Cable broadcast of council meetings common in other cities

By Jim Stickford
Staff Writer

The broadcast of city council meetings by local cable franchises has been going on for many years, and so far the public and city governments seem to like it.

"It was part of our franchise agreement that we provide the city government with a channel for them to use and the equipment they need to broadcast," said Joe Geroux, general manager of Continental Cable of Roseville. "We provided Roseville with a suitcase studio consisting of two cameras, sound equipment and a switcher that permits them to broadcast city meetings live. We also provide a channel just for the local school district."

Geroux said the agreement took effect in 1979.

Geroux said that the viewer surveys taken at the end of 1992 showed 43 percent of the cable subscribers who answered the survey -- about 1,300 out of 13,000 -- subscribers, said they watched the government channel at least once a month.

Of that 43 percent, 3 percent watched the channel daily, 6 percent said they watched the channel at least once a week, and 11 percent said they watched the channel at least once a month.

"These figures are only from people who have responded to our most recent viewer survey," said Geroux. "But the numbers have stayed consistent over the past several years."

Roseville city manager Tom Van Damme said that the city's meetings are popular TV fare for residents.

"I know our meetings are popular because every time a meeting starts a few minutes late, viewers call up to ask if the meeting has been cancelled or they complain that it is starting late," said Van Damme.

Volunteers run the equipment and Van Damme has a list of people able to operate it. So far he has had no difficulty in finding the people needed to broadcast.

Keith Damron, program director of Wyandotte Municipal Cable, said that the cost of broadcasting council meetings depends entirely on the quality of the picture people are willing to put up with.

The better the picture, the more expensive the video equipment will have to be, said Damron.

WE'RE CONCERNED ABOUT YESTERDAY'S NEWS.

News can appear one day and be gone the next. But the paper news is printed on can and should live on.

Last year more than one third of all U.S. newsprint was recycled. And that number is growing every day.

Surprise recycling fees disturb Park residents

By Jason R. Meisner

Recycling in Grosse Pointe Park, formerly provided free, will now cost residents $30 annually per household.

Efficient Sanitation Co., a private contractor, has been picking up recyclables from each household in the Park since Sept. 1992. The recyclable materials are placed in a special red bin at the curb.

Recycling was intended to reduce costs by cutting the total amount of materials sent to the incinerator. Since the city is charged by a per-ton basis, the reduction in tonnage was expected to more than compensate for any additional fees for an independent contractor.

Jerry Driscoll, a resident of the Park, voiced his concern over the new system at a recent city council meeting.

"It looked good at first," said Driscoll, "but someone on the council didn't do their homework."

If tonnage slips below a certain level, charges cease to be reduced. The minimum tonnage requirement was not met after moving to the new collection system, so charges were increased rather than decreased.

City council decided that the best way to charge residents for the new service was to add a fraction of the cost to each household's bi-monthly water bill. The $30 annual fee was divided by six, which amounts to an extra $5 tacked on to the water bill of each household in the Park.

"If you multiply the $30 charge by the approximately 4,000 homes in the Park," said Driscoll, "you're looking at a $120,000 price tag for recycling in this city.

"I am completely supportive of recycling. It's the right thing to do, but it's got to be done right."

Driscoll said that he was more concerned over the city's

Veteran Bidigare quits Woods City Council

Longtime Woods councilmember Ted L. Bidigare resigned Monday night, forcing the council to scramble to find a replacement.

Citing personal reasons in his letter of resignation, Bidigare said effective immediately he was resigning from the council. In his letter, he thanked the council, city residents and city employees for their assistance during his tenure.

Mayor Robert Novitke praised Bidigare for his 10 years of service to the city as a councilmember. Novitke also said that the council would have to move quickly to find a replacement for Bidigare.

"Ted will be truly missed, and I wish him luck," said Novitke. "But the council is facing so many important issues right now, we have to get a replacement. We are looking at Milk River, we have to find a new city administrator, we have the parking lot problem to solve. Ted also worked on several important committees -- the insurance committee, the finance committee. We have to find someone to take up his workload."

2 dogs slain after terrorizing Park neighborhood

By Shirley A. McShane

Three people were bitten and police officers were attacked several times before two stray dogs could be captured and subdued on July 9 on the northeast end of Grosse Pointe Park.

The incident began at 6 p.m. when police officers were summoned to Vernor and Audubon to capture two large mixed-breed dogs that were running loose and had reportedly bitten a 15-year-old girl.

Officers located the animals in the 1300 block of Bishop. But as the officers got out of their patrol cars, the dogs began to attack.

Police then learned that the dogs also had bitten a 13-year-old boy and a 51-year-old man in the same neighborhood. Another resident in the 1300 block of Audubon was able to ward off the dogs by throwing a metal lawn chair at them.

The officers herded the dogs into a rear yard on Harvard. A local veterinarian shot each dog once with a tranquilizer dart, which proved to be ineffective. The dogs were given a second dart, which also failed to subdue them.

To further complicate matters, a sudden violent storm hit the area and both dogs escaped from the yard. Police located one dog in the 1100 block of Kensington and shot it to death. The second dog was shot and wounded at an apartment complex in Grosse Pointe City. It was taken to a veterinary clinic where it later died.

"When we started broadcasting Wyandotte city council meetings four years ago, we used a Super-VHS camera to record the meetings," said Damron. "Anyone can go into any store that sells video equipment and buy a Super-VHS camera. That is the quick and dirty alternative to an expensive system. With a little money the quality of the broadcast can be improved."

If Grosse Pointe Park wants to use a home video camera, it should be possible to get a reasonably watchable video tape that can be broadcast to home viewers, said Damron.

Wyandotte has recently invested $35,000 in modern high quality video equipment, Damron said.

"Our broadcasts have proven so popular that we are in the process of establishing a Wyandotte version of C-Span," said Damron. "We are calling it City-Span, and we will be broadcasting city council meetings, as well as the meetings of the various city commissions. The school board meetin site is being moved to the room that will be equipped to broadcast city meetings."

Broadcasting city meetings has become largely a philosophical question, not a technical question, said Damron. The lowering of the price of home video equipment allows virtually any city to purchase equipment needed to broadcast at a low cost.

"We crawled before we walked," said Damron. "We started out with one camera, and our first broadcasts looked like 'Wayne's World,' with long panning shots, and quick sudden focuses. But we learned, and the quality got better."

Mark Weber, treasurer of Grosse Pointe Cable, said that the franchise agreement does not call for the cable company to provide the equipment needed to broadcast city council meetings.

"Remember, five different municipalities are covered by Grosse Pointe Cable," said Weber. "In order to broadcast meetings, we would have to have a portable system; we couldn't build it in one room like many other cities do."

Weber also said that it wasn't until this year that anyone has asked the cable company to broadcast meetings.

"Our emphasis has been on studio-produced local orgination shows," Weber said. "I know from producing local shows that a lot of people have a great fear of speaking in public. Putting them on TV can make a hard experience even harder. I know some people who just refuse to go on TV."

Lincoln Park's cable commissioner James Roulo, said that after one or two meetings people adapt to the cameras being there. That includes audience members and council members.

"I truly believe in this," said Roulo. "This does get more people involved in city government. I have seen people come in during the live broadcast of a city council meeting, and comment on something they saw on TV earlier that evening.

"This is not the last century, where people all met at the town hall for the big meeting. This is the era of home service. For better or worse, this shows people how their government works. I think it is very important that open meetings be broadcast to the largest audience possible."

James Alogdelis, the Grosse Pointe Woods representative to the cable advisory board, said that as far as he knows, no one has actually asked that meetings be broadcast. He would like to make sure that any technical problems were worked out before any meetings were recorded.

James Leidlein, Harper Woods' city manager, said that Harper Woods allowed the taping of city council meetings earlier this year. Former councilmember Tom Kasunic had a friend tape the meetings with a home video camera. The experiment lasted only a couple of meetings, and Leidlein did not hear from anyone who wanted the meetings to continue to be broadcast.

"We have Channel 20 reserved for the cities and the school districts," said Weber. "If any of the cities want to broadcast meetings, we are more than willing to broadcast the tapes for them, but the decision rests with the individual cities. We are negotiating a new franchise agreement, and if the cities want the meetings shown, they can make it a part of the new agreement."

School board camera ready?

By Shirley A. McShane
Staff Writer

At least one government entity in the Grosse Pointes has discussed the merits and pitfalls of broadcasting its meetings on the local cable access channel. But what about the school board?

The matter has been discussed, informally, from time to time, said Carl Anderson, school board vice president, but has never progressed beyond that stage.

"I'm in favor of it," Anderson said. "I don't think anyone is opposed to it. I certainly think if the community were so inclined, it would be wonderful."

Anderson said the board taped one meeting in 1988, strictly for experimental purposes and self evaluation.

"It was terribly dull," he noted.

Whether the meetings are dull or not, some regular attendees have suggested in recent months that the school district televise board meetings so that more people could be informed of what the district is doing.

"(Broadcasting the meetings) certainly would bring the community in to a greater extent," said trustee Sears Taylor. "Anything to get people involved in what's going on in the schools."

Taylor said he is all for making the school board more accessible to the community — if costs could be kept to a minimum.

"If it was for an additional cost, I would be against it," he said.

Trustee Linda Schneider said she isn't against the idea but wonders if it's the most effective way of conveying to the public what the district is doing.

"Meetings can be very long and tedious," Schneider said. "Having the superintendent and the board president zero in on a particular subject that is of interest to people would be more helpful in terms of understanding the complexities of an issue."

Schneider was referring specifically to the idea of having the superintendent and board president write regular columns in local newspapers.

Trustee Gloria Konsler said she, too, is in favor of broadcasting meetings, although she admitted it would be difficult adjusting to the presence of cameras.

"I don't see any reason not to do it other than the fact that we'd be a little uncomfortable at first," she said. "We might get a little more community interest."

While no one in the district has formally broached the idea, Julie Corbett, director of Grosse Pointe South high school's instructional television studio, said she and her students would be willing to broadcast the meetings if the school board could conduct its meetings in the studio.

School board meetings are currently held in the Wicking Library at South.

"No one on the board has approached me on this," Corbett said. "We have a lot of requests to do projects in the district so we're not exactly out looking for work."

But if the school board decided to use the television studio, it would be at no cost and students would gain valuable experience, she said.

Corbett said South has a professional television production studio equipped with cameras, switchers, editing capabilities for post production and students who know how to use the equipment.

The studio, however, does not have portable equipment. And board members said they didn't know if it would be possible to conduct their meetings in the television studio, which does not have as much room as the school library.

A Native American Tragedy.

At 3: A.M. on April 30th, an arson-fire gutted the Detroit Indian Health Center.

For years, this facility had served more than 10,000 native people in Southeastern Michigan (and Western Ontario) and helped meet their primary medical, dental, community outreach, substance abuse prevention and other health needs.

Hardest hit by this loss — the very young, and very old.

But the real tragedy is this: available insurance only covered a fraction of the loss.

TO HELP:

Money for emergency medical help may be sent to "American Indian Health and Family Services — Southeastern Michigan, Inc. (Fire Fund)" at our temporary location: 4798 Lonyo, Detroit, MI 48210. Toxoplasmosis: Don't blame kitty

Pet Pourri

By Kathleen Ferrilla

A friend of mine who is pregnant asked me to check into the myth or risks involved with feline toxoplasmosis.

My research led me once again to the Michigan Humane Society, and indeed I found the fear associated with contracting this disease from a cat to be severely over-exaggerated.

The story is heard time and time again — pregnant women are told by their doctors that cats can spread this disease that's dangerous to their developing baby. It is true that toxoplasmosis can be a serious problem, but the fact is the Michigan Humane Society and other veterinary professionals feel that cats have really gotten a bum rap in all of this.

Toxoplasmosis (toxoplasma gondii) is a protozoan that lives inside the cells of many creatures (humans and animals alike). It can survive in almost any cell in our bodies.

Toxoplasma infection is considered to be a common thing. By the age of 19, some 5 to 30 percent of the people in the United States have been exposed to toxoplasma, and as many as two-thirds of the popultation are eventually infected with it. It lives in the body and generally has no symptoms.

Some people, however, do have trouble with toxoplasma. Those with impaired immune systems, such as cancer patients receiving chemotherapy, AIDS patients whose immune system is already affected, and transplant recipients who are on a rejection-suppressing medication. All of these situations can result in serious problems with toxoplasmosis. Pregnant women who've already been exposed to toxoplasmosis are not at risk for new infection and will not transmit this "bug" to the unborn child.

Your physician can perform a simple blood test to determine whether you've been exposed.

A woman who first contracts toxoplasmosis during pregnancy may transmit the infection to her baby. Most women who are infected during pregnancy give birth to perfectly healthy children. However, it isn't uncommon to see side effects in severe cases, including miscarriage, still birth or birth defects which affect the brain and eyes of the baby. This, however, is particularly true for infections that have escalated or occurred very early in pregnancy.

So what's the correlation with cats? Well, some people believe that cats spread the disease by carrying it in their bodies and by shedding toxoplasma in their feces. Such transmission is rare to begin with. This occurs only if a cat eats a wild animal (birds, etc.) that itself has been infected with the protozoan, and then the cat will begin to shed the inactive form of toxoplasma called oocytes. The shedding begins within three to 24 days and will continue for one to three weeks until the cat's body has expelled all of the protozoan.

The key to not spreading this disease is to change the litter in your cat's litter box often. If an indoor cat's litter isn't discarded within two to three days after these oocytes are shed, then they have the perfect environment to go through the metamorphosis that allows them to actively infect humans.

Risk of contracting this disease from your cat is virtually eliminated if the cat doesn't hunt and if the litter is properly and frequently removed.

the Aug. 2 council meeting.

"The November election is only about 13 weeks away," said Novitke. "If we take a month or two to replace Ted, we might as well just wait until the November election."

City attorney George Catlin said that Bidigare's replacement would serve until the November election. Then the replacement would have to run in a special election to fill the remaining two years of Bidigare's term.

This election would not be a part of overall council election; it would be a specific election for Bidigare's seat.

Councilmember Peter Gilezan said that while he agreed with Novitke on the importance of finding a replacement quickly, it would be a mistake to appoint one that night.

"It's a matter of perception," said Gilezan. "I think it would be a mistake to name a replacement for Ted before the public even knew that he had resigned. I think it would look funny to the public."

Other councilmembers supported Gilezan. It was agreed that the council should wait until its regular Aug. 2 meeting before naming a replacement.

Councilmembers were unanimous in their praise of Bidigare and the work he has done for the city.

"Everything Ted does, he does in the spirit of excellence," said councilmember Bill Wilson. "Whether it was coaching Little League or working on the council, that spirit of excellence prevailed. The city has benefited greatly by having Ted on the council."

"I'm devastated," said councilmember Jean Rice. "Ted is a close personal friend of mine, and I'm going to miss him terribly. He was just a wonderful councilmember."

Dogs

sent for analysis to the Wayne County medical facility at Herman Keifer Hospital. Grosse Pointe Park public safety detective Lt. David Hiller said police were awaiting results of the tests. Authorities have ruled out the possibility that the dogs were rabid.

Residents bitten by the dogs received medical treatment.

Park police were able to trace the dogs to a Detroit man, who was ticketed for allowing them to run loose and attack people.

Dr. Lawrence Herzog, Grosse Pointe Park veterinarian, said that anyone who encounters a stray dog — particularly one that is aggressive — should either stand still or fall to the ground and roll into a ball and remain in such a position until the animal grows bored and walks away.

In most cases, Herzog said such drastic measures are not necessary and simply turning and walking slowly away will be sufficient.

"What you never should do is yell or scream, which will frighten the animal," Herzog said. "And never run away. Many breeds are trained to attack things that run away from them. That's why so many joggers and bicyclists get bitten."

Unfortunately, some dogs for whatever reason — whether they're tired, frightened or angy — are so aggressive that they are a danger to anyone who is moving, he said.

failure to alert residents of the change in billing than he was about the actual fees involved.

"My objection was that it was a total surprise," Driscoll said. "Also, they took a taxable item and transferred it to the water bill, which is not tax deductible."

Driscoll admits that there doesn't appear to be any easy alternative to imposing a fee.

"If you're going to complain about something, it helps to have an alternate plan, but I just don't know what they could do," he said.

One idea that has been kicked around is to use a rate-based billing system, where the recycling fee is based on each household's tax assessment.

But such a system seems unfair because "fees for a house worth $320,000 would be four times higher than the fees for a house worth $80,000, even though the service is the same," according to Dale Krajniak, the Park's city manager.

Streetlife, camera, action

Photography

By Monte Nagler

Did you know that one of the most varied and rewarding of photographic subjects is literally right at your doorstep?

It's streetlife! Whether it's the familiarity of your own town or the unexplored streets in a strange place, streetlife provides tremendous opportunity for you and your camera.

If you look through a photography book or at a collection of old photographs, you'll find some of the most interesting pictures are invariably of streetlife. This is largely because it is this aspect of our lives that most readily reflects the fashions, trends and lifestyles of a particular period.

Store fronts have an identity of their own. Advertising signs, lampposts, even mailboxes are important features of the street and can be effective elements of a photographic composition.

A street is dynamic. Cars, buses and bicycles are all subjects with strong pictorial potential.

And, of course, there are the people. People walking down the street, people engaging in animated conversation, people standing on the corner — all wonderful opportunities for streetlife photography. There is an almost irresistible appeal in people pictures and a subject preoccupied is easy prey to a photographer with a keen eye and a quick response.

A street market can be a treasure house of streetlife pictures. Market people are extroverts by nature and often have faces and mannerisms which can make great photos.

One problem that often occurs in streetlife photography is confusing and busy backgrounds. Try to avoid this by choosing a camera position that isolates your subject from the surroundings. Use a telephoto lens to frame your picture tightly and by using a wide aperture, distractions in the background will be kept out of focus.

To minimize problems with contrast, photograph subjects that are out of direct sunlight. Better still, an overcast day provides the best lighting for streetlife people pictures. Bright colors are more saturated and lighting on faces is more flattering.

Boat need a part? Thomas Hardware's got it

By Jim Stickford
Staff Writer

Thomas Hardware is the kind of place that is featured in credit card commercials. A special place where they have everything a boater would ever want.

"Thomas Hardware started out as Patterson Hardware in Detroit in 1862," said co-owner Warren Jones. "They always sold boat parts for steam yachts, but in those days there weren't enough boats to support a marine hardware shop, so they sold general hardware as well. The store switched to nautical gear exclusively about 50 years ago."

Jones said the store changed its name to Thomas Hardware when a tinsmith named Thomas bought it. He had a partner named Mrs. Gerrish, who turned 97 on July 18.

"She was running a business before women were allowed to vote," said co-owner Donald Fires.

"Yachting was not for the common folks for many years," said Jones. "One of the benefits of Grosse Pointe is that the municipalities have docks available to the public. That means more people can be involved in boating."

But the recession has hit a lot of people hard, and they do not have the money for boats as they used to, Jones said. But on the other hand there are more millionaires now than ever, he added with a chuckle.

Jones and Fires worked at Detroit Edison, but spent a lot of time at Thomas. About 35 years ago, the owners were ready to sell, so they took a chance and bought the store.

They moved to their present location on Mack in the Farms in 1970.

"We sell just about everything connected with boating, both sailboats and motorboats," said Jones. "We sell clothes, parts, boating supplies and boating gear."

The reputation of Thomas Hardware extends beyond the Detroit area. The store sends parts to boaters all over the world.

"We must send about 15 packages a day through United Parcel," Jones said. "What people do not realize is that there are only a couple of stores like this left in the country. Most of the others have gone out of business. There's Fawcetts in Annapolis, Md. and Swenson's in San Francisco. That's just about it for this country."

Many famous boaters have visited the store, said Jones. He has an autographed poster from Dennis Conner, the man who lost and won back the America's Cup. In the 1970s, media mogul Ted Turner stopped by while he was in town for the Mackinac Race.

"He came into the store, and looked around," said Jones. "He said he couldn't believe what we had in stock. He was a real nice guy, and has turned into a really good sailor."

The store used to have its own catalog, but it got to be so big that the store's personnel just use the manufacturer's catalogs these days.

"We've done real well in Grosse Pointe," said Jones. "But the recession has hit boat makers and parts makers hard, so that has been good for us. When people need parts, they know we are the ones most likely to have them."

Another service Thomas Hardware offers is experience. Both Jones and Fires are longtime boaters. Jones keeps a sailboat, the Great Whisper, at Bayview Yacht Club. Jones finished first in the Class G category in the 1992 Mackinac Race.

Fires no longer has a boat, but is in the Coast Guard auxiliary, and is on the race committee of the DRI, an organization made up of yacht clubs in the Detroit area that sponsors races.

"We have knowledge," said Jones. "We not only have what people need, we often know what people need. You can't know too much about your boat. The Coast Guard and other groups teach in the classroom, but the hard part is teaching practical things. You can't do that in the classroom, you can only learn about that stuff in a boat."

Coats stolen

Employees at Jacobson's in the Village reported to Grosse Pointe City police that at 9:30 a.m. June 29 two men stole between 12 and 15 nautical style jackets from the men's department. The suspects were last seen driving north on Cadieux in a silver Thunderbird.

Park supports establishing development bank on eastside

By Jim Stickford
Staff Writer

A resolution urging Wayne County officials to locate a development bank on Detroit's eastside was adopted July 12 by the Grosse Pointe Park City Council.

For the past three years, Wayne County has been planning a development bank along the lines of the South Shore Bank in Chicago. South Shore is a development bank designed to loan money to neighborhood residents for neighborhood rehabilitation, said Tim Johnson, communications director of Wayne County's job and development department.

The Park's resolution is designed to show Wayne County that there is strong support for the bank project, not just in Detroit, but in the surrounding area, said councilmember Dan Clark.

The South Shore Bank is a commercial institution chartered by the state of Illinois, and regulated by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp, Johnson said.

Since 1973, the bank has loaned $283 million in targeted Chicago neighborhoods, Johnson said. This money has been used to rehabilitate housing. According to a report to Johnson's department, the South Shore neighborhood targeted by the bank is no longer declining. Property values are rising at the same or at higher ratess in other neighborhoods in the city.

The report went on to say that housing rehabilitation has become an industry in and of itself, driving the neighborhood's revitalization. The re-establishment of healthy market forces has attracted commercial banks to the area for first time in many years, the report concluded.

"We hope to establish a bank based on South Shore somewhere in Wayne County," Johnson said. "It will be a full-service bank chartered by the state and regulated by the federal government. In addition to the bank, there are plans for other enterprises to be affiliated with the bank. One is a non-profit housing and community development company, one is a for-profit real estate company, all under a bank holding company."

Wayne County is planning to target a neighborhood to be served by the bank and its subsidiaries, Johnson said. This neighborhood must meet several criteria. It must have residents committed to improving the neighborhood, as well as an economic base on which to build.

About six months ago, a private sector founder's committee was created to select a management team for the bank. Members of the founder's committee include Fr. William Cunningham of FocusHope, Denise Illitch Lites, Don Barden and Alfred Taubman.

It will be the management team's job to raise about $15 million in funds to start the bank, said Johnson. The founder's committee in conjunction with the management team will select which neighborhood to target.

In addition to Detroit's eastside, Hamtramck and Highland Park are also being considered, Johnson said. A key factor in picking a neighborhood is support from the surrounding community.

That's where the Development Bank Coalition East comes in. Chaired by attorney Deborah Groban Olson, the group consists of public officials, citizens and neighborhood group representatives interested in having the bank choose the eastside for its operations.

"The coalition came about after many people on the eastside who had heard about the bank, thought it was a good idea and decided to band together to attract the bank," said Olson. "A lot of people who don't have a lot in common are trying to get this bank at this end of town."

Olson sees the bank as the logical extension of the Park's TIFA program, using local money to invest in the community for the sake of improvement. TIFA, or the Tax Incremental Finance Act, uses money from property taxes to make neighborhood improvements. These improvements increase property values and money from the raise in values, goes to pay off the improvements. It's a win-win situation for the Park and for Detroit.

Members of the coalition include Park councilmember Dan Clark, Maggie DeSantis of the Warren Conner Development Coalition, Margaret Williamson of the People in Faith United and James Odell, chair of Park's TIFA program.

Woods OKs liquor license transfer

By Jim Stickford
Staff Writer

The transfer of a class C liquor license from the bankrupt Mama Pasta's restaurant to the 20930 Mack Avenue Inc., a company that wishes to open a new restaurant at that location, was approved without opposition recently by the Grosse Pointe Woods city council.

The new restaurant will be called Trattoria Andiamo, said Frank J. Palazzolo, attorney for the stockholders.

"The owners are the owners of Andiamo Italia in Warren on 14 Mile Road," said Palazzolo. "They are Joseph Vicari, Frank DeMartino, Joseph Serventi and Gaetano Vitale. They plan to open a nice, upbeat Italian family-styled restaurant."

In addition to Andiamo Italia, Vicari also owns Lido's on the Lake, a restaurant located at 9 Mile and Jefferson in St. Clair Shores.

Grosse Pointe Woods is allowed six class C liquor licenses, said Woods director of adminstrative services Louise Warnke. A class C license permits the sale of wine and beer, as well as hard liquor.

Currently all six licenses have been issued. The only way to get a class C license is from a business that currently has one, said Warnke.

"When Mama Pasta's closed down a couple of years ago, the license they had became available," said Palazzolo. "But the license went to the creditor because it was an asset, and the creditor, an S&L in Pontiac, ended up being taken over by the federal government's Reserve Trust Corp. It was set up to manage the assets of all those S&Ls that went bankrupt in the 1980s."

This meant that getting the license required going through several layers of bureaucracy, said Palazzolo. Now that the Woods has approved the transfer, the trustee appointed by the judge who presided over the bankruptcy must transfer the license to the RTC. Then the RTC must agree to sell the license to Vicari and his partners.

But, because the Woods has approved the transfer, Palazzolo expects no difficulty at any stage of the transaction, the details of which have been worked out in advance.

He declined to say how much Vicari and his partners will pay for the license.

If construction and city inspections go according to schedule, Palazzolo said the Trattoria Andiamo should be open for business in 30 to 60 days.

Break-in reported at Hill jewelers

An unspecified amount of jewelry was stolen from Kiska Jewelers July 18 after burglars shattered the front plate-glass windows and smashed glass display cases.

Thieves in the 11 p.m. break-in used a large rock to gain entry into the building and to gain access to glass display cases and cabinets.

While police were investigating, the store was conducting an inventory to determine how many pieces of jewlery were stolen.

Police have no suspects.

Jewelry stolen at house party

A Grosse Pointe Woods resident was tipped off by an anonymous phone caller that his 20-year-old son had a house party while he was away for the Fourth of July weekend.

The caller told the homeowner that many guests attended the party and consumed alcohol and drugs. The house was not vandalized but the homeowner discovered several pieces of jewerly, silverware and some money missing from the house.

Kitchel has been with the Grosse Pointe libraries since 1985 when she was hired as the youth librarian at the Park branch at Pierce Middle School. She then moved to Central Library and now is youth librarian at the Woods branch at Parcells Middle School.

Becoming a librarian was a natural progression of events for Kitchel, who said she has always enjoyed reading, libraries and people.

She grew up in the downriver area and with the support of her family earned bachelor's and master's degrees in library science from the University of Michigan. It was during her college days that Kitchel said she realized she wanted to be a youth services librarian.

"I worked in the library all through my college days," she said. "I worked in the law library and the graduate library. And then I started — of all things — to drive the Bookmobile around Ann Arbor."

While driving the portable library around, Kitchel said she realized she enjoyed working with children.

Following graduation, Kitchel was hired as youth librarian for the Canton public library. Five years later she began working at the Park branch.

As youth services librarian, Kitchel is responsible for the entire juvenile collection at the Woods branch. She wades through outdated and inaccurate books, maintains the current collection and selects new books.

Then there's story time.

"The program has always been very popular," she said.

Story time is for 2-year-olds and pre-schoolers and is held several times a week around the district.

In addition to her librarian duties, Kitchel, along with Kate Callas, public relations consultant for the library, was instrumental in organizing the National Library Week campaign that was held April 18-24 and went beyond any previous program in the Grosse Pointe libraries.

"We worked very, very hard on that," Kitchel said. "Now that it's all done, I've blanked it out and gotten back to my normal life."

During National Library Week a number of specialized events were held at all three branches and at local book stores to reflect the theme "libraries change lives."

Events included guest appearances by local and national authors, a read-aloud conducted by local celebrities and community leaders, a jazz band concert, author appearances at local book stores, a raffle and an open house.

"It was wonderful," she said of the whole program. "We had the best feedback and it was one of those magic moments when everything ran smoothly and everyone showed up."

While writing for the Grolier grant that funded the program, Kitchel and Callas thought of how they could address all aspects of the library within the community.

Youth services librarian Margaret "Peggy" Kitchel, conducts story time for pre-schoolers during National Library Week last April.

They thought of how to reach adults and children, how to entice patrons to return overdue books and tapes, how to involve the schools and the business community and how to make the library more visible in the community.

"I'm impressed, seriously, with the amount that we did on such short notice," she said.

A majority of what was organized would not have happened without the $2,000 grant the library was awarded last January.

Kitchel said when she helped apply for the grant last fall, she had no idea the competition was so steep.

Groliers is an educational corporation that awards one grant nationally for National Library Week.

"We didn't realize at the time what kind of competition there was," she said. "We were going against big city libraries, universities and other schools."

Kitchel said she recently returned from an American Library Association conference in New Orleans where she had delivered a presentation on the library week program.

"I realized it was about public relations," she said. "It's about making the library more visible in the community and bringing people into the library."

Equally important to Kitchel are women's issues. In addition to her membership in the American Library Association and the Michigan Library Association, she is a member of Soroptimists International, a women's organization working toward the betterment of all women.

Currently the Grosse Pointe chapter supports a program in Detroit that helps young women with children who are fighting chemical dependency.

She also teaches Sunday school at St. Michael's Episcopal Church in the Woods and serves on the library advisory commission at Mason Elementary School, where her two son, ages 6 and 9, attend. Her husband is a technical writer.

A long-term project Kitchel and another woman are working on is to eventually open a women's center on the east side of Detroit.

"It will be a center to address the needs of the east side, to address substance abuse, crisis counseling and offer a referral service, with the focus on immediately addressing needs. Most places have waiting lists. We want to empower women to be the best that they can be and to help them unleash their potential," she said.

Although the center does not yet exist, Kitchel said she and her contemporaries are hoping to find a building, the necessary financial backing and a staff to operate the center.

"I've always been interested in women's and children's issues," she said. "That is one of things I enjoy about my job."

Erik Evert Erikson

Erik Evert Erikson, a Grosse Pointe Farms industrialist and pioneer in the plastics industry, died of cancer Friday, July 16, 1993, at Harper Hospital in Detroit. He was 69.

Mr. Erikson was the founder of Detroit Plastic Products, a major automotive supplier and manufacturer of household products and toys. Before he sold the 26-year-old company in 1977, Mr. Erikson employed 500 people at four plants in Madison Heights, Mount Clemens, Fair Haven and Sturgis.

The company manufactured millions of Roman Cleanser bottles after the advent of blow molding technology and, among other achievements, developed the individual louvers for automotive air conditioning vents.

Mr. Erikson took a tremendous interest in the challenges of entrepreneurship, and parlayed his personal achievements into success for others as he shared his business acumen with employees and colleagues. Mr. Erikson was proud of his efforts to steer friends and acquaintances to developing successful enterprises of their own.

"Erik always had a hand for somebody," said Harry Haaxma, a lifelong friend and plastics industry executive. "While he was a shrewd businessman who advanced the industry, he was fair and kind and created opportunities for others in his plants to learn, too. He was a role model and mentor for many people."

After the sale of his company, Mr. Erikson remained involved in the plastics industry as a consultant and director of operations for Lesney-AMT in Baltimore and Vanguard Industrial Plastics in Eastpointe.

His son Jon R. Erikson called his father the consummate businessman.

"He was somehow able to combine the courage and conviction one needs as a business owner with dignity and gentleness that made him such a wonderful father and human being," he said. "He had great respect from his friends and family before his illness, and earned an even deeper admiration later for the way he confronted cancer."

Mr. Erikson was graced with many professional honors. The Detroit chapter of the Society of Plastics Engineers, of which he was a member and former vice president, named him the 1976 Man of the Year for his lifetime achievements. He was a member of the Society of Plastics Industries trade association and the Plastics Pioneers Inc.

Despite his many professional commitments, Mr. Erikson insisted on putting time aside for community endeavors. He was active with the Detroit Swedish Council and coached in the Woods/Shores Little League for several years. He was also a member of the Grosse Pointe Senior Men's Club.

Mr. Erikson was a student of history, an equestrian and Civil War buff, who enjoyed restoring an 1870 farm in Metamora with his family.

Mr. Erikson was born in Ljusne, Sweden, a small logging town on the Baltic Sea. He came to the United States when he was 7, settling first in Massachusetts and then in Ohio. The family made Detroit its permanent home after visting friends in the city.

Mr. Erikson attended Michigan State College, but interrupted his college career to become a U.S. citizen and enlist in the Army during World War II. After service in the 3rd Army Mechanized Cavalry Reconnaissance, he graduated from Wayne State University Engineering School.

He is survived by his wife, Patricia M.; two daughters, Ellen Cooper and Emigh Litch; two sons, Jon and Erik E. Erikson; and seven grandchildren.

A memorial service will be held at 3 p.m. Wednesday, July 28, at the Grosse Pointe Unitarian Church in Grosse Pointe City.

In lieu of flowers, the family prefers contributions be made to the Dr. Ayad Al-Katib Research Fund at Harper Hospital, 3990 John R, Detroit, Mich. 48201.

Prime Time

By Marian Trainor

Feeling good! It comes with the season — warm sunny days, long hours of light, the opportunity to shed bulky clothes and get out and roam. Summer is release time. If only it could be like this the year around.

While our summer spirits are high, and our bodies more compliant when it comes to physical activity, and we are more willing to abstain from those comforting rich foods used to chase away the blues of winter's inclement weather, we can begin to keep all those promises we made to ourselves about living a more healthful life.

Exercise, diet and attention to ailments before they become major health problems are the ingredients necessary to maintaining vigor the year-round.

There are those who try to ignore symptoms of health problems hoping they'll go away. If there is something wrong, they don't want to know it. They remember friends who were cheerful and carefree until they visited a doctor and discovered they had a problem.

In some cases the problem had reached a stage where little could be done, or it was serious enough to place such limits on the individual that the once-cheerful person became depressed and querulous.

Like the good news of summer, the good news in medical advance is illnesses that were once untreatable or limiting are now much more likely to have an encouraging prognosis.

Prevention is the key word. Avoid serious illnesses by heeding warning signals and preventing accidents by avoiding, as we used to say about sin, the near occasions.

First on the "near occasion" to avoid injury by accident is wearing seat belts.

Seat belts are uncomfortable but a necessary evil. The most common cause of injuries in older persons is traffic accidents, many of which can be prevented by wearing seat belts.

Falls, the second most frequent cause of injury, may be prevented by following such precautions as installing bannisters on stairways, providing adequate lighting on stairs and doorways and being careful on ladders — if you must get on them at all.

Some of the best reminders that minds stay young but bodies get old are joints. Joints will take so much and no more — weight that is — before they fight back. Obesity places added strain on weight-bearing joints and can accelerate osteoarthritis.

Arthritis is a problem that needs a doctor's advice. Relief is available, but because there are more than 100 diseases considered to be arthritis, only you and your doctor can determine what combination of treatments is the correct therapy for you.

Summer is a time for relaxation, reverie and reveling in picture-perfect weather. It is also a time to strengthen the body with exercise, good diet and taking time out to make sure we are free of any potential health problems.

Health problems when caught early can be opportunities for a longer, happier life.

Jerry Hodak to address senior men

The Senior Men's Club (SMC) of Grosse Pointe will meet at 11 a.m. on July 27, Tuesday, at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial.

Jerry Hodak

The speaker will be Jerry Hodak, co-anchor of the "Eyewitness Morning" program on WJBK-TV, Channel 2. His topic will be the evolution of television news.

The presenter will be William Montgomery, former president of the SMC. Also, Dick Beeman will present awards to several past presidents of the club.

Reservations for the meeting can be made by calling a member of the reservations committee. Phone numbers are listed in the newsletter.

Tickets for the Tigers/Baltimore game have been sold out. Stand-by reservations can be made by calling Wilbur Bates.

Beware of fake IRS 'collectors'

Warm weather brings out all kinds of con artists and scams, including individuals posing as employees of the Internal Revenue Service.

"Every year we get reports of individuals impersonating IRS employees," said Cornelius Jackson, inspector-in-charge of the IRS Internal Security Division in Detroit.

Every IRS employee who makes contact with the public is required to carry distinctive identification and must show this when conducting official business.

"People who doubt the validity of credentials offered, or the identity of telephone callers, may contact the Internal Security Division, collect, in Detroit at (313) 226-7340," he said. "We are available 24-hours a day."

Opinion

Women could take control in the Farms

If all four women candidates survive the Aug. 2 primary in the Farms, they would have a chance to take control of the seven-member city council in the general election Nov. 2.

However, there was no indication in the Grosse Pointe News' interviews with all nine candidates that the women were running a united campaign. Instead, all of the candidates, women as well as men, said they were running independently and several women were critical of other women candidates' views.

Furthermore, a victory for a women's slate would require them to defeat John E. Danaher, an incumbent, in a community which tends to return incumbents to office except in unusual circumstances.

However, the current two-year term of the incumbent mayor, Gregg L. Berendt, expires this year, even though his term on the council does not run out until 1995. That means the council will pick the mayor at its first meeting after the election and if the women prevailed, they could pick one of their members for that post, too.

While a victory of the women over the five male candidates would be unprecedented in any of the Pointes, it is true that more women have begun to seek public office nationally and to show more strength as candidates at both the local and national level than they did a few years ago.

Yet only two women ever have been elected to the Farms council and one of the two, Gail Kaess, is an incumbent who is seeking her fifth term after 14 years of service.

In addition to Ms. Kaess, they are, in alphabetical order: Erin J. Barthel, a young district legislative liaison for state Sen. John Kelly and lifelong Grosse Pointe resident; Lisa Gandelot, another lifelong resident of Grosse Pointe and former teacher who has spent 20 years as a volunteer in community organizations; and Elaine Hartmann, a retired school-teacher and civic activist, especially involved in historic preservation issues.

All of the nine candidates support the futurism project — a new subject on the local platter of concerns — and the four women candidates are especially enthusiastic and hopeful that it will stimulate improved cooperation among the five Pointes and Harper Woods.

Even though primary voters will have the choice of voting for only four candidates, or fewer, the News supports the nomination of all four women among the eight nominees who will emerge from the primary. Their excellent records of service to the community are their best recommendations to public office.

In addition, the News believes that Danaher, the other incumbent, in addition to Ms. Kaess, also deserves nomination for a second term on the basis of his record of community service for the past four years.

Two other young men, Chrisopher Corden, a lawyer in a downtown Detroit law firm, and Ronald V. Kneiser, an attorney and certified public accountant, deserve strong consideration for election to the council on the basis of their backgrounds, their interest and participation in city and community affairs, their business experience and their answers to our questions.

We recommend that voters read and study carefully the specific information about the backgrounds and experience of the candidates and and their answers to questions put to them by the Grosse Pointe News. Their profiles and their answers to our questions appear elsewhere in the news columns of today's issue of the paper.

Primary to cost Farms $5,000

Grosse Pointe Farms will spend between $5,000 and $6,000 to stage a primary Aug. 3 to reduce the number of candidates for four city council seats from nine to eight.

The money will go chiefly to finance the operation of the Farms' seven voting precincts from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m. Each precinct will require four or five election employees.

On first glance, such a primary may appear to be a foolish waste of money but it is required under the law. With four positions open, the city must hold a primary to reduce the field to eight nominees for the general election Nov. 2.

Candidates were notified after the closing of the filing period that they had time to withdraw. Several candidates told the Grosse Pointe News they had considered withdrawing, and one even reported pressure on her to do so.

However, all remained in the race, chiefly because of their knowledge that with two incumbents retiring, two of the four posts will be filled by new candidates even if the two incumbents are re-elected.

Cynics question the cost of the primary, but since it obviously was unfair to try to pressure anyone to get out of the race, the decision is, appropriately, left up to the voters in the American way.

Even though the top eight candidates in the primary will be nominated, citizens will vote only for four or fewer, just as they will in November.

The size of the turnout for the single issue is questionable but it probably will be low. However, voters in all the Pointes often surprise the forecasters.

No voice for Detroit voters?

It was discouraging to those of us who oppose legalized gambling that Gov. John Engler now is reportedly considering a plan to finance land costs and site preparation for a new Tiger stadium out of supposed profits from gambling casinos in Detroit.

The presumption of the sponsors is that such a scheme would save taxpayers from the indirect stadium location costs, estimated at upwards of $100 million, although if the profits failed to raise the required amount, taxpayers still would take a hit.

This plan, similar to an earlier proposal in Greektown, would be run by Michigan Indian tribes, and would not require voter approval. However, that ignores the fact that the people of Detroit have said four times that they do not want gambling.

And what about baseball's long tradition of opposing even the appearance of gambling in connection with both players and owners? Would the American League even authorize a risky undertaking for a new stadium that would rely on casino gambling for part of its financing?

It's disappointing that Detroit cannot find the kind of businessmen who financed the cost of the new Toronto stadium with its sliding roof. That kind of sponsorship obviously would be preferable to the questionable value of a reliance on casino gambling profits.

Not all the recent news from the casino front is supportive, however. The people of Port Huron have recently voted down a proposal to locate a casino in an abandoned downtown business building.

Despite the Detroit and Port Huron voters' rejections of casino gambling, it is clear from the renewed promotion of gambling to finance the new Tiger stadium, the Mount Clemens referendum later this year, and promotions in several other Michigan communities that the promoters and their friends are still seeking a toehold in this state.

Yet if these recent votes meant anything, they showed that a large segment of the public opposes legalized gambling as a method of raising public revenue and, like the critics, regards it as a form of taxation on people who can least afford it.

In view of the increased crime and other social effects of gambling, it is also clear that communities that adopt legalized gambling are paying a heavy price for failing to consider the counterproductive costs of their decisions.

It is worth remembering that the strongest criticism of the recent campaign on behalf of casino gambling in Detroit was sounded by two of the state's top enforcement officers, state Attorney General Frank B. Kelley and Wayne County Prosecuting Attorney John D. O'Hair.

Both warned that approval of gambling would create new and expensive problems for Detroit and the state. If the governor is wise, he'll pay heed to that message, too.

Give TV a try

A survey by staff writer Jim Stickford reported in today's issue of the Grosse Pointe News shows that cable TV broadcasts of city council meetings are popular in several cities in the area.

That being so, why doesn't at least one Grosse Pointe community experiment with TV coverage of its council sessions so that the public and the council would have a basis for judging the possibilities in such broadcasts?

After a trial period, Harper Woods did drop its showing but we understand an experiment could be performed in the Pointes at a small cost, certainly less than the annual profit the four Pointe communities earn from their ownership of Grosse Pointe Cable.

A compromise for the Atrium?

Isn't it about time for a compromise on the request of the Atrium Expresso Cafe for a liquor license now that the Farms council has postponed action for a second time?

As we understand her position, Pauline Palazzola, co-owner of the cafe, has offered to compromise on her application for a Class C liquor license by accepting a tavern license that would permit her to sell wine and beer but not liquor.

Even though she would sell only wine and not beer, such a license would enable Ms. Palazzola to develop the afternoon tea service that she is counting on to help her build a clientele for her location in the basement of 131 Kercheval.

The Hill Association has supported the Atrium's request for a Class C liquor license, but Stan Day, owner of ONE23, a restaurant near the Atrium, has opposed it and has won backing from officials of Cottage Hospital and Henry Ford Hospital's Pierson Clinic, each of which has offices at 131 Kercheval.

If the Hill is to widen its appeal for customers, it must continue to seek different kinds of businesses to attract them. It strikes us that the Atrium could offer such an appeal if the council granted its request for a compromise permitting the sale of wine.

Such a license would also lessen the concerns of some residents and businessmen over the sale of liquor since wine has a lower alcoholic content than so-called hard liquor.

Teacher talks: Seek give-backs

To the Editor:

Our Grosse Pointe school district negotiating team is now meeting with the teachers and their union, the National Education Association. Our negotiators are led by Ronald Tonks.

For your information, the teachers union has been excoriated locally and nationally in the last few weeks as "The National Extortion Association."

The NEA was exposed in a Forbes magazine expose — cover and 9 pages of text, charts and graphs. This was followed by a reader's letter to the Grosse Pointe News, citing the Forbes charges. Next day the Free Press carried a William Buckley column based on the same article from Forbes, but with far stronger rhetoric. Buckley said, in view of the shocking decline in education since NEA got in, "the thousands who run NEA should, in remorse, commit mass suicide."

This bunch of educational pirates pulled off the Kalkaska strike which cost all their school kids three months of instruction. Keith Geiger, president of NEA, directed this mess in Kalkaska in person. He then intimidated the state by declaring other Michigan school districts now face shutdowns if their voters don't "cough up on cue."

The David Brinkley show has denounced this, the strongest, largest, most powerful, toughest, roughest trade union in the United States which intimidates local school districts with strikes and political officeholders with electoral defeat unless they cave in to their extortion.

The NEA has 2.1 million members. It is in merger talks with Al Shanker's 800,000-member American Federation of Teachers. That would make a single teachers union of three million members to confront parents and their kids straight across the country, with the kids as bargaining chips in strike talks — and as hostages against Kalkaska-type school closings.

The NEA hasn't the slightest interest in kids as persons to be educated. Its whole, avaricious game is to dominate education as the nation's greatest cash cow, by everlastingly increasing teachers salaries because with every raise it gets a correspondingly bigger shakedown in the dues it bleeds from the teachers. This time, after capturing management, it is going for curricula.

Our negotiating team is headed by Ronald Tonks. He scares me because he wants to negotiate with these bandits in complete secrecy. He refuses to say what the other side wants in terms of wages, hours and working conditions. That's bad. Three years ago, our negotiators wound up giving the teachers three successive 7 percent raises — 21 percent total — when the NEA asked only 6 percent, in three annual raises, or an 18 percent overall.

Today, 80 percent of our local taxes go for schools, teachers, too many administrators, courses, books,

South students honored

Several Grosse Pointe South High School students were honored for their outstanding scholastic performance.

Stacey E. Schulte, a junior, was given the Brown Book Award at a special awards ceremony at South high school. The Brown award, an inscribed Webster's Dictionary, is awarded each year to the most outstanding junior English student. Schulte is the daughter of Mrs. Janey Schulte of Grosse Pointe City.

William Stephens received the Princeton Book Award from the Princeton Club of Michigan. Only 10 Princeton awards are given each year to outstanding juniors in more than 500 schools around Michigan.

Selection criteria include displaying concern for the opinions of others while demonstrating exceptional leadership, talent and competence in both academic and non-academic pursuits. Stephens was president of the junior class and was elected president of the Student Association for the 1993-94 school year.

Lawrence F. Drummy, a junior, was awarded the Rensselaer Medal, which is presented annually to the junior who has displayed the most outstanding achievement in mathematics and science.

Drummy is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Drummy of Grosse Pointe Farms. He will be awarded a $5,000 renewable scholarship upon enrollment at Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute in Troy, N.Y.

Andrew J. Drescher received two of the top undergraduate awards — the Bausch and Lomb Science Award, given annually to an outstanding junior who has attained excellence in science, and the Harvard Book Award, which is given to a student who combines excellence in scholarship with achievement in other fields.

Drescher is now eligible to apply to become a University of Rochester Bausch and Lomb scholar. This designation comes with scholarship funds worth a minimum of $5,000 per year for four years.

Drescher is the son of Dr. and Dr. Dennis Drescher of Grosse Pointe City.

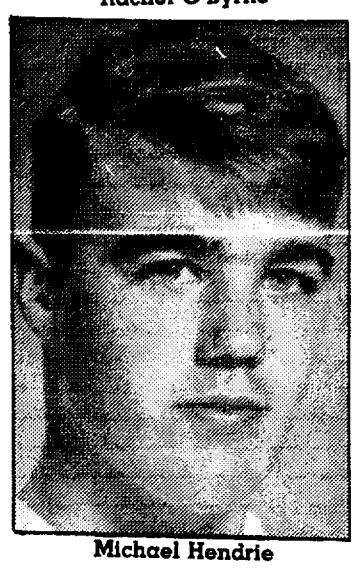

Michael V. Hendrie won the Dartmouth Book Award, which is sponsored by the Dartmouth Club of Detroit. An inscribed copy of Robert Frost's "Collected Works" is given annually to an oustanding South junior who ranks in the top 10 percent of his or her class academically, has high moral character and excels in at least one non-academic area such as sports, music, drama or science.

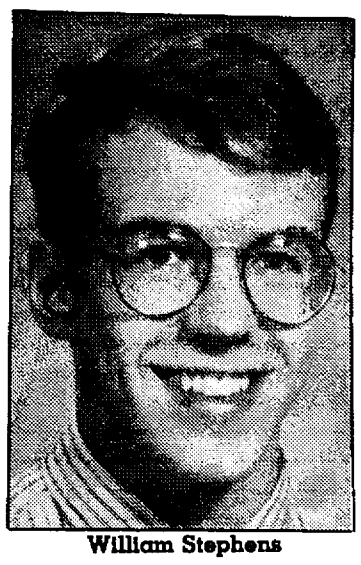

Hendrie is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Hendrie of Grosse Pointe Farms. He is ranked third in the junior class and plays varsity football and varsity hockey.

Rachel E. O'Byrne received the Smith College Book Award which is presented annually by Mrs. Ann Williams, a Smith College alumna, to an outstanding South junior who exemplifies the academic achievement, leadership qualities and concern for others that characterize the thousands of women who have graduated from Smith.

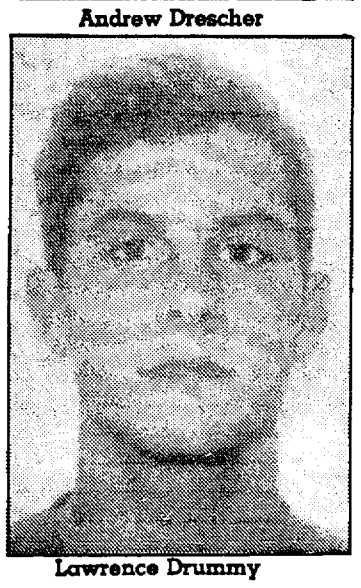

O'Bryne is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cormac O'Byrne of Grosse Pointe Park. She was ranked fourth in her class with a cumulative grade pointe average of 4.094. She was a key distance runner on the women's track team. Her student leadership includes participation in the Generation of Promise program and serving as Student Association senator for the class of 1994.

HEALTHWATCH

This year, 500,000 kids will learn about bike safety the hard way.

The hard facts
Every year, scores of children are treated for serious head injuries caused by bike accidents. Even a simple fall can result in a concussion, and possibly brain damage.

The importance of bike helmets
A well-made bicycle helmet provides invaluable protection. Encourage your child to use one by wearing one yourself. Kneepads, elbow pads and tough jeans also help absorb impact.

No monkey business
Stress the importance of bike safety to your child. No curb jumping and no friends on the handlebars. Kids should walk their bikes across intersections. And they should stay off oversized bikes; they're a common cause of accidents.

A final note
To receive a free bike reflector, call our Physician Referral and Information Service at 1-800-237-5646. To learn more about these and other health issues, tune into our HealthWatch program, weekdays at 5:55 a.m. and 5:27 p.m. on WJR, 760 AM.

The survey also found that:

- More than half of the respondents think freeways are in "average" condition and a quarter indicated they are in "good" condition;
- Almost 75 percent favor reallocation of existing state spending for road reconstruction projects;
- More than 60 percent oppose increased state taxes for road reconstruction projects;
- About half believe more police officers should patrol Michigan's roads;
- More than 80 percent think police officers at least "sometimes" violate speed limits without any job-related reason;
- Nearly half believe traffic safety is treated as a high priority by state government; and
- More than half support a ...law that would require motorcycle riders to wear helmets.

Streff noted that women generally showed stronger support for traffic safety policies than men, who were more likely to report risk-taking behavior, such as speeding and drunk driving. Also, respondents over 70 tended to report safer driving-related behavior and were more supportive of traffic safety policies than other age groups, while those under 21 were less consistent in their views.

"These young drivers voiced majority support for the legality of radar detectors and, at the same time, were among the age groups most likely to report a desire for more police patrols," Streff said. "They also reported the second highest frequency of drinking to intoxication and yet their support of a zero BAC limit for drivers under age 21 was among the highest of any age group. Likewise, they voiced the strongest opposition to a youth driving curfew, as might be expected, but at the same time, gave majority support to graduated driver licensing for young beginning drivers."

In addition to Streff, other researchers who contributed to the study include Lisa J. Molnar, Robert H. Schulz and Carl Christoff. It was sponsored by the Michigan Office of Highway Safety Planning.

'Went to a garden party...'

It wasn't quite as described in the Rick Nelson song. Actually, it was a wedding shower I attended two weeks ago for a couple I know who will be tying the knot this fall.

Nothing unusual about the shower, except that the gift suggestions were registered at a hardware store.

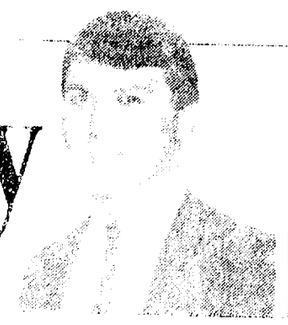

It was the first shower I had attended where I could give something I considered useful like a weed wacker or a Garden Weasel.

Not to knock traditional shower. I have attended over the years, but each time I see the bride-to-be open a box and pull out a casserole dish, I am tuned the groom-to-be strategies to appear excited about it.

Let's face it, showers have always been female-oriented occasions. I realize men drink out of the tumblers and eat off the china plates that are given as gifts at the showers, but they are more concerned with what is in the pie — or on the fish-tease than whether the pie plate serves appropriate decor.

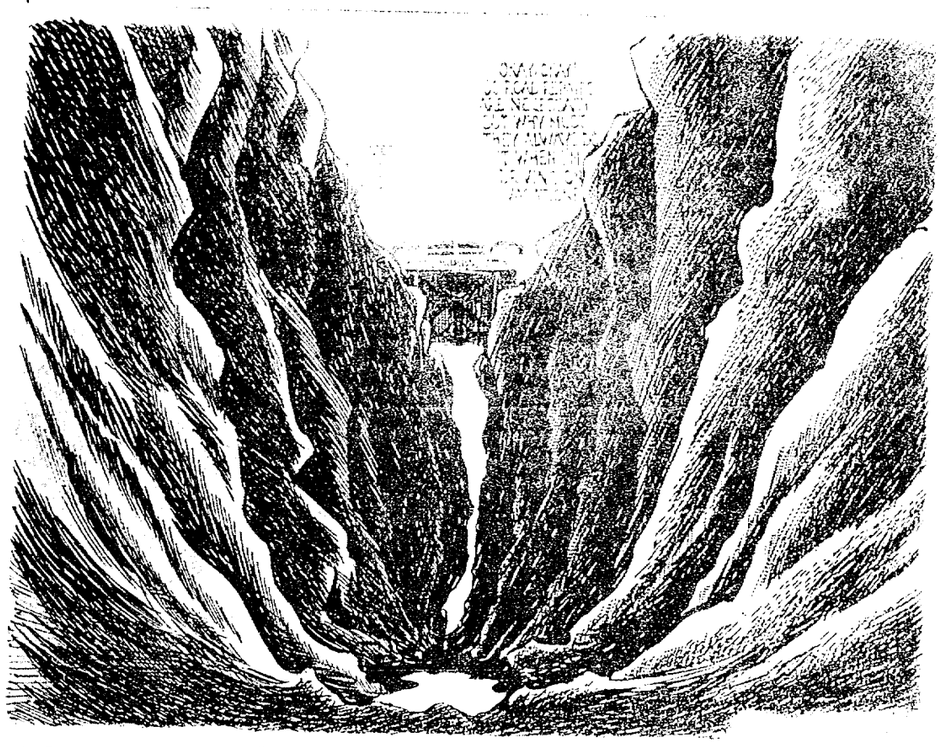

Most people choose to buy the pots and place settings they own before and probably use fetches and bonuses. Fish up your gift from time to time and you'll have a set of fine

Screaming jays. American flags. Weekend traffic.

The woodland flute of the hermit thrush. Black flies.

Killer worms. "Canadian killer worms," some of the bait-shop signs say, to really put the fear in you.

The worms are about the only thing with a killer instinct up here, with the possible exception of the Chamber of Commerce. It has an ever-widening docket of road improvement plans to attract tourists, not seeming to understand that this tourist, at least, will certainly go somewhere else if half their plans are carried out.

The latest is to widen an east-west road to four lanes. Two competing plans will lobby the state transportation department for funds: four lanes between Alpena and Charlevoix, or four from Harrisville to Traverse City. Never mind that most days there isn't much traffic; these guys want the road to bring traffic.

Funny how road developers of the Haggerty Connector in Oakland County insist that the road to nowhere is needed to accommodate current traffic but will definitely not bring any more development (that being a bad word these days and studiously ignoring the mad scramble by Burger King et al., to buy up property). Up here, they favor the opposite argument. So watch your tax payer dollars.

No, the killer instinct is mostly limited to fur and fin in northern Michigan. The prevailing attitude is an unspoken "soon come" worthy of the Caribbean. Even the phone company took two months to get our new service straight.

Maybe it's just a natural part of a rural view of life: individualistic, independent, self-sufficient, distrustful of government (and institutions in general), attuned to the seasons, rooted in the land . . . but no tree-huggers here; they don't mind exploiting its resources, plant or animal.

Of course, the more of us "flatlanders" who move into "stump-jumper" country, the more the north gets like the jarring, driven south, but it sure isn't an improvement. Bad enough that the vacationers tend to Type A; we wouldn't want the natives to match.

Maybe we could try to imitate the country folk instead. Learn to slow down and smell the roses, so to speak, though that's a silly expression now that modern roses have no scent. The slow life has its own rewards.

The other day, we were sitting on the screened porch, gazing at the cedar swamp across the stream, when, suddenly and silently, a bobcat materialized on the opposite bank.

We were transfixed. For the next half hour we watched and listened as the cat padded in and out of the underbrush, chasing whistling the chipmunks, fawns in the thicket, deer.

About that time, a stalwart woodsman came on with a load of split firewood. "Nature in the raw," he said indulgently, being that sort of fellow who [illegible] "Kind of like watching paint move."

At least he didn't try to argue that they're supposed to be the art of the hunt, as someone once claimed about bulls and the bullring.

Michigan drivers speed with little fear of tickets, U-M study reveals

Motorists on Michigan highways are driving faster than ever and more and more believe they can get away with it, according to a University of Michigan traffic safety survey.

About 90 percent drive at or above the 55-mph speed limit on urban freeways, more than half drive at least 60 mph, and nearly a third reach speeds of 65 mph or more. Almost half of urban freeway drivers and a third of those on rural freeways think they will not be stopped by police unless they exceed posted speeds by at least 10 mph.

On rural freeways, 44 percent drive at least as fast as the 65-mph speed limit and 14 percent drive 70 mph or more.

The U-M study also found that nearly 60 percent of respondents believe radar detectors should be legal, an increase from levels reported in the 1990 traffic safety survey.

"There has been both an increase in driving speeds and a decrease in the fear of tickets for speeding," said Fredrick M. Streff, associate research scientist at the U-M Transportation Research Institute. "But most drivers reported that speed limits are set about right."

The Michigan Omnibus Traffic Safety Survey, begun in 1987, polls Michigan residents' attitudes, perceptions and reported behaviors on such issues as speeding habits, drunk driving, use of safety belts, licensing requirements, road conditions and enforcement of safety laws. The most recent findings are based on telephone interviews with more than 750 Michigan adults in the fall of 1992.

In addition to speeding habits, the results show that more than 90 percent of Michigan residents think drunk driving is a serious problem in their community, but a majority believe that people who serve alcoholic beverages should not be held accountable. While more than 60 percent think it is unlikely that drunk drivers will be stopped by police, they are about evenly split on the use of sobriety check lanes. Also, more than 75 percent favor lowering the blood-alcohol concentration (BAC) limit to 0 percent for drivers under 21.

Most respondents reported drinking little or no alcohol, but of those who did drink, about 20 percent said they drank to intoxication at least once in the previous two weeks. Of these, a third drank at home and about a fifth (or 4 percent of total respondents) drove after drinking.

Respondents also were asked a series of questions about Michigan's new drunk-driving laws implemented last year, and most knew very little about them. "Less than a third chose the correct response for any single question and for most, less than a fifth chose the correct response," Streff said.

On other topics, the study found that more than 80 percent of state residents use a safety belt "all or most" of the time (this contrasts with prior studies conducted by Streff that show that 57 percent of motorists were wearing a safety belt when observed). Also, most respondents believe that there was "at least a good chance" of getting a ticket for not using a safety belt if pulled over for speeding.

A majority of respondents favor graduated driver licensing for young, beginning drivers and older drivers. Under such a system, young drivers would gradually acquire driving privileges as they demonstrate increased skill and experience; older drivers would gradually reduce their amount and type of driving if their ability declines.

While opinions were evenly split on the issue of a youth driving curfew that would prevent minors from driving between 11 p.m. and 5 a.m., a majority voiced support for a similar measure for drivers 70 and older. Ironically, most respondents did not know an elderly family member whose driving ability was affected by advancing age.

The survey also found that:

- More than half of the respondents think freeways are in "average" condition and a quarter indicated they are in "good" condition;
- Almost 75 percent favor reallocation of existing state spending for road reconstruction projects;
- More than 60 percent oppose increased state taxes for road reconstruction projects;
- About half believe more police officers should patrol Michigan's roads;
- More than 80 percent think police officers at least "sometimes" violate speed limits without any job-related reason;
- Nearly half believe traffic safety is treated as a high priority by state government; and
- More than half support a law that would require bicycle riders to wear helmets.

Streff noted that women generally showed stronger support for traffic safety policies than men, who were more likely to report risk-taking behavior, such as speeding and drunk driving. Also, respondents over 70 tended to report safer driving-related behavior and were more supportive of traffic safety policies than other age groups, while those under 21 were less consistent in their views.

"These young drivers voiced majority support for the legality of radar detectors and, at the same time, were among the age groups most likely to report a desire for more police patrols," Streff said. "They also reported the second highest frequency of drinking to intoxication and yet their support of a zero BAC limit for drivers under age 21 was among the highest of any age group. Likewise, they voiced the strongest opposition to a youth driving curfew, as might be expected, but at the same time, gave majority support to graduated driver licensing for young beginning drivers."

In addition to Streff, other researchers who contributed to the study include Lisa J. Molnar, Robert H. Schulz and Carl Christoff. It was sponsored by the Michigan Office of Highway Safety Planning.

Orchid Packard, anyone?

A 1930 Orchid Packard, restored by Adams Custom Engines Inc. of Reno, Nev., and owned by Jim Condon, of British Columbia, is currently on loan to the National Automobile Museum in Reno.

The color scheme is said to have been inspired by an orchid and the restored vehicle is true to the original Packard colors, complete with shades of orchid with stamen-yellow striping. The museum said this seventh series, Model 7-33 Packard was the cat's meow in the 1930s and cost $2,725 when new.

Air bags help 'a lot,' victims say

According to a recent survey of motorists who were in air-bag-protected crashes, nearly all drivers say that the air bag protected them from serious injury and that they want an air bag in their next car.

Of the 215 people surveyed by the University of North Carolina and the Insurance Institute for Highway Safety, 89 percent said they thought the air bag protected them from injury, and 76 percent said it protected them "a lot."

Although the respondents' crashes varied at all levels of severity, 71 percent were moderate or severe, with most respondents reporting only minor injuries.

In light of the debate over the safety of air bags, it should be noted that the air bag is only a supplemental restraint. Without the use of a seat belt, the full benefits of an air bag may not be realized. Always remember to buckle your seat belt whether you have an air bag or not.

'Went to a garden party...'

It wasn't quite as described in the Rick Nelson song. Actually, it was a wedding shower I attended two weeks ago for a couple I know who will be tying the knot this fall.

Nothing unusual about this shower, except that the gift suggestions were registered at a hardware store.

It was the first shower I had attended where I could give something I considered useful, like a weed-wacker or a Garden Weasel.

Not to knock traditional showers I have attended over the years, but each time I saw the bride-to-be open a box and pull out a casserole dish, I noticed the groom-to-be straining to appear excited about it.

Let's face it, showers have always been female-oriented occasions. I realize men drink out of the tumblers and eat off the china plates that are given as gifts at these showers, but they are more concerned with what is in the glass or on the flatware than whether these items appear decorative.

Most people about to take the plunge have lived on their own before, and probably own kitchen and barware. Fill up your gas tank four times and you'll have a set of Bugs Bunny glasses.

If one hasn't lived away from home before marriage, he or she should have enough money saved from not having to pay rent that the couple can afford their own housewares.

Like the couple whose shower I attended recently, most of those about to walk down the aisle have been renters throughout their adult lives, living in apartments without yards to worry about.

However, the newlyweds-to-be soon become homeowners, with lawns to mow and gardens to tend. What they need are lawnmowers, rakes, trowels and, of course, Garden Weasels.

It's fine to be able to throw a dinner party for 20 with matching everything, but if your guests can't make their way through the jungle you call your front yard, what's the point.

I realize many women may frown on this concept, but in this day of political correctness and oversensitivity, wouldn't it be sexist to give gifts that presume to be used only by the bride? And wouldn't it it be equally sexist to assume that lawn and garden gifts can be used only by men?

A friend of mine who attended this shower will also be heading for the altar in the coming months. He suggested that the idea could be extended to include power tools and workshop items.

Almost every home has a basement or a garage. And every basement or garage is a potential workshop.

One's basement could rival that of Norm's on "This Old House" if such a shower took place. Power drills and tablesaws are just as useful as placemats and kitchen towels.

So, when planning a shower, don't necessarily restrict yourself and your guests to the interior of the home.

Make sure the brand names of the gifts are not Tiffany and Waterford. Look for names like Black & Decker and LawnBoy.

It's probably the only time you can give someone a sack of manure and get a thank you note for it.

"I can't understand why anyone would hunt them," Bob whispered. Steve drew himself up in a quiet, simple-but-dignified Gary Cooper attitude, the kind of tough, though gentle, man of the earth that Hemingway admired and romanticized. And I'm a Hemingway fan.

"It's the pleasure of training and working a good dog, the challenge of pitting yourself and the dog against the wily cat — and the reward of $100 a pelt that you put right back into dog food," he said quietly. "That cat will double back and cross the stream and never go to a tree. It's too smart. I've been on bobcat hunts six times and never gotten a cat."

His personal history was about to be flattened, and to make things worse, the state wasn't offering him enough money. George is an independent fellow, but not so cussed that he'd refuse himself the solace of hiring a lawyer. It's the American way.

Then he brightened.

Last winter he surprised himself by buying a little place in Yuma, Arizona. He never expected to go house-hunting, never expected to go to Yuma in the first place, but it's his arthritis, and his sister-in-law, and the house came with all the furniture.

They had flown out, he and Barb. First time he ever flew. "It wasn't so bad," he said with a grin.

That's not all. It was good and hot in Yuma, so Barb bought him a pair of shorts.

"First shorts I ever had."

What a year.

His beeper's off

Some politicians don't listen to constituents. Occasionally a few have good ideas, but not often enough.

Hugh Munce

Take U.S. Rep. Dave Bonior, D-Mount Clemens, who wants to proliferate federal government and taxpayer expenses.

He'd have the National Park Service take over big baseball stadiums as memorials to the game. Tiger Stadium would be used by kids, picknickers and vagrants, with the Department of the Interior maintaining these "landmarks" (Detroit's Tigers, Chicago's Wrigley, New York's Yankee, Boston's Fenway) under the National Historical Ball Park Act:

Taxpayers would pay for it instead of the Tigers, though the stadium is currently owned by the City of Detroit. Dave, you're in Washington to save money, not to spend, remember?

Local history buffs

The East Jefferson Preservation Association is selling lectures, luncheons and dinners. Tours, art, history, architecture are subjects July 24 and 31, Aug. 21 and 28 from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m. and noon wine tasting and dining fare at the Whittier, 822-4794. Presentations by Michael Farrell and Tim McCarthy cover Venice, Rome, Paris and Barcelona, with catering by top bistros. Tickets are $25.

Going to the dogs

"Son, remember, even dogcatchers love dogs," spoke my father as the cop chases a mutt with big hooped net flying high.

So it is with Heather and Bonnie Denler, who recently convinced another resident, Dr. Alexander Blain, that abandoned greyhounds make nice pets.

The racing industry in Florida uses hundreds of racing greyhounds in a year, then owners dump them or kill them or salvage groups of dog-lovers rescue them for rehabilitation.

If you're willing to adopt a doe-eyed greyhound write FYI who'll turn notes over to Greyhound Connections. It's worked for thousands of dogs and thousands of dog-lovers. Heather has Cea, a 4-year-old now. The name comes from a Celtic lady warrior, who fought Romans in Northern England centuries ago. Cea, however, is gentle.

Honor local heroes

Local heroes honored by Detroit Edison include engineer James Paavola of Grosse Pointe Woods and Harper Woods' Lee Harris.

Company stock and a silver service certificate were given to Paavola for finding a new way to handle coal-burning waste, earning him the Alex Dow Award. Harris saved two neighbors from sure death as they were trapped when their home burned. He's a systems analyst. Four others from southwest Michigan were also honored.

Oops

Beg your pardon. FYI didn't say last week that Bonnie Denler, not Barbara, worked on the award winning float for the centennial parade, and Grosse Pointe Memorial Church was the sponsor with trust funds of honored deceased.

World trader has feet planted here

His work takes him from Bangkok to Bangor, Singapore to Sydney, even Bali to Baltimore, but Ken Roach loves it.

For 50 years, he's left his Grosse Pointe Woods home, and his seven children, to seek rare woods used in architecture, engineering, die-making, furniture and other applications. You name it, he finds it — mahogany, ebony, teak, even monkey-pod.

McCausey Lumber in Roseville is home-base, but Roach goes to Europe, Singapore, China or Poland from time to time.

"My son, Dan, now runs the Hong Kong/Singapore operation and another is the Florida rep, with a daughter teaching law and all of them exceptional. I'm going to see another daughter in a few minutes. She's Josef Bogosian's partner. Josef's Bakery, you know."

Roach reminded me that they also built their business from scratch, beginning when he returned from the Navy after World War II.

"I married the lady I went to school with, Helen Gilleran. It's been 40 years, the best years," says Roach, smiling so that it's easy to see where his home and heart belong, though he's trod roads around the world.

I looked at his business card. It was very different, just like Roach. It was printed on genuine red cedar, thin shaved, laminated wood. I recalled his flat statement that foresters worldwide respect their trees and wildlife, nursing and caring for nature's offerings, not destroying, decimating, as some lead us to believe. Good words.

Diogenes! No lamp

The ancient pessimists would turn over in their graves if they met Jackie Parent of the Woods. Henry Cook, owner of Henry's Cleaners in the Park, explains: "About $350 was left in a customer's trousers and Jackie turned that money in to be returned. Everything she does is exceptional. The 16-year-old Grosse Pointe North student is diligent, dependable and bright."

Park memorial

There's a new memorial plaque at the end of Patterson Park's George F. Helm boardwalk, honoring young law student John McSorley, who loved marathons, often studying and teaming with veteran marathoner Gerald Coyle, a dentist from the Park.

John's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John McSorley of the Park, have nothing but fondest memories of their son, a former Grosse Pointe South "champion" in many ways, who died while running with his father in Philadelphia about a year ago.

Gap in inventory

Employees of the Gap store in the Village reported that sometime between 6:15 and 6:30 p.m. on July 15 someone came into the store and walked out with a stack of denim pants. Employees could not provide suspect descriptions.

marginal courses and other tuition. We gave away the store last time. We don't want to do it again. I'll predict this: If another teacher increase is voted, the petitions will be on the street to recall all the school board members who voted for it.

Back to Tonks. He says: "To speak of what is being discussed would interfere with free and frank discussions." Who's protecting, Ron, the NEA and its shakedown demands, or the public who would have to pay them, until they rebel? Ron's got to understand how political democracy works, and about freedom of speech, the Freedom of Information Act ... all linked to the First Amendment.

More dough for teachers? Today, teachers' average salary is $5,777 per month. I use "monthly" rather than yearly numbers because teachers work only nine months a year but get paid for a full year. NEA wants more money to rake out maximum dues from teachers. As salaries go up, teachers dues go up. At present teachers dues are, I believe, $500 a year or $55 a month.

Ron's team should join GM, Ford and Chrysler ... negotiate for "zero ... We've [illegible] now, [illegible] and ... [illegible] ... Ron R. wants ... NEA right in ... will [illegible] ... [illegible] ... wants ... more pay, ... [illegible] ... schools, and the ... [illegible] ... plan.

NEA always negotiates from the basis of the least competent member. His high pay sets the standard for his/her betters. That accounts, in part at least, for our national disgrace, our SAT scores, as against those of every other country.

School strikes are illegal in Michigan. It's time for some district to take on these NEA bandits and get this mess into the courts — local, state and supreme, if necessary.

School board should converse

To the Editor:

In last week's letter to the editor, Carol Marr, whose tenure on the school board expired June 30, states, "I don't know one specific measure that would be taken to cut expenditures."

Well, there is one way the board could immediately cut back and they have heard this from the community ever since they tried to push through the library fiasco. Quit spending hundreds of thousands of dollars on feasibility and architectural studies.

Mrs. Marr also states that the board has asked people in the community to serve on different advisory boards. Ask people who have served on some of these boards. You will find all that these people are asked to serve [illegible] their time to research, make a report and the [illegible] time is always the board's original premise.

It is the same [illegible] we [illegible] with the public for ums. I attended all the open forums dealing with the library expansion. The board heard over and over that this community did not want to support this particular expansion.

Then more forums were held when they decided to build a new library on the Brownell play field. Many good alternatives were suggested. Many professionals said they would donate time to help with a more innovative solution. It was pushed through as the board wanted and was met with a NO at the polls.

The problem was never recognized by the board. They interpreted the "no" vote to mean that the community didn't want to spend money on a "quality" library. What the community wanted was an explanation to why we have large libraries at our high schools that are never open past 3:30 p.m. What the community wanted was more innovative use of what we already had. What the community wanted was answers and dialogue to their questions in public, not in private meetings.

The same thing is happening with 389 St. Clair. At the board meeting, which was held as an open hearing, the community overwhelmingly said no to the board's proposal and asked for a vote. The board still voted to sell the property.

Now we have a petition drive to show the board that this community wants a vote on the 389.

The public forum was another [illegible] performance. Many of the board members said that their minds were made up even before the public hearing. Many said that they could not see any new reason for reconsidering the proposal to sell and move into Barnes even though some outstanding views were presented.

The main problem that confronts this community is the board's lack of publicity about their agenda. Basically, if you don't read about it in the Grosse Pointe News then you don't know about it. The board always complains that the community comes out of the woodwork every time it makes a new decision, but that is because it takes such a long time to find out what is going on.

A good example of how the board operates could be seen recently at the last June board meeting when the agenda concerned the magnet school for the gifted.

The public was not told of this meeting's subject matter in advance. The parents of school children were not aware of this meeting. The parents of the children who are in the program were sent letters telling them about the meeting.

One of the issues was expanding the program. Many parents might have had an interest therefore, many parents should have been notified.

This is the board's standard procedure on all decisions. Invite an audience that agrees with you and pass an action before any real dialogue can begin.

Dialogue is the key word. If you attend a board meeting that is the first thing you will notice. Seldom does the board answer good faith questions are met with adversarial mannerisms. Problems will never be solved to the benefit of this community until the school board addresses issues and individuals at its public meetings.

Let's start the new school year on better footing by requesting that the board televise all its meetings. The school system already has a channel on cable. Let's use it to keep us all informed.

Jim Perry continues school battle

To the Editor:

I spent the Fourth of July exercising my right under the First Amendment of the Constitution of the United States to petition the board of education to put its two proposals on the ballot so the registered voters may vote on them. They are as follows:

1. Should the board of education move out of the 389 St. Clair building and relocate to Barnes School, Grosse Pointe North High School and Grosse Pointe South High School and build a garage to house maintenance vehicles at Parcells school?

2. Should the Grosse Pointe board of education sell the buildings and property at 389 St. Clair, Grosse Pointe, Mich.?

The majority of the people approached with the petition are opposed to the above two proposals and were happy to sign. Some even took petitions to help get signatures.

These citizens felt that the board of education and the administrative offices should stay at 389 St. Clair.

The citizens stated that we have the right to have such an important issue, which will effect our Grosse Pointe school system and its financial status for many years to come, placed on the ballot.

We currently have about 3,000 signatures and growing. Find out how you can help circulate a petition or sign one!

We are consulting with an attorney and proceeding with his counsel.

Sears Taylor, Trustee on the board of education backed by the Concerned Citizens of the Grosse Pointes, is working closely with members of the school board to convince them to listen to the registered voters' wishes and return the administration at 389 St. Clair.

Diabetes support tops locally

To the Editor:

I read with interest your story "Families against diabetes raise money to support research statewide" (July 8).

As director of the Diabetes Program at Harper Hospital and Professor of Internal Medicine and Molecular Biology & Genetics at Wayne State University School of Medicine, I spend all of my professional time treating patients with diabetes and conducting clinical and basic research into treatment and causes of diabetes. I spend most of my "spare" time volunteering for the cause of diabetes, both as Chairman of the Research Policy Committee of the Michigan Affiliate of the American Diabetes Association and a Director of the national American Diabetes Association.

Therefore, I read Jason B. Meixner's story with mixed feelings. On one hand, I congratulate any one involved in increasing awareness of the problems patients with diabetes face and in raising more money for the discovery of the cure or preventive for that

Dibs, dabs and loose ends

Occasionally, when I have no particular topic in mind for a column, I refer to a little notebook I keep containing thoughts jotted down for reference at a future date. Today is one of those days when the brain seems even more wilted than the body and I reach for my trusty book. The opinions [illegible] are not meant to target specific people or events. However, my feelings remain my feelings and I take responsibility for them.

This first subject is a delicate one with which I have wrestled for several years. Far too many of us have been touched in one way or another by divorce. It has been over 30 years since my first experience acting as a pseudo-psychiatrist for a troubled friend. Since that time there have been other similar circumstances. As saddened and compassionate as I may feel about the unhappiness of the situation, I prefer to remain neutral. Too often we are urged to take a stance or choose a side. I also don't need or want to know the seamier sides of a marriage. If one party feels compelled to vent their spleen, I suggest he she seek professional counseling. My position remains as it always has, divorce is an intensely personal matter. It is not a subject to be examined by friends, relatives or children. Most of us prefer not to be manipulated consciously or not into the fray. The chances are that we still care deeply for both parties and their unhappiness is our discomfort too. We share their sorrows and frustrations. Enough said.

Weddings revisited: Now that our daughters are both married I can be vocal about some of the pitfalls involved in planning nuptials. I've said it before, but it bears repeating, one of the most difficult parts of the wedding preparations is compiling the guest list. Most friends of the parents expect to be invited and, unless they have had a wedding, are unaware that the bride and groom provide the names for the majority of the guest list. These celebrations are basically for the young friends and close friends and relatives of the parents. The list can be especially cumbersome if both bride and groom are from the same town. In most situations the bride and groom and their families split the list. It is therefore extremely difficult when acquaintances stop the parents on the street and proclaim that they are saving the date. Occasional differences and much anguish go into the finalizing of the list. Please, don't take it personally if you don't make the final cut. The majority of us entertain our friends at our own private parties; a wedding is another venue entirely. Release those silly grudges and think of the money you saved by not buying a present.

The last subject that threatens to drive me round the bend is the most frustrating, because there appears to be no solution. I am referring to recent attempts to solve two billing disputes. One is a snafu with one of the largest medical insurance companies, and the other with a hospital. The problems are not related. All I want is to speak with a human being. This sounds easier than it is. I have spent hours on the telephone pressing various numbers and entering countless codes and each time I think I'm close to hearing a human voice, I am offered another computer command. I have sought phone numbers to officers of the two institutions and have been promised return phone calls and statement revisions. One of these "situations" is in its 11th month, the other its sixth. One of these days I'll be denied credit across the board and there's no telling how I'll react.

Ma Bell and I are having a little go around too. For the past two weeks we've been receiving collect calls from "A Michigan Correctional Facility." The computer asks us to press one if we will accept the call and two if we decline. I finally gave in after repeated attempts to reach an operator and accepted the call in order to notify the poor inmate that he had been reaching the wrong party all these weeks. It was worth it: no more calls.

That's all the bellyaching for today folks. If the stork keeps his date, this grandma will be off for a couple weeks. Stay cool!

Late bulletin: The inmate called again twice last night. AND, the baby is a GIRL. I'm outta here!

Dodge Shadow links energy, style in 'just right' convertible

Autos

By Jenny King

The Dodge Shadow, soon to be replaced by the all-new P-L compact, is available in coupe sedan and convertible body styles. The soft-top is available with a peppy 3.0-liter V-6.

"Ah," said Brownilocks, settling behind the wheel of her Dodge Shadow ES convertible, "This is just right — not too big, not too hot, not too soft." And off she went, propelled by a hefty 3.0 liter V-6, tan top folded back, gold trimmed wheels flashing in the July sunshine.

Kind of like wearing a piece of junk jewelry with a very tasteful outfit. It works.

But let's get past the great green gold and tan color combination to discover some other phases in this sports car wannabe. The engine, a 141 hp V-6, seems large for the task of pulling a 2,700 pound "boy," but it adds a bit to the driving experience. Anyway, Chrysler has a history of stuffing large engines into its products to make them more fun. For example, remember the little Omni GLH Goes Like Heck with a hot turbo charged 2.2 liter?

More conservative convertible lovers can order their Shadow with a 100 hp 2.5 liter four, and probably save a few bucks both in cost and in potential speeding fines. Base price for the convertible is just over $14,000. ABS is available for an additional $900, an automatic transmission adds $557 to the total.

As for Brownilocks enjoying the bucket seats, they are extremely comfortable. She observed but didn't try the shallow and narrow back seat, a sacrifice for the convertibalizing process. Modern convertibles aren't known for spacious back seats, and the Shadow's truncated two person rear bench is no exception. Our test one's niece and nephew, 9 year old Jane and 11 year old Mark, were too long legged to ride any distance in comfort, but the looks of ecstacy on their uplifted faces as they were chauffeured along Mack Avenue in the July sunshine indicated little concern on their part for knee space.

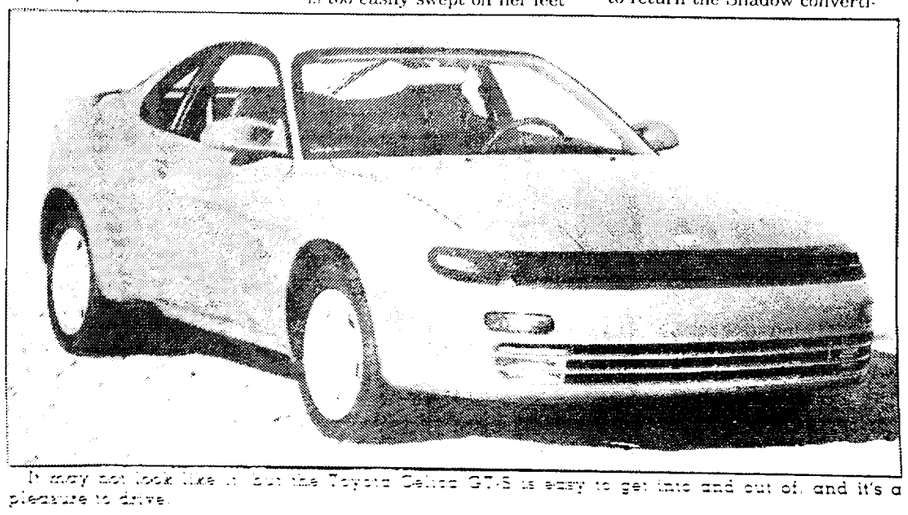

The convertible top on the Shadow is operated by hand. Unlatch it above the windshield, climb out and push it back. Its nifty design has the small rear passenger windows attached to the top, and they simply disappear into the space between outside rear panels and seat as the top is pressed back. The rear window is plastic, so it won't shatter, but it probably will get scratched and scaly in a few years and have to be replaced.

Into every sunny convertible's life, a little rain must fall. Brownilocks reported she almost got caught tempting fate on a gray Sunday evening, and when the raindrops finally found her, she had to pull over and jump out to put the top back up. Actually, she said, it was as fast or faster than using a power-operated top, and think what a nice little aerobic session she had doing it.

Speaking of water, here's a warning: If it's raining, don't leave the front windows open, not even a crack. There are no rain channels for water and it comes right in, if the car is standing still, and collects hugely on the floor.

Lest you think Brownilocks is too easily swept off her feet by any good-looking vehicle that comes down the road, she also made these observations. The handling was a bit soft, she said. More resistance would give the car a sportier and more precise feel. And she thought the Shadow might benefit from a throatier sound in its exhaust system, one that gives the impression that this V-6-powered compact means business.

Then she paid it the highest compliment, saying she hated to return the Shadow convertible to the Chrysler fleet. For this summer, it was "just right," she said.

It may not look like it, but the Toyota Celica GT-S is easy to get into and out of, and it's a pleasure to drive.

The funny thing (so to speak) was the Celica GT-S. Toyota suggested we might want to evaluate its more affordable "sporty" car as we stood in line to drive the all-new, just-introduced, proud and muscular Supra.

Celica, while an older design and not as macho, is still pleasing to the eye. And, as it turned out, it's quite a fine little driving companion as well, in spite of its dainty size.

Reasonably easy to get into and out of, the Celica handles in a refined manner — it's sporty but not brutish, gets into freeway traffic with confidence and generally makes driver and front-seat passenger happy. Mini back seats, complete with belts, are better for briefcases and packages than for people. A power sunroof increases one's options for enjoyment without having to unlatch and fold back "canvas" and hardware.

Celica once boasted the Celica Supra as a member of its clan. Then the Supra chose to go its own way, leaving Celica to fend for itself as a GT-S, an All-Trac Turbo, a GT hardtop or convertible and the Celica ST. This interesting array of models all share features like driver-side air bag, reclining front seats, dual cup holder, cold kit with heavy duty washer tank and variable intermittent wipers.

The All-Trac Turbo, the nameplate's flagship, has all wheel traction and a 200 hp turbocharged engine. The air scoop in the hood isn't just for show on this rascal. Also standard in your $28,600 All Trac Turbo are power windows and locks, cruise control, aluminum alloy wheels and an auto[illegible] steering wheel which retracts automatically when the key is removed from the ignition.

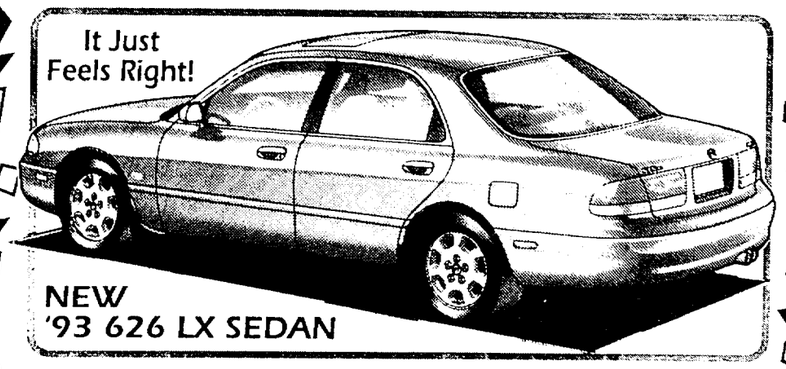

The GT-S shares body and grille with the All Trac but under its hood is a 135 hp 2.4 liter four. Transmission is a 4-speed automatic or 5-speed manual. GT-S prices start at about $18,600.

Are you [illegible] all-wheel, [illegible] 65 hp in the All Trac?

The Celica GT [illegible] and transmission [illegible] S. It has the [illegible]

A good example of how the board operates could be seen recently at the last June board meeting when the agenda concerned the magnet school for the gifted.

The public was not told of this meeting's subject matter in advance. The parents of school children were not aware of this meeting. The parents of the children who are in the program were sent letters telling them about the meeting.

One of the issues was expanding the program. Many parents might have had an interest: therefore, many parents should have been notified.

This is the board's standard procedure on all decisions. Invite an audience that agrees with you and pass an action before any real dialogue can begin.

Dialogue is the key word. If you attend a board meeting that is the first thing you will notice. Seldom does the board converse. Good faith questions are met with adversarial mannerisms. Problems will never be settled for the benefit of this community until the school board converses openly and individually at our public meetings.

Let's start the new school year on better footing by requesting that the board televise all its meetings. The school system already has a channel on cable. Let's use it to keep us all informed.

Jim Perry continues school battle

To the Editor:

I spent the Fourth of July exercising my right under the First Amendment of the Constitution of the United States to petition the board of education to put its two proposals on the ballot so the registered voters may vote on them. They are as follows:

1. Should the board of education move out of the 389 St. Clair building and relocate to Barnes School, Grosse Pointe North High School and Grosse Pointe South High School and build a garage to house maintenance vehicles at Parcells school?

2. Should the Grosse Pointe board of education sell the buildings and property at 389 St. Clair, Grosse Pointe, Mich.?

The majority of the people approached with the petition are opposed to the above two proposals and were happy to sign. Some even took petitions to help get signatures.

Those citizens felt that the board of education and the administrative offices should stay at 389 St. Clair.

The citizens stated that we have the right to have such an important issue, which will effect our Grosse Pointe school system and its financial status for many years to come, placed on the ballot.

We currently have about 3,000 signatures and growing. Find out how you can help circulate a petition or sign one!

We are consulting with an attorney and proceeding with his counsel.

Sears Taylor, Trustee on the board of education backed by the Concerned Citizens of the Grosse Pointes, is working closely with members of the school board to convince them to listen to the registered voters' wishes and retain the administration at 389 St. Clair.

Diabetes support tops locally

To the Editor:

I read with interest your story "Families against diabetes raise money to support research statewide" (July 8).

As director of the Diabetes Program at Harper Hospital and Professor of Internal Medicine and Molecular Biology & Genetics at Wayne State University School of Medicine, I spend all of my professional time treating patients with diabetes and conducting clinical and basic research into treatment and causes of diabetes. I spend most of my "spare" time volunteering for the cause of diabetes, both as Chairman of the Research Policy Committee of the Michigan Affiliate of the American Diabetes Association and a Director of the national American Diabetes Association.

Therefore, I read Jason R. Meisner's story with mixed feelings. On one hand, I congratulate any one involved in increasing awareness of the problems patients with diabetes face and in raising more money for the discovery of the cure or preventive for that

Occasionally, when I have no particular topic in mind for a column, I refer to a little notebook I keep containing thoughts jotted down for reference at a future date. Today is one of those days when the brain seems even more wilted than the body and I reach for my trusty book. The opinions stated are not meant to target specific people or events. However, my feelings remain my feelings and I take responsibility for them.

This first subject is a delicate one with which I have wrestled for several years. Far too many of us have been touched in one way or another by divorce. It has been over 30 years since my first experience acting as a pseudo-psychiatrist for a troubled friend. Since that time there have been other similar circumstances. As saddened and compassionate as I may feel about the unhappiness of the situation, I prefer to remain neutral. Too often we are urged to take a stance or choose a side. I also don't need or want to know the seamier sides of a marriage. If one party feels compelled to vent their spleen, I suggest he/she seek professional counseling. My position remains as it always has, divorce is an intensely personal matter. It is not a subject to be examined by friends, relatives or children. Most of us prefer not to be manipulated (consciously or not) into the fray. The chances are that we still care deeply for both parties and their unhappiness is our discomfort too. We share their sorrows and frustrations. Enough said.

Weddings revisited: Now that our daughters are both married I can be vocal about some of the pitfalls involved in planning nuptials. I've said it before, but it bears repeating, one of the most difficult parts of the wedding preparations is compiling the guest list. Most friends of the parents expect to be invited and, unless they have had a wedding, are unaware that the bride and groom provide the names for the majority of the guest list. These celebrations are basically for the young friends and close friends and relatives of the parents. The list can be especially cumbersome if both bride and groom are from the same town. In most situations the bride and groom and their families split the list. It is therefore extremely difficult when acquaintances stop the parents on the street and proclaim that they are saving the date. Occasional differences and much anguish go into the finalizing of the list. Please, don't take it personally if you don't make the final cut. The majority of us entertain our friends at our own private parties; a wedding is another venue entirely. Release the silly grudges and think of the money you saved by not buying a present.

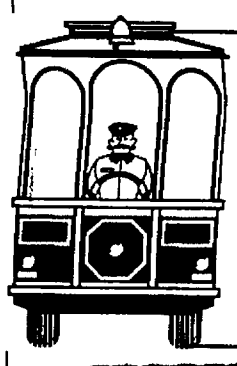

The last subject that threatens to drive me round the bend is the most frustrating, because there appears to be no solution. I am referring to recent attempts to solve two billing disputes. One is a snafu with one of the largest medical insurance companies, and the other with a hospital. The problems are not related. All I want is to speak with a human being. This sounds easier than it is. I have spent hours on the telephone pressing various numbers and entering countless codes and each time I think I'm close to hearing a human voice, I am offered another computer command. I have sought phone numbers to officers of the two institutions and have been promised return phone calls and statement revisions. One of these "situations" is in its 11th month, the other its sixth. One of these days I'll be denied credit across the board and there's no telling how I'll react.

Ma Bell and I are having a little go around too. For the past two weeks we've been receiving collect calls from "A Michigan Correctional Facility." The computer asks us to press one if we will accept the call and two if we decline. I finally gave in after repeated attempts to reach an operator and accepted the call in order to notify the poor inmate that he had been reaching the wrong party all these weeks. It was worth it, no more calls.

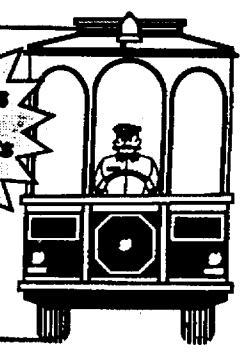

That's all the bellyaching for today folks. If the stork keeps his date, this grandma will be off for a couple weeks. Stay cool!

Late bulletin: The inmate called again twice last night. AND, the baby is a GIRL. I'm outta here!

Dodge Shadow links energy, style in 'just right' convertible

Autos

By Jenny King

The Dodge Shadow, soon to be replaced by the all-new P-L compact, is available in coupe, sedan and convertible body styles. The soft-top is available with a peppy 3.0-liter V-6.

"Ah," said Brownilocks, settling behind the wheel of her Dodge Shadow ES convertible, "this is just right — not too big, not too hot, not too soft." And off she went, propelled by a hefty 3.0-liter V-6, tan top folded back, gold-trimmed wheels flashing in the July sunshine.

Indeed, the compact Shadow convertible was just right. And very handsome, too, with its dark green paint and tan interior. Even the gaudy fake woodgrain setting for the compact disc player in the center of the instrument panel was OK — kind of like wearing a piece of junk jewelry with a very tasteful outfit. It works.

But let's get past the great green-gold-and-tan color combination to discover some other pluses in this sports car wannabe. The engine, a 141-hp V-6, seems large for the task of pulling a 2,700-pound "toy," but it adds a lot to the driving experience. Anyway, Chrysler has a history of stuffing large engines into its products to make them more fun. For example, remember the little Omni GLH (Goes Like Heck) with a hot turbocharged 2.2-liter?

More conservative convertible lovers can order their Shadow with a 100-hp 2.5-liter four, and probably save a few bucks both in cost and in potential speeding fines. Base price for the convertible is just over $14,000. ABS is available for an additional $900; an automatic transmission adds $557 to the total.

As for Brownilocks enjoying the bucket seats, they are extremely comfortable. (She observed but didn't try the shallow and narrow back seat, a sacrifice for the convertibalizing process.) Modern convertibles aren't known for spacious back seats, and the Shadow's truncated two-person rear bench is no exception. Our heroine's niece and nephew, 9-year-old Jane and 11-year-old Mark, were too long-legged to ride any distance in comfort, but the looks of ecstasy on their uplifted faces as they were chauffeured along Mack Avenue in the July sunshine indicated little concern on their part for knee space.

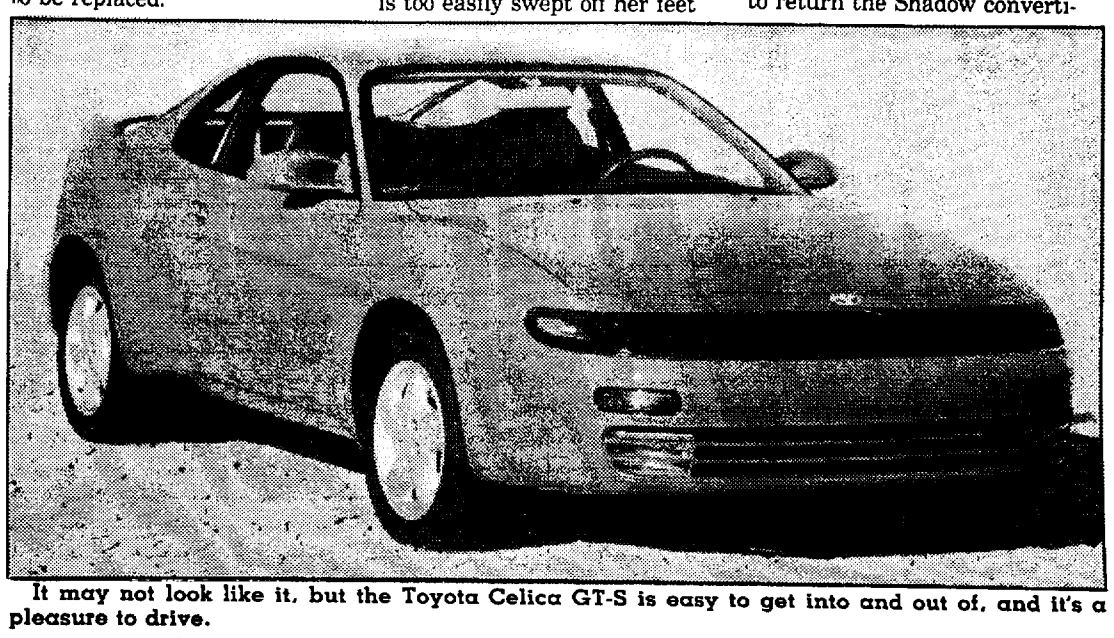

The convertible top on the Shadow is operated by hand. Unlatch it above the windshield, climb out and push it back. Its nifty design has the small rear passenger windows attached to the top, and they simply disappear into the space between outside rear panels and seat as the top is pressed back. The rear window is plastic, so it won't shatter, but it probably will get scratched and scaly in a few years and have to be replaced.

Into every sunny convertible's life, a little rain must fall. Brownilocks reported she almost got caught tempting fate on a gray Sunday evening, and when the raindrops finally found her, she had to pull over and jump out to put the top back up. Actually, she said, it was as fast or faster than using a power-operated top, and think what a nice little aerobic session she had doing it.

Speaking of water, here's a warning: If it's raining, don't leave the front windows open, not even a crack. There are no rain channels for water and it comes right in, if the car is standing still, and collects hugely on the floor.

Lest you think Brownilocks is too easily swept off her feet by any good-looking vehicle that comes down the road, she also made these observations. The handling was a bit soft, she said. More resistance would give the car a sportier and more precise feel. And she thought the Shadow might benefit from a throatier sound in its exhaust system, one that gives the impression that this V-6-powered compact means business.

Then she paid it the highest compliment, saying she hated to return the Shadow convertible to the Chrysler fleet. For this summer, it was "just right," she said.

It may not look like it, but the Toyota Celica GT-S is easy to get into and out of, and it's a pleasure to drive.

The funny thing (so to speak) was the Celica GT-S. Toyota suggested we might want to evaluate its more affordable "sporty" car as we stood in line to drive the all-new, just-introduced, proud and muscular Supra.

Celica, while an older design and not as macho, is still pleasing to the eye. And, as it turned out, it's quite a fine little driving companion as well, in spite of its dainty size.

Reasonably easy to get into and out of, the Celica handles in a refined manner — it's sporty but not brutish, gets into freeway traffic with confidence and generally makes driver and front-seat passenger happy. Mini back seats, complete with belts, are better for briefcases and packages than for people. A power sunroof increases one's options for enjoyment without having to unlatch and fold back "canvas" and hardware.

Celica once boasted the Celica Supra as a member of its clan. Then the Supra chose to go its own way, leaving Celica to fend for itself as a GT-S, an All-Trac Turbo, a GT hardtop or convertible and the Celica ST. This interesting array of models all share features like driver-side air bag, reclining front seats, dual-cup holder, cold kit with heavy-duty washer tank and variable intermittent wipers.

The All-Trac Turbo, the nameplate's flagship, has all-wheel traction and a 200-hp turbocharged engine. The air scoop in the hood isn't just for show on this rascal. Also standard in your $28,600 All-Trac Turbo are power windows and locks, cruise control, aluminum alloy wheels and an auto-tilt steering wheel which raises automatically when the key is removed from the ignition.

The GT-S shares body and grille with the All-Trac, but under its hood is a 135-hp 2.2-liter four. Transmissions are a 4-speed automatic or 5-speed manual. GT-S prices start at about $18,600.

Are you sure you need the all-wheel traction and the extra 65 hp in the All-Trac?

The Celica GT shares engine and transmissions with the GT-S. It has the distinction of a

7 challengers, 2 incumbents face off in Farms primary

By Chip Chapman
Staff Writer

Grosse Pointe Farms will spend more than $5,000 in the Aug. 3 council primary to reduce a field of nine candidates to eight.

Farms voters will be able to choose four of the nine, with the eight highest vote-getters in the primary vying for four council seats in the Nov. 2 general election.

With council members John Crowley and Bruce Rockwell stepping down, there will be at least two new members on the council in November.

Incumbents Gail Kaess and John Danaher will be trying to retain their seats. Challengers Erin Barthel, Chris Corden, John DeHayes, Lisa Gandelot, Ken George, Elaine Hartmann and Ron Kneiser will try to join or unseat them.

During the past two weeks the Grosse Pointe News conducted interviews with each of the candidates asking them questions ranging from their views on the recent reassessment to senior housing to the futuring study.

Erin J. Barthel

Erin Barthel

Erin J. Barthel is making her first bid for a seat on the Farms council.

A lifelong resident of the Farms, Barthel is a graduate of the University of Michigan at Dearborn. She is a legislative aide for state Sen. John Kelly.

Barthel has been involved with the futuring study, serving on the public safety committee. In this area, she has worked with police encouraging self-awareness and CPR classes for students and older citizens.

"I think the futuring process is a great way to work with others in the community," she said. "I'm impressed with the cooperation."

Barthel acknowledges the need for senior housing, and feels that private financing would work best in order for the Farms to maintain control.

Working for a state senator whose district covers both Grosse Pointe and Detroit, Barthel feels that with a new Detroit mayor, it is important to improve communication between the two communities.

"We have to bridge the gap," she said. "We have to work together, and Mack Avenue is where it should begin."

Christopher Corden

Christopher Corden

Christopher Corden is making his first bid for a seat on the council.

He is a partner with the law firm of Honigman, Miller, Schwartz & Cohn, where his principal area of practice is in real estate matters.

He is concerned with the area of the Farms along the interior borders of the city away from the lake.

"More needs to be spent along Mack Avenue," Corden said. "We need to improve the attractiveness of the city, which will increase the value of homes near Mack Avenue."

The futuring study is critical to the longterm vitality of the Pointes and Harper Woods, he said.

"We can't have a city that spends its time reacting to problems — we have to anticipate them," he said.

Corden feels that an improved business district is needed. He would like to see cities cooperate in marketing their business districts. He said a development authority would help create a lively downtown area such as those found in Birmingham or Plymouth.

Traffic is a major concern, Corden said.

"The city has allowed traffic conditions to reduce property values," he said. "Bus routes should be shifted to wider, less populated streets. Speeding and noise pollution are also problems."

With historic buildings as an asset, Corden suggested that these buildings should be converted to senior housing when they are for sale.

"Elderly people play a significant role in a community," he said. "To have them move away is unfortunate."

Corden believes in civic responsibility and giving something back.

"This community is the place in which I've chosen to live," he said. "I want it to be around for a while. I want to make a contribution."

John Danaher

John Danaher

John Danaher is seeking his second term on the council.

In 1989, he led all vote-getters as a challenger. Danaher is a vice president for development at Cottage Hospital.

During his first term on the council, he has chaired two principal committees — the budget and audit and the ordinance committees. He serves as co-chairman of the futuring and centennial committees. He has also served as developmental chairman of the Farms Foundation.

As a member of the futuring committee, Danaher is pleased with what he has seen so far.

"We've been shepherding the process since day one," he said. "The Farms never really thought about its future. Long-range planning is important."

Danaher agrees that senior housing is badly needed, and is one of the main thrusts of the futuring committee. He feels that the futuring committee has sufficiently addressed the issue and it will be at the top of the agenda.

Even with a new mayor in Detroit, Danaher believes the Detroit City Airport expansion is not a dead issue, and feels the Farms and all of the Pointes should continue to oppose it.

Regarding the reassessment conducted this past year, Danaher believes the process went fairly well.

"The intentions were good," he said. "Any 'across the board' formula will result in the 'haves and have nots,' but I think the appeals board did an admirable job. A majority received some tax relief.

"We've maintained the line on taxes. We have the lowest city taxes with the highest level of services. And we've been able to add about $560,000 to our general fund."

John DeHayes

John DeHayes

John DeHayes, who first ran in 1989, is making his second bid for a council seat.

He is the sales manager at GenCorp Automotive, responsible for all current sales to Ford Motor Co. and Chrysler Corp. and their transplant companies.

When DeHayes ran in 1989, he said there were seven issues facing the Farms: recycling, advanced life support, traffic flow, the War Memorial liquor license, the Mack/Moross area, senior housing and the Detroit City Airport expansion.

He feels the council has done a good job resolving the first four issues. DeHayes said he is running because the other three issues still face the Farms.

DeHayes suggested that the Mack/Moross area could be used for senior housing or as a new government center.

"Just because Southwest Airlines has announced its departure from City Airport, no one should assume that the airport expansion plans will disappear," he said.

Although not directly involved with the futuring study, he believes it "is of paramount importance. This citizen-driven effort hopefully will allow all the Pointes and Harper Woods to work more closely together toward a common goal for the sake of everyone's future."

DeHayes feels protecting the merchants on the Hill is very important. He said there are too many service industries there, which contribute to traffic problems in the Farms.

DeHayes would also like to make sure that ordinances that are enacted are put into effect, and not just words on paper. He cited the peel and chip ordinance for houses and the Dumpster ordinance for businesses that he feels have been ignored.

DeHayes' goal, if elected, "is to maintain the integrity and beauty of our city and act upon its citizens' concerns through open and impartial communication."

Lisa Gandelot

Lisa Gandelot

Lisa Gandelot is making her first bid for a council seat.

A life-long Grosse Pointer and 16-year resident of the Farms, she is the president of the board of trustees of the Children's Home of Detroit. She has served on the boards of the Junior League of Detroit, the Grosse Pointe War Memorial, Grosse Pointe Memorial Church, the Mother's Club of Grosse Pointe South and the Grosse Pointe Historical Society.

She feels that her position with the Children's Home of Detroit, being in charge of a $6 million budget, has provided experience she can bring to the council.

Gandelot serves on the futuring committee and the Grosse Pointe Farms Historical Advisory Committee.

As a member of the futuring committee's preservation and beautification committee Gandelot is concerned with maintaining the community's heritage.

"Housing stock is so critical to our community," she said. "Without it, we wouldn't be the community we are."

Gandelot was president of the historical society when the futuring study was started. She believes the historical society has made an impact in the community and hopes that recommendations from the futuring study will be implemented, such as having a bed and breakfast and nominating certain areas of the Farms for a listing on the National Register of Historic Places.

Gandelot said that it is critical that the senior housing issue be addressed.

"It's terrible that people in the community have to leave when they are older," she said.

The Farms should have more events like the centennial, Gandelot said.

"It fosters good feelings about the community," she said.

"I'm vitally interested in the community. I have pride in it and I feel I would be an enhancement to the council."

Ken George

Ken George is making his second bid for a seat on the Farms council.

In 1991, he said an illness during the month before the election prevented him from campaigning as much as he would have liked, and he failed to win a spot on the council.

He is the owner of Ken George Used Shelving in Detroit. George is the founder and organizer of the Grosse Pointe Christmas Tree Recycling/Educational Expo. He is a member of the Wayne County chapter of MADD and is the liaison to the Michigan State Police and local police departments concerning video cameras in police cars and their effect in convicting drunken drivers.

"I want to try to maintain the quality of life in the Farms," he said. "I'm concerned about taxes, but the city's slice of our property taxes is small compared with what goes to the county and the schools."

He is glad the Farms took the leadership role in the futuring effort.

"We have distinct communities, but we also have a lot in common," he said. "We must maximize mutual aid services."

George said that the five Pointes have twice as much fire equipment as St. Clair Shores and have 15,000 fewer residents. He also said that the Farms and St. Clair Shores have relatively the same number of police cars, even though the population of St. Clair Shores is about five times that of the Farms.

Senior housing is an issue George feels needs addressing. He said that only 22 percent of Pointe homeowners have children in the public schools, which means there is a large older population here. Because of this he believes senior housing will be a reality in the Farms and mentioned the Mack and Moross area as a possible site.

"We live in a community that is not controversial," George said. "No one lives here temporarily waiting to buy their dream home elsewhere."

Hartmann

Elaine Hartmann

Elaine Hartmann is running for the Farms council for the first time, but it's not her first bid for public office.

In 1992, she lost in an attempt to unseat Rep. Bill Bryant. in the state Legislature's 13th District.

Hartmann, a retired schoolteacher, currently serves on the Farms Planning Committee, the Farms Historical Advisory Committee and the Futuring Committee.

She was on the Farms Advisory Traffic Commission from 1986-88 and was vice president of the Grosse Pointe Historical Society from 1992-93.

Hartmann is running for the council because she wants "to maintain the quality of life in Grosse Pointe Farms."

"I'm against the destructive development that has altered the community," she said. "Large homes have been demolished in favor of subdivisions. We should preserve old homes and green spaces."

Viewing housing as the Farms' biggest asset, Hartmann would like to see a preservation ordinance enacted to preserve the community's older homes.

She would like to see the Farms have a housing authority through which the issue of senior housing could be addressed. She hopes the Farms can purchase property to construct a facility for senior housing. If not, she suggested that some of the older homes could be converted to this use.

Hartmann would like to see the Hill revitalized as a shopping area and would like to see beautification of the commercial property along Mack Avenue.

Gail Kaess

Gail Kaess

Gail Kaess is seeking her fifth term on the Farms council.

She is the executive assistant to Wayne County executive Ed McNamara. She is also the Farms delegate to SEMCOG (Southeast Michigan Council of Government), where she was recently elected chairman, and is a member of the Michigan Municipal League.

She is spending part of the summer at Harvard University's John F. Kennedy School of Government after being named the 1993 recipient of the Taubman Fellowship for Executive Excellence.

As the Farms' co-representative on the futuring coordinating committee, Kaess said a top priority is implementing the results of the study.

"The futuring report will be important," she said. "I hope every city will pick at least one item from it."

Kaess believes the futuring study has helped the five Pointes and Harper Woods by making the communities more cooperative. She feels the communities should and will maintain their own governments, but could save tax dollars by sharing more city services.

Taxes are always a concern in the Pointes, she said, noting that the Farms completed its first reassessment in 30 years this past year.

"It was badly needed," she said. "I think it worked out well."

With assessments computerized now, she believes it will be best for the Farms in the long run.

"The Farms still has the lowest city taxes," she said. "We have maintained the tax base and still have top-notch services."

Ronald V. Kneiser

Ronald V. Kneiser

Ronald V. Kneiser is making his first run for the Farms council.

Kneiser is an attorney and certified public accountant, specializing in taxation, real estate, corporate and other financially-related areas of the law.

He worked in audit and tax practices at Arthur Andersen & Co. After graduating from the University of Detroit School of Law he worked for the law firm of Bodman, Longley & Dahling.

He is now a self-employed attorney, CPA and business consultant in the Farms.

Kneiser is currently a member of the Farms Property Tax Board of Review.

He thought the reassessment this past year went fairly well.

"We were eager to grant immediate relief when mistakes were made," he said. "More than 70 percent of those who appealed received some relief. The system will never be totally fair, but we are trying.

"We pay a premium, and get premium services, but we should be efficient."

He would like to improve the review process, suggesting full board reviews and faster responses to those making appeals.

Kneiser has not been personally involved in the futuring study, but has read the reports.

"We might see the consolidation of some services," he said, "but futuring is about more than just saving money."

Kneiser also sees senior housing as an issue that must be resolved.

"Sitting on the board of review I have heard, 'You're taxing me out of Grosse Pointe,'" he said.

He would like to see a local housing authority created to deal with this issue and avoid involving federal or state funds.

"We're trying to solve a specific problem for a specific community," he said.

The Mack and Moross area is a major concern, Kneiser said, with the stores there generating over 90 percent of the crime in the Farms.

"Residents of the Farms, in general, don't shop there," he said. "It's the welcome mat to the Farms. I think it's critical that the Farms acquire the property."

Kneiser believes in regional cooperation and supports the Farms' membership in SEMCOG. As SEMCOG members, Kneiser said, the Farms could get outside funds to help pave Kercheval from Fisher to Kerby.

With John Crowley and Bruce Rockwell leaving the council — two people with strong financial backgrounds — Kneiser feels there should be someone on the council who can fill this void.

"When it comes to finances, budgets and audits, someone is needed who can dig into these issues," he said.

dreaded disease. On the other hand, the story contained many half-truths and a lot of misleading information. I would like to list some of my significant concerns.

Most importantly, the article contends that no other efforts are being made to discover the cure for diabetes or distribute information about it other than those of Miami-based Diabetes Research Institute (yet the title of the article speaks about support research statewide; which state?).

Second, it urges people to send money directly to that institute. To set the record straight about ongoing support for diabetes research, the Federal Government is supporting diabetes research in some of the following ways:

1. The National Institute of Diabetes and Digestive and Kidney Diseases with its budget of $716 million spends about a half of that amount on diabetes research. The recently finished $156 million study definitively proving for the first time that tight glucose control in type I (insulin-dependent) diabetes could prevent diabetes complications was the largest diabetes research study ever and was supported by the National Institutes of Health.

2. The Veterans Administration is in the middle of a similar multi-million dollar study in type II (noninsulin-dependent diabetes). As an aside, in contrast to what your article stated, over 95 percent of diabetic patients in the United States have type II diabetes in which the body does make enough insulin but does not know how to use it. Contrary to your contention that three million children in the U.S. have diabetes, there are actually about a quarter million diabetics under 20 years of age and the vast majority experience onset of the disease during their middle or later years of life.

3. The National Institutes of Health will spend $8 million to search for the diabetes gene next year.

4. The Centers for Diseases Control Division of Diabetes Translation, which is directly charged with putting into daily practice the latest scientific discoveries, is spending $19.5 million in 1994 on these efforts.

5. Closer to home, the University of Michigan's Diabetes Research and Training Center is the largest of the half-dozen such centers in the country. This multimillion dollar Center is responsible for developing both the newest research results and best ways to treat patients and train new practitioners.

Long-established voluntary agencies, the American Diabetes Association and the Juvenile Diabetes Foundation have both been extensively involved in the fight against diabetes:

1. American Diabetes Association, in its 54th year, is spending this year about $40 million for programs and services for the patients with diabetes and about $7 million in research grants to scientists. The Michigan affiliate is raising over $1 million each year for the educational and various program activities in the state.

2. The Juvenile Diabetes Foundation is spending volunteer donations directly to support research activities to the tune of about $15 million a year. Both of these organizations have an active network of professional staff and volunteers right here in the Metropolitan Detroit area.

Last but not least, our state is blessed with having hundreds of dedicated first-rate diabetes researchers. In addition to the University of Michigan, we have our own active research program at Harper Hospital/Wayne State University as well as successful programs at Henry Ford Hospital, Michigan State University, the Upjohn Co. and Parke-Davis, just to mention a few.

I would like to urge as many people as possible to get active in the fight against diabetes. It affects directly 14 million people in the United States and indirectly all of us. Diabetes cost us nationally $91.8 billion in 1992 but dollars cannot be put on the suffering of those affected.

However, I would think that it makes much more sense to support well-established organizations with track record in the field, operating in our state rather than to launch new efforts benefiting a single out-of-state institution.

For more information on how you can help, please call the American Diabetes Association-Michigan Affiliate at 1-800-525-9292. Thank you.

Re: Korte

To the Editor:

I am sure there are many other Grosse Pointe Park residents who have read the letters to the editor concerning the closing of Korte street, but like myself have been too busy to take the time to write a letter.

It's time for Windmill Pointe residents to speak up in defense of the Korte street closing.

We moved to the Windmill Pointe area from the Alter/Mack area of Grosse Pointe Park presumably to a larger house and a quieter and more secure neighborhood. Property values are higher here because of the lake border and have become more stabilized because of the closing of Alter at Windmill Pointe Drive and more recently the closing of Korte at Alter. It's not unthinkable that Avondale and Essex also could be considered for future closings.

The riots of the 60's caused Park values to decline and only recently has the Park seen a resurgence in property values, partly because of the older, bigger homes having more appeal to families, but also because of the inroads made in securing the Park and making residents feel that their neighborhoods (albeit adjacent to Detroit) are still as quiet, serene and secure as other neighborhoods in the Farms, City, Shores and Woods. We must protect our property values and maintain low crime rates in our Park neighborhoods.

In retrospect, we experienced a change in our old neighborhood when the Esquire Theater was open — our schoolyards and playgrounds which were in a direct path between the Esquire Theater and Mack had become meeting places for unruly non-residents — I witnessed groups of youths routinely assembling in the late afternoons in the schoolyards displaying aggressive, brutal behavior and language to each other and intimidating Park residents and their children from using their own schoolyard playgrounds. This made residents feel unsafe in their own neighborhoods.

My old neighborhood also experienced a high rate of garage thefts, bicycle thefts and some break-ins where kids coming two on one bike would leave two on two bikes. The closing of the Esquire Theater helped to reduce these problems.

All residents in the Windmill Pointe area and in the Mack/Alter area are affected by border traffic and access roads between the city of Detroit and Grosse Pointe. Everyone knows why the Park decided to close off road access to Detroit and Alter road — not because of racially motivated feelings but because of the reduction in traffic, the crime rate, and the attendant improvement in property values. All Pointers know that the proximity of Detroit to Grosse Pointe neighborhoods has a direct impact on property values — because of the traffic, the noise, and the crime.

One letter to the editor sought to link the closing of Korte to the Fox Creek sewage problem. The Fox Creek sewage problem should be addressed as a separate issue. It is not related to the Korte street closing or any other street closings that might occur in the near future along Mack or Alter Road.

For most families, the largesse of their financial assets are tied up in their homes. There is nothing racially motivated about trying to maintain your property values or protecting and ensuring the safety of your loved ones.

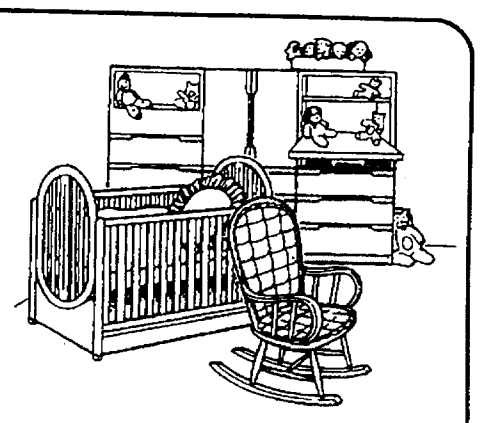

Grosse Pointe Park has long shown hospitality to Detroit residents — adults and children — who trick-or-treat every Halloween in our neighborhoods.

It is an overwhelming experience when hundreds of Detroiters participate in this heavy duty treat-or-treating. Some residents are afraid to open their doors to neighborhood children because they feel threatened by the strangers coming to their door at night.

These are not cute little kids, dressed up in costumes, timid about coming up to porches with lighted jack-o-lanterns. There are as many adults and teenagers (without costumes) as there are young children at your door with pillow cases, demanding candy. It makes it difficult to enjoy Halloween night and causes many residents to shut down early or not open up at all.

I resent being told by Detroit residents and the Grosse Pointe News editorial that I should sacrifice my neighborhood in the interest of community relations.

If there is a deep concern about improving the community relations between Detroit and the Grosse Pointes, let all five Pointes participate in improving these relations. May I suggest a community "mixer" at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial every year on the Fourth of July?

Bon Secours 'superb'

To the Editor:

The recent article on Bon Secours Hospital was of particular interest to this former Pointer and intermittent reader of your enjoyable paper.

Having spent a month of my life in Bon Secours with a serious pneumonia as a 9-year-old, and having visited its emergency room on a number of occasions with all manner of sports-related injuries, I developed a deep fondness for the splendid treatment I received. The fact that my father was counsel to the Sisters for many years may have biased my judgment somewhat, but I think most everyone would be expected to praise the service and care that they have received at this outstanding medical center.

One historical aspect not mentioned in the article, one which ought to have been accentuated, was the difficult and divisive delay which accompanied the expansion of the hospital in the 60's. The title of the article includes the words "grows with community," but the absence of any referene to the fact that growth was nearly stymied leaves the article incomplete. Wishing to reveal only the positive is exemplary but fails to provide a full view, including some bitter facets of the hospital's history that leave the greatness of it misunderstood.

Due largely to the workings of some citizens seemingly disinterested in the expansion of a Catholic hospital in their community, and encouraged by access to City Council and zoning board members, the building plans were caused to be litigated under the pretext that existent zoning would not accommodate the envisioned and planned growth. The entire process consumed vast amounts of time and energy and devoured scarce resources. The waste, added expense and delay associated with this long struggle represent a sad chapter in an otherwise momentous history.

Today this fine hospital stands as a symbol that excellence can overcome any obstacles in its path. Grosse Pointe and its surrounding communities are fortunate to have a facility with the stature and proud record of Bon Secours.

G.P. Cable's not listening

To the Editor:

I have a comment for the lady from Grosse Pointe Woods who in your letters to the editor just trashed Grosse Pointe Cable Co. I say good for you. You have hit the nail dead on the head.

I do sincerely hope they read it. Grosse Pointe Cable couldn't care less about their customers and what they want. Just by the way they pulled HSC (Home Shopping Club), former Channel 26, should indicate that.

I would never have thought having 30-some channels and still not having anything to watch. But it has happened and more times than not. Grosse Pointe Cable had better wake up.

Other cable companies in the area offer their patrons a whole lot more than what we get and they listen to the people who pay their salaries. The Grosse Pointe Cable Co. should try that. They may even have happy clientele.

Parade a success

To the Editor:

On behalf of the Grosse Pointe War Memorial, I would like to thank the Centennial Parade's numerous participants for making it a huge success. Thank you for sharing your community spirit with so many friends and neighbors.

We would also like to thank the city departments of Grosse Pointe Farms and City for their assistance and all the parade volunteers and spectators who came out to join in the fun.

The Grosse Pointe War Memorial Association was proud to coordinate this historic event — for ours is such an outstanding and unique community to be a part of.

GOP, where's your float?

To the Editor:

The organizers of the Grosse Pointe Farms and City Centennial Parade are to be commended for a very successful parade. My only personal disappointment was the lack of a Republican Club float — after seeing that great Dixieland Band on the Grosse Pointe Democratic Club Float.

I have to give the Democrat Club credit as their members seem to have real community spirit. Come on my fellow Republicans — get on the ball!

Grosse Pointe Park earmarks funds for PAATS bus service

By Jim Stickford
Staff Writer

The Grosse Pointe Park city council has allocated $4,258 in SMART funds for the Pointe Area Assisted Transportation Service (PAATS). The money came from a $9,858 SMART grant, said PAATS chairman and assistant to the Park's city manager, Jeff Mueller.

The rest of the SMART money allocated to the Park will be used to purchase SMART tickets for senior citizens, Mueller said.

"These tickets will allow Grosse Pointe and Harper Woods senior citizens to take the bus to the mall or wherever SMART buses go," Mueller said. "The tickets will be at the Park city hall, and seniors just have to stop by and pick them up."

SMART issues grants to communities in the areas served by its buses. The amount of the grant is based on population of the community involved, said Mueller.

The city decided to spend half the grant on PAATS because of the service PAATS provides for senior citizens and the handicapped.

"PAATS was started in 1989," Mueller said. "The idea was to provide door-to-door service for those who can't get around on their own. We have two modified buses that seat 12 people. People who qualify for our service call us up, and arrange for transportation to where they want to go within the area our buses travel in."

PAATS has a priority system, said Mueller. First priority is given to those who need to visit doctors or medical facilities. Priority is next given to those who need to purchase food, and then finally for those who wish to make social calls.

PAATS manager Susan Graham said that the buses run from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday. In order to make the system work efficiently, Graham said that people needing rides should call about two days in advance, though exceptions are made for emergencies.

PAATS bus routes don't extend beyond Gratiot and 11 Mile, said Graham. The downtown routes are limited to the medical center and Henry Ford Hospital. Buses don't go downtown after 4 p.m.

PAATS' budget in 1992 was $560,000 said Mueller. They are trying to get another bus. Last year, the program transported about 10,000 riders, and because of the demand, the buses were in almost constant use. That, of course, wears the buses out faster.

The buses are wheelchair equipped. Senior citizens 60 and older and handicapped residents of the five Grosse Pointes and Harper Woods are eligible to use the system free of charge.

Local math whiz to take his knowledge to MIT this fall

By Nick Chiappetta
Special Writer

Local math whiz Daniel Weber of Harper Woods, a recent graduate of Grosse Pointe North High School, likes a challenge. The 18-year-old Weber has participated in math competitions every year since sixth grade.

Just before graduation last month, Weber was one of 31 students from Michigan who competed in the American Regions Mathematics League tournament at the University of Iowa on June 5.

He helped the Michigan All Star team place 11th among the top high school math students in the country — a jump of seven notches over its previous year's performance.

Weber believes competing helped prepare him for college. In September, he will start classes at MIT, where he hopes to major in mathematics or engineering.

"It made me realize what I can expect at MIT challengewise," Weber said.

Weber was referring to the skills of both his teammates and his opponents, many of whom are also going to MIT.

The competition involved four rounds of mathematical problem solving in group, individual and relay team categories.

Bob Messer, associate professor of mathematics at Albion College, was one coach of the Michigan team. He said students on the team were the top scorers out of more than 16,000 who competed in the state competition last fall.

The state competition was held at individual high schools and involved problem-solving and essay questions. The top 100 students were chosen and 31 decided to go on to the national competition.

This was the second year in a row Weber has competed at the national level.

"These students are really the top students in the country," Messer said.

He said the competition was started in order to get students together with others who have similar interests.

Messer said this is the fifth year Michigan students have participated at the national level and have done relatively well. Last year Michigan finished in 18th place.

40 stores unite in huge sale

Friday Night Live and Saturday Too returns to the Village the weekend of July 30 and 31, when approximately 40 stores along Kercheval will take to the streets and sidewalks with merchandise.

Huge price reductions attract thousands of shoppers to the event each year. White elephants, remainders, seasonal items and more will be reduced to rock bottom — 40 percent to 80 percent off — as room is made for incoming fall merchandise.

Kercheval will be closed between Cadieux and Neff during Friday Night Live, from 6-10 p.m. on July 30, and a party atmosphere will reign. Along with the great sales, there will be balloons, on-street food booths and late-night restaurant hours.

The Goodwill Blenders, a leading barbershop quartet, will sing along the entire three-block area, and from 6-8:30 p.m. the Balduck Mountain Ramblers, a traditional American string band, will provide pop and folk music. The Banjoes of Michigan will also play from 6-8:30 p.m. Pockets the Clown and psychic readings will round out the festivities.

On July 31, Saturday Too will be held from 9:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Kercheval will be open to vehicular traffic, but the great bargains will continue on the sidewalk.

In case of bad weather, the raindate is Saturday, Aug. 7 from 9:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m.

No refund angers men

Three Detroit men grew incensed on July 3 when employees of the Mack and Moross Kroger's store refused to accept their deposit-refund bottles and cans. The men retaliated by smashing a plate-glass door.

The trio had come into the store pushing three shopping carts filled with beer bottles and cans. When advised by store employees that they could not accept the bottles and cans, the men became belligerent and shattered a 5-by-3 plate-glass door.

Employees were able to get the license plate number of the car the men drove away in and Grosse Pointe Farms police found one of the suspects at Harper and Kingsville. The man said he was angry because the store would not take the bottles and cans, so he hit the glass door with his fist. The young man said he was willing to p[illegible] for the damages.

Woods assistant city administrator enjoys working in Grosse Pointe

By Jim Stickford
Staff Writer

Grosse Pointe Woods is quite a change for rookie assistant city administrator Jane Bais-DiSessa, 37, a native of San Antonio, Texas.

"I live in Holly, but I enjoy the daily commute," said Bais-DiSessa. "Just looking at the trees and wildlife is a treat. We don't have this kind of growth in Texas. I am also getting used to basements. In Texas, we don't have basements they're new to me."

Before becoming the Woods' assistant city administrator, Bais-DiSessa was Holly's village manager.

She and her husband Bill, a reporter from Michigan who was working at the Houston Chronicle, moved from Texas to Michigan two years ago. He is currently a reporter for the Flint Journal.

Before coming to Michigan, Bais-DiSessa worked as the assistant to the city manager of LaPorte, Texas, outside Houston. She also worked for current HUD director, and former mayor of San Antonio, Henry Cisneros.

"I have a master's degree in public administration from St. Mary's University," said Bais-DiSessa. "While working for San Antonio, I helped plan the city's budget, a $700 million budget, for about eight years."

Bais-DiSessa also worked on several city projects including the municipal airport, the Veterans Memorial Municipal Auditorium and expansion of the city's convention center.

"Here at the Woods, I'm a jack-of-all-trades," Bais-DiSessa said. "I am currently examining city services to determine their cost-effectiveness. I am also working on preparing an annual budget document to meet the award standards of the Government Finance Officers Association."

Bais-DiSessa is also involved in the city's contract negotiations with its employee unions.

Bais-DiSessa is currently working with city officials to ensure that city services don't suffer while the city council looks for a new city administrator.

"We are working as a team to ensure that the city will run as smoothly as possible," said Bais-DiSessa "There have been some bumps while we have been without a city administrator, but we've pulled together and gotten over them."

Bais-DiSessa believes that all cities want the best for their citizens. To provide a good quality of life, clean water, police protection and clean public parks.

"I think Grosse Pointe Woods does a good job in providing those services," said Bais-DiSessa. "It is a good city and I am glad to be working here. My husband and I are looking at the area. We are taking our time before making any moves, but I really like it here."

Pointe League of Women Voters celebrates 2 anniversaries

The Grosse Pointe League of Women Voters is looking forward to its 45th anniversary and the 75th anniversary of the passage of the 19th Amendment. The celebration began with a presentation to the local public library of "How We Got the Vote," a video documentary of the years 1917-1920.

It is narrated by Jean Stapleton and uses historic footage, dramatic narration and reminiscences to show how women in the United States worked for and won the right to vote. The 52-minute film is available at each of the three Grosse Pointe public libraries and is circulated free of charge.

The League of Women Voters of Grosse Pointe Park was founded in 1950, the same year that the Park became a city.

"One of the Park council members felt it was essential to encourage citizen interest in local government," said Mrs. Harriette Slowin, a founding member. "Mrs. Lillian Pear was asked to investigate the organizing of a local League, and she eventually became its first president."

Membership soon included women from the other Pointes, and the name was changed to Grosse Pointe League of Women Voters. Membership today includes both men and women, residents of the Grosse Pointes, Harper Woods, St. Clair Shores, Eastpointe and Detroit.

When the National League of Women Voters was organized back in 1920, the purpose was to educate the 20 million newly franchised women on how to exercise their new political rights and responsibilities. The purpose today remains essentially the same. The policy then and now continues to be a nonpartisan, nonprofit, volunteer organization.

What was that oily stuff?

Postal workers called police when they reportedly experienced headaches, dizziness and nausea after coming in contact with a 4-by-2 box leaking an oily substance.

Grosse Pointe Farms public safety officers had the box removed and placed in the Department of Public Works yard on Kerby. The postal police later came out to inspect the box. When the box was opened police found a broken bottle of sassafras oil and other assorted items. The box was addressed to a Farms resident. Postal workers sought medical treatment.

Fast Tango's skipper is Bayview's ironman

By Chuck Klonke
Sports Editor

Neither one knows what it is to take a day off.

"I really love racing. I've been doing it like this since 1988, and I can't get enough of it," said Prophit, a 34-year-old Grosse Pointe Park resident. "Fortunately, I have the time and energy now to race as often as I do. I know I won't be able to keep up this pace forever."

By mid-July Prophit had competed in 38 sailing races this year in his boat, Fast Tango, and had sailed 32 races in borrowed crafts.

In 1992, Fast Tango competed in 64 races, winning 32 of them, including a rare double in the Bayview Yacht Club's Port Huron to Mackinac race and the Chicago Yacht Club's Chicago to Mackinac event. Fast Tango was one of two boats to finish first in its class in each of the Mackinac races.

Last weekend, Fast Tango tied for second overall in the Chicago to Mackinac race.

A year ago, Fast Tango was second in 17 races and third in three others.

Prophit began his grueling racing schedule about four years ago after a talk with Dennis Turner, the skipper of Ricochet.

"I don't think there's anyone who does more racing than he does," Prophit said.

Prophit feels that racing at every opportunity can only sharpen his skills.

"You learn something every-time you race," he said. "Eventually you'll face every competitive situation and if you face them enough your reactions will become instinctive."

Prophit didn't grow up on a sailboat. He got his first taste of the sport when he took a sailing class at the Detroit Yacht Club in 1981.

"I started racing because it enhances your skills better than just sailing aimlessly," he said. "The more I sailed the more addicted I became to it. Now I can't wait to get out on the water."

Prophit has a core crew of 12, including Art LeVasseur, Glenn Hummel, J.P. Little, Trish Szydzik, Fred Woolsey, John Harvey, Paul Lee, Craig Gabel, Todd Jones, Chuck Storms and Lou Giedeman.

Many of Prophit's regular crew are graduates of the Michigan and Michigan State sailing clubs.

"They're able to do anything. They have a knowledge of every phase of sailing," Prophit said.

Several other crew members will also join Prophit for some of the smaller races in the area.

"We have 20 to 30 people who'll sail one or more races with us," Prophit said. "Some of our regular crew members will also switch jobs in various races. A good crew is so important. That's why we've been successful in the Mackinac races. We have good chemistry and everybody hits it off real well. It takes a team effort."

Although Fast Tango won 50 percent of its races last year, Prophit isn't bragging about it.

"It sounds better than it was because we won several high-visibility races last year," he said. "We try to do well every race but when we don't we know what the problem was. It wasn't always that way when we first started racing."

Prophit hopes his heavy schedule will bring him a couple more first-place flags for Fast Tango in this year's Mackinac races.

"That's our goal," he said. "We'd like to do the grand slam again. Then we'd really be in some select company."

Fast Tango, a Santa Cruz 35 owned by Tim Prophit of Grosse Pointe Park, tied for second place overall in last weekend's Chicago to Mackinac race. Prophit, a member of Bayview Yacht Club, will compete this weekend in Bayview's Port Huron to Mackinac race. Last year Prophit was first in his class in both Mackinac events.

Mackinac sailors ready for race

Several local sailors will compete in the 69th annual running of the world's largest fresh water sailing event, the Bayview Mackinac Race, which will take place this weekend on Lake Huron between Port Huron and Mackinac Island.

The race, which has been hosted by Bayview Yacht Club since 1925, attracts boats ranging in size from 28 feet to more than 70 feet from across the United States and Canada.

This year's event will feature three new maxi-boats. Fred Detwiler's Trader and Ken Meade's Renegade are sister ships designed by Alan Andrews and built in Estonia. The third is Richard DeVos' Reichel-Pugh-designed Windquest with America's Cup sailor John Bertrand as project manager. They'll join Sassy, Pied Piper and Stripes in the PHRF A class.

If conditions are right, the maxi-boats should finish the race early Sunday evening and could challenge Sassy's 1984 record of 32 hours, 13 minutes and 43 seconds.

The rest of the fleet should finish late Monday afternoon through early Tuesday morning.

The race is sailed on two courses. The Cove Island course attracts the majority of the fleet and covers 259 nautical miles. Sailors go from Port Huron to the Cove Island light in Georgian Bay and finish at Mackinac Island. The Shore Course, which was sailed from 1925 through 1971 and was resumed last year, is 204 nautical miles and will be sailed by the smaller boats up the Michigan shoreline to Mackinac Island.

Following is a list of skippers with Grosse Pointe connections who are scheduled to sail in the race, which begins in Port Huron at 11:30 a.m. Saturday.

New 70-footers ready to sail

By Chuck Klonke
Sports Editor

Fred Detwiler's Trader and Ken Meade's Renegade could be ushering in a new era in Mackinac racing.

The boats are new 70-footers who made their maiden voyages in this year's Chicago to Mackinac race, but what really sets them apart is that they were built in Tallinn, Estonia, an 800-year-old walled city in the former Soviet Union.

"They use many of the same techniques as the Finns, who have been building ships for years," said Detwiler, a Grosse Pointer who does business in Estonia as president of the Trade Exchange of America. "The Estonians are meticulous craftsmen and the labor costs much less over there. Since the breakup of the Soviet Union has allowed us to do business there, I asked if they could build a 70-foot pleasure boat."

Detwiler's connections with the Estonian shipbuilders led Meade to have his boat built there, too.

"They have such a rich sailing heritage and the labor rates are so favorable it made sense to have them build ours, too. The savings in labor costs by having the boat built in Estonia is about 40 percent," said Meade's son Barron. "We wanted to get to the island first and we feel this boat gives us the opportunity to do that."

That's also Detwiler's goal and the friendly rivals will be battling another new 70-footer, Windquest, which is owned by Grand Rapids businessman Richard DeVos.

The only drawback to having the ships built in Estonia was the time involved.

"We gave them the dimensions a year ago February and it took them four months to lay the boat up," Detwiler said. "It turned out to be a bigger project than any of us thought. As it got toward the end we were just anxious to have the building process over."

The pace also got to the Meades.

"One of the problems of having a boat built over there is the system of checks and balances," Barron Meade said. "Their time management is not the most efficient. Time is not money to them, so we sent five English gentlemen over to supervise as project managers."

Both boats got into the water within a couple weeks of the Port Huron to Mackinac race.

Although Trader and Renegade have a similar hull, there are several differences in the two boats.

"Our boat is also built for cruising, while their's is strictly a racing boat," Detwiler said. "The fact that ours is also built for cruising will make it easier to sell."

Both vessels are the ultimate in offshore crafts.

"They're vacuum-packed and baked and lighter and stronger than the production-type boats," Detwiler said. "The core density is also different. If you can save five pounds here and 10 pounds there, it might not seem like much, but over 70 feet it's meaningful."

Detwiler and the Meades each have a long and successful sailing record. There's also a friendly competition between them that usually results in some sort of wagering.

"Fred's an excellent sailor, who always does well," Barron Meade said. "Competing against him makes us stronger."

Detwiler agrees.

"It's always fun to race against Ken," he said. "He keeps us on our toes."

Both boats had excellent performances in the Chicago to Mackinac race, with Trader winning its class (LMPHRF-Section I) by nosing out Renegade and Windquest on corrected time.

Bayer is closing in on 50

By Chuck Klonke
Sports Editor

There are few things in Chuck Bayer's life that rate a higher priority than the Port Huron to Mackinac race.

"Next to my wife and children, it's my life," said the veteran Grosse Pointe Farms sailor, who'll start his record 48th consecutive race Saturday. "I look forward to this day from one year to the next. It's hard to describe the feeling when the gun goes off in Port Huron. It's the thrill of the year for me.

"It's so important to everybody to be first at the starting line, although it doesn't mean a thing when you're racing 250 miles."

Bayer, whose nickname is Old Bear, races a Cal 36 of the same name and last year was first to finish, first in his class (PHRF M) and was the overall winner in the division sailing the new shore course to Mackinac. He was commodore of Bayview Yacht Club, which sponsors the race, in 1964 and 1965.

"I usually say the boat is 40 percent, the crew is 40 percent and luck is 20 percent, but last year, and I say it with no modesty intended, was pure, unadulterated luck," Bayer said with a chuckle. "Our success last year was 90 percent luck."

Bayer had hoped to stay within sight of the shore, but a freighter was in his path and he had to take an outward tack. He eventually wound up four miles off the shore in a heavy fog.

"That was just where I didn't want to be, but I never saw another boat until we reached the island," Bayer said. "Around 9 p.m. (Saturday) the wind picked up where we were, but the guys along the shore where I wanted to be didn't get any of it.

"When I didn't see any other boats, I figured they'd all be in Mackinac when we finally got there. I didn't think we'd be ahead of the fleet until we called in at Thunder Bay and found out the rest of them were an hour and a half behind us,"

Bayer said the last seven or eight hours were especially difficult because of heavy northwest winds.

There was an added bonus to finishing ahead of the fleet.

"Usually wells are at a premium on the island, but I had one waiting for me when I docked," Bayer said.

Last year was the most successful race for Bayer, who has been first in his class at Mackinac several times and has many Detroit River Yachting Association season championship and Offshore season championship flags flying from his mast. But the 1985 race was his most gratifying.

That was the year Bayer and his crew rescued the crew of the yacht Tomahawk, which sank during a storm on the Sunday night of the Port Huron to Mackinac race. Bayer's entire crew received the United States Coast Guard's highest civilian commendation award for their seamanship.

"We heard the distress call about 10:30 and they were already waist deep in water. We were a little more than three miles away, so we turned the power on and it still took us about 40 minutes to reach them," Bayer said. "By the time we got to them, the boat was underwater and they were clinging to their life rafts. I have to give the Tomahawk crew a lot of credit. They did everything right and did an excellent job of giving us their position."

Bayer has sailed with the same crew for several years. It includes his son, Chuck Jr., and his son-in-law, John Burke. Other members are Jerry Leone, Dennis Cotter, Robert Duker, Michael Schrage and Peter Dawson. Chuck Jr. has been on the crew since 1966 when he was 11 and is one of the youngest Old Goats. The coveted Old Goat award goes to sailors who have participated in at least 25 Bayview-sponsored Mackinac races.

"They don't let me make a mistake for more than two seconds," Bayer said. "When seven guys tell you something, you don't question them. My crew's been together for so long, we don't have assignments. Guys just go to their spot. I've said that crews are 40 to 50 percent of a boat's success. With my crew, it's even higher than that."

For the last 41 years, Bayer's wife Fran has prepared meals for the crew and after the start, drives to Mackinac to wait for the boat to come in.

"We eat well," Bayer said. "We don't have those frozen store-bought dinners that some crews have to eat."

After the race, Bayer and his family take a leisurely cruise in the North Channel.

"We've done that for 40 years," he said. "I don't know of many better cruising places."

Bayer is looking forward to making it an even 50 with the 1995 race.

"There are others who've sailed 50 Mackinacs, but nobody has sailed as many consecutive races as we have," he said. "Racing has changed a lot since 1947, particularly the instrumentation. You can pinpoint your location within 10 feet today, where 40 years ago if you were within a mile you were lucky.

"But it's still fun. When it's pitch black at night and you can't see anything, you can't wait until morning to find out where the competition is."

Workers are busy getting Fred Detwiler's new 70-foot Andrews, named Trader, ready for its maiden voyage in the Chicago to Mackinac race. Trader finished first in its class, nosing out Ken Meade's Renegade and Richard DeVos' Windquest.

Veteran Mackinac sailor Chuck Bayer will sail in his 48th Port Huron to Mackinac race in his Old Bear. Bayer was first to finish on the new Shore Course in 1992.

Red Barons schedule signup

Registration for new players and cheerleaders for the Grosse Pointe Red Barons Little League football program will be held Saturday, Aug. 14, from 9 to 11:30 a.m. at Kerby School in Grosse Pointe Farms.

Registration is open to residents of the Grosse Pointes and Harper Woods who were born between Aug. 1, 1979, and Dec. 1, 1984. Players will be weighed at registration and must weigh between 65 and 150 pounds. Because of roster limitations, no late registrations will be accepted.

Youngsters wishing to participate in the program must have a valid birth certificate, proof of residency and a recent physical examination with a signed note from a physician approving the child for participation in athletics. These items must be presented at the time of registration.

The participation fee is $40 per player. Equipment, including helmet, pads, jersey and pants will be provided by the Red Barons' organization. Each player must provide his own footwear.

The Red Barons are members of the Eastern Suburban Football League. The eight franchises are Grosse Pointe, St. Clair Shores, Sterling Heights, Eastpointe, Northeast Detroit, Warren, Shelby and Mount Clemens.

Eight games are scheduled for the 1993 season and will be played on Sunday afternoons in September and October.

The Red Barons are divided into varsity, junior varsity and freshman squads. Age, weight and ability determine which squad a child will play on. Each squad will have up to 40 players.

Players must be available to practice at 5 p.m., Monday, Aug. 16, at Kerby field on Kerby Road between Mack and Chalfonte.

"Due to the nature of our program and that we have only three weeks to prepare the players for the start of the sea-

Hunt Club to host swim championships

The Grosse Pointe Hunt Club will host the 54th annual Michigan Inter Club Swimming Association championships this weekend.

Preliminary heats for swimmers ages 10 and under will begin at 9:30 a.m. Saturday, while preliminaries for ages 11-16 will start at 2 p.m.

The top 12 qualifiers in each of 46 events advance to the finals on Sunday, which begin with opening ceremonies at noon.

More than 1,200 swimmers from 14 area private clubs are expected to participate in the meet.

The MICSA is the largest and oldest summer swimming league in the nation.

Among the former participants in the event are Olympic medalist Betty Pinkston and tennis star Aaron Krickstein. Many other swimmers who came out of the MICSA program have been ranked nationally and internationally.

This is the first time the Hunt Club has hosted the event. The club is at 655 Cook Road. Parking is provided on the grounds and the public is welcome.

Blue Jays win

The Blue Jays ended seven years of National League domination in the Grosse Pointe Woods-Shores Little League Majors by beating the Cardinals two games to one in the World Series. Woods-Shores teams off to a good start

The Grosse Pointe Woods-Shores American and National league teams each won two games last weekend in the District 6 Little League tournament in Harper Woods.

The Americans defeated Clinton Valley American 13-3 and nipped Clinton Valley National 8-7. The Woods-Shores Nationals outlasted Harper Woods 9-7 and hammered L'Anse Creuse National 14-2.

Nick Aubrey went 3-for-4 with a solo homer, Danny Griesbaum ripped two doubles and scored twice and Tom Smyly and Mike Luzi each had clutch hits in the Americans' first victory.

The Americans had to come from behind twice to beat Clinton Valley National. Kevin Diedrich led the way with three hits, including a two-run homer and the game-winning two-run double in the sixth. Gene Baratta had three hits, Andrew Mellos collected two and Aubrey hit a solo homer for the Woods-Shores squad.

Dave Legwand struck out 10 and hit a grand slam in the Nationals' first victory. John Trupiano also homered, while Joel Parrott and Mark Borushko each went 2-for-3.

Legwand hit a three-run homer, Borushko hit a pair of two-run shots and Jon Pacquin belted a solo homer in the Nationals' rout of L'Anse Creuse. Parrott pitched a one-hitter and struck out six.

Yankees edge Tigers in Babe Ruth final

The Yankees had to work overtime to defeat the Tigers in a classic championship battle in the Babe Ruth League Major Division.

The Yankees took a 2-0 lead in the first inning on Joe Schmitt's RBI single and a sacrifice fly by Ricci.

The Tigers rallied to take a 4-2 lead, but the Yankees eventually scored the equalizer in the bottom of the seventh when Schmitt scored on Todd Sandercott's sacrifice fly.

Schmitt went the first six innings and scattered four hits. Kevin Schroeder blanked the Tigers over the last four frames to post the victory.

MAJOR LEAGUE

Yankees 14, Royals 13

The Yankees overcame an 8-0 Royals' lead in the fourth inning, highlighted by Nick Rutan's two hits and four RBI. Dan Bruechert hit a two-out, two-run single in the bottom of the sixth to put the Yankees ahead for the first time. Rob Esler, Tim Sandercott, Todd Sandercott, Andrew Ricci, Mike Hamers and Kevin Schroeder added RBI hits for the Yankees. Bruechert got the victory with Joe Schmitt posting a save.

Yankees 8, Athletics 7

Kevin Schroeder had two hits, made a key defensive play at second base and earned a save. Billy Crandall drove in the winning run with a fifth-inning single. Winning pitcher John Makara allowed two hits in his four innings. Nick Rutan and Joe Schmitt each had two hits and Rutan stole five bases. Dan Bruechert, Nick Arrigo, Tim Sandercott and Mike Hamers had one hit each.

PREP LEAGUE

Phillies 6, Athletics 4

The Phillies got strong pitching from starter Mike Fine and reliever Brian Kasiborski as they clinched first place. Arme Bove hit a two-run triple and Rob Cooper drove in two runs with a long double for the Athletics.

Phillies 4, Brewers 1

Brian Kasiborski pitched a three-hitter, struck out 10 and helped himself with a three-run double. The Phillies retired a Brewers' runner at the plate and third baseman Jason Vesey made four putouts. Brewers' pitchers Brian Hodgman and Joe Choma allowed only two hits. Jamie Thomas had two of the Brewers' hits.

Phillies 12, Angels 0

Phillies pitcher Andy Jones had a strong outing and Mark Touhey led the offense with five RBI. The Phillies' David Janis got a hit in his first at bat after suffering a serious injury in the first inning of the season opener. Clark Durant hit a double for the Angels.

City man on winning team

Bradley McMillin, a Grosse Pointe City resident, was a member of the winning Men's Eight Heavyweight rowing team at the recent World University Games in St. Catharines, Ontario.

McMillin, who received his commission as ensign from the U.S. Naval Academy in May, was a member of Navy's rowing team for four years and received the Callaway Award in athletics. An oceanography major, he will begin supply officer training in October at Athens, Ga.

McMillin teamed with rowers from Dartmouth, Yale, George Washington and Northeastern universities in the winning boat at the University Games. They beat teams from five countries in the championship heat.

McMillin is a graduate of Grosse Pointe South. He is the son of Joan Poposki of Ludington and Kenneth McMillin of Grosse Pointe City.

Farms-City team wins district

The Grosse Pointe Farms-City 10-year-old team lost its first game, but came back to win six in a row to capture the championship in the District 6 Little League tournament at Elworthy Field.

Andrew Vlasak pitched a one-hitter and ended the game with a bases-loaded strikeout as the Farms-City squad beat Harper Woods 5-1 in the final game.

Berschback had a walk and a single and scored two runs; Jim Kypros had a hit, two RBI and a run; Rob Higbee had a hit, drove in a run and scored a run; and John Russell stole second and scored on a wild throw for the other Farms-City run.

Scott Koerber pitched a three-hitter for Harper Woods.

Vlasak and Higbee combined on a four-hitter in the opening 3-2 loss to Harper Woods, but the Farms-City team could manage only three hits.

Kypros, Chad Gohlke and Brandon Birmingham combined on a two-hitter as Farms-City stayed alive with a 10-4 victory over Clinton Valley.

Winning pitcher John Durant, who went five innings, and Berschback led the offensive in a 29-9 romp over Grosse Pointe Park by reaching base a combined 12 times. Allison Schmitt pitched a scoreless sixth inning for Farms-City. John Halpen had three hits for the winners.

Strong pitching over 5 1/3 innings by Aaron Bayko and excellent defensive play by second baseman Robbie Crandall carried Farms-City to a 6-2 victory over Grosse Pointe Woods-Shores.

Gohlke and Vlasak combined on a one-hitter in a 12-1 romp over Shelby. Vlasak helped himself with four hits and Russell collected two.

Brian Molloy hit two doubles and drove in five runs in the second inning of Farms-City's 31-10 drubbing of Harper Woods. Russell played well at first and had two hits, while Higbee held Harper Woods hitless over the last three innings to set up the championship game of the double-elimination tournament.

Barons

son, we strongly suggest that only those players who can commit to practicing five days a week for approximately an hour and a half a day should sign up," said Doug Cheek, president of the board of directors.

"It's a tremendous time commitment for the kids and if they are planning a family vacation that would conflict with preseason practices or are participating in another sport, it is our past experience that it is very difficult for that child to get the full benefit of the Red Barons' program."

For more information on the Red Barons, contact Cheek at 824-1431 or Doug Luttenberger at 885-6485.

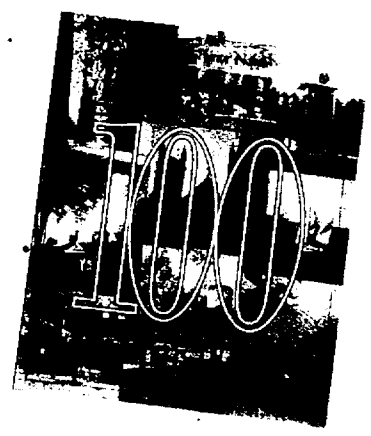

Registration for Red Barons' cheerleaders will be the same time as player registration. The fee is also $40 per participant and is open to residents of the Grosse Pointes and Harper Woods, who are between the ages of 6 and 12.

500 ANIMALS ADOPT A PET

FOUR month old speckled Collie/ Retriever, shots. 882-9689.

PLEASE DON'T DELAY!
SPAY or NEUTER YOUR PET TODAY!
An altered pet is a healthier and happier companion. Also, it spares you the grief and pain of having puppies and kittens destroyed when no homes can be found. Countless numbers of sweet, innocent little ones are euthanized every day in shelters across the country because a pet wasn't spayed or neutered. If we cut down on the numbers of unwanted litters being born, we will also cut down on the number of abandoned, lost and unwanted animals to destroy.
WE WILL BE HAPPY TO PROVIDE ADVICE as well as a LIST OF ECONOMICAL SERVICE SOURCES

Lifelong partners since kindergarten, Stan & Dave would like a chance to become lifelong partners with you!

Dave Levy and Stan Schwartz, the owners of Classic Window & Siding, have been friends and partners in business ever since they were little kids. Though, as youngsters, back in the days of Kool-Aid stands, they probably never suspected that they would grow up to be the men behind the East area's most respected name in windows and siding. On the other hand, if their Kool-Aid was any indication of what was to come, on a hot summer day, they knew even then what it meant to be in demand.

For years, Classic Window and Siding has been providing East-side neighborhoods with the best in sales and installation of vinyl windows and siding. They also specialize in hand-crafted, custom-designed bay and bow windows. With each sale they make, they provide the customer with the "complete package." There are never any hidden additional costs on materials and labor which are covered by Classic's famous 30-year guarantee.

But Dave and Stan will tell you "an excellent product alone does not make a great business." What distinguishes Classic Window and Siding from the pack is their unwavering commitment to their customers. Dave, Stan and the staff at Classic make themselves available to their customers on a 24-hour basis to answer any question or to assist with any service.

Classic's experience in serving homeowners has enabled them to anticipate the concerns of new customers. Often, they can answer questions before they're even asked. For example, to assure their new customers they are getting the finest in windows, siding and service, they maintain a compluterized list of all their previous customers to be used as references. Once the work on a house is completed, Dave and Stan inspect it themselves to insure that the job not only meets the customer's expectations, but lives up to Classic Window and Siding's reputation as well.

In the past year alone, Classic has earned the total satisfaction of over 1600 residential customers. In addition to quick, responsible and dependable service, much of their success is due to making their windows and siding affordable to almost every budget. "We believe that the bottom line is providing our customers with exactly what they want, at a price they can comfortably handle," says Dave.

Some 3 1/2 months after Valentine's Day, Debbie Wright of Harper Woods got a special valentine.

On June 2, the 24-year-old graduate of Grosse Pointe North High School completed the Rochester-based Leader Dog program and came home with Chelsea, a golden retriever who was born on Feb. 14 — Valentine's Day.

Wright has Usher's syndrome, a genetic disorder that causes deafness, and retinitis pigmentosa, a deterioration of the retina. She is legally blind and deaf, but she lipreads and responds orally to questions that she can't hear. Her field of vision includes less than one can see by peering through the cylinder of an empty paper towel roll.

Before Wright got Chelsea she used the familiar white cane to tap out her location; she likes using Chelsea a lot better.

"I used to walk real slowly. Now I can walk faster," Wright said. "I feel safer. I feel more positive."

A guide dog like Chelsea can give Wright more independence than she had with the white cane. Chelsea can help her walk to a store by herself; she can steer Wright around counters and display racks and lead her through congested aisles.

In Michigan, in fact, it is a misdemeanor for an owner, manager or employee of any public place (hotel, apartment building, restaurant, theater, etc.) to refuse entrance to a handicapped person accompanied by a guide dog. The dog must be wearing a harness and its owner must have a picture identification card verifying that the dog is a guide dog. Wright always carries the card with her.

Wright's safety depends on Chelsea's immediate presence and Chelsea has already saved her life, Wright said.

Wright was waiting to cross a busy street near Wayne State University. She stepped off the curb, but Chelsea pushed against her and moved her back. In the limited field that her tunnel vision affords, Wright saw a car speed past.

Chelsea's reaction and Wright's faith in the dog are part of what they practiced during the training program at the Leader Dog school in Rochester.

The school, which is just east of Rochester Road and south of Avon Road, was founded in 1939 by the Lions Club. Keith McGregor, Wright's teacher, said that Lions Clubs still contribute 55 percent of funds for the school's operating budget. The balance is provided by endowments and donations.

New facilities at the Leader Dog school (most of the current buildings were built in 1981 and one wing was added last year) include offices, kennels, a veterinary hospital, a training course, garage and vehicle repair facilities, and a dormitory for students.

The kennels are divided by a long, tiled corridor with windows so that staff and students can watch the dogs without interfering with them. The bays are labeled and numbered. There is a receiving bay; a bathing bay (which has a doggie hair dryer that looks a bit like an oven with a glass door); a bay labeled "trained supplemental reserves" where extra dogs that haven't found an appropriate human partner are kept; and a bay labeled "career change," for dogs that, because of disposition or health, didn't make the cut as Leader Dogs.

Bay No. 8 in the new wing is "short term day care." It's one of the perks for staff members — a place where trainers can keep their own dogs during the workday.

There are puppy pens and a whelping observation room with monitors so trainers don't have to disturb a mother and her puppies.

There is a surgery room and clinic. Veterinarians have removed some strange things from dogs — a porcupine quill, a shotgun slug, a needle, a portion of a tennis ball, a baby bottle nipple, a small multicolored superball and several rocks.

There is a tack room, where Dan MacDonald, a Lions Club member, makes all the harnesses and leashes. He makes about four or five different sizes, since the dogs are 19-26 inches tall, floor to shoulder.

A dog's height figures in the selection process. The school prefers dogs that are 19-23 inches tall, but accepts them up to 26 inches. The dogs are usually golden retrievers, Labrador retrievers, German shepherds or Doberman Pinschers.

Dogs must be friendly and eager to work. They can't be skittish.

The selection process is equally strict for human applicants. They must be at least 18 years old, in good health, emotionally stable and legally blind. Prior mobility training (moving around in their own environment without vision) is also required, as are several letters of recommendation.

The participants are diverse. Of the 23 students in Wright's class, she said only four were from Michigan. Lions Clubs help fund the students' participation; the students are not charged anything for the dog or the training program. But it costs the school about $11,000 for each team.

Although there are other guide programs, there is only one Leader Dog school. While she admitted that she never had a chance to compare it with the others, Wright said, quite proudly, "Leader Dog is the best."

Joan Wright, Debbie's mother, looked at her daughter. "Well, you really don't have any proof for that," she said.

Debbie patted Chelsea, who was lying at her feet, licking Debbie's toe, and said, "There's the proof."

Children's Home staff members attend conference

Two staff members of the Children's Home of Detroit will conduct a workshop at the 14th annual Midwest Regional Child and Youth Care Conference Sept. 30-Oct. 2 in Chicago.

The workshop, "The Best for the Family Is Also Your Agency's Best," will be presented by Patricia S. Schomaker, director of social services, and Yoliswa Akpan, secure program director.

The workshop will present creative, practical ways in which residential treatment programs can collaborate with community-based agencies to prevent long-term out-of-home placements, accelerate hospital discharges, minimize recidivism and promote cost effective service delivery.

Selective Singles

The Selective Singles social and travel club will meet at 8 p.m. Friday, July 23, at the Old Place, Jefferson and Beaconsfield in Grosse Pointe Park. Members and non-members who are between the ages of 25 and 70 and are widowed, divorced or single, are invited.

The cost is $3 at the door, which includes hors d'oeuvres and a raffle prize of dinner for two. For more information, call Ramona at 884-2986. For a newsletter with information about the club's activities (house parties, cards, sports activities, dances, trips, etc.) call Joan at 343-0170.

Guild's gift

Bi-County Community Hospital's Guild presented vice president Gary Popiel with the largest amount of money the guild has ever raised in one year — a check for $61,000.

The money will go toward the hospital's $4.6 million expansion and renovation project. The guild made a four-year pledge of $250,000.

The new officers for 1993-94 are Beverly Hartman of Sterling Heights, president; Ann Storey of Grosse Pointe, vice president; Jane Glasgow of Roseville, recording secretary; Vivian Nosakowski of Warren, treasurer; and Alice Horobin of Warren, counselor.

Bi-County Community Hospital is located on 10 Mile and Schoenherr in Warren.

Alliance for mentally ill will meet

The Alliance for the Mentally Ill-Eastside (a support group for families and friends of someone mentally ill) will have a speaker on Monday, July 26, at 7:30 p.m. at Henry Ford Nursing Center, 19840 Harper in Harper Woods. All meetings are free.

Advice will be given on financial planning for the family of a disabled person.

Participants needed for breast cancer study

Researchers at Henry Ford Health System and Harper Hospital are looking for women to participate in the Breast Cancer Prevention Trial (BCPT), the first large-scale breast cancer prevention study. Nationally, 8,000 women are now participating.

Researchers need an additional 16,000 women to complete the study.

Divided into groups randomly, half of the women in the BCPT take tamoxifen and half take a placebo (an inactive pill that looks like tamoxifen) every day for five years.

Women over the age of 35 are eligible for the trial. In addition, risk factors such as a history of previous biopsies, age at first birth, age at first menstruation, and the number of relatives with breast cancer will be considered to determine eligibility.

Women interesteed in participating in the BCPT should call Louise Moroz of the Henry Ford Health System, at 876-1046 or the Breast Cancer Prevention Program at Harper Hospital at 745-9600.

Louisa St. Clair plans potluck

Louisa St. Clair Chapter, NSDAR, will hold a summer potluck picnic at noon Thursday, Aug. 5 at the home of Mrs. George F. Ryckman of Grosse Pointe City.

For reservations, call Julie Martin, Louise Reading or Martha Tittle. Also indicate what dish will be brought.

Volunteers needed

Partners Against Crime, an intervention program, is looking for volunteer probation workers to help young first-time offenders change their lives. PAC and the 36th District Court match trained volunteers with young adult probationers. Training is provided.

A special orientation meeting is scheduled for Thursday, July 29, at 7:30 p.m. Call PAC at 964-1110 for orientation and training class dates.

Bon Secours recycles

Employees at Bon Secours Hospital now have to think twice before they toss their waste paper in just any container.

The hospital recently began a mandatory program requiring employees to separate paper products and cardboard from other waste items. "The items we recycle make up about 30 percent of Bon Secours' total waste," said Tom Contrucci, director, materials management. "But we're doing it more for environmental reasons than significant cost savings. We incinerate our trash, so we have less tonnage going to the incinerator."

According to materials supervisor Nick Tranchida, hospital employees are doing their share. "We fill a 40 cubic yard Dumpster to the top every week," Tranchida said.

Purple Rose Theatre Company offers apprenticeships

The Purple Rose Theatre Company, operating under an Equity SPT contract, will continue its apprentice program for various theater positions during the 1993-94 season of productions. The apprentice program, which started last September, is the result of the growth and success of the Purple Rose Theatre Company since starting operations in January 1991.

The Purple Rose Theatre Company apprentice program enables individuals to gain hands-on experience in technical theater production and arts management.

According to artistic director T. Newell Kring, "The apprentice program gives the Purple Rose Theatre Company another way of offering employment and educational opportunities for members of the Michigan arts community. As a regional theater exceeding our early expectations, this will also allow us to increase our support staff in order to handle the added responsibilities of our productions and educational programs."

Founded by Jeff Daniels in January 1991, the Purple Rose Theatre Company has produced 10 productions which have drawn over 44,000 people to the intimate 119-seat theater in Chelsea. During the last 18 months, the company has offered acting classes, Alexander movement classes and a playwright unit utilizing seven Michigan playwrights. The schedule of four plays for the 1993-94 season and additional information about future classes and workshops will be announced in August.

The 1993-94 season at the Purple Rose Theatre Company will need four apprentices for all aspects of theater production and arts administration. The apprentice positions will be full-time positions that will include day, evening and weekend hours. Applicants should have a general knowledge of theater, college-level theater experience and excellent organizational skills. In return, they will receive a focused and intensive introduction to the working methods of a professional theater company.

Apprentices will gain experience and opportunities to work in the following areas: scenic construction, lighting, sound, props, stage management, production management, house management, box office, marketing and set and theater maintenance. Apprentices will be paid a weekly stipend and may also earn membership points in the Equity Membership Candidate program.

Resumes and cover letters for those interested in the Purple Rose Theatre Company apprentice program should be sent to T. Newell Kring, The Purple Rose Theatre Company, P.O. Box 220, Chelsea, Mich. 48118.

Lyric Chamber Ensemble receives two large grants

The Lyric Chamber Ensemble has been named the recipient of a Knight Foundation grant in support of its newest outreach project — Summer Music Experience.

The $20,000 grant will underwrite part of the costs of the two-week summer chamber music camp in 1993 and 1994.

Established in 1950 by John S. and James L. Knight, the Knight Foundation is one of the nation's largest private foundations. It is wholly separate from and independent of Knight-Ridder Inc. but supports worthy causes and organizations in communities where Knight-Ridder has newspapers. The foundation also makes selected national grants in journalism, higher education and the field of arts and culture.

LCE's Summer Music Experience will start Aug. 20 at the Tollgate 4-H Educational Center in Novi. Approximately 40 students from Detroit and 35 from suburban schools will participate in the two-week camp which will offer classes in music theory and history, ensemble rehearsals, private lessons, and hikes on the lush green Tollgate grounds. The music camp is an outgrowth of the LCE's Chamber Music for Youth project, which has taken concerts and workshops into Detroit schools for the past three years.

LCE also has been awarded a grant of $5,000 by the Community Foundation for Southeastern Michigan in support of two collaborative concerts during its 1993-94 season.

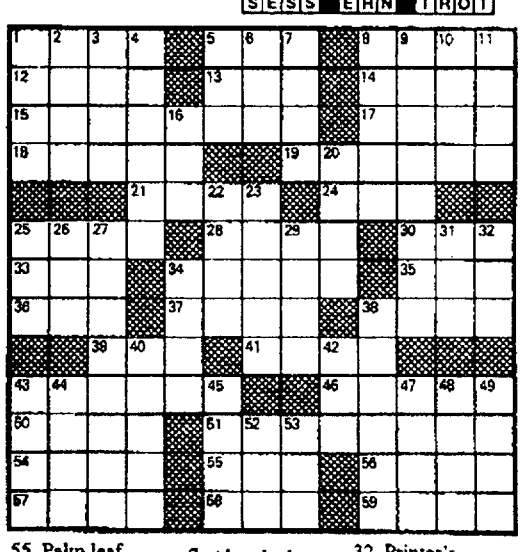

The first concert, scheduled for Oct. 24 at Orchestra Hall, will celebrate the 25th anniversary of the Spaulding for Children agency. The concert, "America's Future: A Salute to Children," will feature local African-American artists including Leslie B. Dunner (associate conductor of the DSO), Earnestine Nimmons (soprano), and the Brazeal Dennard Chorale. A grant has been received from Unisys for the commissioning of a string quartet piece specifically for this celebration concert. The piece, "Memories of My Youth," will be composed by Kevin Scott, the winner of the 1991 DSO African-American Composers Competition.

The second collaborative concert, slated for May 1, will honor the artistic contributions of Asian Americans and will feature internationally renowned violinist Cho-Liang Lin in collaboration with LCE musicians. The LCE will work in cooperation with the Association of Chinese Americans in an effort to involve the Asian community of Metro Detroit in this celebration of Asian Heritage Month.

The Community Foundation for Southeastern Michigan is built around a concept first originated over 75 years ago. It is a permanent community endowment built by gifts from hundreds of community citizens and organizations who are committed to the future of southeastern Michigan.

A picnic can be simple, yet elegant

ELEGANT EATING

By Irene H. Burchard

A picnic is more than just a meal. It is a delightful occasion.

The word "picnic" is probably of French origin. The French "piquer" means to pick at food; "nique" means something small of no value. Piquenique is the original word according to the "Littre Dictionary." In 1740 piquenique was accepted by the Academie Francaise and became an internationally accepted word in many languages.

Webster's first definition of the word picnic emphasized the communal nature of the event; a picnic is "an excursion or an outing . . in the open."

A picnic can be a time free from ordinary cares or responsibilities and can be a luxury over everyday life. When warm breezes beckon you outdoors a picnic can be elegant and also planned so that the food can be easy to prepare. The best outdoor food should be easy to eat, even when you are sitting on the ground or on a rock in the mountains. The best outdoor food needs no last-minute cooking unless a barbecue is part of the festivities.

Chilled soups are a cordial beginning to most outdoor meals. Chilled soups are easy to transport in a pre-chilled thermos bottle and are served in plastic cups with or without a spoon. A casual picnic usually will include a cold vegetable dish, accompanied by cold grilled meat, poultry or fish. If you bring several chilled salads you need nothing more then some sliced salami, cheese, bread and fruit to complete the meal. On the other hand, a salad like Salade Nicoise is a fine picnic salad that combines vegetables and fish. Hard boiled eggs can also be a welcomed addition to a picnic basket. They can be stuffed, or coated with green mayonnaise the way the French serve them, or served with a little coarse salt and fresh pepper.

Cucumber Soup

This soup must be chilled for several hours before serving.

1 large English cucumber or 2 regular cucumbers
2 T green onions, finely chopped
1 cup chicken broth
2 cups plain yogurt
3 T fresh chives, chopped
1 t salt
white pepper

Peel cucumbers and cut them in half lengthwise and remove the seeds with a spoon. Using a blender or food processor puree the cucumbers and green onions. Add yogurt, chicken broth and salt and pepper, to taste. Add chopped chives and stir and chill the soup. Serves four to six.

Crab and Mint Couscous Salad with Vinaigrette

3/4 pound lump crab meat
1 cup couscous
3/4 cup water
2 fresh tomatoes, diced
1 cup cooked frozen or fresh peas
2 T chopped fresh green onions
2 T finely chopped fresh mint leaves
Vinaigrette dressing (recipe below)

In a bowl toss the crab meat with 2 tablespoons of vinaigrette. In a saucepan add couscous to 3/4 cup boiling water and let stand, covered, for 2 minutes. Then transfer the couscous to a bowl, bring up any lumps with a fork and let it cool.

Whisk the remaining vinaigrette, drizzle it over the couscous and toss the couscous gently. Add remaining ingredients and salt and pepper to taste.

(The salad may be made up to 8 hours in advance and covered and chilled in the refrigerator.)

Vinaigrette dressing: 1 tablespoon fresh lemon juice, 1 tablespoon white-wine vinegar, 2 tablespoons minced fresh mint leaves. Whisk together all the ingredients. Salt and pepper to taste. Add mint.

Stuffed Eggs with Caviar

2 T sour cream
1 t fresh lemon juice
2 T finely chopped red onion
2 T black or red lumpfish caviar

Halve the eggs lengthwise and remove the yolks. In a bowl mash the yolks with a fork, add sour cream, lemon juice, onion, and salt and pepper to taste and combine.

Divide 1 tablespoon of the caviar among the eight egg white halves; fill the whites with the yolk mixture. Top each stuffed egg with remaining caviar. Chill several hours before packing the picnic lunch. Makes 8 eggs.

Raspberry Corn Muffins

1 cup yellow cornmeal
1 cup all-purpose flour
1/2 cup sugar
1 t double-acting baking powder
1 t baking soda
1/4 t salt
2 large eggs
1-1/4 cups plain yogurt
1/2 stick unsalted butter or margarine, melted and cooled
1 cup fresh raspberries

Preheat oven to 375 degrees and place paper liner into 12 1/2 cup miffin tins.

Whisk together the cornmeal, flour, sugar, baking powder, baking soda and salt. In another bowl whisk together the eggs, yogurt, and butter, add the flour mixture, and stir the batter until it is just combined.

Fold in the raspberries gently, divide the batter among the muffin tins and bake in the middle of oven for 20 minutes or until tester comes out clean. (Muffins can be made a day in advance and kept in an airtight container after they have cooled.) Makes 12 muffins.

Fresh Fruit Cup

1 lemon
2 apples, cut into think slices
1 cup seedless green grapes
2 bananas, peeled and sliced
2 fresh peaches
2 fresh plums
1 cup fresh blueberries
1 T fresh mint, chopped fine

Peel oranges, and using a small, sharp knife, push sections of fruit away from the membrane, dropping them into a bowl with their juice. Add the juice of one lemon. Add apple slices, grapes, peaches and plums, cut into eighths (peel the peaches). Cut up bananas. Add blueberries. Gently stir in mint.

Sweeten to taste with sugar or honey. (A little Kirsch also can be added to perk up the flavor.) Serves 6. Can be served in plastic or paper cups.

Taste history at Greenfield Village

Folks with an appetite for fun are sure to find plenty of tasty moments at Greenfield Village's "A Taste of History" special weekend on July 24-25.

There'll be learning by stewing (and baking, and boiling), as well as an "encownter" with Elsie the Borden cow. Demonstrations, samplings and take-home recipes will give visitors a chance to experience ethnic and regional foods representing two centuries of American culinary traditions.

"This program tastefully illustrates how food influences and reflects American life," said Dana Sergent, the program's coordinator. "If we are what we eat, it makes sense to just dig in and learn about food history."

"Nyam" (which means "to eat" in the African-American Gullah dialect) is the invitation from award-winning National Public Radio host Vertamae Grosvenor. Her multi-media presentation about African-American foodways blends music, stories and sayings of the Carolina low country.

As they stroll past Town Hall, visitors will hear the food-wise "Aunt Sammy," based on the radio character created by the U.S. Department of Agriculture to educate rural homemakers between 1926 and 1944. She will share household hints and 1930s-era recipes, just like the original Aunt Sammy did in her weekly broadcasts.

In addition to "A Taste of History," the Summer Festival at Greenfield Village continues through Aug. 22 with "the smartest fun you'll have all summer." There'll be real-life wizards, historic innovators, musicians and colorful characters plus lots of entertaining hands-on activities every day. Live performances of plays, storytelling and music round out the festivities. Admission to "A Taste of History" and the Summer Festival at Greenfield Village is included with regular admission. Greenfield Village hours are 9 a.m. to5 p.m. daily.

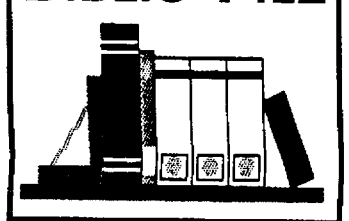

Safety tips

Whether you pack a sandwich and fruit or a gourmet meal, a picnic requires some advance planning. Here are a few suggestions on how to make your picnic safe.

- Remember an iced-down cooler keeps perishable food cold for a few hours — not all day — in the hot sun. Bacteria will thrive at room temperature and a food doesn't have to look or smell bad to be spoiled.
- Meat, poultry, seafood and dairy products spoil easily. When packing these foods in a cooler, be sure to allow plenty of room for the ice.
- Do not leave food out for more than two hours.
- Wash utensils or plates used for marinating raw meats or poultry before reusing.
- Any sauces or marinades that have been used for raw fish, poultry or meat should be boiled at least one minute before serving.

The Wives of Henry VIII
By Antonia Fraser
Knopf. 479 pages. $25.

I recall very vividly my father, in the summer of 1937, pointing out the precise spot where Mary Queen of Scots was beheaded in the infamous Tower of London.

I looked at the sinister execution block in horrified fascination, expecting to see royal bloodstains, and was mildly disappointed that there were none. Later, through reading history, I learned that the death of the Scottish queen was the work of her suspicious cousin, the English Queen Elizabeth I.

Therefore, I was quite naturally inclined to read Antonia Fraser's marvelous biography, "The Wives of Henry VIII."

Henry had the heads of two wives removed by the executioner's sword in the Tower of London, thus laying the groundwork for his daughter, Elizabeth I's removal of her dynastic rival. Like father, like daughter in many respects, although Elizabeth never married.

A most interesting family tree opens the book with startling revelations of the kinship existing between Henry VIII and each of his six wives. Amazingly, each of these individuals involved in this 16th century saga of marital mishaps was directly descended from King Edward I. This common ancestor created a web of intertwining cousinships among the queens and King Henry.

In a clarifying footnote, Fraser explains that "this should be seen as a reflection of the narrowness of aristocratic society in a world of small population, rather than as some unconscious desire on the part of the king to commit a form of incest, as has been suggested."

Fraser has very successfully created a scholarly and sympathetic portrayal of the six women who married Henry VIII, along with illuminating insights into their characters. We are led to appreciate their qualities as well as dismay over their indiscretions and frivolities. They appear very human personages, in spite of their high station, and we can easily understand their uncertainties and often terror as their lord and master ultimately decides their fates.

A Spanish princess, Catherine of Aragon, arrived in England to marry the sickly Prince Arthur, the eldest son of King Henry VII, in 1501. After Arthur's death the following year, Catherine the widow was free to marry her husband's brother, Prince Henry. After many miscarriages, Catherine, now Henry VIII's first queen, gave birth to Princess Mary in 1516, who became the only surviving child of this marriage.

Henry was obsessed with siring a male child to carry on the Tudor line, and after 20 years of marriage his roving eye lit upon one of the queen's ladies-in-waiting, Anne Boleyn.

His decision to divorce Catherine to marry Anne led to confrontation with the Catholic Church, which ultimately led to the severance of relations between the pope and England with Henry assuming the leadership of the church in England. From this strengthened position, the king was able to free himself from Catherine in order to marry Anne.

While Catherine retired in dignity to a remote English castle, her erstwhile mate wed Boleyn, the court charmer, of the flashing dark eyes and impudent manner. The year 1533 saw the birth of the Princess Elizabeth, the future queen, and in vain Anne tried to produce an heir for the king. In the meanwhile, Henry was busily amassing vacated church property: "The dissolution of great abbeys, priories and other institutions — bringing the king a further eleven palaces — provided other rich opportunities. At his death Henry VIII would leave some 50 castles behind him: more than any other English monarch before or since."

True to form, Henry was attracted to another lady-in-waiting — Jane Seymour. By then he had grown weary of Anne's failure to produce a male heir; too, he did not enjoy his queen's temper; often she was a tempestuous spitfire who did not hesitate to give him a tongue lashing. To the Tower she was consigned to meet her end under the executioner's sword. The king and Jane Seymour were quickly married, and in due time the longed-for heir arrived, the future boy king, Edward VI. For this accomplishment, Henry forever cherished the memory of this queen. Jane Seymour died of complications from the birth, much to the king's bitter sorrow.

Henry VIII still wanted another male heir to safeguard his fragile dynasty. His fourth marriage, to Princess Anna of Cleves, was a political arrangement which did not produce any satisfaction between the two parties.

Within six months Queen Anna was on her way out, but with a comfortable financial settlement if she agreed to remain in England — so that the king would not be forced to surrender her dowry to the Cleves in Germany.

Wife No. 5 was the lamentably unfortunate Katherin Howard, a young frivolous court lady who romped with a number of handsome lovers, unbeknown to the jealous king. Her youth and comely looks betrayed her. Even after marriage, there were many courtiers who vied for her favor, so she light-heartedly flirted, much to her growing danger. The king finally discovered her indiscretions whereupon she was banished to The Tower to meet the same fate as Anne Boleyn — the only two queens executed.

The last queen, Catherine Parr, was in her thirties and had been twice widowed when the king selected her for his consort. She was blessed with a kindly, generous nature, largely manifesting itself by her care of her lonely stepchildren.

Mary, Elizabeth, and Edward loved her as long as she lived. Both she and Jane Seymour shared the distinction of being beloved step-mothers for these children who thrived under their loving attention. Fraser also points out "that Queen Catherine Parr is one among only eight women who had books published in the sixty-odd years of the reigns of the first Tudor monarchs, Henry VII and Henry VIII." She wrote a number of religious books on meditation and prayers, which reflected her Protestant outlook.

In 1547, at the age of 55, King Henry died. A few months later, Catherine Parr married her fourth husband, Thomas Seymour, Jane Seymour's brother.

Fraser notes that "it is seductive to regard the six wives of Henry VIII as a series of feminine stereotypes, women as tarot cards. Thus Catherine of Aragon becomes The Betrayed Wife, Anne Boleyn is The Temptress, Jane Seymour The Good Woman, Anna of Cleves is The Ugly Sister, Katherine Howard The Bad Girl and finally Catherine Parr is The Mother Figure. There are elements of truth, of course, in all of these evocative descriptions, yet each one ignores the complexity and variety in the individual character. In their different ways, and for different reasons, nearly all these women were victims, but they were not willing victims. On the contrary, a remarkably high level of strength, and also of intelligence, was displayed by them at a time when their sex traditionally possessed little of either."

War Memorial to visit historic Roscoe, Ohio

Take a trip to the historic Roscoe Village with the Grosse Pointe War Memorial Aug. 23-24.

The historic spot was once an important canal port and a thriving milling center from the 1830s through the Civil War. The village came to prominence as a result of the Ohio and Erie Canal. A quarter-of-a-century later, the historic Ohio canal village is alive with excitement generated by eight museums, costumed craft demonstrators, numerous shops featuring Ohio crafts, elegant perennial gardens and a horse-drawn canal boat ride that takes you back in time.

In addition to the museums, it features early 19th century houses, a blacksmith shop, a schoolhouse and an 1840s canal toll house that bring the canal era to life. The village is also the home of the Johnson-Humrickhouse Museum, renowned for its collections of Oriental and Native American art. The experience is completed by staying in the Roscoe Village Inn, a lovely hotel featuring Shaker-style furnished rooms along with award-winning cuisine in its dining room. Discover historic America on this trip to a recreated canal town. Also visit the Longaberger Basket Co. for a tour of its factory and museum which presents its 100-year heritage of the basket-making craft.

Bastille Day party at Provencal-Weir House raises $7,000

The Grosse Pointe Historical Society threw a party on Bastille Day (July 14) at the Provencal-Weir House, its newest acquisition. The benefit drew more than 250 people for a tour of the house, some samples of French food, music and entertainment, and a chance to peek into the past at the Grosse Pointes' French connection.

The event raised more than $7,000 for the restoration of the house. The simple French farmhouse was constructed in 1819 by Pierre Provencal, one of the Pointes' first French settlers. It was moved to its present location at 376 Kercheval in Grosse Pointe Farms in 1899.

Anyone who would like to donate to the restoration project may write a check to the Grosse Pointe Historical Society and send it to 476 Lakeland Ave., Grosse Pointe City, 48230.

American, British couples look for different characteristics in spouses

Most people would agree that compatibility is an important predictor of long-term marital happiness. But studies of couples in the United States and Great Britain point up some interesting differences between the two countries regarding what people look for in a mate.

In the United States, for example, researchers have found a relationship between marital satisfaction and the husband's earning more than the wife. But a recent survey found no such correlation among British couples. More important to their relationships seems to be a moderately dominant, self-assured husband.

The comparison of American and British couples was made by psychology professors Glenn Weisfeld of Wayne State University, Carol Weisfeld of the University of Detroit Mercy and two colleagues at the University of London-Goldsmiths' College. They are conducting a study aimed mainly at determining whether similar factors influence marriage satisfaction in various countries.

The ongoing research is more thorough than other marriage satisfaction surveys, the authors said, because it includes both men and women who responded to a 200-question survey form.

While survey results from Britain have been tallied and analyzed, the Weisfelds still are in the process of interpreting data gathered from American couples.

"Research in the United States and Britain shows that, in both countries, couples with the most similarities do tend to be happier and less likely to split up," Glenn Weisfeld said.

The Weisfelds, who are married to each other, theorize that a tendency toward male dominance in relationships may be part of "a broader primate pattern of females being drawn to dominant males," they said.

"I stress that we are not referring to tyrannical or abusive behavior," Glenn Weisfeld said. "Extreme dominance by either partner works against a mutually satisfactory relationship."

One similarity between American and British husbands, according to survey results, is that men in both countries were happier when they perceived their mates to be somewhat more attractive than themselves.

Indeed, the Weisfelds point out that research by themselves and others indicates that men around the world attach importance to the attractiveness and youthfulness of a wife. Women, on the other hand, place greater importance on a man's wealth and social standing.

"Theorists think the male preference for more youthful women might have something to do with human evolution," explained Glenn Weisfeld. "For millions of years, it was important to the biological success of the man for the woman to be able to bear many children; the infant mortality rate was high."

He speculates that the relative importance of the female partner's youthfulness may diminish in the mind of the male "if humans are around long enough." But he said the change may take several thousand years. As to the influence of earning levels on American marriages, the Weisfelds note that studies have found the greatest likelihood of divorce among couples where both partners earned approximately the same amount of money; or where the wife earned more.

In a report in the scientific journal Ethology and Sociobiology, the Weisfelds and their British colleagues cite other researchers who found that "husbands of working wives were more depressed, anxious and ill than those of non-working wives." In one study, 25 percent of the women whose job status equaled or exceeded their husband's reported they had chosen to be "downwardly mobile" so as not to jeopardize their marriage.

Financial tips for newlyweds

"For richer or poorer" has a double meaning for couples planning to marry. Setting up housekeeping as newlyweds includes deciding how to handle finances within the marriage. Partners must decide how to share resources and how to divide them. Developing a budget, setting goals, making decisions together and learning to share are among the important steps to a successful financial relationship.

"Many approach money based on their family's spending patterns," said Michael Kelly, director of public information for the Michigan Credit Union League. "If you're used to taking vacations each year, and your spouse comes from a family that didn't travel much, some negotiating needs to take place. By talking about what is important to each of you, a compromise can be reached." One may come to enjoy taking vacations, he said, and the other may learn to be satisfied taking fewer of them.

Couples need to express their goals to each other, yet understand that goals can change. Each should have the opportunity to change his or her mind and to grow and focus on different priorities. Each couple will have different priorities as individuals and as a couple, Kelly said. For example, she may be into clothes, but he may want money to own a sports car.

It's also important to learn to share and make spending decisions fairly. Decide together how much money you're going to spend on a new television set, for example, or who will pay when you go out to dinner or to a movie, he said.

Also, decide how to best set up financial accounts at the beginning of the marriage. For example, you may choose to have a joint savings and checking account to pay household bills while each has an individual account for discretionary needs. Discretionary accounts usually include money for clothing, gifts and personal grooming.

Kelly suggests couples use direct deposit services at their bank to distribute money to their joint and individual accounts. Because each has different needs, couples should agree which expenses to cover with discretionary accounts, Kelly said. Then it doesn't become an issue of her asking his permission or him asking her permission for every purchase.

Disclosing your debts is another major issue to discuss, Kelly said. "Be up-front about your circumstances when you talk about getting engaged or building a life together. The only time money is not going to be an issue in your marriage is when there is more than enough to go around. Begin with a budget you both agree upon and learn to negotiate about money so that 'I do' remains a positive support in your marriage and life together," Kelly said.

HAVE A PLEASANT TRY AT PERFECTION
BRIDGE BY WOODY BOYD ♠ ♥ ♦ ♣

Have you ever watched the performance of a modestly talented declarer in an obvious playing jam? Most such mediocre performers turn off their thoughts and look for heaven to help or a strike of lightning to illuminate their way. Note Sheila's procedure in just such a difficult predicament.

A bridge sewing circle gathers to chit-chat and darn partners.

The day may come when I quit scribbing bridge, but certainly not until I've written about most of the noteworthy dignitaries of our wondrous game. Two at the top of my docket are Jeff and Sheila Lesser who've been at this challenge of playing well together a dozen and some years. They would, in my opinion, head together a dozen and some years. They would, in my opinion, head everyone's parade for their pleasant presentation and easy to play with way. But don't conclude this cordial demeanor impairs their determination to perform competent deeds for they are continual winners at our 52 divided four ways game.

Jeff tells a wonderful story about their first national tournament some years ago in Chicago. Their heavenly honeymoon at or away from the table was in its third year and it was a praiseworthy example of affection and respect. It seems that in an instant of naught, Sheila had failed to give her partner a ruff that would have limited declarer to one trick less than the amount contracted for. Here was the moment the fun loving Jeff had been forever waiting for. "Director!" he called, quickly stepping away from the table three feet out of ears' reach as one appeared. "What's your problem," the director inquired? With a straight face, Jeff quietly explained to him that he wanted a new partner. "What's wrong with the one you've got ," the director asked? Jeff told him it was his wife and she didn't know what she was doing. The totally taken in official didn't know what to say. First he glanced at Sheila demurely sitting at the table then back at Jeff. Totally discombobulated, but not recognizing he was being put on, he sympathetically acknowledged Jeff's plight, but stammered apologetically, "I'm sorry, buddy, but I can't get involved in this one," and hurriedly walked away.

Back at their hotel room after the game, Sheila queried her husband about the earlier interruption and when Jeff explained the recreational diversion he had executed she had misgivings. "You, sir," she half seriously remonstrated, "are a cruel player and don't be surprised if a director someday gets even." Needless to say, Jeff has since had his doubts about Sheila's suggestion they play in Chicago again.

The Lessers found this fine slam recently at one of our club games against two of our best and Sheila's decisions for a dozen would decide the hand's destiny. That certainly wasn't going to be easy as 11 were there, but the twelfth trick seemed away in some card hidden crevasse. Could she pitch a minor loser on a successful spade finesse? That didn't seem as attractive as dropping the queen third. If that didn't work, what next? She won the club queen and played the trump ace. Next the spade ace, king and ruffed the spade nine high and the old maid didn't show. She entered dummy with the trump queen and ruffed the last spade. Next she got out with a club concluding that whoever won it wouldn't have the diamond king which was not a very attractive card to lead away from at trick (9). Either the diamond play was forced or a sluff and ruff from another club. East won the club 10 and immediately played a small diamond. Sheila stuck to her brilliant hunch and played low from dummy. East's king was captured by Sheila's ace and the diamond queen in dummy was the fulfilling rick... Some kind of a wonderful mind this Mrs. Lesser has and you now can see why they're continual winners.

Commentary

. . . and I mean this politely, SHUT UP

Illustration by Richard DiLoreto

By Ronald J. Bernas
Assistant Editor

Thanks to a few huge blockbuster films and sweltering heat, Americans are returning to the movie theaters in record numbers this summer.

While that's great for local theater owners and for Hollywood (whose recent and unexplainable move toward quality is nice to see, if not a little shocking), there is a down side.

Because everybody is talking about movies like "Jurassic Park" and "The Firm," everybody — including those who rarely venture any farther away than their local video store — are packing the movie houses.

And that's the bad part.

People, people, people. And I mean this politely; when you go to a movie you are to sit quietly and pay attention. You may laugh when you feel it's appropriate, you may scream when appropriate, you may cry when appropriate — after all, a movie is supposed to make you feel something.

But you can't feel anything — nor can the hapless person who had the misfortune to sit near you — if you're constantly babbling.

Of course, some movies are made for a wild audience — "Wayne's World," "Nightmare on Elm Street," "The Rocky Horror Picture Show" — but those are the exception, not the rule.

After having scores of movies ruined for me by someone's loud mouth, I've discovered that there are six categories of movie talkers.

The Predictor: Usually a male, usually young, on a date with a girl he's trying to impress. So, in order to do so, he guesses what's about to happen. Never mind that he predicts it 10 minutes after the rest of the audience had silently figured it out.

The Adviser: Quite often the Predictor is also the Adviser, but it's just as often a young woman, maybe just out of high school. She says what everyone else is thinking, but is too polite to vocalize. "Turn on that light, you idiot." Or "Oh, I can't believe she'd fall for that again."

The Comedian: Usually a man of post high school age to late 20s. He was obviously the class clown and when he watches movies at home with his friends he breaks them up by commenting on everything from the actions to the lines to the clothes. The Comedian is great fun — at home, where friends, videotapes and running commentary combine to make a unique event. But in a movie theater, they need a sock.

The Observer: Usually women, usually of middle age and older. They observe everything, so much so that you wonder if they have any concept of what the story is about. In the middle of the most dramatic scene of a movie they'll say something like, "You know, she kind of looks like Mildred's daughter, don't you think?" or "You wouldn't catch me doin' that."

If you can't be polite, then stay home

The Bored Observer: He — almost all are men — was obviously dragged to the movie by a girlfriend or was the one dissenter in a group. He doesn't want to see the movie and wants everyone with him to know that. He says, "Oh, I'm sure" and "This is stupid" to get his point across. He sighs heavily.

The Oh-Am-I-In-A-Movie-Theater? Talker: Ninety-nine point nine nine nine percent of these people are women. They are of all ages and they simply don't know where they are. They have a story to tell and a captive audience and they're going to tell that story from beginning to end whether the movie's going or not. As the movie gets louder so do they. And the most interesting thing is that it has nothing to do with the movie. The story starts before the movie does and ends afterward. They're talking about things they could talk about anywhere. They didn't have to pay $6 to go sit in a darkened theater to tell it.

I may sound like a cranky old man, or Miss Manners, but talking in the movies is just plain rude. Six dollars is too much to pay to get irritated. Most people can get that for free every day.

Yes I can move, and often I do. Yes I can tell people to shut up and most of the time I do. But the talkers don't think they're doing anything wrong, so why should they stop?

But when it comes right down to it, the management is at fault. Many theaters have taken steps to bar children from later movies, so adult patrons aren't disrupted by whining kids. But management needs to do more. They need to be visible. Ushers need to walk up and down the aisles at various intervals and quiet people down.

Of course, that doesn't always work. Once someone sitting in front of an "Oh-Am-I-In-A-Movie-Theater?" talker got up in the middle of the movie and told the usher to come and shut this girl up. The usher came and chewed out the wrong person.

And then there's the theater chain which gives out mints wrapped in cellophane. It's a nice touch, but do they have any idea how irritating it is to hear the crinkling of cellophane for two hours?

So this is a plea, as politely as I know how: Think about other people, be considerate. And if you can't shut up, stay home.

Video store owners will love you.

By Alex Suczek
Special Writer

Minor changes, some subtle and some delightfully bold, have thoroughly refreshed the Festival's revival of its internationally renowned production of "The Mikado."

But the elegantly mannered satire, the gentle buffoonery of the world's most lovable executioner and the spoof of pomposity shine with the same vitality that made this show such a hit 10 seasons ago.

Once again, much credit must go to director/choreographer Brian MacDonald, whose staging has the grace and symbolism of a ballet. Not a single opportunity for significant gesture is missed and not one gesture is superfluous.

But just as much credit goes to the performers who bring to the recreation of these almost universally familiar roles a style and verve that is uniquely their own.

Top of the list of course is Eric Donkin back again as Ko-Ko, the incompetent executioner. He meets his match, however, in Juan Chioran as Pooh-Bah whose hauteur as he recounts the impeccability of his family tree and announces his bureaucratic titles is overwhelmingly high camp.

The simple black backdrop is unchanged. So are the giant fan that folds and unfolds as the scenes demand, the exquisite costumes and the superbly executed props like the willow tree of Ko-Ko's song to Katisha.

But the topical lines poking fun at political figures are all up to date and put a good number of familiar celebrities and politicians on both sides of the border (including Bill and Hillary) soundly in their places. And the Mikado's list of punishments that fit the crimes is particularly entertaining for its blatant incongruity in the setting.

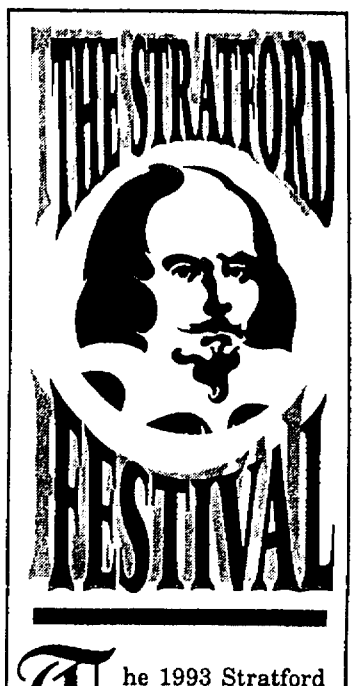

Patter and word play, of course, remain at the heart of Gilbert and Sullivan and the repartee sparkles. The outstanding wit with which the whole show spoofs formal society — be it British, Canadian, American or Japanese — is unexcelled. While it is probably not possible to outdo the original production of a decade ago, this revival easily matches the urbanity and sophistication of the original and brings the humor to the same high level of eloquence and bite.

More subtle, but typical of the clever wit, is the use again of an English silver service in the Japanese Tea Ceremony setting of the act two madrigal scene.

For its totally wholesome humor, value as a great work of comic musical theater, and supreme satire, "Mikado" couldn't be a more welcome revival to balance the classic program at Stratford, for "Mikado" is a classic, too, and presented with consummate artistry and humor in this classic production.

It plays at the Avon Theatre through Oct. 30.

Actor Plummer gives thanks for 'The Word'

By Alex Suczek
Special Writer

The house was packed last week as Stratford celebrated the 40th birthday of that opening night, July 13, 1953, when Alec Guinness first trod the Festival Theatre stage as Richard III.

This time, it was another great actor, one of the greatest of our time. Christopher Plummer, who has played most of the great Shakespearean leads at Stratford, shared his personal, one-man show, "A Word or Two Before You Go."

It was his gift to Stratford, presented as a benefit for the festival which, like most arts organizations today, needs all the financial support it can get. But it was an even greater gift to the capacity audience that was privileged to be there.

This touching, somewhat rambling, and often witty autobiographical monologue expresses Plummer's personal debt to the literature first brought into his life by his parents, and then pursued on his own with insatiable appetite. It includes anything and everything from A.A. Milne's "Now We Are Six" to Shakespeare, Shaw and Oscar Wilde arranged in the approximate chronology in which they relate to his personal development and life experience.

As author and performer, Plummer excels. His self-portrayal has both modesty and self-assurance. Revelations of his values and personal feelings are sensitive and dignified. And the interweaving of his life story with quotations from the literature that has been a driving force in his growth as a person is accomplished with the most artistic good taste and sensitivity.

Combined with the master performer's eloquence and highly expressive manner, the 90-minute adventure through a great artist's life of the mind was an experience to remember for a lifetime. It provided as well a powerful reminder to treasure, as Plummer stated it, "the magic and power of language which is, thank the stars, our heritage to hold onto for dear life while we can."

It was certainly a moving and persuasive endorsement of the great mission that the Stratford Festival itself performs as one can assume with conviction Christopher Plummer intended it to be.

While this was only a one-time performance for this special occasion, and only the third time it has ever been given, it is reasonable to expect that Plummer may do it again, perhaps even on CBC television. File it in your memory as a "Must see."

'Rookie' director hits a home run

By Marian Trainor
Special Writer

Certain to be a surprise summer hit is "Rookie of the Year" — a first-rate family film that speaks to the secret fantasies we all harbor that someday, something will happen to make recognition and fame ours.

That's what happens to 12-year-old Henry Rowengartner (Thomas Ian Nicholas) who yearns to be a star player on his local sandlot baseball team. Most of the time he sits on the bench — he's not good and he knows it.

And then it happens. He gets the nod, rushes to the outfield to catch a fly, trips over a baseball, falls, and breaks his arm. When the cast comes off, Henry is in for a surprise. The first time he throws the ball, it zings through the air like a speeding bullet. "Henry the bench sitter" is now "Henry the slugger" and is signed by the Chicago Cubs.

It's a success story for both Henry and the Cubs who were at the bottom of the standings and facing the loss of their franchise. With Henry in the lineup, they become championship contenders.

But that's only part of what makes this film a winner. Nicholas is an engaging Henry. A superstar, he is unimpressed by his star status. Like any young fan, he eagerly asks for his teammates' autographs and is more amazed when he strikes out the heavy hitters on the rival teams.

He's devoted to his tough-love single mother and is still child enough to resent her boyfriend, whom he recognizes as a loser.

Nicholas moves into the role with a natural ease. He has an expressive face that speaks his thoughts, and is something of a comedian, too.

Daniel Stern, who played the part of the hapless crook in the "Home Alone" movies scores big here in his first effort as a director. He creates a great baseball atmosphere with wide shots of Wrigley Field and roaring fans.

As an actor, he goes all out in his role as a pitching coach who has been bonked on the head too many times. He mugs, rattles on with mindless advice; gets himself locked between the doors of adjoining hotel rooms and in a cage-like supply room. He's good for a laugh whenever he's on screen.

"Rookie" has a great cast of not-so-familiar names who hit home in their roles. Gary Busey as Chet Steadman, a star pitcher who has trouble acknowledging that he is slowing down, gives a sensitive performance.

Amy Morton as Henry's mother is a standout. Without coddling, she lets Henry know she is his biggest fan.

Another who should be mentioned is John Candy as the team's explosive radio announcer who goes wild at the prospect that, with Henry playing, he might have a chance to broadcast a world series.

"Rookie" is right up there in major league standings for its entertainment value and for its insightful portrayal of kids as they really are.

Old toothbrushes — I have found an excellent use for old toothbrushes. Every time I have waxed my cars in the past, some wax has remained in tight places behind chrome strips, door edge protectors and around tail lights after removing the wax with a rag. Now I use old toothbrushes to remove the remaining wax after polishing. The old toothbrushes are soft and will not scratch the paint, and they get into these tight areas very easily.

Election stakes — As soon as elections are over, I gather the small campaign signs at local voting places. The wire poles that insert into corrugated signs make great stakes for beans, gladioli and other plants that need a little support. The wires are thin enough for vines to wrap around easily, and they can be hidden behind plant leaves for unobtrusive support.

Home Tips

Old toothbrushes — I have found an excellent use for old toothbrushes. Every time I have waxed my cars in the past, some wax has remained in tight places behind chrome strips, door edge protectors and around tail lights after removing the wax with a rag. Now I use old toothbrushes to remove the remaining wax after polishing. The old toothbrushes are soft and will not scratch the paint, and they get into these tight areas very easily.

Joe V., Bronx, N.Y.

Election stakes — As soon as elections are over, I gather the small campaign signs at local voting places. The wire poles that insert into corrugated signs make great stakes for beans, gladioli and other plants that need a little support. The wires are thin enough for vines to wrap around easily, and they can be hidden behind plant leaves for unobtrusive support.

You can use a treasured chair as a color palette

Dear Color Wizard,

I have a beautiful French Provincial chair my mother left me and I want to fit it into my living room. I have to replace the carpet, sofa, two chairs and drapes. What colors should I pick to complement the brown needlepoint chair? Solid colors, tone on tone, muted colors or prints? It has a spray of flowers in shades of rose to cranberry, teal and blue, gold to wheat to white.

I'm afraid of ending up with a smorgasbord. Everyone is telling me something different. Your expert advice in this matter will be greatfully appreciated.

Alice of St. Clair Shores

Dear Alice,

Since you mentioned that you are going to purchase a new sofa, paint, change window coverings and carpeting, you can start with a new color scheme. Your "treasured" needlepoint chair is your palette and can be the guide for all your decisions. Selecting "something" in the colors you love is the beginning of a scheme. Here are some guidelines.

1. Draw the colors out of the flowers on the chair by matching them to paint strips. You can use any of the shades or tints up and down the entire strip for matching carpeting, fabric and paint colors. For a more spacious looking room, select the light tones.

2. Begin with your largest areas, the walls and floors, and select from one of the lightest colors in your needlepoint. In your case a creamy white with a rose undertone would work well. Paint your wood trim a little deeper and make your carpeting the same or even deeper yet.

3. Select a sofa and window coverings in neutral smooth and textured fabrics, making your chair the main colorful focal point. To gently carry the eye around the room, a secondary point of color interest would be your two side chairs. Using your color strips, select an open cream, teal and rose plaid.

4. For accents make some throw pillows in solids and stripes, using a combination of any of the colors in the chair. Repeat these colors two more places in the room for balance, such as in floral arrangements, matted pictures and even a lampshade on a floor lamp. For continuity the wood tones of your tables will pick up the brown background of the needlepoint chair.

Color Wizdoms:

- Always make final color selections from samples or swatches in the room where they will be used.
- Get as large a sample as possible to select from.
- Study samples in day and night light.
- Remember, various textures in a room give it character.

Antiques by Ralph & Terry Kovel

Strange words sometimes appear on antiques — words that can't be found in most dictionaries. "Ges Gesch," "depose" and "eneret" are three of the most common of the foreign words. "Ges Gesch" is the abbreviation for Gesetzlich Geschutzt, a German phrase used after 1899 meaning legally patented or registered. That indicates that the design is protected by law and cannot be copied. "Depose" is the French word for registered. "Eneret" is the word used in Denmark. All of these terms appear on ceramics, toys and tools. They indicate a date of manufacture within the last 100 years.

Q. My gold-plated curio cabinet has an elaborate picture on the side that looks like a scene from Marie Antoinette's court. It is signed "Angelica Kauffman." Is that the maker of the furniture?

A. Angelica Kauffman was an 18th-century artist, one of the few famous women artists of the day. She was the daughter of an artist and showed talent. When she moved to London in 1766, she became a member of the Royal Academy, but she was not permitted to join the life-painting classes. She left England with her husband in 1781 and moved to Italy. There she was able to do special historic paintings for wealthy patrons. She died at age 66, a popular, well-known figure.

Many of her paintings were reproduced on furniture and dishes. They were often used in Adams-style rooms. People still think she did the furniture and they forget that she was the original artist who created the copied painting. Your piece could have been made in the 18th, 19th or 20th century. Her pictures are still being copied and signed on elaborate furniture, especially gilded cabinets.

Are you reddy?

The light-bulb nose and electric-outlet ears help identify Reddy Kilowatt, the symbol used by quite a number of power companies. This is one of many trademark figures sought by collectors. Reddy was created by Ashton B. Collins in the late 1920s. It is said that Collins saw four flashes of lightning and thought they resembled the arms and legs of a person. The trademark became the basis of a company that licensed the use of privately owned power companies.

Over 200 companies use Reddy Kilowatt. Kites, dolls, posters, pamphlets, signs, even cigarette lighters, earrings and tie tacks can be found bearing the symbol. One very rare Reddy Kilowatt collectible is a manhole guard. The 4-foot-high iron figure holding two flags was placed in the road to warn motorists that the manhole was open.

Garden Shed

By Ellen Probert

Have you noticed, in your travels around Grosse Pointe, how many houses have exuberant displays of blooming impatiens bordering front walks or decorating front steps or porches?

How welcoming they look, you think, and no doubt that is just what the residents of those houses had in mind.

But any Victorian citizen, knowing, as they all did, the complicated language of flowers so popular at the time, would have been either amused or appalled. In the Victorian language of flowers the impatiens means go away, I don't want to see you.

Not hospitable at all.

Impatiens are hardy and tender little plants originating in South Africa, Asia and North America, and come in many varieties and colors. Most of them are annuals but there are a few perennials and some that are good pot plants which bloom year round. The pretty jewelweed which grows wild in woods and fields is a member of the impatiens family.

Ferns, however, were very much used in Victorian times to border front walks or cluster around porches, and they are just as popular today as they were then.

Ferns are ancient plants. The earliest appearance was about 400 million years ago with the club-mosses and scouring-rushes which were the ancestors of the true ferns and are still with us today, virtually unchanged. Ferns comprise the highest division of the so-called flowerless plants. They are extensively used in some parts of the world as food — the young fiddlehead shoots in spring are widely considered a great delicacy, similar to asparagus. Florists use them to enhance flower arrangements, and for this purpose alone millions of them are grown, harvested in the fall, and stored every year.

Ferns are used in the making of many medicines, perfumes and beverages. They are used in the manufacturing of finished leather, and in some parts of the world they are used in the thatching of houses and for weaving mats and baskets.

The fact that ferns do not produce flowers has led to many fanciful ideas about them. Before their method of reproduction was known it was thought that they produced invisible seeds. People thought that if this invisible seed could somehow be gathered, the person who carried it could become invisible, and if the seed were scattered on the ground, the seeds should make the earth transparent and buried treasures could be seen and retrieved.

Superstitions about ferns are legion. Moonwort, one of the botrychium ferns, prevented toothache and, if gathered at the full of the moon, would unlock a door, or unshoe a horse if the horse ran over it.

Burning bracken fern was believed to bring rain. Maidenhair fern prevents hair from falling out if you eat some every day, and to eat royal fern ensures eternal life.

Royal fern also would heal broken bones if used as a poultice.

Bracken fern is generally called male fern and atherium filixfemina, lady fern, even though, of course all ferns are either male or female, like every other species.

In other times it was thought that to wind a male fern around your finger would enable you to understand the speech of birds.

Female ferns are easily distinguished as they have on the underside of the fronds distinctive spore clusters. Male ferns don't have them.

Ferns vary in size from tiny, moss-like growths, to the massive tree ferns with stout trunks which grow 80 or more feet in height in jungles and rain forests.

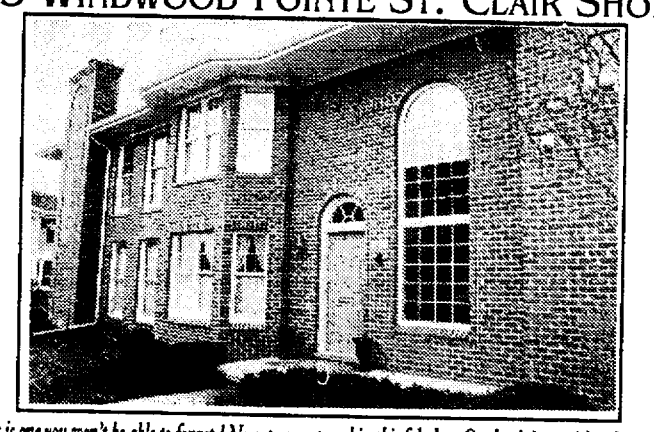

There have been more than 10,000 species of ferns identified and many of them have numerous variants. Most ferns require a cool, shady spot and moist soil in which to grow. They are prevalent in tropical America and Australia.

Ferns have wonderful names. To mention a few, there are sword, tongue, silver, squirrelfoot, staghorn, walking, strap, strawberry, shield, silver and sweet ferns.

Baby girls are sometimes named Fern; and think of all the towns and communities named Ferndale, Fernwood, Fern Park, Fern Ridge, Fern Cliff, Fernville, Fernhurst, Fern Station and Ferny.

Years ago everyone's grandmother had a Boston fern in the parlor, and now this fashion seems to be returning. They are hardy and decorative and a wonderful way to use and display an ornamental pot or container. They live for a long time, which is just as well, since one can become very attached to one's fern.

YourHome readers help design 'Dream Home'

A pantry, a deck and extra insulation — in 1993, when people think about what features they would include in the home of their dreams, there's a pretty good chance that these three will show up at the top of the list.

That's what the staff at Landmark Designs discovered in tallying the results of the 1993 Dream Home series. Ninety percent or more of the YourHome survey participants marked these features on their survey forms. It may be of interest that pantries and extra insulation scored consistently high throughout the United States, but the popularity of decks fluctuated much more widely.

Tastes vary so much from region to region that Landmark architects custom designed homes for each. For readers of YourHome they created the Niopal — a 2,500-square-foot family-style home with a brick exterior. More than half asked for brick and another 35 percent asked for wood, so this plan combines the two.

About half wanted a basement, while more than half asked for a single-level dwelling. The Niopal takes both requests into account.

Some 70 percent requested extra storage space in the garage, an isolated master suite with a private bathroom and a fireplace. With the exception of parents who have young children, almost everyone wants an isolated master suite these days.

More than half asked for three bedrooms, a family room, a dining room, a country kitchen with an eating nook and a two-car garage with a workshop. Home office, recycling center and garden window fell in the 40 percent range.

But it's not wise to design a home based on statistics alone. Reader comments were also extremely important to Landmark's design process.

One woman wrote, "Today's homes seem to have a good square footage, but are chopped up into too many rooms. I prefer an open floor plan."

The Niopal's family kitchen looks like it should suit her. The dining room could be made more open, too, by simply moving the refrigerator.

For a study kit of the NIOPAL (322-260), send $9 to Today's Homes, P.O. Box 2307-NE48, Eugene, Ore. 97402. (Be sure to specify plan name and number). For a collection of plan books featuring Landmark's most popular home plans, send $20 to the above address.

Flame Furnace, an independent dealer of Bryant Heating & Cooling equipment in Detroit, was recently named "1993 Residential Contractor of the Year" by Contracting Business magazine, one of the leading publications in the heating, ventilation and air conditioning (HVAC) industry.

"To win the award, Flame Furnace demonstrated strong roots in the industry and an optimistic vision for the future," said Jeff Forker, publisher of Contracting Business, Penton Publishing, Cleveland. Criteria for selection included the essential character of the firm, as well as its attitudes, philosophies and business practices.

"Show up on time, do what you say you will, and if there's a problem, go back (to the customer) and fix it," said Gary Marowske, Flame vice president, when asked the key to his company's long-standing success.

This straightforward prescription for customer satisfaction has helped Flame Furnace grow from a one-person operation in 1949 to a four-office HVAC dealership serving more than 100,000 residential and light commercial customers throughout the Detroit area. Founded by Bob Marowske, Flame Furnace president and Gary's father, the company has branch offices in Livonia, Troy and Warren.

Household Help

Q. I own a single family home that is 23 years old. The plumbing throughout the house is in good condition and virtually trouble-free. However, at times the pipes will make banging, eerie, vibrating noises. Fortunately, I bought the house with modern plastic plumbing lines, instead of the old galvanized steel pipe system. Do you know what could be causing these awful noises?

A. You can rest easily and take comfort in the fact that this problem is more nuisance than anything else. Modern plastic plumbing lines are noisier than the old steel pipe systems.

To start diagnosing your exact problem, you will need to determine where the source of the noise is. Judging by the description of banging and vibration, I would hazard a guess that you have either faulty faucet washers or pockets of air that are trapped. Another trouble shooting method is to be sure that all pipes are firmly fastened in position. If one particular water line seems to vibrate erratically when one or more faucets are shut off abruptly, I suggest reinforcing the pipe with a roll of durable padding.

Since there are many causes of plumbing noises, I suggest you call a professional if you cannot ascertain the problem.
