

Municipal bonds: A less taxing way to invest

By Chip Chapman
Staff Writer

In February 1991, Grosse Pointe voters defeated by a 3-to-2 margin a $7.6 million bond issue to fund the building of a new central branch of the public library.

Would such a bond issue be approved by the electorate if it appeared on the ballot today?

"Most new bond issues do not pass on the first attempt" said Glenn Watson, director of public finance at Roney & Co. "The combination of a slow economy, Michigan's disproportionately high levels of existing property taxes and the uncertainty regarding future tax policy from the Clinton administration is contributing to the anti-tax sentiment we are experiencing right now."

Watson said that of the 10 bond issues on the ballot in Michigan in the June 14 election, only two passed.

Using the 1991 library bond issue as an example, figures were compiled to determine the costs to taxpayers and investors if it had passed.

Even though the economy was in better shape two years ago, Grosse Pointe was not convinced that the community needed a new library building, especially at that cost.

Municipal bonds of this type are backed by a general obligation pledge and have to be approved by the electorate. If the voters had passed the 1991 bond issue, a new millage rate would have been set, and the schools would have only been permitted to levy enough mills to cover their debt.

Because it is illegal to levy additional mills for more than is needed, tax dollars could not go toward anything other than

Using the 1991 library bond issue as an example - this is how much someone who purchased a $5,000 bond would receive and how much additional taxes would be paid. The tax numbers are for someone with an SEV of $100,000.

WE'RE CONCERNED ABOUT YESTERDAY'S NEWS.

News can appear one day and be gone the next. But the paper news is printed on can and should live on.

Last year, more than one third of all U.S. newsprint was recycled. And that number is growing every day.

Recycling is the one way we can all give something back.

School's out!

The last moment of the last day of the school year, traditionally a time of celebration for students and teachers, was June 17. Above, Detroit Elementary School students marked the occasion by dashing out the front door and cheering. Below, Grosse Pointe South High School students celebrated in a more creative manner - with cans of shaving cream.

School board votes to sell its offices at 389 St. Clair

By Shirley A. McShane
Staff Writer

Following the Grosse Pointe school board's vote last week to sell the district's administrative offices at 389 St. Clair, a citizens' group has pledged to keep its fight going to save the pair of historic buildings.

"We are totally shocked and chagrined that the board totally ignored the voice of the people," said Joe Callahan, spokesman for Concerned Citizens of Grosse Pointe. "We're questioning their motives."

Concerned Citizens of Grosse Pointe was formed in April and had one of its members, Grosse Pointe Park businessman Sears Taylor, recently elected to the board.

Callahan said he and other members were stunned when the school board voted 5-2 June 15 to sell the administrative offices.

Board members Gloria Konsler, Linda Schneider, Julie Bourke, Frank Sladen and Carol Marr voted for the sale. Timothy Howlett and Carl Anderson were opposed.

"The group was given an inside tip - apparently a bad one - that the board would delay its vote," Callahan said. "But we are not giving up. We feel we have the community behind us."

Callahan and other group members have been vocal at April, May and June board meetings, have voiced their concerns at a June 1 public hearing on the proposed sale of the buildings and have written many letters to local newspapers.

Resident Elaine Hartmann, a member of the Grosse Pointe Historical Society, offered to form a foundation to raise private funds for the renovation costs to save 389 St. Clair. Resident Cindy Pangborn said she could form an adopt-a-room program, soliciting donations and volunteers to help refurbish the buildings.

The district has estimated repairs to the buildings at $785,000 and a complete renovation would cost an estimated

$2 million.

Superintendent Ed Shine proposed to the board that the district sell 389 St. Clair and relocate its offices to Barnes school, North and South high schools and build a vehicle storage garage behind Parcels Middle School.

Costs, which the district said would be offset by sale proceeds, are estimated at $669,840 to modify space at Barnes, North and South; $131,000 to build a garage at Parcels; and moving costs are estimated at $95,000.

Before the board vote last week, board president Konsler said she didn't want to see the district continue to spend education dollars on maintaining buildings the district no longer needs.

Trustee Anderson said he would like to give the community one year to explore opportunities for fundraising.

Opponents of the decision to sell the building cited these concerns:

Woods council fires city administrator

By Jim Stickford
Staff Writer

The Woods city council Monday night, in a surprise move, fired city administrator Phil Belcher.

Belcher had been a city employee for about three years. He was assistant to longtime city manager Chester Peterson for two years. Last year, after a three-month search, the council hired Belcher as the retiring Peterson's permanent replacement at a salary of $66,000.

A city employee who asked to remain anonymous said that Belcher was giving a lot of city employees a hard time and that "he was no Chester Peterson."

Woods councilmember James Alogdelis, who voted for Belcher's dismissal, said that while he had no problems personally with Belcher, others in city government did.

"Regardless of a person's ability, his relationship with the people he works with counts for a lot," Alogdelis said. "If you are not people-oriented you have a strike against you."

Alogdelis said he voted with the majority because he was looking out for the interests of the city. He said he was sorry to have to vote to fire Belcher because he cast the deciding vote last year to hire him.

"It's always sad when you have to do something like this," said Alogdelis. "But I didn't see any alternative."

Public safety director Jack Patterson will act as temporary city manager. The council has no successor lined up, and must begin the lengthy process of finding a replacement for Belcher.

"This makes no sense," said councilmember Thomas Fahrner. "I work in the private sector, and you never replace top staff without having a replacement lined up. We have so much going on - Milk River, the parking situation. Now we have to find a new city manager because Patterson doesn't want the job. I hope it doesn't take three months like the last time. I hope the council hires a head-hunter firm to do the work."

Fahrner said Belcher had communicated well with him, and he had no problem with the quality of his work. Fahr-ner said that's why he voted against his dismissal. "You do not hire a man, then take him apart bit by bit after he starts," Fahrner said.

Belcher declined to comment on the council's action, but did say that it came as somewhat of a surprise. He said any problems city workers might have had with him were not communicated to him by councilmembers.

He lives in Roseville with his wife and two children and was looking for a home in Grosse Pointe Woods. City officials did not know or refused to give his age.

Six months in the making

For the past six months, the Grosse Pointes News has been writing stories about the history of Grosse Pointe City and Farms in anticipation of their centennial celebrations, which will climax July 3 and 4.

All the articles will be printed in a special magazine, titled "Pointes in Time," that will be inserted in the July 1 Grosse Pointe News and a limited number of copies also will be available for separate purchase.

We hope you enjoy the compilation and the many activities offered - it won't happen again for 100 years!

To live and die in the City: It will cost a bit more

By Chip Chapman
Staff Writer

Birth and death certificates for those who enter or leave the world within the boundaries of Grosse Pointe City will soon cost twice as much.

Effective July 19, the price of birth and death certificates will jump from $5 for the first copy and $2 for additional copies to $10 and $3.

In every county in the state except Wayne, the county keeps all of the birth and death records. In Wayne County, the cities are required to keep the records.

Two years ago, the Internal Revenue Service began requiring that in order for children to qualify as a deduction on their parents' tax returns, they must have a Social Security number. Parents flooded city offices, creating chaos for officials there.

Every person who is born or dies at Bon Secours Hospital is subject to these new costs.

"There's a lot of paper work involved," said assistant City manager Chris Bremer. "We want to make sure City taxpayers aren't paying for other residents to get birth or death records just because they used Secours."

LaFond named to fill council vacancy

Peter LaFond was sworn in Monday night to fill the City Council seat vacated by Carl Rashid Jr., who resigned after moving to the Woods.

LaFond, a lifelong resident of Grosse Pointe, is president of Steel Tool and Engineering, a jet engine parts manufacturer based in Taylor. The firm was recently recognized by the U.S. Small Business Administration as the top small business sub-contractor in the Midwest after LaFond reworked the company's production strategy.

LaFond is a graduate of Northern Michigan University and is active in the Neighborhood Club youth sports programs. He is a coach for the basketball program and the announcer at all home swim meets for Grosse Pointe South, where one of his daughters is a member of the team.

"I feel fortunate to have been born and raised in Grosse Pointe," he said. "I am pleased to be raising my children in our great community."

LaFond lives on University with his wife, Anne, and daughters Stephanie and Kimberly.

"I feel sitting on the City Council would be an excellent opportunity to be of service to the community which has given so much to my family for so many years," LaFond said.

Corrections

Corrections will be printed on this page every week. If there is an error of fact in any story in the newsroom at 882-0294.

Grosse Pointe News reader Bill Ange correctly pointed out an error on the front page of last week's paper. The centennial events story should have indicated it was continued on page 27A, not page 2A. We regret the error.

Last week's front-page story about the fumigation of the historical Provençal-Weir House should have said that methyl bromide, a gas, is extremely dangerous to humans if not properly handled.

Last week's story about the Baroness Maud Ledyard Von Kettler should have said that the baroness visited her friend Amy McMillan in Washington, D.C.

The article on the Grosse Pointe school board's election results in last week's paper contained the following quote, which should have been attributed to newly elected member Sears Taylor:

"While I was campaigning, I had at least 10 senior citizens come up to me and say words to the effect that they have lived in Grosse Pointe for 50 years, they're living on a fixed income and they want to stay in Grosse Pointe but they can't stand the taxes."

Bonds

the new library, or for whatever the additional mills were earmarked.

From a bond purchaser's standpoint, Grosse Pointe public school bonds would be a secure investment. The state of Michigan requires bonds over $1 million to carry a rating. Bonds of the Grosse Pointe public schools would have a high bond rating, Watson said, currently "Aa" by Moody's Investor's Service and "AA" by Standard & Poors Corp. These ratings are at the high end of the investment grade range.

"Grosse Pointe public school bonds would be a relatively safe investment and would be highly desirable based on the strength and quality of the supporting tax base," he said.

Another positive aspect of municipal bonds is that investors can actually see what they have purchased.

"Residents like to invest in their own community. If an investor can purchase a local bond from his community, it's a way of getting a rebate from the property taxes he is paying," Watson said.

From a taxpayer's point of view, the passage of a bond issue would result in an increase in taxes. In the 1991 library case, 1.3 percent.

For a home with a $100,000 of state equalized valuation (SEV), a homeowner in 1991 would have had to pay $40 a year in addition to the $68 already levied for debt retirement.

That year, the schools levied 28.38 mills ($28.38 a each $1,000 of SEV) for the operation of the schools, 1.25 mills for operation of the libraries, and 0.68 mills for debt retirement. The 1991 bond issue would have added 0.4 mills to this total.

A homeowner with an SEV of $100,000 would have paid $3,071, instead of $3,031, in school taxes.

Optimists seek chili contestants

Getting ready for The Down Home Mussel Boil & Chili Cook Off are Lakeshore Optimist Club committee members, Doug Cordier, Dave Hohlfeldt, Terry Olsen, and John Rademaker. Local celebrity judges will award many prizes for the best chilies. Special prizes for the best Kids Chili will be awarded. Residents may enter chili contest by contacting the Grosse Pointe War Memorial or Cordier at 777-9444.

maturity period from 10 to 30 years. The 1991 library bond issue would have matured in 20 years and the taxpayers would have paid back $14,681,000 in principal and interest. The 0.4 of a mill would then be removed from the debt retirement fund.

Municipal bonds are sold in increments of $5,000 and pay an average of 2.50 to 6.00 percent yearly interest. At that rate, an investor who bought a 5 percent $5,000 bond would receive $250 a year in tax-free interest.

That investor would receive $5,000 in interest over the 20-year life of the bond and get the $5,000 principal back at the end of the 20-year period.

If the 1991 library bond issue had passed, the additional taxes the investor would pay for the bond issue over the 20-year period would total just $800.

- The historic buildings, built in 1906 and 1915, should be preserved.
- The cost of moving offices to three locations is not that much less than the cost to renovate the existing offices, if spread over a five-to-10-year period. If residents were given the chance to raise funds, renovation costs would have been further reduced.
- The land at 389 St. Clair was donated by a local family to the school district, which should not sell any more of its land.
- If enrollment increases significantly in the district, Barnes school may have to reopen, forcing the administration to find new office space.
- In his recommendation to the board, Shine listed the following problems with 389 St. Clair:
 - No handicap access to building.
 - Lack of storage and garage facilities.
 - No central air conditioning and uneven heating.

- Leaky, unsafe windows.
- Computer services area grossly inadequate.
- Inadequate wiring.
- Concerns of fire safety.

The board's vote last week authorized the superintendent to advertise for bids to purchase the buildings after July 20, a date the City of Grosse Pointe had requested in April.

The board's vote did not authorize the superintendent to begin plans to move administrative offices.

"It ultimately comes down to whether the board will accept the bids or not," Shine said. "It's better to see if the board accepts the bids. As we begin to prepare for moving, we will have to spend more money on architectural fees and other detail work. There is no sense going forth and spending money since there's another critical vote."

Meanwhile, Concerned Citizens of Grosse Pointe are circulating petitions in the school district. Members are seeking 4,600 signatures, 10-percent of the electorate, in order to have the matter of what to do with 389 St. Clair put to a vote of the residents.

Group member and recently elected board member Taylor said the group may also seek an injunction barring sale of the buildings.

At the June 1 public hearing, Konsler said the board was elected by the voters to make these decisions.

Callahan said he understands the board's role, but feels in this situation that the matter is much too important not to consider the wishes of the people.

"This is a major issue that will disrupt a lot of lives if they sell and abandon that building and move into three schools around the district," he said.

And Taylor, who will officially join the board on July 7, said he did not understand why the vote was so urgent.

"The key issue is that we are disposing of an asset with the illusion of reducing operating revenue," Taylor said. "The cost of the move, paid for by the disposal of an asset, will leave us with nothing for the future."

What's next for 389 St. Clair?

By Chip Chapman
Staff Writer

The Grosse Pointe school board will begin accepting bids July 20 for the administration buildings at 389 St. Clair, which by a 5-2 vote on June 15 the board decided to sell.

On April 5, a letter from superintendent Ed Shine to the board recommended that the buildings and property at 389 St. Clair in Grosse Pointe City be sold. The school administration would move its offices to Barnes, and North and South schools.

At the April 19 school board meeting, City officials asked the board to delay the sale for three months so alternative uses for the building could be explored.

City does with the usage and zoning of the property," said Bon Secours chief executive officer Henry DeVries. "We are interested in the property, but within the boundaries of the City's view — one that will support the continued relationships with our neighbors.

"We're not interested in creating controversy. We believe in the preservation of our neighborhood."

Elaine Hartmann of the Grosse Pointe Historical Society said she was "very disappointed" with the board's actions of June 15.

She said that school board president Gloria Konsler came up with a plan for Hartmann to raise money for the restoration of the buildings and then the buildings could be leased.

"I had to turn her down," Hartmann said. "She didn't give me a chance for a community effort to save it."

Weekends were for the dogs

Here is a brief recap of recent activities held with and for our poochie pals over the past couple of weeks.

There was a marvelous turnout for the Michigan Humane Society's Spring Mutt March, held June 6 at the Edsel & Eleanor Ford House — 448 pledge walkers and their friends (both two- and four-legged), participated this year. Marchers raised more than $52,000 in pledges for the society's three area shelters.

On behalf of Ron Blauet, the Michigan Humane Society staff and volunteers and all the grateful critters that benefit from your efforts, thank you. It's people like you who make these fundraising events such a tremendous success.

And it was a beautiful day for a canine contest Sunday, June 13. Again, there was a wonderful turnout for the "My Dog Is Better Than Your Dog" contest held at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial.

Judges included myself; Grosse Pointe News editor John Minnis; Grosse Pointe Farms mayor Gregg Berendt; and councilmembers Gail Kaess and John Danaher; and Grosse Pointe Yacht Club commodore Herold McDeason. The event was emceed by War Memorial president Mark Weber.

Dr. Les Faremouth (Harvey Animal Hospital) was on hand to make sure all the animals were being taken care of properly and offering tips on how to keep them cool on this very warm and sunny Sunday.

There certainly was some demanding competition and it was "ruff" judging this contest, but I have to tell you, it was great fun and I had a wonderful time!

I'd like to extend my personal thanks to all the terrific people at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial for inviting me, and I look forward to participating in next year's competition.

HEALTH WATCH

Cars aren't the only things that overheat in hot weather.

Innocent Victims
Something as innocent as a child playing in a sandbox in the hot summer sun could bring on heatstroke, a life-threatening condition for people of all ages. Very young and older people are especially at risk; their bodies can't cool off as quickly, and they can easily become dehydrated.

Common Symptoms

- Profuse sweating, followed by hot, dry skin and no sweating
- Confusion, possibly a coma
- A high temperature; often 106° or greater

First Aid

- Call for medical help or take the person to the hospital
- Remove the person from the heat (to air conditioning, if possible)
- Have the person drink cold water or Gatorade
- Remove restrictive clothing
- Put cool water on the exposed skin, and fan it off

Heatstroke can be fatal. So the next time the mercury climbs, don't work, or play, too hard in the sun.

Workers ponder child care choices: Whose hand should rock the cradle?

Many working parents today face the same dilemma — finding high-quality, affordable child care. But if every option incurred equal costs, which child care arrangement would most workers prefer — a live-in nanny? Think again.

According to an accountants on call (aoc) national poll conducted by the Gallup Organization Inc., no single type of child care is favored by an overwhelming majority of American workers — but one option does emerge as the most popular.

Based on all employees, including those who are not parents, 31 percent say they would prefer a child care facility at their place of work. About one in five (21 percent) would want a babysitter who came to their home. Nearly as many (19 percent) select a live-in nanny, followed by 16 percent who prefer a family or babysitter who cared for their child outside their home. Least favored was a child care facility that was not affiliated with the workplace (8 percent). Five percent of respondents had no preference or did not answer.

Interestingly, in a 1990 survey conducted by accountants on call, only 10 percent of employed Americans said they received child care benefits from their employers, and just 6 percent said the facility was on-site.

This new survey on Preference of Child Care is part of accountants on call's ongoing "Profiles of the American Worker" series which summarizes the opinions, attitudes and behavior of employed Americans concerning workplace issues.

For the survey, full- and part-time workers were asked the following:

"Assuming every option costs the same, which one of the following options would you most prefer for a child of your own: a live-in nanny; a babysitter who comes to your home; a family or babysitter outside of your home; a child care facility at your place of work; a child care facility not affiliated with your work?"

American workers with children under 18 have similar responses to employed Americans overall. Nearly three in 10 (27 percent) would prefer a child care facility at their place of work, 22 percent would like a babysitter who came to their home, and 19 percent select the live-in nanny. Nearly one in five (18 percent) would choose a family or babysitter outside of their home, and one in 10 (10 percent) prefer a child care facility not affiliated with work.

Looking at the various demographic groups, a few differences in preference for child care arrangements emerge. Among women, 34 percent prefer a child care facility at work, compared to 28 percent of men. One in five (20 percent) women employees select a family or babysitter outside their home. Slightly fewer (13 percent) male employees choose this option. One in four (24 percent) male workers would prefer a babysitter who came to their home, while 18 percent of women choose this option. A live-in nanny is the choice of 21 percent of men compared to 15 percent of women.

While the most popular option among all income groups is a child care facility at work, those with household incomes of between $25,000 and $39,999 are the most likely to choose this child care arrangement (36 percent vs. 28 percent among those with incomes under or over this amount). Those in the highest income bracket of $40,000 and over are slightly more likely than those less affluent to prefer a babysitter who comes to their home (25 percent vs. 17 percent).

Residents of the West and to some extent the East are more likely than those from the Midwest or South to state a preference for a live-in nanny. Midwesterners and Southerners are more likely to prefer a child care facility at their place of work than are residents of the East of West.

The survey is based upon telephone interviews with a representative sample of 664 adults, 18 years of age and older, who are employed either full or part time. Interviews were conducted by Gallup between April 12 and April 18. The margin of sampling error associated with this survey is plus or minus four percentage points.

Assuming every option costs the same, which child care arrangement would you most prefer?

Park city council debates having TV cameras at meetings

By Jim Stickford
Staff Writer

In an effort to bring city government to the homes of cable subscribers, Park city council member Dan Clark proposed broadcasting council meetings on Grosse Pointe Cable's government access channel. "I think that televising our meetings is a good idea," Clark said. "We should be doing more to reach the public. A lot of people out there can't attend meetings because they are shut-ins, or have children and can't get a babysitter or have a scheduling conflict. Being on cable would allow people greater access to city government."

The main obstacles to broadcasting council meetings have been technical, Clark said. Grosse Pointe Cable recently purchased several portable video cameras that provide video of cable quality.

The Park would have to provide the personnel to operate the cameras during meetings. Grosse Pointe Cable would train them in how to operate the equipment, Clark said.

The meetings would be broadcast on Grosse Pointe Cable's channel 20, which also is the system's scholastic channel. Shows taped by students at South's studio are broadcast on channel 20 during the day. But after 5 p.m., almost nothing goes out on the channel, said Clark.

Clark's enthusiasm for broadcasting city meetings was not shared by all council members.

"Television cameras might inhibit citizens from speaking at our meetings," said Mayor Palmer Heenan. "We're used to the limelight but it could be intimidating to others. It might also encourage councilmembers to grandstand."

Councilmember Vernon Ausherman said that meetings run long, and who would want to watch that. He was also worried that the informal atmosphere of Park meetings would be lost. Ausherman also had doubts that the city could get volunteers for each meeting.

If the Park couldn't get volunteers, would the city have to pay a city worker overtime to operate a camera? Ausherman asked, and if so, what would it cost.

Heenan also said that if people are interested in city government, they should take the time to attend council meetings.

Councilmembers James Robson, Barbara Miller and Valerie Moran asked that technical concerns, including the numbers of cameras needed to broadcast meetings and possible lighting problems, be investigated before the council voted on the issue.

Moran also said that if the council decides to allow the taping of meetings, it should wait until after the November council election, so as not to give an unfair advantage to incumbents.

Several cities in metro Detroit already broadcast council meetings on local cable channels, and have found the experience positive.

"It does sometimes encourage people to come up and speak longer," said Lincoln Park deputy city clerk Donna Breeding. "But information is more readily available to the public. We receive many phone calls from people who have seen our meetings on cable and have something to say about an issue."

Breeding estimates that about 50 to 75 people attend the city's weekly council meetings, unless something of particular community interest is on the agenda, then it's standing room only.

"When it was first instituted in Wyandotte, it was iffy, but it is one of the programs that people watch, especially live," said Wyandotte deputy city clerk Barb Kuczera. "The broadcasts started out as tape-delayed broadcasts, but in 1992, we went live. People take a community interest, and the council really likes it. Some of our meetings are lengthy, but I don't think cable has encouraged people to speak longer than they might have. It hasn't changed the tone of the meetings much at all. We are into our third year of broadcasting."

Monteith school finally to get much-needed windows

By Shirley A. McShane
Staff Writer

After what one contractor called a four-month emotional roller coaster ride, the Grosse Pointe school board awarded a $397,210 contract to the Charing Cross Co. to replace windows at Monteith Elementary School.

William Koczara, president of Charing Cross, a residential and commercial renovation company, said he is "beyond happy" that the school board decided in a 4-3 vote June 15 to award the contract to his company, although it did not come in as the lowest bidder.

When the project was originally bid in March, Koczara's company did place as the lowest bidder.

But, he said, his competitors were unhappy with how the school district wrote the bid specifications and balked at the April 12 meeting, prompting the board to reject all bids.

"I was so upset," Koczara said. "I went in (to the meeting) thinking it was nothing more than a formality. Now because of this delay I have to use overtime labor to get the windows in by Sept. 15 (the first day of school). It's been an emotional roller coaster."

Charing Cross has been contracted by the district to remove the old wood-frame windows from Monteith, to safely contain and dispose of the lead-based paint and dust that results from window removal, and to replace the old windows with Anderson vinyl-clad windows.

Work is scheduled to begin the week of July 12. The district will pay for the project with budgeted funds.

The process began in March when the school district advertised for bids. Four companies, including Charing Cross and the Fromm Co., submitted bids on an International window and had the option to propose an alternate window model.

Charing Cross' bid for an alternate Anderson window came in as the lowest figure at $387,737. The Fromm Co. submitted a bid for an International window at $480,109. None of the other companies supplied alternate window models.

And that, apparently, is where the problems began, Koczara said, since the original bid specifications called for an alternate window to be aluminum clad. All the contractors said there is no aluminum-clad window on the market. Only Charing Cross offered an alternate vinyl-clad window.

At the April 12 meeting, representatives from International window and the Fromm Co. told the board they were not comparing "apples to apples." They said it was not fair to award a bid for a vinyl-clad window when that type of window was not mentioned in the specifications.

Feeling uncomfortable about the bid specifications and the concerns of the contractors, the board voted to reject all bids and rebid the project, directing school officials to write clearer specifications.

"We were comfortable with the original bid specifications," said Chris Fenton, assistant superintendent for business and support services. "The allegation (that we asked for an aluminum-clad window) is incorrect. They (the contractors) are hanging their hat on that. We were looking for other options, whether it was wood, aluminum or vinyl."

New bids were submitted and opened on May 28. Six companies participated, including Charing Cross and the Fromm Co. Charing Cross offered an Anderson window for $397,210 and the Fromm Co. proposed installing the same model for $373,000.

District administrators recommended the board award a contract to the Fromm Co.

At the June 15 meeting, Koczara read a prepared statement suggesting that the board reconsider and award the contract to his company based on his feeling that his competitors presented a lower bid based on the research and information he provided in the first bidding round.

Richard Fromm, president and owner of the Fromm Co., said Koczara's accusation is false and that the information is easily obtainable through the window manufacturer.

Fenton said the school board was facing a no-win situation since both contractors are viewed as competent, have good reputations in the community and offered the type of window and service the district was looking for. Although the Fromm Co. could save the district $24,000, Charing Cross could begin window installation two weeks earlier than Fromm.

Before awarding the bid, two board members said they were troubled by the whole process and had a gut feeling that Charing Cross deserved the contract.

"In eight years (on the board) I have not seen such accusations and debates on a bid," said trustee Carol Marr. "We have struggled with this and sometimes you have to go with your gut feeling."

Board members Marr, Carl Anderson, Frank Sladen and Linda Schneider voted in favor of Charing Cross. Board president Gloria Konsler and members Julie Bourke and Timothy Howlett supported the Fromm Co.

Fromm said he was "flabbergasted" after last week's meeting and that this may not be the end of the story.

"I don't understand why the district is going with a residential contractor on a commercial job," Fromm said.

St. John, neighbors pledge cooperation

By Jim Stickford
Staff Writer

Officials from St. John Hospital agreed to halt the construction of a parking access point on Linville Avenue and to work with neighborhood residents in finding an alternative solution to the problem.

At a special meeting last week at the Woods Community Center, representatives from Detroit, Harper Woods and Grosse Pointe Woods, as well as residents from the neighborhood, met with St. John officials to discuss the Linville situation.

St. John officials announced on June 1 that they would begin building an access point on Linville to the hospital's west parking deck. Neighborhood residents immediately protested, and at a Woods council meeting on June 7, the hospital agreed to meet with representatives of the affected parties.

At the meeting, St. John staffers explained to officials of Harper Woods, Grosse Pointe Woods, Detroit and representatives from the area what they are willing to do to improve the situation in the neighborhood.

The hospital's vice president in charge of operations, David Silvester, said the hospital would alter the parking deck's traffic patterns, allowing cars to enter the deck from from the rear of the hospital.

This is a temporary solution, said Silvester. Construction expanding the trauma center will, in about six to eight weeks, force the hospital to close that route.

"I must apologize on behalf of the hospital," Silvester said. "We learned too late that the residents of the neighborhood had objections to our plan, and if we had it to do over differently, we would. Right now, we would like to hear your suggestions."

Silvester added that so far, the hospital has been unable to find an alternative to building an access point on Linville, but he said that doesn't mean they have stopped trying.

Rob Musial spoke on behalf of the neighborhood residents. He said they had three suggestions for the hospital. The first was that the hospital solve the parking problem itself, rerouting traffic within its own property.

The second suggestion was that Linville be blocked just after the entrance. That would require placing the entrance much closer to Moross. The current plan calls for the entrance to be built farther away from Moross. Detroit would also have to approve closing off Linville.

The third suggestion was that the parking deck entrance and exit be placed off of Moross.

Placing the entrance in that manner would present several problems, said Silvester. The first problem would be interference with ambulances. The emergency room ambulance entrance is off Moross by the west parking deck. Delays due to added traffic could mean the difference between life and death.

The second problem would be traffic backing up on Moross. During rush hours there are often lines of cars waiting to get into the deck. That would mean traffic backing up on Moross, already a very busy street.

The administrator in charge of construction, Dimitris Bitzarakis, said that the hospital had already considered about 50 alternatives to the Linville solution. The second suggestion to block off Linville at the earliest point possible would require Detroit's approval.

Detroit officials said that if Detroit residents did not object, the city council would probably approve a request to close off Linville. But the hospital and area residents would all have to agree to the solution.

Resident thwarts car thieves

A resident in the 300 block of Moross told police he had heard suspicious noises coming from the street at 1:42 a.m. June 20 and saw a stocky man standing next to a Pontiac 6000 parked in the street.

When the resident yelled out, the suspicious man ran west on Moross toward Piche, where he was joined by another man. When Grosse Pointe Farms public safety officers responded to the scene, they searched the immediate area, but did not locate anyone matching the description of the two suspects.

Public safety officers found the car with the driver's side door lock punched out and the steering column jammed with a screwdriver.

Caretaker drives out intruders

A man identified as the caretaker of the St. Paul Catholic Church and school grounds became so upset about young people parking in the church lot on June 14 that he literally drove them away.

The 37-year-old caretaker told police he drove off at least 12 cars that had been congregating in the parking lot and that he had used his car to chase the youths away. Grosse Pointe Farms public safety officers noticed that the caretaker's car has fresh front-end damage.

The caretaker admitted he had rammed another car with his vehicle. Officers smelled alcohol on the caretaker and said he appeared disheveled. The caretaker was arrested and charged with operating a vehicle under the influence of liquor. He posted bond and was released.

The 22-year-old Detroit man whose car was damaged said he was chased out of the parking lot for no apparent reason and then was followed east on Grosse Pointe Boulevard, north on Kenwood and east on Kercheval.

Police found two 40-ounce beer bottles and a bottle of liquor in the caretaker's car.

Pipe and drum corps

The Red Thistle Pipes and Drums band will march in Grosse Pointe Park's Fourth of July parade which starts at 10 a.m. at Kercheval and Maryland. The parade will continue on Kercheval to Balfour and then to Essex and end up at Patterson Park. The Red Thistles were recently named best pipe band at the Treasure Island Highland games in Florida. So come one and all and see the parade.

Mother wants rough players put in penalty box

A Grosse Pointe Farms mother told police that her 9-year-old son was assaulted by two other youths while they were playing Rollerblade hockey June 13 on the Richard school parking lot.

The boy told his mother that he and two other friends were playing hockey in the parking lot around 4 p.m. when they were approached by two other youths who began taunting them.

One of the intruders picked up a two-liter bottle of pop that belonged to the hockey players and began tossing it to his companion and telling the hockey players that if they wanted the bottle back they would have to come and get it.

When one of the boys sought to retrieve the pop bottle, the other boy punched him three times in the face, giving the hockey player a bloody nose.

The boys then threw the pop bottle at the hockey players and left. The mother wants to press charges against the intruders. Farms police are investigating the incident.

Detroit tests patience of Park police

While a Grosse Pointe Park public safety officer was in the process of writing a ticket to a motorist on Kercheval and Wayburn at 11:24 p.m. June 5, another motorist pulled behind the police car and appeared to deliberately attempt to strike the officer with his car.

The driver, identified as a 36-year-old Detroit man, then drove away without heeding stop signs. He was stopped when several other Park police cars converged on the area.

The man was arrested without incident and determined to be under the influence of alcohol. He was placed in a jail cell, where he grew hostile and violent, damaged the cell window and banged his head against the cell door, said Park public safety detective Lt. David Hiller.

Police are awaiting results of lab work before seeking charges against the man for driving under the influence of alcohol and malicious destruction of property.

Teen charged in shooting of Park cop

A 16-year-old Detroit youth has been charged with first-degree murder in connection with the June 2 fatal shooting of a Detroit motorist. He also has been charged with assault with intent to commit murder for the June 3 shooting of a Grosse Pointe Park police sergeant.

Ricky Cline was arraigned June 18 in 36th District Court. Preliminary hearing dates are pending while Cline receives further treatment at the hospital for gunshot wounds to the arm. Cline was shot by Detroit police officers who had returned fire after the Park sergeant was shot in the hand.

Grosse Pointe Park public safety Sgt. Steve Johnson suffered extensive damage to his hand when he, along with Park and Detroit police officers, cornered a Detroit man who was seen stripping a stolen car in the Manistique and Vernor area of Detroit.

The car belonged to 44-year-old Herman Chatman, who was killed in a "carjacking" in the Elmdale and Parkgrove neighborhood in Detroit. Chatman's uncle spotted the car in the Manistique and Vernor area and flagged down a Detroit police car on patrol in the area. Grosse Pointe Park police assisted Detroit police in the search for the suspect.

When the suspect was surrounded by police, he turned to flee the scene, was confronted by Johnson and fired three rounds, with one striking Johnson's hand.

8-year lawsuit against WCCC drags on

By Jim Stickford
Staff Writer

Like the Energizer Bunny, the saga of Grosse Pointe Woods attorney Susan Radulovich's 8-year lawsuit against Wayne County Community College just keeps going and going.

Radulovich, who just began serving a two-year term as a college trustee last January, was ordered by federal judge Nancy Edmunds to either resign as a trustee, or stop representing Milan Chonich and Carmen Pascaretti in their discrimination suit against the college.

In 1987, two years after the suit was originally filed, a jury awarded Chonich and Pascaretti $1.2 million. WCCC appealed the verdict and a new trial was ordered.

Radulovich said that the jury in the second trial found that her clients were discriminated against, but no money was awarded. A court of appeals decision awarded the two men $1 each last fall, but also ordered another retrial.

WCCC's attorney Cynthia Adkison asked Edmunds be taken off the case because of a conflict of interest. Edmunds agreed, and was quoted in the Free Press as saying that Radulovich can't represent the college as a trustee and at the same time sue the college.

Edmunds gave Radulovich until June 11 to either resign as a trustee, or stop representing Pascaretti and Chonich.

But Radulovich filed a motion in federal district court to have Edmunds disqualified from the case before the June 11 deadline. This action has the effect of delaying Edmunds' decision until a decision is made on the motion. Radulovich said she does not know when that will be.

Radulovich denied any conflict of interest, saying that before she ran for trustee, she consulted with the Michigan Bar Association about conflicts of interest.

Radulovich consulted with attorney Dennis E. Path, who was with the Michigan Bar Association at the time, about the ethics of her running for trustee while continuing to sue the college.

Path advised her that as long as she informed her clients about being a trustee, publicly disclosed her part in the lawsuit and avoid talking about the case with fellow trustees, she would not be violating the state's conflict of interest rules.

"Almost every trustee has a potential conflict of interest," said Radulovich. "We have a member of the UAW who is a trustee, and the college has UAW employees. We have a Detroit city employee, and the college has contracts with the city. The college has rules concerning conflicts of interest because they anticipated this problem."

Radulovich said she is ethically bound not to talk to fellow trustees about the case, and hasn't.

"I see no conflict with being a trustee and representing my clients as long as I act properly," said Radulovich. "I have done so and will continue to do so."

Clinton wins new support in Congress

The outlook may be brightening for President Clinton with Congress and perhaps even with the media as well.

The June 17 front page of the New York Times, for example, carried three headlines that told the story: "Senators reach accord on budget with gas tax and new cuts," "Senate Democrats reach compromise on campaign bill," and "Clinton wins key votes on plans for service tied to school loans."

The three headlined stories illustrated the fact that key elements of President Clinton's program finally are beginning to move through Congress, albeit slowly and with many revisions of the original proposals.

Final passage of all the president's program is still to be achieved, but the Sunday talk shows indicated general agreement that Clinton was looking better. The New York Times editorially intoned: "What a difference a week makes."

Yet relations between the White House press corps and the White House are still somewhat uneasy. For example, last week one informal press conference was abruptly halted after the president lost his patience as well as his temper with Brit Hume of ABC, the first newscaster to question him.

When Hume asked whether Clinton's choice of Ruth Bader Ginsberg for the Supreme Court did not represent "a certain zigzag quality" on the president's part, he responded by lecturing the press conference and then stalking out without taking any more questions.

His first televised evening press conference a few days later turned out much better when the president adopted a friendly tone with the reporters. However, the management of CBS and ABC boycotted the televised conference and NBC bowed out before it ended.

The networks obviously are on shaky grounds in arguing that since the president had just had a couple of press conferences, there wasn't likely to be much news from this one.

True, the White House requests for a half hour of prime time always cost the networks advertising revenue, and it looks to us as if the business offices did make the decision to ignore the press conference.

After all, the Washington press corps has been calling for more more press conferences, but when the president finally accedes to that request, several of the networks in effect try to veto him.

If the TV networks are as serious in covering the news as they claim to be, they should promote more coverage of the president's infrequent press conferences, not less. Otherwise, their claim that they serve the public interest in covering the news is a joke.

But the Washington press corps itself also has come under criticism for its coverage of the new administration.

The New York Times quoted Evan Thomas, news chief of the Washington Bureau of Newsweek, as saying that some reporters indulge in "some overkill and a kind of meanness."

They reflect "an element of revenge," he added, "because this particular crowd (in the White House) was smug, contemptuous of the press and thought it could go over our heads."

Other experts agree that because of TV competition and lack of close supervision, experienced newspaper reporters these days often are given much wider latitude in their interpretative and opinion pieces than they once were.

Neither radio nor TV, unfortunately, carries many real editorials or even commentary on a regular basis. Instead, they, too, rely on reporters to offer conclusions which often contain personal opinion and prompt public criticism.

Under the circumstances, it's no wonder Clinton, who was unfamiliar with the Washington press corps until his 1992 campaign, has often been at odds with the national media.

That is especially true when the objectivity of a few national reporters is tainted by their past political party associations and a few more by their desire for revenge against an administration that they think doesn't appreciate them.

As the president gains experience, however, let's hope that both sides come to understand each other better and do a better job of providing the factual information that the people are entitled to know.

A controversy unresolved

By ignoring public protests, the Grosse Pointe board of education did not win itself many friends in voting to sell the administration buildings at 389 St. Clair.

The vote did not sit too well because it was taken the night after the end of a school election campaign in which four of five candidates for the board opposed the immediate sale of the property.

That meant that the vote was taken before the new member, Sears Taylor, who had opposed the sale, had taken his seat

Congrats!

After two years of planning, Grosse Pointe Park dedicated its attractive new 870-foot-long boardwalk Sunday in Patterson Park on Lake St. Clair despite the rain that dampened festivities but not the spirit of the event.

Officially named for George Helm, in memory of the long-time Park official, the boardwalk represents a $175,000 investment by generous Park residents and businesses.

The Park Foundation helped raise the necessary funds for the project, which included the flowers and other plantings along the lakeshore.

Congratulations to the Park and its public-spirited citizens.

although he had explained his opposition in an earlier appearance before the board.

It is true, as the carryover board members said, they had studied the problem for some months, and as a consequence, the majority had come to the conclusion it was time to act.

But the sudden action after the election gives the board's critics reason to believe it does not pay much attention to public opinion. And that is a bad impression to get abroad, even if it is untrue.

The board did defer the date for accepting bids until July 20, chiefly at the request of Grosse Pointe City, which had asked more time to explore alternative uses of the property.

The City's mayor, Lorenzo Browning, said there has been new talk about the possibility of senior housing being developed on the school property.

The need for more senior housing in the Pointes has been under consideration in several of the Pointe municipalities for years, with one of the obstacles being lack of space which the school property could fill.

Further exploration of this possibility and others including the renovation sought by historical preservationists would appear to be sufficient reason to postpone to an even more distant date the acceptance of bids for sale of the property.

A view from the sidelines

by Wilbur Elston

Columnists and other journalists often mark decades of their lives by trying to express their feelings on reaching a certain age.

I have already indulged myself in that failing once or twice but I am moved to do it again after reading another journalist's reflections about the horror of turning 50.

In a column published in a Detroit daily, Tom Nugent took time out from his journalism teaching duties at the University of Maryland to look at his career accomplishments — and at himself — and found both wanting.

He was especially depressed at catching a reflection of himself in a full-length mirror while down on his knees trying to pick up a dime from his living room carpet.

"Who the hell was that in the mirror?" he reports he asked himself. "That wasn't me, was it?"

"I mean . . . that poor fellow kneeling in the glass . . . the one with the silver-streaked hair and the deep eye-wrinkles and the three chins stacked up like the tiers in a sagging wedding cake — hey, that was an old guy, right?"

Nugent made other confessions, too. But I should warn him that if he eventually reaches my age, he'll have much more to complain about than seeing himself as "an old guy" of 50.

As I approach 80 I feel fortunate every day that I still can get out of bed, totter down stairs to get the morning papers, gulp some orange juice and tea, and eat my Cheerios, banana and toast.

I won't reveal any details of how I look in a full-length mirror — I know only too well what 80 Michigan and Minnesota winters do to anyone — but I am concerned about losing my golf swing after 65 years of practice.

True, the swing may be coming back along with the warm weather, but I'm surely not in the same league as my friend Al Lomax, who at 90 shot his age last year.

Physical problems aside, to have the opportunity at 80 to express one's opinions publicly, no matter how irrational or out-of-synch with modern thought they occasionally may be, is still sufficiently satisfying to wish to continue to perform that weekly assignment.

It's at least provocative if a suburban paper expresses views that aren't always representative of the community, and especially if such comments prompt reactions that start a dialogue — as sometimes they do, in person or in the letters column.

Views do change, even at 80. As an amateur historian, I find myself agreeing more these days with people who favor change, but, at the same time, I often agree with those who wish to preserve more of the best of the past.

Even at 80 I find that experience is a pretty good teacher and that there is great merit in Santanaya's comment: "Those who cannot remember the past are condemned to repeat it."

The problem is that any person my age has seen so much of the past that he would like to see a bit more of the future.

Letters

Parent questions conduct code enforcement

To the Editor:

This letter is intended to bring to light a couple of incidents which occurred involving many area youths, several different high schools and the end result.

Several youths attended a party over spring break in which beer was consumed. Some played high school baseball, some didn't. Some went to Grosse Pointe South, some to Grosse Pointe North, some to Notre Dame. Through a chain of events, it became evident that seven young men from South's baseball teams were present. Because they played baseball for South they were immediately suspended from competition per the Athletic Code of Conduct which calls for an automatic two-week suspension from competition for drinking, smoking or drug offenses. One boy was on the freshman team and six others were on the JV team. The freshman missed five games while the JV players missed nine.

Several youths from Notre Dame were handed various degrees of punishment for their roles in this party and subsequent fights. The youths from North denied any part of the drinking and fighting and were found by the North administrators to be clear of any wrongdoing despite reports from other participants to the contrary.

Two weeks following this incident, 11 varsity baseball players from North admitted to participating in a bonfire party following a baseball tournament in Alpena. Three of these athletes admitted to using alcohol. These students should have been suspended for two weeks of competition per the Athletic Code of Conduct. However, following an appeal by the parents of these players because these boys would have missed 13 baseball games, the Grosse Pointe North athletic director, Mr. Tom Gauerke, assistant principal, Mr. Tom Teetaert, and principal, Dr. Karen Wells decided to commute their penalty to just a one-week suspension, which totaled seven games.

More letters on page 8A

The problem I have with this is that both high schools are supposed to follow the same code of conduct which is very clear regarding unacceptable behavior and the penalties for such behavior. For the North administrators to change board policy without approval of the board administrators does not even seem an option, especially in light of the suspensions which were just handed down at Grosse Pointe South. Their decision to alter the code has led to much resentment and criticism.

I know the North administrators will recite percentages in defending their actions, but if they were truly concerned about being fair, they would have suspended their players for a minimum of nine games. While falling four games short of their two-week suspension, this gesture would at least have shown a little sensitivity to the suspended South players and their parents.

I have intentionally waited for the baseball season to come to a close before going public with this so as not to be accused of sour grapes. For the record, while the parents at North were appealing their sons' suspensions, I had stood by the Athletic Code of Conduct to the point of turning in my own sons knowing full well that they would be suspended for two weeks. They made a decision to break the rules and I made a decision to hold them accountable for it. However, in the future, I have to be guaranteed that the code is enforced bilaterally.

In closing, let me commend Ms. Jo Lake, athletic director for Grosse Pointe South and Mr. Dan Griesbaum, South's varsity baseball coach, for their handling of this incident. Having enforced the code as it was intended to be, they have let it be known to other athletes that this type of behavior will not be tolerated. Grosse Pointe South can be proud to call Ms. Lake, the school system's first certified athletic

The 3 keys to getting into U-M: Grades, grades, grades

By Kathleen Ryan
Special Writer

Grade point average, grade point average and grade point average are the three major factors determining acceptance of a high school senior to University of Michigan, said interim director of admissions Ted Spencer.

"We strongly feel that the best indicator of college success is the high school grade point average," Spencer told the Grosse Pointe Rotary Club at its June 14 meeting. "That's the first thing we look at in the admissions process."

Filling in for U-M president James Duderstadt, who was called out of town, Spencer took the Rotarians through the admissions process and shared some interesting demographic data on applicants to U-M.

"Michigan really is a national institution," Spencer said. "While most of our applicants are from Michigan, we also draw heavily from the East Coast. And I think our Rose Bowl win helped account for the 1,000 applicants we had from California."

Within the state, Grosse Pointe ranks seventh in the number of applicants to U-M. The most applicants come from the two Ann Arbor high schools. "We consider them our feeder schools," said Spencer, with a laugh.

Once those applications reach Ann Arbor, Spencer's staff begins the process of determining next year's freshman class.

"After grade point average, we look at the ACT or SAT score," explained Spencer. "I would have to say that it is a combination of the GPA and test scores that determine admission to U-M."

"That isn't to say we don't look at other factors. We give extra credit to students for advanced placement classes, extra-curricular activities, and for attending a challenging high school. The counselor's recommendation and the student's personal essay are also closely examined."

And what GPA will help a student make the admissions cut?

"The average GPA score for the incoming 1992 class was 3.58," Spencer noted. He was unsure how the new state requirements for high school graduation, such as a passing score on the Michigan Educational Assessment Program (MEAP), would affect college admissions not only at U-M, but at all state schools.

"We have not incorporated MEAP scores into the admissions process because not all schools take the test. We can't have separate requirements for state high schools as opposed to private or out of state schools," he said.

Of equal concern to admissions directors, said Spencer, are the new state rules requiring portfolios for student work and the trend toward outcome-based education.

"The emphasis in some quarters today is to abandon traditional measures of student work, such as grades and test scores, and use portfolios to determine student progress," he said.

"I'm not sure that's all bad, but we're not clear how to apply these untraditional measures to the college application process. I'm sure in the end we can make it work, but there will be growing pains for some time." Spencer urged anyone who would like more information about the University of Michigan to contact the admissions office. Campus tours and appointments with admissions counselors can be arranged by calling 313-747-0102.

William J. Gehrke Jr.

South grad is science scholar

William J. Gehrke Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. William J. Gehrke of Grosse Pointe City, was named a national science scholar by President Bill Clinton.

Gehrke, a 1993 Grosse Pointe South High School graduate, will receive $1,750 per year, renewable for four years. He was nominated for the award by South physics teacher Mark Davids.

Only two students, one male and one female, are eligible from each U.S. congressional district. Gehrke was selected by U.S. Rep. Barbara Rose Collins based on an essay, "Why I Like Science." President Clinton informed Gehrke of his award in a typed letter on White House stationery.

The national science scholars program recognizes excellence and achievement in mathematics, engineering and the physical life and computer sciences by providing scholarships to meritorious high school graduates or general education development (GED) certificate recipients to enable them to continue their studies at the post-secondary level.

David Landau

Each week in this column we focus on the work of a student. It can be a poem, a drawing, a short story, a picture of a scientific experiment, a woodworking project or a book review.

David Landau is 10 years old and has just completed the fifth grade at Ferry Elementary School in Grosse Pointe Woods. He was so excited about spring that he decided to write a poem.

David Landau

But no one falls down in the dumps.
Spring has grass that's green.
And beautiful, green-leafed trees.
You see spring is great!
Spring is the season for me!
Spring is the season for me!

Spring is . . .

Spring is when flowers bloom.
And people pick them.
So they look pretty in rooms.
When spring comes,
No one feels bummed.
Daisies seem to sing and roses seem to dance.
When spring comes,
Nothing seems lazy,
And no one will shiver.
Spring has a few clouds and bumps,

Bon voyage!

A group of 20 Grosse Pointe Academy students are preparing for a two-week trip to France beginning June 30.

Students, who will be joined by recent alumni, will visit the Eiffel Tower, Arc de Triomphe, Tuileries Gardens and the Louvre, Notre Dame Cathedral, Luxembourg Gardens, Sacre Coeur, Chartres, Versailles and the Vouvray Vineyards.

During the second week of their visit, the students will move into the homes of their long-time pen pals in Bourges, a medieval city in the center of France. Soon after their return home, the academy students will be visited at their homes by the French students and their teachers and will have a chance to return the hospitality.

The trip will be led by French teacher Anne Franco, her husband Ed, and French teacher Mary Vitolins.

DISTINCTLY BETTER BANKING

Narrow road to disaster

While rounding the last stretch on my long drive home one Friday, my carefree mood was shattered by the sight of a horrendous car accident.

Police officers and their scout cars blocked the intersection that I normally cross to turn into my driveway.

About a half mile down, I could see the shimmering lights of police and fire rescue vehicles. Surrounding the scene were onlookers crowding the shoulder.

The officer waved his hand, signaling me to turn away from the road ahead. I told him I lived a quarter mile farther and asked if I could please get through.

He waved me onward. The closer I got to the scene, the faster my heart raced. This was no fender bender, I told myself.

After parking my car, I grabbed my keys and ran out to the roadway to join the crowd. Something inside me said I shouldn't want to know what happened. But then I thought: My husband isn't home from work yet — God forbid — I hope nothing has happened to him.

When I reached a grassy hill overlooking the roadway, I gasped. A white BMW lay crumpled on the shoulder, its roof sheared off. Next to it was a pickup truck tipped onto its passenger side door. Just as I began asking onlookers what happened, firefighters started to cover the wrecked car with a blue tarp. What grisly remains were they shrouding from the public's eye, I wondered.

I Say

Shirley A. McShane

"They say one of the drivers is dead; it was a head-on collision," the woman next to me said.

Although I never called the police department to confirm the details, word on the street was that one of the drivers attempted to pass the other and collided with oncoming traffic on the two-lane road.

The woman and I then cursed the road we lived on. Well known in Macomb County as one of the 10 most dangerous, traffic clogged death traps, it does not adequately serve the growing population.

The road once was bordered by farm houses and fields. But the heavy traffic of progress has crowded out the rural inhabitants, making way for subdivisions, strip malls and fast-food restaurants. Yet the county has not seen the need — or maybe lacks the funds — to add more lanes to the narrow road.

Accidents, usually minor, are a weekly occurrence, as someone attempts to make a left-hand turn into traffic or pass a doddering motorist.

Each time traffic is slowed to a standstill or rerouted, the telltale flashing lights ahead indicate the road has failed once again.

But all cannot be blamed on an inanimate object made of asphalt and concrete.

Drivers must take responsibility, as well. Knowing that the road is terrible, I often take alternate, albeit longer routes, to avoid a possible accident. Maybe if I owned a Corvette I would be more daring, but my aging car, which has all the gusto of the Joad's old stake truck clattering westward on Route 66, warns me daily not to try any funny stuff.

All these thoughts raced through my mind as I watched the ugly scene before me. And as I stood there, watching, doing nothing, I thought that someone — a mother, a father, a husband or wife — is going to be getting a horrible telephone call. At a nearby hospital, emergency room doctors and nurses are probably scrambling to save a life. Or maybe it's too late.

And then I had a thought even more chilling. Somewhere out there is another motorist, or two, in some kind of hurry to get nowhere important, who will take that chance and leave others to pick up the pieces.

Tiny bubbles signal summer

Summertime, summertime, sum-, sum-, summertime... How can you tell it's summer? Easy.

• Poison ivy.
It's barely past the summer solstice and I've already got my first case of the stuff. When I was a kid, I thought I was immune, but noooo. As soon as I moved to Michigan and started going up North, I started getting poison ivy.

The bubbles run along a forearm, a couple of fingers, up here on the soft side of my other arm, and a couple of places that shall remain invisible. Just one of the hazards of prancing about the woods in a state of scantiness.

• Porch furniture.
I was strolling home, empty-handed, from a house sale the other day, when a friend in the throes of moving accosted me from amid the worldly goods stacked in her yard.

"How'd you like the porch rockers from my great-grandfather's veranda?" she asked beguilingly. "I don't have room for them, and you could put them on your screened porch at the cabin."

The thought of her having to abandon her great-grandfather's things, the mementoes of her personal history, smote me right here — and besides, they might be pretty nice. Her family had a plantation in Florida. Visions of wicker danced in my head.

I followed her to the shed in the back yard, where we found grandfather's very dirty chairs buried in rubble. The old man would have thrown them in the dump if he'd seen them.

What could I say? I took them home and hosed them down in the driveway. One seat fell out, and red antiques poured off the other, running in bloody puddles.

But sentiment won out. Hey, with one of those pink-flowered pillows from the attic on the seat, these chairs should work fine. We're gonna look like the Grand Hotel.

• Grass.
It's growing. And growing. If agricultural crops grew this well, farmers wouldn't need subsidies. But then, if farmers used this much chemical on their crops... but then, the environment as we know it would cease to exist.

Let's face it, we suburbanites have gone overboard on the grass thing. Even Newsweek recently ran a piece on the American lawn, bringing anti-lawncism into the cultural mainstream.

It called lawn lovers "control freaks."

What the article was getting at was the obsession with perfection that leads otherwise sensible people to fertilize, pesticide, weed, mow, and water a bunch of grass. Or consider it so important that they're willing to actually pay someone to do it for them.

What's wrong with some moss, some clover, some wildflowers? As you might guess, these are part and parcel of what I call my lawn. Tiny little meadow pinks in midsummer, lovely purple gill-over-the-ground and downy woodmint.

You can call them weeds, but it's easier to appreciate them.

Not long ago, I joined a wildflower society. My reward was a four-color book on landscaping with native plants, surprisingly published by the Ortho lawn chemical people, who clearly foresee a boom in back-to-nature.

I doted on every picture, even the prairie and desert landscaping — neither very likely in the Great Lakes bioregion. I reimagined my yard hauled loads of wood chips for paths, haunted the wildflower sales.

Now, you can't just create woodland gardens out of whole cloth, of course. But I had a head start between the houses where there is maple, pine, hickory, lilac, honeysuckle, some spring-blooming bushes, barberry, and lots of lily-of-the-valley. And raspberry bushes.

Down went a woodchip path and some rescued wildflowers: buttercup, trillium, and blue flag — positioned by the downspout where it can keep damp.

This morning I looked out and saw my neighbor wandering, bemused, down our jointly held woodland path, head down, hands behind her back, looking like Winston Churchill in his garden. She's been in California for the last six weeks and didn't know about the path. She likes it.

Nowhere is landscaping more cherished than in the Pointes. If there are readers out there with natural landscaping areas and native plantings, please call the office (882-0294) and leave your name and number for me.

• Flowers.
This category really should be called "disappointment with the cynical commercial attitude so prevalent in America today." But "flowers" is shorter.

This is about the tree-trimming crew that square danced in my new wildflower garden. It's about sloppy workmanship and don't-careism.

Everything was trampled and broken, but what really upset me was the showy ladyslipper, snapped off at the ground. The company's complaint lady was sympathetic, but told us that the only official avenue for making a point was to file a claim for financial damages.

What is a garden worth? It's worth hours of bending, digging, sweating, weeding, watering, dirt under the fingernails. It's pleasure and beauty and joy, a connection to the earth. Plus a few bucks for seeds.

You can't put a monetary value on a ladyslipper.

Live on TV

Two councilmembers in the Park want Mayor Palmer Heenan to seek television coverage of council meetings which would then be aired weekly on cable. Objections are mounting, however, due to budgeting, costs and member-participation problems.

Some councilmembers do not want to appear on camera, while others relish the idea and might misuse the platform, according to those who have used TV and discovered drawbacks, plus cost of lighting, operators, editing, Heenan told FYI.

Fancy babybuggy

Mark Beltaire told FYI that he asked a stretch limo driver parked at Bon Secours who he was waiting for. His reply was that a current fad is to pick up a new mother and baby to add a festive note to the occasion. Often other family members join in the event. Sounds like a great idea.

Gem-on-the-lake

The rain stopped. Skies cleared. About 200 showed up for the Patterson Park boardwalk dedication. The magnificent tribute to George F. Helm now carries a plaque, noting names of major contributors, and FYI was there.

Parks and Recreation Commission chair Arthur Getz and Dr. Roger McNeill, Lou Perrone, Beverly and Mark Beltaire, some family members of Cy Korte, Martha and Bill Lannen, Gwendolyn Bates (who gave thousands in the name of her father, George Helm, a planning commissioner for 30 years), and dozens of other notables were on hand.

Hat's off to the Grosse Pointe Park Foundation and president Mado Lie for another fine $140,000 project. "It looks like a million," said Mayor Heenan. The lighting and landscaping are superb.

Stay in tune

When she came to Grosse Pointe 20 years ago, Halina Olzark brought a love of music, dance and theater. As she watched her son Steve graduate from South High School last week, there were smiles of satisfaction blended with accomplishment.

Her daughter Alexandra announced last month that she would take voice lessons, and Halina had finished her assignment for Michigan Opera Theater with a singing part in "La Boheme" at Masonic Temple, working with choral mistress Sue Acton. An accomplished dancer in years past, Halina now devotes most of her time to St. Paul's evening Mass (Saturdays) and working as folk choir director.

"It's likely I'll be offered an opera, operetta or musical score this fall with MOT," says Halina, who finds "... plenty do do as the children are growing up."

They'll lead

June's Detroit Monthly featured dozens of Detroit area notables who are destined to lead. Under the title "Passing the Baton" were listed up-and-coming young, cultured, social-charitable leaders and singles and couples making big contributions every day.

Future leaders from the Pointes included ONE23 managing partner Vivian Day and husband John Stroh, Grosse Pointe Memorial choir's Deborah Bell (Children's Hospital orthopedic surgeon), Michael and Beth Fisher, Ed and Bet-tejean Ahee, John Ahee, Gary and Cindy Van Elslander, Edsel & Eleanor Ford House executive Hadley Mack French and lawyer and city councilmember Peter Wald-meir.

Late date

It was breezy, cloudy and cool, but about 150 close friends and family came to the Country Club of Detroit for cocktails and a buffet.

Belated honors were bestowed on Vic Benjamin for his 75th birthday, which occurred last December when they wintered in Palm Springs. His wife, Noel, explained that she wanted the excuse to celebrate in their "home town," making sure close pals and daughter Kim Gamble and son Chris Gamble and his wife Michelle could attend.

administrator, as their own. Coach Griesbaum has always had the kids' best interest in mind and, I believe, would not think twice about enforcing the code for the good of the athletic department and for the good of the team.

Martha E. Schroeder
Grosse Pointe Park

North's

response

To the Editor:

Martha Schroeder's description of two incidents that occurred this spring involving Grosse Pointe athletes attending parties where alcohol was consumed by underage student athletes is accurate, but not complete. Allow us to provide some additional information.

An investigation of the first incident by the North High administrators revealed that two North athletes attended a party in the City of Grosse Pointe where alcohol was served and a fight ensued. The North athletes admitted to be in attendance but denied using alcohol or being involved in the fight when confronted by the North administrators. Several contacts between North High administrators and the City of Grosse Pointe police revealed that neither North High youths were cited for drinking or for being involved in the fight, hence no disciplinary action was assigned.

The second incident described by Mrs. Schroeder was a party at the Alpena Baseball Tournament where hundreds of students from Alpena held a bonfire where alcohol was consumed. Many of the visiting team players were invited to the bonfire by the host Alpena players. Again, the North administration investigated North's involvement in the bonfire.

Phone calls to Alpena school officials and parents revealed that no adults witnessed the attendance at the bonfire party and no police report was available. Each North team member was confronted by the North administration and several athletes admitted that they were at the party but denied using alcohol. Three players admitted that they did use alcohol at the bonfire party. The three athletes were placed on a two-week competitive suspension as first-time offenders of the administrative regulations titled "Student Conduct and Discipline - Athletics" and referred to as the "Athletic Code" and were assigned th "Choices" rehabilitative program.

Parents of the boys who admitted drinking at the party appealed the severity of the discipline. They agreed that the boys should be disciplined; but felt that two week suspension, which included 13 scheduled games or 43 percent of the team's total schedule, was excessive. Two weeks in most sports keeps first-time offenders out of 20 to 25 percent of their scheduled contests. The parents rightly pointed out that 14 days of missed competition in baseball is not equal to 14 days in any other sport.

The North administrators agreed with this perspective and upheld the parents appeal based on this rationale. Therefore, the three athletes were suspended from seven games or 23 percent of the varsity baseball schedule. The North administrators believe this was fair and adequate punishment for the three athletes.

Mrs. Schroeder suggests that the North administrators changed board policy. This is not accurate. The "Athletic Code" does allow for appeal. We heard the appeal and agreed that in this specific incident the initial discipline was excessive.

The concern that the "Athletic Code" be enforced bilaterally and equally has long been a concern. Regrettably over the past three years, a total of 39 varsity athletes have been assigned rehabilitation and have received athletic competitive suspensions for substance abuse: 1991 (12); 1992 (11); and 1993 (16). This clearly demonstrates that North administrators have been enforcing the "Athletic Code."

In our opinion, Martha Schroeder is a well-informed parent. Perhaps if all parents, our local police, and our school officials were united in a community effort to curtail illegal use of alcohol and other substances by teens, we adults could make a substantial impact on this serious problem.

The administration at North High will continue to support the "Athletic Code" and take a strong stand against illegal use of alcohol and other substances. However, we will always be open to appeals by parents and students if they believe they have been treated unfairly. Parents' and students' right to question disciplinary action demands that administrators listen with an open mind and weigh all the evidence; it is not appropriate to avoid confronting rules and regulations when legitimate complaints arise about the same.

School budget:
Fiction?

To the Editor:

I predict that this summer's hottest reading in Grosse Pointe will not be "Jurassic Park" or "The Bridges of Madison County," but a green soft-cover titled "The Grosse Pointe Public School System Budget Handbook, July 1, 1993 to June 30, 1994." It is ordinarily dull reading, but with some hints, it could be the most interesting book you have read in years.

Last March 15th, I (and only one other civilian) attended a Grosse Pointe school board budget hearing. That night, the staff development budget was among the items presented. The administration was asking that the board increase spending from $120,098 to $194,000 next year. No one responded to a board inquiry as to the percentage of increase, which was a giant 61.5 percent.

About two weeks ago, I got my hands on the Budget Handbook. One of the items that caught my eye was that the increase in staff development had been reduced from 61.5 percent to only 7.2 percent. Could this be signs of fiscal restraint? I asked myself. Not hardly; the budgeted amount was still $194,000. How could this be? How could you reduce the amount of the increase by 54.3 percent without cutting a penny from the projected budget?

The answer was that $60,000 was added to the 1992-93 amended budget, increasing it from $120,098 to $181,000. Now, of course, it was only a 7.2 percent increase to $194,000. Stop to think! Had this year's spending been increased to $200,000,

Field of art

Poupard Elementary School students recently spent the day creating a number of art projects in the playfield behind the school. The students worked in learning groups and in whole-class groups on projects. The day was organized by art teacher Augie Tedesco. Third-graders, pictured above, show off their folk-art toys made of wooden sticks. The first-graders painted a mural, second-graders wove bookmarks, fourth-graders made chalk drawings and fifth-graders made customized tie-dyed T-shirts.

The top three

Elizabeth Ritter, Amanda K. Brown and Damon W. Smith were named the top senior scholars at commencement exercises held June 17 on the front lawn of Grosse Pointe South High School.

Ritter, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Ritter of Grosse Pointe Farms, was named valedictorian of the class of 1993. Brown, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Brown of Grosse Pointe City, and Smith, son of Mr. and Mrs. Matthew Smith of Grosse Pointe Farms, were named co-salutatorians for the graduating class of 310 students.

Ritter compiled a 4.254 cumulative grade point average at South over a four-year period. As South's most celebrated graduate, Ritter was named a National Merit Scholarship finalist, advanced placement scholar, Phi Beta Kappa scholar, presidential academic fitness scholar and received scholarship offers of nearly $16,000.

She received scholarship offers of $2,000 from the Woman's Club of Grosse Pointe; $250 from Phi Beta Kappa; $1,200 from the state of Michigan; $500 from Cornell University; and $12,000 from Harvard/Radcliffe.

Ritter, who was senior class president, will attend Harvard in the fall.

Brown and Smith finished in a virtual tie after four years at South. Brown will attend Vassar College and Smith will enroll at Dartmouth next fall.

Brown spent six weeks in Tokyo, last summer as the recipient of the Japan/U.S. Senate scholarship. She was a national merit scholarship commended student, a University of Michigan Regents Alumni Scholar, Boston University School of Education Book Award winner and a Presidential Academic Fitness scholar.

As recipient of the General Motors Endorsed Scholarship,

Damon Smith

Brown was a quarterfinalist at the Michigan Interscholastic Forensic Association (MIFA) state debate tournament and was selected by the Detroit Free Press to participate in the John S. Knight Debate Tournament.

Smith was a National Merit Scholarship finalist, received the Presidential Academic Fitness Award, and was offered a University of Michigan Regents Alumni Scholarship of $1,000. He also received the Robert Byrd Honors Scholarship of $1,500 per year, renewable for four years through the State of Michigan Department of Education.

Smith received honorable mention for the 1993 academic all-state and all-city team sponsored by the Detroit Free Press and the Michigan Association of Secondary School Principals (MASSP).

Eight other students compiled grade point averages of more than 4.000. They are Angela Roxas, William Gehrke, Timothy Cassell, Kimberly Apple, Bradley Durlap, Joshua Buckler, Joshua Wood and Katherine Schrage.

Senior Student Association senator Matthew Stentz was given the Grosse Pointe Rotary Club's leadership award. The award, a gold watch, is given each year to a senior who demonstrates outstanding leader-they could have shown a 3 percent decrease to $194,000.

Now before you scream "What a fraud!" remember that fraud, by definition, is the intentional perversion of the truth for gain. There is no way that you or I can determine what the intent was to add that whopping amount to this year's spending; but we can certainly let the numbers speak for themselves.

Remember that this report is unaudited, and therefore not subject to a CPA certifying that these numbers fairly represent the truth.

Looking at the same staff development line, but comparing last year's "Actual 1991-92 Amounts" to next year's "Projected 1993-94 Amounts," you get an entirely different picture of what's going on. The spending goes from $93,000 to $194,000; an increase of 108.6 percent. (Remember that the increase to next year is listed as 7.2 percent.)

Other items have similar trends: Other Business (259) (C) — $1,087,000 to $1,490,000, up 37.1 percent over two years but showing a 9.8 percent increase to next year; Personnel — $513,000 to $605,000, up 17.9 percent over two years but indicating a 1 percent increase to next year. To be fair, there are also cuts involved, but again the numbers are biased.

You can pick up your very own copy of the report from the School Administration Building, 389 St. Clair, free of charge. Looking for these "interesting" numbers is sort of an adult version of "Where's Waldo," and far more rewarding.

Remember that it's still your money. Just because you gave it to your city clerk in a check doesn't mean that you gave up your right to say how it should be spent.

In the future, the board could eliminate much of the bias we see here by insisting that the administration present these items from "Budgeted 1992-93 Amount" to "Budgeted 1993-94 Amount." This would eliminate some of the administration's discretion, but it would also leave the board explaining some mighty unattractive numbers to some very angry taxpayers.

All in all, it would be worth it, just to see this report back in the non-fiction section of the library.

'National Extortion Association?'

To the Editor:

The three-year teachers contract with Grosse Pointe board of education and the Grosse Pointe Education Association runs out Aug. 31. "Bargaining" begins this month.

I put the word "bargaining" in quotes because recent history has shown that in Grosse Pointe this process is a farce. While "bargaining" means agreement on who shall give what and who shall get what, with the Grosse Pointe school board it means nothing more than how big will be the teachers' raise.

Three years ago the NEA target nationwide was a 6 percent wage increase. Grosse Pointe settled through our "bargaining" for a 7 percent increase each year for three years. Some "bargaining."

Grosse Pointe is a community of "dear hearts and gentle people." And this is nowhere more apparent than in this triennial, automatic give-away to the teachers' union.

The teachers have a euphemism for their trade union. They call it the "Grosse Pointe Education Association." It's no such thing. That's the name given to the local chapter of the 2.1-million member National Education Association which, some years ago, passed the Teamsters as the nation's largest, roughest, toughest, most powerful trade union in the country.

Lamar Alexander, former secretary of education, says of NEA: "They collect a lot of money in dues, they often are the largest lobby in a given state. They are powerful... Only a very determined governor has the influence to marshal enough power to overcome NEA-affiliate opposition." The "Grosse Pointe Education Association" is an affiliate of the Michigan Education Association — which is "owned" by the NEA.

It was the NEA which organized and orchestrated the tragic Kalkaska school mess which resulted in denying the students three months of schooling. Keith Geiger, NEA president, was on hand to make sure the disorder was complete. The NEA thrives on disorder. It intimidates other school districts by threatening and pulling off school strikes. Geiger, in a recent interview, said other Michigan school districts now face shutdowns — if their voters don't "cough up on cue."

You'll agree this kind of tough talk doesn't deserve a typical Grosse Pointe "nice guy" kid gloves response. What it deserves is some table pounding, some combative stance, more quid for our quo. Trade unions expect and respect tough talk.

Traditionally the Grosse Pointe negotiators are looked upon as a soft touch.

Enough of that. Right now, with the staggering $70-million budgets we've been running — most of it for schools — we should start thinking, as all our major industries are, in terms of "give-backs."

We want the best for our kids. The NEA doesn't. They look on our kids as bargaining chips in strike actions, and as hostages against voucher and "school choice" proposals winning acceptance.

The June 7 issue of Forbes magazine exposes the NEA in its cover story, with the cover headline: "Suffer the little children: How the NEA corrupts our public schools."

With charts and graphs they show how membership — and dues money — have soared. In that span per-pupil spending has gone from $974 when NEA got control, to today's $5,216; teacher's salaries have increased from $14,770 to $35,334. (Grosse Pointe's per pupil spending is closer to $8,000 per year.) While all this money (all in 1992 dollars) was scampering up, education was getting worse. Grosse Pointe's teachers are, of course, far better paid than the national average.

When NEA got control SAT math scores were 493. Today they're 476. SAT verbal scores have plunged from 470 then to 423 now. Maybe worst of all is that NEA, having gained control over school management, now is going after curriculum! Some record for MEA and NEA.

Forbes headlines the NEA story thus: "The National Extortion Association?" It then examines this thought with nine pages of text, charts, graphs and figures.

To get a true picture of unionism at work in education, I would strongly urge every voter to review this Forbes story. You can examine it in the Central Library — unless they read it then and threw it out.

I would urge all school administrators, board members, teachers likewise to see and read it. I'm sure it should be required reading for Ron Tonks and his negotiating team. I would hope it would stiffen their spines — instead of stiffing just the taxpayers. Notify the NEA the age of "dear hearts and gentle people" in Grosse Pointe just ended.

Group vows more action on 389 St. Clair

To the Editor:
It is the opinion of the concerned citizens of the Grosse Pointe communities that the board of education made a bad decision on June 15 when it voted 5 to 2 to offer the buildings and property located at 389 St. Clair for sale. This land is irreplaceable.

We further believe that splitting up the administrative offices into three schools, Barnes, Grosse Pointe North and Grosse Pointe South, plus the building of a garage at Parcels to house 12 vehicles would be a monstrosity and interfere with traffic and have a negative effect on its efficiency to perform its daily operations. They will be taking space needed by students, teachers and modern technical equip-

Centennial reflections

The reality is that I am one of a few on the Grosse Pointe News staff who qualify, in terms of longevity, as a resident in the City of Grosse Pointe. To be more specific, I have lived my entire 56-plus years within the geographical boundaries of the City. Talk about insularity and tunnel vision if you like, I prefer to dwell on the opportunities that have been available to me and my family for more than half a century.

What a privilege it has been to grow up and raise a family in this community. We are unique and at this time of our centennial it seems appropriate to indulge in a few reflections. I was fortunate to attend both public and private schools here and to enjoy the benefits of each. Utopia was going to the old Country Day school and maintaining friendships from my earlier years at the high school next door. It was double frosting on the cake to attend games, dances and school activities at both and to now be on the master list for reunions at both schools.

When my brother, sisters and I were growing up in Grosse Pointe, the town seemed very small. When we went to the Village after school, we knew almost everyone we met on the street as well as the names of their dogs. At that time our dogs were permitted to go everywhere with us. On more than one occasion my dog attended class with me, but was only permitted to stay through history, as the math teacher considered animals a distraction.

After sleeping at my feet during history class, I would let Iggy out the front door of the school and he would trot the three blocks to our house and be there when I came home for lunch. I didn't find this unusual. After all, I was raised during a time when Lassie was considered a national hero. When our parents sent us to the grocery store, Iggy went along and into the store, always leaving with a big juicy bone, a present from the butcher.

We lived three short blocks from the park and spent most of our days there. The lake was clean and we swam in it without hesitation. Picnics were frequent and baseball games were played daily on the vacant lot next to our house. Part of that lot was planted in a Victory garden, part was child-made caves and part baseball diamond for the large gang from Washington Road and Roosevelt Place. Some things don't change. We staged skits and plays and charged our parents admission; Kool-Aid stands were plentiful and field games competitive. We went everywhere in groups and I don't remember anyone ever being considered the wimp of the bunch. All were accepted. I realize that memory can be selective, but that's OK, it's the good stuff that we hang on to and our childhood days in this town were largely good stuff.

We four children learned to drive in a car named "Plymie." She was a blue two-door 1941 model, with a running board. Before we received our licenses, we would practice backing Plymie in and out of the driveway for hours on end. Our parents permitted us to decorate her for games with pompons and paint and she was known by all in the area, which provided comfort to our parents. We lived a few short blocks from the police station, knew all the officers by their first names and they knew that car!

They say the more things change, the more they stay the same. In this community that's not all bad. We still visit our libraries with regularity and acknowledge the need for expansion in that direction, despite the influence of television on all of us. The Neighborhood Club and the War Memorial that we enjoyed as children have grown and afforded us opportunities we never dreamed of. Our churches interact and have healthy relationships. We have built on the foundations that we knew were solid and have made this community a place that outsiders want to emulate. Sure we shout, make our desires known, interact and disagree with each other. Hooray for us, it validates our caring and involvement. Complacency should remain our enemy.

The Little League games continue, we offer our children more in sports and education than when I was a child. Runners sprint around our streets in safety, our people are offered countless educational choices regardless of age. Do you want to learn computerese, dance, knit, paint, play an instrument, gain confidence? It's all available and in state-of-the-art settings. The months of May and October are our special times to preen and blow our horns, but the other 10 months aren't too shabby, either.

We are a team of committed citizens, blessed and grateful. Happy birthday to a place I call home.

— Offering from the loft ment as we move toward the year 2000.

The cost for the board to move into three schools is nearly $1 million and the money must be paid up front.

When the time comes for the board to move out of these schools, where will it go? It will probably want to build a new administrative facility costing a fortune with your tax dollars.

We have determined after having these buildings inspected by experienced people that these buildings are structurally sound and very functional for the daily operations of the administrative staff and assistants. Yes, there are items that must eventually be done to bring the building up to code. Handicapped access to the building, and restrooms, electrical work, plumbing, cement work and a new boiler can be done one at a time without the expense of moving out of the building and back again.

We feel some of the needed repairs have been neglected in the past few years. Why? Buildings must be maintained in order to receive proper usage from them.

We, the concerned citizens, have spent many hours researching this very important matter that will affect the Grosse Pointe school system, its students, parents and taxpayers for many years to come. We invite you to make time to visit 389 St. Clair and to walk completely through the facilities to understand our viewpoint and we feel you will reach the same opinion we have. The offices should remain at 389 St. Clair.

We need your help to gather signatures on a petition drive that we have started to reverse the board of education's decision to move out of 389 St. Clair.

We need an attorney from one of the Grosse Pointe communities to come forward and represent us pro bono. We will pay court costs and do some of the leg work. Surely there must be a civic minded attorney in our system willing to give of his or her time to help us in this very important matter. The time is now.

Open letter to school board president

To the Editor:

Dear Mrs. Konsler,
It is very difficult for me to understand how the board of education is so free with taxpayer funds.

I am referring to the window replacement for the Monteith school where the board voted in favor of awarding the contract to Charing Cross at a premium of $24,210.00 higher than the low bidder, The Fromm Co.

Despite recommendations by superintendent Shine, administrators Fenton, West, Yankouskas and Dale Ehresman, the architect, to award the contract to The Fromm Co., the board voted in favor of awarding the contract to the fourth-highest bidder, passing up the second and third bidders.

I have been a Grosse Pointe Woods resident since 1957 and this does not appear ethical or in the best interest of the Grosse Pointe taxpayers.

Star closing comments reprehensible

To the Editor:
I was greatly disturbed after reading the article "Star of Sea parents seek injunction against shutdown of high school" in a recent edition of the Grosse Pointe News.

According to Donn Fressard, the attorney representing the parents of Star students, "local Grosse Pointe residents and parish members began to fuel ugly rumors that the regional school would become some sort of magnet... accompanied by racial slurs and threats of declining property values."

If this is indeed true, when I feel quite fortunate to have graduated from Star when I did. As a shy adolescent, I gained incredible amounts of confidence and self-esteem during my four years as a proud member of the Star "family." I also earned numerous academic honors and awards, and received an excellent education which enabled me to become a highly successful college student.

My gratitude for all that Star has given me rests largely upon the fact that I come from a blue-collar, working-class family in Detroit. I believe that the opportunity to attend such a school has helped me reach my educational goals, which will ultimately enable me to create a better life for myself and my family. Certainly, this is an important reason why many students from outside Grosse Pointe have chosen to attend Star.

Unfortunately, one cannot help but wonder whether the real reason behind the parishioners' desire to close the school had something to do with the skin color or social class of present and prospective students. Again, according to Fressard, some of these young women "were approached by parishioners and told that they don't belong (in Grosse Pointe)." The "Christian" parishioners responsible for such crass comments should be deeply ashamed for speaking to adolescent girls in such a hateful and hurtful manner. In retrospect, it really hurts me to think that I may very well have been one of those whose presence was unwanted.

The parishioners and local residents should take pride in having such a fine school where young women of diverse backgrounds are able to receive a quality education. The thought of Star of the Sea closing its doors is disappointing, but the thought of the process being spurred on by a handful of elitist and bigoted individuals is nothing less than reprehensible.

Weight Loss Shocks Scientists

Seattle — A nutrition organization was hopeful that a nutritionally complete food tablet would eliminate world hunger, until the study revealed that one of the ingredients could cause weight loss without dieting.

Scientists in Europe found that an ingredient in the product named Food Complex 3 actually caused people to lose weight, even though they weren't changing their eating patterns. According to a study published in the British Journal of Nutrition, scientists had speculated that the weight loss was due to a reduction in the intestinal adsorption of fat grams.

The development of Food Complex 3, a project of First Lite Int'l, Inc., could not be used to fulfill its intended goal but it has been a great success for overweight people. A Miami Beach, Florida man struggling with a weight problem for 15 years used Food Complex 3 on the recommendation of his doctor and lost 43 lbs. He said, "My cholesterol dropped 96 points and I lost 43 lbs. Now I have to buy all new clothes." In another report from Mesa, Arizona, a pharmacist lost 16 lbs. in 14 days with Food Complex 3 and never felt hungry.

Food Complex 3 is available through physicians and pharmacists without a prescription.

Food Complex 3 is not a drug and only contains natural ingredients known to be safe by the FDA. Copies of the references are available from First Lite Int'l, Inc., 3370 N. Hayden Rd., #123-157, Scottsdale, AZ 85283. Please allow $3 for shipping and for each request.

Handling, performance win converts to Lexus GS 300

In designing and building a near-perfect mid-size sedan in the new Lexus GS 300, Japanese auto maker Toyota also created an enormous challenge for its press information staff. Specifically, the task of describing: a new passenger car that is luxurious, but not as luxurious as its older brother the Lexus LS 400; a vehicle that is expensive — not as expensive as other Lexus models, yet more expensive than the entry-level ES 300; a car that shares its powerplant with the sexy SC 300 Sport Coupe, and a sedan that has some Italian design influence but was engineered at home.

After what must have been weeks of meetings, writing, editing, changes, re-writing, more meetings, preliminary and final approvals and so forth, the communications team settled on phrases like "Italian design concept," and "meticulous Japanese engineering," and "near-luxury," and, finally, "luxury performance sedan designed to provide optimum interaction between the driver and the road, without compromising ride or comfort."

Our experience with the new Lexus GS 300 was one more of interaction between the driver and the incredible magnetism of this fine sedan rather than a thing between driver and road. The exterior design of the GS 300, with high rear deck lid, is striking. But the experience of driving the machine is one of being converted from modest, unassuming mid-price-car-driver-and-likely-to-stay-one-to-arrogant-I-was-born-to-be-a-luxury-car-driver-and-you'll-never-get-me-out-of-this-thing-type person. And all within a few short blocks.

Two reasons are handling and performance. The GS 300 shares its 24-valve 3.0-liter 220-hp inline six engine with the Lexus SC 300. In a word, it's smooth. The electronically controlled transmission comes from big brother LS 400 but with revised gear ratios for the GS 300's smaller 3.0-liter engine.

A double-wishbone suspension with upper and lower arms and stabilizer bars front and rear help you keep things under control. Lexus says its quiet ride is achieved with the help of front and rear subframes. Sources of vibration, like the engine, power steering and differential, are mounted to the subframes. The subframes are mounted to the car frame by liquid-filled bushings.

Standard safety features include anti-lock brakes and driver and passenger air bags. Front seat belt pretensioners have the capability of driving a piston down to retract the seat belt. The pretensioners are activated by the same sensors that activate the air bags. Standard comfort features include a fully automatic air conditioner, front seats with multi-adjustable power controls and an automatic tilt and telescope steering wheel that lifts itself out of the driver's way when the ignition is turned off.

The Lexus GS 300 starts at $37,500.

Go, Maize & Blue

The University of Michigan's 650-pound solar-powered car Maize & Blue is racing from Dallas to Minneapolis June 20-26. Maize and Blue is one of 36 student-designed, solar-powered cars in Sunrayce 93, a 1,000-mile, seven-day race sponsored by the U.S. Department of Energy, General Motors, the Society of Automotive Engineers and the National Renewable Energy Laboratory.

Three years ago another team of U-M students and their entry, Sunrunner, won GM Sunrayce USA and placed third in the World Solar Challenge, a 1,900-mile race across Australia. This year's 21-member team intends to follow suit in the 1993 World Solar Challenge in November.

Maize & Blue is powered by 7,615 solar cells, each the size of a razor blade. They cover the top and sides of the car, according to U-M News and Information Service. The solar cells can produce 1,200 watts of peak power in full sunlight. That's the equivalent of a portable hair dryer. Maize & Blue is propelled by a 4-hp electric motor that draws power from the car's solar cells or from its batteries. The vehicle has an average speed of 45 mph.

More than 85,000 hours of work have been devoted to the solar car project by students in the College of Engineering, School of Business Administration, School of Art and the College of Literature, Science and the Arts, U-M said. Maize & Blue's market value is about $353,000. U-M students Deanna Winton from Centerville, Ohio, and Andris Samsons from Kalamazoo will alternate driving the vehicle from Arlington Stadium in Texas to the Minnesota Zoo in Minneapolis.

Classics auction slated for St. Ignace

Kruse International is auctioning classic cars and trucks this weekend, June 24-26, during the 1993 Straits Area Auto Show in St. Ignace.

The St. Ignace show, now 16 years old, began with just 136 cars. Today, according to Kruse International, it has become the largest one-day show in the United States. This is the first year Kruse has run an auction during the event. Its Classic Series will be held Saturday evening, June 26, and all day Sunday, June 27. Early consignments include television star Larry Hagman's 1957 Ford Skyliner and two award-winning customized Corvettes.

Let's go to the races

The TDM Meadow Brook Historic Races IX are slated for the first weekend in August, leading up to the 15th annual Meadow Brook Concours d'Elegance at Meadow Brook Hall in Rochester on Sunday, Aug. 8.

The Historic Races are held at Waterford Hills Raceway in Clarkston. There, owners of vehicles dating back to before World War I bring their machines out to run against similar ones. It's a noisy and intriguing time, attracting everything from peculiar three-wheel vehicles to matchbox-size Austins and Morrisies, vintage Jaguars and Volvos and even some older Indy-type cars.

Official races are run Saturday and Sunday, Aug. 7-8. They are preceded by practices much of the day Friday, Aug. 6. For more information please contact Michael Sheridan at 373-2500.

Honda still an owner-pleaser

among all makes for the third consecutive year, and No. 1 in owner loyalty for the 16th straight year. The independent research firm measured owner loyalty as the percentage of car owners who purchased a new automobile of the same make as their previous vehicles. During 1992, Honda owners looking for a new car bought a Honda product.

American Honda recently created AMADEUS, an on-line computer information service, to provide news media and auto industry analysts the most current information about Honda products, sales and corporate activities. The service can be accessed by dialing a toll-free 800 number through a computer modem and using a password. For more information on the service, contact Chris Marshall of American Honda at (310) 783-3164.

American Honda, which began automobile exports to Brazil in 1992, has expanded its auto export program to include Panama (U.S.-made Accord coupes and wagons, with Civic coupes to be added later). Exports to Guatemala, Costa Rica and Chile will begin later in 1993. Last year American Honda exported more than 100,000 automobiles to 18 different countries, the company said.

Italian design blends with Japanese performance to capture American hearts in the new Lexus GS 300, a luxury sport sedan that shares the smooth 220-hp 3.0-liter engine with the SC 400. Its ride and handling more than make up for its conservative exterior styling.

G.P. Academy: A Grosse Pointe landmark for more than a century

By Shirley A. McShane
Staff Writer

Had it not been for the determination of a group of parents and alumni in 1969, what is now the Grosse Pointe Academy would have met the fate of the grand old lakefront mansions.

The academy's buildings — six of which are national historic sites — probably would have been razed and the 20 acres of wooded grounds featuring exotic trees from around the world would certainly have been leveled to make way for a subdivision, said Sidney DuPont, the academy's headmaster for the last 11 years.

The school was originally established in 1885 as the Academy of the Sacred Heart and was operated by an order of cloistered, French-speaking nuns whose mission was to educate Catholic girls. By the late 1960s, the popularity of all-girls' schools had dropped and it was decided in 1969 that the school would close.

"A group of parents who had kids here just decided the place was attractive enough and that the potential was here for an individualized, co-educational school," DuPont said.

The parents purchased the buildings and grounds for $750,000, and 24 years later the school has 435 students enrolled and recently was named for the second time as a Blue Ribbon School by the president of the United States.

The Grosse Pointe Academy is a mixture of high tech and tradition, DuPont said. The Lakeshore building housing administrative offices and classrooms was built in 1885. The adjoining chapel was constructed in 1900. The early school, which had one of the first Montessori programs in the country, was built in 1887, and expanded in 1912 and 1988. Also on the grounds is the caretaker's house, constructed in 1885, a barn built in 1855 and the headmaster's residence built in 1939.

The grounds also are home to 100 species of trees, including the bald cypress, ginkgo, Japanese tamarack, Siberian elm and Japanese red pine. The exotic arbor was planted when nuns from around the world brought a seedling along as a gift to the newly built convent and academy in Grosse Pointe.

Inside the Lakeshore building, which is undergoing renovations to restore it to its original state, every classroom has a computer and students have access to a state-of-the-art computer lab, DuPont said.

In the 8,000-volume library and in conference rooms around the school, students and staff still sit at tables brought in by the nuns more than 100 years earlier.

Chris Hume, caretaker at the academy for the last seven years, said the buildings were in disrepair because the nuns simply didn't have the money to maintain them.

Since 1969, parents and alumni have organized annual fundraisers such as Action Auction as a means to continue the restoration efforts.

Recent projects include the restoration of the twin cupolas on top of the Lakeshore building, window replacement and refurbishing the porticos.

"There has been a major effort to refurbish the grounds and bring them back to their original glory," said Pat Palm, director of development. "We want to make people more aware of the physical presence of the school and grounds."

The history of the parcel of land stretching from Lakeshore to Grosse Pointe Boulevard can be traced back to 1774, when a British naval officer, Commodore Alexander Grant, was assigned to the Great Lakes.

Grant had his army of men clear a large expanse of land, in what some consider the first land clearing in what is now Grosse Pointe along what the French called "grand marais" or the great swamp.

When Grant died in 1813, his two-story log house and land were sold to Louis Moran Sr., whose family played an integral part in developing the Grosse Pointes. Grant's house was leveled in 1880.

In 1867, Mother Superior Eugeni Desmarquest of the Religious Order of the Sacred Heart of Jesus purchased the land from the Moran family. Sacred Heart was chartered as an academy and in 1885 moved the boarding school and convent to Grosse Pointe Farms.

The Grosse Pointe Academy's buildings and grounds have been a landmark on Lakeshore for more than a century.

Grosse Pointe News rich in history for more than 50 years

By Jason Meisner
Staff Writer

On November 7, 1940, a newspaper was born. The Grosse Pointe News, as it was to be called, pledged on the editorial page of that first edition to be a "progressive newspaper, giving special attention to the interests and activities of the Grosse Pointes..."

Today, after 52 years and many, many changes, The Grosse Pointe News still retains its basic goals: to be an "accurate and just register" of the Pointes, to use "goodwill and even-tempered judgment" in its newswriting and to allow no "backdoor relations with any clique or faction" affect its honest reporting.

The initial press run was 10,000 copies and the first edition had 10 pages. The paper cost $1.50 a year or 3 cents a copy. The News was founded by Robert B. Edgar, who served as publisher until his death in 1979. His son, Robert G. Edgar, assumed control and has been the publisher ever since.

In fact, four generations of the Edgar family have been involved with the paper. Mark K. Edgar, Robert B. Edgar's father, wrote editorials until his death. All four of Robert B. Edgar's children worked on the paper in various capacities at various times, as did four of his six grandchildren.

This longstanding participation has made the Grosse Pointe News one of the few remaining family-owned papers in Michigan, as more and more dailies and weeklies are acquired by chain operations.

Throughout the more than half-century of its publication, the Grosse Pointe News has taken up many issues, from local to regional to national and even worldwide, and backed many causes, both popular and unpopular. In its early years, for example, the News editorially supported Democrat Franklin D. Roosevelt against his pre-war isolationist foes, supported public education while cautioning readers to be wary of the "burdens imposed by additional taxes" and proposed the merger of the Pointe governments. More recently, the News has endorsed a district court for the Pointes, backed the unification of the police and fire departments in the Pointes, opposed casino gambling anywhere in Michigan and lauded passage of a mandatory seat belt law in 1985.

During its history, the News has occupied several different locations. From its original quarters in the Punch and Judy building, its offices were moved to a newer and larger building at 99-Kercheval in 1946. While the building was under construction, special care was taken not to disturb the huge elm that graced the site. After working out of this location for 40 years, the News moved to its present site across the street, at 96 Kercheval, in 1986.

Just about everything has changed since the Grosse Pointe News began its service to the community over 50 years ago. Grosse Pointe's population has nearly doubled, the United States has emerged as the world's superpower and the world itself has entered a new age of rapid transit and mass communication. Some things, however, have remained unchanged: Grosse Pointe continues to be an outstanding community rich in tradition and the Grosse Pointe News continues to serve its citizens with accuracy, fairness and goodwill.

Centennial field day this week

On Saturday, June 26, from noon to 4 p.m., Elworthy Field at the Neighborhood Club will be filled with fun-loving residents enjoying games and relays of days gone by in honor of the Farms and City centennial.

Residents of all the Pointes are invited to participate in the old-fashioned fun. For the adventurous participants, games like duck, duck, goose, tag and sack races will be on the agenda.

For those interested in more sedentary activity, we have arranged for the ever popular egg toss, some string games and a giant lap sit. (To find out what a giant lap sit is, you have to come to Elworthy Field.)

Pen's and Lifesavers will be available to all participants, courtesy of F&M's PartiGiant.

First of America is going to have a tethered hot air balloon on the premises offering rides. The Bon Secours Fire Safety House will also be on display.

Ribbons will be awarded to all participants in this wonderful Centennial event.

The War Memorial is organizing a parade on Sunday, June 27 on Lakeshore at 3 p.m., starting at Moross Road, to be followed by a picnic at the end of the parade route, at the War Memorial.

At the picnic the Grosse Pointe Barbershop Chorus will serenade us with songs of days gone by. The parade will include bands, mounted police, Brownie troops, inline skaters, Naval Air Cadets, a kazoo band, Mayors Browning and Berendt, floats, balloon people and more.

The communitywide events celebrate the 100th birthday of the cities of Grosse Pointe and Grosse Pointe Farms. Don't miss the fun, it won't happen again for another 100 years!

Sleepy drivers can make sloppy drivers

Drinkers who don't get enough sleep should steer clear of driving, even after just one or two alcoholic beverages, according to sleep researchers.

"Sleepiness is just becoming recognized as an important risk factor in alcohol-related accidents," said Timothy Roehrs, of the Sleep Disorders Center at Henry Ford Hospital.

A new study shows that the amount of sleep a person gets is a major factor in determining the effect alcohol will have on his or her driving skills. Researchers found that people who skimp on sleep are often impaired by relatively low levels of alcohol.

"The sleeper you are, the more impaired you'll be by a given amount of alcohol. For example, if you reduce your night's sleep from eight to four hours, you make three beers the functional equivalent of a six-pack," said Roehrs, whose finding will be presented in Los Angeles at the annual meeting of the Association of Professional Sleep Societies.

"For drivers, sleepiness and alcohol make a very dangerous cocktail," he said.

Experts say most healthy people need at least eight hours of sleep or more every night to avoid daytime sleepiness.

Many different groups of people have problems with sleep or erratic nighttime schedules that prevent them from getting enough shut-eye, putting them in a higher risk for increased impairment from alcohol. Those groups include young adults who stay up late to socialize or study; workers on rotating sleep-awake cycles, such as shift workers and hospital on-call staff; travelers across time zones; and people with disturbed or fragmented sleep, such as the elderly and patients with sleep disorders.

Other safety points drinkers should consider before they slide behind the wheel include:

- The ability to drive can be dangerously impaired long before a person becomes "legally" drunk.

- In a phenomenon known as residual sedation, impairment from alcohol may linger even after the amount of alcohol in a person's bloodstream is barely detectable.

- People who become intoxicated after a few drinks apparently can "sleep it off." Just an hour's nap may be enough to counter the sedating effects of moderate amounts of alcohol.

Supported by a grant from the National Institutes of Health, researchers at Henry Ford Hospital, working in cooperation with the University of Michigan Transportation Institute, studied the effects of sleep restriction and alcohol on the driving ability of a group of 12 healthy men, age 21-35. All of the participants reported normal sleep habits and were moderate drinkers (1-14 drinks per week).

Each participant was assessed under four different sets of conditions, each of which was imposed for two nights in a row. These conditions included eight hours sleep followed by drinking an amount of ethanol equivalent to three shots of vodka; four hours sleep and ethanol; eight hours sleep and placebo; and four hours sleep and placebo. (The amount of ethanol used was enough to bring each participant's breath alcohol level up to .05, or one-half the legal intoxication limit of .10. To maintain breath alcohol concentrations at .05 throughout the morning testing sessions, supplements of 20 percent of the original dose were given at regular intervals.)

On the second day of each series of test conditions, researchers assessed each participant's performance and level of alertness in a 30-minute simulated driving test.

During the course of the study, three "crashes" occurred. Two drivers "crashed" shortly after consuming ethanol following four hours sleep. Both drivers' blood alcohol levels were relatively low at the time of their "accident" — only half that of the legal limit. The third driver "wrecked" his vehicle several hours after drinking ethanol, also following a night with only four hours sleep. That "crash" was attributed to residual sedation, since the driver only had a trace of alcohol in his blood (.013).

Throughout the simulated driving tests, each driver was connected to a brain wave monitor that could detect whether he was awake or asleep at the exact instant any mishap occurred.

"The monitoring equipment we used is sensitive enough to detect microsleeps or just a few seconds. With the help of this equipment, we were able to confirm that increased sedation was responsible for these drivers' impaired performance behind the wheel," said Roehrs.

Previous studies have shown that drivers who nod off for as little as 10 seconds can easily lose control of their vehicle and cause an accident.

Roehrs says it's especially important for young adults to know that sleepy drivers get wrecked with less alcohol.

"As a group, young people are generally more sleepy and tend to drink more heavily than the rest of the population. That puts them at higher risk for alcohol- and sleep-related accidents," he said.

Clowns, antique cars, a marching military band and more will be in the centennial parade on Sunday at 3 p.m.

Everyone loves a parade!

Strike up the band, put on your pink and green; the Grosse Pointe Farms and City Centennial Parade will be Sunday, June 27, at 3 p.m. on Lakeshore from Moross to the Grosse Pointe War Memorial.

- Wear pink and green.
- Dress in costume — representing a decade from 1893-1993.

- Clean-up after parade.
- Sponsor a marching band.
- Bring a picnic and camera!

Grosse Pointe Farms Mayor Gregg Berendt and Grosse Pointe City Mayor Lorenzo "Red" Browning have agreed to be the Centennial Parade grand marshals. Some parade highlights include the 70th Division Army Band, the Grosse Pointe Farms Boat Club modeling swimwear from 1893, Madame Cadillac and her Dance Company, the Naval Air Cadet Academy, the Village Trolley, the Colonial Fife and Drum,

The parade route begins at Moross and ends at the War Memorial. The best place to view the parade will be from the lakeside of Lakeshore or from the Lakeshore islands. The parade will be followed by a free concert by the Grosse Pointe Barbershop Chorus and picnic at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial from 4:30 to 7 p.m. Hot dogs, potato chips, pop and ice cream will be available for purchase. School board approves 93-94 budget

The Grosse Pointe school board unanimously approved the district's 1993-94 operating budget Monday at a special meeting.

The $69.1 million budget includes $62.7 million for the general fund; $1.6 million for the school services fund; $2.9 million for the libraries; and $1 million for the debt retirement fund.

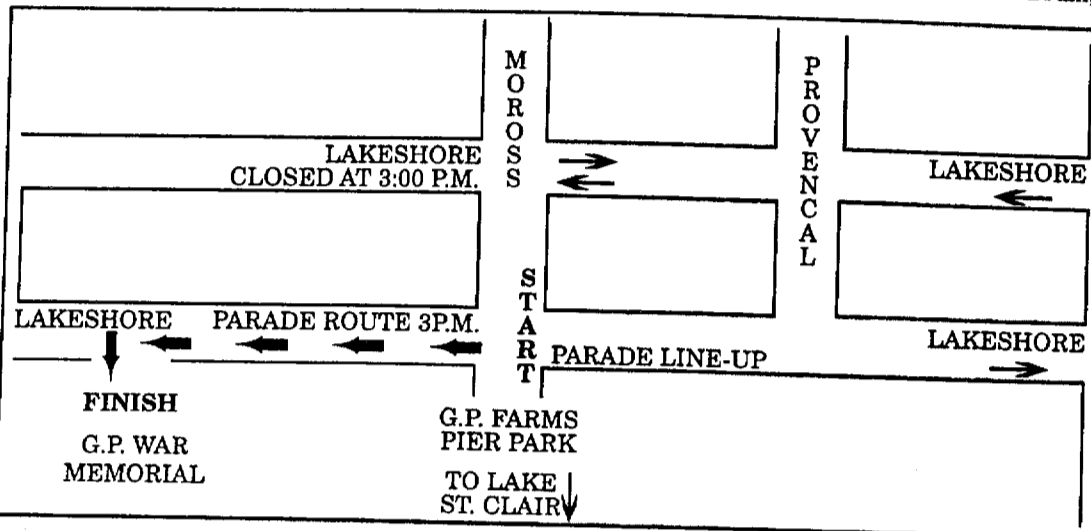

In a brief presentation before the board's approval of the budget, superintendent Ed Shine said the budget includes a projected 2.5 percent tax increase. He said a number of factors influenced the budget increase for the next fiscal year, including a decrease in interest earnings, anticipation that the state will withhold as much as $2 million in retirement benefits paid for teachers, and a projected enrollment increase of 3 percent.

A number of factors, including the outcome of teacher contract negotiations, will not be known before the state-required deadline of June 30 for budget approval, he said.

Grosse Pointe Park resident Audrey Taylor said she was concerned about the school board adopting the budget before knowing the outcome of the teachers' contract. She said she was also concerned about a number of significant increases in the budget.

"This process started in January," said trustee Carol Marr. "We've had 14 budget hearings... We have been talking and working through these issues." Shine said the board will hold a Truth in Taxation hearing in August to set the tax levy for the next fiscal year. At that time, the district will know how much or how little money it will be getting from the state.

ULS athletic director to receive national award

By Chuck Klonke
Sports Editor

Bob Wood can't remember exactly when he ceased being a disciple of Vince Lombardi's "winning isn't everything, it's the only thing" philosophy. "That's not to say we don't strive to win, but sometime during my 32-year career as a coach it became more important to me to prepare my athletes to become well-respected, productive citizens 10 or 15 years down the line," said Wood, who has been the athletic director at University Liggett School since 1968.

"There was a point when winning was my ultimate goal, but now if I've played a small role in the boys' and girls' success in life, I've been successful."

Friday night, Wood will receive the Dwight T. Keith award from the National High School Athletic Coaches Association at the group's convention in Miami.

"The Keith Award recognizes Bob Wood's commitment and dedication to the highest ideals of the high school coaching profession as evidenced by his long service in school, the sport of tennis and his past and present work for the NHSACA," said Don Prokes, executive director of the association.

Wood is the first Michigan winner of the Keith Award, which is presented annually to a person who has made an outstanding contribution to high school interscholastic athletics in a non-coaching role.

Wood has been successful by any standards.

His ULS boys tennis teams won 20 state championships and had eight runner-up finishes in the last 29 seasons. Wood's boys squads are 285-152 in dual matches, they've won 43 invitational tournaments and took 25 regional titles.

The Knights won the boys state tennis championship from 1972 through 1984 and the 13 straight titles are a national record. The 1990 state championship was ULS' 27th, another national record.

Wood also coached the girls tennis team at ULS from 1987-91 and compiled a 57-4 dual-match record. His teams won 19 consecutive invitational titles, five regionals and four state championships. The Lady Knights' 1990 Class A championship marked the first time a Michigan high school team jumped two classes to win a state title.

Wood spent 12 years as varsity basketball coach at ULS, three years as JV basketball coach and 15 years as JV football coach.

He has been chosen as state, regional and national tennis coach of the year. Wood was inducted into the Michigan High School Tennis Coaches Association Hall of Fame in 1986 and three years later was inducted into the Michigan High School Coaches Association Hall of Fame.

"It's very difficult to coach and be an effective athletic director," Wood said. "The only time you can really do it is in the spring because you have the summer to prepare for the next season."

"I love my coaching. I don't know what I'd do if I was forced to devote all my time to being athletic director. Fortunately, I've never been put in that position."

Few athletic directors are as busy as the 52-year-old Wood.

He is the founder of the Michigan High School Tennis Coaches Association, the co-founder of the Metro Conference, co-director of the Detroit and Chicago tennis workshops, past president of the NHSACA and a current member of the association's board of directors. Wood, who lives in Grosse Pointe Farms, began his coaching and teaching career at the Harrisburg (Pa.) Academy in 1961. He began teaching and coaching at ULS in 1965 and three years later became the youngest department head in the history of the school. Frank Sladen, a former headmaster at ULS, was the headmaster at Harrisburg when Wood started his coaching career.

"I'm grateful that he was able to let me coach full-time

University Liggett School was well-represented on the Class B-C-D all-state girls soccer team. First team selections on the squad chosen by the Michigan High School Soccer Coaches Association were goalkeeper Beth Mozena, left, and forward Heather Heidel, center. Sweeper Beth Paul was named to the second team. Mozena also made the Dream Team, which includes players from Class A and Class B-C-D.

All-state soccer honors for three Lady Knights

By Chuck Klonke

The tape of University Liggett School's girls soccer regional game with eventual state Class B-C-D champion Bishop Foley is a Beth Mozena highlight film.

"That was a career-making game for Beth," ULS coach David Backhurst said of his senior goalkeeper, who was named to the Class B-C-D first team and the all-class Dream Team chosen by the Michigan High School Soccer Coaches Association.

"She made one spectacular save after another to hold us in the game. I'll always treasure that part of the tape."

Mozena was joined by forward Heather Heidel on the Class B-C-D first team, while fullback Beth Paul was a second-team selection.

Backhurst, who also coaches the boys soccer team at ULS, was blessed with excellent goalkeeping during both seasons. The Knights' Vince Harkins was the boys All-State goalie.

"Without a doubt, they're the best goalkeepers I've ever had," Backhurst said. "They're both very agile with cat-like reflexes. They read the game well, so they can anticipate shots. They both have very soft hands and don't allow many rebounds. And they both have tremendous punts, so they can kick the ball out of danger."

Mozena was an all-state selection as a junior, but Backhurst felt she improved over last season as she posted a .83 goals-against average.

"She made her best saves against the toughest competition," the coach said.

There was a time, however, when Backhurst wasn't that excited about Mozena.

"She played on the JV team as a freshman and wasn't that impressive," he said. "She almost seemed lethargic, but then she really developed the innate qualities that took her to the top of her game. Her accomplishments are the result of a lot of hard work. In addition to her athletic ability, Beth's a great person. She's one of the best leaders I've had."

Mozena plans to attend

while I was going to night school to finish my degree," Wood said. "I'd always loved sports and working with kids and that gave me an opportunity to see if that's what I wanted to make my life's work. I just loved it."

That love for coaching hasn't diminished 32 years later.

"I look forward to going to work every day," Wood said. "I like the way the seasons change every three months. I like having 25 percent new kids to work with each year."

Since 1915, when it was known as Detroit University School, there have been only five athletic directors at the school.

"The stability of our athletic program is remarkable," Wood said.

Wood has been instrumental in expanding the program during his 25 years as athletic director.

"We've gone from 13 sports, 21 teams and 29 coaches to 22 sports — 11 boys and 11 girls — 37 teams and 46 coaches. That's one of the things that makes me proudest," Wood said. "We've nearly doubled the opportunities for youngsters to participate in sports. To offer a program like we do for a school with 254 kids is unbelievable.

Babe Ruth highlights

MAJOR DIVISION

Athletics 6, Braves 5

Peter Messacar's RBI single in the last inning drove in the winning run for the Athletics, while Steve Gayman's RBI double in the fifth tied the game. Stuart Mackenzie drove in two runs for the A's. Winning pitcher Mike Stines didn't allow a Braves' runner to reach base until the fourth inning. Chris Tiede recorded the save.

Athletics 7, Pirates 6

Winning pitcher Rob Upell struck out 10. Steve Gayman, Chae Wakefield, Chris Tiede, Peter Messacar, Stuart Mackenzie, Chris Campbell and Josh Nyenhuis collected hits for the Athletics.

INTERMEDIATE DIVISION

Blue Jays 14, Orioles 4

Richard Taylor and Chad DeFever homered for the Blue Jays, while Scott VandeVusse, John Skovran and David Jennings also had extra-base hits. Joe Allemen was the winning pitcher. Jack Ryan had an extra-base hit for the Orioles.

Orioles 11, Rangers 7

Ryan Vasser had three hits and four RBI for the Orioles. Brad Hohlfeldt pitched four strong innings for the Orioles and second baseman Jack Ryan helped turn five double plays. Apostoloff and Rudolf had extra-base hits for the Rangers.

Rangers 8, Orioles 4

Winning pitcher Rob Bennett struck out 11 and Brian Barrett pitched the seventh inning to record a save. Chris Farkas, who homered, and Chris Bissig each had two hits for the Rangers, while Brian Degnore tripled.

Rangers 9, Dodgers 4

Chris Farkas struck out eight in five innings for the Rangers, who had triples from Tom Leto and Mike Delmege and two doubles from Ryan Miller.

They have the opportunities to participate that they wouldn't have at a larger school.

"The negative side of that is that we sometimes draw ourselves a little thin in certain sports and can't field a JV team because we don't have the numbers. It's amazing how successful we've been and that's a credit to the youngsters, the coaches and the parents.

"I'm also proud that 70 percent of the boys and girls in our upper school participate in athletics. And that's without a requirement as it is in many other private schools."

ULS' only requirement is that ninth and 10th graders have to be on one athletic team before the end of their sophomore year.

Wood is pleased with the coaching staff he's built at ULS.

"You can't find a more dedicated group of coaches anywhere in the country," Wood said.

Coming back to his alma mater has been a dream come true for Wood.

"ULS is a very special place to me, the same as it is for anyone who attended school here," he said. "They may not realize it until they've been out for a few years, but eventually they all appreciate the opportunity they've had."

Rangers' catcher Brian Degnore threw out two runners attempting to steal.

White Sox 18, Angels 3

Jon Kalmink and Nate Bradley pitched well for the White Sox, while Brendan Joyce, Eric Schulte, John Shock and Kalmink led the hitting attack.

White Sox 21, Orioles 8

The hitting of Greg Dely, Nate Bradley, Andy Shipton and Paul Wilson provided plenty of support for White Sox' pitchers Christian Auty, Steve Dely and Mike D'Hondt.

Red Sox 5, White Sox 3

Matt Shirilla and Karl Freimuth combined to hold the White Sox scoreless on one hit through 6 1/3 innings. Chris McGratty had three hits, Nate Kaczmarek had two hits and three RBI and Bryan Fasulo hit a double for the Red Sox. Mike D'Hondt pitched three scoreless innings for the White Sox.

Red Sox 7, Indians 0

Matt Shirilla and Karl Freimuth combined on a three-hit shutout against the division-leading Indians. Shirilla hit a two-run double, Bryan Fasulo doubled in a run. Chris Chapman had two RBI and Nate Kaczmarek had two hits for the Red Sox.

Phillies 2, White Sox 0

Matt Donnellon and Mike Fine combined for the shutout. Brian Kasiborski had two hits and knocked in both Phillies' runs, while teammate Andy Jones also had two hits. White Sox' pitchers Christian Auty and Mike D'Hondt turned in strong performances and Andy Shipton had two hits.

Phillies 10, Twins 5

Mike Fine went 3 for 3 and put down a seventh-inning uprising by the Twins with a fine relief performance. Phillies' starter Matt Donnellon pitched a strong five innings. Pat Howe had three hits for the Twins and teammate Andy Kotis had a long RBI triple.

Charles Roddis

Freshman Charles Roddis was named the Most Valuable Swimmer at a recent sports dinner honoring the top athletes at the University of Findlay (Ohio).

Roddis, who swam at Grosse Pointe North, set six varsity records. His marks came in the 100- and 200-meter butterfly, the 100 backstroke and the 400 individual medley. He was also a member of record-setting 200 medley and 400 freestyle relay teams.

Roddis was second in the 100 backstroke, fifth in the 100 butterfly and sixth in the 200 backstroke at the Penn-Ohio Conference meet.

He was also one of 18 Findlay swimmers to qualify for the NAA national championships and participated in four individual events and four relays. Although he was slowed by a rib injury, Roddis helped Findlay finish 12th nationally.

Cybelle Codish, shown here long jumping against Lutheran West, was the Most Valuable Player on the University Liggett School girls track team.

Soccer

Heidel set the varsity record for goals in a season with 34, but was also one of the top playmakers on the team.

"She was instrumental in setting up a lot of her teammates' goals," Backhurst said. "Heather would make a run to the sideline and because she's so strong, she could drive the ball back across the field into the prime target area, where Shera Teitge often was. That play resulted in a lot of goals."

Heidel, who is an excellent tennis player, sat out her sophomore soccer season to concentrate on tennis.

"If she'd spent as much time on soccer as she does on tennis, she'd be a Division I player," Backhurst said. "I'm just glad we had her at least part time."

Heidel's size and strength make her difficult to stop in front of the net, but she also has excellent speed.

"She has a very strong shot," Backhurst said. "When it's on the mark, she's unstoppable."

Heidel finished her ULS career with a record 71 goals.

Paul is a four-year varsity player for the Lady Knights and earned all-state honorable mention as a junior.

"She was our best all-around field player," Backhurst said. "She has great skills in passing, trapping, heading and dribbling. She has a nice sense of the game."

Backhurst had only one complaint about Paul.

"I could have used two of her," he said. "I needed her at sweeper, but I would have liked to play her at midfield, too. Once we'd get up a goal or two, I'd move her up to midfield. She's a soccer junkie. She grew up with the sport and it shows."

Although she played a defensive position, Paul finished the season with 19 goals, a total surpassed only by Heidel and Teitge, who scored 23.

Venerable Tiger Stadium — let's not rule it out

When Mike Ilitch spent millions of dollars to upgrade Tiger Stadium at Michigan and Trumbull, it was a reprieve that gladdened the hearts of those who cherished and revered the old stadium.

Now Ilitch is having second thoughts about keeping the old stadium standing because attendance has not lived up to his expectations.

Perhaps a new stadium with expensive suites would bring in more income. It is likely, too, that all seat prices would rise and many fans of America's favorite pastime could not afford to go to a game as often. That would be regrettable because baseball has always been the most affordable of all sports events.

G.P. AARP to discuss schools

Grosse Pointe AARP Chapter 2151 will meet at the Grosse Pointe Memorial Church, 16 Lakeshore, in the Farms, on Monday, June 28, at 1 p.m.

Marge Nixon, the coordinator of Volunteers with the Grosse Pointe public schools, will speak on "Schools and Com-

Another consideration is that the old stadium is necessary for Corktown's vitality. It is an area where homes have been designated "historical" and many others have been renovated and successfully marketed to young people who want to live close to downtown. Then there is the business strip on Michigan Avenue that depends on Tiger Stadium remaining where it is.

Also, popular thinking today leans toward recycling and restoration rather than tearing down and replacing. Tiger Stadium in Detroit is baseball. It is difficult to think the game could be played anywhere else.

Prime Time

By Marian Trainor

It's a field of dreams where once-great players thrilled the fans with their feats — Ty Cobb, Babe Ruth, Hank Greenberg, Mickey Mantle, Mickey Cochrane, Charlie Gehringer, Harry Heilmann and, briefly, Schoolboy Rowe. Every fan had his or her own list of favorites.

Tiger Stadium is one of the oldest ball parks in the country and games are played there the way they have been for ages. It could be a piece of memorabilia of baseball's beginning. Tiger fans want to preserve it. And it could be done. If a new stadium is inevitable, at least build it on the same site.

Baltimore did. Bob Miller, the Orioles' assistant public relations director, who once worked for the Tigers, said, "Even though it's a new park, it's supposed to be an old park." It's an old-style park that has the coziness of Tiger Stadium, Fenway and Wrigley, but with modern fan amenities. Detroit is an old town, a city where even those who have moved away cherish its traditional landmarks, such as Tiger Stadium. They may accept a reasonable facsimile of the stadium, but not a modern complex lacking identity.

Unlike football that never felt comfortable until it was moved to the Silverdome, Detroit baseball has never had any other home.

Let Chicago have its Disneyland approach to the old and venerable game. Chicago's new complex is a stellar attraction, but how long will the fans be enthralled with the mega-mall design and $10 parking, with the best seats going to the corporate and more affluent visitor.

Meanwhile, the low-price-ticket fans must deal with the prospect of climbing to the upper deck where, as one visitor relates, "It's so far from the field the rightfielder appears to be an ant," and, worse yet, where the stairs are so steep you need a tow rope to descend.

Ethel M. Leverenz

Ethel M. Leverenz, 94, a long-time resident of Grosse Pointe, died Monday, June 14, 1993, after a long illness.

Born in Detroit, she belonged to a generation that anthropologist Margaret Mead described as seeing more changes than any other in history.

She remembered horses being frightened by newfangled automobiles chugging down the road, houses being heated by isinglas stoves, outdoor plumbing and people huddling around a crystal set to hear voices that came mysteriously from the air.

Yet she adapted with enthusiasm to an era in which men walked on the moon, messages zipped thousands of miles by fax in a few seconds and computers changed the world. In fact, she was proud that she once successfully composed and printed a computer message.

When she was in her eighties, Mrs. Leverenz appeared on stage in several Theatre Arts productions. In the same decade, she did professional modeling in Chicago.

Her zest for life included being an ardent Detroit Tiger fan.

A member of the Detroit Yacht Club for many years, she especially enjoyed its Sea Gulls, a group of women who swam every Tuesday. Physical fitness was important to her. She did calisthenics every morning until she became ill this past April, and she often went for walks at Windmill Pointe Park where she sat on the pier; watched the passing boats and sometimes chatted with fishermen.

She loved to dance. At her request, the hymn "I Danced in the Morning" was sung at her funeral service.

She was a dedicated member of Grosse Pointe Memorial Church, where she could be found almost every Sunday seated in her favorite spot — the first pew on the left.

As a young woman, Mrs. Leverenz attended the University of Michigan to study library science. Before her marriage in 1922, she was a children's librarian at the then-new main branch of the Detroit Public Library.

She is survived by two daughters, Ann Fox and Jane Grenard; a son, John F. Leverenz; eight grandchildren; and seven great-grandchildren.

Arrangements were made by the Chas. Verheyden Inc. Funeral Home in Grosse Pointe Park. Funeral services were held at Grosse Pointe Memorial Church in Grosse Pointe Farms. Burial was at Elmwood Cemetery in Detroit.

He and his wife recently moved to Wisconsin Rapids to be with his family.

Mr. Hanson is survived by his wife, Virginia; four daughters, Sally Gauss, Susann Papiak, Elizabeth Dykstra and Deborah Monterubio; and 13 grandchildren. He was predeceased by a sister.

Bon Secours: Neighborhood hospital grows with community

Bon Secours Hospital, nestled into the Grosse Pointe community at the corner of Lakeshore and Cadieux, has been ministering to the residents of southeastern Michigan since 1909. But the origins of this good care began in France more than a century earlier.

The Sisters of Bon Secours is an international religious nursing order whose mission has remained unchanged since its beginning. Its caring ways flourished in a congregation that was founded in France in 1824 with 12 young women who vowed to live their lives specifically in the service of the sick and the poor.

These unique sisters came to the United States from France in May 1881. They came as trained nurses to Baltimore where, it is believed, there were no other trained nurses.

In 1909, the sisters arrived in Detroit at the invitation of Archbishop John S. Foley, where they nursed the sick of Detroit in their homes. The sisters quickly realized the growing need for their services as Detroit's population began to multiply with the fledgling automobile industry. Increasing numbers of unskilled laborers, many from foreign lands, flocked to Detroit. Most had little or no access to health care. The sisters needed a setting where their good care could touch more people. Their needs were soon answered when William B. Thompson — who later became mayor of Detroit — loaned them a home on Trumbull Avenue in Detroit's Corktown. But five years later their needs had grown so quickly they moved to a larger convent on McClellan Avenue in Detroit and began to plan for a

The sisters and their supporters soon realized that a 36-bed hospital was not enough to meet the community's growing needs. Additional wings were added in 1951 and 1954, bringing the hospital's capacity to 160 beds. Construction on two additional wings was completed in 1975, bringing the hospital to its present capacity to 311 patient beds.

Today, Bon Secours is more than a hospital. Bon Secours of Michigan Healthcare System Inc. includes outpatient centers, home care, home medical equipment, pharmacies and nursing care centers. More than 2,000 Bon Secours employees and 500 physicians offer care with compassion and respect.

As a leader in women's health care services on the east side, Bon Secours offers state-of-the-art diagnostic, medical and surgical services for women, including mammography, ultrasound, amniocentesis, inpatient and outpatient gynecological surgery, mastectomy and breast reconstruction.

Bon Secours is a specialist in "BirthCare" and was the first hospital in the Detroit area to provide single-room maternity care with 12 birthing suites. Bon Secours also has made a special commitment to the mature woman through a combination of education, support groups and health care services that include special fitness classes, free continuing lecture series and a women's support group.

Bon Secours has more than 16 surgical specialties and offers some of the most advanced procedures in gynecological, laparoscopic/endoscopic and laser surgery, ranging from hernia repair to prostate gland obstruction repair to carpal tunnel correction.

The recently expanded emergency department at Bon Secours is staffed by board-certified physicians and a pediatrician is available around the clock for the special care children require.

Rehabilitation programs for heart and lung patients are staffed by specially trained experts who help patients recover through exercise and nutritional changes to improve their quality of life. Bon Secours also has support groups, such as the Breather's Club, to help patients adjust to chronic disease and, at the same time, improve their health status.

In 1938, Bon Secours Hospital began as a convalescent home in a converted farmhouse on Cadieux.

Today, the modern hospital at Lakeshore and Cadieux in Grosse Pointe City has been expanded and renovated with 311 beds. It is part of the Bon Secours of Michigan Healthcare System Inc.

Bon Secours has one of the most comprehensive community health education programs in the country, offering a wide array of free or low-cost classes and health tests. Classes are specifically designed to help community members improve their quality hospitals. Economic conditions delayed their plans for a hospital until 1938 when they opened a convalescent home in a converted farmhouse on Cadieux in Grosse Pointe. By 1941, the sisters had raised enough money to build a 36-bed convalescent home, which they later intended to convert to a hospital. The cornerstone of the new building was laid on Dec. 7, 1941, the day Pearl Harbor was attacked.

Within two years, enough funds were raised — particularly through the help of the physicians and generous residents of the Grosse Pointes — to set up a clinical and pathology laboratory, as well as a modern operating room, X-ray department and emergency room.

Growing pains play a persistent part at the central library after 40 years

By Chip Chapman
Staff Writer

When the Central branch of the Grosse Pointe Public Library opened at the corner of Fisher and Kercheval in January 1953, its mission was "to serve people of all ages by actively providing easily accessible information, materials, services and programs designed to meet the community's evolving educational, recreational, cultural and informational needs."

It wasn't very long before the library discovered how difficult it would be to fulfill this mission.

As early as 1966, a professional study identified the library's deficiencies, specifically, the lack of space.

"There's been such an information explosion since 1953," said library director Charles Hanson. "No one could have envisioned the different types of formats with audio cassettes, computers and work stations."

Although the Central branch experienced growing pains just 13 years after it was built, voters have not approved any of the bond issues that have repeatedly appeared on ballots to expand the library or move it to another location.

Construction of the Central branch was made possible by the D.M. Ferry Jr. Trustee Corp. In 1951, the corporation announced a gift to construct a modern library. Marcel Breuer was the architect.

The Pointes had been served by a library system since 1922, which provided small scattered library stations administered by the Wayne County Library System.

In 1929, the Grosse Pointe Board of Education approved the establishment of a library to serve the entire district. In 1939, the Park branch moved to Pierce Middle School from its location in the basement of the municipal building. The Woods branch opened at Parcels Middle School in 1949. Other smaller branches, including the City branch (located in what is now the Thrift Shop) and the Shores branch (at Vernier school) were discontinued.

Although there had been scattered libraries in the Pointes since 1929, by World War II there was a need for a central library.

Florence Severs, the first professional librarian in Wayne County's system outside the main office, wrote in her annual report of 1943-44: "Serious consideration should be given to the need for a central library building. Even with additional shelving during the past year, all the available space has been used. From now on it is going to be difficult to shelve the books we have, to say nothing about additions to the book stock."

She wrote again in her next annual report that "the need for a new central library building cannot be overemphasized."

Since a 1938 survey concluded that a library should be located so that residents are within a mile, and given the locations of the Park branch and the (proposed at the time) Woods branch, the Fisher and Kercheval spot was chosen for a central branch, if one were to be built.

In 1946, plans were made for the City branch to move from the Thrift Shop to the Fisher-Kercheval location. The Farms city council would not approve construction of a temporary, unattractive building.

Murray W. Sales gave his residence at the corner of Lincoln and Jefferson to the school district in 1947, as a memorial to his wife, Jessie Carter Sales. Sales had approached members of the Grosse Pointe War Memorial study group but indicated he wished to leave his residence to the citizens of Grosse Pointe because residents were concerned over the lack of a central library.

It was thought that the library could also serve as a war memorial to World War II veterans; however, due to the projected costs of building a war memorial wing and the concern that the Sales property might soon be inadequate for community needs, it was agreed that the money from the sale of the Sales property would be better spent erecting a new building at the Fisher-Kercheval site.

In 1948, plans were made for a fundraising campaign to collect $525,000 for the construction of a war memorial library. Later that year, the family of Russell A. Alger Jr. offered the Alger House to the Grosse Pointe school district. The idea of using the house for a library was considered, but it was rejected because of location and the cost of conversion to library use.

With about $300,000 collected by this time, the Grosse Pointe War Memorial Library Fund Association recommended that the Alger House go directly to the Memorial Association.

In February 1950, a petition was amended to raise money with a bond issue for the construction of a central branch. The bond issue was not put on the ballot at that time because the library was not considered an essential and critical classroom facility needed by the community.

In January 1951, Murray Sales died, and his home was passed on to the board of education. Four months later, Dexter M. Ferry Jr. decided to honor his friend Murray Sales by donating funds for the construction of the Central Library. A plaque honoring both men hangs in the front entrance today.

Ground was broken in September 1951 at the Fisher-Kercheval site.

On January 25, 1953, more than 3,000 people attended the dedication ceremonies. The Central branch officially opened the next day.

Robert M. Orr, the Central branch's first director, wrote that first year: "A new era of service for the library was inaugurated with the opening of the Central Library."

By 1966, however, the 18,000-square-foot library was beginning to run out of room. A $2.45 million bond issue to expand the Central branch and build new Woods and Park branches had been defeated two years later.

Voters in 1972 did approve a separate library operating millage, but the library still remains under the control of the board of education.

William Peters succeeded Orr in 1974. He was the library's director until 1985, when Hanson took over that post.

"We are utilizing every square inch of space," Hanson said. "We have to discard a book for each new one we take in."

Keeping up with the times, as well as providing more space, the library has replaced the LP records with CDs. Grosse Pointe was one of the first libraries in the country to circulate phonograph records.

The Central branch has also had to keep the tools it lends behind the checkout area due to space constraints. The library was believed to have been the first to lend tools. The Grosse Pointe Rotary Club sponsored a tool collection 50 years ago.

Seating capacity has also been reduced over the years. The fiction section was moved to the reference room, and there isn't any place to sit near the periodicals.

The Central, Park and Woods branches total 28,000 square feet. Hanson said that a library system should have one square foot for each member of the population. With part of Harper Woods being part of the Grosse Pointe School System, Hanson figures that number to be 54,000 square feet.

Bond issues to build a new 43,000-square-foot central branch on the grounds of Brownell Middle School were defeated in 1987 and 1991.

Although there aren't any bond issues being discussed presently, the board of education has given the library permission to talk with the surrounding municipalities about becoming a district municipal library instead of a school district library. About a third of the state's school districts operate their community's library system.

"We realize the library has inadequacies and deficiencies," Hanson said. "Not everything will be solved by automation. We still need space. Service is the most important part of the mission. Carrying out the mission isn't easy without the space to do it."

YOUR PET TODAY!

An altered pet is a healthier and happier companion.
Also, it spares you the grief and pain of having puppies and kittens destroyed when no homes can be found. Countless numbers of sweet, innocent little ones are euthanized every day in shelters across the country because a pet wasn't spayed or neutered. If we cut down on the numbers of unwanted litters being born, we will also cut down on the number of abandoned, lost and unwanted animals to des-

Get a job! In the old days, summer jobs were a dime a dozen

By Margie Reins Smith
Feature Editor

The summer of '93 is not the best of times for seekers of summer jobs.

High school and college students who are not employed by now may find the summer long, hot and boring. They'll probably be short of cash as well.

Most employers have already lined up their lifeguards, lawn cutters, babysitters, delivery van drivers, camp counselors, sales people, hamburger-flippers, phone answerers and ticket-takers.

Students may find themselves unemployed in spite of their willingness, eagerness and excellent qualifications for the kinds of jobs that used to be a dime a dozen in summers past.

Parents and grandparents have tales of their own summer job highlights and lowlights.

"Sometimes," they'll say, "a summer job leads to a full-time job, to more education or to a new career choice.

"Sometimes," they'll say, "a summer job is just a summer job."

Leon Sehoan, owner of Leon's Hairdresser's, carried 50-pound and 100-pound blocks of ice in Del Ray for three summers. He was a student at Ecorse High School.

"I was building myself up for football," said Sehoan, who played fullback. "I falsified my age so I could drive the ice truck. That was more than 40 years ago. I delivered blocks of ice to residences and commercial establishments — including a bawdy house. It was challenging. It taught me how to deal with different kinds of people."

Barbara Denler, program director for the Grosse Pointe War Memorial, worked as a car hop for a couple of summers while she was a student at Benton Harbor High School.

"It was great. I got to see all my friends and I got paid for it," she said. "I learned how to make a milkshake. I learned how to deal with people; to be nice to people so I'd get tips."

Red Browning, mayor of Grosse Pointe City, grew up in Knoxville, Tenn. While attending Knoxville High School, he held a variety of temporary and summer jobs.

"This was in the late '20s and '30s," Browning said,

"I was lucky to get any job. I was lucky to eat."

Browning worked for a while as a filling station attendant, where he pumped gas, changed tires and "did whatever needed to be done." He worked as a soda jerk and learned to make sodas and sundaes and banana splits. And he worked as a counter clerk in a grocery store.

"One week," Browning recalled, "I remember I worked 56 hours in the grocery store — and went to school — and I earned a grand total of $3.50."

Michigan Supreme Court Justice Dorothy Comstock Riley graduated from Northwestern High School in Detroit. "I wanted to be a lawyer since I was 9 years old," she said.

She worked a few summers in the college shop at the downtown Hudson's store. "I also worked some summers during college and law school in the office of Wayne State University, doing secretarial work," Riley said. "It enabled me to earn the money I needed to go to college."

Jenny King, freelance journalist, grew up in Grosse Pointe and graduated from Grosse Pointe High School.

"Dad never insisted that we get jobs," she said. "I went to summer school during college but I'm sure I could have used my time more productively in high school. I did volunteer work for the Foundation for Exceptional Children one summer.

"I worked as a chambermaid at a resort on the island of Sylt in the North Sea after I finished college. I only lasted a couple of weeks. I cleaned rooms. It was hard work, very labor intensive."

Brownell Middle School Principal Don Messing grew up in Grosse Pointe and graduated from Austin High School, where he also played basketball.

"I was a lifeguard at the Grosse Pointe Park park from age 16 to 19," Messing said. "During my college summers I was a recreation director for the parks and recreation department in Lansing. I always worked with kids. While I was in education at MSU, my summer job helped me with my courses and I could apply techniques from the courses to situations on the job."

Dick Wright is the director of the journalism program at Wayne State University and a journalist who specializes in automotive news. He graduated from Detroit's Mackenzie High School in 1951.

"I worked for a landscaping company while I was in high school and I remember I drove to work with an old guy who owned a '37 Packard," Wright said.

"Then I worked for about three weeks at the United Artists Theater as an usher, right after high school. 'Showboat' was playing the whole three weeks and I learned all the lines. Then I went to work as an apprentice in a print shop."

Advice from the employed to this year's discouraged unemployed students:

Sehoan: "Keep trying. I try my darndest to help young people looking for work. If I don't have something, I try to recommend someone who does."

Denler: "Offer to work for your own parents, for money."

Browning: "Take any job you can get. Kids need to be busy. I know it's frustrating. I've got 14 grandchildren, but kids need to be busy; they need to be out in the world. Get out and hustle."

King: "If you can't find a paying job, look for volunteer work. It's a chance to do something useful and to make contacts."

Riley: "If you can't find a job, volunteer for some community effort."

Messing: "Don't give up. Pursue. Work hard."

Wright: "The job market is in shambles. My only advice is to hope you stumble onto something."

Support group for children

A support group will begin meeting in Eastpointe for children 7 to 13 from homes where there is chronic physical or mental illness; physical, sexual or emotional abuse; a disabled parent; or addictive behaviors.

The group, organized through Eastwood Clinics, will meet at Eastwood Plaza, 20811 Kelly, suite 103, for six sessions from 4:30 to 5:50 p.m. each Wednesday, beginning June 23.

Prescreening and post-interviews will be scheduled on an individual basis for each child with his or her parent or parents.

The group's goals are to assist the child in recognizing he or she is not alone; to reduce anxiety and guilt; to talk about feeling; develop self-esteem; to obtain a sense of competence and control; and to experience fun and play.

Themes for the sessions are: My life is chaotic; I am not responsible; Masks I wear to survive; I am a child, not a little adult; and Taking care of me.

Costs are $140 for the pre- and post-interview; $180 for six group sessions. Some costs may be covered by some insurance.

For information, contact Bernie Beyer at 445-2210. Eastwood Clinics is an affiliate of St. John Hospital and Medical Center.

"HAVE A PLEASANT TRY AT PERFECTION" BRIDGE BY WOODY BOYD ♠♥♦♣

If you truly want to become competent in the play of our game, you have to be determined to learn and that takes an immense amount of incentive. Add a big dash of enthusiasm for that helps too. Successful peddlers have the need for the same wonderful characteristics. Take my favorite haberdasher who used to drape me in many fine trappings and wraps. Once he sold me two hats and me with only one head.

Two diamonds is sufficient. This hand has slam possibilities, but such a reach will have to wait for a further description of high cards and shape of each others hands. The club fit is encouraging, but where is the spade suit?

North's hand: Q 8 6 4 A 5 K 3 A Q 9 8 7

All partner is telling you is she has a rebiddable suit. You have a good hand, but moderation is called for. Bid three spades which is very encouraging, but not forcing. If partner can't bid game, you don't belong there.

North's hand: K 10 9 8 6 4 2 8 4 3 Q K 6

As South Neither Vulnerable ♠ K 9 5 ♥ K 10 9 7 2 ♦ 8 ♣ J 10 9 4	The Bidding <table border="0" style="width: 100%;"> <tr> <td style="text-align: center;">W</td> <td style="text-align: center;">N</td> <td style="text-align: center;">E</td> <td style="text-align: center;">S</td> </tr> <tr> <td style="text-align: center;">-</td> <td style="text-align: center;">1H</td> <td style="text-align: center;">-</td> <td style="text-align: center;">2H</td> </tr> <tr> <td style="text-align: center;">-</td> <td style="text-align: center;">3H</td> <td style="text-align: center;">-</td> <td style="text-align: center;">?</td> </tr> </table>	W	N	E	S	-	1H	-	2H	-	3H	-	?

Today most experts use North's second bid as a game try which specifically asks how good are your trumps? Pass if bad, otherwise bid game. Your trumps are excellent. Bid four hearts. You're a favorite to make.

North's hand: A 6 4 J 8 5 4 3 A K A Q 8

Conversely three clubs or three diamonds by North on his second bid would be a game try specifically inquiring whether you're on top with your first bid and can help in his second suit. If so bid game in hearts otherwise return to three in his major.

As South, E/W Vulnerable ♠ 7 ♥ 5 4 2 ♦ Q 10 9 6 5 3 2 ♣ 8 4	The Bidding <table border="0" style="width: 100%;"> <tr> <td style="text-align: center;">N</td> <td style="text-align: center;">E</td> <td style="text-align: center;">S</td> <td style="text-align: center;">W</td> </tr> <tr> <td style="text-align: center;">1D</td> <td style="text-align: center;">DBL</td> <td style="text-align: center;">?</td> <td style="text-align: center;">-</td> </tr> </table>	N	E	S	W	1D	DBL	?	-

The odds favor the opponents have game in a major, maybe even a slam. Your horrible hand has a purpose...preempt! Don't be timid. Bid five diamonds. That puts it squarely up to West who won't find it easy to bid. If they beat you doubled for four tricks, most unlikely, they have a slam.

North's hand: 10 5 2 K 6 A K 9 7 4 Q 7 3

Sigma Gamma Association's Fireworks Picnic is June 29

Sigma Gamma Association will hold its annual Fireworks Picnic, a benefit for the Detroit Institute for Children, on Tuesday, June 29, at the Edsel & Eleanor Ford House, 1100 Lakeshore in Grosse Pointe Shores.

The evening of all-American family activities will begin at 6:30 p.m. and will feature fireworks over Lake St. Clair. Families will be able to picnic on the lawn and lots of activities will be available to keep children busy — clowns, for instance, and face painters, a magician, a fortune teller, games and a Moonwalk. Standard all-American food will be for sale, like hot dogs, hamburgers, soft drinks, popcorn, apple pie and ice cream.

For adults, there will be a cash bar and an I Love America silent auction, featuring things like trips, parties, children's clothes, tickets to local events, even homemade cookies to bid on.

Sigma Gamma Association hopes to heighten the public's recycling conscience and awareness of the need to conserve natural resources. The association will make a special point of using picnic materials that can be collected for recycling — plates and cups and napkins, for instance.

Picnic committee chairmen are Mr. and Mrs. Henry W. French and Mr. and Mrs. John P. Gray, all of Grosse Pointe.

Silent auction chairmen are Grosse Pointers Ginna Ives, Christy Maxwell, Molly Sterr and Jill Williams.

The price of admission is $250 for benefactors, which includes four tickets for adults, a gourmet picnic and special seats; $150 for patrons, which includes tickets for two adults and two children; $100 for sponsors, which includes tickets for two adults; $25 for adults; and $10 for youths 17 and under.

Pointer elected: Eric, Hespeneide of Grosse Pointe Woods has been elected national vice president of finance for the United Cerebral Palsy Association.

He has been a board member of United Cerebral Palsy of metro Detroit since 1983. Locally, he also serves as chairman of UCP's Casual Day fundraiser, where participants purchase buttons which allow them to wear casual clothes to work on Friday, June 18. Last year, more than 100 local firms took part in the event, raising more than $27,000 in support of UCP's local programs.

UCPA is based in Washington, D.C., and is the national organization for 160 state and local affiliate chapters. The association's mission is to positively affect the quality of life for people with cerebral palsy and others with severe disabilities. In 1991-92, combined revenues for all UCP affiliates exceeded $400 million.

Summer dance: The eighth annual summer dance to benefit St. Peter's Home for Boys will be held Friday, June 25, at the Grosse Pointe Yacht Club. The fundraiser will feature food, dancing, the music of the Sean Dobbins Trio Plus One, Hari Paris and Rzye, and a silent auction which will include trips to Key West, a Chicago cultural package and a Drummond Island golf package.

St. Peter's Home for Boys is a residential care facility with group and individual treatment for boys between the ages of 11 and 19 who cannot live with their own families.

Chairmen of the benefit are Elizabeth S. and John P. Otaway III of Grosse Pointe. Co-chairmen are Grace M. Piku of Grosse Pointe and John R. Boladian of Lathrup Village.

The benefit committee includes Grosse Pointers Peter K. Dow, Hudson Holland III, James Lambrecht, Benjamin Paddock IV and Jennifer Tuffey.

Tickets are $40 for crew members; $75 for first mates; $100 for captains. Call Boladian at 237-7136.

Pre-ballet party: Overtures, a bunch of twentysomething, thirtysomething and fortysomething professionals, has been getting together for five years for social gatherings and Detroit Symphony Orchestra concerts.

Continuing its tradition of mixing the best of Detroit's food with the best of Detroit's music, Overtures will hold a party beginning at 6 p.m. Saturday, June 26, on the mezzanine level of the Fox Theatre featuring an array of hot and cold hors d'oeuvres and a cash bar.

At 8 p.m., the Jeffrey Ballet will present Prince's full-length ballet, "Billboards."

fects — crumbling families, rotting cities, financial chaos, a generation of children and teens less educated and more morally confused than ever before — seem all too evident. I don't have all the answers concerning how to "live out" the balance in government and schools and the halls of state. How do we really keep our foundation of faith and yet truly allow freedom of expression — freedom to believe or not believe on a personal level?

The founding fathers didn't do it perfectly. I'm not sure we can either. I do know that the effects of the pendulum shift that we are experiencing, if they continue, will eventually destroy us as a nation.

The pendulum effect

By the Rev. J. Kevin Butcher
Grace Community Church

One extreme or the other. That's what we seem to see happening around us in almost every aspect of American life. A lack of balance, a drastic swinging of the pendulum from one side of an issue or behavior to the other.

Sometimes the overall effect on society is rather minimal. The sports fan who deliriously cheers and yet angrily curses his favorite team in one game (while somewhat annoying if you are sitting next to him) will not seriously hurt the American way. Neither will burned-out workaholics who become leisure addicts or body abusers who become vegetarians, 12-workout-a-week health nuts significantly change the way we live.

However, the other swings of the pendulum do have a greater, and sometimes more harmful impact. Parents who totally ignore and massively indulge their children in the same three-day span will produce a generation of confused young adults. Couples who fall in and out of love, moving between passionate affection and intense hatred on a regular basis, will negatively impact not only their own lives but all those around them. A society which rebounds from the hard right to the hard left, to the right, to the left, year after year, will most certainly leave in its path a chaotic infrastructure and a trail of wasted opportunities.

The swing of the pendulum — when it is out of control, when it is extreme, when it bypasses the truth which is somewhere in the balance between two propositions — most certainly has a negative effect upon much of what we hold dear.

In my opinion, that's what we have seen happening with the issue of church and state over the last several decades. Several hundred years ago our founding fathers left western Europe because the pendulum had swung in a direction that destroyed their religious dignity and freedom. Interestingly, while they fled the state churches of their European countries, they proceeded to set up smaller state churches in the American colonies. The Baptists settled in Rhode Island. The Congregationalists settled in Massachusetts. Other groups followed suit. Certainly there was greater tolerance for other religious persuasions within these small colonies than was felt in Europe, but nevertheless, the goal of many of the colonies was to become self-governing states that rallied around a particular spiritual ideology. The pendulum was still far at one end of the spectrum.

Slowly, the pendulum began to swing. By the time of the writing of the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution, the leaders of the colonies had decided to unite, putting their religious differences aside, agreeing that the principles of the republic would meld them together into one United States of America.

Of course it was understood by all that these very principles (the dignity of each human being, the freedom of choice, etc.) emanated from a common belief in a moral, just and good Supreme Being whose character (and thus the value system of our republic) was declared in the Bible.

Atheists, agnostics, pantheists, and other religious and non-religious viewpoints had freedom under our Constitution. But again, it was understood by all that the principles of our form of government would rise and fall based upon the foundation of a stated belief in a Judeo-Christian God.

For a time in our history the pendulum was centered. And the result of that balance was a country that rose to the top of the heap, that took the lead in almost every major category by which we judge the welfare of humanity.

The question we must ask ourselves today is simply this: Are we in danger of the pendulum now moving from the balance originally intended in our Constitution, swinging in an opposite direction from the oppression of state churches, to a different but equally oppressive position?

Other equally important questions follow. Doesn't it make sense that our founding fathers, realizing that the principles of our government stood upon the values emanating from the character of the Judeo-Christian concept of God, desired to provide a country where other views were free to be expressed, yet where a good, benevolent and moral God could still be freely recognized — even in the halls of state?

Did the authors of our Constitution really intend for the Judeo-Christian tradition and those who espouse it (still an overwhelming statistical majority in America) to become an oppressed, even persecuted minority in the name of "freedom of religion" and "separation of church and state?"

I realize that I am a pastor. I also realize that I come from the Judeo-Christian tradition. Nevertheless, I personally have no desire to "Christianize" our nation through any type of state-supported proselytization. Hearts are won to the faith one by one through personal contact, sharing and persuasion. I know that the option of a Christian nation where all go to the same church and believe the same things is not left open to us in a fallen world. In my opinion, the future kingdom of God is the only place and time where that kind of union will be possible.

However, I am interested in a nation where the majority are not persecuted for the sake of the minority. I am interested in a nation where I can attend a graduation ceremony and hear leaders and students and even clergy freely speak not only of the academic and physical and psychological growth of our graduates, but the spiritual values without which everything else rings hollow. I am interested in a nation that does not allow the pendulum to swing so far to the other side that one day our government is calling for help from other nations to help rebuild our moral infrastructure (the case in modern day Russia) — a moral infrastructure that began to crumble when we thought we could maintain our republic without the foundation of faith.

I fear that the pendulum has already swung. The ef-

The Memorial Church carillon consists of 47 bells spanning four musical octaves. The heaviest bell weighs 4700 lbs., is 5 feet in diameter and 4 feet high. The original chime of eight heavy bells dates back to 1927. They were given, according to the inscription, by Col. and Mrs. Frederick M. Alger "to the memory of those who have died in the service of our country." In 1952, 39 bells were added with the inscription: "Ring in the common love of good."

Christ Church plans Bible school

On Wednesday, July 28, students, their families and other members of the community are invited to take part in the annual Blessing of the Pets at 12:15 p.m. in the Rose Garden of Christ Church.

'Gypsy' can still entertain you

By Alex Suczek
Special Writer

The decibel and energy levels peak on Stratford's Festival stage this season with a revival of the late 50's Broadway musical, "Gypsy."

For anyone who remembers and loves the clarion voice of Ethel Merman as Mama Rose and her inimitable rendering of the hit song, "Everything's Coming Up Roses," the memories come welling up.

Not that this production imitates the original. It has a rough diamond sparkle all its own, lit up by the bright tal-being pushed, Baby runs off with a hooper in the troupe and Mama focuses on older sister Louise.

As the vaudeville tradition dies in the 30's, they desperately accept a booking in a burlesque theater. There, filling in for a no-show stripper, Louise becomes Gypsy Rose Lee and creates her successful stage persona. The real, and genuinely compelling story, of course, is Mama's obsession to have a star daughter and then having the star she thinks she created refuse to be dominated any longer.

grinds, "You Gotta Have a Gimmick."

Their gimmicks amount to electrified G-strings, suggestive contortions and bare bottoms and they generate a level of belly laughter rarely heard at the Stratford stage.

The dance expertise of director MacDonald is evident constantly and makes a show that moves with vitality and drama, while Sandra O'Neill's Mama Rose carries the show with the big brassy voice and domineering personality her role requires. There is no question who is in command of the

Pointe comedian finds laughs in life

By Jason R. Melsner
Special Writer

Life, it seems, can provide an endless store of laughs — if you know where to look.

Sheila Loveley of Grosse Pointe Park knows, and has learned to use it to her advantage.

Loveley, 41, works in day care, teaches aerobics, and raises two children by day, and at night she shapes these experiences into a stand-up comedy routine, which she performs at local night clubs.

"I talk about marriage, I talk about kids, I talk about trying not to look 40," said Loveley. "I also poke fun at my own name. I talk about my life, basically."

Loveley's interest in comedy began about 2 1/2 years ago at a restaurant called The Stage in downtown Detroit. "I was in a talent contest where they were trying to start up a television show," she said. "I introduced myself and said a couple of funny things about my name... and then I did a song which had a lot of double-entendre in it."

A comedian who booked shows at the restaurant noticed the response that Loveley got from the crowd and offered to pay her to do the song on stage.

"I did the song and was immediately hooked by the laughter," Loveley said.

Loveley has her own favorite professional comedians, but she insists that her style is unique.

"Right now my favorite comedian, the one who really tears me up, is Dennis Wolfberg. I also love Rita Rudner and Paula Poundstone," Loveley said. "But I don't think I model myself after anyone in particular."

Loveley considers her own style to be fast and straightforward.

"I am more of a 'get to the punchline quick' comedian rather than a storyteller like Bob Newhart and Bill Cosby. I have more of a Rita Rudner style, I set the joke up and then I twist it," she said.

Loveley recently got a chance to try out her style in an audition for a half-hour comedy pilot on WDIV/Detroit, appropriately called "So You Think You're Funny." The series, which began a 13-week run on June 12, showcases the talents of professional and amateur comedians in the Detroit area.

Loveley was one of 18 comedians selected from hundreds of local stand-ups to appear on the first six shows.

"I saw the contest advertised and went to the Metropolitan Music Cafe to audition," Loveley said. "I had a really good set. I knew that I had won — there was no doubt in my mind."

Loveley then attended an all-night taping of the six shows, with each show featuring three comedians competing in three rounds: an insult hurling round, a compulsory round, where each comedian performs a routine based on a pre-selected topic, and a final round, where each comic performs his or her own stand-up routine.

"The first part was tough," said Loveley, "because unless you're really into hurling insults, heckling someone who is right next to you is difficult."

Loveley also admitted she was unhappy with her performance in the second round.

"In a way I got a tough topic because I had 'come-on lines,' which I never use because I don't date — at least I'm not supposed to," Loveley joked. "I also should have tested my material first because it wasn't my usual act. We had a chance to but I didn't," she said.

On this particular show, however, even jokes that bombed were met by a huge audience response.

"Instead of at a normal comedy club where you have to hope you get laughter after every joke, the audience here had already been trained to applaud after every line," Loveley said. "It was a real shock the next night, at a regular comedy club, when a joke that was applauded like crazy the night before only got laughs from one table."

Loveley didn't need the artificial applause in the final round, where she was able to do her own stand-up routine.

"I felt real good about this part," she said. "I really had the audience going."

Her show is scheduled to air on Saturday, July 3 from 1 to 1:30 a.m. on WDIV-TV, Channel 4.

"One in the morning, during the holiday weekend; you can't buy exposure like this," Loveley said laughing.

Loveley also has appeared on "Kelly and Company" twice, as well as in an Oakland County cable telethon.

Her future comedy plans do not include anything too drastic.

Loveley has any plans to drop everything and go out to California or something," she said. "Sooner or later, Marilyn Turner is going to have to quit. You know, 'free installation, free padding,' I could do that," Loveley joked.

For now, Loveley is happy with the symbiotic relationship between her day and night jobs. With one feeding the other so nicely, who wouldn't be?

ents that director Brian MacDonald has assembled.

The book, lyrics and music remain vintage New York musical — brash, brassy and making much humor out of the corny style of touring vaudeville and the vulgarity of old-time American "Burlesk."

Based on the autobiography of the all-time striptease star Gypsy Rose Lee, the show presents a caricature of a stage mother, Mama Rose, determined to make a vaudeville headliner of her younger daughter, Baby June. Tired of

Meanwhile, the real fun is in the somewhat satirical treatment of the two long-gone show biz formats.

"Baby June and Her Newsboys," a barnyard number complete with two-man cow, and "Toreadorables" drag in every sentimental, corny and patriotic gimmick possible in juvenile song and dance routines.

The bite is sharpest and the laughter loudest, however, when three burlesque queens demonstrate their art for the wide-eyed Louise, explaining between their bumps and troupe as she belts out her songs, of whose soul is suffering as she faces up to letting Louise be a star on her own.

But Mary Pitt, Karen K. Edessi and Mari Trainor come close to stealing the show with their impersonations of the three queens, Tessie Tura, Mazzeppa and Electra. They bring down the house and they must stir macho memories in the hearts of every red-blooded male who can still recall furthering his education a few decades ago with a trip to the local burlesque show.

'Jurassic Park' chills and thrills

By Marian Trainor
Special Writer

Is there a dinosaur in your future? You'd better hope not.

In Stephen Spielberg's hi tech-sci-fi thriller we learn that those fascinating behemoths which ruled the Earth millions of years ago could once again make the planet their own and that man would be no match for them.

"Jurassic Park" is more than just a story. Bringing the dinosaurs to life on screen involved breaking new ground in animation and computer graphics. It is an amazing accomplishment.

The story is based on Michael Crichton's novel in which dinosaurs inhabit a theme park after being hatched on a Costa Rica island by eccentric billionaire Jon Hammond (Richard Attenborough). His scientists have found a way to clone the beasts from fossilized dinosaur DNA.

Restricted by high voltage wire fences, the dinosaurs become museum attractions that may be safely gazed at by awed and curious spectators.

From the beginning there are those who have reservations about the project. One of them is Malcolm (Jeff Goldblum) who thinks that what God has put asunder, no man should put together. "God kills dinosaurs, God invents man, Man kills God. Man invents dinosaurs," he says.

Crichton, who also wrote the film, delights in details and presents an obsessive story on both the possibilities and evils of modern science.

It is a story that suits Spielberg's talents.

Most of the movie avoids overt violence. The truly violent scenes are mostly in the viewer's imagination. It is not violence, but the threat of violence that is important. Generally, "Jurassic Park" creates a triumphant illusion.

Spielberg is noted for mixing wonder with horror. Thus we have a quiet sequence in which cars ride on an electric track through the terrain which is home for the dinosaurs. The silence is eerie and unnerving. As the car moves along there is a noise like muffled thunder announcing the presence of dinosaurs, and the audience along with the passengers get a close-up view of true-to-life dinosaurs.

Back in the laboratory promoter Hammond is watching the progress on a computer. In the car are Ellie (Laura Dern), Grant (Sam Neill) two paleontologists, Malcolm (Goldblum) who is skeptical about the project, a mercenary lawyer (Martin Ferrero) who represents Hammond's investors and Hammond's two grandchildren, Tim (Joseph Mazello) and Lex (Ariana Richards). With him in the laboratory is Arnold (Samuel L. Jackson) who monitors the computer, Wu (B.D. Wong), Hammond's assistant, and a disgruntled Nedy (Wayne Knight) who tries to steal the dinosaur embryos. A violent thunderstorm that lashes the coast causes the electricity within the automated theme park to break down and huge dinosaurs start to escape.

One of the scariest scenes occurs when the children find refuge in the large kitchen of the Jurassic Park visitor's center only to have two triceratops break through the door, their large tails whipping the pots and pans in every direction. Another tense moment occurs when Ellie volunteers to go into the basement of the center to try to restore the power. Unknown to her the two children are climbing a high-voltage wire fence.

Nothing comes easy in these last segments. Ellie turns from the switches to see two triceratops entering the narrow passage.

Outside, two dinosaurs are engaged in a mortal battle. As we see the last of them, we wonder how these huge powerful monsters grew from the tiny creatures we watched break out of a shell in Hammond's laboratory.

There are no villains in this film. The dinosaurs are only doing what comes naturally and Hammond is more of a visionary than his counterpart in the novel who used genetic research into capitalist exploitation to create the ultimate side-show.

"Jurassic Park" creates such a triumphant illusion you will believe you have spent time in a dino-filled world.

'Goering's List' itself is a work of art

'Goering's List'
By J. C. Pollock
Delacorte Press. 378 pages.
$21.95

Long before reaching the final page of "Goering's List," a gripping novel, I had irretrievably lost count of the body bags.

The author of this phenomenal suspense story, J. C. Pollock, is a former intelligence officer, and thus eminently qualified to write of such spy tricks as "safe houses," surveillance tactics, and esoteric weaponry that would have dazzled even James Bond, Ian Fleming's master spy.

The hero is Mike Semko, 42-year-old special agent for the CIA, where he is recruited by his boss, Jack Brannigan, an admirer of Mike's often unorthodox approach.

Having no official sanction for his new assignment, Mike "was on his own, out on a limb, and he didn't care. He had ceased to care about political considerations and diplomatic subtleties years ago."

Mike hits the ground running as he begins his pursuit of the East German, Jurgen Strasser, a notorious killer and blackmailer in possession of the secret file owned by Hitler's reich marshal, Hermann Goering. The file lists the art works stolen and amassed by the Nazis during WWII along with a damning record of art dealers and wealthy collectors who benefited by this illegal treasure.

"The stories of these missing treasures were legend. A significant part of the Nazi program for conquest was to effect the impoverishment of the conquered nations and the enrichment of Germany through a deliberate and official process of looting works of art. In the Slavic countries the program called for pillaging the whole of the national cultural heritage. No collections — state, church, or private — were spared. In France, Belgium, and Holland, as well as in Austria and Germany itself, organized stealing was limited largely to private Jewish collections, which were systematically looted, or to cloak the transactions with a semblance of legality, the owners were forced to sell at ridiculously low prices, often just prior to being sent to the death camps."

Almost 50 years after the end of WWII, the CIA, the Mossad (Israeli intelligence), the KGB, British intelligence, and the German police become entangled when they enter the maze-like hunt for the elusive, sinister Strasser, who leads them on a merry chase throughout Germany, Austria, England, France, and the United States. Because some of these agents are working at cross-purposes, this leads, of course, to a great deal of confusion.

Eventually, Mike is teamed up with an unusual Mossad agent, Rachel Sidrane, a beautiful New York-born woman with a doctorate in art history from Vassar.

Now an Israeli citizen, Rachel had arranged for "The New York Times" to be left at her apartment door in Tel Aviv every day by a friend with El Al Airlines. The paper was her way of keeping in touch with a city she had called home for 26 years, a still unsevered cord to her past, and to a life she had left behind eight years ago."

Colonel Leonov of the SVR (successor of the infamous KGB) has quickly picked up on the murderous ramifications of Strasser, who attempts blackmail and coercion on present-day owners of the Nazi art loot.

As Mike and Rachel, under increasing pressure from both friendly and enemy forces, race to locate Strasser first, they set off a number of trip-wires which instigate bloody encounters between opposing forces.

The denouement is the final confrontation between Mike and Rachel with Strasser and his well-armed minions holed up in a Tyrolean retreat. A gruesome and fierce battle of wits and armament takes place, with no quarter given.

While "Goering's List" is long on action and derring-do, character-development comes up somewhat short. However, Pollock has succeeded well in describing spy operations and the perils of intelligence work, enough to guarantee every reader's fascination and increased heart-beat.

'Cliffhanger' promises drama and delivers

By Marian Trainor
Special Writer
"Cliffhanger's" stunning cinematography competes for our attention with the death-defying stunts performed by Gabe Walker (Sylvester Stallone), a Rocky Mountain rescue worker.

And it wins — all the performers are upstaged by the breathtaking panoramic background shots of the rugged crags of the Colorado Rockies and the Italian Dolomite Mountains.

"Cliffhanger" wastes no time in establishing itself as an adventure film full of action and surprises. As the credits roll, a tense, terrific sequence features Walker doing his best to save a woman hanging precariously from a rope across a terrifying deep abyss. Unfortunately, he fails.

Unable to deal with the tragedy, Walker quits his job and leaves behind his self esteem and the woman he loves.

A year later, he returns to the Rockies to try to persuade his girlfriend, Jessie (Janine Turner) to join him. She refuses, but when her helicopter is grounded because of a blizzard, rescuers will have to reach them on foot and Walker tags along.

His partner is Hal Tucker (Michael Rooker). It was Tucker's girlfriend who fell to her death and he blames Walker for failing to save her. It is not a happy reunion.

After a grueling climb, they reach the stranded party — a crew of thieves led by a psychotic British mastermind, Qualen (John Lithgow) who hijacked a U.S. Treasury cargo jet carrying $100 million. When their plane crashes, several money-filled cases are scattered in the wintry mountains. Walker and Tucker are ordered at gunpoint to retrieve the lost cash.

Walker escapes and he and the thieves begin a lethal game of cat and mouse as the thieves try to reach the cases before Walker does.

of the fillains as a human to-boggan. He skewers one of Qualen's men on a stalactite. In all, he is an impressive-looking foe with bulging muscles, his veins etched in sharp relief and his jaw set in determination.

Lithgow's Qualen is a cold-blooded killer who so nonchalantly bumps off his loyal followers, it is almost funny. He is deadly serious, though, about recovering the last case. He has a philosophy about killing people in numbers. "Kill a couple of people, and they will call you a murderer. Kill a few million and they call you a conqueror."

"Cliffhanger" ends as it began with a spectacular last-ditch feat by Walker.

Fans of Stallone who know that violence and endurance are his forte and accept him as a super hero who can survive killing assaults and live to perform deeds beyond the ability of an ordinary man, will thrill to the relentless brutal attacks that leave him standing atop a mountain — a conquering hero.

"Cliffhanger" is a top-drawer escapist film done up with style.

Hilberry Theatre is 'Telling Wilde Tales' for children

"Telling Wilde Tales," a stage adaptation of fairy tales by Oscar Wilde, will be the Hilberry Theatre's 1993 summer production for children, scheduled for June 21 through July 10.

Robert T. Hazzard, director of theater at Wayne State University, says the performance will include three tales: "The Happy Prince," "The Nightingale and the Rose" and "The Birthday of the Infanta." They have been adapted for the stage by Jules Tosca.

Oscar Wilde's fairy tales, written for his children, were published in 1888 as "The Happy Prince and Other Tales." It is this publication which established Wilde's reputation as a writer. The book was critically acclaimed, and he was compared to Hans Christian Andersen.

The main theme of Wilde's stories is the power of love over evil, and they include fanciful characters such as princes and princesses, dwarfs, statues, birds, flowers and other inanimate objects.

The Wayne State production is directed by Ray Schultz, former Hilberry actor and a Ph.D. student in the Department of Theater.

Tickets are $2.50 and are on sale now at the Hilberry Theatre box office, telephone 577-2972. For group rate tickets at $1.50 for groups of 10 or more, or for further information, call the theater promotion office at 577-3010.

Home Tips

Easy stain spotting — Tired of looking for spots to treat on your family's clothes (or tablecloths and linens)? Give each family member a water-soluble pen from the fabric shop and have them circle the places that need pretreating.

The pen marks come out in the wash, and when the spots are circled in blue, you don't have to try to remember where everyone says they were.

Anita F., La Salle, Ill.

Small mint boxes — I use a recycled mint box for a pill box. The top will stay on after the label is removed. You can see inside easily as well.

Michelle E., Lincoln, N.H.

New real estate appraisal dictionary essential resource

To effectively communicate in today's rapidly changing real estate market, appraisers must master the language of their profession as well as that of related fields. The Dictionary of Real Estate Appraisal, third edition, just released by the Appraisal Institute, offers real estate professionals concise, clear definitions of a wide array of real estate-related terms.

The dictionary provides information on a variety of subjects that affect the appraisal profession. Extensive supplemental addenda are provided to keep appraisers abreast of important developments such as the regulation of appraisers and the effect of recent U.S. Supreme Court decisions. "This text is without question an indispensable resource for anyone active in real estate," said Appraisal Institute president Bernard J. Fountain.

The new dictionary defines more than 5,000 terms in easy-to-understand language. Entries are categorized in a topical index and extensive cross references are provided. Readers will find terms from associated fields such as accounting, banking, and law, in addition to a comprehensive collection of real estate appraisal terms.

Vent system offers cleaner environment for homes

ENVIOR-VENT

A newly patented home ventilation system called the Envior-vent is now available to homeowners nationwide.

The Envior-vent helps improve the quality of air circulating in a home by removing radon gas, dampness, musty odors, mildew and smoke and dust particles. Allergy sufferers will also benefit. The vent is ideal for basements, entertainment rooms and heavy traffic areas.

Of the elements the Envior-vent removes, radon gas is of special concern to many consumers because of its link to lung cancer. Radon gas, which seeps into the cracks of basement walls and foundations, is the second-leading cause of lung cancer in the United States, according to the EPA. The Envior-vent is less expensive and more practical than other radon reduction methods.

The Envior-vent is designed to fit easily between two ceiling joists and can be installed in approximately three hours. The Envior-vent encompasses a quiet centrifugal blower which completely changes the air in a 30-by-20-foot room within 11 minutes or in an average home within 20 minutes.

"We are introducing our product at a time when people are more concerned about their health and home environment than ever before" said Don Hurst and Bill Finley, inventors of the Envior-vent.

Hurst and Finley have 40 years combined experience in the appliance industry.

Dealer wholesale and retail inquiries are welcome.

The Envior-vent is available in two power levels, 460 cfm and 1,000 cfm, and retails for under $500. It is available through Hurst Appliance & Ventilation Co., 23210 Greater Mack, St. Clair Shores, Mich. 48080, or phone 778-8670 or fax 778-8671.

Understand window terminology

So, this is the year to update the house by replacing those inefficient front windows with new energy-efficient ones. The next step is to make an informed window purchase. The following is a quick guide that can be used to master the terminology associated with purchasing a window.

According to Patrick Bushey, territory sales manager, Pella Window Store, there are several things for a person to consider before purchasing energy-efficient windows.

"Finding an energy efficient window doesn't have to take a lot of time or effort. We encourage people to look for specific information which can help them make a comparison among window brands. It's important to understand that windows are measured in terms of U-values and air infiltration," he said.

"A U-value is the measure of heat loss during a unit of time. The lower the U-value the more energy efficient the window. Air infiltration is measured in cubic feet of air leakage per minute per lineal foot (cfm/ft). The industry standard (NWWDA) for a Grade 40 window is .25 cfm/ft, high quality windows are below .20 cfm/ft."

Bushey also suggested consumers should be informed that recent technology has enabled windows to reach new levels of energy efficiency. One recent development is the low emissivity (low-E) coating. This clear coating changes the way a window reflects radiant heat into a room. High quality windows are available with low-E surface coatings.
