Park carries two rivets in her wallet everywhere she goes. They are remembrances of the time she spent at the Hudson Motor Car Co. building B-29 bombers while her husband, Oscar, was in Europe fighting World War II.

She's related to shuttle pilots and her husband's great-great-grandfather went to school with John Quincy Adams. Her husband's family founded Fisk Academy in Kentucky, where she went to school.

Blanche is a hero in her own right, although she doesn't think so — working to build warplanes was just something you did, she said. She had to work while her husband was off at war, so why not work for the government?

Last weekend, she was among dozens of women from across the country who were honored at Selfridge Air National Guard Base as part of its 75th anniversary celebration.

The name Rosie the Riveter was used to collectively refer to the women who worked in factories building the U.S. war machine.

Dressed in navy pants and a white blouse — which she was asked to wear by the event's organizers — Fisk, 68, joined dozens of other women on a special float in the parade at the guard base.

"They say recognizing us is way past due, but I don't know, we were just working and we knew we were doing something for our country," she said.

Her name was recently included in an article on Riveting Rosies and she was recognized at her church and at a group of Chrysler retirees she belongs to.

"They said I'm a celebrity, but I don't want to be a celebrity," she said. "I just did something everyone did."

Fisk was married in Kentucky and moved to Michigan where her parents resided. She had only been married for a year when her husband was called to service.

She wrote to him every night, she said — and then she made a decision.

"I wanted to do something for the war effort," she said. "This was it."

She first built gun turrets for B-24s and then moved to the Hudson Axle plant on Conner where they built wings for B-29 bombers.

Fisk led an eight-woman team which included her sister, Clarice. The wings were built in one room and the body in another. The women worked in pairs, one to hold the rivet gun and the other to hold the bucking bar. The two women who worked in a pair couldn't see each other because they were on opposite sides of the huge pieces of metal that became the wings. They communicated, Fisk said, by using their other senses. Fisk said women were probably better for those jobs because they are able to use feelings and intuition better than men.

Each part first had to be inspected by Hudson staff then by the government. If it wasn't up to standards, it was scrapped.

"I can say that our team didn't have to scrap one piece, ever," Fisk said.

She says she could "only work 60 hours a week." She was paid almost $2 an hour.

"I didn't know I was doing such an important job," she said. "I just did what I had to do. Sometimes it was hard, working around the metal in the summer. It got so hot you had to take salt pills. But I didn't mind. I had to work."

After serving 33 months, her husband received an honorable discharge, suffering only a minor injury to his toe. They had to get reacquainted, having been separated longer than they had been married.

He got a job at the Chrysler plant and she worked as a waitress. They raised two children and now have two grandchildren. Next month would have been the Fisk's 50th wedding anniversary, but Oscar died in 1987.

Fisk still works a little, helping elderly people, and says she has enjoyed everything in her life.

"Life's nothing but a bunch of fun," she said.

Raze house, expand park to max, City told

By Ronald J. Bernas
Staff Writer

Grosse Pointe City's Neff Park may get a lot larger if the council approves the recommendation of a study committee.

The council appointed an 11-member panel of council members and Neff Park neighbors to decide what to do with the Whiteley property — a 43,000-square-foot parcel of land adjacent to the park that the city bought for $895,000 last June. A house that is in serious disrepair stands on the lot.

The committee discussed and rejected three options, which included maintaining the southern-most part of the property for park use and leasing the house; converting the existing house to a community-type building; and splitting the property, retaining the lake front portion for the park and selling the existing house for residential purposes.

Then the committee recom-

Auxiliary unit helps douse fire

Fire destroyed the roof and attic of a home in the less than 100 block of Regal Place in Grosse Pointe Shores recently.

Grosse Pointe Shores public safety officers received the call about 10:20 a.m. Tuesday, June 2, and four regular firefighters and eight auxiliary firefighters, who work in the department of public works and the city's mended a fourth option which involves removing the house and using the entire parcel for park expansion.

That option would expand the park's size by 17 percent and provide 27 percent more green space. The park now covers 5.8 acres, of which 2.1 acres are used for parking.

The parcel would add 174 feet — or 63 percent — more lake frontage to the park and the new area would be developed as a "passive park" — meaning no equipment would be installed.

The house, the report says, is attractive but its interior would need major renovations before it would be available for long-term occupancy.

The other options were not recommended because:

- While splitting the lot and selling the house would provide money for the park expansion, it would reduce the usefulness building department, responded to the scene, said public safety chief Daniel Healy.

They had the fire under control within 35 minutes and no one was injured, he said.

The fire was apparently started by workers who were using a small torch on the roof, he said.

Careful thought and planning produced this memorable picture for Nagler on his recent trip to Ireland. The accompanying story explains how he did it.

Plan your photograph

Too often, a photographer will quickly click off a shot that says little about the subject and results in no more than a simple snapshot.

But with some planning and creativity, you can take an ordinary subject and produce a photograph that is both exciting and impact-filled.

The photograph shown here is a good example of how applying thought and planning can reward you with a memorable picture. I'll explain exactly how, on a recent trip to Ireland, this photograph was made.

I was in the small village of Bunratty when I came upon these quaint, thatched cottages. I saw excellent photographic potential here. Rather than take just the quick, ordinary snapshot, I put my mind in the "plan a photograph" mode.

First, I began looking for nearby subjects that could serve as "framing" objects while still allowing me to place the cottages in a pleasing composition in the viewfinder. Sure enough, I found a position where an overhanging branch and a hedge of tall grass worked perfectly. I was also able to use the roadway as an effective "lead-in." This way, the viewer's eye is directed into the picture.

Man rescued

Public safety officers from Grosse Pointe Park and Grosse Pointe City worked together to rescue an unconscious man from a roof recently.

The 36-year-old Milford man was working on a roof in the less than 17 block of Sycamore in Grosse Pointe City when he passed out about 11:36 a.m. Monday, June 8.

The homeowner called the City public safety department, and because the City contracts its ambulance service from Grosse Pointe Park, it asked the Park to send its medics.

Both City and Park officers arrived at the scene, and found the man lying on his side in the valley of the roof, near a propane gas tank he had been using to repair a gutter.

The officers requested the Park's ladder truck, and held the victim on the roof until it arrived.

The truck parked in front of the home, and the ladder formed a 10 or 20 degree angle with the roof, said Lt. Jerry Mehl of the City.

Park officers then strapped the patient on a stretcher, and crawled down the ladder, carrying him.

"I have to give them credit. It was very difficult," Mehl said.

The patient was taken to Bon Secours Hospital, where he was kept overnight for observation.

"We don't know the reason for his collapse," Mehl said.

14 scouts earn the silver

Fourteen Grosse Pointe area girls received the Girl Scout Silver Award, the highest award for Cadette Girl Scouts ages 11-14.

They are: Heather Bogdan, Emily Linn, Katie Daniels, Gnor Ford-Lepthain, Moreija

Emily Linn Ford-Lepthain, Sarah Grunow, Heather Hill, Carly Kovalick-Blagdurn, Melissa Miller, Litisha Oglesby, Melissa Oglesby, Ann Pieper, Christina Vandenbergher and Stephanie Wiringer.

About 95 girls from the metropolitan Detroit area won the Silver Award this year, which were presented at an honor reception for the Michigan Metro Girl Scout Council.

Sarah Grunow and Heather Hill

To earn their awards, the girls had to learn about themselves, explore careers, build on their talents and skills, develop leadership and conduct a service project to benefit the community.

Michigan Metro Girl Scout Council provides leadership, cultural and personal development opportunities for more than 28,000 girls in the Wayne and southern Oakland county areas.

Photography

By Monte Nagler

To place everything in the viewfinder, I chose a 28mm wide angle lens. This lens gave me the perspective I wanted as well as giving a three-dimensional appearance to the image.

It's very important in shots using "framing" techniques to have everything sharp and in focus from front to back. To accomplish this, I selected a small aperture of f-16 and verified on my len's depth-of-field scale that all would be sharp. A sturdy tripod helped, too.

A look at the sky confirmed that a filter was needed to obtain tonal separation between the white clouds and the blue sky. A red filter works fine with black and white while a polarizer is in order with color film.

Now I was ready to trip the shutter. All my planning, which took no longer than a few minutes, paid off with this delightful photograph that expresses perfectly the beauty and charm of Ireland.

2 Nissan models look alike, but they're niches apart

"Niche" is a hot buzzword in the auto industry.

Modern technological developments in computer numerically controlled "versatile" machine tools have made it more economical to tool up for lower-volume runs, hence the "niche car" becomes economical and less risky than tooling for a high-volume line.

As a result, the major auto producers have a sometimes bewildering array of different cars, all bearing the same nameplate and using common components, but aimed at different market "niches." These market niches are often very closely defined. Take, for example, Nissan's NX2000 and 240SX.

They are both cars of merit and you can tell them apart from each other and from their competitors, but you may have to get close to them to do it. While the NX2000 and the 240SX may look like they are in the same niche — they are both two-door fastback coupes with minimal backseats, fashionable "eggish" styling, economical but good-performing four-cylinder engines and are within inches in their body dimensions — but in fact they are aimed at quite different markets.

The NX2000 is a descendant of the Pulsar, the small sportster with "modular" roof which allowed it to play the sporty coupe, convertible or small station wagon. It was one of my favorite little sportsters, but never really caught on.

The station wagon roof module is not available on the NX2000, but it is still the lowest-priced car available with removable T-top panels. It is an option, at $900, which pays off handsomely in enhanced summer driving enjoyment. It allows the open-air motoring fiend to have his closed coupe and eat his convertible cake too. (Coupes are easier to explain to those family members to whom a car is just a way to get from one place to another faster, more reliable and more comfortable than public transportation, but of the same utilitarian nature. With the T-top panels removed and the windows down on the frameless doors, the effect is the same as a convertible. And if you worry about such things, rollover protection is there in the T-bar and the rear roof panel.

The Nissan 240SX LE Fastback is a traditional front-engine, rear-drive sports car.

The 1992 Nissan NX2000 offers economical fun, contemporary styling and open air motoring at a reasonable price.

Base price of the NX2000 is $13,480 and once it is equipped for solid motoring pleasure and value — T-top, air conditioning, antilock brakes, upscale stereo, maybe a compact disc player — it is still in an affordable $16,000 range.

It is aimed at the buyer who wants a good-performing fun car for everyday economical use and contemporary styling which is very fashionable, but does not scream out to every auto thief in the area. It is a niche populated by some very tough competitors, including the Honda CRX, Geo Storm, Toyota Paseo, Mazda MX-3 and Hyundai Scoupe. There are no losers in this niche, but I would rate the NX2000 tops.

The NX2000 is a front-drive sports/specialty coupe that was developed for the American market. It is a 2 plus 2, which means it has two comfortable bucket seats in front and a bench seat in back suitable for a small or medium-sized dog, but you wouldn't want to put humans in there. It is for the pre-family buyer.

The NX is also available as the NX1600, with base price of $11,300. The test car was a NX2000. The NX1600 is powered by a 1.6-liter dual overhead-cam four rated at 110 horsepower; the NX2000 has a 2.0-liter DOHC engine with four valves per cylinder. With a rating of 140 horsepower, the 2.0 is the most powerful non-turbocharged engine in its niche. Five-speed manual overdrive transmission is standard

Autos

By Richard Wright

(and preferred by most); a four-speed automatic is optional.

The NX2000 is one of the most comfortable in its niche, which is not noted for comfort and ease of entry and egress. The rear seats fold down to increase cargo capacity. It has in-dash cupholders, for you coffee drinkers, and controls are convenient and easy to use.

Standard equipment includes power rack-and-pinion steering, power four-wheel disc brakes (front discs only on the NX1600), power exterior mirrors, front and rear stabilizer bars and a driver-side air bag.

NX2000 options include antilock braking and (new for 1992) power windows and door locks. Both NX1600 and NX2000 are available with removable glass T-top panels.

The 240SX looks much the same as the NX2000, but is surprisingly different. Its 2.4-liter 16-valve four-cylinder engine puts out 155 horsepower, and its rear-drive configuration marks it as a more serious performance car than the NX2000.

A traditional front-engine, rear-drive sports car, available in base, SE and LE Fastback models. The test car was a top-of-the-line LE fastback and its serious intent could be gleaned from its sticker price, which topped $20,000. Now you see why this is in a different niche than the NX2000.

On the side of the test car, just ahead of the rear wheel well, was the legend "Super HICAS." This denoted that the car was equipped with the optional Super HICAS four-wheel steering, more evidence that this car is for the serious driver. Super HICAS is an electronically controlled four-wheel steering system which operates in the 40-to-65-mph range to determine the appropriate amount of rear steer needed for improved response and stability.

In truth I did not know the system was on the car until I noticed the "Super HICAS" and looked it up to see what it was. But then I did not come close to testing the limits of this car's capabilities, because that would be quite illegal (and I am sure my nerve would have given out long before the car was even trying hard).

The Super HICAS four-wheel steering system is offered as part of a package which includes viscous limited-slip differential, sport suspension and high-performance tires.

Base price of the 240SX is $14,515, but base of the LE Fastback, the model the serious driver will want, is $18,724. The well-equipped test car topped $20,000.

For the owner who takes driving seriously, the Nissan 240SX LE Fastback is the lowest-priced front-engine, rear-drive sports car available. If you just need neat transportation that will make commuting fun, try the NX2000.

Road project to affect airport traffic

Wayne County Executive Edward H. McNamara advises motorists that one road project may have a significant impact on both highway travelers and Metro Airport travelers — the work being done on I-94 west of Detroit Metropolitan Wayne County Airport.

"The Michigan Department of Transportation (MDOT) has advised us that eastbound Interstate 94, one-quarter mile west of Rawsonville Road to Shook Road, will undergo a complete reconstruction this summer," McNamara said.

There will be lane closures from approximately May 11 through Nov. 1 which could slow traffic to the airport, he said.

Information may be obtained by calling the airport parking hotline at 1-800-642-1978.

Car care video available

If that maze of hoses, belts, wires and dipsticks under the hood of your car make you want to slam the hood right back down, the Car Care Council offers a video that helps you find your way under the hood and around the car, truck or van.

"How to Find Your Way Under the Hood..." is a 25-minute, hands-on guide that tells you how to determine if a belt or hose is going bad, how to check tires, transmission and

Riley to seek re-election

Justice Dorothy Comstock Riley will seek re-election to the Michigan Supreme Court where she is currently serving.

In keeping with her decision to run again, Riley issued the following statement: "During my tenure on the courts, I believe that I have demonstrated that I care very deeply about the American system of justice and deem it incumbent on those who seek to sit on our courts to clearly set a standard of dedication and devotion to the rule of law."

A survey by Michigan Lawyers Weekly in 1991, a newspaper for the State's legal profession, established Dorothy Comstock Riley as one of the most respected jurists in Michigan.

Beware of IRS imposters

Warm weather brings out all kinds of con artists and scams, including individuals posing as employees of the Internal Revenue Service.

"Every year we get reports of individuals impersonating IRS employees," said Cornelius Jackson, inspector-in-charge of the IRS Internal Security Division in Detroit. "The motive is usually financial gain. The impostors attempt to harass people or collect money for what they say are unpaid taxes."

Every IRS employee who makes contact with the public is required to carry distinctive identification and must show this when conducting official business.

"Generally, people who owe money to the IRS will receive written notification before being contacted in person," Jackson said. He also emphasized that individuals should always ask to see credentials of anyone claiming to represent the IRS.

"People who doubt the validity of credentials offered, or the identity of telephone callers, may contact the Internal Security Division, collect, in Detroit at 1-313-226-7340," he said. If there is no answer at the Detroit number, a collect call may be placed to the Cincinnati office at 1-513-684-3564.

Gunman caught

About 4 p.m. Saturday, May 23, Detroit police received a call that a man had fired two shots from a shotgun, and was holding a baby at gunpoint in the 1200 block of Ashland.

When Detroit police arrived, the suspect ran east into Grosse Pointe Park's jurisdiction.

Park police found him hiding in a nearby garage and turned him over to Detroit police.

Housework begins on Park lot

Construction of a house on Pemberton near Jefferson has begun, following a decision that the Grosse Pointe Park City Council made last month.

The council agreed to rezone the vacant lot, which it recently sold to local developer Ted Schollenberger for $35,000, from a restricted office district to a residential district.

Under the terms of the sale, Schollenberger must build a two-story brick veneer home on the lot with at least 2,000 square feet of living space.

Also, he must raze the vacant Unocal service station, located about a block away on the southeast corner of Barrington and Jefferson. That work has also begun.

Schollenberger plans to purchase the Unocal site, and the other two vacant lots on the corner of Pemberton and Jefferson, from the city within the next year, and build an office own selfish desires to do first and foremost for himself, always does right by his children in the end (of each episode).

Fathers

Compared to the origins of Mother's Day, which dates back to ancient Greek and Roman spring festivals honoring goddesses, there isn't much folklore about the beginnings of Father's Day — it basically sprang from the Mother's Day idea.

After listening to a Sunday sermon in 1910 extolling the maternal sacrifices made by mothers and honoring Mother's Day, Sonora Smart Dodd of Spokane, Wash., realized that in her family, it was her father, a Civil War veteran, who had sacrificed for her and her five brothers after their young mother died in childbirth.

She proposed having a local Father's Day celebration to honor the oft-overlooked deeds of fathers everywhere. The idea received wide support from the local YMCA and the town's ministers, who asked to postpone the celebration from June 5, Dodd's father's birthday, to June 19, so they could have time to prepare special sermons.

Ever since, Father's Day has been celebrated on the third Sunday in June.

Interest in Father's Day took hold everywhere. Newspapers helped spread the idea across the country and famous political leader William Jennings Bryan wrote to Dodd saying he believed fathers should not be slighted.

Although President Wilson and his family personally observed Father's Day in 1916, Congress did not take quickly to proclaiming it a national holiday, as they did Mother's Day, because they thought it might look like the male-dominated body was blowing its own horn.

In 1924, President Calvin Coolidge suggested to the states that they hold their own Father's Day observances, which would forge "more intimate relations between fathers and their children, and also to impress upon fathers the full measure of their obligations."

Many people attempted to make Father's Day official, most notably Sen. Margaret Chase Smith, who, in 1957, forcefully told Congress that either both parents should be honored or neither should be honored.

"But to single out just one of our two parents and omit the other is the most grievous insult imaginable," she said.

Although it took 62 years to make it official, Father's Day is now the fifth-largest card-sending day of the year, with about 85 million cards exchanged.

So, fathers, take the day off this Sunday, putz around in the yard, take a nap in a hammock. And tell your kids, in honor of the president who made the holiday official, that they won't have Dad to push around anymore — at least for the day.

Jewelry

Part of the evidence he found in that case was a gold shop transaction sheet, and a class ring. The initials on the ring didn't match the names of the people who sold it to the gold shop, which were listed on the sheet.

"I thought, there has to be a way of tracking down the owner of a class ring," Skinner said.

He contacted the school and the ring manufacturer, which helped him find the owner — a woman whose home on Outer Drive in Detroit had been robbed.

"I found it to be a lot of sleuthing, and I got great satisfaction out of returning stolen property to its rightful owners," he said.

For the next three years, he did pawn shop investigative work fulltime, and built up contacts with ring manufacturers and the Secondary School Principals Association, he said.

Since 1986, pawn shop work has been only a small part of his duties in the investigative operations section of the Detroit Police Department, but he still does it occasionally.

Detroit licenses pawn shops for the state, and the shops must agree to open their records to police officers at any time in order to get a license, Skinner said.

"The shops I've dealt with are usually cooperative," he said, "and sometimes, they will call me and say, 'We have a ring that doesn't match the seller,' or 'We have something with identifying information; want to come check it out?'"

Skinner is asking anyone who has information about the Hill or Madeira school jewelry, or the broach or fox tail pendant to call him at 596-5540.

Computer gone

Sometime between 5 p.m. May 20 and 10 p.m. May 25, someone stole about $2,000 in computer equipment from a store in the 100 block of Kercheval, according to a report filed with the Grosse Pointe Farms public safety department.

Taken were a computer processor, a monitor, a laser printer and a keyboard.

Experience living science

Kids from 5 to 12 can experience a "hands-on" summer day camp filled with a healthy mix of indoor and outdoor activity.

Five different topics are offered this summer Mondays through Fridays, 9 a.m. to 3 p.m., at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial.

The instructors and science projects are from the Living Science Foundation. The camps are arranged by age. Each group of eight to 10 students will work with a fully qualified and professionally trained science interpreter.

Explore ocean life using the new mobile marine study lab in "Marine Biology Camp" from June 22-26 or Aug. 17-21. Handle sea anemone and other creatures while learning where they come from and how they live together.

Campers also explore the history of ocean life and learn about ocean habitats and geography.

Each day take a safari to a different area to learn about its animals, geography, climate and people in "Safari" July 6-10. Travel to South America, Australia, Africa, early America and space.

Have a successful landing in the space shuttle simulator and explore the skies with the Starlab planetarium in "Air and Space Camp" July 20-24. Put jet propulsion and air pressure to work, making your own hovercraft, building rockets and studying the mechanics of flight with the help of kites, airplanes and live birds.

Each day in "Science Sampler," Aug. 3-7, highlights one area of discovery: kids have live, personal encounters with a variety of animals; discover vibrations by making musical instruments; make their own fossils and reconstruct giant dinosaur models; enjoy learning experiences in air, space and marine biology.

Each camp is $185 a person. Registration at least one week in advance is recommended. Campers bring their own lunch. Beverages and snacks will be provided.

A 10 percent discount is given to the second sibling in a family for the same camp. For more information, call 881-7511.

Milk River

Repair Cook Road temporarily after each phase of the construction is completed, and resurface the entire road in summer after the sewer is in place.

Only a small portion of the trench will be excavated to install the sewer. Shafts will be installed at about seven points along the route, and workers will tunnel underground from shaft to shaft, laying the pipe.

The 54-inch diameter pipe will be laid in three overlapping phases. In the first phase, it will be installed from Chalfonte to Holiday, from June 15 to July 22; in the second phase, it will be laid from Holiday to Cook Road from July to September; in the third phase, a diversion chamber will be constructed in an alley between Edoardo's Restaurant and a residence west of Mack, and the sewer will be hooked to the diversion chamber.

The new sewer is one of several measures the drain board is taking to prevent raw sewage from being discharged into the open Milk River Drain at Lake St. Clair, as has happened in the past during wet weather (rain and melting snow).

Other actions include constructing a larger retention basin behind the Milk River

Pump Station at Marter Road and Parkway in the Woods (currently under way); installing a chlorination facility near the mouth of the Milk River drain (completed last year and operating); and disconnecting downspouts in Grosse Pointe Woods (to begin this year and to be completed in 1993).

To understand how these measures will be of benefit, it helps to know how the system now works.

Currently, sanitary sewage and storm water from Harper Woods come to Grosse Pointe Woods in two separate underground sewer pipes. In the Woods, they are channeled into a 72-inch-diameter combined sewer under Cook Road that also carries storm water and sanitary sewage from Grosse Pointe Woods.

That sewer carries the waste east under Cook Road and then north at Chalfonte to the Torrey Road Pump Station, which sends the mixture to the Milk River Pump Station on Marter at Parkway.

The Milk River Pump Station sends the waste south, through a 72-inch-diameter sewer called the Grosse Pointe Sanitary Interceptor, that runs under the east side of Chalfonte to the Detroit Water and Sewerage Department wastewater treatment plant.

Along the way, the waste gets an added push from other pump stations, including the one at Kerby Road and Chalfonte in Grosse Pointe Farms.

During wet weather, the Milk River Pump Station receives more stormwater mixed in with the sanitary waste than it can handle. In other words, the station receives the wastewater faster than it can send it into the Grosse Pointe Interceptor, because the sewer can only hold so much.

When the Grosse Pointe Interceptor sewer's capacity is exceeded, raw sewage backs up in an uncovered, 3.8 million-gallon concrete retention basin in back of the pump station.

The wastewater is then pumped to Detroit when capacity becomes available in the Grosse Pointe Interceptor.

Historically, the capacity of the retention basin has been exceeded about 44 times a year.

When that happened, drain board employees would open a flood gate and send the excess raw effluents into the Milk River Drain, which was a real river until its flow from Lake St. Clair was cut off in the 1950s to make it a drain channel.

A few times a year, drain board employees would pump the sewage water from the drain into Lake St. Clair.

The drain board has been working with the Department of Natural Resources and the city of Grosse Pointe Woods for almost two years on ways to stop the flow of raw sewage into the Milk River Drain.

The new sewer will carry Harper Woods' sanitary sewage directly to the Grosse Pointe Interceptor, bypassing the Milk River Pump Station. That will decrease the amount of sanitary sewage that is sent into the Milk River Drain during overflows.

The Milk River Pump Station will still receive sanitary sewage from Grosse Pointe Woods, and stormwater from Grosse Pointe Woods and Harper Woods.

To reduce the amount of rainwater that is sent into the system, the drain board has asked the Grosse Pointe Woods City Council to adopt an ordinance that would require residents to disconnect their downspouts, and re-direct rainwater over their lawns.

While the volume of wastewater the pump station will receive is going down, the capacity of its retention basin is going up.

A new 18.8 million-gallon covered basin is being built around the existing 3.8 million-gallon uncovered basin. The new basin will consist of two chambers, and the existing basin will be demolished once the first chamber is complete, which is scheduled to be sometime between January and June 1993.

In a separate but related project that is being undertaken by Wayne County, the equipment at the Kerby Road Pump Station on Chalfonte in Grosse Pointe Farms will be upgraded.

All of these measures should reduce the number of Milk River overflows from 44 to 15 a year, the drain board's engineers have said.

Also, before waste is sent into the Milk River Drain, it will be treated with chlorine. The chlorination facility has been operating for almost a year.

The last step of the Milk River combined sewer overflow control project will be to dredge the drain and install a system that will constantly circulate fresh lake water through the drain, cleaning it.

The entire project is scheduled to be completed late next year.

The estimated cost of the project is $25 million, and will be paid for by the governments that use the sewer system, according to the percentage of waste that they have historically sent into the system.

Grosse Pointe Woods will pay about 60.5 percent of the tab, Harper Woods 35.1 percent, the state 2.3 percent, Wayne County 1.7 percent, and St. Clair Shores 4 percent.

Those governments will likely pass the cost along to their residents, either through a special tax assessment or higher sewerage rates.

Belcher said the increase won't hit Woods residents for another year, and that he and the city controller are in the process of determining how and how much homeowners should be charged.

For more information about the Milk River project, call Henry Lundquist of the Wayne County Division of Public Works at 224-3625, or Tom Whitcher, Grosse Pointe Woods director of public works at 343-2462.

A childhood pastime can help you get the jump on old age

Social Security, pensions, annuities, investments — these are building blocks that ensure a retirement free of financial worry.

But if we are going to realize the benefits of what we have worked so hard to achieve, we have to invest time, energy and thought to preserving our health. Wealth without health is an empty bank.

Just as we begin planning years before our retirement for a carefree future, so should we begin to take care of our body so that we will have enough strength to do more than sit in a rocking chair. Exercise is a major factor in keeping the body fit, and if we start early enough it is possible to keep fit at any age.

A wealth of scientific evidence suggests that exercise can help delay some of the effects of aging and, thus, allow people to exercise well into their later years.

Walking, cycling and swimming are types of exercise that most people enjoy. Another form of working out that is within the reach of most budgets and doesn't require the inconvenience of leaving home is jumping rope.

It's a sport for any season and both sexes. It's easy to learn and the only equipment it requires is a rope and you can do it almost anywhere, any time.

Like running, cycling and swimming, it helps build endurance and provides aerobic benefits. The claim that 10 minutes of rope skipping equals 30 minutes of jogging may not be quite true but rope jumping can be just as strenuous as jogging.

It provides a good cardiovascular workout and it's a good calorie burner. It's lower in impact and easier on the knees than running, since you should jump no more than an inch off the ground.

In a University of California Wellness Letter, advice on how to get started suggests that if you have been relatively sedentary and are just starting to jump rope, you should begin at about 70-rope-turns a minute. You can jump in place or move around. Try jumping while you're watching television.

It is suggested that if you are increasing speed and intensity, you stop for 10 seconds to monitor your heart rate, since jumping rope can elevate it very quickly. To check your pulse, multiply by six to get your rate per minute.

Prime Time

By Marian Trainor

Slow down if you get winded or too tired. As with any extended exercise, it's wise to start with a five-minute warm-up and end with a cool-down period.

You'll need a pair of good supportive shoes and a rope — those with ball bearings work well. Cotton ropes are cheap and probably preferable. It is best to jump on the kind of wood floor you'll find in a gym, but a lawn or a mat works worth the effort to shop and cook for one.

The result is many who have reached their "golden years" are not eating well. It is said that the elderly are the single largest demographic group at risk of malnutrition.

A joint statement of the American Academy of Family Physicians, the American Dietetic Association and The National Council on Aging says nutrition is one of the important vital signs, just as blood pressure or pulse. Well-nourished people tend to have shorter hospital stays, fewer complications and speedier healing after surgery.

Beyond that, it can improve the quality of the retirement years, since adults who make sure they are well nourished have more vigor and, therefore, are more likely to lead active and independent lives. They may even improve their chances of staying out of nursing homes.

Researchers at the USDA Human Nutrition Research Center on Aging at Tufts University found that those who take in the greatest proportion of calories from milk and other dairy foods, fruit and fruit juices and cereals enjoy the best nutritional profiles. Specifically, they had the highest intakes of vitamins A and C, riboflavin, foliate and vitamin B6.

Researcher Katherine Tucker, Ph.D., does not believe the results should be interpreted as a call to give up meat, poultry or bread. She does feel that people who put a heavy emphasis on those items should make a conscious effort to increase the variety of food they include in their diets so that they eat dairy products, fruits and cereals on a more regular basis.

Trace your family tree

The Senior Men's Club of Grosse Pointe will meet at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial on Tuesday, June 23, at 11 a.m.

Speaker Richard G. Tripp, chairman, Bloomfield Hills Family History Center, Roseville Family History Center, Family Records Extraction Program, will speak on "Tracing the Family Tree." The presenter will be Ed Roney.

Make luncheon reservations with the committee.

Ladies' Night is Thursday, June 25, at 6:15 p.m. There will be a visit to the Coast Guard station at Selfridge field on Thursday, July 9.

Medicaid to change

In an effort to contain soaring health care costs, the state of Michigan has decided to place recipients of Medicaid funds living in Oakland, Wayne and Macomb counties in a managed health care setting.

Currently, recipients are free to attend any doctor they wish, including specialists, with the taxpayer bearing the cost.

During the next eight to 12 months, Medicaid recipients will be offered to voluntarily join the health care company of their choice from a list of approved companies offered by the state.

Those who do not select an HMO or other such program by the end of the selection period, probably early next year, will be placed in a company by the state.

Seniors cautioned about living trust kits

Senior citizens are advised to be wary of companies offering to sell living trust kits, according to Attorney General Frank J. Kelly; Fred L. Woodworth, president of the State Bar of Michigan; and Nancy Crandall, director of the Michigan Office of Services to the Aging.

Kelly has issued notices of intended action against two companies operating in Michigan which, according to him, use high pressure, misleading sales tactics to convince senior citizens that using their kit to put their property in a revocable living trust will avoid high costs of probate. The kits cost as much as $2,500. Notices of intended action were issued to:

— Senior Citizens Information Center, a Michigan business enterprise located in Eaton Rapids, Eaton County;

— American Association for Senior Citizens, Inc. in the District of Columbia but operating out of Dallas, Texas

According to the notices, sales representatives, who are not attorneys, use false and misleading statements to sell the high-priced kits to senior citizens. They use mail solicitations, telephone calls and in-home sales presentations that may last several hours to sell the kits.

The sales representative allegedly tells the consumer that probate costs may eat up more than 10 percent of their estate, but that these costs may be avoided by purchasing the kit. In fact, typical probate costs in Michigan are far less than 10 percent of the value of the estate.

The company representative convinces the consumer to pay for the service up front. The consumer is then asked to complete a financial questionnaire. The information is then sent to an attorney, often an out-of-state attorney not licensed to practice law in Michigan. The attorney assigned is then to prepare the documents to form a living trust and return it to the consumer. These same services can be obtained through local attorneys at far lower costs.

The notices also inform the companies that they are failing to abide by Michigan's Home Solicitation Act which provides that in-home sales must be accompanied by a written notice that the purchase can be rescinded anytime within three business days after the deal is completed.

The companies have 10 days in which to contact the attorney general's office to resolve the dispute and bring their operations into compliance with Michigan law.

Following is a consumer checklist to provide assistance in choosing the best option:

1. Be wary when a salesperson tells you that a kit they are offering will solve all of your estate problems.

2. Check the price of the kit against the price of the same service offered by local attorneys.

3. Make sure that promises of savings are based on Michigan probate costs and laws. Probate costs and attorney fees vary greatly from state to state and even from court to court within the state.

4. A kit is not tailored for the customer's particular circumstances. If the salesperson promises the services of an attorney to review documents, get the name of the attorney and check to see if he or she is licensed to practice in Michigan.

5. Do not provide personal and confidential family and financial information to a salesperson. Meet with the attorney to discuss your circumstances.

6. If the salesperson says part of the cost of the kit pays the lawyer's fee, do not buy. Michigan attorneys are not allowed to split fees with salespersons.

7. Find out if there is a way to get a refund if you are not satisfied. Get the promise of refunds in writing.

seniors sought

Michigan Office of Services to the Aging, in conjunction with the Michigan State Bar, has begun its search for outstanding Michigan senior citizens, one in the area of service and one in leadership, to be nominated for selection as 1992 Senior Citizens of the Year.

Strong personal commitment, helping others and demonstration of the same are all that is needed to be considered for this award, said OSA director Nancy Crandall.

Helping others is one of the most enriching experiences," Crandall said. "We know that there are thousands of Michiganians out there through their efforts, help senior programs, provide consultation and leadership through positions on committees and policy boards, deliver services themselves, and thus, they are eligible for the special distinction this award brings."

The two older adults selected for this award will be honored at a ceremony at the Michigan Senior Citizens Fair on Aug. 31, Senior Citizens Day.

The eligibility criteria for nomination includes the following: the person to be nominated must be 60 or older as of the nomination date; may not be nominated for providing service in a paid position; may not be a member of the state commission or Advisory Council on Aging; an employee of the Michigan Office of Services to the Aging or the Michigan Senior Citizens Fair.

Nominations can be accepted from organizations and individuals and be signed by the president or that organization. Applications must be made using applications provided by the Michigan Office of Services to the Aging.

The deadline for nominations is August 24. Completed applications should be sent to the Michigan Office of Services to the Aging, Senior Citizen of the Year Award, P.O. Box 30026, Detroit, Mich. 48909.

For more information or questions about the award should contact Linda Hill at (517) 373-8230 between 10 and 11 a.m. and Tony Aiuto at (313) 369-8410 between 10 and 11 a.m.

Van Burkleo honored

Sandra Van Burkleo

Sandra Van Burkleo of Grosse Pointe Park received the 1992 President's Award for Excellence in Teaching from Wayne State University. Winners receive a citation and a $2,000 award funded by alumni gifts and the Teaching Excellence Fund established by the Michigan Legislature.

Since her arrival at Wayne State in 1983, Van Burkleo, an assistant professor of history, has impressed her colleagues as an "amazing" instructor and a "dynamite" teacher.

Van Burkleo, a specialist in the history of American public and private law, has demonstrated her scholarly dedication, colleagues say, through numerous presentations in local and national forums, along with articles, reviews, essay reviews and encyclopedia entries on an impressive range of subjects.

In recognition of her active contributions to the university community and the community at large, she received the 1991 Probus Club Award.

Van Burkleo received a bachelor's degree from Hamline University in 1974, a master's from the University of Minnesota in 1981 and a Ph.D. from Minnesota in 1988.

Walters honored

Kenneth Walters of Grosse Pointe Park is one of among six people who received the 1992 President's Award for Excellence in Teaching from Wayne State University.

Winners receive a hand-lettered framed citation denoting the honor and a $2,000 award funded by alumni gifts and the Teaching Excellence Fund established by the Michigan Legislature to recognize excellence in teaching by faculty at state-supported institutions.

For Walters, an associate professor of Greek and Latin and WSU faculty member since 1975, the word "teacher" indicates a way of life and not just a university function, colleagues say.

His specialties include ancient Greek and Latin prose authors, as well as Greek and Roman law history; he also teaches Greek mythology and Greek and Latin language courses. This breadth of knowledge, peers say, allows him to divide successfully teaching duties between his own department and the history department.

Walters has developed a computerized Latin grammar program for his students that demonstrates the rudiments of the language. More importantly, colleagues say, the program reveals the deeper workings of language in general. He also has designed a computerized index program that can facilitate any humanities research project.

Walters received his bachelor's degree from Bowdoin College in 1968. He received his master's and Ph.D. from Princeton University in 1973.

Saros, Dad's Club donates scoreboard

Four years ago, when Jim Saros attended a Grosse Pointe South baseball game in which his nephew was playing, he noticed that something was missing — a scoreboard.

He made note of the fact and when the school's athletic director, Jo Lake, called and asked him if he would be willing to help attain corporate sponsorship for a scoreboard, he agreed. His response was that he would match any funds the school would raise.

The Dad's Club took him up on his offer and began various drives to raise the money.

"Grosse Pointe South has a fine baseball program," Saros said. "This was something I felt I could give back to the community, while at the same time have the kids work to pay for their half."

"The work ethic kids learn from sports competition is one of the most valuable lessons you learn in life. Besides, I have a 2-1/2-year-old son who will probably play on this field one day."

Saros was an all-city athlete in high school and attended Wayne State University on a four-year baseball scholarship. He recently donated baseball dugouts to Wayne State.

Exchange Club takes kids to court

The Exchange Club of Grosse Pointe/St. Clair Shores recently provided an opportunity for sixth grade students from Brownell Middle School to see first-hand America's legal system in action.

Approximately 60 students visited the courtroom of District Judge Matthew Rumora in Grosse Pointe Farms where they viewed several cases involving shoplifting, speeding and larceny.

After the courtroom proceedings, Farms Probation Officer Suzanne O'Shey, Public Defender Dean Valente, Police Officer Richard Rosati, and Rumora answered questions from the students.

The program, "My Day In Court," is provided by Exchange clubs as a public service. Sixth graders are selected, based on the assumption that children of this age are old enough to understand and attentively observe the courtroom drama, and where the lessons learned will serve them well during their later years.

Students were given certificates recognizing their participation.

The Bridge

In the world of Teribithia,
A friendship lies,
Across a creek,

Through the skies.

We're the rulers,
The king and queen,
In the most beautiful place
You've ever seen.

The spirits protect us
In this enchanted land,
We stand together hand-in-hand.

We work together as a team,
Sewn together like a seam.

We'll stand together to the end,
The power to us,
Will you send?

Elizabeth Moran

The following poem was written by Elizabeth Moran, 9, who completed the third grade at Richard Elementary School. Her parents are Joe and Beth Moran of the Farms.

His name was Smokey

He lived in a stable
He was always poky
He loved to eat
Especially meat
He liked the shade
But I wish he had a maid.

Elsila, Gajewski top South senior scholars

Jamie E. Elsila and Jeremy Gajewski were named top senior scholars at commencement exercises held June 10 on the front lawn of Grosse Pointe South High School.

Elsila, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Elsila of Grosse Pointe Park, was named valedictorian of the Class of 1992, and Gajewski, the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Gajewski, of Grosse Pointe Farms, was named salutatorian of the class of 316 graduates.

Elsila compiled a 4.288 cumulative grade point average at South over a four-year period. As South's most celebrated graduate, she was named a National Merit Finalist, Robert C. Byrd Scholar, Presidential Scholar, Class A All-State Academic Team, Detroit News Outstanding Senior in World Studies Division and placed in the top 100 in the Michigan Mathematics Prize Competition.

In her junior year, she won the Bausch and Lomb Science Award, Princeton Book Award, Madame Curie Award, first place in Physics at Detroit Science and Engineering Fair, third in State Spanish Advanced Level Exam, third in Southeast Michigan Junior Science and Humanities Symposium and placed in the top 100 in the Michigan Mathematics Prize Competition.

Elsila has received scholarships from Phi Beta Kappa, Detroit Pistons, Tylenol, National Merit Scholarship, Kalamazoo College Honors Scholarship, Kalamazoo College Competition in Math and Science, Robert C. Byrd Scholarship and the Detroit Chapter of American Chemical Society. In all her scholarship fund totaled $18,250, which she will use at Kalamazoo College.

Gajewski compiled a 4.275 cumulative grade point average after four years of study at South. He won the Rensselaer Medal and the Dartmouth Book Award as a junior.

Last summer he was selected for the Summer Institute for the Arts, Sciences and Technology, a program for highly talented 10th and 11th grade students. Co-sponsored by the state board of education and various Michigan universities, the two-week residential program for which Jeremy was selected was held at Michigan Technological University in Houghton.

He has been an active member of South's cross country and track teams as well as a leader of his youth group at Grosse Pointe Memorial Church. He plans to attend The University of Michigan at Ann Arbor this fall.

Four other South seniors compiled cumulative grade point averages of more than 4.000. They are Amanda Filkin, Scott McGarvey, Jeffrey Montgomery and Ashley Moran.

Senior class president Ashley Moran was given the Grosse Pointe Rotary Club's Leadership Award. The award, a gold watch, is given each year to a senior who demonstrates outstanding leadership to the senior class and to the school.

Senior Candace Goss received the Grosse Pointe South High School Outstanding Service

Jamie Elsila

Award. The selection of these two awards is made by the principal.

Their parents are Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Moran, of Grosse Pointe Park, and Mr. and Mrs. James Goss, also of the Park.

Jeremy Gajewski

Mr. and Mrs. David King, of Grosse Pointe Park, and Sarah G. McCandless, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John McCandless, of Grosse Pointe Farms. King chose "The Power to Seize the Hour" as the title for her speech while McCandless' speech was titled "The Road to Oz."

Star Elementary accredited by state board

Our Lady Star of the Sea Elementary School was recently awarded full accreditation by the Michigan State Board of Education.

Karen McGuire, principal, attended a recognition dinner in Lansing on May 26 to receive the award for the school.

Star Elementary School was one of 43 schools in the state to receive the award and the only parochial school to complete the entire Michigan Accreditation Program, which took three years.

Accreditation began in 1989 when each teacher participated in a self-study of the school which was submitted to the state. Parents and students also completed surveys.

A few of the recent improvements at Star include the in-depth review of curriculum by concentrating on one area each year, hiring a part-time librarian, examining alternative assessment programs other than standardized testing, the development of a comprehensive health education program and an overall three- to five-year improvement plan.

Ann Gillard has been selected by the Student Conservation Association as a member of a volunteer conservation crew in the Mount Rodgers National Recreation Area this summer.

The volunteer crew, under the supervision of a trained leader, will perform hiking trail construction and trail rehabilitation projects.

The summit of Mount Rodgers, the highest peak in Virginia, is surrounded by weathered bluffs and rugged terrain.

Her parents are Robert and Trudy Gillard of Grosse Pointe Woods. She will be one of more than 425 high school students taking part in the high school program at national parks, national forests and other areas nationwide this year. They have been chosen from approximately 2,000 applicants.

Andrews talked about his personal experiences with Bob Lanier, Isiah Thomas and M.C. Hammer. His message to the students: It isn't who you know, it's believing in yourself and what you want to accomplish and then going after it.

Brown's off to Japan

Amanda Brown, a junior at Grosse Pointe South, will live with a host family in Japan for the summer. She is a recipient of the prestigious Japan-U.S. Senate scholarship which is administered by Youth For Understanding International Exchange.

juniors from each state received scholarships this year through Youth for Understanding, one of the world's oldest and largest student exchange organizations.

Before traveling to Japan, the scholarship recipients will attend an orientation program in San Francisco.

news that Wemhoff was re- sidering.
Callahan, outwardly mild- nered and easy-going, said t was a tense situation. So s taping his initial automo- reports for WJR Radio, fac- z Sen. Edmund Muskie's bcommittee on Air and Wa- r Pollution and serving as tipper of a small craft in the venth wave in the 1944 inva- on of Normandy.

gess, the fact that Callahan and his wife, Halina, were mov- ing from a five-bedroom Colo- nial in Grosse Pointe Woods to a two-bedroom ranch on Lake- shore Drive in the Shores played a role in its timing. The scripts of his radio broadcasts alone will provide valuable in- sight into the development of the auto industry in the last two decades.

"I've always been very indus- try-oriented," Callahan said. "Many auto writers are more interested in product and in writing about various cars and trucks. I found the industry and its people fascinating."

Callahan has known many of those leaders personally. He speaks with ease about John DeLorean and Pete Estes, Lee Iacocca and Don Petersen, Ed Cole and Bob Stempel. Roger B. Smith, who preceded Stem- ple as chairman of General Motors, showed up at Callahan's retirement party from Auto- motive Industries, he said.

His appearance before the Muskie subcommittee back in 1966 turned out to be anti- climactic, he says. Calahan had written an extensive series for Automotive News called "The Billion-Dollar Hoax" — his perception of the growing demand for emissions controls on cars and trucks. "I still believe it wasn't necessary," he said. "I think I was right."

The Muskie subcommittee came to Detroit to gather testi- mony and Callahan, along with auto industry leaders, was "in- vited" to appear before the aus- tere assembly.

"I really felt betrayed when the guys from the Big Three turned the tables and began agreeing with the senators that something should be done about the pollution caused by cars," he said. "But I said my piece anyway, and began to sense Senator Muskie was quite uninterested in the whole affair."

Now an editor-at-large for the monthly publication Auto- motive Industries, Callahan continues to attend press con- ferences and keep current. He regularly plays tennis with au- tomotive friends, indulges in bridge and admits that his golf- ing days were due less to a love of the sport than a chance to socialize.

In addition, he and Halina, a teacher at Columbus Middle School in Detroit, have traveled far and wide over the past three decades. Their next trips should include Costa Rica and Africa — probably South Africa, he said.

Callahan said he prefers to do his own driving when he travels, though not being in a group can pose some problems. Once when trying to exit Czechoslovakia, he said, he was detained for a couple of hours and questioned by the police. It seems he had sold American dollars for local currency and was leaving the country with more money (technically, any- way) than he had brought in.

"That was another time I was scared!" he said with a laugh.

While the Callahans live out of boxes and do without a kitchen sink as they move into, decorate and remodel their new home, their animals already are comfortably scattered through the yard and gardens. These friendly plaster beasts keep company with the blue jays and squirrels who stop by for a drink from an elaborate bird bath.

When he's not working on a story, or down at the National Automotive History Collection, Callahan is getting acquainted with the trees, shrubs and plants that surround his new castle.

"I spent all morning trim- ming trees in the front yard, and you can't tell to look at them," he said.

Active in the Detroit Execu- tive Service Corps, Callahan is enthusiastic about the develop- ment of mentoring programs around the city. Young people, especially boys, need adults to follow, he said. Suburban men are assuming a parental inter- est in these youths. "We try to make it a one-to-one contact," he said.

The Callahans' immediate family includes daughter Carol, a buyer with Ford Motor Co. in Dearborn, and son Chris, an at- torney specializing in interna- tional trade in Washington, D.C.

"I will say that I'm con- cerned about the future of the U.S. auto industry," said the reporter who uses a word pro- cessor and an electric type- writer, with an old manual model for back-up. "It is the basis of our economy."

Then he launches into a de- scription of automatic night vision, a futuristic kind of system for drivers based on thermal imaging. It "sees" through fog, rain, dust and darkness, he explained.

"GM hopes to offer it in some vehicles for perhaps as low as $1,000 by '94 or '95," he said.

SINCERE VOTE OF THANKS!

To the many voters who supported me for the School Board of Trustees Election

Congratulations to Gloria Konsler and Frank Slater

Now serving: Freezing surf 'n' turf

By Pat Paholsky
Editor

John Held was in the army stationed in Germany when he got the idea.

It was the mid-'50s and skiing, which had not yet captured America's interest, was a way of life for many Europeans. He saw people flocking to the train stations on the weekends with their equipment and figured it was a matter of time before Americans caught the fever.

Before he went into the service, Held was selling skis in his father's store, City Sport Shop in Mount Clemens. When he returned to civilian life, he decided to open a store specializing in skiing and golf equipment.

It was a departure from the traditional sporting goods store — fishing tackle and baseball equipment — of the time. He opened Held's Sporting Goods, two doors from his father's store, in 1958. In 1960, he leased a larger building in Mount Clemens and opened Bavarian Village.

"Golf was growing and skiing was growing and we were a small business," he said. "We didn't have the finances to concentrate on both."

At the time, men, women and children were buying ski equipment and clothing, while golf was primarily an equipment-only business dominated by men. Skiing offered more opportunity, Held decided.

The business grew and today there are 13 stores throughout Michigan. Bavarian Village sells 2 percent of the skiing equipment in the country, according to son Richard Held, vice president of advertising.

And now the business is returning to the original concept of ski and golf. Until last spring, the stores were closed from April until July.

"We felt the need, the desire to maximize the potential to be year-round," the younger Held said.

The golf market is about seven times larger than the skiing market, said Held, who earned a degree in advertising from Michigan State University in 1985. About 70 percent of skiers golf, he said, although the reverse is not true.

Six of the 13 stores have begun selling golf equipment — Grosse Pointe, Bloomfield Hills, Mount Clemens, Novi, Dearborn Heights and Grand Rapids. Plans are to convert all the stores to ski and golf shops, he said.

In October, Bavarian Village moved from a 2,300 square-foot outlet in East Detroit to an 8,500-square-foot store at 19435 Mack in the Woods.

The floor space comprises seven sections, making it easier to merchandise its stock, with women's clothing and equipment in several sections, for instance, golf shoes in another and skis and boots in another.

Currently, 80 percent of the store is devoted to golf and 20 percent to skiing. During the winter, the figures are the opposite.

The original concept of red shag carpeting and paneling on the walls and wood shingles has given way to gray carpeting with white walls to accent the increasingly colorful ski boots and other equipment, Held said.

Bavarian Village hopes to find its niche in the golf industry by providing a wide range of prices. "We sell from the low end to the high end, $39 to $169 for shoes," Held said. "We will offer the whole selection." Store manager Rich Attee said the Grosse Pointe store offers 150 sets of golf clubs, 300 putters, 300 bags, 1,000 packages of golf balls and "every accessory available you can think of," from videos to books to water coolers.

Golf shirts range in price from $21.95 to $110. There are about 50 sets of clubs available for women as well as some for children, including a left-handed junior set. The store also carries left-handed sets for men and women.

The Grosse Pointe store is involved in a summer promotion with WJR, offering trips to northern Michigan resorts to play golf with a celebrity and to win a bag and clubs. The third trip in a series of four will be to Shanty Creek on July 17. People can register at the store; no purchase is necessary.

Bavarian Village moved to the former Scott Shuptrine store on Mack last October.

Store hours are 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. Monday through Friday; 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. on Saturday; and noon to 5 p.m. on Sunday. The phone number is 885-0300.

Despite the firm's growth — up to 400 employees to staff the stores during the Christmas season — Bavarian Village is still a family business. John Held is chief executive officer, his brother, Jim, is president in charge of operations, and sons Richard and James are vice presidents, with James running the golf division and Richard handling the advertising, marketing and promotion.

A comfortable area in the center of the Grosse Pointe store allows a shopper (or spouse) to relax. Richard Held makes himself at home.

Tax deductions for business travelers can help offset cost

Whether you're an employee or work on your own, business travel comes with a hefty price tag. If traveling across the country or even around your state as a necessary part of your business, you are entitled to some tax deductions that can help offset your expenses.

Be aware that travel expenses of employees are subject to different rules than travel expenses of those who are self-employed. Unreimbursed employee travel expenses are considered miscellaneous expenses and as such, are only partially deductible.

If you are an employee, you may deduct only those unreimbursed expenses that together with other miscellaneous expenses exceed two percent of your adjusted gross income. This restriction does not apply if you are self-employed.

Business trip deductions

Most expenses incurred on a business trip away from your business home are tax-deductible, depending on the length of your stay. These include transportation costs, such as rail or airline tickets, cab fares, automobile expenses, meals, lodging, laundry, tips, telephone charges and fax charges. The cost of taking a spouse along on a business trip is not deductible unless it can be shown that the presence of the spouse serves a bona fide business purpose.

On one-day business trips within the general area of your employment, you may not deduct the costs of lodging or meals, unless you are working with a client during that meal. Meals and lodging are generally tax-deductible on a business trip that requires an overnight stay.

Meal costs

Even if you meet the overnight tests for meal costs, tax law limits the deduction of meal costs to 80 percent of the actual cost. This rule applies whether you are eating alone on your trip or entertaining a client.

If you didn't keep accurate records of meal costs on your business trips, you can claim the standard federal meal and incidental expenses (M & IE) rate. For travel within the continental United States, the daily meal allowance is generally $26. In high-cost areas specified by the IRS, the meal allowance is $34.

Automobile expenses

If you travel by car on most of your business trips, you may claim either the statutory rate of 28 cents per mile or the actual expenses incurred. Actual expenses include costs for oil and gas, parking fees, repairs, insurance and tolls. To verify your deductions for these types of expenses, make sure you maintain accurate records.

You cannot take a deduction for the expenses of driving to and from your regular place of business. If you work two jobs, the IRS will allow you to deduct the costs of commuting between the jobs, as long as you don't stop home to have a meal before you go to your second job.

Conventions

To deduct expenses associated with attending a convention, you must demonstrate that the convention was connected with your business or may help to benefit or enhance your position. Legitimate expenses include the cost of traveling to and from the convention, lodging, tips, and even room costs for product exhibitions. In most cases, you may not claim deductions for a spouse traveling with you to a convention, nor can you claim deductions for recreational expenses.

Business/vacation trips

If you travel to a three-day convention, and spend another four days vacationing, expenses incurred during that vacation time are not tax-deductible. However, you can deduct the costs of your transportation to and from the resort, your lodging, and 80 percent of meal costs as long as the main purpose of the trip was to conduct business.

The rules in this area are strict. According to the Michigan Association of CPAs, the best way to ensure that you get the deductions you deserve is by keeping a diary of all your business related travel expenses.

Eyes on the Classics' focuses on automotive design

By Margie Reins Smith
Feature Editor

The fifth annual Eyes on the Classics auto show will take a look at automotive design from the front and rear as well as what's in between.

The benefit for the Detroit Institute of Ophthalmology will be held from 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Sunday, June 28 on the grounds of the Edsel & Eleanor Ford estate in Grosse Pointe Shores.

Eyes on the Classics is the only automotive show dedicated exclusively to the art of automobile design — past, present and future.

All vehicles in the show are by invitation only.

Approximately 200 privately owned antique, sports and specialty vehicles will be displayed, including concept vehicles from ASC Inc., Chrysler, Ford and General Motors.

In addition, more than 100 pieces of original artwork by automotive designers and automotive design students from the Center for Creative Studies and the Art Center College of Design in Pasadena, Calif., will be on display.

There will also be a raffle and an appearance by race driver Jackie Stewart, three-time Formula One world champion.

The 1992 Eyes on the Classics honorary chairman is Grosse Pointer Edsel B. Ford II, Ford Motor Credit Co. president and great-grandson of Henry Ford, founder of Ford Motor Co.

The position of design chairman is rotated each year among Big Three design vice presidents. Jack J. Telnack, Ford Motor Co. vice president-design, holds the honor this year.

A panel of auto designers will select the Best of Show vehicle and present awards designed by glass sculptor Herbert W. Babcock to three vehicles in each of 14 classes of competition.

The public will select the People's Choice Award. And vice presidents for design at Ford, Chrysler and GM will present awards for exceptional design to three vehicles and specialty vehicles.

There will be awards for eight traditional classes of vehicles: American style, prewar; American style, postwar; European style; racing cars; commercial vehicles; unique design solutions; honored marque; and honored designer.

Six innovative classes have been added for the first time this year: wonderful wagons (cars showing the design evolution of the station wagon); unusual doors (cars featuring unusual door designs); automotive animals (cars named after animals); famous faces (popular automotive front-end designs); tremendous tails (cars known for their rear-end designs); and American custom (customized cars displaying native American design talent).

Sir William Lyons, founder of Jaguar, will be honored with a Posthumous Award for Lifetime Automotive Design Achievement at Vision Honored, a black-tie awards banquet to be held Saturday, June 27, at Masco's corporate headquarters in Taylor.

All proceeds will benefit the DIO, a non-profit agency that conducts vision health programs.

Admission is $10.

A Private Eyes brunch will be held from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. Reservations are necessary for the brunch.

Awards presentations will begin at 2 p.m. For more information, call 824-5554.

Photographer Baltazar Korab provided the artwork for the 1992 Eyes on the Classics poster, left. The poster is available for $10.

Below, Dr. Philip Hessburg, president of the DIO, James Quinlan, owner of the 1932 Packard Dual Cowl Phaeton Twin-Six featured on the poster, and Judi Dara, executive director of the DIO, look over a vintage automobile, one of more than 200 examples of excellence in automotive design to be featured at the annual auto show.

What is the DIO?

The Detroit Institute of Ophthalmology is a non-profit organization dedicated to preserving eyesight of people in the metropolitan Detroit area.

Three staff members and more than 100 volunteers offer educational programs, support services and referrals for visually impaired clients and their families.

The DIO reaches 5,000 people every year.

The 15-member board of directors is headed by Dr. Philip C. Hessburg. Charlotte Rusek is president of the Friends of Vision. Judi Dara is executive administrator of the DIO.

Gardening beats sports as popular outdoor activity

National Geographic News Service

Good for the body, good for the soul, gardening is America's most popular outdoor leisure activity.

Members of 80 percent of the nation's 93.3 million households believe that gardening is unrivaled as a form of relaxation, according to a survey by the National Gardening Association.

"Americans by far prefer to bring a peony to exquisite bloom or a golden summer squash to sweetness of flesh than to play golf, catch fish, or go camping and wish on falling stars," assistant editor — and gardener — William S. Ellis writes in the current National Geographic.

Americans spend more each year on gardens than on pizzas. "In 1990, retail sales of lawn and garden materials amounted to more than $20 billion," says Bruce Butterfield, the gardening association's research director. "Six years ago, the figure was $14.2 billion. Sales are increasing 10 percent a year."

Economic uncertainties may play some role in the surge. Vern Grubinger, an agricultural extension agent in Brattleboro, Vt., thinks many people grow their own vegetables as a hedge against financial hardships. "A gardener can save a couple of hundred dollars in food costs that way," he says.

For whatever other reasons, Ellis writes, gardening has prospered because it has reached out to tap into the vast pool of baby-boomers, the generally well-educated and health-conscious men and women who were born in the two decades following World War II.

Ed Perlman of Washington, D.C., comes from that generation. Skillful at growing plants in containers, he prepares such exotica as pelargonium topiaries, a type of geranium, for Christmas decorations.

It takes time, he says, and that is the way it must be: "The worth of a garden and a person as a gardener cannot be judged in a season or even two seasons. It takes years."

Another gardener who has plenty of time is Sam John Passarella, a Tennessee prison inmate in his mid-40s who is not scheduled for release until 2013. "I don't even care that much about getting out as long as I can continue to work with flowers, especially roses," he says.

The concept of calming a person through gardening is not new in the United States and is even older in England.

"It has long been known," Ellis writes, "that being around plants can be of significant benefit to the physically and mentally disabled and to older persons and inner-city youngsters turned surly."

Gardeners in America show a rising interest in heritage plants and seeds.

Among the most fervent protectors of that heritage are Kent and Diane Whealy of Decorah, Iowa. Their business is saving the seeds of vegetables grown in the United States before hybridization was started by large commercial growers — "before the ethylene-gassed market tomatoes put a grimace on the face of America," Ellis writes.

Of the great number of vegetable varieties available in the United States at the turn of the century, more than 80 percent have been abandoned.

Even so, in places such as eastern Pennsylvania the tradition of gardening remains strong. Near Malvern, Pa., Joanna Reed, 75, maintains a 50-year-old country garden of flowers, shrubs and trees on a farm called Longview.

"So much happens on its own in this garden," says Reed, who may walk some 18 miles in a day tending her plants. "It's not an inanimate object. It's not like a painting even. When you stop painting and go back to it, it's right where you left it. But you go back to your garden and you find it's moved on, you know. It's developed on its own."

Many U.S. gardeners today are making a statement of environmental concern. Americans use 69 million pounds of pesticides on their gardens and in their homes each year. But the trend is to organic gardening and biodegradable materials.

Ann Lovejoy, a gardening writer, tells Ellis that she never uses chemicals in her garden in Washington state: "If something is so sick that you need chemicals, throw it away. What sense does it make to poison something to grow something else?"

For the hundreds of thousands of Americans who have turned to it, gardening doesn't end with the coming of winter. There are catalogs to be read, from which eight million households placed orders in 1990.

Paul Hawken runs an expanding California company that sells gardening tools. He expects the rage to plant will continue with the aging of the baby-boomers.

So does Ellis. He writes: "They're north and south, east and west, everywhere there's earth to grow, ... digging like there's no tomorrow."

The loss of his legs to circulation problems doesn't stop Eugene Braden from tending his cabbage in Ypsilanti. Scientists note that stress levels rise and fall in relation to proximity of plants. One study found that hospital patients in rooms with views of outside greenery recovered more quickly than other patients.

American Red Cross is beneficiary of Prix-race fundraiser

A kickoff party at the Detroit Yacht Club before the Grand Prix raised a little over $12,000 for the American Red Cross.

Organizers were Grosse Pointers John Conn and Michael Schoenith and the party was designed to attract young professional people, according to Conn.

It did. About 250 Yuppies showed up.

"We were surprised we did so well," Conn said. "We were a very young committee. Of 22 people, the majority were between the ages of 21 and 28. Most of them had never done a benefit before."

The event included appearances by radio personalities, silent and live auctions, a mini grand prix car race by the Detroit Radio Control Car Club and a fashion show.

How to prevent head injuries this summer

"In the United States alone, one million children and youths sustain traumatic brain injuries each year," says Nancy Bloch, director of speech and language pathology at St. John Hospital-Macomb Center. Bloch advocates protective gear and visible outerwear for children and adults who are biking, rollerblading or jogging this summer. The possible consequences of not buckling a seat belt or donning a helmet are too great.

"When someone sustains a traumatic brain injury, given that they survive it, they can be in a coma, all the way up to living a relatively normal lifestyle, but they may note problems in their memory, their attention, in their ability to organize and sequence information. And these things are very important for a child who is going through the school system," she says.

Bloch says that we need to raise awareness of safety issues through PTA and neighborhood groups, with local authorities who often develop safety ordinances, and in the home, by teaching strategies to children on how to avoid risks.

"Rehearse with your children how they might react if a car pulls out in front of them or if they see a big pothole. Teach them to be more aware of their surroundings," she says.

"Visibility is a definite must. Neon-colored clothing and reflector tape at night are paramount. Neon-colored accessories, such as water bottles and back packs and even flags - I'm a firm believer that these kids should have flags on their bikes. Light sources at night are also very important."

Bloch recommends that bicycle helmets be worn by both children and adults. Youngsters may benefit from bells or horns on their bikes. A bicycle mirror can help you see better when you ride in the street.

For a free handout on how to prevent head injuries this summer, call 1-800-237-5646.

BRIDGE BY WOODY BOYD

I arrived a minute after eight and too late to play in Judy and Dave Buskirk's Saturday evening duplicate soiree recently, so Dave suggested I might enjoy a spectators seat at table sixteen where Mike Brown was playing south. Mike is one of our seldom seen perennial players who has a long standing record for good play. He had arrived unannounced looking for a game and Dave did the best he could under the circumstances. It was readily evident in only a moment or so that the pic-up partner wasn't up to it, but the infrequent vested visitor was a gentleman and his play was well worth observing.

The fifty-two for today came from that game and if you enjoy reading about it as much as I did witnessing this comical phenomena, I will be cheered.

A cunning declarer can turn misfortune to gold if the situation is right. Of course, the defense must be induced to go along with the gag otherwise, "The gig is up," as the English say. (See diagram at right)

When North in a flash passed Mike's four heart fragment, declarer never flinched much less showed any emotion and his manner on this one convinced me he was an experienced performer. His bid, a splinter or fragment, call it whatever, was intended to tell partner he had a singleton heart and a magnificent club fit, but at that moment North gave it no thought. Actually if he had, even the most modest player would have concluded that after originally passing and then only raising diamonds, it was impossible for South to have a heart suit much less a game in the major reds. If that had been the case, he would have immediately bid hearts over diamonds. Later North apologetically admitted as much. As you can see, five clubs was the favorite contract of the field and as the cards are a club slam was on, but it couldn't be bid.

In the four/one heart fit, South had a monstrous problem, but watch how he distinguished his administration.

He ducked the heart jack and the ten when it was continued. Shock followed when declarer pitched the spade ten on the second heart. It wasn't yet too late for East to beat the contract by leading a low spade, but he was obviously reluctant to lead away from his king and blindly continued with a third heart which was won by dummy's king. 4, Mike played a low club from dummy and when East played his queen, he won the ace. Now a low diamond to dummy's queen and when that won he was nearly home. 6, The heart ace confirmed the outcard four/four break and at 7 The club jack to East's king and that was the defenses last trick. In all he won a spade, two trumps, two diamonds and five clubs fulfilling a rather unusual contract.

Carpal tunnel syndrome patients get relief from surgical procedure

When the familiar pain and numbness began occurring in Marilyn Tobeler's left hand, she recognized it as carpal tunnel syndrome — a condition corrected by surgery on her right hand five years before.

This time, however, the Grosse Pointe Woods resident was pleasantly surprised to learn that the problem, which is aggravated by repetitive motion of the hands, can now be corrected with less pain, less recovery time and less scarring — through endoscopic surgery instead of traditional open surgery.

"When I contacted Dr. Miguel Lorenzini, the hand surgeon who did my previous (traditional) surgery, he told me he would be performing the new endoscopic procedure at Bon Secours Hospital, starting in March. I was relieved to be able to have the new method performed that quickly," Tobeler said.

Three days after her outpatient surgery, she was well on the road to recovery.

"I can already pick up light objects such as paper with my thumb and index finger. My recovery is going much better and faster this time. When I had my first surgery, my hand was in a removable cast up to my elbow for three weeks and I couldn't pick anything up for about two weeks after the cast was removed," she said.

She added that scarring would be minimal this time, compared to her first surgery which resulted in a long surgery line along the folds of her right palm.

"This time, I only have two small incisions and have only taken one pain pill since the surgery," Tobeler said.

"More and more patients are becoming attracted to this new procedure due to the minimized scarring, pain and swelling," Lorenzini said. "The endoscopic surgery provides pretty much total relief from carpal tunnel symptoms immediately after the operation. Patients may return to work within one week after the procedure as compared to a four-to-six week re-

Trio aims its Longbow at the moon, scores two bullseyes

By Ronald J. Bernas
Staff Writer

This summer people will be talking about Longbow Productions.

The fledgling film company will unveil two of the summer's most talked about offerings beginning June 20 when HBO presents "A Private Matter," the true story of the Finkbines, a couple who learns their new baby will probably have serious birth defects because the expectant mother used Thalidomide.

The drama unfolds as her request for an abortion draws national attention.

In a much lighter vein, "A League of Their Own," which opens at theaters in July, will show what life was like for two sisters who played for an all-woman professional baseball team in the early 40s. The film was directed by Penny Marshall and stars Geena Davis, Tom Hanks and Madonna.

Two of the three men who are Longbow make up Ronnie Clemmer, former local newscaster and host of Detroit's "P.M. Magazine"; and Bill Pace, former local news reporter and award-winning producer and documentary maker.

They had a dream of forming a production company that would produce quality films.

Pace and Clemmer met local entrepreneur Richard P. Kughn when they did a story on his classic car collection for "P.M. Magazine." They respected him and his business sense and approached him with their idea.

That was nearly five years ago. Since then they've gone from their first tiny offices, on the second floor of a flat that had a fraction for an address, to office suites with whole numbers.

They've also had some success, although it has been slow in coming.

When they moved to California with no contacts, they knew they were taking a long-shot. In fact, they didn't even have a company name — Longbow is the name of a street near their first offices.

But they had the idea for "A Private Matter" — it came from a news article looking back at the Finkbine story on its 25th anniversary.

"I was fascinated by the story," Clemmer said. "People say, 'you picked a good issue,' and we say that we picked a good story. They say it's timely, but we picked it five years ago."

They negotiated the rights for the story with Sherri Finkbine, the woman whose private decision sparked a national debate. Although 30 production companies approached Finkbine for the rights to her story, Longbow, without a film under its belt at the time, was chosen.

"I really think she picked us because we were Hollywood outsiders," Pace said. "Sometimes it does help being an outsider."

But as soon as they got to Hollywood, the rights to a hot story in their hands, the screenwriters went on strike.

"We have impeccable timing," Clemmer said.

They found a writer with the help of HBO which, at the time, was trying to establish a reputation as a producer of high quality films about socially relevant topics.

Despite an excellent script and backing by HBO, the film was put into turnaround. That's movie jargon for dead in the water. The two other projects they were working on, a television movie and "A League of Their Own," were also put into turnaround.

Pace and Clemmer credit Kughn with keeping faith in them and their projects and not giving up.

"The three 'P's' are patience, perseverance and passion. The process is arduous," Clemmer said. "The odds are 1,000 to 1 that a project idea will make it to the air. We never knew how difficult it would be and that's why you have to really believe in your project. We believe in our projects."

"And we believe that quality attracts quality," Pace said. "And that's how we got Sissy Spacek interested in 'A Private Matter.'" The film also stars Aidan Quinn and its executive producer is Sydney Pollack, who produced and directed "Out of Africa" and "Tootsie."

They believe in their stories so much they work in network television, cable television and feature films, an unusual thing in Hollywood.

"There are people who won't work in feature films because it takes too long, and there are others who won't work in television," Pace said. "We want to go where we can get our stories told."

Their first completed project

Bill Pace, Richard Kughn and Ronnie Clemmer are Longbow Productions. They developed HBO's "A Private Matter" which begins airing on June 20, and "A League of Their Own," a new comedy starring Geena Davis and Tom Hanks that opens at area theaters next month.

Most of Longbow's work is factually based, probably because Pace and Clemmer have a background in news and documentaries. But they have a few fictional films in the works.

"But we don't pick the story because of an issue," Clemmer said. "The story, for us, is how people react in a crisis. The issue is just the way of examining interesting people."

Longbow has more than 20 films in various stages of production for cable and network television and the theater. But it won't necessarily be any easier to get their next project completed despite three successful projects.

"We will have the credibility of having films — quality films — to show what we've done," Pace said. "But it's never easy to get a project done."

"But it's a moonshot getting anything made," Clemmer said. "Everything has to line up at exactly the right moment."

"Running a production company is kind of like being a chef and making a big meal. You know you have the sauce simmering on the burner, but you've got to be cutting and chopping over there so you have to leave that alone. But you know it will all come together at the same time."

Stratford finds winner in 'Love's Labour's Lost'

By Alex Sucek
Special Writer

Stratford's third Shakespearean offering this season, "Love's Labour's Lost," was the poet's first attempt at pure comedy. It is revived regularly because it is very amusing and has a poetical, pastoral freshness (suggesting Shakespeare's nostalgia for his youth in the Stratford countryside) that makes it especially appealing. But it is also an outstanding are entertainingly farcical, dealing cleverly with the age-old repartee between male and female that Shakespeare later developed to a high art in "Taming of the Shrew" and Beatrice and Benedick's famous wordplay in "Much Ado About Nothing." And this is the aspect of the play that is usually brought out in the typical professional production.

Stratford's remarkably skilled and talented team does this, too, exceedingly well. But they also make accessible to their modern audience one of the most exciting features of Elizabethan life and Shakespeare's work — the exploration of the richness and expressive power of the English language. It opens the door to a whole new appreciation of Shakespearean wit, humor, and artistry.

The action is mostly verbal and the sparks fly because the play is essentially a play on words. In that regard, this performance succeeds as few others have in making the tongue-twists and fancies of Elizabethan wordplay not only clear, but significant and truly funny to a 20th century audience.

The wordplay, in fact, provides an underlying theme for the play — the perpetual conflict between university erudition and natural talent — which was a popular Elizabethan topic. Just as today, they liked to poke fun at the pompous.

When Diego Matamoros as the Prince of Navarre opens debate on the pros and cons of cutting themselves off for three years of study, the somewhat fatuous rationalizations, couched in rich puns and allusions, are both laughable and familiar. With him, Colm Feore as Berowne, Paul Miller as Longaville and Jeffrey Kuhn as Dumaine are engagingly vain and clumsy in their attempts to woo the ladies.

And the ladies always manage to get the upper hand. What a charming and wily quartet they are, led by Lucy Peacock as the Princess of France. Whoever said Shakespeare downplayed the roles and abilities of women must never have taken a really thoughtful look at this play. Alison Sealy-Smith, Michelle Fisk and Claire Rankin are archly articulate as they strategize circles around their fumbling suitors.

Then there is the supporting quartet providing wonderful satiric caricatures and indulging in every form of wordy pretension. Peter Donaldson creates a fabulous caricature of the seedy, military retiree Don Armado, the "fantastical Spaniard" with his affected manner and flowery language; William Needles is a countrified, pontifical Nathaniel the preacher trying to compete with him; Douglas Rain's Holofernes the schoolmaster affects superior intellectual airs and lectures on rhetoric and Italian quotations; and they are put in perspective by the pithy commentary of William Vicker's Costard. They do it all so well that the centuries' gap dissolves as these stuffy caricatures quickly become recognizable as types we, too, have known. In other words, putting down the pretentious is as much fun today as it was in Shakespeare's day.

The play is fun for its story alone and this production is a delightful romp, but the rich dividend of superb delivery makes it a rare opportunity to enjoy clever, well-spoken repartee as it is rarely heard anywhere in public or private.

"Love's Labour's Lost" plays in repertory on Stratford's Festival stage through October 18. Accommodations and ticket information is available by calling (313) 964-4668 or (800) 567-1600.

Special Writer

In "Hunt for Red October," the blockbuster film adaptation of Tom Clancy's high-tech submarine thriller, the action centered on the threat of a nuclear holocaust. It starred Alex Baldwin as the renegade CIA ana-tacked on the street by one of Miller's group, he knows that he and his family are in danger.

Miller has set up a carefully staged plot against Ryan to avenge his brother's death; it begins in London, takes him to Maryland, to a Libyan terrorist camp and back across the Atlantic.

The next day Ryan re-enlists in the CIA. With the help of administrator James Green (James Earl Jones) he is put through an intensive course on terrorism before he leaves for Ireland to hunt down Miller.

He doesn't have much luck. "We don't inform on our own people," he is told by IRA head honcho, Paddy O'Neill (Richard Harris). In the chilling final confrontation, the terrorists crash a family party attended by the Prince of Wales.

It is a Hitchcockian scene that ends with a speedboat race and a final, fierce struggle. "Patriot Games" intersperses breathtaking episodes with segments showing happy family life which accents the film's main point — that this is a way of life worth preserving.

An able supporting cast includes James Fox as Ryan's royal cousin; Patrick Bergen as Kevin O'Donnell, who stands out as the cold, mastermind of the terrorist attacks; David Durrell as Miller's captor, and Polly Walker as Annette, who pursues her deadly game with glee. Samuel Jackson provides comic relief as Robby, Ryan's naval academy buddy.

All of this is bound together by Ford as Jack Ryan, playing the stalwart and playful father, loving and concerned husband and angry vigilante. Beam, as the terrorist is the embodiment of evil and hatred.

Directed by Australia's Philip Noyce, "Patriot Games" is loaded with action, suspense, sophisticated modern technology, first-rate cinematography and an opportunity to visit a family where love reigns supreme.

lyst, Jack Ryan.

In "Patriot Games," Harrison Ford takes over that role and faces a more personal problem. A small rogue faction of the Irish Republican Army is threatening his family and in a larger sense the American way of life.

The story begins in Britain where Ryan, now officially retired from the CIA and teaching history at Annapolis, is on a working holiday. He is there with his wife, Cathy (Ann Archer), an eye surgeon, and his young daughter Sally (Thora Birch). He innocently stumbles upon a group of masked men attempting to kidnap a member of the royal family. Braving gunfire, he kills one of the masked men and foils the kidnap attempt.

It turns out that the terrorists are a radical fringe group that has broken off from the Irish Republican Army. One of them, Sean Miller (Sean Bean), is the brother of the slain terrorist. As he is led away, he locks eyes with Ryan. A world of hate is in that gaze. Ryan returns a look that delivers a silent message: "Don't mess with me." It is a telling scene that sets the stage for the action that follows.

When word comes that Miller has escaped from prison, Ryan is not worried; after all, terrorism hasn't hit U.S. shores. But when he is at-demonstration of the Elizabethans' creative use of English that this production brings out to a rare and exceedingly funny degree.

The plot is simple: The Prince of Navarre, dizzy with intellectual and literary aspirations, persuades his buddies to join him in an "academy" of study in his castle, to which no women or other frivolous distractions will be admitted.

Their pact is immediately threatened, however, by the arrival of the French princess and her three enticing ladies who tempt the newly ascetic scholars. The men, of course, lose their hearts, make fools of themselves, break their oath of study and celibacy and generally make a lot of very funny conversation about it. They also dress up as Russian Cossack dancers to call on the ladies incognito and again, have the tables turned on them.

Middle Eastern cuisine will spice up your palate

A cookbook containing a collection of traditional middle eastern Arabic recipes has been contributed and compiled by the women and mothers of St. George Antiochian Orthodox Church, located on East Grand Boulevard in Detroit.

The recipes have been carefully tested and thoughtfully evaluated and edited by a committee composed of Mary Coosa, Judy Samra, Irene Green, Yvonne Holwey, Mary Jan McCoul and Sally A. Ruffin. Ruffin also compiled, edited and designed the cookbook. The proceeds from the book will benefit the new St. George Antiochian Orthodox Church building fund.

Arabic cuisine is fragrant with herbs such as mint, allspice, anise, basil, cinnamon, cumin, fennel, garlic and sesame seeds. Many of the recipes will have titles and herbs and spices in Arabic with English translations to make it easy for the reader. Parsley, mint, lamb, pine nuts, eggplant, chickpeas, yogurt, okra, and bursal are many of the ingredients that make this cuis-

The appetizers (mahza) include baba gannough (eggplant appetizer dip), hummos bi-tahini (chickpeas with sesame paste), matoblee (lamb tartar) and more. Hearty lentil- and yogurt-based soups are featured.

The salad section has tabooley, hommus, foul moudammas (fava bean salad) among others. I tried the fava bean salad and found it delicious. The entree section has over 38 traditional recipes featuring chicken, lamb and beef. Included are traditional dishes such as bamee (okra with lamb), coosa mahshi (stuffed squash) and coosa mahshi stuffing and warak areesh (stuffed grape leaves).

There are also sections titled: Vegetarian Lenten, Breads, Dairy, Miscellaneous and Helpful Hints.

To order Middle Eastern Cuisine send $10 per book plus $2 for shipping and handling to: St. George Antiochian Orthodox Church, 2760 East Grand Blvd., Detroit, Mich. 48211. Middle Eastern Cuisine

Art's on the move in Detroit from June 22-24

Art On The Move, an artist residency program co-sponsored by the Grand Circus Park Development Association and the Detroit Recreation Department, is coming to the Grand Circus Park area.

The four sculptural installations, each one unique and exciting, may be viewed June 22-24. The artists who created them will be in attendance on the evening of June 22 and at noon the other two days.

The residency program, in its seventh year, is designed to challenge Michigan artists to experiment with large-scale, temporary art for public places.

Detroiter Sandra Budd has designed "The Third Rail," which will be installed at the corner of Woodward and Columbia, across from the Fox Theater. A twelve-foot central pole supports four arms which revolve, pulling metal tines through the dark- and light-colored sand sections of the base. Passersby will be invited to turn the arms of the sculpture, intermixing the sand in ever-changing patterns.

"Journey" is the title of a ten-foot-long, ship-like structure created by Kyoung Ae Cho of Birmingham. The piece, which will be installed in the green space between the Fox and State theaters, is made of gathered materials and shredded printed text bound together with wire. It represents the journey of life and hope for the possibilities of the future.

Grand Circus Park East will be the site of "Blaim," an oversized target-shaped sculpture built by Berkeley resident Robert Neilson. The piece, fashioned of painted recycled tires, is meant to represent the violence associated with firearms. A further dimension is added to the work by taped quotations from the landmark "Plessy vs. Ferguson" Supreme Court case.

Long, helium-filled tubes will float skyward from the Edison fountain in Grand Circus Park West. Entitled "Detroitscape '92," the large, inflatable sculpture uses light and motion to express the renewed creative impulse of Detroit. Kalamazoo artist Lou Rizzolo has installed exciting multi-media work all over the world.

Cooperating with the Grand Circus Park Development Association and the Detroit Recreation Department in presenting the residencies are the Michigan Council for Arts and Cultural Affairs, The Arts Foundation of Michigan, The Arts Extended Gallery, the David Whitney Building and the Metro Times.

A Gallery Exhibit at the Arts Extended Gallery on the second floor of the David Whitney Building, 1553 Woodward Avenue in Detroit, will showcase additional studio artwork by the four resident artists, as well as the proposal boards submitted by all 34 entrants to this year's contest. The exhibit, curated by MaryAnn Wilkinson of the Detroit Institute of Arts, will run through June 27, Wednesdays through Saturdays from noon to 5 p.m.

The exhibit will also be open from 5:30 to 9:30 p.m. on June 22 during the Grand Circus Park Development Association's Spotlight Tour of the theater district.

For more information on Art On The Move, call Nancy Henk at the Detroit Recreation Department, 224-1184.

Founded in 1956 by Robert Joffrey and Arpino, The Joffrey is now in its 35th year.

Summer Shakespeare season begins June 26

Summer Shakespeare, an outreach program of Richmond Community Theatre, begins its third season.

Once again audiences will be romanced under the stars by Shakespeare's witty words as this summer, "As You Like It" is set in an exotic Moroccan oasis. The comedy is filled with mistaken identities, villains, clowns, and, of course, lovers. It opens at Stoney Creek Metropolitan's Eastwood Beach on Friday, June 26 at 8 p.m. and will run every weekend through Sunday, July 19. All shows are at 8 p.m.

Tickets are $10 for adults and $8 for seniors and students. There is a $2 park admission fee. For ticket information contact 1-800-47-PARKS or Richmond Community Theatre at 313-727-9518.

Look for upcoming information on Summer Shakespeare's second show, "Kismet," a musical about the fateful search for love and happiness, which opens July 24.

Summer Shakespeare is supported in part by the Michigan Council for the Arts as well as the Macomb Arts Council.

Travel Trends

By Cynthia Boal Janssens

B&Bs provide the comforts of home somewhere else

There are some reference materials that are invaluable to the inquisitive traveler. For inquisitive travelers in this area, I recommend the 1992 directory, "Lake to Lake Bed & Breakfast in Michigan."

I can well remember not so many years ago when bed and breakfasts were still very new in the United States, although they were very popular in Europe. When I wrote my first feature article about them, I found less than 10 in the entire state.

This year the guide lists 225 B&Bs in both the Upper and Lower peninsulas of Michigan. Arranged alphabetically by city, the directory includes rates, number of rooms, seasons of operation, amenities and nearby attractions.

A map in the center shows the locations represented. Many are open year-round. And there is lots of variety. Some are literally country inns, while others are small resorts or cozy homes. A few offer city lodgings.

Accustomed to hotels and motels, my husband was rather hesitant about staying in a bed and breakfast. He was unsure about living family-style with strangers. But in 1983 I booked a room for us at a lovely inn in Bar Harbor, Maine, and after that he was hooked. (His only terms: "Just don't make me share a bath.")

It was through the Lake to Lake guide that a few years ago my husband and I discovered the Sylvan Inn in Glen Arbor. We were visiting the nearby Sleeping Bear Dunes and the rest of the Leelanau Peninsula, dining in the many area restaurants and finishing our days in the inn's hot tub. We even managed to fit in a charter fishing trip from Leland.

The Sylvan Inn was built as a country hostelry in 1885 and was restored in 1987. Rates run from $60 to $110 per night for one of its 14 rooms or suites (seven with private bath).

When visiting Mackinac Island this May, I kept noticing how attractive the B&Bs there are, and how elegant. There is the Metivier Inn (21 rooms), Haan's 1830 Inn (seven rooms), the Cloghaun (seven rooms) and the relatively new Bay View at Mackinac (15 rooms), which is right on the water next to the marina.

I vowed that the next time that I overnight on the island it will be in one of these cozy places (unless, of course, we are on the boat). All of their details are in this guide.

A quick read-through reveals these interesting choices:

The Hexagon House in Ann Arbor (three rooms) is a Frank Lloyd Wright-inspired house, based on hexagons, that has no right angles and is located on a heavily-wooded site five miles northeast of town.

The Tall Ship Malabar is a floating B&B that docks in Traverse City. A package price includes a sunset sail with picnic dinner, overnight accommodations and a full breakfast, all on a 105-foot two-masted schooner.

Chaffin's Balmoral Farm B&B (two rooms) near Ithaca is an 1890 farmhouse located on a cash crop farm, so you can discuss agriculture over your hearty country breakfast.

The Last Resort B&B (12 rooms) was actually built in 1883 as South Haven's first resort inn. It features luxury penthouse jacuzzi suites, perfect for celebrating special occasions. The on-premises Inn Gallery features the contemporary original works of Mary Hammer.

And way up at the top of the U.P. in Kearsarge you'll find Belknap's Garnet House (five rooms) which has a huge porch and is on three acres of grounds on the Keweenaw Peninsula.

Obviously, there are plenty more and they serve both business and leisure travelers. In fact, a friend of mine who regularly travels to Kalamazoo on business wouldn't think of staying anywhere but in the Stuart Avenue Inn, operated by Andrea Casteel, one of the founders of the Lake to Lake B&B Association. It's also a great place to stay when visiting your kids at Western or Kalamazoo College.

To order a 1992 directory, send a check for $3 to Bed & Breakfast Directory - Michigan, P.O. Box 428, Saugatuck, Mich. 49453 or charge to major credit card by calling toll-free (800) 832-6657.

Have a question about travel? We'll try to answer it in this column. Have you discovered a wonderful place that you are willing to share with your neighbors? Tell us about that, too. Write Travel Trends, Grosse Pointe News, 96 Kercheval, Grosse Pointe Farms, Mich. 48236.

African-American history celebrated at Greenfield Village

"Juneteenth" and other rich traditions of African-American history are the focus of Greenfield Village's special weekend "Celebration of Emancipation" on Saturday and Sunday, June 20 and 21.

Activities ranging from storytelling to horseback riding and roping demonstrations will recreate historic elements of celebrations staged by African-Americans as news of the Emancipation Proclamation spread throughout the United States in 1863.

"This program will explore some aspects of African-American culture that are not familiar to us in Michigan," said Chris Wilson, a program supervisor at Greenfield Village. "The 'Juneteenth' celebrations that originated in Texas provide a historic foundation for activities that are inspiring and educational in addition to some that are just plain fun."

The Michigan Black Horsemen's Association will demonstrate the riding and roping skills practiced by African-American cowboys. Association member Dr. Gerald Johnson will narrate a slide presentation about African-Americans' role in the development of the western and southwestern states.

The James Topp Singers, a Detroit-based youth choir, will perform music created to lift the spirit in hope and celebration. Fiddle player Howard Armstrong (known as "Louie Bluuie") and his band will perform songs in the country-western blues tradition.

An inspirational speech, the keystone of a traditional emancipation celebration, will be delivered by the Rev. Clarence L. James of Atlanta. Currently president of Youth Leadership Development Programs, Rev. James is known throughout the nation for his presentations on history and solutions to the problems faced by many African-Americans today.

"Thanks to Greenfield Village's national scope, our emancipation celebration can draw on many vital African-American traditions," said Nikki Graves Shakoor, a member of the planning team. "This celebration of freedom brings together an impressive array of talent and achievement representing all parts of the United States."

A leading collector of 19th-century photographs of African-Americans, Detroit attorney Jackie Napoleon Wilson will present a slide show featuring images selected from his vast collection. Wilson's daguerreotypes, tintypes and early photographs portray African-Americans in north and south, during eras of enslavement and after emancipation, in a variety of occupations and settings.

Storytellers Amy Jackson and Jennie Crittendon of the Detroit Story League will relate popular African-American tales handed down through generations. Winners of the De-contest will also be on hand with presentations on issues that affect the lives of today's African-American youth.

All weekend long, special guided tours will highlight the George Washington Carver Memorial, Susquehanna Plantation and other village historic sites that address African-American heritage and experience. First-person accounts of struggle and triumph will be presented at the Hermitage Slave Houses, where costumed role-players portraying formerly enslaved African-Americans express their thoughts on freedom. And the emphasis is on celebration as visitors are invited to play traditional African-American family games throughout the weekend.

African-American military history will be explored by members of the 102nd U.S. Colored Troops Civil War re-enactment group in a presentation about Michigan's first black regiment.

Special exhibits include a display of the museum's rare copy of the 13th Amendment, which began the process of emancipation, and a clothing exhibit created by students from Detroit's Woodward School and Malcolm X Academy that features fashions favored by today's youngsters.

Admission to "Celebration of Emancipation" and all special weekend programs is included with Greenfield Village admission. Village hours are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily.

Henry Ford Museum & Greenfield Village is located at Oakwood Boulevard and Village Road in Dearborn, just west of the Southfield Freeway (M-39) and south of Michigan Avenue (U.S. 12).

The Whitney serves up jazz

"Jazz on 3" is quickly becoming the thing to do on Sunday evenings in Detroit. Each Sunday the bar at the Whitney will offer jazz performances by the city's best musicians from 8 p.m. to midnight.

The following groups are scheduled to perform during June:

- June 21 - Gary Schunk Duo;
- June 28 - Paul Vorghagen.

For more information, call Donna McEachern at 832-5700.

Screenwriting seminar offered

Cranbrook P.M. will again offer Grosse Pointe Harvey Ovshinsky's weekend seminar "Introduction to Screenwriting: A Survival Course."

The well-known award winning writer and documentary filmmaker will conduct this two-day workshop on Saturday and Sunday, July 11 and 12 at Thornlea House, the former home of Henry Booth. The cost is $150 and advance registration is necessary.

Prospective participants should look upon this as a unique opportunity to learn the craft of scriptwriting from a successful, working professional who will demystify the process.

Designed for college students, journalists, film and video producers, film and media instructors and aspiring screenwriters, the course will provide a simplified yet complete approach to the writing process, along with information on many aspects of the business itself.

For further information call 645-3635.

Cranbrook P.M. is a program of continuing education and outreach of Cranbrook Schools. Cranbrook Schools are a division of Cranbrook Educational Community, which also includes Cranbrook Academy of Art and Museum and Cranbrook Institute of Science.

Tub liners leave homeowners overflowing with joy

By Debra Pascoe

Josephine Williamson smiled as she leaned against her bathroom doorway. "It's just beautiful," she said, admiring her recently installed Re-Bath bathtub liner.

The St. Clair Shores resident had the custom molded acrylic butyl styrene (ABS) liner installed after two attempts to reglaze her tub failed to make her a satisfied customer. Williamson said the company that performed the re-glazing willingly agreed to re-do the work, but the pits and chips left from the first job returned.

Unwilling to invest more than $3,000 and lose the use of her bathroom for up to three weeks while a new tub is installed, Williamson contacted Michigan Bathtub Liners. For $500 and about two hours time, Williamson now has what looks like a brand new, slip-resistant tub.

The only physical difference between the liner and a new tub is the liner is rectangular and does not conform to the contours of the original, according to Jeff Oslund, president of Michigan Bathtub Liners in Auburn Hills. However, he said most customers prefer the "more contemporary" look.

Oslund said the tub liners have been used in the hotel/motel industry for more than 14 years and only recently been made available to the private homeowner. The company now also offers complete shower units for homeowners that want to cover up unsightly tile.

Other than the cost, Oslund said the main advantage of a Re-Bath liner is the homeowner doesn't have to worry about the mess. Because the liner fits over the existing tub, there is no need for plumbing changes, he said. The cost also includes a new chrome drain and overflow cover.

Oslund explained when a customer wants a liner, a factory-trained dealer will come to the home, photograph and measure the tub and find out which of the four colors available — white, almond, grey or black — the customer prefers.

That information is sent to the company's home base in Mesa, Ariz., which Oslund said is literally

Before: The old chipped and rusted tub is measured to determine required liner.

Shipped from the factory, the liner is slipped over the old tub.

The installer uses silicone to seal the corners.

After: The finished product looks like a new, modern tub — without the expense and fuss of ripping out the old tub and plumbing.

Refinish? Replace? Re-Bath?

Refinishing: After sanding the tub to roughen the surface, it is repainted with harsh chemicals that can be toxic. The tub cannot be used for up to three days after the process has been completed and the surface has been known to chip and peel. The estimated cost is $300 to $600.

Replacing: In addition to installing the new tub, plumbing will have to be replaced as well as the tile and floor surrounding the unit. Because a number of contractors may have to be hired to do the work, the entire job could take up to three weeks. The average cost is $2,000.

Re-Bath: Installing the tub liner takes up to two hours and can be used after another four hours. There is virtually no mess. The cost of the job is about $500.

Source: Re-Bath

filled with models of almost every bathtub ever made in the United States. Workers then compare the specifications to sample tubs and mold the ABS material over the model on a special machine to form the liner. Within four to six weeks, it is shipped to the company's local distributor.

Once the liner is delivered to the customer's home, a factory-trained installer will make any alterations necessary to ensure a proper fit. Before the liner is installed, the tub is first cleaned with acetone to remove any soap scum and dirt left on the surface. Adhesive strips are then applied to the sides and bottom of the tub to adhere the liner to the existing tub. Oslund said heat from water running in the tub keeps the adhesive fluid, preventing the strips from hardening and the liner from shifting.

Once the surface is prepared, the installer places the new liner in the tub and applies a silicone caulk to provide a water-tight seal.

After the installer sweeps up the mess and provides the customer with cleaning instructions he's on his way. And in just four hours, the owner can relax in their brand new tub.

For further information, call Michigan Bathtub Liners at 1-800-426-4573.

City living reborn at Homearama Detroit

The idea of city living is being given new life this summer.

Homearama Detroit is the nation's first showcase of homes to take place in a major city.

More than 20 new homes, individually designed, built, decorated and landscaped by members of the Builders Association of Southeastern Michigan (BASM), will be on display in the Victoria Park subdivision during Homearama Detroit on June 4-21.

"Each home in Homearama Detroit has amenities typically found in the newest suburban models," said Bernard Gliberman, president of BASM and Crosswinds Communities Inc. of West Bloomfield. "Wider lots make it possible for each home to have an attached two-car garage. Cul de sacs, underground utilities and landscaped common areas provide privacy in a park-like setting."

James Bonadeo, chairman of Homearama Detroit and president of Bonadeo Builders of Plymouth, said, "We are very excited about Homearama Detroit at Victoria Park and expect very large attendance for this new concept for urban living."

BASM, Standard Federal Bank, the city of Detroit and Jefferson-Chalmers Non-Profit Housing Corporation are conducting Homearama Detroit, along with co-sponsors Detroit Edison and the Detroit Newspaper Agency.

"Homearama Detroit signals the return of new, moderately priced homes to a housing market experiencing more than 30 years of pent-up demand," said Standard Federal Bank Executive Vice President Garry G. Carley. "This development sets the standard for neighborhood revitalization not only in Detroit, but across the nation as well."

The new homes are in the Victoria Park subdivision located on Dickerson two blocks south of Jefferson, four miles east of I-75. Each model home is fully furnished and features the latest in living convenience and construction. The homes are priced from $80,000 to $145,000.

A plan book that highlights each home is available. Hours for Homearama are 3 to 10 p.m., Monday through Friday, and noon to 10 p.m. Saturday and Sunday. Admission to Homearama Detroit is $6. Discount coupons, good for Monday through Friday, are available at Detroit Edison and Standard Federal Bank offices.

There is ample parking and refreshments may be purchased at the site. For more information, call 313-737-4478.

Insect stings can kill

Thousands will suffer life-threatening allergic reactions and scores of people will die as a result of insect stings this year.

Approximately 3 million Americans are allergic to insect stings. And many live in fear of each passing (or attacking) bee or yellowjacket.

"People who have had a severe allergic reaction to an insect sting often keep their outdoor summer activities to a minimum; some won't even leave their homes or offices during daylight," said Martin Valentine, M.D., professor of medicine at the Johns Hopkins Asthma and Allergy Center.

Restricting outdoor activities, however, is not the most effective way to deal with allergic reactions. Valentine said a treatment is now available which will prevent future allergic reactions to insect stings.

"Anyone living in fear of stinging insects because of a severe allergic reaction should see an allergist for evaluation as a possible candidate for "venom immunotherapy" (VIT). VIT is 97 percent effective and will typically require only a couple of months treatment until the patient reaches full protection, which can then be maintained by periodic boosters."

Many insect-allergic people rely on the protection of self-administered epinephrine. Valentine feels this could be a mistake.

"We have found that many patients fail to have their epinephrine kits in the right place at the right time, and that some reactions are so severe that apinephrine alone is not enough. VIT is clearly the treatment of choice."

For additional information, contact an allergist in your area. A free information booklet about bee sting allergy is available by calling 1-800-23 STING.

Insect allergy fact sheet

1. There are approximately 3 million Americans allergic to the venom of stinging insects.

2. Severe allergic reactions to insect stings cause 40 to 50 deaths, and thousands of visits to hospital emergency rooms every year.

3. Severe allergic reactions to insect stings cause 40 to 50 deaths, and thousands of visits to hospital emergency rooms every year.

4. An allergic reaction to an insect sting can occur immediately, within minutes, or even hours after the sting.

5. Patients who have experienced a systemic allergic reaction to an insect sting have a 60 percent chance of a similar (or worse) reaction if stung again.

6. Venom immunotherapy (VIT) is administered by an allergist and is 97 percent effective in protecting an allergic person from a reaction if stung again.

7. VIT involves having an allergist administer gradually increasing doses of purified insect venoms until the patient's own immune system takes over and protects the patient from reacting to an actual sting. This is called the maintenance level. For the typical patient, this level is reached in 4-6 weeks of treatment.

8. Once a patient has reached this level of protection, a maintenance dose is then administered at 4 to 8 week intervals for 3-5 years.

9. Stinging insects (bees, yellowjackets, hornets, and wasps) occur throughout the U.S. They are most active during the summer and early fall when nest populations can exceed 60,000 insects.

10. These insects are most dangerous in the vicinity of their nests. A passerby is viewed as a threat to the safety of their home and is often chased out of the area by a sting(s).

11. Yellowjackets, hornets, and wasps can sting repeatedly. Honeybees have barbed stingers which are left behind in their victims' skin. These stingers are best removed by a scraping action.

Billions available for repair grants and subsidized loans

Most homeowners are unaware that regardless of their income there are federal, state and local programs that will help them repair and remodel their homes.

Government at all levels recognizes that neighborhoods are the foundation of life in our country.

When a neighborhood deteriorates, many things happen both physically and socially. Homes that are shabby seem to make a neighborhood more attractive to crime and criminals. An area in decline is like a spreading cancer. As homes become rundown and in need of maintenance, the residents lose their desire to keep up the neighborhood. Streets become receptacles for trash, schools lower their standards and very quickly the selling price of homes in the area drops sharply. This accelerates the cycle of degeneration.

To keep and maintain the nation's housing and neighborhoods, government at all levels has programs to give homeowners money (that does not have to be repaid) for repairs or to lend them money at below market levels or at no interest. In many areas utility companies will do energy conservation work free or at low cost and in other places will lend homeowners money at no interest to pay the contractor of their choice for the necessary work. In addition, there are tax incentives to promote efficient energy use.

These programs are not restricted to low-income people, slum areas or urban neighborhoods. Owners of single or multi-family dwellings are eligible for some programs regardless of income. Most of the loans offer long terms and low payments.

Some of the other home improvements covered under these programs are: attic and wall insulation, new windows, outerwall siding, security doors and locks, window guards, sidewalks and masonry work, bathrooms and kitchens, electrical and plumbing work, new roofs, gutters or downspouts. Consumer Education Research Center, a national non-profit consumer group, has just published "Consumers Guide to Home Repair Grants and Subsidized Loans," a 208-page book which lists over 8,500 sources of loan and grant programs provided by all levels of government, utility companies and others, as well as typical programs offered and eligibility requirements.

The book can be obtained for $10.95 plus $3 shipping and handling from CERC GRANTS, 350 Scotland Road, Orange, N.J. 07050 or by calling 1-800-USA-0121 for credit card orders.

Home Tips

Card tricks — I am a retiree living on a fixed income, and I found that I was spending between $50-$75 a year on birthday, anniversary and get-well cards. I have decided this year to send them on a more personal basis and save money.

I have written down a few favorite messages that I find appropriate to send to my friends from past cards that I have received. When the occasion arrives, I send them a personal note along with a handwritten birthday/anniversary/get-well message.

I save on buying a card, and the message is more personal.

Betty L., Stafford, Mo.

Garden hose leak — Don't throw away a garden hose that has sprung a leak. You can repair it by using a rubber patch and some adhesive tape. To wit:

Sand the area around the holes lightly with fine sandpaper. You don't have to buy patches — you can cut some from an old rubber inner tube. Before applying, sand the patch lightly, too.

Apply contact cement to both surfaces, let dry to the touch, then press firmly over the hole. To keep the patch in place, wrap black electrical tape around it.

Keith N., Syracuse, N.Y.

Quincy: Elegant, permanence

Brick facing on this modern rendition of a traditional design creates a solid feeling of permanence in the Quincy.

While a variety of angles give the home a custom-designed appearance, the formal living arrangements inside have strong appeal for families with traditional values.

A large country kitchen with generous counter space serves as a natural gathering place. The central eating bar is handy for grabbing meals on the run. When more time is available, family members can sit down and read the paper or enjoy leisurely conversation at the kitchen table. Ample storage space is provided by a walk-in pantry tucked in an odd-shaped corner of the kitchen.

The formal dining room is conveniently close to the kitchen, yet out of view of the clutter. Both rooms are brightened by large sliding glass doors which open onto an expansive deck. Nature lovers can enjoy watching the changing seasons through the big glass doors while dining in either area.

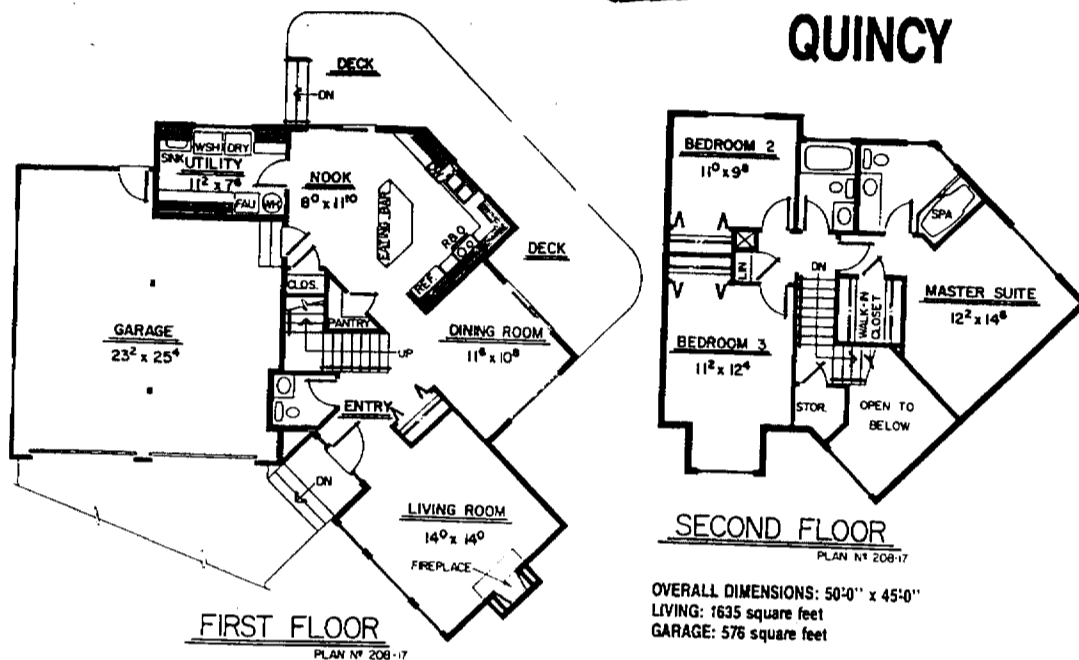

An oversized double garage provides plenty of storage and space for a formal work bench.

Soft, diffused light from a high window fills the vaulted entry. Ridges in the vaulted living room ceiling give it a sculpted look, creating an air of quiet elegance. Multi-paned windows framing a central window on the top and sides bring plenty of light into the room while augmenting the room's formality.

All the sleeping areas are upstairs. The master suite includes a large walk-in closet and separate bath. The oversized tub, which can easily accommodate a spa, is enclosed in glass. A second full bathroom serves the other bedrooms. In the front bedroom, a deep-set dormer window adds traditional charm.

For a study kit of the QUINCY (208-17), send $7.50 to Today's Home, P.O. Box 2832-T Eugene, Ore. 97402. (Be sure to specify plan name and number when ordering.)

Title clash may be next for North softball

By Chuck Klonke
Sports Editor

If the natural progression of events continues, Grosse Pointe North's softball team should be playing in the state championship game next year.

"We've advanced one step further each year," said coach Bill Taylor. "Two years ago we lost our first regional game. Last year we made it to the regional final. This year we won the regional and lost in the semifinals. If that pattern continues next year I'll be happy."

It took a state champion to end North's tournament run. Jenison, which won the Class A title with a 1-0 victory over Plymouth Canton, nipped the Lady Norsemen 2-1 in the state semifinals in Battle Creek.

"We made some mistakes, but I went over the scorebook and we probably would have still lost 1-0 if neither team had made any errors," Taylor said. "We have no regrets. It was a great season to get as far as we did. I'm real proud of what we accomplished."

Taylor went into the season with a young squad, including two freshmen in starting roles, so the expectations weren't extremely high.

"We were just hoping to win our third straight district," Taylor said. "As it turned out it was harder to win our division than it was to play in the tournament."

North finished second to Romeo in the tough Macomb Area Conference White Division, but the Lady Norsemen got past Regina and East Detroit in the district, then beat league rival Fraser and Birmingham Marian in the regional.

"Once we got to the semifinals I just wanted to be competitive because then anything can happen," Taylor said. "Jerry Hoag (Jenison's coach) told me that our game with them could have gone either way."

One player was the difference in the Jenison game — Wildcats' center fielder Tracy Taylor.

She reached base on a throwing error to lead off the second inning, stole second and third and scored on Jen Brookins' sacrifice fly.

Taylor scored the winning run in the fourth. She beat out a bunt with one out, stole second, took third on an infield single by Brookins and continued home on a throwing error.

After that was taken care of, Taylor proceeded to beat the Lady Norsemen with her glove.

Heather Arioli led off the North fifth with a single and Roberta Ricci ran for her. Kristen Loehner sacrificed Ricci to second and Stacey Kent followed with a line drive to center field that looked like a sure hit, but Taylor raced in and made a diving catch. Like everyone else, Ricci thought the ball was going to fall safely, and was doubled up for the final out.

"I thought the ball might have been trapped," said Bill Taylor, "but the umpires said it was a clean catch. I couldn't tell for sure. It was a great play, no matter what."

"I never usually hit the ball to center field," Drouillard said. "I hit that one a little too far on the handle."

North took a 1-0 lead in the second inning. Laura Cartwright singled with one out and stole second. Arioli struck out, but the ball got past the Jenison catcher, who then made a wild throw to first, allowing Cartwright to score.

North had only three hits off Wildcats' pitcher Betsy Morse, who struck out six.

"We just didn't hit today for some reason," said North shortstop Buffy Miriani, one of the three key seniors on the squad. "She wasn't any faster than (Romeo's Shannon) Pierce or (Ford's Amy) Repicky."

Drouillard agreed. "We thought we could hit her, but maybe we were too tense instead of just relaxing and making contact," she said.

Drouillard, who was named to the Class A All-State first team, pitched a four-hitter, struck out four and didn't allow a walk.

Bill Taylor praised the season-long efforts of the senior group, which included Drouillard and catcher Erica Barr.

"Buffy and Erica both changed positions so we could get some of the younger kids into the lineup at spots where they were most comfortable," Taylor said. "Buffy had been our center fielder and Erica played second, but they gave up their positions for the good of the team and I don't think they regretted it."

"It took me a while to get used to fielding ground balls, but (Taylor) must have hit a thousand to me in practice," Miriani said.

Farms youth among nation's best

By Chuck Klonke
Sports Editor

Ryan Jahnke spends nearly as much time on ice skates as some folks spend at their jobs.

"I probably average about five hours a day in workouts, but that includes off-ice workouts, too," said the 14-year-old Grosse Pointe Farms youth, who is one of the top figure skaters in the country in his age group.

The hours of practice have paid off for Jahnke, who recently took second place overall in the men's novice division at the Phoenix (Ariz.) Fiesta State Skating competition. He competed against teenage men from five western states and took first place in the long program free skating presentation.

"Ryan has come a long way in a very short time," said his coach, Diana Ronayne-Wetzel of Grosse Pointe Park.

Jahnke has been skating since he was 8, and is the Midwestern gold and the United States national silver medalist in ice figures among novice men. He won his silver in the national championships last January in Orlando, Fla.

The first blades Jahnke donned were hockey skates, but he quickly found out that figure skating, not hockey, was his sport.

"I just wanted to skate so I took a basic skills class at the Grosse Pointe arena and liked it," he said. "Then I attended another clinic in St. Clair Shores."

That's where he caught Ronayne-Wetzel's eye.

"The first time I saw him skate I was amazed that a young child could be doing so well without a full-time coach," she said. "After I started working with him, I could tell right from the beginning that he had the desire and the ability to put together the things he was taught."

"It didn't take him long to catch and then pass the skaters he was going against in his first competitive situations."

Jahnke's presence on the ice is one of his strong suits.

"The way he skates presents himself in a very positive way," Ronayne-Wetzel said. "He beats other skaters who have more tricks. Ryan's jumps are very good, but as his body gets stronger, they'll get better. He's very good at spins, too. His basics are excellent."

It takes a special person to cope with the grueling practice regimen, but Jahnke has done it.

"His success is due to who he is as a person," Ronayne-Wetzel said. "He's intelligent, talented and has an attitude that makes him want to do the best he can. He's stayed very committed to skating, yet was able to keep up his other interests like soccer, choir and scouting."

Jahnke also excels in the classroom. He was an eighth grade honor student at Brownell Middle School this year.

Jahnke will probably stay in the novice division until he's 16, unless he wins the title next year. Then he'll move up a notch to junior. Passing a skills test that he'll take later this month could also move Jahnke out of the novice division into the tough junior competition.

"The United States has a tremendous depth of skaters," Ronayne-Wetzel said. "Many of the juniors have a skill level comparable to the senior division."

Jahnke watched the Winter Olympics this year with an eye to the future.

"I'd love to skate in the Olympics," he said. "I think that's a dream for anyone who's serious about skating."

Ronayne-Wetzel said that a berth in the Olympics isn't beyond Jahnke's reach, but the road is a long and difficult one.

"It takes 10 to 15 years of hard work to make a champion," she said. "It's very difficult mentally because all that work comes down to two to four minutes on the ice. It can be a scary thing, but the best learn to cope with it. The true champions get there because they love the competition and can control the situation. They don't succumb to outside pressures. Ryan has the personality to succeed and the ability to keep himself focused."

Jahnke has two major compe-

A vacation to remember

By Chuck Klonke
Sports Editor

Rebekah Ingall and five of her University Liggett School hockey players won't have any trouble deciding what to talk about when they're asked how they spent their summer vacation.

They'll help form one of two United States women's teams that will compete in the first White Nights International Hockey tournament in St. Petersburg, Russia.

"When I was first approached about it I thought it was an experience that would be too good to pass up," said Ingall, who is the girls varsity hockey coach at ULS.

Pirates post two victories in Federation

Steve Champine and Chris Campbell pitched the Grosse Pointe Pirates to a 4-1 victory over the Sterling Heights Cardinals and the Pirates scored three runs in the seventh inning to beat the Sterling Heights Rangers 8-7 in Macomb Amateur Baseball Federation action last week.

Champine allowed only one run in five innings and Campbell pitched two hitless innings in relief against the Cardinals. Todd Drake and Chris Sterr had two hits apiece and Dave Nielubowicz had an RBI single for the Pirates.

Trailing 7-5 going into the seventh inning against the Rangers, the Pirates rallied for three runs on walks to Sterr and Tommy DeLisle, a two-run triple by Keith Smith and an infield out.

Troy Bergman had a pair of RBI and Champine and Nielubowicz also drove in runs against the Rangers.

The Pirates dropped the second game of the doubleheader with the Rangers 12-11, despite a four RBI performance by Drake and three RBI by Sterr.

The Clinton Valley Reds needed five runs in the last two innings to slip past the Pirates 7-5 and remain unbeaten. The Pirates had taken an early lead on a double by Kevin Collins, Chris Ford's single, a walk by Terry Brennan and a single by Sterr.

The United States will have two teams in each of the divisions.

"These will be the first women's hockey teams to travel to Russia," Ingall said. "It's exciting to be a part of that."

Ingall will be assistant coach of the American Women's Hockey Coaches Association (AWHCA) Ambassadors. The squad includes the five ULS players — Katie Frederick, Monica Paul, P-R Stark, Michelle Kryszak and Becky Simpson — and three from the Michigan Capitals. The rest of the squad includes players from the New England states. Lee Hunsaker, who coaches a team in Maine, is the head coach of the Ambassadors.

The second U.S. women's team consists of players from New York.

"We thought we might be able to put together a team from the Midwest, but there wasn't enough interest at first," Ingall said. "There's been more lately, but we had to make arrangements."

The U.S. squads will play teams from Ukraine, Latvia, St. Petersburg and Finland.

The tournament begins June

22 and continues through June 29.

The Ambassadors' delegation, which includes several parents of the players, will leave Saturday.

Pointers watch unlimited hydroplane history

By John Minnis
Assistant Editor

When a handful of Grosse Pointers was invited to watch the hydroplane time trials last Thursday, little did they know they would witness racing history.

At 9 a.m. Chip Hanauer piloted unlimited hydroplane Miss Budweiser to a world lap record of 169.523 mph. Hanauer went on to win the Gold Cup Sunday.

Witnessing the record-setting speeds were Pointers Paul Huth, a partner in the law firm Huth, Farmer and Scudi; Larry DuMouchelle, president of DuMouchelle Art Galleries; Robert Edgar, publisher of the Grosse Pointe News; Tom Vigliotti, a real estate developer and broker; and Pat McKeever, chief financial officer for a holding company in Troy.

The group, which was put together by retired Army Col. Jerry Stonisch, had the best seats possible — aboard the referee boat in the eye of the Roostertail turn, the tightest on the hydroplane racing circuit.

The skipper of Summer Reign, the referee boat, was Roger Bialic, who is vice president and chief financial officer for Stahl's Lettering in St. Clair Shores.

Bialic has been a Gold Cup volunteer for 19 years and was course chairman of the Detroit River event for five years before stepping down to referee the race.

"Which basically means I sit on the boat and watch the race," he said. "I love being on the water."

More than 400 volunteers pay $30 membership fees to the Spirit of Detroit Thunderfest committee for the opportunity to spend a week's vacation working at the race. Most jobs, such as parking cars, are not as glamorous as Bialic's.

The weather was perfect and the river was glasslike as Miss Budweiser was lowered into the water. It was the first and only unlimited hydroplane on the water, and that was by competitive design.

Hanauer requested that Miss Budweiser not only be the first unlimited on the course, but that it be the only boat on water. The request was granted, leaving the Winston Eagle twisting in its sling.

"The politics are flying thick and fast here," Bialic said. "Today they're fighting for the favors of the press. Who gets the fastest time, gets the biggest headline. And Miss Budweiser and Winston Eagle don't spend millions of dollars sponsoring the race only to end up second in the headlines."

"Miss Budweiser doesn't want to share its press with Winston Eagle. They've just requested to be the first and only unlimited on the course."

"Yesterday, Winston Eagle put on a show for the press. The Miss Budweiser crew was furious this morning. It's their (Budweiser's) Gold Cup event."

And Hanauer did steal the headlines, not only by breaking Detroit Gold Cup lap records but also by setting the new world standard.

Winston Eagle came onto the river 10 minutes later, but even its very respectable top qualifying speed of 160.821 mph, which also broke the previous Gold Cup and Detroit River qualifying records, failed to get the headlines after Hanauer's performance.

"It's absolutely amazing," said Vigliotti after Miss Budweiser and Winston Eagle took turns screaming around the Roostertail turn just yards from Bialic's anchored cruiser. "This close to something that fast is frightening," he said.

McKeever found the time trials interesting and the weather great. He only wished there had been more activity on the water that morning.

Likewise, DuMouchelle enjoyed the chance to be away from the office on a perfect day for racing.

"I couldn't believe the speeds," he said. "You get a completely different perspective out here."

Huth, who can watch the races through a telescope in his office on the 43rd floor of the Penobscot Building, found the race much more exciting up close.

"I'll be wishing I were out here," he said as Bialic motored back toward the docks. "You couldn't buy a ticket to get out here."

Edgar added, "We had a perfect day. It's exciting. Very few cities have this."

One of Bialic's volunteer crew members for the four-day event, Kristina Majewski, appreciated the warm weather this year. In the past, it's been so cold that she lit the galley stove to keep warm. Not one to waste energy, she baked a cherry pie that year, causing hunger pangs among the volunteers in smaller boats who were limited to peanut butter and jelly sandwiches.

The show was briefly stolen from the unlimited and Grand Prix drivers by the spectacle of a huge B-52 bomber making a low fly-by along the Detroit River.

Fortunately, the only bombing done that day was by Miss Budweiser, who torpedoed Winston Eagle's prospects at keeping the Gold Cup.

Chip Hanauer set a world lap record during time trials last week and went on to win the Gold Cup Sunday on the Detroit River course.

Defending Gold Cup champion Mark Tate in the Winston Eagle failed to outrun Chip Hanauer's Miss Budweiser.

NORTHERN Suburbs Animal Welfare League has a large selection of kittens. Long hairs, short hairs, 6-10 weeks of age, also spayed/neutered adult cats. Kittens only- call 773-6839. Adult cats, dogs, puppies- call 463-7422.

PLEASE DON'T DELAY! SPAY OR NEUTER YOUR PET TODAY!

An altered pet is a healthier and happier companion. Also, it spares you the grief and pain of having puppies and kittens destroyed when no homes can be found. Countless numbers of sweet, innocent little ones are euthanized every day in shelters across the country because a pet wasn't spayed or neutered. If we cut down on the numbers of unwanted litters being born, we will also cut down on the number of abandoned, lost and unwanted animals to destroy.
