'Suspicious' blaze destroys Crown Cleaners

By Donna Walker Staff Writer

Fire ripped through Crown Cleaners on Jefferson in Grosse Pointe Park on Monday night and Tuesday morning, leaving its owner and his family home-

Park Lt. David Hiller said the building was "totally destroyed" and that the fire had been labeled "suspicious."

The fire started about 10:22 p.m., Hiller said, and firefighters from the Park, Grosse Pointe City, Grosse Pointe Farms and Grosse Pointe Woods battled the blaze throughout the night.

It was finally brought under control about 3:30 a.m. Tuesday, but hot spots in the building continued to relight as late as 6 a.m., Hiller said.

"We had a heavy fire load in there," he said, "with all of the plastic, cleaners and solvents.'

Park Lt. David Hiller, in the heat of battle

Lee Shin, who has owned the building and cleaning business for 13 years, lived with his family in four apartments above the store

He, his grandmother, his uncle and nephew were home when the fire started, he said.

He said he heard two loud thumps coming from downstairs and discovered the building was on fire.

As he was evacuating his family, he saw a man banging on one of the first floor doors and yelling, "Your building's on fire!'

Shin said he can't describe the man, who disappeared after delivering his warning.

"We hope that man steps forward," Hiller said. "First, because we want to thank him for his assistance, and then to ask him what he saw.'

Shin carried his grandmother out of the building and his uncle and nephew also escaped. All were unhurt, Shin said.

A Park public safety officer arrived at the scene within a minute after the fire call came in and saw flames inside the building through two first-floor side windows, Hiller said.

The officer immediately requested back-up from Grosse Pointe City, Grosse Pointe Farms and Grosse Pointe Woods under the cities mutual aid agreement, because of the potentially explosive contents of the building, Hiller said.

Two aerial trucks, the Grosse Pointe Woods tower truck and four fire engines were deployed to fight the blaze, he said.

Firefighters battled the blaze from inside the building for a

The fire appears to have started in the center section of Crown Cleaners, Hiller said.

He said it would be a while before firefighters could get inside the building to search for the point of origin and cause of the fire because the front of the building is a "collapsible zone."

Mystery malady killing park ducks

By Ronald J. Bernas

Pointe Workers at Grosse Shores municipal park are concerned about the number of dead and sick ducks they have found floating in the park's harbor.

Helen Bai, who works as a gardener at the park, said she and other park workers have found at least a dozen sick or the past week.

"We find them simply floating in the water," she said. Larry Herzog has been trying to save them. 'We can get to the live ones because they're too weak to paddle away from us. When they get too sick they just put their heads into the water and drown and that's how we find

"I've had five ducks brought in and the symptoms they're showing are the symptoms of some sort of a toxicity," Herzog

One of the five ducks has been returned to the lake and three others are in various stages of recovery. The fifth duck died shortly after it was brought in. Herzog has been working with officials from the state DNR and is awaiting the results of the agency's autopsy on the ducks. Earl Friese, an environmenquality analyst with the DNR's surface water division, said the autopsy is looking for any cause of death, either a virus, a bacteria or any kind of poisoning.

"It's hard to say what's happening without the results of the test," Friese said. "But they won't be in for a while." But Bai wishes the tests could be speeded up.

"We're battling time," she said. "We have about six or seven healthy ducks out there right now; they all might be dead before we find out what's killing them.

former Esquire property Home building and the Old Place Restaurant, both of which will be torn down to accommodate the project, said John Vitale of Stucky & Vitale, Phillips' architects. The project faces at least three possible stumbling blocks.

The Park planning commission must rezone the property from commercial to residential and vacate (or close) Beaconsfield from the north side of Jefferson to the first house on either side of the street, because Phillips wants the complex to extend over what is currently the roadway on Beaconsfield.

Also, he needs a height variance from the city council for the third story of his proposed building.

Councilman Andrew Richner said, "I think this is a great project and I think you (Phillips) should just buy the (Esquire) property and get started on it right away.'

But Vitale said Phillips doesn't want to purchase the property until the possible stumbling blocks are removed.

"My only hesitation is locking up the property with an option. I wouldn't want to hold it up indefinitely," said Richner, who suggested the council limit the option to three months.

Heenan said that would not be enough time for the planning commission to review

Phillips' plans, and suggested that the option be limited to

"If this thing goes on longer than a year, and the delay isn't our fault, I feel he should pay the city taxes on it," Heenan said. "It's only fair. If you're going to have a hold on our property for longer than a year, the least you can do is pay our taxes."

The council, minus councilwoman Valerie Moran, who was absent, unanimously approved a motion to authorize Krajniak and the city attorney to enter into an agreement with Phillips for an option of up to one year.

The $30,000 selling price is much less than what the city paid for the property.

In 1988, the city condemned the Esquire - a second-run movie theater where all seats were $1 - because it claimed the theater represented a nonconforming use which was incompatible with the master plan for revitalizing the business district.

The Park paid the Esquire's owner, Michigan Theaters, $271,000, but the company took the issue to court and in December 1989 a Wayne County Circuit Court mediation panel said the Park had to pay an additional $164,000 for the

Vahida Livadic

Pointer of Interest

By Donna Walker

The multitude of cheerful flowers that Vahida Livadic carefully tends around her Grosse Pointe Shores home belies the immense sadness and frustration she has felt ever since the war in Bosnia-Herzegovina began last spring. Livadic, 32, was born and fied by the atrocities she has heard are occurring in the former Yugoslavian republic.

Yu goslavia was primarily made up of six republics, including Serbia, Montenegro, Croatia, Slovenia, Bosnia and Macedonia. These republics originally had been separate entities but were lumped under one communist country - Yugoslavia at the end of World War I. "Bosnia, Croatia and Slovenia always wanted to be independent and democratic for as long as I can remember," Livadic said. When the Soviet Union began to crumble, the Bosnians, Croatians and Slovenians clamored for their own freedom.

However, the leaders of Serbia and Montenegro wanted the republics to remain Communist, Livadic said. Tensions mounted and turned into a civil war that Livadic and others are calling a 'modern-day holocaust." The United Nations has recognized Bosnia-Herzegovina

How David Seamans went from being a squash professional at the Detroit Athletic Club to winning the Outstanding Student Researcher of the Year award from the American Heart Association is a long story

The 38-year-old Grosse Pointe resident and third-year medical student at Wayne State University didn't have any profound reasons for making a mid-life career switch. Suffice it to say he had always considered a career in medi-

Funded by a fellowship, Seamans embarked last summer upon a study of "the effect of exercise on autonomic mechanisms of baroflex control of heart rate.

While research can be rewarding, Seamans said students should be aware of the downside: long, lonely hours and the chance that your efforts may not come to a useful conclusion.

"It can be frustrating," he said. "You could do the research and have nothing come of it.

Seamans selected his research topic hoping to learn more about the causes of hypertension and heart disease what he calls the silent killers.

Grosse Pointe resident David Seamans recently was honored by the American Heart Association for his research on the effects of exercise on heart rate.

"I became interested in how exercise changed the intrinsic mechanisms in the body to control the heart rate and blood pressure," he said. "When you go from a lying position to a standing position, your body adjusts its blood pressure so you don't faint. Gravity pulls the blood down and your body has to make an automatic adjustment. If you feel your pulse, there will be a slight increase in your heart rate.

Changes or malfunctions in these mechanisms lead to hypertension and heart disease, he said. While treatments for problems with these automatic mechanisms are known, doctors still do not understand the underlying causes of the malfunctions, he said.

Seamans began his quest for an answer to this medical puzzle when he met WSU professor of physiology, Donal O'-Leary. Seamans grew interested in O'Leary's work and with the professor's support, he applied for a fellowship.

His research project stretched over a 12-week period. During that time, he studied the effects of exercise on the automatic mechanisms by using a dog and a treadmill. Seamans measured the dog's heart rate at rest and during various stages of activity.

After completing the animal research and "other tedious aspects to make this work," Seamans said he compiled an abstract and submitted it to the American Heart Association and to the American Society of Experimental Biologists at its national convention in Anaheim, Calif.

He also presented his findings at the National Student Research Forum in Galveston,

His findings were significant, he said, but would probably be a crashing bore to anyone outside of the medical profession.

Seamans and other researchers' results are often targeted at finding cures for heart disease, he said.

"High blood pressure is the silent killer. So many people have it and don't know it. Their doctors will tell them and they'll say they don't feel anything is wrong. The problem is a year later they'll have a heart attack or kidney or eyesight problems and their doctors will remind them of the hypertension," Seamans said.

Since physicians do not know the underlying causes of hypertension, finding an answer would push the whole medical community one step ahead, he said.

According to the American Heart Association of Michigan, cardiovascular diseases are the No. 1 killer in America. One in four Americans has some type of cardiovascular ailment and each year they kill more than 170,000 Americans under the age of 65.

The good news, according to the heart assocation, is from 1979 to 1989, age-adjusted death rates from heart attacks declined 31 percent. Leading risk factors of heart disease are diabetes, high blood pressure, obesity, smoking, high blood cholesterol and a lack of exer-

ouncil appoints Belcher Woods city administrator

By Donna Walker Staff Writer

After nine months of searching, the Grosse Pointe Woods City Council has selected a new city administrator - Phillip Belcher, who was appointed by a 5-2 vote and sworn-in at the Sept. 21 council meeting, had been acting city administrator since May, when Chester E. Petersen stepped down from his post as interim city administrator.

Petersen was Woods city administrator-clerk for 30 years before he retired in December. He then worked part-time as acting city administrator to help plan the city's 1992-93 budget, which was completed in May.

Voting in favor of Belcher's appointment were Mayor Robert E. Novitke, Mayor Pro Tem Thomas J. Fahrner, and councilmen James Alogdelis, William Wilson and Peter Gilezan.

Voting against his appointment were councilwoman Jean Rice and councilman Ted Bidi-Bidigare said he voted against Belcher because "I felt there were better qualified applicants" among the finalists.

Profiles of other 3 finalists

By Donna Walker Staff Writer

The other three finalists who were considered by the Woods council for the job of city administrator were John D. Berchtold, Jerome R. Kisscorni and Scott S. Randall.

Berchtold has been village manager of Lake Orion since 1987, and before that he was village administrator of Wolverine Lake from 1983-87 (including six weeks as city manager of Kewanee, Ill.), city superintendent of Harbor Beach from 1980-83, township nmager of Lower Saucon Township, Pa., from 1978-80, and borough manager of Troy, Pa., from 1977-78.

Married with four children, he received his master's degree in management and supervision with a major in public administration from Central Michigan University in 1985, his bachelor's degree in economics with emphasis on governmental economics from Temple University in Philadelphia in 1976, and his associate's degree in business administration from Delaware County Community College in Media, Pa., in 1974.

Kisscorni has been city manager of Tecumseh since 1985 and before that he was assistant city manager there from 1983-85, executive director of the Manistee County Economic Development Office from 1982. 83, executive director of the Manistee County Chamber of Commerce from 1981-83, and director of the council of neighborhood business associations of the Grand Rapids Chamber of Commerce from 1980-81 Married with two children, he received his master of public administration degree from Western Michigan University in 1981, his bachelor of science degree with a double major in public administration and political science from Grand Valley State College in 1977, and his associate of arts degree from Grand Rapids Junior College in

Randall has been village manager of La Grange, Ill., since 1988 and before that was assistant city manager of Normal, Ill., from 1984-88, administrative assistant to the city manager in Portage from 1983-84, director of the office of community development in South Haven from 1981-83, and manager of community services of the Western Illinois Regional Council from 1978-81

Married, he completed 51 semester hours of instruction toward a master's of business administration degree at Western Illinois University in Macomb, Ill., from 1978-81, and received his bachelor of arts degree in political science with a minor in management and a certificate in public administration from Western Illinois University.

Asked how he felt about the council conducting a national search, Belcher said, "That's the council's prerogative. It doesn't bother me. In fact, I'm glad because it shows I compare favorably with other city managers and administrators in a national search.

Belcher and the city are in the process of negotiating his salary and the length of his contract.

Under the Woods charter, the assistant city administrator may reside outside of the city, but the city administrator must live in the Woods.

That means Belcher, who lives in Roseville, has to move, and the Woods charter gives him one year to do so.

He said he is "passively" looking for a house in the Woods and that before he buys one, it will have to meet the approval of his wife, Rose Ann, and their children, Phillip Jr., 9, and Amanda, 2.

Belcher is currently enrolled in Central Michigan University's master's degree program in human resources and expects to graduate in June 1993

He received his bachelor's degree in community development, with a concentration in public administration, from Central Michigan University in 1989 and earned his associate's degree in general studies with an emphasis in business administration from Macomb Community College in 1983.

He was city administrator in Auburn from 1987-90, city clerk-assessor in Clare from 1984-87, and worked in various departments in St. Clair Shores city hall - including the assessor's office, budgeting office and department of public works from 1973-84.

Board renews North principal search; early candidates found wanting

Staff Writer

If something went awry at one of Grosse Pointe's two public high schools, the prying eyes of the media and the community's attention would focus on the principal.

He or she would be expected to act swiftly to remedy the situation, to speak to the media, calm the parents and whatever else is necessary to maintain

"Like it or not, the high school is the showcase of a school district, said John Artis, South High School principal. "A principalship makes time. No matter what level elementary, middle or high school -- it's heavy duty. The principal, along with the school board and the superintendent, has to withstand the spotlight.

Following North High School principal John Kastran's retirement in June, the Grosse Pointe school district began a search for a replacement who could stand the heat. Assistant principal Tom Teetaert is interim principal until the job is filled permanently.

"None of the candidates fit the profile of who we were looking for," said Ronald Tonks, district personnel director. "We Tonks said. had a couple of candidates we thought met the qualifications, but before we could do any follow-up they withdrew. The ones left didn't measure up.'

Conducted by a 13-member search committee of parents, one student, teachers and district administrators, a renewed search began in late August with a state-wide job posting, Tonks said.

Applicants had until Sept. 20 to respond. Once the committee members pore through the applications, they will divide into two smaller groups that will both interview each candidate,

A high school principal's qualifications, Tonks said, include being a dynamic leader with excellent human relations skills, having knowlege of curriculum and reserach, being willing to involve others in the decision-making process and being highly visible, accessible and responsive to the concerns of staff, students and parents.

Add to those qualifications an expertise in financial management and problem solving, Tonks said, because high schools have the biggest budgets in the district.

And if all of that isn't enough, principals also are expected to supervise extra-curricular activites, attend school board and PTO meetings, fundraisers and homecoming parades, Artis said.

Artis' calender last week was packed with after-hours school functions, he said. Monday he juggled a Dads Club meeting and a school board special meeting. Tuesday and Wednesday he supervised sporting events. Friday and Saturday he visited the student homecoming float parties in progress, attended a pancake breakfast and more homecoming festivities.

Celebration of a life

If we are fortunate, we will know a handful of people in our lifetimes who will make an indelible imprint on us. If she were alive, my grandmother would be 116 years old this week. She would be the first to say that her life had been well-lived and I would agree. She had four children, 13 grandchildren and at least 10 greatgrandchildren. I find that I think about her often and am guided by the memories.

Term limits could create new problems

Trom all reports, the campaign to limit the terms of many public officials in Michigan and other states is gathering steam around the country.

Unfortunately, if the campaigns are successful in November, they could create new problems which in some respects would be worse than the problems caused by entrenched politicians that term-limitation proposals seek to dislodge.

Under Michigan's proposed constitutional amendment, which will be Proposal  ${\bf B}$  on the November ballot — U.S. House members would be limited to three twoyear terms in a 12-year period, while Michigan's senators would be restricted to two six-year terms over 24 years.

At the state level, the amendment would hold state House members to three two-year terms, state senators to two fouryear terms and Michigan's governor, lieutenant governor, attorney general and secretary of state to that same limit of two four-year terms.

If approved in November, the amendment would become effective in January and the limitations would apply on terms starting in 1993.

However, by throwing out, after limited service, able and experienced incumbents as well as veteran hacks, the proposal would deprive the state and nation of many competent officials.

If the plan had been in effect in the past, for example, state Rep. William R. Bryant Jr. of Grosse Pointe would not have been permitted to provide his more than 20 years of service to his Grosse Pointe constituency.

In effect, the limitation would deprive each voter of his freedom to choose the best candidate available for each of these elective positions. Thus it would reduce the power of all voters and further lessen their interest in the outcome of elections.

Even worse, with respect to Congress, Michigan would impose limitations on service in the House and Senate that would not be imposed by all other states. That would tend to reduce the power of Michigan's congressmen vis-a-vis lawmakers from states not limiting terms.

That is a significant argument because Congress still observes the seniority system which means Michigan's members and their constituencies would be placed at a disadvantage if this state adopted the term-limitation proposal.

The major argument in favor of term limitations is that it would dislodge entrenched incumbents who are more interested in feathering their own nests than in serving their constituencies.

But a better way to achieve that goal would be to reform the current campaign financing systems in both Washington and Lansing. Those systems encourage too many legislators on too many issues to ignore their constituents and serve the special interests that supply the bulk of their campaign funds.

It is worth noting, however, that there will be many changes in Congress this year even without the passage of Proposal B. At least seven members of the state's current 18 members of Congress have been eliminated by redistricting, defeat or retirement and similar proportions of members are being replaced in many other states.

Perhaps the strongest argument against the proposal is that it would increase the power of unelected staff members, lobbyists and executive department officials who often "capture" new members before they learn their way around Washington or Lansing.

Those people are seldom as dedicated to the public interest as the responsible elected officials whose chief aim is to serve their constituencies. Yet imposing legislative term limits would especially strengthen the unelected appointees of executive departments in their duels with Congress.

In Michigan and some other states, the campaign for Proposal B appears to have been supported by Republicans who see it as one way to cut into or even upset the Democratic control of both the state House and the U.S. House of Representa-

Even if it would have that effect, however, the proposal would also limit the careers of able and responsible GOP members who are building records of service in both Lansing and Washington and thereby gaining experience and seniority that benefit their constituents and the country as well.

In our view, the arguments for a "no" vote on limiting terms are persuasive.

Under the 260 plan, the school board itself would appoint the library board to run the library, adopt a budget and exercise other authority, subject to approval by the school board. The school board now also serves as a library board.

An independent library, on the other hand, would be supported by a library district completely independent from the school board but probably encompassing the same area.

Overall, however, it was a curious discussion in at least one respect.

Not a single speaker ever mentioned the reasons for the community concern that led to the appointment by the school board of a governance committee to seek out the best library organization for the

That concern arose after two defeats in recent years, the latest in February 1991, of plans to build a new and larger building to accommodate the increase in library services and activities already occurring in the Grosse Pointes.

Pentagon not a relief agency

ou have to give Defense Secretary Dick Cheney credit. When he says the Pentagon is not a welfare agency, he means it.

Despite Cheney's view, however, the Bush campaign chiefs twice in recent weeks have shown that they regard the Pentagon as a tool to be used in the president's re-election campaign.

Cheney told the Detroit Economic Club recently that it is Congress that is forcing him to spend money on an upgrade of the MIA1 tank at the General Dynamics tank plant in Warren. He added that he had asked Congress to rescind the approproation but when it refused he had to pend the money.

Yet two weeks earlier it was Vice President Dan Quayle, during a Macomb County campaign visit, who had anresinced what he called the "welcome ws" about the upgrade project and the ing of jobs at the Warren plant.

Even if Congress is forcing the expendion the Warren plant, to the satisfacan of its employees and other area residents, the Bush campaign obviously dictated the timing of the announcement.

The decision to rebuild Homestead Air Force Base in Florida, which had been scheduled for closing before it was destroyed by Hurricane Andrew, is another case on the same point.

Cheney told the Economic Club the decision was "personally, specifically and directly made by the president" to satisfy the feelings of people in the area devastated by the hurricane.

That decision, like the one affecting the Warren plant, was made for political and perhaps economic reasons even though, as a number of congressmen testified, other Southern bases scheduled for closing could have served as substitutes.

Even though our own Detroit metro area sometimes benefits, even though other presidents have taken similar actions and even though the recent moves may be politically beneficial, we're disappointed when the Pentagon is used for other than defense purposes.

As Cheney said, it is not a welfare

Facts to remember

To the Editor:

As election rhetoric and emotions heat up, there is apt to be disproportionate concern for the truth. In this election year, that is particularly true of the Republican Party's stance concerning a woman's right to choose an abortion.

Both pro-life and prochoice leadership agree that religious and moral principles influence that decision. They disagree on significant matters, such as definitions of "fetus" vs. "child," importance of the mother's physical and mental health, and whether the whole issue should involve intrusion by the state. Their differences appear to be irreconcilable.

Most mainline Protestants and reformed Jews support pro-choice principles. Thirty-six religious denominations and faith groups are members of the Religious Coalition for Abortion Rights. The Protestant Episcopal Church in the United States, President Bush's church, supports pro-choice principles.

The Republican Party and its religious-right leadership insist on legislating their views. This is a clear violation of the establishment clause of the First Amendment of the U.S. Constitution. President Bush announced that God was in the Republican platform. This was an affront to religious groups and persons who disagree with him. Demonizing of those who have other views is not in the spirit of mutual respect in a pluralistic soci-

Listen to the words of these Republican leaders -Pat Buchanan, Pat Robert. son, Jerry Falwell, Rush Limbaugh. Are these bigoted, misogynous men the moral leaders of this country? I think not.

Following are other truths to keep in mind when pulling that lever in November. Hitler and the Third Reich, all Christians, forbade abortions. They also sent millions of Jews, gypsies and homosexuals to the gas chambers, along with dissenters. Despite a plethora of prolife material to the contrary, 95 percent of abortions are performed within the first trimester. The fetus is 1 to 2 inches long and weighs one-half ounce. Those performed in the second or third trimester are generally done to save the life of the mother. The answer to the abortion dilemma lies in cooperative action promoting better sex education programs and research in birth control methods and devices not more laws which would threaten religious freedoms and a woman's right to her health and privacy. Katharine Gee Grosse Pointe Park

Harmless prank? Not in my album

1 promise this is the last you'll hear from me about weddings for a long time.

Really, I swear.

But there is a wedding tradition that is so strange, so rude and so stupid that I feel I must talk about it, so that other people will think twice before doing it.

No, I'm not talking about the wedding night.

I'm talking about wedding guests pulling childish pranks on the bride and groom.

Maybe I'm sheltered. Or maybe I just haven't attended enough weddings. But I had never heard of the practice until I became a victim. When my husband and I became engaged in June 1991, we considered having a small wedding. And when we started getting prices for halls, we briefly considered having a picnic wedding reception in a park.

The bridal party members could change out of their formal wear into baseball-player like T-shirts that said, for ex-"Marlise, Maid of Honor.

No, no, we decided.

We're only going to get married once, we theorized, and if we don't do it up right, we might regret it later. So, we decided to go over our budget and throw the biggest and best reception we could.

We spent months looking at halls, interviewing disc jockeys and going to bakeries and flotion site, a dinner menu, music, a cake and decorations we thought our 200 invited guests would enjoy.

We put a lot of time, effort and expense into our wedding, but we did not feel we were owed any gifts in return. We just wanted to throw a big celebration for ourselves, our friends and family.

The only thing we expected rists before choosing a recep- from our guests was common courtesy

> Instead, we got a car full of toilet paper and balloons, which delayed our departure from the reception. And two groomsmen broke into my suitcase, which was in the trunk of the car.

In retrospect, the balloons were kind of funny, but I surely would not have thought so if my husband and I had to catch a plane right after the reception as some couples do, and if the balloon-delay had caused us to miss our plane.

As for the suitcase incident, that was totally inexcusable in

When I opened up my suitcase the night of my wedding, I found a Hustler magazine and two half-crushed beer cans inside with a few drops still in

"Ha, ha," I thought. But I totally lost it the next morning when I discovered the pranks didn't end there. My carefully packed shorts, shirts and sweatshirts had been tied in knots, and the shoelaces on my tennis shoes were tied in about a hundred little knots.

I don't know what reaction the perpetrators intended to foster, but I didn't think it was funny at all. I felt violated and I cried most of that morning.

My husband was angry about it, too, and said he didn't understand the sense of it, but tried to calm me down by saying it was a goodnatured prank.

Maybe so, but when I go into their homes, I don't search through their drawers and tie their clothing in knots.

I've forgiven the two men who pulled that stunt, but I will never forget that feeling of betrayal that spoiled the first day of my married life. Weddings are an emotional time for the bride and groom. After weeks, months, or years of planning, they deserve to enjoy a feeling of happiness and relief once it's all over.

If someone thinks enough of you to invite you to his or her wedding, smile for them and wish them well. But please, don't return the courtesy by pulling a stupid, immature prank that could spoil their happiness.

Thanks again

A stolen-vehicle chase which ended in the chilly waters of Lake St. Clair got lots of media attention recently.

Two men stole a minivan in Grosse Pointe Farms and led both Farms and St. Clair Shores police on a chase through the two cities in the early morning hours of Sept. 9. The thieves took a wrong turn, drove through two chain-link fences at the end of 11 Mile, and splashed into the lake. All was captured on a video camera inside a St. Clair Shores po-

We covered the story in our Sept. 17 issue. The Detroit News and Detroit Free Press wrote about the incident. Several TV stations ran clips of the police department's video.

Police officers were praised, especially Jason Brown, David Pietrzak and Sgt. Bob Chester of the St. Clair Shores police department, who dove into 63-degree water to save the two suspects.

Nobody mentioned the Farms public safety officer who spotted the stolen vehicle in the first place - just after it was reported missing by its owner.

George Broomfield was the sharp-eyed Grosse Pointe Farms officer.

Anniversary

Jo Ann and George Beard, formerly of Grosse Pointe, now of Boynton Beach, Fla., will celebrate their 50th wedding anniversary Saturday, Oct. 24, at a reception at the Grosse Pointe Yacht Club given by their children, Barbara Taylor and Patrick Beard.

Lost dog? Not!

Remember our "lost dog" item Sept. 17?

A worried Grosse Pointe Woods resident called us about a homeless sheltie-like dog who had been wandering in her neighborhood since March. Neighbors were leaving food out for him, she said, and he seemed timid and wary of peo-

He's not lost, according to another reader.

Margie Reins Smith

She, too, was concerned. One day I tracked him near his owner's home," she wrote to "The woman claimed her young daughter carelessly leaves the side door open for the dog to escape. The owner is aware of the dog's adventures and seems concerned. I was happy to see your article because our family is also concerned about this animal's safety.'

Winning cook

Jamee Marie Chancey of Grosse Pointe Farms won a premium blue ribbon first place award at the Michigan State Fair for the last three years, for her spice cake.

This year, she also won a blue ribbon for her snowball Christmas cookies, a fourth place ribbon for her chocolate chip cookies and an honorable mention for her banana nut

Flux stirs angst in jittery Germany

I couldn't have picked a more ropean anti-Germanism and interesting two weeks to spend

Currency fluctuated, resentments flared, zealots voted, bankers dueled with interest rates as sidearms, rightwingers protested, gypsies begged, thinkers introspected, politicians fulminated, pundits expounded.

The new Europe is coming apart at the seams. Or not. The last time I visited Germany, drab-colored trains had small, uncomfortable compartments; dour border guards in matching drab uniforms unsmilingly inspected passports and said things like "achtung!" The old trains are still in use on the milk runs, but now the ICE sweeps smoothly, rapidly, aerodynamically, expensively, silently (it's electric) between major cities.

Now, crossing a border just means driving past an empty customs booth. Open borders mean highways full of trucks, not just from the usual western EC nations, but stinking diesels from Poland and Hungary.

"It wouldn't be Germany without a traffic jam," a friend told me as we sat at a dead stop, motor off, reading magazines. "You're experiencing all the real things.

Some of the real things aren't very attractive in Europe just at the moment - just as they aren't very attractive in the United States. Even as I asked about neo-Nazis and Euproblems with the old East. rates and illiteracy and ruined cities. Nobody has a monopoly on tragedy and despair.

It isn't just the French and Danish who have reservations about a more unified Europe. The German constitution precludes holding a referendum on Maastricht, but (contrary to what you read here) the Germans I know think the country might vote no on that treaty if given a chance.

"Nobody knows what it means," a friend said. "Everybody's nervous about it.'

Especially since The Change, the opening of east/west borders. Nobody minds the EC's elimination of international tariffs. Nobody minds being able to drive to France for the afternoon without an annoying customs hassle.

What they worry about is the new movement of people, the feeling of constant flux, and the accompanying economic uncertainty. Conservatives in France and England (not just Germany) protest verbally and physically against newcomers who they think threaten their tenuous economic situation.

If we think that's hard to understand, we should remember the Texas shrimpers' violent reaction against Vietnamese immigrants. Or Michiganders' own feelings when welfare seekers from all over the United States came to our state for better benefits. Or the strife between blacks and Koreans in New York or moves in cities nationwide to exclude the homeless from public places. That the new openness comes at a time of economic downturn only makes feelings harsher. In Stuttgart, a conversation with a management-level employee of Mercedes Benz sounded exlike a page from Detroit s Big Three story. Twenty percent of the managers were being reassigned, he said. He felt lucky to have his job, but uneasy when he looked around at the people without assignments, wondering about their future.

So life doesn't look as clearcut and dependable as people used to think it was. But do Europeans want to forget all about community? I don't think

Other lingering impressions: Not all the East Germans unloaded their Trabis. The little "cardboard" two-stroke smokers still line eastern roads and chug along at about 55 on the Autobahn. In Dresden, sidewalk vendors sell toy Trabants as collectors' items: "Car of the Year. '89"

The Autobahn's reputation is overblown. The passing lane certainly gives scope to 100mile-an-hour aggression, but the rest of the folks are only traveling about 75 - and we know that's kind of standard.

Germany isn't as clean as its billing. Villagers are compulsive about neatness, but in the cities, garbage piles are reminiscent of New York. Everybody has a dog, so scheisse is widespread. Watch your step. And never mind the pit bull wandering loose in the park Nobody else does.

The fast trains are a glimpse into the future. But, in order to get riders at the new high prices, the government cut back service on the former express routes. Unfortunately, tickets on the ICE are so expensive that now lots of people drive instead. I tried out the organized carpools, which are cheap and work fine if you aren't in a hurry. Germans pay close attention to U.S. politics and are worried about our impending isolationist stance. The Frankfurter Allgemeine reported that Ross Perot had made it onto all 50 state ballots, calling him a "Flaschengeist," or genie in a bottle. Lots of potential for a surprise there, come November.

To say that housing is at a premium is such an understatement that it's almost a joke. "It's like Moscow," one friend said.

In Hamburg, refugees live on barracks barges on the Elbe; in Dresden, hotel guests overflow into floating hotels. And, down south in Freiburg, university students stay in barracks abandoned by the departing French military. A chemistry professor was talking about commuting two hours to a new job because of the difficulty in finding housing there.

The flowers are as beautiful as everyone says. The best display wasn't in Germany at all, though, but in my own "home town" in Alsace. Pardon my civic pride.

The west didn't waste any time investing in the previously closed east. Dresden has a McDonald's in its soulless Prager Square, and a Hilton has been on the scene there for two years already.

In Strasbourg, the otherworldly atmosphere of the cathedral square was transformed as klieg lights held night at a distance and French television conducted man-on-the-street interviews about the Maastricht referendum that day. The ethereal pull toward heaven of the centuries-old stone spire only heightened the immediacy of the decision-making in the modern world

Response

To the Editor:

The Sept. 24 letter to the editor written by Greg Theokas, an obvious campaign supporter of my Republican opponent, contains several inaccuracies which fairness compels me to address.

First, the attempt to imply that paying taxes on a piece of property outside of Wayne County means I do not live in Wayne County is an insult to everyone who ever owned a piece of investment property, a cottage or a condominium outside the county in which they reside. Is my Republican opponent's campaign supporter also calling all of these individuals dishonest?

The facts in this matter are as follows:

1. I have lived in Wayne County since the day I was born.

2. I have held a driver's license, with a Wayne County address on it since I was 16 years old.

3. I have voted in Wayne County since I was 18 years old.

4. I have owned property in Wayne County and paid taxes thereon since 1983.

Second, to say that because some of the Democrats on the Wayne County Board of Commissioners favor the proposed one-half mill tax increase, means because I am a Democrat, I also favor the proposal. This is the standard "guilt by association" ploy which my opponent had effectively used against his fellow Republicans in the primary election. The truth, of course, is much different.

I have consistently opposed this proposed tax increase, and my opposition was the main reason the Detroit News endorsed my candidacy in the primary election.

Finally, I hope my Republican opponent will soon acquire a higher opinion of the intelligence of the Grosse Pointe voters and begin to address the very serious issues facing these voters, such as crime and drugs, the expansion of Detroit City Airport and the proposed use of tax money for a new Tiger Stadium — all of which I oppose.

County commission

race
To the Editor:

I am most disappointed to see the barrage of negative advertisements that Democratic County commissioner candidate George Fitzgerald has launched against his Republican opponent Andrew Richard ponent, Andrew Richner.

As a Grosse Pointe Park councilman, Andrew Richner has had a fine record as a public servant. He has consistently sought to provide the best service for his constituents, at the lowest possible cost. In fact, his commissioner candidacy has been so well-received that he is enthusiastically endorsed by every Grosse Pointe mayor.

If elected, Andrew Richner has promised to oppose the wasteful Wayne County perks (large staffs, luxury cars, etc.) that the Democratic commissioners think they deserve. Richner will encourage the privatization of many of the county's inefficient and overly expensive services. He will also vigorously oppose any new county taxes, such as the proposed one-half mill property tax increase

The proposed one-half mill property tax increase was emphatically voted down by Wayune County's voters in the Aug. 4 election. Yet, the Democratic commission majority voted to put it back on the Nov. 3 ballot. Richner's Democratic opponent does not oppose this tax increase.

Unlike Councilman Richner, the Democratic nominee does not hold a public office and has failed in at least four attempts at various public offices. The Democratic candidate also supports the "tax and spend" approach of Wayne County's bureaucrats. That "tax and spend" mentality has resulted in a 75 percent increase in Wayne County property taxes during the last five years.

Maybe the Democratic nominee is not concerned by higher Wayne County taxes because he recently bought a new home in Macomb County.

Andrew Richner lives in Grosse Pointe, owns his home here and actively participates in our local government. It is a shame that he should be subject to so malicious a campaign by so unworthy an opponent.

BBB

To the Editor:

I found your two flattering stories about the Better Business Bureau in the Aug. 27 issue quite interesting.

They were interesting because, as a long-time reporter, I had written similar flattering things about the BBB, generally based on what the BBB leaders said.

But recently, while in the role of a consumer of services by a member of the BBB, I found a huge gulf between what the BBB says and what they do.

In a nutshell, some months ago I contracted to have some extensive remodeling done at my home by a member of the BBB of Detroit and Eastern Michigan. After collecting megathousands of dollars, the builder bluntly told me he couldn't finish our job because he had taken our money and spent it — presumably on himself and possibly for another job.

This whole matter was then referred to a BBB case worker who acknowledged that the builder was a BBB member, but she was unable to provide any help.

My next move was to take the matter up with the BBB director of operations and the person quoted liberally in the story that carried the six-column headline. After asking me to dig up all the facts on this "heist," the BBB dropped the case flat—without even a telephone call to explain its failure.

There are some good, honest remodelers in Grosse Pointe — one has now just about completed the job. But I think there's a major misconception about what the BBB can do for the public.

Board meetings

To the Editor:

An editor's note on page 6A of last week's Grosse Pointe News (Sept. 24) said that board of education meetings were rotated among schools in the district. That is no longer true.

This year all regularly scheduled board of education meetings will be held in Wicking Library, Grosse Pointe South High School.

The change was made for a number of reasons, including the need to comply with the American Disabilities Act, the wish not to compete with other school and community groups for use of school gymnasiums, and the inability of staff to move and set up recording equipment at different locations due to cutbacks.

Notices of board meetings are posted in the Administration Building, all public school buildings, and all three public libraries. A schedule of board meetings is available from the Superintendent's Office, 389

St. Clair, or by calling 343-2020.

Fox Creek

horror

To the Editor:

For something that only happens once every 100 or 500 years, it sure does seem that the Grosse Pointes find the need to ‡ discharge combined sewage into Fox Creek far too often. Grosse Pointe Park city manager Dale Krajniak was inaccurate when he said they "let water out at Fox Creek." It would be more accurate to say that combined sewage was discharged via Fox Creek into the back yards and homes of the residents of Ashland Sitreet

After the Sept. 15 storm. Addiand Street and its resi dents were awash with sewage from porch to porch as Grosse Pointe Park pumped millions of gallons at such a rate that the crpek transgressed its boundaries.

As a victim of the inane and Grosse Pointe Park that allows the discharge of combined sewage into Fox Creek, I have spent a good part of my life sandbagging and creating earthen dikes to protect my home and my neighbors' homes from the disasters this agreement has caused over the years.

On Sept. 15, I watched in horror as Fox Creek overflowed again. In a matter of minutes several feet of sewage was washing away any hope of saving anything in its path as it headed over my boat dock, into my back yard, over my dike system, toward my back door and in my basement windows. Condoms and tampons swirled around my boots and then down my driveway headed for the street grates that quickly clogged with human waste.

The Sept. 17 and 24 stories in the Grosse Pointe News about the flooding that took place in the Grosse Pointes were interesting. The hard news and the real story is that this is Grosse Pointe Park may have a piece of paper saying they can do this to us, but it does not make it right. It's time that Grosse Pointe Park adopt a good neighbor policy and agree that dumping their sewage into our back yards and basements does not solve its problem. I resent that my home is considered an "open drain" for Grosse Pointe Park to dump on.

Gooty campaign

To the Editor:

(1) "Good old Harry Truman" is experiencing something of a Renaissance these days. "Good old George Bush" is saying he's going to come from behind just like Harry in 1948, whistle-stopping and all, and beat Bill Clinton. Don't count on it.

(2) Two been reading a wonderful book called "I Vote My Conscience," Debates, Speeches and Writings of Vito Marcantonio, a congressman during the 1935-1950 years. I urge readers to get this book, edited by literary historian Annette T. Rubinstein, published in 1956 and available through the Detroit Public Library (Dewey decimal number 320.8 M33i, Sociology and Economics Department).

It's an exciting history of a period now fading into the past, although there are striking resemblances to our time. "The more it changes, the more it's the same thing."

(3) Bill Clinton is full of charm, and you can't help liking him, but whether he'll be a president of stature remains very much to

Bush? It's time now for retirement with a handsome pension and happy days ahead at Kennebunk-

Perot? A joke. Remember the radio comics who could double-talk? They'd seem to be saying something, but darned if you could figure out what it means. He's the candidate that Archie Bunker might like, a distraction, someone not to be taken seriously.

May the Lord have mercy on us all in this most goofy of goofy campaigns.

Viet vet loan program facts

Q. Are there small business loans available to disabled veterans?

A. Since 1983, the Small Business Administration (SBA) has administered a direct loan program for Vietnam-Era and disabled veterans. A Vietnam-Era or disabled veteran who meets SBA's credit criteria may qualify for a direct loan if unable to obtain financing from commercial or other lenders. In each SBA field office, there is a veterans' affairs officer who is designated as the contract person to assist veterans in dealings with SBA. Interested veterans should contact their nearest SBA field office to obtain additional information on SBA loan programs. SBA also maintains a national toll-free number: 1-800-827-5722.

Ninth Amendment addresses rights not covered elsewhere This is the 13th in a series of articles about the Bill of Rights, courtesy of the Commission of the Bicentenmal of the U.S. Constitution.

The Ninth Amendment states simply that "tohe enumeration in the Constitution, of certain cigists, shall not be construed to deny or disparage others retained by the people."

One of the arguments used during the debate over the need for a bill of rights was That, if certain individual rights were expressly listed, rights we were not listed might not e recognized later.

Y Thus, Alexander Hamilton wrote that the protection of individual rights depended not on her being listed in a bill of sights but "on the general spirit of the people and of the pyernment.

Others were not convinced. They were apprehensive about i distant national government and wanted to limit its powers over individuals as much as possible

In drafting the Bill of Rights in 1789, James Madison drew on the Virginia Declaration of Rights and other state bills of rights, and included the provision that became the Ninth Amendment to address these

Madison's original draft of the Ninth Amendment made it quite clear that the protection of certain rights in the Bill of Rights did not imply that other rights were not also worthy of protection:

The exceptions here or elsewhere in the constitution, made in favor of particular rights, shall not be construed as to diminish the just importance of other rights retained by the people, or as to enlarge the powers delegated by the constitution; but either as actual limitations of such powers, or as inserted merely for greater caution.

The Ninth Amendment is the only provision in the Constitution that instructs the people how the Constitution should be interpreted. In recent years, this instruction has been the subject of considerable debate. The prevailing view is that the Ninth Amendment itself is not a source of constitutional rights, but simply tells the people that the framers' failure to protect a particular right in the Constitution does not mean that the right is without protec-

For example, a right that is not protected by the federal Constitution may nevertheless be protected by a state constitu-

Some justices and judges, however, have taken the position that the Ninth Amendment grants constitutionally protected status to a body of socalled natural or fundamental rights that are not specifically listed in the Constitution.

Thus, in the case of Griswold Connecticut, 381 U.S. 479 (1965), several justices relied on the Ninth Amendment in striking down a Connecticut statute that forbid the use of contraceptive devices by married couples on the ground that the statute violated a constitutionally protected right to marital privacy. even though the right to marital privacy is not expressly set forth anywhere in the Constitu-

With the possible exception of the Griswold case, the Ninth Amendment has been of relatively minor significance in the historical development of federal constitutional law.

It stands as an important reminder, however, that our system of government is based on the will of "We the People," who have the power to retain rights not enumerated in the Constitution by making laws that protect those rights.

Children's Home is extended family for mother/daughter team

By Shirley A. McShane Staff Writer

Elizabeth Reeves and Margie Garbarino remember a cold and snowy February day more than 40 years ago when the Children's Home of Detroit was first relocated from Jefferson Avenue to its Cook Road site in Grosse Pointe Woods.

Surrounded by pheasant-inhabited fields and wooded lots, the cluster of cottages seemed a million miles removed from civilization. The nearest neighbors were University Liggett School and the Grosse Pointe Hunt Club.

"I remember those children getting off the buses. Everything they had was in these soggy paper bags. It was all muddy out here," said Reeves, 79, who resigned as a Children's Home board trustee in 1987 and later was named an honorary trustee.

'Some board members were upset. They said you can't put all these children out in the country; this was literally out in the country," said Garbarino, who is Reeves' daughter and has been on the board since 1967.

Reeves and Garbarino mark the fourth and fifth generation of the Kanter family to serve on the Children's Home board of trustees. According to their memories and the aid of a book tracing the institution's history, the Kanter family involvement began around Christmas of

Reeves' great-great-grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Kanter, invited the orphans from the Protestant Orphan Asylum of Detroit over to their home for Christmas festivities. The Christmas invitation grew to be a yearly tradition, Reeves

Edward also served on the asylum's advisory finance committee. His son, Henry Kanter, later joined the finance committee and his wife, Marie, was elected to the board of trustees. Tradition followed with Reeves' parents, Charles and Margaret Kanter, who were instrumental in the capital campaign to relocate the Children's Home from Detroit to Grosse Pointe Woods.

"There is a lot of tradition here," said Reeves, who is one of the longest-serving board members. "Several people on the board have relatives who

Reeves and her late husband, Arthur, followed suit when Arthur joined the finance committee and she was elected to the board in 1946. To illustrate how deep the family committment is rooted, Reeves said when her husband relocated the family to Midland for a year, she didn't let a two-tothree-hour drive get in the way of her responsibility to attend board meetings.

Influenced by her family's involvement, Garbarino joined the board in 1967. She predicts that her daughter, Karen, who now lives in Dallas, will probably become involved when she returns to Michigan.

Childhood memories of visits to the Children's Home and dinner-time conversations between mother and father about the latest news at the home made the place and its staff and residents seem like an extension of the family.

"When (the home) was on Jefferson Avenue, I loved going down there with mom," Gar-barino recalled. "I had all of those kids to play with and I thought it was wonderful. I can still remember all the wonderful smells coming out of the kitchen when they would bake cookies and make apple sauce. I was included in everything the kids did and it was fun."

Reeves shared similar memories of her mother taking her along on visits to the home.

While the family involvement has remained constant for almost 100 years, Reeves and Garbarino have witnessed sweeping changes in the home's residents and their needs in just the last 40 years.

Originally established as an orphanage, the home also has served as a place for children whose parents were unable to care for them. Today, the focus is on helping emotionally disturbed children.

"We changed as the needs arose," Garbarino said. "The breakdown of the family has increased these needs. That's why the name changed from the Protestant Children's Home to the Children's Home of Detroit. We are only interested in the child and it doesn't make a difference where he comes While Garbarino was the first woman in her family's recent history to hold an outswide job, she still managed to find time for the Children's Home. At 56, she has retired from full-time management at Jacobson's. But even when she logged 40-plus hours at the store and was raising a family, she said she couldn't turn her back on the home.

"I was aways so much in love with everything that was going on there," Garbarino

Getting back to snuff after an illness

Dr. Roger O. Egeberg is with the Institute of Medicine in Washington, D.C. His background includes serving as assistant secretary for Health, Education and Welfare under secretaries Finch, Richardson and Weinberger; professor of medicine and later dean of the University of Southern California School of Medicine; clinical professor of medicine at the UCLA School of Medicine; medical director at the Los Angeles County General Hospital; medical director of the Wadsworth General VA Hospital; and Gen. Douglas MacArthur's physician and aide-de-camp for the last year and a half of World War II. Before the war, he practiced medicine and taught at Western Reserve University School of Medicine in Cleveland. His column will appear here every other week, alternating with Prime Time by Marian Trainor.

This column comes from my heart, or from my legs or arms, for it is a chronicle of personal experience of the past few months. It happens to most people, but they don't fully realize what has occurred.

About four months ago I had the flu. Not a bad case, but I went to bed for two or three days, took it easy for another few days and thought I was completely over it and its after-

I slept well, ate well, and I got around well. And then two things happened. The first was that some nasty weather cleared away, and I began to walk farther afield. Great! But when I timed my measured mile, it took 22 minutes, whereas before contracting the flu I had walked it in 18-1/2 minutes.

Seniors plan trips

The Grosse Pointe Woods Seniors and St. Joan of Arc Seniors have several trips planned. They welcome all seniors to join them.

There will be a trip to Niagara Falls Dec. 5.6 for $199, a Caribbean cruise in January for $1,200 and Las Vegas in March for $479.

For fliers and information, call Irene Sutton at 884-2942 or Ann McNally at 884-1549.

Travel lecture set

The Neighborhood Club Senior adults will meet Wednesday, Oct. 7, to hear a speaker from Blue Cross/Blue Shield of Michigan's Senior Service Department present a new program, "Trouble-Free Travel.

For more information, call 885-4600.

For hearing-impaired

If you know someone who has a hearing impairment, call the PAM Assistance Centre (Physically Impaired Association of Michigan) for a list of companies that sell products for the hearing impaired.

The second thing referred to my strength. My wife sculpts in clay. It comes in 25-pound plastic bags which I could handle easily. I would lift them out of the car and carry them to her studio without any sense of effort. Now I found they had become very heavy. I could handle them but it was hard.

This made me wonder about a few other repetitive actions. The stairs: climbing one flight winded me just a bit, which it had not done earlier.

Other little things made me realize that I was not up to snuff, my pre-flu snuff. Finally, one day my wife said, "Roger, you're walking like an old man. Why don't you straighten up?" I found that I could do so but I didn't stay that way for very long.

I didn't like these changes. My doctor said I was fine, and my friends told me how well I looked. But I wanted to prove that I could get back into the physical condition I had enjoyed before the flu. I sought the help of a physical therapist. He made a number of tests and prescribed exercises for me and told me to walk two miles a

This I did for a month. I could walk reasonably erect when I concentrated on it, but could be necessary following a speeding up on the level I would stoop. I could lift my wife's bags of clay much more easily but not with the aplomb that I formerly had shown.

I had reduced the timing of my measured mile to 20 minutes, but that was pushing it. On some days, but only on some days, I felt that I had regained my pre-illness stamina. However, I realized I was not getting back fully to my pre-flu state, so I returned to the physical therapist and suggested that he see me once a week for a while, to praise me or to bawl me out. We agreed on a regimen of 15 minutes of exercises every morning and a walk of one mile a day.

I am sure the steady encouragement helped me. Now, after four weeks of doing what I was told to do, I am pleased and grateful to be completely back in shape.

Talking with a geriatrician friend of mine and reading two articles that he suggested have persuaded me that most of us, even in our 80s, can regain our former degree of fitness with a proper regimen after being kept in bed. The time in bed need not be due to an infection but minor operation, a broken bone, or other non-generalized incident.

Most of you are going to have to take this responsibility on your own shoulders. All too many surgeons are ready to say goodbye to you when they have removed the stitches. Too many other physicians rush to declare you in good shape when their examination and the lab show no abnormality. And your friends, of course, comment on your healthy appearance whether they believe it or not.

Not long ago, I visited a friend in the hospital the day after he had undergone a major operation. He asked me, "Do you know how far I walked to-İ said, "Twice around your room?

He said, "No, I walked a quarter of a mile, and I'm going to walk half a mile tomorrow. I asked my surgeon for an OK, and he seemed surprised but told me to go ahead and try it. Two round trips of that hall you came down equal a quarter of a mile.

He reached three-quarters of a mile by the time he left the hospital a couple of days later, and he told me the other day that he was back in his pre-operative shape in 10 days. Incidentally, he is 81.

Be aware of timing and of incidental tests of your strength. These can point up insidious changes that we all accept as being part of growing older. Unless we have a few such mileposts for comparison, we, our doctors, and our friends will all think we're doing well.

I've been preaching and I know it, but for the most part what I have been talking about or writing about is up to you. It is very important, for if you're laid up and don't consciously try to regain your former status, you will have taken another step in diminishing the horizons of your physical well-

Scouts from Troop 479, which meets at Parcells Middle School, went whitewater rafting in West Virginia this summer.

Scouts explore West Virginia afoot, afloat

Boy Scout Troop 479 had a week of high adventure in West Virginia this summer as they explored the state on foot and by raft.

Participants were Gene and John Carswell, Dave and Ned Eisenbrey, John Everett, Chris Frey, Jeff Profeta, Nathan Pierantoni, Jon Opdyke, Paul Serilla, Sean Stevenson, and Craig and Alex Tracy, and their leaders, scoutmaster Joe Meinig and assistants Ken Carswell, Bill Frey and Mike Tracy.

Their first stop was the Monongahela National Forest where they backpacked about three miles from the trail to set up a base camp at Judy Springs. The next day they explored the many trails in the area, climbed and descended 2,500 feet and hiked numerous

Their reward was a spectacular view of the Allegheny Mountains from Spruce Knob. at 4,840 feet elevation.

The following day they drove to New River valley. Near the village of Prince, the group loaded their gear onto two large rafts, to be rowed by their guides and then set off down the New River in two four-man rafts and eight inflatable kay-

For two days their guides showed everyone how to "read" and select a route through the rapids, how to turn into and peel out of eddys and what to do if you end up swimming in whitewater.

The third day brought the group to the New River's Lower Gorge, one of the East's most popular spots for whitewater rafting. The lessons paid off as they ran more than a dozen rapids in guided 10-man rafts and ended their descent with a spectacular view of the US-19 single span arch bridge, nearly 900 feet above the river.

The Scouts are looking forward to their monthly camping trips and talking about a new adventure next summer.

For information about Troop 479, call Meinig at 882-6614 or come to one of the regular meetings at 7:45 p.m. on Mondays at Parcells.

Trap suspected in maining of cat

By Ronald J. Bernas

Have other pets in Grosse Pointe Farms been victimized by what may be a leg trap or is Leslie Evans' cat Daniella the only one?

That's what she and Farms police want to know.

Evans' cat sneaked out at about midnight last Tuesday and limped home at approximately 4 a.m. Her paw was mangled and she was bleeding so badly Evans called the veterinarian immediately. Upon examining the cat, the vet said the injury looked like one made by a standard leg hold trap, which, incidentally, are illegal to use in Grosse Pointe Farms.

The damage was so severe that Daniella's leg had to be amputated, but she is doing fine now, Evans reports. "I just want to know if this

Board curbs carousing cats

By Ronald J. Bernas Staff Writer

Grosse Pointe Shores cat owners will have to be a little more careful with their pets following passage of a new ordinance by the village board of trustees.

In response to a letter sent to the council by a group of Shores residents angry over roving cats in their neighborhood, the board amended its dog ordinance to include cats.

That means cat owners are subject to the same laws dog owners must observe. Cats must be licensed (for a $5 fee), and residents must keep their cats under control; no more putting the cat out for the night.

If a stray cat is found it will be impounded. The owner will be fined. After the third offense, the owner must appear in court.

The new ordinance also limits to four the combined number of cats or dogs an owner can keep.

The new ordinance will be enforced on a complaint-only has happened to other pet owners," she said. "Those traps are dangerous. It could have been a kid that stepped on that."

Public safety chief Robert Ferber agrees.

'There are ordinances against these traps," he said. "We do have lawful traps available to rent if people feel they have an animal problem. They keep the animal alive and the police take care of them once they're trapped."

Ferber couldn't tell if what happened to Daniella was the result of a leg trap, but said he is keeping his eyes open for similar incidents.

DM holds nfo class

Parents, teachers and admintrators are invited to attend n awareness session on Odysy of the Mind, a creative oblem-solving program, on 'ednesday, Oct. 7, at Parcells iddle School or Tuesday, Oct. 3, at the Macomb ISD in Mount Clemens. Both sessions will be from 7 to 8 p.m.

The Odyssey of the Mind pogram promotes divergent thinking in students from kindergarten through college. It provides students with an opportunity to participate in challenging and motivating activities, both inside and outside their regular classroom curriculum.

Students learn to work with others as a team and develop self-confidence by creating solutions, evaluating their ideas and making final decisions. Creative skills are increased through problem-solving and independent thinking.

Odyssey of the Mind strives to make learning fun. Participants must be members of the OM Association which provides problem information, rules of competition and curriculum materials containing creative problem-solving activities at the elementary and secondary levels.

The program began when students from 28 high schools and middle schools met for the first creative problem-solving competition at Glassboro State College in New Jersey.

In 14 years, the membership has extended to 10,000 schools and programs across the United States, Canada, China, England, Germany, Hungary, Japan, Mexico, Poland, the Soviet states, Australia and several other countries.

South to host parents night

Parents of Grosse Pointe South High School students will go back to school on Thursday, Oct. 8, at 7 p.m. to follow a mini-version of their student's schedule.

Each of the seven class periods will be 12 minutes with the exception of the first period, which is 15 minutes to allow for a few announcements.

The purpose of Back-to-School Night is to provide parents with an opportunity to meet teachers and become more familiar with the high school curriculum, according to principal John B. Artis. During each class period, the teacher will define the course of study, describe methods used to develop skills and how they are integrated into the course and list the organizational skills required to understand the content of the course.

Teachers will also explain the nature and purpose of study guides, assignments and tests, and interpret the criteria used to evaluate student performance.

The Grosse Pointe South High School Mothers' Club will serve refreshments in Cleminson Hall during an open period in the student's schedule and at the end of the seventh period.

Parents will have six minutes to pass from one class to another on the abbreviated bell schedule.

Artis will conduct South's annual public meeting at 6:30 p.m. in the auditorium (Room 137) before the Back-to-School portion of the evening. The meeting is required by Public

Updated Pontiac showrooms spotlight cars, not fish

showrooms but also the dealerships themselves that Pontiac hopes will attract the attention of shoppers today.

Dealerships around the country are coming under the influence of the division's Advanced Retail Environment (A.R.E.) concept. Will all stores be made to look alike? Not exactly, Pontiac said at the recent introduction of the 1993 models to the press at Bob Jeannotte Pontiac-GM in Plymouth.

"In 1989 Pontiac embarked on an aggressive campaign to encourage and assist dealers in updating their facilities, and more than 200 have already completed or are in the process of completing facility updates like this," said Pontiac general manager John Middlebrook, referring to the carefully orchestrated grays accented with red in the airy showroom with glass partitions.

In fact, there's a kind of "landing pad" a short distance inside the main entrance. That's where the shopper can stop, look around the showroom and perhaps pick up some liter-

Recognition, for one thing, said Pete Carroll, a Pontiac staffer who has been heavily involved with the dealership side of the business. Shoppers know it's a Pontiac dealership because it carries the theme and the look-alike signage.

"In this kind of setting, the product becomes the focal point, not the dealer's trophies or awards or tropical fish," Carroll

'Shoppers are attracted to the dealership because they know what it is and because it looks like a place to shop," he said. Studies have indicated that today's buyers — Pontiac attracts a younger shopper, one who probably is well-ac-

Don't expect to see the traditional marketing messages painted on the windows of the A.R.E. dealerships. They've been replaced with smaller electronic signs capable of flashing a variety of messages without distracting consumers from the new cars and trucks.

Speaking of new products, there isn't much this fall from Pontiac. A year ago the division, which boasted a 9 percent increase in sales for the first seven months of this year, introduced a couple of big-time winners with the restyled Bonneville and Grand Am.

Bonneville sales took off they're up something like 75 percent this year compared with 1991. And Grand Am, up 36 percent, has elbowed its way to become the top-selling compact in the industry, Middlebrook said. The '93 Firebird goes into production in November and is expected to debut the first part of the new year.

Pontiac said it should close out the '92 model year the end of September with sales of about 555,000 units. Its sales target for 1993 is 609,000, an increase of 10 percent, Middlebrook said.

Middlebrook denied that any of the division's lines will be dropped in General Motors' current cost-cutting mania. However, the smart money seems to be on the little imported Le-Mans, - that is, reporters suspect if anything goes, LeMans is the likely victimed, at most Middlebrook said Pontiac is lowering prices on some models in an effort to stimulate sales. The '93 Sunbird LE coupe and sedan are priced at $9,382 - a reduction of $238 on the coupe and $338 on the 4-door sedan.

The '93 Bonneville SE, which accounted for 80 percent of that nameplate's sales this year, gets standard anti-lock brakes, improved torque on the 3800 V-6 engine, new trim and a new Sport Luxury Edition package

(the Bonneville SLE). The Quad Four engines have been made quieter, Pontiac said. The Trans Sport all-purpose vehicle enjoyed a sales increase in 1992. For the new model year, look for an optional leather interior package in gray or beige.

And, just in case things don't work out with your new Pontiac, courtesy transportation is available for all 1993-model dealership warranty visits: a one-way shuttle service for repairs completed the same day, or a free loaner if a vehicle needs to be kept overnight or longer. And beginning with 1993 models, Pontiac's Roadside Assistance Program covers non-warranty service like changing a flat tire, charging a dead battery or running out of gas - all at no charge. These conveniences aren't just for Bonneville SSE owners, Middlebrook said. They protect LeMans, Sunbird and base Grand Am buyers also -"great for our young buyers who, in many cases, can't af-as being independent nations, and is in the process of recognizing Macedonia. Last week, Serbia and Montenegro were kicked out of the UN.

The aggressors in this war are primarily Serbs who are running hundreds of concentration camps, Livadic said.

The prisoners in these camps are native Bosnians (many of whom are Muslims), Croatians and Serbians who will not fight on the Serbian side, she said.

Her father may be a prisoner in one of those camps. She has not heard from him since the fighting began.

"But he's an adult," she said.
"I'm sure if he can, he's hiding himself somewhere. What disturbs me most is the children being tortured and starved in those camps."

She cries when she relates stories she has heard from the press and from people in Bosnia with whom she has managed to stay in contact.

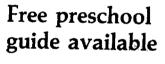

Serbian soldiers invaded the town where her sister-in-law lived. Her sister-in-law, her three children and her son's friend ran toward the outskirts of the city when they heard the shells coming in.

"My sister-in-law looked back and saw a grenade strike and kill her son's friend. She didn't look back after that, she just kept running." Livadic said

A 15-year-old pregnant, battered girl was found wandering aimlessly along a street in Bosnia by rescue workers, Livadic said. The girl — who had suffered a mental breakdown after being repeatedly raped by soldiers and could not remember her own name, according to a female companion who was with her — was taken to a hospital in Croatia.

pregnant, and the doctors could not take the baby from her because she was too far along," Livadic said, her voice cracking as tears rolled down her cheeks.

She has heard numerous reports of young girls being raped by soldiers in the savage civil war.

"I'm a woman, and to be raped on a street is a brutal crime. But to do it to children?" she said.

Livadic said her brother's house was bombed and that he escaped with only the clothes on his back to a refugee camp in Croatia.

Most of her relatives are in Bosnia, she said.

She grew up in a middle class household with her parents, who are now divorced, and her sister and two brothers.

Teachers were stricter there than in the United States and students were trained to go out into the world at an earlier age, she said. She came to the United States as a 15-year-old newlywed.

Her husband, Alija, who is nine years her senior, grew up in her neighborhood and moved to Austria when he was 21, she said.

He learned some English while in Austria, and then moved to Detroit, where he learned more English in night school.

He returned to Bosnia when

"He wanted to wait a few years, at least until I was 18, before we got married, but I didn't want to wait," she said.

They were married and he returned to Detroit with his wife.

Livadic said that during her school years in Bosnia, she had to learn Russian.

"I would have rather learned English, because even as a child, you know English is the language you must learn in this world. You know that because when you watch television, the good shows are in English."

Her town's government-controlled television station would occasionally broadcast an American movie or TV show if it did not contain any politically messages.

"The 'Three Stooges' are the only ones I can remember seeing," she said. "I like them. It's nice to see guys making fools of themselves."

She also learned some things about the United States in her world history classes, but other than that, she knew very little about this country. Only that she wanted to see it, and that she was finally getting her

"When I first came to this country, I knew only a few phrases: 'hi,' 'how are you,' 'thank you' and 'good bye.' My husband taught them to me and said I would need them to get by," she said.

She also took English classes in night school. The teacher did not speak Serbo-Croatian, so Livadic could not understand her. But she wrote down everything the teacher said and later showed her notes to her husband and asked him what they meant.

Livadic helped her husband with his house painting business and made caring for their son, who is now 16, her full time job when he was born.

"I try to teach him values and to be a responsible young man," she said. "I tell him, 'Don't do anything to anyone else you don't want done to you.' I tell him I was responsible when I was his age and that I expect him to be the same. And I tell him to feel lucky he was born in this country."

try."

The family has lived in Warren and Grosse Pointe Woods, and moved to Grosse Pointe Shores two years ago.

She said she enjoys gardening, reading and crocheting, and that for the past six years—until this year—she and her husband and son spent their summer vacation in Bosnia.

Her husband inherited his grandfather's house, and that's where they stay.

Livadic said the last time she visited Bosnia was in February, for her father-in-law's funeral.

On April 4, she and her husband were listening to their short-wave radio and heard a report from a Bosnian ham radio operator that the Serbian army was preparing to move into the Bosnian town where they used to live.

She spent six hours on the phone trying to get reach her sister-in-law, who was still living in the town, to warn her. When she finally got through, her sister-in-law told her she didn't believe they were coming to her town, and that she was going to stay.

The war started the next day.

Her sister-in-law was right. The soldiers struck a neighboring town. But a few weeks later, they hit her town and she fled to Croatia.

"Sometimes, I think it would be easier for me to go there and try to help them and suffer along with them," Livadic said. "But then I start to think, if I go there, who is going to be left here to help them?"

She and about 25 former Bosnians who found each other by word of mouth belong to a group that is trying to educate people about the "modern-day holocaust" and to encourage people to write their legislators, asking them to increase efforts to stop the war.

The group is also collecting warm clothing and non-perishable goods to send to war-torn Bosnia.

The group is in the process of getting its name registered with the state of Michigan. The proposed name is the American Bosnian Association, she said.

Last Sunday, the group met

Last Sunday, the group met in her basement. About 75 people attended, including 50 people who weren't of Bosnian descent but who wanted to listen and learn what they could do to help, she said.

A relief agency plans to send a shipment of supplies to Bosnia from New Jersey on Nov. 6, and Livadic's group will transport the goods they collect to New Jersey to be part of that shipment.

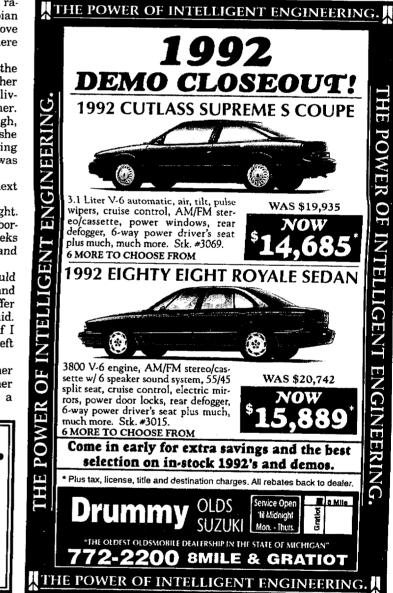

Their plan is to have the items distributed to prisoners in the concentration camps, where many people get only one meal a day, if that, and where they have no warm clothing to wear this winter, she said.

The items will be distributed to prisoners of all faiths and ethnic origins, she said, with an emphasis on helping the children.

"When I see the face on television, I don't know what religion that child is, nor do we ask," she said. "All we know is that it's a child, and it's crying, and that we want to help."

Livadic will pick up donations or they may be dropped off at her house. For more information, call her at 885-5038.

Girl loves phantom, girl tapes phantom, girl meets phantom

By Ronald J. Bernas Staff Writer

Last Christmas Grosse Pointe Woods resident Noelle Hathaway got the original London recording of Andrew Lloyd-Webber's blockbuster musical "Phantom of the Opera."

"And I just fell in love with it," the 15-year-old sophomore at Regina High School said. "The music is so beautiful. I played that record constantly."

Her obsession grew, and after after learning every word on the record, Hathaway bought the book by Gaston Leroux and read it through.

"If the play had been more like the book, it would have been scarier, and much different." Hathaway said.

She read everything she could about the musical, including a book written about it and was able to carry all those items around in a tote bag bearing the "Phantom" logo a half mask.

Then in April the family took a trip to Toronto to see the show at the Pantages Theatre.

HE OF ELECTION

Noelle Hathaway met Andrew Lloyd-Webber's original "Phantom" Michael Crawford and gave him a tape of her Legomation version of "Phantom of the Opera.

A Lego phantom whisks a Lego Christine through the catacombs of the Paris Opera House in Noelle Hathaway's Lego version of "Phantom of the Opera."

Hathaway studied everything from the frescoes on the theater wall and seats to the ceiling design to the costumes and set pieces. When the family returned home Hathaway locked herself in her bedroom and broke out the Legos those children's toy building blocks.

First she reproduced certain scenes using the Legos, with a photo book of the musical and her memory as references.

"I don't know why I started to do this," she said, "but then I couldn't stop."

She then began adding Lego people to the set pieces and reproduced more scenes. Of course it didn't look complete without costumes, so Hathaway made some.

Once all the pieces were in place, she staged her own scenes. With the record blaring, she would move a tiny Lego Christine and a Lego phantom through the catacombs beneath the Paris Opera House in a little Lego boat, complete with fog to add the proper mood. She would string a Lego Raoul up with a punjab lasso, drop the chandelier on unsuspecting Lego actors and watch as the love between Christine and Raoul triumphed over the phantom's evil. She made two different phantom heads - one with the mask and one without

She used found objects like birthday candles, beads, string, construction paper and toothpicks to create the sets and recreated the Pantages Theatre inside a huge egg box.

She borrowed a video camera and made a tape of her staged scenes. The actions of the Lego pieces were timed to the music off the album.

"It was really hard because Lego people only have these claw hands, so getting Christine to pull his mask off took a lot of filming and re-filming,' she said.

Then Hathaway heard Michael Crawford, the original Phantom, was going to be in called "The Music of Andrew Lloyd-Webber." The family got tickets and Hathaway's father Robert called the Fox Theatre, explained what his daughter had done and asked if it would be possible for them to give Crawford a copy of the video.

The Fox did better than that. During intermission they told Noelle she would be able to go backstage and deliver the tape to Crawford personally.

"I couldn't believe it," Hathaway said. "I was hyperventilating; I didn't know if it was going to be just me backstage so my mom wrote down things I should say on the back of my

Noelle was accompanied backstage by her parents, sister and a friend who all met Craw-

"He was so sweet. He was wearing jeans and a T-shirt and he was funny and nice and he interacted with us and posed for pictures," Hathaway said. "I explained the tape to him and I felt like I'm totally nuts, but he took it.

The next day the show went on but without Crawford, who was ill. Hathaway pictured him sitting in his hotel room, watching the video.

Woods council clips nail salon, denies hardship license

By Donna Walker

Staff Writer Is there room enough for 18 beauty shops in Grosse Pointe

That's a question the Woods city council was forced to address recently.

At the center of the issue was Gloss, the Nail salon, located at 20947 Mack.

The salon went out of business June 1, and a month later, its business license was given to L'Vogue Boutique, located at 21019 Mack.

Now, the owners of Gloss, the Nail want to reopen their salon, but they can't do so because all of the beauty shop licenses in the Woods are taken.

Under city code, a maximum of 17 beauty shops (including hair and nail salons) can operate in the Woods

Gloss, the Nail had been in business for about four years before it closed.

In April 1991, owners Richard Allor and Paul Meli sold their interest in the salon to Deborah Marie Wendt, under a five-year purchase agreement.

They said she has only made 12 of the 60 payments required under the agreement and filed for Chapter 7 bankruptcy in "This action has given us no choice but to reopen the salon in an attempt to salvage the business and equipment on which we are still making payments," Meli and Allor wrote in a letter to the city council Aug. 3.

They said they had just learned the company's regular business license had expired, and asked the council to grant them a hardship business li-

The council approved her request for a hardship business license, bringing the number of beauty salons operating in the Woods up to 18.

Nearby business owners said they were not happy because unlike residents living within a 300-foot radius of L'Vogue, they had not received a letter notifying them that the council would be considering a hardship request.

Subsequently, the council revised the city's notification procedure to include businesses within a radius of 300 feet of the property.

Under Woods city code, the city clerk must cancel a business' license if it ceases to operate in the city for a period longer than 30 consecutive days. The license must then be given to a company in that business category that has been operating under a hardship license, if any such companies L'Vogue was the only company in the "beauty shop" category that was operating under a hardship business license.

On Aug. 17, the Woods council held a public hearing on Allor and Meli's request for a hardship license.

They and the owner of their building, Phyllis Lapiani of Grosse Pointe Shores, spoke in favor of the request.

On Sept. 14, the council held another public hearing regarding a hardship license for Gloss, the Nail.

This time, the request was made by Lourdes LaBracena, who, along with a partner, was trying to buy the business from Allor and Meli.

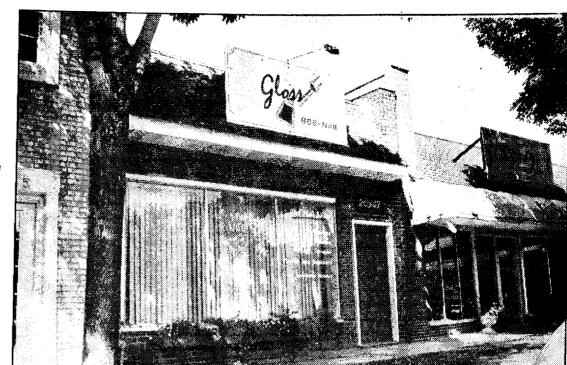

"We were given the impression that there was no problem with the license when we entered into our negotations with the seller" toward the end of August, LaBracena said

In anticipation of buying the salon, she said, she quit her job as a nail technician at Heidi's Salon at Eastland mall and had done a lot of work on the inside of the former Gloss, the Nail building.

Novitke said there were 51 businesses within a 300-foot radius of her building. She said she did not know how broad an area she had to cover and so only asked the people on her block to sign the letter.

Each one is heard on a caseby-case basis, and is judged on its own merits," he said.

Seeley said the male members tease her - but not about being a woman. Most of the banter is about her small stature and bubbly personality.

'If they didn't like me, they wouldn't tease me," she said.

Becoming president of the club didn't come easily. To get the position, Seeley explained, a member must first be elected to the board of directors, then second vice president, first vice president, president-elect and finally president.

For example, members volunteer at the Senior Day Care Center sponsored by the Macomb County Mental Health Department, offer $1,000 scholarships for each of the city's three school districts and the adult education program and purchase back-to-school clothing for needy children.

Last year the club raised and spent $47,040 on those and other projects.

We begin this year with special excitement, with the knowledge that a new facility will enhance the total program at ULS.'

Ford, a 1966 graduate of grosse Pointe University School (a predecessor of ULS) told those assembled about his family's sense of excitement about making a contribution that will add to the long-term overall health of the school.

The $1 million addition will total about 11,000 square feet of new construction, with some remodeling of existing space. It will feature three pre-kindergarten and one kindergarten classrooms, a 2,000-square-foot gross motor skills room, two offices, a kitchen/dining area and storage space.

The addition is designed to match the general character of the existing building and will incorporate the surrounding existing landscaping and large trees

Construction began in late August and is expected to be completed by the summer of 1993. Pre-kindergarten classes are scheduled to begin in fall

Gowns get around:

Women borrow a concept traditionally reserved for men – renting formal wear

By Margie Reins Smith

Feature Editor
Shirley Moulton needs a drop-dead dress.

She's going to one of Detroit's fanciest, black-tie-and-glittery-ball-gown charity social events of the year, the Detroit Institute of Arts' dinner dance, "Under the Stars," on Saturday, Nov. 14.

Moulton is president of Universal Software Inc. in Southfield. She lives in Grosse Pointe City; she's 40; single.

She doesn't have time to shop, to peruse and try on gowns in the department stores and boutiques of Grosse Pointe, Birmingham and Troy. She doesn't want to drive to the malls — Fairlane, Lakeside, Eastland, Northland, Westland and beyond — searching for an outfit for each charity event she attends.

Moulton also doesn't want to spend $800 on a dress she'll wear once, maybe twice.

Judy Swanson of Grosse Pointe City is also looking for a drop-dead dress.

She's a 36-year-old orthotistprosthetist and is married to a physician. She and her husband attend several hospital charity balls and benefits a year, like Bon Secours Hospital's Autumn Ball and St. John Hospital's White Christmas Ball.

"I like to make a statement and I like to be different," Swanson said, referring to the kind of dresses she seeks. "I like being in on the beginnings of trends."

Swanson also doesn't like to wear the same gown over and over. And she likes bargains. Bonita Coleman Webb has drop-dead dresses — lots of them.

Webb is one of the founders of One Moment in Time, a Birmingham store that rents designer gowns.

That's right, rents.

"Men have been renting formal wear for years," Webb said.

"Women have never done this before. The first time they rent something, they don't tell anyone. But you know women. Pretty soon they tell their best friends. Women like bargains."

Webb travels to New York City several times a year to purchase designer gowns. Most are one-of-akind. Most would sell for between $300 and $1,500 in retail stores.

Webb's customers rent a gown for three days for $75 to $300. Webb also offers alterations; delivery and pick-up; rental jewelry and handbags; rental evening wraps; and she sells shoes.

"We're working toward a onestop-full-service approach," she said. "We want to offer our customers the gown, the accessories, the shoes, everything. People want convenience. Women are rushed. They don't have time to shop. We'll soon have a make-up artist and a cosmetic counter as well, and we'll offer makeovers. Women can schedule makeovers on the day they pick up their dresses."

Webb held up a tea-length ivory gown of Chantilly lace, covered with an intricate design of pearls and sequins. "This one went to the altar several times. It sells for about $650. It rents for $175.

"We do a lot of rentals for second weddings, proms and pageants. We've had gowns go on cruises to Monte Carlo, balls in London, to Las Vegas. And to most of Detroit's first-rate charity events."

She held up a full-length gold gown encrusted with pearls and bugle beads, an Oleg Cassini design. It could be purchased new for about $800, she said. Customers can have it for three days for $225. Webb tracks each dress, noting who rented it and where it went. Although most of her gowns are one-of-a-kind, she never wants two customers to show up at a party in the same dress.

When the dress is returned, it is cleaned and repaired. Most beaded

First Church of Christ, Scientist is 100 years old

The world headquarters church for two Christian Science churches serving the Grosse Pointes is 100 years old this month.

In 1879, the Christian Science church was organized like most other churches in the United States, on a congregational basis in which members govern by vote. But for this little church with its unique emphasis on spiritual healing, that plan proved unworkable. Drifting and dissension weakened it.

In December 1889, the founder of the church, Mary Baker Eddy, dissolved it. For more than three years her followers were without any formal church organization. On Sept 23, 1892, Eddy called together her few remaining loyal followers and asked them to form a church that would be governed by a five-person board of direc-

Local family therapists offer workshop on fair fighting

A workshop to teach people the principles and techniques of fair fighting will be offered on two Saturdays by Eleanor Payson and Carole Kirby, marriage and family therapists. The seminar will be offered twice each Saturday, from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. or 2 p.m. to 5 p.m. on Oct. 17 and 24, at 20816 E. 11 Mile, Suite 112, in St. Clair Shores.

According to Kirby and Payson, anger is the most misunderstood and mishandled emotion in relationships, yet anger causes much of the positive change that occurs in people's lives. In their work with couples and families, they see many inappropriate ways of dealing with conflict: passive avoidance, volatile outbursts, complaining and other unproductive behaviors that cause pain and heartache.

The workshop will give participants guided experiential exercises and offer a new framework for understanding how to communicate anger.

The cost, including handout literature, is $50 a person for both sessions. For information, call Payson at 774-7779, or Kirby at 776-6622.

Herb Society project

The Grosse Pointe unit of the Herb Society of America's most recent project is the decoration of a Grosse Pointe church and home in the style of a Victorian herbal wedding. Most of the herbs to be used in the project were grown by society members. Members also did research on the origins and symbolism of many of the decorations.

Bridge

Have a Pleasant Try at Perfection Bridge by Woody Boyd $\Phi \lor \Phi$

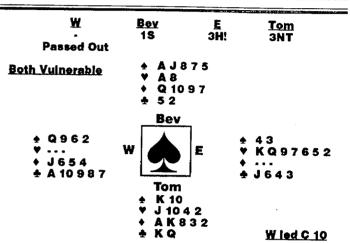

"Character can't be developed in ease and quiet. Only through experience, trial and suffering can the soul be strengthened, vision cleared, ambition inspired and success achieved."

Helen Keller

One among us in our suburban world of bridge who has gained the love and respect of all is Tom Gardner of Southfield. I first met Tommy some forty years ago when he was playing in the most vigorous rubber bridge game played west of the Hudson to the edge of the Windy City. Every Monday evening an array of Detroiters and some of the best from the mid-west would gather at the D.A.C. card room for dinner and "DEAL". If your playing credentials weren't exceptional, you just weren't acceptable. Few of that crew are still with us, the exceptions being the Reindel brothers, Bill Baubie of Grosse Pointe and Tommy. In what he calls, "his scar filled full life," he's become one of The Motor City's truly fine players having achieved his "Diamond Life Master" rating (over 5,000 points) just this year. There are only eight players in Michigan to precede him in this glory. Tommy is the first one to say, at his savory age, "if you win you're an old pro and if you lose you're an old man." His devoted wife, Beverly, who in her own right is an excellent performer and his favorite playing partner attributes much of his success to the determination and devotion he has for the game. Certainly the unselfish hours he contributes to teaching and bridge seminars can't be matched. As Thomas Paine wrote, "character is what you are in the dark." Tom's glows radiantly!

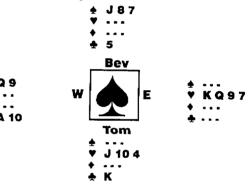

On Wednesday evening recently, a wonderful group (twenty odd tables) gathered at the Gardner's mid week Southfield duplicate game to celebrate his 71st on Earth and his Diamond Life Master award. Beverly will blush if you mention this, but she was the one who graciously arranged for the 42" square cake and pizza for eighty odd attending. It was an extremely pleasant occasion for a very deserving person and I was fortunate to have been dealt into this splendid event.

The transition from rubber to duplicate bridge is difficult and daring because the thrust and result are specifically different. In the former, the single significant purpose is to insure your contract. In match play (duplicate) averages usually don't win tournaments. You must intently search for better scores and if a favorable probability is commensurate with the risk to achieve, you are a winner if you can execute effectively. Note Tom's aptitude on the following hand he and Beverly played in the recent August Oak Park M.B.A. Sectional.

East's preemptive bid (not vulnerable) was indeed a disruptive maneuver which required Tom's careful and calculated consideration. As you can see, Tom has nine winners when at trick (2) he lays down the diamond ace which reveals a sure line of play... two spades, one heart, five diamonds and a club. Tom knew that every declarer would find the same result and he wanted no part of such an average. Note his performance for a tenth trick and a top which was a Rembrandt reason why they finished in the money.

Here is the four card ending.

At trick (10), Tom led dummy's club to his king and West's ace. West could still win his club ten and spade queen, but at trick (13) he had to play his spade nine to dummy's jack and Tom's tenth trick.

Gowns

gowns need to have beads reattached or replaced after each wearing. It's part of normal wear-and-tear, Webb said.

"A couple times a year we have a sale of 'gently-worn dresses,'" she said.

The Birmingham store opened in 1989. "We also have a store in Chicago, started in 1990; and one in San Francisco, started in 1991. It's a growing industry. Our growth rate is 40 percent a year," Webb said. "The December issue of Entrepreneur magazine said that the women's formal-wear rental business will be the hottest growth industry in 1993.

"People are allocating their dolfars differently. They want to spend their money on educations for their children and on their vacations.'

"Renting is cost-effective," Moulton said. "When you buy a gown and wear it once, it hangs in your closet foreverafter like a museum piece."

Moulton said she discovered One Moment in Time after reading about it in Crain's Detroit Business two years ago. She rented a black lace off-theshoulder gown with a short skirt, topped by a full-length silk chiffon overskirt for a party she attended in New York City. She also rented a green cocktail-length sequinencrusted dress for another event in Detroit.

"I'll look at a dress for 'Under The Stars," she said, "probably about a month in advance. Bonita will give me some suggestions.'

Swanson said she was shopping for a dress in Birmingham and casually mentioned to a saleswoman that she wished she could rent a gown. The saleswoman directed her to One Moment in Time.

"I rented several short cocktail dresses, one with those new poufy sleeves, about eight months before everyone else had poufy sleeves. I wouldn't have wanted to wear it again for a while and it would have cost about $900. I'm not going to buy something like that," she said.

"For people on the party circuit renting is a great idea. My husband can buy a nice tuxedo and vary the look with different ties and cummerbunds. He doesn't have to show up in something new each time.'

"Women ought to be more open to the concept of renting," Moulton said. "But they're reluctant to wear something somebody else has worn. Women need to be educated. We live in a world of fast food and convenience, so why spend thousands of dollars on a gown you'll wear once or twice?

Webb stocks hundreds of dresses in sizes 4 to 18. One Moment in Time is open Mondays through Fridays from 11 a.m. to 7 p.m.; Saturdays from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.

A dress has never been damaged, destroyed or stolen, she said. "But we prefer to do the dry cleaning and repairs ourselves.'

Webb said the store doesn't do much advertising. Most customers hear about it from friends. "We want people to think of our business as 'borrowing a dress from a friend."

"We're also educating women about this idea and that's a lot to tell in an ad. Women have never done this before. Some don't get it yet. We have to help them.'

It's all Greek to her

On Sunday, Oct. 4, Grosse Pointe Farms resident Penny Voudoukis will be honored by the Hellenic Society for the Performing Arts, an organization she founded 20 years ago and has been the backbone of ever since.

"The main idea was to do something for non-Greeks," she said. "And to give young Greek people the opportunity to learn about their heritage.'

In 1974 the group was officially formed, but Voudoukis had been doing work before then. She helped organize the first Greek Festival in Hart Plaza and worked on every one

before they were discontinued

The group performed traditional Greek dances in traditional Greek garb, meticulously researched by Voudoukis and other members of the group. Young people of Greek descent performed the dances which the society taught.

"I founded it in 1973 because the United States' bicentennial was coming up in '76 and I thought it was important to show Americans and other non-Greeks our culture," she said.

The group has since performed hundreds of times for the Greek Festival downtown, at schools, at Greek celebrations, at Chene Park and as far away as Cleveland. In 1984 members performed for President Ronald Reagan.

Voudoukis was born in Sudbury, Ontario, and although her parents were Greek, she she wasn't brought with Greek traditions. She missed it and that's why she formed the group.

It was also a way to get young Greeks from the Metropolitan area to meet each other. She said more than 800 young people have taken classes and performed with the group in its 20 years.

The performances have been cut back, she said, because many of the Greek Orthodox churches she used to draw members from now offer their own classes in Greek culture. But there are still many members and recently when the president of Cyprus was in town, a group of the society's students showed up in traditional Cyprus costumes and served as the color guard. "Young people today don't have a lot of time," she said. "They have to work and their weekends aren't free, but we're hoping to put a new program together which will include music and singing and plays in addition to the dancing."

The group's major fundraiser is the annual young person's Thanksgiving dance. Now in its 19th year, the dance is the most popular event sponsored by the Hellenic Society. Last year more than 600 people showed up to mingle and dance and meet other Greeks.

Although she's being honored for all her work, she doesn't look at the last 20 years as dif-

"I loved it," she said. "And my husband Ignatios supported me and helped me a lot; otherwise I wouldn't have been able to do it. He enjoyed it as much as I did. It's a great reward working with young people. That's the best part about all

Detroit teens shine in Attic's 'Runaways'

By Ronald J. Bernas Staff Writer

A group of 18 young runaways occupies the same abandoned playground in New York City. To say they live together would not be right — they survive together. They fight and make up, cry and dry each other's tears, accept new kids into the group and exile old ones when they betray.

They are the "Runaways" in the Attic Theatre's startling season opener featuring a cast made up entirely of Detroit area teens. They may not possess the kind of family values

Runaways

At the Attic Theatre through October 17

Featuring a cast of Detroit area

Don't Bother 2 - Nothing Special 3 - It Has Moments

Better Than Most Outstanding

prominent in this election year's rhetoric, but they are a family nonetheless.

The musical doesn't exactly tell a story. Instead it lets the kids - who come from broken homes and abusive families discuss their past, how they deal with the present, and what they want to do with what little future they have.

The play was written by Elizabeth Swados in 1978 and is based on the stories of actual runaways. Its insightful book, moving score and stirring lyrics earned Swados five Tony nominations. It has been updated, using current social references, but the emotions are universal.

As the kids talk, we hear their sad stories. There's the boy who was disappointed when he returned home after 10 days on the streets to parents who wouldn't tear themselves away from the television to look at him. There's the girl who sat awake every night listening to her parents fight. There's the prostitute who will celebrate her 14th birthday working for an abusive pimp.

All the children are living as one character puts it -"defective fairytales." The theme that runs throughout the play is "Let me be just a kid out on the playground."

But despite the nagging despair and bleak future, the kids still hope for something better while all around them their "family members" are dying from violence and drug abuse.

Enough can't be said about the cast. We learn the names of only a few characters - the fault of the script, which, by the way is rather sanitized but we care about all of them because the actors — who range in age from 10 to 19 - are so talented. Their voices are good although some could have been louder - and their stage presence exudes self-assurance.

It would be difficult to find a cast of Detroit teens equally as talented as the one I saw on opening night. But the Attic staff did, and double-cast the show. Singling any of the actors out would do a disservice to the ensemble performance. It was such an enjoyable evening it's worth going again to see what the other cast does.

Director Rick Sperling pulls professional performances out of nearly all the actors. A few, unfortunately, try to draw attention to themselves, but so much is happening elsewhere on stage that they never really get a chance.

The kids are cute, tough, funny and sad - but all are individuals. They work well together on stage, and acted like old stage pros even when objects like hats and other props fell off the stage into the audi-

Although the material is challenging, not to mention disturbing, the overall effect is uplifting. Not only because these kids who have had everything taken from them still have their hope, but also because the talent was taken right out of our own back yard.

The Attic was so impressed with the talent that it formed a young adults' theater group called the Mosaic Theatre of Detroit.

"Runaways" is Mosaic's first production, and it's a winner. I can't wait to see more.

Denise Szykula, right, talks to the members of Dance Nonce!, the modern dance group that she is reforming after a five-year absence. The group will perform its first show next weekend at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial.

Dance Nonce! returns after 5 years

By Ronald J. Bernas Staff Writer

The rise and fall of junk bond kings like Michael Milken were less than uplifting to most of the country, but to Denise Szykula, the story offered a lot of inspiration.

Szykula is a dance and movement teacher at the Grosse Pointe Academy and the founder of Dance Nonce!, a modern dance group which is reforming after a five-year absence. The Eastpointe-based group will perform at 7:30 p.m. Thursday through Saturday, Oct. 8-10, at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial.

The group was formed in 1973 "because I had a lot I wanted to say," Szykula said "Modern dance is a wonderful way to comment on current themes. 'Nonce' is an old English word for 'now,' 'the moment,' 'in the instant."

But she found, after running the group for 12 years, that she was burned out. The group last performed in 1985.

For five years Szykula did anything but dance she pursued writing and drama before three women asked her if she would give them private les-

"I said no because I didn't know whether I wanted to get involved in dance again," she said. "I didn't know how I felt about it. But dance mattered so much to these women that they absolutely reinspired me.'

At the same time, Milken was being prosecuted for dealing in junk bonds.

"I was angered by the corporate greed of the '80s and I felt I wanted to comment on it,' she said.

So she choreographed "Transgressions," a dance with words that tells the story of two people who "allowed their integrity to be compromised until it ate away at them."

When she formed the group anew Szykula called old friends and dancers she wanted to work with. The new Dance Nonce! group consists of seven principal dancers, two apprentice dancers (two of the three women who reinspired Szykula), and a young girl who figures in the plot of "Transgressions.

But is there an audience in Grosse Pointe for a modern dance company?

"Modern dance is known for its maudlin themes, but there is something for everybody," Szykula said. "It's so relevant because it is ever-changing.'

DSO report:

Symphony makes the musical rounds

By Alex Suczek

Neeme Jarvi and the Detroit Symphony Orchestra demonstrated once again last Thursday that good music belongs on any stage as they divided the program between symphonic works based on the American jazz and swing traditions and on one of the great classical piano concertos of all time. Helping them make the point was that giant (in every sense) of the piano, Garrick Ohlsson.

For an opener, Jarvi compiled a seven-movement suite from Duke Ellington's ballet, "The River," orchestrated to take full advantage of the rich resources of a full symphony orchestra. From the opening counterpoint by the brass and woodwinds, the music had a unique fascination.

The loss of the feeling of improvisation and spontaneity of the original players of this music was more than made up for by the ample power of the full orchestra and sophisticated musicianship. Sometimes fresh, sometimes exotic, the music was a moving combination of jazz, blues and swing in a rich setting. It gained a refinement consistent with the change of venue from cabaret to Orchestra Hall and recalled the hall's days as the Paradise Theatre.

Some of the movements evoked a sense of wild times in a Harlem nightspot with Ellington-style jazz licks and a piano episode that led into an elegant big band retrospective. The total effect was easy, but also satisfying, listening as the orchestra lavished a top quality treatment on this popular material. Not to mention the delightful impact of hearing Robert Gladstone's outstanding section play jazz style string

William Grant Still's "Afro-American Symphony" followed in much the same vein only with strong reminders of the great blues tradition of William C. Handy. Credited as the first such work by a black composer to be performed by an American symphony orchestra, it is an unabashed symphonic tribute to one of our nation's great popular musical movements.

At times, one must be co tent to accept its naivete as its main charm, but the movements that draw heavily on W.C. Handy's blues melodies and rhythms, were particularly successful at merging the casual musical style into symphonic form and the DSO musicians and Jarvi got the feel of the music. Both works are scheduled for Jarvi's next Chandos CD.

Comparison with the sophistication of Brahms' Second Piano Concerto that followed is tempting but unfair. It was, in fact, more interesting to observe the impact of the combination of soloist resources at work here. Ohlsson is unquestionably a brilliant pianist both technically and expressively, and his power at the keyboard seems limitless. It raises the question of whether he really needs the huge power of the oversized Boesendorfer piano that he played.

He drove that magnificent instrument to its limits, perhaps beyond. Under Ohlsson's fingers, the piano's clarity of tone and definition were impressive. It rippled and sang from a delicate whisper to mezzo forte and the piano part was etched exquisitely against the orchestral background.

Ohlsson's thundering chords however, were overpowering, especially in the rich acoustics of the hall, and his power brought out a harsh tone. It was dramatically effective but aesthetically less so. Fortunately, the moments of crashing sound were few and brief and the superb artistry of the total performance by conductor, orchestra and soloist was easily the richest reward of the eve-

'Mr. Saturday Night' again falls short

By Ronald J. Bernas Staff Writer

Billy Crystal, Lowell Ganz and Babaloo Mandel teamed up last summer to make "City Slickers," one of the year's biggest hits.

guys, and directed by Crystal, the movie tries to be a "film' and misses the mark. It suffers, like the title character, from bad timing.

But at the same time, the film offers some of the funniest lines of any recent movie. The audience, at several points during the film, stopped laughing and collectively held its breath in order to hear another punch-

"Mr. Saturday Night" tells the story — from aspiring comic to disillusioned has-been - of Buddy Young Jr. (Crystal), a fictionalized combination of every great comic from George Burns to Don Rickles. He hones his comic skills in an act with his brother Stan (David Paymer) at family gatherings, but when they get their first shot before an audience Stan gets stage fright and Buddy goes on alone.

For the rest of their lives Stan is Buddy's agent, but is treated like a gofer. He books gigs for Buddy, gets sandwiches for him after each show and cleans up after Buddy's rude mouth gets audiences or sponsors angry.

Stan even gets girls for Buddy after the shows, including one Stan had his eye on and who eventually becomes Buddy's wife.

While Stan is a fascinating character, Buddy gets most of the screen time. The story is his, despite the fact that he's a bitter, foul-tempered user. Why people stay around him is difficult to determine because the characters are so shallowly

As Buddy, Crystal gets a chance to show the depth everyone knew he possessed, but never had a chance to display. It's an excellent perfor-

Buddy's wife Elaine (Julie Winters) is charming and funny with a personality and a mind of her own when Buddy first meets her, but later in the film she's reduced to smiling and nodding her head supportively when Buddy speaks. Winters does an excellent job in the scenes that give her a chance to carry on a conversation, but is wasted in the sec-

That's not the only fault in the script. It's incredibly slow sometimes, which allows you to think, which is not a good idea when there are gaping holes. The script does get kudos for blending the past and present without resorting to cheesy "framing device," such as the one used in "For the Boys," where the older character tells the story to a younger, interested outsider.

And like most of the scripts by Mandel and Ganz (they did "Parenthood" and "A League of Their Own," too) the script tugs at the heart strings, but not gently - it gets in there with both hands and one foot on the chest in order to wring some emotion out of the audience, and it's a little much.

When the movie is over, you've laughed a lot, but you don't feel like you've learned anything about the characters. And worse, the characters don't seem to learn anything about themselves. You get the feeling that nothing has or ever will change, and that's sad, because none of the people are very

To Cuba for scuba

For most people it begins with a mask, fins and that funny-shaped tube called a snorkel.

Someone presses them into your hands when you are on a cruise ship, or on the sands of some Caribbean isle, or when you are rummaging in a friend's dive bag.

So you take five minutes to learn how to spit in the mask so it won't fog, how to hold that tube in your mouth, and how to make an ungraceful entry into the water with those big floppy fins. When you finally make the plunge, you are dumbstruck by the beauty you discover under the surface.

It's easy. You just lie in the water (providing you are reasonably buoyant) and kick gently along the surface. Fold your hands. Watch the rays and exotic fish skim along the bottom. Catch sight of a crab, lobster or shrimp crawling out of holes in the coral. Observe at close range sponges, anemone or other aquatic growth. The show is constantly changing.

Then one day someone says, "If you think it is gorgeous at six feet below, you ought to see what is down there at 60 feet 'Translated, that means. "You ought to take up scuba

So I did. Some years ago I spent four hours a night for six winter Tuesdays at Center Line High School learning about regulators (you breathe through them), BC's (they control your buoyancy), the bends (you don't want to get them), decompression (hanging onto the anchor line before finally rising to the surface) and how to avoid panic (well, try).

Then, with classroom and pool sessions completed, it was time for making the open-water descents required to be a certified diver.

I could have waited for spring and done these dives in one of our local lakes, which tend to be murky. But I longed to try out my new skills in the clear waters of the Caribbean, so I signed up for a dive trip to Cuba.

In that seven-day trip, during a brief period when Americans could legally travel to that country, I toured the city of Havana, took in the extravaganza at the famed Tropicana nightclub and spent the night in the renovated Riviera Hotel. But the undisputed highlights - which I'll forever remember were those below the water's surface. Way below.

On the reef walls some 100 feet deep, there was rare black coral (which appears green beneath the surface). In shallow water, there was a 5-foot "tame" barracuda named Lola who swam around a shipwreck and appreciated meal leftovers tossed from the boat. There were moray eels and large manta rays. There was a 3-footlong sea turtle that we freed from a fishing net. We dived on shipwrecks, through caves, along reefs and on coral walls. Because these dive areas had ben virtually undisturbed since Fidel Castro's takeover, they were glorious, especially to the eyes of a novice. At the end of the nine dives I had earned my certification. True, I was often led by the hand by my instructor or my veteran dive buddy Fred Alter, but that didn't matter.

Diving vacations, like hiking, hunting, fishing, tennis and golf trips, are generally regarded as specialty trips. They are organized for people who share a common interest, and the destinations are selected by the type of sports facilities and dive sites available - not for how pretty the rooms are.

By Cynthia Boal Janssens

Since formal scuba training was established more than  $3reve{0}$ years ago, millions of Americans have completed certification. In fact, there are more divers in the United States than in the rest of the world combined. The word "scuba" means "self-contained underwater breathing apparatus.'

Some people begin diving by taking a short course offered on a cruise ship or at resorts like Club Med. However, these do not make up for formal scuba training and only allow for very shallow dives.

Once becoming certified, many Americans begin diving in the Florida Keys because they are accessible, and later move on to the Bahamas, the islands off Mexico and into the Caribbean. Finally, if they are fortunate, they reach the exotic spots — the Red Sea in Africa, Fiji, the Great Barrier Reef and Coral Sea of Australia, the Galapagos Islands off South America or the tiny islands of the South Pacific with names like Truk, Ponape and Palau. Or they don dry suits and head for cold water in Vancouver, British Columbia. Actually, there is decent snorkeling and diving in the reefs around almost any of the Bahamas or Caribbean islands. But divers are finicky. Equipment is expensive, and time is short, so they go where the diving is best.

The quality of the underwater terrain is often more important than the surface amenities. You can find exceptional diving at Roatan in Honduras, San Salvador in the Bahamas, Belize in Central America, Bonaire in the Netherlands Antilles and at Provo in the Turks and Caicos - not exactly wellknown vacation spots. However, at most of these places there is little else to do but dive. Often the beaches aren't too good. But divers don't mind. Actually, simpler facilities and plain food help keep trip costs

The favorite more commercial spots - especially for divers traveling with non-divers are Cozumel, the Virgin Islands, the Cayman Islands and Hawaii, because there is plenty to do besides diving.

There are dozens of travel agencies in the states which specialize in booking diving excursions and many run ads in special-interest magazines such as Skin Diver, Underwater USA, Diver Magazine and Ocean Realm. Local dive shops such as Rec Diving in Royal Oak (549-0303), Advanced Aquatics (779-8777) and Sea-Side Dive Shop (772-7676), both in St. Clair Shores, also organize trips. Usually divers bring along (or rent) their equipment except for weight belts and air tanks which are provided in the islands. Divers are generally a pretty friendly group. You'll make new friends as you improve your diving skills, which is a great way to travel and to keep your lungs in shape.

uinn on the run for Devils

By Chuck Klonke Sports Editor

The old song "The Mighty Quinn" might be the theme for Grosse Pointe South's boys cross country team this season.

Dan Quinn heads a group of solid seniors who are setting their sights on an unprecedented second straight unbeaten dual meet season.

"If we can make it through the season without losing, those kids will have had a 34-3 record during their four years here," said Blue Devils' coach Tom Wise. "It'll be hard to replace their leadership. Those seniors always seem to rise to the occasion.

While the team has performed well in the early part of the season, Quinn has been sensational.

He chopped seven seconds off the course record at Anchor Bay in a dual meet and two weekends ago ran the fourthfastest time ever on De La Salle's Stony Creek Metropark course. He beat a field that included most of the top runners in the Metro East area.

"I think Dan came of age in a meet last spring in Oxford," Wise said. "He really grew up as a runner in one day. He'd always be so pumped up for the start of a race that he'd run into oxygen debt at the end. That day he ran a 9:52 twomile and realized that if he ran at more of a pace, he'd be more successful.'

Quinn said that consistency is his strength.

"I can start pretty fast and keep up that pace throughout the race," he said. "My third mile is usually close to my first. I like to run in front as much as possible. I don't like to run from the back of the pack because you can run into trouble doing that."

Quinn has that built-in clock in his head that most veteran runners possess.

"Coach told me to run a 5:20 first mile in the De La Salle meet and it was exactly 5:20," Quinn said. "I tried to hold that time for the second mile; it worked, and I just pulled ahead. That was probably my favorite race, other than winning the two-mile at the track regional last spring.

Quinn said his improvement as a runner is because he's made it a year-round project.

"I trained hard during the summer," he said. "I ran 75 straight days. I didn't run as many miles as I have other summers, but I did more quality running."

Quinn has attended a cross country camp at Michigan State the last three summers and said that it has provided some valuable training.

He began running as a freshman and fell in love with the sport.

"He really enjoys it and works hard at it," Wise said. "He could be a successful runner beyond his college days. We haven't had many of those."

Wise knew Quinn had potential as a runner the first time he saw him.

"My first impression of Danny was, 'This is a good runner," the coach said. "He wasn't our top freshman, although his best time was an 18:13, but he's been No. 1 since his sophomore season."

Quinn, who is an excellent student, enjoys the hard work cross country involves.

"One of the things I like about the sport is the dedication it takes," Quinn said. "I also like the teamwork involved in cross country. Everyone on the team has to help each other if you're going to be successful."

Most of Quinn's goals for the year involve the team, but he'd also like to do well individu-

"I want to run consistently fast, win a couple invitationals and place higher in the state than I did last year," he said. "But most of all I want our team to continue to do well and to keep improving."

Quinn's next action will be in the Center Line Invitational on Saturday, Oct. 3.

"They'll have the best invitational field in the state," Quinn said. "We'll see Monroe, Port Huron Northern, De La Salle and Milford Lakeland, which was the Class A champion last year. We're going to a lot more big meets this year and the competition will help everybody.'

Wise thinks Quinn could break the school record on Sat-

"He should run a 16-flat on that course," the coach said.

If he does, South's Mighty Quinn will have a line of his own in the school's record

Lady Devils aren't feeling right at home

By Chuck Klonke Sports Editor

Grosse Pointe South's girls basketball team has had a season's worth of distractions and the year isn't even half over.

'We've become a team without a home," said coach Peggy VanEckoute after the Lady Devils improved their overall record to 4-1 with victories over Lakeview and Sterling Heights last week

"We had to practice at (Grosse Pointe) North for two weeks in August when they repaired the roof in our gym. Now the floor has to be fixed and they tell us it's going to be Nov. 1 before it's supposed to be done. All those things could destroy a team. The girls could start thinking nobody cares about them."

South's main gym floor has buckled in several areas because of severe moisture problems. The Lady Devils have been forced to practice and play their home games at Grosse Pointe North.

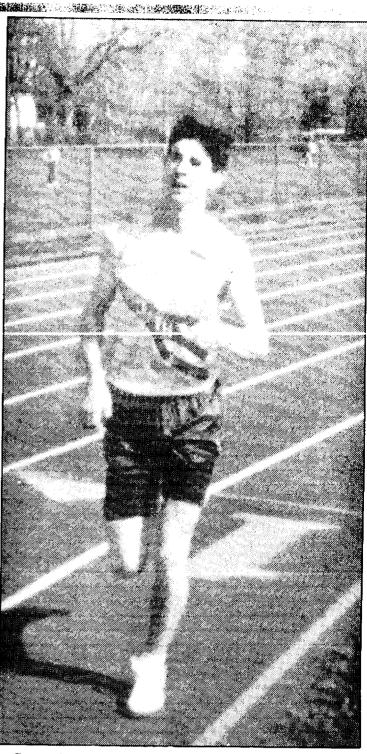

"It's a shame because this is the best team I've had at South and maybe the best team we'll ever have," VanEckoute said. "It's a coach's dream come true."

Last week was homecoming at South, which added to the distractions for the basketball

"Not to take anything away from Sterling Heights, but we didn't play well," VanEckoute said after the Lady Devils' 52-42 victory. "We took ourselves out of the game more than they

There were still several im-

Mustangs win Romeo tourney

The Under-16 Pointe Mustangs subdued the Force to win their division in the Romeo Peach Festival soccer tourna-

A 3-0 victory over the Force - the Fraser Force, that is in the championship game gave the Mustangs the title.

The Mustangs, who had tied Fraser 1-1 in a semifinal match, pressured the Force from the start of the championship contest. They opened the scoring on an indirect kick by Katie Grenzke, which was headed in by Robyn Dold.

Within five minutes, the Mustangs scored their second goal on a similar play. Grenzke again chipped an indirect kick to the far post and Carey King headed the ball into the net to give the Mustangs a 2-0 halftime lead.

The Mustangs got their final goal on a volley kick by Molly McKenzie.

Grosse Pointe opened the tournament with victories over the Rochester Attack and Moore Township. Dold and Katie Grenzke scored in the first game with assists from Maggie Durant and McKenzie. Jody Costello and Shera Teitge notched the goals in the second game, with Tricia Thurber and Tara Chevalier notching as-

That set up the first meeting with Fraser. The Force scored early in the second half, but the Mustangs tied the game with about 10 minutes remaining when McKenzie scored on a pass from Laurie Ness.

The Mustangs' defense, led by goalie Erin Schneider and sweeper Katie Grenzke, allowed only two goals in the tournament. Other defenders were Costello, Melanie Lewis, Cassie Pangborn and Carla Legwand.

McKenzie led a strong midfield contingent that included Karyn Clark, Chevalier, Durant and Emily Grenzke.

Forwards Ness, Dold, King, Teitge, Sarah Attie and Tricia Thurber all contributed to the scoring.

"One of the nicest things about this team is our ability to substitute our entire front line and not lose our ability to attack," said coach Rick Grenzke.

Tough loss frustrates Knights

Sports Editor 🍪

University Liggett School's soccer team made its first trip to Hamtramck in 10 years last week and the Knights probably would have been better off staying away even longer.

"It was a very frustrating game," said coach David Backhurst. "We dominated the play. We outshot them 13-2 in the first half and 19-8 for the game but walked away defeated (1-0). Our kids were really down after that one.

"Hamtramck isn't as strong as it used to be and we thought we were going to win, but we just couldn't find the net. A couple times we shot over the net and put the ball on the railroad tracks (behind the stadium).' The Cosmos scored the winning goal from a scramble in front of the net about six minutes into the second half. "The longer it took for us to score the more frustrated we got and the more we started pressing and trying to do too much individually," Backhurst said. "It was a similar reaction on the other side. The longer we let them stay in the game the stronger and more confident they got. I think if we'd scored a goal or two they might have collapsed, but their goalie came up with some big saves.'

Things improved for the Knights in their next game Arbor Greenhills, which was ranked fourth in the state in Class C-D.

"We were behind 2-1 at halftime, and we didn't play well," Backhurst said. "We had a good talk at halftime and played better in the second half. We were trying to play with too much finesse, so we emphasized moving the ball for-

ULS tied the game at 2-2 half when Henry Ackerman converted Jeff Backhurst's rebound. Seven minutes later, the Knights went ahead on a corner kick from Eric Lindauer to Ackerman.

ULS got the clincher with five minutes left on a pass from Ackerman to left halfback Frank Tymrak, who one-timed the shot into the net.

"That was a picture-perfect play," David Backhurst said. 'You work on it all the time in practice but can't even get it right then. I think the Italian National team is the only one which can do that on a regular basis.'

The Knights' first-half goal was scored by Gary Spicer on an assist from Jeff Backhurst.

ULS completed the week with a 1-1 tie against Southfield Christian.

a one-goal game," David Backhurst said.

The Knights took a 1-0 lead 15 minutes into the first half on Jeff Backhurst's sixth goal of the season on a pass from Omar Sawaf.

Southfield Christian tied the score midway through the second half on a long shot that goalkeeper Vince Harkins misjudged.

"Vince thought it was going over the net, but it just ticked the crossbar and went in," the coach said.

Once again, ULS dominated play, outshooting the Eagles

David Backhurst praised the performances of sophomore defenders Tom Simmonds and Chris Corneau and Lindauer, a junior midfielder.

"They've been real steady for us," he said.

The Knights, 5-3-2 and ranked seventh in the state in Class C-D, have a rugged week

They host Metro Conference foes Lutheran North today, Oct. 1, at 4:30 p.m. and Cranbrook on Saturday at 10:30 a.m.

"We won't play many tougher teams than those two,' David Backhurst said.

Hornets sting Red Barons

The Grosse Pointe Red Barons won two of their three games with the St. Clair Shores Green Hornets this week as the junior varsity and freshman squads posted victories before the varsity suffered a 26-12 defeat.

The varsity, which consists of seventh and eighth graders, started its game on the right note. It marched 65 yards for a touchdown on its first possession behind the running of Jay Watson, Steve Gayman and Chris Morkut. The scoring play was an eight-yard touchdown pass from quarterback Kyle McCartney to J.R. Hiller.

Tied 6-6 at halftime, the Red Barons opened the third quarter with two quick first downs but a fumble led to a Green Hornets' score. On their next possession, the Red Barons drove 58 yards, only to falter when a fourth-down pass from McCartney caromed off Hiller's fingertips in the end zone.

The Red Barons got their second touchdown on a 29-yard run by Bronson Gentry.

Grosse Pointe's drives were spearheaded by excellent blocking by linemen Steve Dube, Eric Neveux, Jason Lorence, Dan Raymond, Nick Paquin, Ryan, Martin Mathews, Jess Thibodeau and Bryan Mack.

Ken Marone and Kevin Brandon made outstanding plays on defense, while Matt Gorczyca, Loyd Gentry and Dave Grant also played well.

The JV game was a comefrom-behind 7-6 thriller.

Grosse Pointe trailed 6-0 midway through the fourth quarter when quarterback Jimmy Louisell completed a 10yard touchdown pass on fourth down to Jeff See. Tailback Mark Weber went around right end for the decisive extra point.

The Red Barons' touchdown was set up by an excellent defensive series that gave the offense the ball on the St. Clair Shores 11. Key plays included a tackle by James Thomas, pressure on the quarterback by Matt Tocco and solid pass cov-

Grosse Pointe South's football team accomplished something it hadn't done in three

The Blue Devils won a homecoming game, or to be more precise, they romped to victory.

Anchor Bay was victimized by South's big-play offense in the first half and its ball-control running attack in the second as the Blue Devils rolled to a 38-8 victory.

"The loss last week (to Romeo) really hurt," said senior quarterback Scott Lupo, who passed for 155 yards and three touchdowns against the Tars. Lupo also ran for a score.

The victory improved South's record to 2-1 in the Macomb Area Conference White Division and 3-1 overall and kept the Devils in the hunt for the

"We're going to face top quality programs for the next five weeks," said South coach Jon Rice, whose team visits Utica for a game Friday at 7:30

The Chieftains are 1-2 in the MAC and 2.2 overall after losing 28-7 to Fraser last week, but Rice is taking them very seriously.

"Utica is a sound team," he said. "They're really strong defensively. It will be a whale of a ball game."

The Chieftains to watch include quarterback Todd Koehn and free safety Kyle Rojeski.

South's big-play first half began on the opening drive against Anchor Bay. On the first play after a 15-yard pass interference penalty against the Tars, Lupo raced 25 yards for a touchdown and Tim Harmount kicked the first of his five extra points.

The Blue Devils got Big Play No. 2 with 1:50 left in the first quarter. On fourth and seven, Lupo hit Peter Mertz with a swing pass and he used a fine block by Ryan McCartney to scamper 25 yards for the touch-South's third big play of the half was a real back-breaker for Anchor Bay. The Blue Devils had driven for a first down inside the Tars' 10, but Anchor Bay had two sacks and another outstanding defensive play to force a fourth and 31 situation for South.

Lupo dropped back and hit running back Steve Bednarchik along the sideline. Bednarchik carried the ball into the end zone and South had a 21-0 lead.

Anchor Bay's offense showed some life late in the first half when the Tars went 60 yards in nine play with quarterback Craig Bloom hitting Bill Grimes with an eight-vard scoring strike. Anchor Bay made a two-point conversion to cut the lead to 21-8.

"Big plays killed us," said Tars' coach Jay Knierim. "(South) had more athletic ability than we did."

Although the halftime score was impressive from South's standpoint, Rice and his staff were unhappy that the Blue Devils had picked up only 54 yards rushing.

"I wasn't real pleased with the first-half offense," Rice said. "We were a little harsh on the kids at halftime."

Chad Hepner responded to the challenge as he finished with 113 yards on 14 carries. Mertz finished with 36 yards on eight carries.

South opened the third quarter with a long drive that was capped by a 34-yard touchdown pass from Lupo to Mc-Cartney.

Harmount kicked a 38-yard field goal late in the third quarter and Mertz finished the scoring with a 23-yard run with 8:37 left in the game.

South converted seven of 11 third-down situations. Defensively, the Blue Devils were outstanding, especially in the second half. They forced three fumbles and linebacker Charles O'Loughlin intercepted two pas-

Reynaert returns in top form

Mike Reynaert reminded Grosse Pointe South's soccer team what it had missed when he was forced to sit out two games because of food poison-

The senior forward-midfielder made a rousing return to action last week as he scored all the Blue Devils' goals in a 4-0 victory over Anchor Bay in a Macomb Area Conference White Division game.

"Mike's a pretty tough kid so when they bounced back with a "We've played them, for 10-1, you know he must have been 4-2 non-league victory over Ann years and every time it's been sick when he didn't even show up for our game against (Troy) Athens," said coach Mark Christensen. "He was on the sidelines for Mott, but still couldn't play.'

South tied Athens and beat Mott 3-0 without Reynaert, so he felt he had something to

"Mike played pretty well, considering the time he missed," Christensen said. "I think he was pressing a little because he's a key player on our team and now we played two good games without him. I think it helped him quite a bit mentally to have a game like

South, which led 3-0 at halftime, was frustrated by Anchor Bay's defensive strategy.

"They put nine men in the box and didn't even try to win," Christensen said. "They just tried to keep the score down. That isn't soccer. But I think our team learned from Sweeper Andy Bramlage played a strong game against the Tars.

The victories over Anchor Bay and Mott put South in first place alone atop the White Division with a 4-1 record.

"The second time around will decide the division, but we can control our own destiny," Christensen said. "Fortunately, we'll meet all the better teams at home during the second half."

Mott came into its game with South unbeaten in division action, but the Blue Devils jumped out to an early 2-0 lead.

"We played real well in the first half," Christensen said. The second half was chippy and we had to play a man short for the last 30 minutes because of a red card."

Andy Ostrowski hadi a goal and an assist to lead the Blue Devils. Pat Meehan and Tim Reynaert scored the other South goals.

Christensen praised the play of sophomore midfielder Jake Howlett. Chris Dowe played well in goal to record the shut-

LS No. 1 in many ways

By Chuck Klonke Sports Editor

University Liggett School girls tennis coach Chuck Wright doesn't want his team's No. 1 ranking in the state to be based entirely on its won-lost

"We're proud to be No. 1 as tennis players, but we want to be No. 1 when it comes to respect," Wright said after another successful week in which the Lady Devils beat dual meet foes Rochester and Grosse Pointe North by identical 7-1 scores and then won the rainshortened East Grand Rapids Invitational.

"We're doing a good job of winning. Every team member competed hard, but did it with incredible class. We had several compliments last week on our court demeanor. When you're ranked No. 1 everybody's out to get you and people look at you a lot closer.'

Wright compared his team with the former NBA champion Los Angeles Lakers.

"The Lakers were the No. 1 team in the league but the fans still liked them because they won with class," he said. "That wasn't the case with the Pistons and people were happy to see them get beat. They made a lot of enemies with the way they played."

the Kingswood tournament on Saturday.

Five of the top six teams in Class A and the No. 1 team in Class B (Kingswood) will be there," Wright said. "We'll find out then if we're still No. 1.' ULS dominated the East Grand Rapids tournament, which was shortened to two rounds, by taking seven of the eight flights in two sets.

The closest match of the day was Maggie Durant's 2-6, 6-4, 6-2 victory over a Kingswood player in No. 4 singles.

Durant, who had been playing fourth doubles, traded places with fellow freshman Rachel Calderon last week and the move turned out to be beneficial for both players.

"Maggie has been real steady in fourth singles and Rachel is a dominant player in doubles," Wright said.

One of the key matches at East Grand Rapids was in fourth doubles where Calderon and Dena Wright beat a Holland Christian pair 6-4, 3-6, 7-

ULS swept the four singles matches with North. Shannon Byrne won 6-0, 6-1 at No. 1; Heather Heidel posted a 6-2, 6-0 win at No. 2; Ify Obianwu was a 6-0, 6-0 winner at No. 3; and Durant eked out a 6-4, 6-4 win at No. 4.

Rachel Calderon posted a 7-5, 6-2 win.

The only loss was in third doubles where Bevan Garrett and Meredith Korneffel dropped a 6-4, 6-4 decision.

"The doubles matches were much closer than the score of the match," Chuck Wright said. "North is really strong in doubles and you have to play well to beat them.

"Our first three singles players have really been dominant. Ify is learning to control a match just like Shannon and Heather.'

Field hockey

After struggling to find an offense during the early games, the ULS field hockey team discovered one in time to post a 5-1 victory over Dearborn last week.

The score was tied 1-1 at halftime on a goal by the Lady Knights' Beth Mozena, but the ULS offense exploded in the second half as Nicole Metcalfe scored twice and Liz Eldridge and Natalie Hubbard added a goal apiece.

The Lady Knights' defenders did a good job of keening Dearborn out of its attac ng zone.

Later, ULS dropped a game to Ann Arbor Pioneer despite a strong performance by senior goalie Amy Shanle.

It wasn't a school record, but Belloli was willing to put an asterisk beside Grant's name.

"It's probably a record for a player under 6-5," the coach said. Martina Jerant, who was an all-state center for ULS a few years ago, holds the singlegame record of 37.

"She did a great defensive job on St. Florian's top scorer, rebounds.

"She's been averaging 23 points and Kania held her to 10. Kania isn't a big offensive threat, but she's so valuable because of her rebounding and defense.

Earlier, ULS dropped a 42-40 decision to Roeper. The Lady Knights held a 26-16 halftime lead but were outscored 15-2 in the third quarter.

"For a while, it looked like we'd never played the game before," Belloli said. "We tried to catch up in the fourth quarter

The Red Barons also got good tackling from Jason Ford, Ricky Pesta, Jack Lucido, Eric Dunlap and Shane Conlan. Solomon recovered a fumble after the Grosse Pointe touchdown, allowing the Red Barons to run out the clock.

On offense, Rory Cleary ran the ball well, Weber had a 40yard run and the Red Barons got solid blocking from Brian Granger, Tom Davis, Eddie O'-Brien, Cam Murg and Jon Pa-

The Grosse Pointe freshmen won 20-7 with Josh Lorence scoring three touchdowns and an extra point. Andy Hill added the other extra point.

The offense moved the ball well throughout the game with steady rushing performances from K.C. Cleary, Brian Moore, Heath Schollenberger, John Arbanas and Steve Marone. Don Northey blocked well out of the backfield and the Red Barons also got good blocking from linemen Justin Urso, Anthony Allor, Austin Clayton, Tony Gatliff, John Laga, Robert Selvaggi, Joe Gorczyca, Mike Cataldo, Don Badaczewski and Mark Lindeman.

On defense, Brandon De-Guvera made a touchdown saving tackle. Other top tacklers were Andrew Wrosch, Sean O'-Sullivan, Jason Rusko, Clark Peters and Lee Elsey.

North enjoys a turnabout

By Chuck Klonke Sports Editor

Grosse Pointe North's soccer team is recovering nicely after a rough start.

The kids have turned it around," said coach Guido Regelbrugge after the Norsemen tied Romeo and beat Lake Shore and Utica in their last three Macomb Area Conference White Division games.

'We're not a powerhouse, but we're in the games and we're scoring goals. I'm quite happy with the way they've played lately. We made a few changes in the lineup and our conditioning is better than it was earlier in the year. Except for the (Grosse Pointe) South game we were never behind at halftime, but we weren't able to sustain the way we played in the first

North has a key game Friday when it plays at South at 4

"We're up a notch from where we had been, but we'll find out Friday if it's high enough to challenge South,' Regelbrugge said. "If not, we'll just have to set our sights on second place."

Several players have turned in strong performances for the Norsemen, including forward Dean Balcirak and defender Jamie Ditty.

"Balcirak has worked hard to be our biggest threat up front and now we've found some kids who can get him the ball," Regelbrugge said. "Ditty has been our steadiest defensive player all season, even when we were struggling. Bryce Kenny has had some good games, too."

Balcirak scored twice and Ajit Sarnaik and Steve Chevalier added a goal apiece in the 4-1 victory over Utica.

"The wind was a real factor in that game, but we played very well as a team," Regelbrugge said.

Balcirak, Sarnaik and Tony DiLaura each scored a goal in North's 3-1 victory over Lake Shore and Balcirak had the only goal for the Norsemen in their 1-1 tie with Romeo.

First MAC Blue defeat leaves Norsemen glum

By Chuck Klonke Sports Editor

Frank Sumbera can't wait until Friday. That's when he'll find out which of his Grosse Pointe North football teams shows up for its game with Cousino.

"We're at the crossroads," Sumbera said after the Norsemen dropped at 21-0 decision to Warren Woods-Tower for their first setback in the Macomb Area Conference Blue Division.

"We have to find out which team we are, the one that lost to Fraser and Woods-Tower or the one that looked so good in beating Mount Clemens and Lake Shore."

Despite the stunning defeat by the Titans, North is still in the midst of the MAC Blue race. Six teams, including the Norsemen and Cousino, are tied for first place with 2-1 re-

North had 119 yards rushing, 93 passing and had 10 first downs.

North fumbled the opening kickoff and things went downhill from there. Woods-Tower recovered on the Norsemen's seven and four plays later the Titans scored.

North took the next kickoff, ran a couple of plays, then threw a pass that a Woods-Tower safety picked off and returned 36 yards for a touchdown.

The Norsemen had their chances to get back into the game late in the first half, but were stopped inside the one and later dropped a pass on the

Building-trade apprentices hope to nail title at Cobo

By John Minnis

Stand back, Tim Allen, and let the pros show how "Home Improvement" is really done.

ARMED AND READY

Arrgh! Arrgh!
The biggest "Tool Time" ever will begin this weekend at the Cobo Conference/Exhibition Center as 85 fourth-year building-trades apprentices from the United States and Canada compete for the coveted Best Apprentice of 1992 award — not to mention the first-place $1,500 cash prize

"The contest and exhibition promise to be an exciting event for anyone interested in the building trades," said Ron Conrad, director/coordinator of the Detroit Carpentry Joint Apprenticeship Committee. "Our best apprentices will showcase the skills they have acquired during their four years in the apprenticeship training program."

The contest is co-sponsored by several business and labor organi-

Do-it-yourselfers can learn a lot by watching 85 apprentices compete in the Best Apprentice of 1992 competition at Cobo hall next Sunday and Monday, Oct. 4 and 5.

zations — United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, The Associated General Con-

Apprentices are handed a blueprint in the morning of the competition and are given eight hours to complete their project.

tractors of America, National Association of Home Builders of the United States, Specialized Carriers and Rigging Association and Association of the Wall and Ceiling Industries-International.

The competition tests apprentices' craft knowledge and manipulative skills in one of four categories: carpentry, millwrighting, cabinetmaking and floor covering.

As part of the competition, the apprentices must build a project according to a blueprint they receive on one of the two days of the exhibition. They have eight hours to finish the project, and they are given just enough materials to complete the job.

The apprentices are judged on accuracy, neatness, safety, how they use their tools and their ability to follow the blueprint. On another day of the two-day contest, the apprentices take a three-hour written test. Also, while taking the test, each apprentice will be called to complete a half-hour special project

Spectators, including do-it-yourselfers, can learn a lot simply by watching the contestants as they go through various stages of their projects.

While the apprentices are competing, journeymen and journeywomen and other apprentices will demonstrate their skills at 25 working exhibits, including dock building, lathing, tile setting, terrazzo, wooden floors, concrete forms, lasers, door hanging, welding, and lead and asbestos removal moval.

Mark Braithwaite, 25, a third-year apprentice from Grosse Pointe, won't be competing this year, but he will help set up at Cobo and looks forward to watching his fellow apprentices go through the paces.

Home sales up as first-time buyers enter market

Sales of previously owned homes jumped in July, as low mortgage interest rates continued to draw first-time buyers to the market, according to the National Association of Realtors.

The association recorded a seasonally adjusted annual sales rate of 3.48 million existing single-family homes in July, up 6.7 percent from July 1991, when the resale rate was 3.26 million units.

NAR President Dorcas T. Helfant said the heavy activity was due in part to a surge of purchases by first-time home buyers, who were taking advantage of the lowest mortgage rates in 19 years.

"Many people are finding that they could be making mortgage payments that are lower than their rental payments. It's an easy choice to either build up equity with each mortgage payment, or keep throwing money out the window on rent," Helfant said.

The Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp. reported that the national average commitment rate for 30-year, conventional, fixed-rate mortgages was 8.13 percent in July, the lowest monthly average since July 1973, when the rate was 8.05 percent. In July 1991, the average rate was 9.58 percent. Mortgage rates this year have generally remained at least one percentage point lower than rates offered last year.

Year-to-date sales continue to exceed those for last year. The association recorded a total of 2,030,000 existing-home sales between January and July, which was 5.8 percent higher than the total of 1,919,000 units for the first seven months of last year.

"The market is ahead of where it was a year ago," Helfant noted. "It's looking more and more like the economy is getting back on its feet."

The national median existing single-family home price for July was $102,600, slipping slightly from one year earlier, when the price was $103,400. The median is the midpoint in the price range — half the homes sold cost more, half cost less. The heavy volume of first-time buyers purchasing less expensive homes resulted in the year-to-year drop in the national median price, said NAR Chief Economist John A. Tuccillo.

"The combination of first-time buyers, starter home sales and low rates caused the median price to drop," Tuccillo said.

Mortgage rates are expected to continue sliding in the months ahead, he noted.

"We aren't going to see any sharp drops in rates, but they'll stay low enough to keep buyers revved up," Tuccillo said.

Currently, NAR is predicting that the average rate for fixed-rate, 30year mortgages will be 8.3 percent this year, compared to 9.2 percent for 1991.

YourHome

The resale rate in the Midwest was 970,000 units in July, soaring 19.8 percent from one year ago.

"In the Midwest, buyers are coming out in droves, because housing there is among the most affordable in the nation," Tuccillo said. The median existing-home price in the Midwest was $81,500, up 2.9 percent from July 1991.

Currently, NAR is predicting existing single-family home sales to total 3.49 million units this year, rising 8.3 percent from 1991, and reaching the highest level since 1988

Builders' pre-licensing class in October

The Michigan Builders Institute, in cooperation with Grosse Pointe schools, will offer a 16-hour evening seminar to prepare for the Michigan state builder's licensing examination.

The seminar will be held on Mondays and Wednesdays, Oct. 19, 21, 26 and 28, from 6 to 10 p.m. at Barnes School, 20090 Morningside Drive.

The course is designed for real estate investors, people in the building trades who are now working without a license and for those who want to subcontract the building of their own home. The cost of the seminar is $160 and includes all materials, including a manual, law book and sample test questions.

Pre-registration is required no later than Thursday, Oct. 15, with Grosse Pointe Community Education. Those interested should call the Barnes School at 343-2178 to register during office hours. For a free brochure and more information about the classes, call Michigan Builders Institute at 313-651-2771.

The course instructor is a licensed builder with extensive experience teaching builder's pre-licensing classes.

Apprentice

He works for Brunt and Associates in Farmington Hills and does everything from rough to finish carpentry. Currently, Braithwaite is working on a job at the Mazda plant in Flat Rock.

Carpentry has a long history in the Braithwaite family.

"My dad's dad was a carpenter and then my father," he said. His grandfather apprenticed in his native Scotland.

To enter the apprenticeship program, a would-be craftsman must work at a company represented by a union. While the apprentice has to pay for classroom instruction, he or she still receives a wage while attending class.

"It's definitely worthwhile," Braithwaite said of the apprenticeship program. "The teachers are all experts in their fields."

He said the classes teach a broad range of skills related to carpentry, including working with concrete and other non-wood materials.

"Carpentry is just not working with wood," Braithwaite said. "I'd recommend it (the apprenticeship program) for anyone who wants to get into the field."

He said the recession doldrums in the construction industry may be easing.

"Things are starting to pick up right now," Braithwaite said. "Work is starting to pick up."

The two-day apprentice competition, Sunday and Monday, Oct. 4 and 5, will be open to the public free of charge from 8 a.m. to 5:30 n.m.

For more information, call Conrad at 541-2740.

Log-home-building seminar

A log home building seminar and trade exhibition will be held Sunday, Oct. 18, at the Dearborn Inn - a Marriott Hotel from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

"Interest in log home living is still strong," says Tom Kupferer, seminar manager for Log Home Living Seminars Inc. In fact, he reports, "hundreds of modern log homes have been built in the area over the past few years."

Because of the continued high interest in log home living by residents of Michigan, Log Home Living Seminars is once again conducting a day-long seminar on buying and building a modern log home.

"This is the seventh year Detroit has hosted a log-home building seminar," says Kupferer. "An average of 150 registrants have attended each of the previous seminars. Nationally, more than 26,000 individuals have attended the 175 Log Home Living building seminars since the series started in 1985.

The seminar focuses on five major aspects of building a modern log home. These include developing the home design, budgeting and cost estimating, obtaining construction financing, the important preconstruction phase and the actual construction process which is illustrated with a slide presentation.

The seminar also includes exhibits by a half dozen log home companies that are active in this area. Attendees will be able to meet these company representatives, examine sample sections of their log walls and corner styles, and collect their catalogs and plan books. Each participant also receives a detailed 80 page seminar workbook which outlines the entire building process.

"It surprises most people to learn that typical log home buyers are college-educated, professional couples in their mid-30s."

Most of these young couples already own a home and generally have one or two children. They are building the log home as their primary residence on three to five acres of land within an hour commuting distance of their work in a major metropolitan area. Most say they were first attacted to log home living by the unique beauty of the logs and the idea of raising their family in the relaxed country atmosphere created by living in a modern log home.

For more information or to register for the seminar, contact Jim or Tom Kupferer at 1-800-782-1253, ext. 300, or write to Log Home Living Seminars Inc., 11041 Lin-Valle Drive, No. 1A, St. Louis, Mo. 63123. Registration fee is $50, $20 for a spouse. Pre-registration is recommended as space is limited. A 100 percent money-back guarantee is offered to all who attend.

Killian: A panoramic view

Almost every room has a striking view in the Killian, but the vista from the hexagonal great room is by far the best.

The parnoramic scope of this central living area allows full appreciation of the finest that nature has to offer, be it ocean, lake, river, valley or even an ever-changing orchard. And in warm weather, a wide deck spanning three sides expands the viewing possibilities, along with living space, still further.

At the heart of the vaulted great room, a fireplace, flanked by a closet and a built-in china cabinet, provides a warm welcome on chilly nights. This combination unit also provides visual separation between the otherwise open kitchen and the living room.

The kitchen has plenty of cupboard and counter space. Other amenities include a walk-in pantry and a work island with vegetable sink. Two or more chefs can work together without ever getting in each other's way.

Rectangular wings extend from two sides of the central living area. This arrangement allows kids and teens to make as much noise as they want in their bedrooms, without the sound they produce intruding on their parents' privacy, and quieter atmosphere, at the other end of the house. The room adjacent to the master suite can serve as a home office, a nursery, a den or redesigned as another bedroom, if needed.

Benches and planters line the oddangled airlock entry vestibule, creating a friendly and cheerful first impression. Boots and wet shoes will find a home under the bench, coats and umbrellas on the wall.

And because the home is built over an unfinished full basement, storage space will never be a problem.

For a study kit of the KILLIAN (207-10), send $7.50 to Todays Home, P.O. Box 2832-T Eugene, Ore. 97402. (Be sure to specify plan name and number when ordering.)

The grape: Empires were built on this ancient fruit

September was the seventh month of the Roman calendar, but it is the ninth month, according to our more modern reckoning. The Anglo-Saxons called it Barsely month.

In the eighth century B.C., the author of a book called "Works and Days" wrote, "When Orion and Sirius come into mid-heaven and the rosy-fingered dawn sees Arcturus, then cut off all the grape clusters and bring them home."

Grapes are among the very oldest of cultivated fruits. The Bible tells us that the first thing Noah did after the flood was to plant a vineyard. He soon discovered what to do with the crops he raised. Jacob and many others of his time cultivated grapes and had vineyards and wineries.

In ancient Mesopotamia, grapevines were planted in gardens and the vines were swung between trees planted in rows to create arbors which were used for alfresco dining. The Book of Esther describes such an occasion in the feast given by King Ahasuerus for his princess.

In Egypt, grapevines were trained over trellises to form a high round mound to be used as an outdoor room. Pictures of them can be found in ancient tomb carvings and wall decorations.

Records of grape cultivation appear in Egypt as early as 4000 B.C. Soon the round trellises grew larger and became pergolas, which were sometimes very large indeed. They were used as summer living rooms for entertaining.

It is interesting to know that during the early years of this century, the pergola was a most fashionable addition to many estate gardens and was used in exactly the same way as were the ancient ones. Even today many gardens have small trellises upon which grapevines grow, echoing the great hall of pillars at Amarna where the ceiling represents a vine-covered pergola roof.

Although the Romans grew many kinds of fruits, and were experts in the art of grafting, the most important fruit, the one which played a large role in the advancement of the Roman empire, was the grape.

Roman naturalist and writer Pliny said that Italy opened up its hills and plains to the triumphal entrance of Dionysus between 130 and 120 B.C., and from that time on the process of grape growing has continued without interruption in Italy.

By the first century A.D., Pliny declared that of the 80 best qualities of wine made in the whole world, Rome made about two-thirds. Wine was exported from Rome to as far away as India. One reason for the growth of Rome's prestige as a city among both Italians and people from other countries was because the best wines were to be had there. This, of course, brought increasing wine commerce and wealth, and much of the new money went into the cultivation of more vineyards and of gardens in general.

In the Middle Ages, grape-growing and wine-making were important sources of income for many monasteries, as were the monastery herb gardens and the making of medicines from the herbs.

The earliest settlers in this country found wild grapes and varieties of grapes they had never seen before. One of the first shipments of the Massachusetts Company to New England included grapevines for future winemaking. These, along with the new varieties that were already here, provided the start of the American wine making industry.

One of the most attractive uses for grapevines in our contemporary world is in making ornamental wreaths. These carefully wound, almost woven, wreaths may be seen on many front doors. The wreaths are embellished with flowers, pods, cones, ribbons or grasses to suit the whim of the owner or the season of the year. In ancient times, grapevine wreaths on doors were considered a protection from evil spirits.

Who knows? That might even be true now. In these violent times, we need all the protection from evil we can get.

Now is the time for making grape jelly, too, or jams or jellies from currants or rose hips or elderberries or mint.

Almost any variety or rose may be used if you are collecting rose hips for jam. They are the small, applelike seed pods of roses and are red or yellow in color. The very best ones are from Rosa Regosa, one of the favorite old-fashioned roses.

If you have elderberry bushes in your garden, you may have to defend them from the birds if you want to use the berries. Most birds have a passion for elderberries and have been known to completely strip a tree in a matter of hours. The small blue or purple berries are high in vitamin C and make wonderful wine and herbal tea, as well as jam and jelly. However, here's a word of caution. If you have the kind of elderberry bush that produces red berries, let the birds have them. Only the blue or purple ones are edible for humans.

Antiques by Ralph & Terry Kovel

No birds allowed in this bird-house! The old wooden birdhouse in your backyard could be a valuable collectible. About two years ago, folk-art collectors began looking for hand-made birdhouses from the past. The most valuable are the Victorian examples that look like small Victorian houses. Antique birdhouses made of pottery or metal are also collected.

Most of these antiques are carefully cleaned and displayed inside the home and not used outside where the weather and the birds could damage them. An attractive old birdhouse sells from $500 to $3,000.

Q. What is Satsuma pottery?

A. Satsuma is a province in Japan. Pottery has been made there since the late 16th century, but it is the 19th-century pieces that interest collectors today. A cream-colored earthenware pottery with crackled glaze was developed in the late 18th century. It was decorated with enamel and gilt and made for export, not for use in Japan. Designs were often birds, flowers, scenes or stylized geometric patterns. Some of the mostwanted pieces were made from about 1890 to 1920. Many are marked with Japanese characters.

We recently wrote about a rag rug with a streamlined train as part of the pattern. Several readers have added to the information about dating diesel-train pictures. The first diesel was the Pioneer Zephyr in 1934. The B&O and the Santa Fe railroads had diesels by 1937. The rug might have been made by a railroad buff in the mid- to late 1930s.

Q. How long has the Wienermobile, the funny car advertising Oscar Mayer hot dogs, been used? I have a small replica of the car.

A. The first Wienermobile was made in 1936. It was designed so it could hold Little Oscar, the world's smallest chef. This car was shaped like a plain hot dog. In 1950 a number of Wienermobiles were made. Each was shaped like a hot dog in a bun. More modern versions were made in the years that followed.

The last ones were made in 1988, and the newest versions are made of plastic and have steam vents that emit the smell of grilled hot dogs. The Wienermobile was pictured in ads and TV commercials until the 1970s.

Tip: Lemon oil is a good polish for brass inside the house. After polishing brass kept outdoors, use a thin coat of paste wax to protect the shine.

Household Help by John Amantea

Q. How do you get that musty cellar smell out of a basement? Our house was built in 1984. It has a walkout in the basement, not the patio door kind, but the kind that has a few stairs to walk down or up. We do have a cellar-like room that holds the water pump, etc. In another area of the basement is a hole where there is water, apparently the place for a sump pump. The smell is pretty bad. Any helpful suggestions would be appreciated.

A. Even though your home is not considered old, a musty odor can form and germinate in only a short time. A lot depends on the specific location where you live and its environment. The other factor is, as you mentioned, that the odor is coming from a basement. Also, the basement appears to be below grade level, which means you are relatively underground.

If no one else has already suggested using a dehumidifier in your basement, then accept this advice now. This method of extracting moisture from the air will also practically eliminate the musty odor, too. Using the dehumidifier in conjunction with a cat's litter box filled with kitty litter and a small box of ordinary baking soda sprinkled throughout will help a great deal as well.

In reference to the hole in the basement where there is standing water, it most likely had a submersible sump pump there. If you are not the first owner of your home, then you can possibly obtain some information about the basement from the original contractor's plans. You will most likely have to seal that pump hole to totally eliminate any odor, or contact a professional waterproofer for further advice.

Seasonal tips:

- Prepare and caulk those drafty windows and doorways with a good silicone material.
- Weatherstrip all air conditioners (if left in windows) and seal inside door jambs.
- Patch those hazardous cracks in walkways before they get covered with leaves and, eventually, snow.
- You still have some warm weather and the time to seal your driveway for longevity and protection.
- Be aware to keep your gutters and leaders clear of any debris.

Home Tips

Homemade juice boxes - My family and I are very concerned about the environment, so we recycle as much as possible. After reading about certain school districts banning cardboard drink boxes in school lunches, I came up with a great idea. I bought several two-cup plastic fliptop containers. I fill each with four ounces of juice and freeze them. As I pack lunches every morning, I simply add four to eight ounces more juice and pack into the lunch boxes. The frozen juice melts and keeps the drink cold, but not watered down. A straw can be slipped into the flip-top hole. Best of all, there are no boxes to discard.

Sarah K., Virginia Beach, Va.

Used pencils — When my pencils are too short to use, I give them to my church to put into the pews. It's no loss if they disappear.

Gerri F., Imperial Beach, Calif.

Phone messages — I use the phone a lot for business calls, trying to obtain information. I used to have a pencil and paper handy at all times, but sometimes I had so much to write, I'd run out of paper and have to run for more.

I got the idea of putting my little tape recorder near the phone. When I am ready to write down detailed information, I repeat it into my recorder. This saves me having to keep a pad and pencil at the phone, cluttering up my counter.

I replay the machine and type up the information. It works great!

Janie B., Clarkston, Mich.

Measure couch — When I bought a couch, I forgot the most important thing — to measure it before buying.

In a large showroom, the one I picked looked just right. I didn't realize how large it was. If I had only thought of taking a tape measure along. I knew the length of the wall, but didn't check the couch.

When it was delivered and put into place, it was at least 10 inches too large. I had to send it back.

Now I'm off on another shopping trip with a tape measure in my purse. I won't make that mistake again.

Atlanta family at home in the trees

By Michael Jack

AlA News Service

When most people build a house, they choose a spot and cut down trees to make room. Tod and Linda Chmar took a slightly different approach, deciding to let nature pick the site for them.

Though just a few miles from downtown Atlanta, the 2 1/2-acre lot borders a forest and is heavily wooded. When the Chmars first visited the property, the noticed that a tree had fallen.

"The house occupies the position of the fallen tree," says architect Mack Scogin. "The house also occupied the attitude of the people who inhabit it — an attitude of multiplicities and dualities."

That attitude is shaped in large part by the Chmars' devotion to Mahikari, a practice of Japanese origin that emphasizes spiritual purification and harmony with nature. The couple's philosophy led them to seek a house that complemented its natural surroundings rather than imposing on them.

"Due to the spiritual beliefs of the owners, there was stated a desire to alter the site as little as possible," Scogin says. "Therefore, the concrete foundation walls — the only contact with the earth — are oriented in such a way that allows the site to drain just as it did before the house was built." Few trees were displaced during the building process, and a quiet stream still runs under the house.

The stucco-and-wood structure is long and narrow, its two wings punctuated by a varied assortment of custom redwood-framed windows. The vast expanses of glass combine with a number of decks to blend the outdoors with the inside.

"There aren't any clear-cut interior zones, and there aren't any clear-cut exterior zones; the house flows into the surrounding environment and vice versa," says Linda Chmar. "My favorite place or spot in this house really is not in the house; it's outside the house. The star of the house is nature."

Natural materials are prevalent throughout the 4,000-square-foot building: The floors are uncovered particleboard, walls are paneled with redwood, and the ceilings are birch plywood and painted gypsum board. Most of the walls are angled or gently curved, enhancing the openness of the floor plan. One of the decks is supported by five telephone poles that abstractly reflect the surrounding trees.

It's been described as Frank Lloyd Wright meeting Orson Wells," Tod Chmar comments, "and that's probably an accurate description. But it's a very easy house to live in."

At the heart of the structure, reached by a separate stairway, is the goshinden room, where the entire family performs the rituals of mahikari.

"The rich wood interiors and variety of window shapes punctuating the stucco exterior allow for unexpected views of the forest and create a feeling of living in the trees," commented the jury that selected the house to receive a 1992 Honor Award from The American Institute of Architects. Out of the 10 Honor Awards presented this year, only three were houses.

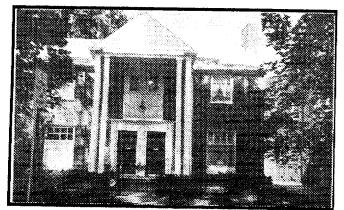

"This exquisite house accommodates the profound spiritual lives of the owners while respecting the rhythms and cycles of the natural environment on which it is sited," the jury noted.

The house was the first residential project for the 8-year-old architecture firm Scogin, Elam & Bray, which has also won AIA Honor Awards for designing a museum and a library.
