Pointers lead county in doing their civic duty

By Jerome Allotta Special Writer

Once again the Pointes led Wayne County in voter turnout in the Aug. 4 primary elections.

Of the 40,682 registered voters in the five cities, more than 27 percent showed up at their precincts to vote.

The turnout, though no blockbuster, was actually about normal for a primary. The Pointes' voter turnout was some 2 percentage points higher than that recorded in the rest of Wayne County and the state.

The Woods, with the highest number of registered voters (14,479) in the Pointes, turned out the greatest number of voters last week with 4,359 (30.1 percent) exercising their constitutional right.

The City followed closely on the heels of the Shores in voter turnout with 29.7 percent and the Farms came next with 29.6

"By our standards it was a

Chris Bremer, assistant city manager in the City.

"Voters turned out fairly regularly all day long. There were never any large gaps when people weren't coming in." The Park and Shores posted the lowest turnouts among the Pointes, both below the county average with 23.9 percent and 23 percent, respectively.

Shores residents defeated by 380 votes a proposal that would have increased the tax levy from one-half mill to a maximum eight-tenths of a mill for the purpose of offsetting the increased costs of continuing to provide advanced life support ambulance service without charge to the residents.

For the county commissioner seat in the 1st District, which includes all of the Pointes, Harper Woods, and part of Detroit, the two Democratic candidates amassed almost twice as many votes (10,680) as the three Republicans (5,669 votes).

Typically, about 75 percent of Pointers vote Republican. The statistics indicate that for this election a large percentage switched parties, which is permitted in Michigan primaries.

George S. Fitzgerald won the primary for commissioner on the Democratic ticket with 6,662 votes cast, and Andrew C. Richner won on the Republican side with 3,262 votes

In Detroit, turnout was 24 percent of registered voters up five points from the city's average for primary elections and was largely attributed to Mayor Coleman Young's publicized concern over the races of U.S. Reps. John Conyers Jr., in the 14th District, and Barbara-Rose Collins, in the 15th Dis-

Due to reapportionment, the two Democratic candidates were facing untested waters particularly Conyers, who had the additional hurdle of being challenged by state Sen. John Kelly - but both emerged victorious by wide margins.

Country dancing - Scottish-style - is performed by these dancers at the 143rd annual Highland Games, held Aug. 1 at the Edsel & Eleanor Ford House. The event, billed as the oldest games in North America, drew 7,000 people to the idyllic grounds near the lake. It was the largest attendance ever, according to Randy Cain, second vice president of St. Andrew's Society of Detroit, which hosted the Scottish spectacle. The society has 268 members. Cain, who is a lieutenant with the Grosse Pointe Park police, said he was amazed at the number of Scots and non-Scots who came to enjoy the music and games. More photos are on page 16A.

Board math test: How to divide $1.7 million

Just a couple of months ago, the Grosse Pointe school district was battening down for a fiscal tempest.

This spring, the state started discussing FICA recapture, as well as putting payment of teacher retirement and unemployment insurance premiums back in the hands of local dis-

Almost $2.3 million of the Grosse Pointe schools' $67 million budget was at stake in what school officials called "the worst case scenario."

With passage of the State Aid Act in early July, the worst case never materialized - the state only took $600,000 - and now that the storm has (apparently) blown over, school officials face a new, but not totally unpleasant, dilemma.

What will the district do with the additional $1.7 million it had set aside to make up for the expected loss of state reimbursements?

Some are calling for the return of laid-off faculty members, while others are pushing for building improvements and

Superintendent Ed Shine recommended at the Aug. 3 school board conference meeting that a third of the money be put in fund equity, another third used for technology and the rest placed in reserve for building and site needs.

He said he is concerned about the two property tax reform proposals which will be on the November ballot. "We want to put the bulk of that $1.7 million in fund equity, as a financial reserve for next year's budget preparations," said Shine. "We don't know yet what the voters are going to do about the tax proposals.'

Shine said there is already a heavy reliance on property taxes for funding school districts and that adopting one of the reform proposals could exacerbate the problem.

In the reform proposals, the state would reimburse local districts for the property tax income lost by the schools.

Many school officials are taking the state's promise with a large grain of salt.

The Legislature has not been able to grapple with other forms of taxation, such as raising the sales or income tax," said Shine. "How will they reimburse if there's no money in ambulance service funding

By Ronald J. Bernas Staff Writer

Grosse Pointe Woods administrators aren't worried - yet - that voters in their city rejected a proposal to increase funding for the city's advanced emergency medical service.

The proposal would have allowed the city to levy up to .8 mills instead of the current .5 mills taxpayers have been paying since 1982 when voters authorized the city to switch from basic to advanced life support protection.

The ambulance service is funded at least through July 1993. The increase, which lost 2,074 to 1,694, would have been put into effect then.

"The proposal would have allowed us to levy more only if we needed it," said Phil Belcher, acting city manager. "Now we have several options."

"But we don't want to do either of those," Belcher said.

He said the Woods' system is working well so the city probably won't privatize ambulance service or enter into a partnership with a local hospital, as other Pointes have done.

Grosse Pointe police were kept busy by drunken drivers last week making six arrests for that offense.

A 23-year-old Grosse Pointe Woods man was arrested on Saturday, Aug. 8, for operating a motor vehicle under the influence of liquor.

A policeman spotted the motorist going east on Vernier and driving erratically. When he pulled the car over he found a case of beer and several other bottles, including one open bot-

Breathalyzer tests showed the driver had a .18 blood alcohol level, well above the .10 which is the legal limit.

The man couldn't pass all the roadside sobriety tests and refused to take a breathalyzer test. He agreed to take the test at the Woods police station. Results showed he was legally drunk, with a test result of .10 blood alcohol.

A 48-year-old Grosse Pointe Shores man was arrested Thursday, Aug. 6, after Woods police stopped him for driving erratically and found he had been drinking.

Breathalyzer tests showed he had a .11 blood alcohol level.

Grosse Pointe Shores police arrested a 27-year-old Detroit man who drove into the construction zone on Vernier on Aug. 7. When they approached the car they could smell alcohol on his breath. He couldn't recite the alphabet and was unable to count backward from 100. He blew .13 on the breathalyzer.

Farms police stopped a 35year-old Grosse Pointe Woods man on Aug. 6 for erratic driving and saw he had two flat tires. They asked if he had been drinking and he said, "Yes, too much," according to police reports.

His breathalyzer test registered .31, more than three times the legal blood alcohol limit.

A check revealed it was the man's fourth drunken driving arrest since 1982. He couldn't be fingerprinted or photographed because of his condition.

A man was stopped by Park police on Aug. 2 for erratic driving. When he wouldn't respond to the officer's questions he was arrested for operating a motor vehicle under the influence of liquor. As he was arrested, police found a .38 caliber pistol in the man's waistband.

Wayne County's 1st District has been a Democratic stronghold for years, because Detroit made up a larger portion of the district than the Pointes encompassed. With reapportionment and popular Democratic incumbent David Cavanagh not running, the GOP feels victory is within reach.

"I think we have an excellent chance to win but I think it will take a team effort," Richner said.

He's undaunted by the relatively small number of GOP votes cast - only 5,669 in the county race compared to the Democrats' 10,680 - because he believes many Republican voters crossed over party lines to vote in the Democratic congressional primaries.

Fitzgerald, who took a vaca-tion immediately after the primary, said he looks forward to a hard fight in November.

In the Shores, Conyers received only 15 out of 214 Democratic primary votes and picked up 217 votes out of 2,203 cast in the Woods. In Harper Woods, he won only 172 out of 1,987 votes.

Some of Conyers' opponents said they were opposing him because he wasn't responsive to his constituents and wasn't effectively funneling federal dollars to his district.

Eugene M. Gilmer, campaign chairman of the Conyers for Congress Committee, said that Conyers was less concerned about Kelly's support on the east end than he was about splitting votes with his two other opponents in the rest of the 14th District.

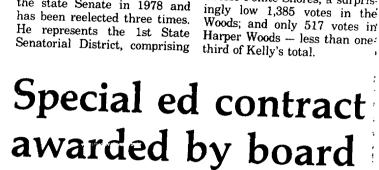

'Although he didn't receive support he expected in some areas, he's not disappointed,' said Gilmer. "The question was, that no one could ascer-

After receiving only one bid on a $430,000 special education transportation contract, the Grosse Pointe school board voted to amend the contract to a one-year agreement.

The board awarded the amended contract to Eastside Bus Co.

Board members said they hope this action will spur more aggressive bidding for the next contract. The cost of transporting the district's 85 special education students is about $1,950

"It's distasteful to me to spend this kind of money for one bid," said board member Carl Anderson. "That's $23 a person, per day."

Board members discussed combining the district's sports and special education transportation, which could also attract. more potential bidders.

In the 1970s, Congress passed the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA), which required school districts to provide transportation to their special education students.

Most of the states subsequently have passed compatible legislation, with the exception of New Mexico.

"The health and welfare clause was the 'hrok' the federal government used in their legislation," said superintendent Ed Shine. "If you do certain things, you get federal money."

Special education students are those who are physically, emotionally or mentally impaired. The 12 categories of impairment range from autism to learning disabled to severe multiple impairment. Students are usually transported within the district, but a few who participate in "low incidence" programs may have to be bused (or take a cab) all the way across the county.

Why aren't bidders lining up to land this contract?

Because most of them would be required to buy additional buses, many of which would have to be equipped with costly wheelchair lifts. Without being guaranteed a multi-year contract, these companies have been unwilling to commit to such an expenditure.

"It's expensive, not only because of the fixtures needed for the buses," said Sue Klein, director of instructional services for the Grosse Pointe school district. "The buses also have to godfom house to house and more buses are needed to go to different areas."

Invitations were sent to six companies, but only Eastside Bus Co. submitted a bid on the two-year contract that was initially offered.

"This has been a concern for several years," said Shine. "We want to generate some competition to bring the price down, but this has not been the case.'

Shine said the district had the option a few years ago to purchase its own buses. At the time, there were no financial advantages because of the cost of maintenance, storage, facilities and personnel, he said.

YOUR CHOICE OF ENDLESS STYLES

By Ronald J. Bernas

Barbara-Rose Collins and Dr. Charles Vincent will once again be on the same ballot to represent the Pointes and Detroit in Congress, but this time they'll be on opposite sides of the fence.

Two years ago Vincent and Collins were among nine candidates vying for the Democratic nomination to represent the 13th District. Collins won over Vincent and perennial candidate Tom Barrow.

"The vote was split and I feel that if either Tom or I hadn't been running, Barbara-Rose wouldn't have won," Vincent

After reapportionment, the 13th District became the new 15th District and Vincent switched parties and ran this year as a Republican against two other candidates.

Vincent won by more than 2-I over the other two candidates combined votes with 2,919. Timothy Theodore collected 777 votes and John W. Savage II got 702.

Collins' only opponent was Barrow and although she lost soundly in the Pointes she beat him in the overall district by nearly 20,000 votes - 37,472 to 17,774.

Vincent believes he has enough support to win a headto-head battle with Collins. A newly formed group named Democrats for Vincent might help, too, he said.

"We will do everything in our campaign," Vincent said. "We'll visit any group who wants us and we'll campaign on the issues. One thing I don't want is an anti-Barbara-Rose campaign. I think we all learned from the 11th District that negative campaigns won't work.

In the 11th District, incumbent David Honigman and it out in a costly mudslinging campaign only to lose to Joe Knollenberg, a third candidate who stayed out of the fray.

"The issues, at least in the 15th District, are health care and education," Vincent said. 'And Congress has said that challenger Alice Gilbert duked health care will be its main gress.

Vincent, who is a doctor in private practice and an associate professor at Wayne State University's school of medicine, believes he is best qualified to deal with those issues.

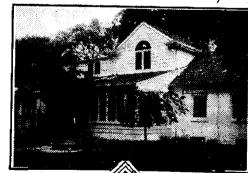

"I'd like to tell the people of concern during the 102nd Con- the Pointes that I will represent them well en electea, Vincent said. "Not if, when."

Spurned anew on millage request, WCCC to try again in November

By Ronald J. Bernas Staff Writer

Wayne County Community College is following the old maxim, "If at first you don't succeed. . .

The proposal was approved by Detroit voters, but lost resoundingly in all suburbs. Pointe voters rejected the proposal by almost 3-1, with 5,759 against to 2,068 in favor.

The college will again ask voters to approve the same proposal in the November general election, according to George Swan, director of public affairs for the college.

Under state law, community colleges must have a local base of support. Because Wayne County voters have repeatedly rejected WCCC millage proposals, the state Legislature had to step in and impose a .25 mill levy to keep the school solvent.

In addition, the state had been subsidizing the school to the tune of $10 million but cut those subsidies in half last year and promised more cuts next year

WCCC is the only community college in the state without a sure source of funding.

Swan said college officials were generally surprised by the election results because the millage request had been supported by most of the media. the college's unions and its stu-

The college has been plagued by poor management since it opened in 1967, but since 1990 a new president and new administration have streamlined the college, eliminating more than 100 non-instructional personnel, beginning an assessment program for students and establishing accountability for the teachers.

Someone has received the message, though, because enrollment in the fall semester is up 30 percent over last year,

"This mill is necessary if Wayne County is going to have a community college," he said. 'That's why we're going after it in November." And if it fails in November? "We'll have to look at very serious cutbacks," Swan said.

Experience the world with anthropology class

A popular anthropology class taught without textbooks or tests and featuring field experiences to an American Indian powwow, a Buddhist temple, and a suburban transvestite boutique will highlight a series of college classes to be held again this fall at Grosse Pointe South High School.

The course will be taught by Grosse Pointe Park anthropologist James Saad on Tuesdays from 7 to 10 p.m. and will include additional field trips to numerous cultural settings in the metropolitan area includ-

- A Hindu wedding cere-
- The Old World Ethnic Market
- The temple of the Aetherius Society, a metaphysical flying saucer religion
- Greektown, MexicanTown and the Hungarian gypsies of Old Del Ray
- A Native American pow wow on Walpole Island
- A cultural cruise on the Detroit River between Lake St. Clair and the Ambassador Bridge with a lecture on the history and culture of this area
- A Christian faith-healing church
- An urban archaeology dig The class, Anthropology 201: Urban Cultures & Lifestyles, is one of several courses to be held for residents of the Grosse Pointes and Harper Woods at South through Wayne County Community College for the third year in a row.

The courses are three credit hours each and are transferable to four-year colleges and universities throughout Michigan, including the University of Michigan, Eastern Michigan University and Michigan State University. The classes may be taken for college credit, or simply for personal interest and growth.

Other classes offered include psychology, math, English and humanities. Instructors for these courses will be named at a later date.

Classes for the fall semester begin the first week in September, and a special registration will be held Monday, Aug. 17, from 4:30 to 7:30 p.m. at South High. Tuition is $54 per credit hour and payment may be paid by money order or personal check.

Interested persons who are unable to register at the high school can register at the W.C.C.C. Eastern Campus located at the Conner exit of I-94, Monday through Thursday, from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. and Fri days until 3 p.m.

All classes in the fall semester at South will be held in the late afternoon and evenings from Monday through Thursday. Students may also take classes held at the Eastern Campus which are held Monday through Saturday.

Pointers have been able to take college classes at South through W.C.C.C. for the past three years, and previously at Grosse Pointe North High School. The classes at South have attracted a wide range of Pointers to the classroom, including middle-aged couples who enjoy learning about the variety of ethnic and religious cultures of the area, college-age students taking advantage of WC3's low tuition, and senior citizens enjoying a renewed intellectual stimulation and the exposure to other lifestyles while in the comfort of an adult class.

Several high school seniors from North and South, eager to get a "jump start" on earning college credit have also begun taking the WC3 classes at South. Current high school students may enroll with the approval of a parent or guardian. Senior citizens who are 60 years or older may enroll in the courses with free tuition, except for payment of the registration and student activity fee.

About one-half of the class members at South have indicated that they are taking courses for personal interest, including many who already have a college degree.

Saad will also teach his world geography course (GEG 202) at South on Tuesdays from 4 to 7 p.m. Saad, who is a member of the American Anthropological Association and the Association of American Geographers, introduces the students to each of the world's continents and regions through films, lectures and field experi-

Also a member of the Society for Visual Geography, Saad has traveled to every continent several times and produces geographic and ethnographic films. He recently returned from his third visit to post-Tiananmen Square China, and will premier three of his latest films in the fall semester class, including one on Buddhist fishing villages on stilts in the South China Sea, one on Venice, and another on Egypt and the Nile.

Registration will be held at a booth just inside the Fisher Road entrance, next to the parking lot and tennis courts. For school or registration information, call Geri Fernandez in the office of admissions at 922-3311. For information about the anthropology or geography classes, call Saad at 882-

Tax defeats could imperil school funds

he rejection by Grosse Pointe and Wayne County voters of three property tax hikes sought in last week's primary illustrates the difficulty of winning approval of any tax boosts these

It also means that the future funding of the public schools by property taxes could be at risk. Nearby districts already have rejected proposed millage increases and even the Pointes' schools have had increasing difficulty in winning millage renewal campaigns.

Just look at the variety of services that the four rejected property tax boosts would have financed:

By a margin of more than 600 votes, Grosse Pointe Woods rejected a proposed increase of up to three-tenths of a mill in the property tax to finance an advanced life support ambulance service.

Two Wayne County millage proposals also went down to defeat, one for a 1-mill boost to help finance Wayne County Community College for 10 years, and the other for a half-mill hike to finance health and mental health services in Wayne County.

Both measures were defeated by larger margins in the Pointes than in the county as a whole. Grosse Pointe Woods, which smothered its own proposed tax increase by a margin of 2,074 to 1,694, gave both county tax proposals the largest number of votes of any community in the Pointes but still opposed both.

It was the fifth time in 25 years that a proposed 1-mill property tax to help fund Wayne County Community College had been turned down by county voters.

The tax, which would have replaced the quarter-mill levy now imposed on property owners, would have raised about $16 million a year. It would have cost about $75 a year more in taxes for a Grosse Pointe owner of a home with a market value of $200,000.

WCCC officials said they would renew their request at the November election because the Legislature this year began phasing out the $10-million-a-year appropriation that has kept the college alive. Without county funds, the college will have to cut its services sharply.

County voters also showed their dissatisfaction with property tax boosts when they rejected a proposed hike to meet resident George Bush and his 1992 re-election committees apparently are trying to travel on both the high road and the low road in the fall political campaign.

Bush trying to travel 2 roads

That surely is one interpretation that can be drawn from Bush's public disavowal and his later private approval of a tough campaign press release that criticized Democratic presidential nominee Bill Clinton in personal and vituperative

Bush had disavowed the press release, written by Mary Matalin, his deputy campaign manager, because he repeatedly has vowed to avoid "sleaze" and other negative campaigning this year.

But Ms. Matalin, in a later TV interview, said that President Bush thought her criticisms of Clinton had been "perfectly legitimate." She added that she had not apologized, as the White House had reported, and, instead, the president had told her he didn't want her to stop defending him.

A Bush campaign spokesperson put another spin on the matter by saying that the president was describing Ms. Matalin's activities in general when he called them "perfectly legitimate."

As we have noted earlier, it is wise for prospective voters to pay more attention to what candidates in both major political parties do than to what they say. Each citizen can draw his own conclusion about which road the two campaigns follow in the future but we think Bush's beginning is inauspicious.

County Executive Ed McNamara opposed it as not well thought-out, and, in fact, the proposal became another source county health and mental health needs.

of controversy between McNamara and commissioners opposing his leadership. The defeat of these millage proposals bodes ill for any other local, county or state plans for new buildings, new services or new programs that would have to be paid for by higher property taxes. Even worse, we emphasize that those defeats raise serious questions about the future financing of the local public schools which soon may face tax increases to offset the losses resulting from legislation and state policies that trim state aid and tax revenue for this and other out-offormula districts.

Even in the Pointes, which have loyally supported their public schools for generations, new questions are being raised about the costs of education. People here also are questioning any sharing of property tax revenues with poorer districts, as called for in legislation now under appeal.

The critics argue that sharing half the revenue from the increased valuations of commercial and industrial properties, already approved by the Legislature, would not cost the district much, but it could set a precedent for proposals to share increased revenue from residential prop-

The opposition being expressed to any property tax hikes no doubt will provide an additional incentive for enactment of one or both of the referenda on property tax reduction that will be on the ballot in

If one of those is approved, whence, then, will come the funds to guarantee the continuing excellence of the Grosse Pointe school system?

GOP too optimistic in county?

esults of the hotly contested primaries for the 1st District county com-LUmissioner's post indicate that Pointe Republicans may have been overly optimistic about capturing the seat.

Vol. 53, No.33, August 13, 1992, Page 6A

Although the primary results are not always an accurate indicator, the total Democratic vote in the district exceeded the GOP turnout at the polls by a substantial margin. Yet that fact raises substantial doubt about the GOP prospects for victory in November.

The two Democrats, George S. Fitzgerald, the nominee, and Jane E. Gillis, received a total of 10,680 votes in the district. The GOP nominee, Andrew Richner, and his two losing Republican foes, Frederick Kaess and James E. Robson, received only 5.669.

Richner did carry the Pointes as expected after he was endorsed not only by four of the five mayors and an ex-mayor of the fifth Pointe community but by many members of the Pointe GOP establishment.

But his margin was only 628 votes over Fitzgerald which was not enough to offset the 862 lead that Fitzgerald won in Harper Woods and the 3,388 votes he got in

It is true that Richner lost some votes from Republican Pointers who crossed over party lines to support the Democratic foes of the Detroit incumbents in the 14th and 15th Congressional Dis-

From that fact, however, Richner can draw hope that those primary ticket jumpers will return to the GOP fold in November, especially with an incumbent Republican president on the ballot.

Somewhat similar ticket jumping also occurred in the 14th District Democratic primary, in which 1,830 voters in the Woods and 195 in the Shores gave Democratic state Sen. John Kelly 2,025 votes, while the unopposed GOP nominee, John W. Gordon, captured only 1,569 in those communities.

In contrast, Conyers received only 15 votes in the Shores and 217 in the Woods for a 232 total. But Conyers was easily renominated with a 39,311 to 15,775 vote margin over Kelly in the entire district.

In the 15th District, Rep. Barbara-Rose Collins received only 265 votes from the City, Farms and Park, while Tom Barrow, her Democratic foe, carried the three Pointe communities with a 2,375 total. But she won renomination by 37,472 votes to 17,774.

Dr. Charles Vincent, who filed as a Republican afer unsuccessfully seeking the nomination as a Democrat two years ago, got only 2,919 GOP votes in the district with more than half, or 1,773, coming from the City, Farms and Park. At the moment, his chances of a November upset obviously are not very high.

The problem is the same one that has plagued local GOP candidates in the past. The Pointes constitute a small Republican island in a vast Wayne County Democratic sea and provide only a minority of the population of the 14th and 15th congressional districts and apparently of the 1st Commissioner District as well.

Unfortunately, the reapportionment of all three districts apparently did little to improve the Pointes' political clout which means that the GOP hopes for victory in November are almost nonexistent in the 14th and 15th congressional districts and not all that bright even in the commis-

etters

On the bandwagon

To the Editor:

Through you, I would like to address this brief letter to all the residents of Grosse Pointe.

I have been a member of the Grosse Pointe Community Band since its inception six years ago. Thus, from first-hand experience, I know our community is extremely fortunate to have someone as talented as our band director, Ralph Miller. He has given of his time, endless energy and commitment to anyone who, like himself, shares a love of music and who wants to use and develop his/her individual abilities.

There are no special requirements to join the community band. Also, there are no auditions for chair position. Band members may come as they are and offer the best they are able. Most assuredly, everyone is welcome!

The community band gives anyone interested the chance to use their musical talents - from middle school age to senior citizens. Our special rehearsal time together each week is a delight. And, so is the opportunity to present several concerts a year for our families, friends and the rest of the community.

I consider myself very lucky to be a part of the Grosse Pointe Community Band. Further, I want to personally, and publicly, thank Ralph Miller for his patient and outstanding leadership.

> Jean Weber Grosse Pointe Farms

Congratulations To the Editor:

I congratulate Andrew Richner on his very impressive victory in the Republican primary. Republicans must now close ranks and work hard to ensure that Andrew Richner becomes the next 1st District Wayne County commissioner. Andrew, I know you will do your best to bring quality county services to our district at the lowest possible cost.

I commend Mr. Richner, Mr. Kaess, their supporters, and my supporters as well for participating in one of the cleanest races in the entire country.

And from the bottom of my heart I want to thank my tenacious, dedicated supporters. No candidate ever had it better. I am a very blessed man.

> James E. Robson Grosse Pointe Park

Fewer than 1/3 vote here

rosse Pointers upheld their tradition of voting in larger proportions Than most other Michigan citizens in last week's primary even though fewer than one out of three actually went to the

In Detroit, estimates were that about 24 percent of the registered voters cast ballots. That gain over the 19 percent reported as voting two years ago was attributed to the increased pressure this year to get out the vote in Detroit's two congressional districts.

Statewide, too, estimates were that only about one-quarter of the registered voters went to the polls, despite close races for Congress, the state House and other posts in a number of districts.

Among the Pointes, the Woods led with 30.1 percent of the registered voters going to the polls. The City came in second with 29.75 percent and the Farms was third with 29.6 percent. The Park reported 23.9 percent voting and the Shores 23 percent.

People turn out to vote in much larger proportions not only in the Pointes but in the state as a whole for general elections, with the presidential election providing an added incentive this year.

Yet with the public supposedly cynical and critical of all incumbents this year, will the November vote be larger or smaller than usual? In normal times, a small vote supposedly benefits the Republicans, a big vote the Democrats.

But this year, with Michigan joining the states voting on term limitations for state, legislative and congressional candidates, who knows what will happen?

Club news. Church news. Charity events. Engagements and brides. Babies. College graduates and honor students. This is my territory.

I recently said to myself: "Self, perhaps readers would like some insight into the Grosse Pointe News' policy concerning the selection of items for its Features section.'

I'll tell you anyway.

First of all - ads are ads. People pay for them. I don't have anything to do with ads. The rest of the written stuff is called editorial copy. That's my responsibility. The Features section is the first four or so pages of section B. Right after Features is the Entertainment section. Don't moves around). The Features section has four kinds of articles:

Nearly every week the Fea-

Call Ron Bernas.

1. Feature stories. There's always one on the top half of page 1B, followed by a byline (the author's name.) It's an indepth examination of a single topic, event, person, or organization. I usually write it myself and it's accompanied by photographs or illustrations.

2. Opinion stories. These are articles written from one person's point of view. The Pastor's Corner, which runs in a box at the upper left-hand corner of the church page, is written by members of the Grosse Pointe Ministerial Association. They sign up for the week they want and their topics are limited only by their imaginations.

Pastor's corners have bylines and are solely the opinions of the writers. Editing is minimal.

3. Announcements. These are brief blurbs: New Arrivals, Pride of the Pointes, Engagements and Weddings of Grosse Pointers and former Grosse Pointers.

Because I'm always short of editorial space, I'm forced to edit these announcements to fit a short, uniform style. Pride of the Pointes, for instance, is for college students. It usually mentions the student's name, his or her parents' names, and the type of honor or award earned.

Information for Prides is mailed to me directly from colleges. Most schools in Michigan are meticulous about sending this stuff. But students who attend small out-of-state colleges sometimes have to rely on proud parents or grandparents to send this information. Most Prides are printed about two or three months after the fact because I get so many and they all come at graduation time. I file these and run them in the order they were received.

Engagements and weddings are printed in order too. Please don't send an engagement announcement two weeks before the wedding because I usually have a stack of a dozen or so engagements waiting.

We accept photographs with engagements and weddings. We use some photos with Prides, but never with birth announcements. (All babies are cute and they all look alike anyway, so if we did use photos, we could probably use the same one over and over.)

4. Charity events and fundraisers. On page 3B, under the heading Faces & Places, I edit and string together oodles of tidbits about fundraisers and benefits for non-profit organizations. If there's room, I also run after-the-fact photos and notes about charity events that have already occurred. The upcoming stuff - especially if the public is invited - is highest on my priority list.

Each item must have some sort of Grosse Pointe connection that is it's either taking place here or a local person is in charge of it.

We have printed forms for engagements, weddings and births. All you have to do is cruise into our office at 96 Kercheval on the Hill and ask for one. If you prefer, you can send a self-addressed, stamped envelope with a note telling us which form you want. I answer requests the same day I get them. Always.

Please send me a businesssize envelope, since the forms are 8 1/2 by 11 inches. I get crabby when I have to fold forms up into teensy weensy squares and cram them into miniature envelopes.

When you fill out the forms,

According to "Snooze News." a newsletter published by the Better Sleep Council, the average person spends 220,000 hours asleep during his or her lifetime. That's more than 22 years.

Some of our former presidents had unusual sleep habits, according to the Sleep Council. Lyndon B. Johnson, for instance, was afraid of being alone at night. Joseph A. Attention: thrill-seekers Bungee jumping has been bounced off the list of activities to be offered at this year's Michigan State Fair, according to Dick Allen, general manager of the fair.

Recent accidents have raised questions about the safety of bungee jumping, he said. Instead, the fair will offer a brand new bunch of demonstrations - barn raising, for one; blacksmithing for another; broom making; and square dancing.

County government who needs it? Same old faces, congressionvery hush-hush - suggests out-ally speaking. Last week's primaries wielded a new broom in some areas, but Grosse Pointers are seeing step one of returning two incumbents to Washington. Redistricting is no fun.

Yes, some serious newcomers - and even a few serious old faces - did run. But who can be energized by the power politicking at the sheriff's level in Wayne County (tied to the exec, of course)? Or the old-pol network in Macomb, although one of them has already paid the price for collecting a pension and a salary at the same time

Looking ahead, the Michigan governor's chair is almost as predictable as Convers and Collins. The gubernatorial wannabes already floating past the jaded eyes of the voters are names that we have all known for years. Blanchard, Hertel, Riegle. The Democratic convention that excited the hearts of feminists with its promise of new women senators, was also a convention whose Michigan delegation was jammed with old boys.

One tantalizing conclusion that could be drawn from last week's flabby exercise in democracy is that we simply have too many layers of government.

For some time there have been hints around Grosse Pointe about seceding from Wayne County and joining Macomb. A recent variant - still and-out secession from Wayne, another county

We might be better off just abolishing county government. What has county government done for you or anyone else lately that some other entity couldn't have done just as well?

CountyCare, the Wayne County health program, apparently works. Beyond that, one is hard-pressed to think of anything. Hey, specific authorities or cities or the state could and do handle jails, airports, police patrols, water and sewer systems, and roads.

And there'd be fewer candidates braying.

Broader horizons department: On a recent trip to Ohio, I stopped along the road to buy some fireworks. It was my first

Coming from a state that outlaws the things, it felt surreptitious, illicit. I tried to act nonchalant as I ordered some ladyfingers.

I got 1,600 of those little babies for $5.96, so I take it they aren't bigtime explosives.

But out came the paperwork. Driver's license. Oaths. I had to swear I wouldn't shoot them off in Ohio (you need a fire marshal's permit for that). Hold the seller blameless. Keep the paperwork handy with the firecrackers under penalty of law. Plain brown wrapper, sealed tight.

"Gee," I said. "I feel like the FBI is watching me.'

"It's easier to buy a gun in the state of Ohio than it is to buy fireworks," the dealer said, sweating details of my tiny purchase as two or three other potentially more lucrative customers lined up immediately. And to think we won't even adopt the Brady bill.

Oh, by the way, I detoured through, uh, yeah, Indiana to shoot them off. It's against the law to bring firecrackers into Michigan.

Major injustice department: When was the last time you felt good about the state's school aid situation? Never mind, I know the answer. Here's another bitter opinion to add to your stew.

At the same time that the state perpetuates an unfair financial distribution to local school systems, at the same time that school taxes are unconscionably high everywhere, at the same time that the local board of review has no sympathy for your plight, the state tax tribunal is handing out tax breaks so incredible that they're well, not believable.

Listen to this:

Northern Michigan is home to many outdoors clubs. Hunters band together to buy 10,000- to 20,000-acre parcels to maintain a more-or-less wild state for the enjoyment of the members. Many of the clubs also have golf courses and clubhouses and cabin or home developments on a portion of the property. Most of the owners are downstaters.

Last year the state tax tribunal ruled that the common club property at Canada Creek Ranch in Montmorency County cannot be sold (by individual members) and therefore has no market value. And if it has no market value, it can't be taxed. What???

Not only that, but the governments that have collected taxes over the years will have to repay the money. The tiny school district in Hillman will have to repay several hundred thousand dollars, a virtual impossibility

The ruling is, in the first place, completely without logic in its assumption that because land belongs to multiple owners, it can't be sold. These individuals wealthy enough to be members of the club are now enjoying the recreational benefits of their huge acreage taxfree - at the expense of the many lower-income residents of Further, other clubs are following suit. Turtle Lake Club, whose membership is Detroitbased, has already lodged a tax appeal on the same grounds.

If the tax tribunal continues its insane path, much of the now-taxable land in upper Michigan's recreational areas will be removed from the tax rolls. It could bankrupt local governments and schools - and it isn't difficult to see how the financial repercussions could reach downstate school districts as well, in bailout form. After all, we're all in this together.

Last month's column about the strategies ethnic groups use to defy or accommodate their oppressors uncovered a few fellow Alsatians. Apparently my grandmother's strategy of keeping both French and German flags handy (just for show) wasn't so unusual.

"My grandmother used to say it depended on who got up first in the morning which flag they flew," one reader told me. Guess the family was divided between open and secret versions of resistance

Romanian visitors find Pointes aren't 'funky' at

By Christian Argensanu Special Writer

Christian Argesanu is a Romanian journalist who is living in Grosse Pointe as the guest of the Moebus family and Grace Community Church in Grosse Pointe Woods. My wife and I came to America from Romania a few months ago. After a disastrous experience in the huge wild New York City and after a lot of people frightened us telling scary stories about Grosse Pointe residents, we were afraid of everybody. "Oh, Grosse Pointes . . . what a please type or write legibly. Always include a daytime phone number so I can ring you up if I can't decipher your handwriting.

For club news, it's a good idea to appoint one member of your group to be responsible for sending press releases to the Grosse Pointe News. That way I don't get information about the same meeting from two or three different people with different points of view.

I prefer typed press releases, but legibly printed information on 8 1/2 by 11-inch paper is nearly as good.

Puh-leeze double or triple space if you type it - or leave lots of room between lines if you write it. Then I can edit the information quickly and send it on its way to be typeset. This simplifies and speeds the process of getting your news into print. If your press release is scribbled in pencil and scrawled around the margins on the edges of a scrap of torn envelope, it's apt to get lost, or put aside, or misinterpreted.

Then you'll be crabby. Speaking of editing - we have a journalistic style that we follow. If you write your press release in this style in the first place, it will make my job easier and the facts will be

So we came here with fearful hearts. We knew the Moebuses in whose home we are living now. They are wonderful, godly people, good Christians, ready to help anybody who is in need. But we thought they were an exception. So, we didn't expect anything good from others. We even had doubts about our nice neighbor, Joyce Alef, whose put what's special or unique about the event.

At the end I want to include a phone number for readers who need more information or reservations.

For example:

The Society for the Eradication of Bell-Bottom Trousers will hold its monthly meeting at 7 p.m. Tuesday, Feb. 10, at Fashion Police Headquarters, 123 Tiara Lane, Grosse Pointe Farms.

Tamara TyeDye, director of fashion for Trousers 'R Us, will discuss "How to update your wardrobe with patchwork and appliques.'

For reservations, call Tye-Dye at 555-1234.

Because of space restrictions, we print only events with a clear Grosse Pointe connection.

If the meeting is in Detroit or Southfield, for instance, but a couple of Grosse Pointers are involved in organizing the event, be sure to include their names so I can see the Grosse Pointe connection.

I can only run each item once. I put articles for upcoming events in the paper one or two weeks ahead of the date. If you prefer a certain date, you may write "prefer Sept. 10" (or whatever) at the top of the first page. I'll try my darndest to print it then, but all editorial copy is subject to space restrictions and I can't always print everything I want to print when I want to print it.

You may have to wait your turn. But don't we all?

If you have any suggestions, any ideas for improving the Features section or any ideas for future features, call me at 882-0294.

house is across the street from ours on Lincoln Road. "You guys, I think, need a mother for a while, and I volunteer for this," she said. We watched her suspiciously from head to toes.

"My ancestors came here from Germany, France, England, Ireland in the early 1800's," Joyce said. "My great grandfather owned a farm, which extended from Jefferson at the river to Mack and Mt. Elliott to Gratiot, and East Grand Boulevard cut the prop-

Little by little, we started to SmithLittle by little, we started to smile, to be interested, and in a glorious ending, we even talked. The ice was broken. Fully assuming her role as guide, Joyce gave us books about the area and planned a gorgeous program to help us know the region. We started with a trip to Grand Rapids, where we visited the Gerald Ford Museum and toured the city. It was one of the most beautiful days in our lives. At least we could find out something more about America, this country which was always the center of our dreams. Then it was Belle Isle, and Greenfield Village, Ann Arbor with its impressive campus, followed by Port Huron, White Birch Lodge, Chicago and Niagara Falls. Together, we discovered the American-style food: fastfood restaurants, Ponderosa with its bar, Mama Rosa's pizzeria, the picnics in the Pointe parks. We were excited seeing the spectacular fireworks offered in honor of America's Independence Day.

Thursday evenings we go and enjoy the concerts in Grosse Pointe Village, where one of Joyce's sons, Paul, played the guitar. He is the second most valuable guitar player in the Detroit area. And Detroit is one of the world's most famous music centers.

She initiated me into this very American thing, which is the landscaping. In Romania, nobody cuts the grass. In the cities there's not much grass and in the countryside nobody is concerned about cutting the turf - 3-foot-tall grass, which offers a dreamy playground for children and a delicious food for flocks. We even have a saying about somebody who is very lazy and doesn't do anything all day long: "He is cutting grass and leaves for dogs.

The American spirit made even from this job one of the most valuable businesses, the landscaping. I must admit that for the first time I cut the grass in zig-zag. Now, I do it much better - approximately in rows. So I hope I'll cut it right, and when my friend comes back from White Birch Lodge, he will find his garden in very good shape.

To make complete this portrait, I must tell you that thanks to Joyce, my wife Michelle learned at last how to swim in Grosse Pointe Park's pool (I would say almost swim, but I don't want to discourage her!) And not once, when Michelle and I have a "back and forth" day, with all kinds of small wars between two strong personalities, Joyce makes her best to convince us to sign a "pact" of reconciliation.

Through Joyce, we met other Pointe residents, who are not at all "infatuated, selfish and wicked," but they are proud because they form a big, united community. They are serious people; in fact they are one of the most "healthy" categories of American society. Probably they are wealthier than others, but all of them worked hard to get here, to be respected, successful citizens. They are really friendly and they care a lot about what's happening with others. So, they are the same like the majority of Americans. Speaking about the joy of

'feeling at home" among Americans, I can't help bt feel bad because of the other Romanians I met here, living in the United States.

In Michigan, there are about 25,000 inhabitants with a Romanian origin. I tried to contact some of them, feeling (knowing) that people who share the same native language, the same memories, have to care about each other. But I was so disappointed! But I was so disappointed!
They are so divided, they don't help each other! They seem to be even worse, to be in permanent competition between themselves, and if somebody succeeds in one way, they are so envious that they even try to put him down. If you are recently arrived in the United States they try to take advantage of you, if you have money. If you're poor, they don't want to know you! My heart is bleeding writing all this, but unfortunately it seems to be true.

Two Romanian churches I contacted didn't move one finger to help me and my wife in trying to settle here. They were just interested in co-opting us as new members, for good propaganda, but nobody asked us if we have a place to live, food, if they can do something concrete for us. From a group of about 100 persons, only two of them came and shook our hands. I suffer and I can't understand this. I know in Romania people are friendly and hospitable. They are united and group together. What happened with them here? What happened t those people who should be a spiritual nucleus for the Ro. manian community, for a m tenance of Romanian values. still hope it's not too late to find out that I'm wrong, or at least partially wrong.

If one day I become an Am ican citizen, I'll know that the Grosse Pointe community gav me the most important and p cious American value - trust ing in people.

"Don't worry," our goldenhearted neighbor tells us. "Trust God, He will help all your dreams come true! Thank you Joyce! Michelle at I love you and we'll try some. day to repay all you have dor. for us. Thankyou Grosse Poin community!

Riley honored by bar group

State Supreme Court Justice Dorothy Comstock Riley was honored by the American Bar Association Friday, Aug. 7, at a special Minority Justice Conference in San Francisco.

The Minority Justice Conference was held as part of the bar's annual meeting to recognize minority members of state supreme courts throughout the United States.

The announcement said the Minority Justice Conference "will be an unprecedented gathering of about 30 minority members of state high courts to address progress of minorities in our nation's judiciary and efforts to increase minority representation on the courts.

The honored justices received awards during a special program - "Recognition of Ethnic and Racial Diversity in the Ju-

Immediately after the luncheon, former State Supreme Court Justice Dennis W. Archer of Detroit moderated a roundtable discussion on "Challenges to Minority Judges in the '90s."

A graduate of Wayne State University Law School, Riley was appointed to the Wayne Circuit Court in 1972, the Michigan Court of Appeals in 1976 and the Michigan Supreme Court in 1982. She was elected to an eight-year term on the state's highest court in 1984 and is seeking re-election this year.

Riley and her husband, Wallace D. Riley, a past president of both the State Bar of Michigan and the American Bar Association, live in Grosse Pointe

LOCAL AGENCY WINS HONORS WITH REGIONAL INSURANCE COMPANY

he Amerisure Companies, a Michiganbased insurance company, recently recognized the J. A. Versical & Associates, Inc. agency for having met the criteria for three agency recognition award programs, namely the Ambassadors Group, the Regional Excellence Group and the designation of a "Diamond" Agency. These programs recognize agencies for production, profitability, professionalism and longterm potential. This agency is one of only three others among the over 200 state-wide agencies of Amerisure to earn this many awards, as well as one of only two agencies to earn the Diamond designation in Commercial Lines. In addition to the awards, Jon Tallerico, Executive Vice President of the agency, also serves on Amerisure's Agents' Advisory Council which was formed to elicit feedback on issues from their clients.

Mr. Tallerico attributes the success of the agency to services and teamwork, in a "family-type" atmosphere, which have been traditions since the formation of the agency over 30 years ago. Mr. Tallerico further notes that the agency represents a well-rounded list of the linest domestic and national insurance carriers, products tailored to fulfill specific client needs, and consistent high-level professionalism.

Music Makers prepare for battle

The Grosse Pointe Music Makers, a big band musical aggregation, under the direction of Woods resident Ben Grycan, will perform in Birmingham in a "Battle of the Bands" on Thursday, Aug. 27, at 7:30 p.m.
The "In the Park" summer season concert will be held at Shain Park. The musical opponent of the Grosse Pointe group is the well-known Johnny Trudell and his band featuring Fat Bob Taylor. The program is a feature of the Department of Public Services, city of Birmingham.

Race is on the track, but history is in the parking

the Pioneer Meadow Brook Historic Races at Waterford Hills a lot of fun is that in addition to seeing the sports cars from the '50s and '60s (and a few much earlier) on the track, the spectators put on quite a show in the parking lot with their own

On the track were Austin-Healey Sprites, Mini-Coopers, Porsches, Mustangs, Corvettes and Triumphs, most of them from the '60s. But there were some older racers too, most notably a handsome 1933 blue Bentley with red leather seats, powered by a 4.25-liter engine, and a wonderfully weird 1932 red three-wheel Morgan, its helmeted driver leaning out on the curves, as if to keep his

land. "It had been hanging

Driven by an 1,100-cc aircooled engine mounted in front of the radiator, the two front wheels had independent front suspension with sliding pillars and coil springs. Morgans were said to be safer than other three-wheelers because they held the road better. So what about Elcomb's dramatic leaning during driving exercises? The driver just likes to get some cool fresh air from time to time," he said. Racers were divided into a half-dozen groups, loosely based on engine sizes and types of cars. Dick Reynolds' 1962 blue Volvo 544 Sport B-18 was assigned to group six. He was beaming because he managed to keep a Corvette behind him during the last warm-up. Not bad when you consider the Volvo is powered by a 1.8-liter engine, while the Vette has a 5.0-liter V-8 under its fiberglass hood, he says

'57 Jaguar Mark I is some kind of beautiful saloon.

Group two consisted mainly of bug-eyed Austin-Healey Sprites and boxy Mini-Coopers, with a sprinkling of Alfa Romeos and a couple Lotuses.

The Mini-Cooper was introduced in 1961 and immediately began winning rallies and races around the world. It was a high-performance version of the Austin Seven and the Morris Mini-Minor, introduced a year earlier, both of which soon took the name "Mini."

The odd-looking little car was designed by Sir Alec Issigonis and guaranteed him an honored place in automotive history. The Mini was one of the most influential automobiles of the post-World War II era, the first car to use what has become the standard modern configuration — transversely mounted front engine with front-wheel drive and independent suspension.

Two of Great Britain's pioneering auto companies, Morris and Austin, merged in 1952 to form British Motor Corp. BMC also built the Austin-Healey sports car and in 1954 began making little Metropolitan coupes and convertibles for Nash. The Morris Minor, also designed by Issigonis, was one of the early exports to the United States in the '50s, as was the Austin saloon.

And one of the major rivals to the Mini-Coopers at Waterford was the Austin-Healey Sprite, the so-called "bug-eye" Sprite. It was introduced in 1958 as a low-priced sports car for those who did not have the price of an Austin-Healey 3000. And there were a lot of wouldbe racers who were in that cat-with existing stock components of other BMC cars, including the Minis, and was an instant hit. The "bug-eye" lasted only until 1961, when the MG Midget was introduced and shared its rather undistinguished body with the Sprite.

An unexpected entry in group three, a very tough group which included Porsches, Aston Martins, Triumphs, modern Morgans and E-type Jaguars, was a '66 Corvair. It did not excel in that run against all-out sports cars, but it was fun to watch the air-cooled, rear-engine car with a history compete.

In the parking lot were an interesting assortment of exotic, classic and unusual cars. including:

• A very rare MG TF sports car, successor to the classic TD. which established the British sports car as part of the American scene. The TC and TD were resolutely '30s in their styling, but the TF made some consessions to modern design, with raked grille and headlamps sort of incorporated into the fenders.

• A '53 Chevrolet Corvette, the first year for that nameplate. One of the most valuable collector cars of the post-war era, it was not there to race and in fact never was a favorite with the racing crowd. Unique in that it had a fiberglass body, it otherwise had the same sixcylinder engine as the Chevy family sedan and came only with an automatic transmission. The first Corvette was built in Flint and only 300 units rolled off the line in that first year.

• A mildly customized '49 Ford, with trim removed, wire wheels and a deep-gloss red finish. A nice example of the car that saved the faltering Ford empire after World War II.

 A '64 Sunbeam Tiger with a Ford V-8 stuffed under that sleek hood. It is reported that Lord Rootes came out to take a look at this curiosity Rootes and Ford engineers had put together and took it for a drive. Aides became alarmed when he failed to return after a few minutes, fearing that the hot little machine had gotten out of hand. They breathed a sigh of relief when their conservative boss returned, got out and walked around the car without saying a word, then spoke: "Let's build it." The company did, until 1968.

• A '36 Ford Phaeton, a magnificent example of the elegant styling that marked Fords during the '30s under the influence of Edsel Ford. Fords were not intended as racing cars, of course, but a '36 Ford won the Monte Carlo Rally that year.

• An early Ford F-100, done up in tasteful customizing. Its vintage stumped us.

• A '57 Jaguar Mark I fourdoor sedan, or saloon, as the British call it. Certainly one of the most beautiful saloons ever built.

Create a non-alcoholic drink

Michigan residents who can turn the image of leaping lords, piping pipers and other true-love gifts into tasty non-alcoholic drinks could win $1,000 in AAA Michigan's 12th annual "Zero-Proof Mix-Off" competition. Entry deadline is Sept.

The "Twelve Days of Christmas" theme has been selected for this year's contest in keeping with the 12th "First A Friend, Then A Host" drink contest which draws attention to alcohol awareness during the Thanksgiving, Christmas and New Year's holidays.

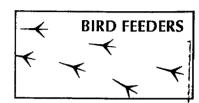

The non-alcoholic drink judged best on taste, appearance, originality of name and adherence to the "Twelve Days" theme will win its creator $1,000. Second, third and fourth place will win $250, $150 and $100, respectively.

The 20 finalists selected during preliminary judging of written entries must mix their drinks in person, Thursday, Sept. 24, at the Detroit Press Club in Detroit's Renaissance Center.

Entrants must be Michigan residents 16 or older. No alcohol or flavor extract containing alcohol is allowed. Previous winning drinks are not eligible. Only one recipe per person and one person per entry are allowed. AAA Michigan employees and their immediate families are not eligible.

Entries should include name, address, daytime telephone number, name of drink, ingredients and mixing directions. Mail entries to: "Zero-Proof Mix-Off," AAA Michigan Public Relations, 1 Auto Club Drive, Dearborn, Mich. 48126.

Woods couple to hit the dusty trail this weekend

By Debra Pascoe Staff Writer

When Grosse Pointe Woods residents Dan and Elise Paterek bought new mountain bikes in March, they had no idea they would be taking them on a 90-mile ride.

The Patereks are just two of 700 off-road bicyclists who will participate in a 290-mile, sixday cycling tour across the state in the inaugural Detroit Free Press Michigander Aug.

Proceeds from the event, sponsored by the Detroit Free Press and the Michigan chapter of the Rails to Trails Conservancy, will help cover the costs of converting unused railroad tracks into cycling paths.

Elise Paterek has seen firsthand the work Rails to Trails 'has done in Michigan. Her inlaws' home abuts a portion of the converted 75-mile trail along the Paint Creek in Rochester - the official end of the six-day trip.

Participants in the race can either take on the entire 290mile challenge, choose the 90mile week-end adventure or opt for shorter one-day tours.

The Patereks chose the Kalamazoo to South Haven weekend excursion after learning their friends also had signed up for the tour. Elise Paterek also felt it would be fun to do with her husband, but decided it may be too grueling for their 10-year-old son, Peter.

Elise Paterek, who is an aerobics instructer, is confident she'll have an easier time covering the first 45-mile leg than her husband.

"He thinks he's going to be way ahead, but I don't think so. I think he's gonna poop out," Elise Paterek teased.

Her only worry? "I don't know how my butt's going to

In preparation for the race, the couple bought matching bicycle shorts - complete with the necessary padding - and helmets to wear on the trip and during their two five-mile training rides each evening.

Since 1986, the Michigan chapter of Rails to Trails has developed almost 500 bike paths across the state, many in the Upper Peninsula, according to Roger Storm, chapter direc-

"It isn't cheap, but in terms of the amount of use and the land involved it is relatively cheap," Storm said.

For example, the 22-mile blacktopped Hart Montague path in Huron County cost between $500,000 and $750,000.

Storm said the conservancy doesn't buy neglected railroad lines; rather it acts as an advocacy group to educate the public on the benefits of the trails. Members also work with the Department of Natural Resources recreation division and encourage state legislators to seek funding for future projects.

"One of the reasons we're doing the bike ride is not only to keep our office running but in the future to become a resource for local municipalities for upkeep of the trails," he said.

State funds that have been used to finance the trails are not tax dollars. The money comes from revenues generated through the state's oil and gas explorations.

Many trails that have been completed over the last 20 years were developed as part of a snowmobile trail network. But many haven't been surfaced to suit cycling.

"For snowmobiles, all you need is the snow," he said.

In many cases, local municipalities have taken advantage of a DNR-sponsored partnership program that brings officials, business leaders and residents together to maintain the trails.

Once a trail has been designated, Storm said the railroads will often sell the steel tracks and railroad ties to salvage companies or use the materials in other locations. Once the railroad is officially abandoned, the trouble starts, Storm said. Because the land is no longer policed, residents adjacent to it complain about trash dumped on the site and motorcycles and trucks speeding down the path. But once the land is under public ownership, the problems are corrected.

"Its so popular to bikers and walkers, just use alone will eliminate the troubles associated with it," he said.

When Elise and Dan Paterek return to Grosse Pointe Woods Aug. 16, they may have a few problems of their own - like sitting, walking, moving . . .

MCC may try again with bond bid

By Debra Pascoe Staff Writer

Macomb County voters may be asked to reconsider last Tuesday's rejection and approve a $16.8 million bond continuation proposal to fund Macomb Community College's major repair and replacement program.

The college board of trustees is expected to discuss an administrative recommendation at its Aug. 18 meeting to again put the issue before voters in the November general election.

If the board decides not to try again, Bob Rini, manager of editorial services, said the college will have to make do with the money it has on hand. At this time there has been no discussion of a tuition increase to make up for the lost funding, he said. Students now pay $42 a credit hour.

Rini said when the college was established in 1954, trustees promised the community it would remain fiscally responsible. Even given the college's current bleak financial picture,

Rini said officials have no intention of breaking that prom-

"We aren't going to spend money we don't have," he said. However, the college is bound to suffer from cutbacks.

When the bond issue was originally passed in 1988, Rini said the goal was to ensure graduates of its vocational programs that they would be trained on the most up-to-date equipment to ensure their employability. In order to do that, he said money will have to be taken from different departments to cover the costs of new equipment - and that means building maintenance will probably suffer.

"No matter which pocket you pull from you only have a finite amount of money," he said.

Because most of the college buildings are 31 years old, maintenance and repairs are piling up. But they'll have to be put on hold until funds are found, Rini said.

"We hope it doesn't cost more money when the repairs have to be made," Rini said.

The bond proposal was defeated in a tight contest with 43,139 "no" votes and 40,587 "yes" votes.

Highland games test strength, skill with music, dance

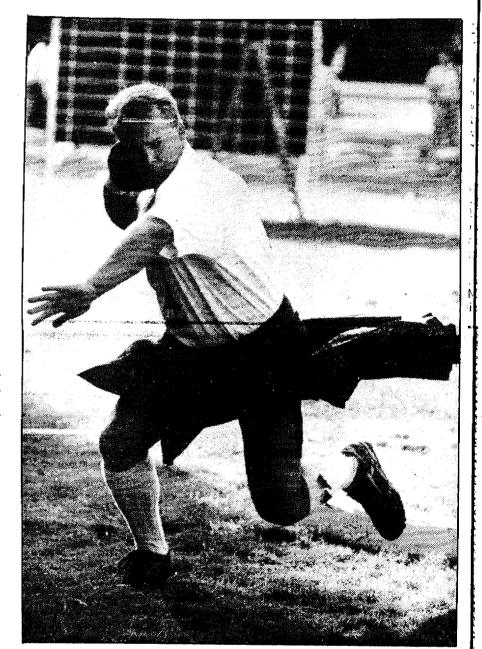

The parade of bands, above, was a stirring spectacle. At the left, a bagpiper practices before the competition. Bagpipe music, due to the continuous flow of sound, uses short, cutting notes which are combined to form movements to produce various sounds. The movements are complex and take years to master.

Photos by Leah Vartanian

The girls at the left take part in the highland dancing competition. At the right, an athlete puts, or throws, a stone during another contest. The 20-pound stone was obtained from the shores of Lake Huron.

The caber toss, at the bottom, is the most spectacular event at any highland gathering. This feat of strength, balance and agility has remained basically unchanged over the centuries, and is referred to in ancient records as "ye casting of ye bar." A caber is a log or pole, usually peeled of its bark, measuring between 16 and 20 feet in length. It weighs from 85 pounds to more than 200 pounds. Below, right, a contestant lifts the caber, and below, left, another competitor throws it.

Library summer reading program finale is SRO

The auditorium at Grosse Pointe South was standing room only for the public library's Summer Reading Celebration, held Aug. 5 to mark the end of the Summer Reading Program and Summer Film Series at the libraries.

More than 250 parents and children, some costumed as their favorite storybook characters, enjoyed a "puppet potpour-ri" presented by puppeteer John Osborne.

Each child received a heliumfilled balloon and stickers of author James Marshall's characters. Three stuffed hippos, representing Marshall's beloved George and Martha characters were awarded to the Read-A-Lottery winners from each branch library.

About 1,500 children took part in the program throughout the summer. During July alone, nearly 10,000 books were checked out of the youth collection at Central Library.

Summer readers were given a lottery ticket for every 50 ages read, allowing the most rolific readers the best chance f winning a prize. Certificates participation will be distribted to all readers through ieir schools in September.

Park approves 6 for comp fund

Special Writer

The Grosse Pointe Park City Council voted this week to approve all six incumbent trustees to serve on the Michigan Municipal Worker's Compensation Fund.

It is the fund trustees' duty to operate as policy-makers in overseeing the operation of the

The nominees are voted in by communities statewide that are members of the fund. The candidates with the highest number of votes will be elected to the six positions available.

The recommended nominees are: Lawrence Hegstrom, mayor, Crystal Falls; Randall Husk, city councilman, Troy; Ruth Ann Jamnick, treasurer, Ypsilani Charter Township; James E. Leidlein, city manager, Harper Woods; D. Wayne O'Neal, city manager, Clawson; and Rillastine Wilkins, councilwoman, Muskegon Heights.

The council also approved the request by the Lucky Penny. located at 15316 E. Jefferson, to hold an outdoor party Labor Day weekend in its parking lot behind the restaurant.

The Lucky Penny must also obtain a special permit from the Liquor Control Commission to have drinking outside.

A proposal, introduced by Do. by Hair Co. for a Fall Festival in the Park was tabled, because no members of the organizing committee were present at the meeting.

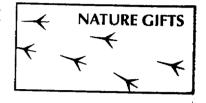

The highlight of the 25-minute council meeting came at the start when councilman Andrew Richner, walking in a few minutes after roll call, passed out chocolate cigars to the council and the audience to mark the birth of his baby boy.

Mayor Palmer Heenan immediately unwrapped his cigar and began chomping on it, and the rest of the council followed suit.

After the regular meeting adjourned, a closed-door session followed. The discussion involved the status of contract negotiations of the two police unions — patrol and command.

Real estate acquisitions were also discussed during the closed door session. No action was taken on either of these issues, said Dale Krajniak, Park city manager.

Party time

Jewelry and credit cards were stolen from an upstairs bedroom of a home in the 1000 block of Berkshire in Grosse Pointe Park sometime between July 25 and July 31 while the homeowners were away.

Their son had two parties during that time and parents suspect that's when the theft occurred.

Indecent exposure

A 13-year-old girl was the victim of an alleged indecent exposure incident on Charlevoix in Grosse Pointe Park.

The girl was walking on Charlevoix at 7:30 p.m. Aug. 3 when a black male described as 5-feet tall, about 120 pounds tried to lure her into an alley.

When she refused, he pulled down his pants and grabbed her buttocks. The girl got

Lake level

Lake St. Clair at the end of July was at elevation 575.33 feet above the mean water level at Rimouski, Quebec, or 36 inches above chart datum.

This was about 2 inches above what it was a year ago, and about 3 inches above one month ago.

The July monthly mean level of 575.22 feet was about 7 inches above the long-term average for July. The lake, however, remained about 24 inches below the all-time high July monthly mean level, which was recorded in 1986.

The forecast shows that at the end of August, the level of Lake St. Clair will be about 6 inches below what it was at the end of July. The level of the lake is expected to begin its seasonal decline in August.

The water level in January 1993, is expected to be about 7 inches above the long-term average for that month, or about 3 inches below what it was at the same time in 1992.

ombit says, because it's more difficult for individuals to launch businesses today. The costs are enormous, he says, especially for anyone who doesn't have an extensive line of credit.

Palombit concedes the domestic auto industry and its suppliers have taken a pummeling from the Japanese in the U.S. marketplace. But the chairman of the Grinnell operations says those who have survived emerge stronger from the competition. Today, when it comes to quality in manufacturing, "we now are duplicating the success the Japanese have had," he says. In the last several years, the Japanese have controlled the automotive job shop market.

"But we recently won a contract with Tokico-USA, a Japanese auto supplier with offices in Kentucky," Palombit continues. "It took us three years to get it. And that included many visits by their people to our operations, paperwork, answers to questions, more visits, more answers to the same questions.'

Palombit credits his son, Grinnell president Louis A. Palombit, with the Tokico victory, as well as the company's continued growth. "He has studied the technology carefully, and has bought the right kinds of equipment to keep us competitive in price and qual-

"But the real secret is good people, and we've got them.'

The senior Palombit, now 79. continues to look for talent and dedication. He recalled at a recent golf outing that he learned that a friend was going to close his local manufacturing business. Would Palombit be interested in buying any of his equipment before it went to auction, the colleague asked?

"I went over to his shop to look at it, and while I was there I met a highly skilled man, soon to be out of work, I knew I wanted on our staff," Palombit says. "I referred him to one of our key people. I also bought a couple of machines. It broke my heart to see this fine business going under.'

The last five years have been devastating to smaller shops tied to the auto industry, he says. Factory orders for original equipment parts have followed the downward trend of new-car sales. Suppliers who haven't been able to keep up with new technology while controlling their own costs have been forced out of business, squeezed between the pressures of reduced income and growing demand for zero-d nents.

Plaques citing the company's preferred-supplier status with customers like Ford, Chrysler and General Motors adorn the walls of the reception area at Grinnell Screw Products. But they are more than wood-andmetal trophies. They have become a necessary part of doing business with the Big Three, Palombit says. Without its Q-1 rating, for example, there's little chance of the firm getting any contracts with Ford Motor Co. "The paperwork and other requirements behind these awards is tremendous," Palombit says, waving his hands. "I think if I were doing it alone, I wouldn't have the patience to

He waves Bob Ripley into the conference room. The company vice president carries documentation produced by a new electronic quality-measuring device with the ability to check the surfaces of parts to within a tiny fraction of an inch. The company is considering buying the $27,000 unit. Customers demand these kinds of tolerances, Ripley says, and they must have read-outs to prove your parts are perfect. They no longer re-inspect pieces after they arrive.

Palombit says the time, space and energy the Grinnell companies invest in quality inspections have increased in recent years. Gone are the days when parts - like those first 50,000 bleed screws for Bendix could be churned out and tossed in boxes for shipment. Now, inspections punctuate the various cutting, grinding, boring and milling stages required for the brake and transmission components produced.

Sophisticated equipment measures some pieces; dozens of people pick up and inspect others, sitting for hours each day studying aluminum, steel and brass parts under their work lamps before carefully packing them for final transport.

The payoff comes in longerterm contracts, says Betsy Palombit, who heads the company's customer service program. "We have some threeyear agreements, which really helps our operations."

The level of quality, she says, is reflected in the fact that Grinnell has delivered seven million pistons for Chrysler brakes in two years without any rejections.

"Our Palco-CNC operation does work on castings and forgings for customers like Rockwell International and GM Truck and Bus," she said. "Palco and Grinnell Screw Products are screw machine works and Palco Stamping on Mack at Conner turns out brake disc plates for G.M.'

Peter 'Tad' Miller

Peter 'Tad' Miller

Services were held Sunday, Aug. 2. at Grace Community Church in Detroit for Peter "Tad" Miller, 29, of Grosse Pointe Farms, who died July 30, 1992, at Cottage Hospital in the Farms of complications from AIDS.

He was a self-employed singer, composer and recording engineer who recorded his first songs while attending Grosse Pointe South High School, where he graduated in 1981. Miller published and produced songs both in Los Angeles, where he moved in 1982, and in Grosse Pointe.

He also owned Zone Productions, a Grosse Pointe recording studio.

Proceeds from the sale of his most recent album, "Save the Music Now," are earmarked for the Children's Immune Disorders (CIDS) organization.

Last November, Miller talked with the Grosse Pointe News about his struggle with AIDS.

He said his foremost mission was to urge people to pay attention to the AIDS epidemic. He said it was especially important to spread the message in Grosse Pointe, an area where many people think they are insulated from the problem.

"I want to alarm people, but avoid panic," he said during the interview. "People really need to be shaken and awakened.

Richard H. Beach Sr.

Funeral services for Richard H. Beach Sr., 83, of Battle Creek, formerly of Grosse Pointe Farms, will be held at 1 p.m. today, Aug. 13, 1992, at the Farley-Estes Funeral Home in Battle Creek. Mr. Beach died Aug. 10 in Battle Creek after a brief illness.

He was born in Lima, Ohio, and attended the University of Florida, Columbia University, Michigan State University, the University of Michigan and Northern Michigan University. He earned a Ph.D. degree in education from Wayne State University.

He served for two years as a training officer in the U.S. Army. He was a coach, counselor and teacher. He was principal of Lakeshore High School in St. Clair Shores from 1949-52, and served as superintendent of schools in Bay City and in a suburb of Saginaw.

Mr. Beach was a teacher in the Grosse Pointe Public Schools from 1960-75, and was voted Outstanding Educator in Wayne County in the Detroit News' Apple for the Teacher contest in 1970.

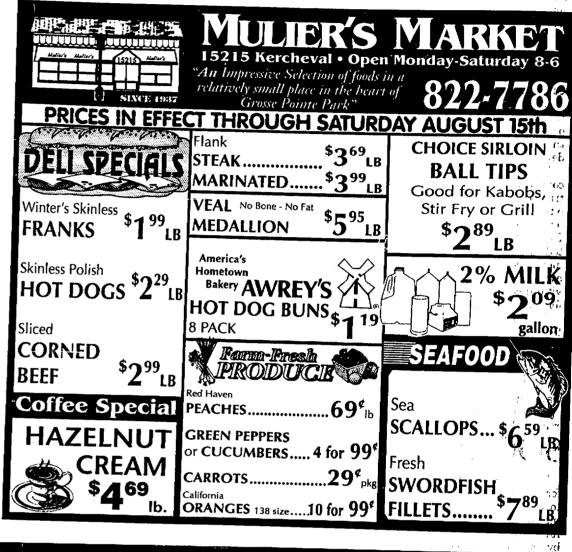

He was a member of the Kiwanis Club for 38 years. He served the club as president of the Grosse Pointe chapter, as a trustee for the Kiwanis of Michigan Foundation and as governor of a division of Kiwanis. He received Kiwanis' highest nonor, the Legion of Honor award, in 1987. Mr. Beach organized the Grosse Pointe South High School Key Club 30 years ago and served as adviser for the group. He also helped organize Key Clubs at Osborn High School in D troit and Lakeshore Hig School in St. Clair Shores.

After his retirement in 1975 he continued volunteer activities such as taking food and clothing to the needy, tutoring learning disabled and troubled students and assisting with Grosse Pointe's Substance Abuse Council (SAC2). Survivors include his wife Ellen; a daughter, Betty A. Harvey; a son, Richard H. Beach II. a sister, Beatrice Hawkins of Daytona Beach? Fla.; and a grandson.

Burial will be at Memorial Park Cemetery in Battle Creek. Memorial donations may be made to Kiwanis Club International.

Ceep up, stretch your mind and stay young at heart

In his book, "The Life Cycle completed," Erik Erikson reises some of his earlier conspts. In previous writings he aw old age as a period of semity and wisdom, but he now sees it as another opportunity or growth and personal fulfillment.

This change in philosophy as largely come about because if his work and study in the eight stages of human development.

He is joined in this convicion by his wife and collaboraor, Joan Erikson, who says, One of the surprises of old age is that learning is possible. It has been proven that even the muscles of the aging adult can earn new skills, if not aproached with a negative attiude." She qualifies this with: "Graceful aging requires all he strength one can muster. drowing old is not for sissies." Erik Erikson substantiates this view with, "Old age has ordained conflicts and, living develop new strengths."

He also emphasizes the discontinuance of family life as a traditional family unit where often three generations lived in one household and in one area. He contends that in family life today, where grandparents live alone and children are far away, there is a minimum of vital involvement so necessary through them, old people can for really staying alive.

In other words, older people feel unneeded and betrayed. Children, whom they hoped would provide companionship and make a place for them in their lives and achievements, have failed them.

They must accept reality and realize that while they are loved, circumstances dictate that young people work. Even if they live close by, they are so involved with their own affairs that they have little time to spend.

The way to combat the situation; Erikson says, is to develop and grow and become such an interesting person that grandchildren will seek you out.

With this in mind, Joan Erikson worked on a project in the San Francisco area that combined her skill in teaching arts and crafts with her knowledge of human needs at various life stages.

What she had in mind was to establish a program for grand-parents, particularly for those whose grandchildren lived far away, where they could brush up on their skills.

"When you talk to older people, they don't know what to do with children," she said. When their grandchildren come to their homes, grandparents have the feeling they want to be fed and taken somewhere but the rest is amorphous.

"The vital intimacy, the nurturing of ties between generations must be nurtured for survival of both young and old," she said. "It may be necessary to demonstrate how the task of grandparenting can stimulate the older generation. It is especially needed for deprived children from impaired families."

As she searched for new ways to help her contemporaries become intimately involved with the younger generation, she found that there is a need for older people to take on more responsibilities.

In her career, Joan Erikson has used her talents as a craftswoman to develop meaningful programs for people of all ages.

A question whether grandparents in this enlightened age do feel abandoned and at loose ends could arise. Many of them have accepted the fact that the extended family is gone. If they didn't live in the same house, they lived close enough so they were in daily contact. They realize that now even if families live close by, they are so busy with their day-to-day doings that the only time allotted for grandparents is holidays, celebrations and some vacation time. Mother and father both work and the children are busy with school, their friends and various other activities. Their days and hours are filled.

Having accepted these facts, the older generation has gone outside the family for compan-

60 and 2 percent of all residents in the six cities are over ionship and purpose for being.

They join clubs, they volunteer, they play bridge and they travel. They fill their time but their hearts are empty. They long for a close, meaningful relationship with the family that was once the center of their lives. What they really want is to be an integral part of the

How to achieve that without being demanding is what Joan Erikson demonstrated to those willing to try new things to become more oriented to the world of their grandchildren. The best way is to find out what interests younger people the most.

Young people today have far different problems than even their parents experienced. It takes a little probing to find out what they are, but a good place to start might be by reading what are termed realistic teen novels.

Add to this newspapers and magazines, radio, television or any approach that keeps you in tune with the world. If the purpose is to be contemporary, there is much to learn if we are to have rapport with our young people.

Joan Erikson points out that while we are stretching our minds to better understand others, we are also becoming mentally alive, someone who is well worthwhile being around.

Listen to the radio and discover what teenagers like. You might not like it, but the growing process is not easy. The music scene could be reciprocal. It is rumored that the big band sound is coming back. You could impress the younger people by recalling the big names — Benny Goodman, Artie Shaw and Tommy and Jimmy Dor-

Another way to reach out to remind young people that you are not buried in the past but have a hold on the present is to become knowledgeable about sports. You don't have to know the techniques and the strategies but you can keep track of scores, standings and personalities.

Another top interest to young people is computers. If you hope to gain their attention, you'd better become acquainted with bits and bytes.

It is possible to acquire a general knowledge of computers and their many applications in modern life. You might even take a basic computer course.

Keeping in contact through common interests and knowledge does involve effort. If we are going to establish our identity in the latter stages of life, we must develop new strengths.

SOC to testify against proposed cuts

Three members of Services for Older Citizens (SOC) went to Lansing July 17 for a hearing on proposed revisions to funding. The hearing was held by the Michigan Office of Services to the Aging.

They were Helen Francis, board member, Ann Kraemer, executive director, and Mary Evelyn Self, president.

Francis has been an advocate for seniors in the Grosse Hointes and Harper Woods since her retirement at 70 from the faculty of Wayne State University School of Social Work 18 years ago. Her statement at the hearing challenged the cuts in funding for the Detroit Area Agency on Aging, in whose service area SOC is located.

She said that with the proposed cuts, the most vulnerable seniors will be at risk.

In the funding formula under review, a 2.25 percent cut in funding to the Detroit agency was proposed, which is in addition to a recent cut of 15 percent. The Detroit Area Agency on Aging currently receives 18 percent of the total share of state funding while the proposed share is 15.75 percent.

On the other hand, she said, the funding proposal for the total share for District 1B (Macomb, St. Clair and Washtenaw counties) is an increase from 18 percent to 28.64 percent.

In testimony at the hearing, Self said, "We would like to continue the service program we have begun. To do that, we need a commitment from the commission to continue the approach of local control of community-based services."

She made a strong plea for special recognition of the needs of low income and minority residents of the state.

The state commission, which has sole authority to approve the new formula, is expected to vote on the issue at its monthly business meeting Sept. 18.

Before that, the commission will host a second public hearing in Lansing on Thursday, Aug. 20, from 10 a.m. to noon at the Holiday Inn Conference Center, 7501 W. Saginaw.

Representatives from SOC, as well as city officials from the Pointes and Harper Woods, plan to testify Aug. 20.

According to current census figures, the advancing age of residents in the five Grosse Pointes and Harper Woods is increasing — one of three residents of Harper Woods are over Allergic to insect bites?

For people allergic to insect tings, knowing how to prevent them could save lives this sumner.

A new brochure, "Patient Inprimation on Allergic Reactions of Insect Stings," outlines comtion sense measures that hould be taken by anyone who as experienced an allergic rection to an insect sting. The rochure is free by calling 1-10-23 STING.

Some of the precautions disassed in the brochure:

1. Don't wear bright-colored othing and sweet-smelling rfumes, hairsprays and deorants (try not to look or smell to a flower).

2. If eating outdoors, keep all od covered and avoid drinking om open beverage containers inging insects have a tendct bites?

3. Allergic reactions to insect stings can actually be prevented. If a person has had a severe reaction to an insect sting, he should consult an allergist about venom immunotherapy (VIT), a safe, effective treatment that offers protection against future reactions to insect stings.

Although more people will die this summer from allergic reactions to insect stings than from snake or spider bites, and thousands will suffer lifethreatening allergic reactions requiring treatment at emergency care facilities across the United States, simple avoidance measures along with VIT could reduce these statistics dramatically.

Be it big things or little things, she seeks dignity for elderly

By Pat Paholsky Editor

Patricia Heftler tells about looking into an elderly woman's refrigerator - after getting her permission - and finding 22 packaged dinners from Meals on Wheels.

The woman had forgotten that she would be receiving a hot meal every day. When the volunteer delivered it, she accepted it out of politeness and social worker for Beaumont Hospital Home Care.

There were a significant number of patients being discharged who still needed a tremendous amount of help," she said. "Medicare would say you can get six weeks of care for this, four weeks for that. There are limited resources for ongoing follow up and community services are overtaxed.'

So last year, Heftler took her training and experience working with older people and began Elder Care Options, a community networking and care management service which gives counseling and assistance to seniors in their homes or wherever they are.

"Our goal is to provide needed care while allowing the person as much independence and dignity as possible," Heftler said.

The services range from housekeeping and meal preparation to help with placement in an assisted living facility to arranging for 24-hour home care. Elder Care Options will help secure legal or financial aid or help the family deal with a terminally ill parent.

As a geriatric care manager, Heftler assesses a situation and makes recommendations in writing and verbally. What she also does is show someone how to parent a parent.

"It's very difficult when roles are changed," she said. "It's very painful to see a parent lose either physical or mental functions.'

There may be disagreement among the adult children about whether a parent needs help.

"I've had meetings with four or five siblings whose opinions ran the entire spectrum," she said. "One sees mom in a nursing home and the other feels mom is fine in her own home."

Besides being the objective party, Heftler provides counseling. "The person may have lost a spouse, their siblings, physical function and at least part of their independence," Heftler said.

"It's very difficult to cope with and the person may be depressed and not know it. They think they're fine, but they're not eating and sleeping well. Sometimes a small dose of medication will help.

Heftler said her recommendations could be as simple as getting a parent with arthritis a tool to open jars or a chair for the bathtub to make it easier to get in and out. She might recommend that the son or daughter have dinner once a week with mom and do her laundry, because going up and down the stairs is dangerous.

"It can be little things like taking out all of the throw rugs," she said. "Very often it's simple, basic things.

Heftler said the plastic containers to hold pills for each day of the week are hard to open and the print may be too small to read.

"I use muffin tins and I write the doses large," she said. "They work real well."

Sometimes, however, there is no choice, Heftler said, and a parent requires 24-hour care or a nursing home. "That's where counseling comes in, because people are guilt-stricken," she said. "In the Grosse Pointe area there are very good nursing homes. Sometimes you don't have a choice and 24-hour care is very expensive."

Then there's sundowner syndrome in which a person is all right until it gets dark and he or she becomes disoriented. The adult child sees the parent mainly during the day and doesn't know there's a problem ily when a parent is near death. "A lot of people have difficulty talking with a loved one about dying. I will have a meeting with all of the family members and introduce the topic.' Most people are relieved, she said. "They have final things they want to say to their loved

Heftler also recommends legal and financial services, if it's necessary. "Very often I'm more involved on a monitoring basis," she said.

Another monitoring services is vacation coverage for adult. children who may be gone for a few weeks or for the winter. Heftler will visit the parent weekly or monthly and provide the children with a phone or written report.

Heftler got into the field of gerontology when she worked as a counselor at Harper Hospital in surgery and oncology. "Statistically, people in hospitals are older and I found I liked working with older people the best," she said.

She worked at Harper for five years and then spent six years working in home care for Beaumont Hospital.

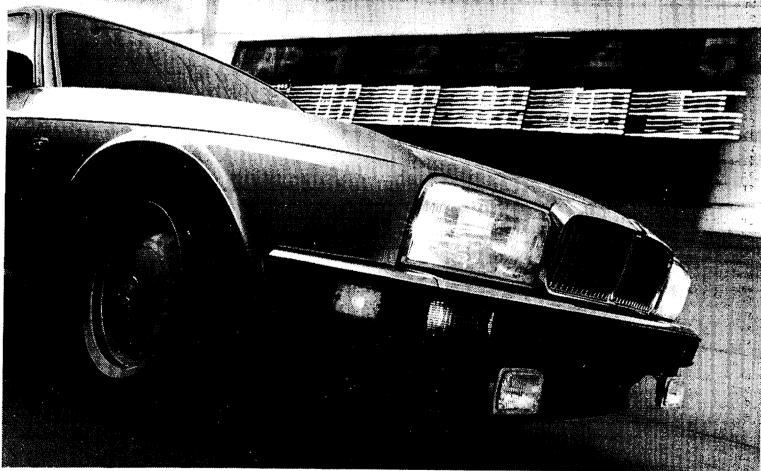

"In the hospital, people are fed, bathed and cared for," she said. When patients are discharged, however, it's a different story, and that's where Heftler strives to help.

Michigan employers pay top tarting salaries in Midwest

Although Michigan's constricted economy may be making the job search more challenging than ever for recent college graduates, the effort may be well worthwhile for those who do land a job in their career field.

A survey conducted by the Cooperative Education Research Program at Wayne State University reveals that salaries paid to new graduates by employers in Michigan were the highest among nine Midwest states.

The average annual starting salary paid to recent four-year college graduates, as reported by Michigan employers who participated in the survey, was $29,052. Ohio ranked second, with a $28,362 average, and Indiana third, at $27,257. Salaries paid to new graduates were lowest in Iowa and Missouri, the survey found.

Graduates with engineering degrees enjoyed the top starting salaries, averaging $30,792 annually in the nine states surveyed. Among this group of graduates, mechanical and chemical engineers commanded the highest annual remuneration, averaging $33,424 and $31,476, respectively.

Based on some 500 responses from employers with co-op programs, researchers found that recent graduates were receiving the highest salaries in petroleum-related industries. Lowest salaries were in the non-profit sector.

for the past seven years, the survey focuses on wages, salaries and benefits provided by employers to students, including recent graduates, who participate in cooperative education programs. The most recent poll, which covers 1991, was supported by the Michigan Council for Cooperative Education.

"As might be expected, there is a direct correlation between salary rates and skills that are in high demand," notest survey director John Crusoe. "We also know that, other things being equal, graduates with co-op work experience have an advantage in the job market over their peers who do not have onthe-job experience in their field of interest."

In Michigan, the average annual salary paid to newly degreed engineering students was $33,384, the survey found. In the sciences, newly employed graduates with a bachelor's degree earned an average of $29,136, while their counterparts in business averaged $26,460. Humanities and social science graduates trailed, with an average salary of $24,384.

Crusoe, who is executive director of counseling and placement services at WSU, says the survey results may be of particular interest to employers who are curious about how salary and benefit packages offered to their new employees with college degrees compare to averages reported in the survey.

The report also gives average monthly salary rates for starting co-op students and for students on their final work assignment before graduation.

Mirroring the trend for engineering graduates, the monthly average salary received by coop students pursuing engineering degrees was higher than that received by students studying in most other career fields, the survey found.

The report has separate secions pertaining to associate's legree- and bachelor's degreeevel students. Salary data is eported by monthly rather han annual averages, Crusoe oints out, because co-op jobs ormally last less than a year.

ewelry stolen

A resident of Newberry Place Grosse Pointe Farms rerted more than $5,000 in jewy was stolen from her home netime between 1:30 and 0 p.m. on Aug. 7.

The woman said there were ne men working on trees in yard at that time. No arabaye been made.

The nine states included in the survey are Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kentucky, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, Ohio and Wisconsin.

Among other conclusions of the report:

 Employers of co-op students pursuing bachelor's degrees tend to provide more benefits than do employers of students on associate's degree programs;

• Employers in the utilities industry pay the highest entry-level salaries to graduates with associate's degrees;

• Employers in the automotive and mechanical equipment industries provide the most benefits to new graduates with bachelor's degrees.

• Salaries tend to be highest in metropolitan areas located roughly along a line between Chicago and Cleveland, and diminishing the farther a city is situated north or south of the line.

Interior designers to display work

The best of professional interior design will be on display to the public during "Design, Live! A Day With Designers," on Saturday, Aug. 22, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Michigan Design Center in Troy. Thirty-one 8 foot x 10 foot room vignettes by metro Detroit area designers will be displayed. In addition, eight interior designers will do table-top displays and show their portfolios.

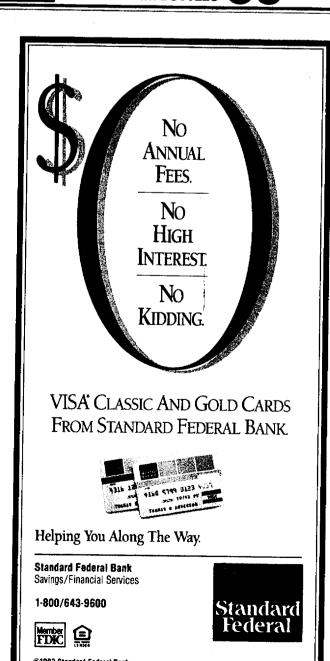

Five design-related seminars will be offered throughout the day in selected showrooms. Attendees will hear Barbara Krass of Colorworks Studio of Interior Design discuss "Building a New Home Without Losing Your Mind"; Susan Zinger of MDC looks at "How To Work With an Interior Designer"; Gene Galley of Rohn Goldman Design and Gary Fried of Madison Design Group present "tchens, By Design"; Karen Gagne, Gagne & Gagne, discusses the importance of "Accessorizing"; and Nancy Laube of Laube Interiors describes "Smart Decorating — How To Complete Your Look At The Right Price!".

Admission is $8, with a portion of the proceeds to benefit the Rainbow Connection, a non-profit corporation that grants the wishes of children with lifethreatening illnesses. Lunch will be available for purchase. Showrooms will be closed, but lighted for consumer viewing.

Michigan Design Center is a resource marketplace for the interior design profession. Normally open to the trade only, consumers are welcome in the company of their interior designer, architect or builder. It is located at 1700 Stutz Drive, north off Maple, three blocks east of Coolidge.

Dreamweaver P.O.W.E.R.:

Women and their children get help in east side Grateful Home project

By Margie Reins Smith

Sara Snyder tells two true

Snyder is executive director of the Dreamweaver P.O.W.E.R. Project of Grateful Home Inc.

Grateful Home is the oldest substance abuse and transitional housing program for women in Detroit. It's located on East Grand Boulevard.

The Dreamweaver P.O.W.E.R. Project is a coalition of services for chemically dependent women and their children. It's located on the site of the former St. Bernard School, 11031 Mack Avenue at Fairview, on Detroit's east side. "It was summer, 1988," she said. "I was director of the original Grateful Home on East vard in Detroit. I was getting tired of telling women who needed us that we were full - that there were no beds available.

Grand Boule-

"A woman came to us. She was living with a dope dealer. She had children, but they were living with her parents. I had to turn her

"A few weeks later, her body was found in a dumpster. She had been beaten, slashed and set on fire.

'She didn't deserve that. Neither did her children.

to anybody who would listen about the critical needs of chemically dependent women and their children.

"That's all I did for three years. I talked to committees, wrote letters to newspapers, went to conferences, did anything I could."

The Dreamweaver P.O.W.E.R. Project opened in February 1992 and so far 643 women and their children have been through the program.

Snyder calls her second story "The Teddy Bear and the Dope Dealer.'

'We had an 11-year-old girl here (in the Dreamweaver program). Her mom was in treatment. She was extremely quiet, sad and withdrawn. We found out that her mom owed money to a dope dealer, so the dealer broke into their home and cleaned out everything. He took their furniture, clothes, toys, everything — including a teddy bear, which he yanked out of the little girl's arms.

"Troy Woods, our resource coordinator, went out and bought a big teddy bear which had its arms wrapped around a smaller bear. He gave her the

"She took them, grinning from ear to ear. She named the big bear after her mom and the small bear after herself. It changed her life. She became outgoing, bubbly, sharing. She's now behaving like a bubbly 11-year-old girl."

It was a small gesture, Snyder said. "There are so many social problems. People want to help but they're overwhelmed. 'I made a commitment right --- They don't know what to do. A then to go anywhere and speak small gesture - like the gift of a teddy bear - can help a great deal.

"I like to think we beat the dope man. He probably had this little girl pegged as a potential customer.

Snyder smiled and pounded a fist on her desk.

"But we beat the dope man." Grateful Home on East Grand Boulevard has provided a therapeutic environment for chemically dependent and homeless women for 30 years.

The Dreamweaver Project which Snyder presides over, has the same purpose and a mission to empower women with the ability to make healthy, positive choices critical to successful independent living. P.O.W.E.R. stands for Proud Of Women Enjoying Re-ren were on the street. Detroit shelters were overwhelmed.

'This is a unique approach to a group of people with a problem," Snyder said. "Traditionally, one agency in one building does one piece of the recovery process for the client - offers shelter, for instance.

"But then the client has to pay for child care and take two or three buses three or four times a week to complete the other pieces of recovery - education, for instance, or job

"Our approach is to bring everything here. No buses are necessary. Clients just walk down the hall or across the parking lot.

• Life Directions Inc. helps teenagers learn how to be responsible and self-reliant.

Another unique aspect of the Dreamweaver project, Snyder said, is the mixture of city and suburban agencies and people who are contributing to its success. "Our staff is a combination of city and suburban people," she said, "and the coalition is an interesting combination of city and suburban agencies.

The Junior League of Detroit, for instance, whose members are primarily Grosse Pointe women, joined Grateful Home in a five-year project to acquire the St. Bernard School. The Junior League made a $50,000 down payment on the buildings and property. They will place $16,000 each year for the next four years into an escrow account to pay the $75,000 balloon payment due

The Junior League is also funding two children's service staff positions, will renovate all children's play spaces and will provide volunteers to serve as child care aides.

The program is also unusual because women may stay as long as they are attempting to turn their lives around. "The length of stay is open-ended.' Synder said. "Most other places limit clients to 30 days. We also accept children from birth to age 17.

Funding for the Dreamweaver project is complicated.

"In the last seven months, Grateful Home has submitted proposals to a combination of city, state and federal sources, she said. "Thirteen grants or contracts have been approved, equaling just over $1 million. We have three major funding proposals out now for a total of just over $3 million more."

Resource coordinator Woods said the suburbs play an important part in supporting the program. "Children in Grosse Pointe have taken an interest in Grateful Home," he said. "I'm pleased with the message that we can work together to improve relations with one another. Grosse Pointe South High School students are planning a dance on Sept. 11 to raise money for us and students are going to bring personal care items to the dance too, to donate.

"Without the support of Grosse Pointers - individuals and churches — Grateful Home wouldn't have made it this far. For a while there, all we had was donations."

Snyder is proud of Grateful Home and the Dreamweaver project.

"In January 1986," she said, 'people hadn't even heard of Grateful Home. In just seven years, it has changed dramati-

"I want people to know the value of believing in something and not giving up. I am tremendously proud. A year and a half ago, Grateful Home owned one building of less than 4,000 square feet and employed three people full time. Now we have five buildings of about 40,000 square feet and employ 30 people — in one of the most employment-devastated job categories in the area.'

She added that 90 percent of the staff are former homeless and chemically dependent women — including herself. "I attribute its success to a combination of staff, board members and community wl understand what lost and ur wanted was like and who ha promised to do something to stop that for other women. said.

"We have a nice group of gentle, kind men who work here too. The children bond with them. Many of these chi ren are terrified of men.

Clients get into the Dreamweaver P.O.W.E.R. Program 1 several routes, Snyder said. "Shelter hot lines refer them us. Some just show up on the doorstep. We get referrals from other agencies. We admit clients 24 hours a day and we've been at or near capacity since February.'

Mariners Inn to benefit from 'River Rhythm' party Aug. 28

Mariners Inn was founded in 1955 to shelter and treat men who are homeless, physically or mentally ill, or have chemical dependencies. Its focus is on the causes of homelessness and its goal is to provide tools for helping men create a new beginning through counseling, education, medical care, nutrition and vocational assistance.

A fundraiser for Mariners Inn, "River Rhythm," will be held Friday, Aug. 28, at the Roostertail, 100 Marquette in Detroit. The evening will include the music of the Sun Messengers and a silent auction. Ticket options are: $150 for a cruise, cocktails, hors d'oeuvres, dinner and dancing; $75 for dinner and dancing; $40 for dancing and treats. For information, call 962-9446.

Grosse Pointers on the honorary committee include Lynn and Paul Alandt, Dale and Don Austin, Lisa and Benson Ford, Diane and Tom Schoenith, Phyllis and Neal Shine and Jean and Peter Golf outing: The Matthew M. West Foundation Inc. will hold its third annual golf outing and dinner dance Saturday, Aug. 29, at the Wolverine Golf Club and Banquet Center in Mount Clemens.

Proceeds will benefit the Harry J. Hoensellaar ALS Clinic at Henry Ford Hospital and ALS of Michigan. Amyotrophic lateral sclerosis (ALS), more commonly known as Lou Gehrig's disease, is a progressive neuromuscular disease which affects voluntary muscles and causes progressive weakness and paralysis. The cause and cure of ALS are unknown.

The Pastor's Corner Speaking up

By the Rev. Nancy A. Mikoski Grosse Pointe Memorial Church

When I was growing up, I often heard adults in social gatherings say that you should never bring up politics or religion in public conversation. I suppose the fear was that these topics were sure to be controversial. It was much more polite to stick to "safe" topics like the weather.

What seems to have started as a rule in social situations appears to have taken hold in family life, too.

The Search Institute of Minneapolis has completed a national study that offers windows of insight into the development of faith among teens and adults. They found that maturity of faith is often linked to the frequency of conversations about God and faith in the simple routines of daily life. Open and candid conversations with mothers and fathers have an enormous impact on the growth of faith in children and adolescents.

The sad fact is that many of us who profess faith in the Lord have not found ways to verbally describe our experience and relationship with God to our children. We may be embarrassed or intimidated. It may feel awkward or silly. But have no fear. God is prepared to speak in us and through us so that our children will come to love the Risen Lord.

While our faith may be intensely personal, let's not let it remain private!

Rotary Club scholarships awarded to 13 local students

Pointe honored 13 local high school students at a luncheon meeting Aug. 3 at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial.

The Rotary Club of Grosse Pointe is a service organization of 120 men and women and is involved in community, national and international activities, from loaning tools at the Grosse Pointe Public Library to eradicating polio worldwide. The club emphasizes youth activities by awarding scholarships and hosting exchange students.

Students who shared $14,000 worth of scholarships included Monica Paul and Linda Morreale of University Liggett School; Glen Varchetti, Melisa Drouillard and Ann Matouk of Grosse Pointe North High School; Molly Tannian, Daniel Commer, Rachel Farkas, Jack Nemeh and Kelly Levitan of Grosse Pointe South High School; and Emily Faber, Mary Gallaway and Kathy Star of Our Lady Star of the Sea High

Each student received a oneyear partial scholarship for his or her first year of college. Students were selected by parent committees at each high school.

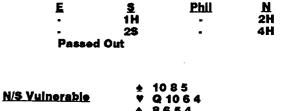

HAVE A PLEASANT TRY AT PERFECTION BRIDGE BY WOODY BOYD 🛧 🕈 💠

I have written of bridge and its participants for some forty months, yet I have never acclaimed the expertise of one in our midst who is truly Grosse Pointe's most proficient player. I know of no one who would question that the talents of Phil Leon at the table are most remarkable. In this one's opinion, he has held that paramount rank since the days of Bud Smith and maybe even before. In forty-odd years of first class play, he has gathered thousands of master points and most of them against the metal of national and regional competition where the mix of participants is majestic and gifts consisting of tricks are few. (We club players really have a difficult time appreciating how severe major tournament play is, but once you've done it against their likes, you're wiser and totally

Phil is a quiet partner and player and them kind are particularly dangerous. I speak from some experience. He's there for one specific reason. To compete successfully; to put to work the total intellectual energy and technique at his disposal to score well and when that fails most often, he takes the blame on himself it there's the slightest question. His favorite partners through these years of victories accumulated are more often than not pedestalled on bridges hall of fame stage. I consider him a sneak and I say that with respect and total reverence. Best when one sees him coming, you should press the danger button and flashing lights that dance through your forewarned medulla. He's so laid back and unobtrusive your danger brain cells just don't get turned on 'til it's too late. He quietly slips into his seat, pays his graciousness and then proceeds to effectively slay you before you know what's happened.

Recently he did just that to this columnist and as disappointed as I was with my faltering technique, I had to give him his just due. Sitting at my left defending this declarer's no trump game he gave me a peak at the possibility of making a dozen and that was my undoing. Once you perceive three over tricks, it takes a disciplined mind to remember your first responsibility is nine. Phil assisted me in my play by ducking a club finesse in rhythm which led me to believe I could achieve a more handsome result. So when I tried it again, snipping my communication from dummy to hand, he won closing the door on my dream and I ended taking only eight.

This past spring in SOMBA Seniors' Regional, Phil made a play that Alan Truscott of the New York Times would have commended in caps. Among 54 tables playing four hearts, all but one were successful. Phil contrived a defense that was singular, significant and superb. Witness his exceptional

Phil led D 10

Declarer won East's diamond queen and played three rounds of trumps ending in dummy. At trick 5, he led dummy's spade ten to Phil's ace! Yes, Phil's ace. Phil got out with his club seven and declarer cooed as he could see eleven tricks. He therefore, won the club ace. Why gamble a second fifty/fifty finesse when he had found the spade lady on side. He'd repeat the spade finesse and pitch dummy's club queen on his fourth spade. Such was not to be for and amazed declarer watched in horror his second spade play won by Phil's queen followed by the club king and East's diamond king. For the only South losing four tricks in an ice cold major game contract.

I'm sure we agree. Phil Leon is a great player.

Reach into the Magic Bag for loads of musical laughs

By Ronald J. Bernas

"Can you sing 'Faust'?" a critic asks the new owner of the Skunk Creek Op'ry House.

"I can sing Faust or slow,"

If you laughed at that you'll probably have a good time watching "Phantom of the Op'ry," a musical spoof which opened last weekend at the Magic Bag. in Ferndale.

It is the second offering at the new, improved Magic Bag Theatre which was taken over by Three Guys Productions early this summer.

The play is a goofy mix of Gaston Leroux, Rocky and Bullwinkle and "Star Trek."

But with music.

The script is by Tim Kelly, America's most published playwright, who turns out unchallenging but entertaining plays at the rate of about one a month that are produced mostly at the high school and community theater level.

Songs were added later by Gerry Castle (music) and Mike Vigilant (lyrics), two of the three guys in Three Guys Pro-

"Op'ry" is the story of a rundown opera house in Skunk Creek, Nev., which is being turned into a vaudeville house by its new owner Minerva Pampermouse (Grosse Pointe's Holly Graham).

What she doesn't know is that the theater comes complete with its own phantom, sporting a mask with a Minnie-Pearlesque price tag who sings "I Enjoy Being a Ghoul." When the opening night performers arrive - the haughty Carlotta Barracuda (Cindy Pritchard) with her mother (Holly Hellsten) and Carlotta's sweet understudy Christine Swansong (Carollee Castle) - the often hilarious complications begin.

Add Christine's Mountie boyfriend Lt. Farleigh Good (Tim Reinman), a local music critic named Silky Acidtongue (Mark Carley) and a variety of other off-beat backstage types and you have the makings of typical farce.

The music gives the production a nice kick which makes up for a very slow start (which should tighten up as the production finds a rhythm), and the witty lyrics provide a lot of laughs. The titles — "He Who Can Creates, He Who Can't Writes Reviews," and "Time Would All Heels" — show the nutty humor you can expect.

The best performances come from Castle, Pritchard, Hellsten, Reinman, Joey L. Johnson as the local sheriff and Maria Menozzi and Mary Jo Kulhanek as Christine's supportive season

The show runs through Saturday, Sept. 5. For tickets and information call the Magic Bag

"We're offering a season that's pure enjoyment for any theatergoer.'

That's how Ruth Ellen Mayhall, new president of Grosse Pointe Theatre, describes the group's 1992-93 season.

For its 45th season, GPT will present a wide variety of musicals, comedy and drama at Fries Auditorium in the Grosse Pointe War Memorial.

"Nunsense," a musical comedy hit now in its eighth year off-Broadway, opens the season. It's a spoof featuring five nuns putting on a talent show. In addition to ensemble song-anddance routines, each of the five madcap sisters does a star turn in her specialty. It runs Nov. 4-

Open auditions for the five female parts in "Nunsense" are scheduled for 1 p.m. Aug. 29 and 30 at the Grosse Pointe Theatre studio at 315 Fisher in Grosse Pointe City.

How to succeed in acting without really trying

By Ronald J. Bernas Staff Writer

Matthew Letscher got into acting while he was a junior at Grosse Pointe South High School. Barely six years later he's got a role in a hot play and in September he's going to Hollywood to be in a major television mini-series.

"I didn't intend to become an actor," Letscher said from his Ann Arbor home. "But it was something I wanted to pursue in college and it just sort of

The 1988 South grad joined Pointe Players - the school's theatrical troupe — as a junior because "well, basically, I needed things to do.'

He played leads in "Harvey' and "Hello, Dolly" before deciding to study theater and drama at the University of Michigan. He graduated this year with a bachelor of arts degree.

"I think I got a pretty good education there," he said. "I got parts in a lot of different types of plays."

He earned roles in U-M productions of such varied works as Chekov's "Three Sisters" to Lloyd-Webber's "Jesus Christ Superstar." (Yes, he says, he sings and dances, but only under duress.)

His current role as the "motorcycle-crazed goon boyfriend" of an upwardly aspiring pickle plant executive in "The Tropi-Pickle" now playing at Chelsea's Purple Rose Theatre, came out of his college work.

"Because it's so close, the Purple Rose is affiliated loosely with U-M," Letscher said.

Letscher was asked to read a part in a play-in-progress by Purple Rose founder Jeff Dan-

Daniels is a film and television actor from Chelsea who starred in such films as "Ar-achnaphobia," "Something Wild" and Woody Allen's "The Purple Rose of Cairo," from which Daniels took the name of his new theater.

Letscher liked the part and the play - a farce about trying to get ahead in business by shmoozing the boss. When he heard the play was finished and being produced, he auditioned for the role.

"It's a great part; I'm sort of a crazy-looking guy," he said. "I don't look like my photo in the program. I've got hair to my shoulders and a big goatee now. And I get to act like a total idiot on stage."

Critics have enjoyed Letscher's performance — some more than they did the play. But au-"They have readings of new diences love the play and its original run which was supposed to end in late June has been extended twice and the production is now booked through Aug. 30.

"It's a very well-written play and there's some very good acting," he said. "I think audiences like it because the story is set in Michigan."

In the Flo-Ziegfeld's-in-theaudience-go-out-and-be-great tradition, Letscher landed a part in the upcoming Turner Network Television Civil War mini-series "The Killer An-

Daniels is starring in the mini-series as Civil War leader Joshua Chamberlain and its director Ron Maxwell saw "The Tropical Pickle" and told Daniels he liked Letscher's work and would he be interested in a small role?

Also on the way up

Former Farms resident Jennifer Marshall recently finished the lead role of Rose in the drama "A Shayna Maidel" at the Petersborough Players in Petersborough, N.H.

She followed that quickly with the role of Philia in "A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum" for the same company.

Marshall, who lives in Manhattan, is a 1984 graduate of the Interlochen Arts Academy where she was the winner of the Michigan Youth Arts Festival for voice. She is also a graduate of Northwestern University where she majored in music and theater.

She apprenticed at the Actors achieved Equity status.

"I said, 'well, let me think about it," Letscher said. "No. I'm kidding."

Letscher will play one of Chamberlain's soldiers and he has "a few lines here and there."

He begins 20 days of filming at the beginning of September. After that, who knows. Maybe more roles at The Purple Rose.

"The Purple Rose is a fantastic outlet not only for actors but for writers, too," Letscher said. "It's committed to only doing new works by Michigan writers with Michigan actors. And it's a philosophy that works well."

"The Tropical Pickle" runs Thursdays through Sundays until Aug. 30. For ticket prices and performance times call the box office at (313) 475-7902.

Eastwood makes classic Western

By Ronald J. Bernas Staff Writer

Just about every Western movie stereotype is represented in Clint Eastwood's new Western, "Unforgiven." But he has prepared the dish in such a way that despite its familiar ingredients, it has a new freshness and kick.

"Death of a Salesman," Arthur Miller's powerful Pultizer-Prize-winning drama about an exhausted, defeated old drummer coming to the dead end of his career runs March 3-13.

Neil Simon's "Rumors" runs April 14-24 - a wild contemporary farce about four couples who hold an anniversary party with unexpected but hilarious consequences.

"Mack and Mabel," with music and lyrics by Jerry Herman, closes the season June 8-19. It's the musical love story of Mack Sennett, master director of 20s and 30s Hollywood slapstick comedy, and his greatest star, Mabel Normand. It features the famous Sennett bathing beauties, Keystone Cops, and old silent film clips.

Tickets are now available for the season or individual performances - $50 for the five-show season; $10 or $12 for individual shows. The box office number is 881-4004. For information about the group, or audition dates, call 886-8901.

hat. The kind that are now shown minus their cinematic glory on Sunday afternoon tele-

But it's not one of those oldfashioned white hat films. In fact, it's hard to determine who's good. Only one character isn't painted with a gray brush, and she still comes out a dingy white.

The story begins in a brothel in Big Whiskey, Wyo., as one man holds a prostitute down while another slashes her face with a knife. Because the crime wasn't that they cut up a woman but that they damaged another man's property, Sheriff Little Bill Daggett (Gene Hackman) fines the men five ponies. Her prostitute friends, led by a particularly vindictive harlot named Strawberry Alice (Frances Fisher), collect money for a bounty on the two men, setting the story into motion.

When we first see Will Munny (Eastwood), he is a none-too-happy pig farmer with two children and an almost unbreakable tie to his dead wife, the woman who turned him from legendary killer to sober, loving husband.

He is asked by brash young gunfighter The Schofield Kid (Jaimz Woolvett) to help him kill the prostitutes attackers and get the reward. Hoping to escape his poverty, Munny joins The Kid, picking up his old partner Ned (Morgan Freeman) along the way.

None of the trio is too sure that they will be able to pull the trigger when the time comes, but they continue their trek, without knowing why.

They are beaten to Big Whiskey by legendary gunfighter English Bob (Richard Harris) who brings with him a writer, W.W. Beauchamp (Saul Rubi-

Daggett, who wants nothing more than peace in his town uses English Bob as an example of what happens to bounty hunters. It's not pretty.

Actually, with the exception of the scenery, little of the movie is pretty. It's brutal, it's dark and it toys with the sensibilities.

Of course you want the bad guys killed - that's what Westerns are about - but should Munny, who fought hard to put his killing days behind him, be the one? And if so, can he stop after the two killings or is it like the alcohol he kicked, and even one will be too much?

'Unforgiven" is a movie that works equally well as a Western and as a character study.

It's strange not knowing who to root for in a Western and yet it's oddly satisfying. The charactors are crafted so that their motivations are revealed more by their actions, than by dialogue. All ring true.

And the acting is great. Freeman, Hackman and Woolvett all turn in textured performances, and Harris is at his best as the flamboyant English Eastwood is also good, but his directing skill towers above his acting abilities.

What makes this such an excellent movie is that in the end, the good, the bad and the ugly are indistinguishable from one another. The good get punished along with the bad and life goes on, as unforgiving and unjudgmental as the land.

A true tale of murder and sex in genteel Grand Rapids

Forever And Five Days By Lowell Cauffiel Zebra Books, 467 pages, $20.

Lowell Cauffiel, formerly associated with The Detroit News and Detroit Monthly, is a veteran journalist who has just published his second true crime book, "Forever And Five Days." For his penetrating forays into Michigan crimes and psychological misbehavior, he has won many awards, including citations from Associated Press, United Press, the Columbia Graduate School Journalism, and the National Magazine Awards. He now resides near Ann Arbor where, it is hoped, he is planning another blockbuster expose of lawlessness in our state.

Alpine Manor, an elderly folks' residence in the staid community of Grand Rapids, was the macabre scene of multiple murders perpetrated on helpless residents who relied on the goodwill of nurses and aides to attend their every

In 1988, two aides, Cathy Wood and Gwen Graham, suffocated six aged women at the residence. These nefarious deeds were prompted by their weird love pact, intended to firmly cement their devotion and dependence upon one another. As lesbians who suffered child abuse and stunted intellectual growth, their twisted minds and maimed egos led them on the fatal trail to murder, and when they were finally discovered, all of genteel Grand Rapids shuddered in

Ken Wood, the estranged husband of Cathy Wood, was among the first to pick up the disturbing vibrations of the two women, and he notified the police because he thought that Cathy was being unduly influenced and misled by Gwen; therefore, his motive for going to the authorities was to rescue his wandering wife from the supposed clutches of her fellow nurse's aide. As more patients mysteriously died. the wheels of investigative detective work began to spin in

As the police examined Alpine Manor's records, they grew more and more amazed by the strange symbiotic relationship between Cathy and Gwen, who always seemed to be in the background together at the time of each killing. A battery of lie-detector tests and psychological evaluations revealed that Cathy Wood, in spite of her shy and meek demeanor, was actually the instigator of the murders. She was adept at playing mind games on her co-workers and friends and, in the process, causing many divorces and break-ups between couples, male and female. Gwen Graham, much the smaller physically, was easily intimidated by the taller and heavier Cathy who imposed her will on her murderous cohort.

Surprisingly, the administrative personnel at the nursing home failed to surmise the reason behind the swift succession of deaths in their institution, although one nursing supervisor did harbor vague doubts about Cathy and Gwen but she was unable to catch them in the act, so to speak. If Ken Wood had not stepped forward with his suspicions, caused by his wife's coy hints of her lesbian lifestyle and nursing home shenanigans with Gwen, it is likely that to this day the world would still be in the dark as to what really transpired.

Cathy Wood, 28, and Gwen Graham, 26, were psychopaths in every sense of the word. After weeks of frustrating investigation, the police were able to come up with a logical motive for the killings. The elusive Cathy led them on a merry, exhausting chase by employing clever psychological games, thus leading weary officers to think she was the innocent victim of Gwen's machinations. The murder and the ensuing trial made headlines around the country and thrust Grand Rapids into uncomfortable notoriety.

Not only are we appalled by the lax conditions that existed at the Alpine Manor, where the lives of its patients were unduly jeopardized by two largely unsupervised aides, we are also treated, if that is the proper word, to a glimpse of a sordid homosexual subculture where Cathy and Gwen gravitated to socialize, drink, and play terrible mind games on one another.

As the trial proceeds, Cauffiel presents clear portrayals of both the prosecutor and the defense attorney with their legal tactics and skirmishes. We are provided with actual transcripts and statements taken during pre-trial interviews as well as during the trial. We can see for ourselves the insidious, devious character of Cathy Wood, still using mind games to further confuse and mislead the authorities. In Gwen we see a cowed but defiant woman who fails to understand the dire consequences of her acts. To the end she still loves Cathy, but Cathy herself has long abandoned Gwen — as a friend no longer useful or compliant. Both women are sentenced to the penitentiary. Although Gwen received by far the harshest sentence, prison for life with no eligibility for parole, many detectives, doctors, and psychologists felt that Cathy, being the instigator and planner, should have received the same punishment. However, Cathy ended up with a lighter sentence - prison with a chance of parole in 2005.

Cauffiel, Michigan's master true crime writer, has woven a skilled narrative which succeeds in pinning the reader to the chair in hypnotic fascination. This book will take its place among outstanding annals of real crime because it is so compelling in the telling that we are forced to plunge right through almost non-stop until the final absorbing page. The author's experiences as a reporter have enabled him to do a prodigious amount of research, conduct careful personal interviews of the individuals involved, and render a skilled interpretation of motives behind the dastardly deeds. We are rewarded with a big book about heinous crimes which absorbs us with details of one such crime and a look at one city's underground culture.

On Saturday, Aug. 15, Harper Woods resident Stephen Dueweke, 34, will sign copies of his first novel, "Playing Soldiers in the Dark."

He thinks it's about time. The 290-page softbound novel published by Bagman Press is the product of 17 years and 25,000 hours of writing, six completely different revisions (each with five or six rewrites), and 10,000 pages of copy. Together, all the preliminary versions — each of which Dueweke thought was "the final draft" — take up a 4-foot by 2-foot by 2foot space in his home.

The book is a challenging story of sexual awakening and love. It details the obsessive love of a physics teacher for one of his 14-year-old male stu-

One friend describes it as "a different slant on the coming of age story." Dueweke himself "Lolita,' but consumcalls it mated."

"It started," Dueweke said, "when I was sitting in class in high school and a teacher gave his opinion of homosexual sex. He said it isn't right because it can't be productive. And my 17year-old mind thought of people like Michelangelo and won-dered how could he not be productive."

The book is meant to be a challenge, he said, and he admits he set out - in what turned out to be the final draft to create controversy. Originally, the story was about a young boy and an older boy, but making the older boy a teacher, he knew, would get people talking.

"Controversy sells," he said. "It's meant to be a challenge. But obviously my biggest fear is that people will judge it based on (its subject matter) and not on what it says. I don't think the novel advocates what Emotional travel experiences are those that become tucked away in your memory, never, ever to be forgotten. They don't come along very often.

A couple of weeks ago I attended the mariachi Mass at Mission San Jose Y San Miguel De Aguayo, one of the original Spanish missions just outside of San Antonio. People from all over the world were there. Coincidentally, the celebrant was from Michigan.

The Rev. Peter Wolf, a Capuchin priest, explained that he was pastor of a largely Hispanic parish in Saginaw and that he studied language and customs each summer in San Antonio.

So it was a diverse mixture of locals and tourists who were gathered in this little church, enjoying the splendid music. singing and Spanish liturgy. Although I was sitting in the last row, the seat turned out to be excellent because there was a young woman standing behind me with a fine mezzo soprano voice who sang wholeheartedly. The effect was stereophonic.

One cannot escape the fact that the mariachi Mass is a popular tourist attraction. There were even people recording it on video cameras. That is, until we came to the singing of the Lord's Prayer. At that point, the priest asked everyone o join hands across the aisles and sing together. Of course, ew of us knew Spanish. Fewer Jet knew the people they were holding hands with. And yet, as the singing began and the brass and guitars swelled in volume, ever so slowly the rows at the front of the church began to sway. And gradually, row by row, the swaying continued to the back of the church until the entire congregation was involved, with most everyone trying to sing or hum along.

One did not have to be Catholic, or even Christian, to appreciate the spirit of the moment. It was a coming together of many different peoples in a moment of unity and it was very special. I, for one, will lever forget those few minutes in that little adobe church. For while Mission San Jose is a very important part of Texas history (parts of it are open for tours), it is also an active Catholic parish church that makes visitors feel very welcome.

The mariachi Mass is held at Mission San Jose every Sunday at noon. After the service, the mariachi musicians serenade in the church courtyard.

Officially, the four San Antonio missions - Concepcion, San Jose, San Juan and Espada – are part of a national historical park and are operated by the National Park Service and the Archdiocese of San Antonio. They were established along the San Antonio River in the 18th century by the Spanish as a means of extending their domination of the New World northward from Mexico. The city of San Antonio began as a small settlement near the missions and has developed into ne of the 10 largest cities in he United States.

A fifth mission, San Antonio e Valero, commonly called the lamo, was founded in 1718. It the center of San Antonio nd the focal point of local tourm. (Don't miss the new IMAX ovie, "Alamo . . . The Price of eedom," playing in Rivercen-

Black satire in three-part harmony

Special Writer

Eternal youth — now that's something to die for. And in 'Death Becomes Her," that's exactly what two women obsessed with the horror of the aging process decide to do.

This high-style, satiric black comedy gleefully plays on the notion that it's OK to be old.

providing you don't look it.

Inventive director Robert Zemeckis, who gave us Marty McFly's time travel in all three "Back to the Futures" and Jessica's close encounters with real flesh and blood in "Who Framed Roger Rabbit," takes two aging glamour girls and with some remarkable optical and makeup tricks makes them

One of them is Madeline

Ashton (Meryl Streep) who we first meet singing and dancing in the lavishly choreographed musical "Songbird." It is a wretched performance that leaves the audience cold and her worried. "Wrinkle, wrinkle, little star, will they ever see the scars?" she says, questioning her mirror.

She does have two backstage well-wishers in her longtime friend, Helen Sharp (Goldie Hawn) and Helen's fiancee, Dr. Ernest Menville (Bruce Willis). Menville is particularly impressed by her and when Madeline learns that he is a renowned plastic surgeon, she goes all out with the charm routine while Helen - who is no match for high-powered Madeline - looks helplessly on. This is not the first time she has been defeated in the love game with Madeline and she knows it's a losing battle.

Seven years later, Helen, depressed over losing her fiance, has turned to food for solace and weighs a gross 200 pounds. Menville, a victim of Madeline's shrewishness, has lost his practice and become a mortuary artist.

With Menville barred from his profession, Madeline is driven to running from one quack to another searching for the elusive fountain of youth. Fourteen years later finds Helen shaken out of her lethargy, and resolving to do something about herself. She becomes a well-known author and literally transforms herself from a blimp into a trim, sexy woman ready for revenge. Losing no time, Helen wins back Menville and they come up with a plan to eliminate Madeline.

In the meantime, Madeline is put in touch with Lisle (Isabella Rosselini), a sorceress who supplies Madeline with a potion that will keep her forever young and makes her a member of the living dead.

The catfight escalates and ends with black comedy at its most inventive.

In this basically three-person cast, Streep stands out. She is fantastic as the pathologically vain actress whose sole goal at any price is a youthful image.

Wicked and funny, she outdoes herself in this role that starts where her role in "She-Devil" left off. Hawn gives a spirited performance as the rejuvenated best-selling author and wins honors as the depressed woman jilted by Menville for Madeline.

Willis, as a pawn between two warring harpies, gives an out-of-character performance as the wimpy brow-beaten doctor who shows some of the bravado we are used to seeing from him as he escapes from their clutches.

Both Streep and Hawn give fascinating performances but director Zameckis stands out for his special effects.

Take for instance the huge hole in Hawn's stomach, or the trick of producing an illusion of Streep's head being on backward.

"Death Becomes Her" could be looked at as a social commentary on the terrors of looking old. Thankfully its message is subtly delivered by talented performers in high-style.

Home additions are going up, and out

By Tracy Wilson

When Dr. Upali Fonseka and his wife, Kumu, went shopping for a house two years ago, they looked at one that was a little cramped and had only one bathroom.

So they bought it.

"We were planning to add on to it before we even moved in," said Fonseka. "We have two children and it was too small, but we really loved the house."

High land prices, combined with the squeeze of the recent recession, have forced people with outgrown homes to make the most of what they have.

The Fonseka's contractor, Bill Jenzen, owner of H.F. Jenzen Building Co. in St. Clair Shores, said he has completed about 10 second-story additions within the past two years.

"There were not really many requests for it before," he said. "There have been more in the past four or five years than we have ever had."

The Fonsekas are part of this expanding group which is opting for space-saving additions.

"It made economic sense," said

Fonseka. "We wanted a little bit more space to the house, but we couldn't really build out because the land was not available."

Building an addition can cost anywhere between $50 to $100 a square foot, depending on the fixtures, fireplaces, siding, cabinetry, windows and grade of lumber.

The bill for the Fonseka's 1,100square-foot addition will be steep almost $100,000 for an extra bedroom, bath and downstairs family room.

But for a family wanting to · move from a three-bedroom into another home that has four bedrooms, the price could be even steeper.

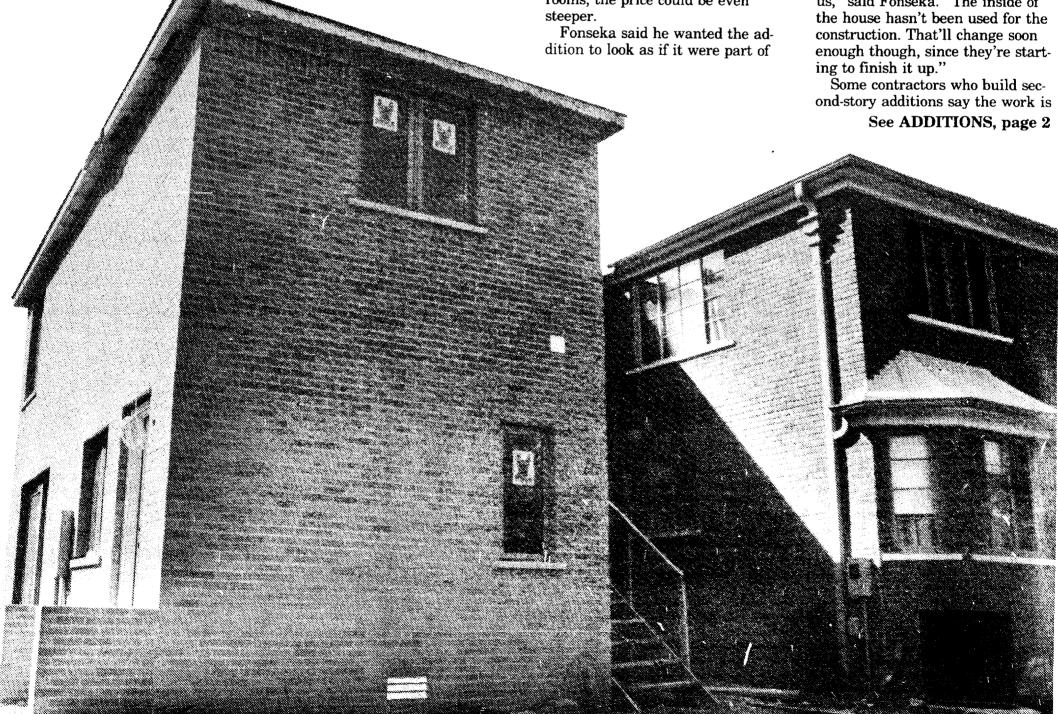

the old house, not just a new appendage.

"It's an old house," said Fonseka. "Sometimes it's hard, getting bricks to match up, stuff like that. The hardware, cabinetry and molding are hard because they're a different age and different styles."

Because the contractor has been doing most of the work from the outside of the house — even building a temporary stairway especially for the workers — the Fonsekas have been spared most of the inconveniences that accompany remodeling.

"So far, it hasn't really affected us." said Fonseka. "The inside of construction. That'll change soon

Square-inch Garden Contest entries sought

Midwest amateur gardeners are invited to enter their unique "small space" gardens in the first annual 'Square Inch Garden Contest" sponsored by University of Michigan's Matthaei Botanical Gardens.

The contest offers an opportunity for gardeners to showcase their talents used to create the unusual in small spaces. Winning gardens will appear in the official Flower Show Program Guide and the photographs will be displayed at the 1993 Ann Arbor Flower & Garden Show, "A Walk On The Wild Side.'

Winners will receive two complimentary 1993 Flower Show tickets. Participants can enter three categories:

- 1. Contained Gardens pots, beds and window boxes.
- 2. Camouflage Gardens plantings grown to conceal.
- 3. "Round the Pole" Gardens flag pole, clothes line and mail box plantings.

To enter, the gardener must submit a 5 x 7 photo of the space and a plant list. Entry forms can be obtained at Matthaei Botanical Gardens or at the following locations: Ann Arbor: Abbott's Landscape Nursery, Chelsea Flowers, Fine Flowers, Huron Valley Garden Center, Nielsens Flower Shop and Tom Thompson Flowers; Brighton: Wildlife Greenhouses; Mount Clemens: Alexander's Nursery; Plymouth: Good's Nursery, and Plymouth Nursery; Pontiac: Goldner Walsh Nursery; West Bloomfield: Eaton Nursery; Ypsilanti: Riverside Lawn & Garden Supply.

To be eligible, entry materials must be returned, or postmarked by Aug. 28, to the Flower Show Office at Matthaei Botanical Gardens, 1800 North Dixboro Road, Ann Arbor, 48105. Winning gardens will be announced by Sept. 24.

For more information, contact Juliana Haubrich at the Matthaei Botanical Gardens, 313-998-7343.

Finding a contractor and submitting working drawings to your city's building department are the first steps. Then it's time to fill out a building permit application, including setbacks, square footage and lot plans.

Once the necessary variances are secured from the city council, you can apply for a building permit and pay when it's accepted usually about $1,000 for 500 square feet, in and around the Pointes.

Beyond bars — architects eye jails

By Todd S. Phillips, AIA AIA News Service

Designing correctional facilities today requires highly specialized expertise and skill to meet the needs of the justice system and the inmate populations it houses.

The American Institute of Architects' Committee on Architecture for Justice, a group of specialists in jail and court facilities design, predicts that a number of societal trends will have great impact on the physical design of correctional facilities today, and for 20 years into the future.

For instance, the number of female inmates has risen more than 400 percent since 1980, necessitating a hard look at women's correctional facilities.

As more of these facilities are needed, says Ann D. Bartolo of the Bureau of Prisons, architects must begin to address such issues as parity with male prisoners; provision of appropriate levels of security; and the need for more extensive medical and program facilities (for instance, more space is required for examination rooms and other medical procedures for women than is customarily provided for men), specially designed areas for activities such as parenting, and taking into account that female inmates are considered to need more opportunities for interaction with family members.

Another important trend is the growing diversity of the inmate population, which necessitates a rejection of "all-purpose repositories." Sheriff Michael Hennessey of San Francisco County, observes that 50 percent to 70 percent of the people held are pretrial detainees who should not be kept in inappropriate high security facilities and cautions that it is necessary to avoid architectural overkill.

He says architects should design to minimize inmate assaults through the use of highly observable units, with smaller groups of inmates housed together and less reliance on bars and steel doors.

The trends appearing on the horizon for jail design today will be the parameters for design tomorrow, according to the justice architects, who held a participation workshop in which attendees discussed what they thought prisons would be like in the year 2010.

They agreed on one disturbing trend: Jails of the future will have to accommodate more elderly people, as well as inmates with long sentences.

Inmates will come in with medicine, oxygen, crutches, and wheelchairs. They will need to get medical histories from their doctors and will require thorough medical screening. Many will need to be placed in medical units. This will require more space for extensive medical facilities on the premises of the correction facility.

The architects concluded that to suit the needs of the elderly, as well as an increasing number of inmates who are homeless and/or diagnosed with AIDS or are HIV-positive, they will need to replace jail design with diverse alternatives, which should include single-room occupancy hotels, day treatment, nursing homes, halfway houses, electronic monitoring, and detoxification centers.

This may also result in more single-level housing without the traditionally provided bunk beds (to accommodate those who can't climb up to a bunk and to lessen crowding in cells) and combinations of single rooms and small dormitories.

The architects also agree that jails of the future will be more closely connected to social services/diversion centers. These will be set up so that those who do not need to be detained receive appropriate placement treatment, which will help keep them out of the criminal justice system.

Home Tips

Cap this — I use tubes of oil paint, and after a short while, the caps no longer fit or become lost.

To replace them, I've found that roofing nails work quite well and are easy to remove and replace.

Pat M., Salem, Mo.

Recycling tip — Being aware of ecology, I came up with a use for the perforated edges from computer paper that I had been throwing away in the office.

I toss them into a box under my desk and save them for packaging material rather than using plastic foam. It does the job.

Kate N., Ruidoso, N.M.

Inexpensive saffron substitute I read somewhere that tumeric could be substituted for saffron, and while I love the yellow coloring that saffron gives my rice dishes, it's expensive. Thus, I decided to try the turmeric.

It was wonderful. The olor is the same, but the flavor is a lot milder. Lynn F., Yonkers, N.Y.

Shelf paper – I just discovered a time-saving tip for removing adhesive-backed plastic from inside cupboards. I put a thin cloth on top of the plastic and press it several times with a steam iron. It pulls right off. I just keep moving the cloth down the shelf, steaming a section and pulling it off.

Wanda K., Ft. Myers, Fla.

Bridal runner — Tell all those new brides to save the paper aisle runner. Cut it into towel-size pieces, wash and use for any job from dusting to washing windows.

It's lint-free and goes through the washing machine beautifully.

Linda P., Blue Bell, Pa.

Polishing - My husband and I purchased a home that has darkwood louvered closet doors. Dusting them has been a chore!

Last week, I tried a new method that saved me time. First, I sprayed the doors with furniture polish. Next, I got an old, clean four-inch wide paint brush and painted the polish onto the doors. The long bristles reached under the louvers and into the cracks to spread the polish and remove the dust.

I was able to clean three doubledoor closets in about five minutes. When I finished, the doors looked as if they had just been varnished.

I hope this tip will save others as much time as it has me.

Rose H., Gloucester, N.J.

Clarey 2: Economical to build

Not only is the Clarey 2 compact and economical to build, but it is also designed with ample storage space to meet the needs of a small, and possibly growing, family.

Storage areas line the hallway and ample closet space is available in each bedroom. The kitchen has a pantry, and nooks for bookshelves are found in both the living room and one of the bedrooms. These could be outfitted with floor-to-ceiling shelves, or shelving only the upper area would leave a convenient cubby for a desk - a natural for a personal computer or an entertainment center.

The utility room is conveniently close to the bedrooms and bathrooms, where most laundry is generated. And having the bathroom so close to the front door allows kids to dash in from play when nature calls, without leaving a trail of footprints through other rooms of the house.

Cafe doors open into the roomy kitchen from the entryway and the corner sink looks out across the front porch and yard. In addition to the pantry, this room includes plenty of cupboards. Having the range in the eating bar allows family members to ladle out seconds directly from the stovetop without leaving their stools.

French doors in the master suite open onto a private deck, and a skylight brightens the master bath.

Another skylight, in the vaulted living room, adds to the light from the sliding glass doors, while a large corner fireplace offers an open invitation for toasting pajamed backsides and reading bedtime stories.

For a study kit of the CLAREY 2 (209-16), send $7.50 to Todays Home, P.O. Box 2832-T, Eugene, Ore. 97402. (Be sure to specify plan name and number when ordering.)

Household Help by John Amantea

To help you make the best choices for your home in a price range you can afford, here are some tips for selecting and installing ceiling fans.

Before you visit a lighting showroom or a fan specialty store, determine your room dimensions, ceiling heights, and the colors or wood finishes you want to match.

Decide which type of fan most nearly suits your home decor.

Most consumers hardly give it a thought, but the motor is the most critical part of your decision — the difference between a quiet, smooth-operating fan and a noisy one that keeps you awake.

Bargain fans are noisy fans. A good qualtiy fan has sealed bearings to keep out dust and dirt. They also never require oiling.

Most fans come with either four or five blades, and depending upon the angle of the blades, can move a considerable amount of air. The size of the blades, their pitch or angle, and their balance are all required for superior operation. You'll need at least a 42-inch diameter fan to move air in a 100-square foot room, a 52-inch fan for an area up to 400 square feet, and a 56-inch fan for areas over 600 square feet. Large rooms often require more than one fan.

The pitch of the blades ranges from four to 16 degrees among various brands, with higher pitches generally doing a better job.

The fan should hang no lower than seven feet from the floor, with a recommended 12-inch drop from the ceiling. Fans with less than eight inches of clearance from the ceiling can be 40 percent less efficient, according to experts.

Often, a fan replaces an existing light fixture and most fans can accommodate lighting, available in single-globe or multiple light fixtures. A variety of wall controls to operate light and fan speed are available.

Instructions for self-installing fans are included by manufacturers. It is important, however, that the electrical junction box is approved for hanging a ceiling fan.

If the purchase of a ceiling fan seems complex, realize you're buying comfort, decorator appeal and energy economy. In the winter, a ceiling fan can be reversed to redistribute warm air downward. This is particularly effective in rooms with high ceilings or with fireplaces.

Research works.

Antiques by Ralph & Terry Kovel

Shades of the past — Lamps with glass shades were first used in the late 1890s. By the 1940s, they were out of style, but they came back in fashion in the 1970s and have continued to attract buyers.

Four types of glass and metal shades were preferred. "Tiffany"-type leaded glass shades were made using pieces of colored glass set in lead strips to form patterns. Reverse translucent painted glass shades had colorful scenes painted on the inside. Other glass shades were "blown-out" with outlines of flowers or fruit that were then painted. The shades are known as "puffies" because the glass does look puffed out.

The least expensive type of glass shade imitated the expensive leaded shades. Colored slag glass was mounted in panels behind a cut-out piece of metal. Silhouettes of trees, people or geometric shapes were on the top of the glass. When the lamp was lit, the colors appeared. Green, tan and other muted shades were used in the slag of glass and they were not as colorful as the leaded glass shades. Tiffany was best known for the leaded shades.

Other important makers like Phillip Handel of Connecticut made leaded, reverse-painted and slag shades. Pairpoint is best known for "puffies."

Q. I have my great-grandmother's stuffed bear. It is black and white and looks like a panda bear. It is at least 75 years old. I have not seen many old panda bears. Are they valuable?

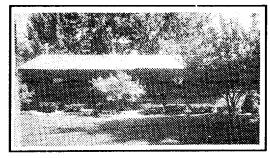

A. The panda bear was not generally known in the Western world until 1936. The toys that look like pandas were made after that year. If your bear is unusual and if it is over 25 years old, it has a collectible value.

Q. I found an old vacuum cleaner in my attic. It is labeled "Quickwork Cleaner, O'Neill-James Co., Manufacturers, Chicago." It is like a tube with a plunger at the end. How old is it?

A. The plunger or suction type vacuum cleaner was popular about the turn of the century. One similar to yours was offered in the 1910 Sears catalog. There are few collectors of old vacuums; the value is under $75.

A deft touch on the greens is one of the reasons Palmer Heenan has been able to maintain a solid golf game for more than 50 years.

Buhl lengthens lead

Robbie Buhl combined a poleposition start and a third-place finish in the Cleveland Firestone Indy Lights race to lengthen his series lead to a season-high 13 points.

Buhl, of Grosse Pointe, has 120 points, while Franck Freon of Paris is second with 107 and Adrian Fernandez of Mexico City holds third place with 106. Four races remain in the 12 See BUHL, page 2C race Indy Lights series.

Buhl started from the pole position for the first time this season and his patented dash at the beginning of the race provided him with a comfortable lead until a full-course caution brought the field back together.

Park mayor still in the swing

By Chuck Klonke Sports Editor

Arnold Palmer was just a kid of 17 when Grosse Pointe Park Mayor Palmer Heenan won his first golf championship at the Country Club of Detroit.

Arnie's game has slipped some since 1946, but the 70. year-old Heenan is still going strong.

He proved that last week when he defeated Grosse Pointe Farms councilman Terrence Griffin 4 and 3 over 36 holes to take his fourth club championship in the last six decades.

The toughest part is playing 36 holes at 70 years old, Heenan said. "I walked part of the way and rode in a friend's cart the rest of the time. Our course is nearly 7,000 yards and we have to play from the long tees for the championship.

The distance didn't faze Heenan. He parred the 596yard 10th hole twice and had a birdie and a par on the 220yard fifth.

"I used my driver both times on the 220-yarder," Heenan

It's no accident that Heenan has been able to maintain his edge over a long period of time.

"I practice four or five times a week and play at least a couple rounds a week," he said. "My relaxation is hitting golf balls. And I always practice with an aim in mind. I don't just hit the balls when I practice."

Attitude is also a factor in Heenan's success.

"The other day somebody asked me how I played and I said, 'I played very well,'' Heenan said. "He said, 'I've never heard anybody say they played well.' Well, if I hit four or five good shots-a-round, I'm happy. That's what makes it relaxing to me.

Heenan admits it wasn't always that way.

'I used to get upset when I hit bad shots, but I rarely get angry anymore," he said. "A lot of it has come from maturity.'

Heenan hasn't made a lot of changes in his game through the years, but he takes advantage of the improvements made in golf equipment.

"I use the high-tech equipment to the ultimate," he said. "I have some new Daiwa clubs — irons and metal woods --that are as modern as tomorrow. They add a good 10 yards to my drives.'

The shaft on Heenan's driver is 2 inches longer than normal, which increases the club-head speed by one-mile-per-hour. That translates into an additional 10 yards in distance.

'Keeping up with the changes in equipment has kept me closer to the flat bellies." Heenan said. "I'm also very confident around the greens.'

In winning the 1985 club championship, Heenan hit four bunker shots onto the green and one-putted each time.

Unlike many golfers his age, Heenan still has a deft touch on the green.

"A lot of older golfers use the long putter or a cross-handed grip because they have the yips, but my nerves are still good," he said. "I spend a lot of time on my putting stroke and I never putted better in my life than I did during the last series of matches.'

Although he could probably give some pretty good lessons of his own, Heenan isn't above taking instruction.

"I get about four or five lessons a year," he said. "I had a putting lesson from Matt Bodde (the assistant pro at the club) that was very successful. I made a couple adjustments in my stroke and it helped. You never get to the point where you know everything.

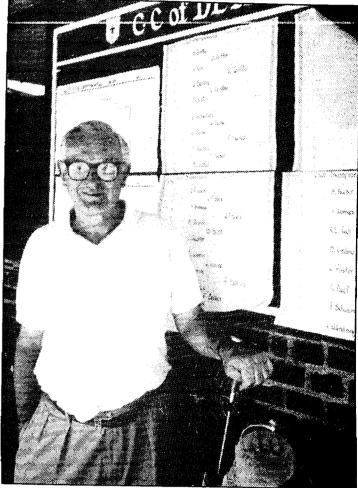

Heenan was 24 when he defeated Howard Walton for his first club championship in 1946. He also won in 1963 and was a finalist at least twice in each of the last six decades.

"We used to have a great golfer named Fred Kammer, who went to the finals of the U.S. Amateur," Heenan said. "He'd played in the club championship every other year and the rest of the time the other members would scramble for the championship."

Heenan's biggest thrill in golf was defeating John Grace, another former U.S. Amateur finalist, one-up in a club semifinal match in the early 1970s.

'The week before, John won the Michigan Amateur and the week after he won the Detroit District golf title at the Country Club," Heenan said.

Grosse Pointe Park Mayor Palmer Heenan stands next to the scoreboard after winning his fourth golf championship at the Country Club of Detroit.

Offshore racing has its own 'Dream Team' ond in his class in last ye world championships in world wor

First there was the "Dream Team" the United States sent to Barcelona to win the Olympic gold medal in basketball.

Now offshore powerboat racing has its own "Dream Team." Bob Kaiser of Grosse Pointe and J.D. D'Elia of Connecticut will combine forces in the open division at the Race Rock Offshore Challenge on Sunday, Aug. 16, on Lake St.

"We've been chasing each other in our boats all over the world. We've been each other's nemesis for several years," said Kaiser, who hasn't raced since the World Offshore Championships last November.

pretty good friends when we're not racing. When that green flag drops there's no time for friendship.'

Kaiser and D'Elia will compete in the 35-foot Jacquar catamaran, Special Edition, powered by twin 800-horsepower Mercury inboard racing en-

The "Dream Team" got together when Kaiser learned that most of the top offshore boats would be racing on Lake St. Clair.
"I took the year off to regroup," Kaiser said. "After nine years I needed a break, but when I found out there was going to be a big race here I 1983. I grew up in the waters from the Grosse Pointe Yacht Club to Metropolitan Beach so I couldn't pass up this opportunity. It's something I've waited for for nearly 10 years."

There was only one snag. Kaiser recently sold his 40-foot Cougar catamaran and he had no boat to race.

"When I heard about the race I contacted J.D. and the package was put together," Kaiser said. "It was very kind of his father (John D'Elia) to let me take his place in the boat."

Kaiser was the World Offshore champion in 1986 and bined for 28 national offshore victories.

"J.D. is an aggressive throttleman and I'm an aggressive driver so it should be pretty exciting," Kaiser said. "The tough thing will be getting into the cockpit. John is 5-feet-10 and I'm 6-4. I might get cramped up, but if we take the checkered flag I don't care if they have to carry me away.'

Kaiser won't be the only driver with Grosse Pointe ties who'll be among the favorites to win their class. Joe Bresciami of Grosse Pointe Woods will be making a comeback of sorts in the Pro I Division.

Bresciami, who finished second in his class in last year's world championships in Key West, Fla., suffered a broken arm when his boat, Eastern Express, flipped in the first race of the season in Panama City, Fla. Bresciami was in the lead, 500 feet from the finish line, when the mishap occurred. Sunday's race will be his first since the accident. Bresciami is the owner-driver of the 32-foot boat, with Robert Kehrig of Mount Clemens at the throttle.

Racing is scheduled to start at 11 a.m. Sunday. The startfinish line will be at Jefferson and 15 Mile. The boats will make eight 16-mile laps. Spectator boats will be allowed along the shoreline between Nine and 10 Mile.

Final registration Sunday for hockey skills school

Final registration for the third annual Great Lakes Hockey Skills School will be Sunday, Aug. 16, from 7:30 to 9 p.m. at the Grosse Pointe Community Rink.

The school, which also offers specialized goaltending instruction, will be held at the rink from Monday, Aug. 17, through Friday, Aug. 21. It is open to all youngsters ages 5 through 15.

"One difference from last year is that we'll have a special session for beginners," said school director Costa Papista.

Detroit Red Wings' forward Paul Ysebaert has joined the staff of guest instructors, which includes NHL players Jimmy Carson (Detroit), Mike Hudson (Chicago) and Mike Hartman (Tampa Bay). Other instructors are Red Wings' associate coach Doug MacLean, former Detroit assistant Don MacAdam and Brad Schlegel, the captain of the Canadian Olympic team. The enrollment fee is $195.

Several Grosse Pointers are among the committee members for the second annual golf tournament to benefit the Assistance League to the Northeast Guidance Center. From left are John Tyrer, Sharon Nelson, Warren Heitman, Camille Cracchiolo, Lynn Panin and Bill Murray. The tournament will be held Saturday, Aug. 15, at Sycamore Hills golf club near Mount Clemens. Registration is 12:30 p.m. and the shotgun start for the scramble format event is 1 p.m. For more information, call 881-0742.

Norbs honor top swimmers

The Grosse Pointe City Norbs swim team honored several of its members at a recent awards dinner.

Trophies were given to swimmers who earned the most points in their age groups. Winners were Ryan LaDuke and Catherine Wayman, 8 and under; Rob Thiel and Caitlin Howe, 10 and under; Lindsay Sandercott and Jason LeRoy, 12 and under; Amanda Defever and Cory Wininger, 14 and un-der; and Chuck Ruifrok and Ashley Wolter, 17 and under.

Krist Laumanis received a trophy for being the most improved swimmer and the team high-point trophy went to Wininger.

The swimmers with the best attendance in each age group also received trophies. Winners were LaDuke, 8 and under; Rob and Steven Thiel, 10 and under; Chris Ruifrok and Chuck Thiel, 12 and under; Laumanis, 14 and under; and Betsy Leto, 17 and under.

Four Pointers among best in biathlon

Four Grosse Pointers were among the top finishers in the recent Metropolitan Beach biathlon.

The event included a 1-kilometer swim and a 5K run. There were 75 athletes who completed the biathlon.

Robin Posada of Grosse Pointe City was first in the 35-39 women's age group with a meet record time of 37.42. The old record was 42.28. She finished 38th overall.

Leonard Posada of Grosse Pointe Woods was 18th overall and third in the 25-29 men's division with a 33.54 clocking.

Karen McCrackin of Grosse Pointe Shores finished third in the 25-29 women's division and 34th overall in 37.24.

Jeff Clark of Grosse Pointe Park was 27th overall and third in the men's 35-39 group with a time of 35.35.

Sixteen-year-old Jeff Leonard of Clinton Township was first overall with a time of 29.45.

The club also recognized swimmers who won't return next year. They include 17year-olds Brad Dunlap, Gretchen Miriani and Mary Rowe, along with Abby Long, Brian LeRoy and Jason LeRoy, who are moving out of the

The Norbs' coaches are Ann Rice, Greg Corbett, Craig Wininger and Ashley Moran. The team was second in the annual relay meet and finished fourth in the Lakefront Swimming Association in both the league and dual meet competition.

Buhl

Buhl maintained a smaller lead on the restart but soon began to experience minor car problems.

"My car started to lose its grip, making it more difficult to handle," he said.

Freon took advantage of the problem and passed Buhl at mid-race. Two laps later, Bryan Herta also passed Buhl and went into second place. The three finished in that order.

Buhl had the second-quickest car in qualifying, but was moved into the top starting position when race officials declared that pole-sitter Mark Smith had illegal car components.

Buhl had mixed reactions to his finish on the sweltering Cleveland course.

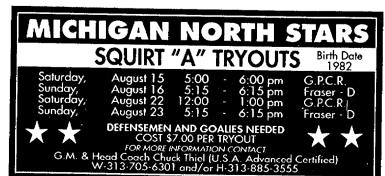

"We come to each race to win and that has eluded us so far," he said. "But we have been in a position to win at every race and that's why we're leading the series at this point.

"My crew has been tremendous because it has given me a race car that has finished every lap of every race. We'll spend the time until the Vancouver race (Aug. 30) to find that little extra we need to hold onto the leads we've had."

The Cleveland purse of $6,000 brought Buhl's season earnings to $61,000.

The Toronto Indy Lights race will be televised on ESPN Saturday, Aug. 15, from 3 to 3:30 p.m. A tape of the Cleveland race will be shown on ESPN Sunday, Sept. 20, from 1 to 1:30 p.m.

ones in your perpetual glory, Amen. Thank you for your love towards me and my loved ones.

101 PRAYERS

May the Sacred Heart of Jesus be adored, glorified, loved and preserved throughout the world now and forever. Oh, Sacred Heart of Jesus, pray for us. Worker of miracles,

Say this prayer 9 times a day. By the 8th day your prayer will be answered. It has never been known Jude for

HOLY SPIRIT St. Jude, pray for us and Holy Spirit, you who make me see everything and who shows me the way to reach my ideal. You, who give me the Divine Gift to forgive and forget the wrong that is done to me and you who are in all instances of my life with me. I, in this short dialogue want to thank you once more that I never want to be separated
