

Are public library records the business of busybodies?

By Shirley A. McShane
Staff Writer

Ever wonder what the mayor's reading list looks like? Maybe not. How about what your 10-year-old son is checking out of the public library — ever wonder about that?

Forget about it. The Grosse Pointe board of library trustees discussed the Michigan Library Privacy Act at its Feb. 22 meeting. The board is expected to take action on whether it will incorporate the act into the public library's policy manual at its April 26 meeting.

Passed in 1983, the Library Privacy Act protects the confidentiality of circulation records, said library director Charles Hanson.

The board of library trustees, which is also the board of education, began meeting on a regular basis last fall to devote more attention to needs and issues pertaining to Grosse Pointe's three public libraries.

"One thing I'm making them aware of is the number of policies pertaining to the library that are not in our policy manual," Hanson said. "We've probably always operated under these policies, but we want to make sure they are in the manual and part of our working operations."

The board discussed whether a person could walk into a library and ask to see circulation records on, say, the superintendent of schools. Trustees also talked about the possibility of parents wanting to access their child's library records. If adopted by the board, the act would not permit the library to release such information.

Board president Gloria Konsler said she has no problem with privacy protection when it is applied to adult patrons, but was concerned with parents' reactions if a librarian told them their child's records were none of their business.

Mabel Hawkins, who works in the library's technical services department, said the library's computer system is currently set up to show only the books a patron has checked out that are overdue. The computer software could be set up to show a patron's circulation record, but the library has not chosen to execute that option.

"I don't want to encourage parents to check on their child's reading list, but certainly if a parent wants to know, I don't feel comfortable saying they cannot," Konsler said.

Trustee Carol Marr said she believes the main concern of parents would be to make sure their child doesn't have any overdue or lost library books.

The board referred the act to the district's legal counsel for clarification.

City cop delivers — a girl!

By Shirley A. McShane
Staff Writer

The police activity log at the Grosse Pointe City Public Safety Department lists a Feb. 25 event in the most clinical of terms: "Emergency childbirth, delivered infant and transported mother and child to Bon Secours."

But for public safety Sgt. Edward Tujaka, helping City resident Monica Barbour deliver Katherine Leigh into the world was one of the most exhilarating moments in his life.

Tujaka was on patrol about 12:45 p.m. in the area of the Barbour residence, which is one block away from Bon Secours Hospital, when the dispatcher told him to respond to a house on Cranford Lane because a woman was going into labor.

"I thought I was just going to take her to the hospital," Tujaka said. "It's been close a lot of times, but we've always made it to the hospital."

He admitted he was nervous as he walked up to the house. When he opened the front door and walked in, he saw Barbour in the second-floor hallway, lying on her side, trying to turn over. He also noticed that she was well into labor and ready to deliver her baby.

"I realized I had to do it now," he said. "There was no time to go to the hospital. So I just told her to breathe and to push. Most of this came from what I've seen on TV."

Tujaka was promoted to sergeant in January and has been with the City public safety department for seven years. He had 10 years' experience with another department before that, but it has been a number of years since he was trained on what to do when called upon to assist in childbirth.

Barbour, 38, who is an attorney for NBD Bank, said she was one day overdue when she began feeling contractions around noon. She wasn't concerned — yet.

At 12:30 her water broke. She called her husband back and his secretary said he had left the office.

"All of a sudden, with the next contraction, the baby started coming," she said. "I called my nanny (Elma Quinn, who was in the house at the time) and told her to dial 911, thinking they would come and take me to the hospital."

At 12:47, Tujaka and Quinn had helped Barbour deliver her baby girl and paramedics were preparing to take her to the hospital.

"My husband got there while I was delivering her," she said. "I think he was surprised when he saw the police there. And when he came up the stairs and he saw the police officer and the nanny delivering the baby, I think he was beside himself a little bit."

The whole thing happened so fast, Barbour said she didn't have time to be scared.

"It was a mixed blessing," she said. "I didn't have a lot of pain, but then, I didn't want to have my baby in my house. It's a mystery to me. It isn't like I ignored the signs. I did have a short first labor (for her son, now 3) so I was forewarned. But I thought I'd at least be in labor for a couple hours."

Tujaka said he, too, was relieved when the baby was born without any complications. He said as soon as the baby was delivered, he wrapped her in a towel and carried her into the bathroom to keep her warm.

"I was looking at her tiny hands and she reached out and wrapped her hand around my finger," he said. "Then she opened her eyes. I was ecstatic. I love kids and this was such a kick like you wouldn't believe."

Star of Sea High School survival chances brighten

By Shirley A. McShane
Staff Writer

The news last month that Our Lady Star of the Sea High School may be in its last year of operation came as a crushing blow to parents, students and staff at the all-girls institution in Grosse Pointe Woods.

So when the Archdiocese of Detroit announced on Feb. 26 that it would act upon the parish council's recommendation to change the school's status from a parish school to a regional school, and thereby keep its doors open, moods soared from despair to elation.

"I thought the school would close," said alumna Joanne Gerstner, who is now a journalism major at Oakland University. "I received a phone call on Friday afternoon and was totally thunderstruck. It made my weekend. It made the whole year. Everyone is very excited that Star is staying open."

Gerstner, who graduated from Star in 1989, still visits the school regularly. She described the mood of teachers and students as joyous after a visit on Monday.

"I think the community realized what a tragedy it would have been if the high school had closed. This was a good wake-up call for the alumni and the different groups trying to organize. Hopefully we can all work together on this instead of against each other," Gerstner said.

Archbishop Adam Maida's proposal to change Star of the Sea to a regional school governed by a board of directors came one month after the parish council mailed a letter to Maida recommending that unless the school received some financial support, it should be closed.

"Maida considered it all," said parish monsignor Dennis Haritty. "He heard a presentation from the group (of parents and parishioners) who wanted to continue the school and accept responsibility for it and last Friday he proposed the parish be relieved of its financial responsibility."

The parish council approved Maida's proposal at a March 1 meeting, Haritty said. The board of directors — yet to be appointed — will be responsible for raising the necessary funds to support the school.

"The parish council had concerns about what would be the relationship between the high school and the rest of the parish," Haritty said. "An agree-

Teen drinking: Control needed

By Shirley A. McShane
Staff Writer

A cloud of adverse publicity shrouded Grosse Pointe South High School last week, upsetting administrators and parents, who said their efforts to do something positive had been translated into negative headlines and TV broadcasts.

The dispute began when school leaders called a Feb. 23 meeting to get parental feedback on how the schools should handle students who arrive intoxicated at school functions. Events escalated and tempers flared as some citizens in the district felt the media had distorted the story and created a "circus atmosphere."

"I think the feeling is that if someone speaks up, people think there must be a big problem," said South principal John Artis. "That is not the case."

Teen drinking is not a Grosse Pointe problem, it's a societal problem."

Artis said a number of factors contributed to the publicity focused on the incident.

"I think the reaction is because it's Grosse Pointe; people hold us up to some form of critique. People know of it as an affluent community and the feeling among people is that Grosse Pointe protects its own. They feel we keep things quiet in an almost deliberate way, and when something does pop up, it becomes newsworthy," he said. In fact, Artis said one of his colleagues in a neighboring city said his school district held the same meeting on the same night and the gathering was sparsely attended and drew no media attention.

Despite the meeting's rocky start, Artis characterized it as a mixture of good news and bad news. The good news, he said, is that the forum generated a variety of opinions and suggestions from parents and students. The bad news, he said, is the district had to spend a significant amount of time getting past the publicity and down to the meat of the matter.

"The general tenor of the meeting is that the problem is beyond any one singular solution and that the issue is not new," Artis said. "What I was looking for was feedback from parents regarding the specific issue of the dances, the measures that have been taken, and what measures we could possibly take in the future."

"I got some of that. But I

First-term Grosse Pointe county commissioner Andrew Richner learned quickly that business as usual in the City-County Building is about as hard for him to change as it is for a fellow Republican at the Capitol.

Richner finds path to change rocky

By John Minnis
Editor

Rookie county commissioner Andrew Richner from Grosse Pointe Park has something in common with President Bill Clinton, and it's not politics.

Richner, a Republican who was elected to his first term on the 15-member county board in November, is finding, like Clinton, that change is difficult in a huge bureaucracy.

"I'm trying to change the system," said the 31-year-old commissioner during an interview in his City-County Building office. "I'm only one person, unfortunately. There's a lot of inertia. County government has been building up and building up."

His goal is to slow down the growth of government and, he hopes, downsize it, but he realizes that as one of just two Republicans on the board, it won't be easy.

"I'd like to cut taxes," he said. "It would help to have the majority on the board. I view my role as the stick in the spokes of a wheel. I'm trying to slow government spending down. I've brought views on how we can cut the cost of government and relieve the burden on the taxpayer. At least my view is heard."

about 5,000 different students during his 28-year career.

He remembers nearly every one, and can recall their names when they come back to visit.

"Some of my first students are in their 40s now, so it's getting harder," he said.

Silverston enjoys working with middle school students and he enjoys math. He looks at each new academic year — each semester — each day, in fact — with fresh anticipation.

"I know what hum-drum work is like," he said. "I've worked in a factory. I've worked in a machine shop. I know the feeling of doing the same thing, over and over, 10 hours a day."

"But I have never, in the last 28 years, had two days the same. Each day is exciting and new."

"Even if you're not in the majority, you can still influence policy."

ment will have to be worked out and further approved by the parish council."

Although many details of the plan need to be worked out, Ned McGrath, a spokesman for the archdiocese, said the archdiocese has every reason to hope the school's new board of directors will be successful in their efforts to revitalize the high school.

"There are not too many parishes that can support a high school," McGrath said. "Most high schools in the archdiocese are supported by a religious order, like Dominican High School, which is supported by the Dominican order of nuns, or University of Detroit, which is run by the Jesuits."

McGrath said Maida made his decision to keep the school open based on the commitment and pledged resources of those interested in saving it.

One such group is Save Our Star (SOS) made up of parents and parishioners who searched for alternatives for funding, including a gradual increase in tuition; ongoing fundraising by students, parents and alumni; and gift solicitation to be directed by a board of directors.

"It always has been the council's hope to keep the school open," Harrity said. "The problem was the financial burden on the parish."

"And the greatest pleasure comes when a child says, 'I understand.'"

Silverston likes middle school students — sixth, seventh and eighth graders.

"In middle school, you can still turn on the math light," he said. "It's not too late, even if they've had a few frustrating years with math. Also, middle school kids are persistent. If they think you're willing to show them how to do something, they'll stick with it. High school kids aren't as patient."

Silverston grew up in Dearborn Heights and earned a bachelor's degree from Wayne State University in 1964, with a major in biology and a minor in math.

He began teaching in Dearborn Heights in 1964. He moved to the Grosse Pointe schools five years later, as a biology teacher. He earned a master's degree in junior high school curriculum from Eastern Michigan University in 1970.

"Parcells needed another math teacher. I started with one section, then two. Within a few years I was back in school at Madonna College to get a computer science degree, again with a math minor," he said.

Students' work fills every inch of bulletin board space in Silverston's classroom. Each student has his own designated space, marked by his name. Each student is responsible for displaying his own work — whatever he or she is proud of. Most of the bulletin boards are covered with A and A-plus test papers, awards and certificates kids have earned in various math competitions.

One of those is Mathcounts, a regional math competition. Silverston has been taking a team of students (who are selected on the basis of their performance on an in-school test) to Mathcounts for 10 years. They nearly always return with cardboard boxes stuffed with commendations, certificates and trophies.

Silverston was chosen Mathcounts' coach of the year for 1993. All of this year's trophies and certificates are on display in the hallway of the school.

Silverston and his wife, Maria, have two daughters, Jennifer, 14, and Amy, 10. Maria Silverston is a systems analyst for Chrysler Corp.

Jennifer describes her father: "He has a sense of humor most people don't understand and he's good at math."

"Teachers — and people in general — are too serious," Silverston said. "I can make math fun; not tense. In this room, a child is never afraid to try an answer. If he or she is wrong — it isn't a big deal. If he or she is right: Wow."

"We have a lot of fun. Rarely do I conduct a class without at least one good laugh."

Silverston is teaching three eighth grade math classes and one honors math class this

"They've treated me fairly, like any other commissioner down here," he said. "I have great committee assignments. I'm vice chair of a good committee. They expect me to work with them and when it comes to an issue in my area, I expect the courtesy from them."

"We two Republicans can expose or question things that weren't explained in the past. I'm in the same position representatives in Congress are."

Richner said first-off he is trying to live up to his campaign promises.

One promise was to curtail the use of franking privileges, particularly when campaign season rolls around. He said he has introduced a resolution calling for similar mailing guidelines as those used by the state Senate. His resolution is stiffer than the Senate rule, he said, and calls for a prohibition on county-paid commissioner mailings 60 days before they are up for election.

He said he's also looking for more ways that county government can privatize services to save money through competitive bidding.

"I was astounded to see how many services are already contracted out," he said. "If we come up with a specific proposal, it has to save the county money or we won't do it."

He believes that because privatization of services is already being done to some extent at the county level, he could get support for more if it saves money and provides better service.

His biggest surprise with county government was how involved it is in so many areas.

"We have airports to parks to health care," he said. "We have a miniature Congress with the same committees and offices at the executive level."

Richner realizes that downsizing government could mean fewer county jobs.

"Wayne County does so much," he said. "It's a lot of responsibility. We affect a lot of people's lives."

"Yet, I've been elected to represent the people in my district. I have to do what's in their best interest."

He said he has already slashed office expenses from his predecessor's $85,000 a year to an estimated $30,000 for his first year in office.

"That's not to say I saved the taxpayers money," he said.

"It's been budgeted. The commission controls it."

He acknowledges, however, that his predecessor, David Cavanagh of Grosse Pointe Woods, was vice chairman of the commission and chairman of the powerful roads committee, both requiring more staff.

Richner is paid $41,996 a year for what is considered a part-time position. The salary is set by county charter, though Richner admits it sounds like a lot for a part-time job. He said part of his salary will be used to set up a scholarship fund for his district, which includes the five Pointes, Harper Woods and a portion of Detroit.

He pointed out that his district is represented in part by two state representatives and that their positions are considered full-time.

Richner was a lawyer with a downtown firm before becoming a commissioner. He said that because he spends so much time on county business, he left the firm and started his own practice, where he can set his hours.

"I gave up a lot to come here," he said, "and I feel taxpayers are getting value for their money."

year. He's also the school's computer coordinator.

"Parcells is in the forefront of computer technology. Kids who leave our building are completely computer literate," he said.

"Kids love computers. School starts here at 9:10 a.m., but most mornings kids are lined up at 8 a.m. to take turns on the computers. We have to chase them out of here at 4:30 p.m. so we can go home to dinner."

In his spare time, Silverston and his family enjoy camping. They've been all over the United States and Canada. Silverston said he's also known by locals as the man with the big dog.

"That's Thunder Bear," he said, describing his 165-pound black Newfoundland. "I walk him around the neighborhood near the Village of Grosse Pointe Shores office. People honk at me. He's quite a dog."

"My students would say I'm demanding and tough, that I have high standards for behavior and high academic standards," he said. "I don't give grades as gifts. Every grade is fairly earned."

"The best part of teaching — what makes it unique — is the kids themselves. I meet a new group of names and personalities every single year."

"It's like meeting a whole new group of friends every year."

Media barred from school meeting

By Shirley A. McShane
Staff Writer

Parents attending a meeting last week to discuss teen drinking at Grosse Pointe South High School did not feel comfortable speaking in the presence of television cameras, said school superintendent Ed Shine.

That, apparently, is what led to the ejection of both television and newspaper reporters from the invitation-only gathering in the school library.

The presence of cameras panning the audience and reporters jotting quotes in notebooks made some audience members reluctant to speak candidly, Shine said.

District officials also were concerned that television cameras might provoke heightened drama and add further to the publicity they were trying to avoid.

"Parents were uncomfortable with the TV cameras," Shine said. "People were getting nervous over how the media was taking the issue and blowing it out of proportion and seeing it on the front page of the newspaper."

The intent of meeting, which attracted an estimated 300 parents, teachers, students and other community representatives, was to discuss the problem of student drinking and then examine a number of solutions and deterrents.

The gathering was not a meeting of an elected public body for the purpose of making policy decisions, said Doug West, attorney for the school district, and therefore did not fall under the protection of the Michigan Open Meetings Act.

"It was perfectly within (Shine's) rights to limit the participation of people at the meeting," West said. "It was not a meeting of a public body."

A public body in this case would mean the Grosse Pointe board of education. But even if a majority of the board had been present, West said that would not necessarily have been a violation of the act.

"Simply because a majority of the public body is present at a meeting does not mean it is subject to the Open Meetings Act unless their participation amounts to a deliberation toward a decision," he said. "A classic example of this would be commencement exercises . . . all board members would be there. It would depend on the nature of their participation. They could have been (at the Feb. 23 meeting) purely as parents."

Robert Button, journalist and adviser for the Tower, South's student newspaper, said he discussed the incident with his beginning journalism students, but did not review the matter with Tower staff members, who were not barred from the meeting.

"As a journalist, I have not heard a clear explanation that would warrant removal of the media from the meeting," Button said. "But I also will raise this from the administration's view; I can see reasons why. The preparations before the meeting became a media circus. There was the danger of (those at the meeting) performing for the media or the media might have restricted comments from people who might not have wanted to be in the media."

South principal John Artis said letters were sent to parents inviting them to the discussion; newspapers and television stations were not included in the mailing.

Drinking

didn't get as much as I would have liked. We have some useful commentary on making a decision."

Artis said the district would like to hold a follow-up meeting to expand upon ideas raised at last week's meeting, but nothing has been scheduled.

Parents offered a number of suggestions to control teen drinking before dances, ranging from the presence of uniformed officers to using Breathalyzers to limiting the number of dances.

"It was difficult to glean an overwhelming consensus," said schools superintendent Ed Shine. "As a parent, the consensus was that dances for the vast majority are a healthy activity. In a community where we hear there are not enough activities for kids to be involved in on weekends and during the summer, limiting the activities doesn't make sense."

South Mother's Club president Joan Gehrke said the most important task confronting the community is to send a no-use of alcohol message to the teenagers. Solving this problem is a shared responsibility between the schools, parents, police and other members of the community, she said.

"What reduces student use is how risky they perceive the behavior to be, not the availability of a substance," said Susan Pearce, student assistance coordinator at South.

Pearce said students do not think they will get into a car accident or that they will become alcoholics; those are parental worries.

"Students think about getting caught and what will happen to them. What will their parents do to them?" she said.

Shine said by approaching the issue of substance abuse as a problem that is solvable rather than a behavior that is controllable makes the problem far more difficult, if not impossible, to tackle.

"Do we ever anticipate that the 'crime problem' will be solved, or will there always be crime? It's a matter of keeping it under control. With the issue of alcohol and drugs, if you talk about it as a problem, ask if it is solvable or is it a matter of defining limits of acceptable behavior," Shine said.

Artis said last week's meeting was not intended to produce final solutions, but rather was an exploration and examination of the issues.

Pointers asked to 'bag it' for hungry

How much food can fit into one grocery bag? Grosse Pointers are once again being challenged to put as much food as possible into the grocery bag which will be inserted in the March 11 Grosse Pointe News. The bags are printed compliments of Republic Bank and Sunshine Biscuits.

The Grosse Pointe schools and the Central Library are collecting food for Gleaners Community Food Bank from March 15 until March 26 for the annual "Kids Helping Kids" canned food drive. We encourage everyone to open their cupboards and drop their groceries in the collection bins placed in the schools and library.

Last year, Grosse Pointers collected more than 14,000 pounds of food from the "Kids Helping Kids" program. The donations are sorted into emergency food boxes by volunteers and distributed free of charge to more than 180 southeast Michigan soup kitchens, church pantries, shelters and other feeding agencies. Gleaners distributed more than 13 million pounds of food annually to agencies that feed the hungry in southeast Michigan.

"We want to extend a heartfelt thanks to the entire community for generously supporting all of our 'Help Feed the Hungry' programs," said Gleaners marketing director Jack Grifo, a Grosse Pointe resident. "Every year, the joy of spring is made even better by the fact that Grosse Pointers open their hearts and donate thousands of pounds of food for the hungry."

For more information about "Kids Helping Kids," call Grifo or special projects coordinator Carmen Mattia at 923-7855.

It's official

Grosse Pointe Park public safety officers Mark Maple, left, and John Kretzschmar, congratulate each other during their promotion ceremonies held Feb. 26 in the Park city council chambers. Maple was promoted to the rank of lieutenant and Kretzschmar was named a sergeant. Their promotion followed Lt. Bobby McAllister's retirement.

History month fetes church founder Eddy

March is National Women's History Month. The theme this year is "Discover a New World: Women's History." In keeping with this theme, the two local Christian Science Reading Rooms will be focusing on the writings of Mary Baker Eddy, an author whose work "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" was recently recognized by the Women's National Book Association.

In 1992, more than 80,000 copies of "Science and Health" were sold worldwide. Since its first publication in 1875, more than 8 million copies have been sold.

"Reading Rooms are always a good source for information on Mary Baker Eddy," suggests Virginia S. Harris, a former resident of nearby Birmingham and current Publisher of Eddy's writings. "In addition to her autobiography 'Retrospection and Introspection' there is a wealth of material provided in various biographies published by The Christian Science Publishing Society and available at local Reading Rooms."

The Christian Science Reading Rooms in Grosse Pointe are located at 106 Kercheval on the Hill and at 15029 Kercheval next to Janet's Lunch in the Park. These Reading Rooms are sponsored by First Church of Christ, Scientist in Grosse Pointe Farms and Sixth Church of Christ, Scientist in Detroit.

The importance of Eddy's lifework, including "Science and Health" and its relationship to the Bible, is the subject of planned meetings sponsored by The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, to be held throughout the world.

March 8 has been observed in the United States as International Women's Day since 1910. But it has only been since 1981 that National Women's History Month has created the unique opportunity for schools and community organizations to sponsor an entire month of special celebrations and activities. These celebrations honor contributions and stories of women throughout history and present times.

City earmarks block grant funds

By Chip Chapman
Staff Writer

A total of $80,000 in 1993 Community Development Block Grants were earmarked for various projects by the Grosse Pointe City Council Monday night.

The money will be divided between residential-related projects ($19,180) and general community projects ($60,820). Last year, the City received $68,500 in block grant funding.

More than half of the money for residential-related projects will fund Services for Older Citizens Inc. Minor home repair, senior transportation and the SOC program supplemental funding will account for $11,680. The remaining $7,500 is marked for tree preservation and minor property preservation.

Curb replacements on areas of Notre Dame, St. Clair, Neff and Charlevoix represent almost two-thirds of the money allocated for general community projects. Funding for wooden keg planters with flowers in front of Mack Avenue businesses from Neff to Cadieux will total $2,500.

To comply with the Americans with Disabilities Act, the City will spend $8,500 of the project money at the City office, the public works and Neff Park to make the buildings more accessible.

The remaining funds will go toward the Historical Preservation Study and administrative costs.

Anti-stalking law proposed in Woods

By Jim Stickford
Staff Writer

An anti-stalking ordinance, similar to one recently enacted into law by the Michigan Legislature, was proposed Monday night at the Grosse Pointe Woods City Council meeting.

City attorney George Catlin suggested the ordinance to the council because it would allow Woods authorities to take action in stalking cases without having to go to Wayne County prosecutors.

"Our ordinance would do pretty much the same thing as the misdemeanor part of the state's law," Catlin said. "But Woods police, instead of going downtown and trying to get a Wayne County prosecutor to act, could come to me, and I could write up a complaint. It's an easier process. Trials resulting from charges would take place at the Woods Municipal Court, instead of in Wayne County courts."

Catlin said that the Woods police has dealt with stalking cases in the past, but without a stalking law, there was little they or the victims could do, unless the stalker trespassed or committed assault.

Under state law and the proposed ordinance, a victim could go to the police and receive protection from the courts.

Anyone convicted of "stalking" under the ordinance would be subject to a fine of $500 and/or 90 days in jail. Catlin said that for a first offense, a fine and probation would be the usual sentence.

The proposal defines stalking as "contact with another individual that is initiated or continued without that individual's consent, or in disregard of that individual's expressed desire that the contact be avoided or discontinued." That includes contact by phone or by mail.

"I think it's a good law," Catlin said. "I don't expect that we will have to use it often, but if we do, it's good that we have it on the books."

Councilman James Alogdelis voiced approval of the proposal, citing experiences he and his wife had with a stalker.

Corktown: It's still remembered for the Irish

You can go home again, and many who proudly proclaim their Irish ancestry will do just that on Wednesday, March 17, at noon at Most Holy Trinity Church.

Mark your calendar. On that "high holy" day, Archbishop Adam J. Maida will lead the faithful in the 159th annual St. Patrick's Day Mass.

On that day and maybe the weekend before, no matter what their background, celebrants will be sporting green

Journal chief to address senior men

The Senior Men's Club of Grosse Pointe will meet at the Grosse Pointe War memorial, 32 Lakeshore Road, at 11 a.m. Tuesday, March 9.

The speaker will be Paul Ingrassia, bureau chief for the Wall Street Journal in Detroit. His topic will be "Changing Hands and Changing Fortunes: Perspectives on the Wall Street Journal and the Global Automotive Business." The presenter will be Joseph Callahan.

Coming up, on Wednesday, April 28, at 2 p.m. members have a date to join their friends at The Gem Theater for the all new "Forbidden Broadway II" (direct from Broadway).

If you find that you made a reservation, and are unable to keep it, be sure to call a member of the reservations committee (phone numbers in the newsletter).

and waving the flag of the auld sod. Tenors will render "Mother Macree" and "Danny Boy" in dulcet heartrending tones. Bands will strike up "Irish Washerwoman" and "Oh, the Days of Kerry Dancing" and step dancers will clog to the delight of hand-clapping audiences.

In some areas, rivers will be dyed green. In many a watering spot, green beer will be served.

What makes this day so special? A lot of it is due to the Irish themselves. The land in Ireland may have failed them, but they loved it and long for it and were determined to bring a bit of it with them wherever they went. And so each year they celebrate it.

Those who came first are gone, but so deeply did they pass on their love for that dear land across the sea that generations who only know it from stories handed down to them revere and honor it.

Those who have never set foot on the soil have been told of the beauty of Ireland's emerald green fields, the incomparable blues of the lakes and rivers and the muted green colors of the hills and valleys through song and story. They have been made to see the sheep grazing in the fields; they have traversed the castles; they have visited the thatched huts.

In Detroit, the immigrant Irish settled in Corktown. Here they came to build their houses and raise their families. There were lace curtains on the windows and there were porches where folks out for an evening could stop for a bit of conversation and maybe a drop or two.

After the homes were built and families settled in, the next project was a church. Pledges of money were made and kept and, "saints be praised," Most Holy Trinity became a reality.

After that came the campaign for a school, and again personal needs were put aside to make that dream a reality. The dream was a four-story brick building, a block down from the church, and handsome it was with its strong oak doors

AARP to meet

The Grosse Pointe Chapter No. 3430 of the American Association of Retired Persons will hold its regular monthly meeting on Monday, March 8, at the Neighborhood Club, 17151 Waterloo in Grosse Pointe City.

The meeting will begin at 12:30 p.m. and the board of directors will meet at 11:30 a.m. A St. Patrick's Day lunch of corned beef sandwiches, dessert, and beverages will be served. Make reservations for lunch by calling Florine Holzen at 884-6155. All seniors are invited.

Entertainment following the luncheon will be provided by the Dancing Belles, consisting of Mary Jo Bor Egbert, Dorothy Johnson and Ruth Zippettell. All have years of experience in the entertainment field. Their acts include clowning, ventriloquism, song and dance numbers, character acts and tap dancing.

Prime Time

By Marian Trainor

and polished stairways and bannisters.

The student body roster read like a recitation from "McNamara's Band" and the highlight of the year was the St. Patrick's Day entertainment put on by the children. For weeks ahead, the students would trudge up to the fourth floor auditorium where they would practice singing all the favorite Irish songs, learn to clog and how to get on and off the stage without falling off the high-riser erected to accommodate groups adorned in green paper hats. It was a proud day for parents who came to enjoy the spectacular event.

As years went on, the neighborhood began to change. Families prospered and moved on. They were replaced by other immigrants — Maltese and later Mexicans. They were new Americans by virtue of the area where they chose to settle, but they were inducted into the Irish culture.

The old school, so proudly built by the first Irish settlers who came to Detroit, has been torn down, a casualty of impossible maintenance costs and dwindling enrollment.

It is a remarkable phenomenon that Corktown is still regarded in the annals of local history as an Irish settlement. It's been a long time since it has been that, but in the memories of many, it lives on as a symbol of their Irish heritage.

Grosse Pointe law is laid back law

By Jim Stickford
Staff Writer

We've all heard of the show "LA Law," a TV series about how they practice law in Los Angeles, but many people may not know about a group of lawyers who practice "Grosse Pointe" law.

Butzel Long, a downtown Detroit firm established over 100 years ago has maintained an office in the Punch & Judy building on the Hill since October of 1991. Joseph Melnick, director of client development, said the firm opened a Grosse Pointe office to serve the needs of its clients in the Grosse Pointe area.

When they made the move to the Hill, two long-time Grosse Pointe lawyers, Alfred Wilke and LeRoy McNally, joined the firm, bringing with them many clients living in Grosse Pointe.

"We are a service profession, and it is to our advantage to serve our clients in the most convenient manner possible," said attorney Frederick G. Buesser. "We do a lot of estate planning, tax advising and family law. It's much more convenient to have offices where people live. So many people no longer work downtown, having an office here is so much easier for them."

Butzel Long has offices in Detroit, Birmingham, Grosse Pointe and Ann Arbor. It offers clients the benefit of a large law firm's resources with the convenience of a local, small law firm, said Buesser.

"Butzel Long is one of the largest law offices in the state, with about 140 lawyers in the company," Buesser said. "If a client has a serious crisis or problem, we can draw on the resources of a major law firm, with experts on most every aspect of the law. If a client has to go downtown, we can work out of the Detroit office. There are a lot of advantages to the way we work."

Another benefit to working in the Grosse Pointe office, according to attorney Carl Rashid Jr., a City of Grosse Pointe council member, is that practicing law in Grosse Pointe is like practicing law in a small town where everyone knows everyone and it is easy to feel like a part of the community.

Grosse Pointe resident Carl Rashid Jr., manager of Butzel Long's Grosse Pointe office, shows off the firm's law library located in the Punch and Judy Building on the Hill.

"I can look out my window and see the homecoming parade, or kids practicing football," Rashid said. "That kind of atmosphere is very pleasant to work in and helps keep us enthusiastic."

"I think, as a group, we are enthusiastic lawyers," said David W. Sommerfeld. "I specialize in estate planning, and I get to help people plan for the inevitable. You'd be surprised how many people don't do that."

Melnick said Butzel Long likes to be a part of the community and that means more than just having offices on the Hill. It means making yourself available to the community, he said. Several lawyers in the firm in the past have given seminars about estate planning and other legal matters to civic and religious organizations around Grosse Pointe for free.

"We're different from most other big law firms, because we take a different approach," said Melnick. "We're here to give better service to our clients. I've talked with other lawyers, and they've told me that there's not a lot of growth potential here — how can we make money? That's not why we opened an office. We did it to make things easier for our clients. If that brings in business, great, but if not, fine too."

Clairpointe to remodel

The Clairpointe Restaurant in the Village will close its doors Monday for approximately two weeks to remodel the interior, said owner Frank Tallero.

"It's time for a new look," Tallero said. "Some of the fixtures have been here for 10 or 12 years."

Sandra Baer Design Associates will remodel the entire restaurant. The Clairpointe will have new booths, carpeting and lighting.

Federal requirement costs Woods $30,000 in vaccinations

By Jim Stickford
Staff Writer

A federal safety regulation designed to protect local public safety workers from blood-borne diseases will cost the taxpayers of Grosse Pointe Woods about $30,000 this year.

Last week, as required by federal law, the Woods city council voted to establish guidelines for workers to follow if they are exposed to the blood of others in the line of duty.

It is not uncommon for police officers, firefighters and paramedics to be exposed to the blood of others during the course of their jobs. Exposure to blood can put workers at risk of developing blood-borne diseases like HIV (the AIDS virus) and hepatitis B, a particularly dangerous strain of the disease.

Policies adopted by the council established pre- and post-exposure steps. Pre-exposure procedures include vaccinating public safety workers against hepatitis B.

City administrator Phillip Belcher said about 200 workers will have been vaccinated by the beginning of March. Those to be vaccinated include police officers, firefighters, paramedics, auxiliary police officers and city lifeguards. Belcher said that two representatives from the unions affected helped draft the policy. He said he has heard no complaints from any union members.

"From what I've been able to gather, the union people think this is a good idea," Belcher said.

It takes three separate shots for the vaccination process to be complete. Each shot costs $50. Belcher said the cost of the vaccination process is expected to be about $30,000. The federal government is not helping defray the costs of the program, despite mandating its implementation, Belcher added.

"It's not a bad program," He said. "But I feel, and the council feels, that if the federal government is going to mandate a program, it really should help pay for it. We're lucky because we can pay for it, but there are a lot of cities out there that aren't so lucky."

Belcher does not know how long the vaccination will last before a booster is required. He believes that it will be at least a year before a booster shot is needed.

Moross property split draws flak in the Farms

By Chip Chapman
Staff Writer

A Moross Road resident seeking a variance of a city zoning ordinance met heavy opposition from surrounding neighbors during a meeting of the City of Grosse Pointe Farms Zoning Board.

David Livermore, of 42 Moross Road, applied to the board to split his property, which extends back to Lakeview Avenue. Livermore and his wife, Shelley, have proposed dividing their lot into two parcels for the purpose of building a new home for their family on Lakeview. If the variance were to be approved, the Livermores would be the only residence on this block of Lakeview, which extends from Mary Street to Carver Street.

The proposed split would create two lots, one on Moross of 14,000 square feet and one on Lakeview of 10,158 square feet. The zoning ordinance for this area requires a lot size to be at least 15,000 square feet.

The Livermores believe that having a residence on Lakeview would reduce problems (which they documented from 1960) that the street has had, such as people drinking in cars, speeding and dumping of trash by landscapers.

One neighbor, who opposes the variance, said that what the Farms calls an "avenue" — which Lakeview is considered — is really an alley.

The block of Lakeview in question is unpaved. To allow a residence on the block would cost the city more than $51,000 in paving and water main costs, said John DeFoe, director of public service. The cost of street lights, which the city requires, would be determined by Detroit Edison.

Mayor Gregg Berendt and director of public safety Robert Ferber agree that the potential for additional houses would exist if one house were to be allowed.

The city received seven letters opposing the variance (one with 17 signatures) and one letter (with six signatures) supporting it. More than a dozen neighbors attended the council meeting Monday night; none voiced support for the variance.

Unaware of the amount of opposition to their plans, the Livermores asked the zoning board for a month before a final decision is made. Five of the seven board members must approve the variance for it to pass. Two members, councilwoman Gail Kaess and Mayor Pro Tem John Crowley, have gone on record opposing the variance.

The zoning board will consider this variance at the April 5 council meeting.

Grosse Pointe Woods public safety employee Eric Steiner receives his third and final hepatitis B vaccine shot from nurse Cecilia McEachin. The vaccination is part of federally mandated program to protect public workers from blood-borne diseases that can result from on-the-job-exposure.

Parking barred on Vernier during sports events

By Chip Chapman
Staff Writer

At the urging of the Michigan State Police, parking will no longer be permitted on Vernier Road during athletic events, the Grosse Pointe Shores Village Council ruled last week.

As of March 15, participants and spectators involved with athletic events in the area will have to park in the north lot of the village offices, the department of public works lot or the Vernier School lot.

Sgt. Robin J. Beach of the State Police and Chief Dan Healy of the Grosse Pointe Shores police conducted a survey Nov. 10 which concluded that when vehicles park along both sides of Vernier, causing traffic to move toward the center line, it's nearly impossible for an ambulance or fire truck to get through.

Moving the center line south and allowing vehicles to park on the north side of Vernier Road would not be feasible, it was concluded, because of the width of the street. Vernier Road is 54 feet wide, and the recommended width per lane is 16 feet. Although there has been no significant history of accidents on the street there is concern about two-way traffic when cars are parked on one side of the street.

"Safety is the number one issue," said village trustee N. William O'Keefe.

A study was conducted in January by Grosse Pointe Woods to see if reducing the speed limit from 30 mph might make Vernier safer. The study concluded that as the speed limit drops, so does compliance.

Currently, there aren't any "no parking" signs along Vernier, and for aesthetic reasons, there won't be. Residents along Vernier Road and members of the Grosse Pointe Soccer Association, and the Little League, and Grosse Pointe North High School and University Liggett School will receive notices outlining the parking ban.

Park gets federal funds

By Jim Stickford
Staff Writer

Grosse Pointe Park will receive almost $100,000 in community development block grants from the federal government, of which three-fourths will go toward making the new city office construction handicapped accessible. The city council approved the expenditures last week.

The Park is eligible for $99,500 in block grants this year according to HUD guidelines, said Jeff Mueller, assistant to the city manager. The money is distributed by Wayne County. City officials, with the advice of the Citizens Advisory Board, determined how best to use the funds.

About 75 percent of the federal funds will go toward making city buildings comply with federal laws requiring handicap accessibility.

The Park is currently renovating the old fire hall behind city hall to house the public safety department. The renovation will include an elevator to serve both the city and police offices.

According to the recently passed Americans with Disabilities Act, government buildings must be handicapped accessible.

Of the remaining federal funds, Services for Older Citizens will receive a $12,000 block grant. Program director for home repairs Lucy Miller said SOC is a non-profit organization that provides home maintenance services to senior citizens with low and moderate incomes.

SOC helps with snow removal, minor electrical and plumbing repairs and other services that allow seniors to live independently in their own homes.

The group, which operates in all five Pointes and Harper Woods, helped about 300 seniors last year. Aid is based on income and the value of homes. There is a slight charge for services, Miller said.

Shores home broken into

A homeowner on S. Deeplands told police his house was broken into sometime between 9:40 a.m. and 10:40 p.m. Feb. 20. The man told Shores police that he had left a door unlocked and that appeared to be the way burglars quickly entered and exited the house, removing a VCR, cordless phone and rifle.

Teen drinking coverage irks local parents

Most of us who live in the Pointes regard the quality of life in this community as one of its chief attributes.

It is a good community in which to live, raise a family, do business and enjoy pleasant social relationships. It is also a community of well-maintained homes with quality schools, excellent public services, beautiful parks and good local governments.

However, we Pointers tend to close ranks to criticize those who find fault with or expose some faults in our Garden of Eden, without realizing that we cannot seal ourselves off hermetically or isolate the community in any other way from the rest of society and its problems.

That tendency helps explain the recent strong reaction of some Pointe residents to the Detroit media's coverage of a letter from school officials warning parents about student drinking at South High School's student dances.

The letter cited in no uncertain terms the "medical, safety and crowd control issues" that parent and school chaperones have encountered as well as "belligerent and offensive student behavior."

"This situation cannot continue," the letter went on. "Students, administrators and chaperones should be able to attend school dances without exposure to out of control behavior of others."

Unfortunately, The Detroit News played up that strong language in the headline on its Feb. 22 story, "Teen drinking 'out of control' in Grosse Pointe."

That headline does not limit 'out of control' behavior to some students at school dances but seems, instead, to attribute it to all Grosse Pointe teenagers.

As a result of such Detroit news media coverage, many parents expressed annoyance about sensationalism when they showed up at the South High meeting the next night.

True, most parents were more concerned about the student drinking problem, but some, as is often the case, tended to find fault with the messenger rather than with the bad news in the message.

However, the downtown media were reporting on a situation that already had been well covered by the Grosse Pointe News on Feb. 4 when it had reported on the new restrictions being placed on school dances at South High School to help curb student drinking.

Furthermore, the results of a poll more than a year ago had shown the extent of the teen-drinking problem in the Pointes, and that, too, had been reported in the Grosse Pointe News.

As for the parents' meeting, we sympathize with those concerned about sensational reporting and especially the presence of TV cameras, which made some parents uncomfortable as they contemplated joining the discussion.

But generally we believe that the public's business is best conducted in full view of the public. The First Amendment protects more than the media. It serves as a protection for the public and for public officials who can be embarrassed by actions taken in private meetings.

If there is a lesson here for all concerned, it is that teen drinking is a societal problem but it also puts a heavy burden on parents as well as on schools everywhere.

But the problem also requires the attention of the entire community, especially when and if school and other public or private property is being damaged by drunken students or when law enforcement officials become involved in school situations.

Even when discussing with groups of parents the conduct of students at dances on school property, the schools also should welcome fair and serious news coverage that can contribute to solutions.

In fact, several school people said that the some of the unpleasant coverage of the school letter has served a useful purpose in the end in alerting the community to the seriousness of the student drinking problem.

But the news media, including the Grosse Pointe News, also have a responsibility to be as accurate as possible in publishing information about the behavior of any students and to avoid exaggerating and possibly inflaming a serious situation.

An incentive to retirement?

Mayor Coleman A. Young of Detroit got some bad news the other day even as two announced challengers continued to campaign for his job by making renewed appeals to the suburbs for financial support.

The bad news for Young was contained in a Detroit News poll that reported 81.8 percent of the respondents said they did not want the mayor to run for another term this year.

Even worse, from the mayor's point of view, he trailed both Dennis Archer and Sharon McPhail, the two announced candidates for his job, in separate one-on-one matchups in the same public opinion poll.

Archer, a former associate justice of the state Supreme Court now practicing law in Detroit, appealed again to the suburbs, including the Grosse Pointes, for financial support for his campaign in which he promises cooperation with suburban residents.

Speaking at a Howell Rotary Club luncheon, Ms. McPhail said, according to a Detroit News story, that if elected she would work with everyone interested in improving Detroit, including suburbanites.

In responding to criticism that she should not have appeared in Howell because the Ku Klux Klan has operated in the area since the 1920s, she said: "It is as inappropriate to see the people in Howell as all racist as it is to see the people in Detroit as all criminals."

As a supervisor in the Wayne County Prosecutor's Office, she knows what she is talking about when she discusses crime. But she also knows what she is talking about when she advocates cooperation between the mayor's office and Detroit's suburbs.

However, the beleaguered mayor, sounding more and more like a candidate for reelection, again went on the attack.

He called The Detroit News poll a "phony," revived a charge that suburbanites are trying to "steal" Detroit's cultural jewels, and added a new target by blaming Wayne County Prosecutor John O'Hair for the city's refusal to join an anticrime coalition.

The mayor's list of "enemies" widens as his support ebbs. If his current campaign line continues, it could provide a sad ending for a long career and a record of past achievements.

State awaits highway funds

Despite the criticisms of President Clinton's economic program by many businesses and industries, Michigan road builders representatives are welcoming at least part of his "stimulus" package.

As many as 2,000 construction jobs apparently could be created in Michigan by passage of the president's proposed $3 billion fund to finance the building and rebuilding of roads, highways and bridges. The project would be part of the federal investment in the nation's infrastructure.

The Detroit News made the jobs' estimate after talking with representatives of the Michigan Department of Transportation's Bureau of Highways, the Michigan Road Builders Association, the Michigan Concrete Paving Association and the Michigan Asphalt Paving Association.

The representatives said, however, that while the program would make more money available, it would not solve all of the road construction industry's problems. The industry has suffered badly from the recession and from state and federal cuts in highway spending.

But that means it is ready to start putting more people to work as soon as the money becomes available. While Congress may still trim the proposed funding, the project is expected to cost about $3 billion, or near that figure, because of the need to repair and rebuild the nation's roads and bridges.

Improved highways help speed movement of goods, cut gas consumption and improve safety. Such benefits will be shared by private business and industry generally as well as by trucking companies and private auto owners.

Michigan's share of the $3 billion amounts to about 2.5 percent of the total, plus an additional $6.5 million from a $750 million mass transit fund.

In view of Michigan's 7.1 percent unemployment rate, let's hope the project does lead to the jobs that are needed and isn't delayed so long that its effect would be more inflationary than stimulative.

A fair share

It is encouraging to note that many senior citizens are expressing willingness to pay their fair share of the national burden in reducing the federal deficit.

Twice in recent weeks the Wall Street Journal has carried stories about seniors who said they would be willing to pay their fair share in any deficit reduction program despite politicians' comments to the contrary.

Members of an ABC senior panel even said they would return all or part of the money they receive if the entitlement cuts were part of an overall package that requires sacrifices from everyone.

Another senior, who heads a national agency that helps people avoid dependence on Social Security, said he was tired of hearing that Social Security is a sacred cow that must not be touched.

If Congress does trim seniors' cost-of-living increases or require more income taxes from them, "what right have politicians to assume that Social Security recipients will immediately vote them out of office?" he asked.

After all, he concluded, we elected those "undisciplined spenders" to office, and "should be willing to pay something for the costly voting mistakes we've made."

Right on!

Letters

Hospice: An alternative to Kevorkian

To the Editor:

This letter is prompted by the frenzy of recent suicide deaths in which the so-called "Suicide Doctor," Jack Kevorkian, "assisted." As I write this, Kevorkian has been involved in three such deaths in five days, and each death was accompanied by widespread coverage in all the media.

The greatest danger in this media attention is that it may give terminally ill people the impression that Kevorkian's way is the only alternative to futile, expensive, and often painful medical care. That is absolutely wrong.

For terminally ill patients and their families, there is another choice, and it is called hospice care. It is a form of care for the terminally ill that enables them to live fully and as pain-free as possible before they die, allowing them to spend their last days in dignity, making peace with themselves and their loved ones.

Hospice treats all the needs of such patients through a team that includes physicians, nurses, counselors, therapists, clergy, aides, and volunteers. In most cases, the patient can be cared for in the home, with a relative or close friend serving as the "primary caregiver."

Hospice also tends to the needs of the patient's family, advising them how best to handle the many practical and emotional problems involved.

More letters on page 9A

Hospice is becoming increasingly known and more widely used. Last year, for example, 193 terminally ill people received hospice care in our community; and nationwide, the total was well over 210,000 patients. Hospice has become so accepted that it is now covered by Medicare, Medicaid, and most private insurers.

Unlike Dr. Kevorkian, hospice operates openly. Ours is a community-based organization that opens its arms to everyone. Further information about our service can be obtained by calling or writing to us at Cottage Hospice 884-8600, extension 2467; or write: 159 Kercheval, Grosse Pointe Farms, Mich.

Although our service is only provided to terminally ill patients, experience has taught us that the earlier hospice enters a case, the more effective our help can be. For this reason, and because it is also good personal planning, we invite all inquiries — even those where there may be no immediate need for hospice.

It is not our place or our intention to pass judgment on Dr. Kevorkian or on the people whose desperation drove them to seek his services — but those who think his way is the only way should be advised they are wrong.

Director, Cottage Hospice

King's speech at G.P. South recalled

By Chip Chapman
Staff Writer

This year marks the 25th anniversary of the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr.'s assassination in Memphis, Tenn. It has also been 25 years since King's first and only Grosse Pointe appearance.

On March 14, 1968, three weeks before his death, King addressed a crowd of 2,700 people in Grosse Pointe High School's gymnasium, speaking on "The Future of Integration."

King was invited here to speak by the Grosse Pointe Human Relations Council in December of 1967. Since the gymnasium at Grosse Pointe High School was the only place that could accommodate a large crowd, the council had to petition the school board to use the school facility.

Two of the seven school board members opposed King's visit. The board asked Grosse Pointe Human Relations Council president Dr. Harry C. Meserve for a $1 million insurance policy to cover the high school for the evening King would be there.

In a meeting in February 1968, after the insurance policy had been taken out, the same two board members remained in opposition to King speaking at the school. Trustee Arnold P. Fuchs objected because he felt King was not the apostle of non-violence he portrayed himself to be and should not be allowed the use of school facilities.

The Grosse Pointe Property Association sent a letter to residents opposing King's visit and listing the names and telephone numbers of the school board members who voted for and against it.

Russell Peebles, a school board member at the time who voted in favor of King's visit, said he wasn't worried about reactions from some residents.

"Some of the calls at 3 a.m. were a little disturbing," he said, but added that there were about as many calls in favor of his position as there were against. He and his wife, Carrie, kept a record of the roughly three dozen calls they received.

Mrs. Peebles helped found the Racial Justice Society of Grosse Pointe in 1968. She and her husband are members, and she is on the board.

Concerned about security, Grosse Pointe Farms police chief Jack F. Roh wanted to accompany members of the human relations council on the ride to Metro Airport so that he would be with King upon entering Grosse Pointe Farms. The car was so crowded that Roh had to sit on King's lap on the ride back.

According to a New York Times report, the FBI said King's assassin, James Earl Ray, was in Windsor, Ontario, the evening King spoke in Grosse Pointe.

While King spoke inside, a group of about 200 demonstrators from the organization Breakthrough picketed King's appearance outside the school. Some members of the group went inside, including leader Don Lobsinger, who shouted "traitor" and stomped out of the gymnasium.

King was interrupted several times, by standing ovations and by hecklers. The Peebles said they remember someone making a "firecracker" noise in the back of the gymnasium during the speech. The audience turned around to look, and even King noticed the disturbance. As King expressed his views on the war in Vietnam, a young ex-Navy man rose and shouted toward the stage.

He was invited by King to speak. King extended his hand to the man, who yelled that he didn't want his years of service to go down the drain. King's comment was that he wanted all the people home and safe.

Harvey Ovshinsky, president of HKO Media Inc. in Grosse Pointe, did not attend King's speech at the high school, but as a documentary producer, was hired three years ago by WXYZ-TV Channel 7 and WTVS Channel 56 to make a film about the event. "The Night Martin Luther King Came to Grosse Pointe" features over 100 photographs taken March 14 with the audio of King's speech that night. It was done in a similar fashion to the PBS Civil War series, but made before it, Ovshinsky added.

In making the film, he learned a lot about that evening. A friend was almost kicked out of the house by his father for attending the speech.

"It was not an easy decision for the community to embrace," Ovshinsky said.

Once merely utility vehicles, trucks are No.1 sellers

The top-selling vehicle in the United States last year was the Ford F-Series full-size pickup truck, at 488,539 units. In second place was the Chevrolet C/K pickup, at 455,250. The top-selling passenger car, for comparison, was the Ford Taurus, at 409,751 units in 1992.

In most 10-days sales reports so far this year, passenger car sales have been up and down, while truck sales have been consistently and substantially up. In the top-10 sellers for January, Chevrolet (32,606) and Ford (32,335) pickups were No. 1 and 2. Dodge Caravan was in fourth place with 20,643 and Ford Ranger was 10th with 17,069.

And despite a 25 percent import duty on trucks (compared with 2.5 percent on cars), Toyota has introduced its T100 full-sized pickup and will probably begin U.S. assembly at some point.

All this reflects the fact that pickup trucks have invaded the passenger car market in a big and, for the makers, profitable way. When vans and sports/utility vehicles are included, more than one-third of the U.S. vehicle market consists of trucks.

This has not always been the case. Trucks began as workhorses, specialized vehicles for farming and delivery purposes. Trucks have been around almost as long as passenger cars, but the penetration of the traditional passenger car market by pickups, vans and sports/utility vehicles has been a relatively recent phenomenon.

Gottlieb Daimler is generally credited with producing the first passenger car for sale in 1886 and the first truck in 1896. In the United States, Mack Brothers Motor Car Co. was the first producer of trucks and buses, starting in 1902. Most of these early trucks had chain drives, as did some early passenger cars. A heavy-duty Mack truck distinguished itself in World War I and won the nickname "bulldog" because of its rugged power. Mack later put a bulldog hood ornament on its vehicles, which became one of the best known automotive icons.

The first Cadillac, introduced in 1903, was a two-seater with a tonneau that fit on the rear to provide a back seat or which could be removed to make way for a pickup bed. This was not an uncommon design in those early days.

Ford got into the truck business in 1905 with delivery vehicles based on its passenger cars. Its first truly distinctive truck was introduced in 1917, a Model T with a heavy-duty chassis and suspension.

White Motor Co., which had begun building steam-powered vehicles in 1900, brought out a gasoline-powered truck in 1910. In 1918, White introduced a double-reduction-drive rear axle, a system that began to replace the widely used chain drive.

General Motors got into the truck business in 1911 with acquisition of Rapid Motor Vehicle Co. and Reliance Motor Car Co., which it merged into the General Motors Truck Co., which later became GMC Truck and Coach Division.

Four-wheel-drive trucks were developed by two Wisconsin companies, Front Wheel Drive Auto Co., Clintonville, in 1912 and The Thomas B. Jeffery Co., Kenosha, in 1914, builder of the Rambler car. Jeffery was taken over by Charles B. Nash, ousted president of GM, in 1916 and the four-wheel-drive truck was marketed as the Nash Quad.

The first Dodge truck was a light vehicle based on the Dodge car and was introduced in 1916. Through the '20s, Dodge built engines for Graham trucks and as Chrysler Corp. gradually bought up Graham, it became its truck division. Finally the name was changed to Dodge.

Diesels became popular powerplants for trucks during the Depression, because of their superior fuel economy and by World War II, trucks had taken over much of the long-distance freight hauling from the rail-

Airstream came to the truck market, too, as illustrated by this late '30s Dodge gasoline truck at the Henry Ford Museum.

The most famous truck of World War II was the Jeep, developed by American Bantam, Willys-Overland and Ford Motor Co. The Army selected Willys' version. American Bantam went out of business and after the war, Willys got the rights to produce the Jeep. The Jeep was the first of what has developed into a booming sports/utility vehicle market.

Passenger vans were introduced in the early '60s, built on chassis of the first round of "compact cars," the Ford Falcon, Chevrolet Corvair and Plymouth Valiant. The popularity of light trucks, particularly pickups, soared in the mid-'60s after the auto industry was hit seriously for the first time with federal regulations. Trucks were not covered by the new regulations at first, and they began replacing muscle cars in the minds of performance enthusiasts. Young buyers in particular liked the macho image the trucks provided.

The Ford Ranchero and Chevrolet El Camino, both based on passenger cars and carrying all the luxury items motorists had become used to, won great popularity and they are now favorites of collectors. The Latin American flavor of their names is no accident, as they were extremely popular south of the border where trucks carried much lower import duties than cars.

At custom car shows, such as Autorama, light trucks have long been favorites and some have become quite famous, such as "the Dogcatcher," a '33 Willys panel delivery; Terry Brown's "Gold Rush Express," built on a '23 Ford C-cab truck; George Barris' "Love Machine" van and Carl Casper's "Popcorn Wagon" and "Paddy Wagon" theme trucks.

There is no question that while trucks are for work, they are fun, too.

State reps introduce school-funding alternative

A group of more than 40 Democrats and Republicans are supporting an initiative now before the House Taxation Committee that would cut property taxes and change the way Michigan funds its public schools.

The group, formerly known as "Team 14," is advancing a proposal that would eliminate property taxes as a major funding source for schools and provide a net tax cut of $300 million. Legislation to implement the plan was introduced recently in the Michigan House, and garnered 19 Republican and 24 Democratic co-sponsors. The reform package is composed of House Joint Resolution G and House Bills 4277-4286.

Under the plan, which is the culmination of several public hearings:

- School operating taxes on residential and agricultural property would be cut by over 50 percent this year.

- School property tax rates for businesses would be capped at 1992 levels.

- A new, equitable system of school finance would be provided.

- The state income tax would go to 6 percent to compensate for the reduction in residential and agricultural property taxes.

- The personal exemption on the state income tax would be increased from $2,100 to $3,000 for a net tax cut of $300 million.

- Public schools would have received a basic grant of $4,700 per pupil in 1992-93. The fiscal year 1993-94 estimate is $4,850.

- Tax cut and school funding changes are implemented directly by the Legislature with out a ballot proposal.

- At the November 1994 general election, voters would have the opportunity to approve a sales tax rate increase from 4 percent to 6 percent, allowing for a rollback of the state income tax to the current 4.6 percent or the elimination of school property taxes on homes and farms.

The lawmakers joined forces to enact a responsible, meaningful solution to the inequities of Michigan's outdated property tax system and the enormous spending disparities between school districts.

Members of "Team 14" in-

For more information on the proposal, write to Reps. Nye, Munsell and Jondahl at the State Capitol, Lansing, Mich. 48909.

School finance reform: We're in a fight

Our schools continue to be subject to dire jeopardy, threatened by wrongheaded legislators advocating wild schemes to revamp school finance.

This problem is not new. And my warning that it is a serious problem is not new. But this is not a case of crying wolf. The danger exists and seems to mount day by day, year by year.

The dual problems of difficult property tax burdens and complex concerns over school finance make the situation volatile, and end up making things dangerous for us. But the threat does not stem from the very real problem that some school districts do not have adequate resources. What places us in danger, rather, is a matter which many legislators wrongly claim is a problem, the "disparity" between expenditures in some districts compared to others.

As I told our Republican members of the House Taxation Committee and state treasurer Doug Roberts, the governor's representative, at a recent meeting: "If we would only focus on the two real problems we could solve them, easily. It is only when we get sidetracked and act as if envy were grounds for constitutional amendment that we get bogged down. Let us, for the moment, stop trying to hurt school districts that are doing well, and focus on how we could 1) cut property taxes and 2) help schools that need help."

William R. Bryant Jr.
State Representative

The group assented to this strategy and the discussion was focused on the two real problems for about 90 seconds and then reverted to the whine of

"but some school districts have more revenue than others."

If we really want to cut property taxes, all we need to do is 1) pass the governor's property tax cut proposal to reduce assessments as a percentage of value, with assured reimbursement to the local units for their lost local revenue, or 2) provide a homestead exemption of, perhaps, $15,000 off homeowners' assessments on their homestead, or 3) increase the property tax credit to $2,500 from $1,200 to recognize the erosion of the value of that credit as a result of the inflation which has occurred since the time the limit was fixed at $1,200.

To help schools that need help, we could allow each school district to have a resident individual income tax, at whatever rate may be approved by the voters in the district, piggybacked on the state income tax and immediately returned to the levying district. In this way each district could decide for itself the mix of property tax and local income tax to use for its local effort for schools. A district could opt for a high degree of property tax relief, or a lower degree or none.

And the state could do two things to recognize income as an appropriate new measure of ability to pay. First, the state could establish a second school aid formula, one providing a guaranteed yield per pupil per unit of tax, just like the present formula, but guaranteeing a decent yield on a local school district income tax, based on the median household income of the district residents. Second, the state could amend the existing guaranteed millage yield formula to give a boost to the districts having the lowest incomes. Each mill levied is harder for low income residents to pay, so we could give districts with low resident income credit in the formula as if they were levying more mills than they actually are.

These ideas are not simple, but they are vastly less complex than unnecessarily, wrong-headedly trying to undo or totally redo the entire school finance and local property tax systems.

We are in a fight for our very existence, one we simply cannot lose and have our community remain what it is today, a great place to live and to raise a family.

Kenneth S. Drake

Kenneth S. Drake, 84, who headed one of the earliest and largest international public relations firms in Detroit, died of cancer at his Grosse Pointe home on Saturday, Feb. 27, 1993.

Mr. Drake was an associate editor of The Chronicle of the Horse magazine in 1952 when he decided to start his own public relations firm. With one client, Commercial Contracting, a machinery installation company, he formed Kenneth Drake Associates Inc., and opened an office in the Buhl Building. As the firm grew he moved, first into larger quarters in that building, and later to the 22nd floor of what was then the just-built Detroit Bank & Trust building, now the Comerica building.

In the 1960s, Kenneth Drake Associates was the largest public relations firm in Detroit. During the office building boom of the late 1950s and 1960s, the firm provided public relations services for the architects, contractors and owners of such downtown landmarks as the Detroit Bank & Trust building, the National Bank of Detroit headquarters, Manufacturers Bank's operations center, the Detroit Trade Center (now the State Office Building) and the Professional Plaza in the Detroit Medical Center.

In addition to a large number of industrial, commercial and real estate accounts, Mr. Drake's company provided public relations services to many of the Detroit area's largest banks, hospitals, nursing homes, religious organizations and professional groups. He served not only local clients, but also several European companies doing business in Michigan.

Kenneth Drake Associates closed in 1984 when Mr. Drake retired.

Mr. Drake was born in Altoona, Pa., and attended Gettysburg College. He also studied at Carnegie-Mellon University, the University of Michigan and the University of Detroit.

Early in his business career he worked for the United States Steel Corp. in Pittsburgh, New York, Cincinnati and Detroit. He left the steel business to follow his life-long love of horses, fox hunting and polo by working for The Chronicle of the Horse. In later years Mr. Drake was founder and publisher of Polo Unlimited magazine, which circulated nationally.

Mr. Drake served many cultural, community and business organizations. He was a founder of the Greater Detroit Public Relations Counselors and a director of the Public Relations Society of America. He was a trustee of the Society of Arts and Crafts (now the Center for Creative Studies), and was appointed by former Gov. William Milliken to the Commission for Art in Public Places.

Mr. Drake was a former president of the Michigan graduate chapter of his college fraternity, Phi Gamma Delta, and was a member of the Country Club of Detroit, the University Club, the Detroit Club, the Detroit Athletic Club and the Detroit Press Club. He was a past chairman of the Witenagemote and was a director of L'Alliance Francaise de Grosse Pointe. He was also a member of Rolling Rock Hunt Club in Ligonier, Pa.

Mr. Drake is survived by his

Academic Olympians

St. Paul students William Stentz, left, and Jan-Michael Stump flexed their mental muscle during the Norte Dame High School Scholastic Olympics. More than 250 eighth-grade boys from more than 20 area schools competed in nine different events — art, drafting, English, forensics, history, math, science, music and religion. Stentz took first place in religion, while Stump won first place for science. St. Paul school won third place overall in the daylong academic competition.

Yzerman promotes reading

Red Wings hockey player Steve Yzerman recently visited the Grosse Pointe Public Library to film a promotional spot for the Rev Up to Read program to encourage students to read and to use public libraries. Young readers like Lyndsay Dalby, left, Erin Griffin and Kathryn Shirilla, can win prizes after they have read five books from different categories. Registration forms are available at all branches of the public library.

The new 'three R's'

Carey Weihmiller, recycling education coordinator for Waste Management of Michigan, parent company of Efficient Sanitation which handles waste hauling for the Grosse Pointes, gave presentations to Kerby Elementary School students on reducing, reusing and recycling household waste. Weihmiller used puppets and a model of a landfill to demonstrate how students can reduce wastes with a trashless lunch. The presentation was sponsored by Kerby's recycling committee.

Gallbladder surgery now comes in two sizes.

Incisions that can be covered with a tiny adhesive bandage might look like a small reason, but it makes a big difference. In fact, it's one of the major reasons laparoscopic laser gallbladder surgery is fast becoming the preferred alternative to long hospital stays and soaring medical bills.

Conventional gallbladder surgery frequently requires an incision up to five inches long. Those extra inches can represent extra days that you spend recovering from surgery. And, of course, added hospital days can mean added cost and increased post-operative pain.

Unlike other new gallbladder treatments, this is a permanent cure because the gallbladder is removed without need for costly stone-dissolving medications. In some cases, the surgery can even be performed on an outpatient basis. And many laser patients return to work or resume their normal activities within a week of surgery. Conventional surgery may require a recovery period of six weeks or more.

If you'd like to find out more about laparoscopic laser gallbladder surgery, call the hospital where more have been performed than any other hospital in

It's great to be back

It's been a year since I've written an "I Say" column for the Grosse Pointe News. No, I didn't leave the company. Rather, I was the founding editor of a start-up newspaper for the Grosse Pointe News, called The Connection.

Starting a paper from scratch with no other staff members was a unique experience, and I'm glad I had the opportunity. It seems papers are closing today, instead of opening. Starting a new paper serving all of Harper Woods and St. Clair Shores showed courage and optimism by my publishers.

The Connection, incidentally, was accepted immediately with rave reviews from readers in both communities, and it is still doing well today under the capable guidance of Grosse Pointe News assistant editor Ronald J. Bernas — The Connection's second editor. He also has a capable staff backing him up.

But while the start-up newspaper experience was worthwhile, it's great to be back on the Grosse Pointe News side of the hall at 96 Kercheval on the Hill. The News, after all, has been the paper of record for the Pointes since 1940 and is widely read. (Just make a blunder, and you find out quickly how well-read the paper is!)

It's especially satisfying to come back to the Grosse Pointe News as editor — the highest position in the editorial department and, in many readers' minds, the most identifiable position of authority at the paper other than, of course, the publisher. It's a heady title, carrying much responsibility.

Merely becoming a Grosse Pointe News staff writer some 4 1/2 years ago was the fulfillment of a goal of mine. While in college at Wayne State University, I knew of the Grosse Pointe News through Wilbur Elston, then one of my professors and editorial writer and consultant for the Grosse Pointe News, as he is today.

I Say

John Minnis

At the time, I was impressed that the Pointe newspaper had the clout to attract a man of Elston's experience — a lifetime in journalism, including 15 years as the editorial page editor of The Detroit News. He has traveled all over the world, interviewing international leaders who would have left me speechless.

Now to work with Elston as an equal (organizationally, not in experience, of course) is rewarding, as well.

Also backing me up at the News is another Detroit News veteran, George Lathrop, who worked for more than 15 years as a copy editor at the downtown daily and at one time was the slot man — the chief copy editor.

Lathrop is more than a proofreader, he makes copy sing; he makes it clear; he catches the holes and the redundancies. I know of no other weekly paper with a copy editor and editorial writer of the caliber of those employed at the Grosse Pointe News.

I'm also supported by one of the top veteran sports writers in Detroit: Chuck Klonke, who began his career with the Macomb Daily. He then went to United Press International in Detroit, covering the big leagues — the Tigers, Pistons, Red Wings and Lions. When he left UPI, he joined the Grosse Pointe News, much to our delight.

When not covering Grosse Pointe prep sports, he still covers the Detroit teams for the wire services and is an official scorer for the Detroit Tigers. Not too shabby for a weekly paper, eh?

Don't look for major changes at the Grosse Pointe News.

Sure, there will be some, but they will be minor and phased in over time. It is my goal to encourage more but shorter stories, an acknowledgement that we're competing for readers' time, and that we have to give them more news, but in a format that's less time-consuming to absorb. More graphics will be used in the future to add to stories' readability and comprehension.

The Grosse Pointe News will remain "Your Community Newspaper," as our slogan on the front banner states. We are sensitive to the community, its many benefits and also its problems. We will continue to print the bad news as well as the good, but we will also continue to do so sensitively, not sensationally.

I hope to continue the legacy of the Grosse Pointe News, an institution here, and I'll want your advice and criticism. Feel free to call me any time (882-0294), or stop in and say hello.

Mining past tense treasures

Dee Crownley's been working on her family tree for some time.

I first met Dolores Scott-Crownley a couple of years ago when she was a Liggett mom, and she was beginning to organize documents then. She's since joined a couple of historical societies and given talks on the satisfactions of finding family roots. Now she's done what every amateur genealogist wishes for — she's put it all into a booklet.

"Here is my gift to you in celebration of Black History Month," she wrote when she sent me a copy in February.

Gathered inside are bits and pieces of family history: some newspaper articles, reminiscences, lots of photos, diagrammed family trees, all the things that clutter our attics, begging to be collated.

Family trees have odd branches that appear or disappear without reason. Here's Great-Aunt Minerve, who went to New York in the '40s to pass for white. She's a dead end to Dee Crownley; a beginning without a past to some new family.

So many families must have these inexplicable loose ends. Somebody went out west to seek his fortune or made a new life in the big city or emigrated to America and didn't stay in touch. For good reasons and not-so-good, somebody makes a break with the past and becomes a lopped-off branch on the family tree.

Here are the quaint old costumes, the ruffled high collars, the old-fashioned shoes, the hat tipped stylishly over one eye, the pudgy knees of a long-ago toddler. Here's a shot of Uncle Clarence and his friend, leaning on their battered stake truck.

Nancy Parmenter

People have a lot of reasons for searching out their roots. Sometimes the surprises they unearth aren't exactly welcome. Sometimes the surprise is simply that the family history is quite ordinary.

My Great-Aunt Gertie was bound our family descended from someone important. When the hired genealogist unearthed Alfred the Great, Edward the Confessor and "11 other kings," she was delighted. No one ever had the nerve to tell her that Edward the Confessor died without issue.

But ordinary can be satisfying, too.

Leafing through Dee Crownley's material, here's Aunt Mabel and Uncle Foster, one a Democrat, the other Republican, down to their very toes. Uncle Foster was a decorated soldier in World War I; Aunt Mabel worked the polls on Election Day for 50 years. Uncle Foster was a perfectionist, and you can see it in his ramrod-stiff picture. Aunt Mabel grew roses — here she is at 91, wearing a new hat and showing off the climber on the back porch.

Real people, doing real, everyday things.

My favorite vignette of one of my ancestors is an incident so small, so mundane, so completely ordinary, that I wonder who the heck sees stuff like this, writes it down, remembers it? It wasn't passed down through the generations — we found it in a historical society publication.

Seems a long-ago George Heckert was walking along the street one day when a lady tried to dismount from her horse. Embarrassingly enough, her long skirt caught on her siddesaddle, and when the lady came down, her dress stayed up. But my ancestor, the esteemed George, rushed over and covered the most delicate female portion with his hat, saving the day and the lady's modesty.

I suppose some long-ago newspaper reporter was on the spot and got his scoop.

Newspapers play a big role in Dee Crownley's genealogy, too. Hearing the details of her family history as a child at Uncle Foster's knee, she was later able to gather clippings from four Ohio papers to more fully explain the story.

Her family, the Andersons, was part of a group of slaves freed by their English master in 1815. Samuel Gist owned thousands of acres of land in Virginia, worked by hundreds of slaves. By the terms of his will, the slaves were freed and resettled on land in Ohio.

"Uncle Foster told me about 300 to 400 slaves who traveled to their new freed home area by walking, riding, or being carried in whatever way possible to the rugged, tough farmland in Georgetown, Ohio," Crownley said. "There, the freed slaves set up their own little towns, built their homes, stores, shops, and churches.

"Our direct ancestor and his oldest son worked at the lumber mill."

Uncle Foster's ancestor built a house on Water Street, across the road from the schoolhouse where U.S. Grant later got his education. There's a picture of

Chugging along

Yes, Virginia, there really is a magazine for beer drinkers. It's called Heads Up, The Magazine of Beer Drinkers of America.

The most recent issue includes an update on how our representatives in Congress are dealing with the proposed increase in federal beer excise taxes. It even includes a list of legislators who have promised not to vote for such nonsense. "Beer is a freedom worth protecting," it says.

The 12-page quarterly includes information on how to start a homebrew club. Some club names: The Bell Hops, Sultans of Swig and Wort Ever Ales You.

Homebrew clubs meet regularly and present programs like show-and-tell sessions for home brewing equipment and beer tasting parties.

To be fair, we must note that the Beer Drinkers of America claims it beams its messages only in the direction of responsible adult beer drinkers.

More editorial tidbits:

- The discovery of brewing ranks up there with epic achievements such as the harnessing of fire and the invention of the wheel.

- The term "watch your P's and Q's" was originally a notice to barmaids and customers to keep track of their tab and how many pints and quarts they had ordered.

- In a recent episode of TV's "Married With Children," Al Bundy rounded up a bunch of voters to protest a local 2-cent excise tax increase on beer. Bundy ended the episode by looking into the camera, and with a threatening, yet calm voice, stated, "Whoever you are — read my lips: Don't tax my beer."

Even sitcom characters know when enough is enough, sez the magazine's editor.

Rain or shine

Speaking of Dan, who knows what a terrible thing it is to lose a mind, the fifth annual "Walk a Mile to Save a Mind" indoor walkathon will be held on Saturday, March 20.

The route will be through the corridors, skyramps and underground tunnels of the Fisher Building, the GM building, New Center One and the it, showing its age, gone from a simple frame house to a series of additions covered with asbestos shingle — an old house with no notion of its proximity to fame.

"We all, at one time or another in our lives, want to know who we are, where we come from, and who the relatives were," Crownley writes, trying to explain the fascination we all have with our past.

"Telling stories about... the past... gives our children a feeling of being part of someone other than (just) Mom and Dad."

Stuff 'n' conscience

Some of us have been through it. Almost all of us will be faced with it one day, the disbursement of material possessions when the last member of a household has died. Advice has been given concerning fairness and equitability in the division and families have experienced painful and, in my opinion, unnecessary schisms as a result of this process.

Having recently completed the division of personal property within my own family which, thankfully though not surprisingly, went smoothly, I was thinking of horror tales I had heard involving others in similar circumstances. I was thinking of the dynamics that can take place between family members, obscure relatives and nosy interlopers. Personalities can surface that suggest entirely different people. Greed, avarice, envy and even supplication are not strangers to these settings. Compensations are sought, but their reasons are not always clearly stated. Long forgotten episodes of jealousy between siblings are unhappily resurrected and feelings are hurt, sometimes irreparably.

I was wondering how some of these situations get out of hand and where things begin to go wrong. I suspect the reasons go back many years with unresolved problems. A friend and I were discussing this one day last week and the question arose as to what causes human beings to cling tenaciously to "things." We know that the grasping for stuff is much more than that. That "stuff" is symbolic of many different things to each of us and holds individual memories.

It is fascinating to observe why people choose as they do. Value is rarely the underlying motive guiding most choices. The sentiment involved can signify continuity from one generation to the next as well as an adult security blanket. Who among us has not experienced certain custodial feelings about a family heirloom? My friend said it well when she described our choices as "bridges to memories."

When the time comes for you to make difficult choices regarding material possessions, I suggest you take a step backward and evaluate as best you can the reasons behind your selections. This having been accomplished, step up and acknowledge your choices, but remember to respect the other people and the individual processes they must have employed before arriving at their decisions.

Animal research abuses — are there safeguards and what can you do?

Cindy Petipren of St. Clair Shores writes, "Could you please warn your readers to keep an eye on their pets because so many are stolen and used for research. Also, please tell about alternatives to dissection because teachers can no longer force students to dissect if they don't want to. Imagine the trauma of an animal lover or a person especially fond of cats who's expected to dissect one."

Animals are obtained by

"bunchers" or "dealers" — the same groups who steal house pets. A North Carolina firm (a biological supply company) gets its animals from various dealers and suppliers around the world, turning them around to research and experimentation facilities for a profit.

A PETA (People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals) special investigation report, "Dying for Biology," quoted an employee of that North Carolina firm as saying, "One cat collector pays people $3 to $5 an hour to collect live cats, who are trapped using sardines for bait; they often get cats that are people's pets. If people knew how we got our cats, they'd probably shut us down."

Dealers can also get their animals through "pound seizure" (illegal in some 14 states), using unclaimed dogs and cats who are released or sold from area animal shelters.

The federal Animal Welfare Act (a so-called animal rights act), requires dealers to be licensed and inspected by the U.S. Department of Agriculture. The act also mandates humane housing, feeding and veterinary care, but it says very little about what things can and can't be done to these animals during research — all of which are too graphic to mention. In an effort to help protect ordinary pets from abduction, the act requires dealers to maintain accurate and complete records of where their animals come from. The minimum 10-day holding time instituted to allow pet owners a chance to locate missing pets, is crudely enforced by the USDA with animals often being removed or destroyed within four days.

CBCS supplies preserved animals regularly to most of our nation's schools. They're the people who are breaking federal laws, stealing your pets, and torturing live animals before delivering them to research facilities or schools like ours, which brings me to Cindy's second comment on the controversial issue of animal dissection in schools.

I find this topic difficult to respond to due to its complex moral and ethical nature. However, I encourage everyone, especially parents, to read PETA material on the subject.

Students should not be forced to participate in acts which may be emotionally, medically or ethically damaging to them. Today, many stimulating, cost-effective and sophisticated alternatives to animal dissections are available.

Computer programs like "HUMTRN" a living human data bank, provide up to 10 million pieces of information on what happens when various substances enter the human body. "Operation Frog" simulates dissection and reconstruction of a frog which then hops away when the dissection is completed.

There are books, charts, and models like "Ribbit," a 39-inch cloth frog whose belly opens, teaching students about major organs. There are videotapes, videodiscs, and computer assisted mannequins like Resuscit-Dog, which replaces hundreds of live dogs per year. Resuscit-Dog teaches students emergency tactics like cardiopulmonary resuscitation, and offers evaluations of their diagnoses and treatments. There's even grant and scholarship funding for students and high school teachers who want to study non-animal research methods.

Parents and children are no longer helpless in this situation. Alternatives should be provided and encouraged in all courses that use animals, and no student should be penalized in any way for refusing to dissect a "real" animal.

Call or write PETA, P.O. Box 42516, Washington, D.C., 20015, 301-770-PETA for more information. Ultimately, you must decide what is best for you.

If you have any pet-related questions or comments, write to: Kathleen Ferrilla, c/o Grosse Pointe News, 96 Kercheval, Grosse Pointe Farms, Mich. 48236.

Barns are a common photographic subject among camera club members. Monte Nagler photographed this uniquely painted one (that's the artist Raphael) near Fenton.

Getting stale? Join a camera club.

How's your picture taking been lately? Are you improving or do you need a little encouragement because your pictures just aren't what you want? Perhaps you're just getting started and need some instruction.

Well, a camera club could be just what you need — a place to learn, exchange ideas and to socialize with other club members. Club dues are minimal and the benefits are maximum. Some clubs are small, some large, and they meet often enough that you're bound to find one that fits your schedule. Clubs are found all over the metropolitan area, from Grosse Pointe to Milford, from Utica to Wyandotte.

Joining is easy and you are free to visit many clubs until you decide on the one best for you. The local newspapers run weekly announcements on camera club happenings and you can call Skip Moody, Greater Detroit Camera Club Council president, at 548-9087 for information.

The primary function of a camera club is to promote a common love and interest of photography. And nowhere will you find more camaraderie and a willingness to help others and share knowledge than in a camera club.

Some of the activities featured in camera clubs are photo competitions, slide programs, modeling sessions, guest speakers, even field trips.

Whether your interests are in black and white, color slides or color prints, you'll find many creative outlets at camera clubs.

Camera clubs will help you to grow in your own photographic pursuits to whatever levels you wish to attain.

OPEN HOUSE SUNDAY MARCH 7th 2-3:30 p.m.

'We're really getting our money's worth.'

— Yolanda Turner, Grosse Pointe

Yolanda Turner is the mother of Charlie, a first-grader at University Liggett School. She and her husband, Charles (an alumnus of the school, Class of '67) have sent Charlie to ULS since he was 3-years-old. Knowing the fine academic program at the school, Charlie's teacher hope that Charlie will stay until he graduates from the upper school.

Yet, the Turners have more reasons why they believe, as they say, "we're really getting our money's worth," from the tuition they spend at ULS. Yolanda says, "ULS can bend a little to Charlie's way of learning." With only 13 children in her classroom, Charlie's teacher can be more accommodating to his needs and learning style than if she had 25 or 30 students.

The Turners also appreciate that the school cares very deeply about children's self-esteem and is "old-fashioned enough to still teach the values we hold at home." ULS stands for tolerance of others and the appreciation of differences among children.

We invite families interested in quality education to explore University Liggett School at an Open House on Sunday, March 14, from 2:00 - 4:00 p.m. Let us show you the excellent educational experience we offer to children of all ages.

Thoughts on Clinton's plan

To the Editor:

The ideas for the economy presented in the State of the Union message to Congress and over our television to the nation on Feb. 17 were a compromise. Like any compromise it contained details to both please and displease — surely no one found all to his or her own taste. Campaign promises had led us to expect most of the specific spending increases he proposed. All addressed needs and sought goals most of us can support as worthy and desirable. Questions concern the amount, timing, and execution of each program.

Is it possible that spending cuts could balance spending increases? The reduction or elimination of programs and agencies that have already achieved their original purposes and outlived their need could surely go further than was suggested. Perhaps the special-interest lobbies are too strong to target them all. A challenge was directed to the Republican leadership to suggest further places to cut spending — but they are subject to the same political pressures as the Democrats. The charge to Congress to curtail special-interest funding of political campaigns pointed a way to go in this regard.

Entitlements were pointed to as a possible source of savings too politically hot to handle. As a retiree with pension and enough savings to result in one half of Social Security income subject to income tax, I can think of no good reason why more or even all should not be so subject. But the living standards of anyone below that level should not be jeopardized. Perhaps exemptions ought to be raised and adjusted for inflation. After a lifetime of work and contributions to society, people deserve a decent—and dignified retirement.

The discussion of welfare reform was sensible and well expressed — independence rather than dependency should be desired by the recipients as much as by the taxpayers. How farm subsidies and urban subsidies are used should also be looked at very skeptically. Why should farm subsidies be used to build million-dollar resort complexes or enrich incorporated families operating (or withholding) thousand-acre farms? Why should lumber from national forests be sold below cost? And are we still subsidizing tobacco?

In applying the "fairness" test to taxation, it should be recognized that when the top income tax brackets were reduced, the amount and the share of revenue received from the top 1 percent and the top 5 percent of taxpayers increased markedly and the top 10 percent pay over 50 percent of income tax revenue. It should also be recognized that taxation creates a system of incentives and disincentives. So does spending. We expect to get less of what we tax and more of what we subsidize. Taxing savings and risk-taking and subsidizing poverty and dependency may not achieve the results we really desire.

Perhaps Democrat control of the White House well as both houses of Congress will achieve an end to gridlock in Washington, though President Clinton may still feel the need for the line-item veto, and Congress may demonstrate its need for a budget-balancing amendment. We will watch to see what discipline develops with one-party responsibility.

Harold Jinks

He's worried

To the Editor:

This letter is in regard to the "Boom Vox" editorial on Feb. 25. The New Yorker does not speak for everyone. But I digress.

Please inform your readers about President Clinton's economic proposals. Report the news about the imputed-income tax, a tax on income that homeowners have not received.

You will have to get such information from a Republican, because I have not yet heard a Democrat mention it yet. The other morning on Denny McLain's program, Democratic Sen. Carl Levin claimed to know nothing about this method of confiscation of property.

Democratic politicians do not seem to be very fussy about the details of the president's economic proposals. They see tons of money coming in which can be used to fund many ill-conceived projects.

I have not heard a Republican leader pronounce the president's economic proposals DOA. Perhaps only a Democratic majority can do that.

If you wish to be truly informed, listen to Rush Limbaugh or to George Romney on WXYT radio.

Howard Batts Jr.,
Grosse Pointe Park

Perplexed by Clinton's plan

To the Editor:

I wonder with genuine amazement where support for the Clinton tax plan comes from.

In 1983, we received a tax increase, the largest in the history of this country. The increase was to pay the deficit. In 1990, we received yet a larger tax increase, again to rid the congressional deficit. It made no difference. Presidents do not spend money (theoretically); Congress does.

Throwing more money at Congress' feet will not reduce the deficit. This is not change. Tax increases have failed to hit the mark twice. Demanding our Congress pull out the pork barrels and resurrect the last two tax increases would regain this legislative body some respect in future generations.

Let me construct a hypothetical society of let's say 10 people — one very young child, two retired, one in school, one unemployed and five employed. Of these five, three are employed by the government — restricting and burdening the two employed in free enterprise. Who really feeds everyone? Who makes the "system" work? Who improves the quality of life? Who is most invaluable to this society?

I understand the answer to our "problems" (substitute "symptoms") is for government to employ more people. At what point do the slaves in free enterprise lose initiative and give up? How much can you drain them?

Throughout the world, socialism has been moving in our former direction. A society must have more private-sector employees than governing employees, if that society is to prosper. Encouraging initiative and innovation is the sole source for new, lasting and viable employment.

Who truly can walk into another tax increase with eyes open? Freedom and government are polar opposites. It is once again time to decide which we value more and which will keep this great country strong.

Mrs. James Kristich

South swimmers, gymnasts win league titles Hepner, Schoenherr lead way

By Chuck Klonke
Sports Editor

Chad Hepner's presence at the Macomb Area Conference American Division swimming meet was a bonus for Grosse Pointe South.

"I didn't even know he was going to be able to dive until I went into the pool and somebody told me that he was leading," said Blue Devils' coach Fred Michalik after Hepner's record effort in the diving and two individual firsts by Brenn Schoenherr led South to its second straight conference meet championship.

South finished with 312.5 points to 264.5 for runner-up Grosse Pointe North. Ford was third with 249, followed by Fraser 229, Utica 95, Stevenson 82 and Eisenhower 58.

Hepner suffered a four-stitch cut in his heel earlier in the week when he hit the board during a dive.

"The doctor said it might be three or four days before he could get back in the water, but they sprayed the cut with a type of toughskin and he was able to come back sooner than expected," Michalik said.

Hepner scored 476 points to set a Ford pool, South varsity and league record.

"Without Chad I had us by 20 points on paper and that's nothing," Michalik said. "Three years ago I figured us to be 80 points better than Ford and they beat us in the conference meet."

North and South each took five first places. South's Geoff Prysak won the 100-yard breaststroke in 1:03, Schoen-herr was first in the 100 freestyle (50.96) and won the 100 backstroke in 55.01 after setting a pool record of 54.57 in the preliminaries. The Blue Devils' 200 medley relay team of Schoenherr, Prysak, John Peabody and Tim Harmount was first in 1:42.93.

North's Brett Collins won the 200 freestyle in 1:48.47 and the 500 in 4:52.21, qualifying for the state meet in each. Teammate Steve Williams was first in the 200 individual medley in 2:06.44. The Norsemen also won two relays. The 200 freestyle relay team of Craig Williams, J.P. Gamrat, Rusty Milne and Steve Williams set a varsity record with a 1:33.73 clocking and the 400 freestyle relay team of Collins, Jeff Shelden, Milne and Steve Williams was first in 3:27.4.

Collins, a sophomore, was named swimmer of the meet in a close battle with Schoenherr and Hepner.

The other first places in the meet went to Ford's Dayce Schreiber in the 50 freestyle (22.92) and his brother, Darcy, in the 100 butterfly (55.0).

"I thought my kids really swam well," Michalik said. "Especially some of the newer kids, who did a super job. Hopefully, they'll see that if they spend even more time in the water they'll improve faster. A lot of kids had their best times in this meet and we did better in the finals than we did in the prelims."

One of the highlights of the meet was a dead heat for third place in the 100 butterfly between North's Steve Williams and South's Peabody.

Following are the first places in each event and the North and South swimmers who placed in the league meet.

Freshmen are a factor in Lady Devils' win

By Chuck Klonke
Sports Editor

Grosse Pointe South's gymnastics team has made a steady climb to the top of the Great Lakes Eight Conference standings since Al Trombley became coach five seasons ago.

"This has been our goal since we finished second in the league last season by two points," Trombley said after the host Lady Devils won the league tournament and earned a seeding in the state Class A regional at Troy on Saturday.

South scored a school record 128.65 points to finish ahead of runner-up Grosse Pointe North, which had 121.55. Fraser was third with 120.6, followed by Trenton 119.6, Dearborn Edsel Ford 114.95, Wayne Memorial 95.65 and Livonia Clarenceville 88.60.

"It's great to win," Trombley said. "We knew we were capable of it, but it was a matter of each girl raising her scores by a couple tenths of a point. That means one less slip on the bars or beams. This sport is 95 percent mental and all of our girls came together and were totally focused. In our last dual meet we had our previous best of 120.5 and we wanted to improve on that."

South placed three gymnasts in the top 10 in all-around competition. Freshman Marla Cummings was first with a combined score of 36.45, a personal best. Freshman Kim Hepner was fourth overall with 31.25 and junior Hillary Andrei was 10th in all-around at 29.45.

"Marla has been in gymnastics since she's been 2, and is outstanding," Trombley said. "She has a great attitude and despite her success, has remained very humble. She could win all-around at the regional."

Go On. Open It Up.

If your next car is destined to be yet another practical side—like a 2.0-liter DOHC engine, four-wheeled, four-doored commodity, forget the Alfa Romeo Spider. After all, it's legendary reputation is based on fun and the fantasy of motoring top-down in a sporty roadster.

Of course, the Spider does have its practical side—like a 2.0-liter DOHC engine, four-wheeled, four-doored commodity, 3-year / 36,000-mile limited warranty* and a thoroughly sensible price. Come to think of it, you owe it to yourself to test drive a Spider. After all, what's wrong with having your car and enjoying it to?

Autograph session

Former Tigers' first baseman Dave Bergman, a Grosse Pointe resident, autographs a ball for a young fan at a recent card show at the Gibraltar Trade Center in Mount Clemens. Bergman and outfielder Kirk Gibson, background, are coaches of the Grosse Pointe Pirates baseball team in the Sandy Koufax Division of the Macomb Amateur Baseball Federation. Proceeds from the autograph session will benefit the Pirates.

South wins without two starters

Grosse Pointe South wrapped up the Macomb Area Conference White Division championship the hard way last week — without both Angela Drake and Stephanie Coddens.

"We were a little tentative in the first game, but we played much better in the second," said Lady Devils' coach Cindy Sharpe after South's 15-11, 15-0 victory over Sterling Heights Ford. "This will help our confidence for next year when Angela and Stephanie graduate."

Drake and Coddens were each bothered by sore knees but Sharpe hopes they'll be ready on Saturday when South hosts a Class A district.

South meets Regina at 9 a.m. in the only semifinal match. The championship match will start at about 10 and will pit the South-Regina winner against Grosse Pointe North.

South has advanced to the quarterfinals of the state tournament the last two years.

"We can do well in the tournament if we find that fine line of being relaxed but intense," Sharpe said.

Amanda Defever, Kate Grenzke and Kathy Schrage each had three kills against Ford, while middle blocker Jeneane Farr did a good job in Drake's place.

"Jeneane had some great blocks and a couple of kills," Sharpe said. "She put us in a position to make some good hits."

South, which is 13-0 in the MAC White, improved to 30-2-3 overall.

Knights have a busy week

University Liggett School's volleyball team split its final two Metro Conference dual meets and posted a 2-1-1 record in pool play at the league tournament.

The Lady Knights beat Kingswood 15-11, 15-9, but lost to conference champion Livonia Clarenceville 15-2, 15-12. ULS finished fifth overall in the conference.

ULS will play Center Line St. Clement in Saturday's district tournament at Warren Bethesda.

Knights do well at Brighton

University Liggett School's swimming team made a strong showing at the recent Brighton Invitational.

The meet featured several Class A and B schools. The Knights' co-ed team was the only Class D school that competed.

ULS sophomore Betsy Belenky became the only female in the 14-year history of the event to qualify for the finals in two individual events. Belenky posted times of 1:04.22 in the 100-yard butterfly and 5:42 in the 500 freestyle and finished eighth in each event.

ULS' 200 medley relay team of Annie Petz, Belenky, Sean Gardella and John Turnbull finished 12th in 1:57.29.

Turnbull, competing in swimming for the first time this year, was 12th in the 100 freestyle in 57.68. Gardella earned an alternate position in the 100 breaststroke with a 1:14.15 clocking.

Earlier, ULS beat Ann Arbor Greenhills 90-80 to close out the dual meet season with a 10-4 mark.

Tracy wins Harvard clincher

Freshman Tripp Tracy of Grosse Pointe Farms turned back 24 shots last week to lead Harvard to a 3-1 victory over Vermont that clinched the Eastern College Athletic Conference championship for the Crimson.

Tracy made his best save of the game in the second period when he kicked out his right skate to stop a drive by Vermont's Aaron Miller during a power play.

"That was a key save," said Vermont coach Mike Gilligan. "That might have got us going."

Star boys post 11th win

Our Lady Star of the Sea's seventh and eighth grade boys basketball team improved its record to 11-3 with a recent 50-32 victory over St. Paul.

Richard Grosfeld led Star with 12 points and Brian Wisk scored 11. Ben Peters had nine points, David Strunk seven and Vince Meli four.

Defensive standouts were Andy Beaupre and Ryan Cur-lis.

Saints march on

The St. Clair Shores Pee Wee AA Saints, with six Grosse Pointe boys on their roster, won the Michigan Amateur Hockey Association District 3 playoffs last week. The Saints blanked the Warren Blues 2-0, edged the USA Rangers 4-3 and posted 4-1 and 3-1 victories over the Grosse Pointe Hawks to earn a trip to the state tournament in Alpena on March 5-7. From left, are Grosse Pointers Matt Farr, David Bilbrey, Ben Debski, R.J. Wolney, Matt Moran and Tom Pierce. Bilbrey and Wolney were also members of the 1991-92 squad that won the District 3 playoffs.

The farm Colonial has been and continues to be America's number one architectural choice.

Proximity to a body of water has always been the most desirable location and man's penchant for a view of the sea is universal.

This ten room home in the Village of Grosse Pointe Shores comes close to satisfying the desire for traditional architecture in an excellent location.

Two gas forced air furnaces provide economic heat and air conditioning.

In selecting your next home it is important to consider the surrounding neighborhood. Also, the value of the house you select should be comparable or even less than that of neighboring properties. The reason for this is that the marketability of a specific house is not adversely affected because its perceived value is considerably higher than other properties on the same street.

This particular property is offered at a price below what many other homes have sold for in its neighborhood.

Open for your personal inspection from 1:00 to 4:00 p.m., Sunday, March 7th.

Antiques by Ralph & Terry Kovel

Q. You previously discussed Tiffany buckles. I purchased my buckle 20 years ago, and I was told that the London stamp made it an authentic Tiffany. Please confirm my worst suspicions that all the Tiffany buckles are fake. On the front of the buckle is a picture of a horse-drawn fire wagon. It says "America's Heroes." The back is marked "A.J. Nash, Regent St. London, England" and "Tiffany Broadway, New York."

A. Sorry, but you too have a buckle that was part of one of the great scams among collectibles. In the 1970s, numerous brass belt buckles were designed, cast and sold as old buckles made by Tiffany. We have a picture of your buckle in a 1972 catalog from London. The company offered to stamp the name of the state in a space at the bottom of the buckle. At that time, the retail prices was $19.90. The fake buckles were so popular, they were recast fakes of the fakes that were of inferior quality. The 1970s buckles remain popular and are often worn on a belt. They appear at the shows from $25 to $50.

Tip: If you have wicker furniture inside, be sure to keep a humidifier or lots of plants nearby. The wicker will crack if it is too dry.

Seed catalogs: The true harbingers of spring

There is a lot of imagery connected with the month of March — lions and lambs, the bridge between winter and summer, the voice of the turtledove. But perhaps the best of all are the images conjured up by the arrival of seed catalogs in our mailboxes. For some of us, that is the official sign of spring.

How delightful to look away from the ice and snow outside to the beautiful, brilliantly pictured flowers, fruits and vegetables in the pages of the catalogs.

All the usual things are there, better than ever, somehow. And there are some pretty unusual things too.

From one catalog it is possible to order radish seeds to grow unusual radishes which are white or black on the outside and red on the inside or, wonder of wonders, to grow a Japanese radish guaranteed to weigh an incredible 15 pounds.

There is a variety of corn that grows to 20 feet. And did you know that in the back pages of this catalog you may find a choice selection of worms and insects to be ordered to place in your garden to devour predator insects which might try to take up residence? (For $25, 1,000 earthworms will write their way into your mailbox.)

All the prize-winning vegetables — asparagus, zucchini, herbs of every use and scent, fruits from which to

Garden Shed

By Ellen Probert

make jewel-like jellies or fabulous pies — are here in these seductive pages. And in the sections devoted to flowers, the temptation is strong to order everything, even when our gardens are city lots or window boxes instead of several acres.

All the vegetables commonly grown in kitchen gardens in the middle ages are still being offered, including onions, cabbages, turnips, parsnips and that odd-looking relative of the cabbage, kohlrabi.

Incidentally, did you know that the small city of Hamburg, near Ann Arbor calls itself the "Kohlrabi Capital of the World?" Every year, Hamburg puts on a week-long kohlrabi festival which features parades, kohlrabi dinners, a formal ball which is the social event of the year and, of course, the crowning of the kohlrabi queen.

The seed catalogs tell us that one package of kohlrabi seeds will plant a 40 foot row and that early spring is the time to plant. It's a cool-weather plant of ancient lineage that is still much-used in Europe and has been popular in China for centuries.

We usually think of rice in connection with China and other Oriental countries, and when we think of the Indians of Michigan we think of corn, or maize, as their staple food. Oddly enough, the two thoughts can easily merge.

Some historians, writing about the Michigan Indians in the years 1670 to 1700 commented on the almost Oriental appearance of some of the people they saw. They went on to mention rice as part of a long list of the food supplies of the Indians of this region. Fish, wild game, native fruits, berries and nuts, corn and other crops and the large rice fields were among the tribal assets of the Algonquins, in particular, as well as some of the Chippewas and Ottawas. Very often the possession of wild rice fields was a cause of wars between the Indian nations.

Wild rice gathering is still a large industry for Michigan Indians. The next time you buy rice at the supermarket, look at the package of wild rice for the tribal identification on the package.

By now, all there is left of the holiday decorations are the poinsettias, those lovely but almost too durable of winter blooms, which usually put on a pretty good show for two or three months. (One local woman tells of a white poinsettia given her as a Christmas gift a year ago which retained its lovely blooms all the way through the summer and was still lovely for another Christmas season this year.)

The white and pink ones do last longer than the red ones, for some reason, which is perhaps just as well. The red ones do begin to look too boisterous as we begin to think of spring and pastel flowers.

Mount Clemens compiles 175th anniversary exhibit

The first of many activities celebrating the 175th anniversary of the founding of Mount Clemens will be conducted by The Art Center March 8-26.

Artifacts and memorabilia are being gathered from many sources and mounted in a special historic exhibit. The public is invited to the opening reception Monday, March 8, from 7 to 9 p.m.

The event initiates 175 days of activities coordinated by the city.

The Art Center itself is one of the major historic landmarks of the city. Built in 1904, it is one of more than 2,000 libraries constructed by the noted industrialist and philanthropist Andrew Carnegie. The interior of the neo-classical structure was transformed elegantly from a public library to galleries, a gift shop, and classrooms in 1969. It is an appropriate temporary sanctuary for the artifacts and memorabilia which punctuate the history of Mount Clemens.

The historical exhibit comprises items representing all facets of life in Mount Clemens since its founding in 1818, from the rugged frontier days, through the popular "Bath City Era," into the Depression and World War II. The exhibit features photographs, paintings, clothing and accessories, home furnishings, treasured objects, historic documents and collections relating to business/industry, communication, transportation, education and family life in Mount Clemens. Items on display have been loaned by individual owners and collectors, the city of Mount Clemens, Macomb County and the Macomb County Historical Society.

Hours are Tuesday through Friday from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Saturday, 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. Group tours are welcome. The Art Center is funded in part by the Michigan Council for Arts and Cultural Affairs. Call 469-8666 for information.

Kids First: Program gives divorcing parents a child's-eye view of pain, confusion that accompanies family break ups

By Margie Reins Smith
Feature Editor

Wayne County Circuit Judge Kathleen MacDonald of Grosse Pointe Woods said she hopes the new Kids First program will eventually be mandatory for divorcing parents. The program, which began in September, is simple and straightforward: a 45-minute video followed by a short question-and-answer session.

But it can make all the difference in the world, MacDonald said. "It's important to us to help parents through the divorce process as best we can."

S.M.I.L.E. (Start Making It Livable for Everybody), an Oakland county program from which Kids First is patterned, draws more than 100 people to its monthly sessions. Divorcing parents with minor children are required to attend.

The video, produced by the family law section of the Michigan State Bar, is a collection of local youngsters' feelings and reactions to their parents' divorces and advice from psychologists about helping children deal with divorce.

"They don't like each other any more and they didn't explain it to me," said a preteen girl.

A teenage boy said it seemed his parents were always fighting. "All of us kids just go to our rooms and stay there for the night," he said.

Another teenager said she felt like a hockey puck, referring to her parents unwitting use of their children to get revenge on each other.

"I was angry because I was not seeing Dad and I loved him a lot. I was scared I'd never see him again," a young girl said.

Next to death, divorce is the most devastating experience a child can have, according to psychologists interviewed on the video. A child's biggest worry, they said, is: What's going to happen to me?

MacDonald said the program was designed to help parents who are in the middle of a divorce.

"As a judge," she said, "I just don't have the time to interact with each divorcing couple. This is not a condemning video. It's to help them be aware of what their children are going through."

Each participant in the Wayne County program receives a booklet, "Kids First," a review of how children react to their parents' separation and divorce, and suggestions to parents on how to make the process less stressful for everybody.

For instance, preschoolers are often confused and afraid of abandonment. They may cling and cry, become demanding and regress to an earlier stage of development.

Elementary school age children often blame themselves for their parents' break-up. They throw temper tantrums. They try to maintain loyalty to both parents, yet worry about losing the custodial parent. Problems with friends and schoolwork are common.

Young teenagers are often moody and insecure. They have trouble sleeping and many have difficulty concentrating on their schoolwork. Anger is common. Older teens may show their anger by feeling resentful toward one or both parents. They're notorious for testing relationships with both parents. They also may worry about their own relationships with the opposite sex.

Even young adults in their 20s and 30s suffer when their parents divorce, MacDonald said. "I know some people in their mid-30s who are still feeling the pain of their parents' divorces."

MacDonald estimated that 10 percent of divorces involve custody arguments. "But those that do are really bitter," she said. "I'd rather have people fighting over millions of dollars instead of their children."

MacDonald remembers a bitter custody battle over three small children that dragged on for six months.

"We didn't have the Kids First program then," she said, "so I made the couple attend the Oakland County S.M.I.L.E. program.

"They came back in two weeks. They had resolved everything themselves. The husband/father thanked me and said he had no idea what he had been putting the children through."

"There was still animosity between the parents, but they worked out their own custody and visitation solutions."

It's important for divorcing parents to understand that their children are going through a divorce at the same time, the video stresses. Divorce is devastating, but it doesn't have to ruin the life of a child.

The Kids First program is presented at 1 p.m. every Friday at the City County Building in Detroit.

"We hope to add an evening session in the next few months," MacDonald said, "so that parents who work can attend. We also hope to make it mandatory."

How parents can help their children

The "Kids First" booklet by the family law section of the Michigan State Bar offers suggestions to divorcing parents:

- Children need frequent and regular contact with both parents.
- Parents should be cautious about introducing new boyfriends or girlfriends to their children.
- Each parent should stress good points of the other parent and avoid name-calling and blaming.
- Children should not be used as messengers between parents.
- Parents should not expect children to take the place of the absent parent. Children should be allowed to be children.
- Parents should tell children about the divorce together, if possible.
- Children need to be assured they are not to blame for the divorce.

To know honey is to love honey

By Irene H. Burchard

Honey, it's a natural. For thousands of years, people have loved honey. And it's always been produced in the same way, in one of the most efficient factories in the world — the beehive. From fields of clover, citrus orchards and mountain wild flowers, honeybees collect nectar to create pure, wholesome, delicious honey.

Did you know that there are more than 300 flavors and shades of honey? Flower nectar, the sweet liquid gathered by bees, determines honey's flavor and color.

In general, the darker the honey, the bolder the taste. Clover honey is the most common variety. It has a light amber color. Other familiar honey varieties include alfalfa, buckwheat, fireweed, orange blossom, tupelo and wildflower.

In ancient times, honey was thought of as the food of the gods, a symbol of wealth and happiness used both as a food and as an offering.

In the Bible, the Promised Land is described as the land of milk and honey. Egyptian tomb reliefs from the third century B.C. show workers collecting honey from hives. Chinese manuscripts from the same period contain poems and songs praising honey and its many uses.

In the Middle Ages honey continued to be regarded as a precious commodity and was used medicinally. During Greek and Roman history it was used for confectionery and as a condiment for savory or sweet dishes. Today, honey is an important ingredient in nearly every culture's cuisine.

Cooking tips:
• For best result, use recipes adapted to honey.
• Honey absorbs and retains moisture, which retards drying out of baked goods.
• A 12-ounce jar of honey equals a standard measuring cup.

• Because of its high fructose content, honey has a higher sweetening power than sugar.

Buying and storage tips:
• Select mildly flavored honey, such as clover, for use in cooking where delicate flavors predominate.
• Use strongly flavored honey in spreads or other recipes where a distinct honey flavor is desired.

• Store honey at room temperature.

• If honey crystallizes, remove lid and place jar in warm water until crystals dissolve. Or microwave 1 cup of honey in microwave-safe container at HIGH 2 to 3 minutes or until crystals dissolve; stir every 30 seconds. Do not boil or scorch.

Honey-Sweet and Savory Chicken in Parchment

1 cup mayonnaise
1/4 cup honey
1 T each soy sauce, sesame oil and vinegar
1 t crushed red pepper flakes

1 cup each thinly sliced carrots, broccoli florets and sliced mushrooms
1 package (3 oz.) instant noodles, quartered and split (reserve flavor packet for other use)

1-1/2 pounds boneless, skinless chicken breasts (4 breast halves)
8 red pepper slices
4 sheets parchment paper (14-inch squares), or aluminum foil can be substituted.

Combine mayonnaise, honey, soy sauce, sesame oil, vinegar and pepper flakes. Mix well and set aside. Combine vegetables and set aside. Cut each sheet of parchment paper into heart-shaped piece about 11 inches long by 14 inches wide. Spoon 2 tablespoons mayonnaise mixture onto one side of parchment paper heart. Arrange 1/4 of noodles over mayonnaise mixture. Layer 1/4 of vegetable mixture over noodles; drizzle with 2 tablespoons mayonnaise mixture. Arrange 1 chicken breast half over vegetables; drizzle with 1 tablespoon mayonnaise mixture. Top with 2 red pepper slices. Fold other half of parchment over layers and crimp edges to seal; place on baking sheet. Repeat with remaining packets. Bake at 350 degrees for 30 minutes. Makes 4 servings.

hour; brush with remaining honey mixture and cook about 45 minutes or until thermometer inserted into thickest part registers 170 degrees. Cool 10 minutes before slicing. Garnish with fresh thyme and cranberries. Serve with honey cranberry relish. Makes 8 servings.

Honey cranberry relish: Coarsely chop 1 package (12 oz.) fresh or frozen whole cranberries and 1 medium orange in food processor or by hand. Stir in 3/4 cup honey. Bring to boil over medium-high heat and cook 3 to 4 minutes. Cool. Makes 2-1/4 cups.

Honey Roasted Apples

4 medium baking apples
1/2 cup honey
1/4 cup orange juice

1 T lemon juice
1 t grated orange peel
1/2 t ground ginger
1/3 cup hot water

Pare top 1/3 of apples and remove core leaving 1/2-inch of core on bottom. Place apples in oiled baking dish. Combine honey, orange juice, lemon juice, orange peel and ginger. Spoon over apples allowing mixture to fill centers and coat entire surface. Pour water into baking dish. Bake, covered, at 400 degrees for 15 minutes. Remove cover and bake 30 minutes longer or until apples are glazed and tender; baste with liquid from baking dish every 15 minutes. Makes 4 servings.

Travel

State tourists get new guide, planning info

In mid-February, the Michigan Travel Bureau unveiled a new state tourism guide it's publishing in cooperation with Midwest Living magazine.

Called, Michigan Travel Ideas, the free full-sized publication has 132 pages and is now available to those who call or write the travel bureau. A million copies were printed, 444,000 of which are being mailed to subscribers of Midwest Living.

The travel bureau used to produce its own publication, which was a costly and labor-intensive enterprise. By uniting with Midwest Living, the state will cut its costs by almost half and double the circulation of the previous book, according to Tom Altemus, the new director of the travel bureau.

Some local publishers, notably Crain Communications and AAA Michigan Living, are gnashing their teeth that they failed to land this lucrative piece of business. But Midwest Living, which is based in Des Moines, Iowa, came up with the concept first and brought it to the attention of travel bureau.

It seemed to be a win-win situation, what with budget cuts all around, and so the book was commissioned.

Midwest Living's proposal was that it would pull together a collection of stories it had published about Michigan in the past couple of years and combine those with the kinds of trip planning information that guidebooks must include.

There were those with concerns. Kathryn Usitalo, who used to head communications for the Metropolitan Detroit Convention and Visitors Bureau, was worried that the book would primarily consist of travel features, and not include enough "hard-core" planning information.

The result is 106 pages of Midwest Living editorial copy on activities and attractions and 26 pages of planning information. Many of the stories were written by the state's most talented writers — notably Dixie Franklin of Marquette and Sue Pollack of Royal Oak — and regrettably, no credit is given to them.

Most readers will enjoy the guide, primarily because it is slick and contains a lot of great photos. But as a writer and editor, I can tell you that the publishers have designed it around the stories available, rather than the other way around. But that was the idea.

Anyway, the trip-planning information seems to be sufficient (with quite a bit of focus on winter activities, for a change) but I doubt if there is enough to suit Usitalo or any hard-core travel writer. I particularly miss any extensive coverage of the state's growing number of bed and breakfast inns. But, I suggest you write and obtain a copy of the publication, as your taxes are paying for it and it should be helpful to you in planning your Michigan trips.

To obtain a copy of "Michigan Travel Ideas," write to the Michigan Travel Bureau, P.O. Box 30226, Lansing, Mich. 48909 or call toll-free (800) 5432-YES. The hearing-impaired may call the TDD line toll-free at (800) 722-8191.

On a completely different, but almost as interesting topic, a new cruise line has been launched and with a most radical theme — families.

Yep, we are talking mom, dad and the kiddies. Or, as the president of American Family Cruises says, "If you don't like kids, this is not the way to go."

Sage advice. I would have loved this concept about 10 years ago when Amy and Jenny were still youngsters and liked to travel with mom. Now they are 17 and 20 and their idea of a cruise is Carnival — party down, without mom. But I digress.

Two ships that are now operated by Costa Cruise Lines, the ErugenioCosta and the Costa Riviera, are being reconfigured to accommodate families and will be called KinShips. They will be renamed the American Adventure and the American Pioneer and, to accommodate families, will offer such oddities as four-, five- and six-berth staterooms and suites.

More than half of the public areas will be dedicated to children's activities, and buffet areas will serve food constantly, from 6 a.m. to 11 p.m., to accommodate unpredictable children's appetites.

And parents won't have to provide all of the entertainment. An intensive children's program, divided into four age groups, will be operated by cruise counselors (called "coaches") and each age group will have its own public room. Fuzzy Wuzzy's Den will handle ages 2-4; Rock-O-Saurus Club, ages 5-7; the Sea Haunt, 8-12, and Club Yes! for 13 and older.

Parents are not overlooked. Those seeking a respite can opt to leave their kids with the coaches during meals and retreat to tables for two in the dining room where they will be treated to real candlelight and complimentary champagne.

And, yes, there is a midnight buffet — it's just that it is at 9 p.m.

Are these folks serious? Most decidedly so. Cruising is becoming more and more popular and adults often want to bring the kids along, but the ships weren't really designed for them. So American Family Lines has decided to fill the bill.

This will definitely appeal to single parents and, for once, they get a break. Rather than pay a single supplement, a parent with one child under 18 can cruise at a regular adult and child rate. It's about time.

They will begin sailing from Miami in December. Cruise-only rates start at $795 per parent and $395 per child aged 2-17; kids under two sail free. For more information, contact your travel agent or call toll-free (800) 322-3130, 8:30 a.m. to 7 p.m. weekdays.

Charity Clark, David Ramsey and Stacey Herring appear in Lorraine Hansberry's powerful drama about cultural identity, integration and family unity, "A Raisin in the Sun." March 5-15 at the Bonstelle Theatre. Performances are Fridays and Saturdays at 8 p.m. and Sundays at 2 p.m. For tickets and information call 577-2960.

'A Raisin in the Sun' opens at WSU's Bonstelle March 5

The Wayne State University Department of Theatre will present Lorraine Hansberry's "A Raisin in the Sun" at the Bonstelle Theatre March 5-14.

The story tells of a mother's struggle to keep her family together after getting $10,000 from a life insurance policy. Each family member's dreams are suddenly within their reach, but the price of success could be the destruction of the family. The play explores cultural identity, integration and family unity.

"A Raisin in the Sun" premiered at the Blackstone Theatre in Chicago for four weeks before opening on Broadway, at the Ethel Barrymore Theatre, on March 11, 1959. The original production was directed by Lloyd Richards, a Wayne State University alumnus. "A Raisin in the Sun" was the first play written by an African-American woman to be produced on Broadway, and Lorraine Hansberry was the first African-American playwright to receive the New York Drama Critics Circle Award.

The Bonstelle production is directed by WSU faculty member Addell Austin Anderson, director of the Black Theatre Program.

For tickets and information call the Hilberry Theatre box office, Cass and Hancock, at 577-2972.

'Antigone' opens at Strand

Sophocles' classic tragedy "Antigone" will be presented at the Strand Theatre in Pontiac March 4-April 4. Translated by Timberlake Wertenbaker, the legend of "Antigone" is as powerful today as it was 2,500 years ago.

The story of a woman who had the courage to say "no," "Antigone" explores the timeless questions of civilization. Can a balance be found between order and freedom, between the needs of the individual and of the state and at what point does one take precedence over the other?

Wertenbaker is best known for her award winning play, "Our Country's Good," which received outstanding reviews earlier in the Attic's season. Her translation captures the play's awesome power and its breath-taking beauty.

The play will be directed by Patricia Ansuini, who directed last season's "Abundance" at the Strand Theatre. With a cast of 13, the production features Susan M. Felder as Antigone, Miriam Yezbick, David Fox, Jim Porterfield, and Thomas Mahard.

"Talk back" sessions with the cast and director will take place every Thursday directly following the performance. Tickets are available at the Strand Theatre at 335-8100, the New Center Theatre at 875-8284, or any Ticketmaster outlet at 645-6666.

Group sales information can be obtained by calling Gwen at 875-8285. Student Rush Tix are available, 1/2 off the ticket price, 1/2 hour before performance with valid student I.D.

Semkow is always a welcome DSO guest

By Alex Suczek
Special Writer

Detroit's favorite guest conductor came to town last week and led the symphony in three weekend performances of an absolutely smashing program.

For many seasons now audiences have known that Jerzy Semkow has a masterful skill for bringing out the overall concept of a piece of music while also paying full attention to detail. Last Thursday's performance of Berlioz' hallucinatory adventure, "Symphonie Fantastique," couldn't have been a better example.

Intending to portray a series of dreamed episodes that range from idyllic to nightmarish, Berlioz created psychedelic musical experiences of epic proportions and Semkow and the orchestra set each mood vividly. The opening segment drawing the listener into the mystery, the ball with its delirious waltz, the pastoral escape to the country, the grim march to the gallows, each expressed its special mood with captivating effect. And the culminating witches sabbath captured the frenzied imagery of that satanic event with demonic energy.

Meanwhile, musical details from the various sections were powerfully etched with superb clarity by the strings, the harps, the brass and tympani, each in their turn.

While this 50-minute-plus work was the major piece for the evening, it could not eclipse the memory of the delicious opening presentation. The Symphony No. 34 is one of several three-movement symphonies left to us by Mozart, but it is definitely not a minor work. In any case, Semkow gave it major treatment. It was a clean, crisp performance, dignified in the opening allegro movement, delicate and gracious in the andante and sparkling with Mozart's best joie de vivre in the final allegro.

Here, too, Semkow demonstrated that along with mastering the overall form of a work, he knows how to shape the nuances with such details as carefully crafted swells and fades beautifully applied to Mozart's elegant phrases and a superbly controlled flow of ideas.

Tonight, guest conductor Herman Michael opens a four performance series with two more performances Friday and one Saturday evening. Featured performer is pianist Jon Kimura Parker in Rachmaninoff's "Rhapsody on a Theme of Paganini." Rossini's overture to "An Italian in Algiers" and Schubert's Symphony No. 9 complete the program. For tickets and information call 833-3700.

Kottler honored at piano festival

In a geo-choreographed extravaganza featuring dances from around the world arranged for one, two and four pianos, the Lyric Chamber Ensemble will celebrate the 94th birthday of Mischa Kottler, often referred to as the "Dean of Detroit pianists."

Kottler will appear as special guest on the program, which also includes pianists Flavio Varani, Louis Nagel, Fedora Horowitz and Joseph Gurt, along with guest artists Michael Gurt and Andrew Cooperstock.

The Fifth Annual Piano Festival ("94 Candles and 352 Keys") will be at 3:30 p.m. Sunday, March 7, at Orchestra Hall, 3711 Woodward Ave. in Detroit.

Kottler was born in Russia and moved from Kiev to the United States in 1913. After a brief period in Chicago, he went to New York where the great violin teacher Leopold Auer arranged for him to perform for Sergei Rachmaninoff. Rachmaninoff encouraged Kottler to return to Europe for further study. He went to Paris to study with Alfred Cortot and to Vienna to study with the great pupil of Franz Liszt, Emil von Sauer. Upon returning to the United States; he settled in Detroit and became music director for WWJ radio and television stations, a post he held for 33 years. ## British organist plans concert

One of Britain's up-and-coming young musicians, organist Simon Gledhill, will make his first Detroit appearance Saturday, March 6 at 7 p.m. in "From England to America," a program featuring the music of Cole Porter and Ray Nobel played on one of Detroit's most unique and historic organs.

Gledhill, 27, will play the 32-ton Mighty Wurlitzer pipe organ, originally installed in Detroit's Fisher Theater and now owned by the Detroit Theater Organ Society, at the refurbished Senate Theater, 6424 Michigan Avenue, west of Livernois.

Since winning the Northern Theater Organist of the Year competition in Great Britain at 16, Gledhill has played nearly every theater pipe organ in Britain, making several recordings on the BBC theater pipe organ.

In addition to tours of Australia, Holland and Germany, he has performed at the pipe organ at the Paramount Theater, Oakland, Calif. (originally installed in Detroit's Grand Circus Theater), the former New York Paramount Theater instrument, now at Century II in Wichita, and at San Francisco's Castro Theater (where the organ console from Detroit's State Theater is now installed).

The concert is being presented by two organ preservation groups, the Detroit Theater Organ Society and the Macomb Theatre Organ Society. Production of theater pipe organs ceased with the advent of talking pictures in the early '30s. Organized in 1981, the Macomb Theatre Organ Society presented prominent organists in monthly concerts at the Kilgen pipe organ at the Macomb Theater in Mount Clemens until 1986, when the theater was converted to a dinner theater and the organ was removed. Originally installed in the Palace Theater in Gary, Ind., before being moved to the Macomb Theater in 1970, the instrument was sold to a theater in Port Edward, Wis. The Macomb group continues to sponsor concerts at other metropolitan locations housing a theater pipe organ.

Following the performance the audience is invited to tour four of the instrument's six chambers to view some of the 2,297 pipes that range from 16 feet to the size of a pencil. There will be no charge for lighted, guarded parking. Free shuttle bus service will be provided between the theater and the parking lot. Drivers are requested to drop off and pick up passengers at the theater entrance, two blocks west of Livernois, one-half mile south of I-94. A doorman will direct drivers to the parking lot. Tickets are $6 in advance and $7 at the door. For more information, call 894-4100.

East's four diamond call is preemptive with no four card major. West and South have good hands. You probably should have pulled West's double of four spades. Now you must when partner says, "We're in trouble." That's what the re-double bugles. Bid five clubs. Luckily everything turns out well.

Your opponents most likely have a vulnerable slam somewhere. Make it difficult to find. Take away their bidding space. Bid four spades; if you go for 800 (down four) their ice cold in a slam that starts counting at 1250 or 1500.

You could experience a serious embarrassment in your rebid by opening one spade. If partner has red cards (10-12 H.C.P.) and bids two diamonds or hearts, you can't pass and to correctly describe your shape you'd have to bid three clubs which would be the over-bid of the decade. With this one, bid one club and then bid one spade. If forced to bid at the two level, do so again in spades which perfectly portrays your holding.

Works of art will benefit Children's Home of Detroit

By Ronald J. Bernas
Assistant Editor

Want to indulge your passion for the arts for a whole weekend and at the same time help an agency that helps children? Then set March 19-21 aside, and leave your black tie at home.

That weekend, the Grosse Pointe Artist Association and Gallerie 454 in Grosse Pointe Park will team up to present a first-of-its-kind benefit for the Children's Home of Detroit.

It is the first time the association has put on a fundraiser of this type and everybody seems excited about it.

"We wanted something for everybody, so we kept the costs low and spread it out over a weekend so people can come whenever they want," said Nancy Prophit, who is chairing the event.

"In the summer the Grosse Pointe Artist Association met to see how we could get more exposure for our group and it was suggested that we do a charity benefit," said Leo Salvaggio, president of the group.

"Not a lot of people know about our group," Prophit said, despite the fact that the association has 250 artists who either live or teach in Grosse Pointe. "And in our discussions, people don't seem to know what the Children's Home of Detroit is all about. This event will bring some attention to our group and to the Children's Home, which does some wonderful work."

The Children's Home, located in Grosse Pointe Woods, is Michigan's oldest child care facility, founded as an orphanage in 1836. Today it offers four different programs — residential treatment for boys 6 to 14 and girls 6 to 17; a secure residential program (located in Warren) for boys and girls 6 to 17; short term emergency shelter; and a community services program which works with youths in the Grosse Pointe area.

"We're really looking forward to this," said Deborah Liedel, director of community relations for the Children's Home. "The home is 80 percent state funded and the rest comes from fundraisers and private donations."

The fundraiser will be a juried exhibition and sale in which half of all the proceeds will go to the Children's Home. The money is to be used for some sort of art-related programming.

The Preview Party is from 6 to 9 p.m. on Friday, March 19, at the gallery. Musicians from the Grosse Pointe Symphony Orchestra will perform and Sparky Herbert's will cater. Tickets are $10, $25 and $50.

On Saturday, March 20, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. visitors can view the exhibit and cross the street to Cup a Cino for coffee and pastries. The cost is $5. From noon to 3 p.m. Sunday, March 21, art lovers can browse the show at the gallery and have a special brunch at Sparky Herbert's for $15.

Reservations for the opening night party and the brunch at Sparky Herbert's are required by March 12.

"We're doing a lot this year and everybody is excited," Salvaggio said.

In addition to the Children's Home benefit, the association is also participating in a joint venture with the Grosse Pointe Symphony. The artist association will provide the artwork and the symphony will provide the music — appropriately enough, Mussorgsky's "Pictures at an Exhibition," at 3:30 p.m. Sunday, March 7 at Parcels Middle School.

The association also has a new member classification for people who support the arts, but aren't necessarily artists. They can become associate members for $10.

And, of course, the association puts on its annual fall festival at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial and a smaller show in the summer in the Village. Applications are now being accepted for the juried fall festival.

For more information about the benefit, call Prophit at 884-8635; to join the group, call Bunny Homan at 881-9085; and for information about the Fall Art Festival, call Isabelle Goosen at 882-4626 or Carol Sinclair at 886-8468.

A great film and a troubled recital are parables of integrity in art

By Alex Suczek
Special Writer

A beautifully sensitive and engaging art film that just opened at the AMC Maple Theatres makes an eloquent statement about the relationship of art and life. Meanwhile, a classic guitar recital at Orchestra Hall last week provided a most vivid and troubling case in point.

Music

The film is "Tous les Matins du Monde" ("All the Mornings of the World") made in France (with English subtitles). It is at once both an intelligent and sensual exploration of the choice between idealism and commercialism in art and its relationship to goals of life. With the setting romantically remote in a 17th century French chateau, plus the superb direction, music and acting of the all-French company, getting the message is an effortless though somewhat melancholy pleasure.

The central figure is Sainte Colombe, a Renaissance master of the viol (precursor of the cello) expressing through his music his inconsolable sorrow over the death of his young wife. Tender, lamenting and exquisitely beautiful compositions spring from his fingers on the seven-stringed instrument as spontaneously as improvisation.

The music, as performed by the film by what must be France's greatest interpreters of this music, transcends the role of a mere film score to become rather a vital method of communication of the film's message regarding the relevance of art to life and its values. Colombe's music is sublime and superbly performed in sych with actor Jean Pierre Marielle's expression as he pantomimes on the viol, speaks volumes against compromising art for vanity.

The conflict is provided by young, ambitious and facile musician Marin Marais played by Guillaume Depardieu as a youth and by Guillaume's father, Gerard, (of "Cyrano de Bergerac" fame) as the mature, successful court musician of Louis XIV.

It is Marais' awareness of his own artistic superficiality that keeps bringing him back to Colombe to learn to play the viol, to have an affair with his tragic daughter Madeline, and most of all to hear and acquire Colombe's music. Marais, who narrates much of the story, finally awakens in his maturity to the reality that his musical entertainment at Louis' glittering court is not worthy of Colombe's sincere, uncompromising artistry.

What is especially rewarding about this film is the way the story, which creates a plausible account of the lives of two real musicians, raises the issues subtly, in a touching and highly evocative portrayal of their lives. There is an unusual realism and poetry to the camera work, especially night scenes, and exceptional meaning to all the visual imagery utilized by director Alain Corneau. And the music of Sainte Colombe, though never published in his lifetime, has survived to provide imposing authenticity to the retelling of his story.

It was, therefore, a startling experience to hear a recital by classical guitarist Christopher Parkening that aroused questions as to artistic standards and motives. Publicized as the heir to the legendary Andres Segovia, Parkening displays a remarkable technical virtuosity and appears able to play the most challenging music for classical guitar accurately and with dazzling speed.

His concert last Wednesday was far from satisfying, however. In the first half of the program, devoted entirely to music of the Renaissance and baroque periods, the performance, while showy, was largely mechanical and lacking in depth. There were even lapses in accuracy with occasionally scrambled embellishments. And it soon became apparent that he had not memorized his program but would play the entire concert from the scores.

Joining with assisting artist David Brandon in several guitar duets provided a pleasant diversion but did not relieve the rarity of genuine sensitivity and inspiration. Rather, the impression was of a relentless drive to get through the concert on time. Nonetheless, a cadre of enthusiastic fans responded with obvious enthusiasm and pleasure.

Having heard Renaissance music only the night before the film, it was inevitable to think of Marais tossing off his musical entertainment in court and of Colombe-like Andres Segovia, whose concentration and dedication to artistic perfection are part of his legend.

In his second half, Parkening seemed to find himself in two short works of Villa Lobos and "Leyenda" by Isaac Albeniz — all-time classics of standard guitar repertory which every aspiring player learns. And in response to his loyally uncritical fans, he generously returned with three encores. Perhaps the greatest reward of the evening was the realization that glamour masquerading as real music is a timeless phenomenon.

For a highly rewarding way to get that message, go see "Tous les Matins du Monde" at the AMC Maple (just west of Telegraph Road), but don't wait too long. Without the attraction of mayhem and monsters, it may be there only a week or two. For showtimes call 855-9090.

Acting up

The Pointe Players of Grosse Pointe South High School will present four one-act plays at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, March 4, and 8 p.m. Saturday, March 6, in the school's auditorium. The plays — "Postponing the Heat Death of the Universe," "A Case of Two Detectives," "China Dishes" and "Grandma Duck is Dead" — will be directed by four South seniors, Jennifer Andary (above, upside down), Andrew McKim (behind her), Ian Deason (right), and Kevin Ozar, not pictured. Tickets are $4 and may be purchased at the door.

'Amos:' Socially relevant and hilarious

By Jeffrey Harper
Special Writer

"Amos and Andrew" is a satire on the all-too-familiar problem of racism. Writer/director E. Max Frye does a hilarious job of comparing stereotypes of blacks held by whites, and vice-versa.

Samuel L. Jackson plays Andrew Sterling, a successful, outspoken playwright and "thorn in the side of the white man" who is the personification of all frustrated black men.

Sterling buys a summer home on a predominantly white island in the northeast and is mistaken by his new neighbors as a thief. Sheriff Cecil Tolliver (Dabney Coleman) is an ill-motivated, election year peacekeeper with an eye on higher public office.

On the misinformation of Sterling's neighbors, Tolliver and his merry band of Barney Fife clones become all too anxious to display their heroics before the local news corps. With an imagined hostage situation, the trigger-happy cops send the sheriff down a one-way street toward media disaster.

Sterling, thinking that he is being welcomed by the island's inhabitants, calls the police and unknowingly informs Sheriff Tolliver of the reality of the situation.

Tolliver, now just moments away from becoming unelectable, employs the aid of a small-time crook, Amos Odell (Nicholas Cage), who has found himself detained in the city hoosegow on a list of minor offenses. With the promise of freedom as motivation, Odell agrees to infiltrate the Sterling home, pose in black face for the cameras, and release his hostage.

Giancarlo Esposito is the Rev. Fenton Bunch, a caricatured hybrid lying somewhere between Jesse Jackson and Al Sharpton, who rallies black protesters to the scene, insuring confusion and justice for all.

Frye also takes aim at the media who are depicted as too eager to see black/white conflicts as racially motivated, or to sensationalize mediocre events. When the news vultures encircle the crime scene, the now camera-shy Tolliver orders, "Get me some crowd control down here; we don't want another Vietnam."

This is the most intelligent comedy in a long time. Cage was made for this type of semi-slapstick and is as perfectly cast as he was for "Raising Arizona." His body language and facial gestures make him a natural for the genre. The closeups of Odell finding "buried treasure" in a neighbor's ashtray and enlightening Sterling to his boyhood penchant for sea monkeys are the funniest scenes in the film.

Although this type of film is often excluded from Oscar considerations, if there were a category for social relevance, "Amos and Andrew" would win hands down.

Children's Hospital's auxiliary plans Cuisine Extraordinaire

The ninth annual Cuisine Extraordinaire, a benefit for Children's Hospital of Michigan, will be from 6 to 10 p.m. Sunday, March 14, at the Dearborn Inn.

Some of Detroit's top chefs will offer taste-tempting choices with an international flavor: hot and cold hors d'oeuvres, entrees and desserts. The Mark Phillips Band will provide music for dancing.

The Children's Hospital of Michigan Auxiliary will host the event; the Chefs de Cuisine Association is the sponsor. All proceeds will benefit the auxiliary's commitment to the neonatal intensive care unit and nursing education/research endowment.

The theme, "It's a Small, Small World," will inspire planners to transform the Dearborn Inn's grand ballroom into a global wonderland.

General chairman is Mary Beth Winkworth. Honorary chairmen are Mr. and Mrs. William Clay Ford Jr.

Besides the good food, the evening will include silent and live auctions featuring things like an Australian holiday, a Caribbean cruise, a trip to Disney World, a Red Wing playoff package for four, a five-course gourmet dinner for eight at The Golden Mushroom, a golf outing, and more than 100 silent auction items.

Tickets are $100 a person; $150 for patrons; $200 for benefactors. For information, call Dawn Dyer at Children's Hospital at 745-5373.

Race kickoff: State Rep. Maxine Berman will be the guest speaker at a kickoff breakfast for Race for the Cure, a fundraiser and consciousness-raising event to benefit research into a cure for breast cancer. The breakfast will begin at 9 a.m. Saturday, March 13, at Jacobson's in Grosse Pointe.

Berman lobbied for federal legislation to standardize mammography diagnostic reporting. As a result of her efforts, Michigan was, in 1989, the first state to adopt mammographic control legislation.

The Race for the Cure is one of dozens of national races/walks designed to promote awareness and early detection of breast cancer. The Meyer L. Prentis Comprehensive Cancer Center of Metropolitan Detroit sponsors Detroit's race, which will be Saturday, April 17, on the grounds of the Detroit Zoo.

Grosse Pointer Suzanne Zielinski of the Michigan Cancer Foundation will also speak at the kickoff about the Race for the Cure benefit.

The cost for the kickoff breakfast is $5.

Strike: Bowlers also will get a chance to throw a strike at cancer. The Michigan Cancer Foundation's seventh annual Bowl-A-Thon will be Saturday, March 6, at seven southeastern Michigan bowling centers.

More than $100,000 has been raised in the past by the event, which supports the foundation's research, education and patient care programs.

Bowlers are asked to solicit a minimum of $25 in donations as an entry fee, which includes three games, shoe rental and a party.

For more information, call Rob Schweers at 833-0710.

T & C benefit: Tennis & Crumpets Inc. will present a benefit for Children's Hospital of Michigan, a Burgundy Wine Tour, on Monday, March 15, from 6:30 to 9 p.m. at Industry, in New Pontiac.

Guests will get a chance to taste wines from the Burgundy region of France and hors d'oeuvres provided by Ristorante di Modesta and will meet the vintners of nine French wineries.

Proceeds will benefit a new in-house community mental health program for ambulatory clinics at Children's Hospital of Michigan. Tickets are $40 a person. Call Estelle Bletsas at 675-6633 or Peggy Ventura at 882-6246 for more information.

Tropical party: The Goombay Festival 1993 will be Friday, March 5, at Forest Lake Country Club in Bloomfield Hills, beginning at 7 p.m.

The benefit is for the Children's Center, a non-profit organization that works with abused and neglected children and their families.

Patterned after the Goombay Festivals celebrated each summer in the streets of the Bahamas, the hot tropical party will feature colorful costumes and pulsating sounds and guests are encouraged to wear tropical attire and to join in the line dances and the limbo.

The fundraiser will feature a dinner of island-inspired food, Caribbean music and an auction of tropical stuff like a Puerta Vallarta getaway, a Caribbean cruise, a golf and tennis package in Harbor Springs and more.

Grosse Pointers Delia and Dominic Pangborn are on the festival committee, and Dr. Don and Dale Austin are members of the host committee. Dale Austin is a Children's Center board member.

Tickets to the Goombay Festival are $85. Call the Children's Center at 831-5535 for more information.

DIA volunteer: Grosse Pointer Mary Ann Lawlis was honored by the Volunteer Committee of the Founders Society Detroit Institute of Arts as its volunteer of the month for March.

Lawlis is a gallery information volunteer at the DIA. She signed up as a volunteer 21 years ago. She was a charter member of the Gallery Aides Committee (now Gallery Information) and she has been treasurer of the committee and personnel placement chair for the Volunteer Committee board.

"We're the ones visitors see first," she said of her work as an information volunteer. "If we make a good impression, they'll have a good impression of the museum. We think of ourselves as hosts. We're always selling the museum."

She's had some unusual visitors. "Once a truck driver stopped in to use the phone when his truck broke down," she said. "He went back in the galleries and was gone over two hours. When he came out, he said, 'Boy, that was great. I forgot what time it was.'"

Lawlis said people often write thank-you notes, telling what a good experience they had at the museum. "That's very rewarding," she said.

In addition to her service at the DIA, Lawlis is corresponding secretary for the American Association of University Women and a eucharistic minister for St. Paul Catholic Church in Grosse Pointe Farms.

For more information about volunteering at the DIA, call 833-0247.
