Students scan the cosmos from the school roof

Staff Writer

They call themselves RATS and inside their blue-walled control room, they spend their after-school hours probing the universe.

RATS - members of the Radio Astronomy Team at Grosse Pointe South High School isn't a large group with only 11 students. And their club quarters, behind a nondescript door on the school's second floor, may not be the most popular spot on campus. In fact, some students and residents living in the area of South may not know a radio telescope is sitting on the school's roof.

But the students and their adviser, North High School science teacher and planetarium operator Ardis Maciolek, are the first in the United States to build and operate a researchgrade radio telescope in a high school setting.

Now that the telescope is operational, the students face a new challenge in their fouryear quest: obtaining computer equipment to record, chart and analyze information transmitted through the telescope. The $2,000 unit is anchored on the roof of the boy's gym. A dish constructed of wire mesh holds a piece of electronic equipment called a "front end" which receives, amplifies and filters radio waves from Earth and outer space. The radio waves are then carried through a wire that feeds into the control room and connects to a box called the "back end" which further modifies the signals.

The signals are then sent through the strip-chart recorder which prints out a scan -athin strip of paper resembling an adding machine tape. A scan is a representation of a specific time, a specific sky position and the radio energy present at that moment, Maciolek said.

Students are now in the process of deciphering the daily scans. On a typical afternoon in the control room, with its floors lined with second-hand furniture and its walls plastered with posters of astronauts, space missions and planetscapes, four students were working with their own equipment and a borrowed computer.

While Peter Lickteig, Jed Scott, Liang Waychu and Derek Harris experimented with the computer equipment, Katrina Koski, a senior and fourvear member of RAT, held a scan in her hand and examined the jagged lines representing radio waves.

Students are in the process of learning how to distinguish which lines on a scan represent interference (from lightning or radar for example) and which lines represent signals from outer space.

What's exciting about deciphering radio telescope transmissions, Koski said, is that the instrument can "see" objects in space that a visual telescope may not pick up.

"Matter does not emit light, it emits radio waves," she said. "The radio waves can travel through large regions of dust and gas. A regular telescope wouldn't be able to see through the dust and gas. Radio waves can travel through these obstructions and radio telescopes can observe at all times of day and night. They are used to detect black holes.

Koski compared a radio telescope to an X-ray machine, which can record what is inside

City considers 2 ambulance plans

By Donna Walker Staff Writer

Grosse Pointe City was just about set to go with Grosse Pointe Park's plan for improved ambulance service, when it received a last-minute, cheaper proposal from Grosse Pointe Farms.

"Now, we don't know what to do," said City manager Thomas Kressbach.

About a month ago, Grosse Pointe Park asked the City to enter into a three-way contract with the Park and L.C. Taylor Ambulance Service.

Under the agreement, L.C. Taylor would provide advanced life support service to the Park and City for a one-year trial period. Alter that, the two cities could renew the contract for a period of seven years. The service would include a

L.C. Taylor-owned advanced life support ambulance, which would be stationed at Grosse Pointe Park city hall; and two medical personnel per shift - a paramedic, and either a second paramedic or an EMT special-

For the service, L.C. Taylor would charge the Park $45,000 a year, and the City $10,000 a year. Those prices - which the ambulance company has guaranteed for eight years — reflect posal, the company would charge patients between $225 and $250 a run, Kressbach said.

However, the ambulance response in the City and Park is so fast --- in most cases, patients arrive at the hospital within four minutes of the ambulance request - that some people may wonder if paramedics are worth the added expense, Kressbach said.

"But the question is moot, because our choices are limited," he said.

The City can elect to go along with the plan its current service provider – the Park – has proposed. Or, the City could hook up with another private ambulance company. Or, it could buy an ambulance and train its public safety officers to be EMTs.

However, there is nowhere to store an ambulance at city hall, and it would be costly and time

Council asks Browning to reconsider By Ronald J. Br

When Scott McDuffee believes in a cause he'll do anything for it.

That's why he's taken pies in the face and run a marathon to raise money for the Michigan Chapter of the Leukemia Society of America.

"The Leukemia Society of America is a relatively small organization," McDuffee, cf Grosse Pointe Park, said. "But it's had a dramatic impact on the disease. Twenty years ago if a child had leukemia it would have been a death sentence. Now they think they'll be able to find a cure by the year 2000.

Scott McDuffee

GPN

That's what kept McDuffee going through the closing hours of the Detroit Free Press Marathon he entered to raise money for the organization.

It was a fundraising idea borrowed from the Kansas City chapter of the Leukemia Society. The Michigan chapter hired a trainer and those members interested in running the marathon were whipped into shape over a five-month period.

Each runner was teamed with a leukemia patient and served as the patient's proxy in the race. The program was called Team in Training.

"I've been a runner for years," McDuffee said. "I was in rowing for a lot of years and running was part of the training for that, but I had never done anything as serious as this before."

But he enjoyed the challenge, believed in the cause and stuck with it, as did two dozen other runners in his group. But several weeks before the race he hurt his knee during training and was unable to work out in the weeks leading up to the race.

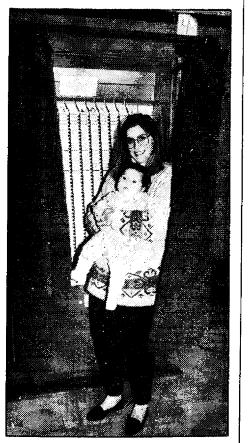

But he had made a commitment and he would not back out. So he began the race with the rest of the more than 1,400 people who entered.

He wore a T-shirt with the names of all the patients and subsidies that Bon Secours Hospital has agreed to pay as part of its community service program.

The hospital has agreed to pay L.C. Taylor $26,050 a year for two years on behalf of the Park and $5,790 a year for two years on behalf of the City.

In addition, L.C. Taylor would bill patients' insurance companies for ambulance runs.

The cost would be more than patients are currently billed, because the level of service would be higher than the basic life support service the Park and City currently have.

For more than a decade, the City has contracted for its emergency medical service through the Park, which owns two basic life support ambulances that are staffed by Park public safety officers who are trained emergency medical technicians (EMTs).

When a Park resident uses the ambulance, he is billed $75, and when a City resident uses the ambulance, he is charged $100, said Park city manager Dale Krajniak.

It looks as though the Grosse Pointe City Council has finally come to an agreement on who it wants to be mayor - its current mayor, Lorenzo Browning.

Browning resigned last month, citing personal reasons. But his resignation went into effect only after a successor was appointed from among the council.

When the council met on Oct. 19, it attempted to elect a new mayor. After eight separate votes, four voice and four secret ballot, the council was unable to reach a consensus and a special meeting to elect a mayor was set for Monday, Nov. 2.

Shortly before the Nov. 2 meeting, however, Browning's wife Anne died after a long illness and the council thought Browning might want to reconsider his resignation.

Councilman Dale Scrace made the motion that the city offer Browning that chance. The motion passed unanimously.

On Tuesday, Browning said he wasn't sure what he would

After a somewhat controversial introduction, the board of education in spring 1991 approved the administration's idea to adopt a new philosophy of teaching for elementary age students.

Differentiated programming was described by deputy superintendent Harrison E. Cass Jr. The old way, Cass said, was to line all the pupils' desks in a row and instruct them to open their textbooks to the same page and begin reading the same lesson.

Cass said. "She asked how and segment, he said. why questions rather than ba-work together in pairs. When the recess bell rang the students actually expressed disappointment. Half the students stayed during recess to finish writing their own stories. It was an amazing turnaround."

The idea behind differentiated programming is not exactly new, Cass said. Some teachers over the years have used innovative approaches to stimulate higher-level thinking and variety in education, he said, and others have not.

The Grosse Pointe program "I was in a third-grade class- now mandates that elementary room last week and the stu- teachers use this approach, dents were talking about a which is targeted toward all story (the teacher) had read," students rather than a specific students rather than a specific

All students fit in somewhere sic comprehension questions, on a continuum of ability, Cass Then the students began to said. At one end are the handicapped and special education students, who have traditionally been separated from the mainstream. At the opposite end is the extremely able learner or the gifted student. Beginning last school year, three magnet classrooms were established to focus more attention on their needs.

But reaching all students is not quite that simple, Cass said. In the middle of the continuum are the average students, some of whom may be borderline special education and others who are magnet-eligible.

"Within the regular classroom, there are students with a wide range of abilities," Cass said. "You can't just teach one way and reach everyone. The best way is to have all the students working within their area of ability."

The program was launched at the beginning of the 1991-92 school year following teacher, parent and student surveys, said Alfrieda Frost, assistant superintendent of curriculum and evaluation. Teachers also attended a number of workshops before and during the last school year, she said.

"The response was very positive," Frost said. "People believed in the value of what we were trying to do.'

Roger McCaig, director of reseach and development in the curriculum department, said first-year results of the magnet program were "a spectacular, unqualified success in terms of student gains equaling or surpassing expectations.'

Magnet students, those with an IQ of 140 or higher, who participated in the program experienced extraordinary growth in reading and math, he said, and most students performed two years ahead of their grade level.

One of the advantages of the magnet program, McCaig said, is that advanced students can work with other gifted students in their age group rather than be placed in a classroom with much older students.

"There are two primary causes of these successes," he said. "One is the certainty of delivery. If you have three classrooms populated by ex-tremely bright students being taught by three teachers who want to do this and parents who elected to have their students in this program, it's not surprising to find such extraordinary results." The other reason is the magnet students have learning partners in their equally gifted classmates, he said.

Some of the results of the first-year evaluation are:

• Students are more involved, challenged and committed.

Differentiated programming is easier to implement in English than in math.

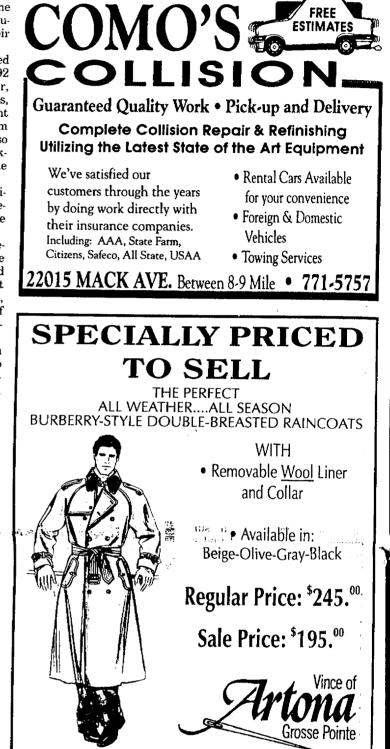

• More staff development is needed.

• Good efforts need to be recogonized more.

Director of special education services Sue Klein said implementing a new teaching philosophy in the classroom is like learning a new golf swing or tennis grip.

"For some teachers, there will be more changes than for others, depending on how they did things before," Klein said.

Poupard Elementary principal Jay Flowers said the program is well-received at his school because it allows the teacher to make more deicisons in the classroom.

Woods man faces charges in tank scam

By Donna Walker Staff Writer

A 38-year-old Grosse Pointe Woods resident has been accused of setting up a phony state agency to bilk underground storage tank owners.

Glenn R. Smith, 38, was arraigned on two counts of obtaining money under false pretenses in 54-A Judicial District Court in Lansing on Oct. 26.

The charges were filed by state attorney general Frank J. Kelley.

He said Smith allegedly sent a notice to the 15,000 registered underground storage tank owners in Michigan, telling them they had to send $50 per tank to the Michigan Underground Storage Tank Committee (MUSTCOM).

MUSTCOM is a private corporation Smith created and registered with the state, Kelley said.

It is not a state agency and has no relationship whatsoever with the Michigan Underground Storage Tank Financial Assurance (MUSTFA) fund, which administers grants to help owners clean up sites that have been contaminated by leaky underground storage tanks, Kelley said.

Grosse Pointe Park, which recently had three underground storage tanks removed from city-owned property with the promise of reimbursement from the MUSTFA fund, received one of those letters two days after Smith was arraigned.

"The state sent out a bulletin so we knew to ignore it,' Krajniak said.

The bogus notice, dated Oct. 20, said:

"On Aug. 3, 1992, the Michigan Underground Storage Tank Commission (MUSTCOM) voted uanimously to assess, a sur-charge on all registered underground storage tanks in Michigan.

"In order to remain in full compliance with MUSTCOM regulations, all owners of registered underground storage tanks (USTs) are required to pay the surcharge by Nov. 20, 1992.

"The surcharge is $50 for each registered UST. This surcharge is independent of the $100 registration fee required each year on each UST and is retroactive to the number of USTs at the facility on Jan. 31, 1992

Well, South liked Perot

News

By Shirley A. McShane Staff Writer

Even if high school students had a say in the matter, election day results wouldn't be any easier to decipher.

Students at Grosse Pointe North and South high schools cast their votes last week for president, members of Congress and four state ballot proposals.

North students elected President George Bush for another term and South students opted for entrepreneur Ross Perot.

Official results at South were: Perot, 324; Bush 322; and Clinton, 315. Ballot proposals A and B passed while C and D were voted down.

At North, results were: Bush with 232, Perot with 223 and Clinton with 206. North students did not vote on the ballot proposals.

South students filled out ballots during their social studies classes. Students without a social studies class were invited to cast ballots between classes, said Gene Matecun, social studies department chairman.

The North High School newspaper, North Pointe, conducted the poll. Journalism adviser Merrie Gay Ayrault said the social studies department had planned on conducting a student poll, but the newspaper scooped them.

Any surprises? Matecun said Perot's victory among South students went against convention in Grosse Pointe, a predominantly Republican stronghold.

"In past (student elections) the Republicans almost always stomped the Democrats," he said. "If my memory serves correctly, the only time students went for a candidate other than a Republican was in 1964, when (Republican Barry M.) Goldwater lost to (Democrat) Lyndon B. Johnson. It's usually a Republican sweep every four vears.

Matecun asked the students if they voted based on their own conscience of if they were reflecting their parents' political preferences.

"I think they were voting their own feelings," Matecun said. "They seemed to express dissatisfaction for big government.'

Perhaps what skewed the results was the presence of a formidable third candidate, Matecun said. In his estimation, not since 1968 when independent George C. Wallace challenged Richard M. Nixon and Hubert H. Humphrey, has there been a significant third-party candidate on the ballot.

Matecun also wondered what would have happened if two girls had not walked into his classroom just before "the polls closed.'

"They came in after school wearing big Perot campaign buttons and asked if there still was time to vote," he said. "As it turned out, they cast the tiebreaking votes that put Perot in the lead."

Condit has built other gingerbread houses, including a firehouse and a miniature version of the Whitney that was auctioned off to raise money at

The individual facility is identified by the Michigan State Police Fire Marshall (MSPFM) facility I.D. number located on the label.

"Failure to comply with this directive will result in account delinquency and jeopardize future MUSTCOM site clean-up funding contributions."

Payments were to be sent to "MUSTCOM, UST Compliance Section," at a Lansing post office box.

Smith had registered the post office box in his own name, authorities said.

In a prepared statement, Kelley said, "I want to acknowledge the excellent work of the Michigan State Police fire marshal in quickly alerting the public to what could have been a $750,000 scam.

"I also want to thank the fire marshal's office for their assistance in providing evidence to bring this prosecution.

'Citizens must be continually skeptical when they are asked to pay out money; make a call, or verify an address to make sure your money is going where you think it is and not to some unscrupulous scam artist."

The maximum penalty for obtaining more than $100 under false pretenses is 10 years in prison or a $5,000 fine.

After his arraignment, Smith was released on a $3,500 bond. His preliminary examination was originally set for Friday, Oct. 30, but it has been moved to Tuesday, Nov. 10.

Ineaia again take drubbing on reporting

nce again the nation's news media are the losers in a presidential campaign, with the three major candidates finding fault at different times and for different reasons with the reporting of the campaign.

Even before the votes were cast last Tuesday, it was clear that the messengers were going to be blamed for whatever happened on Nov. 3, not only in Michigan but in the nation.

In his brief interview with WJR's J.P. McCarthy, aboard the plane bringing him to Detroit for his umteenth appearance, President Bush again showed his annoyance with the national press corps in Washington, although he diplomatically exempted the local media from that criticism.

Among other things, he contended the national media were partial to liberal views and he gave his own evaluation of the press by repeating his favorite bumper sticker, "Annoy the media. Reelect President Bush."

Ross Perot, too, often lectured the media during the campaign, complaining about the questions asked, the reporting of some of his answers and the media's search for real proof of some of his outlandish charges.

Early on, Bill Clinton also had his problems with the press, especially when Gennifer Flowers' charges got national media attention after first being printed in a scandal-mongering sheet that reportedly paid Flowers for her revelations.

Yet Flowers' charges and the draft story stayed alive the rest of the campaign, in part because the Bush team continued to repeat them as part of its major theme that Clinton could not be trusted.

Our own view is that the media did a slightly better job than they did four years ago but spent far too much time on the personal, inconsequential and, worst of all, negative charges raised by all three major political camps and far too little on examining the substantive issues.

Some blame for those media failures must, however, be directed at the candidates who sought to oversimplify complex issues and offer easy but obviously infeasible answers in their efforts to provide a good sound bite for TV news shows.

Even more serious, in the final frenetic and frantic days of the campaign, all three candidates indulged in some of the worst personal attacks ever heard in modern political campaigns.

Whether he won or lost, Bush demeaned the presidency by the tone of his attacks on the Democratic ticket, saying in the Detroit metro area, "My dog Millie knows more about foreign affairs than these bozos" and calling Sen. Al Gore "Ozone" and "crazy, way out, far out."

Clinton, some would say, responded in kind although perhaps with more reason when he accused the president of "baldfaced lies" about his record in Arkansas as well as conducting a campaign of "fear-mongering" and "mudslinging."

Such campaigning contributed to the media's problems. They felt required to report each new charge and response and thus aided and abetted those who had started on the low campaign road in the first place. TV news, while often covering developments well in special reports, damaged its performance by trimming its sound bites to the point that many speakers were misquoted because of the lack of time to explain the qualifications and conditions they had put on their answers.

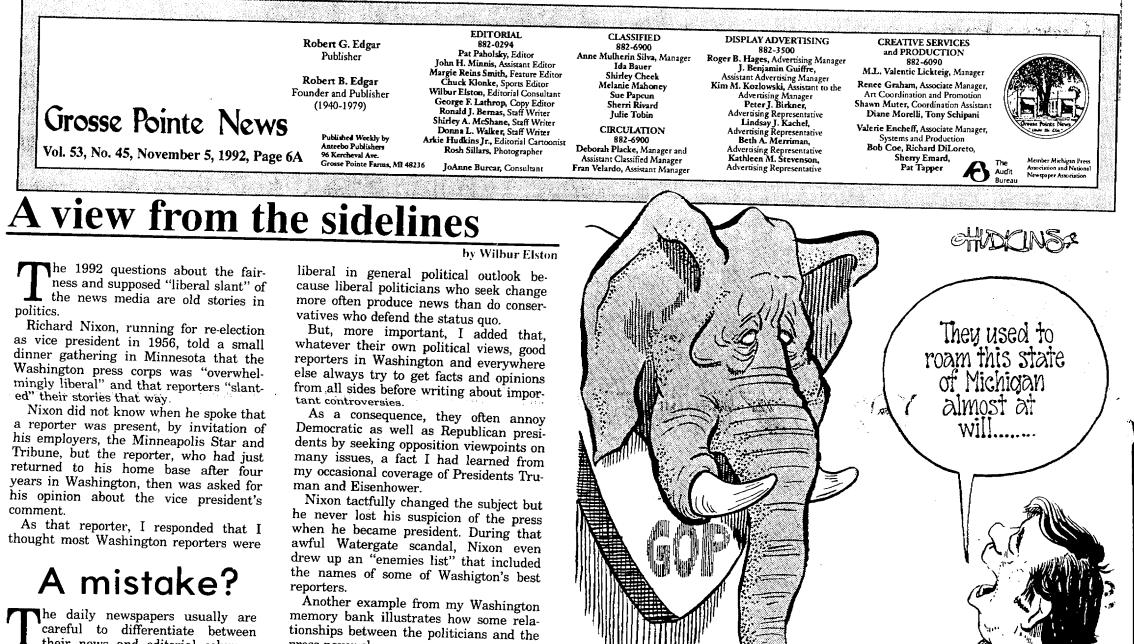

Yet the public itself bears some of the blame for the squalid level of the campaign. Readership and TV rating surveys show greater public attention was paid to gossip and trash than to the coverage of serious issues. So the media gave the public what it wants, or so they say.

Yet in the long run it is in the best  $in \frac{bl}{m}$ terests of the media themselves as well as the American public for the news distrib<sub>rd</sub> utors, whether print, radio or TV, to re<sub>70</sub> sist the siren call of popularity and servew up to their own audiences the sound information the people need.

By the time you have read these words<sup>(4)</sup> on Thursday, you will know who has won<sup>(b)</sup> and whether the polls were right in fore.<sup>(i)</sup> casting a Clinton victory — or as wrong, as they were in 1948 in predicting President Truman's defeat.

Whoever won, it's over — unless Perot<sup>4</sup> made a last-minute spurt that carried him to victory in several states and put the election in the House of Representatives which doesn't take office until after Jan. 1, 1993.

That would add another two months to the campaign, at least in Washington, which would be a horror too gruesome to contemplate.

L their news and editorial columns, but sometimes they give the impression of slanting the news to satisfy their editorial opinions.

That happened last Sunday when The Detroit News and Free Press carried two Page 1 graphs in color, one showing the gap between President Bush and challenger Bill Clinton at two percentage points and the other a gap of three.

Well down in the accompanying story, however, the paper cited a CBS-New York Times poll gap of eight points.

True, the poll reports were accurate but some readers saw the chart's emphasis as supporting President Bush, editorially endorsed by the News.

Was it a mistake or an attempted slant? We don't know but the Sunday news sections are prepared by the News staff, while the Free Press, which editorially endorsed Clinton, prepares other sections for the joint Sunday edition. press never change.

A National Press Club reverse "Meet the Press" program in the early 1950s gave politicians a rare opportunity to question reporters instead of just providing answers for the news media.

It was supposed to be all in fun, and it was, except that one senator asked a simple question that hasn't been answered to this day.

Sen. Robert Kerr of Oklahoma, no mean purveyor of both wit and invective, put his first question to Mae Craig, a New England newspaper correspondent whose tart tongue brightened her appearances on radio "Meet the Press" shows. "Isn't it true, Mae," Kerr inquired,

"Isn't it true, Mae," Kerr inquired, "that the press is more interested in a scalp than a scoop?"

Both sides collapsed in laughter but there's more meaning to that question today when many TV personalities are more interested in making impressions than in making news.

Challenge seen for term limits

If the advance polls were accurate, Michigan joined the national termlimitation movement in Tuesday's election but Proposal B still may not permanently authorize term limits for members of Congress.

Why not?

Because legal scholars contend that the measure would be unconstitutional under a Supreme Court decision that ruled the U.S. Constitution set only three qualifications for membership in Congress: age, citizenship and residency.

The Michigan proposal and those in 13 other states would add a fourth criteria — the length of terms — which could prove to be unconstitutional.

Those favoring term limits, however, claim that another constitutional provision gives states the right to establish the "times, places and manners" of holding elections.

However, no challenge would be likely until Proposal B becomes effective because the Supreme Court rarely takes a case until someone can claim injury.

If that is so, Michigan challengers apparently would have to wait for another six years to go to court. That is when the first limited terms for U.S. House members would expire.

Proponents plan to seek a U.S. constitutional amendment to limit terms, which would make moot any legal challenge and also answer a major criticism of Proposal B: that it would cost Michigan seniority and clout in Washington because many states do not yet impose limits. That would be an improvement.

In support of public schools To the Editor:

The Oct. 21 issue of the Grosse Pointe News carried a letter from a Farms resident, critical of Governor Clinton's education proposals, because they do not provide for public tax support for private and parochial schools.

My many years of professional experience in education and social welfare compel me to answer this gentleman's letter.

It is certainly true that many private and parochial schools are doing a fine job; it is not correct to imply that these schools necessarily turn out young people with better morals, ethical standards or even higher academic achievement.

The letter further indicates serious misunderstanding concerning local school funding.

Local public school districts receive tax money only for students enrolled in their schools by the fourth Friday count after Labor Day. They do not receive money for those enrolled in private and parochial schools.

As for vouchers, they are specifically outlawed by an amendment to the Michigan Constitution. Public support of private and religious-oriented schools is also prohibited by the establishment clause of the First Amendment of the U.S. Constitution, commonly known as the provision for separation of church and state. So far, these statutes have stood up in Supreme Court rulings, despite repeated onslaughts.

One can easily imagine the chaos and rancor if each of the many religious and political groups in our nation were to vie for public support for their separate schools.

There would not be much left in public school coffers.

More letters on page 8A Before buying into slogans as "privatizing," "competition" and some other quick-fixes for public school ills, let me urge readers to become acquainted with Jonathan Kozol's "Savage Inequalities; Children in America's " Schools" (Harper Perennial).

The real challenge to our 11 nation is to make improvement of public education a 14 major priority in order that we may provide equal opportunity to all our children.

To the Editor:

On Sunday, Oct. 25, Grosse Pointe Park celebrated the beautiful season of fall by having a wonderful event at Windmill Park – Harvest in the Fall.

The kids and grownups alike had a blast. What a super family event. We want to thank everybody who was responsible for this fun-filled day.

Anybody see a pot of gold?

It's amazing what Roy G. Biv can do.

On Monday, I felt about as sorry for myself as the withered jack-o-lanterns on my front porch looked.

I was behind on my deadlines, struggling with a story, and faced with the prospect of working late into the evening.

My umbrella broke so I got wet walking to work; I had a bad headache; and I still hadn't decided who to vote for in the presidential election.

I had to drop off some workrelated film at a one-hour processing center so I ventured outside about 4:30 p.m.

As I walked to my car, I saw two high school sweethearts standing in a somewhat-secluded nook, kissing in the rain.

Normally, I would have thought, "Oh, how romantic. What a tender moment. They'll probably remember this for the rest of their lives!"

But my headache had grown worse due to computer eyestrain and I heard myself thinking, "Oh, take it elsewhere." They did, when they saw me approaching, and I continued on my way to the parking lot.

I drove to a camera shop on Mack in Grosse Pointe Woods and dropped off my film. As I was leaving, I noticed through the glass front door that it looked eerie outside. The eastern sky was bluish-black, but everything else was brightly lit.

I opened the door, and that's when I saw it. A double rainbow. Perfectly arched and stretching from about Vernier to Torrey Road in Grosse Pointe Woods.

I forgot about my headache, the work I still had to do, the responsibility of picking the "future leader of the free world.'

All I knew was that there was a rainbow in the sky, and I had to tell someone.

With a new-found smile on my face, I walked back into the camera store, saw a lady looking at picture frames near the window, and said, "Excuse me, ma'am. There's a rainbow outside and I just thought you might like to know.'

She turned around, peered out the window, and said, "Well imagine that. And here I was oblivious to it. Thank you for telling me."

She smiled at me as if I had given her a special gift.

"I just felt like I needed to share it with someone," I said as I left, and she said she was glad I did. The rainbow was still there as I struggled to pull out of a cramped parallel parking space on Mack and then drove to Grosse Pointe Woods city hall to pick up a packet of information.

As I parked once again, a traffic announcer on the radio excitedly said she had just spotted a rainbow from her perch inside a helicopter that was hovering over I-94.

l entered city hall and waited in line behind a man who thought he was registered to vote in the Woods, but had just learned he wasn't.

He also had to pay a traffic ticket, he told the clerk.

As she went to pull his file, I asked if he had seen the rainbow, which was visible through the double glass doors.

His face lit up and he said, 'Yeah, I did. İsn't it beautiful?"

When the clerk came back, he told us both, "I have friends who have been out in the ocean right next to the end of a rainbow. You know how you're supposed to find gold and treasure at the end of the rainbow? Well they didn't find anything like that. But I heard it was really pretty.'

When I walked back outside, the rainbow was fading.

I wished I had brought my camera with me, so that I could have captured it.

But maybe their elusiveness is what makes rainbows so special.

I learned in elementary school that you can see the colors of the spectrum - red, orange, yallow, green, blue, indigo and violet (Roy G. Biv) when lightwaves are refracted through a prism.

In this case, the light was the setting sun, the prisms were the water droplets hanging in the air and the spectrum was the rainbow. But I couldn't help but think that maybe — just maybe the rainbow had some greater meaning.

I know it says in the Bible that God told Noah the rainbow was a reminder of His promise not to flood the Earth again.

But I mean a meaning besides that meaning.

Maybe the rainbow was a reflection of the happiness those two high school sweethearts shared as they stood kissing in the rain.

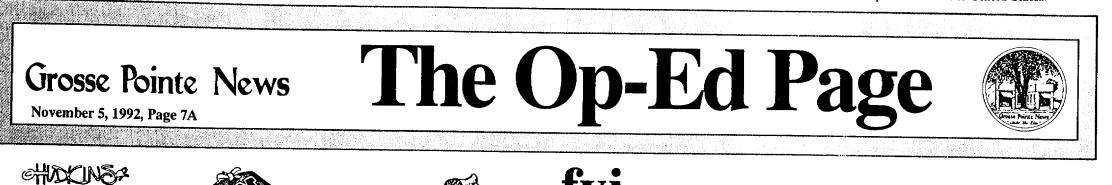

Or maybe it was a sign that the president voters would pick the next day would live up to his promises and lead the nation wisely.

Or maybe it was a sign that I would be able to leave work before 9 p.m.

When I got back to work I learned our printer had broken, putting everyone behind schedule.

So much for getting home at a respectable hour.

Better luck to the sweethearts, and the new president of the United States.

Polled to death

Even though just about everybody in the United States has had it up to here with polls and mock elections and prepresidential election predictions, the Grosse Pointe News' classified ad department maven, Julie Tobin of Grosse Pointe Farms, conducted her own personal unscientific, unorthodox, unbiased, unofficial poll last Thursday.

Results: Člinton, 13; Bush, 12; Perot, 6; Tobin, 1.

Tobin, opviously a write-in, Just for good measure, and other unscientific, unorthodox, unbiased unofficial poll was taken the next day, Friday.

The results were (drum roll): Clinton, 18; Bush, 12; Perot, 4; Tobin, 2.

The real election, however, was Tuesday and Tobin didn't get any votes.

Curst from the grave? It's the eerie case of the dis-

In 1863, during street repairs, the headstone was uncovered and workers refused to move Hickok because of the dire warning on his headstone.

Eventually, an illiterate digger was plied with spirits and persuaded to dig up Hickok and move the grave to Elmwood Cemetery. Is the headline-less article a curse from Nathaniel?

Leukemia Foundation seeks toys, gifts for cancer patients

The Children's Leukemia Foundation of Michigan (CLF) is in immediate need of donated, new toys for distribution to children and adults suffering from leukemia, lymphoma and other blood disorders.

CLF's annual toy drive provides gifts year-round to children, ages 2.15, in hospitals statewide who are undergoing painful treatment procedures. For the first time, CLF is seeking gifts for adult patients as well, ages 16-80, who must endure lengthy hospital stays. The program also provides toys for needy CLF families at the holidays.

of a bed or chair, or in a resting position. Items must be new and not gift-wrapped. Activity and crossword books, stuffed animals, videos, puzzles, puppets, dolls, action figures, novels, and table and card games all are appropriate gifts for adults and children in the hospital.

But the finished product last

"His headstone was engraved with these words: "Curst be he vou'll know who won the election. On Tuesday, as Peter and Tom and Dan were predicting and analyzing, the Grosse Pointe News was whirling through the presses.

So I'm writing blind. But let me try to guess. Not the national outcome, but Grosse Pointe's part in it.

Hmmm. On the one hand, in Grosse Pointe, Republicans typically outnumber Democrats two-to-one. On the other hand, this year's election is so unusual that that ratio may not hold

But, on the whole, I think Grosse Pointe has a passion for moderate programs, limited government and good schools. So the fearless forecast is:

Bush, narrowly;

'No" on the two tax limitation propositions;

Yes" on term limitations; And, just to be inconsistent, still another nod to Bill Bryant, the dean of the state House. It's a proven fact that term limits should only apply to someone else's legislator.

I'm not even going to try to guess how the car insurance proposal fared.

Every last one of the proposals was on the ballot because the state Legislature has failed to step up to its responsibilities. High property taxes and underfunded schools have been a hot debate issue for more years legislators have been unable to resolve it. No wonder people want to limit terms in office (although a bunch of neophytes every few years will probably not be skilled enough to do much better).

But it wouldn't be fair to say the Legislature hasn't been doing anything. Some of our elected officials have been working industriously to dethrone the robin and make the chickadee Michigan's state bird.

Chickadees are everybody's favorites. Chickadees are energetic, friendly, acrobatic. If you're patient, a chickadee will perch on your hand to get a sunflower seed. How could anyone fault a state rep who pushed aside the annoying pile of intractable tax papers on his desk in favor of dealing with chickadees?

So, it should be without surprise that I report that the chickadee bill has been introduced, is currently in committee, and is awaiting action. Soon after the House reconvenes today, you can expect it to be reported out. Committees sit on thorny issues like assisted suicide; they never sit on chickadees.

All I can say is, Uncle Con must be turning over in his grave.

Conrad Netting was an immigrant lad who made good. He came from Germany when he was 11, managed to learn pretty good English and a trade and eventually went into business for himself.

He married Grandma's sister Clara, a tall, elegantly thin, dignified lady, with a long, stylishly swanlike neck. She was very kind and very proper and not as much fun as Grandma, who laughed and went fishing four winds, so that every June the yard bloomed orange.

Uncle Con was dignified, too, and portly, as all successful gentlemen were in those days. He and Aunt Clara used to drive their big, black, expensive car to visit Grandma, and come next door to see the little Parmenter kids.

"He used to let me sit on his lap and play with his gold watch fob," Bob remembers. "The fob was a globe that opened in four parts – like a blooming flower.'

In the '20s, Uncle Con formed a land company that built workmen's homes and got himself elected to the Michigan House of Representatives, where he stayed until the day in the late '30s when he drove the big black car into a head-on collision on Telegraph Road. He was killed instantly, and Aunt Clara died a few minutes later, her beautiful long neck broken.

Conrad Netting may have served in the House for business or political or statesmanlike reasons. But the Parmenter kids knew him for one bill: Uncle Con made the robin Michigan's state bird.

"My mother told us about the robin every time he visited," Bob said. "The robin and the watch fob, that's what I remember.'

Back in August, I wrote with dismay about a growing trend for northern Michigan outdoors clubs to seek tax breaks for their huge properties. The trend has some dispiriting implications for schools there.

At the time, I singled out the Turtle Lake Club, whose Detroit-based membership wanted their 20,000 acres in four northern counties.

I'm happy to report that the club has dropped its appeal. The equalization director of Oscoda County was quoted as explaining that the appeal was started by a few club members, but that when the club board and general membership found out, they didn't want to pro-

Sounds like some interesting internal politics at Turtle Lake, but whatever the reason, they've done the right thing. There are some responsibilities that just shouldn't be shirked.

Readers are busy folks, and I've just had two letters to remind me that it's hard to get around to writing. Jerry Cohen of St. Clair Shores is happy that I mentioned the Detroit incinerator litigation. That was last summer, but the post office had a hand in the delay. Jerry's note gives me an opportunity to remind everyone again that the city is wasting a lot of money fighting when they could have just fixed it right.

Ken Van Dellen of the Park has done some thinking about a piece I wrote last winter. I'm darn glad he remembered it that long. I said then that Michigan is too flat to have any chasms, but Ken says there are nice gorges on the Sturgeon and Tahquamenon rivers and at Horserace Rapids. Mark 'em down for next summer's trips.

Thanks, guys. Keep those cards and letters coming.

Ideal toys/gifts for the program are those than can be played with within the confines

Cleminson appreciated

To the Editor:

Recently, the members of the Windmill Pointe chapter of Questers had the opportunity to tour Grosse Pointe South High School and learn firsthand about its fine architecture and what is being done to preserve and restore it.

Being an organization devoted to antiques, preservation and restoration, we are delighted that, under the auspices of the G.P.S. Mothers' Club, the newly formed Preservation and Restoration Committee has made such progress with the restoration of Cleminson Hall and has plans that go beyond the hall itself that we made a generous contribution to support their efforts.

We would like to thank the chairwoman of the committee, Tish Collett, Cynthia Warner and Judy Mathews for the tour and overview of the restoration in progress and plans for the future

Dr. Hoover's well researched slide program added to our appreciation of South's history also. We hope to encourage not only other Quester groups but the community in general to recognize South High as a historic landmark and seriously consider supporting their preservation and restoration efforts.

Weep not To the Editor: Weep not for Minnesota,

Wilbur — the Golden Go-phers shall rise again! Most of us can empathize with Wilbur Elston and his Minnesota team (Oct. 29, page 1C opinion), victims of a 63-13 score run-up by Michigan's Wolverines a couple of weeks ago.

We, too, have known the bitterness of big defeat which, tragically, seems to rub out memories of past glories.

But I remember well the golden era of the Golden Gophers under the golden touch of Coach Bernie Bierman. He and his teams put Michigan and the rest of the Big Ten through their Swedish meat grinder making Swedish meat balls for both hors d'oeuvres and main course, too.

My very first college game was Minnesota-Michigan at Ann Arbor. It was Bennie Oosterban's last game. Bennie, left end, couldn't match the cannonading of the Michigan line by the Gopher's fullbackimmortal Her Joesting who led his team to a 7-6 victory

The Bierman era, which at that time seemed to be a dynasty that would last forever, was impressed on me by college friend, Jerry Liska, who at that time headed the sports coverage of the northwest as sports editor for United Press out of its Minneapolis bureau. Every week Jerry's stories trumpeted the glories of the Gophers as they stomped the victim of the day.

Jerry, whose sports prose was positively lyrical, played end on the Golden Avalanche – Marquette University football teams of the mid-thirties, and was a friend and follower of Jimmy Powers, famed sports editor of the New York Daily News, whose style he unabashedly tried to imitate.

As to running up the score, most coaches refrain from this unpleasantry, because they know some day the vanquished will be the victor – and they, in turn, will need all the mercy they can get. In score-run-ning, I think Knute Rockne was the most decent coach I ever knew. Search the records. You'll find the scoring difference between a Rockne team and its opponent was rarely more than two or three touchdowns.

Personally I do not think Gary Moeller would pour it on a fine team like Minnesota. But when you go your second and third team depth you're playing fresh kids against tired opponents - fresh kids trying to impress so as to climb higher on the depth chart. I'm sure Moeller gleefully swamped the Houston Cougars and their lousy coach whose game-plan was to humiliate opponents to make Houston look mighty.

In my time at Marquette, Coach Lisle Blackbourn had his own way of controlling the score. Against Iowa State, and leading 42-6, he ordered his quarterback to try a field goal every time Marquette reached the Iowa 25 yard line.

One instance of deliberate score building was Ara Parsegian and his Notre Dame team one week after being tied 10-10 by Michigan State in their well-remembered 1966 game. Believing the tie would weaken his chances for a national championship, Parasegian tried to impress by destroying Southern Cal by running up 59 points. Incidentally, I hope Wilbur remembers that Michigan great Tom Harmon played against the Gophers three years straight - and never scored a point.

So don't cry for me, Argentina, or the Golden Gophers, Wilbur. They'll be back, maybe before you expect it.

And they'll be taking back home again "Jost's Yug," as the Minnesota trainer called it, in that very first game for the "Little Brown Yug.

Generous To the Editor:

Bravo!

I'd like to say thank you to four very generous restaurants on Mack Avenue. – Mack Ave. Diner, Silver Spoon, Golden Dragon and Parthenon East. Also, a special thanks to Noelle's Catering.

I was involved in a TasteFest Oct. 3 for the Northeast Guidance Center. The purpose of this event was to raise money and get baby items for the Infant Mental Health program of the Northeast Guidance Center. The above sponsors were generous enough to donate one of their specialty items to this event. This allowed us to make a larger donation to this important cause.

The Assistance League to the Northeast Guidance Center is dedicated to raising funds for this community mental health organization and with all the budget cuts suffered by these agencies it is of the utmost importance that we provide all the support we

MichCon invites students to create awareness posters

Michigan Consolidated Gas Co. (MichCon) wants talented local students to put their artistic skills to work designing posters which promote natural gas awareness and energy conservation. Twelve outstanding posters will be selected, earning the student artists both U.S. Savings Bonds and the possibility of competing in state competition.

"October is National Energy Awareness Month," said Cheryl Allen-Williams of the MichCon Education Programs Department. "The MichCon poster contest offers students and teachers from public, private and parochial schools in our service area a way to observe energy awareness through a classroom experience.'

Now in its eighth year, the MichCon Poster Contest will reward winners with first-, second- and third-place prizes in four categories: K-3rd grades; 4-6th grades; 7-9th grades; and 10-12th grades. All students in special education and kindergarten through grade 12 in schools located within MichCon service area are eligible to participate.

Designs should be original artwork, although chalk, charcoal and pencil may not be used. Copyrighted characters and commercial brand names also are prohibited.

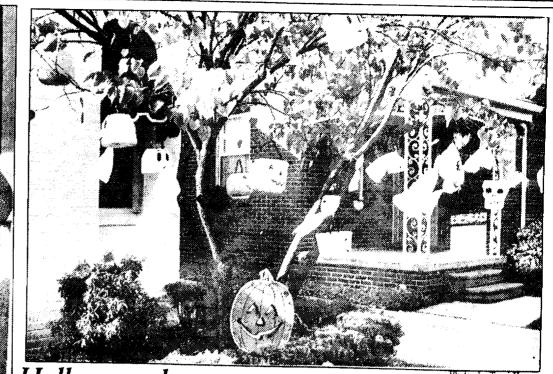

All entries must be received by December 18, 1992 at the Art Education Office, 842 Schools Center Building, 5057 Woodward Ave., Detroit, Mich. 48202 or at your local MichCon customer business office.

Posters should promote natural gas conservation or the importance of natural gas as an energy resource. All entries will be judged by a panel of artists, conservationists and community representatives on originality, neatness and artistic flair.

Twelve winning designs will be selected from each of two Detroit-area districts: Detroit and Northeastern Wayne County and Southern and Western Wayne County. From these 24 winning designs, 12 will be selected to represent the Detroit area in competition with other MichCon service areas. U.S. Savings Bonds will be awarded to the top three finishers in each category at each step of the competition. Three designs will be selected from all of the statewide winners and the artists will receive a U.S. Savings Bond.

For more detailed information contact Cheryl Allen-Williams at (313) 256-5123.

Local students are given chance to study abroad

Qualified high school students are offered a unique opportunity to spend an academic year or summer holiday in Scandinavia, Germany, France, Italy, Switzerland, Britain, Holland, Spain, Czechoslovakia, Portugal, Poland, Japan, Mexico, Australia, New Zealand or Canada (French or English speaking) as part of the ASSE International Student Exchange Program, according to Corinne Channing, midwestern regional director of ASSE. Until a few years ago, only a fortunate few could afford to spend a school year or summer abroad. Now, ASSE has changed all that," said Channing.

A parent's time will be your child's favorite gift

Call it "The Time Trap."

A new survey reveals almost two-thirds of today's parents believe one parent should stay home with pre-school-age children no matter what. But only one-third can afford the time to do so.

More than 1,000 parents from across America were surveyed by Independent Order of Foresters, a not-for-profit fraternal organization, and Baby Talk magazine, the nation's oldest baby magazine, to gain insight about the time vs. money dilemma that new parents face.

Sixty-one percent of the parents said that if you can make ends meet, one parent should stay home with pre-school-age children no matter what. Another 31 percent said it would be nice to have one parent stay home, but not if it means cutting out all the extras from the family budget. Only 35 percent of the two-parent families surveyed were able to get by on one income.

"For a child, love is spelled T-I-M-E," says motivational speaker and author Zig Ziglar, who advocates that investments of time and energy in the early years will pay "dividends of love and enjoyment in later vears.

The surveyed parents agreed. If money was not a concern, 35 percent would not work and stay home with the children indefinitely. Another 25 percent would not work and would stay home with the children until they entered pre-school.

"The Time Trap's" culprit is family finances, not career satisfaction. Only 22 percent of the families surveyed have both parents working just to fulfill their needs of stimulation and satisfaction that work brings to their lives.

Different women have developed different strategies to cope with "The Time Trap." Some women choose to work parttime. Another solution is to own your own business, either working out of your home or setting up your own hours at the office.

If you do have to work fulltime, stress expert and IOF Foresters parenting consultant Dr. Richard Earle offers another suggestion:

"Plan for special times together with your family and make sure to set aside time for yourself. Make a point of scheduling these times into your weekly activities.

"Juggling the demands of family and working life is one of the leading causes of stress today. Parents who try to do it all often feel irritable, tired, anxious and tense.'

A "Managing Family Stress Kit" by Earle is offered free by the IOF Foresters. For the free kit, call the IOF Foresters tollfree Better Parenting Line at 1-800-922-4-IOF.

Video-equipped police cars To the Editor:

Thank you for giving credit to officer George Bloomfield in a recent paper for his alertness in spotting and then chasing the stolen mini-van; it was  $_{\rm T}$  well deserved and overdue. As you stated, St. Clair Shores police were given an incredible amount of publicity and credit in both  $_{\sigma_{0}}$  Detroit papers and the TV and radio media. We all have to agree officers Robert Chester and Jason Brown and Sgt. David Pietrzak of the St. Clair Shores police deserved every bit of the credit and praise they received. A lot of credit also must be given to the city of St. Clair Shores and the officials in the St. Clair Shores police department, including inspector Fred Marengo for initiating the use of video cameras in the patrol cars. One of the reasons we all live in the Pointes is our excellent police departments: their effectiveness, efficiency, and rapid response time. Their ever presence and inter-Pointe cooperation give us all a peace of mind and comfort/ safety level that few communities can boast about.

While we all own and use video cameras, the first use of a video camera in a patrol car, that I heard about, was the January 1991 case of a Texas policeman given a video camera for Christmas, on his own, he mounted it in his patrol car. On a routine traffic stop three men overpowered him, took his gun, shot him and stuffed his body into the trunk of their car and drove away, leaving the unmanned patrol car with its video camera still rolling. The video tape helped convict them of murder

For our officers to give us the best possible protection they must have the best possible equipment. After having watched the St. Clair Shores videotape on TV, I checked with the Grosse Pointe Farms police department to see if we had the cameras or planned to have them in the near future. Public Safety Director Robert Ferber told me that we do not have them. He has investigated the use of cameras, has sent officer Brian Bililski to study the use of the cameras in St. Clair Shores and acknowledged he would love to see cameras in all patrol cars, however, being realistic, he stated that there are no funds in the budget, and, based on budgetary constraints and the annual review process, there may not be funds available for cameras anytime soon. I have attended nearly every city council meeting for the last three years and have watched the council try to squeeze the last nickle out of every budget. They are frugal, and as a taxpayer I am thankful. But I believe we could and should have cameras in our patrol cars. If St. Clair Shores can do it we should be able to find a way. I could not help but be impressed watching the chase on TV as Bill Bonds said, "It looked like a Hollywood production."

With my interest aroused, not only did I check with Director Ferber, I also checked with Judge Rumora, Inspector Marengo of the St. Clair Shores police, Mothers Against Drunk Driving and Crim-Tek, for the suppliers of the cameras and others.

Judge Rumora favors the use of the camera, stating that it would result in more guilty pleas, thus saving court time and court costs.

Inspector Marengo talked at great length praising the benefits of the cameras, many of which I will discuss later. One unique approach St. Clair Shores has to fighting drunk driving (DUIL) is not only to charge drunk drivers criminally but to also charge them civilly for costs video taping, processing, etc. - with the videotape as evidence, most lawyers advise their clients that they might as well plead guilty.

Crim-Tek sent me background literature as well as testimonial letters from sheriffs and chiefs of police from around the nation. The testimonials were so impressive and so conclusive, I am completely sold on these cameras. I wish there were space for them to be reprinted here; however, I realize space is limited.

The cameras are equipped with a long distance wireless remote microphone that produces a clear crisp sound track even while the officer is outside of the patrol car. They produce excellent ouality video, are tamperproof, have continually running date/time stamping, visual indications of when and if overhead lights and sirens are turned on and radar capabilities. They are even explosion-proof and fully hold up as legal evidence in court.

Mothers Against Drunk Driving (MADD) also sent me reams of literature which bestow the benefits of the cameras and also included testimonials. MADD is in favor of us using the cameras and is willing to support us with our program. Across the nation MADD has made many donations for cameras; at its November meeting they will consider making a donation to Grosse Pointe

Farms. I believe we, as residents, community organizations and businesses, can collectively raise the money to put cameras in all the cars in all the Pointes. There has been a lot of positive talk lately concerning "futurism." There has always been a tradition of cooperation between all Pointes. With "futurism," I fully expect that we will have more extensive cooperation between all Pointes, especially on the purchase, use and even couse of equipment.

The more cameras we buy at one time the cheaper they become. My goal is to have all the Pointes purchase their cameras at one time to obtain the maximum savings per unit. I would like to take this opportunity to challenge the concerned citizens of each of the Pointes to put together a fundraising campaign for their respective communities.

I read recently that Grosse Pointe Park Foundation was looking for worthy projects. I think a little friendly competition between our communities will energize each of us to support our local police departments — who in turn protect us. The collective success of this program will further demonstrate to our local officials that we support their efforts for "futurism" with further cooperation between our communities.

I am certainly willing to meet with and share my information with any residents of the Pointes who are interested in getting cameras in their police cars.

I want to take this opportunity to ask the residents of the Farms:

1) Would you like to see video cameras in our patrol cars?

2) Would you be willing to become involved in a fundraising effort. You can either call your director of public safety, or your city manager, or me at 886-6003.

News 10th Amendment addresses power of federal government vs. states

This is the 14th in a series of articles about the Bill of Rights, courtesy of the Commission of the Bicentennial of the U.S. Constitution.

Like the Ninth Amendment, the Tenth Amendment was included in the Bill of Rights to address the concerns of those who were apprehensive that the new national or federal government created by the Constitution was too powerful.

Thus, the Tenth Amendment makes clear that the federal government is a government of limited, delegated powers: "The powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution, nor prohibited by it to the States, are reserved to the States respectively, or to the people.'

In drafting this provision, the framers sought to preserve the idea that the federal government was a government of limited powers without stating the limitation so strictly that the government would be paralyzed.

Under the Articles of Confederation, the national government was severely weakened by a clause which provided that "(e)ach state retains its sovereignty, freedom, and independence, and every power, jurisdiction, and right, which is not .... expressly delegated to the United States.<sup>4</sup>

If some opponents of a strong national government had had their way, the Tenth Amendment would also have limited the federal government to powers "expressly delegated" to it by the Constitution.

During debate on the proposed amendments, however, Congressman James Madison of Virginia argued that "it was impossible to confine the government to the exercise of express power; there must necessarily be admitted powers by implication. . . .'

Although Madison's view prevailed, not everyone was convinced of the correctness of his position, and some members of Congress feared that the federal government would use its power to weaken or destroy the State governments.

In two dramatic incidents during the early years of the Republic, states attempted to assert their sovereignty by declaring acts of Congress unconstitutional

In 1798, the Congress enacted the Alien and Sedition Acts, which operated to stifle the rising political opposition of the Jeffersonian Republicans. In response, with the assistance of James Madison and Thomas Jefferson, Virginia and Kentucky passed resolutions declaring the Alien and Sedition Acts unconstitutional and affirming the authority of the states to make independent judgments concerning the constitutionality of federal legislation.

Other states failed, however, to follow suit, and the challenge abated when the Alien and Sedition Acts expired in 1801

In 1832, led by Vice President John C. Calhoun, South Carolina passed an ordinance that declared the federal protective tariffs of 1828 and 1832 "unauthorized by the Constitution" and therefore "null, void, and no law, nor binding upon this State, its officers or citizens.'

The nullification crisis was resolved when Congress passed a compromise bill that gradually phased out the high tariffs that South Carolinians found so objectionable.

While these and other political challenges to federal supremacy were being raised, the Supreme Court established two crucial legal principles: first, that federal law was supreme to state law and, second, that the federal government had certain implied powers that were not specifically enumerated in the Constitution.

The first of these principles expressly set forth in Article VI of the Constitution, which declares that the Constitution, laws, and treaties of the United States "shall be the supreme Law of the Land" - was given practical application in such cases as Ware v. Hylton, 3 U.S. (3 Dall.) 199 (1796), in which the Supreme Court struck down a Virginia statute that conflicted with the 1783 Treaty of Peace between the United States and Great Britain, and Dartmouth College v. Woodward, 17 U.S. (4 Wheat.) 518 (1819), in which the court ruled that Dartmouth College's colonial charter was a contract, and that New Hampshire's attempt to revise the original college charter violated the command in Article I, section 10 of the Constitution that "(n)o State shall ... pass any ... Law impairing the Obligation of Contracts.

The principle that the federal government was a government of implied as well as express powers was set forth in cases such as M'Culloch v. Maryland, 17 U.S. (4 Wheat.) 316 (1819), in which the Supreme Court ruled that Congress had the authority to exercise a power not expressly set forth in the Constitution - the power to create a national bank — under its general authority in Article I, section 8, "(t)o make all Laws which shall be necessary and proper. . .

In M'Culloch, the court specifically rejected the argument that the Tenth Amendment limited the federal government's authority to powers that were "expressly" delegated in the Constitution, noting that "(t)he men who drew and adopted th(e) (Tenth) amendment had experienced ... embarrassments resulting from the insertion of this word in the articles of confederation, and probably omitted it to avoid those embarrassments.

Even after these decisions, advocates of "state sovereignty" continued their assaults on the Community Foundation for Southeastern Michigan have selected the Neighborhood Club as one of the recipients of a grant from the Van Dusen Endowment Challenge program.

Established in October 1991 £3 and named after the late corporate and civic leader and Kresge Foundation Trustee Richard C. Van Dusen, the probr gram has thus far awarded grants to nine Southeastern Michigan organizations. 11

Through the Van Dusen Endowment Challenge program, The Kresge Foundation and Community Foundation award permanent endowment funds on a 1 to 3 challenge basis. Upon the successful completion of a $100,000 endowment campaign the Neighborhood Club will recieve an additional $33,000

In order to meet grant requirements, lead gifts totaling $10.000 payable by Feb. 1. 1993, have been pledged. The $100,000 goal must be reached by Nov. 1, 1995

To accomplish this, the Neighborhood Club will conduct a community-wide endowment fund campaign. Contributions made payable by Dec. 31, 1992, to Community Foundation for Southeastern Michigan/ Neighborhood Club Endowment Fund may be eligible for the State of Michigan Community Foundation Tax Credit. This credit may be extended for 1993 and 1994. Further information is available at the Neighborhood Club.

"The awarding of this grant is very exciting both for the Neighborhood Club and the Grosse Pointe area," said John Bruce, the Neighborhood Club's

The Kresge Foundation and executive director. "It's a recognition of the Neighborhood Club's contribution to and continuing interest in maintaining the quality of life in our community.

> The Neighborhood Club is a unique, non-profit organization with strong board leadership and community support that has provided a broad range of services to the Grosse Pointe area for 81 years. Programs include a nursery school, a senior adult center, computer classes, fitness activities and sport leagues for children and adults.

> "Funds from this grant will be utilized to emphasize the need for volunteers and to improve educational programs for community volunteer coaches, Bruce said. "Committed and trained volunteers are essential to the continued operation of community youth programs.

"Last year more than 750 volunteers coached 538 Neighborhood Club teams with 6,200 players. Other community leagues were supported by an additional 600 volunteer coaches for 4,000 more players. One of our objectives is to coordinate and publicize educational programs for all coaches in our area. We are also dedicated to strengthening the recruitment of volunteer coaches from high school age to senior adults."

As soon as the initial $10,000 is paid, the Community Foundation will provide annual operating grants for the next three years for the volunteer program equivalent to the endowment income of $5,000.

"The good we can accomplish through this grant reaches well into the future," Bruce said. "We hope the rest of the community will share our excitement and support us in our campaign to raise the necessary funds.

The most recent grantees of the Van Dusen Endowment Challenge grant besides the Neighborhood Club are the Eton Academy of Birmingham, the Hospice of Southeastern Michigan and the Livingston County Catholic Social Services. The first group of five recipients included the Founders Society of the Detroit Institute of Arts and the Detroit Symphony Orchestra.

Libraries seek children's books

Last year, more than 1,300 young children received new story books donated by Grosse Pointe library patrons, local school and church groups and local book stores through the Detroit Free Press Gift of Reading drive.

The Grosse Pointe public libraries are hoping to collect even more books this year to help meet growing requests from Head Start programs, homeless shelters and social service agencies.

The three branches will collect new story books suitable for children under 7 from Nov. 21 through Dec. 9.

Cash and checks will be collected at the circulation desks and will pay for books purchased early by the Free Press. The Free Press will distribute the books to needy youngsters through public and private social service agencies.

To celebrate the joy of giving and the love of reading, the Friends of the Grosse Pointe Public Library will hold a Gift of Reading Book Send-Off at the Central Library at 4 p.m. on Dec. 9. Individuals and community groups collecting Gift of Reading books are invited to add their books to those collected at the libraries and enjoy holiday songs and stories and an official 'thank you' from the Free Press.

Complaint filed in theater tiff

city of Grosse Pointe Monds Michigan

An employee of a theater in Grosse Pointe Woods filed an assault complaint with the Woods public safety department after a man threw a metal stand at one of the building's glass doors.

The man was upset that his female companion, who was in a wheelchair, couldn't see a certain movie because it was playing on the second floor, which is not wheelchair accessible, the employee said.

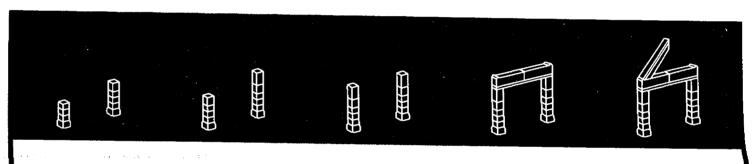

She said the man and woman entered the theater about 5:15 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 10, and that when they tried to buy tickets to a second-floor movie, they were told that only the lower-level viewing room is wheelchair accessible. The theater will soon install wheelchair lifts in compliance with the Federal Disabilities Act, she said she told the man.

He then asked her if theater personnel would carry the woman up the stairs, and the employee said they couldn't do so because of insurance reasons.

She said he asked her to call the police, and she said she refused because she wasn't the one who had the complaint he was.

That's when the man threw the stand at the door.

The glass didn't break and the man and his companion left the building. The employee filed an assault complaint the next day.

To Chincoteague and back in a Geo Prizm

By Jenny King Special Writer

14A

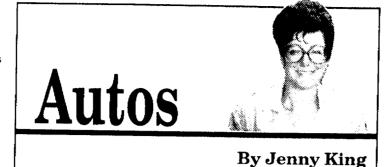

"Carlisle!" was printed in ink on the calendar's Oct. 3 square. The following week was blocked off by a wavy pencil line. It should have read "Chincoteague," but that was understood because after only four years the island off the Del-MarVa Peninsula - Virginia's Eastern Shore and the righthand side of the Chesapeake Bay – has become an early-October tradition.

Like the migrating birds, we are drawn to its sister island, Assateague, for refreshment in life's journey. Unlike the birds, who continue on to points south, we must head northwest at the end of the shortest week of the year, to face the coming rigors of winter and prepare to mark next year's calendar with a thin line through several days in early October.

This year, though, we had the steady companionship of Chevrolet's only re-designed passenger car in production, the 1993 Geo Prizm. (A dramatic new Camaro bows the (first of next year as a 1993.) The rounded, red compact sedan provided adequate, comfortable and very economical transportation over the 1,400 miles to Chincoteague and back. A journey that included Carlisle, Pa., and its annual October collectors meet as an important stop, according to the calendar.

The bold, inked "Carlisle," it turned out, was a ruse. Not exactly an excuse for combining business with pleasure, but something like that. This eastern haven of car nuts, which draws thousands of collectors each spring and autumn, is a must for auto writers and enthusiasts.

Marty Bufalini, Gari Kersten and probably dozens of other Grosse Pointers plan their lives around either Carlisle, or Hershey the following week. Kersten and his buddies hit them both with a caravan of motor homes that almost certainly earn their other appellation, rec vehicles (pronounced "wreck"), before the 10 or so days are up.

Our concept was great, our planning poor. We left Detroit promptly at 9:17 a.m. on Saturday, Oct. 3, and headed straight for south central Pennsylvania. The Prizm pulled off the turnpike around 6 p.m. and we thrust ourselves into evening rush hour. Everyone was going in the opposite direction, so we figured we must be headed toward the fields of dreams

Wrong. We never found a meet or show; we never spotted a flea market, except what looked like one just as we were exiting the turnpike. We didn't encounter much of anything except a long line of vehicles moving slowly against us, and several older cars parked on lawns with For Sale signs in their windows, presumably to lure less diligent buyers or anyone wanting a quick '50s fix.

Our energies and enthusiasm ebbed. We refused to ask directions to the meet and had no paucity of excuses for not staying on course until we found it. We drove through the impressive campus of Dickinson College and found ourselves back out in the country. Enough, we declared. We tried. Let's head east to York and hope that somewhere along the way there are accommodations on a classic meet weekend.

There were - in Baltimore. Glen Burnie, to be precise, on the south side of the soft-shell crab capital and not too far from Annapolis, where we re-parked the Prizm Sunday morning just in time for service at St. Anne's. This venerable Episcopalian congregation happened to be honoring its 300th birthday on Oct. 4, and we were proud to join in the celebration

But Chincoteague was calling, as it always does on the second day of this trip, and after mistakenly leaving a Visa card at the Treasures of the British Isles shop, we hurried across the breathtaking bridge that spans the bay near Annapolis and dumps one out onto the DelMarVa peninsula. Heading south on U.S. 50, we raced along the four-lane, grass-divided highway toward Easton and Princess Anne, on to Salisbury and then down U.S. 13 to the turn-off for Chincoteague.

A distant colleague, Al Haas, wrote about making this excursion recently, except he made the trek down U.S. 50 in a new Cadillac Allante. Al writes about autos for the Philadelphia Enquirer, and apparently makes the trip to the famous ocean islands more than once a year. He loved the Allante and hates U.S. 50. We don't mind the highway, with its traffic lights and plethora of roadside markets overflowing with bright orange pumpkins and rows of dig-your-own chrysanthemums.

And we enjoyed the Prizm. Even this base model, which at around $10,000 is a very affordable alternative to other small sedans. It is Geo's version of the Toyota Corolla, which is the largest selling car in the world. It is not hard to see why.

The earlier Prizm design, with sharper lines, was more cramped inside, especially for back-seat passengers. The revised version has an aero-style, rounded instrument panel, comfortable front bucket seats and good visibility. It is roomier by seven cubic feet and has a driver-side airbag. The rear seat is split and folds for convenient "pass-through" from trunk into the passenger compartment.

The engine is a dainty 108horsepower 1.6-liter four; ours came with a smooth threespeed automatic. While acceptable, it doesn't have much oomph for getting on the freeway in a hurry or trying to pass another vehicle.

Chevrolet spokeswoman Nancy Libby said a 1.8-liter dual overhead-cam engine offers a much peppeir 115-horsepower version. Other transmissions include a five-speed manual and more sophisticated four-speed automatic. Fourwheel anti-lock brakes are optional.

EPA mileage figures for the Prizm are 28 mpg city and 33 highway with manual transmission; 25/29 with automatic. For the more powerful 1.8-liter engine, the figures are even better; 28/34 with manual and 26/33 with automatic.

Our driving style, combining mostly highway and some stopand go, yielded over 30 mpg. With a 13-gallon tank, that adds to infrequent re-fueling stops; we found other excuses urges for chocolate, heeding the calls of nature, the necessity of shopping the world's best outlet center (Chesapeake Mall, about 15 minutes over the Bay Bridge on the peninsula), and the compelling search for a chopped liver sandwich (Wall Street Deli at said mall).

Chincoteague Island, for all its renown from Marguerite Henry's beloved children's book, "Misty of Chincoteague," is far from glamorous. Our first visit in 1988 had us wondering, seriously about the glowing descriptions in the guide books. Passing the impressive NASA Visitors Center and the fencedin area with runways and multiple huge white receiving dishes of the NASA Wallops Island/Goddard Space Flight Center, we headed across Mosquito. Creek on Virginia Route 175. through the mixture of grass, bog and water where so much fishing and clamming is done, up over a short, steep drawbrige and found ourselves in the center of a white-washed, weather-worn town with scores of taffy-and-T-shirt shops, seafood restaurants, a modest post office and the Island Roxy theatre where Monday is bargain night.

It wasn't until the following day that we discovered the real.

RaRa

The RaRa 10. Toyota's solar-powered single-seat racing car, uses crystalline silicon solar cells and nickelzinc battery power to attain speeds up to 75 mph. Its carbon-fiber monocoque body weighs just over 350 pounds. A belt transfers power from the brushless DC motor to the rear wheels, Toyota says. In 1990, Toyota developed the RaRa II to serve an an escort vehicle in marathons and other road races.

beauty of Chincoteague: it's Assateague. This companion island lies across a narrow channel and, thank goodness (and our tax dollar), is protected by the federal government. Harbored on the long, thin, everchanging mound of sand and soil, sweet gum and pine trees, bushes and wild flowers are resident and transient birds, deer, billions of insects and the famous Chincoteague ponies. The beach on the Atlantic side is nothing less than awesome. Over the last 12 months it also was awful, with two nor'easters and a third heavy storm working to destroy the man-made conveniences of steps and benches atop the dunes along the shore, and uprooting and re-locating whole sections of the paved bike trails perhaps 100 feet inland.

People on Chincoteague said there was water in the streets, but no serious flooding on the motel-filled island. This past summer, they said, had been cooler and less satisfying than in other years when weekend traffic is thick and motorists who drive over to Assateague have to wait a long time to get into the parking lots at the beach.

By late September, however, the beach is almost deserted and many of the motels have closed down. Fortunately, the restaurants stay open and this year the crab cakes, scallops and shrimp steamed and served in the shell were better than ever.

If you have read this far in the story, you deserve a reward, and here it is: intimate AJ's on the Creek, on Maddox road, and the barn-like restaurant at the Landmark within view of the drawbridge are two superb places to dine on Chincoteague.

The best place to stay appears to be the Refuge Motor Inn, also on Maddox and a pleasant walk away from Assateague Island. This two-story complex has a '60s, back-to-nature feel about it, to wit, signs ask guests not to bring their bikes into their quarters, and each second-floor room has its own bird feeder.

Now that we've divulged our treasured travel secrets, we hasten to add that the new Prizm, built in California by NUMMI, the General Motors-Toyota joint-venture, is worth considering as an affordable small sedan featuring standard driver-side airbag, a longer wheelbase and greater interior room than the first generation Prizm.

Car-deer crashes hit all time high in Michigan

An all-time high of 48,233 car-deer crashes with seven fatalities and 1,732 injuries were reported on state roads last year, a 5 percent increase over 1990, AAA Michigan reports.

The 1990 tally was 45,945 crashes in which one person died and 1,957 suffered injuries. In 1989, the previous peak year, there were 46,784 reported crashes with six deaths and 1,857 injuries.

Car-deer crashes are not strangers to Michigan. There are thousands every year, and they're increasing in number. They happen throughout the year, most occurring during fall and early winter months. Last year, 18,001 were recorded during October and November, 31.6 percent of the yearly total. This year an estimated 760,000 firearm deer hunters are expected to take to the woods between Nov. 15-30, adding to the normal traffic flow and tourist travel.

And, sadly, the car-deer crash story will be repeated. But anyone, not just hunters, can be involved in such accidents. Ironically, the size of the herd was 1.7 million last year, down from the peak year of 1989 when the herd numbered 2 million strong. This year's deer numbers are projected at 1.75 million.

"Last year was tough," said Jerry Basch, AAA Michigan's community safety services manager, of the seesaw statistics. "The controlling factors are many — food availability, weather, size of herd and, most importantly, traffic volumes.

"A look at the southern tiers of counties shows this. There may be fewer deer per square mile than you'd find in the Upper Peninsula, but the number of car-deer crashes is uniformly high because there are more roads and more vehicles on those roads. In short, the fewer number of deer stands a greater chance of being hit." Last year, the top five counties in the number of car-deer crashes reported were Kent with 1,662; Calhoun, 1,363; Montcalm, 1,239; Jackson, 1,222; and Menominee in the Upper Peninsula, 1,117.

The fewest number of such crashes were recorded in the U.P. counties of Keweenaw with 16; Luce, 132; Houghton, 164; Gogebic, 172; and Alger, 192.

While there is no reasonable way to eliminate all car/deer crashes because of the unpredictability of the animal, AAA Michigan advises motorists to always wear safety belts and heed the following tips:

• Car-deer crashes most often occur on paved local and county roads, although freeway motorists are not exempt.

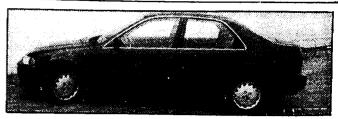

• The hours just before dawn and just after dusk are the most likely times to have deer move from area to area.

• If you see a deer, drive slowly, and assume that others are nearby.

• If you should approach a deer in the road, do not take unsafe evasive action. It is usually safer to strike the deer than another object, such as a tree or other vehicle.

• Be aware of eyes reflecting from your headlights. Drive at a speed that allows you to brake safely if you spot a deer.

• Should you strike one, report it to local or county police authorities. Also, to your insurance company. Repair bills for car-deer crashes generally average $1,300 per car. If you choose to keep a deer you hit, first get a permit from the police department or Department of Natural Resources.

Bowing earlier this year, the re-designed Honda Civic sedan has captured the new "in" look with its morerounded front end and raised rear deck lid. Available in three models, DX, LX and EX, the '93 Civic sedan is a pleasant package that includes excellent interior room comfortable front bucket seats plus a wide rear seat with plenty of leg room - coupled with a pleasing, seamless design with good fit and finish. Our EX model had neat, hardy gray tweed upholstery that looked like it could stand up to anything. Front-seat headrests extend from a single molded arm and are not adjustable, causing some visibility problems when backing up. The EX features a quietly efficient 1.6-liter 125-horsepower four; the base sedan has a 1.5-liter 102-horsepower four. Expect 29 mpg city/25 mpg highway with the larger four and 5-speed manual. The EX is tagged at $15,100; automatic transmission pushes it to $15,850. The base DX model starts at $11,055.

Exotic locales, old standbys beckon off-season vacationer

Vacation is just a memory low, something to look forward to for next year. That's the world of work.

For retirees this time limitation doesn't necessarily apply. They can not only travel when t pleases them, they can vacation in the off-season when plane tickets are cheaper and hotel rates are reduced. But here is a rub here, also. The tight budget of many retirees limits their travel even at bargain prices. It's the old Catch-22 - if you have the money, you don't have the time and if you have the time, you don't have the money. Then there are those fenced in by inflationary prices who have neither the time nor the money.

For all of these "I wish I could" travelers, why not do just that - wish.

Gardeners have done it for years. With just enough space for tomatoes, beans and cucumbers, they read seed catalogs all during the long winter months, wishing they had room for any number of the new untried varieties of flowers and vegetables. Never mind that growing space is limited and the time and expense of caring for hybrids is beyond their reach. They enjoy playing the botanical Walter Mitty role.

Besides, they enjoy the vicarious fun of choosing what variety is best for the growing conditions of their particular locations and are most adept at figuring space. So much for horticulture. It's only mentioned as an example for would-be travelers.

Why not read about those

Ne have the first this speciali

faraway places with strangesounding names, as well as the nearby locales with familiar names? You may never make a trip to see them, but you certainly will end up having a broader base to choose from when it comes time to plan your real trip. You will know the best time, the best and most reasonable accommodations and whether the area offers the diversions and recreation you seek.

You might even begin reading up on a journey you would never think of making. Think of the relief when you finish your make-believe expedition and can say, "Thank goodness, I'll never get caught doing that!" At the same time, you admit that for some it would be a fun trip.

For instance, there are those who would be less-than-thrilled with the prospect of traveling in an 18-foot inflated raft on the Tutshenshini River in the Yukon territory, a river that runs down a mountain slope through northwestern British Columbia and Alaska's Glacier Bay National Monument to the Pacific. Yet seven times in the summer, a different group of 18 climb into four separate rafts to travel the rough waters, sleep in sleeping bags and tents and enjoy the camaraderie of camping and viewing the awesome scenery. These adventurers come in all ages. On one of the trips, the youngest was a 9year-old boy. The oldest was a 76-year-old man.

As rugged as shooting the rapids in the Yukon can be in the framework of exciting vacations, it would be difficult to match a photo safari in Africa. If you have that yen, there is an 18-day itinerary that takes in the game rich areas of East Africa such as Masa and Ambosellie. East Africa is still abundant with game. You can see elephants, lions and herds of impala, zebra, gazelles and more. The travel vehicles are so designed that everybody has an opportunity for hundreds of great pictures. Each person has a window seat, and the vehicles have roof hatches to enable photographers to stand.

Adventure and excitement are a good combination if you are just doing some armchair traveling, but in the real world, up, Power Windows,

Florida might well be an alternative, especially after reading the dire predictions of a snowy, cold winter this year.

If you are driving, then you might like to plan an itinerary that will keep you moving and one that will put you in touch with other attractions besides sunning yourself on the beach.

With 8,000 miles of coastline. it is possible to visit not only the most popular attractions, such as Disney World, but lesser-known spots, such as St. Augustine, the site of the Ponce de-Leon Fountain of Youth, or Ravine Gardens to view 85 acres of azaleas, camellias and roses in bloom.

Going south, you could visit EPCOT Center at Disney World, if you haven't already done so. You might also enjoy NASA's Kennedy Space Center nearby. You can reach it after seeing EPCOT by heading toward the coast on I-4 and the Bee Line Expressway.

If you enjoy a driving vacation, you might like to travel across the country to the Pacific Coast. Along the way you can see the scenic wonder of the West.

California, unlike Florida, offers every kind of weather you can imagine. It is 700 miles long, and you will find raging coasts, snow-covered mountains, lofty redwoods, deserts, vineyards, orchards, big cities, small towns, fog and smog.

The best introduction to California is to begin with San Francisco. Follow the 49-mile scenic drive which passes by the best views, from the posh mansions of Pacific Heights to the mossy gravestones of Civil War heroes in the Presidio military base to the breathtaking Golden Gate Bridge.

Some of the stops you will Wharf, still a working wharf town, the world's largest many of the city's ethnic groups live, work and shop.

A fascinating city, San Francisco is difficult to leave, but there are many attractions beyond the borders awaiting the intrepid traveler, such as the

'ULS did a lot in getting me ready for college.'

ULS Class of '91 Entered ULS in First-Grade, 1979 Sophomore, Duke University

At University Liggett School, we take great pride not only in our outstanding record of college placement, but also, in the preparation we provide to assure our graduates' academic success in college.

Sam Khatib entered ULS as a first-grader in 1979. This year, he is a sophomore in the liberal arts program at Duke University. Sam maintained a 3.3 GPA in his first year at Duke, where he also was an avid participant in intramural sports. Sam found a high level of work and considerable academic pressure at Duke, but says. "ULS did a lot in getting me ready for college. The adjustment to college work was not as tough for me as for some of my friends who came from public schools."

ULS seeks students who. like Sam Khatib, want a serious college preparatory experience. We also welcome families interested in the finest quality education for their pre-school, lower school or middle school child. The Flintstones float, fashioned by the Grosse Pointe North High School senior class, featuring the modern stone-age family, won first place during 1992 homecoming festivities on Oct. 24. This year's parade theme was cartoon characters. The Flintstones beat the other classes' floats depicting the Peanuts gang, the Jetsons and Marvin the Martian. Spirits were high this year as the Norsemen scalped the Lakeview Huskies, 47-0, and senior Kristen Buckler was crowned homecoming queen. Events culminated with an evening dance in the school gymnasium.

19 ULS students earn honors

Nineteen University Liggett Lila LaHood, Tamara Lie, School students were named AP Scholars by the College Board in recognition of their exceptional achievement on the college-level Advanced Placement examinations.

Only about 11 percent of the 388,000 students who took AP examinations in May 1992 performed at a sufficiently high level to merit such recognition. The College Board recognizes three levels of achievement the AP Scholar with Distinc-tion, the AP Scholar with Honor, and the AP Scholar.

At ULS, eight students qualified for the AP Scholar with Distinction Award by earning grades of 3 or above on five or more AP Exams with an average exam grade of at least 3.50. These students (members of the class of 1992) are Sonia Eden,

GROSSE POINTE WOODS RESIDENTS Milk River Drain Project

The Milk River Drain District is an agency which oversees and operates the Milk River Pump station. The cities of Harper Woods, Grosse Pointe Woods, and portions of St. Clair Shores, Wayne County, Macomb County and the State of Michigan are included in the drain district. The Board, whose members administer the operations of the agency, is made up of individuals from the counties of Wayne and Macomb and the Department of Agriculture. The City of Grosse Pointe Woods is the largest member of the Milk River Drain District and is responsible for 60.5% of all operating and debt costs incurred by the agency. The City, however, is not represented on the Board.

Each October, the City is informed by the Drain Board of its share of the District costs. By law, this is assessed tot he residents as part of the winter drain tax levy, with the City functioning as the collection agency. Since 1989 this levy has not exceeded 1.85 mills.

During 1991, the Drain Board, as mandated by the Department of Natural Resources, authorized significant capital improvements for the Milk River drain district. The total cost of these mandated improvements is currently estimated to be in excess of $33 million, and over $26 million in bonds have been issued to finance this project. The 1992/93 annual payment, which the City of Grosse Pointe Woods is responsible for amounts to $811,696.

Accordingly, the Grosse Pointe Woods City Council is required to levy a total of 3.7087 mills for the drain tax beginning with the 1992 winter tax bill. This is a 1.8587 mill increase over last year's rate of 1.85 mills or a $139.00 increase for a home with an SEV of $75,000.

The only portion of this millage rate that the Grosse Pointe Woods City Council has direct control of is the 1.0999 mills for capital improvements. This allows for replacing and updating the City's existing sanitary and storm sewer system.

In order to effectively control the cost of these improvements, Mayor Novitke established a Construction Committee which oversees all material infrastructure projects. In working closely with the City's staff and engineers, they have saved tens of thousands of dollars in these projects.

Unfortunately, our City does not have control regarding the improvements undertaken by the Milk River Inter-County Drainage Board. Our City has adopted a resolution requesting that the state legislature provide for our direct representation on the Milk River Drain Board. However, to date the state legislature has not taken such their running representatives in the Team in Training program. He also had a wrist band with his patient's name on it.

After about eight miles, his knee was giving him too much pain to continue running so he walked the remaining 18 miles.

"The cold was awful," he said of the upper 30-degree temperatures and the rain that continued throughout the race. "But the worst part is that I didn't anticipate it. I know what to wear for a run, but I don't know what to wear for a walk. But I didn't want to stop because people had pledged money on me, and I wanted to finish the race."

Most racers finished the 26mile course, that wound through the streets of Windsor and Detroit, in less than four hours. McDuffee said an average runner can finish a marathon in 3 1/2 hours — he walked across the line with a time of five hours and 32 minutes.

"Anyone can run a marathon in three hours," he said with a laugh. "But it takes somebody with real fortitude to stay out there for 5 1/2 hours."

McDuffee joined the Leukemia Society several years ago because the company he works for encouraged community service and the society interested him.

"I started doing some work for the chamber of commerce, but that wasn't so fulfilling," he said. "Then I started with the society and I really liked it. I don't have anybody close to me who had it, but you don't have to have a mother or a child or a brother with leukemia to be touched. When you see a child with no hair, you can't help but be moved."

One of the best things about the organization is that it is so small, McDuffee said.

"We are able to see the impact it has on people's lives and it gives us the fervor to con-and the maintain of the second states and the second states and the second states and the second states and the

See related story, page 25A tinue working," he said.

But he wouldn't complain if his organization were no longer needed.

"Leukemia is still the No. 1 killer of children, but they believe a cure can be found by the end of the decade. It would be great if we could work our way out of a job," he said. In March, McDuffee was

In March, McDuffee was elected to the national board of the Leukemia Society of America; he's been on the local board since 1988, serving part of that time as president.

He also served as a celebrity waiter at the Leukemia Society's Celebrity Waiter fundraising lunch held over the past three years at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial.

At the events, diners make donations to the Leukemia Society if their waiters and waitresses — local business and community leaders — do things they normally wouldn't do. (See sidebar.)

This year's event raised more than $15,000 for the society.

McDuffee is the fifth generation of his family to be born in Detroit. He spent most of his 48 years in Indian Village, moving to Grosse Pointe Park six years ago. He is vice president of the financial services division of Johnson & Higgins of Michigan, the largest privately held insurance brokerage and benefit consultant in the world.

He's been married to Claire - known as Chickie - since 1969 and they have two boys, Maxwell, 20, a junior at the University of Mississippi, and Dwyer, a middle school student.

They also have two beautiful black and white English setters, Mollie and Maggie, who, they say, are their other children.

When McDuffee isn't working or volunteering his time with the Leukemia Society, he can be found on a platform tennis court (it's a game that's a cross between tennis and racquetball), on a lake with a fishing pole in hand, on the links or in a camp ground.

"You've only got so much time, and there's so much I want to do," he said. "Something always gets put aside. A few years ago I attended a seminar and they asked the participants to make a list of 10 things they haven't done, but have always wanted to do. Most people only had one or two things on their lists; I think a list like that has to be an endless thing."

McDuffee's list includes learning to play a fiddle, climbing Mt. Kilimanjaro and hiking the Appalachian Trail.

And undoubtedly the list includes being around when a cure for leukemia is found and his group is no longer needed.

Waiters get $15,000 tip at Leukemia Society luncheon

The 1992 edition of the Celebrity Waiters Luncheon held at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial was a star-studded affair where no one was safe.

For pledges made payable to the Leukemia Society of America's Michigan chapter, celebrity waiters - who were local business and professional people did goofy things in front of friends, business associates and an unforgiving camera.

There were hula hoops, a belly-dancer and a microphone with which people were asked to embarrass themselves.

And, of course, whipped cream pies to throw in faces. WDIV-TV Channel 4 reporter Dwayne X. Riley got a pie in the face.

After most waiters had been creamed with a pie, the diners got adventurous and kind of bizarre.

One man got 12 pies thrown in his face at the same time. Another got a bottle of wine poured over his head. One woman confessed in front of the room that she recently got a tattoo, but would only show it for another $50. One man had a face drawn on his belly.

Grosse Pointe Woods resident Dave Deacon is taking advantage of a recently enacted Woods ordinance to help him weather a difficult time in his life.

Deacon, who has lived in the Woods for 20 years, had worked for more than 25 years in the field of employee benefits and human resources when he was laid off from his job in May 1989

"I didn't apply for unemploy-ment right away," he said, "be-cause I had a couple of shortterm consulting jobs lined up, and I had a few leads on real jobs. I didn't think I'd be out of work for very long.

But the leads fell through and the consulting jobs didn't last long.

A year later, after exhausting all his resources, Deacon applied for unemployment benefits.

He said he believes you shouldn't take from the government what you don't need, and up until that time, he didn't think he needed unemployment.

"I thought I would find something on my own," he said.

'And then when I did apply for unemployment, they told me I wasn't eligible because I hadn't earned any income during the previous year," he said. Luckily, his wife, Suzanne, works as an office manager for a dentist, he said. During the two years following his lay-off, Deacon sent out more than 2,500 resumes all over the United States. He received no job offers, but he said he came close. "I came in second or third in at least 15 situations, but being the second or third priority candidate for a job doesn't put food on the table," he said. "I'm a victim of the economic downturn, and while I can't prove it, I think age discrimination has

"I was walking home from the store one night during the first week of September, and I saw that on one side of the block alone, there were 16 houses that would have to have their downspouts disconnected to comply with the new downspout ordinance in Grosse Pointe Woods," he said. In July, the Woods city council passed an ordinance that requires homeowners to disconnect their downspouts from their drain tiles by next July, so that less rainwater is channeled into the sewer system.

"I thought, 'I could do that," Deacon said. "So I made up 100 fliers with the help of a friend who is pretty good with a P.C. (personal computer).'

He also contacted his friend Rob Lillich, another 20-year Woods resident who was out of work at the time.

"Lillich is a licensed builder who worked for Russell developers for five years. Because of his experience, he had wholesale contacts for the (down-spout) supplies," Deacon said.

The first 100 fliers they sent out produced 11 phone calls from one street alone, "and we ended up doing 16 jobs on that street," he said. They deliver their fliers door-to-door in Grosse Pointe Woods. Through word of mouth, they have received six jobs in Grosse Pointe Farms and even one on Windmill Pointe Drive in »nsuming to train City public ifety officers to become EMTs, ressbach said.

Last month, about a week afer the City received the Park-.C. Taylor plan, it received a pint proposal from the Farms nd its emergency medical service provider, Ruehle's/St. Joseph's Ambulance Co., Kressbach said.

The price quoted in that proposal undercut the Park-L.C. Taylor price by $2,500 a year. However, that price would only be guaranteed for 2 1/2 years, he said.

Under that plan, Ruehle's would respond to all calls in the City with the advanced ambulance Ruehle's has stationed at Cottage Hospital in the Farms.

Currently, that ambulance is committed to responding to Farms calls only, and to requests for help from other cities under the mutual aid agreement the Farms has with the other Pointes and Harper Woods

An earlier plan that Ruehle's submitted to the Park had been rejected by Krajniak.

That plan involved Ruehle's providing advanced ambulance service to the Park and the City. The cost to the Park would have been $37,111 (excluding patient co-pays) a year, and the cost to the City would have been $17,301.

Krajniak said he rejected the Grosse Pointe Park plans to donate one of its basic ambulances – the one at the left – to the city of San Pedro in the Dominican Republic once Ruehle's ambulance company comes on line, Park city manager Dale Krajniak said. The ambulance was due for replacement, at a cost of $55,000, he said. The Park will keep its other basic ambulance at the right – as a backup for the Ruehle's advanced ambulance that will be stationed at Park city hall.

Paramedics are top rung of EMS ladder

Michigan recognizes three levels of ambulance service.

In ascending order they are basic, limited advanced, and advanced.

Basic life support ambulances are staffed by emergency medical technicians (EMTs) who can provide sophisticated first aid.

Limited advanced ambulances are staffed by EMT specialists who can do everything basic EMTs do, plus administer intravenous fluids and provide advanced airway maintenance by intubating patients.

Advanced life support ambulances are staffed by paramedics who can do everything an EMT specialist can do, plus administer drugs and use electrocardiograms and other complicated #### said.

The increase in the number of calls between the two offers reflects the fact that the first offer included only Priority 1 and 2 calls, whereas the second offer included Priority 1, 2 and 3 calls, Slipiec said.

The Farms has a three-year contract with Ruehle's, which took effect in January. The base cost to the Farms is about $85,000 a year, said Farms city manager Richard Solak. However, the Farms also covers the co-payments residents are charged by their health insurance carriers for ambulance runs, which is about an additional $4,000 a year, Solak said.

Slipiec said if the City chooses to hire Ruehle's, his company can lower the subsidy it requires from the Farms by about $15,000 a year.

"You have to keep in mind that we bill patients," Slipiec said. "In some of the places where we operate, we don't ask for a subsidy from the city involved because we receive enough runs to be self-sufficient.

He said an advanced Ruehle's ambulance would need 1,500 calls a year to be self-sufficient. He said Ruehle's expects to get 301 calls a year from the Farms, and 137 calls a year from the City, if it decides to join.

"We still wouldn't be at 1,500 calls a year, but we'd be closer to it. That's why we would be able to lower the Farms' subsidy," he said.

Solak said he would like the City to choose Ruehle's for the cost savings it would provide both cities, and because an ambulance stationed at Cottage Hospital would be closer to the City than an ambulance stationed at Park city hall.

"We just want the optimal level of service at the least cost for Grosse Pointe Park residents," Krajniak said. "If the City goes with Ruehle's, it won't affect the cost to us. We've always had a good realtionship with the City as their service provider, but the decision is clearly up to them, and whatever they choose is fine with us.'

The Park sought proposals that included the City because it didn't want to leave the City without ambulance service, Krajniak said.

"We felt a certain amount of responsibilty to the City since we are its current ambulance provider," he said.

Kressbach said he and the council need more time to review the two proposals.

"They were put on the back burner while we considered who should succeed Mayor Browning, and other issues that we had on the table," he said

Mayor Lorenzo "Red" Browning resigned last month, but has been asked to reconsider.

Kressbach said he and the council will be looking at the long-term consequences of whatever action they choose to take. In the short-term, Ruehle's proposal would cost the City less than L.C. Taylor's proposal.

But we don't want to be hit with a big increase when we go to renew whichever proposal we decide to go with," Kressbach said. "We want the best service, with the best response time, at the best possible cost.'

That means if a person in Grosse Pointe Park fell off his bike and broke his arm, he could be taken to Bon Secours, Cottage Hospital in Grosse Pointe Farms, or St. John Hospital in Detroit - whichever one he chose - because they all treat broken arms.

St. John Hospital. Second, Laskowski said, Bon Secours interest in and subsidization of the Park and City obtaining advanced emergency medical service is "purely a community support project.' "Bon Secours is a non-profit hospital, and as such is required by the Internal Revenue Service to spend part of its annual budget on community service," he said.

Because of the low number of runs in Grosse Pointe Park and Grosse Pointe Shores, he said, no private ambulance company would be able to stay in business there if it relied solely on patient billings. An ambulance company working in the Pointes would need a subsidy from the cities it served, he said.

Grosse Pointe Park and Grosse Pointe City each has a provision in its city charter that states the city council/administration does not have to ask for bids before entering into a contract if competitive bidding clearly is not practical, or no advantage would result to the city by requiring competitive bidding.

Before a municipality asks for bids on a project or service, it must spell out in detail what it needs.

The Park council and administration are not experts in the field of advanced emergency medical service, Krajniak said. They knew they needed to have a paramedic and an advanced ambulance to have advanced life support service, but they didn't know what all that entailed, so they couldn't write bid specifications.

For that reason, competitive bidding was not practical, Krajniak said.

The Park relied upon the guidance of Laskowski, who is the Park's emergency medical service (EMS) director and a member of the Detroit-East Medical Authority which oversees paramedic services in this area, Krajniak said.

Laskowski said he asked for proposals from several ambulance companies. Some chose not to participate, he said. Those that did submit proposals included Universal Ambulance Service, Ruehle's/St. Joseph's Ambulance Co. and L.C. Taylor.

When reviewing the proposals, he said he took into account the services that were offered, the quality and cost of those services, and the willingess of the company's paramedand Grosse Pointe Shores - "so that this valuable (paramedic service) would be within their reach," Laskowski said.

Indian festival lights the way toward understanding

By Jenny King Special Writer The colorful cars and minivans of students and alumni gushed from State Street and streamed southward, like sparkling water, toward various eateries, Briarwood Mall and I-94.

November 5, 1992

Grosse Pointe News

To the north, Homecoming had Ann Arbor's main campus looking like a log jam, but pedestrians and drivers were oblivious, sated with the pleasures of a huge football victory and warm October afternoon in this ever-fascinating university town.

Over on Church Street, where parking is at least as great a challenge as defending a shaky thesis, desks in the office of the Presbyterian Churchsponsored Ecumenical Center were being wrapped, using wide white paper, into parcels resembling banquet tables. A few stainless bowls and pots heralded the evening feast of curry and rice and fruits and drinks containing grass jelly.

For many thousands, Oct. 24 was Homecoming Saturday at the University of Michigan. For about 40, it was a celebration of the annual Indian Festival of the Lights in a long, narrow room on the first floor of this 1960s-style low-rise cementblock apartment building where students from all over the globe live while working on advanced degrees in several disciplines.

We never know how many to expect for most of our programs," said Nile Harper, a Presbyterian pastor now in his seventh year as director of the Ecumenical Center. "It could be anywhere between 10 and maybe three dozen.'

In anticipation of the larger number, furniture was pushed to three walls of the room, the pingpong table was folded and pressed against the fourth, at right angles to an upright piano and beneath a computergenerated paper banner reading, "Ecumenical Campus Center." Fully half the room was the designated stage where bejeweled Rekha Menon would perform Hindu dances in celebration of Diwali, the traditional Festival of Lights.

Space is always a concern, said Harper, who is spearheading a project to raise $1.25 million for a second residence building next to the current one that houses 40 students from 23 countries. Figures in a neat hand on a nearby flip chart spelled out possible sources for the funding. Harper hopes the building will become a reality within a year.

And he already has what may be his most unusual pledge from an individual contributor. Burmese-born Christian-convert Tun Thwin came to Ann Arbor to study five years ago, Harper said. The former political prisoner, now in his mid-forties, completed work in Southeast Asian studies, earned a graduate degree in urban environment planning and applied for status as a landed immigrant in Canada.

"I took him to Windsor a couple of weeks ago, and after he finished an order of french fries – his favorite food – at McDonald's, he handed me a slip of paper on which he had written his pledge of $1,000 toward our building fund,' Harper said. "He plans to pay it within a year and to someday return to Burma when the political climate is more stable."

By 6:30, the twilight had yielded to night, and more students, friends and faculty sought seats at the audience end of the room. Flames burned high and smoked in an oil lamp on a low table; a black plastic radio-cassette player (the orchestra and chorus) stood ready, and Menon, encrusted with jewels and in colorful dress and theatrical makeup, prepared to educate and entertain the guests.

The stories are Indian, but the themes are universal. She tells the tale, through dance, of a young woman awaiting her lover, who is late. Her friend arrives and the fretful woman asks if her friend has seen the young man, pretending not to care if he comes or has forgotten. With exquisite expressions on her face, and graceful pantomime set to chanting music and the constant punctuation of ankle bells, Menon enchants her audience with this and other tales of love, bravery and compassion.

"Diwali is a Hindu festival, but it's celebrated all over India by just about everyone like our Christmas," said Carol Hansen, administrative associate at U. of M.'s Association for Asian Studies Inc. "It is the triumph of light over darkness - although it's held during the new moon. Ram returned to his kingdom, the demon Ravanah has been vanquished, all is well.'

Hansen, who has traveled extensively in India, said the festival has long signalled a new year or beginning in that country, even fiscally. "Books are balanced, the slate is wiped clean," she said. "But my colleague says that's no longer true. In keeping with modern trends, debts are 'carried over."

Shirley Lewis is associate director of the Ecumenical Center and heads the residence. In the past, she said, there were many active exchanges through churches in southeastern Michigan. The center would arrange for students to spend weekends in private homes, an exciting opportunity for Americans to get acquainted with fascinating women and men from other cultures

"We think part of the reason for the slowdown in exchanges is the fact that more women are working today and families just need time to be together," Lewis said. The center is anxious to revitalize the program; there continues to be interest and need - among students, particularly over long holiday weekends and breaks, she said.

"You can get kind of lonely, but often your studies and work keep you busy," said Deling Weller, a diminutive woman from the Philippines who has brought her young daughter to the Diwali celebration. Now a resident of Ann Arbor, Weller remembers her days as a newcomer. She said she participated in an exchange with a church in Grosse Pointe Woods back in the late 1960s.

Not only was it interesting and enjoyable, she said, it proved what a small world we live in. During her visit, she was introduced to a Philippines exchange student whom, it turned out, she had known when he was a small child in their homeland.

Grosse Pointe Farms resident Lynne Kogel is on the staff at the Ecumenical Center. The Ph.D. candidate is enthusiastic about the many potential ties between the center and the community.

"It's an exciting home away from home for any Grosse Pointe kids in Ann Arbor," she said. Tuesday evening vegetarian suppers followed by an hour of free-flow dialogue or Wednesday evening meditation and prayer sessions are two opportunities for young Grosse Pointers to share in a truly international experience, she said.

The late-October Diwali feast attracted several young Americans in addition to many residents of the building. Among the latter was Karim Ladha, whose cotton sport shirt and shorts gave the handsome Uganda-born Indian a very Western air. Ladha was back in Ann Arbor studying public health after earning a graduate degree at the University of California in Berkeley.

Constant tremors and the fear of earthquakes convinced him Michigan, in spite of its cold winters, was a better place to prepare for a career, he said. Living at the International Residence since September, Ladha

The Pastor's Corner Winning

and losing

By The Rev. Edward A. M. Cobden, Jr. Rector, Christ Church Grosse Pointe

As I write this column, we are anticipating the election. As you read this, you will know who has won and who has lost. The election which we have been concerned with for so long has caused me to think about the common experience of winning and losing and how our faith helps us manage that experience.

Winning and losing is something that happens to each of us. You may remember the time you were in elementary school and your teacher selected you to show the class the picture or project you were working on. As you grew you knew the esteem of being chosen by a group of friends, elected to a school office, accepted by a college, chosen by a mate, promoted to a higher position at work. Or you knew the opposite of this experience. Sometimes you were not chosen and not elected; you were turned down or passed over.

Influencing the way we deal with these experiences is what I call the primitive model of winning and losing. The great epics of our culture, such as the "Iliad," "King Arthur" and "Star Wars," revolve around the dynamic of herioc triumph or shameful defeat.

The biblical story which conveys this understanding is that of David and Goliath. Goliath is the fearsome Philistine giant who is slain by the youthful David With courage, agility and gumption David wins. He chops off the head of the giant and parades around with his trophy in exaltation. David is the mighty emblem of the winner.

When you win, you get to chop off the head of the loser and go on to become king. If you lose, however, you lose totally. You are decapitated - finished.

The New Testament presents a different model of winning and losing. This is the model of the servant winner. It is found most beautifully expressed in the early church hymn recorded in Philippians 2:5-11 and paraphrased as follows.

Though Jesus was equal with God, he emptied himself of his glory and might and humbled himself so that he could become one with us. By becoming a servant, by giving himself on the cross, he emptied himself so completely that God could infuse him with his spirit, energy and love and raise him to the highest status of savior of the world and helper of all.

What this model of the servant winner tells me is that genuine winning is service. The real purpose, satisfaction and success in life consists of giving of ourselves.

We give what we have to give: our experience, talents, energy, means and personality. On some days that will mean we will be chosen. On some days we will win the struggle we find ourselves in.

That will encourage us and strengthen us for greater service. On some days we will not be chosen. We will lose the struggle that day. That means we will open ourselves more fully to God's help and power. Our loss will draw us closer still to God, and that will be our victory.

The model of the servant winner is the model of continual self-offering and growth. It is the way to go from winning to winning or from losing to winning. As we serve in the manner of Christ, God always sees us as winners

Genesis House to benefit

Members of the Grosse Bessert, Ardy Jones, Bill De Pointe Woods Presbyterian Church were busy wallpapering, sewing curtains, buying furniture and hanging pictures. They were putting the finishing touches on four bedrooms they have completely decorated for Genesis House II.

Renovation of the former Visitation Convent into a residence for homeless women and children is a project of the Detroit Rescue Mission. Various churches and organizations have been invited to adopt rooms.

"The finished results could be featured in any decorators magazine," said Nancy De-France, coordinator of the Grosse Pointe Woods Presbyterian Church's Genesis House II Project. "The people who worked long hours to decorate the rooms put lots of love into them

"Small touches of flower arrangements, inspirational pictures and plaques, and decorative pillows and lamps, and hand-made quilts make the rooms warm and inviting. I am very proud of the way a large portion of our church has gotten behind this project and helped with donations, contributions and good old elbow grease.

Classes for expectant families

Bon Secours Hospital will hold additional classes for families expecting newborns.

6B

The first class - on early pregnancy - will be held from 7:30 to 9:45 p.m. Thursday, Nov. 12, in the hospital's Connelly Auditorium.

Expectant couples will learn about physical, emotional and nutritional changes during pregnancy and how best to deal with those changes. Designed for couples less than seven months pregnant, the class is advisable for those in the earliest stages of pregnancy.

The second class — "New Grandparents" — will be held from 7:30 to 9:45 p.m. Thursday, Nov. 19, also in Connelly Auditorium.

This class will teach grandparents how to give support to new parents, and will discuss current concepts in labor and

Bereaved, holidays

"Making It Through The Holidays" is a special program offered by Cottage Hospice for people in grief.

Ideas and suggestions will be given to help people through one of the most difficult periods in a bereaved person's life.

There will be two different presentations beginning at 7 p.m. in Cottage Hospital, one on Thursday, Nov. 12, and the other on Tuesday, Nov. 24, in Board Room A, located in the lower level, in the Conference Center on the main floor.

Call Cottage Hospice for information at 884-8600, ext.

Both classes are open to the public and are free of charge, but reservations are limited. For more information, call the Women's HealthCare line at 779.7909.

Alzheimer's caregivers to meet

A support group for Alzheimer's caregivers will meet on the second Tuesday of every month at 7:30 p.m. at the Grosse Pointe Woods Presbyterian Church, 19950 Mack, between Moross and Vernier, in Grosse Pointe Woods. The next meeting will be Nov. 9. All meetings are free and everyone is welcome.

At support group meetings, family members learn about the medical, legal, financial, and emotional aspects of Alzheimer's disease. Through materials and speakers, caregivers develop skills in managing difficult behaviors and communicating with someone who has dementia.

Leaders Elmer Stanke and Noella DeVolder said, "It is a real challenge when a family member has Alzheimer's disease. Our support group helps others cope with a difficult situation.'

For more information, please call Stanke and DeVolder at 268-1044 or Anne Lilla at the Alzheimer's Association, 557-8277

LCE salutes Rossini in a concert on Nov. 8

The Lyric Chamber Ensemble will present the only Detroit-area gala celebration scheduled to date for composer Gioacchino Rossini's 200th birthday.

'Rossini at 200 - Serata Musicale," will be Sunday, Nov. 8, at 3:30 p.m. at Orches-tra Hall (3711 Woodward Ave., Detroit). The concert will showcase some of Detroit's most exciting young performers, including 17-year-old pianist Anthony Bonamici and vocalists Barbara Youngerman, Valerie Yova, Robert Bracey and Mark Caczmarczyk.

The program will be representative of the wide variety of media for which Rossini wrote, is considered to be among and will include three of his overtures arranged for two pianos/eight hands, including the popular "William Tell" and overtures from the operas "The Barber of Seville" and "Semiramide," performed by pianists Louis Nagel, Fedora Horowitz, Joseph Gurt and Anthony Bonamici.

Also on the all-Rossini program will be vocal selections from popular Rossini operas and his "Serate Musicali" and "Sins of My Old Age." Rossini's "Sonata for Strings in B Flat Major" will be performed by Geoffrey Applegate (violin), Lenore Sjoberg (violin), James Valkenburg (viola), and Van Marcy Chanteaux (cello), all members of the DSO; and the 'Andante con Variazioni in F' will be played by DSO harpist Patricia Masri-Fletcher and Van Valkenburg, who is the assistant principal violist of the DSO. Bonamici, a national award winning pianist and composer, Michigan's most promising young musicians. He was the first-prize winner of the Lyric Chamber Ensemble's "Mozart Youth Competition" in 1991.

Kaczmarczyk, bass, is a graduate of the Eastman School of Music in Rochester, N.Y., and studied under famed American mezzo-soprano, the late Jan DeGaetani. As the founder and music director of the Detroit Oratorio Society, Kaczmarczyk has become known to Detroit audiences as a conductor, as well as a singer.

Bracey, tenor, well known to Michigan audiences, has appeared with numerous local groups, including the "Brunch with Bach" series at the Detroit Institute of Arts, the Ann Arbor Cantata Singers, and the University of Michigan Opera Theatre.

Youngerman, mezzo-soprano, is a graduate of Eastern Michigan University and Manhattan School of Music. A resident of Royal Oak, she appears regularly with the Michigan Opera Theatre, both with the main stage company and in the outreach division.

Yova, soprano, was a national winner of the Metropolitan Opera auditions in 1981. A resident of Royal Oak, Yova is a graduate of the New England Conservatory of Music. She has toured with New York City Opera, OperaWorks of Texas, and has appeared in Mozart's "The Marriage of Figaro" with the Pittsburgh Opera Theatre.

Masri-Fletcher was appointed principal harp of the DSO in 1988. She has performed as principal harpist of the National Grand Opera in New, York and the Monterey and Santa Cruz Symphonies in California, as well as with the New York City Opera, the Pittsburgh Symphony Orchestra and the Spoleto "Festival of Two Worlds.'

DeNiro makes magic in the 'Night'

to give up, and fall victim to those dreams.

One of the losers is Harry Fabian, played to the hilt by Robert De Niro in Irwin Winkler's dark and impressive "Night and the City."

The film begins with Harry in a bar where he scans the news for accident victims. He is a small-time New York lawyer who is trying to move into the big leagues. He has confidence and is smart, but he operates from a base of false bravado.

He wastes his energy scheming and setting up scams. Though his schemes don't work out, he believes he will one day hit it big. Harry is fascinated by Helen (Jessica Lange), the wife of a friend. She, however, has dreams of her own. In one of his many monologues, Harry tells Helen of the great need he has to be someone of importance. Impressively delivered, the monologues are like operatic arias.

The story revolves around the seedy world of boxing - the latest place where Harry sees his fortune lying in wait.

Money is a problem, though So is Boom Boom, played with deadly seriousness by Alan King. He is the kingpin of what is left of a moribund boxing syndicate and he is not about to let Harry move in on his territory. In the promoter's visits to the neighborhood gym to select contenders, Harry discovers that Boom-Boom has a brother, Al Grossman (Jack Warden), a former fighter now retired and living in Florida. Harry persuades him to return to New York as his consultant. This all progresses at a breathless pace toward a diabolical ending.

Winkler keeps the film moving in a series of short, arresting takes, but it is De Niro who dominates the action with his impressive torrent of words as he scuttles from one meaningless activity to another trying to achieve recognition and dignity. He has brains, and charm but misuses both. He is likable, though scuzzy.

"Night and the City" is bolstered by a good supporting cast. Lange, as Helen, is not unlike Harry when it comes to her desire to move out and upward. King is smoothly ruthless and Warden gives a good performance as a canny, counterpunching retiree.

"Night and the City," a remake of a 1950 movie starring Richard Widmark, still packs a punch in the '90s

Council Cargle stars as Troy Maxson in "Fences."

Attic opens its 'Fences'

August Wilson's Pulitzer Prize winning drama "Fences" will be presented at The Attic Theatre's New Center Stage from Nov. 5 through Dec. 13.

November 5, 1992 Grosse Pointe News

In cooperation with Buku Productions, the Attic brings back to Detroit the 1990 production which won honors as Best Play of the season from both The Detroit News and Free Press.

Premiering in 1985, Wilson's drama swept the field of prestigious theatrical awards, including the Pulitzer, four Tony Awards, the New York Critic's Circle Award and many others. Wilson's compelling slice of African-American life in the '50s raises black family struggles to epic proportions in the same out houses. Reprising their roles are veteran Detroit actor Council Cargle as Troy Maxson, and Jennifer Jones, who received Best Actress awards from both The Detroit News and Free Press for herzoor trayal of Troy's wife Rose. Reuben Yabuku, who directed the DRT production, also will direct the Attic Theatre's effort.

"Fences" is the second play Wilson has written in his cycle of dramas about each decade of the 20th century in African-American life. His other plays are "Ma Rainey's Black Bottom," "Joe Turner's Come and Gone" and "The Piano Lesson."

The Attic's New Center Stage is located at 7339 Third

The Blue Pigs

Kids Koncerts begin

Get to know your police officers in a different light when the Blue Pigs perform at the season's first Koncert for Kids series for ages 2-8 at the War Memorial on Saturday, Nov. 7, from 11 a.m. to noon.

The Blue Pigs have entertained all ages since 1970 with performances ranging from rock 'n' roll to comedy. The event is co-sponsored by Jacobson's Grosse Pointe.

The next concert in the series, "Puppets to Go," is slated for Saturday, Nov. 21, from 11 a.m. to noon.

Puppeteer, Nancy Henk and her troupe bring her puppets to life in the enchanting tale of "Cinderella." Watch as a pumpkin from the garden gradually turns into a golden coach as the kitchen is cleaned in a ballet of feather dusters - and as Cinderella changes from rags to silken splendor. All of this is made possible by a sympathetic Fairy Godmother, who has a few other surprises for the audience.

Tickets are $16 for adult packages of 4; $12 for children's packages of 4; $5 for individual adult; and $4 individual child 12 and under. For more information, call 881-7511.

The baton-wielding young Finn, Jukka-Pekka Saraste, and the consummate showman/ musician James Galway provided an out-of-the-ordinary and highly rewarding program at Orchestra Hall last weekend. It was, in fact, a foot-tapper and a spine-tingler with interludes of soulful lyricism.

Opening with the rarely heard "Oceanides" by Sibelius, Saraste evoked the feeling of the swell of the sea, the sting of wind-driven spray and awesome foamy waves, as though he were Neptune himself turning Sibelius' highly descriptive music into a vivid experience. The only disappointment was that this fine work is all too short.

Galway then took center stage with his own arrangement for flute and orchestra of Faure's ethereal Sonata for Flute with Piano. Together with Ibert's Concerto for Flute which followed, it gave Galway a great opportunity to demonstrate the flute's wide-ranging powers of expression.

Galway has obvious mastery. He rendered the low register passages in the concerto's second movement with appropriate sensuality and as his playing tends to be more frolicsome than soulful, he sparkled brilliantly in the glittering finale.

The showmanship reached a pinnacle in the third movement where Ibert set down a fanciful cascade of notes for the flute with beautifully integrated support from the orchestra. Galway played it with consummate artistry.

After doing his duty as a skilled accompanist, Saraste again showed his mettle in the second half. The "Petrushka Suite" from Stravinsky's ballet is a cacophony that is arresting, stimulating and highly accommodate dance, and the wealth of folk motifs providing the atmosphere of a country fair, this is a great orchestral work of symphonic proportions.

musical. Notwithstanding the rhythmic patterns designed to

It is also a challenge to player and listener. There is much direct foot appeal in the powerful rhythms and ear appeal in the fragments of Russian folk tunes, but the construction of the work is itself engrossing.

Above all, it is really fun to hear an unrestrained performance with thundering basses and drums, dazzling brass and the bright sound of the piano representing musically the title role of the ballet story. It was especially fun to hear the work magnificently enhanced in a hall with great acoustics.

Saraste led the performance with a clear sense of telling the story with all the theatrical air of a narrator intent upon holding his audience spellbound. And he did just that, from the wonder of the puppets coming to life to the mysterious finale when the slain Petrushka's ghost appears on the rooftop.

This weekend brings Detroitbred pianist James Tocco to present the Detroit premiere of a concerto by American composer John Corigliano. Tocco, admired worldwide for his elegant playing, has been described by Corigliano as the definitive interpreter of this concerto. Completing the program, associate conductor Leslie B. Dunner will lead the orchestra in Beethoven's 'Egmont Overture'' and Brahm's Symphony No. 3 in F major. The program will be presented Friday morning and evening and Saturday evening. For more information and tickets call 833-3700.

Thorsten Kaye and Tami Evans star in "Nothing Sacred."

Hilberry offers 'Nothing Sacred'

"Nothing Sacred," George F. Walker's award-winning stage adaptation of Turgenev's novel 'Fathers and Sons," opens at the Hilberry Theatre Friday, Nov. 13, at 8 p.m.

"Nothing Sacred" is a free adaptation of the 1862 Russian novel about the tensions between young rebels and their parents in pre-revolutionary Russia. The play centers on the character of Bazarov, a haughty and nihilistic young rebel.

Canadian Bill Glassco, who has directed productions of "Nothing Sacred" throughout Canada, wrote, "... the play's very contemporary sensibility was precisely what made it immediate and accessible as opposed to literary and remote.'

Walker is one of Canada's most widely produced playwrights and his work has been honored with several awards. For "Nothing Sacred," Walker received the Dora Mayor Moore Award for Best Play of 1988, the Governor-General Literary Award in 1989 for English-Language Drama and the Floyd S. Chalmers Award in 1988.

The Hilberry Theatre's production is directed by WSU faculty member Blair Vaughn Anderson. His most recent directing credits are "Translations" at the Bonstelle Theatre and "Interrogating the Nude" at the Hilberry.

The 11-member cast includes Thorsten Kaye as Bazarov, Tami Evans as Anna and Christopher Newman as Arkady.

"Nothing Sacred" plays in rotating repertory from Nov. 13 through Feb. 4. Tickets range from $8 to $15 depending on performance day and seat location. Discount tickets are available for students, senior citizens, WSU faculty and staff, and alumni association members. For tickets and information, call the theatre box office at (313) 577-2972.

Mystery novel really books 'em

Booked to Die

By John Dunning Scribners. 321 pages. $19.95 Here is a fine mystery novel which stars a detective with strong bibliophilic tendencies.

"Booked to Die" is an unusual combination of police action and the bookish affairs of the true bibliophile. The author, John Dunning, is a proprietor of a Denver shop known as the Old Algonquin Bookstore. From there he has gathered invaluable knowledge and experience of book lore enabling him to write about Cliff Janeway, a book-loving cop, who pursues the killer of Bobby Westfall, a rabbity book-scout found murdered in an alley near Denver's Bookshop Row.

Janeway, a top homicide detective with the Denver Police Department, is assigned the case. He immediately suspects the murderer is his long-time foe, Jackie Newton, a musclebound punk who specializes in bullying the weak and preying on the timid. After a ferocious showdown slugging match between the two antagonists, Janeway is peremptorily suspended from the force, and subsequently resigns to pursue his real love, books.

He finds an abandoned building in Book Row, signs a lease, and happily begins his new career as an antiquarian bookman. After much arduous cleaning, scrubbing, building shelves, and painting, Janeway's thrill in the ownership of Twice Told Books, a dream come true, is expressed thus: "I walked through the store and only then did it hit me — what I had taken on, what I'd left behind, how drastically my life had changed in only one month. I took a deep breath. The place smelled of paint fumes and sawdust. It smelled like a new car, though the actual odor was nothing like that. It was real, it was alive, and it was mine. It was sweet and exciting. I had a sense of proprietorship, or direction. I had a lifetime of work ahead of me, and it was very good." Book scouts begin coming in to sell Janeway books which he chooses with discrimination: books must be in good condition and be by authors in demand by collectors. As several more murders involving the denizens of Book Row occur, Janeway is reluctantly dragged back into the arena of police work. In his unofficial status, he manages to win some coop eration from his former colleagues on the force who offer him some clues and information.

through Denver and its environs to nab the murderer before more killings take place. The final heart-stopping denouement is a shocker - an amazing surprise relating to books.

Janeway has an interesting conversation with the enigmatic and sometimes aloof Rita McKinley, a wealthy dealer of books, about the endless war going on between libraries and book dealers, which, at best, is an uneasy truce, and she opines that "I know how I see them (librarians), having worked with them. I can show you libraries that would make you cry. Priceless, wonderful books given to the library, and then put in some moldy basement to rot. Old-timers die and think they're doing the world a favor when they leave their books to the library. They might as well take them out and burn them. Public libraries particularly. They just don't have the staff or knowledge to handle it. And after all, the public's got to have its Judith Krantz and its Janet Dailey. So the library buys fifty copies of that junk and then cries that it has no budget."

In addition, McKinley tells Janeway that she used to work in a library in Kansas: "I started in a library back in Kansas, a good case in point. It was given a gorgeous collection thirty years ago. It's still right where they put it then, in a basement room. Part of the ceiling came down five years ago and the books are buried under two thousand pounds of plaster. I'd give a lot of money to get that stuff out of there.

These observations and others made by these two bibliophiles provide entertaining grist for the mill of like minded readers. What makes this so refreshing is that it all takes place in a very literate mystery in which police action is delightfully mixed with bookish matters.

"Booked to Die" is the first of a projected series featuring Cliff Janeway, and Dunning has begun excellently in opening a bright new chapter in mysteries with exciting overtones of bibliophily. Devoted readers and bookshop habitues have much to look forward to, thanks to that bookman from Denver.

"Cabaret," John Kander and Fred Ebb's musical about prewar Germany, is the holiday offering by Dennis Wickline Productions Inc. at the Golden Lion Dinner Theatre.

Opening Friday, Nov. 6, the show will run Friday and Saturday evenings through Saturday, Dec. 26, with the exception of Christmas Day. There will be a special New Year's Eve performance of "Cabaret" on Thursday, Dec. 31.

Price for the special New Year's Eve performance is $95 a couple or $47.50 per person, which includes dinner, show, tax, gratuity, party hats, noisemakers, and a champagne toast to usher in the New Year. Price for all other performances is $25.95 a person, which includes dinner, show, tax, and gratuity.

"Cabaret" became a multi-Tony award winner after it opened on Broadway in 1966.

The stage version of "Cabaret" tells the story of Cliff Bradshaw, an American writer traveling through Europe in hopes of creating a novel during the early '30s. During his stay in Berlin, Cliff becomes romantically involved with Sally Bowles, a free-spirited cabaret singer. He is also exposed to the growing terror of the Nazi movement, and the desire by almost everyone to pretend that no dangers existed.

Portraying the M.C. is Nick Dara, who can be seen in a wide variety of television commercials and industrial films. Suzanne Marie Hillman, a veteran of many professional productions throughout the metro area, takes on the role of Sally Bowles. Bruce Gellasch, also seen in many local television commercials and industrial films, portrays Cliff Bradshaw. Also in the cast are: Golden Lion favorite Molly Dodge as Fraulein Schneider, Cliff's landlord; Richard Davis as Herr Schultz, Fraulein Schneider's Jewish boyfriend; Michael Kowalski as Ernst Ludwig; Jane Vreeland as Fraulein Kost; Elizabeth Perkin as Maria, and Don Ross as Max.

The production is under the direction of Kim Marlinga.

Cocktails begin at 7 p.m.; dinner is at 7:30, with the show following dessert. Gift tickets and group rates are available. Special group performances are also available during the week for groups over 75. Special senior citizen group rates are available for Friday performances only.

Gordon of 'Sesame Street' visits Youtheatre Nov. 7-8

Stepping right off the television screen from his usual "Sesame Street" address, Roscoe Orman (who has been "Gordon of Sesame Street" for 17 consecutive seasons) brings his own show to the Youtheatre stage Saturday and Sunday, Nov. 7 and 8. The show is designated a Wiggle Club attraction, chosen especially for its appeal to the youngest theatergoer - age 3 and older.

Youtheatre's home stage is now Music Hall Center for the Performing Arts, 350 Madison at Brush in downtown Detroit. Performances are 11 a.m. and 2 #### p.m. Saturday and 2 p.m. Sunday.

Tickets for both children and adults are $6 each; groups of 10-29 are $5 each; 30 or more, $4 each. To request a season brochure or to order tickets by credit card for performances throughout the Youtheatre season, phone (313) 963-2366. On the day of the performance, available tickets go on sale at the Music Hall ticket office an hour before curtain time.

As Gordon, Roscoe Orman is one of television's most engaging personalities and he brings songs and stories from his award-winning "neighborhood" live to the Youtheatre stage.

"Sesame Street" has taught preschoolers about everything from letters and numbers to ecology and emotions. In its 23rd season, it is watched by more than 11 million households weekly and the English language version of "Sesame Street" is seen in more than 80 countries spanning six continents.

Wiggle Club performances are sponsored, in part, by an anonymous benefactor on behalf of The Old Newsboys' Goodfellow Fund of Detroit. All Youtheatre performances are made possible with the support of the Michigan Council for Arts and Cultural Affairs.

Learn to speak

Everybody, at some time or another, has to get up before a group of people and speak. A workshop on presentational speaking will be held on Tuesday, Nov. 10 and 17, from 7:30 to 9 p.m. at the War Memorial.

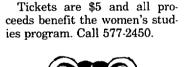

Instructor Marty Bufalini will show students how easy it can be to speak before one or 1,000 people.

Bufalini is a veteran radio news broadcaster with 25 years' experience in communications, public relations, theater, radio and television commercials and industrial films.

At the first class learn the basics of outlining a speech, delivery techniques and exercises for handling stage fright.

Pointe Plaza

By John Minnis

Century 21 East has positioned itself for the next century by adding new quarters in the modern Pointe Plaza office complex at Mack and Moross in Grosse Pointe Woods.

We felt we wanted a modern, high-profile location," said Rick Landuyt, manager of the new office and formerly of Johnstone & Johnstone.

The office is the second Century 21 East location in the Pointes. The firm's other office is in the Village.

The Pointe Plaza site is the eighth Century 21 East office in metro Detroit. The other offices are in Novi, Fraser, Clinton Township, Royal Oak and Rochester Hills, where the company also has a commercial real estate office.

Century 21 East is owned by William and Elizabeth Eldridge of Grosse Pointe Shores.

"We're so excited by this new office," William Eldridge said. "St. John (the owner of Pointe Plaza) basically gave us a signature building with our name on the tower."

He said most of the Century 21 East offices maintain a high profile, and the Pointe Plaza location meets that requirement.

Landuyt said the Pointe Plaza site was chosen because it is centrally located and is new and luxurious for the comfort of customers and agents. Also, he said Pointe Plaza has the one thing that most Grosse Pointe real estate offices lack – ample parking.

The new office, which held its grand opening Oct. 23, is staffed by 32 agents, and already business is good.

Landuyt said the nearby retail stores. doctors' offices and St. John Hospital make Pointe Plaza great for foot traffic.

The traffic is phenomenal," he said, 'and the incoming calls are phenomenal."

He said the number of inquiries just at the Village office range from 275 to 375 a month, and he hopes to match that at the new office, where many doctors, nurses and other medical employees at St. John Hospital like the convenience of having a Realtor nearby.

The Pointe Plaza office serves the Pointes, St. Clair Shores, Harper Woods and the East English Village area in Detroit.

Landuyt, a lifelong Grosse Pointer who lives in the Park, said the Pointes will always be a good real estate market for buyers and sellers.

"It's an investment as well as a roof over your head," he said about buying in the Pointes

He said that uncertainty over the presidential election and sagging consumer confidence were dampening real estate activity. But buying and selling have been livelier in Harper Woods and St. Clair Shores because of the affordability factor, said Landuyt, who has been in the business for 13 years and has a broker's license and other real estate certifications.

Century 21 East does more than sell homes in the communities it serves. The company is also active in charitible and civic causes Century 21 East raised $72,000 for Easter Seals last year, ranking the company first in the Midwest and third nationwide among Century 21 offices in fundraising efforts for the charity, Eldridge said.

The firm also sponsors a Grosse Pointe Soccer Association team that recently beat a London, Ontario, team and is on its way toward winning another tournament, said Landuyt, who has coached Little League for years.

Century 21 East is an affiliate member of the Grosse Pointe, Macomb, Oakland, Birmingham, Bloomfield, Western Wayne, Rochester and South Oakland boards of Realtors.

Eldridge, a lifelong Grosse Pointer who has a law degree from Wayne State University and has been a member of the Michigan Bar since 1974, started the real estate company in 1986.

Last year, Century 21 East sold $250 million worth of homes, a $47 million in crease over the year before and ranking it

Here's ease and comfort in a single-level plan

Homeowners will appreciate the flexibility in this plan. A covered porch leads to a wide open foyer with a commanding view of the auspicious sunken great room. This room is shown with a sloped ceiling, sun deck access, fireplace and steps up to the formal dining room, which is separated only by a wooden rail.

The fantastic kitchen and breakfast room are combined into a 12foot-6 by 18-foot space. The breakfast room enjoys a picturesque bay window. A wet bar expands the width of this room and is shown with a pass through window allowing refreshments to be passed directly into the great room. Excellent cabinets and work area are provided for both the bar area and the kitchen.

The master bedroom suite is isolated for privacy and boasts a tray ceiling, a large walk-in closet and bath.

There are three additional bedrooms shown at the opposite end of the plan. These bedrooms share a central compartment bath. The laundry room is near, and the basement stair parallels the rear wall of the double garage. The plan is available with basement or crawl space. Eliminating the basement stair increases the size of the adjoining bedroom.

The brick facade is shown with a steep gable roof and a front entry garage.

The plan is No. 2264. It includes 2,297 square feet of heated area. It is a computer generated plan. All W. D. Farmer plans are drawn in compliance with FHA and VA requirements and are furnished with special energy-efficient construction details. For further information write W. D. Farmer, P.O. Box 450025, Atlanta. Ga. 30345.

Money saver – My children always left the lights and stereo on. They never gave a thought about the money it cost.

Home Tips

One night, we sat our four kids down and showed them the bills so they could actually see what electricity cost. We put one child each week in charge of checking and turning off electricity when not in use for two months. Their reward was the difference between the previous bill and the new one. It taught them the importance of not wasting electricity, which I hope will carry on when they are on their own some day.

Car freshener - I have a way to freshen the car without buying those expensive car deodorizes which don't last very long anyway. I put a tiny bit of potpourri in my car's ashtray. Whenever I need to freshen the air, I just open up the ashtray. It stays fresh quite a while, and the porpourri will last for months, too. Virginia P., Pinch, W.V.

BED ROOM

Purse organizer - The purse I carry is quite large, but I need it to carry various items, such as lipstick, nail clippers, aspirin, etc. Finding these items when I needed them proved to be a pain, so I came up with an easy solution.

I took a gallon-size, self-closing plastic bag and put all the small items from my purse into it. Now I can pick up the bag and look through the sides to find what I need right away. It also makes it easy when I change purses. The bag can be left in my car to make the purse lighter when I have to shop.

Fall colors paint the magnificence of trees

There is something about the feeling of autumn in the air that makes us think of brisk country walks and the scent of burning leaves (no longer a fall ritual for city dwellers but still a country delight).

It isn't really necessary to go to the Upper Peninsula of Michigan or to northern Vermont to take a color tour of beautiful fall foliage. Just drive around Grosse Pointe on a sunny late October day, and the gold and russet and scarlet of the trees present a gorgeous panorama of color worthy of an artist's palette.

Many Indian tribes take note of this colorful season with special ceremonies and dances during which the participants wear their most colorful dress and elaborate ornaments in celebration of the end of summer and the coming of winter. This is the season of Indian summer when often the frosty nip in the air is tempered by a series of warm sunny days and a return to blue skies and balmy breezes.

There are many explanations as to why this season is called Indian summer, but one of the most prevalent is that at this time, when the leaves on the trees are still there to offer concealment and the brilliant colors provide excellent camouflage for anyone hiding among them, a painted, feathered war-party could go out on a raid with a minimum of risk.

The frosty nights and warm noontimes of late October and early November are what cause the colors to appear, and the beautiful, crisp falling leaves, while creating raking chores for many of us, also provide wonderful crunchy pathways underfoot and a new play opportunity for children and pets.

Trees are among our treasures. They represent the oldest and largest living organisms on Earth and are friendly links between us and our remote ancestors.

By Ellen Probert

The famed cedars of Lebanon remain as the Bible describes them. The sequoias are a variety of evergreen and are native to the Pacific Coast of the United States. These forest giants often attain a height of 400 feet. Trunk diameters up to 26 feet have been recorded and the age of the huge trees has been estimated at nearly 4,000 years.

But the oldest trees of all are the bristle-cone pines native to the American southwest, which have been dated back 5,000 years.

Oldest isn't biggest, however, and if you are thinking of girth instead of height, the African baobab takes the prize. These gigantic trees are the size of a modest house and are more like monuments than trees. With pinkish-gray to copper-colored bark, they have assumed gnarled, fantastic shapes. Early travelers in Africa considered them landmarks and often carved names and dates on them, creating a cryptic record of early Western exploration of the dark continent.

To people who live where baobabs grow, the tree has infinite uses. The bark provides fiber for clothing, mats, blankets, fishing nets, sacks and cords. The gourdlike fruit, called monkey bread, is eaten. The pulp and leaves, mixed with boiling water, are an ancient, still-used remedy for malaria.

Some of the largest baobabs are in Zimbabwe and are up to 100 feet around. They have great cavernous hollows which have been put to curious uses. One tree is used as a bus station; another is the chamber of a blacksmith's forge. Some are used as stables, storehouses and even homes. In western Africa they are used as burial chambers and, with iron grilles across the openings, as prison cells. One restaurant owner installed rest rooms in his tree.

Fig trees are ancient, and Buddhists, Hindus and Christians alike respect them for their religious associations going far back in history, as well as for their fruit. They make good houseplants if you have space for quite a large pot. Or they can be successfully used to create bonsai, the tiny decorative trees so many of us treasure.

'Move-up' home sales increase, while first-time buyers dominate

Although first-time home buyers will continue to dominate the residential real estate market in the Midwest, "move-up" buyers are becoming prevalent in this area of the United States, said regional Century 21 Real Estate Corp. officials.

Low mortgage interest rates are causing many homeowners to move up to larger residences in Michigan, Ohio, Indiana and Kentucky, and are playing an important role in a projected rise in the average home selling price in Illinois, according to the Century 21 organization.

The overall Midwest market will remain solid, with a 5 percent increase in average home prices through 1993; Wisconsin is projected at 7 percent. Existing home sales this fall are well ahead of last year's figure and are expected to keep increasing through the remainder of the year.

Nationally, existing home sales for 1992 will probably be the highest they've been in four years, said Richard J. Loughlin, president and CEO of the Century 21 system.

"Nationwide, the real estate industry expects almost 3.5 million sales of existing homes this year, and we anticipate 1993 to be as strong or stronger," Loughlin said in a recent interview. "However, the recovery we're beginning to see is still very regionalized. While a majority of states are showing a sizable number of sales, others, such as California and the Northeastern states, are still rather sluggish in some areas."

While recent surveys show most Americans feel now is a good time to buy a home — especially with mortgage rates the lowest they've been in two decades — Loughlin noted that many potential buyers are reluctant due to economic uncertainty.

Loughlin expressed disappointment over the outcome of the recent urban aid/tax bill, also known as H.R. 11.

"By the time it worked its way through the congressional red tape, the bill was stripped of its most meaningful real estate provisions, such as the $2,500 tax credit for first-time home buyers," he said. "Sadly, government doesn't realize that homeownership is central to the American dream and the rejuvenation of our economy."

On Parian — The word "Parian" has two meanings. Originally, Parian was a type of fine-grained white marble. About 1840, Copeland & Garrett, an English pottery works at Stoke-on-Trent, made a new type of porcelain that had a marble-like appearance and was named Parian. The new material was easy to cast in molds and was popular for figurines and other decorative wares.

In 1945, a series of small limitededition statues were made by Copeland and Garrett for the Art Union of London. The statues were advertised, and the name Parian became well-known. Other firms began making Parian; Robinson & Leadbetter of England made nothing but Parian figures. The Continental makers also discovered the popularity of the ware.

At the New York Exhibition of 1853, Parian was introduced and soon many American firms began making portrait busts and figures of it. By the 1890s, Parian statues were colored and gilded, especially in France and Germany. The colored statues are still favored by collectors.

Q. I have my great grandmother's "traveling clock." It is in a rectangular case about 8 inches high, and there is a stiff permanent handle at the top of the case. The dial is enamel, and the clock has chimes. It is too large and too heavy to be used like today's small fold-up travel clocks. How was it used?

A. Your clock may be a traveling or carriage clock. They were first used in large horse-drawn carriages. Clocks were expensive luxuries. Travel was difficult, and a traveler often went for a long stay, so a wealthy traveler sometimes took a clock along on the trip.

The "carriage" clock style remained popular in the 19th century, and by the 1880s, many were made in France near Dieppe. The clock movements were added to the cases in Paris. By then the clock was used on a fireplace mantel.

Q. My transparent aqua glass spoon holder is a hand with molded flowers in the cuff. It is marked with a heart with a D inside. I think it is very old. Is it?

A. Your spoon holder was made by the Crystal Art Glass Co. of Cambridge, Ohio. John and Elizabeth Degenhart started the factory in 1947. It closed in 1978. The mark was used after 1972. The firm made paperweights and many small glass dishes. The hand dish sells for about $20.

Remodeling: When to stop

By Doug Strahahan

Regional Director

Century 21 of the Great Lakes

The classic way for homeowners to increase the value of their house is by remodeling existing rooms or adding on to its current plan.

Some choose to build recreation rooms and studies while others add new appliances, fixtures and cabinets to enliven rooms and make their home more attractive to future buyers.

But when should you decide to stop sinking money into a home and buy a bigger place? And how much rehab is too much when it comes to recovering remodeling costs through a home sale?

For instance, if you've just spent $1,000 remodeling your living room and didn't expand your small bathroom, the chances of increasing the number of interested buyers are slim.

With these concerns in mind, Century 21 sales associates offer a few tips for those struggling to add value to their home.

First, always protect the character of your home. Nothing sticks out more than a new addition that is in a completely different architectural style. Be consistent. Recognize your home's character and stay within its framework.

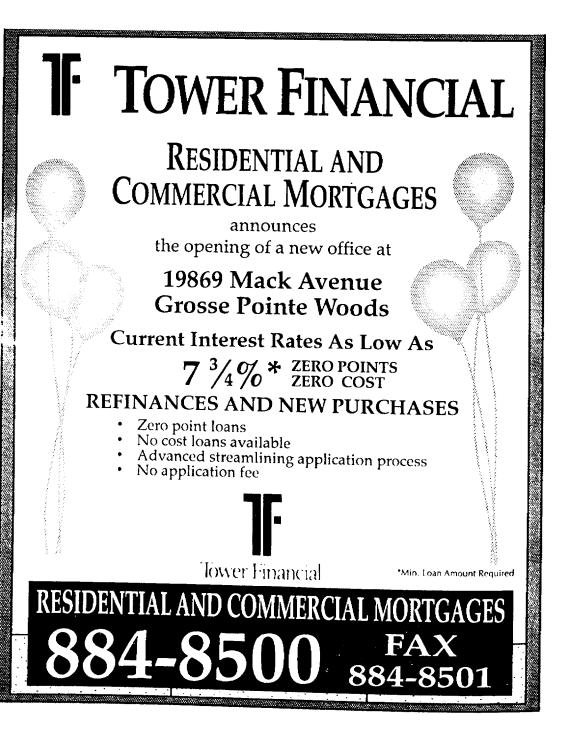

The most financially rewarding areas to remodel are usually the kitchen and bath. Newly re-done cooking spaces and cabinets can attract more buyers and may command a slightly higher price for the home than a comparable one on the market. Simple repairs that are made to last will bring you the biggest returns upon sale.

Enlarged bathrooms are the most popular attraction for new home buyers, according to the National Kitchen and Bath Association. Today, the most popular additions for younger buyers are sunken whirlpool baths and showers. But be sure to install modest, solid amenities. It's easy to quickly over-spend on bathroom fixtures.

Buyers are, by convention, more interested in above-ground living space — not basements, yards and walkways. Swimming pools can be a poor investment if installed for the sole purpose of increasing a home's value; it's rare that a pool's cost will be recovered in a home sale. It can also be a negative feature for potential buyers with very young children.

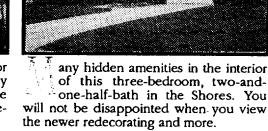

Replacing worn carpeting, tiles and wood floors can give your home an immediate advantage over similar properties in the area. Updating paint colors in all areas of your home can also prove beneficial.

Don't go overboard. Concentrate on improving two or three deficiencies in your home. More than likely, the time and money you spend adding quality to your home will be rewarded with greater profit at selling time.

Household Help by John Amantea

According to experts, glass windows and doors can be the weakest part of a building's exterior. They say that laminated glass is the best type for protecting against internal pressurization, a process that can trigger the total destruction of homes and businesses during a hurricane.

"When a window is hit with flying debris during a storm and breaks, hurricane winds can rush in and expose the structure to stresses and forces that it was probably not designed to resist," explained Joel Zingeser, of Building Technology Inc., an architectural consulting firm in Silver Spring, Md. "That's why it is critical for a building to remain sealed to the outside pressure during a severe storm."

The force can be powerful enough to severely damage or blow the roof off, along with trusses, shingles and sheathing. Within moments, a total structural collapse can be triggered.

Under present building codes, homes and commercial buildings are not required to withstand this kind of pressure.

'That's why it's so important to keep that hurricane out of the building, and why keeping glass windows in place is the first line of defense," said Dr. Joseph E. Minor, an internationally recognized wind engineering expert who has led investigations into more than 60 damaging storms around the world.

When it comes to storm resistance, not all glass is created equal, according to the experts. Laminated glass - the kind used in car windshields - consists of a plastic interlayer sandwiched between two sheets of glass. It may crack when impacted, but unlike ordinary annealed or tempered glass, it doesn't break into pieces because the glass fragments adhere to the plastic interlayer. If properly secured, laminated glass is designed to remain in place in the window frame, preventing internal pressurization of the structure damage from wind and rain.

A number of studies have demonstrated the effectiveness of using laminated glass in severe windstorms, and have shown that externally applied films and masking tape commonly used by consumers are ineffective solutions that can cause the glass window to be pulled from its frame during a storm.

Although laminated glass costs slightly more than ordinary glass, installing laminated glass may raise the total cost of a new window by 10 percent to 20 percent - a small additional investment to protect a home

THE RIGHT CHOICE RIGHT NOW... North Shore Villas in St. Clair Shores

Haven't the best purchases of your life been those that both made you happy and were of a lasting quality?

Certainly the home you buy should be visually pleasing and well constructed.

Piku Management Co. is offering spacious, custom built two-bedroom 'ranch villas," off of Masonic, just one block from Jefferson and St. Clair Shores Memorial Park.

The location couldn't be better, and due to current low interest rates, the time might never be better to move into a new home and enjoy a high quality of life for many years to come.

Let's discuss location first.

this 40 home development are sold it will be near impossible to find a similar quality housing development in the Shores area.

When Piku Management Co. bought the five and-one-half acre site to develop 10 ranch-style buildings with four homes each, they got some of the last land zoned for residential development in St. Clair Shores.

Additionally, Piku Management Co. is offering a Grand Opening Special. On the next three one-car garage homes sold, you can save 50 percent off the Deluxe Options.

A major reason r buying a home tile and linoleum.

Chris Piku, the builder, and his father Frank Piku, a developer for 37 years, are always accessible to their clients. They have built three condominium projects on the east side and have the experience to offer the very best in condominium living.

A standard one-car garage home is $98,900 while a Deluxe one-car garage home is $102,550 which includes a 50 percent savings on the Deluxe Option Package. And a standard two-car garage home is $109,900.

With 20 percent down, a buyer can move into the standard one-car home which sells for $98,900 with payments of $645.00 a month on a 20 year 7.65 percent mortgage. The Association Fee includes all exterior building and ground maintenance, landscaping, sprinkler system, snow removal, water, sewer and insurance on the entire home for only $85.00 a month.

North Shore Villas is between Harper and Jefferson off Masonic (13 1/2 mile) in St. Clair Shores. Piku Management Co. can be reached at 293-6760.

If your work constantly has you on the go, or you are retired and don't want to spend a lot of time traveling, the purchase of a new condominium for under $100,000 from Piku Management Co. is the right move for you.

Recreation and shopping are close by. The homes are within walking distance of Memorial Park on Lake St. Clair, area shopping, and the St. Clair Shores public golf course. The St. Clair Shores Community Education site is right next door offering adult education classes.

An added plus for the development is that it can only be entered off Masonic, thus eliminating through traffic, lessening noise, and providing greater security.

Everyone agrees location is important, but why buy now?

Aside from being table to take advantage of low interest rates, once the 15 remaining homes (eight onecar garage, eight two-car garage) of at North Shore Villas in St. Clair Shores is the opportunity to choose the design you want from five available floor plans.

Each home has two bedrooms, a basement, dining room, living room, kitchen with eating space, and the option to include two baths and a first floor laundry. Every buyer gets to make adjustments to their floor plan to achieve a home more reflective of their personality, such as deciding to move a wall back to create more space, or to take a wall out altogether. Buyers can choose to put in a fireplace, or an interior finish to their liking, such as cabinets, counter tops,

Why Jim and Shirley made the right choice!

Right away Jim and Shirley Kollar admit they have made more changes to their original floor plan than any other buyers at North Shore Villas, located on Masonic west of Jefferson in St. Clair Shores

That's a big reason why they bought a twocar garage home for just over $100,000 from Frank and Chris Piku, the father and son team who run Piku Management Co. They couldn't resist the freedom (and encouragement) they received to make the changes that were important to them.

The Kollars, who moved to Michigan from Virginia last year, knew in advance the features of a new home that they couldn't live without.

The ranch-style condominiums being offered by Piku Management Co. already satisfied most of the Kollars desires, and the modifications they did request were taken care of professionally and without question.

"You never get shortchanged with Piku," said Shirley. "Their attitude is that what you want is the way it will be."

Right from the start of construction Chris Piku worked hand-in-hand with Jim and Shirley to accommodate the requirements they had for a perfect home.

"Chris had a kitchen and bath designer come out to the construction site to take our suggestions," said Jim. With the designer, Jim and Shirley drew up all the kitchen specifications on the floor of the future kitchen.

"As they were building our home we got to know all the carpenters, electricians, and everybody who had a part in it," said Shirley.

What the Kollars couldn't live without was already a basic part of every home built at North Shore Villas

One, they had to have an attached garage to save wear and tear on their car during the winter. Shirley said it was no fun bringing in groceries from the outside during the cold and snowy winters.

Secondly, the Kollars wanted the convenience of having everything on one floor, especially the master bedroom.

MASONIC

We felt we were getting older and we didn't want to have a move in a few years because we couldn't take three floors, or a larger place," said Shirley

And finally, Jim said that a full basement was a "must" to store much of their belongings.

Changes they were allows to make to the original floor plan only confirmed their belief that they were right to buy a home through Piku Management Co.

Changes like moving a wall closet out of the living room to create more space, adding two extra linen closets, having the washer and dryer installed in the basement to free up space to expand the kitchen and allow for an extra long counter to and cabinets, having bardwood flooring put in, putting a cedar closet in the אריות ביש שברעובי ערמבנו בערכת בערכת בערכת בערכת בערכת ב basement, and replacing a wall between the kitchen and dining rooms with a food bar to create a feeling of openness so that it seems the kitchen, dining and living rooms flow into each other.

Jim mentioned other reasons for buying at North Shore Villas. The convenience of nearby shopping, the fact that he is only 15 minutes from his job at General Dynamics, that he and Shirley like to play golf and a course is only three blocks away, and that the two of them can leave on trips without security concerns.

Shirley said it's nice having Memorial Park little more than a block away because she enjoys the view of Lake St. Clair.

The Kollars couldn't be happier with Piku Management Co., who still have homes available

"This is everything we wanted in a house," said Shirley. "We love this house, it's really nice.'

Football final has everything but playoff berth

Sports Editor

Grosse Pointe North's Frank Sumbera knows all the angles it takes to win a football game.

"I always joke with my kids and the coaches that I know the angles from teaching drafting," Sumbera said after the Norsemen beat Grosse Pointe South 24-20 in a thrilling nonleague finale between the crosstown rivals.

"We had to do a lot of angle blocking because of South's size advantage. We blocked down, looped around and used combination blocks. We couldn't go after them one-on-one."

The only thing the game didn't provide for the big crowd was a state playoff berth for the winner.

North's victory spoiled South's hopes of making the Class A playoffs, but it wasn't enough to put the Norsemen into post-season play.

"We missed by 2 1/2 points," Sumbera said. "It would have been nice to be practicing this week, but I don't feel real empty. I could see this coming after we lost to Warren Woods-Tower. We went 7-2. That's a great year."

South ended the season with a 6-3 record. The Blue Devils' only other defeats came against playoff-bound Fraser (9-0) and Romeo (8-1).

"I'm so proud of the seniors who played 18 extremely competitive games over the last two seasons," said South coach Jon Rice. "They've never been out of a game for two years. Sure, it's disappointing to not make the playoffs, but we did dot like our loss to Tower with the best we could. We told the kids to play as hard as they could and then let the chips fall where they may. We couldn't have asked for a better effort." North made a huge improvement after losing 35-0 to Fraser in the season opener "We went through something like this in '84," Sumbera said. "It was a young team like this one and Brother Rice spanked us 34-0 in the opener. The next week we lost 14-13 to L'Anse Creuse in a game that was a turnovers and interceptions. We won our last seven and beat South 3.0 on Craig Como's field goal in overtime.

"This group almost pulled off the same thing. We played well against Mount Clemens in our second game, then slipped against Tower, but after that we just got rolling.

North scored the winning touchdown with 10:50 left in the fourth quarter on a 68-yard run by Eric Peters. Scott Spada, who sealed the win with a 33-yard field goal with 17 seconds remaining, added the extra point that turned out to be the difference in the game.

South came back to score on its next possession when Aaron Letscher caught Scott Lupo's deflected pass for a 10-yard touchdown. It was Letscher's third touchdown reception of the game and brought the Blue Devils within a point, 21-20, with 8:01 remaining.

North linebacker Chuck Heaphy then made one of the key plays of the game when he blocked Tim Harmount's extrapoint attempt.

"He almost blocked the point after the second touchdown, but he stumbled over somebody's foot," Sumbera said. "When they scored the third touchdown we told him to go in as hard as he could. He actually had to slow down so he could make the block."

The Norsemen then mounted a 13-play drive that consumed all but the final 17 seconds of the game. North drove to South's 16 before settling for Spada's field goal.

South missed a chance to take an early lead when a motion penalty nullified an eightyard touchdown pass from Lupo to Ryan McCartney. The Blue Devils took the opening kickoff and drove from their 20 to North's eight behind the running of Chad Hepner, who closed out his high school career with 178 yards in total offense. Hepner had runs of 20 and 37 yards in the first drive.

"It would have been nice to score after moving the ball  $\sim 0$ well," Rice said. "We got down the field so fast, then had the touchdown taken away and came out of it with nothing.

"But the play that hurt the most was the long run on the play after we tied the score at 14-14. Everything was going our way and then (Peters) broke it for 68 vards. Then the blocked extra point was obviously big, too.

South opened the scoring with 4:09 left in the first half when Letscher got behind North's secondary and hauled in a 41-yard scoring strike from Lupo. Harmount added the extra point.

North drove 64 yards in eight plays on its next possession and tied the score at 7-7 with 1:27 remaining in the second quarter on a 14-yard pass from Spada to tight end Matt Dube.

Key plays in the drive were a 19-yard scramble by Spada and a 16-yard shovel pass to Dube Spada completed nine of 15 passes for 132 yards and threw the ball better than he has all season.

"That's the first game he's played without his thumb in a cast," Sumbera said. "He had a lot more zip on the ball. His passing statistics would have been much better if he had been healthy all season."

Spada injured the ligaments in the thumb during North's pre-season scrimmage but played in all nine games.

Lupo also turned in a fine performance in his final high

Jessica McLalin may be riding "Chariots of Fire" into in all state cross country berth on Saturday.

That's the theme song Grosse Pointe North coach Charles Buhagiar and athletic director Tom Gauerke picked out for the Lady Norsemen's senior standout, who has set a goal of earning all-state honors.

"She's been having a little trouble with her stride and since she's such a good musician we wanted to find a song that relates to what she's supposed to do," Gauerke said. "Something like 'Chariots of Fire' would pick it up just right.'

A strong showing in the state meet would cap an outstanding year for McLalin, who has been on North's girls team since her freshman season.

Buhagiar said there's no reason why she shouldn't achieve her goal.

"She's been in the top 20 at the state meet before so she knows what it's all about," he said. "It takes most kids at least one or two times at the state meet before they feel comfortable. She's been there all four years.'

McLalin knows what she has to do to make a good showing on the tough Flint IMA golf course, the site of the state Class A meet.

"I have to get out with the front-runners, and then stay there," she said. "I've run against a lot of the top runners in the state so I have a good idea of what the competition will be.

McLalin's style of running is to grab the lead early and hold

"She likes to control the race or be in a position of taking control when she wants to,' Buhagiar said.

McLalin won invitationals at Holly and Royal Oak Shrine sophomore she just ran through and was second at West Bloomfield and runner-up in the Ma comb Area Conference Blue Division meet at Metropolitan Beach. She was undefeated in dual meets until finishing second behind Grosse Pointe South's Heidi Wise last week. Buhagiar has seen a lot of improvement since McLalin was a freshman just getting started in cross country. "It takes a while to under stand what running is all about," Buhagiar said. "Jessica has finally come to understand that you don't run against your opponent, the race is against vourself. There's little you can do to influence your opponent's race, but there's a lot you can do with your own race.

"Jessica now has a race plan. When she was a freshman and the meet, but now she races." McLalin carries a 4.2 gradepoint-average and is an accomplished flutist.

"She has the urge to be the best she can in anything she does and that carries over into her running," Buhagiar said.

McLalin had never run until her freshman year.

"Mr. Gauerke came to our middle school and talked about sports and I thought it would be fun to try cross country, she said. "I thought it would be a good way to get into shape and I'd never been on a team before and I wanted to get into some kind of athletics."

McLalin has never regretted getting involved with cross country.

"I enjoy the team aspect," and we've been together since we were freshmen. I also like the individual part of running where you can set goals for yourself.

3C

McLalin's best race was a recent dual meet at Dodge Park in Sterling Heights, where she ran away from the rest of the field and was clocked in 19:01.

"I don't think I've ever run better and I was by myself for most of the race," she said. "It's tough when you're alone. You have an idea of how fast you're going, but you don't know if you're going as fast as you think.

No matter where McLalin finishes in this year's state meet, she'll give it her best

"That's just the way I am," she said. "I have a lot of close she said. "Whatever I do, I try friends who are my teammates - to do to the best of my ability.

Tradition continues for North, South

By Chuck Klonke Sports Editor

It wouldn't be a state cross country meet without the girls teams from Grosse Pointe North and Grosse Pointe South. South took first in the Class A regional at Metropolitan Beach last Saturday to advance to the state finals for the 13th straight season, while North's third-place finish ran its string

"Our first six girls really came in packed tightly together," said Lady Devils' coach Steve Zaranek after his team took six of the first 13 spots to finish with 36 points.

Runner-up Port Huron Northern had 64 points and North wound up with 124 for an eight-point margin over fourth-place Detroit Cass Tech. Regina was fifth with 153.

Cass Tech's Erica Shepard was the individual champion with a 19:27 clocking.

"Our success this year has been to run together and they've followed the strategy well," Zaranek said. "We try to get into a position to win by the mile mark and then solidify it at the two-mile mark. They've done a good job of keying off each other.

Zaranek doesn't plan any major changes in strategy for Saturday's state meet at the Flint IMA Brookwood golf course

"We're just going to solidify what we've been doing," he said. "We'll remind them of where they should be relative to each other at various points on the course. It's easy to get lost in the numbers at a big meet like that and you can get thrown out of your race. There's such a high percentage of quality runners at the state in the series between the two and the key is to run under control. Sometimes in a big meet there's a tendency to go

"There are about 13 teams that are real close and we'd like to think we're among them," he said.

Heidi Wise led South's runners with a third overall in the regional as she covered the three miles in 19:54. Her sister Melissa was fourth in 20:03, followed by Rachel O'Byrne, seventh, 20:22; Mary Rowe, 10th, 20:29; Sandy Dierkes,

12th, 20:38; Amy Balok, 13th, 20:47; and Katie Weed, 33rd, Melissa Wise, O'Byrne and Rowe each posted season-best times.

21:56

North won't be one of the favorites for a state championship, but coach Charles Buhagiar expects to be pleased with the showing in Saturday's meet.

'We've had to work hard this year and we'll just try to do as well as we can and carry on the tradition," he said.

North had an outstanding performance from Becky Clor, who finished 25th overall in the regional.

"She ran with a stress fracture in her foot that would have kept a lot of runners out of the race," Buhagiar said. She overcame the pain and her time (21:33) wasn't a whole lot slower than usual. At her best she's in the low 21s.

Jessica McLalin was fifth overall for North with a 20:18 clocking. Nina Misuraca was 24th in 21:32; Alissa Zepke, 29th, 21:49; and Anna Collinson, 46th, 22:43.

South runners dominated the junior varsity race, taking the first 13 places and 22 of the top 30 positions.

Junior Eileen Lang won the race in 20:52, followed by Sarah Gordon, 21:20; Laura Stuckey, 21:22; Aimee Vasse, 21:27; Lisa McCurdy, 21:28; Kate Callas, 21:52; Katie Quinn, 22:09; Stephanie Kiem, 22:10; Heather Whitten, 22:29; and Becca Pope, 22:37.

performances were Karessa Kuntz, Martha Kerfoot, Maria Ksenzenko, Kyle Murphy, Sara Black, Alexa Olzark, Becky McCurdy, Anita Taylor, Rebecca Hancock, Chris Bossler, Kathy Leisen and Tori Buckner.

The Blue Devils tied the game on the second play of the fourth quarter when Letscher used his height advantage to haul in a 23-yard touchdown pass from Lupo to cap a 75yard march. Harmount's extra point tied the score at 14-14.

North brought the kickoff back to the 32 and on the next play, Peters went left, cut back up the middle and raced into the end zone. Dube, Donny Tocco and Jeff Adams provided key blocks for the sophomore speedster.

"That was a highlight film play all the way around," Sumbera said. "We think Eric has the potential to be an outstanding back. He's done nothing but get better with his running and blocking. He's as good at blocking as any 10th-grade back we've had."

South boys first in regional

By Chuck Klonke Sports Editor

Grosse Pointe South's boys cross country coach Tom Wise hopes his team's appearance in Saturday's Class A state meet is habit forming.

"This is the first time in eight years so it's good to be back." Wise said after the Blue Devils took first place in the Class A regional hosted by South at Metropolitan Beach.

South finished with 66 points, while runner-up Port Huron Northern had 81. Thirdplace East Detroit was the other team that qualified from the regional.

Grosse Pointe North's squad finished sixth, but gualified Bill Stevenson for the Class A individual meet.

"We have some good young runners so we're hoping this is the start of something," Wise said. "We have some real competitive seniors who helped us reach this level and they're doing a good job of educating the freshmen as to what's needed to compete among the best teams in the state."

South's Dan Quinn was fourth overall in the regional and led the Blue Devils with a 16:37 clocking.

He was followed by Pat Butler, 12th, 17:18; Tim Nicholson, 14th, 17:20; Josh Wood, 18th, 17:21; Dan Taylor, 25th, 17:36; Adam Rhodes, 26th, 17:37; and Tom Coyle, 43rd, 18:11.

"Adam really helped us by pushing out other teams' No. 5 runners," Wise said. "That group of three (Butler, Nicholson and Wood) that was bunched together helped win it for us, too.'

Wise was disappointed with South's showing in last week's Macomb Area Conference White Division meet and he addressed the problem in a team meeting last Monday.

"I asked the kids what they thought the problem was last week and they thought they might have been tired so we rested all week. We kind of tapered down until the regional. Then I left it up to them. We didn't have any special strategy, but the kids did a tremendous job. They've been like that the regional.

all year. When we ask them to do something, they do it," Wise said.

South's best showing at a state meet was a 24th place and Wise thinks his team can improve on that.

'One of our season goals was to make our best showing ever in the state and we have a solid shot at doing that," he said.

The Blue Devils had the first five runners across the finish line in the junior varsity race at the regional and Matt Debski, who won in 17:52, earned a spot among the top seven runners South will take to the state meet.

Rounding out the Blue Devils' top five were Nat Spurr. 18:01; Chris Johnson, 18:10; Pete Gillespie, 18:13; and Jon VanHoek, 18:15.

"They'll all be important runners for us next year." Wise said.

Two North runners - Mike Hamlin and Jeff Profeta turned in personal best times at keep the pots boiling while the old master chats with his fans. Aldo couldn't have done it in the old days. Still, he remembers those busy days fondly, and he seems to regret giving up the place that bore his name and the menu on which virtually everything was "alla Aldo." Now "alla Aldos" are more discreetly sprinkled through the menu, just three of them among the dishes from Rome (his hometown), Venice, Milan and New York (steak, of course).

Aldo Ottaviani is obviously rejuvenated in his new role as chef-patriarch. He looks hearty and relaxed and is reverently referred to by all at Andiamo as "Mr. Aldo." That's appropriate, considering what a difference his presence has made. The kitchen is much improved at this restaurant that was less than thrilling before Mr. Aldo's arrival. And even after he was on the scene, it took some time to get the place rolling.

Now, I'm impressed with its fresh spirit and the kitchen that seems to be humming along in fine form, well represented in the dining room by a sharp young staff that knows the menu and discusses it intelligently.

At dunce this week on a usually quiet Thesday night, it wasn't so quiet at Audona after all. There was an

Our table started with ravioli verdi (who could resist Mr. Aldo's recommendation?), and it was excellent, the green pillows stuffed lightly with finely minced chicken and yeal in a robust tomato sauce. Then some of the excellent minestrone alla Milanese. There's no soup any better when it is prepared with care, as it is here — full of random-cut vegetables and bits of paskitchen, including talented young chef Jeffrey Kay, to ta in broth that has picked up all of the flavors.

Maybe the salad course is a bit routine, with its simple lettuce and cucumber approach in creamy garlic or raspberry vinaigrette dressing, but main courses rise well above that. In fact, the bocconcini di vitello alla Aldo (plump medallions of yeal tenderloin with a thin yeil of Fontina, sparked with tomato and prosciutto) was one of the best yeal dishes sampled this year. The other element on the plate was an array of firm-but-tender miniature fall vegetables brightened with tarragon. Lovely.

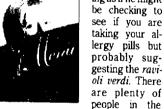

And so were the marinated, charbroiled spring lamb chops, five of them on the plate, and completely self-sufficient without the side dish of mint jelly. They were also accompanied by the tiny fall veggies.

The menu offers a number of appealing choices, from the house-made pastas including fettucine with tomato and vodka sauce, lasagna with meat sauce, and gnocchi in a choice of sauces, to made-to-order risotto, chicken sauteed with wine and black olives, and Dover sole with tarragonbutter sauce.

Let's not even talk about the pastry tray. No wonder the rooms are full of life on Tuesday.  $\bigstar \bigstar \bigstar$

Knights reign in regional

By John Miskelly Special Writer

Revenge may be too strong a word, but that's exactly what the University Liggett School boys soccer team exacted from Riverview Gabriel Richard in last Saturday's Class C-D regional championship game.

ULS and Richard met on the Knights' home turf for the second year in a row and this time ULS advanced to Wednesday's championship game with a 2-0 victory over the Pioneers. Last season. Richard was a 3-1 winner

"It was sweet," ULS coach David Backhurst said about the reversal of his team's fortunes. "They (Richard) had a great season. We had a little added incentive.

Richard finished the season with a 17-5 record while ULS took a 12-8-2 mark into the semifinal game at Goodrich against Ann Arbor Greenhills. A victory by the Knights would send them into the Class C-D championship game Saturday at 11 a.m. at Bloomfield Hills Andover.

About 150 fans, including new Colorado Rockies' manager Don Baylor, watched ULS score two first-half goals and then look to senior goalkeeper Vince Harkins to preserve the lead.

Matt Spicer scored during the 13th minute on an assist from Omar Sawaf. Fourteen minutes later, Frank Tymrak gave the Knights a two-goal lead with Henry Ackerman assisting.

Tymrak had a tremendous individual effort as he leftfooted the ball past the Pioneers' netminder while two defenders were closely marking him.

ULS might have had an even bigger lead at halftime, but the Knights drove two shots off the goalposts.

The one damper on the firsthalf performance was a knee injury sustained by senior midfielder Gary Spicer, who had to leave the game and was unable to return.

The second half belonged to Harkins. When the Pioneers applied pressure they were turned away by the goalkeeper's aggressive play.

"He didn't fumble anything," Backhurst said of Harkins' ability to come out of the goal crease and pick off Richard's scoring attempts.

Harkins' 12 saves weren't the only bright spots on defense for the Knights, who got strong games from sophomores Chris Corneau and Tom Simmonds.

"The second half was a nailbiter all the way," Backhurst said. "It was great."

Harkins, who has given up only two goals in the last two games, received the loudest cheer from the home fans when the Knights received their medals.

"Our team is on a roll," Backhurst said. "We're peaking at the right time."

The regional championship was ULS' first since 1989.

South still slick on the court

By Chuck Klonke

Sports Editor

Grosse Pointe South's girls basketball team is playing just as well as its scores indicate. The Lady Devils improved to 10-0 in the Macomb Area Conference White Division and ran their winning streak to 15 games, after dropping the season opener, with a 59-34 victory over Anchor Bay and a 71-22 romp over Fraser last week. "We're trying to accomplish certain things in each game and we've been successful," said coach Peggy VanEckoute. "We've been getting a lot of people into the games and they've all been contributing. In one game 10 of the 12 scored and in the other game 10 of the 11 we dressed scored.

"With four games left in the regular season, we have to pick it up a little bit to get ready for the tournament. Hopefully, the other coaches will understand.'

Angela Drake had a big game against Anchor Bay as she scored 20 points, pulled down 15 rebounds and blocked four shots. Stephanie Coddens had 12 points, four assists and four steals; Jeneane Farr scored six points; and Shannon Mc-Gratty collected five points and McGratty, a sophomore, had one of her best all-around performances in the Fraser game when she scored eight points, grabbed 12 rebounds and had three steals.

Drake added 18 points, 10 rebounds and three blocks, while Coddens had 17 points, three assists and seven steals. Chris Howson came off the bench to score six points.

South built a 41-5 halftime lead against the Ramblers.

North Stars win

Steve Thiel scored two thirdperiod goals, the second coming with 10 seconds remaining, to give the Michigan North Stars a 2.1 victory over the Eastpointe Blazers in the Little Caesars Squirt A Travel Hockey League.

Jonathan McPharlin fed Thiel a perfect pass to set up the winning goal. Mark Kujawski drew assists on both goals.

Rich Cicala scored for the Blazers.

North Stars' goalies Kyle Tannheimer and Jason Kies played well, as did defensemen Kevin Dunbar, Dan Tannheimer, Charley Starr and forward Adam Raab.
