Teachers union must please own higher-ups before reaching agreement

Second in an occasional series this summer on the teachers' contract negotiations for the Grosse Pointe Public School System.

First phase of Neff Park beautification dedicated

By Chip Chapman Staff Writer

The first phase of the Neff Park beautification project was dedicated last Friday with the traditional ribbon cutting.

Phase I - a new entrance to the park along Jefferson and Lakeland - was initiated in honor of the City's 100th anniversary. Phase II - a new dropoff site and guard gate - is scheduled for next year.

The City of Grosse Pointe Foundation has led the effort, hoping to raise $100,000 for both phases. The City of Grosse Pointe will contribute $1 for every $4 the foundation raises.

Phase I was completed by Torre and Bruglio, who planted 153 evergreen trees, a perennial garden, and added a brick walkway and park benches.

Anyone wishing to contribute to the project can send a contribution, payable to the City of Grosse Pointe Foundation, to the City offices at 17147 Maumee, Grosse Pointe, Mich. 48230.

Legislation concerning the spraying of pesticides has been placed before the governor, legislation that is of the utmost concern to local governments, said Grosse Pointe Park councilmember Barbara Miller.

HB 4344, a bill designed to give local governments more power to control the spraying of insecticides, is on Gov. Engler's desk to be signed, said Park resident Karen Kendrick-Hands, of the East Michigan Environmental Action Council. The bill, as originally proposed, would have given local governments the authority to enact spraying laws stricter than state regulations, Kendrick-Hands said. The bill came before state Sen. David Honigman's, R-West Bloomfield, government committee for consideration. While before the committee, the bill was modified, said Sally Chandler of the EMEAC. According to Rick Seely of the Michigan Nursery and Landscaping Association, HB 4344 needed modifications. The bill would have severely affected businesses that spray.

Honigman's arrangement, keeping state spraying laws, but allowing local governments the authority to enforce them, is a good compromise said Seely.

According to Chandler, the state department of agriculture has authority to enforce spraying regulations but does not have enough inspectors to do Seely said that the EMEAC did not oppose Honigman's amendments because the amendments kept state regulations. Allowing properly trained local officials the right to enforce state rules is not a problem, he said.

Having a mentor or role model is often a way of finding one's vocation. Edward A. Krull, M.D., chairman of Henry Ford Hospital's dermatology department, has had a number of them.

"My ambition in becoming a physician was pretty well fixed by the age of 16," Krull said. "I had a wonderful family practitioner. He was extremely competent, of great caring, concern, a humanitarian. All the qualities I really liked in physicians. He became my early role model in becoming a physician."

Krull grew up in Oakville, Conn., where he met Dr. Royal Meyer, the family practitioner who was his first mentor.

While growing up in Oakville, Krull won a scholarship to Taft school in nearby Watertown.

Alice H. Hammond

Alice Hammond, inducted into the Michigan Aviation Hall of Fame in 1990, died Monday, June 28, 1993, at her home in Millville, N.J. She was 86.

Born in Detroit, Mrs. Hammond was a former resident of Grosse Pointe Farms. Known as "The Flying Grandmother," she was a pilot, flight instructor and friend of Amelia Earhart.

Mrs. Hammond attended Wellesley College for two years and graduated from the University of Michigan. She received her private pilot's license in 1931 and won the first air race for women in Michigan in 1933. She obtained a commercial pilot's certificate in 1941, and later earned seaplane and instrument ratings.

During World War II she activated and commanded the first and largest women's flying squadron of the Civil Air Patrol, based in Hartung, Mich., flying courier missions. President Lyndon Johnson named her as one of the original members of the Federal Aviation Administration's Women's Advisory Committee on Aviation.

Soon after earning her license, she joined the Ninetynines, an international organization of women pilots founded by Earhart. She served as international president from 1951-53

After Earhart's disappearance, Mrs. Hammond proposed that a scholarship be created in Earhart's memory. Mrs. Hammond served as historian of the Amelia Earhart Memorial Scholarship Fund, which enabled more than 200 women to enhance their opportunities for a career in aviation.

Mrs. Hammond was chosen by the state of Michigan as one of its 150 "Women in Achievement" in 1950. The following year, she was named one of Michigan's 10 Outstanding Women. Her most recent honor came in 1990, when she was inducted into the Michigan Aviation Hall of Fame.

Hammond's late husband, John, earned his pilot's license in 1926. The couple moved to New Jersey in 1967, when he became public relations director for Airwork Corp.

Mrs. Hammond was a flower show judge, a member of the Countryside Garden Club, the Millville Women's Club and a member of the Millville Public Library board of trustees.

Mrs. Hammond and her family were also members of the Grosse Pointe Unitarian Church.

She is survived by a daughter, Barbara Hammond Sepenuk; a son, John S. Hammond II; seven grandchildren; two great-grandchildren; and a sister, Ruth Chapin. She was predeceased by her husband and a daughter, Betsey Jane Crooks. Interment will be at Woodlawn Cemetery in Detroit.

Memorial contributions may be made to the Amelia Earhart Memorial Scholarship Fund, P.O. Box 599965, Will Rogers Airport, Oklahoma City, Okla. 73159.

Village has choice between old and new in frozen desserts

By Jim Stickford Staff Writer

In the dog days of summer there's nothing better than going out for something cold and sweet. These days, however, that doesn't always mean ice cream.

Fans of the traditional ice cream cone or soda have been going to Sanders in the Village next door is TCBY Yogurt, a 5year-old store that sells frozen yogurt.

Store manager Margaret Naughton said frozen yogurt doesn't have the calories or fat content of regular ice cream. The store also sells fat-free frozen yogurt, sugar-free frozen yogurt and fat- and sugar-free frozen yogurt.

There are a lot of people out there who, because health reasons like diabetes, can't eat regular ice cream," Naughton said. "By offering alternatives, they can go out for a cone just like everyone else."

The store offers a variety of flavors of frozen yogurt, Naughton said. When people have it has been good for business. for the first time, they are often surprised to find out it tastes more like soft serve ice cream this year, well, the weather has than regular yogurt.

In addition to a variety of flavors, the store offers a variety of toppings. They range from hot fudge to crushed cookies. Surprisingly, most people order toppings on their frozen yogurt, said Naughton.

"I guess when people eat for the last 57 years. But right frozen yogurt, they feel they deserve a little extra treat because the yogurt has fewer calories," said Naughton. "But depending on the topping, that treat can add up to a lot of extra calories."

The store's Village location proves the old adage that it takes three things to be successful in business - location, location, location - Naughton said. Because people walk to the Village they get a lot of walk-in trade, quite different from owner Roma Hess' Mack store in the Woods.

Being close to several Little League baseball fields doesn't hurt either. Naughton also said that the hot summer weather "Last summer it rained a lot, Sanders manager Mary David said that her store does not sell low-calorie items like non-fat ice cream.

"We get a request every now and then, but we have not traditionally carried those items." said David. "The stores were sold to the Tastee Freeze company based in Utica, and they will be expanding the menu, but that's in the future.'

Sanders was founded in 1875, and the Grosse Pointe store has been at its present location for 58 years this August, said David.

He accepted the position with Franco after taking a brief time-out to "relax."

Quigley has held a variety of field, division and corporate staff positions over the years. Since August 1990, he served as executive-in-charge of communications of GM's communications and marketing staff. Before that, he was the executive director of corporate communications.

Among the other titles he held at GM were executive director of public relations and general director of media and community relations.

A Detroit native, Quigley graduated from Wayne State University and completed the Harvard Business School Advanced Management Program. He is an accredited member of the Public Relations Society of

During the ride to the airport across the city, they were concerned about being shot at. British Airways employees had signs put on the bus that said, 'These are American tourists.'

After waiting in line for more than five hours, and being told that there wasn't room for all of them on one of the flights, they were able to leave the country.

"As we flew out, just before curfew came in, we could see all of these fires going on in Beijing," he said. "It was a very scary time for us."

Krull has resisted the lure of more money in private practice for a number of reasons.

"I love resident education." he said. "That has been the strongest magnet that has kept me at Ford Hospital. I enjoy the interaction and the teaching. There is a great thrill in watching young doctors develop into responsible, effective dermatologists."

He appreciates Henry Ford Hospital's commitment to research. Clinical exposure is also important to Krull, and is another reason he has remained where he is.

"Role models and mentors are very important for all of us," he said. "I certainly had mine. Hopefully, those of us in resident education remain as good mentors for young doctors coming through.

"One of the things that attracted me to Clarence Livingood and what he stood for is his humanitarian concern for patients. There really is an art in medicine, and it is reflected in how we deal with patients. It's important for young doctors to have role models who are concerned with patients."

Krull said that when interviewing residents, he looks for those who will give something back. With 250 people vying for six resident positions, he seeks those who can make things better in their residency education, in medicine, in their care of patients.

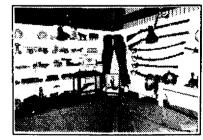

Krull ran a charity clinic at St. Mary's Hospital in Grand Rapids during his time there. Half a day a week, he would see patients free of charge.

"It was part of my paying back for all the things that were done for me," he said. "Without scholarship help, the commitment of dedicated faculty, I wouldn't be here.'

Krull said there isn't anything else he could picture himself doing other than being a physician.

"It involves a lot of hours," he said, "but it doesn't seem so when you enjoy what you are doing.

Former Pointer runs for mayor of Detroit

By Jason R. Meisner Special Writer

Marc Cedric Alan, a 1969 graduate of Grosse Pointe South, believes that he is the man for the job - replacing "hizzoner," Mayor Coleman A. Young of Detroit.

Alan, 42, who lived in Grosse Pointe Farms until he moved to the race for mayor as a bunch Detroit in 1981, is running for mayor on a platform that is built around 20 specific goals he would pursue if elected. Of these, Alan would give five his top priority:

1. Finish removing all abandoned buildings and houses that belong to the City of Detroit.

2. Make interest-free loans to homeowners where their houses need repairing.

3. Install 5,000 Michigan Bell telephones on public property.

4. Provide a personal contact for residents who are behind on property and income taxes.

5. Get tough on litter and crime.

To achieve these lofty goals, Alan realizes that a lot of money will be needed. He also realizes that money doesn't grow on trees, especially in Detroit.

"My theory is this: If I get elected mayor, Coleman Young already has all these appointees in his administration. Since it costs money to replace all these people, I would leave the same administration in place," he said.

With the money saved by doing this, Alan said he would get a head start on his top priority - tearing down abandoned buildings.

According to Alan, reforming the legal system in Detroit would not only deter crime, but would also help clean up the city. "Someone has got to talk to getting tough on crime," he said. "We have a legal system where if you go to jail you get out a couple of months later. Maybe instead of being sent to jail these people need to be put to work cleaning up the streets and tearing down houses."

Alan sees his competition in of "dreamers" who think they'll have piles of money to throw at a problem once they are elected.

"I'm the best man for the job," Alan said, "because to solve a problem you have got to understand it. I've got 25 years' experience understanding the problems of people in this city." That experience comes from years of working in a variety of businesses in Detroit, including ownership of a car dealership and an apartment building complex. Alan also has experience as the former mayor of the Last Frontier - a "private city" of about 900 residents and 20 businesses at Jefferson and Hart, which was bought out by Mayor Young when Chrysler underwent expansion.

Alan entered the race mainly out of concern over Detroit's economic decline over the past two decades.

"The City of Detroit hasn't created a job in over 20 years," Alan said. "At one time we had 1.6 million people living here. Today we have about a million and it gets smaller and smaller and smaller."

Alan contends that Detroit's problems should be the concern of everyone who lives in the area, not just residents of the city.

"The Grosse Pointes should be concerned because the people who live in Detroit, when they get money and the chance, move out here," he said. "They're happy because they've these judges about getting run away from the problem.

Marc Cedric Alan But all of a sudden, 20 years down the road, the problem moves as well. You get the wrong people coming out here them.' Alan insists that residents of Grosse Pointe should be concerned with building up Detroit because of its proximity - if for nothing else.

"If you live on the edge of Grosse Pointe Park and you cross the street (into Detroit) it looks like Beirut, Lebanon," Alan said. "There's piles of garbage on the sidewalks and people hiding in the weeds waiting to rob you.'

Because the decline of business in Detroit was gradual, Alan does not expect to turn the city around overnight.

"Businesses change — it may just change a hair, but if you look closely you start to see the awnings getting dirtier, not getting replaced. It means that another store made less money last year and can't afford to keep their business up," Alan said.

In the 10 weeks until the election, Alan plans to hit the campaign trail, getting his message out to anyone who will lis-

"I'll be out soliciting votes," he said. "Maybe we'll win, maybe we won't.'

Park plans summer road paving

By Jim Stickford Staff Writer

The Grosse Pointe Park city council approved spending over $200,000 to repave and repair roads in the city at its last council meeting.

"We picked the roads according to need of repair," said director of public service James Ellison. "The council just gave its approval, so we won't start the work until sometime in July, but excepting a long patch of rain, we should be finished by the end of July.'

The streets that will be repaved include Charlevoix, between Whittier and Three Mile; Avondale, Essex, from Barrington to the city boundry; and from Bedford to Grand Marais.

If the city has any money left over, Nottingham from Mack to Jefferson will also be repaved. Harvard will be patched up, but not repaved, said Ellison.

"When picking the roads, we looked for pot holes, 'alligator skin' conditions, and levelness," said Ellison. "When a road or street has cracks, and lines in it, it is said to look like the skin of an alligator. That happens when the base of the street is wet."

Ellison explained that when the base of the street is wet, during winter it freezes. The water expands, cracking the base and the top layers of the road. Water gets into the cracks, and when that water freezes, the water expands and causes the cracks to grow.

States like Florida don't have that problem, and the roads can only be repaved during the summer.

The repavers, Angelo Iafrati and Co., will begin by milling the road, said Ellison. A device resembling a steamroller with spikes will dig up the road.

Then workers will lay the first layer of asphalt for the base of the road. After that, the second layer of asphalt will be laid on top.

This asphalt is of a finer grade and is meant to make the road and the ride smoother.

The crews will work on one side of the street at a time. This will allow access to those who have to use the streets.

The drawback is sometimes the weight of the vehicles will cause the newly laid edge to crumble. That means when the road is complete, the center is slightly depressed.

But unless the city is willing to close off the streets being worked on for several hours at a time, there is no alternative.

The Park will also be working with Grosse Pointe City on patching Cadieux. The street is the border between the two cities.

City manager Dale Krajniak said the Park will spend about $260,000 on road repair this year.

New in the Park

The Grosse Pointe Park public safety department recently swore in four new officers, left to right, Albert Crooks, Dennis Van Tassell, deputy director William Furtaw, Joshua Cornell and Robert Krompatic. Crooks is a graduate of the Macomb Community College police academy and previously has worked for the Clarkston and Clinton Township police departments. Van Tassell graduated from Western Michigan University with a bachelor's degree in criminal justice and from the Kalamazoo Valley Police Academy. Cornell graduated from Lake Superior State University with a bachelor's degree in criminal justice and law enforcement. Krompatic is a graduate of Michigan State University with a bachelor's degree in criminal justice and attended the Wayne County Regional Police Academy, where he graduated at the top of his class.

An employee of an exclusive bicycle shop on Cadieux and Mack chased a thief and recovered a $3,000 mountain bike on June 28.

Store employees told Grosse Pointe Park police that a young man entered the shop around 5p.m., selected a bike and pedaled out. An employee chased the thief on foot to Charlevoix and Neff, where the thief jumped off the bike, apologized and got into a car.

Park public safety detective Lt. Dave Hiller said the incident is similar to several other bike thefts that have occurred recently in Farmington Hills, Birmingham, Royal Oak, Dearborn and Northville. The suspect in the Park incident also fits the description of the suspect in the other incidents, Hiller said.

After earning a scholarship to Yale, he had to take begin- often because he was an imporning science courses. He applied to medical school after his third year and was accepted for the next fall. Dr. Meyer's influence led Krull to pursue a career as a family practitioner when he finished medical school in 1955.

He took a rotating internship in San Francisco City & County Hospital (now San Francisco General). Professors at Yale had discouraged rotating internships, where young physicians would learn different specialties, because they felt graduates would not learn enough about any one specialty to be worthwhile.

There was no Medicare or Medicaid at the time, and most of the patients could not afford hospitalization.

"It was a great learning experience for me," he said, "but also a very hard working experience. It wouldn't be unusual to go two or three nights without any significant sleep whatsoever. Most of us felt that that's what internships were like."

After his internship he volunteered to go into the Army. One of his friends from his internship told Krull to ask for an Armish-Maag (Army Military Assistance Advisory Group) as an assignment. After about three or four months he was given a choice between Taiwan or Tehran, Iran. He chose Tehran and went there in 1957.

A group called Friends of the Middle East asked him if he would evaluate Iranian physicians who wanted to study in the United States to assess how they would perform in this country.

"I enjoyed my Army career a great deal," he said. "I felt very needed. I felt like I was making a significant contribution.

Krull returned to the United States and chose an assignment at Madigan General Hospital in Tacoma, Wash., where he was the director of the outpatient clinic. He asked his new commanding officer if he could spend half a day a week in some field in which he was interested to learn a specialty.

He gravitated to dermatology. His thoughts of becoming a family practitioner began to change. There were aspects of ogy is the education and ways of preventing skin cancer and early detection by patients themselves," Krull said. "Just as women are being taught to do their own breast exams, many dermatologists are instructing patients to do skin exams.'

Krull said there are about 700,000 new cases of skin cancer a year. Melanoma is major disease concern, he said.

"Maybe 25 years ago the occurrence was one in 2,000 over a lifetime," he said. "The prediction right now is that it will be one in 750 over a lifetime by the year 2000."

Educating the public is important, Krull said. He suggested that people use sunscreens, try to avoid intense sun exposure and educate children.

"There are some studies that suggest an intense sunburn prior to puberty is an important factor in the development of melanoma."

He said that it isn't a case of physicians' ability to recognize more skin cancer cases, "there truly is an increasing incidence."

Krull said there is a lot of feeling that the changes in the ozone layer have played a role in the increase in skin cancer, but the scientific basis may be less conclusive.

"Only in time will we be able to put it in its proper perspective," he said. "There are studies that suggest that with a 1 percent change in the ozone, there may be significant changes in the increase of skin cancer. I don't know whether those studies will hold up in time.

Krull's career has taken him from Tehran to Tacoma, but one place he will not forget is Tiananmen Square in Beijing in 1989.

Krull was supposed to go to China with a small group to meet with Chinese dermatologists. Students had been protesting the government in Tiananmen Square. The government had been somewhat tolerant of the protests to fair," he said. "People were that point.

About 10 days before the group was scheduled to leave for China, the organizer of the program canceled the trip. Krull's office contacted the U.S. State Department, which said it would be safe to travel to China. The woman who was organizing the original trip asked Krull if he was still interested in going. Krull, his daughter, another dermatologist, his wife, and the tour director all left for Beijing.

It was difficult for the Chinese dermatologists who lived outside Beijing to get into the city because of the protests. The program was changed around and a few of the doctors met for a few hours.

After the meeting Krull went down to Tiananmen Square.

"It almost looked like a state

The next day, at about 10 p.m., trucks were rolling past Krull's hotel and at 3 a.m. the soldiers were killing the students.

The only communication the group received was shortwave radio.

"We didn't know what was happening," he said, "but we thought this could end up as a civil war and we might not get out of the country for a long time."

The group's flight wasn't scheduled to leave for five days. They booked a British Airways flight that would leave two days later.

the overall practice he wasn't going to be interested in. His focus turned to teen-agers, with thoughts of going into adolescent medicine.

"During this half day a week in dermatology, I met a very good teacher and there I found the things that interested me in medicine as I was beginning to focus on a future career,' Krull said. "There were my teen-agers. I had a broad spectrum of patient population from kids to the elderly. I had medical parts and surgical parts and I became intrigued with the career of dermatology.

He thought he might end up in administration if he stayed in the Army. He enjoyed taking care of patients too much to give that up, so he left the Army to pursue a career in dermatology.

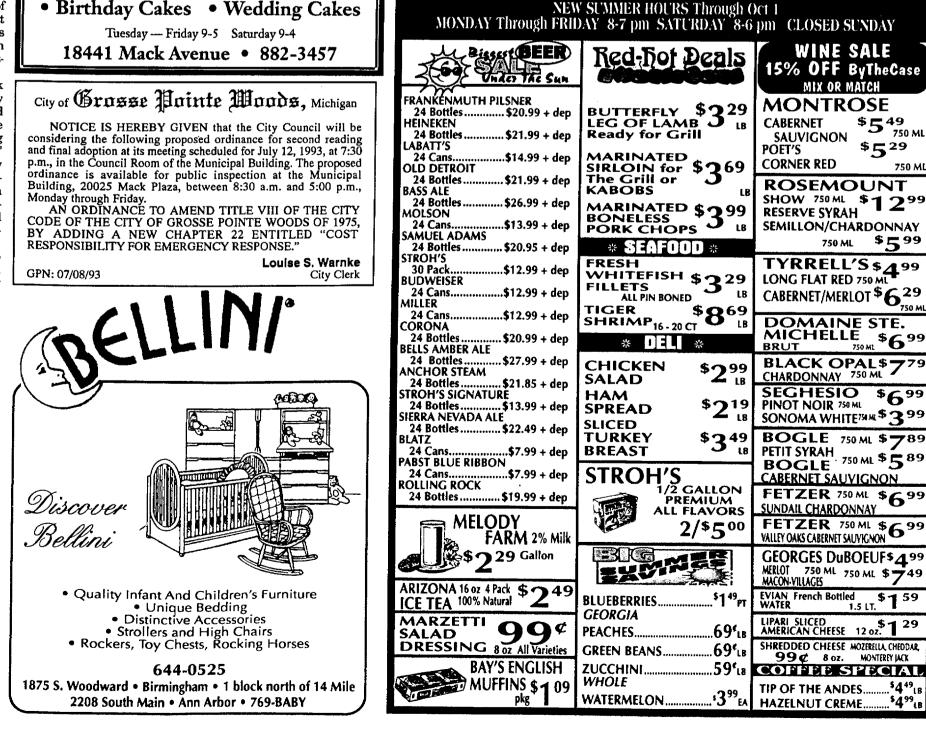

Looking at a number of residencies, a dermatologist at Madigan General Hospital said that Dr. Clarence Livingood would be a good teacher.

"I chose to come to Henry Ford Hospital because of Dr. Livingood's reputation as a teacher," Krull said. "My supervising resident in San Francisco was Bobby Brown, the (New York) Yankee's third baseman. I asked him for a letter of recommendation. At the time, I didn't know of Dr. Livingood's interest in baseball. If I had known, I would have told Bobby, 'please put down that you are a former Yankee third baseman."

Livingood would later become the team physician for the Detroit Tigers.

Krull came to Henry Ford Hospital in 1960 as a resident in dermatology and became the the chief resident in his third vear.

Pointes face teacher pay hike of 11%

Indications are that the Grosse Pointe School District will face an 11 or 12 percent increase in its teachers pay over a three-year period covered by the contract now being negotiated.

That probable result is predicated on the contract settlements already reached in five of the 16 districts in Local 1 of the Michigan Education Association whose members bargain jointly with the local school boards.

Cindy Riwney of the MEA's Local 1 office told Shirley A. McShane, education writer for the Grosse Pointe News, that the average increase in these districts amount to about 4 percent a year.

However, in Harper Woods, the only one of the five districts whose figures were available, the increases are 3 percent for the first year and 4 percent for each of the succeeding two years.

If the Grosse Pointe teachers settle at the same level, an 11 percent increase for the three-year period, that would be sharply lower than the expiring contract that called for 7 percent increases a year for three years.

However, the cost of living during the 1990-93 period of the expiring contract was substantially less than 7 percent, especially in the third year, and the forecasts would indicate a continuing 3 to 4 percent rise for next year.

Even at 11 percent, however, the pay increase would be substantial for the school district to finance at a time when the state is reducing its state aid and property owners in the Pointes are complaining about high property taxes.

Wayne County and local units of government also finance most on their costs by levying property taxes, but school property taxes take by far the largest property tax bite from Grosse Pointe homeowners.

Yet both the school board negotiators and the teachers union prefer to keep the public out of the negotiations — and thelaw apparently agrees with them. Doug West, the Grosse Pointe district's attorney, points out that public access to collective bagaining is exempt from the Michigan Freedom of Information Act, and the Michigan Court of Appeals has affirmed a lower court decision upholding that exemption.

However, prior to the opening of negotiations, Pointe voters in the recent school election campaign showed their interest in more economical operation of the schools by electing one critic of board spending and giving a second critic the third largest vote total.

Yet Ronald Tonks, director of personnel and labor relations for the district, told education writer McShane in an interview that details of each side's position in the negotiations are not being revealed and then added: "We don't want the public's influence."

Perhaps Tonks misspoke or intended to refer only to the negotiating team when he said, "We don't want the public's influence," but he appeared to be referring to the school system and its attitude toward the public.

That would be unfortunate because it is the public, after all, that will pay the bill for whatever contract is reached in the renewal negotiations.

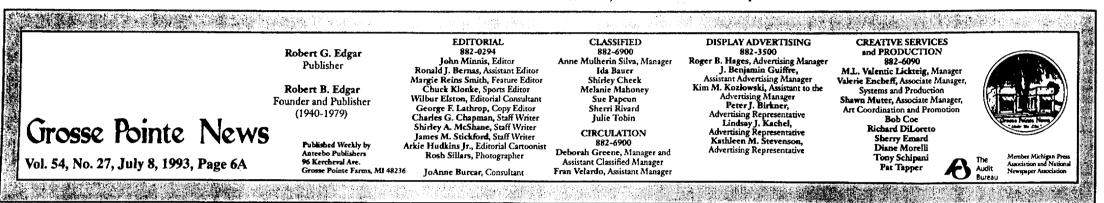

Furthermore, taxpayers' interest in the contract negotiations is unusually high this year because of the recession and that 7 percent hike in the expiring contract.

By and large, this newspaper has supported the board in most of its decisions but we are not sure that board members always pay appropriate attention to comments and complaints being voiced in the community.

An earlier instance was the action of the board majority in voting to approve the sale of the school district's administrative buildings the day after the end of an election campaign in which four of the five candidates had opposed the immediate sale.

From having observed the board's operations for some years, we know it tries to do a good job. It puts in many hours of work and it usually serves us well.

But it could pay more attention to citizens who are worried about costs of everything these days, including the mounting taxes being levied to maintain our excellent school system.

National GOP faces 2 risks

While emphasizing President Clinton's troubles in getting his programs through Congress, many Washington experts have ignored two risks that the Republican opposition also faces these days.

The risks for the GOP involve two policies: the first, the party's opposition to most of Clinton's economic proposals and, second, its support for many of Ross Perot's proposals.

If the approved Clinton stimulus package is too small to provide the economic stimulus that the president sought, and the recession endures, or worsens, the Democrats can be expected to blame the GOP for its obstructionist tactics.

With respect to Perot, the GOP may suffer an even worse fate. The Texan has been spending most of his time and money lately attacking Clinton's economic program and the GOP has made common cause with him on these and other issues.

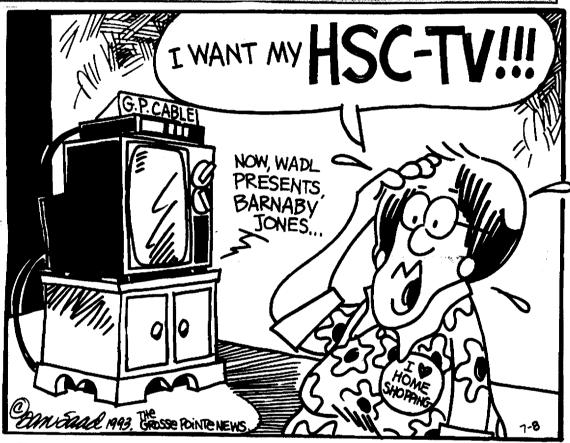

But Gerald F. Seib, writing in the Wall Street Journal, warns that the Republicans "run the risk of becoming me-too Perot boosters who could be either swallowed up or blindsided by him down the road." It was Seib who called attention to the support Kay Bailey Hutchison, the new Texas GOP senator, is giving to Perot in Washington in return for the support she received from his United We Stand organization in her victorious campaign.

In fact, in welcoming Perot to Washington with his truckload of petitions calling for reduced federal spending and political reforms, Hutchison announced she, too, is a United We Stand America member.

But Seib points to differences between Perot and Hutchison on the North American Free Trade Agreement and defense spending — and possible differences over two major Texas projects, the space station and the supercollider, which are already in trouble in Congress.

Seib concludes by warning that if Perot decides to run for president on the GOP ticket in 1996, "he could wreak havoc on the GOP establishment." That could mean that those "now building up Perot may then be trying to tear him down."

True, these are the kinds of risks political opposition parties often feel they have to take, but the Republicans can't say they haven't been warned of the possible consequences of their actions by their Bible, the Wall Street Journal.

A Monitor dies

American news media are mourning the untimely death of the Christian Science Monitor's monthly magazine, World Monitor.

The magazine sought to clarify global events by using "seasoned authorities who could tell readers what today's events meant in relation to the history that went before," editor Earl Foell wrote in the final issue.

In today's society, magazines usually seek out specialized audiences but World Monitor apparently failed to attract enough readers who appreciated its unique world view to make it a profitable publication.

Fortunately, the daily Monitor remains as a symbol of the best in American journalism although today it is no longer as complete as it once was in interpreting and reporting important developments in world and national affairs. seems to have been too easily accepted as an appropriate response in recent years.

The Gulf War is an exception to this criticism. That war, waged by the United States and its allies against Iraq, was justified by Iraq's invasion of Kuwait and its threat to other Middle Eastern countries.

However, in the Reagan administration, this country bombed Col. Qhadafi's Libya in 1986 to retaliate for that country's responsibility for blowing up a West Berlin discotheque full of U.S. GIs, an action that killed one man and caused many injuries.

Similarly, the Clinton administration's attack on Somalia a few weeks ago was in retaliation for the murder of a number of UN Pakistani peacekeepers by Somalian warlords.

In these cases, as well as in the recent firing of more than 20 missiles into Iraq, innocent women and children died as a result of bombing ordered by the U.S. government in retaliation for actions by those foreign leaders.

We hold no brief for the leaders of Libya and Iraq or the warlords of Somalia, but we think there must be better ways to pressure these men in peacetime, whatever their crimes against humanity and their own people, than to use bombing techniques that kill many civilians.

A joint international action, even though it might lead to war, would spare this nation the obloquy of going it alone and using bombing techniques that kill civilians in peacetime — but still do not eliminate the real enemy. Atrium owners explain bid for liquor license

To the Editor:

We address this letter to you with the hope that you will consider publishing it in the next edition of the Grosse Pointe News. As principals of the Tea Room On The Hill, doing business as the Atrium Espresso Cafe, located at 131 Kercheval, we have applied to the State Liquor Control Commission for a Class C liquor license. The City of Grosse Pointe Farms must approve and recommend our application prior to the state completing its investigation and issuance of a license.

As in most instances where one organization or group of individuals is attempting to grow, there will always be detractors. Such is the case with our application for a license.

As noted, we hope that you will publish our letter so that our true intentions may be clearly articulated to the community, and to the merchants, business and professional people in residence on the Hill. We want everyone to have a clear and undistorted view of our plans.

A little history to start. I, Pauline Palazzolo, was the former tea director of the Townsend Hotel, and had expressed my desire to open a tea room in the Grosse Pointe area, as many former afternoon tea customers of the Townsend were from the Pointes. My cousin and longtime friend Bernard Licata suggested we explore the opportunity. To make a long story short, we decided to start our business with the Espresso Cafe, which we have been operating since early January this year, and grow into the tea room serving afternoon tea in the English tradition. That quickly brings us to the point of requesting a Class C liquor license from the state, and the necessary approvals via the city and our friends and neighbors in the community.

We as the principals of Tea Room On The Hill, presently doing business as the Atrium Espresso Cafe, have expressed our disappointment that city council has delayed its decision to grant us a license when the matter was initially brought before council. At the same time, we understand council's need to be diligent in assuring that in doing so it will be in service to the community as a whole.

The following information is for your readership, the people, the community, in the hope that they will express their opinion in this matter to the mayor and members of council.

The cafe intends to begin offering formal afternoon tea as soon as possible after a liquor license is issued. The primary reason a full Class C liquor license is requested is that the cafe wishes to offer champagne and still wines as well as ports, sherries and other dessert wines which in some cases are of alcoholic content beyond the limitations of a tavern license. Additionally, having a full Class C license will accommodate and enhance the cafe's opportunities to host private parties.

The forward plan for the cafe is to then grow into being open evening hours. The intent of evening hours is to offer a relaxed, friendly atmospehre where friends may gather to enjoy classical music, espresso, cappuccino, lattes, other coffees, and desserts, as well as fine wines. The forward plan also includes private parties.

The cafe is and will continue to be somewhat unique in that it is located in a non-smoking facility at 131 Kercheval and will Jennifer Fasulo of Grosse Pointe Park will participate this summer in the Michigan State board of education summer institute for the arts and sciences at Madonna University.

Fasulo is the daughter of Anne Marie Fasulo and was a student at Our Lady Star of the Sea High School. She is a National Honor Society member who is on an academic scholarship.

The program begins next week when 100 Michigan high school sophomores and juniors will arrive at Madonna University. Selected from among 1,200 applications statewide, more than 800 students will participate in the institute.

Projects the students will undertake include MTV meets MU for music video production, featuring local band Voodoo Hippies, who will show studucing a music video.

Students also will participate in sign language and artisitic interpretation for the deaf, including lessons in American Sign Language and exploring issues of the handicapped.

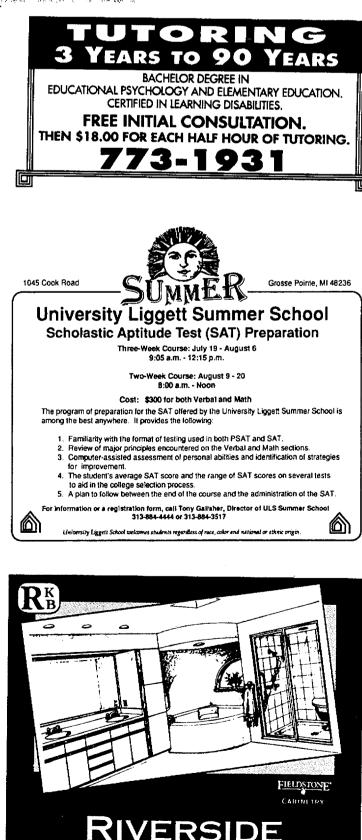

Students also will study Japanese language and culture, molecular genetics and genetic enginnering, political science of international relations, Great Lakes water analysis, printmaking, architecture a

A gift of class

The class of 1993 at Grosse Pointe South High School raised $2,500 to help pay for the cost of constructing a brick and limestone sign identifying the school at the corner of Grosse Pointe Boulevard and Fisher. Dale Ehresman of Ehresman Associates Architects, said his firm worked closely with the seniors to design a sign that would be harmonious with the 65-year-old school's architecture. The 17-by-3-foot sign is constructed of bricks and limestone closely matched to the school building. The insignia is carved in Roman lettering to match the original school name carved in the stone above Cleminson Hall. Edward V. Monahan Inc. contractors coordinated the project, The Pointe Asphalt Paving Co. donated the concrete foundation and the J.C. Cornillie Co. provided masonry products.

Register now for next school year

Students who expect to enroll in Grosse Pointe North High School for the first time for the 1993-94 school year, may do so Monday, Aug. 9, and Monday, Aug. 16. The dates are for all students transferring from parochial or private school or those who have recently moved into the Grosse Pointe Public School district.

Call the office of the assistant principal, Thomas Teetaert, at 343-2205 any day after Tuesday, July 27, from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m.

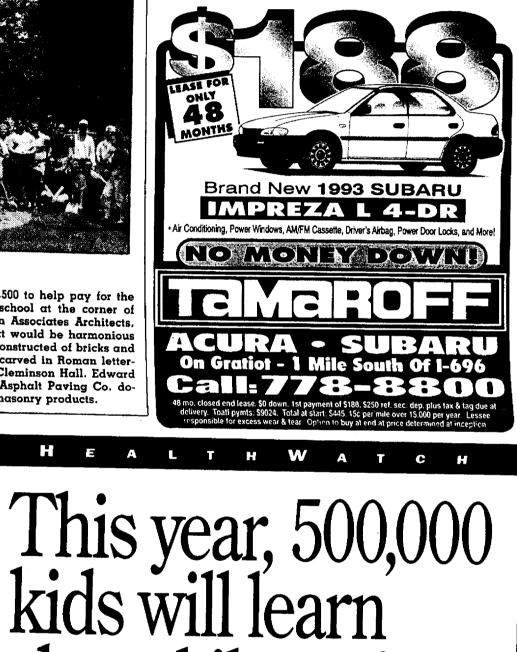

Those enrolling are requested to bring a birth certificate, the student's social security card and a copy of their school record. If a school record is not available, a copy of the latest report card would be helpful in making the appropriate course selections.

In-line skating taught

More and more people are participating in one of today's fastest growing activities - inline skating or "Rollerblading."

If you or your child have wanted to join them, this is the chance to learn how safely, and at minimal cost. The Neighborhood Club and the City Rollers will offer lessons at the Neighborhood Club during July and August.

Classes will meet on Saturday mornings in the Neighborhood Club parking lot. Separate classes for beginning adults and beginning children are available. Classes for intermediate skaters will combine children and adults. The instructor is accredited by the International In-line Skaters Association. For those who do not have skates and protective gear, equipment can be rented.

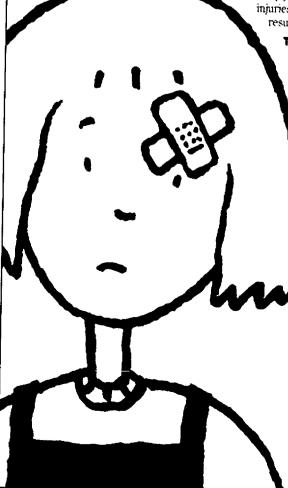

The first session of four classes begins July 10. The fee is $35 a session. All participants must have a Neighborhood Club membership. Registration may be made in person or by mail at the Neighborhood Club, 17150 Waterloo St., Grosse Pointe, 48230. For additional information call 885-4600.

The hard facts

Every year, scores of children are treated for serious head injuries caused by bike accidents. Even a simple fall can result in a concussion, and possibly brain damage.

The importance of blke helmets

A well-made bicycle helmet provides invaluable protection. Encourage your child to use one by wearing one yourself. Kneepads, elbow pads and tough jeans also help absorb impact.

No monkey business

Stress the importance of bike safety to your child. No curb jumping and no friends on the handlebars. Kids should walk their bikes across intersections. And they should stay off oversized bikes; they're a common cause of accidents.

A final note

To receive a free bike reflector, call our Physician Referral and Information Service at 1-800-237-5646. To learn more about these and other health issues, tune into our HealthWatch program, weekdays at 5:55 a.m. and 5:27 p.m. on WJR, 760 AM.

Obvious often isn't

The nightmare of every 5. year-old child in Erie, Pa., recently came true. A lion escaped.

The animal ran amok and was spotted cruising through parking lots of fast-food restaurants, messing up the neighbors' lawns and scaring the socks off motorists on the interstate.

Erie's public safety department hurried to broadcast a warning, as well it should.

"A lion is loose," it announced. Obviously, the public needs to know things like this. Some PR overachiever, striving for precision, went on the air with additional information. "The escaped lion is wearing a red collar and two gold bells," the spokesperson said. Pennsylvania state trooper T.J. Abbate, a keen observer of the obvious, pointed out that no further description of the lion was necessary.

"If anyone sees a lion," Abbate said, "it's probably the one we're looking for." Obviously.

The nightmare of every pop manufacturer recently came true thanks to someone in Tacoma, Wash. He claimed he found a hypodermic needle in a can of diet pop. He raised a local ruckus which quickly escalated into a full-blown 23-state national ruckus.

CHVY-ML -1. State 1. North State American dream just may not cut it

Maybe it's the time of year. Or maybe because so many firms are laying off older workers. Maybe it's just because reporters like writing about people who live out their dreams.

Whatever. The fact is the papers seem full of stories about people who are breaking out of the mold. People who don't want to sit on the porch and rock or play golf retirement village. Instead, they're joining the Peace Corps or sailing away or becoming a priest or moving to a Pacific island. Lots of different ideas, bound by the common thread that they're doing what they want to do. Also tied by the thread of envy. "I wish I could do that," says everybody who hears their story. Not realizing that the choice that seems so impossible to them was the same choice the adventurers had to make. The choice can mean giving up the usual components of the American dream (career, wealth, fancy house, retirement in Florida) for the less-tangible values of the personal dream (adventure, insights, valuing experience over the material). It's not a choice lots of people seem willing to make. The need for status and financial security is so ingrained that many feel they have to have them in their hip pocket before they can add adventure to the mix. I've heard it a lot. Not that I've ever sailed off into the sunset (not for more than a week, anyway), but my sister and brother-in-law did. Back in about 1970, they decided they didn't like the 9-to-5 rut. He grew a beard, they bought a little boat — but it didn't help. Suburban conformism and the scramble for material goodies still weighed heavily. So they sold all their stuff. And it was a surprising amount, although they'd only been married a few years: house, lawnmower, furniture, appliances, boat, car. It all went.

It floated free the next day. but they didn't make it all the way out of the harbor before a navigational error stranded them on the rocks. It also put a hole in the bottom of the boat. By the time they reached Detroit, the dream was wearing a little thin around the edges. They put the boat in storage, and spent a few months beguiling the cocktail circuit with their adventures. Then they got a camper.

Penny Marshall, current movie producer-director, came to the Hill last week. Assistant editor Ronald J. Bernas chatted worldwide sales that would stagger many industrial nations two or three decades later. The Toyoda firm was struggling to rebuild for the third time in 40 years, but faced bankruptcy. The Korean War began and our industry, weakened by steel, coal, electrical, telephone and auto plant strikes, was slowly creaking back to produc-tion. Instead of disturbing this economic rebirth the decision was made to give Toyoda millions and a contract to build recon cars and trucks, rushing them to Korea in just six months, a production marvel.

More orders went to Japanese industry, for motors, tools, generators and the new firm, now named Toyota, was off and running. Also I never knew that in late 1928 through 1936, both GM and Ford dominated the Japanese market for cars, creating a tough competition, but lending a learning hand to their fledgling industry. It's all in a great "History of Toyoda" loaned to me by the Midwest PR director John McCandless, a Navy Reserve captain and former Chrysler executive.

Nature's music

As I was walking, I did spy A teenage jogger sprinting by 11.11.1 His eyes were fixed, his focus clear His attention was tuned to the "thing" in his ear.

I listened to the chirping birds The funny sounds the squirrels call words I heard the breeze as it teased the leaves And watched the sun sneak through the trees

I thanked my God for the gifts of the day For family and health and a sense of fair play For friends and eyes and ears to enjoy For the freedom to walk and not need a toy

Because Nature's music is all that I need No rock concert blaring, no handsome white steed A casual walk in a safe neighborhood Is all I require to make me feel good.

Then they ordered a VW camper, picked it up in Germany, and started driving. They drove through Scandina-

Europe, parts of the Middle East, and stopped when they got to Greece, because it was warm. Eventually, they planned to continue on to India, but after a year in Greece, they had a baby and Kirk's mother died. So they came home.

After an experience like that, you might think American comforts would look pretty good. But, in their case, at least, you'd be wrong. What they had seen was a different view of life. And they didn't think people in the consumer society seemed any happier than the poorer people they'd come to know.

In the succeeding 20 years, they've lived simply, worked for themselves rather than others, and made travel a priority. Almost every year, they put it all on hold and go away for a few months.

"I wish I could do that." everyone says when they hear about it. They don't understand that they can just do it.

Of course, not every dream lives up to its advance billing. My friends Doug and Betty decided to just do it. They (or at least Doug) had always wanted a boat. Maybe they thought they'd sail around the world. For the last two years before he retired, they spent evenings and weekends combing marinas and boatyards for just the right boat. Their search spread wider and wider, until they eventually found their dream boat in New Hampshire.

The plan was to sail the boat back to Detroit through the New York canal system, then go down the Mississippi to the Gulf of Mexico. We all followed their preparations with interest (wishing we could do that).

What a journey. The first day, Doug fell off the boat while it was fueling. Wearing

It says here that Grosse Pointe Park has decided to disconnect residential downspouts after all. Good for them.

For one thing, the action will apparently save the city big fines from the Department of Natural Resources. The DNR has told the city that the permit to dump untreated excess water into Fox Creek won't be renewed when it expires next year.

For another, it's a good-faith move as far as the city's Detroit neighbors are concerned. The people who live along Fox Creek have suffered long enough.

The only thing I don't understand is why they're phasing it in so slowly. Residents won't have to disconnect until they sell their houses - which means the whole process will take years.

Some have claimed that the cost of disconnecting will be a burden and is the reason for the slow phase-in. Baloney. It will cost people less than $100 to do the job, and if there are more than a couple Park residents without a hundred bucks, I'll eat my hat.

Come on, people. Do it now. The new ordinance won't penalize you for getting ahead of the game.

Ed Deeb has time for kids

Last Friday, when the Detroit Tigers prepared to meet the Texas Rangers, Ed Deeb, of Grosse Pointe Shores, was honored as Hero of the Week. As the 13-season founder and leader of the Metro Detroit Youth Day, involving 12,000 kids, 140 contributing corporations and 60 participating youth groups going to Belle Isle each year he was loudly hailed and applauded by fans and players. Many athletes join in the games, signing autographs, holding sports clinics, receiving awards during the day, slated this year on Wednesday, July 14.

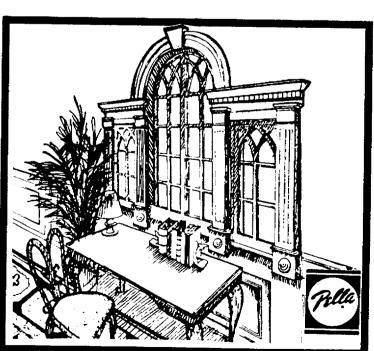

Deeb, as president and CEO of the Michigan Food and Beverage Association, chair of the board of Eastern Market Merchants Association and president of the Michigan Business and Professional Association, won from President George Bush the 1991 Presidential Point of Light Award for his youth work. Other major Deeb activities include the Boys and Girls Clubs, United Way, Boy Scouts, United Community Services, plus others.

continue to offer a nonsmoking environment.

May we state also that the cafe has the extensive support from almost all of the other merchants as well as the professional community on the Hill. Many letters have already been written to the mayor and council in support of approval. Additionally, the cafe has the support of women's groups and other women-owned businesses. The cafe is a 50 percent woman-owned venture.

The cafe's detractors have characterized the cafe, given a liquor license, as a "neighborhood bar." The community may rest assured this is not our intent. Our intent is as stated in this letter, and our statements of record to city council.

We would encourage the Grosse Pointe News readership to voice their opinion loudly and promptly to the mayor and members of council regarding their approval of a license to the Atrium Espresso Cafe. This matter is on the agenda and will come before council on Monday, July 12.

We thank you and the Grosse Pointe News for publishing this letter, as we believe the matter of granting a liquor license is an issue of community concern, and not one to be taken lightly.

Snappy about stolen turtle

To the Editor:

My family visits Lou's Pet Shop at Eight Mile and Mack regularly. My son and I were there on Saturday, June 19, to purchase food for one of our pets when we noticed that the employees were upset. When we inquired, they explained that a turtle had been stolen from the front window display. Unfortunately, this was not the first time a turtle had been stolen.

Lou's Pet Shop is a responsible pet store and does not sell turtles under 4 inches because there is a law forbidding it for health reasons. There is a sign clearly posted stating this restriction.

The people at Lou's Pet Shop are kind, knowledgeable and friendly people, never too busy to help out with any problems we have with our pets.

I realize that kids are probably responsible for this but nonetheless stealing is stealing and it truly is unfortunate that this type of thing occurs to such a nice establishment. If only these individuals realized the front window display is there for all customers to enjoy.

No easy solutions

To the Editor:

On June 30, my eightyear tenure on the Grosse Pointe board of education ended. Needless to say, I followed the recent school board election with great interest. I listened at the League of Women Voters forum, read candidate interviews in the local papers and read all published responses to questions presented to school board candidates.

The anti-tax, anti-spending rhetoric worked successfully in this campaign, a sign of the times. However, I do not know one specific measure that would be taken to cut school expenditures. It is also quite interesting that candidates would maintain 389 St. Clair when the majority of the board believes that it is one way to reduce costs and downsize the system. Where would money to renovate 389 St. Clair come from the existing school budget without increased costs? What program or project would be cut?

I was somewhat confused by the June 17 editorial in this newspaper which states, "the broader question raised by the election is will the board increase the use of the business practices and analytical approaches that the candidates had recommended." What does that mean?

(Mr. Andrews has raised one item, staff development account, that he doesn't like the way it was reported in the budget document. Would he cut staff development funds?)

Also, in the editorial it states that Mr. Taylor urged "cutting overhead and eliminating excess administrative costs.' Where? How much money will be saved by this? Where are the specifics? "... mobilizing more volunteers" Where does that save money? Grosse Pointe boasts of hundreds of volunteers in its schools, libraries and community education programs. "Seek out advice from community business people." Where does that save money?

We have Vocational Education Advisory Council, Superintendent's Advisory Council, Business Partnerships and strategic planning action teams on building and site where many business people provide input and support. Where are the specifics that would be different from what is done now?

If I've learned anything in the last eight years, it is that there are no easy solutions. The board is all too aware of attempting to balance quality programs with escalating property taxes. Reducing costs is one main reason for the sale of 389 St. Clair.

The superintendent, Dr. Shine, requested no salary increase for next year which the board granted. (That news article was one paragraph long on the back page.) Had the board given a salary increase to the superintendent I'm sure it would have made the front page.

Next year's general and debt fund budget increase is 2.5 percent. (Total tax levy will not take place until September after employee contracts have been negotiated.) We have not had to lay off staff or cut any programs.

I challenge Grosse Pointers to look around at surrounding communities to see the serious employee layoffs and program cuts needed to reduce budget deficits.

Our school system continues to try to respond to FICA recapture ($5 million), teacher retirement fund ($700,000) and lost categorical state aid (special education, etc.). The board fully understands the economic realities of negotiating a teachers' contract this summer. Additionally, we have no idea what the state will do to us next in the form of recapturing dollars that once went to educating Grosse Pointe students.

We are now living with a president who found it easier to be a candidate who told people what they wanted to hear critical of everything than to be a leader who must step up to difficult decisions and stand by them. We continue to hear that special interest groups can no longer control political policy.

Don't let it happen here in Grosse Pointe. There are 40,000 registered voters in Grosse Pointe. There were only 3,500 citizens who voted in the recent school board election. We can and must do better; the quality of our schools and community depends upon it.

Carol B. Marr Grosse Pointe Farms Attendents

overzealous? To the Editor:

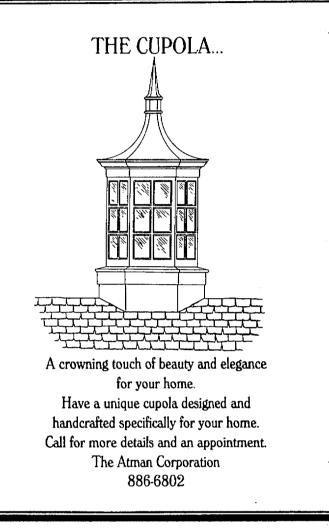

I shopped at the Something Special shop on the Hill one morning, and dutifully put enough money in the meter to allow for 30 minutes of shopping in the store. I returned to my car at 11:17, exactly 5 minutes past the alloted time, to find a ticket for $5 as a reward for my efforts to be law abiding and continue shopping in the community. Even though my watch did not agree with your meter, I am still being punished.

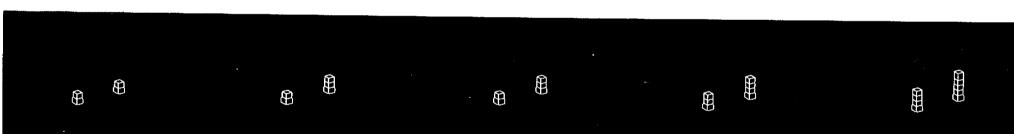

I find that the parking meter attendents are entirely too zealous in the pursuit of offenders, and it has gotten to the point where they are driving shoppers away to other sites where the cost of shopping isn't so high.

The shops do their best to provide interesting and correctly priced merchandise to encourage shoppers. But at the same time the city does its best to drive us away.

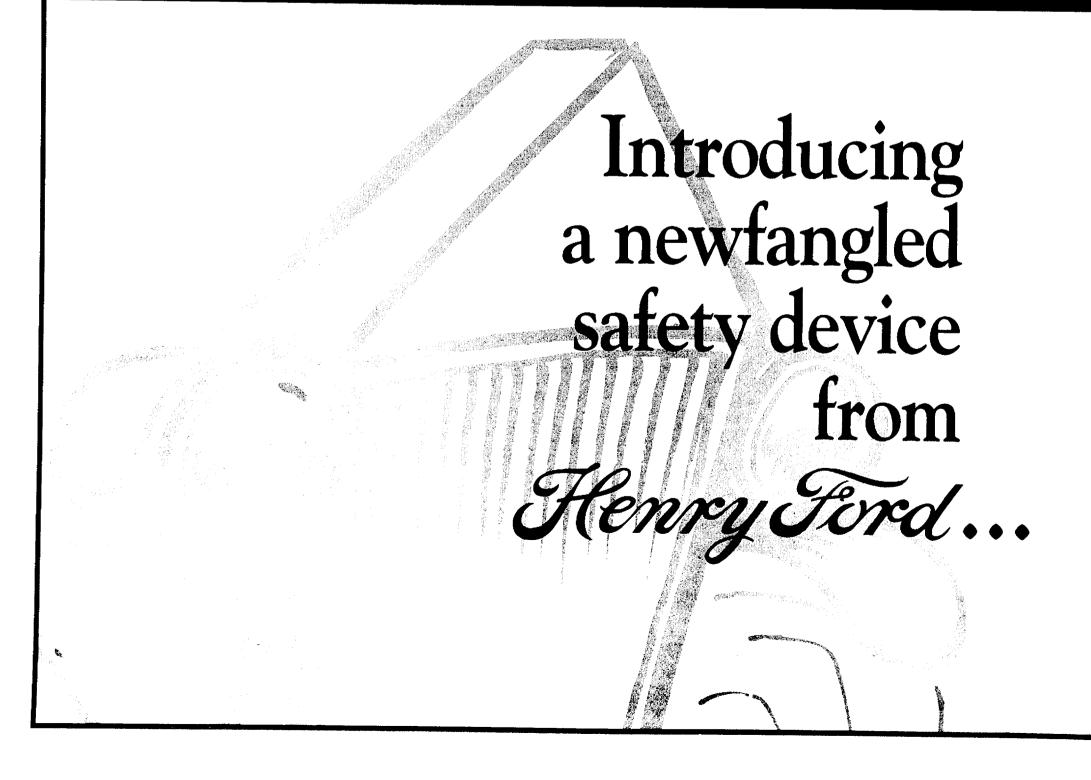

My fine has been paid and my letter has been written, but it will be a long time before I return to the Hill to take my chances with the vagaries of the parking meters and their overeager attendents. Ann McDonald

July the temptress lures us to enjoy her bountiful favors

Hang up your sweaters and throw open your doors. Summer is finally here.

Meteorologists proclaim June 22 as the arrival of summer but pragmatists know differently. They know that June is a flirt, warm, fragrant and lovely one day, cool, rainy and sloppy the next. July fulfills every promise of summer.

July days awaken, freshened by the cool night bathed in the glory of the rising crimson sun, melodious with the trilling of flitting birds, verdant, fragrant with dew rising from rainbowhued blossoms.

July is a temptress, a siren, an enticement. Gaudy with color, voluptuously warm, seductively perfumed, it lures even the most reluctant stay-inthe-house to come forth and enjoy her favors. July is summer in all its glory and promise.

That organization, known as Families Against Diabetes, is involved in a statewide effort to raise funds in support of research projects that are dedicated to finding a cure for diabetes. The group also aids its members by sharing information on current diabetes research and breakthroughs that occur throughout the world.

So far, the community response to the efforts of "Families" has been overwhelmingly supportive.

'Katie's school (Monteith on Cook Road) has been very supportive of her and her diabetes, especially with things such as her snack time and getting her food that she is able to have," McPharlin said. "They really make her feel more comfortable, so she doesn't feel so much like the Lone Ranger."

"Families," which the Mc-Pharlin's have just recently joined, was originally formed by Jerry Pauzus of Southgate and Jim Coogan of Allen Park.

Because just about everybody is affected by diabetes in one way or another, convincing local retailers to sponsor "Families" fundraisers has not been difficult, according to Pauzus, whose son Daniel also has diabetes.

"It's amazing, there's so many people who have diabetes, and they're so happy to something to fight it," Pauzus said.

"Families" also raised money during the Labor Day parade in Detroit. It was the first time that any organization has collected money at the parade, Coogan said.

"The Diabetes Research Institute is looking at our Labor Day drive and trying to notify other groups in cities like New York and Chicago, where the parades are huge, about the money that we raised, " Coogan said.

"Families" is planning to collect money again at trus year of Labor Day parade, Coogan said. A table will be set up at Filestrical Worker's Hall able to monitor the mother's the bits and regulate the social near Tiger Stadium.

GM's Durant—super salesman who wound up runnng a bowling alley

The nameplate upon which William Durant built his General Motors automotive empire was the honored marque on Buick's 90th anniversary at this year's Eyes on the Classics at the Edsel & Eleanor Ford House.

Buick kicked off its anniversary festivities earlier this year at the North American Auto Show at Cobo Center by displaying a meticulously restored 1905 Buick Model C, the fourth-oldest Buick known to exist. It was also at Eyes on the Classics.

The 1905 Model C Buick was a five-passenger touring car powered by the two-cylinder valve-in-head engine which convinced William Durant to get into the automobile manufacturing business.

Unlike most of the early automotive pioneers - David Dunbar Buick, for example ---William Durant was not a tinkerer or a mechanic or an inventor. He was a salesman, a superb salesman who could, in the words of one associate, "charm the birds from the trees." And he had dreams of empire.

Grandson of a Michigan governor and a self-made millionaire in the horse-drawn carriage manufacturing business, Durant did not like the new automobiles that were beginning to appear around his home town of Flint. They were noisy and smelly, he said, and they frightened the animals.

His feeling that the new machines were obnoxious was not a reaction against something that might threaten his Durant-Dort Carriage Co. in Flint, largest maker of horse-drawn carriages in the country. He was a success, no doubt about it. a millionaire several times over. He did not fear innovation, he thrived on it.

In fact, he drove a steampowered Mobile car in 1902, not because he might want to buy one, but because he might want to sell them. He was unimpressed with it and with automobiles generally. Until, that is, he drove a car in 1904 built by David Dunbar Buick.

Buick was an inventive fellow who had made a fortune in the plumbing business, largely because he figured out how to porcelainize cast iron for tubs and sinks. He began to manufacture gasoline engines in 1900 and decided to design an automobile. But his business foundered. He tinkered a lot, but did not produce cars commercially.

In 1903. Benjamin and Frank Briscoe decided to get into the automobile business on a remarkable adventure of empire building in which he created General Motors, lost it. then created Chevrolet and used that auto maker to regain control of GM After achieving success with the Buick car, Durant formed General Motors in New Jersey in 1908 and it bought Buick. With breathtaking speed, Durant's new GM acquired Oldsmobile, Cadillac and Oakland (later to be Pontiac), plus some supplier firms and a few lesser auto makers. In its first years of existence, GM had put together all of its current carproducing divisions except Chevrolet.

Not all of Durant's ventures were successful and, in 1912, GM was taken over by bankers after getting into financial difficulties. Ousted from GM, Durant kept active in the auto business, starting a number of firms, including Chevrolet Motor Co. in partnership with Louis Chevrolet.

Durant met Louis and Arthur Chevrolet when they came to America as part of a French racing team. (Louis was the more aggressive and more successful race driver of the two, so the prudent Durant hired Arthur as his chauffeur.)

Louis Chevrolet had built a high-quality car with his name on it. While Chevrolet was visiting Europe in 1913, Durant changed the design to a smaller car in an attempt to achieve

By Richard Wright

Meanwhile, Durant's Chevrolets were a great sales success. The company grew rapidly and Durant used profits to buy up GM stock. GM, meanwhile, was coming back out of trouble under the guidance of Charles Nash, a Durant protege who had formerly headed Buick and was president of GM, and the new head of Buick, Walter P. Chrysler.

By the time of the board meeting in 1916, Durant's Chevrolet had bought up almost half of the outstanding GM stock. Nash, unaware of that, called Durant aside before the meeting. The trust agreement was running out and the majority of the board had agreed to renew it, Nash told Durant, "so let's not have any trouble.'

"There won't be any trouble, Charlie," Durant said. "We won't renew the agreement, but there won't be any trouble. It just so happens that I own General Motors.'

Durant nominated Pierre du Pont, who was trusted by the bankers, as chairman. Chevrolet was to be merged into GM. By the following May, the deal was complete and Durant had GM again. He met with Nash.

"Well, Charlie, you're through," he told his former employee who he felt had thrown in his lot with the bankers. Nash later took over the ailing Jeffery Motors, which became Nash, then Nash-Kelvinator and, in 1954, merged with Hudson to form American Motors.

He then gave a big raise (from $50,000 a year to $500,000) to induce the thencurrent head of Buick, Walter P. Chrysler, to stay with the auto maker. Chrysler stayed until 1920, when Durant's bubble burst again and he once more lost GM.

regained GM was a division of the board of directors - six named by Durant, six by the bankers and three to be neutral. Pierre S. du Pont, head of the chemical giant, became chairman, nominated by Durant and trusted by all. One of the neutrals was John Jacob Raskob, a close du Pont aide. In the years ahead, Johnny Raskob turned out to be Durant's most powerful ally in his empire-building spree.

With the end of World War I came boom times for the auto business. Durant began buying companies, including a 60 percent interest in Fisher Body. In 1919, GM of Canada and General Motors Acceptance Corp. were created. Encouraged by Raskob, who was able to secure financing with du Pont money and connections, Durant continued to expand GM's empire, ignoring more cautious voices.

Durant ordered construction of the General Motors Building on West Grand Boulevard in Detroit, which was to be the largest office building in the world. (In fact, it was to be called the Durant Building and it has the initial "D" at its corners near the top in the manner of Napoleon, who decreed the letter "N" be put on buildings erected in Paris during his reign.) Irked by Durant's management style, Chrysler quit. The action shook GM.

Car sales declined, inventories began mounting, the bond market was weakening and GM was in a financial bind. GM's stock price slid, despite heavy buying by Durant with his personal fortune in an effort to prop up the stock. He bought on margin, often only 10 percent.

Fearful that his personal failure would be tied to GM, which Part of the deal when Durant itself owed $80 million to the banks, the bankers demanded that Durant resign. Raskob and du Pont came up with a proposal to buy Durant out. Forced to sell at $9.50 a share, he had lost about $100 million of his own money.

The deal was consummated and he resigned on a Friday. Monday, GM opened at $16.50. What Durant had failed to do with his millions of dollars, he finally did by resigning. GM was turned around.

The Depression finally did in William Durant. About two months after his final ouster from General Motors in late 1920, Durant incorporated Durant Motors. He had no car, but he had the faith of investors and goodwill of dealers and before production began in 1921 of the Durant Four, he had 30,000 dealer orders. The next year, he brought out a lowpriced car, the Star, to compete with Ford and Chevrolet.

Durant was on his way again. He added nameplates the Flint, the Eagle, the Princeton and the Mason truck. To compete with Cadillac, Packard and Lincoln, he acquired Locomobile. He gobbled up supplier firms. In 1927, he announced formation of Consolidated Motors, clearly intended to rival GM. It would include the Star, Moon, Chandler, Gardner, Hupmobile, Jordan and Peerless. But it never became a reality, because Durant was again in financial trouble.

A major figure in the bull market of the '20s, Durant had amassed a $50 million fortune by 1927, but displayed his old weakness of losing interest in day-to-day management of his company in favor of empire building and stock manipulation.

When the crash came in '29, Durant was hit hard. In 1933, Durant Motors went broke. He was down, but not out.

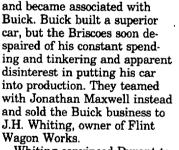

He still had a plant in Lansing and he signed a deal to build and market the Mathis, a small French car. But in the depths of the Depression, it never got off the ground. In 1936, William Durant filed for bankruptcy, claiming debts of $914,231 and assets of $250.

In 1940, he opened a bowling alley in Flint, the North Flint Recreation Center. Always thinking big, he had plans for 50 such centers across the country. He suffered a massive stroke in 1942, shortly after a trip to Nevada to investigate a venture in mining cinnabar, a mercury ore.

He and his wife moved to New York, where they lived quietly, supported in part not by the General Motors he had created, but by four long-time associates - C.S. Mott, R.S. McLaughlin, John Thomas Smith and Alfred P. Sloan. Durant died in that apartment on March 18, 1947.

Ninety years ago, Durant was worried that people would not be able to pronounce "Buick."

Whiting convinced Durant to drive the Buick car, which featured a valve-in-head engine. Durant was impressed.

In 1904, Durant reorganized Buick Motor Co. and embarked

City Rollers keep growing

By Chuck Klonke Sports Editor

The inline skating club founded by Grosse Pointe Park resident Mark Farnen keeps right on growing.

"We're the biggest club in nen said. the country, and we've started several new projects," Farnen said of the City Rollers, which will host an International Inline Skating Association regional championship on Saturday, July 24, on the Detroit Grand Prix course on Belle Isle.

One of the new projects is a series of lessons at the Neighborhood Club, beginning Saturday, July 10.

'It's for beginning and intermediate skaters from the first ful. grade and up," Farnen said. "We'll have four certified IISA instructors."

Farnen is one of 10 instructors in the country certified at weekly television show on Levels 1 and 2 and the only one in Michigan with dual certification.

"That means I'm certified to teach stunts and racing," Far-

The Neighborhood Club classes are held at 9, 10 and 11 a.m. each of the four Saturdays in the first session. A second session will be held from Aug. 14 through Sept. 4.

'We've been running a similar program in Southfield since April," Farnen said.

Farnen said the Sunday evening skates through the Grosse Pointes continue to be success-

"We've grown from 15 to 65 skaters and they range in age from 18 to 55," he said.

The City Rollers have a Grosse Pointe Cable and the group was instrumental in the organization of an adult roller hockey league that plays its games in Southfield.

The Belle Isle race has a purse of more than $6,000 in cash and prizes.

There will be 10-and five-kilometer races for experienced skaters and a 5K novice race. Male and female divisions are offered in seven age groups from 12-and-under to 60-andover.

Registration forms for the regional are available at Bikes, Blades and Boards; Harper Sports; Bavarian Village; and Schummer's Ski Shop.

The Hornets came from behind twice in the late innings to nip Eastern Market 9-8. With the Hornets trailing 4-3 in the fifth, Jim Thornton hit a two-run single and eventually scored to give his team a 6-4 lead. Eastern Market came back with four runs in the top of the seventh to go ahead 8-6, but a two-out single by Nick Tomezak in the bottom of the inning tied the score. The Hornets won the game in the eighth as pinch hitter Randy Vasser drove in the lead run.

Ventimiglia pitched the last two innings, striking out three, to pick up the win. Eric Pierzchala collected

White Sox repeat in Park

The Grosse Pointe Park Little League Major League World Series championship is becoming the exclusive property of the White Sox.

The Sox swept the Mets in a best-of-three series to win the title for the second straight season

In the opener, the Sox built an early 9-0 lead and coasted to a 10-2 victory.

Starter Charlie Braun, who pitched three perfect innings, lined a double off the top of the right field fence, then stole third and home to give the White Sox a 1-0 lead in the first.

Ties for first

Mary Richards of Grosse Pointe Woods tied for first-place low net honors in the Third Flight of the Women's Metropolitan Golf Association tournament at Brae Burn Golf Club in Plymouth.

Richards shot a 112, corrected to 71, to match the score of Dorothy Cody of Farmington Hills.

pitch to lead off the second and he raced to third on Jonathon Keelean's sacrifice fly. Miller's single. Brendan Keelean drove in Jarboe with a perfect squeeze bunt and Tony Tocco followed with an RBI single. Braun and Colin Morawski walked to load the bases and Tocco then stole home.

The White Sox broke the game open in the third. Anthony Sivanov led off with a triple and scored on Jarboe's suicide squeeze. Miller doubled, Keelean singled and both scored on Tocco's double. Colin Bakewell faked a bunt, then lined a single to left, knocking in Tocco. Braun then hit another double off the right field wall to bring in Bakewell.

The White Sox scored their final run in the fifth. Morawski singled, stole second and third and scored when Todd Loringer, who walked, was caught in a rundown between first and second.

The Mets scored their runs in the fourth. Mark Weber led off with a walk and Charlie Norton doubled to center. Weber scored on a groundout by John Berschback and Norton came home on Trevor Szymanski's sacrifice fly. Sivanov pitched two solid innings of middle relief for the White Sox and Tocco blanked the Mets in the sixth.

Tocco and Braun closed out their careers with the White Sox in spectacular fashion in the second game by combining on a no-hitter as the Sox blanked the Mets 5-0.

Sivanov hit a bases-loaded, two-out single in the first inning to drive in Bakewell and Braun for a 2-0 lead.

The White Sox added two more runs in the second. Lukas Morawski lined a double to right-center and Mahmoud Zahriya singled to right. After Zah-riya stole second, Tocco hit a two-run single to center.

in the fifth. Miller led off with year. It won the championship a single, took second on a hit in 1990.

Matt Jarboe was hit by a by Sivanov, moved to third on a walk to Jarboe and scored on > Philip Hands, Colin Morawski and Braun also had hits for the White Sox, while Hands, Loringer and Miller played well in the field to preserve the no-hitter.

Szymanski pitched well for the Mets, while teammates Berschback, Adam Maloof, Heath Schollenberger, Paul Loccrichio, Charlie Missant and Todd Otto also had good games.

White Sox' pitchers recorded 11 strikeouts during the two World Series games and the team played errorless baseball.

MINOR LEAGUE

Purdue 4, Ohio State 0

Andrew Beer triggered Purdue's four-run rally in the third inning. Rick Landuyt, Zack Beer and Robbie Porter also scored for Purdue. Zack Beer and Jeff Schröeder combined for the shutout, while Andrew Spinney provided excellent defense. Ohio State's standouts were Tony Nouhan, Corrigan Nadon-Nichols, Greg Beyer and Oliver Votteler.

Annual tour features Grosse Pointe's best bloomers

By Margie Reins Smith Feature Editor

July 8, 1993

Six gardens and two homes will be open for the Grosse Pointe Garden Center's annual three-day tour Friday, Saturday and Sunday, July 16, 17 and 18. Visitors will be welcome from 1 to 5 p.m. each day, rain or shine and hostesses will be on hand to point out the most interesting features of each gar-den and answer horticultural questions. Complimentary refreshments will be available; and the Detroit Garden Center will set up its Upstairs Shop, with a selection of gardening supplies and craft items for sale.

"We chose six different types of gardens," said Maria Lucarelli, chairman of this year's tour. "We wanted to show how creativity and individuality can enhance any garden - large, small, elaborate or simple. Each one is unique. We also wanted to give people on the tour ideas for their own gar-dens." Lucarelli's garden, 1015 Bishop in Grosse Pointe Park, is made up of several gardens at a variety of elevations, all joined by a brick walkway.

The perennials were planned with blooming time in mind so that something is in flower every month, Lucarelli said.

The ones that will probably be in bloom for the tour include lithium, black-eyed Susans, oldfashioned pale pink hollyhocks, clematis, lavender, gladiolas, hybiscus, purple hydrangias and yarrow in shades of yellow, white and red.

A portion of Lucarelli's garden is stocked with herbs: basil, oregano, purple basil and two kinds of mint. Another grassy, sunken area is transformed into a skating rink for the family's hockey players in the winter, she said.

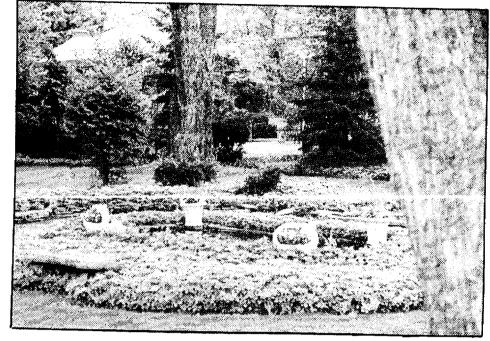

Lucarelli does all her own garden work. "I spend about four hours a day in the garden," she said, "and about six or seven hours on weekend days. My younger son does the lawn. My husband putters around sometimes.'

The garden of Jayne Kasuba and Frederick Williams, 1247 Kensington in Grosse Pointe Park, is smaller and is divided into several sections - an English garden, shade garden, rose garden, herb garden and a grape arbor — all connected by brick walkways. Large pots of blooming annuals fill in the blanks.

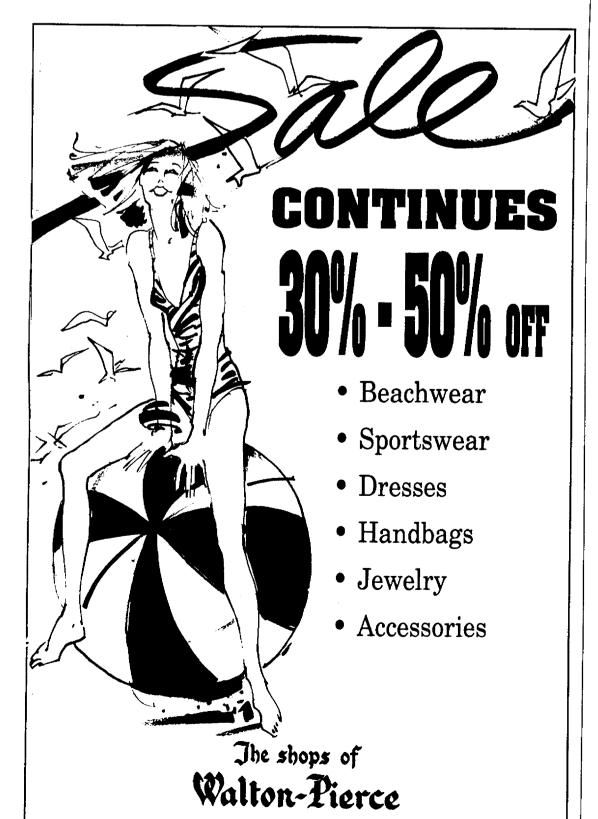

A narrow English garden stretches from sidewalk to gate at the home's side property line and is bordered by a path that leads to the back yard garden gate. The rear yard's shade garden is filled with pachysandra, coleus, bleeding heart, three or four varieties of hosta, azaleas and rhododendron.

The front yard of Jayne Kasuba and Frederick Williams, at the left, features a perennial garden along the side lot line and in-cludes coral bells, roses, astilbe and lilies.

The back yard garden of Dana Locniskar and Marie Vanerian, above, includes a pond surrounded by benches and urns filled with red and pink impatiens.

At the right, a woven basket planted with impatiens brightens a shady spot on the Grosse Pointe Garden Center's annual tour.

Many gardens on the Grosse Pointe Garden Center's annual tour contain small herb gardens, with each herb identified. The herbs above are planted around a sundial. Stone urns planted with colorful annuals like the one at the right, are popular with Grosse Pointe gardeners.

A sundial is circled by a formal herb garden; each herb is labeled.

Grape vines climb and twine over a redwood lattice that covers a brick patio sitting area. The home of Dana Locniskar and Marie Vanerian, 1004 Three Mile in Grosse Pointe Park, was designed by architect Hugh Taylor Millar in the mid-1920s. The house and the classic, elegant garden will be open on tour days. The grounds are spacious and grassy, a mixture of longestablished shrubs, large ivycovered trees and a variety of bushes. A small pond in the center of the yard is surrounded by masses of pachysan dra and huge urns filled with red and pink impatiens.

Mr. and Mrs. Jeffrey Taylor's English garden, 1176 Yorkshire, was inspired by their travels in the British Isles.

'It's small, compact, resembling an old English garden,' Lucarelli said, "all connected by brick paths and featuring high and low-growing flowers.

More than 30 perennials vie for attention in a side bed, including filipendula, coreopsis, anemone, yarrow, cone flower, phlox, baby's breath and poppies.

The main garden includes some apple trees and more than 60 species of perennials some planted specifically to attract butterflies and hummingbirds.

The 1908 farmhouse of Mr.

and Mrs. Larry Postlethwaite, 308 Rivard, was recently redecorated in shades of blue, gray and burgundy and the garden was designed to fit the house's color scheme. The house and garden will be open for the tour.

Creeping junipers, dogwoods and weeping crab trees form the background for a back yard deck, which serves as an outdoor room. Nearby is a children's play area.

"The owners tried to give the garden a southern flavor," Lucarelli said. They created a spacious front porch sitting area decorated with fragrant flowers and flower boxes. It's a place to relax, cool off and chat with the neighbors.'

A vegetable garden in the side yard boasts green peppers, tomatoes, carrots, green onions and a variety of herbs.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Greening Jr., 693 Pear Tree Lane, incorporated a miniature railroad into their back yard, complete with model train, creative lighting and special dwarf plants to fit the model's scale and recorded sounds of a working railroad.

The Grosse Pointe War Mem-orial's Trial Gardens, 32 Lakeshore, will also be open on the days of the tour.

The Grosse Pointe Garden Center was founded in 1950 to promote horticultural education and beautification in the community

HISTORIC NIAGARA-ON-THE-LAKE

Proceeds from the house and garden tour will benefit the center's horticultural education programs, help beautify the area and provide funds for scholarships for local students who wish to pursue their studies in horticulture and landscape design.

Lucarelli's co-chairman is Gail Terry.

Other committee members are Ann Cook, treasurer; Marie Mainwaring, assistant treasurer; Joyce Blumenstock, Joanna Garrett and Barbara Malley, tickets; Dorothy Smith and Betty Sorenson, hostesses; Eleanor Marsh and Valerie Pesegna, publicity; and Mary Lou and Urban Boresch, map chairmen.

Tickets are $10 on the days of the tour. Pre-sale tickets are $8 and may be purchased by calling Blumenstock at 882-8078 or the Grosse Pointe Garden Center at 881-4594.

Tickets will be for sale at the garden center's headquarters in the Grosse Pointe War Memorial Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, July 13, 14 and 15, between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m.

Tickets are also available at Cavanaugh's Office Supply, 16837 Kercheval in the Village; Grosse Pointe Florist, 174 Kerby; and Hollywood Pharmacy, 20853 Mack in Grosse Pointe Woods.

On tour days, tickets may be purchased at any of the gardens.

Five tales of mystery will mystify

Bohannon's Country: Mystery Stories

By Joseph Hansen Viking. 174 pages. $19.

"Bohannon's Country" is an engaging collection of five mystery stories by Joseph Hansen, the winner of the 1992 Lifetime Achievement Award by the Private Eye Writers of America.

With such recognition from his peers, we quite properly expect something beyond the usual run-of-the-mill work from Hansen, and we are not disappointed.

In the first story, "The Olcott Nostrum," we are immediately introduced to Hack Bohannon, "a lean man of 40, six feet tall, with a shock of Indian black hair, operated stables up here in Rodd Canyon back of Madrone on the California central coast. He boarded horses for town folk with no place to keep them, and had horses of his own for people to ride. He taught them to ride, taught their kids. For 14 years he'd been a deputy sheriff, but that had gone sour for him. He had quit, yet people kept coming to him for help and, unable to refuse, he'd taken out a private investigator's license. He favored horses over most humans, he liked a quiet life but no man had things just the way he wanted them.

Genevieve Olcott, an aboutto-retire schoolteacher from Vermont, has come across the country to settle the estate of her recently deceased aunt, and fer and room cleaner. While in she discovers that the old Ol- high school, she had fallen in cott place has been ransacked.

by the sheriff's department, cruelly leads her on. When he and together they struggle to leaves town on the rush, Molly solve a mystery involving miss- vows revenge. Years pass, and ing heirs and pranksters seek- then Molly's path crosses that ing lucrative loot, all with a of Hugh Henderson, who was tinge of danger hanging above also a high school contempothe action.

"The Owl in the Oak" concerns Alice Donovan, the perky for similar reasons-jealousyproprietor of Ye Olde Oak Tree both Molly and Hugh plan to in Madrone. She sold cheap touristy things like postcards, film, sunglasses, chewing gum, and cigarettes-an innocuous occupation, but she is found murdered with her skull smashed in by a cast-iron skillet. With the only clue a muddy size-12 shoe left at the door, Bohannon leads us on a merry chase to unearth the motive and the murderer.

Two of the five stories do not feature Hack Bohannon but take place in his locale. "Molly's Aim'' is one. Molly is a simple-minded young woman who works in a motel as a go-love with the senior big-man on She is referred to Bohannon campus, Carl Wynant, who rary. Carl Wynant unexpectedly returns to Poinsettia, and revenge themselves on Carl. However, their well-laid plans turn surprisingly awry at the last minute.

The other Bohannonless story is "McIntyre's Donald," about an old man, Raymond McIntyre, who spends his declining years looking after his bedridden, dying wife, Mar-garet. One rainy night Mc-Intyre notices a leak, and dragging himself outside with a tar bucket, he finds a ladder. Laboriously he reaches the roof where he swabs tar upon the hole. Upon coming down, his arthritic leg collapses, and falls is knocked out. Upon regaining consciousness, he discovers himself in bed, all cleaned up, and faced by a cheery young man, who introduces himself as Donald. Although a total stranger to McIntyre, Donald appears and disappears, always helping the elderly man. Mc-Intyre begins to think of the son he never had, but his musings are dashed when Lt. Gerard arrives and explains that he is on the trail of a thief who his stable helper, "an ex-rodeo had broken into a neighbor's house. Is the elusive, helpful Donald a criminal?

The final story, "An Excuse for Shooting Earl," relates how Ruthann Cartmell, the young newly-widowed wife of a wealthy rancher, approaches Bohannon for assistance in handling her rebellious stepson, Earl Cartmell, who is fighting her plans for the ranch. He apparently wishes to sell the property, which would bring vast sums from developers sists upon hanging on to the this section.

heavily to the ground where he property for, as she claims, sen timental reasons, although it would be obviously beneficial for her if she sold it. Bohannon has to cope with the mixed signals of both step-mother and step-son in trying to determine what each really wants. Hansen has a great gift for delineating character, done with swift choppy sentences which manage to flow smoothly. We can easily visualize his cohorts: George Stubbs, rider, a fat old man now, who hobbled, his bones and joints remembering long-ago breaks and sprains"; and T. Hodges, the female deputy, who is secretly in love with Bohannon, meets him for breakfast at a local eatery: "She was uneasy about it at first, but soon she was smiling with her luminous dark eyes. It was her way. She worried that her front teeth stuck out, and unless caught by surprise, she didn't often show them in a smile or a laugh."

United Way awards $450,000

The United Way for Southeastern Michigan recently awarded special grants to 14 United Way member and nonmember agencies. The grants, which total $450,000, will support innovative programs that focus on children and youth in crisis in the tri-county area. The funds are the result of the success of the 1992 Torch Drive, which raised $57.8 million in Wayne, Oakland and Macomb counties.

Agencies which received funds are: Adult Well-Being Services, Detroit, $23,180; Arab Community Center for Eco-nomic and Social Services, Dearborn, $62,000; Caring Program for Children-Michigan Health Care Education and Research Foundation, Detroit, $26,550; Catholic Social Services of Oakland County, Pontiac, $29,165; Catholic Youth Organization of the Archdiocese of Detroit, $32,061; Detroit Area Council, Boy Scouts of America, Detroit, $20,000; First Lakeshore Legal Services Inc., Clinton Township, $21,586; demonstrate different ways of Lula Belle Stewart Center Inc., incorporating herbs into the Detroit, $22,821; Merrill-Pal- landscape. Thirty-eight more volunteers are needed to meet the study's goal of 60 high-risk individuals. Men who have an elevated PSA blood test of at least four, but have a < negative biopsy are eligible. Tests for PSA have been shown to detect cancers missed by annual rectal examinations. According to Dr. Kenneth Pienta, cancer specialist at Harper Hospital, the Detroit Medical Center and assistant professor of medicine at Wayne State University, "Laboratory research suggests the 4HPR may prevent prostate cancer from developing by intervening at an earlier stage when there is a small amount of undetected cancer somewhere in the prostate." Among the current participants in the study taking 4HPR, results have shown lower PSA levels and there has been no evidence of toxicity from the drug. Individuals at risk for prostate cancer are encouraged to join the 4HPR research study at Harper Hospital. Prostate cancer, which is one of the most rapidly growing forms of the disease, is the second leading cause of death among American males. Early detection is essential to successful treatment and cure. According to the American Cancer Society, over 28,000 cases of prostate cancer will be diagnosed this year and 25,000 deaths will occur.

The Pastor's Corner Wasted lives

By the Rev. John Corrado Grosse Pointe Unitarian Church

It was a long time coming. It was a visit I wanted no, needed — to make. Leonard was the special reason for the visit.

Leonard was my classmate at John Carroll University. I heard his name in the roll call more than I heard words exchanged directly between the two of us. He was the kind of guy you'd want your son to be like.

Mostly, I remember Leonard from the dance floor. I played at many dances and weddings during those college years. Leonard and his girlfriend Nadia were at more than a few of them. As vividly as if it were yesterday, I can see Leonard, beaming smile on his face, Nadia in his arms, floating across the dance floor. The words "romance," "spring," "youth" and "joy" come to mind.

Leonard might have been one of those persons I simply lost track of if it hadn't been for the article in the John Carroll Alumnews two years after we graduated. By this time I was in the second year of my theological school training in California. My about-to-be 5-year-old daughter Carrie had developed a new serenade for all who would listen: "Row, row, row your boat gently down the stream. Merrily, merrily, life is down the drain." To that accompaniment, I read: "1st Lt. Leonard J. DaDante, '63, is the first John Carroll alumnus to die in the Vietnam War. He was 23. Ground fire by Viet Cong troops cut through the helicopter he was piloting and caused it to crash and explode about 100 miles south of Saigon. His 22-year-old wife, Nadia Merritt DaDante, who attended her husband's funeral only a week earlier, delivered his seven-pound, ten-ounce son on September 28. The baby was named for his father."

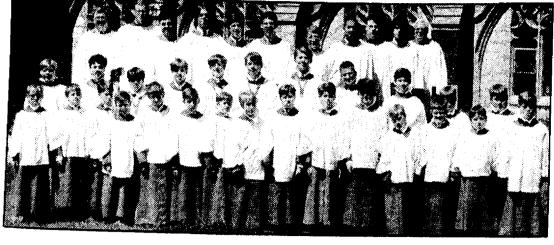

Over the next few years Leonard became something more to me in his death than he had been in his life. He became the personalizing of an ugly war. He became the dead soldier I could have been. He became the beginning of an awareness of the waste of good young lives. His name became the name after which the listing of a "killed in action" name was not just a name, but a person with a mother and father and family and friends; a person who had probably danced, certainly had done foolish human things and possibly had loved.

There is probably a Leonard in your life. He may have died in Iraq or Korea or during one of the many battles of World War II. There were Leonards in World War I and the Civil War and any other war you can think of. Leonards are dying in Bosnia right now, I'm sure.

When, on my way to preach in Midland, I visited the traveling Vietnam Memorial, it was not only Leonard I was at last visiting, but all he has come to represent. The words of poet John Ciardi come to mind: "And I would pray more good of (Leonard)/ Than I can wholly believe. I would pray/ An agreement with the United States of America/ To equal (Leonard's) living as it equals his dying."

As you clean the grill from the Fourth of July picnic, wipe the mustard from your jeans and roll up the flag, I hope you will think of the cost that has been exacted to keep that flag - or any other flag - flying.

May the times of flag-flying and flag-waving be also times of remembering. May what mourning there be, be redeemed by hope; an active hope which resists the warlike impulses that lead to beautiful young lives being, as we put it so well in the sixties, "wasted."

group meets

As the number of adults caring for their parents continues to increase, so does the need for caregiver support. Juggling obligations to parents, spouse and children can be demanding. If you are feeling isolated, overwhelmed, or experiencing difficulty making caregiving decisions, it is important to seek help for yourself.

A support group for caregivers of older adults at Henry Ford Continuing Care Center-Belmont will provide a safe atmosphere to discuss your feelings. Educational information will be provided. Speakers will discuss legal issues, diagnoses and community resources.

The group will meet Tuesdays at 7:30 p.m. in the clubroom at Henry Ford Continuing Care Center-Belmont. Contact Marla K. Ruhana, group leader, for information at 881-9556.

LSS president at First English

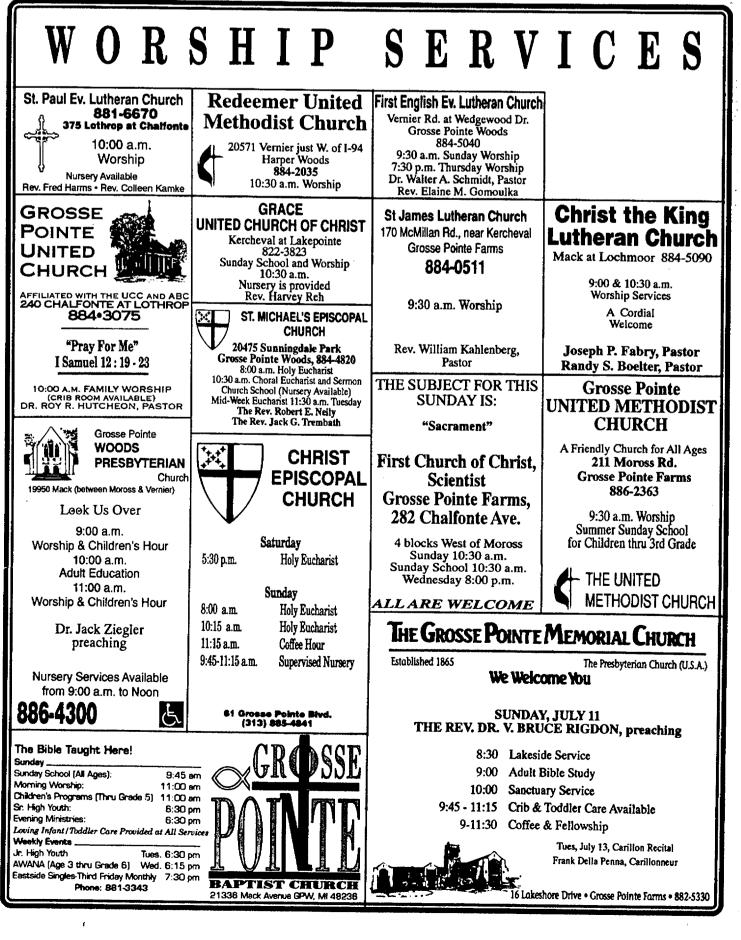

Lutheran Social Services of Michigan president Carl Thomas spoke to the congregation at First English Evangelical Lutheran Church on June 27.

Thomas, a Grosse Pointe Woods resident, has led the Detroit-based agency for 20 years, raising it to the third-largest Lutheran social service agency in the country. When Thomas became president in 1973, LSSM was in three cities and had services totaling $2.6 million. Today the agency has 56 programs in 37 cities in the Lower Peninsula and its services exceed $44 million. LSSM today is the largest nonprofit agency providing foster care in Michigan and the largest private agency placing children in adoptive homes. It also is the third-largest nonprofit agency in metropolitan Detroit.

Thomas also is vice president of the board of Lutheran Immigration and Refugee Services, a national church agency. He is a consultant to other church-related agencies across the country. Last year. Thomas was awarded the Sylvester C. Michelfelder Award for Christian Service from Trinity Lutheran Seminary in Columbus, Ohio. He also has served on the executive committee of the division of social ministry organizations for the national church, the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America.

Thomas was a founder of three national Lutheran organizations designed to help those without funds and to help church organizations in the search for funding.

Under Thomas' leadership the agency now provides adoption and foster placement; operates five nursing homes and manages 10 housing centers for older adults; manages 27 homes for people with developmental disabilities; and operates two community centers and a residence for women in trouble with the law.

Teacher: Acting can be an inmate's outlet

By Kathleen Ryan Special Writer

When Joe Grigaitis made his directorial debut two years ago it can be said that it was definitely before a captive audience.

Grigaitis, a freelance lighting designer who is technical director for Grosse Pointe South's stage plays, donates his theatrical expertise to a unique therapy program at the Huron Valley Mens Correctional Facility in Ypsilanti.

Developed by Diane Kneffel, a music therapist at the prison, the program incorporates a stage play into the therapy given emotionally impaired prisoners in hopes of ultimately mainstreaming them into the general prison population.

'Breaking into directing in the Detroit area is very difficult and I saw this as a way of gaining experience," Grigaitis said. "But this program is also very personally rewarding, not to mention extremely challenging."

Grigaitis' first director's job was a prison production of "The Caine Mutiny" in 1991. It was considered such a success that Kneffel asked him back this summer.

How it's funded

Funding for the theater program at Huron Valley was provided by Very Special Arts Michigan, a nonprofit organization headquartered in Royal Oak. Its main purpose is to provide exposure to the arts for "special" populations, including the emotionally and mentally impaired.

According to Diane Kneffel, music therapist at Huron Valley, a grant from Very Special Arts was used to pay royalties and Joe Gregaitis' expenses.

'We can't thank Very Special Arts enough," Kneffel said. "This project is so important to the prisoners involved. For some prisoners, this is the first time they have been able to feel good about themselves for the right reason.

"As a result, we see a marked improvement in their behavior while they're in the pre-production stages. They know that any behavior problems would result in them being dropped from the cast. It's a privilege and they know it.'

Samuel Barber Symphony No. 2 and "Adagio for Strings," and George Bristow Symphony in F Sharp minor

Recorded by the DSO under the direction of Neeme Jarvi By Alex Suczek Special Writer

Continuing its successful set of CDs by the DSO under Neeme Jarvi, Chandos now offers the fourth in Jarvi's American Series (the sixth in all). Regulars at orchestra hall will remember vividly the exciting performances of these works on the program last season and it is nice to report that the excitement has been captured very effectively on disc.

Headliner on this CD is Samuel Barber's Symphony No. 2. It has the distinction of having been destroyed by the composer, who was his own severest critic.

A forgotten copy survived, however, and it is fortunate. The work is a beautifully crafted opus and has many inspired moments.

Moreover, it is a fine example of Barber's individual-the performance. As any good interpretation must, the DSO under Jarvi's direction breathes strong conviction into the music and gives it a moving performance. This is a glowing example of the remarkable rapport between the orchestra and its musical director. The performance shines with artistic polish.

The reading of Barber's well known "Adagio for Strings" that follows has a force and drive that is unusual in performances of this work. It is a refreshing addition to a very familiar work and perhaps even a reflection of Jarvi's maturing un-

Envelope codes - After mentioning this to a friend of mine last night and finding that she thought it a good idea, I decided to pass it on.

When I am paying bills, I use the upper right-hand corner of the envelope (where the stamp will go) to write when the bill is due. When it needs to go in the mail, I put the stamp on and mail it.

I also use that corner when I am addressing my Christmas cards - I put an "L" or a "P" depending on whether it needs a letter enclosed and/or a picture.

I also use this device when addressing birthday or anniversary cards. I write the date of the occasion.

I have used this technique for years. It is so simple, but I never thought to pass it on to others.

Hubby's input - My husband had a great idea for plastic laundry baskets when the sides are no longer good. He cuts off the sides, leaving the bottom of the basket with a twoinch edge. It's perfect by the back door for wet boots or shoes.

I've used his idea and expanded it by taking the bottoms of the round baskets and giving them to the kids to use as bases in the backyard kickball games. It works out well for them, and they have colored bases. Janie L., Brooklyn, N.Y.

Odor eliminator – Summer heat intensifies the odors from garbage cans, so we have found a way to keep the smell at a minimum.

After cleaning fish or skinning chicken, we put the skins or carcass in a plastic bag and then into the freezer. On garbage day, we simply take it from the freezer and put it straight into the outside trash can. It works great for any food that spoils

Pearl J., Neptune, N.J.

Garage door windows - Our garage doors have windows on them that I covered with curtains, but after having to wash them several times a year, I decided there had to be a better way.

I found a frosted adhesive plastic that I cut to match the dimensions of the glass in the windows, then applied it directly to the glass after removing its protective backing. It works great for privacy and still

Defray financial loss on a home — convert to a rental

Consumers who face potential losses when selling their home can lessen the financial pinch by converting a personal residence to a rental property, according to an article in the June issue of Real Estate Today, published by the National Association of Realtors. "Smart Tax Moves For Tough

"Smart Tax Moves For Tough Times" shows homeowners how to diminish potential losses when selling property in areas with declining home values. Under Internal Revenue Service rules, the loss on the sale of a personal residence is not deductible, but since the loss on the sale of an income-producing property is deductible, homeowners choosing to convert their property to a rental should first understand the appropriate IRS rules.

Author Donald J. Valachi, a Realtor in Woodland Hills, Calif., writes, "First and foremost, in order for the loss to be allowed, home owners must have profit in mind."

Valachi summarizes various tax court decisions that provide guidelines to home owners seeking to establish a profit motive:

• The home owners must rent the property in a transaction where both the owners and renters have their own interests at heart. If home owners rent to a family member and are subsequently audited, the IRS will expect to see that the same price and terms would have been provided to any other renter.

• The property must be rented at a fair market price, consistent with similar rentals in the area.

• Before selling, the owner cannot reoccupy either part or all of the home once it is rented.

The article adds that the length of time the home is rented does not appear to be a factor, just as long as it is actually rented. However, Valachi emphasizes that in order to establish the fair market value, an independent appraisal should be done at the time the property is converted to a rental. This figure is important when the decision is made to sell the rental property.

The loss on the sale of a property that has been converted to a rental is based on a variety of home value calculations, including: • "Amount realized" — the pur-

• "Amount realized" — the purchase price of a home, minus any expenses incurred by the seller, such as a real estate commission or attorney's fee;

• "Fair market value" - the home's value based on an independent, professional appraisal related to current market conditions; • "Original basis" — the original purchase price paid for a home, plus certain closing costs;

"Adjusted basis" — the original

• "Adjusted basis" — the original basis, plus adjustments made to the home during the period of ownership. Adjustments can either increase or decrease the value of a home.

Examples of adjustments that generally increase the basis of a home are additions or restorations after damage. An adjustment that generally decreases the basis is a gain from the sale of an old home on which tax was postponed.

Typically, a loss on a home sale would be the difference between the adjusted basis of the home and the amount realized from a sale. However, when a home has been converted to a rental under proper IRS guidelines, the loss is calculated using the lesser amount of two values — either the basis of the home at the time of conversion, or the fair market value. That lesser value is then contrasted with the amount realized to form the adjusted basis for deductibility. The final figure for deductible loss is determined by taking the adjusted basis and subtracting the depreciation incurred over the rental period.

Therefore, if the market is so slow that the property would not have many interested buyers for an extended period of time, deductibility can be maximized while rental income offsets further loss. Also, in areas experiencing a better rental market than sales market, converting a private residence to a rental

Household Help by John Amantea

Q. I've lived in a modest threebedroom house for about nine years and have had basement flooding for some time. I can link the problem to a clogged exterior ABS drainpipe which runs along the front of my house. When I finally unearthed the pipe which was buried under two feet of dirt, I discovered a shocker. The interior drainpipe was totally obstructed with shrubbery roots and solid earth. The pipe was also cracked and split in some sections.

I need to mention that I live in a rural region with a septic system that leads into a leach field and dry well. Can you advise me on how to correct this draining problem?

A. I can more than guess that your gutters and leaders empty into your ABS drainpipe and cause the flooding. This only leaves us no choice but to remove any bushes or shrubs along the path of your pipe. The possibility exists that if the drainpipe was installed a long time ago, it lacked a gravel base and plastic sheathing.

The best way to correct any future

If there are any indications of cracks along the wall, be sure to repair them with special bonding material purchased at your hardware or large construction material store. The use of a concrete and/or masonry waterproofing tar will better protect your exterior wall from major problems.

If you find that these aforementioned solutions do not work, you will have no choice but to consult a waterproofing professional. property before selling may be a wise investment.

Valachi cautions that home owners should consider real estate variables such as finding tenants and managing the property before choosing this course of action. He recommends getting the advice of an experienced financial professional such as a certified public accountant before moving forward.

On a mission - "Mission" is the name of a furniture style that became popular in the early 1900s. The ornate Victorian furniture made in the 19th century began to lose popularity and a new look was in demand. Gustav Stickley started a company in Eastwood, N.Y., in 1898 that made furniture and other pieces in the style then popular in England. The furniture was made of plain wood with no carved decorations. Straight, sturdy arms and legs were used, usually mortise and tenon joints were the only visible decorations.

The Mission style became the rage, and many other makers copied the furniture. Some pieces by other

Q. Where can I hope to find an old wedding-cake topper showing a bride and groom? We both collect old things and thought an "antique" on the cake would be fun.

A. The custom of the small brideand-bridegroom figures on the wedding cake was probably derived from an earlier idea of a doll dressed like the bride and groom on the food table. The traditional ethnic clothes of the family were often used for these dolls. By the early 1900s, the dolls were moved to the top of the cake, and the traditional bridal clothing was used.

Many marzipan or sugar figures were made in Germany, and by World War I, figures of porcelain or bisque were popular. During World War II, figures often pictured soldiers or sailors in uniform. Other cake toppers had brides and grooms in flapper dresses or '50s gowns with the fashionable sweetheart neckline. Figures came with a variety of skin tones, although most were white. You can date most cake figures by the style of clothing. They can still be found at garage sales and flea markets.

You work hard at looking good ... now RK can help you look your best!

Daily exercise helps us look good. Now, through radial keratotomy (RK), people all around the Grosse Pointes are looking their best ... without glasses. Radial keratotomy is a surgical procedure to correct the curvature of the cornea or outer surface of the eye so glasses may no longer be needed.

Everybody's talking about it and you hear it all over the radio. Here's your chance to find out the real story; come to one of the free seminars at Metropolitan Eye Center to find out if RK is for you.

Metropolitan Eye Center, on Greater Mack at Shady Lane in St. Clair Shores, is a national trendsetter in this new surgical procedure. It's safe, it's almost painless, and the surgery is performed in our fully licensed and equipped surgical facility on an outpatient basis.

To find out if RK is for you, call today...
✓ To request information in the mail;
✓ To schedule a one-on-one consultation;
✓ To reserve a seat at a free RK seminar.
