

School board weighs effects of Senate Bill 1, suggests a town meeting

Concerned over media reports speculating about the endless consequences that Senate Bill 1 poses for the public education system, Grosse Pointe schools superintendent Ed Shine discussed the legislation with the school board this week.

Passed by both houses of the Legislature on July 21, Senate Bill 1 would eliminate property taxes to pay for school operating millages, intermediate school district operating millages and millages allocated by counties that are paid to schools, thereby eliminating more than 90 percent of revenue to the district.

Shine and board members discussed how this loss of revenue might affect special education programs, how the district will not be able to use the Headlee Amendment, how renewal of millages will be difficult and how bond ratings will decrease.

Chris Fenton, assistant superintendent for business and support services, said the district probably will not be able to float general obligation bonds in the future because there will not be a tax base to support them.

"That's the problem with legislation of this magnitude and trying to understand all its repercussions," Shine said. "There will be a great many more issues that will be raised."

Board members, upon the recommendation of Shine, discussed the possibility of holding a town meeting to discuss the legislation and to gather feedback from the community.

Board vice president Carl Anderson said he has invited

Gov. John Engler to Grosse Pointe for a "good old fashioned political town meeting."

"We want to get the whole community involved. Twenty-four percent of the community has kids in school. But those children are 100 percent of our future," said trustee Gloria Konsler.

In addition, Shine told the board that he has accelerated his discussions with the Grosse Pointe and Harper Woods regarding formation of a district library.

Shine has contacted Harper Woods city and library officials regarding their interest in forming a district library.

Shine said that within two weeks he would have a response from Harper Woods.

Take a new seat at Performing Arts Center

Broken and worn seats on the main floor at the Performing Arts Center at Grosse Pointe North High School will soon be replaced following the Grosse Pointe school board's approval this week of a $45,226 bid to do the job.

The main floor seating has not been repaired or replaced since the theater was built in 1968 and many students, staff members and patrons have complained about the situation.

Country Roads Inc. will remove the seats from the premises and reconstruct and reupholster them. Handicapped seating also will be provided in compliance with the Americans with Disabilities Act.

The district had originally hoped it could replace all the seating in the theater, said Larry Yankauskas, supervisor of buildings and grounds, but with so many financial uncertainties facing the district, the administration decided to attack the worst part of the problem first.

389 supporters ask board for vote

Members of Concerned Citizens of Grosse Pointe submitted petitions containing 5,477 signatures to the Grosse Pointe school board Monday night.

Speaking on behalf of the citizens group seeking to bar the school district from selling the historic administrative offices at 389 St. Clair was Grosse Pointe attorney Alfred W. Wilke.

Wilke said the group was against selling the building, decentralizing the administrative offices and rendering Barnes school incapable of serving as an educational facility. Wilke said the school board made its decision to advertise for bids to sell the building without considering future enrollment increases and other circumstances that may affect the district.

The petitions were submitted to the board asking that it consider placing the issue on the ballot for a vote to the public.

"We believe the ultimate decision belongs to us," Wilke said. "The will of the residents will be heard in this election."

Concerned Citizens spokesman Jim Perry also told the board that to sell the buildings and property would mean the loss of a valuable, irreplaceable piece of land.

Board president Timothy Howlett said the district will accept bids until Aug. 24 and then have until Oct. 24 to act upon them. Following a letter submitted to superintendent Ed Shine on Aug. 9 by the mayors of Grosse Pointe City and Grosse Pointe Farms, Howlett said the board is not in a rush to make a decision on the matter. The mayors have asked the board to withhold a decision until February 1994 in order to allow the cities to explore other land use options for the 389 parcel.

School smoking ban takes effect on Sept. 1

By Shirley A. McShane
Staff Writer

Tobacco, in its various forms of indulgence, will no longer be a welcome visitor in Grosse Pointe public school buildings.

Effective Sept. 1, smoking will be banned from all Michigan public schools following the passage of public act 140, signed by Gov. John Engler on Aug. 3.

The bill was introduced earlier this year by State Sen. Dan DeGrow, R-Port Huron, based on his concern for both the health and safety of children.

"Schools were sending mixed messages," said Judy Allen, administrative aid for DeGrow.

"Most districts are now spending money on health programs and basically teaching children the side effects of smoking and not to smoke. And most districts have a smoking lounge that does not have a separate ventilation system. After-hours smoke may not be gone from the atmosphere by the next day."

The law prohibits use of any tobacco product in school buildings or on school grounds. Smoking will be allowed outside the building on Saturdays and Sundays, on days on which there are no regularly scheduled classes, or after 6 p.m. on a school day.

The offense is a misdemeanor punishable by a $50 fine.

"I'm delighted with (the law)," said Grosse Pointe schools superintendent Ed Shine. "There aren't any administrators who smoke and a sizable majority of the teachers don't smoke. The students have asked that some consistent message be presented in the schools and this is another step toward our increasing efforts to help adults quit smoking and prevent children and young adults from beginning a habit that all the literature has indicated is harmful to your health."

Shine said the district had three board of education policies that dealt with smoking: one for teachers, one for students and one for community education.

Student were prohibited from smoking on school grounds in 1986. Teachers and other personnel were allowed to smoke in designated areas as long as a building was not voted "smoke free" by a majority of the staff.

The new state law supersedes any and all board policies and contractual language, Shine said.

Atrium asks Farms to postpone liquor license vote again

By Chip Chapman
Staff Writer

With the mayor absent, the Farms city council granted Atrium Espresso Cafe owner Pauline Palazzolo an adjournment of her request for a full Class C liquor license until the Sept. 13 council meeting, when a full council is expected to be on hand.

This is the third time this matter has been tabled.

Palazzolo, who co-owns the Atrium at 131 Kercheval with Bernard Licata, first approached the council in May to seek a full Class C license. Although she had the support of the Hill Association, the council wanted to hear directly from some of the association members before making a final decision. The decision was postponed to the June council meeting.

Before the June meeting, the city had received several letters from Hill merchants supporting Palazzolo's request and one letter against it.

ONE23 restaurant owner Stan Day, whose establishment serves alcohol, expressed concern about the council granting the liquor license, characterizing the Atrium as a "neighbor-

Camcorder stolen

An employee of the Radio Shack store on Mack in Grosse Pointe Woods reported to police that a couple walked into the store on Aug. 13 and walked out with a $1,000 video camera.

The incident happened at 2:50 p.m. when the man and woman entered the store and began looking at a display of camcorders. The man then filled out a credit application and handed it to the employee.

The couple continued to browse. When they left, the employee observed them getting into a Chevrolet Impala parked in front of the store. He then noticed that the man was carrying a camcorder. The car drove away at a high rate of speed. The name, address and driver's license number on the credit application were bogus.

Crushed stop

Fortunately, no one was waiting for a bus on the morning of Aug. 11 when the brick bus stop on Oxford at Lakeshore was stuck by a moving van. The Shores hopes to rebuild the structure with the original bricks.

The bus stop dates back to when the interurban rail line, which ran between downtown Detroit and Mount Clemens, made stops in the Grosse Pointes.

hood bar." At the June meeting, one councilmember wanted to hear from the building's owner, Peter Bologna, and another had concerns about the Atrium's boundaries, and how it would be isolated from other offices in the building.

The decision was again postponed.

Just a couple of hours before the July meeting, the city received letters opposing the liquor license from Gregory Vasse, president and chief executive officer of Cottage Hospital, and Dr. Joseph McGoey of Henry Ford Hospital's Pierson Clinic, each of which have offices at 131 Kercheval.

With these last-minute letters and councilmember Gail Kaess absent, Palazzolo asked the council if the matter could be delayed until the August meeting. The council granted the adjournment, agreeing to shelve the decision until the meeting on Aug. 16.

Learning that Mayor Gregg Berendt would be absent from that meeting, Palazzolo asked the council last Friday if the decision could be postponed until the Sept. 13 meeting.

After three delays, the council is once again scheduled to decide Palazzolo's liquor license request next month.

Fisher site soil tests continue

By Chip Chapman
Staff Writer

Last year when Fisher-Maumee Automotive's Ed Schocker leased the service station where Moir's was once located, he had the gas tanks removed and the soil there tested.

After more than 50 years, he said it's not unusual for the soil to be contaminated, but he didn't think the problem was so extensive.

"Most of the contamination is near where the pumps were," Schocker said. "A drip here or a drip there from a nozzle over 50 years is going to contaminate the soil. You dig up any old gas tanks and you'll find soil contamination."

PM Environmental of Royal Oak began the soil testing in June, after the gas tanks were removed.

Barry Sarin of PM Environmental said testing for the presence of gasoline fragments was conducted in accordance with Department of Natural Resources guidelines.

These results were sent to the DNR for analysis. PM Environmental will conduct further testing as the DNR permits them to do so.

When the results of the testing are known, there are several options to correct the situation, depending on what the results reveal.

The soil can be treated, excavated, vapors can be extracted or on-site incineration can be used to burn the contaminants from the soil.

But Sarin downplayed any danger at the Fisher-Maumee site.

"It's been a very favorable situation, considering how long the gas tanks have been there," Sarin said. "I've seen much worse."

When the testing is completed, Schocker said he will not replace the gas tanks. Fisher-Maumee Automotive will be a service station only.

"A lot of smaller stations are going toward just service," he said. "By about 1998, most smaller stations won't offer gas."

By 1999, all service station gas tanks must be upgraded to the state's minimum standards, Sarin said.

Anticipation key in shooting sports

Whether it's the family volleyball game in the back yard or the major league baseball game at the stadium, sports photography can reward you with many impact-filled and memorable shots.

So "go for the gold" with your camera. Here are some tips to help you get good sports photographs.

As in all good photography, fill the frame for impact. So when photographing sports, a telephoto lens is needed. Use one that will bring the action in close. For the Little League game down at the corner lot, a moderate 135mm lens will do. But for the major leagues, you'll need a major league lens of 200mm to 400mm in length.

You'll require an action-stopping shutter speed of at least 1/500 second, so fast film is in order. Use a 400 ASA film in either color or black and white.

The key to good sports photography is to anticipate the action and capture the spontaneity of the game.

In the photograph shown here taken during a Detroit Tigers/Boston Red Sox game, the Tiger's Kirk Gibson was on third base eager to score. Anticipating a play at home plate, I pre-determined the exposure using 1/1000 second and pre-focused my 200mm lens on home base. By keeping my left eye open, I could follow the action of the game and be ready to snap what I hoped would be an action-filled picture.

Sure enough, the play at home happened and I got the shot. As you can see, Gibson was safe. Only by pre-focusing, determining the exposure ahead of time and anticipating the action, was I rewarded with this memorable photograph.

Use your concentration and be prepared to take a couple rolls of film to get the few shots you want.

Remember that sports photography is not only concerned with freezing the moment of victory or defeat, but also of capturing the spirit of the game.

Village Records closes after 12 years of service to Pointes

By Jim Stickford
Staff Writer

It is said that all good things must come to an end, and so it is with Village Records, a store that offered personalized service in an era of mass merchandising.

Store owner John Denomme said that changes in market conditions have made it impossible for a store like his to compete against other record outlets.

"We were a classic record store, in that we carried a little bit of everything," Denomme said. "The marketplace has dictated that those less financially able to compete will not survive. Over the past few years, the retail record industry has become a micromarket where big operations are able to buy large volumes of product for less."

Chain stores, Denomme explained, make their money on volume, so they can sell albums for a lot less. About 50 to 60 percent of his sales are in the pop music category; music purchased by the young.

"Kids are the least loyal consumers around," Denomme said. "If they can buy an album at Harmony House for $11, they're going to. Why buy the same album from me for $15. I can't blame them, but that attitude hurt the store."

Village Records, from the beginning, never tried to compete in that arena. Rather, the store tried to offer expertise and knowledge of different forms of music.

"For example, if a husband wanted to buy his wife a classical music album, but knew nothing about classical music, we could help him," said Denomme. "As stores like mine go out of business, the public will be left with chain stores where employees have no incentive to sell to specialized audiences. Their idea of helping a classical music fan is telling in what aisle classical records can be found."

Beside going against music store chains, Denomme found himself competing with stores like Target and Kmart. When he started in the business, they did not have large music departments.

He feels that local communities will suffer when businesses like his are forced out by chains. Many chain stores, as a matter of policy, don't pay local business association dues, Denomme said.

"For the last six years, Village Records put on the Thursday evening Village music show," Denomme said. "That was part of our effort to educate and serve the public. Chain stores don't do that."

Denomme said that when he started out in May of 1981, he expected that competition would be tough and recognized that's the nature of business. But about 10 months ago, he realized that the store was in trouble.

Since then, he and his employees have been scrambling to stay open, but finally they crossed the line that separated hard to compete from impossible to compete.

"This is not what we wanted to do, but in the end it is the only thing we can do," said Denomme. "Our last day is Aug. 21. While the store ultimately didn't work out, I can live with myself because I offered the kind of service that I thought the public deserved."

Financial statements can be key to making wise investment decisions

Prepared by the Michigan Association of Certified Public Accountants

Financial statements, included in a company's annual report, are the primary way a business communicates its financial position and the results of its operations. According to the Michigan Association of CPAs, a basic understanding of financial statements can be valuable for making financial decisions.

The balance sheet

Two of the most important financial statements are the balance sheet and income statement. A balance sheet is a report that shows the assets, liabilities and equity of a company at a particular moment in time, usually the last business day of a month, quarter or year. Essentially, a balance sheet reveals what a company owns, what it owes, and the amount of money the owners have invested in it.

A typical balance sheet lists assets on one side in decreasing order of liquidity. Liabilities are listed on the other side in the order in which they must be repaid. Owners' equity is shown below liabilities.

Assets are usually classified into three categories — current assets, fixed assets and intangible assets. Current assets include cash, marketable securities, accounts receivable, inventories and other amounts that are expected to be turned into cash, generally within a year. Fixed assets represent more durable items that are used by the business in the course of carrying out its operations — such as machinery. Some balance sheets refer to this category as property, plant and equipment. Patents, copyrights, trademarks and goodwill fit into the category of intangible assets.

Liabilities are divided into two classes. Current liabilities include all debts that are due within the coming year. Long-term liabilities are obligations that are payable more than one year after the balance sheet date.

Owners' equity — sometimes called shareholder equity — is the amount of money investors have put into the firm, plus any profits earned by the business that have not been paid out in dividends (retained earnings).

The income statement

A balance sheet is always dated as of a particular date, i.e., December 31, 1992. An income statement, on the other hand, reports on the results of the company's business activities for a certain period of time. It might be dated "For year ended Dec. 31, 1992" or "Jan. 1 through March 31, 1993."

The income statement — sometimes called the profit and loss statement — shows how much the company made or lost during the period covered by the statement. It reports the amounts received from selling goods and services, as well as all the costs and expenses of running the business. The result is a net profit or net loss, the proverbial "bottom line."

The format of income statements may vary from business to business. The income statement generally opens with a net sales figure that indicates the total amount of sales recorded (less returns and discounts). From this figure, the company's costs and expenses are deducted. The resulting figure is the net income, one of the most important measures of a company's performance. Net income shows how successful the company is in generating profit from its principal operation.

The importance of footnotes

Don't overlook the footnotes to the financial statements. They generally explain in greater detail certain captioned items from the balance sheet and income statement. For example, the footnotes might describe the company's debt obligations. Additionally, footnotes explain items not disclosed on the balance sheet or income statement, such as if the company is party to a significant lawsuit.

Financial ratios add insight

Financial ratios are important tools for measuring a business' performance. Ratios are particularly useful for comparing a business' performance with the performance of a similar business, or with the industry's standard. In addition, analyzing the same ratio for a company over a period of time can point to important trends.

Don't dismiss the value of financial statements because of the technical jargon used. Learning to decipher financial statements is a skill that is worth your investment of time.

Woods nears decision on more parking; several sites eyed

By Jim Stickford
Staff Writer

After almost two years of planning and discussion about creating additional parking along Mack, Grosse Pointe Woods is in the "home stretch," said city councilmember Peter Gilezan.

Gilezan, who serves on the mayor's Mack Avenue Study committee, said the council has had an executive session to discuss the parking situation and is seriously considering the purchase of land along Mack.

But until all the details are worked out, Gilezan said, any sites under consideration must remain confidential.

The mayor's committee first started looking at Mack's parking problems in December 1991, Gilezan said.

"We did so because we wanted to do everything possible to maintain the viability of the Mack commercial strip in the Woods," said Gilezan. "We want to avoid the possibility of deterioration of business along Mack. Businesses on Mack by the Park suffered a long decline, and because business provides so much to the community, we wanted to avoid that."

To assist in keeping the Mack shopping district vital, two things needed doing, Gilezan said. The first thing was to resolve the traffic problem. To that end, the city studied traffic patterns and flows along Mack.

The city then adjusted traffic signs to achieve maximum flow and minimum traffic inconvenience.

"Now that we have addressed the traffic portion of the problem," Gilezan said, "we are working on the parking portion."

The city had to identify areas with the worst parking shortages. The city then considered a number of pieces of property that could be easily converted into parking lots.

Bonds can be floated to pay for purchase of the land, Gilezan said. But right now, he said, the council is working on practical ways to meet all the requirements of location and cost and no decision has been made on how to finance new parking.

While the council has not made a final decision on what property to purchase, they are in the home stretch, said Gilezan. He hopes to have everything completed in the next six months, but before anything can be finalized, the city must hold public hearings, Gilezan said.

Mack stores need parking to grow

By Jim Stickford
Staff Writer

Andrew Bernard would like to expand his business in the Woods but one thing is holding him back — a lack of parking along Mack.

Bernard was granted a variance by the Woods City Council Monday night to build on the second floor of his beauty salon located at 19877 Mack, a block from city hall. Bernard owns Friends Hair & Nails, a business he established 11 years ago.

"The Woods won't allow businesses to open up or expand unless they can provide enough parking for customers," said Bernard. "My store was built before the ordinance was passed, so I was exempt from the established parking requirements. But because I want to build on my second floor, I have to get permission."

Bernard wants to move some of his salon's stations upstairs to relieve crowding on the first floor. He would not be adding more stations to the shop. This means that his shop will be servicing the same number of people as before, but just in different locations than before. Because his construction is meant to accommodate the customers he already has, not new patrons, the council granted his variance.

"I understand the council's concern about parking," said Bernard. "There is a cheese-cake shop next to my shop, and when I am busy, my customers might be in the shop for two hours. It can make it hard for customers of the cheesecake shop to find parking. But all the businesses along my part of Mack are doing well."

"The better each single business does — the more customers each business attracts — makes it harder for every other business because parking becomes that much more scarce. It's almost getting to the point where, as Yogi Berra said, 'no one goes there anymore, it's too crowded.'"

Businesses are in business to grow, said Bernard, but without more parking along Mack, most businesses can't expand. Parking has become a critical issue for businesses along much of Mack, he said.

Park councilman frustrated in bid to air meetings

By Jim Stickford
Staff Writer

Static: That's all Grosse Pointe Park councilmember Dan Clark said he's receiving from Grosse Pointe Cable since he proposed airing city meetings.

"The War Memorial has the equipment to tape cable shows at people's houses, outside in their garden and all around the War Memorial main building," Clark said. "But when I want one camera to tape council meetings, (Grosse Pointe War Memorial president) Mark Webber says that it will cost $27,000 to tape meetings. Now that's just not right."

Clark said he has no doubt that Grosse Pointe Cable, using the equipment already owned by the War Memorial, has the capability to tape council meetings.

Clark said that when he made the proposal to broadcast meetings, he was thinking of a very simple system — just set up one camera, and let it record the meeting, and then broadcast the meeting over Channel 20, the cable system's government/school channel.

"Webber tells the council that a top-of-the-line camera system to record meetings will cost $27,000," Clark said. "We are supposed to buy three cameras, get an expensive microphone system and get a mixing board to handle the signal from three cameras. The council doesn't want to spend that kind of money, and I don't blame them."

"All I really wanted to know was whether Grosse Pointe Cable had a camera we could use. Instead, we're told that if we want to broadcast meetings, it will cost thousands of dollars. If we want to use War Memorial cameras, which aren't owned by Grosse Pointe Cable, only paid for by Grosse Pointe Cable, we really can't, because the cameras are for local origination, not government broadcasts."

"The intent of the proposal was to open up the proceedings to the public. Grosse Pointe Park has a lot of professional people as residents. They do care about what happens in government, but they are busy people, and attending the Monday night meetings isn't always possible."

"I believe if we put this on the air, people will care. I don't want editing. As soon as you edit, someone is deciding what is important and what isn't. The public should see what is going on without any kind of mediation by an editor."

Amy Parvel, director of Community Television Service for the War Memorial, said there is a camera kit available that the Park council can borrow, complete with a microphone and lights.

The Park would have to provide people to operate it, Parvel said. The operators would have to be trained in the camera's use before they could borrow it, and the Park would have to take responsibility for any damage, but those would be the only restrictions, she said.

Webber said the War Memorial's studio, which opened last spring, was set up to provide local access. The camera equipment is not easily portable, and he believes the studio has only one portable camera, left over from pre-studio days.

"Our latest cameras aren't really portable," Webber said. "That's why we wired the War Memorial and built the studio — so that we would have equipment on hand to film at one location."

When he spoke to the council, Webber said he was doing it as a courtesy and that it is really up to the cities' cable advisory council to decide if they want to buy equipment. The War Memorial's equipment is used only for local-origination production and broadcasting, he said.

a career that began nearly 40 years ago at Austin High School.

"Growing up I was sure I wanted to be a pharmacist," Taggart said. "But I guess the idea of being a priest was always in the back of my mind."

"During my sophomore year at Austin a classmate announced his intention to be a priest. I looked at him and thought if he could do it so could I."

Taggart left Austin to attend St. Augustine Seminary in Holland, Mich., then went on to Tolentine College in Philadelphia. He was ordained as a member of the Augustinian religious order in 1965.

The Augustinian order concentrates on teaching and parish work, and it was Taggart's interest in teaching that brought him back to Austin to teach physics in 1968.

During his eight-year tenure at Austin he assisted in parish ministries at various eastside parishes including St. Clare and St. Paul's in Grosse Pointe Farms.

Taggart spent the summer of 1976 in Israel studying Scripture in a multi-denominational program taught by a Lutheran theologian that included exposure to both Palestinian and Israeli teachings.

"The teacher made sure that we had a diverse experience, including visits and interactions with remote villages. It was a step back in time and helped us to understand the diverse cultures of the region," he said.

"I look forward to returning to Israel someday. I'd love to experience the seasons there. It's such a beautiful country."

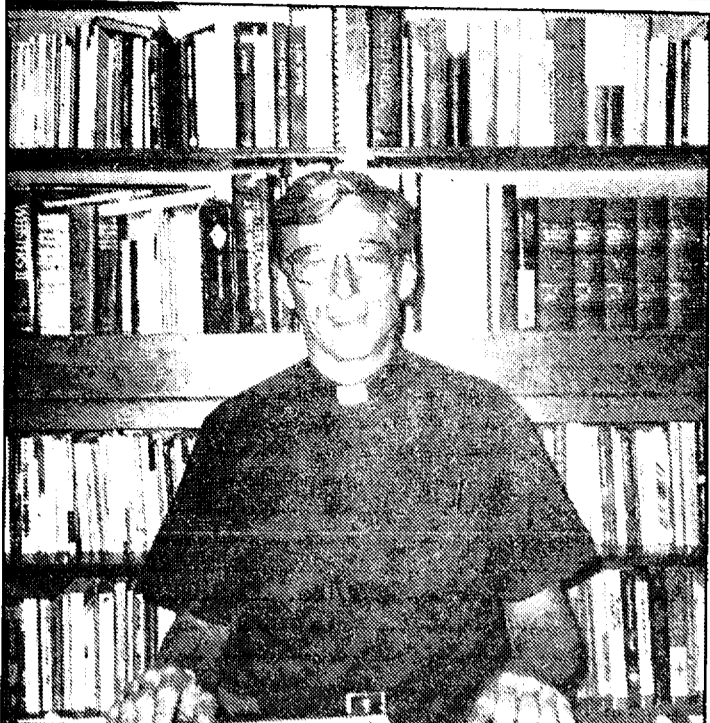

A stop at DeSalles Seminary in Milwaukee preceded a longer stay in Chicago where Taggart supervised seminarians studying at the Catholic Theological Union.

"The Hyde Park area of Chicago is home to a number of theology schools including the Lutheran School of Theology and the Chicago School of Theology. A number of religions come together in that one area which makes it a most interesting place to be," Taggart said.

After taking course work at Duquesne University in Pittsburgh in guidance and counseling, Taggart expected to return to an educational setting. Instead, he found himself in parish work, but with a unique opportunity to use his counseling background.

"I was assigned to St. Peter Parish in Saugatuck. Included in the parish boundaries was a medium security men's prison for which I was chaplain," Taggart said.

"I said Mass at the prison on Saturday nights and conducted Bible study groups during the week. It was really very difficult work. Prisons are terrible places. I learned from my work there that we do very little to actually rehabilitate prisoners.

Austin alumnus Father Fred Taggart was recently appointed as vicar of the Archdiocese of Detroit's Grosse Pointe vicariate.

"Prisoners have little chance of succeeding once they are released. A prison record is almost impossible to overcome."

"I still have ex-prisoners contact me, asking for help. But there is very little we can do for them in today's economy when people without records are out of work."

"I just wish I had the answer."

Taggart arrived as pastor of St. Clare in 1989, returning to the area he was so familiar with, but facing the challenge of ministering to such a large parish.

"Life as a teacher is much different from parish life. In teaching, relationships come to a natural end as students move on to different grades and schools," Taggart said.

"But in parish work there is a constant continuation. Even death doesn't end a relationship, as there is still the family to minister to."

Taggart also pointed out the challenge of managing the business and finances of such a large parish.

"I was really overwhelmed when I first came," he said. "But we are really blessed here at St. Clare with excellent people. We are a very viable parish with a fine school and a dedicated staff."

In addition to Taggart, two other priests and a deacon minister to the nearly 1,400 families in the parish. The school enrollment is nearly 500.

Taggart's new role as vicar is in addition to his parish responsibilities.

"I didn't necessarily look for the position, but, like Moses, when you're called, you respond," Taggart said with a smile.

"The vicar's job is to act as a liaison between the archbishop and the local priests, as well as to bring cohesion to the many programs offered in this area."

Even with his added responsibilities, Taggart still intends to make time for some non-parish activities.

"I try to make time for exercise each day," he said. "I walk and swim. In the winter I cross-country ski."

"And during my time in Saugatuck I learned to love the beach, so I try to get away to Florida and the beaches there. This past January a fellow priest and I went down to watch a space shuttle launch and just enjoy the beach."

One way Taggart finds to combine business with pleasure is the time he spends as chaplain on the Norwegian Cruise Line ships.

"On all their one-week cruises they take both a priest and a doctor," Taggart explained. "The chaplain has many responsibilities, including religious services and counseling. We also officiate at ceremonies where people renew their wedding vows. And occasionally, with the large numbers of elderly who take cruises, we handle deaths."

"But I have to admit the two things I like best about being a chaplain are the snorkeling and the fact that there are no telephones," he added with a laugh.

Taggart doesn't know how long he will remain at St. Clare, but looks forward to the challenges his stay will bring.

"As an Augustinian I belong to a group of men who have pledged our lives to God," he said. "Technically, I own nothing."

But Taggart himself appears to be owned by a lovable 7-year-old black lab mix named Jessie who seldom strays from his side.

"She began to follow me when I was in Saugatuck," Taggart said. "Her owner finally asked me if I wanted her. I couldn't say no."

Taggart also enjoys having his family close by. A sister, Pat Wyllie, lives in the Farms; a brother, Richard is a pharmacist in Eastpointe. A nephew attends St. Clare.

Pastor and vicar are clearly two hats Taggart will wear well in the coming years.

"I'd define my role here as one who celebrates with the people all the important things that happen in their lives, both the good like births and weddings, and the bad, like illnesses and death," Taggart said.

Congestion...Headaches...Post-Nasal Drip...Facial Pressure...Sinus Pain...Allergies...

Unfortunately, many people with chronic sinus symptoms think the best relief is found on the shelves of their neighborhood drugstore. But the truth is, many sinus symptoms can now be easily treated and corrected at their source, once properly diagnosed.

At the St. John Laser Center of Southeast Michigan, there are physicians who specialize in the diagnosis and treatment of sinus problems. Using advanced endoscopic equipment, they can look into your nasal cavities to determine the exact cause of your symptoms and your treatment options. These may include medication or a less-invasive surgical technique, such as sinusoscopic surgery, using lasers and other appropriate equipment.

If you're living with chronic sinus symptoms, call for a referral to a laser trained physician at the St. John Laser Center of Southeast Michigan. We believe you'll find this approach to sinus problems a breath of fresh air. 1-800-962-7777

Senior vitality comes in many forms — so get on board

New times. New ways. Once upon a time, having served God, your country and your family, it was okay to sit down and watch the rest of the world go by. No more.

To retire now means to move into a new phase of living. With all responsibilities, obligations and commitments taken care of, we are now confronted with the news that there's still work to be done and challenges to be met. You can't relax and sit back and enjoy a world of comfort. It's no fair now to coast in. It's upward and onward.

If you don't participate, the world will go on without you and you'll be an orphan of time. To be part of it, you must work at it. You've got to keep up with fashions instead of wearing just what's comfortable. You've got to exercise when you'd rather rest and you've got to watch what you eat instead of eating what you like.

Unless you follow these precepts, you won't fit in with all your alert and active contemporaries. They are out there shopping for "in" clothes, exercising, dieting, taking part in tournaments, all proof that it's never too late to be all you can be.

Some get so enthusiastic in their endeavors that they become serious about what started out as fun. A bicyclist, age 65, sets a senior citizen cross-country record, a 70-year-old former artist holds several records in track and field and a 72-year-old former barber started skiing and won 84 medals in downhill racing.

It's all too much. What's a person to do to keep up with this new breed of "let's live it up" older citizens who have made the word "retire" obsolete.

We're told that it's more fun to join them than to wonder at them. There's no need to change the whole pattern of life. Those who didn't like golf, swimming or tennis when they were younger are not going to like it any better when they are older.

Those who hated shopping for clothes, trying new hairdos or worrying about makeup in their salad days won't want to be bothered with it now.

But still that urge to be part of the group remains. No one at any age likes to be an outsider.

It is possible, without any of these routines, to meet new friends, to be in demand and the life of the party by reading. Everyone enjoys talking with or listening to people of any age who are informed, have something to say and who say it well.

As for keeping young, experts agree that keeping mentally alert is a sure way to ward off the designation of being old.

Reality tells us that no matter how hard we work at it, the body ages. It is agreed that it is good for morale to make every effort to take care of your body and to work at keeping it looking good, but the years still take their toll.

Prime Time

By Marian Trainor

The mind is another story. It may work a little slower as the years go on, but it is possible to maintain an alert and vigorous mind long after the body shows signs of aging.

This is particularly true of today's older citizens. A Pennsylvania State University study found that people who recently turned 65 exhibit better mental agility than older generations because of improvements in education and nutrition.

It also found that mental skills can get rusty from not being used. It was suggested that older adults take continuing education courses to keep their mental skills sharp.

Grosse Pointe residents have abundant opportunities to learn what interests them.

Grosse Pointe Community Education offers a long list of courses in cultural and personal interest categories. The War Memorial is another place where programs are scheduled to enlighten and enlarge perspectives. The Grosse Pointe Library is a treasure trove of books on every subject.

For those who would like to pursue an interest in greater depth, Macomb Community College has a long list of available studies.

And it is possible to combine learning with a vacation in any part of the United States, Canada or abroad and there is a program designed for that called Elderhostel.

Elderhostel students live on campus at their host institution while attending classes. They have access to the cultural and recreational facilities and resources available there.

The programs last one week beginning on Sunday afternoon and ending the next Saturday morning.

The courses are not for credit and there are no exams, grades or homework. No previous knowledge or study of the subject is presumed. Some students have Ph.D.s and others have never graduated from high school. Altogether the package appears to be a fine opportunity for a first-rate vacation. Besides providing an opportunity to open new vistas, it is also a fine chance to meet new friends who share the same interests. The fact that they come from another part of the country and have had various educational and work experiences will add to that pleasure.

For a catalog listing courses, locations and descriptions, write to Elderhostel, 40 Boylston, Suite 400, Boston, Mass. 02116.

New attempt to hike sales tax coming?

Gov. John Engler traveled all the way to the National Governors' Conference in Tulsa, Okla., over the weekend to discuss his views about tax and school reforms for Michigan with a Detroit Free Press reporter.

Apparently seeking a national stage now that conservative GOP friends are mentioning him as a potential presidential aspirant, the governor said any new school finance system for Michigan should include a higher sales tax.

He is, however, opposed to the idea of a state school property tax but hinted that some local taxes would be required to help fund the public school system. While favoring parental choice of public schools, he ruled out any state funding of vouchers for use at private schools.

Reports in the two Detroit dailies disagreed on whether the governor had revised his view about an income tax hike. The Free Press said he had softened his opposition. The News said he didn't.

Most of his comments are elaborations of his earlier stands. In fact, a sales tax boost was an essential element in Proposal A which the governor supported but which the public voted down in June.

Engler also told the Free Press reporter that a new state funding system probably would spend less money than it now does and that high-spending districts "aren't all they should be with the money they're spending."

The crack about high-spending districts is part of a campaign the governor is

Jerry Ford, political healer

Jerry Ford, Michigan's lone contribution to the presidential derby, is apparently serving once again as a national political healer.

Ford, the only president never to have been elected either to the top office or as vice president, did serve briefly as a national political healer when he succeeded to the office after Richard Nixon resigned.

Ford was widely regarded as having helped close the deep political divisions that resulted from the Watergate scandals that forced Nixon out of office. For some Americans, the healing period ended when Ford pardoned Nixon and permitted the disgraced ex-president to escape criminal prosecution. But for many other Americans, and especially Michiganders, Ford still remains a popular figure, with his reputation as a healer intact.

So what's he doing now that recalls his earlier reputation?

waging against schools like those in the Grosse Pointe district which are financed chiefly by local property taxes.

In another recent interview, he even claimed the Grosse Pointe schools are not

He's befriending Democratic President Bill Clinton out in Vail, Col., where the president is grabbing a few days of well-deserved vacation after a spring and summer of trials and tribulations in Washington.

Ford apparently helped Clinton find a home to rent as a vacation White House, played golf with him, escorted him to a Vail cultural bash, and in other small ways showed that one former GOP president didn't regard Clinton as a pariah.

After the nastiness of personal attacks on Clinton by some GOP leaders, it is refreshing to see Ford rise above the petty partisan politics of Washington and try to restore some good will if not active cooperation to the Republican-Democrat relationship.

Let's hope it continues after Clinton's vacation is over. It might even end the gridlock — and thus benefit both parties.

as good as they should be in view of the amount of funds they are receiving.

But, Governor, how do you know that? Do you just form your judgments on the basis of complaints you receive about higher property taxes?

Did you ever check into the outstanding records made in many fields by the Grosse Pointe schools and others that receive very little state aid?

It is clear that the governor is still imbued with the view of some business leaders that education should be run like a business and that it must be "downsized" just as many businesses have been.

The public schools no doubt could adopt more business practices but education is a labor-intensive industry that tends to damage its end products if it economizes at the expense of the teaching staff which is, if you will, the production staff.

Furthermore, the public schools must be prepared to do something that is rarely required of private businesses or, for that matter, of private and parochial school systems: to serve all of their potential customers in a given community, regardless of their income or ability to pay.

However, the governor's message from Tulsa does continue the examination that Michiganders are making of ways to solve the major crisis created by the Legislature's recent repeal of the major source of operating revenue for the public schools: the property tax.

However, the governor, who is scheduled to sign the bill repealing the property tax today, still needs to broaden his own view of what may be required at the state level to restore meaningful support for the public school system.

Middle class escapes a hit

A dispute has broken out over whether the middle class will take a serious hit from President Clinton's recently adopted economic plan.

The president says it won't, contending that major revenue increases will come chiefly from taxes on the wealthy.

But it is true that a recent poll, after the president had spoken to the country about the budget problem, reported that 68 percent of the people still thought that the middle class would pay the most taxes.

That poll was taken after the Clinton speech that was supposed to refute the impression of 78 percent of the people that the middle class would pay the bigger share of the new tax load.

Yet, in fact, most reports now indicate that the president was right all along. Here, for example, is what Gerald F. Seib said in his Capital Journal column in the Wall Street Journal:

"No matter what else one may think of the Democrats' deficit-reduction plan, it is indisputable that the overwhelming share of its taxes falls on upper-income people." Then he added:

"That was true in the beginning and it became far more true once the president's energy tax was killed."

Seib cited three factors to explain Clinton's failure to sell his plan:

First, the Clinton plan "was the subject of intense partisan criticism, some of it misleading."

Second, the White House did a poor job of selling the Clinton program, "a failing that created a fertile field for misperceptions to sprout."

Third, the people were reluctant "to believe Clinton once he got his message through."

While Seib mentioned the partisan criticism, he did not point out that while most of it came from Republicans, much of it came from Democrats who deserted the president, a fact that explains why the budget bill passed the Democratic Congress with only a single vote margin in each house.

That being the case, the president's program is likely to face a precarious future as he attempts to deal with the trade treaty and health and welfare reforms even if he returns to the centrist themes that elected him.

Suicide reveals capital strife

Anyone who reads or views the national news these days knows that there is a good deal of truth to the charge that in Washington "ruining people is considered sport."

Yet now that Vincent Foster, President Clinton's deputy White House counsel, has committed suicide, apparently for the reason cited above, those who helped make Washington unbearable for him seem to be saying, "Who? Us? No way."

The news media, in particular, purport to see the need for federal investigations at the highest level, take seriously all of the charges the deeply depressed counsel made against the FBI and other govern-

Good news!

Departments of public safety in both Grosse Pointe Woods and Grosse Pointe Park have made good news in recent weeks.

The Woods has won the first-place award for traffic safety in Michigan cities with a population of 5,000 to 20,000. The Woods, which had previously finished second and third in the annual contest, took top honors by reducing the number of traffic accidents by 7.3 percent in 1992.

The Park has just officially opened its new $2.3 million public safety building. It is described as a successful blend of old and new architectural styles with modern holding cells and state-of-the-art facilities and equipment.

On behalf of all citizens of the Pointes, we offer congratulations to both departments and both cities for their achievements.

ment agencies.

At the same time, the media tend to excuse the conduct of the Wall Street Journal and other news agencies that apparently tried Foster's patience beyond endurance.

They were, they now seem to be saying, only doing their job.

In fact, Robert Bartley, Wall Street Journal editor, said the paper would have nothing to add to its Aug. 6 comment in which it defended its editorial criticism of Foster in these words:

"There is no way to cover national government on the assumption that a high official and steeled litigator secretly suffers from depression, and may commit suicide if criticized."

And, Bartley might have added, if the official does kill himself, it's not our fault.

Well, mebbe so, but if we're going to have an investigation, let's have a look at all implied, imagined and actual charges raised against Foster and other former Arkansas colleagues of the president who now are in the White House, Justice Department and elsewhere in government.

Let's try to find out just how much basis in fact there is to what so far are basically speculative charges. Do they emanate chiefly from Republican sources? Or do they go beyond the bounds of political partisanship?

And let's not have the Washington news media join ranks and retreat into the usual excuse for their actions: the public's right to know everything except what the First Amendment permits them to hide.

To the Editor:

After reading Joseph Wright's latest inane diatribe (Aug. 5 issue), I felt obliged to correct a few of the errors and out-and-out lies in his letter.

His first statement that the cancellation of the property tax as a means to support public schools is down the road and will be handled is a real Alice in Wonderland notion. When (if ever) has our legislature handled anything expediently — important or otherwise. They have thrown out 97 percent of the Grosse Pointe schools' tax base — without replacing it. I would say that is a slight cause for concern. Tax bills would normally be due in less than five months.

Gov. Engler and would-be governor (Sen.) Stabenow are on a collision course to see who can do more damage to our public schools. Engler will not hear of an income tax increase; the voters have said no to a sales tax increase. What's left? The governor has taken care of his pals in the insurance business by granting us the "cut" that the people voted down a few months ago. Now, he plans to shove the sales tax down our throats one way or the other. Engler's goal since he was elected has been to tear down the quality school systems like Grosse Pointe, Bloomfield Hills, etc., and redistribute their money to those who elected him — outstate rural Michigan.

Contrary to Mr. Wright, the NEA is not the world's greatest monster since Hitler, Atilla the Hun and Snow White's stepmother. They have helped bring education — and teachers' salaries — into the 20th Century. Do you realize that a teacher now earns almost as much as a truck driver? They also earn as much in 9-1/2 (not 8-1/2) months as Cecil Fielder gets for playing two ball games. Wow!

More letters on page 8A

The Kalkaska "school disaster" was brought on by the people of Kalkaska themselves — not the NEA. Their school taxes (which they have adamantly refused to raise) are below the minimum amount required to receive full state aid reimbursement. By passing their recent millage request (at a cost of less than $100 per homeowner) they would have reaped more state money as well as local money. If they levied the 30-40 mills that most school districts in the tri-county Detroit area do, they would have all kinds of money. They opted, however, to vote "no" and hope for a state bailout — at the expense of the out-of-formula districts like Grosse Pointe. For once in his life, Engler did the right thing by not bailing them out.

Mr. Wright also worries that teachers are "setting their sights to grab curriculum control," whatever that means. Who is better prepared to set curriculum guidelines — teachers, or housewives, doctors, lawyers? How many teachers sit on the AMA board and advise the doctors how to perform heart surgery.

And yes, the NEA is a trade union. Is this some sort of a crime? The AMA and ABA are also trade unions.

Mr. Wright begrudges hospital coverage for the teachers and their families ("... even those in college"). Even the auto workers have coverage (better than the teachers, by the way). As most intelligent people realize, family cover-

Star eases into transition for new school year

By Shirley A. McShane
Staff Writer

Teachers at Our Lady Star of the Sea sacrificed their traditional summer vacation to help the newly expanded elementary school ease into the next school year.

Following the June 30 closing of the all-girls' high school adjacent to the elementary school on Fairford in Grosse Pointe Woods, the parish council decided in July to move the middle school students into the vacant building.

In the past month teachers, parents and students have been busy moving classroom furniture, books and equipment into the old high school building that will be home to sixth-through eighth-graders.

The building and grounds were cleaned, a new coat of paint was applied to the gym walls and the wooden bleachers were refinished. Desks and materials used specifically for the high school were sold Aug. 12 to other Catholic high schools.

The elementary school serves pre-school through eighth-grade students. Principal Karen McGuire described conditions within the school last year as cramped, with approximately 400 students occupying the building. This year the students will be able to spread out through two buildings.

The high school building last year served a student population of 130.

"This will give the (middle school) students more room, a separate identity and more independence," McGuire said.

The principal said the students seem excited about having a new building and are especially thrilled to have their own lockers, which they wouldn't have had in the old building.

By moving three grades into the high school building, the pre-school program will have more room in the elementary building, the old library will be converted into a research/computer lab and a homeroom will become a science lab.

The high school building will provide a gym, cafeteria, larger library, art and music rooms and two science labs for all students to use.

The mood has been positive around the school and parish, McGuire said, and she hopes the efforts this summer are a sign of a new beginning for Star of the Sea, which had a difficult year with the closing of the high school.

"We are all very positive and that is all behind us," she said. "I don't even want to get into it. There is a lot of parish support for the elementary school. We need to move on. We had a difficult year and are looking forward to a new beginning."

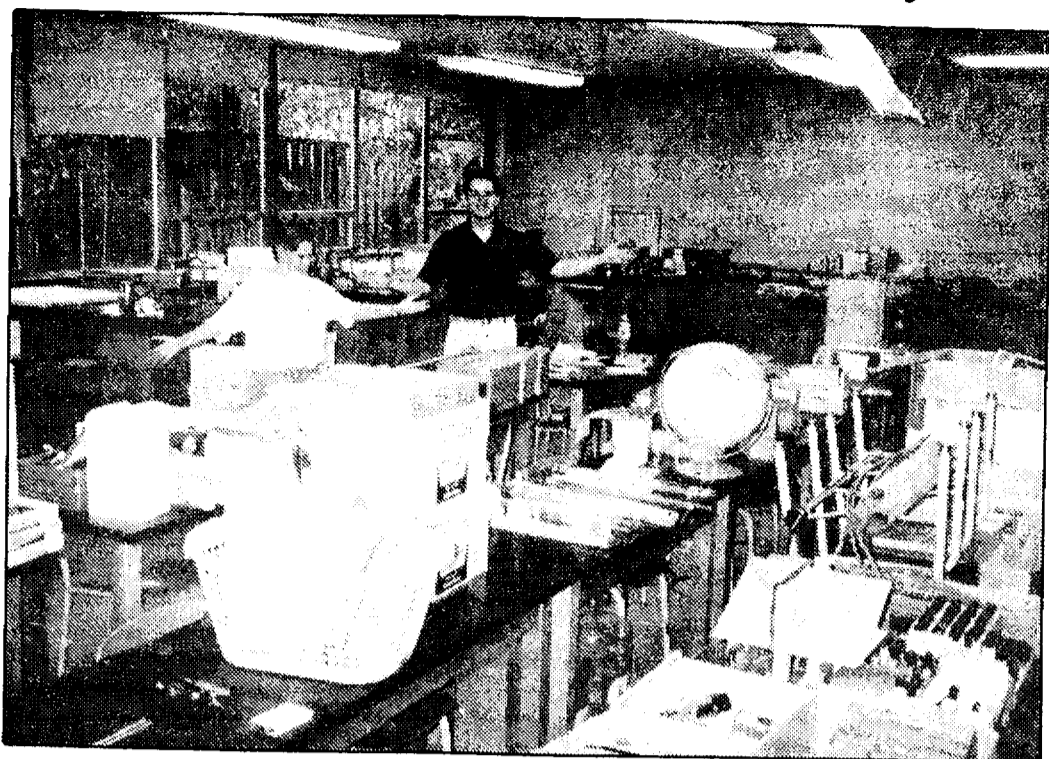

While the hallways and classrooms were in disarray last week, with books, desks, computers and boxes stacked every which way, McGuire said she has faith she and the staff will complete the transition by the first day of classes on Aug. 30.

Pointers ace J-school workshop

Nearly a dozen Grosse Pointe area students attended a journalism workshop at Michigan State University earlier this month. The local students joined 450 others from Michigan, Ohio, Illinois, Indiana and Iowa to learn about writing techniques, computer skills, photography and broadcasting.

The 10th-annual workshop, sponsored by the Michigan Interscholastic Press Association from Aug. 1-6, began with an anniversary celebration.

Local students who participated were: Lucy Ament, Tom DeCorte, Anne Krappmann, Christine Kurap, Patrick Maun, Lauren Mayk, Rebecca McCurdy, Matt Myftiu, Maria Romano and Megan Steele of Grosse Pointe South High School and Nelson Mitchell of University Liggett School.

Science teacher Patrick Victor and a student show off the new science lab that will be available for Star of the Sea sixth-through-eighth-graders.

Student Spotlight Lauren Swanson

Each week in this column we focus on the work of a student. It can be a poem, a drawing, a short story, a picture of a scientific experiment, a woodworking project or a book review.

Lauren Swanson is 12 years old and is a student at Parcels Middle School where she will be in the seventh grade this fall. Lauren loves to write poetry and keeps a daily journal. She lives in Grosse Pointe Woods with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Swanson. Her grandmother submitted this poem.

Grandfather

A warm hand on my little one.
A heart so pure, a face so sure.
He's a warm filled person
inside and out.
And he doesn't argue or shout.
He laughs and he cries.
His face never lies.
He gives me hugs and looks into my eyes.
And for a man so young he is so wise.
I love my grandpa, I love him so.
And he's always moving, ready to go.

Air conditioning bids awarded

Another step in the process to rid South high school of its gym's moisture problem was approved this week when the Grosse Pointe school board awarded a contract to Fast Cooling Inc. to install a dehumidification system.

The project will cost $46,000. The board also approved contracts to replace air conditioning systems at Central Library for $14,000 and at Monteith Elementary School for $21,000.

Both locations currently have air conditioning units installed in the data processing and office areas, but the systems need to be updated.

Excessive moisture in South's gym caused the wooden floor to buckle last year. The warped boards were replaced last September. But unless temperature and humidity levels are controlled in the gym, the problem will persist, the board was told.

Lauren Swanson

McCuien at Interlochen

University Liggett School student Marc McCuien is a student at the Interlochen Arts Camp this summer. He is the son of Jeannette and Phill McCuien of Hamtramck and is active in the camp senate at Interlochen, where he was elected vice president in the July elections.

Down on the farm

Children attending Grosse Pointe Nursery School Day Camp spent a day at Neuder Farm in St. Clair recently. The children, ages 2 1/2 to 12, enjoyed a day of watching cows, horses, goats and buffalo.

Student caught rifling desk

Three custodians found a student going through files in a teacher's desk at University Liggett School on Aug. 11. The employees said the 18-year-old man was not authorized to be in the building at 8 p.m. and called police. The man was arrested for trespassing.

The student told police that he had left a bag in the school on Aug. 6 and he was looking for it. He didn't say why he didn't attempt to look for the bag during business hours. He also told police that he was looking for a girl's telephone number that he thought might be on file in the teacher's desk.

Charges against the man will depend on whether the ULS headmaster wishes to prosecute.

Register now for required tests

Required achievement testing will be done at Grosse Pointe South High School on Friday, Sept. 3, for all new ninth- and tenth-grade students and for all ninth- and tenth-graders who have missed one or more tests previously.

New ninth graders will be tested from 8 a.m. to 11:35 a.m., with two breaks, in rooms 164-66.

New tenth graders will be tested from 8 a.m. to 10:50 a.m. in rooms 184-86. All testing rooms are air conditioned.

Achievement tests are being given at this time so that classes will not be interrupted during the school year.

It is very important that all new students and those students who have missed one or more of these required tests previously take them on Sept. 3 since no make-up date is scheduled.

The results of these tests are used by school counselors for educational planning and course replacement purposes.

HEALTH WATCH

They've had their immunizations. Now how about your kids?

Pet vaccinations are pretty easy to keep up with. But what about kids? They need a whole host of immunizations, which can sometimes change. We recommend keeping this list and following it closely:

Sure shots

Birth-18 months:

- 4 DPT (diphtheria, whooping cough, tetanus)
- 3-4 HIB (Haemophilus influenza)
- 3 oral polio
- 3 HBV (hepatitis B)*
- 1 MMR (measles, mumps, rubella)

Before starting kindergarten:

- 1 DPT (diphtheria, whooping cough, tetanus)
- 1 oral polio
- 1 MMR (measles, mumps, rubella)*

*These vaccines are new. Your child's doctor can tell you if he needs them.

Minimal risks

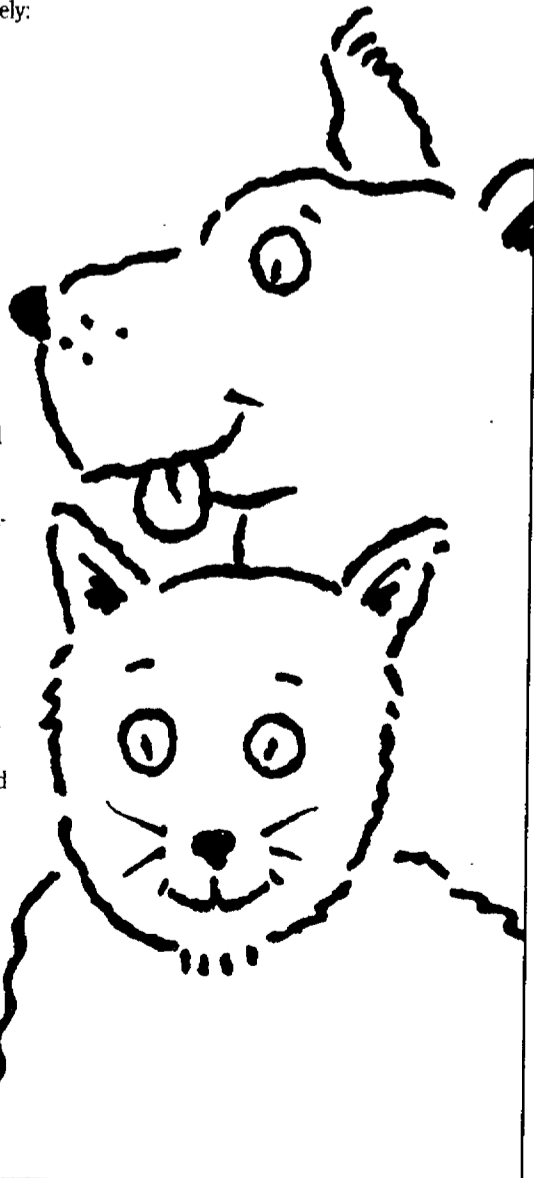

Parents sometimes avoid vaccines for fear that a bad reaction may be more harmful than the disease. Side effects are very rare, and pose far fewer risks than the diseases themselves. So although the list of immunizations is long, it will go a long way toward protecting your child for many years to come.

Free children's gift

To get a jump on back-to-school physicals, or receive a free travel pocket to tie on to your child's shoelaces, call our Physician Referral and Information Service at 1-800-237-5646. This information was provided by family practitioners and pediatricians on staff at St. John Hospital and Medical Center, and excerpted from WJR's HealthWatch program. HealthWatch airs weekdays at 5:55 a.m. and 5:27 p.m. on WJR, 760 AM.

Subaru introduces new line

Subaru's new-for-1993 Impreza nameplate features a series of subcompact sedans and station wagons in either front-wheel or all-wheel drive. Driver-side airbag is standard and anti-lock brakes are available. The standard Impreza engine is a 110-hp 1.8-liter four. Subaru promises several special-edition station wagons for 1994 including one designed for winter sports enthusiasts. It will have a heavy-duty battery that starts the car in very cold conditions, and room for equipment for skiing and the like.

Car care, driving tips that save money, energy, environment

Keeping your car running properly is one of the best things you can do to save money, reduce fuel consumption and at the same time help the environment.

"Performing routine maintenance, using quality products and modifying your driving habits are the three biggest factors affecting fuel economy and car performance," says Dave Smith, manager, technical support and development, at Mobil in Fairfax, Va. "And a properly maintained and tuned car runs more efficiently and produces fewer emissions."

Here are Smith's tips for saving money and energy:

Engine Tune-up — A well-tuned and properly maintained engine burns less gas and emits fewer pollutants to the environment.

Routine maintenance — Follow recommended maintenance schedules for checking the fuel system, air filters, transmission, belts, cooling/heating system, shock absorbers, wheel alignment and other parts subject to wear and breakage.

Acceleration — Don't be a "jackrabbit." Avoid fast starts and quick stops. Fast starts will overfeed your engine and burn 60 percent more gasoline than normal driving.

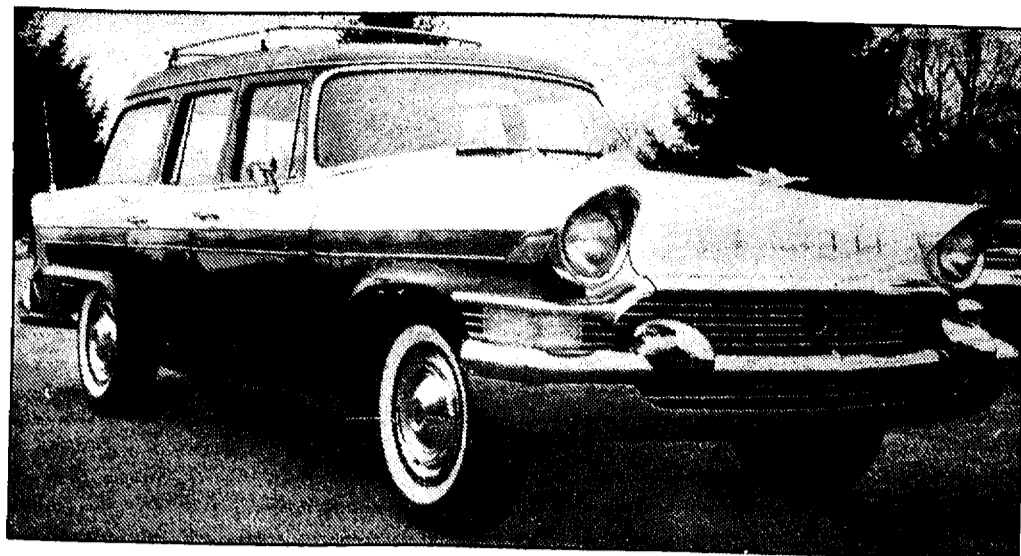

Know your transmission — With an automatic transmission, be light-footed. Pretend there's an egg between your foot and the gas pedal. Accelerate gradually. With a manual transmission, get your car into high gear quickly. At 20 mph, second gear consumes up to 20 percent more fuel than high — and first gear, up to 55 percent more.

Lubrication — Your oil is one of the most important protection "devices" in your car. Good engine oil can add to your engine's life, lower fuel consumption and reduce air emissions. Routinely check your oil level and follow builder recommendations for change intervals. Use an "Energy Conserving II" oil as identified on product labels. Use a quality synthetic oil for faster engine turnover and starting.

Tire pressure — Check tire pressure often. Under inflated tires add to fuel consumption. "Whether your car is a dependable means of transportation free of daily problems, or your worst headache, depends on you," says Smith. "If you take care of it, it'll more likely take care of you. And it'll do it for a lot less money."

ers are retirees, many of whom have never considered a wagon before. They want something more stylish than the traditional station wagon."

BMW, which builds and sells compact three-series wagons and mid-size five-series wagons in Europe, introduced the five-series model to the U.S. market last summer. One-quarter of the buyers of the 525iT own or have owned BMWs, said Rob Mitchell, spokesman for BMW of North America Inc. in Woodcliff Lake, N.J.

Who are these drivers willing to pay $39,800 for a mid-size station wagon that drives like its five-series sedan counterpart? Their median age is 47, most are married (with and without children), their median household income — are you ready for this? — is $218,000, according to Mitchell.

"While the wagons are utilitarian, owners don't use them that way as much as you'd think," Mitchell said. "They may put their golf clubs or riding tack in the back, but probably not groceries or paneling."

When he heard this, Jack Guthrie, a manager at Erhard BMW in Bloomfield Hills, chuckled. "The wagon has been popular with our customers," he said. "And I'm quite sure some of them put groceries in their BMW station wagons."

Problem? Don't call newsroom

One of the pearls of wisdom I saved from my days as an intern goes something like this: The people who make the most noise aren't necessarily those who deserve the most attention.

In other words, my former editor was trying to tell me, just because two city council members argued and tore each others' reputations to pieces at last night's meeting doesn't necessarily mean their behavior merits front-page news.

The same rule can be applied to individuals and groups espousing a particular opinion about anything from the shoddy workmanship done by the cement contractor they hired to the parents who think the school district is doing a lousy job of educating their children.

That is not to say that these are not legitimate concerns that might need to be examined further. But sometimes the newspaper is not the best resource for solving problems.

In the few years that I have worked at newspapers, I've received all kinds of suggestions for story ideas. The most curious calls come from those who prefer not to give their names. And I've often suspected their "story ideas" were really plans to smear someone or something's reputation in the newspaper.

I Say

Once a man called me to say that he knew for a fact that his brother-in-law was a child molester. He thought a newspaper article would teach the guy a lesson and alert the police. I suggested the man go directly to the authorities. If the case goes to court, then we'll consider covering it in the newspaper.

Another time, a distraught father called me — at home — to tell me that the reason why the people who killed his son were not being brought to justice was that they were tied to the mob and could I possibly do something about it?

Do what? Rough up some Mafia types? Who did this guy think I was? Did he think I quietly slipped into a closet and emerged as a caped super hero?

I know that may sound insensitive. Here's a man whose son is dead, who isn't seeing anyone do anything to help him and he wants some answers.

Many people call the newspaper because they don't know where else to turn.

I remember telling the father that there was nothing I could do to help his cause. He needed a good attorney or should contact a local social justice organization. Too much of what he and many others had called and told me about were allegations based on speculation.

But others I wonder about. Some people are just looking for a free ad. "My business is doing great this year. You should write an article about it."

And some people seem bent on spreading their hatred.

"John Doe was no heir; he died a pauper," whispered a woman caller who was disputing details of an obituary. "Furthermore," she snapped. "He was a homosexual."

So, in closing, I would like to string a few new pearls on the strand: If you want to boast about your new product line, call the advertising department. If you hate your mother, call a psychiatrist. If your water bill quadrupled this quarter, call the water department. If there's a squirrel nesting in your chimney, call an exterminator. Enough said.

HUCKINS

The aim of the 90's family is to not be the target of violence. It's tough!!!

Half a loaf, half a loaf onward

This is probably as good a time as any to write about Bill Clinton.

Washington's in recess, a sort of first-inning stretch between the acrimonious budget battle and the NAFTA and health-care fights to come. Reflection seems to be in order.

Besides, I bordered on the effusive six months ago. I believe, in fact, that I was heard to say "Ya gotta love the guy."

So let's revisit the subject, my love, like everyone else's being a bit mixed at this point.

At first, I avoided talking about Clinton. He's absolutely the first presidential candidate I ever voted for who won — and I was afraid bragging about it would put the jinx on him. As it turns out, too often he's managed to find the jinx without my help.

Writing about it won't make it any worse.

The main question that has to be answered about the Clinton approach is always whether half a loaf is better than none. It's pretty obvious that he believes it is. The man is a natural compromiser.

Normally that approach appeals to me, too. But compromising can be characterized as "win-win" or as "hopelessly watered down." There's been too much of the watered-down variety, no thanks to Bob Dole and Sam Nunn, who have helped the president back off his stated positions.

Take the budget agreement (or the "tax increase" agreement, or the "deficit reduction" act, as varying media outlets call it, according to their economic or political prism). Everybody knows that we aren't going to get out of the deficit hole we dug for ourselves without both tax increases and program cuts. But a diehard partisan Congress chose obstructionism over cooperation, and Clinton went along with it.

As a result, his earlier message of shared sacrifice was lost.

A higher tax on energy is not a bad thing, though it hurts a bit; it's a conservation measure, if not a deficit-cutting measure. Likewise, we need controls over a burgeoning Social Security. We got a little, but not what we should have.

The administration prefers to view its current limited success as a good start which will be followed quickly by more cuts. Good. We'll need 'em.

Or take the gays-in-the-military fiasco. Maybe Clinton was naive or politically foolish to shoulder that particular millstone. But people probably said the same thing when Harry Truman decided to integrate blacks into the armed services.

Truman didn't pussyfoot with compromises and endless studies. He said, "Look, I'm the commander-in-chief and I get to make the rules — this is the way it's going to be." Then he ignored the hollering.

Once Clinton decided to take a stand on the issue, he'd have served himself and the country better if he'd made the stand firm. Then we could have put it behind us, instead of being left with a non-settlement of a non-issue.

It's a disappointment. I came prepared for an activist presidency. I'm always up for shared sacrifice, because I don't think it ever hurts as much as everybody expects. Besides, although Clinton received less than half the vote, with the addition of the Perot supporters, there was a clear mandate for change, if not for Clinton.

But let's not give up too soon.

There's still health care. There's still a trade agreement. There's still the environment and the promised shake-up of bureaucracy. And, while my man has badly bobbed some appointments, he's also made some good ones. I'm willing to withhold judgment — and he does, after all, have three-plus years to go. This really was only the first inning.

If the record is murky on the domestic side, it is utterly obscured on foreign relations. While we seem to be winning a bit of international respect for our limited efforts to grab onto the tail of our deficit, our handling of the Yugoslavian civil war has been a major embarrassment.

I don't pretend to know what we should have done about Bosnia. Nobody seems to know, least of all the Europeans, who have been living with this mess and its antecedents on their doorstep for centuries.

But a couple of things are clear. We cherish the ideal of ourselves as a moral nation, founded on principles and ethical purpose. Both the Bush and Clinton governments so completely lost that sense in this case that two State Department employees on the Bosnia desk have resigned in protest. The most recent protester chastised the administration and the media for perpetrating the illusion that the endless talks in Geneva are about peace, when they are nothing but partition talks. We should at least be honest with ourselves.

Further, our public position has so far been only bluster, amounting to little more than telling the Serbs to make nice. If we weren't prepared to back up our threats with some kind of action, then we shouldn't bluster at all. It makes us look weak and foolish.

The Europeans, so fond of blaming us for not taking action, have at least had the sense to keep their mouths shut.

But do I regret my vote? My once-in-a-lifetime winning vote?

No way. Though I'd like to see the president reclaim some of the persuasive arts he demonstrated last fall. And get some backbone.

Some perspective:

Bush wasn't willing to step up to the deficit or to the moral question of Bosnia. He didn't have idea one about health care. He did get along better with the military, a cold comfort so far as I'm concerned.

Let's look back to spring of 1989, when the New York Times ran its assessment of George Bush's first three months in office. Administra-

fyi

Cable TV coverage a boondoggle?

The best argument against televising local council meetings is the cost-benefit ratio.

Per-capita value is nil and, the U.S. Department of Justice, says video does not replace "live" attendance.

Under the new Americans with Disabilities Act, real physical access must be provided — lifts, elevators, wide doors, toilets, ramps, "providing access by handicapped by Jan. 26, 1995."

Also, remember that "auxiliary aids and services must be so provided, for the sight-impaired, deaf, TDDs, telecommunications devices," says Michigan Municipal League information manager Lois Thibault. (Gads, what's next?)

Hugh Munce

Finnish symphony

Next week, Aug. 26-29, a Grosse Pointe Symphony Orchestra music specialist, Eldonna L. May, will travel to Finland's University of Jyväskylä as a speaker at the First International Conference of Cognitive Musicology. Prestigious members from many nations will participate.

An accomplished oboist, she won a research fellowship for next year in a graduate school. Her undergraduate and graduate degrees are from Wayne State University and a history of musicology degree from Michigan State University. She is a member of American Musicology Society and the International Delta Omicron Society.

Fights system as county commissioner

If Andrew Richner keeps up his call for Wayne County budget controls, reduced perks and more citizen participation in commissioner meetings, I'm giving him my vote in the next election ahead of time.

Andy did good work for the Park council and won the seat on our loosely operated Wayne County 15-member board of commissioners. Now he's homing in on reasons for the $12 million budget deficit, and he states flatly that Ed McNamara's county executive expenses should be cut as much as 40 percent.

Coincidentally, The Detroit News slammed down hard recently on big Ed's contributions from county suppliers, millions for political funds "donated" by those getting county contracts?

Former Pointer gets part in 'The Fugitive'

Tighe "Tiger" Barry, a 1975

graduate of Grosse Pointe South High School, has a speaking part in the new Warner Brothers action film, "The Fugitive."

Formerly a resident of Grosse Pointe Woods, he now lives in Santa Monica, Calif. He is a full-time prop master/set dresser for Warner Brothers Action Movies.

He also was a stunt man in the movie "Under Siege," the Stephen Segal action movie now hitting the video stores.

International law

Phil Gillis was 20 and a Navy communications technician when his ship put him ashore at Palermo, Italy. Quickly the Americans found friends, good food and wine, but his eyes fell on a lovely lady, a recently-graduated lawyer, no less.

Teresa Greco was the daughter of the city attorney and many relatives were lawyers. The young Gillis married Teresa and soon she came to Michigan.

He abandoned plans to teach mathematics, switching to law since three or four uncles, brothers and cousins were already lawyers.

Ten years later, Teresa earned a master's degree in psychology from the University of Detroit. She began her career as a Recorder's Court case worker and moved up to psychologist and eventually chief psychologist, from which job she retired in 1988.

When the directors of the Fine Arts Society chose her recently as president, Phil, five children and 11 grandchildren were filled with pride.

"I love theater, clothing, sewing, designing and working with fine clothes," says Teresa, master of the theater group's wardrobe.

Road worker assaulted by car passenger

A 33-year-old road crew worker was assaulted by another construction worker on Aug. 9 over a misunderstanding.

The incident occurred in the area of Chalfonte and Champagne at 6:56 p.m. when the driver and passenger of a truck misunderstood the actions of a flagman on the street.

After the flagman said something to the truck driver, the 300-pound truck passenger got out of the vehicle and asked the flagman for a clarification. The passenger then struck the flagman in the face and knocked him to the ground.

Grosse Pointe Farms police are investigating the incident.

2-year-old case is solved

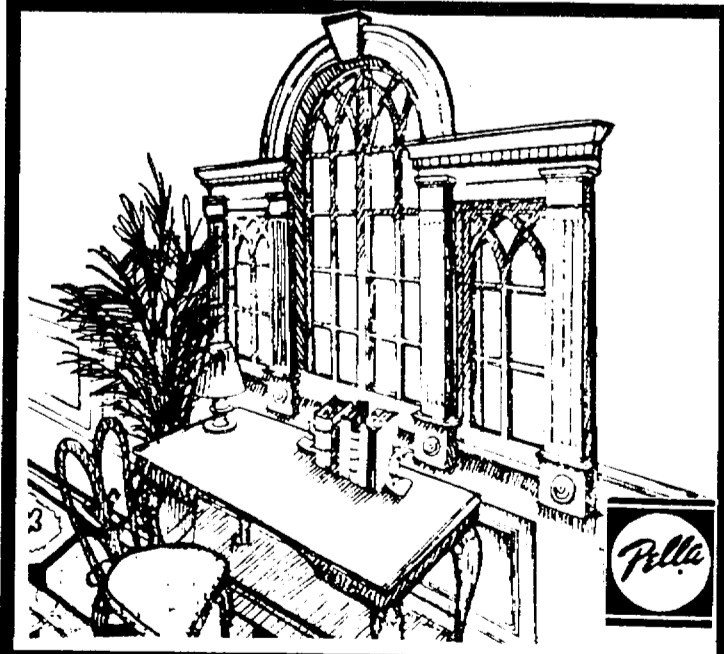

An FBI special unit on Aug. 12 arrested a 41-year-old Detroit man who was wanted for the September 1991 unarmed robbery of a Mack avenue business employee.

The man was arrested by agents from the repeat offenders task force — which focuses on looking for persons wanted on outstanding arrest warrants in the Law Enforcement Information Network.

The man was arraigned Aug. 13 in Grosse Pointe Park Municipal Court and was being held in Wayne County Jail. He was scheduled to appear today, Aug. 19, in the Park Municipal Court for a preliminary hearing on unarmed robbery charges.

tion officials, the paper said, "are nervous that pundits will charge that Mr. Bush has no agenda, no money, no strategy, no message, no ideology, no world-view, and no explanation of his mysterious role in the Iran-Contra scandal."

Other than that, no problem.

We are now installing Pella windows. Energy efficiency, structural integrity and long-term durability have become hallmarks of Pella products. No wonder more architects recommend Pella windows than any other window.

age costs the same whether there are two or 20 people in the family. So, "those in college" do not cost anything additional.

Optical coverage includes ONE pair of glasses per year per family member — not two, Mr. Wright. Get your facts straight — don't embellish. And, there is a co-pay by the insured. The "fat pension" you speak of is provided by the state for all its teachers, although Gov. Engler is doing his best to take this away, too.

Teachers are paid to work 186 days per year. The time off at Christmas and Easter and during the summer are not included in the 186, so technically, they are unpaid days off. Although some teachers have their pay spread out over 12 months, it is earned only during the 186 days.

Mr. Wright, save the blood you're afraid of having siphoned off, and donate it to the Red Cross.

Incidentally, I am not a Grosse Pointe teacher. I have lived here for 25 years and am grateful for the excellent job the teachers did with my three children. I think they earn and deserve every penny they get.

bidding parents from pulling their children out of school for extended vacation periods. Likewise, they could also effectively forbid broken families, latchkey children and a burgeoning drug-and-alcohol culture.

Help teachers to somehow control or at least cope more effectively with these conditions, Mr. Wright, and their skills and dedication, which are not one iota less now than in former years, will produce those higher test scores and, much more important, successful graduates who can effectively compete in a global economy.

The point here is that in assigning blame for unsatisfactory education, we in Grosse Pointe as well as in that larger society, would perhaps do well to give up blaming some "devil" (a school board, a superintendent, a teacher union) and simply look at ourselves in the mirror.

No raises for teachers

To the Editor:

Regarding the present teacher contract negotiations, it is time that the school board takes a hard stand.

Since the teachers received 7 percent each of the three years in their last contract, which is actually a total 22 percent raise, they should receive no raise the first two years of the new contract with a minimal raise the third year.

Since it is illegal for teachers to strike, it is time that this law is enforced to the fullest. It is time that judges start following laws instead of attempting to rewrite them from the bench.

The taxpayers of the Pointes are tired of the school board thinking that it has a blank check.

Runaway caught

A juvenile runaway was caught stealing a power drill from a hardware store on Kercheval in Grosse Pointe Park on Aug. 10 and was returned to the custody of the Wayne County Youth Home.

Hardware store employees saw the youth take the power tool and held him until police arrived. Park public safety detective Lt. David Hiller said the department may pursue charges against the youth.

In response

To the Editor:

I am writing to comment on recent letters by two other local residents that have recently appeared in the Grosse Pointe News.

The first letter was from Cindy Pangborn who said that our school board can make some very easy budget-cutting choices, offering as an illustration that after two voter rejections, we don't need to spend any more money on feasibility studies for a new public library facility.

Frankly, I must very, very reluctantly agree with Ms. Pangborn. What those two voter rejections told me was that in Grosse Pointe, as in the larger American society, reading is simply not the valued activity that it once was.

Perhaps I could add here yet another easy budget-trimming suggestion for our board. That would be to eliminate the high schools' ice hockey program, which is currently funded to the tune of $849 per student player.

Which brings us to the second letter writer, Joseph P. Wright. Despite what he perceives as lavish pay and perks, Mr. Wright views our teachers as having failed to halt a "dismal" decline in student test scores.

In its infinite wisdom, our state legislature has recently decided to cut the Gordian knot of school funding rather than to painstakingly untie it. Perhaps this august body could, in a similar spirit, pass legislation outlawing Nintendo, MTV, daytime TV and R-rated movies, thus forcing our children and youth to read and then to respond — meaningfully — to what they have read.

In like manner, legislation could be enacted for-

Once a sales leader, station wagons fall sharply in popularity

Station wagons, once as middle-American as baseball, apple pie and "The Ed Sullivan Show," are threatened with obscurity.

Once the vehicle of choice for families and many businesses, wagons today are shifting into low for a steep uphill climb in a market that offers dozens of minivans and sport utilities that fulfill the same roles.

Wagons had their genesis in the 1920s. As depot hacks, they transported travelers from train station to hotel and spa. The body style really caught on with the new wave of post-war families in the late 1940s, and by 1959 station wagons accounted for nearly one of every five domestic new-car sales.

A decade ago domestic wagons of all sizes accounted for over 616,000 new vehicle registrations in the United States, according to numbers from R. L. Polk for calendar year 1982. Last year domestic wagon registrations numbered just 235,000, Polk said.

In spite of their precipitous decline in popularity, most full-line auto makers — both domestic and import — continue to offer wagons. At one end of the scale, Mercedes-Benz offers its 300TE 4matic for about $58,000. Entry-level buyers are better advised to check out a Ford Escort wagon for around $10,000.

Who buys them? And why? Young families, small businesses, retirees and even the hunt-club set are taking delivery of wagons. They like them because they can be cheaper than minivans, they're more car-like in their ride, they haul cargo, they are easy to get into and they look stylish. And some young families are trading minivans for wagons.

The auto makers have mixed feelings about continuing to build wagons. While they don't want to miss sales and snub buyers, high-volume builders who sell on smaller profit margins have, since the 1980s, invested heavily in manufacturing and marketing minivans and sport utility trucks. Upscale manufacturers like BMW or niche vehicle makers like Subaru offer wagons because their customers said they want them. And loyalty and repeat business are critical to their survival.

Relative newcomer Saturn introduced its first station wagon last fall as a 1993 model. Compared with launching a small van or sport utility, a wagon was economically practical to build in the Spring Hill, Tennessee, plant. And it has helped the General Motors subsidiary continue to woo and win import owners.

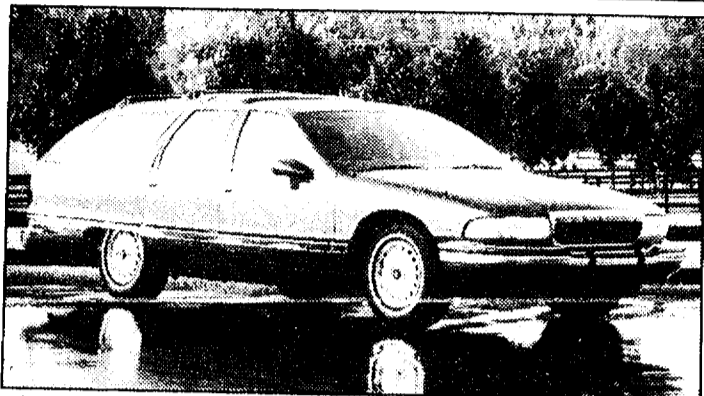

"Eighty percent of our station wagon sales are import conquest sales," said Paul Young, Saturn product planning manager in Troy. "They are more successful in that regard than our sedans."

Young said the Saturn plant in Spring Hill has assembled 12,000 wagons since last fall. Buyers are opting for the more expensive wagon with dual-overhead-cam engine by a margin of 2-to-1, he said.

The big, luxurious American station wagon is exemplified by this 1994 Buick Roadmaster Estate Wagon.

In its earliest form, station wagons had bodies made of wood, as on this '26 Ford Model T Depot wagon.

Handling and comfort still sway buyers toward wagons, said Jim Demmer, vice president of Jack Demmer Ford in Wayne. "Older drivers like the car-like qualities of wagons like the Taurus," he said. "The Escort seems to appeal more to young families and to businesses that need an economical delivery vehicle."

"In the past we've offered wagons in almost every car line. Mini-vans and sport utilities have changed that."

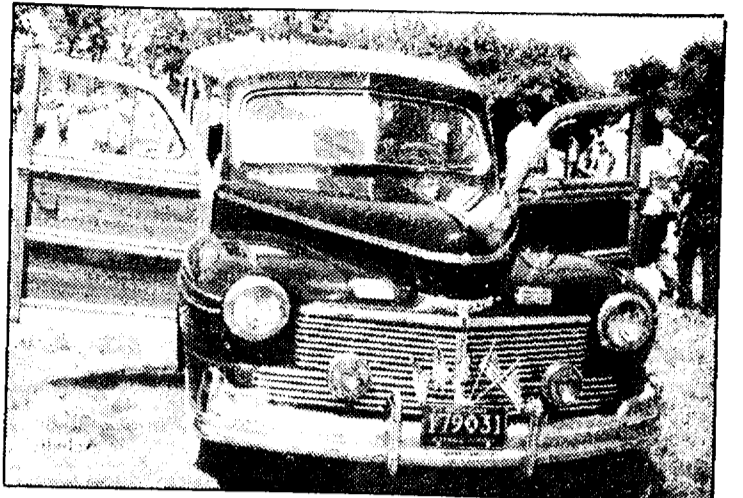

Bob Bierley, product segment planner for Chevrolet, couldn't agree more.

"As a mass marketer, we have to go with the trend toward sport utilities and minivans. Station wagons have eroded to a small market — one out of three new vehicles sold today is a truck," he said.

Bierley said small sport utilities almost doubled in sales between 1987 and 1992. Chevy is putting its eggs in baskets labeled four-door sport utilities and minivans, he indicated.

"There will continue to be a modest demand for wagons in the future," Bierley said. "Right now we offer a small wagon with our Cavalier, and a full-size wagon with the Caprice. As long as we build the Caprice (series), we will have a full-size wagon in our line-up."

Another mass marketer, Toyota, said it believes the decline in wagon sales may have leveled off. Wagons do have an edge on trucks in their ride and accessibility, said Mike Michels, spokesman for Toyota Mo-

Toyota brought out an all-new Corolla wagon for the 1993 model year and earlier introduced a domestically designed-and-built Camry wagon to counter Honda's made-in-the-U.S.A. Accord wagon.

"Our new Camry wagon is popular in Japan and Europe," Michels said. "It has really taken off in Japan with the baby-boomer generation."

Like the Camry version, Honda Accord wagons also are exported to markets around the world. Here at home, they appeal to a kind of upper-middle-class market, said Jeffrey Leestma, Detroit-based spokesman for American Honda Motor Co.

"About half of Accord wagon owners are managers or professionals and virtually none use their vehicles for utilitarian purposes," Leestma said.

"Interestingly, nearly a quarter of Accord wagon own-

Hockey makes South senior a world traveler

By Chuck Klonke
Sports Editor

Chris Fox left home last Christmas Day for a hockey tournament in Calgary and the Grosse Pointe South senior hasn't stopped traveling since.

He recently returned to his Grosse Pointe Farms home after spending more than a week in Japan playing for the U.S. National Select 17 hockey team, which finished second to the Russian squad in a recent four-team tournament that also included teams from Canada and the host country.

"This has been a busy year, but a very rewarding one," said Fox, who anchored the defense on the U.S. team. "It seems like I've been playing hockey all summer, but I've had the chance to travel to Rhode Island, New York, Chicago, Montreal, Alaska and Colorado."

Fox played on the Little Caesars team that won the National Midget championship in Alaska last spring and his selection to the National Select 17 squad, enhances his chances of someday playing in the Olympics. He was the only Michigan player on the 20-man Select team.

"Eighty percent of the Olympic players have played on the National Select teams," Fox said. "The 1998 Olympics would be just about the right time for me."

He said the recent revolution in the former Soviet Union hasn't had an effect on the country's hockey program, which dominated world play for so many years.

"They were skating all over the ice," Fox said. "They're as explosive as ever. It doesn't look like their hockey program has changed much. There's not much else for them to do."

The Russian team beat the United States 10-7 in the championship game. The highlight of the tournament for Fox was a 4-0 victory over Canada in the semifinals.

The United States beat Japan 7-6, but lost 3-1 to Canada and 9-3 to Russia in round robin play.

"We felt we should have won the two games we lost," Fox said. "The game with Canada was scoreless for a long time and in the game with the Russians our goalie gave up five goals in five minutes. We were really pumped up when we played Canada in the semifinal."

Fox was outstanding in the tournament. He was on the ice for only five of the 28 goals scored against the Americans and had several assists, including one in the victory against Canada.

"It was a big thrill to have them play our national anthem after that game — and to have the Canadians stand there and listen to it. Sometimes they think they're the only ones who can play hockey," Fox said.

Fox got his start in the Grosse Pointe Hockey Association when he was 6.

"I was going to play when I was 5, but I hated it and played floor hockey instead. By the next year I wanted to play," Fox said.

He was an immediate hit. He scored 17 goals in the first month of the season and a promising hockey career was under way.

"That was our first experience with hockey," said Chris' mother Jane. "We didn't know it was anything out of the ordinary at the time to score that many goals."

By the time he was 8, Fox was playing travel hockey.

"Some people thought we might be pushing him, but we believe that you have to let your children develop and grow to their potential," said Jane Fox. "As long as he could handle the competition and everything else we felt it was good for him. Academics come first, but they never suffered."

Chris Fox carries a 3.89 grade-point-average at South and he hopes to pursue a career in medicine.

One of his role models is Randy Gregg, who was a practicing physician while playing for the Edmonton Oilers and the Canadian Olympic team.

"He proved it can be done," Fox said.

Fox went through a series of tryout camps before he was chosen for the Select team, which is co-sponsored by the U.S. Olympic Committee and USA Hockey.

He attended a Michigan tryout camp in early May, then joined 250 other prospects at a National camp in Lake Placid, N.Y., from June 30 through July 6.

That number was pared to 68 for the Select 17 camp at the U.S. Olympic training center in Colorado Springs. After a series of practices and scrimmages, the final group of 20 was chosen to make the trip to Japan.

Fox's coach was Dave Silk, a member of the 1980 U.S. Olympic team and an assistant coach at Boston University.

"I learned a lot from him," Fox said.

Fox has several options for continuing his hockey career. He was the No. 1 draft pick of the Detroit Freeze, a Tier II junior team that plays in Fraser, and was also drafted by the Niagara Falls Thunder of the Ontario Hockey League. He has also been contacted by the Omaha team in the United States Junior Hockey League.

"I don't think I'd play Tier I junior because then I couldn't play college hockey," Fox said. "The Omaha team is appealing because they play before crowds of 5,000 every night. The downside is that I'd have to move away for my senior year in high school. It's a tough decision."

Hockey has been a series of difficult decisions for the Foxes. "There are a lot of tradeoffs," Jane Fox said. "It's tough to

A view from the sidelines

by Wilbur Elston

Senior golfers try new tees

A trial of a new set of forward tees for senior golfers has started an intriguing debate among older players at the Country Club of Detroit.

In effect, the new forward tees offered on an optional basis for golfers 70 years and over trim the length of the course to about 5,568 yards, cut handicaps computed for the white tees by four strokes, and reduce par from 72 to 71.

The changes make the seniors' course 687 yards shorter than the 6,255-yard white-tee course most seniors have been playing or 1,032 yards less than the blue-tee course on which most championships are played.

Players on 14 of the 18 holes use the striped tees. On two holes, players use the white tees and on two others they play from the red tees.

What apparently disturbs some senior men is that the striped and red tees are regularly used by women.

As a consequence, some senior men have suggested that men who play the forward tees will have to wear skirts. Others want to call their fellow players Miss or Mrs.

That's all in fun, of course, even though it may reflect a bit of male chauvinism, too.

The club's golf chairman pointed out in his notice to members about the experiment that similar forward tees are used at many outstanding clubs in the South.

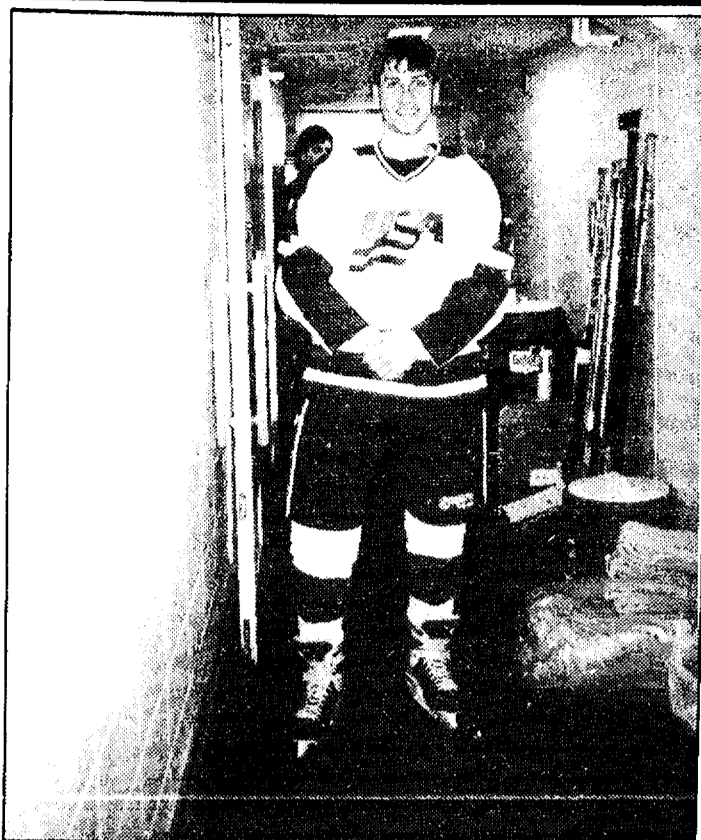

At the Country Club, the board hopes the program will offer a new challenge to senior players and speed up play on the course. After the season, the golf committee will recommend whether or not to make the trial permanent.

In this senior's view, the change has produced a different game. It enables some of us to recapture some of the excitement of the past by scoring better than we have done in recent years.

More specifically, it enables us to reach some par-four holes in two shots, score a few more pars and avoid some of those disastrous double and triple bogies that plague us on the longer white-tee holes.

Jack Nicklaus once designed a ball that would carry only a limited distance. His aim was to use it to limit the length of holes and the amount of acreage needed for new golf courses. That plan fell flat with a resounding thud — but some of us have higher hopes for the new forward-tee course.

True, we can't roll back the years but we can occasionally create the momentary illusion that we have done so by playing the forward tees.

Chris Fox, a senior at Grosse Pointe South, poses in his Team USA uniform before taking the ice for a game in a hockey tournament in Japan between squads from Russia, Canada, the United States and the host country. Team USA finished second and Fox was one of the anchors of the squad's defense corps.

Fox

see your son leave for Calgary on Christmas Day, but the tournament was a great opportunity for him. He's had a chance to see places he'd never see otherwise and he's met some great people through hockey."

Fox was named to the second all-tournament team in Calgary and his game has improved steadily since then.

If it keeps up, he could be one of the players American fans are cheering in the 1998 Olympics.

Woods golfers among the leaders

Two Grosse Pointe Woods golfers made strong showings in the Women's Metropolitan Golf Association tournament at Pine Valley golf course in Romeo.

Elaine Jenks tied for second low gross in First Flight. She shot a 47-43-90 to tie with Pat Meyers of Birmingham.

Mary Richards had the low net score in Third Flight when her 107 was corrected to a 69.

Regatta winners

Bayview Yacht Club's team of Mike Uznis and Nathan Marshall won all three of their races to take first place in the 30th annual J. Otto Scherer Memorial Regatta on the waters adjacent to the host Crescent Sail Yacht Club. Crescent Sail's Mike Hendrie and Eric Schulte were second and the Bayview team of Peter Feldman and Scott Wake took third place. The regatta challenges the area's top young sailors in a three-race series that honors Scherer, a former Grosse Pointe Park resident who established junior sailing programs. The young sailors compete in Flying Junior sloops. Mrs. Scherer, who is 95, presented the trophies to the top finishers. In the front row,

PLEASE DON'T DELAY! SPAY or NEUTER YOUR PET TODAY!

An altered pet is a healthier and happier companion. Also, it spares you the grief and pain of having puppies and kittens destroyed when no homes can be found. Countless numbers of sweet, innocent little ones are euthanized every day in shelters across the country because a pet wasn't spayed or neutered. If we cut down on the numbers of unwanted litters being born, we will also cut down on the number of abandoned, lost and unwanted animals to destroy.

WE WILL BE HAPPY TO PROVIDE ADVICE as well as a LIST OF ECONOMICAL SERVICE SOURCES

Grosse Pointer gets new liver, new outlook

By Margie Reins Smith
Feature Editor

Last month, 9-year-old Eve Breitmeyer made a get well card for her father, John Breitmeyer III of Grosse Pointe Park, who was very sick. He had been in Henry Ford Hospital for 35 days. He was not expected to live.

On the opposite page, she painted a healthy pink liver covered with sparkly fuchsia sequins. Beside it, a smiley face.

Eve, her brother Alex, 6, and their mother Leslie, are smiling again because John Breitmeyer traded his diseased liver for a healthy one July 12.

One month later, on Aug. 12, he said, "Today is the 31st day of the first year of my life."

"I was warned of a problem with liver function in the mid-1980s. I had some abnormal values in some blood work — enzymes. I was feeling fine. There was no treatment, but my doctor wanted to monitor the situation."

In 1989, after a liver biopsy, doctors told John he had hepatitis.

"It wasn't the usual kind of hepatitis," he said. "They called it non-A non-B hepatitis. About two years ago, new research determined it was a third kind of hepatitis, called hepatitis C. I had cirrhosis of the liver complicated further by hepatitis C."

Doctors considered an experimental drug, then decided John's disease had progressed too far. In 1991, doctors told him the only way to extend his life would be with a new liver — a transplant.

He went through the traditional stages of grief, including shock, denial and anger. "How could this happen to me?" he thought.

Before Leslie and John realized John had been placed on a list of people waiting for a transplant, a liver became available.

"He was offered a liver in February," Leslie said. It didn't work out. Later, a second available liver wasn't suitable either.

"The wait for liver transplants is not as long as the wait for other organs," she said.

"You can harvest a liver and use it for about 20 hours. Henry Ford Hospital is more conservative. They consider the 'shelf-life' of a liver to be 12 to 15 hours," John said.

John and Leslie smiled. "Shelf life. You have to maintain a sense of humor about these things," he said. "My sense of humor helped me heal."

"It was 3 p.m. Sunday, July 11," Leslie said, "when I got word that another liver might be available. John had been in the hospital for 35 days. His kidneys had failed. Less than 20 percent of his liver was functioning. He was very ill. But when we got the call, they couldn't find John."

"He had put on his clothes and walked across the street to his office. He told the nurses he was going out for a newspaper."

A helicopter took John's doctor to Bay City to pick up the liver of a 60-year-old woman and bring it back to Henry Ford Hospital. At 8:30 p.m., after they found John and began to prep him for surgery, Leslie heard that the helicopter — and the liver — were en route to Henry Ford Hospital.

Because Leslie knew where the helicopter landing pad was, she and her family went outside to wait.

"They bring the liver in a picnic cooler," she said, "... like this one." She pointed ment into being. I've never experienced such feelings."

John said it's difficult to describe the gratitude he feels since he got a second chance at life.

"I have re-examined my priorities — my type A 12-hour work days, which probably contributed to my illness. I realize how important my wife and children are. I had neglected them and taken them for granted. Now I have a new perspective," he said.

"We've always believed in God and a spiritual power. But now my relationship with God is different. I was able to call on God for assistance and I was absolutely overwhelmed by how much He was able to carry us through in a way that was liberating and joyful. I have re-examined what faith is all about and it's very important for me."

John is the 32nd person to receive a new liver at Henry Ford Hospital since the mid-1990s.

"National statistics say that transplant patients have an 80 percent survival rate over a five-year period," he said.

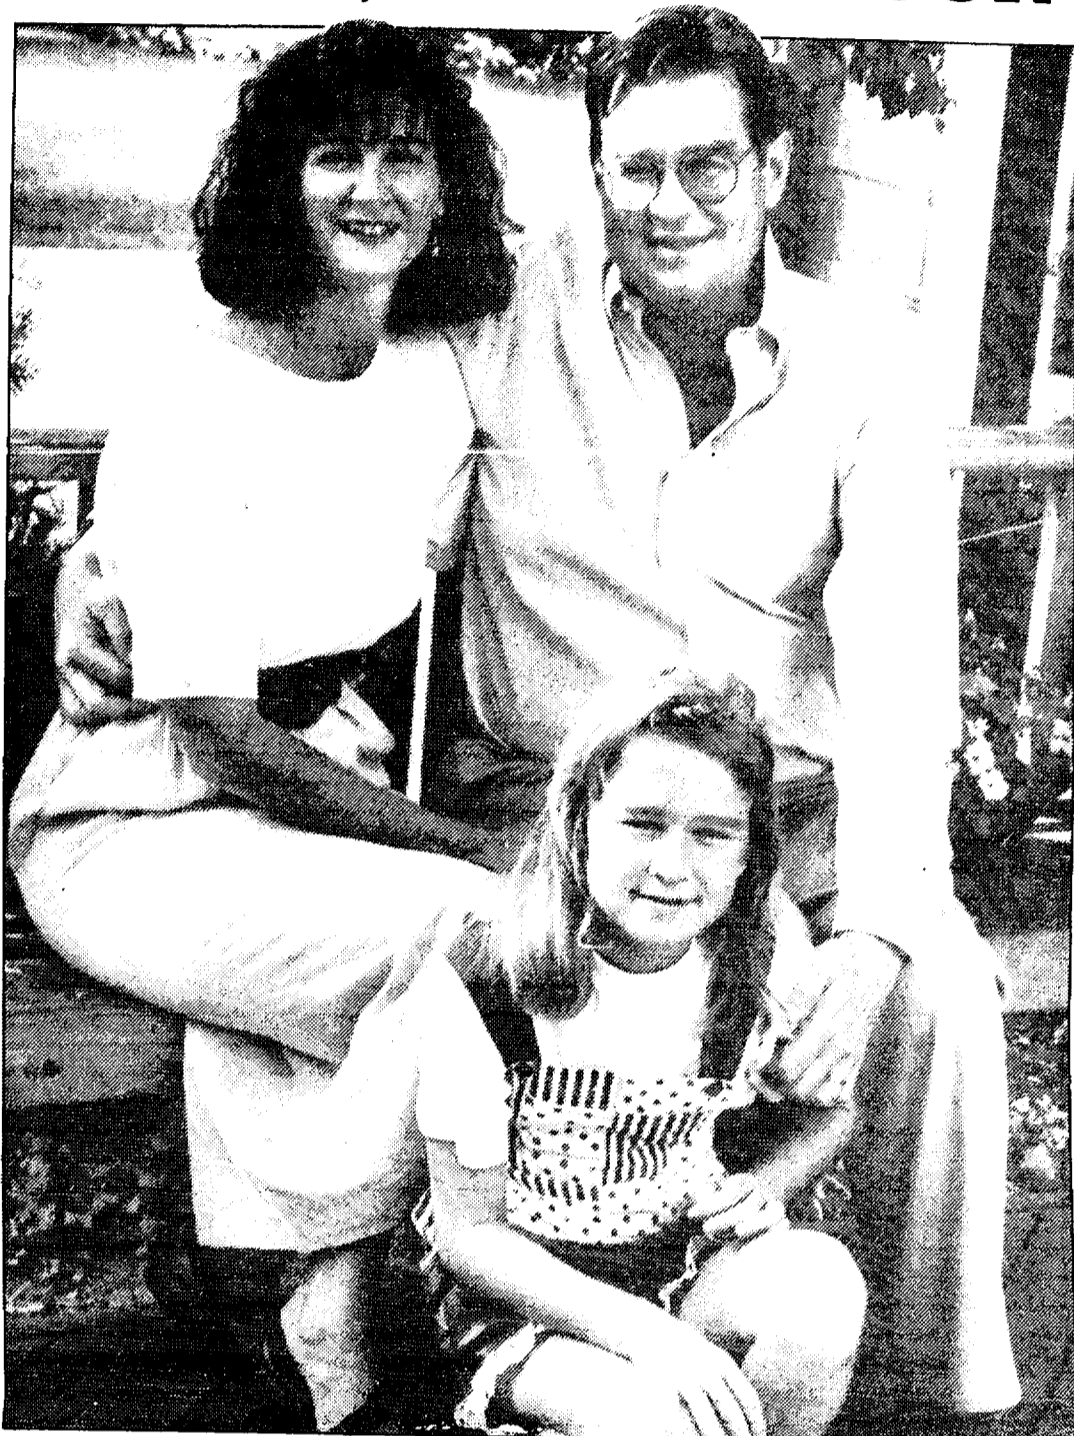

Because John is young (41) and was relatively healthy for most of his life, his expectations for survival are closer to 90 percent.

"I fully expect to be around for a long time," he said. "But I temper that with the reality that rejection (of the liver) can occur at any time."

"I take 40 pills a day. The anti-rejection medication suppresses the body's natural disease-fighting system, so the body can't fight other diseases. I'll always be susceptible to opportunistic infections."

Breitmeyer said he's not allowed to swim; he can't stay in the sun for long periods of time; can't work in his garden. But he expects to lead a relatively normal life in spite of these few restrictions.

"I realize I have a second

How to donate an organ

Anyone can donate an organ or tissue, according to the Organ Procurement Agency of Michigan. Old age or a history of disease don't eliminate your eligibility to improve or save the lives of others who are suffering from organ failure, bone defects, burns and blindness. Organs and tissue that can't be used for transplants can often be used for research. The heart, kidneys, liver, pancreas, bone, eyes, skin and other tissues can be transplanted.

Signing a donor card will not affect the care you receive at a hospital if you're injured and there is no charge to the family of an organ donor. It is important, however, for your family or loved ones to know that you want to become a donor. Donor cards are available in the form of labels that can be attached to the back of a driver's license or a personal identification card.

For more information about donating organs or tissue, call 1-800-482-4881.

John is vice president of marketing for Health Alliance Plan. He describes himself as a type A personality, a person who thrives when his days are active, his work hours are long and his sense of control is maintained.

Suddenly, he had lost all control of his life.

"I even denied the physical symptoms of my disease," he said. "I ignored the chronic fatigue, the serious episodes of bleeding, the changes in my mental state. I said to myself, 'I'm strong. I can beat this on my own.'"

"In October 1992, I was referred to the Henry Ford Hospital transplant evaluation team. The evaluation process involved 10 specialists and it's not easy."

to a small red and white cooler in their living room, which was decorated with pictures of the musclebound duo of "Saturday Night Live" fame. "Hans and Franz lunch box," was painted in red across the top. "Steroids included," was scrawled across the handle.

"This one is a joke," Leslie said.

When the helicopter landed, John's family and their minister were waiting.

"It had been raining," Leslie said, "a bad storm. But when the helicopter landed, the sky was clear and there was a rainbow. It was incredible. So dramatic. As his two surgeons stepped off the helicopter with the picnic cooler, I thought how John's life was just beginning and I thought about all the powers that brought that mo-life, but under medical management. I have to take medication the rest of my life; I have to be concerned about infection; I have to change my lifestyle.

"I am absolutely beholden to the family of the woman who donated her liver. I take comfort in the fact that she was willing to do this and I hope her family is satisfied that she's well taken care of in her spiritual needs by whatever God she believes in."

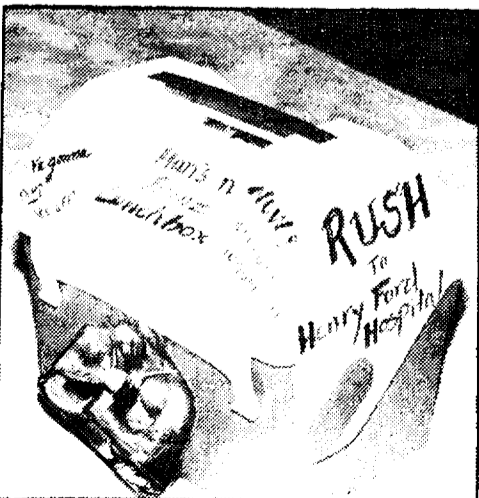

The woman who donated her liver so that John can look forward to life also donated both of her corneas and both kidneys. The Breitmeyers don't know anything about her or how she died.

"I just hope she had a three or four handicap," John said, with a smile, "so maybe my golf game will improve."

Both John and Leslie emphasized the importance of educating people about the need for organ and tissue donations.

"Everyone should consider this," John said. "The statement on the back of your driver's license is a good first step. But it's important to know that it's not enough to just sign this. You have to have the consent of the nearest surviving family member and this is frequently where the donation process breaks down."

"A liver transplant is not a common procedure. For me it was an adventure, a learning experience, a chance for personal growth."

Transplant patients' new organs are often delivered in ordinary picnic coolers. John Breitmeyer's wife Leslie and some friends decorated a cooler for him as a joke to cheer him up. John said a sense of humor helped him heal.

Spur-of-the-moment is always an adventure

My husband and I planned our little adventure into the Upper Peninsula of Michigan on the spur of the moment. We were visiting relatives near Gaylord when we began talking about the fact that we had not visited the U.P. in several years and that I had never seen Taquamenon Falls. So it was decided — we would go the next day and just stay one night.

And, of course, it was up to me to find some place to stay.

Now I have always considered this a bit of a personal and professional challenge. I am always trying to find interesting places, rarely opting for a chain motel or other "known" quantities.

Because we were visiting a part of the U.P. where I had never been and where my husband had not been in more than 13 years, we were somewhat at a loss because I did not have a copy of the U.P. travel planner with me. And so I called the office of the Upper Peninsula Travel & Recreation Association (UPTRA) at (800) 562-7134 and asked its staff for advice. Of course, they consulted the travel planner.

I inquired specifically about bed & breakfasts. They first recommended the Lakeview Inn in Grand Marais. This town on Lake Superior was a bit farther than we intended to go but I did talk with innkeeper Beverly Madore. She said that she did have one vacancy ($45/night) but that if I intended to write about her place then I should know that the inn was for sale and she would be closing at the end of the month for the winter.

As alternatives, she recommended either Chamberlin's Ole Forest Inn or the Helmer House, both near Manistique Lake and the town of Curtis. So I called the Ole Forest Inn where I spoke with Bud Chamberlin. He did indeed have a vacancy ($55/night, queen bed)

TRAVEL TRENDS

By Cynthia Boal Janssens

and modestly noted that the dining room "serves the best meals in the eastern U.P." Since food was the second most important consideration, I made a reservation.

We left about 2 p.m. on a Wednesday. The weather was sunny and the trip up I-75 was uneventful. We stopped at the visitor's center at the bridge and picked up a copy of the U.P. travel planner. As soon as we crossed the bridge, the scenery began to change. The highway became two lanes. Hand-lettered signs advertising smoked fish, pasties and beef jerky appeared. We were following Route 2 along the southern edge of the peninsula and the views of beaches and dunes were impressive.

Near Nubinway, we diverted for a half hour or so to visit the site where Everett's Cottages used to be located. For more than a dozen years before we were married, my husband and his family vacationed every fall at this rustic resort on the Black River.

About 12 years ago, Mr. Everett was forced to sell to the state and since then the cottages have been razed. However, the "big house" is still there and, of course, the river. So we re-traced the back roads that Chet had traveled so many times. We also tried something that Chet said they always used to do: putting the car in neutral at the top of the hill and coasting all the way to the entrance.

From here we headed north on Route 33 into the little town of Curtis which looked fairly lively, featuring a T-shirt shop and several taverns. We diverted to visit the South Lake Decoy Shop on South Manistique Lake where we had a nice chat with proprietor and carver Jim Wicks. He said that he had worked for the state Department of Natural Resources in Lansing and had retired to the U.P. some years ago.

As dinnertime was approaching and the sky was darkening with a potential storm, we headed on to the Ole Forest Inn which is just a couple of miles outside of Curtis on Big Manistique Lake. This vacation lodge was built in the late 1800s by a railroad company as a passenger hotel near its Curtis station. The railroad abandoned service in 1909 and in 1924 the inn was purchased by James Ostrander and moved to its present location. He operated it as Ostrander's Forest Inn until 1955. There is a collection of postcards in an album in the lobby that shows the inn with its big wrap-around veranda looking much as it is today.

For that we can thank Bud Chamberlin and co-owners Terry Bashore and Gail Chamberlin. A few years ago, while on a snowmobiling trip, Bud discovered the abandoned inn and was charmed. They purchased it and began an extensive renovation. It now features both a bar and restaurant as well as 10 guest rooms on the second floor.

All seemed well until, as we were checking in, they mentioned that tonight there would be karaoke on the porch. Huh? Karaoke at a B&B, a place that advertises its tranquility? We hesitated. Our room was in the front, directly over the porch. Chet was already a bit piqued to learn that we would be sharing a bath with the rest of the rooms (Uhh, a detail that I completely forgot to check). We questioned what the noise level would be and they offered to change our room to one at the back of the hotel.

After dinner, we checked out the alternative room, found it rather small and decided to stay where we were and cope by shutting the windows.

Bud explained to us that there is very little entertainment for tourists in the Curtis area and that the inn had been trying to put on a variety of functions to give guests something to do. As a result, they had been featuring karaoke every Wednesday night during the summer months.

Frankly, I felt a bit like a party pooper. We had been anticipating peace and quiet and so were a bit disappointed to find that the inn was bustling with diners and visitors. Because of the weather, there really wasn't much of anywhere to go and so we settled onto the couch in front of the fireplace for an hour of magazine-browsing and headed for bed around 9 p.m.

Chet immediately fell asleep. I read for an hour, managing to ignore most of the lousy singing below. It became obvious to me that there was a large crowd downstairs of people who were thoroughly enjoying themselves. Between 10 p.m. and midnight, the festivities really swung into high gear and rock tunes such as "Louie, Louie" and "Bad, Bad Leroy Brown" became popular. I might as well have given up and joined the party. Sigh.

Otherwise, our stay at the Forest Inn was pleasant. The food was indeed good and the bar was convenient. The inn stays open year round and is very busy during the fall color and snowmobiling seasons. The antique-furnished rooms are $55 a night or $65 for one of the two rooms that do have private baths. Call (906) 586-6000.

The temperature had dropped about 20 degrees overnight and it began to rain as we headed for Taquamenon Falls. (As we passed through the town of Newberry, Chet looked longingly at a new Comfort Inn — "Bet it had private baths," he observed.) We hauled out our foul-weather slickers and enjoyed the sights in the drizzle. The falls were indeed well worth seeing ($3.50 per car admission to the state park).

Then we headed up to the new Great Lakes Shipwreck Historical Museum at Whitefish Point which features some excellent exhibits and a film on the sinking of the Edmund Fitzgerald ($3.50/adult). We also browsed through the bird observatory at that site. It was a nice side trip and we just wish the weather had been more conducive to walking around the beaches and dunes.

For lunch, we grabbed pasties and Cokes at a local bakery (in the not-so-aptly named town of Paradise) and headed home. It was a fun adventure. Not exactly what we planned, but memorable and a bit amusing.

iar human confrontation — the conflict between two women in Argan's life, his daughter Angelique and her stepmother, Beline.

Michelle Fisk as Beline is subtly villainous as she works on Argan to send Angelique to a convent so that Beline can be the sole heir. And Monique Lund as Angelique is archly innocent as she angles for permission to marry her own choice of husband.

But they only tangle the web and Sheila McCarthy as Toinette the maid, becomes the instrument for unraveling the snarl as she delivers a comic cameo impersonation of a new doctor coming to treat the famous patient, switching back and forth between her two identities with hilarious facility.

The voice of reason, however, finally appears in the second half, in the person of Argan's brother, Beralde, played by Nicholas Pennell. Here is another master of comic timing and gesture and he lays them on in a biting exchange with Hutt on the idea that Argan must in fact be incredibly healthy to survive so many purges and enemas.

No efforts are spared in costume, prop and stage business to wring every last laugh out of Moliere's clever script and as the last laughter dies and the cast takes its bows, it is hard to imagine who had more fun — audience or performers. One thing is sure. The actors worked a lot harder, though they never let it show.

"The Imaginary Invalid" plays in repertory at the Festival Theatre through Oct. 16.

Illusion

In fact, they earn their spurs.

Their play is "The Illusion" by Pierre Corneille (a contemporary of Moliere) and it is fascinating to compare in style with "Imaginary Invalid" as the two shows run concurrently.

"Illusion" is also farce but with a melodramatic air and a plot of romantic adventure that lends itself particularly well to the youthful ebullience and impetuous energy of this cast.

It also demands mature acting skills and understanding of the peculiar challenge of playing melodramatic comedy without overplaying it.

Here in one evening of pure entertainment are offered many favorite features of the stage. A penitent father seeks his wayward son with the help of a magician who makes entrances and exists in flashes of light and puffs of smoke.

The adventures of the son he uncovers are rich in perils, narrow escapes and a love that is won and lost many times over.

That love is promised (as usual in those days) by her father to someone else but she and the son are prepared to face any danger to be together. The dangers include death, imprisonment and a sword fight in which Stephen Bogaert as the son matches the best moments of Hollywood bravado, out-fencing four opponents at once in an exceptionally entertaining and convincing stage fight.

The trick ending, especially, which brings the hero back from death, makes the playwright's point that much of life, after all, is illusion and giving it full play is a source of boundless pleasure.

"The Illusion" plays in repertory at the Tom Patterson Theatre through Sept. 19.

The 41st Stratford Festival is one of the premier cultural events of the summer and marks the 40th straight year that Grosse Pointe News' resident Bard expert Alex Sucek has attended the festival and the third year in a row he has reviewed it for the News. Tickets and information on the shows can be obtained by calling 1-800-567-1600. Below is a running tally of what he thought of

Jacobson's re-grand opening nets $12,000 for AIDS charities

A fundraiser for Children's Immune Disorder and AIDS Interfaith Network on Aug. 10 raised $12,000 and drew more than 700 people to Jacobson's newly remodeled stores in the Village.

The benefit for AIDS charities was a grand success, according to Peter E. Northcott, Jacobson's sales promotion manager. "The store has a new image and is looking ahead for other worthwhile charities to support."

The festivities of the evening included hors d'oeuvres, a silent auction, tarot card and rune stone readers, entertainment by 7-year-old pianist Adrienne St. Peter, mimes, clowns, a performance by the 1st Michigan Colonial Fife and Drum Corps, and a children's back-to-school fashion show.

Quack quack: The second Rubber Duck Race, a benefit for Detroit's annual Thanksgiving Day parade, will begin at 1:35 p.m., rain or shine, Sunday, Aug. 22, at the Roostertail, at the foot of Marquette on the Detroit River.

About 15,000 rubber ducks are expected to participate.

The race is sponsored by F&M Distributors, AAA Michigan and the Chrysler Corp.

The public is invited to a free beach party from 1 to 3 p.m. at Bill Muncey Park, just west of the Roostertail.

The first nine ducks to cross the finish line will win prizes for their adopters — prizes like a 1994 Jeep Cherokee, round-trip airfare for two to Orlando, Fla., a basket filled with $1,000 worth of beauty products, a Lionel train set, an exercise bike, a tool box, a Kitchen Aid mixer and some Mucky Duck Mustard gift boxes.

Chairman of the benefit is Tom Schoenith. Vice chairmen are Al Lucarelli and Rick Cole. Linda Kughn is chairman of the Michigan Thanksgiving Parade Foundation.

Ducks may be adopted at all southeastern Michigan F&M Distributors, AAA of Michigan and Art Van Furniture outlets. You can adopt a duck for $5 or five ducks for $20.

Adopt some ducks on your Visa or Mastercard by calling the Lucky Duck hotline at 92 DUCKY.

ROTC medal: Grosse Pointe Woods resident Lois Tope recently participated in the United States Air Force Junior ROTC awards ceremony at B.O. Davis Aerospace Technical High School in Detroit.

Tope represented the Daughters of Founders and Patriots as she presented a medal and certificate to Cadet Derrick Ealy for his academic achievements and leadership qualities.

Two-steppin benefit:

The Detroit Council of the Archives of American Art will hold a fundraiser on Tuesday, Aug. 24, at Diamonds and Spurs in Pontiac.

The evening, which begins at 7 p.m., will include a full spread of cowboy grub, a cash bar, and country dancing — including some instructors to help partygoers figure out the Texas two-step and the latest line dances.

Council president Dotti Doerer of Grosse Pointe is chairman of the benefit with Nancy Glover of Dearborn and Hope Palmer of Huntington Woods.

Others on the planning committee include Tom and Diane Schoenith, Sandy and Roseanne Duncan, Yvan Silva, Anne Spivak, Linda and Barry Solomon, Bea Charleston, Louise Dudy and Jo Kessler.

The Archives of American Art is a bureau of the Smithsonian Institution, and boasts the largest collection in the world on the history of the visual arts in America. It has more than 12 million documents and 3,000 oral histories; papers of painters, sculptors, craft artists, collectors and dealers; and papers from art historians, curators, critics, museums, societies and institutions.

Tickets are $40. Call the Detroit office of the Archives of American Art at 226 7544.

AAUW convention: Six members of the Grosse Pointe chapter of the American Association of University Women joined more than 2,000 members from around the country at the 1993 AAUW convention in Minneapolis, June 18-23. The national organization renewed its commitment to achieving gender equity for women and girls in education, to fighting sexual harassment in schools and to assuring every woman's reproductive freedom.

"AAUW has been very effective in exposing problems of gender bias and gender harassment in schools," said Elizabeth Schaefer, president of the Grosse Pointe AAUW. "Now we must ensure that these problems are addressed in Grosse Pointe. We have presented a statement to the Grosse Pointe schools, defining and condemning gender harassment and urging that it be included in our middle and high school student handbooks."

"AAUW is known as a moderate organization," said Sharon Schuster, outgoing president, "but this is no time to be moderate. It is time to say 'no more' to second class citizenship."

The Grosse Pointe delegation to the convention participated in workshops on a variety of topics.

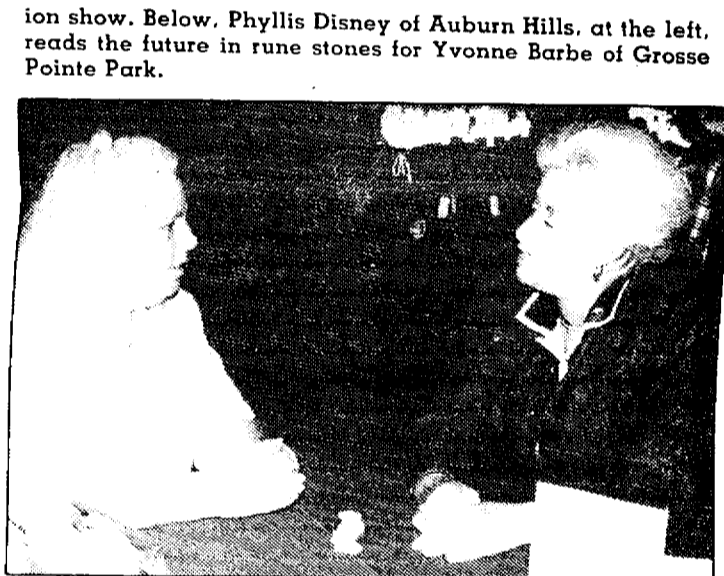

For information about membership in the AAUW, call Judy Stark at 884-0250 or Cynthia Tegel at 773 0090.

The Pastor's Corner

Rage

By the Rev. William C. DeVries
First Christian Reformed Church

I do not clearly remember when I had grown up enough so that physical force was no longer the accepted means of settling disputes.

I was the third child of four. My two older siblings as well as my younger sibling were females. In my early years the inevitable disputes over space on the couch to view TV, who would dry which of the dishes, what was the proper time for brother to go to bed, and a million other differences of opinions, were settled via the principle of "might makes right."

My older sisters were bigger and I followed their directions or I suffered.

(It should be noted that I duly persecuted the youngest of the brood. And being youngest and female, she never outgrew my advantage. Fortunately, I outgrew my need to dominate her.)

The point I want to share, however, is not that when I reached the size of 6-feet-2 or -3 my sisters suddenly found patience and compassion. Rather, I remember more importantly that this rule of might was rarely if ever practiced in the presence of my parents — either of them.

One of the central teachings of my upbringing was that resorts to violence were to be an absolutely last resort. Physical force was to be used toward a human being only to prevent extreme physical harm. It was thought by my parents that a truly strong person did not need to continually stand up for his or her rights. It was taught that preserving peace was more valuable than gaining power. And all of this was taught, not just as personal lifestyle, but as the life lived and taught by Jesus.

Avoiding violence is something that is not merely a recommended possible course of action. It is a sheer necessity for every Christian. (And, I am told by reliable sources for every Jew, Muslim, Buddhist and Hindu.)

"Don't hit your brother!" These familiar words, then, were not just a convenience to promote parental ease of mind. They were, and are, a core of true humanity.

It does not surprise me that life is cheap internationally, in our neighborhoods and in our homes. It is not because popular motion pictures and TV shows portray heroes as killers. It is because so many people teach the generations that to stand straight one must strike others. It is because we have so often confused young people with a false message that personal rights are best preserved by "standing up to others."

The fact is, rage is something that destroys. If turned loose, it destroys not only what makes us angry, but ourselves as well. It's time the generations saw that strong people get angry, strong people stand straight, strong people make steady progress. They just don't hit their brother, or sister, or neighbor.

Crossroads needs volunteer teachers

The Crossroads Learning Center at Columba House is a new educational center which will provide individualized vocational training for adults seeking employment.

The center needs volunteers to teach subjects such as math and reading, job readiness skills and practical living skills. Teaching experience is helpful, but not necessary.

The center is located at the Crossroads East location, 14641 E. Jefferson in Detroit, now called Columba House.

Archdiocese of Detroit sponsors food drive

The third annual Hot and Hungry Food Drive is underway in the parishes, hospitals and central offices of the Archdiocese of Detroit.

Three years ago, the Christian service department of the archdiocese and the Society of St. Vincent De Paul began a drive in response to the need for food donations during the summer months.

Summer is the leanest time for food donations and is also the hungriest time for children who don't have the supplemental breakfast and hot lunch programs of their schools to fall back on.

Parishes and hospitals will collect non-perishable foods during specific weekends in August and the food will be earmarked for the St. Vincent De Paul Community Food Depots for specific parishes and soup kitchens.

Last year, the Hot and Hungry Food Drive collected 48,681 pounds of food and $772 in cash.

For more information, call the Rev. Ann Johnson of the Eastside Emergency Shelter; Leonard Piasta of the Society of St. Vincent De Paul at 972-3100; or Sister Pat McDonald of the Department of Christian Service at 237-5900.

Hospice volunteers needed; training begins in September

Volunteers help Hospice of Southeastern Michigan provide compassionate care for the terminally ill and their families by helping provide a compassionate setting for individuals to die with dignity. More than 5,000 patients will receive hospice services this year.

Patient care volunteers help patients and their families by running errands, lending support and being friends. With additional training, volunteers may perform patient care tasks such as giving baths, transferring patients and changing linen. Some volunteers assist with bereavement support groups by making calls and visits to families after a patient's death. Some volunteers are "on call," willing to assist families on short notice with driving or simple home maintenance chores. Speakers bureau volunteers tell the hospice story to community groups.

Hospice of Southeastern Michigan will begin the next round of volunteer training classes in September. Classes are in St. Clair Shores. Anyone over the age of 16 is welcome to volunteer and many assignments are during evening hours and weekends.

For more information on Hospice volunteer opportunities, call Betty Pejakovich, volunteer manager, at 445-6855.

League of Women Voters sponsors generational schools pilot program

Generational schools, a neighborhood school curriculum offering core, enrichment and informational courses for all ages, will begin at Grosse Pointe South High School in September.

Sponsored by the League of Women Voters, the pilot program will offer six courses this fall: career decisions, commercial design I, European history, American studies, advanced placement English language-learning composition and photography.

The LWV hopes several adults will sign up for each class. Support for the idea of mixing students of different ages in the same classrooms has come from interviews with students, faculty and administrators.

"It's an experiment in how different ages relate to one another," said Ann McCleary of the League of Women Voters.

For more information about generational classes, call McCleary at 882-2709, Kay McDonald at 882-3497 or Rachael Webers at 821-5059.

Rummage Sale

The Ladies Auxiliary of the Walter F. Bruce V.F.W. Post No. 146 will hold a rummage sale on Thursday and Friday, Sept. 9 and 10. Hours will be 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. at 28404 E. Jefferson in St. Clair Shores.

Center, discussed "Seasonal Affective Disorder and the Use of Phototherapy." He demonstrated the use of a light box at the meeting.

The group will meet at 7:30 p.m. Monday, Aug. 30, at the Livonia Library Auditorium, 32777 Five Mile in Livonia. Calvin Lippitt, president of Oakland County AMI and the retired head of health care services will discuss "What's Next for the Oakland County Mental Health Care System?"

William Hutt shines as Moliere's "Imaginary Invalid."

Moliere's 'Invalid' is still a refreshing tonic

By Alex Suczek
Special Writer

Medical mumbo jumbo and hypochondriacal hijinks hit a peak in Moliere's "Imaginary Invalid" at Stratford this summer.

This immortal spoof of unscrupulous practitioners and pill-hungry patients makes side-splitting fare of behaviors that don't appear to have changed much in the nearly four centuries since Moliere first penned and performed this witty satire.

But Moliere's mischievous genius is grandly abetted by the team responsible for this production. It is a sure bet, for starters, that Donald M. Frame's colloquial translation of the fast-paced script has helped the play bridge the time gap and the Stratford troupe brings the fun to fever pitch.

Playing French farce is an art in itself and this cast, under Albert Millaire's alert direction, has obviously mastered it.

Leading the pack is festival veteran William Hutt as Argan, the dedicated hypochondriac himself. His repertoire of comic gestures, grimaces, vocal inflections and above all exquisite comic timing, maintain the merriment at a high level from the moment he is first discovered on stage, cataloging his ailments, adding up his medical bills and hatching his scheme to marry his daughter to a doctor so that he can get free medical care.

Moliere uses that situation to satirize yet another famil-

It's no 'Illusion,' Stratford's Young Company has talent

By Alex Suczek
Special Writer

For some unfathomable reason, Stratford's recent succession of artistic directors has felt obliged to designate a corps of less seasoned, supporting actors as The Young Company, implying, we suppose, apprentice or trainee status.

Chameleonlike, they have alternated between being an entirely separate group, fully integrated in the main company and having supporting roles in the major productions while getting one production all to themselves.

The last is the case this season and many of them have already distinguished themselves in everything from walk-ons to important supporting roles in other productions. Meanwhile, the play they perform as a group is an exceptionally wonderful choice and has given them the opportunity to demonstrate that they bring unique and worthy talents to the festival as a whole.

Allen meets Hitchcock for 'Murder'

By Ronald J. Bernas
Assistant Editor

It's been said that comedy can be murder.

Woody Allen's latest film proves the opposite is also true.

In a fun departure from his personal comedies of recent years, Allen, in "Manhattan Murder Mystery," has created a '90s film noir as only he can. It's reminiscent of his earlier films and also of "Broadway Danny Rose" where the theme is nothing more than a good time at the movies.

It praises films like Alfred Hitchcock's "Rear Window" and at the same time brings that genre to a new level.

And it shows, once again, that Allen can do — and do well — just about anything on film.

"Mystery" begins when Larry and Carol (Allen and Diane Keaton) meet an elderly couple who live down the hall in the same Manhattan apartment building. They are touched by the love displayed by the elderly couple.

But shortly afterward, when the wife dies of a heart attack, Carol finds the widower's lack of grief puzzling.

She starts investigating and strange things turn up — a pack of lies, a mistress and, they think, the once dead wife.

Carol pursues the mystery because she's a little bored with her marriage which, while still pleasant, has become a bit stale. But Larry, who she says has gotten stodgy, won't join in her little game. So she turns to Ted (Alan Alda), a recently divorced family friend and a playwright who loves the possibility of a murder and uses it to get close to Carol.

There isn't a lot of the usual Allen angst, and in fact, we see him playing a new character. When he sees he's losing his wife he takes action instead of whining about it and joins her in her sleuthing.

The trio is joined by an author (played by the always excellent Angelica Houston) who is a friend of Larry's.

There are a lot of inside jokes which seem to be tributes to the genre. A bus drives by and on the side is an ad for Vertigo bluejeans. And Paul, the widower, has an obsession with stamps, homage, perhaps, to "Charade," which "Murder" feels a lot like. And then there's the final scene in a theater with a shootout in a room filled with mirrors a la Orson Welles' "Lady from Shanghai," which, incidentally, is playing in the background.

Allen employs the jarring camera work he started using in "Husbands and Wives" but he seems to have worked some of the bugs out and it's less obtrusive and not as dizzying.

The script, which Allen wrote with Marshall Brickman, always leaves the audience guessing, right up to the last few moments. Just when you think they're leading up to a perfectly simple set of answers to the mystery it takes amazing turns. Mystery and noir fans will love it.

And it's nice to see Keaton and Allen on screen together again. There's still a lot of chemistry there.

It's a film only Allen would have dared to make. And a film only he could have pulled off.

'Meteor Man' is a super comedy

By Marian Trainor
Special Writer

Robert Townsend's, adventure-comedy which he wrote and directed and in which he plays the title role, gives us a super Superman who not only performs amazing feats of strength but also flies like Batman. He carries on a two-way conversation with his dog and with a wave of a hand transforms a garbage dump into a flourishing vegetable garden.

We first meet this super-hero as Jefferson Reed (Townsend), a mild-mannered substitute teacher in a Washington, D.C., school in a neighborhood where warring gangs rule. Reed does his best to avoid them and advises his students to run when they see them coming.

His father (Robert Guillaume) is more contentious. He refuses to move aside for them. When they go after him he is lucky enough to have the police intervene. They leave, but promise to come back, and when they do, they come looking for an easier mark — our hero, Reed.

They arrive in force one day as he is leaving school. Trying to outrun them, he improbably bumps into a large, glowing green meteor. He is rushed to the hospital with severe burns and to the amazement of the staff, who have gathered to watch the bandages removed, Jefferson shows no signs of ever being burned.

In addition he has developed magical powers — he can fly — not far off the ground, though, because he's afraid of heights. Reed's mother (Marla Gibbs), tells the neighbors about him. He is recruited to keep the gangs out. To make him more presentable, his mother designs and sews elaborate costumes for him, cape and all. He scores a major victory when he gets two rival gangs to drop their guns and declare a truce but he still has the Golden Lords to deal with.

Reed comes off as a serious superman who worries about the responsibility of keeping the neighborhood free of gangs and about how much longer his power to do so will last.

"The Meteor Man," a series of comic book adventures played for laughs, is highlighted by an accomplished supporting cast, such as Bill Cosby and James Earl Jones, to pop and rap groups such as Another Bad Generation, Naughty by Nature, Cypress Hill, singer Mary Wilson and Luther Vandross and rapper Big Daddy Kane.

Townsend, as the laid-back apostle of peaceful negotiation pushed into conflict by a meteor, gives an appealing performance.

Cosby scores high as a homeless scavenger. He never speaks a line but manages to be hilarious with his impressive eyes and mischievous grin. In a role different from any he has ever done, Jones plays a vain comic eccentric who keeps interchanging his assortment of wigs. Another whose mannerisms and expressions generate laughs is La Wanda ("Sanford & Son") as a bossy nurse. Guillaume ("Benson") and Marla Gibbs ("227") as Townsend's parents add to the fun.

A spoof of the super hero genre, "Meteor Man" is super entertainment.

New cookbook is a veritable cherries jubilee

Cherry season is here and despite lots of storm damage the country is harvesting a respectably large crop.

Michigan alone expects to harvest some 244 million pounds of tart cherries and 56 million pounds of sweet cherries. Happily, as this bountiful crop hits the markets, a truly exciting cherry cookbook comes along at the same time.

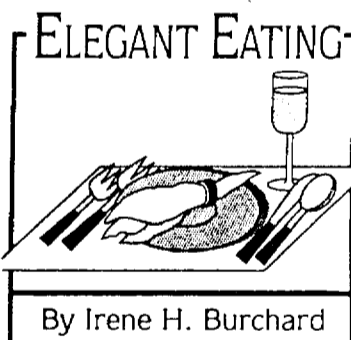

"600 Very Cherry Recipes" by Julia Pollister Amos and Marjory Viliquette offers wonderful ideas for every kind of cook, yet maintains its focus on cherries, a fruit these country cooks know well.

Whether you try Farmhouse Custard Pie (with gingersnaps) or go for Supremes aux Cherries, "Very Cherry Recipes" not only provides a huge range of cherry recipes, it also entertains, educates, and above all inspires culinary imagination. The book is a delight.

Its 13 chapters, averaging 46 recipes each, represent every wonderful, edible use of cherries possible, including soups (try Corn, Crab, and Cherry Bisque and White-Fruited Fudge), relishes (Red Onion Cherry Chutney), main dishes (Sausage Banderillas), baked goods (Cherry Buckle) and, of course, the best cherry pies in the world. There's recipes for 40 of them from Amaretto Cherry Cheese to Luscious Meringue.

"Cherries" in this book means sweet and tart cherries that are fresh, frozen, canned or dried. Dried cherries are rapidly gaining popularity in food circles because they are an exceptionally healthy food.

"Very Cherry Recipes" is spiral bound to lay flat, and each recipe is conveniently confined to one page. The print and typeface are clear and large enough, and categories of recipes are separated by heavy pages which give cherry information, history, nutrition, ideas and fascinating trivia.

While there are recipes to satisfy the sweetest of sweet teeth in "Very Cherry Recipes," the emphasis is on healthy eating and superb taste. The recipes also span seasons, providing ideas for every time of year and every possible occasion from a child's birthday party to a late-night buffet.

Both Amos and Viliquette are members of cherry growing families which go back into Michigan history, and they culled the best from over 1,500 recipes from cherry people and cherry competitions. Their knowledge of the fruit and love of cooking and kitchen are evident throughout the book.

The book is available from: Rotary Partners, P.O. Box 541, GP, Elk Rapids, MI 49629. Send $12 plus $2.25 shipping and handling. Make checks out to Rotary Partners.

If you still need a reason to purchase this gem, all proceeds of the book will be used to fund the Needy Children Christmas Project.

Lifelong partners since kindergarten, Stan & Dave would like a chance to become lifelong partners with you!

Dave Levy and Stan Schwartz, the owners of Classic Window & Siding, have been friends and partners in business ever since they were little kids. Though, as youngsters, back in the days of Kool-Aid stands, they probably never suspected that they would grow up to be the men behind the East area's most respected name in windows and siding. On the other hand, if their Kool-Aid was any indication of what was to come, on a hot summer day, they knew even then what it meant to be in demand.

For years, Classic Window and Siding has been providing Eastside neighborhoods with the best in sales and installation of vinyl windows and siding. They also specialize in hand-crafted, custom-designed bay and bow windows. With each sale they make, they provide the customer with the "complete package." There are never any hidden additional costs on materials and labor which are covered by Classic's famous 30-year guarantee.

But Dave and Stan will tell you "an excellent product alone does not make a great business." What distinguishes Classic Window and Siding from the pack is their unwavering commitment to their customers. Dave, Stan and the staff at Classic make themselves available to their customers on a 24-hour basis to answer any questions or to assist with any service.

Classic's experience in serving homeowners has enabled them to anticipate the concerns of new customers. Often, they can answer questions before they're even asked. For example, to assure their new customers they are getting the finest in windows, siding and service, they maintain a computerized list of all their previous customers to be used as references. Once the work on a house is completed, Dave and Stan inspect it themselves to insure that the job not only meets the customer's expectations, but lives up to Classic Window and Siding's reputation as well.

In the past year alone, Classic has earned the total satisfaction of over 1600 residential customers. In addition to quick, responsible and dependable service, much of their success is due to making their windows and siding affordable to almost every budget. "We believe that the bottom line is providing our customers with exactly what they want, at a price they can comfortably handle," says Dave.

Weed or flower? — It's all in how you look at it Progress means change, but sometimes, things do just seem to go around in circles. So many of our most popular culinary herbs were first developed from wild plants or weeds.

The list of herbs/weeds is very long and sometimes surprising since we are constantly being called upon to revise our thoughts concerning what is a weed and what is not. Perhaps it is because plants are constantly evolving and what one generation cultivates for medicinal uses another tries desperately to eradicate in favor of a more beautiful or useful one.

It may just depend on where you stand.

It is amazing how often the dividing line between weeds, flowers and herbs becomes confused and blurred. Some of the plants that are considered the worst weeds are the most valuable of medicinal herbs and some of the prettiest of the old-fashioned flowers that our grandmothers carefully cultivated in their gardens are classified as weeds by horticulturists.

Did you know, for instance, that in some parts of the world acres of dandelions are carefully grown for use in medicines? It just depends on which angle you are looking from.

Take trumpet vines, for instance.

Garden Shed

By Ellen Probert

There are 100-year-old trumpet vines which adorn old farmhouses and have reached the proportions of trees with gnarled and twisted trunks several inches thick and cascades of orange-colored, trumpet-shaped flowers.

Generations of children have known about pulling the blossoms off the vines and sucking the drops of nectar from them, and hummingbirds are always found near the trumpet vines, almost disappearing into the blossoms in their quest for nectar.

Trumpets are of Mexican origin and were known by the Aztecs by the unpronounceable name of "tecomaxochitl." They are the bane of dairy farmers because they often grow wild in pastures and cows love them, but often develop an itching skin rash after eating them.

In fact, in the south, trumpet vines are usually called cow itch — not nearly as pretty a name, but equally descriptive.

Many old-fashioned gardens had yarrow growing as borders or around porches. It is a lacy-leaved plant with small clustering flowers of pink or yellow. Classified as a weed, it is listed in countless herbals as a most beneficent medicinal herb with many uses.

The name is Anglo-Saxon and refers to the astringent qualities of this plant. It will stop the flow of blood from a wound and is often used as an herbal tonic and remedy for colds. Achilles is supposed to have used this plant to stanch the wounds of Telephus.

No old-fashioned garden would have been without hollyhocks or their relatives, the flower-for-an-hour. These are members of the mallow family, as are the Rose-of-Sharon, the marsh mallow and other members of the hibiscus tribe. The tall stalks of hollyhock with single or double blossoms in many shades of mauve, pink, yellow and white have been loved by generations of little girls who have made hoopskirted dolls of them or strung them on thread to make necklaces. It is hard to think of them as weeds.

A drive along a country road in August shows us thousands of the beautiful starry Queen Anne's lace blossoms that decorate country meadows this time of year.

Really wild carrots, Queen Anne's lace is also called, in some parts of the country, devil's plague, which tells you how it is sometimes regarded. It may also be called birdsnest plant because of the way the umbel with its seeds draws together after the flower is gone to form a nest-like hollow form.

These are popular for dried flower arrangements and the lacy, white blossoms can be made into fragile, but beautiful Christmas tree ornaments by spray-painting them with white paint and then sprinkling them with glitter powder before the paint dries.

The wild carrots are edible if they are cooked for a long time, but really resemble the common kind only in smell and taste, since the roots are thin and white and not fat and yellow like the carrots we are used to.

Mint is often considered a weed because of the determination it has to take over our gardens unless firmly controlled. It was named for Menthe, a nymph who was loved by Pluto, the god of the underworld. When Pluto's wife found out about Menthe she angrily turned her into a plant which would spend eternity seeking underground water looking for her lost god.

Beautifully furnished and accessorized, each vignette lets the consumer view MDC's fine selection of quality and custom furnishings available through interior designers, as well as the newest color ideas and finishes.

Designers will be at their vignettes to answer questions. In addition, consumers may register for 20-minute complimentary consultations with a designer to discuss their design projects.

"This is an exciting event for consumers at MDC," said Susan Zinger, vice president and general manager, "because it's very visual and educational. They'll see examples of excellent design work, and can come to understand the design process and the benefits of working with an interior designer."

A number of design-related seminars will be offered both days in selected showrooms. Visitors will hear Susan Zinger of MDC discuss "How To Find and Work With A Designer Who's Right for Me"; P.K. Fields-Helm tells you "How To Use Color With Confidence"; Karen Gagne of Gagne & Gagne discusses the importance of "Accessorizing"; Gene Galley looks at "The Way You Live ... Life Styles, Function and Aesthetics in Design"; and Linda Goldein of Socially Yours Design and Judy Frankel of Judy Frankel Interiors give you the definitive word on "Defining, Decorating With, and Collecting Antiques."

Admission is $10, and a portion of the proceeds will benefit the Rainbow Connection, a non-profit corporation which grants the wishes of children with life-threatening illnesses. Lunch will also be available.

Michigan Design Center is a resource marketplace for the interior design profession. Normally open to the trade only, consumers are welcome in the company of their interior designer, architect or builder. MDC is located at 1700 Stutz Drive, Troy, north off Maple, three blocks east of Coolidge.

For complimentary Designer & Architect Referral, consumers may call MDC at 649-4772.

Doors' similarities are more important than differences

"Close the door, you're letting all the heat out," has been a common cry of parents to their children for as long as people have had doors opening onto the outside world.

Just like an oven which loses 25 percent of its heat each time the door is opened, a home loses energy with each and every opening of the door. Just how much depends upon the difference in temperatures between outside and inside and the amount of outside wind force present.

There is more to the door and energy issue, however, than just the way an exterior door is used.

Jeld-Wen, a maker of most of the competing types of exterior doors on the market today, has issued a free brochure reminding consumers that the best energy performance for any door is more a function of correct installation than it is composition of the door itself. This is true because air tends to travel around rather than through an object, a process called air infiltration.

A door is held by hinges attached to a frame which is then placed into the over-all framework of the house itself. The door frame must be installed correctly and all cracks, gaps and spaces between the door frame and the framework of the house must be caulked and sealed. In addition, everything (house, frame and door) must be "square," that is, in alignment. Further, all points where the door meets the door frame must be weather-stripped correctly with quality insulating materials. The best energy rating in the world will do the homeowner little good if the product is not installed correctly.

What is the company's advice to consumers contemplating building a new home or remodeling an existing home? Find the products you like which are appropriate to your application. Be certain they are of quality manufacture and backed by a significant warranty. Install, seal, finish and maintain them correctly to maximize energy performance and guarantee longevity.

Consumers may receive a free copy of "A Consumer's Guide to Exterior Doors" by calling Jeld-Wen at its toll free number: 1-800-877-9482, ext. 100.

Home Tips

Keyboard cleaning — I could never get the keyboards of my typewriter, calculator, computer and telephone dusted because of the many narrow crevices between the keys. Now I use the same method as I do in the workshop — a brush. Purchase an inexpensive 1-1/2-inch paintbrush in a discount store and keep it in your desk.

A 30-second session once or twice a week keeps the keyboard surfaces dust-free.

Maria N., Arlington, Va.

Spot check — My blue rug had some spots on it that looked like they were caused by spilled bleach. I had nothing to lose by trying to fix it, so I bought some blue fabric dye that was as close to the carpet color as possible. I made a weak solution of water and dye, starting with very little dye and working up to the perfect color. I dabbed it on with a sponge and let it dry to check the color. It matches so well, and the best part is, it cost very little to do!

Q. My wife and I purchased a three-bedroom ranch several years ago. Aside from the ordinary maintenance in and around my home, I would like to do some outside concrete repair work.

Some of the restoration work pertains to minor cracks on the walkway, patio, and a side entrance step that is crumbling. The step I am referring to has eroded for quite some time, and I believe it was previously repaired.

Can you start me in the right direction to tackle the above-mentioned problems?

A. I will first direct you to look in your garage or basement for some basic tools which are necessary to do this work. A ball peen hammer or small sledge is needed for the larger areas. Next is a cold chisel, eye goggles and protective gloves. Finally, you need a mason's brush, shop broom, plasterer's trowel, and some lumber for forms where needed.

The proper preparation is very important and the key to a successful repair. If we begin with your crumbling side entrance step, we must first clear and chip away any loose areas. Be sure to remove any dirt, dust, loose paint and other foreign matter, down to a solid base.

Next, construct a sturdy form of plywood or 1"x4" wood planks around the existing sides of the step. You must nail the form securely together, but don't drive the nails in completely. The assistance of a level will give you a totally accurate surface, but it's not always necessary.

If the damaged area is over a depth of 2" of concrete, then you'll need a commercial concrete bonding adhesive. This product produces a tacky surface before you pour your concrete. An ordinary paintbrush can be used to apply it. I would suggest using a good brand of Portland cement kept slightly damp for several days for proper curing and a more durable surface.

Not forgetting your other mentioned chores, a good vinyl concrete patcher from a home decorating center will do the trick. This mix is very stiff and can be applied with a trowel. You can also leave the finish smooth, or lightly dampen a mason brush, and give it a textured surface.

Q. I own a house with a large tool shed in the back yard. My shed sits on a corner of my property which is a half acre in size. The problem I'm faced with is poor landscaping. My shed shifts when there is a heavy rain. I periodically install support braces such as cinder blocks and 4x4 pieces of wood. Can you tell me how to secure my shed other than moving it to a more level area of ground?

A. There are several methods of supporting and even leveling your shed so that it is secure. However, I believe the major culprit here is an eroding and loosely packed bank, in addition to poor landscaping.

I do suggest immediate action regarding the condition of your shed's foundation. I can only guess that your structure is built of wood with a plywood floor. This does not have any bearing in the kind of support work I am going to mention, though. The construction of good, pressure-treated 8x8 railroad ties will support the constant erosion of earth beneath your shed. Of course, you will have to anchor the ties deeply enough, approximately two to three feet behind the shed. If it's possible, building a wall-like structure several feet high and completing it at a 90-degree angle will greatly strengthen that corner of your property. The lumber or decorating center dealer can advise you on the proper size ties and railroad spikes to use.

Other than the above-mentioned materials, you will need a good deal of landfill to be laid in the area behind the shed. An alternative is to transfer extra fill from your existing property to that spot.

This procedure will prevent any further erosion. Also, if the remaining parts of your property need support, you can continue a wall of railroad ties as needed.

All the alligator is back!

From August 6th through the 31st, he's challenging YOU to try our exotic Gourmet Gator appetizer. And when you do, you'll get a FREE Gourmet Gator squeeze bottle!

Sure, he may not be the cuddliest mascot you've ever met -- but he can't be all bad. He's donating a percentage of the proceeds to the Michigan Cancer Foundation. Pretty Altruistic for a scaly, cold-blooded reptile, eh?

Even if you don't want to take Al up on his dare, come on in for our usual fare -- good food, good drinks and good friends.
