

Reaching teachers' contract accord is fraught with pitfalls

Last in an occasional series this summer on the teachers' contract negotiations with the Grosse Pointe Public School System.

By Shirley A. McShane
Staff Writer

Calling in mediators, teachers threatening to strike and working months without a contract marked Grosse Pointe teacher contract negotiations throughout the 1970s, making recent years seem tame by comparison.

The Grosse Pointe Education Association — representing 530 teachers — and the school board have been bargaining labor contracts since 1965. The teachers' current three-year contract expires Aug. 31. The following is a summary of how both sides arrived at agreements in previous years:

The GPEA, the sole bargaining agent chosen by Grosse Pointe teachers, and the school board ratify a three-year master agreement. It was one of the first collective bargaining agreements developed by educators in Michigan. The agreement set a minimum salary for beginning teachers with a bachelor's degree at $5,700. Hours, working conditions, benefits, sick leave and other matters were incorporated into the document that took effect on July 1, 1966.

A fact finder is sent to Grosse Pointe to help the bargaining teams reach agreement on salary, longevity and holidays. The two sides had reached a tentative agreement on most issues but could not agree on everything. In October, teachers go on strike after more than 400 hours at the bargaining table.

Both sides finally agree to a two-year contract with an 8 percent salary increase each year.

School board and teachers reach an agreement in August after negotiating since April. The new two-year contract features a 6.3 percent pay increase for the first year and a cost of living allowance adjustment for the second year.

Sears scheduled to close Pointe store next month

By Chip Chapman
Staff Writer

The Sears, Roebuck & Co. store at the corner of Mack and Moross, which has been at that location since 1952, is expected to close its doors Sept. 30.

"We're targeted for the 30th," said unit manager Erle Etzel, "but we'll stay open as long as it takes to move the merchandise."

Etzel said the Grosse Pointe store is presently on schedule to close at the end of September but he said he has the authority to remain open longer.

"It's been a very orderly process, we are meeting all of our objectives," Etzel said. "However, we'll be here as long as we need to be here."

The closing of outlet stores, which the Grosse Pointe Store has been for the last 10 years, is part of a downsizing effort Sears has been conducting during the past couple of years.

The Grosse Pointe store has been one of the busier outlet stores in the nation, ranking in the top 10 percent of the more than 100 outlet stores.

Closing the outlet stores follows Sears' decision earlier this year to drop its catalog.

Some of the employees at the Grosse Pointe store have been transferred to other Sears stores and some have retired. Others are working through the Michigan Job Connection to obtain retraining.

"The governor's office has been very helpful," Etzel said.

The closing signs are up and time is running out for the Sears outlet store at the corner of Mack and Moross. The store, which is scheduled to close Sept. 30, has been at the location since 1952.

Shores picks new trustee, village clerk

By Chip Chapman
Staff Writer

James T. Wright, the clerk of Grosse Pointe Shores since 1984, was elected unanimously to the village council at last week's meeting.

Wright, 66, fills the vacancy created when village president John Huettman III succeeded president Edmund M. Brady Jr. when Brady resigned in June.

Dr. Ronald P. Laskowski, 40, chief of emergency medicine at Bon Secours Hospital, was named to replace Wright as village clerk.

Wright, a 35-year resident of the Shores, had served on the planning commission since 1971, and had been chairman since 1975 before becoming the village clerk in 1984.

"Traditionally, the clerk's position has been a training spot before serving on the council," Wright said.

"I felt like I was blocking the regular training," he joked.

Wright, who has been the Shores representative on the Detroit City Airport study commission, is expected to remain in that position. He is a mechanical engineer at Carlson, Diamon & Wright Inc. and has his aircraft pilot's license.

He will finish Huettman's term on the council, which ends in May 1995.

On his elevation to the council Wright said, "Now I can express my opinion rather than record everyone else's."

Wright said he had consulted a 1911 (the year the Shores became a village) encyclopedia concerning the required duties of a village clerk in Michigan.

FCC forces G.P. Cable to adjust rates

By Jim Stickford
Staff Writer

Thanks to new Federal Communications Commission regulations, some Grosse Pointe Cable customers will be paying higher fees, and some will be paying lower fees. All customers will be facing an array of new charges and fees.

According to operations manager Mary Schultz, the FCC issued new regulations in May. Cable companies were given until October to comply, but the date was later changed to September.

The regulations, 500 pages worth, according to Schultz, changed the way cable companies do things. Customers will be getting a new style bill, resembling a phone bill, beginning in September.

"Some bills will be two pages long," Schultz said. "Each option, service and piece of equipment will be itemized. So if someone has HBO, the Disney Channel, a remote control, a signal converter and the basic cable package, each one of these selections will be on the bill as an individual expense. Customers will be able to really cut down on expenses by looking at their bill."

Previous bills just listed the amount a customer owed. In addition to changing billing procedures, the FCC changed the rates cable companies can charge for equipment like remote controls and converter boxes.

According to Schultz, the FCC dictates what cable companies can charge for equipment depending on the equipment's age. The older the equipment, the less that can be charged.

How could a relatively useless back muscle save lives?

Dr. Larry Stephenson knows the answer, but cautions that "it's a long story that would put most readers to sleep."

Stephenson is professor and chief of cardiothoracic surgery at Wayne State University and chief cardiothoracic surgeon at the Detroit Medical Center.

The Grosse Pointe Farms resident is currently perfecting a procedure that could save heart patients and improve their quality of life.

Cable

"Right now customers are being charged $5.25 a month for remotes," Shultz said. "Under the new FCC regulations, we will be charging 62 cents a month. For an additional outlet, we were charging $3.50 a month. Starting in September, an additional outlet will be free."

For the first time customers will be charged for repairs to equipment inside their homes. Previously, any repairs to equipment inside a customer's home were free, Schultz said. Converter boxes will still be repaired for free, but if cable inside the house needs repair or replacement, the customer will be charged.

"We always felt that free repair was part of the package," said Schultz. "Lots of times a family dog will chew the cable wire, or it gets caught in the vacuum cleaner. Before, we replaced it for free. Now we will charge. Wires outside, from the utility pole to the customer's home, will still be our responsibility."

Schultz also warned that if people purchase new VCRs or television sets and require a repairman to visit, they will be charged. Customers can save money by getting rid of an unneeded converter box, said Schultz. Since getting cable, many customers have bought cable compatible television sets, and no longer need the converter box. By turning in the box, they will avoid the equipment charge of 44 cents a month.

For the most part, one-time service charges like installation and reconnection will remain the same.

Customers will be charged a "cableguard cost" of 22 cents a month, said Schultz. Cableguard is an insurance program. If something goes wrong in the customer's home and the customer has cableguard, Grosse Pointe Cable will not charge for the repair. Customers will automatically be charged a cableguard fee. They can ask to have it removed, but they will also lose its protection.

"Depending on what services customers have, they could end up saving a lot of money with the new FCC rates, or they could end up paying more," said Schultz.

"This will be like the phone deregulation of 10 years ago. A lot of people will benefit, but a lot of people will be confused for a time. I am not looking forward to dealing with that."

tions, it said that village records were not allowed to be kept in a saloon that sold liquor," he joked. "We haven't sold any liquor at the village offices, so I guess I've done a pretty good job."

Laskowski, a three-year resident of the Shores, has worked with village president Huettman on the emergency medical services commission. He hopes to help with the effort to coordinate emergency services between the five Pointes and Harper Woods.

"I'm looking forward to working with the council," Laskowski said. "I hope to add some creative input."

Laskowski will serve the rest of Wright's term as clerk, which ends next May.

Teachers

Both bargaining teams were concerned about President Richard Nixon's 90-day wage freeze instituted as part of an economic plan to strengthen the U.S. dollar. It was later determined that the freeze did not affect the teacher contract.

1973

A mediator is called in after talks, which began in late 1972, fail to produce a tentative agreement. The school board then calls in a fact finder to help settle the divisive issue of teachers' salaries. As one bargaining team member said in the newspaper, "Grosse Pointe teachers' salaries have soared off into the blue."

According to the school board, teachers with a bachelor's degree at the top of the pay scale are making $250 more than their next closest competitors. Teachers with a master's degree are earning $750 more than their next closest competitors, prompting the board to label Grosse Pointe teachers' salaries "the most generous of any pay schedule in Michigan."

A fact finder is called in again in October after mediation fails. The GPEA files an unfair labor practice charge with the Michigan Employment Relations Commission because, the union charges, the teachers did not receive their annual salary increase and the board did not bargain in good faith.

By November, there is talk of a strike. Fact finder recommends that both parties agree on a three-year package of $1.6 million to be used to pay for all increases including salary, longevity and fringe benefits. The board accepts the recommendations but teachers initially hold out for an additional $90,000.

In December, both sides tentatively agree on a three-year contract.

Days before school opens, the GPEA announces that teachers may not be reporting to work. Teachers then walk the picket line at 389 St. Clair. Problems stem from the GPEA making public a school board proposal and its accusation that the board is deliberately slowing negotiations in order to force an "eleventh-hour" high-pressure confrontation.

On the first day of school, the GPEA calls for a strike but teachers don't walk out. Custodial personnel, secretaries, kitchen workers and teachers carrying picket signs during an open house honoring new superintendent William Coates, demonstrate their dissatisfaction with the lack of progress in contract talks.

By October, after a fact finder is unable to resolve the matter, teachers ask for binding arbitration. The board rejects the idea. Later that month, a tentative agreement is reached on a three-year contract calling for a 7 percent pay increase each year. Both teams agreed to defer negotiations on language and merit pay issues and to extend the current agreement until 1977. In March 1977, agreement is reached ending 10 months of bitter wrangling.

Teachers return to work in September without a contract. Teachers threaten to strike, but do not. A mediator is called in and both sides reach a tentative agreement on a two-year contract with a 9 percent pay increase for each year.

1981

For the first time in a decade, teachers and the board ended their negotiations before the opening day of the school year. The teams agreed to a 20-percent pay increase over two years — a 5 percent increase each year along with a maximum 5 percent COLA increase for each year.

1983

Another quiet year. Both sides agree to a two-year contract with a 5 percent increase for each year. COLA increases are capped at 3 percent for each year. The average salary of a teacher with 10 years' experience and a master's degree is $33,676 to $37,172.

1984

Grosse Pointe teachers voted 3-1 to extend their current contract two more years, marking the first time in teacher union history that a contract was negotiated ahead of time. The decision was made because the district had been overwhelmed with a school board recall election, the death of a former superintendent and the replacement of three other superintendents.

1987

After a marathon negotiating session, an agreement is reached in early September for a 19.1 percent salary increase over a three-year period. Teachers will receive a 6.2 percent increase for the first and second years and a 6.7 percent increase in the third year.

1990

The two teams agree to a three-year contract with a 7-percent pay increase for each year.

A beginner's guide to investing in the stock market

If you have been reluctant to jump into the stock market, consider this: In the long run, the stock market generally performs better than any other investment vehicle.

But before you take the plunge, make sure you are sufficiently prepared, says the Michigan Association of CPAs. Here are some tips to help you get started.

Understanding the basics

When you buy shares of a corporation's stock, you become an owner of the company and earn the right to share in its profits. Stock prices are influenced by investor expectations of a company's earnings, the nation's economic outlook and interest rates, as well as rumor, inference and innuendo.

The two basic kinds of stock are common and preferred. Holders of common stock receive dividends based on the company's profits and typically have the right to vote on important matters. Owners of preferred stock receive dividends at a specified rate before dividends are paid to common stockholders.

If a company goes out of business and its assets are liquidated, preferred stockholders are paid before common stockholders. But preferred stockholders usually pay for this advantage by giving up the right to vote and the right to share in the company's profits beyond the stated dividend rate.

Managing risk

In general, the younger you are, the more risk you can afford to take with your investments. For example, a single 30-year-old with good career prospects may choose high-growth, high-risk stocks, which don't pay dividends but are expected to increase in value. A 55-year-old, on the other hand, may favor stocks that pay steady dividends, but grow at a slower rate.

Another important ingredient in managing risk is diversification. By spreading your holdings over an adequate number of stocks in different industries, losses in one stock can be offset by gains in another. Investors with modest savings can achieve diversification by buying mutual funds.

Tracking p/e ratios

One of the key ratios for evaluating stock is the price-to-earnings (p/e) ratio, which is a measure of how the investment community views a stock. A high p/e means investors expect the company's earnings to grow rapidly. That does not necessarily mean you want to buy a stock just because it has a high p/e. Such a stock can be a risky investment because if the company's earnings don't reach those lofty expectations, the price of the stock may fall quickly.

Choosing a broker

If terms like dividends and p/

e ratios make you nervous, you may prefer to leave the technical aspects of stock market investing to a broker. Be sure to compare the brokers' commission fees. A discount brokerage house can save you money, but if you need special attention and advice, a full-service broker may be a better idea.

Check to see if the brokerage firms you are investigating are members of the New York Stock Exchange. Member firms have to uphold certain requirements, which may offer you extra protection.

A final word of caution

Finally, CPAs point out that to do well in the market, you have to ride out the waves. Don't panic at the first sign of falling prices. On the other hand, don't make the mistake of holding on to a stock too long. If a stock does not perform as well as you expected, consider selling it.

Not everyone can take the ups and downs of playing the stock market. If you feel you don't have the nerves, then you are probably better off sticking with steadier, less risky investments. But if you want to give it a try, remember, it's no place for amateurs. Learn all you can about the market first and then get expert advice.

Michigan Credit Union League offers tips to control finances

It's the dog days of summer and you've been working hard keeping the grass cut, the garden growing and the bushes trimmed. Why not turn your efforts inside the home on a hot summer day and tackle a project which will get your personal finances in order?

Empty out all of those drawers full of paid bills and receipts and set up a filing system for your finances. You'll feel good about getting organized.

Start by purchasing a good file cabinet which provides ample drawer space. Whether you decide on a four-drawer cabinet or one with two drawers will depend on how much paper work and records you have. If you have a lot to file, it pays to purchase a sturdy file cabinet with plenty of drawer space. Cramping files into one or two drawers will not help you get better organized and your files won't be easy to access.

Once you've purchased your file cabinet, get some hanging files with plastic tabs and some manila folders. This is all you'll need — you don't want to get so much organizing equipment that you have to organize your organizers. Keep it as simple as possible.

The next step is to attack those drawers full of bills and papers. Begin to sort your bills, receipts, records and paper work by category. For example, have a pile for your credit card bills and purchase receipts, one for your paycheck stubs, one for each utility company, one for taxes, one for home improvement receipts, etc.

Once you have all of your bills and papers divided into organized piles, create a hanging file for each. Fill out a plastic tab and name of the file (phone bills, Visa, etc.). Place the loose bills and papers into a manila folder, set the manila folder inside the hanging file and file it in the cabinet. Once all of your files have been created, filled and filed, you may want to rearrange them in the drawer so that all credit card bill files are close together, all insurance files are together, etc.

You may also want to keep an empty file at the front of the first file drawer for "current bills to pay." Bills come in every day of the week. Whether you pay your bills once a month or every other week, once you sit down to write your checks all of your bills will be in one place and easy to find.

For important papers such as marriage and birth records, stocks and bonds, insurance policies and wills, you may need a safe-deposit box. Make a copy of these important documents and file them in your filing cabinet, but keep the originals in a safe place.

Getting your financial files in order will help you manage your finances better and may help you reach your financial goals sooner.

Title of the Hill's newest business? Philip Greco Title Co.

By Jim Stickford
Staff Writer

Business has been so good for the Greco Title Co., that the firm has opened its second office in Grosse Pointe. In addition to the facility on Mack in the Woods, Greco now has an office on 121-B Kercheval on the Hill.

"We're here to better serve the number of real estate agencies on the Hill," said office manager Sue Cowan. "A title company performs a number of services for real estate companies, and Grosse Pointe is a lucrative market. Despite the recession, opening a new office was good business."

A title company, Cowan said, offers title insurance to real estate agencies, as well as taking care of the paperwork involved in closing the sale of a home or commercial property.

"Most real estate purchase agreements require that property owners provide title insurance," said Cowan. "This policy ensures that the new buyer is the only one who owns an interest in the property. If the buyer is purchasing the property via a mortgage, the lender usually requires a mortgage title policy as well."

Cowan said this requirement is needed to ensure that the property doesn't have any liens on it or back taxes owed on it. These are referred to as clouds in the title.

If Greco does a title search and fails to discover that the property already has a mortgage on it, they deal with the problem, not the new owner.

In addition to title insurance, Greco provides a full complement of escrow services, from preparation of closing documents for real estate brokers to deed escrows and new construction servicing. They also close commercial loans and do mortgage closings.

"There is a lot of paperwork involved in the selling of a house," said Cowan. "Once a house is sold, completing the paperwork to the satisfaction of all parties involved can take up to a month. It's easier for a real estate company to hire us, or a company like us to take care of business. We know more about closings than they do. Real estate agencies have to sell the next home. They don't have time to do a lot of paperwork."

The number of legal documents needed to close a real estate deal is large, Cowan said. Included are title insurance, mortgage payoff letters, tax lien payoffs and the settling of any back taxes owed and liens on the property. In addition to these documents, a termite inspection might be needed as well as a death certificate for the last owner of the home.

"As you can see, there's a lot of paperwork," Cowan said.

"We are experts on it. That's what we do, all we do."

Sometimes it's just time consuming to close a deal, said Cowan. She remembers one case involving a customer who would only close a deal when it was raining outside. As the title company involved, they had to wait for it to rain. A real estate agency would have forced to wait.

"By hiring us, we did the waiting and freed them up to do what they do best, sell homes," Cowan said.

One of the reasons Greco opened a second Pointe office is because Grosse Pointe has stable real estate sales, Cowan said.

"Sales are slightly down because of the recession," said Cowan. "But they are very steady. This is a good market to invest in, and it's a good community to do business in as well."

Michigan's Florida-type estate tax debuts Oct. 1

On June 3, Gov. John Engler signed the "Michigan Estate Tax Act" which is similar to an estate tax now implemented in Florida.

The act applies to Michigan residents or non-residents (owning real estate in Michigan) dying after Sept. 30. The act eliminates any State Death

Tax on the first $600,000 of assets.

As a result, after Oct. 1, there will be no Federal Estate Tax and no Michigan Inheritance Tax for decedents with taxable estates that are less than $600,000. The following examples demonstrate the effects of the significant changes made by this act.

1. On the death of an individual with no surviving spouse, there will be no death tax at all, neither federal nor state, on the first $600,000. If the estate exceeds $600,000, there will be some death tax payable to the State of Michigan, but it qualifies 100 percent for a state death tax credit against the Federal Estate Tax liability, so the result is the same as if there were no Michigan death tax.

2. Many couples, if not all, with estates more than $600,000 currently split up their assets so that on the first death, a trust of $600,000 can be set up to be available to the survivor but not taxed on the survivor's death. This trust was (and until Sept. 30 is) subject to Michigan Inheritance Tax of about $20,000. As of Oct. 1, there will be no Michigan death tax on this trust of $600,000.

3. Any gift at death to a friend, niece, or nephew has been subject to Michigan Inheritance Tax of at least 12 percent with no exemption, while gifts to children or close family members started at 2 percent with a $15,000 exemption. The new Michigan Estate Tax Act eliminates the distinction between the tax on gifts to different classes of beneficiaries.

4. In Michigan, gifts within two years of death or assets made joint within that time were subject to special contemplation of death rules. Those rules will no longer apply and gifts within two years of death will be taxable or tax-free depending on the federal rules only. That is, any gift of less than $10,000 to a person each year shall be excluded from tax, while any gift more than that amount will use a portion of the $600,000 exemption equivalent.

5. The old Michigan rules which separately exempted joint property and life insurance will no longer apply after Oct. 1.

Beware of scam artists

It's your lucky day! You've just been notified by the National Prize Association that you are now officially guaranteed to receive a prize.

The first prize is $10,000 cash. All you have to do is sign your name on the prize notification form, enter the simple contest and include a $5 contest judging fee with your entry. Sound too good to be true? It is.

Scam artists use many old and sometimes new tricks to take your money. Some promise lavish gifts, such as brand new cars and trips to Hawaii, without obligation and with no purchase necessary. But if you must pay any money up front to receive your "free" gift, forget it.

Michael Kelly, director of public information for the Michigan Credit Union League, cautions people to be extra careful before providing any personal financial information to companies or an individual promising free prizes or cash awards.

"Never give out your credit card number over the phone to someone you don't know. Also never provide a stranger with your checking or draft account information," cautions Kelly. "Providing that information can result in a preauthorized debit from your account. Once you give someone your checking account numbers, you are buying the liability and exposing yourself to a loss."

Unfortunately, many people get caught up in the excitement and provide their personal financial information or pay a fee to receive the big prize. Generally the loss is under $200. Thus, the person is too embarrassed to take legal action for this amount of money.

Follow these simple rules offered by the Alliance Against Fraud to avoid both embarrassment and getting taken by marketing scams:

- Don't pay for something that has been offered for free. Free is free, or should be. Even if the charge seems innocuous, such as shipping-handling, delivery, promotional fee or tax, forget it. And if the telephone number is a "900" line, don't call. You will find you are charged a high fee for the call.

- Ignore demands for immediate action. Con artists like to imply that if you don't act quickly (that is, before you have time to think), you'll miss out.

- Don't give your credit card or checking account numbers to strangers. Legitimate companies don't operate this way.

- Try to check out any company you do business with before you send money. If no one has any record of the firm, be suspicious. If you suspect you have been taken, contact your state attorney general, the Federal Trade Commission, the Postal Inspection Service or the Better Business Bureau.

Park cleans up Wayburn alley again; neighbors still upset

By Jim Stickford
Staff Writer

Residents of Wayburn street, which borders Detroit, are angry that they have been forced to complain to Grosse Pointe Park officials two years in a row to get the alley behind Wayburn cleaned up.

In a letter sent to Park city manager Dale Krajniak, the residents of the 1100 block of Wayburn strongly protested the condition of the alley. The letter stated, "trash, smell and rats attract undesirable characters to linger where they suspect no police will come."

The letter goes on to say that Wayburn residents fear for their safety because of the mess. Residents also noted their concern that the condition of the alley hurts property values, and they are afraid that no one will want to buy into the neighborhood.

The residents noted in their letter that last year the Park did clean up the alley, but so far this year, nothing has been done.

Krajniak said that after receiving the letter on Aug. 16, he ordered the city's public service department to begin cleaning up the alley as soon as possible. Krajniak said city contractors began the cleanup on Aug. 18.

"The city was aware of the problem," Krajniak said. "I know for a fact that we had planned to clean up the alley earlier this summer, but a number of unexpected road repairs came up, delaying when we could clean up the alley."

What most Park residents don't realize is that the Wayburn alley is not in Grosse Pointe Park, said Krajniak. The entire alley is in the city of Detroit. Last year, director of public services Jim Ellison contacted Detroit officials to see about a joint effort to clean up the alley.

"Detroit officials seemed very receptive to the idea," said Ellison. "But, as reported in the Detroit papers, Detroit has a lot of alleys, and is having trouble keeping them clean. The Wayburn alley is used almost exclusively by Park residents, not Detroit residents. The alley just isn't as high a priority for Detroit as it is for the Park."

Ellison said the Park ended up cleaning the alley on its own in 1992. The Park managed to pick up the trash that had been dumped there last year, Ellison said. According to reports he has received from the cleanup crews, most of the problems this year are due to overgrown weeds and bushes. Because part of the alley is dirt, that is to be expected, Ellison said.

Lt. David Hiller, of the Park public safety department, said that because the alley is in Detroit it is not on public safety officers' regular patrol routes. But he said if officers saw something they thought was suspicious, they would certainly investigate.

"We're doing the best we can to keep the Wayburn alley clean," said Krajniak. "We will try to be as responsive to residents' concerns as we can be."

Mack clock will be repainted in October in 'more suitable color'

By Jim Stickford
Staff Writer

Marc Alan, owner of the Engass Clock in front of the Old Cook School, says not to worry about the clock, it will be repainted in October.

"An enterprising group of people asked permission to paint the clock red, white and blue," said Alan. "It is part of a photo program. They wanted a Victorian background. They

Couple attacked at private club

A 30-year-old Harper Woods woman told police that she and her husband were followed to the Lochmoor Club on Aug. 22 by a carload of men who attacked them when they got out of their car.

The woman said four men in a silver Dodge followed them, yelled obscenities and began throwing objects at their car. When the couple got out of their car, one of the men came up and struck the woman on the left side of her face.

The woman's husband then began hitting the man in retaliation. The others joined in the attack on the woman's husband, then fled west on Sunningdale.

The couple said they did not know the men in the car.

Police halt war games

Grosse Pointe Woods police on Aug. 17 confiscated four BB guns and arrested four teenage boys who said they were engaged in war games on the Grosse Pointe North High School football field.

Grosse Pointe Woods public safety officers responded to the call of a concerned custodian at the high school who saw four youths firing guns in the field. As police arrived at the field, the boys initially threw their guns down and ran. After police demanded they retrieve their guns and come forward, the boys said they didn't think they had done anything wrong.

Woods detective Lt. Michael VanDeginste said the boys were released with a warning and their guns were not returned. A Woods ordinance prohibits the discharging of any gun within city limits, he said.

Park home raided

Detectives from the Grosse Pointe Park public safety department, the Grosse Pointe-Harper Woods Special Response Team and the County of Macomb Enforcement Team (COMET) obtained a warrant on Aug. 17 and searched a home in the 1400 block of Three Mile Drive.

No one was home at the time of the search. Police removed from the premises a loaded pistol, a substance suspected to be marijuana and other narcotics paraphernalia.

Park detective Lt. David Hiller said the house is the subject of a multi-jurisdictional lengthy investigation that remains ongoing and is predicated on information the department has received by unnamed sources and developed by officers through routine police investigation.

paid for the painting of the clock, and have also paid to have it repainted. It should be completed in October."

Alan said the clock will be black, with special gold leaf treatment for the ornamental leaves and handles. He said his family is quite proud of the clock and wants it to look its best.

"I believe in giving young people a chance," said Alan. "When they asked me if they could paint the clock for their picture, I felt I didn't have the right to say no. I understand the concerns of Grosse Pointers. I received a number of calls about the color of the clock. I'd feel that way as well, if the clock were going to stay that way, but it isn't, and I was glad to be of service."

The clock is a Seth Thomas street clock with four fronts. It was built out east in 1880, and stood in downtown Detroit for many years at Monroe Avenue by Woodward.

The clock was slated to be destroyed when the buildings it was in front were torn down 30 years ago, Alan said. He and his family decided to save it. The clock was moved to its present location at 20276 Mack in the late 1960s, when his family purchased the Old Cook School.

"My wife, Gertrude Lovless Alan, comes from an old Detroit family," said Alan. "Her family has always been interested in historical preservation, whether it's furniture or functional items, like the clock. My sons Marc and Dean are also interested in history, so we were glad to save the clock and the school."

Besides being repainted, Alan said the clock will get a new type face. Alan intends to put a Tiffany style face with fine thin roman numerals on the front.

Alan, a retired investment banker, said his company's motto, "Each person has an obligation to leave this country a better place than he found it," reflects his attitude toward Grosse Pointe and its history. He said he wants to assure the public that he will take care of the clock, and always try to place it in the most favorable light.

Absentee votes will become easier to count in Farms

By Chip Chapman
Staff Writer

Pulling a lever in the voting booth could become a thing of the past in Grosse Pointe Farms.

If the city's new voting equipment works well for absentee ballots in the Nov. 2 election, it could be used for all voters in future elections.

The Accu-Vote system uses scan technology to read and tabulate ballots. Voters simply fill in the oval next to the name of the candidate and feed the ballot through a scanner, where the vote is recorded.

Voters will still be able to cast their votes privately, filling in the ovals behind a curtain and feeding the ballot face down through the scanner.

When the polls close, the totals are automatically tallied and printed.

Absentee ballots are currently read orally to an election official who then pulls the corresponding lever in the voting machine.

"This will eliminate the need to manually input absentee ballots," said Shane Reeside, city clerk. "This way will expedite the process."

The Farms is the first Pointe to try this system.

If all goes well in November, the Farms will consider purchasing more Accu-Vote Systems to replace the 37-year-old mechanical voting machines it presently uses.

The Accu-Vote System, being much smaller than the current booth system, is more portable and easier to store.

The cost per each new AccuVote system is $5,800. The Farms has only budgeted enough for the one machine in this fiscal year. The Farms also hopes to reduce the number of voting precincts from seven to five. Only one Accu-Vote System is needed at each precinct.

Park's police dispatch system cuts prank calls

By Shirley A. McShane
Staff Writer

A couple of giggling children who dialed 911 and then hung up the phone were surprised to find a Grosse Pointe Park police car in their parents' driveway a few minutes later.

That's one advantage to the new enhanced 911 system now in operation at the Park public safety department, said William Furtaw, assistant director of public safety. If you call 911, the police will know who you are and where you are — even if you call from a public telephone.

"What we have now is what people see on the TV show 'Rescue 911,' where the caller's name, address and phone number are displayed on a screen," Furtaw said.

The system helps cut down on the number of prank calls received by the department, as one young man learned. Furtaw said the department had been receiving a number of harassing calls. The enhanced system enabled dispatchers to trace the caller to a nearby pay phone.

But sometimes hang-up calls are not the work of bored youngsters, Furtaw said, recalling an incident that happened a few weeks ago.

The dispatcher had received a hang-up call from a woman. The dispatcher called the woman back and learned the woman had been jogging and felt what she thought was the onset of an asthmatic attack but had had second thoughts and hung up the phone.

The dispatcher found out that the woman was diabetic and still wasn't feeling well so she sent an ambulance to the woman's house. As it turned out, when the ambulance reached the woman's house, her medical condition had worsened and she was taken to Bon Secours Hospital. Furtaw said the woman was treated and is fine.

Enhanced 911 featuring a separate phone, computer screen and computer printout recording each call, went into service this May when the public safety department moved into its new quarters.

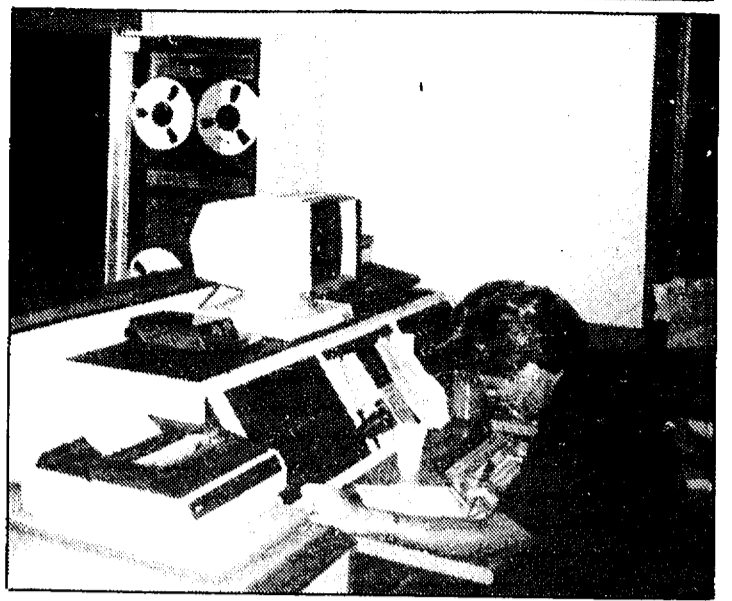

In addition, Park dispatchers also have equipment that enables them to communicate with deaf callers.

The Park city council approved in September 1992 the purchase of the $40,000 enhanced 911 system and the $18,000 phone system for deaf callers. Both systems were part of the overall improvement project completed this month at the municipal offices on Jefferson and Maryland.

"We now have the top system available," Furtaw said. "It allows us to cover any type of emergency where a person is in desperate trouble."

Dispatcher Diane Vandenberg said the new system is wonderful because she knows she has all the information she needs right on the screen.

Grosse Pointe Park's enhanced 911 dispatch system features the caller's name, address and telephone number on a computer screen. The system has been in operation since May.

Woods begins annual fall tree planting

By Jim Stickford
Staff Writer

The Grosse Pointe Woods tree commission will plant trees this fall as a part of its program to "keep the woods in Grosse Pointe Woods."

The commission will plant 88 trees on the treelawns of Woods residents who wish one. The trees will be planted at no cost to residents.

The tree commission has planted about 2,000 trees in the Woods since 1976. The trees available for planting include Japanese pagoda, seedless ash, gingko, red maple, red oak and sweetgum.

Anyone interested in having a tree planted in his or her lawn by the commission should call the department of public works at 343-2460 as soon as possible, said tree commissioner George Martin. Planting must begin right away.

The variety of trees chosen for planting were picked for their ability to grow and thrive in urban areas.

According to information released by the Tree Commission, fall is the best time to plant trees because the roots grow slowly during the winter. When spring arrives, the tree roots are well established and ready to provide the tree the food and water it needs to grow quickly during prime spring weather.

Homeowners can do a number of different things to ensure that their newly planted trees survive and even flourish. Newly planted trees should have tree wraps. This protects tender young bark from injury by the sun or hungry rabbits and other animals.

Homeowners should place a plastic spiral tree-guard around a newly planted tree. It protects trees from lawnmower damage, a leading cause in the deaths of newly planted trees.

Placing wood chip mulches around newly planted trees holds down the invasion of weeds and grass, which compete for nutrients. It also prevents the soil from drying and cracking, which damages new roots.

Martin explained that the city has a number of restrictions to prevent tree loss from disease, and to ensure that utility lines aren't disturbed.

The city also encourages planting a variety of trees. This prevents a neighborhood of trees from being wiped out by disease as happened with Dutch elm disease, said Martin.

Martin said that city ordinances also restrict residents from planting a tree under 8 feet tall. The Woods wants a tree that will grow to maturity in the shortest period of time. Taller trees take less time to reach maturity.

Trees can't be placed too near to streetlights or manholes because the city doesn't want lighting blocked, or roots to interfere with sewer lines, according to Martin. No tree that will grow over 40 feet tall may be planted near overhead wires.

Trees must be 30 inches from a sidewalk and 54 inches from a curb to prevent interference with sidewalks and streets, Martin said.

No tree can be planted within 25 feet of an intersection to avoid an obstructed view of the intersection. Trees may not be planted closer than 40 feet from another tree. This prevents excessive tree density, Martin said.

Prohibited trees include many elm varieties and white birch, because they are susceptible to disease. Buckeye trees are barred because of poisonous roots. Catalpas, and cottonwoods are unwelcome because they are "messy" trees that drop more than just leaves, Martin explained.

Encouraged trees include ashes, maples and oaks. But, Martin warned, maples and oaks are beginning to have problems with disease, so residents should pay close attention to any newly planted maples or oaks.

Egg mess, part I

A resident of Sunningdale in Grosse Pointe Woods told police that vandals had attacked a company car parked in his driveway on Aug. 22.

The resident found the car radio had been ripped from the dashboard and thrown onto the driveway, the left rear door was dented and eggs had been thrown all over the interior.

Egg mess, part II

A man who lives in the 600 block of Blairmoor heard something hit his front door at 9:45 p.m. Aug. 20. When he investigated, he found that someone had thrown several eggs at his house.

NOTICE OF A PUBLIC HEARING ON INCREASING PROPERTY TAXES

PLEASE TAKE NOTICE pursuant to Act 5, Public Acts of Michigan 1982, that on Thursday, September 2, 1993, at 8:00 p.m. at a conference session, the Board of Education of The Grosse Pointe Public School System will hold a public hearing at the South High School Library, 11 Grosse Pointe Blvd., Grosse Pointe Farms, Michigan 48236 on the levy of a proposed millage rate of 31.2953 for operating purposes.

The present voted and allocated millage of the school district of 37.08 mills for the General and Library Funds has been reduced by the "Headlee Amendment" to 33.4133. The Board of Education has complete authority to establish that 31.0629 mills be levied in 1993 for the General and Library Funds from the present authorized millage rate.

The maximum additional proposed millage rate for the General and Library Funds would increase revenues for operating purposes from ad valorem property tax levies in 1993 otherwise permitted by Act 5, Public Acts of Michigan in 1993 in the amount of $1,984,430 for General, or an increase of 3.5% (or $1,476,901 for General and Debt Fund or an increase of 2.5%) and $183,491 for Library, or an increase of 7.6%. The total of all three funds is $1,660,392, or an increase of 2.7%. The figure for increase in revenue for operating purposes is based on the latest estimate of state equalized valuation of property located within the school district.

The purpose of this hearing is to receive testimony and discuss the millage levy. Not less than seven (7) days following the public hearing, the Board of Education may approve any portion of the proposed millage rate.

This notice is given by order of the Board of Education.

Ignatius A. Backman

Ignatius A. Backman

The flag at the Grosse Pointe Farms city hall was lowered to half staff last week in honor of Ignatius A. Backman, who died Wednesday, Aug. 18, 1993, at St. John Hospital in Detroit.

Services for Mr. Backman were held Monday, Aug. 23, at St. Paul's Catholic Church in Grosse Pointe Farms.

Born in Grosse Pointe Farms, Mr. Backman earned the Bronze Star from the U.S. Army during World War II before embarking on a lifelong career with the Grosse Pointe Farms police department. He served 46 years with the Farms department, retiring as chief of police last January. He also was the unofficial historian of the Farms police department.

"When I joined the force, I made a point to stop by and visit every house in the city," Mr. Backman told the Grosse Pointe News in an interview earlier this year. "But the city's growth after the war made that impossible."

Mr. Backman's uncle, Ledger Backman, was the Farms police chief in 1915. After World War II, Mr. Backman and his cousin decided to join the force.

"They gave us guns and badges," Mr. Backman said. "We rode around with a veteran officer for a few weeks before we were allowed to ride solo. That was our training."

"I worked with him for 23 years," said director of public safety Robert Ferber. "He was the most concerned, decent individual I've ever known in my life. I'm going to miss him."

"I worked with him for 28 years," said Farms police chief Sam Cardella. "My father is the person I respect the most, but I would put Ig next to my dad."

"I was introduced to someone as his replacement. I may be in his office and sit in his chair, but how can you replace someone that good?"

"We are all deeply saddened by Aggie's (as he called him) premature death just months after his retirement," said Farms city manager Richard Solak. "Aggie was an institution in this community for 46 years and the best example of a police officer and public official one could hope to find. More important, he was a steadfast friend to many and a devoted father and husband. His presence will be sorely missed."

"He made a heck of a contribution to this city," said Farms Mayor Gregg Berendt. "He will be sorely missed by the community."

He is survived by his wife, Patricia; three daughters, Susan Kenyon, Barbara Kozicki and Julie Lattimore; five sons, Allen, Tim, Michael, Andrew and David; nine grandchildren; a sister, Myra Supanich; and a brother, Charles Backman. He was predeceased by his daughter, Karen Trevillian.

Interment is at White Chapel Cemetery in Troy.

Arrangements were made by the Chas. Verheyden Inc. Funeral Home in Grosse Pointe Park.

Memorial contributions may be made to the Michigan Cancer Foundation, 110 E. Warren, Detroit, Mich. 48201; or to the Foundation for Exceptional Children, 16 Lakeshore, Grosse Pointe Farms, Mich. 48236.

John Hancock Wood

A memorial service was held Saturday, Aug. 21, at the First Presbyterian Church of Harbor Springs for John Hancock Wood, 72, of Harbor Springs, who died Tuesday, Aug. 17, 1993, at Northern Michigan Hospital in Petoskey.

Mr. Wood, formerly of Grosse Pointe, served in the U.S. Army in Europe during World War II. He was the past commander of the Grosse Pointe Power Squadron. He was an avid sailor and raced in the Detroit area for many years. He was a member of Bayview Yacht Club, Little Traverse Yacht Club and Sea Oaks Club in Vero Beach, Fla.

Mr. Wood is survived by his wife, Madesta; six children, Wendy Boal, Susan Hopkins, Lisa Vreede, Lori Wood, Logan Wood and John Wood Jr.; three stepchildren, David, Robert and Peter Bailey; eight grandchildren; two sisters, Cathrine Champion and Barbara Simmonds; and two brothers, Donald C. Wood and Robert B. Wood.

Memorial contributions may be made to the First Presbyterian Church of Harbor Springs and the Little Traverse Conservancy.

Hector Montpetit

Hector Montpetit

Services were held Tuesday, Aug. 24, at St. Paul's Catholic Church for Hector Montpetit, 93, formerly of Grosse Pointe Farms, who died Friday, Aug. 20, 1993, at Bon Secours Hospital in Grosse Pointe City.

Nursing home costs: Will you be able to afford your bill?

The average American reaching age 65 has a 43 percent chance of spending time in a nursing home, according to the New England Journal of Medicine.

In a recent study, Marion Merrell Dow Inc., Managed Care Digest and SMG Marketing Group Inc., found that the average daily room rate for nursing homes in 1992 was $88 for skilled care and $78 for unskilled care. At $88 per day for a five-year stay in a nursing facility, the total bill for skilled care could be a whopping $160,000.

"With costs like that," said William O'Donoghue, branch manager of the A.G. Edwards Detroit office, "even people who have a significant retirement nest egg could find it may not be enough."

According to a U.S. Congressional Study Commission on the Aging, only three percent of nursing home bills are paid by private health insurance companies. That means that 97 percent of Americans are either "self-insuring," covering the costs of long-term care with their own savings and investments, or relying on Medicare and Medicaid to cover the costs of long-term care.

"Many people mistakenly believe Medicare or Medicaid will cover the costs if they need long-term care," O'Donoghue said. "But Medicare, on average, pays for less than one month of skilled care, and Medicaid is available only to patients whose incomes are at or near the poverty level."

For Medicare purposes, skilled care is defined as care that is provided daily under supervision of a physician. Unskilled care can be administered by caregivers who have not received special training and includes daily services like assistance with walking, bathing or eating.

"Most of us may be more likely to need some level of unskilled care, and Medicare won't cover any of it," O'Donoghue said. "For practical purposes, most of us can expect to pay more than 97 percent of our own long-term care costs."

What can we do now to prepare for those expenses? O'Donoghue says the first step is a sound investment plan for retirement.

"However, if you are worried your retirement nest egg won't be enough, you may want to consider options such as long-term care insurance, annuities or life insurance with a long-term care rider," he said.

In reviewing your options, O'Donoghue suggests you consider your age, the value of your savings and investments, and the amount of care you think you may need or want to be prepared for in the future.

With long-term care insurance, you pay premiums while you are healthy, and the insurance company promises to cover a specific amount of future nursing home costs for a designated period.

"This type of insurance is not for everyone," O'Donoghue warns. He notes that nursing home insurance premiums are cheaper the younger you are. But younger people should also consider that they will be paying the premiums for a longer period of time.

Of course, with long-term care insurance, the individual always runs the chance of never using the benefit, thus in most cases losing the premiums paid.

When shopping for this type of insurance, O'Donoghue advises looking for insurance from a quality company that includes desirable provisions such as an inflation rider that will adjust the benefit payment to the rate of inflation; a wide variety of covered care options, including skilled and unskilled care; and no requirement for prior hospitalization.

Immediate annuities, on the other hand, may be a better choice for older individuals. With an annuity, you pay a lump sum to an insurance company and receive a payment each month for life or for a set period of time.

As the name implies, payments from an immediate annuity begin immediately and can be used to pay for the long-term care you need right now. Under a life option, payments may be received for the rest of your life. However, nothing may be available for your heirs when you die.

O'Donoghue points out that unlike long-term care insurance, payments received from an annuity can be directed toward other uses if long-term care is not needed or if you are faced with a financial emergency in the future.

You should be aware, however, that an immediate annuity payout includes both interest and principal for a set period of time. When the payments end, there is no principal remaining to redeem or reinvest.

According to O'Donoghue, when you purchase fixed immediate annuities (immediate annuities with set rates of return that are guaranteed by the insurer), they are usually irrevocable, and they usually don't rise with inflation.

A third option is available through some life insurance companies that now offer life insurance policies that help individuals pay for long-term care. These new life insurance policies allow limited access to all or a portion of the death benefit for use toward long-term care costs. Currently, only a handful of life insurance companies offer policies that pay 100 percent of the death benefit toward long-term care costs.

A policy with this type of rider can allow for a percentage of the cash value, the death benefit or some combination of the two, to be paid toward the costs of long-term care. Some of these policies pay two percent or a specific dollar amount of the death benefit each month for a prearranged number of years after the insured has been confined to a nursing home for at least 90 days.

"A life insurance policyholder whose policy contains a long-term care rider can be sure that the premiums paid over the years will not be wasted if the long-term care rider is never used," O'Donoghue said.

According to O'Donoghue, this insurance protects you against long-term care costs in the future, and is also a cash value life insurance policy. Thus if long-term care is not needed, you still have the cash value of the policy for any emergency financial needs.

If you purchase life insurance with a long-term care rider, O'Donoghue suggests choosing a policy offered by a quality, experienced insurance company that is highly rated.

Insurance policies are slowly being developed by insurers to better assist individuals concerned with long-term care costs. However, O'Donoghue still believes the best way to prepare for the costs of the future is by developing a financial plan tailored to your specific needs.

"Individuals who have long-term plans to reach their financial goals can minimize their future worries," O'Donoghue said.

Edwards Detroit office at (313) 962-5525 to obtain a free copy of the article, "Sowing the Seeds for Long-Term Care," in A.G. 'Sizzler' planned for seniors

With all the entertainment, door prizes and food, seniors attending the "Seniors September Sizzler" may forget to have their blood pressure checked, their vision tested, or their back checked for spinal abnormalities.

Well, perhaps not. But there undoubtedly will be perks aplenty to woo seniors to the Red Cross/OmniCare health fair on Saturday, Sept. 11, in downtown Detroit.

Seniors often have obstacles such as transportation and finances preventing them from getting regular health checks. Recognizing this, the Red Cross Southeastern Michigan Chapter and OmniCare have teamed up so that seniors can get the health information they need in one fun setting.

The "Sizzler" will be held from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. in the Red Cross parking lot, 100 Mack, corner of Mack and Woodward. Square dancers, door prizes, and demonstrations will live up the outing.

"We want to make it as easy and attractive as possible for seniors to get the health counseling they need," said Red Cross Community Relations Specialist Dorothy Davis.

For more information, call Dorothy Davis at the Red Cross at 494-2882 or OmniCare's Doris Powers at 393-4561.

Community health fair slated

St. John Hospital and Medical Center, Universal Ambulance and Kelly-Morang Senior Center are sponsoring a free Community Health Fair for all ages on Saturday, Sept. 25.

The event will be held at St. Matthew Catholic Church, 6021 Whittier at Harper, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

In addition to health screenings and medication reviews, local businesses and organizations will provide information on home fire prevention, child protection and safety, emergency medical services, community outreach programs, home security and lock safety. Lunch will be provided with a special luncheon performance by The Blue Pigs. Door prizes will be distributed throughout the day.

For more information, call Donna Moshauer at the Kelly-Morang Senior Center at 527-8562.

Public divided over ways to fund schools

Gov. John Engler is ecstatic over the achievement of his campaign pledge to cut property taxes — but he helped create a state crisis to do it.

Now he talks glibly about favoring an increase in the sales tax, and putting a number of other plans on the table for consideration. But the public is already taking sharp issue with him.

In the first poll after the Legislature handed Engler his property tax-cut victory, the public has expressed sharply divided opinions over the ways being proposed to replace the property tax to fund state public education.

The public greeted the governor's proposed sales tax hike with disdain, which was not surprising in view of the defeat earlier this year of Proposal A which relied heavily on a sales tax boost.

But other tax plans being talked about didn't fare much better.

Actually, 51 percent opposed state property tax restoration and only 27 percent backed a plan to increase income and single business taxes.

However, 75 percent expressed support for a proposed dime increase in the beer tax while 74 percent backed a suggested cigarette tax boost of 50 cents a pack.

This strong backing for boosts in beer and cigarette taxes may encourage the Legislature to consider reliance on such tax hikes as part of a tax package but together they wouldn't produce the $6 billion needed in replacement revenue.

Among three options for financing education, 34 percent of the public backed a combination of state and local property taxes, 27 percent favored hiking income and single business taxes and only 20 percent supported a 6.5 cent sales tax increase.

That 6 1/2 cent sales tax hike, which sounds high, apparently would be needed if it were to carry the full burden of replacing the $6 billion in property taxes lost through property tax repeal.

In his remarks subsequent to signing the repeal legislation, the governor tended to paint highly unrealistic pictures of what the future would hold for education, parents and business.

He is still at war with the Michigan Education Association, frequently attacking the teachers' union as the chief obstacle to educational improvement in Michigan and, at the same time, telling the public what wonderful opportunities Michigan will offer business in the future.

State treasurer Doug Roberts said last week the voters might be asked next year to choose from several options to help solve the financing crisis.

He also seems to seek some legislative action this year so that new tax collections could start Jan. 1, 1994. The public then would vote on alternative tax plans, including the governor's recommended sales tax hike, in November 1994.

In his talk about education reform and funding, the governor sounds as if his overriding concern is improving the state's business climate by cutting taxes, regardless of the consequences for education and other state services.

That talk no doubt wins support among some businessmen who regard the cost of education as part of the cost of all public services without considering the fact that education costs also represent an investment in the state's future.

However, most good businessmen know that business needs trained high school and college graduates and realize they won't get them without helping finance the public schools.

We agree with businessmen and property owners generally that Michigan has put too much reliance on the property tax. Yet abandoning the traditional method of financing the public schools without identifying any replacement is as irresponsible an action as making a parachute jump without locating the rip cord.

We acknowledge that the schools could benefit from adoption of the best business practices, but despite Engler's pandering to critics of education, business cannot and should not try to run the schools. That's still the job for professionals.

And despite the support of the Michigan Chamber of Commerce for a school choice plan that would kill the public schools, we doubt that many businessmen want to add the responsibility of running the public schools to their many other burdens.

It's a decision for the board

Despite the petition signed by 5,477 voters, we think that it is the responsibility of the Grosse Pointe Board of Education to decide whether to sell the district's buildings housing the administrative offices.

The News disagreed with the board's decision to call for bids right after the recent school board election but under our democratic system, we elect representatives to conduct our public business, including the possible sale of public buildings.

Furthermore, it turns out that if an election were held, as requested in the petition, its results would not be legally binding on the board and could only be used for advisory purposes anyway.

However, the board would be wise to postpone as long as possible its decision to accept one bid or reject them all in order to allow the maximum time for investigation of other possible uses of the property at 389 St. Clair.

Earlier, the mayors of both Grosse Pointe Farms and Grosse Pointe City had asked that the decision be delayed to permit them to explore other land use options for the 389 land parcel.

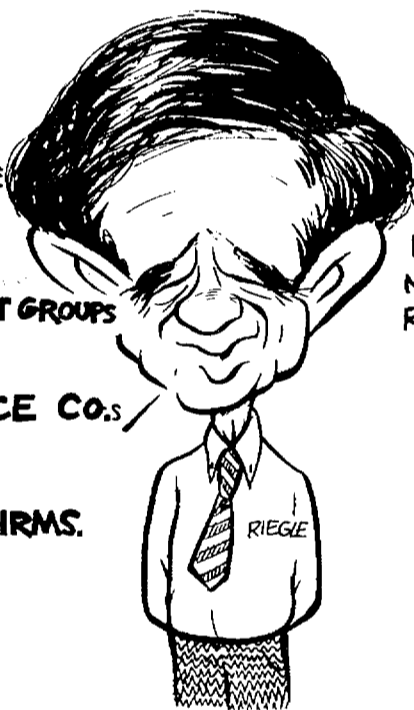

In view of the long statement read by Alfred W. Wilke, attorney for the Concerned Citizens of Grosse Pointe, it is obvious that critics of the proposed sale feel strongly about the problem.

The statement called the plan to distribute the administrative staff among three buildings "a monumentally flawed educational policy," termed the decision to sell the buildings "financially irresponsible," and urged the board to put the issue to a vote.

We don't pretend to know what proportion of the people favor the public vote sought by the Concerned Citizens of Grosse Pointe but we reiterate that the board and it alone has the authority to make this decision. If people disagree, they can vote against the re-election of board incumbents in the next election or even seek a recall vote if they wish.

In the meantime, we hope the exploration of alternative uses of the property proceeds and, if one or more of them seem to warrant further investigation, the board could delay any decision on disposing of the property until the option or options can be given serious consideration.

2 sad chapters in Gravel case

Two more sad chapters have been written in the story of the murder of Benjamin Gravel, Grosse Pointe businessman, in February 1990.

One chapter was written by Detroit police who last week discovered the body of Rico Searcy, 21, a Detroit youth, who was one of the six Detroit youths implicated in the crime, in an alley on Detroit's east side. He had apparently died from a gunshot wound to his head.

Searcy was one of two participants acquitted of murdering Gravel. Authorities said that while Searcy had not been the gunman, he had allegedly helped in the plan to steal Gravel's car, an attempt that precipitated the murder.

Police had no one in custody late last week but were still searching for Searcy's killer.

Meanwhile, a second but different chapter in the same murder case is being written by Kermit Haynes and Cortez Miller, two other young men directly involved in Gravel's murder but originally sentenced as juveniles for premeditated murder.

The Wayne County prosecutor's office successfully appealed that sentence to the Michigan Court of Appeals, which ordered the two youths be remanded to the lower court for sentencing as adults.

Their attorneys promptly asked the Michigan Court of Appeals for a rehearing which has just been denied. But they now have up to 56 days from that denial to appeal to the state Supreme Court.

Unless their request is accepted and an appeal granted, the young men would seem to face life imprisonment without parole. That is the mandatory penalty for first-degree murder, to which both had pleaded guilty.

However, even if Haynes and Miller lose their attempt to win an appeal in the high court, they could withdraw their original guilty pleas — and start a new round robin of seeking trials and appealing denials if they don't win them.

It's no wonder that there's a legal saying that justice delayed is justice denied.

But there's a Biblical saying that describes Searcy's fate: "All they that take the sword shall perish with the sword."

Archer gets 2 needed boosts

Dennis Archer last week took two more steps toward nomination and election as mayor of Detroit.

He not only won the endorsement of the influential Michigan Chronicle, the African-American newspaper, but he also raved out to 50 percent backing in the latest public opinion poll.

The newspaper's endorsement serves as an effective answer to Archer's critics who have complained about his support from the suburbs and his supposed lack of interest in city grass-roots issues.

In the same WDIV-TV poll, Sharon McPhail, a supervisor in the county prosecutor's office, dropped from 19 to 13 percentage points, but Arthur Blackwell II, Wayne County Commission chairman, won 11 percent to improve his chance at nomination.

That gain may have reflected the boost given by Mayor Coleman Young's $250,000 contributions to the 14th and 15th District Congressional District Democratic units, which back Blackwell.

A major question is whether Young now will endorse Blackwell personally and if he does, whether the lame-duck mayor still has political clout.

Pope's message has something for everyone

To the Editor:

The outpouring of millions (counting TV) for the Pope's visit to Denver had far greater meaning than simply a Catholic event. The excitement caused by his visit can only be explained that people want something in their lives to hang on to — something more than money, lotteries, athletic events and sex symbols. It was a sign that there is a search for discipline.

Many of us believe that the fall of communism, the end of the Iron Curtain, was a major event; that it changed people's overall living habits, their thinking, even their working habits. Before, there was the Russian menace to our Western world, just as there was a capitalistic menace to the Russian-dominated Eastern world.

We were the good guys and we must defend against the bad guys. The communists thought the same about themselves. There was a balance of power in arms and attitudes. There isn't any balance any more. Petty nationalism is the order of the day. In union, there was strength. You don't need union any more. If the Uzbeks want to separate from Georgians, why not? (The Turks are too busy with their own problems.) If the Serbs and Croats want to hack up a lot of Bosnia (and Bosnians), there isn't any Tito or a Yugoslavia to sit on them (the old Stalin threat has long since been forgotten).

In our own country, there is no need for a big army. The generations that were heroes of Bastogne or who fought off Japanese kamikazes from their Navy gun-tubs have passed on and are substituted by a generation of credit card carriers and women who along with their child-rearing do many things better than their debt-ridden, worried husbands ever thought of doing.

Leadership? Do you think our cynical electorate would even consider a great general for president? The United Nations? How can it be effective? Who's united?

All this negativism may make us understand the extent of the Pope's visit. His Holiness may be contentious, the "faith" under fire in many areas. But Pope John is strong; there's no vacillation there. In a civilization that's wandering, His Holiness is on a direct line. He exudes confidence. He offers the masses security — his security.

Could his visit and its effect on so many be augury of the future? Could it be that some type of spiritual organization could move into a secular position — even a strong secular leadership?

It would fill a void. It has happened before.

Grosse Pointe Cable lauded

To the Editor:
When a commercial Grosse Pointe firm provides an exceptional service to local residents, I think public recognition should be given.

As one interested customer, I thank Grosse Pointe Cable Inc. for complete coverage of the World Youth Day. Through Channel 20, the messages of Pope John Paul II could be heard, and the cameras took us (vicariously) into the activities of the young participants from around the world. It was fascinating and greatly appreciated.

Grosse Pointe Cable Inc. is one of those special companies in our community.

Paramedic unit saved life and reunited old friends

The coincidence can only be described as remarkable. On the evening of July 21, 1992, the Grosse Pointe Shores Village Council approved the immediate use of a new paramedic unit in emergencies. The unit, operated by Taylor Ambulance and supported by Bon Secours Healthcare System, was to be the first ambulance in the Shores staffed by paramedics.

Early the next morning, Elfreda Leete, of Lakeshore Lane, felt lightheaded. Minutes later, she was in cardiac arrest. A neighbor quickly dialed 911, which dispatched the Grosse Pointe Shores new paramedic unit. The ambulance rushed to the scene and paramedic Ronald Guentner immediately resuscitated Leete. Half way to the hospital, she arrested again and was quickly revived.

Only weeks later did Shores president pro tem John Huetteman III realize the woman was a family friend he had known since he was a small child, a neighbor he affectionately called "Petey" (a nickname derived from her maiden name, Petersen).

"It was unbelievable," Huetteman recalled. "I received a call from Petey about three weeks after the emergency and she said, 'Johnny, I owe you my life. I was dead twice and your paramedic unit saved my life.' I told her that when we started out all of those years ago, she held me in her arms. Now, I had extended my arms to her. Then, we both shed a few tears."

Leete, 84, underwent balloon angioplasty to open her clogged arteries soon after her heart attack. She recently completed a six-week cardiac rehabilitation program at Bon Secours and passed with flying colors.

"She did exceptionally well," said Scot Hoverman, program coordinator. "Her progress and recovery were very quick. She had a good sense of what we needed to accomplish and was an active participant in her recovery. It was a pleasure to turn her loose to her own exercise program because we know she will comply."

Recently, Huetteman paid Petey a visit to talk about the paramedic unit that saved her life.

"I called Johnny to let him know how appreciative I was," Leete said. "I am so grateful, as were all my children."

Huetteman is quick to share the credit.

"I truly appreciate the support of Henry DeVries and Dr. Ron Laskowski from Bon Secours and the entire Shores council. This all became possible through Dr. Laskowski's tireless efforts and the commitment Bon Secours has made to our community."

Interns learn politics first hand

For many students at Michigan State University, state government means more than political science courses and news headlines. Instead, interested students are able to gain valuable first hand experience and unfold some of the mysteries of the political arena through legislative internships.

State Sen. John F. Kelly, D-Grosse Pointe Woods, is one of many legislators who offers such an opportunity. There are currently 12 interns in Kelly's office who assist in solving constituents' problems as well as researching bills and current issues, while utilizing their own academic skills. This is something Kelly feels is beneficial for both the office and students.

"There are definite mutual rewards in offering this opportunity. We are able to add to our staff while the students are able to learn the legislative process. Students also bring a great deal of enthusiasm and energy into the office," Kelly said.

He said the internship program, which is closely regulated by various departments within Michigan State University, has become a vital part of his office over the past eight years.

"Each intern becomes part of my staff and is an invaluable asset. Many stay on several terms after their internship ends and some move on to paying jobs within the system," Kelly said.

Craig Winger, an MSU student from Grosse Pointe, said he feels his position in Kelly's office has helped him gain a greater sense of awareness about the state's political structure and the vast influences that effect it.

"My work in the Senate has been an excellent opportunity to witness the inside process of government. It is also interesting to see the decision making process that goes into representing the district I'm from," he said.

Winger said helping constituents has made him more aware of the current issues affecting his home town as well as the importance state government plays in everyday life.

"It has been interesting to watch the reactions of people in our district as legislation is being made. For the first time, I am able to see issues like property taxes and auto insurance from both the citizen's standpoint and that of the politician. Putting ideas into motion and meeting the needs of all the voters is much more complex than I ever imagined," he said.

Along with solving constituent problems, Winger is involved in fetal tissue research, something he says has been a very rewarding experience.

"This issue is extremely interesting and very current. Researching the issue has enabled me to look at all angles of a very controversial subject and also learn more about the legislature's role in shaping policies," he said.

Like Winger, many of Kelly's interns are political science majors, with aspirations of law school and possible future roles in government. However, there are also those students whose non-political backgrounds offer new insight into research and effective problem solving.

Kelly said students of various majors such as journalism, education and criminal justice are showing increasing interest in the internship program, in hopes of learning what their required courses do not teach them about the legislative process.

"Each intern has something to contribute. The law affects everyone, whether they're in political science or the arts, and we try to let everyone experience the whole legislative spectrum as it applies to their interests," Kelly said.

As well as becoming familiar with the various state departments and current legislation, Kelly's interns can become involved in select Senate committees. Sean Liles, a political science major at MSU, is currently doing extensive research for the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, which Kelly chairs. Liles is responsible for collecting data from foreign governments and reporting to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee on his findings.

"It's an opportunity to learn not only what is going on in our own nation, but how economies are throughout the world. I enjoy watching the progress toward a global market from a hands-on perspective," Liles said.

Media in search of a mission

Ever since Bill Clinton started his campaign for the presidency, the national news media — both print and electronic — seem to be searching for an identity.

Are they to be the voice of the people, as the talk shows tell us they already are; the protectors of the people's rights and freedoms, as many in the media claim they are, or simply the critics of government and people in public life, as many incumbents in office see them?

To date, the media seem to be trying to fulfill all of these roles — and not succeeding well in any.

As they conduct this search for identity, the media are undergoing tough evaluations from observers from within and without who don't like much of what they read and hear from the media.

Take Reese Cleghorn, for example. Reese, a former associate editor of the Detroit Free Press and now dean of the College of Journalism at the University of Maryland, is still a working journalist, too. He's president of and columnist for the American Journalism Review.

In a recent column, Cleghorn indicts the Washington press corps in this way:

"It is hard to remember a time when the reporting and commentary from Washington have been worse: self-centered, myopic, pompous, often preposterous."

But Cleghorn has plenty of critical company in the print media.

Bruce Watson, for example, writing in the Smithsonian magazine, says talk radio offers "no pretense, no pomp, just bald-faced lies." He explains his reaction:

"When our Founding Fathers met to talk about a Constitution, they shouted and whined a little, but they envisioned democracy as a civilized conversation, citizens calmly talking over events."

I Say

Wilbur Elston

"In actual practice, the conversation never was all that civil, but now — thanks to the intercession of talk radio — it has deteriorated to the point where it manifests all the logic and maturity of kids chatting on a playground."

Mike Wallace, not the CBS News star but a former California newspaper editor, complains in Editor and Publisher that many newspaper stories are "so badly written they simply fail to convey the essence and context of the story to the reader."

He adds: "With all the talk about why fewer people are reading a newspaper these days, hardly anyone mentions the abysmal quality of reporting, writing and editing."

Stanley W. Cloud has offered one plausible explanation for the media's lapses in discussing in Time magazine the search for a successor to Paul Duke, soon to retire as moderator of PBS's news-analysis show, "Washington Week in Review."

Cloud writes that more than 50 applications had been submitted, "many from print journalists who, in other circumstances, enjoy belittling TV," but who obviously seek the good pay and the full-fledged celebrity status that goes with the job.

In fact, many Washington print journalists, and most of the good ones, already have succumbed to television, although they still continue their columns and reporting for the print media.

But it's clear that too many journalists on TV become performers who must cater to the public — and help maintain the program's ratings.

They do so by engaging in opinionated shouting matches or exaggerating their own biases to serve as either conservative or liberal to prove the program's balance.

True, Cloud reminds us that "Washington Week's" far-sighted producers have said opinion-laden journalists need not apply for Paul Duke's job, but hasn't the damage already been done by all those other ranting, raving, shouting media maniacs on other talk shows?

It's no wonder the media have been unable to find a common identity. The fact is they don't have a single identity. Instead, they have many.

The bad media, chiefly found in electronic journalism, regard talk shows and even news as entertainment and see readers and listeners as mere customers to be wooed by whatever popular method works, regardless of the facts or accuracy.

Fortunately, the good news media — and there are a few, chiefly in the print media — take seriously their responsibility to serve the public by supplying full, fair and balanced coverage.

And in part they do so by paying attention to critics not only from the public but from within their own ranks, such as those cited above.

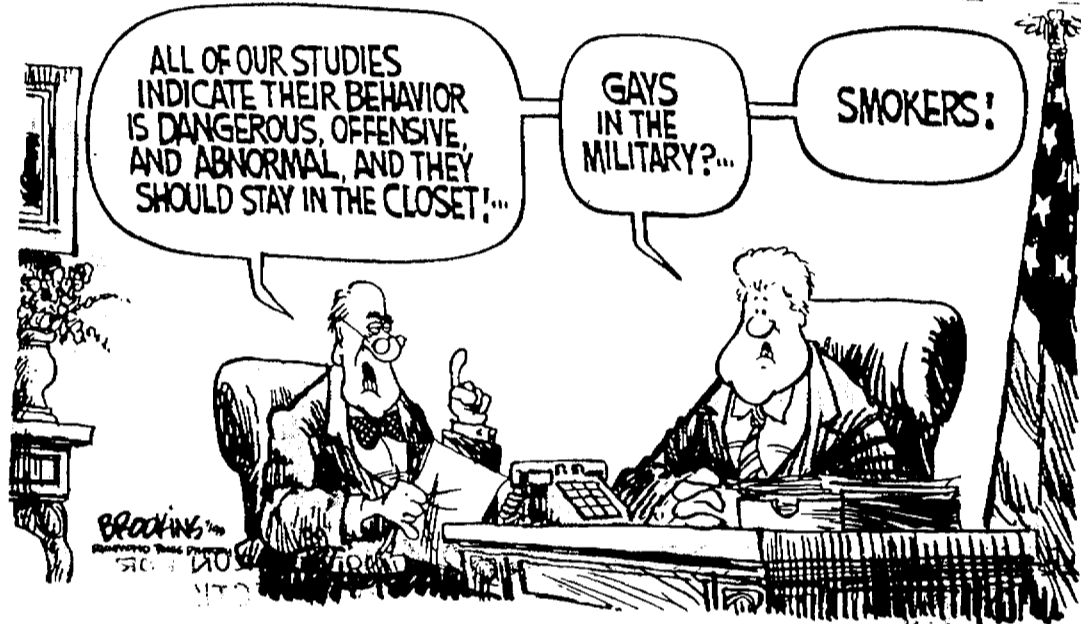

After a career in print journalism, I cheerfully admit my bias in favor of print journalism. As a critic of electronic journalism, especially TV, I blame the poor standing of the media today chiefly on TV and the print media that try to copy TV's brief and too often opinionated news coverage.

As a Washington correspondent in the 1950s, I saw TV reporting in its infancy and while it has widened its role since those days — and must be credited with some great reporting of spot news events — its net impact on society still appears to be a minus.

Bash Clinton? Not me, I'm a fan

Cousin Barbara thinks I'm too tough on Bill Clinton. Last week when I said his half-loaf compromises were half-baked, she got after me. Give him the benefit of the doubt, she told me, trust him to work things out.

I'd like to, I really would. But even as I give him credit for signing the family leave act and empathizing with the Mississippi flood victims, there are rumblings that he gave away the environmental store in his so-called compromise between logging jobs and preservation of old-growth forests.

And that was one area where I was really counting on him. Sigh.

So you think you're overworked and stressed out. Someone I know has a new job, four college kids home for the summer, five in-laws staying for three weeks, and somebody filming a video in her kitchen.

Of course, that does give them an excuse to eat out.

Hey, sex and the military is shaping up to be a long-running story.

First we were treated to sexual harassment via the Tailhook scandal. Then it was a witch hunt against gays.

Finally, a couple of weeks ago, the Marines came up with an anti-marriage policy (quickly scotched, but not quickly enough to keep it out of the news). Seems that family troubles make it hard to concentrate.

Now, there's some truth to that, and it made me think that such a sensible policy might be equally well applied to traveling businesspeople, who probably have trouble concentrating on deals while missing out on the kids' Little League games. It would help with our overpopulation problem, too.

But Secretary Aspin made the general deep-six the policy, and they're back where they started, married and not happy about it.

So I've been working on a solution to the military's quandary. It's obvious that neither heterosexuals nor homosexuals, married or single, can do the job. None of them can keep their minds above their, er, belts.

But I have an idea. The answer is so obvious that I'm surprised they haven't thought of it themselves: Shakers in the military.

Judy was having one of those days. She was organizing boxes for the attic when she ran across a picture of herself as a lovely young girl.

She set it out on the kitchen counter.

One by one, the kids straggled in from school, glancing casually at the unfamiliar photo. "Who's that, Mom?" Then the 5-year-old saw it. "Hey, Mom, that's a nice picture of you!" he said, as Judy smothered him with hugs and kisses.

"Thank you, Josh," she said in his ear. "I was feeling like an old, fat, gray-haired lady." "Aw, that's OK, Mom," he reassured her. "You're not a lady."

How can some people be so positive that they have the right answer to Bosnian ambiguities? Columnists like Anthony Lewis have for a year been urging us to military intervention in the name of preventing a second holocaust in Europe.

I don't remember similar voices when genocide was waged in Cambodia a decade ago. Who speaks for Romanian gypsies today? What about the Israeli oppression of Palestinians (which we more or less support with aid dollars)?

To be honest, there are moments when intervention seems like the right answer to me, too — there's a burning need after watching the televised scenes of inhumanity to march straight over there and beat somebody to a pulp. But who?

We blew it right at the beginning when, instead of speaking up for the right of self-determination (or just staying out of it), we announced that we preferred a united Yugoslavia. That turned out to favor the Serbs, who acted on the "permission" we gave them to keep Yugoslavia together by any means necessary.

The ultimate has happened, the last word, bringing with it awful reverberations of the final decline of civilization as we wish we knew it.

An 800 number hung up on me.

There I was, trying to find out how to deal with roots in my septic tank (one of several pleasures of cottage ownership with which I have no previous experience). The fellow on the other end of the line had all the answers (naturally), as well as a miracle product — a six-year supply for only $140.

That sounded like an awful lot. Where would I put it? This is a cabin, not a palace. So I told him I'd need to think about it.

"You wanna think about it, lady? Fine!" he snarled. Click. Yikes.

A more tangible pleasure of northern living was discovered serendipitously. We were hiking a nearby section of Michigan's shore-to-shore trail when we saw — wild blueberries!

Hundreds of them. Thousands. Fat, ripe blueberries on six-inch bushes. Clusters to fill your hand. Or mouth.

We stopped hiking and started eating. Through purple lips, we made plans to come back with giant pails.

"What should we do if a bear comes?" asked Cousin Barbara, marring the idyllic peace.

Bear fears aside, she managed to keep up with us in the eating competition, till we all rolled on down the trail, stuffed full.

Points of view

About 10 people have asked FYI, "Where are those streets that have obstructed views from trees and hedges blocking auto driver vision, forcing them to drive up to and into oncoming traffic, over crosswalks — a big danger, you say?"

Well, we found so many that it proves a dumb idea. Older neighborhoods, heavily-traveled roads, kids cutting corners near schools, make obstructed-view ordinances silly.

Disabled and old people can't keep bushes trimmed, but yellow-hashmark paint seems to be the answer, if five feet ahead of crosswalk line. Drivers should creep up to look, not slam-bang into intersections. And, some didn't want to offend neighbors so would not complain of inherent danger (nice thought).

Hugh Muncie

Cryptographers

FYI has confirmed, but promised not to use names (so, take our word for it), many stores use spoken codes to talk to employees but not disclosing hidden words to customers.

One young lady says that her Big Boy waitresses call out on the speaker the arrival of a handsome-hunk, gorgeous guy, "Double-beef with everything at table 16."

If a suspected shoplifter comes to one party store, the counter person calls, "Broken glass in aisle four," but a hardware store signals with "Carryout needed at checkout" if a suspicious guy drifts in.

Loves 'em, just beclaws I do

Ralph Wilgarde retired a few years ago as an administrator at Cottage Hospital, 25 of his 35 years in health care spent in the Farms. He lives on Bishop in the Park, but walks to the Hill each day for his body conditioning.

"Seeing the special care afforded dogs, the scooper brigade on parade, makes me appreciate my four cats more and more," says Ralph.

I reminded him of the old saying that cat lovers take the feline disdain because as animal lovers they want to give attention. Dog lovers, on the other hand, tend to want affection returned, need affection.

"Nuts," says Ralph, "I love both cats and dogs for no real reason beyond that." (End of story.)

Local star rises

Two weeks ago FYI wrote of Joyce Weidemann finding a new member of her family via a new Hollywood figure, Tom Sizemore. He always calls, writes and keeps in touch with Mae Weidemann's clan in Grosse Pointe, favoring one Weidemann, Chris, housed in an adult care center.

Sizemore, a Bishop Gallagher High School, WSU grad, and local theater (Bonstelle, Hilberry) alumnus here on a promotional tour, revealed two more films he is making, as "Heart and Souls" opened in Detroit.

Experts say this local boy, Sizemore, has made good, fast.

U.S. Coast Guard seeks cadets

The United States Coast Guard Academy is accepting applications for appointment as cadet, U.S. Coast Guard, Class of 1998. Applications are being accepted for both men and women.

Appointments as Coast Guard Cadets are tendered solely on the basis of an annual nationwide competition with no congressional nominations or geographical quotas. Applications must be submitted to the Director of Admissions before Dec. 15.

Candidates must arrange to participate in either the College Board Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT) or American College Testing Assessment (ACT) prior to or including the December 1993 ACT and SAT test administrations.

Appointments as cadet are awarded based on the candidate's high school record, performance on either the SAT or ACT, and leadership potential as demonstrated by participation in high school activities, community affairs and/or part-time employment. Most successful candidates rank in the top quarter of their high school class and have demonstrated proficiency in both the mathematical and applied science fields.

Candidates must be unmarried at the time of appointment, have no legal obligations resulting from a prior marriage, and must have reached the age of 17 but not 22 by July 1, 1994.

All candidates must be assured of high school graduation by June 30, 1994. All candidates must have completed a minimum of three years of English, and three in mathematics to include algebra and plane or coordinate geometry or their equivalents, and must fulfill basic physical requirements.

Coast Guard cadets obtain an excellent undergraduate education at no personal expense. In addition, they receive pay and allowances adequate to fulfill their ordinary living expenses. The constantly updated academy curriculum leads to a bachelor of science degree with a strong academic emphasis on engineering and science. The selected major studies, when combined with varied elective courses, establish a solid foundation for a challenging career.

Graduates of the Academy are commissioned as ensigns in the United States Coast Guard. Selected officers may pursue further postgraduate education and specialized training at many leading civilian and military graduate or professional schools, in such fields as aviation, business administration, electronics, engineering, law and oceanography.

The young Academy graduate can look forward to a varied and demanding career as a regular Coast Guard officer. Under the Department of Transportation, the Coast Guard performs a variety of missions. These include search and rescue operations by ship and plane, maintenance of advanced electronic and other aids to navigation around the globe, operation of icebreakers which clear the way for all polar expeditions, and enforcement of marine law and all aspects of merchant marine safety. In addition, the Coast Guard has responsibility for boating safety and marine environmental protection.

Smitten and besotted!

She has been gone for less than an hour and the void is tremendous. For seven glorious days we have been permitted to have our month-old granddaughter stay with us. We feel especially grateful to the paternal grandparents, as both the mother and father are from the same town and although every effort was made to share time, the princess slept here. I'll have to remember the rules when our sons marry. Girls usually head home.

The years melt away and the naive innocence of our own early parenting is recalled as expertise. We quickly forget how timid we were with our own newborns and our arms welcome the joyous bundle whenever we are permitted to coo, cuddle or feed. We were even entrusted with total baby care on a few occasions.

To say that we behaved with shameless abandonment of our senses is an understatement. We stared and made incoherent noises with stupid grins for hours on end. I don't think I have sung as many songs, back to back, since college days. My singing would put the birds to sleep from sheer boredom. From "Swing Lo Sweet Chariot" to "Embraceable You" that poor child heard it all. Perhaps she was simply too stunned to cry.

It is a magical time. Friends parade in and out and make appropriate comments about a perfect grandchild. We swallow it all and bask in her shadow. We attempt to show only a scant few pictures, but silently hope we will be asked to produce more. In their infinite wisdom the new parents allow us great latitude as they listen to how it was done in our day and our varying theories. They smile patiently and move ahead calmly being the parents they have learned to be. Their natural abilities astound us, as they will always be our children. But, oh what a lovely dimension there is in grandparenting. Our second grandchild is due in three weeks. Boy, oh boy, we can hardly wait! It's not all bad to grow old.

Cops thanked

To the Editor:

We were keeping our daughter's dog, a husky, on Aug. 14 when he ran away. As my husband was trying to catch him, two Farms police officers stopped and asked if they could help.

Their generous offer was quickly accepted, and they helped catch the dog. We would like to thank them for their kind and courteous help.

Disappointed over primary turnout

To the Editor:

As one of the successful candidates in the Grosse Pointe Farms City Council primary, I was concerned to see so few residents voting on Tuesday, Aug. 3.

A city council election may seem unimportant when compared to state and national elections, but council members directly affect our lives and the community in which we live on a daily basis. It is important that we all take responsibility for shaping our community by voting in every election, not just the "big" ones.

It is also time for the city administration to initiate a study of whether to reduce the number of precincts and polling places in the Farms. The number of residents casting ballots at the polls is simply too small to justify seven precincts at five separate locations. We should be able to reduce our $5 per voter cost by careful consolidation without inconveniencing anyone who wishes to vote.

The next opportunity for Farms residents to exercise their right to vote is Tuesday, Nov. 2. Here's hoping more of our friends and neighbors will participate in the process.

Farms never looked better

To the Editor:

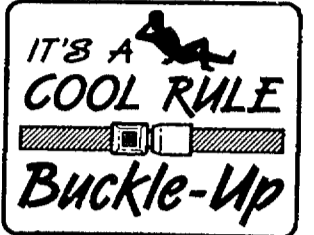

Congratulations to the City of Grosse Pointe Farms, its foundation, to former Mayor Joseph Fromm and to the Beautification Committee he created in 1987. The Farms has never looked prettier.

The first plantings at Moross and Mack and the shops on the Hill in 1987 were a great improvement, and today the beauty on Lakeshore and the Joy Bells Park is a real delight. It was so nice to watch all the improvements on Lakeshore — the mounding of soil, the sprinkler installation, the laying of sod, the plantings of trees and flowers. The old-time classic streetlights are frosting on the cake!

Those involved should be more than proud. We, Grosse Pointe residents, say, thank you for giving us a bit of beauty for our tax dollars. We really enjoy all your work.

They've had their immunizations. Now how about your kids?

Pet vaccinations are pretty easy to keep up with. But what about kids? They need a whole host of immunizations, which can sometimes change. We recommend keeping this list and following it closely:

Sure shots

Birth-18 months:

- 4 DPT (diphtheria, whooping cough, tetanus)
- 3-4 HIB (Haemophilus influenza)
- 3 oral polio
- 3 HBV (hepatitis B)*
- 1 MMR (measles, mumps, rubella)

Before starting kindergarten:

- 1 DPT (diphtheria, whooping cough, tetanus)
- 1 oral polio
- 1 MMR (measles, mumps, rubella)*

*These vaccines are new. Your child's doctor can tell you if he needs them.

Minimal risks

Parents sometimes avoid vaccines for fear that a bad reaction may be more harmful than the disease. Side effects are very rare, and pose far fewer risks than the diseases themselves. So although the list of immunizations is long, it will go a long way toward protecting your child for many years to come.

Park weighs crackdown on storing boats, RVs

By Jim Stickford
Staff Writer

An old proposal that would restrict storage of boats and other recreational vehicles in Grosse Pointe Park has been brought out of dry dock for consideration.

The ordinance, which failed to pass two years ago, would bar the storing of boats and recreational vehicles in residential yards for more than a day in the driveway behind the front building line.

"The intention of the proposal is to place recreational vehicles and boats in the rear yard area," said Krajniak. "This is the result of several complaints to the city by residents about vehicles being parked in side yards between homes for days and weeks at a time."

Krajniak said that two years ago, hearings were held on this issue. At the hearings, some citizens requested more restrictive rules, and others wanted no change in the ordinance.

The proposal was referred back to the ordinance review committee, which did not take action on the proposal for two years, Krajniak said. But citizen complaints over the summer, brought the issue to forefront. The committee referred the old proposal back to the council for consideration, saying it best balanced the interest of homeowners and recreational vehicle owners.

"This is similar to ordinances in the other Pointes," Krajniak said. "It is not, however, as severe as the Farms ordinance, where vehicles can only be stored in a garage. This would allow storage in the rear yard area, and limit storage to only one vehicle."

A planning commission public hearing on the proposed ordinance is scheduled for Sept. 21. If the planning panel approves the proposal, it will be sent back to the council for a vote, said Krajniak.

Joseph P. Bianco Jr. guest on 'Pointers with Prost'

Joseph P. Bianco, Jr., executive vice president of the Detroit Institute of Arts Founders Society, will be the guest on Grosse Pointe Cable's (Channel 32) "Pointers with Prost" beginning Monday, Aug. 30.

Bianco, who joined the DIA in 1984, is responsible for the overall management of the DIA Founders Society, the organization which provides major management operations and financial support to the institution.

Bianco and program host John Prost discuss the advantages of museum membership, and the sense of increased optimism at the DIA due to the institution's Partnership for Renewal. This multi-year operating plan has raised more than $17 million toward its $24-million goal, and has enabled the museum to extend weekend hours, reopen galleries and reinstate programs such as YouthArt, daytime art classes for young people.

"Pointers with Prost" airs at 2:30 p.m. and 4:30 a.m. Monday-Sunday; also at 7 p.m. on Monday, Wednesday, Friday and Sunday.

For additional information, call 881-2472.

A good read

Former Grosse Pointe Park resident Mabel Starrs, now of Alaska, took sometime from her visit here for a family reunion last week to enjoy some leisurely reading at the Farms Pier Park.

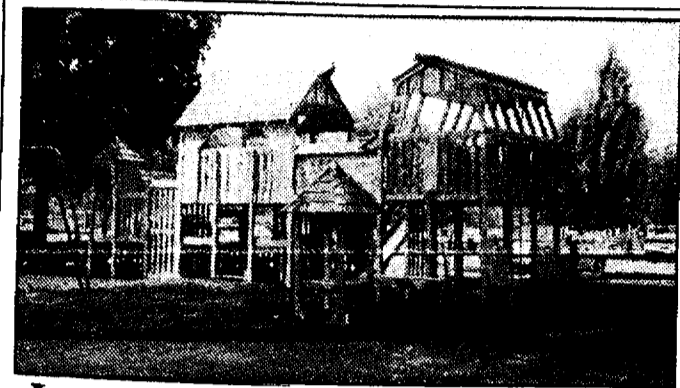

Reading is a great pastime. Check out any branch of the Grosse Pointe Public Library regularly.

Pick a nursery school that's good for children — and the parent

When choosing a nursery school, why not consider one that benefits parents as well as children?

Parent cooperative nursery schools, commonly referred to as co-ops, can be the best way to introduce 3- or 4-year-olds to a school environment and help moms and dads become better parents.

Typically, co-ops advocate a hands-on or learn-through-play type of learning in the classroom. A typical school day includes songs, crafts, dances, stories, sports and lots of time for a child's most important work — play. Schools are licensed by and teachers are certified by the Michigan Department of Social Services.

But what makes each co-op special are the contributions brought in by the parents. Parents are involved in every aspect of running the school from assisting the teacher in the classroom to serving on the school's board.

Police intercept family drama

Grosse Pointe Park public safety officers chased a speeding car through the Park on Aug. 19 and recovered a 16-year-old Detroit girl reported as a runaway.

The patrol officers saw the car traveling at a high rate of speed around noon in the St. Paul and Beaconsfield area. When the officers activated the car's emergency lights, the speeder turned onto Lakepointe, drove past Kercheval and into an alley. The chase ended when the speeding driver's path was blocked by a parked truck.

A second car containing the 16-year-old's family arrived at the scene and told police they were trying to recover their daughter, who has been hiding from them with her boyfriend, the speeding driver.

The boyfriend was arrested for reckless driving. The girl was taken to the police station where she said she had run away because her family had been physically abusing her. Police found physical evidence to support her claims and turned her over to Wayne County protective services.

Sign up for computer classes

Among its many program offerings, the Neighborhood Club will have computer classes available again this fall. Adults can choose from a variety of classes that provide instruction on IBM PC's and compatibles.

Word processing classes include Learning WordPerfect and Learning Windows WordPerfect. Instruction on spreadsheet programs is available with Learning Lotus 1-2-3 and Learning Excel. In addition, education may be obtained in other business applications software programs. There are four levels of DOS instruction available, and Learning Microsoft Windows is also offered.

The classes will take place for three-hour sessions, and may involve one or two sessions to complete the course. Class size is limited to allow participants to have hands-on experience with the computers.

All classes will be held in the Bodman Computer Center at the Neighborhood Club. Adult classes will begin in September, and are held from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m.

Registration may be made by mail or in person at the Neighborhood Club, 17150 Waterloo, Grosse Pointe. A Neighborhood Club membership is not required; nonmember class fees are available. For a brochure detailing class dates and times, call 885-4600.

Nursery Council Inc. "Not only are these parents actively involved in their children's education, but they are able to grow personally and professionally through their co-op experience as well."

Co-ops give stay-at-home parents a chance to sharpen some of their job skills through board or committee jobs such as publicity, treasurer or fundraising. Working parents are also changing the shape of many co-ops. "It's amazing how the skills that working parents bring with them have helped our school," says Warren Woods co-op teacher Beth Cronk. "And these parents do find time to spend with their children at school by job sharing, flexible work schedules and offering to babysit for each other."

Also, having mom or dad at school helps make nursery school a positive experience for the individual child.

"Having mom or dad there for their first school experience really helps with the separation anxiety," says Cronk. "Sometimes the parents have a harder time letting go than the children."

And since co-ops also recognize parents as a child's first and most influential teacher, a lot goes into parent education. Many schools have a parent library and schedule speakers on parenting topics.

"Keeping parents informed and educated gives children a real boost to what they're getting out of nursery school," says Hamilton.

By design, co-ops also foster greater accessibility to the teacher and closer relationships among families.

"Because families are more distanced today and because of work schedules, sometimes co-op is the first time parents and children get together to develop friendships. Personally, I found my co-op to be a wonderful support system when my children were younger and some of those people I met back then are still my dear friends today," says Hamilton.

To find out more about co-ops, call the Greater Detroit Cooperative Nursery Council, Inc. at 271-6110.

Local members of the Greater Detroit Cooperative Nursery Council include nurseries at Christ Church, Grosse Pointe Memorial Church and St. Paul Lutheran Church.

dorsi muscle from the back and reshaping and conditioning it into a pumping chamber for the heart, an otherwise weak heart is made strong.

Another experimental procedure Stephenson and his colleagues are working on is cardiomyoplasty, which involves wrapping the back muscle around a weakened heart.

An important part of the process is taking the back muscle — which like any other skeletal muscle is prone to fatigue — and stimulating it with electrical impulses so that it behaves like a heart muscle, which is fatigue resistant.

Both of these procedures are yet to be FDA approved but could greatly improve the life expectancy of people with heart disease, he said.

The skeletal muscle pump has been successfully implanted in laboratory dogs and sheep, but never in a human. "We've had animals with these pumps in for more than two years," Stephenson said. "We still have a few 'snafus' we have to solve before using these on people. But our research is going along very well and we are hoping soon that these can be used in place of an artificial heart or heart transplant."

Cardiomyoplasty has been performed on humans and is still in the trial stage. Stephenson is hoping the Detroit Medical Center will join five others in the United States currently performing the procedure.

"There are thousands of people dying each year of heart failure," he explained. "If we could develop a pump that would assist the heart, we could save a lot of these people. A lot of people are just sitting around short of breath; they can't play tennis, they can't even golf because their heart is only pumping two quarts of blood a minute.

"If we could use one of our skeletal muscle pumps and get them pumping three or four quarts of blood a minute, they could be much more active — out walking, playing tennis or golfing."

Neither of these procedures would be used to prevent heart disease, he noted. But both could possibly improve a patient's chances for survival by using the patient's own tissue, thereby decreasing the incidence of tissue rejection, he said.

"Another area where this will have an impact is on people waiting to have a heart transplant," he said. "Every year there are more people on the waiting list but there are no more hearts to be had."

He said each year about 2,000 people have heart transplants.

"Everyone has two back muscles and all you need is one, so there would be no waiting list," he noted.

Stephenson cannot take credit for coming up with the idea of using the back muscle as a heart muscle. The idea has been tried by other heart surgeons unsuccessfully.

While he was working as a professor at the University of Pennsylvania, Stephenson operated a research laboratory, learned about the idea and began experimenting with it himself.

Perhaps it's his love for heart surgery that prompted him to continue where others had found failure.

While in medical school at Marquette University in Wisconsin, his native state, Stephenson had the opportunity to work with a heart surgeon performing one of the first coronary bypass operations in the Midwest.

"Most of the recipients of bypass had died," he explained. "But our recipient lived more than eight years. She was listed in the Guinness Book of World Records."

It was that experience that convinced Stephenson to become a heart surgeon. Following his graduation from medical school, Stephenson completed his internship and residency at the University of Alabama medical school.

From Alabama, he went to the University of Pennsylvania where he was on staff as a professor for 12 years.

"A lot of people think that when you're a professor you don't operate," he said. "But the fact of the matter is that university surgeons frequently do as much or more heart surgery than heart surgeons in private practice. We train heart surgeons."

While Stephenson was in the midst of his research he was recruited to become the chief cardiothoracic surgeon for WSU and the DMC. He accepted the position in 1989 and moved his research lab to Michigan.

In addition to his medical training, teaching and research, Stephenson also managed to fit in 20 years with the U.S. Army Reserve. He was recruited as one of four surgeons to join the reserves during Vietnam and continued his service right through the Desert Storm conflict of 1991.

"I got my 20 years in and had put my paperwork in to get out," he said. "They decided to sit on my paperwork while Desert Storm was brewing. I got a phone call and was assigned for three months and assigned to Walter Reed hospital in Washington, D.C., as one of three main cardiothoracic surgeons for the war."

Retired from military service, Stephenson divides his time between his family, his career, his research and his love for car and boat racing (he is good friends with Mario Andretti and keeps Andretti's racing boat at the Grosse Pointe Yacht Club).

His wife Carol is a travel agent. His son William is a senior at Marquette University and his daughter Jennifer is a record store manager in Boulder, Colo.

To All GROSSE POINTE CABLE CUSTOMERS

New federal regulations governing cable rates take effect September 1, 1993. As a result, your cable bill will look different and the total amount you pay for cable TV service may change. Federal law now regulates most cable rates and charges except for programming offered on a per-program basis (such as pay-per-view) or per-channel basis. Examples of per-channel programming are premium services like HBO and SHOWTIME and any other cable channels available individually. Your monthly bill will now list charges separately for programming, equipment and service calls.

New Grosse Pointe Cable rates are listed below. Depending on the services you choose, your total bill may be more, less or about the same as you pay now.

Over the years, Grosse Pointe Cable has provided quality cable service at a fair price. Historically, the monthly charge for basic has been at least $1.00 less than most cable systems in Southeastern Michigan. We believe the new federally mandated rates verify that Grosse Pointe per September 1st rates were fair to our subscribers.

1994 Chevy; S-10 trucks bow

Chevrolet's compact S-10 pickup truck has been redesigned for 1994 and will be available at dealers the end of September. The new models are 10 inches longer, 3 inches wider and nearly 2 inches taller than this year's version. The '94s are more aerodynamic in appearance and have brand-new interiors with a change of trim, seats and instrument panel. The base engine is a new 2.2-liter 118-hp four. Alternate engines are a 165-hp 4.3-liter V-6, plus a 195-hp high-output version of that V-6. Rear-wheel or four-wheel anti-lock brakes are standard. Two new special options for 1994 are the ZR2 "wide stance" performance package for the 4X4 regular cab model, and a Super Sport performance package for the two-wheel drive regular cab model. New two-stage rear leaf springs, new front coil springs (or torsion bars with 4WD) and larger diameter shock absorbers improve the S-series pickup's ride and handling. Extended-cab models are available for two- and four-wheel drive, regular and long-bed trucks.

TLC for tires can add value to car

Each year Americans spend millions of dollars purchasing tires. Unfortunately, they don't spend much time taking care of them.

What most people don't realize is that tires add value to their cars when properly cared for. And proper tire maintenance involves very simple, routine tasks that can save consumers both money and headaches.

"Tires are some of the most important parts of a car, helping a car perform to its maximum capabilities," said Stan Cooper, consumer products marketing manager for Firestone. "On the other hand, they're also some of the most overlooked components of a car. By giving them a little attention every month, consumers can enhance the performance of their cars and make their tires last a lot longer."

So what can you do to provide your tires a little TLC? The first step in caring for your tires is keeping them properly inflated. The single greatest cause of tire damage is improper inflation — which results in early and irregular wear and also decreases gas mileage.

The car owner's manual will have the correct tire pressure for your tires. Investing in your own air pressure gauge is money well spent. Gauges are easy to use; your tire dealer can show you how. Firestone recommends that you check the air pressure in your tires at least once a month and perform visual checks regularly to detect possible leaks.

By having your car's alignment checked, you ensure that your wheels are moving in a straight line when you steer straight, therefore cutting down on irregular tread wear. Misalignment can result in tire damage as well as damage to your car's suspension system. And that can be costly.

Have your alignment checked about every 10,000 miles or at least once a year. Call ahead to make an appointment. This job usually takes less than an hour.

Balancing the tires is also very important. When the tires aren't balanced correctly, the car will behave a lot like the way a washing machine does when the clothes clump in one spot during the spin cycle. The washer rocks wildly from the uneven weight distribution. When the tire and wheel assemblies aren't balanced, you get an uncomfortable ride, the steering wheel will vibrate, and the tires and suspension system will be damaged as the tires bounce against the pavement.

Protect your investment by checking the inflation and tread depth on the tires each month and by having them rotated, aligned and balanced when necessary.

Gasoline additives cleanly helpful

To function at its best, the human heart needs clean arteries. Keeping them clean takes proper diet and regular exercise. Today's complex car engines demand similar care.

As deposits in human arteries can cause harm, deposits that build up in a car engine's working parts can be harmful, too.

Take carbon build-up for example. Carbon is a by-product of the engine's combustion process. Too much build-up can clog fuel injectors and lead to deposits in other parts of the engine such as intake valves and combustion chambers.

In the intake system and the combustion chamber, deposits can upset the air/fuel ratio, cause engine knock, power loss, cold start stalls and hesitation during acceleration.

These carbon deposits can also lead to higher exhaust emissions — an important point now that the oil and auto industries are addressing stronger federal clean air requirements.

"Deposits affect driveability by altering our ability to control air/fuel ratios in the engine," said James Spearot, head of the fuels and lubricant department for General Motors' North American Operations Research and Development Center. "Deposits in the intake system and combustion chamber can increase hydrocarbon and carbon monoxide emissions. One theory is that deposits absorb hydrocarbons, and those that don't burn efficiently eventually come out in the exhaust."

Gasoline detergent additives help limit deposit formation and help keep the engine cleaner and newer, Spearot said.

In compliance with the federal Clean Air Act, the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency has proposed rules to require the oil industry to sell detergent gasoline that prevents deposit accumulation in engines and fuel supply systems by 1995. The EPA is also considering a keep-clean requirement for combustion chambers.

To help meet the new requirements, the oil industry has improved detergent additives in gasoline. Mobil, which has long promoted its detergent gasolines, recently introduced a new synthetic detergent additive to address problems cited by auto builders: carbon deposits on piston tops and cylinder heads.

Michael J. McNally, a research engineer at Mobil's automotive research lab in Paulsboro, N.J., says Mobil's new additive is specially formulated to keep combustion chambers cleaner, which provides several benefits.

"Reduced combustion chamber deposits mean reduced engine knock, less power loss and fewer emissions," McNally said.

Like the human heart, today's complex car engine needs proper diet and careful maintenance to keep functioning at its best.

New engine for '94 Jaguar XJS

The '94 Jaguar XJS coupe and convertible began arriving in the United States over the past several weeks. A 6.0-liter V-12 engine with new 4-speed electronically-controlled automatic transmission is available in the series. The XJS coupe with base 4.0-liter six is priced at $51,950, while the convertible version is $59,950. The V-12 models will feature a functional rear deck spoiler. A 5-speed manual transmission mated to a firmer, sportier suspension, will be available on the 6-cylinder XJS.

We are now installing Pella windows. Energy efficiency, structural integrity and long-term durability have become hallmarks of Pella products. No wonder more architects recommend Pella windows than any other window.

If you think you have to live with sinus problems, we'd like to clear something up.

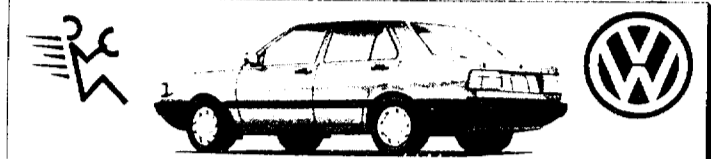

Congestion...Headaches...Post-Nasal Drip...Facial Pressure...Sinus Pain...Allergies...

Unfortunately, many people with chronic sinus symptoms think the best relief is found on the shelves of their neighborhood drugstore. But the truth is, many sinus symptoms can now be easily treated and corrected at their source, once properly diagnosed.

At the St. John Laser Center of Southeast Michigan, there are physicians who specialize in the diagnosis and treatment of sinus problems. Using advanced endoscopic equipment, they can look into your nasal cavities to determine the exact cause of your symptoms and your treatment options. These may include medication or a less-invasive surgical technique, such as sinusoscopic surgery, using lasers and other appropriate equipment.

If you're living with chronic sinus symptoms, call for a referral to a laser trained physician at the St. John Laser Center of Southeast Michigan. We believe you'll find this approach to sinus problems a breath of fresh air. 1-800-962-7777

Attention: parents of frosh

A special orientation program for parents of ninth-graders will be held at 7 p.m., Wednesday, Sept. 15, in the Grosse Pointe South High School gym.

The evening's program will begin with a general session in the gym and will conclude with small group meetings led by South's five counselors.

Members of the South administrative team will be introduced and will briefly discuss their major duties and responsibilities.

Other general session speakers scheduled include Joan Coyle, Mothers' Club president; Tom Recht, Boosters' Club president; Will Stephens, Student Association president; and Ranae Ikard, freshman class advisor.

The small group meetings of parents with the counselors of their students will last about one hour and will give parents an opportunity to meet their student's counselor. They will also give counselors a chance to address questions and concerns parents may have.

Johnson's a winner

Allison Johnson, an eighth-grader at St. Clare of Montefalco Catholic School, received a scholarship award of $300 along with a certificate and an engraved medal for her high scores in the ACT test as part of the Midwest Talent Search Program 1993.

The talent search program is directed by the Center for Talent Development of Northwestern University and is available each year to talented students throughout the Midwest. Johnson's reading score of 36 placed her first and her composite score of 29 placed her second among the more than 3,853 seventh-grade students who took the ACT test earlier this year.

Playtime!

The children at Grosse Pointe Baptist Community Nursery School were smiling after Mr. and Mrs. Pete Winkler donated a playscape to help the youngsters develop large motor skills (running, jumping, climbing, sliding and balance). Children also will learn how to cooperate and work with a group. The school is at Old Eight Mile and Mack in Grosse Pointe Woods and is open to children around the community from ages 30 months through 5 years. The school is currently accepting new registrations for fall.

They had a plan

Third graders in Janet Thompson's class at Kerby Elementary School learned first-hand about how communities operate. They elected a city council and a mayor, established a planning commission and hired builders and road construction engineers to help them erect a Lego city. The class welcomed a guest businessman, Yee Tom of the Golden Dragon restaurant, to deliver a presentation. The students also had help from senior volunteer Betty Scherer, center, who recently celebrated her 86th birthday and served as local historian, telling the students about how Grosse Pointe Farms has grown as a community through the years. Celebrating with Scherer are, left to right, Robert Rogers, Laura Cole, Shane Wilson and Tim Baccus.

What next for 389 petitioners?

By Shirley A. McShane
Staff Writer

Two months and 5,000 signatures later, those who hope to save 389 are taking five.

"All we can do is sit tight and wait and see," said Jim Perry, spokesman for the Concerned Citizens of Grosse Pointe, a citizens group that has collected 5,477 signatures and submitted a petition to the Grosse Pointe school board on Aug. 16 asking it not to sell its administrative offices without a vote of the people.

The group has been vocal at school board meetings since April, when the board began discussing whether to save or sell the aging offices at 389 St. Clair.

Superintendent Ed Shine recommended the board put the buildings up for sale and use the proceeds to modify space at North and South high schools and Barnes elementary and to build a garage behind Parcels Middle School.

A majority of school board members are in favor of selling the property as a cost-saving measure.

Opponents of the plan warn the district that to sell the buildings, constructed in 1906 and 1915, would be to give away a piece of Grosse Pointe history, to lose additional land which is at a premium in the Pointes and that it would be cheaper to renovate the existing facilities, spreading the expenses over a five- to-10-year period.

The board voted 5-2 in June to advertise for bids to sell the buildings.

Concerned Citizens of Grosse Pointe has been collecting signatures since June 14 that ask the school board to hold a special election.

After presenting the petitions to the board, Perry made another suggestion that he said would save time and money.

"We asked the board (Aug. 16) to rescind their two proposals that appeared on their records of April 19 and thereafter," Perry said. "If they rescind the proposals, then it's finished and there's no need to have an election."

"It is a waste of time to drag this out."
But time is needed to gather information to make the best decision, said school board president Timothy Howlett.

In addition to the petitions, the school board also has to consider if it wishes to accept any of the bids submitted Tuesday, Aug. 24, and if it will honor the requests for additional time made by the mayors of Grosse Pointe City and Grosse Pointe Farms.

"We won't do anything certainly until after the bids are opened and I think we have to get some specificity in terms of the municipalities' time request," Howlett said. "Then the board will discuss what to do with all these pieces of information. What the result will be at the board level with all those pieces of information, I don't know."

Although the board has not decided whether it will consider the petition, Doug West, attorney for the school district, said the board has no legal obligation to do so.

According to section 217 of the Michigan School Code of 1976, a special election shall not be called unless the question to be submitted may be decided by the school electors. Such questions, West said, are those relating to floating bonds, increasing millages or consolidating school districts.

"The statute makes it clear that not every kind of issue that comes before the board may be decided by the electors," he said. "There are any number of decisions that could come before the board that the electors may be interested in the outcome of, but the responsibility to make the decision is not with the electors."

The Grosse Pointe Public School System has activated a to keep residents informed on the progress of contract negotiations between the Board of Education and the Grosse Pointe Education Association.

2. That Section 8.61 of Chapter 101 of Title VIII of the Grosse Pointe City Code is hereby repealed and the following Section substituted therefor:

8.61 Changes in code.

The following sections and subsections of the National Electrical Code, are hereby amended or deleted as set forth and additional sections and subsections are added as indicated, and such changes shall control and supersede the specific provisions of the National Electrical Code. Subsequent section numbers used in this chapter shall refer to the like numbered sections of the National Electrical Code.

Section 210-11 added to read as follows:

210-11 Circuit interconnection: Neutral and ungrounded circuit conductors for two-, three- or four-wire circuits shall originate at the same outlet or panel. Neutral and/or ungrounded conductors for circuits shall not be tapped from different locations in the wiring system.

Section 210-22(a) amended to read as follows:

210-22(a) Motor-operated and combination loads: Where a circuit supplies only motor-operated loads, Article 430 shall apply. Where a circuit supplies only air conditioning, refrigeration equipment, or both, Article 440 shall apply. Fixed appliances with motors larger than one-eighth horse power rating shall be connected to circuits supplying motors only.

Section 210-50(c) amended to read as follows:

210-50(c) Laundry outlet: Laundry equipment duplex receptacle in dwelling units shall be mounted on the wall not higher than forty-eight (48) inches (1.22 m) above the floor within six (6) feet (1.83 m) of the intended location of the equipment. A laundry lift pump of less than one-sixth horse power shall be permitted to be connected to the laundry circuit.

Section 210-52(a) amended to read as follows:

210-52(a) General provisions: In every kitchen, family room, dining room, living room, parlor, library, den, sun room, bedroom, recreation room, or similar rooms of dwelling units, receptacle outlets shall be installed so that no point along the floor line in any wall space in more than six (6) feet (1.83 m), measured horizontally, from an outlet in that space, including any wall space two (2) feet (610 mm) or more in width and the wall space occupied by either fixed or sliding panels, or both, in exterior walls. The wall space afforded by fixed room dividers, such as free-standing bar-type counters or railings, shall be included in the six-foot (1.83 m) measurement.

As used in this section a "wall space" shall be considered a wall unbroken along the floor line by doorways, fireplaces, and similar openings. Each wall space two (2) or more feet (610 mm or more) wide shall be treated individually and separately from other wall spaces within the room. A wall space shall be permitted to include two (2) or more walls of a room (around corners) where unbroken at the floor line.

210-52(d) Bathrooms: At least one duplex receptacle outlet shall be installed on the same wall as each wash basin or on a wall immediately adjacent to each wash basin. The receptacle shall not be more than four (4) feet (1.22 m) from any wash basin and shall be installed not less than thirty (30) inches (762 mm) and not more than forty-eight (48) inches (1.22 m) above the floor and rated 15 amperes, one hundred twenty five (125) volts. Serenade to a T-bird finally finds receptive audience

Thunderbird Blues, indeed!
The story for the daily newspaper was written. It started out to be a piece about songs about cars, or at least tunes in which cars play a role.

Fine. "Merry Oldsmobile," "Little 409," "Tumble on a Rumble Seat," and so forth.

Then came the editor's photo request. Let's get the disc jockey from the local public television station, with his guitar, singing "Thunderbird Blues" to — what else? — a T-bird.

One doesn't sing to a late-model Thunderbird. It's gotta be a vintage one. If not a two-seater from '55-'57, then one of the squared-off four-seaters.

A memory search was followed by some phoning. Former Ford dealer Dick Duncan has T-birds in his growing collection at The Old Garage behind the Jerome-Duncan dealership in Sterling Heights.

How about a '66 convertible, suggested Allan Schoenberg at the dealership. Perfect, we said.

Schoenberg said Wally Tenyson, who keeps the collection in top-flight condition, had left for the day. We, of course, needed it the following afternoon. Schoenberg said he'd confirm in the morning.

A piece of cake. A few more phone calls secured Robert Jones, blues specialist, musician, and Saturday morning disc jockey at WDET-FM. The photographer was scheduled. Everything was in order.

Early on Friday, Schoenberg called. Wally couldn't possibly have the Bird ready in time to drive it downtown for a picture. Apologies were exchanged. Panic set in. Four hours until the shoot. We've got a disc jockey and a photographer, but no Bird, except for an '86 that needs a bath and a soul.

The preceding day someone had suggested Bill Gill at the T-Bird Store. He was back from sick leave Friday morning and anxious to help.

"I've had my cars photographed many times, but that was either here or at a studio," Gill said. "I wouldn't drive them downtown for this."

Whoever referred us to Gill had mentioned that his early

Autos

Birds are in 100-point, better-than-new condition. So his response was logical, if disappointing. Then Gill searched his memory bank and began suggesting names of T-bird collectors. "Try Dan Domengoni," Gill said. "He's got a beautiful red '57."

Dan, a Detroit cop, was at work. His wife, Sharon, said she'd call his beeper and find out if he would be available. "We really like to help out whenever we can," she said. Twenty minutes later Sharon phoned back. Dan couldn't get away. Sorry. Maybe next time.

Among the other names provided by T-bird Shop owner Gill was Mark Sitko. Sitko answered the phone on the third ring. We need a vintage T-bird in just a couple of hours, downtown in front of the Detroit Institute of Arts. Can you help? Sitko took the ball and began running.

After only 10 minutes the phone rang. Sitko had done the impossible. Bill Attard was going to drive his 10th Anniversary Edition 1965 Thunderbird up to the DIA from his home in Taylor. We'd meet on the circular drive off Woodward Avenue at 2 p.m.

And a minute before the appointed hour, the limited-edition beige and copper (actually, "ember glow") four-seater glided up to the museum. Attard piloted; Sitko co-piloted. This car's instrumentation and interior design demand a crew of two. Generous chrome accents, myriad buttons and switches — it was so sixties American, rather like some of us lived, or wished we could, moving to the upper end of the middle class with our fancy toys and clothes and homes.

Attard joined Ford Motor Co. long before his '65 had been designed and built. With the company 39-1/2 years, he spent more than half of his long career at the Allen Park pilot plant. That's where proposed and actual new models are developed for final production, or obscurity. Retired since 1989, Attard still declined to talk about the many vehicles that never saw the light of day.

He was more interested in showing off his original-condition anniversary Thunderbird. With 50,000 miles on the odometer, it looks and drives like new, he said.

"They only built 4,500 of these," Attard said. "I've had mine 10 years. I keep it in a heated garage. It has never been outside in a Michigan winter."

Sitko said Ford also produced some white-on-white 10th Anniversary Thunderbirds. This was the fourth generation Bird, he said. The two-seaters were built during 1955-57. The first four-seaters bowed in 1958. They were changed in 1961 and again in 1964. In 1967 a major re-styling included the addition of the first four-door model, Landau Sedan, complete with suicide doors, vinyl top and, of course, lots of decorative trim.

Attard's T-bird has sequential turn signals. Reminiscent of the moving lights on a marquis, they were hot stuff in 1965, but only lasted a couple of years in production models. Attard thought they may have been found too confusing and therefore a safety hazard.

Thunderbirds continued to grow and change in the 1970s, and, many will agree, not for the better. Ford kind of lost its way, turning the hugely popular two-seater into a two-door, four-passenger monstrosity by the time the nameplate was 20 years old.

Instead of a car designed with a vision in mind, it became a reaction to public tastes. It came close to rediscovering itself in 1984 when the aerodynamic jellybean body style was introduced.

Attard's Thunderbird won first place in a collector car event in Taylor, he said. Today it drew many admiring looks, and the attention of a police cruiser — we thought because we were parked where we shouldn't have been. But the officers in their new Crown Victoria were more interested in chatting about the 10th Anniversary Edition Bird than in scribbling Bill a ticket. In fact, they said, "Stay as long as you like."

Bill Attard's 1965 Thunderbird classic puts a song on the lips of WDET-FM blues disc jockey Robert Jones.

In a rare moment of perfect coordination, the photographer showed. Then Robert Jones pulled up with WDET-FM marketing director Diane Taylor and Bernice, a steel guitar named for his wife.

Jones strummed and posed. The pictures were taken. The group dispersed into the hot August Friday afternoon.

Jones assured us that blues aren't always sad songs. It's a style of rhythm and harmony. 'Bout the only unhappy part of the afternoon was seeing the beautiful ember-glow-and-beige Thunderbird head back home to Taylor.

Pardo honored for works

Camilo Pardo of Grosse Pointe Park was honored for his automotive art during the 1993 Concours d'Elegance Art Reception held at the Somers Collection. Pardo competed against nationally renowned automotive artists from across the country for this honor.

Pardo's work was displayed at the Somers Collection prior to Concours d'Elegance and was later auctioned during the black tie fundraiser at Meadow Brook Hall.

McMillan rowing toward an Olympic berth

By Bob St. John
Staff Writer

The United States Naval Academy has a tradition of excellence and honor second to none in the minds of every officer who graduates.

Bradley McMillan, a Grosse Pointe City resident, utilized his opportunities and recently graduated from the Naval Academy in Annapolis, Md.

"I wanted to go to the Naval Academy because they had an excellent rowing team with a long standing tradition that dates back to Civil War days," McMillan, 22, said.

"I grew up with the military, and one of my grandfathers was a 1931 graduate of the Naval Academy."

McMillan began to row at the end of his sophomore year at Grosse Pointe South High School. He'd awaken every morning at 5 a.m. and go down to the Detroit Boat Club with his friends and row.

"When I first began rowing, it was just to socialize with my friends and have a little fun," McMillan said. "But when I began rowing at the Naval Academy, I realized that I had to dedicate myself to the sport, and maybe I could be the best."

He rowed at the No. 2 position in the eight-man shell with the Navy as part of the highly acclaimed Eastern Association of Rowing. The Naval Academy rowed against the likes of Dartmouth, Pennsylvania, Rutgers and other east coast schools.

He said the eight-man shell was the premier event in rowing competition, but other classes of rowing include the two- and four-man shells.

McMillan graduated with a bachelor's of science degree in oceanography and was awarded the prestigious Rusty Callow Award, which is presented to a rowing team member who showed a true dedication and sacrifice to the team above and beyond the average effort.

"I'm very proud to receive the Rusty Callow Award," McMillan said. "I am very serious about making the Olympic team, and receiving the honor should help my chances at accomplishing the feat."

He said his rigorous schedule at the Naval Academy should be an advantage to his chances at making the U.S. Olympic team.

"Everything I did in the Navy was on a strict schedule," he said. "I would get up at 5:30 a.m. and eat breakfast at 6, then it was off to classes until 3. After classes, I rowed until 6:30, then it was off to eat dinner and finally I would do homework until 11. I followed the same routine for four years."

McMillan competed in the World University Games in Buffalo. He qualified as a member of the U.S. rowing team's second boat, which competes in the World University, Goodwill and Pan Am games.

He hopes to improve enough to earn a spot on the U.S. rowing team's first boat which competes in the summer Olympics.

He said that the United States has one of the best rowing programs in the world due to the excellent collegiate teams in the United States especially on the east coast.

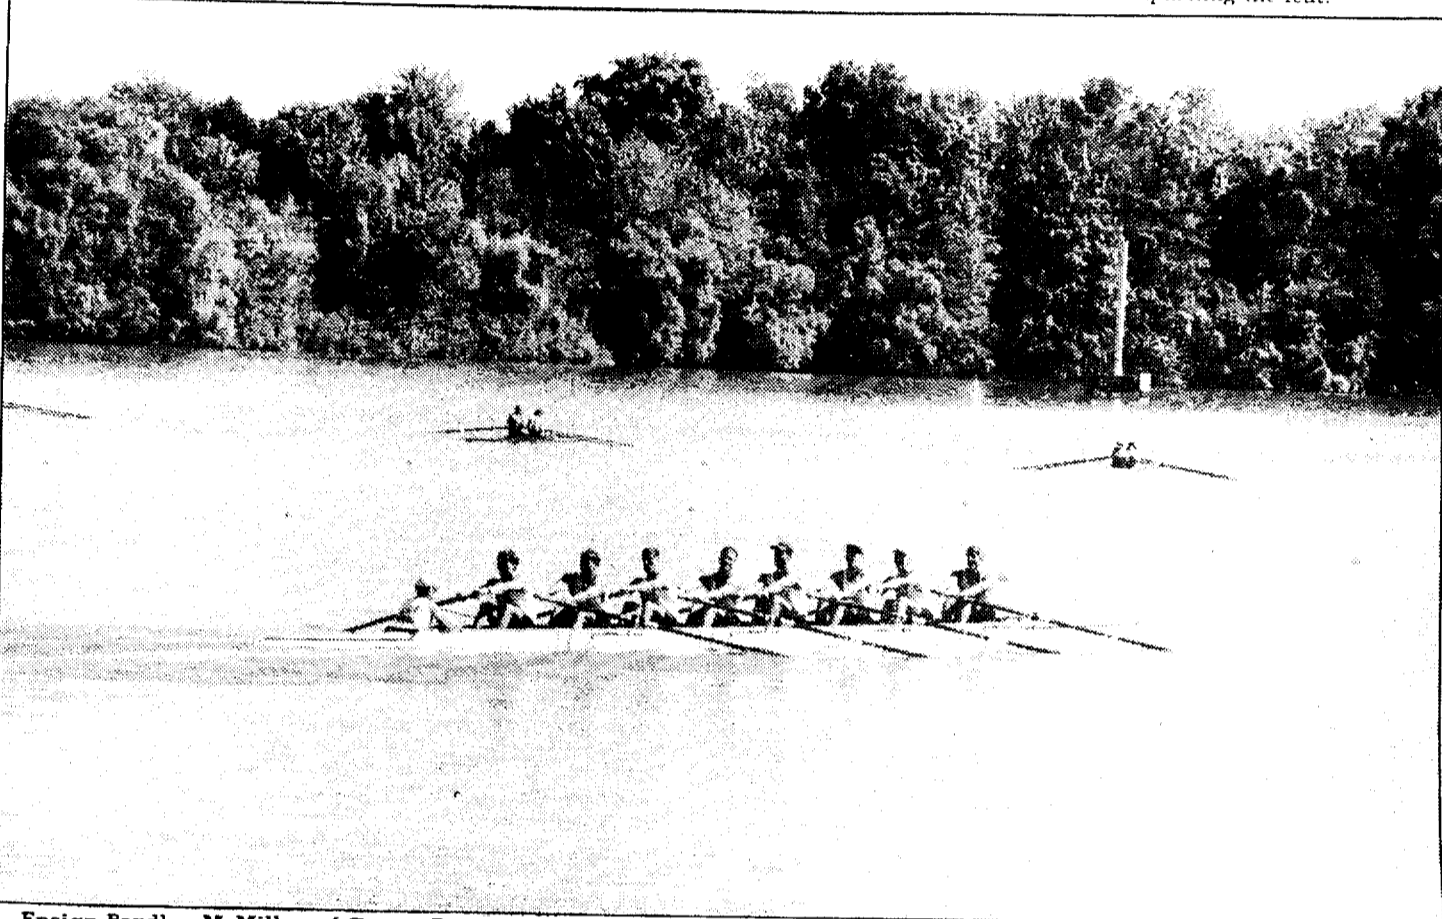

The collegiate schedule runs every weekend from April through June.

"United States rowers get better and better every year," McMillan said. "I think it won't be long until the United States is the best in the world in rowing."

McMillan is currently on leave, but will soon go back to the Navy where he will attend supply school (business school) for three years.

After supply school, McMillan plans on a career in business, environmental consulting or a combination of both.

Anyone is interested in rowing may contact Kenneth McMillan at 343-2163.

Ensign Bradley McMillan of Grosse Pointe City, second from right, was a member of the United States rowing team's boat that competed in the recent World University Games in Buffalo and won the gold medal in the Men's Eight Heavyweight division. McMillan is a recent graduate of the U.S. Naval Academy.

Park Little Leaguers reach regional semifinal

Grosse Pointe Park's bid to make a trip to Williamsport, Pa., for the Little League World Series ended in Indianapolis, but not without a strong fight by the Grosse Pointe team.

The Park squad, which won the District 6 and Michigan state championships, advanced to the final four of the 12-state Central regional before dropping a 9-8 decision to Illinois in the semifinals.

Illinois lost 3-1 to Ohio in the championship game. Ohio is one of four United States teams playing in the Little League World Series, which concludes Saturday in Williamsport.

Grosse Pointe got off to a rough start, losing 4-1 to Nebraska in a game that took two days to complete because of rain delays.

Park pitcher Charlie Braun was working on a one-hitter in a scoreless game when the rain came. Nebraska took advantage of an error and a single in the downpour to score its first run before the game was suspended. When it resumed the next day, Nebraska scored three more runs.

Grosse Pointe had trouble hitting Nebraska hurler Matt Janson, who pitched a four-hitter. Braun was 2-for-2 and drove in Mark Weber with the Park's only run on a fifth-inning double. Tony Tocco had Grosse Pointe's other two hits.

The Park bounced back in Game 2, eliminating North and South Dakota 6-1. Adam Hess pitched a three-hitter for Grosse Pointe and his teammates supported him with a four-run second inning.

Hess started the rally with a walk, Dan Battjes singled to center and Trevor Szymanski followed with an RBI single to left field. John Berschback walked and Tocco, Braun and Jason Mangol each collected RBI singles.

Grosse Pointe added two more runs in the sixth. Battjes banded out his second hit and moved to third on Colin Bakewell's double to right-center. Ben Schaefer followed with a two-run double down the left field line.

In Game 3, the Park jumped on Minnesota with two runs in the second inning and three in the third on the way to a 5-3 victory that eliminated the losers.

Colin Morawski walked and Hess lined a home run to give Grosse Pointe a 2-0 lead. In the third, Mangol hit a three-run homer after Berschback singled and Braun doubled.

Berschback had two hits, while Jeremy Linne and Schaefer came through with pinch hits.

Mike Bramlage played well at third base and Braun made several excellent plays at shortstop to support Mangol's four-hitter. Hess made two outstanding catches in center field when he robbed Minnesota's Tom Dixon and Jermar Larkins on consecutive drives that appeared headed over the fence.

In Game 4, Grosse Pointe sent Nebraska home with a 3-1 victory.

Braun pitched a three-hitter to win the rematch.

The Park scored twice in the second inning. Mangol led off with a single, Morawski walked and Mangol scored on Battjes' grounder to second. Schaefer drove in the second run with a single.

In the fifth, Tocco led off with a double, Braun bunted him to third and Mangol drove him in with his third hit of the game. Weber, Hess and Braun had Grosse Pointe's other hits.

Mangol made the fielding play of the game when he raced to the fence to rob Nebraska's cleanup hitter of a home run in the sixth inning.

There were now four teams remaining in the regional — Michigan, Ohio, Illinois and Missouri.

Top guards

The Grosse Pointe Woods team of Matt Beal, Karen Dundon, Lauren McDonald and Andy Walter won the first Grosse Pointe lifeguard competition at Neff Park. Each of the five Pointes sent teams consisting of two male and two female guards. The competition included a written exam, a CPR accuracy test and several physical events testing life-guarding skills in the water. The purpose of the event was to promote teamwork and competition among lifeguards and to increase the awareness of accuracy, speed and knowledge needed to be the best lifeguards. Pictured are each of the competitors. In the front row, from left, are Jenny Paolucci, Jeff Jogan and Lauren McDonald. In the second row, from left, are Linda Krieg, Mike Hoey and Paul Reaser. The third row, from left, is Rachel Smith, Ashley Moran, Gretchen Miriani, Kim Apple, John Gamrat, Susan Llewellyn, Tina Higel and Karen Dundon. In the rear, from left, are Steve Booher, Pat Cliff, Brad Dunlap, Greg Corbett, Andy Walter and Matt Beal.

South booters face tough foes

By Chuck Klonke
Sports Editor

There won't be an easy break-in period for the new players on Grosse Pointe South's boys soccer team.

"We have a lot of question marks on the team, but a lot of those questions will be answered this weekend," said coach Mark Christensen, who is beginning his fifth season at the helm of the Blue Devils.

South will play in the eight-team Country Day Invitational, which starts Friday when the Blue Devils face Farmington at 5:30 p.m.

"All eight teams were over .500 last year and they all have a strong soccer tradition," Christensen said. "There aren't any weak sisters in the group."

South won a Macomb Area Conference division championship the last three seasons and was runner-up in Christensen's first year as coach. Last year the Blue Devils overcame a 1-4-2 start and finished with a 14-4-2 record that included 13 straight victories. The string ended with a 1-0 loss to eventual state Class A champion De La Salle in the district championship game.

"We have some players back with varsity experience, but we don't have the big gun up front that we had last year," Christensen said. "Our top returning players are (midfielder) Tim Reynaert and (sweeper-stopper) Andy Ostrowski. How they play determines a lot of how well we'll play."

Mike Reynaert, who scored a school-record 32 goals during an All-State season in 1992, will be playing at the University of Dayton this year so Christensen has to find the scorers to replace him.

and Karl Davids, who is up from the junior varsity which finished 16-3 last year.

"Ryan is an excellent baseball player, too, so he spent the summer playing baseball instead of soccer," Christensen said. "It's hard to measure how the JV kids will do because the competition is so much different at the varsity level."

The strength of South's team is at midfield where juniors Jake Howlett and P.J. Tannian, who played on the varsity as sophomores, join Tim Reynaert.

"We'll win most of our games by controlling the midfield," Christensen said. "Howlett, Reynaert and Tannian played soccer during the summer against competition that was tougher than they'll face during the high school season. Hopefully, they'll play like seniors because of their experience."

Dan Wolking and Jeff Case, sophomores up from the junior varsity, are candidates to start at defense positions.

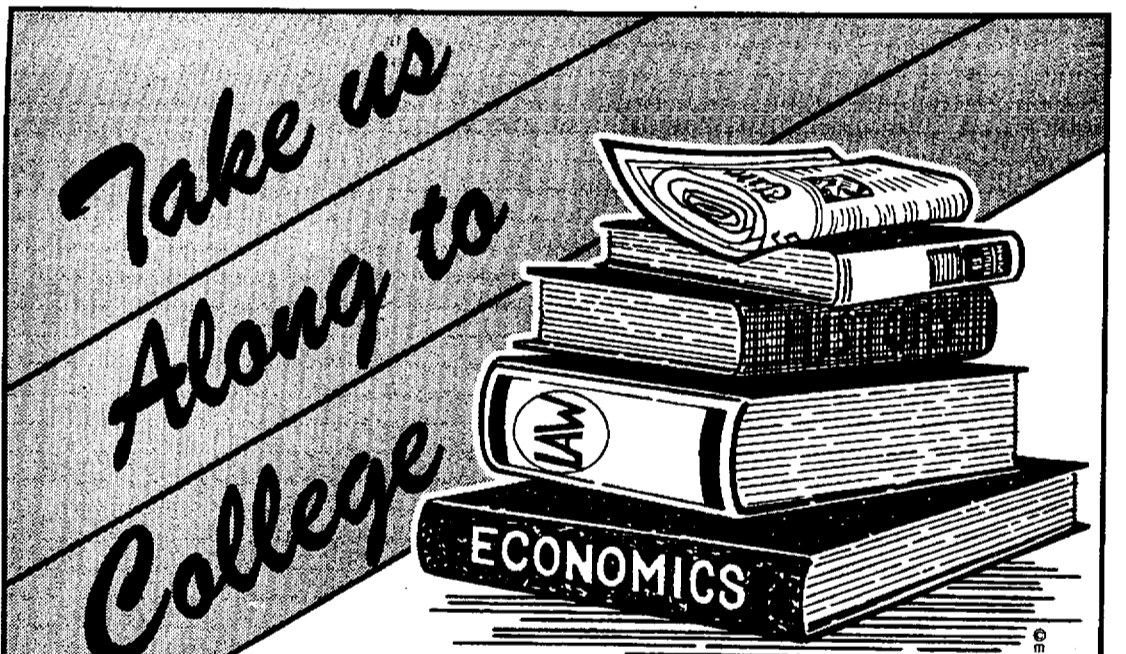

Jeff Goudie, who played more than half of South's games when All-State goalkeeper Cris Dowe was injured last year, returns as the starting netminder.

"He's looked good in the pre-season," Christensen said.

Another returning veteran is John Mullin, who filled in at several positions last year.

"We might even move him up front if we struggle there," Christensen said. "He's one of our most aggressive players."

The schedule doesn't get any easier once South gets past the Country Day tournament. Non-league games with Brother Rice, Washington Eisenhower and De La Salle are on the docket before the Blue Devils open the MAC White season against Romeo on Sept. 15.

PLEASE DON'T DELAY! SPAY OR NEUTER YOUR PET TODAY!

An altered pet is a healthier and happier companion. Also, it spares you the grief and pain of having puppies and kittens destroyed when no homes can be found. Countless numbers of sweet, innocent little ones are euthanized every day in shelters across the country because a pet wasn't spayed or neutered. If we cut down on the numbers of unwanted litters being born, we will also cut down on the number of abandoned, lost and unwanted animals to destroy.

Anorexia victims are typically teenage, pre-teen girls

By Susan Fleming
Special Writer

Dawn, who is 5 feet 7 inches tall, once weighed only 85 pounds. It was a dark and troubled period of her life.

Dawn teaches a self-help class at Cottage Hospital in Grosse Pointe for others afflicted with what she describes as "the terrible hell" of anorexia.

Anorexia is an eating disorder that can cause its victims, mostly young teen girls — but also some men — to nearly starve themselves to death. The median age of anorexics is 14.

Dawn is 29 years old and lives in St. Clair Shores. She expects to battle anorexia and occasional bouts with another eating disorder, bulimia, for the rest of her life.

She wants to help others who are driven by depression and compulsive behavior to starve themselves to the point of suffering severe physical ailments.

Wayne State University Medical School wants to help, too, and has just been awarded a $500,000 grant to study ways of treating anorexia. The rare national study, headed by Arthur L. Robin, Ph.D. and professor of clinical children's psychology, and Amy Baker Dennis, Ph.D. and a research associate in pediatrics, seeks to attract anorexic girls from the Detroit area, including the Pointes.

Robin has seen the eating disorder cause people to lose as much as 20 or 25 pounds as they refuse to eat or eat barely enough to stay alive. A recent survey conducted under an earlier $500,000 grant from the National Institute of Mental Health showed girls as young as the third grade are susceptible to anorexia.

More girls at an earlier age are being afflicted with severe eating disorders, said Robin, whose work has earned Wayne State national prominence in the study of anorexia.

Girls between the ages of 11 and 19 who have been diagnosed with anorexia nervosa and who live at home with at least one parent are eligible for the study, which includes 10 to 18 months of free outpatient psychotherapy, free dietary counseling and low-cost outpatient medical care.

America's obsession with thinness — especially among women — is contributing to the increasing problem with eating disorders like anorexia, Robin said. The baby boomer generation's preoccupation with good health is also a contributing factor, he said.

About 40 girls will be treated as part of the study. Seven are enrolled now, including one from the Grosse Pointe area.

"In our culture, femininity is linked to thinness," Robin said. "Weight is our obsession."

A typical anorexic may begin like any other young girl starting a diet, according to doctors. The teen or pre-teen girl goes to camp and decides to launch a diet. That's normal. What becomes abnormal is when the girl becomes so preoccupied with dieting that, even after losing weight, she remains obsessed with the notion of being fat.

That obsession drives her to near starvation. And all the while, according to Robin and other doctors who treat eating disorders, the young woman remains convinced she's still fat.

"We will work with families together or teens separately to bring them back to a normal weight and treat the underlying disorder," Robin said.

The cause of anorexia, which involves at least a 15 percent loss of body weight, is often depression, compulsive behavior and a dysfunctional family.

If treated, 90 percent of anorexics can be cured. If left untreated, the condition can become so severe that it's life-threatening and hospitalization becomes necessary.

The study's goal is to find better ways for health care workers such as psychologists, psychiatrists and family doctors to effectively treat anorexia.

Dawn, however, has battled anorexia and bulimia for 20 of her 29 years. Today she still has to see a nutritionist to make sure she's consuming enough calories. Often, though, she's repulsed by food.

on the staff of Bon Secours Hospital, said statistics show an increasing number of women being diagnosed with anorexia. The St. Clair Shores physician sees anorexics when the women have problems with menstruation — one of the physical complications of anorexia.

Jordan has these suggestions for teens contemplating a diet:

- Consult Weight Watchers or another dieting group when you decide to slim down.
- Crash dieting isn't the way to lose weight.

- You should always look at yourself and get feedback from others so you can recognize when "enough is enough."

- Talk to a physician first and get a sensible diet to follow.

- If you recognize the onset of an eating disorder, get treatment early before your health is threatened or you have to be hospitalized.

"If you go too long without eating properly, it becomes more and more difficult to eat," Jordan said. "It's more difficult to swallow. The body feels bloated. The stomach shrinks and the individual can eat very, very little or sometimes can't eat."

Dr. Dan Guyer, a psychiatrist on the staff of Cottage Hospital, is currently treating a half dozen patients with anorexia or other eating disorders. He calls it the ultimate control illness.

"The trigger behind this is control. It's control over their lives. Eating becomes one thing they can control while other things are going wrong," Guyer said. "Anorexia will often occur more in affluent suburbs where there is a heightened preoccupation with appearance and weight and food."

For more information about the Wayne State University study, call Robin at 745-4892 or 745-4878.

Warning signs

The following symptoms may indicate the presence of anorexia nervosa, a life-threatening disease in which the victim is obsessed with thinness and may deliberately starve herself.

- A distorted body image. The victim thinks she is fat, even though she appears underweight.

- Absence of menstruation for three or more months.

- The victim is obsessed with thoughts of food — shopping for, cooking and preparing it — but not eating.

- Depression.
- Moodiness.
- Perfectionism.
- Weight loss of 15 percent or more.

"It's unconscious," she says. "I still struggle with it. I came from an abusive, alcoholic home. All the women in my family were obese and I got this idea in my head that I would be just like them if I didn't starve myself."

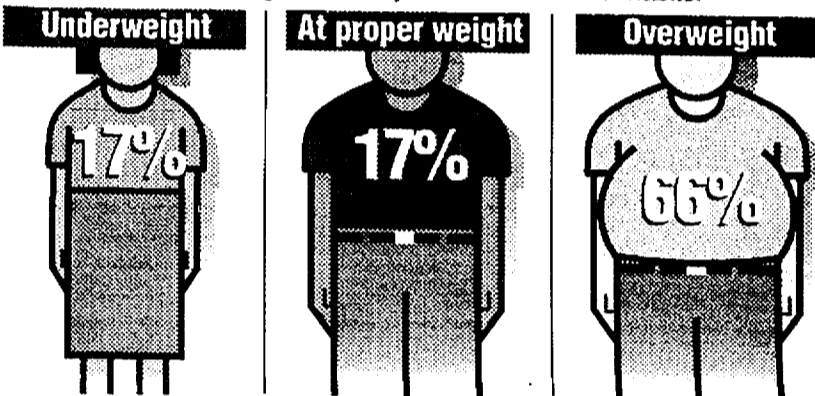

Her anorexia has caused one heart attack and repeated hospitalizations.

"Sometimes I want to die," Dawn said. "When I get depressed sometimes I feel so hopeless and that's the onset of the beginning of the cycle of anorexia. It's a terrible hell."

Alzheimer's patients have special needs

The dementia of Alzheimer's patients poses special challenges to nursing homes and other residential facilities, according to Dian Wilkins of the Detroit area chapter of the Alzheimer's Association. "We must learn to change and adapt our behavior and the environment to meet the needs of those who cannot change because of dementia," Wilkins said.

"These facilities historically have been geared to the physical and medical needs of the frail elderly. Alzheimer's patients, who account for fully half of all nursing home residents, have very specialized needs that often are not met."

To help administrators and the staff of residential nursing facilities develop and manage the specialized care programs required by Alzheimer's patients, the Alzheimer's Association this year introduced Guidelines for Dignity: Goals of Specialized Alzheimer's/Dementia Care in Residential Settings, the first national guidelines for specialized care of Alzheimer's patients in residential facilities.

"The guidelines urge facilities to provide care for Alzheimer's patients that promotes their individual dignity and well-being and maximizes their ability to function," Wilkins said. This approach, in turn, should increase efficiency, enhance staff satisfaction, reduce turnover, and save the facility money, Wilkins said.

For example, the guidelines indicate that the physical environment should be stimulating enough to encourage productive activities, but not so much as to confuse or agitate patients. Clear visual cues, such as arrows and handrails, can help patients, who may no longer be able to recognize words, find their own way to the bathroom or activity areas, easing the workload on the staff.

"Light levels should be high enough to maximize vision, but not create glare," she said. "Background noise should be reduced to create calm and make hearing easier. Introducing familiar odors, such as perking coffee or laundry, is comforting, while those of bodily functions or disinfectants are disturbing."

The guidelines define and make recommendations on eight areas of management of the specialized care program: philosophy, the pre-admission process; the admission process; care planning and implementation; flexibility in responding to the patient's change of condition; staffing patterns and training; physical environment; and evaluating the program.

"The association hopes that Guidelines for Dignity will stimulate sensitive and compassionate care and promote a better understanding of persons afflicted with Alzheimer's disease and other dementias," Wilkins said.

Guidelines for Dignity is available for $5 a copy, plus postage, by calling The Detroit area chapter at 557-8277.

Founded in 1980, the Alzheimer's Association is a national voluntary health organization dedicated to research into the cause, cure and prevention of Alzheimer's disease and related disorders and to providing support services to America's four million Alzheimer's patients, their families and caregivers. The Detroit area has over 60 support groups and approximately 400 volunteers in Wayne, Oakland, Macomb and St. Clair counties.

Sound advice for avoiding hearing loss

To maximize your ability to hear later, minimize the noise in your life now.

Noise-induced hearing loss is one of the nation's 10 leading work-related diseases and injuries, but the problem isn't confined to the workplace.

We're all bombarded by a wide variety of noise at home and at play that has the potential to harm our hearing, according to Dr. Michael Seidman, a neurotologist in the department of otolaryngology at Henry Ford Hospital in Detroit.

Although many of the hazards are obvious, such as blaring music and roaring power tools, there are many subtle noises that can pump up the volume of daily life and contribute to hearing loss. Over time, daily exposure to the racket from innocent-seeming sources such as a ringing alarm clock, blow-dryer and city traffic can take a toll on your hearing.

"More than 30 million Americans suffer from hearing loss, and about one-third of those cases were caused by noise pollution," Seidman said.

"Hearing is a priceless gift. With age alone, we all tend to lose a certain amount of hearing. Being exposed to unnecessary noise just adds to that loss."

Currently, 23 percent of Americans aged 65 to 75 are affected by hearing loss and 40 percent of individuals aged 75 and over suffer from hearing loss.

Whether noise damages your hearing depends on how long you're exposed to it and how loud it is. Prolonged exposure to any sound over 85 decibels (dB) has the potential to damage your hearing over time.

Sounds over 120 dB can potentially damage sensitive inner ear structures, instantly resulting in permanent hearing loss. The din from modern life includes:

- 50-60 dB: normal conversation
- 80-85 dB: traffic, blow-dryer, snow blower
- 90 dB: power lawn mower, cheering fans at sporting events, video arcade

- 100 dB: jackhammer, leaf blower, snowmobile, power tools

- 110-120 dB: stereo headset or boom-box radio turned up high, rock concert, powerboat

- 130-140 dB: firecrackers, gunshots, cars with souped up "boom" speakers.

Although there's no question noise damages hearing, exactly how it happens is still controversial. Seidman, who is involved in several studies of noise-induced hearing loss, suspects that noise sets off a string of physiological events within the ear that goes something like this:

1. Loud noise causes blood vessels in the inner ear to constrict, decreasing blood supply to the inner ear.

2. The decrease in blood supply reduces the amount of oxygen available.

3. When there's less oxygen, free radicals proliferate. Free radicals are molecules that contain an odd number of electrons. They are chemically volatile and can destroy surrounding tissue very rapidly.

4. Free radicals damage the tiny hair cells of the inner ear that transmit impulses to the auditory nerve. Once these hair cells are destroyed, they cannot be repaired or replaced, and hearing loss is permanent.

Free radicals may also be involved in age-related hearing loss, because the body's ability to produce enzymes that counteract free radicals appears to decline with age.

In preliminary studies, Seidman has successfully used certain drugs to block or minimize the production of free radicals within the ear and provide some protection against hearing loss.

Someday his research may lead the way to medications that will insulate us against the aural assaults from our day-to-day lives, but in the meantime, we'll all have to learn how to protect ourselves against too much noise. Dead giveaways that noise is too loud include:

- Sounds seem muffled or you experience a temporary hearing loss after noise exposure.

- You hear ringing or buzzing in your ears, or experience a feeling of fullness or pressure after leaving a noisy place.

- Background is so loud, you can't carry on a conversation with someone a few feet away.

- People nearby can hear the music from your stereo headset.

If you want to protect your hearing, follow a low-noise regimen. When you can't adjust the volume of the noise around you, muffle it. Wear ear protection if you work in a noisy environment, attend rock concerts, or use firearms, power tools, yard equipment or noisy household appliances. Foam ear plugs can cut sound levels by more than 20 dB, enough to reduce most noises to safe levels.

If you suspect your hearing isn't as sharp as it used to be, don't suffer in silence. See your doctor for a hearing test and thorough evaluation of any problems that might be detected.

Recipes sought for AAA non-alcoholic contest

Michigan residents can help make this year's holiday highways safer and win $500 and other prizes by entering a non-alcoholic drink in AAA Michigan's 13th annual "Zero-Proof Mix-Off" competition. Entry deadline is Sept. 22.

The contest is part of the Auto Club's "First A Friend, Then A Host" program, which draws attention to alcohol awareness during the Thanksgiving, Christmas and New Year's holidays.

To enter, send AAA Michigan a written non-alcoholic drink recipe with a clever name that reflects the magic of the holidays. Fifteen finalists will be chosen to mix their drinks in person at one of three regional contests — five finalists per contest.

Regional contests will be held Oct. 5 in Alpena; Oct. 6 in Kalamazoo; and Oct. 7 in Birmingham. In each region, the drink judged best for taste, appearance, name and ease of preparation will win its creator $500. Second-place winners will receive a weekend getaway package for two, while third place merits a dinner for two at one of Michigan's outstanding restaurants.

First-place winners from each region will be invited to mix drinks in person in mid-October at the Detroit Press Club. Members of the Automotive Press Association will choose a statewide winner. First-place winner in the state contest will also earn $500. All contestants at the state contest will receive mileage costs and an overnight stay at the Westin Hotel in Detroit's Renaissance Center.

Winning recipes will be featured in the 1993 "Great Pretenders Party Guide" distributed free at AAA full-service branches statewide in November and December.

Entrants must be Michigan residents 16 or older. No alcohol — including flavor extract containing alcohol — is allowed. Previous winning drinks are not eligible. Only one recipe per person and one person per entry are allowed. AAA Michigan employees and their immediate families are not eligible.

Entries should include name, address, daytime telephone number, name of drink, ingredients and mixing directions. Mail entries to: "Zero-Proof Mix-Off," AAA Michigan Public Relations, 1 Auto Club Drive, Dearborn, MI 48126.

AAA Michigan is the nation's third largest auto club affiliated with the American Automobile Association (AAA). The Auto Club is a non-profit corporation which provides safety, travel, recreational, insurance and financial services to its 1.5 million members statewide.

Skillman Foundation assists Music Hall and Youtheatre

Skillman Foundation operating grants of $50,000 each were recently awarded to Detroit's Music Hall Center for the Performing Arts and to Michigan Performing Arts, Inc./Youtheatre, which is based at the Music Hall.

During the past season, Youtheatre audiences numbered more than 170,000; 103,000 were metropolitan-area students participating in school field trips.

"Teachers praised the student experience of attending live theatre in an authentic setting like Music Hall, and our satellite performance locations in Macomb and Oakland counties make Youtheatre accessible to many additional schools in southeastern Michigan," Hamlin said.

Eric Diweke, executive director of the Music Hall, said, "The Skillman grant will help support the current Music Hall initiatives which include program and audience development, minority and community access and educational outreach."

To begin realizing these initiatives, Music Hall re-introduced a modern dance series in its 1992-93 season and became home stage for Youtheatre. The 1993-94 season will continue dance programming presented by the Music Hall and other community-based organizations.

New Center's arts festival is Sept. 17-19

Tickets are now on sale for an evening of progressive merrymaking in the University Cultural Center.

Seven of Detroit's most treasured cultural institutions will open their doors for an evening of art, food, wine and entertainment during "The Detroit Festival of the Arts Presents: Art A La Carte" Friday, Sept. 17, from 6 to 11 p.m.

Tickets are now available for the event which will benefit the seventh annual Detroit Festival of the Arts (DFA) held Sept. 17-19. "Art A La Carte" is held on the evening of the first day of the festival.

Participating institutions include Wayne State University (WSU) McGregor Memorial Conference Center and WSU Community Arts Gallery, the Detroit Historical Museum, Center For Creative Studies, The Detroit Institute of Arts, the International Institute of Metropolitan Detroit, Scarab Club and the Museum of African American History. Sponsored by the University Cultural Center Association (UCCA), the event will showcase the participating institutions, while providing guests with an opportunity to enjoy the Detroit Festival of the Arts.

"We're calling it a celebration of the festival as well as the University Cultural Center," said Joanne E. Start, senior vice president, Kelly Services Inc. and chairman for the event. "It provides people who have never been to the University Cultural Center or the Detroit Festival of the Arts with a marvelous opportunity to see both — and enjoy art, food, drink and camaraderie. And it gives our many friends an opportunity to celebrate the festival with us."

The evening begins at the Museum of African American History where guests will board a shuttle to the WSU Community Arts Gallery to start the evening with a light appetizer.

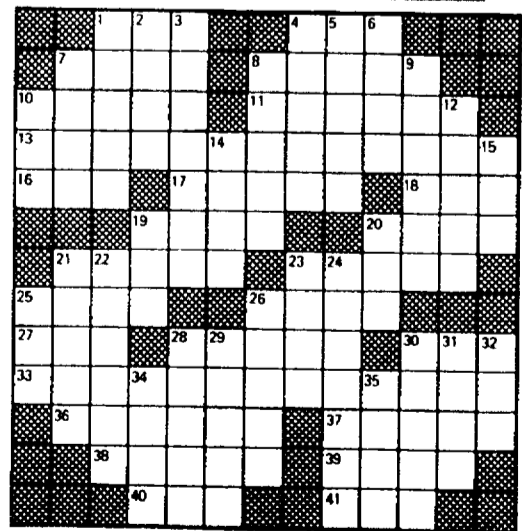

Comfortable shoes are suggested because guests will then stroll through the remaining participating institutions, as part of a multi-course progressive dinner. The evening's finale at the Museum of African American History will feature desserts, specialty coffees and live jazz (concert open to event guests only).

Tickets for "Art A La Carte" are $50 per person, $75 for patrons and include valet parking, shuttle service, entertainment and dining. For ticket information call UCCA at 577-5088.

Spies passe, le Carre turns to drug lords

The Night Manager
By John le Carre
Knopf, 429 pages, $24

When communism ignobly crumbled, many John le Carre fans undoubtedly wondered what their favorite author would take for his next subject. But never underestimate a fertile mind. Le Carre has seized upon the topic of international crime-lords who, with evil impunity, have discovered and exploited a very lucrative field — that of drug and arms smuggling. With such unlimited power at their command, these nefarious characters dominate the scene of le Carre's latest thriller, "The Night Manager."

By Elizabeth P. Walker

The title refers to the hero, Jonathan Pine, who is the night manager of an ultra-plush hotel in Zurich. After years of doing various intelligence work, Pine has escaped, he thinks, to a more mundane operation in order to recover from a personal tragedy.

However, he is persuaded, almost against his will, by Leonard Burr from the London office of British covert operations and Rex Goodhue, a functionary at Whitehall, to seek and pursue "the worst man in the world" — Richard Onslow Roper, a devious and dangerous figure in the world of arms and drugs dealing in the Middle East and the Caribbean.

When Pine returns to England to receive a briefing from Burr, he feels that "there is larceny to returning covertly to your own country after you have abandoned it. There is larceny to using a brand-new alias and being a new version of yourself. You wonder whose clothes you have stolen, what shadow you are casting, whether you have been here before as someone else. There is a sense of occasion about your first day in the part after six years as your undefined self in exile."

Roper himself makes a spectacular entrance with his entourage, in the Hotel Meister Palace where he first meets Pine, the studiously proper night manager. Later, after a fake kidnapping involving his beloved young son, Daniel, who is ostensibly rescued by Pine in a plot to win the father's trust, Roper includes Pine in this traveling ensemble.

From this vantage point, Pine is able to witness some of the shady transactions hatched by Roper and his thuggish associates. Pine is also uncomfortably aware that he is at peril because some of these hangers-on are suspicious of him, and he is able to communicate only sporadically with his handlers, Burr and Goodhue.

To complicate matters even further, Pine is strongly attracted to Roper's gorgeous mistress, Jed Marshall, who quickly indicates her interest in him. Their growing love needs, of course, to be concealed from the penetrating eyes of Roper and his cohorts.

In the meantime, a number of intelligence agents are involved in the operation against Roper; the British, CIA, and smaller organizations of spies sometimes complicate the surveillance, especially when they unwittingly work at cross purposes with one another.

Le Carre's fantastic powers of description draw readers right into the setting: In Roper's Caribbean retreat, Pine allows "his gaze to begin the climb toward the terrace, where the worst man in the world, surrounded by retainers, jesters, bodyguards and children, was disporting himself in his private Camelot."

Such ill-gotten wealth is unashamedly displayed by Roper, and its fruits are enjoyed to the fullest by him and his retinue. Pine is swept into all this largesse, but he is careful to maintain his balance — to observe and serve Roper while pretending friendship.

The plot races to its conclusion. An unsatisfying ending is the sole blemish in this otherwise near-perfect book. Unfortunately, we are left with an implausible and contrived finish which comes as a disappointment because we expect nothing less than perfection from the master spy-writer himself, John le Carre.

Metropolitan Ballet Theatre offers season subscriptions

Metropolitan Ballet Theatre — Detroit's first full-scale professional ballet company — wants you to be a part of history.

The company's premiere season will offer four productions of classical and contemporary ballet in the gloriously restored Music Hall Center for the Performing Arts.

The season includes:

• Bruce Wells' "A Midsummer Night's Dream" — The first production will introduce the company's artistic director,

Karl Condon, to Detroit and reintroduce audiences to the beauty of Felix Mendelssohn's score based on Shakespeare's best-loved comedy. Condon will dance the role of Puck, which was choreographed especially for him by internationally renowned choreographer Wells. "A Midsummer Night's Dream" will run Oct. 7-10.

• The Ballet Masters — This repertory program will feature two one-act ballets choreographed by two of the great ballet masters, George Balanchine and John Butler. Balanchine's "Allegro Brillante," set to a stirring Tchaikovsky score, opens the evening. Butler's "Carmina Burana," a masterpiece set to the chants and songs of an old-world monastery, as recorded by Carl Orff, concludes the evening. The Ballet Masters runs Nov. 10-14.

• The Contemporary Masters — This unique evening is a look into the future of ballet and features the works of three of the country's best contemporary choreographers, Bill T.

Jones, Alonzo King, and Ralph Lemon. The program will include world premieres by King, Lemon's "Folkdance Sextet" and another new work by Jones, commissioned by the MBT. The Contemporary Masters runs Feb. 10-13.

• "Giselle" — The Metropolitan Ballet Theatre concludes its first season with this full-length classic. This story of a young woman's descent into madness after being jilted by her lover has been one of the most popular ballets since its premiere 130 years ago. "Giselle" runs April 7-10.

Each production will be performed Thursday through Sunday evenings, with Saturday and Sunday matinees by Metropolitan Ballet Theatre's corps of 26 professional dancers under the direction of Condon. A live orchestra will accompany the dancers.

Subscriptions are available for the four-production season and prices range from $55 to $157 — a savings of 15 percent over the purchase of individual tickets. All ticket prices include a $4 restoration fee for the Music Hall. VISA, MasterCard and Discover are accepted.

In addition, subscribers get priority seating in this and future seasons. Metropolitan Ballet Theatre's newsletter will feature updates about the company and invitations to special ballet company events. To receive a season brochure call 963-2388.

For more information about Metropolitan Ballet Theatre call 963-5858.

Bats

Guano, or bat droppings, is a $100,000 annual industry in Thailand, Tuttle said. "There are thousands of bacteria in a teaspoon of guano," he said.

Thus far five kinds of bacteria identified in guano are used by wide-ranging industries to detoxify industrial wastes, improve detergents and produce gasahol and antibiotics. In medicine, an anticoagulant from the saliva of the vampire bat may be available soon to treat heart and stroke patients.

Through ignorance, however, millions of bats are burned and destroyed in caves where they hibernate. Since Bat Conservation International was founded in 1982, it has led the effort to educate the world public about the critical role bats play and to protect them in their habitats.

From the bumblebee bat of Thailand, which weighs less than a penny and is the world's smallest mammal, to the giant flying fox bats of Indonesia, which have a wing span of nearly six feet, bats are gaining supporters through educational efforts such as the exhibit at Cranbrook.

Visitors enter the exhibit through a neo-Gothic portal that leads into an upside-down gallery where they see the world from a bat's perspective. There's a lifelike cave and a tree trunk where participants can learn how bats roost and hibernate.

There are 20 hands-on activities, including a nursery which demonstrates how mother bats can pick out their offspring from hundreds crowded together. Youngsters can make crayon rubbings of their favorite bats from metal plates and everyone can experience what a bat hears through a giant pair of bat's ears. There are simulated rain forests and a 15-minute video, "It's a Bat's Life," shown three times daily. Summer admission is $6 for adults, $5 for senior citizens and children 3 to 17. Children under 3 are free. The museum, located at 1221 N. Woodward, is open Monday through Thursday, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.; Friday and Saturday, 10 a.m. to 10 p.m.; and Sunday, noon to 5 p.m. For prerecorded information, call 645-3200 or 645-3230.

Renaissance Festival still comes to life in 14th year

The family car can be the time machine leading a journey back to medieval European times by merely motoring to Holly for the 14th annual Michigan Renaissance Festival.

The event is full of games, activities, foods, crafts and entertainment following a 16th century theme for people of all ages.

Some popular games and activities found on the grounds that were popular during the Renaissance period include archery, dueling buckets and flying dragons. You can even compete in a game of press-a-wench, stump the court or grape-stomping.

Don't forget the Handi-wipes for all the hand-held festival foods. Many of the foods are made with authentic Renaissance recipes. Just some of the treats include turkey drumsticks, apple dumplings and corn on the cob.

Over 160 artisans in more than 140 craft shops boast a variety of pottery, jewelry, weavings and clothing.

While wandering around the festival grounds, be on the lookout for impromptu performances by troubadours, street theatre troupes, puppeteers and magicians. There are also eight stages on the festival site featuring light-hearted dramas, comedies, folk and courtly dances and much, much more.

In addition to the usual antics which take place annually, there are new attractions for this year's festivities.

Madcap Mike, previously seen on Nickelodeon, premiers and show spectators can observe his juggling, balancing and comedic skills up close and in person.

The Tree Top Stage, part of the new lane, is holding shows to laugh and marvel at.

The Crown Theatre, formerly the Swan Theatre, will feature the zany swordfighting of Don Juan and Miquel.

And finally, demonstrations will give visitors an opportunity to step back in time and see the delicate art of glass blowing.

If you're in the mood for shows, food and fun then check out the Michigan Renaissance Festival.

The 14th annual Michigan Renaissance Festival is open 10 a.m. to 7 p.m., weekends and Labor Day, now through Sept. 26, one mile north of Mt. Holly, Inc. in Holly on Dixie Highway between Pontiac and Flint. The festival is open rain or shine.

Admission prices are: $10.95 at the gate or $9.50 in advance for adults; $5.95 at the gate or $5 in advance for children ages 5 to 12; and children under 5 are free. Advance tickets are available at Kroger supermarkets and Total gasoline stations. Parking is free.

For more information, contact the festival office at 700 East Maple, Birmingham, or call 645-9640.

'Face' doesn't look beneath the surface

By Ronald J. Bernas
Assistant Editor

Mel Gibson made a strange choice when picking "The Man Without A Face" for his directorial debut.

The story is part "Dead Poet's Society," part "Karate Kid" and part "This Boy's Life." Unfortunately, it's all the dull parts. In fact, it could have been called "The Man Without A Script."

The story takes place in the summer of 1968 (how many more movies can be set during the Summer of Love) on the coast of Maine where 12-year-old Chuck Norstadt (engagingly played by newcomer Nick Stahl) vacations every summer with his oft-married, inattentive mother Catherine (Margaret Whitton), one cruel half-sister and one annoying half-sister.

Chuck can't stand living with so many bizarre women — his own father died years ago — and is desperately seeking male role models, so he decides to spend the summer studying to pass the entrance exam to get into a military academy.

Also on the island is "The Freak," a man with half his face burned away, who inspires fear and Gothic rumors because he is rarely seen and because no one has ever made the effort to get to know him.

Chuck meets The Freak (played by Gibson) who, as it turns out, is a brilliant teacher who agrees to tutor Chuck all summer.

- 5 - Outstanding

You can guess the rest: The relationship starts out rocky, the two become friends, they have a falling out, the teacher is taught by the student, yadda, yadda, yadda.

The problem isn't the idea (in fact it's worked well in hundreds of books and movies) but rather the way it's carried out. The script by Malcolm MacRury only skims the surface on the issues of alienation and friendship. And the dialogue is laughably bad. Although it's set in the '60s, the characters talk like it's the '90s.

"Don't use me for your emotional punching bag," is a line straight off the Oprah-Phil-Geraldo circuit. And it's said by an 8-year-old girl.

And Chuck, who's 14, actually says, "People are afraid of what they don't know."

And the unbearably slow pace Gibson (as director) has chosen to tell the story only accentuates the script's weaknesses.

Mel Gibson plays a mysterious recluse in "The Man Without A Face," a film he also directed.

Although it's rated PG-13 there is an awful lot of swearing going on — and it's all done by the kids.

The performances are all fine, but the supporting actors turn in the best work in the most thankless roles. Especially Richard Masur as the hippie professor who becomes Chuck's mother's fifth husband.

This is one you wait to rent on video, then read the paper while watching it.

'Heart' will surely tug at yours

By Marian Trainor
Special Writer

Going to heaven on a bus is a novel way to get to the Promised Land.

However, in "Heart and Souls," a spirited tear-edged comedy, four characters happily climb aboard the celestial conveyance and take off into eternity.

Directed by Ron Underwood ("City Slickers") and written by a committee of four writers, "Heart and Souls" is a hybrid of other films that featured the supernatural, namely "Topper," "Ghosts" and "Heaven Can Wait."

The story begins in San Francisco in 1959 and ends there 29 years later. Julia (Kyra Sedgwick), a nightclub waitress, has just turned down her boyfriend's ardent plea to marry him. Later, she thinks better of her decision and hops a bus to follow him.

In another part of town, Milo (Tom Sizemore), a jovial thief, has made a decision to go straight, after one last job. Unfortunately for him, he is caught trying to get back a valuable stamp collection he had stolen from a 10-year-old boy which was given to him by his grandfather. He becomes the second passenger on the bus.

The next passenger is Harrison (Charles Grodin), a shy librarian who aspires to become an opera singer.

The fourth passenger is Penny (Alfre Woodard), a loving single mother who works nights to support her children.

About this time a prospective father is driving his wife, who is in labor, to the hospital. Along the way, the bus driver, Hal (David Payman) is distracted and loses control. The bus hits a wall, careens down an embankment and all the passengers are killed.

Just at that moment a baby is born in the car en route to the hospital. The spirits of the deceased are tied to the boy as playmates only he can see.

They coo and play games with him while his father wonders what the boy Thomas is laughing at.

As he grows older, they accompany him everywhere. They teach him a doo-wop version of "Walk Like a Man," an accomplishment that amazes his kindergarten teacher when she walks in on him in the boys' room while he is practicing to a four-part harmony only he can hear.

The spirits are dismayed when 29 years later he grows into an aloof, distant, upscale workaholic, played by Robert Downey Jr.

Although he is in love with Anne (Elizabeth Shue) he is afraid of commitment. They conspire to take over his body and turn him back into the loving child he once was.

All of the cast turns in good performances. Downey's gift for physical comedy that earned him accolades in "Chaplin" is brilliantly brought into play.

"Heart and Souls" is an amazingly satisfying film. There is not an objectionable scene. It is full of warmth and joy. Even the tears that well up are tears of joy and there are more than enough laughs to balance them off.

It's not a great film with an in-depth story nor is it an elaborate production, but it sends you home feeling good.

In the dark about bats? Don't be scared, they're vital to our ecology

By Pat Paholsky
Special Writer

There are people who look at bats and see an appealing creature with large, almond-shaped eyes. Or a snowball of fur with a yellow nose and ears. Or an E.T. look-alike.

They see a gentle ally in the maintenance of the Earth's delicate ecosystem. They also see a family-oriented species that mates for life and generally produces only one baby, called a pup, a year.

But don't call these people batty — call them informed.

Throughout the ages, bats —

probably the most misunderstood of mammals — have been shrouded in myth and superstition. It's common knowledge that bats are blind, that they become entangled in human hair and that many are rabid — right?

Misconceptions, all.

Bats have a unique sonar system, called echolocation, that is so sophisticated that a fishing bat, for instance, can detect a minnow's fin as fine as a human hair barely protruding above the pond's surface. An African bat can hear the footsteps of a beetle walking on sand more than six feet away. And thousands of bats can fly around a small, dark cave and never bump into each other. With that kind of highly developed radar, bats aren't about to dive-bomb a person's head.

And they seldom transmit disease to other animals or humans. Fewer than one-half of 1 percent of bats contract rabies and they normally bite only in self-defense.

Yet these masters of the night, who shared the Earth with dinosaurs, are in trouble. Of nearly 1,000 species, 40 percent of American bats and more throughout the world, are endangered.

"Bats play crucial roles in nature," said Dr. Merlin D. Tuttle, founder of Bat Conservation International. "Were they to cease to exist, thousands of other plants and species would cease to exist."

Tuttle, who has published a book and more than 45 scientific papers about bats, spoke twice to standing-room-only crowds at Cranbrook Institute of Science last month. Accompanying him was Zoe, his pet bat, a flying fox fruit-eater who patiently allowed numerous humans to come close and stroke it.

It's all part of the touring exhibit, "Masters of the Night: The True Story of Bats," currently at the science museum in Bloomfield Hills through Sept. 12. Scheduled to tour throughout the United States and Canada through 1997, the exhibit debuted at Cranbrook in June and has been giving Michigan residents a first look at the multi-sensory display. It will travel next to Los Angeles.

"One bat can eat between 500 and 1,000 mosquitoes in one hour," Tuttle said. "You couldn't have a better friend in your neighborhood."

A colony of 150 big brown bats can protect local farmers from up to 18 million or more rootworms each summer. Worldwide, bats are natural enemies of night-flying insects, including cucumber and potato beetles and corn borer moths.

Besides the insect-eating bats, there are fruit- and nectar-eating bats which are vital to the survival of rain forests. In West Africa bats carry from 90 to 98 percent of the seeds of pioneer plants that begin the cycle of forest regrowth on cleared land. On some Pacific islands, up to 40 percent of tree species depend on bats for seed dispersal or pollination.

"The entire tequila industry in Mexico is dependent on agave plants, which are pollinated by bats," Tuttle said. Without bat pollinators, seed production of the agave plants would drop to 1/3,000th, he added.

Crops such as bananas, cashews, dates and figs rely on bats for their survival.

"Seventy percent of all fruit in the market depends on bats for seed dispersal," Tuttle said.

A new exhibit offers a bat's eye view of the world.

The Pastor's Corner

Freedom and responsibility

By the Rev. Walter A Schmidt
First English Lutheran Church

Many of the assigned Scripture lessons over the past several weeks have spoken of both the freedom that we as humans possess, plus a call to be servants of our Lord. Freedom and servanthood are normally viewed as opposites rather than complementing one another.

However, I would suggest that that dichotomy between freedom and responsibility lies at the heart and center of what it means not only to be a child of God but also our ability as humans to live together in society.

The creation accounts of Genesis remind us that we as humans are made in the image of God which, yes, does imply that we do possess freedom. God does not force his will upon us.

Furthermore, Scripture reminds us that we do have freedom from sin and death through the life, death and resurrection of Jesus Christ. In Jesus' own words, "So if the Son makes you free, you will be free indeed."

But does not the gift of freedom also imply responsibility?

Again, as we look at the creation account we see that humans are given the responsibility of caring for creation and for one another. In answer to Cain's question, "Am I my brother's keeper?" the answer must be "Yes." We do have a responsibility to one another.

Plus, we must ask ourselves why has God sent his Son to suffer and die and arise again for us. The answer is love; but the question which must immediately follow is: "How am I to use that freedom which God gives to us through Christ our Lord?"

We also should add to the discussion the fact that God has gifted his people. Scripture reminds us over and over again that the Spirit is the giver of gifts. There is no such thing as an ungifted person. God has showered us with gifts, talents and abilities. Again the question is why, for what purpose?

According to God's word, the purpose is not to have those gifts sit idle and deteriorate; nor is the purpose just for our own use. We are gifted so that those gifts, talents and abilities might be used for service to God and to one another. Yes, we are free to use or not to use those gifts as we desire. God does not force himself upon us.

How then do we resolve the dilemma between freedom and service? First of all, as I suggested earlier, it is not a dilemma but rather a dichotomy where we as humans are both free and are called to serve. I can think of no better example to follow than the one which Jesus puts before us: "For the Son of man also came not to be served but to serve, and to give his life as ransom for many."

Jesus was not forced to bear the cross. It was his willing obedience to the father and love to humankind that led him to the cross and grave. He had set for us the example.

St. Paul, reflecting upon this nature of Christian liberty, reminds us in his letter to the Galatians: "For you were called to freedom brothers and sisters; only do not use your freedom as an opportunity for self-indulgence, but through love become slaves to one another. For the whole law is summed up in a single commandment: You shall love your neighbor as yourself."

Charles Kingley puts it like this: "There are two freedoms — the false, where people are free to do as they like, and the true, where people are free to do as they ought."

As I reflect upon our society, I am afraid that all too often we have opted for the false freedom, to do as we like rather than the real freedom, to do as we ought. All too often our words and deeds reflect our individual rights and freedom without concern for the common good.

Not only from the Christian perspective but for society as a whole, we need to hold the dichotomy of freedom and responsibility in a healthy tension.

Donation

Grosse Pointe Woods resident Dr. J. Lupo, at the right, presented a check for $50,000 to the Rev. Leon Olszowski, principal of Notre Dame High School.

Lupo also initiated a challenge program to encourage gifts to the school's 1993 annual fund. He has promised to match all new and increased gifts to the fund.

Lupo, a 1961 graduate of Notre Dame High School, is a chiropractor. "God has truly blessed me with a good life, a wonderful family and a successful career helping others," he said. "Now it is my turn to repay the school that instilled personal discipline and laid the foundation for me to succeed."

"We owe a debt of gratitude to Dr. Lupo for matching annual fund gifts and his generous donation of $50,000," Olszowski said. "Hopefully, Dr. Lupo's generosity will motivate others to reflect on their own Notre Dame experience and help build the endowment fund."

HAVE A PLEASANT TRY AT PERFECTION
BRIDGE BY WOODY BOYD

Today there are a number of words on the printed page if not in conversation which are usually regarded as a complete in themselves, but which in reality are two words; a negative and a positive. I have reference to uncouth, unkempt, unruly, inept, immaculate and the likes. Few, but the purist users of words recognize that to gruntle means to put at ease and in a good humor which is particularly important if the professional and pupil player are to have a rewarding game.

When our own famous Zeke Jabbar was here for a week last May as a guest of S.O.M.B.A. During the Wolverine Regional he told a wonderful story about his interpretation of "tit for tat." It seems there was this young player who had dreams of being Zeke's equal, asked him if he could have his address as he wanted to arrange a playing date. Naturally Zeke was most anxious to accommodate the tenderfoot and did so. Within a week, Zeke received a short not from this same youth who was absolutely sure that someday he was destined to be a bridge ace. It read, "Before I agree to the expense of your play, please send me a comprehensive manual of your bidding system." "If it's any good, I'll send you my check for, let's say, $25.00. Is this satisfactory?" Zeke, always delighted to oblige a budding prospect, wrote back, "Before I send you my bidding manual, please send me your check for, let's say, $50.00 and if it's any good, I'll send you my manual. Is this satisfactory?"

I don't know how long Zeke has been an extremely fine player among this country's best, but Chuck Burger says it goes back to his college days on the U of M campus. Certainly in the past ten years, he has been on the same playing plain with North America's finest. In fact, his peers tell me that today his is one of the most sought after professionals on the tournament circuit. To be you must be more than an exceptional player. A pleasant disposition and the ability to transmit your expertise effectively are extremely important characteristics, but while I've never played with him, I believe Zeke has another plus that isn't easy to identify. That is the confidence level he must instill in his partner no matter what limit those skills may be. Of course, to finish in the money is dramatic and unfortunately the single significant measure of a pupil's investment and these past few years he and his partners have gloried in many. Truly I think he is a darn good pupil partner and someday I hope to enjoy a play with him.

Today's hand was played by one of Zeke's partners who numbers among his most adroit. South bid his hand as though he were 6-5 in the minors and his last call East's don't generate a professional's enthusiasm. After the heart lead, a talented declarer has no trouble winning twelve, but one of a shade less competence might easily go down as was the case with some who found the aggressive slam at the recent Gatlinburg regional. That or a spade lead scuttles the dozen immediately. The heart jack was won with East's queen and the spade king was won with dummy's ace at trick (2). The problem is to dump the spade loser and also succeed with the trump finesse as there are only two entries to dummy and one has already been expended. The losing playing play is the trump nine at trick (3) which a good defender will cover recognizing declarer's problem. The only way the hand can be made is to play the heart king or ten at trick (3). East will cover, but South can get back to dummy with the club jack at trick (4). (5) He plays the remaining high heart pitching his second spade. In spite of what mother taught, you must wait till trick (6) to play trumps. Then and only then is it right to play the diamond nine which Zeke's partner did in the actual play.

Lifelong partners since kindergarten, Stan & Dave would like a chance to become lifelong partners with you!

Dave Levy and Stan Schwartz, the owners of Classic Window & Siding, have been friends and partners in business ever since they were little kids. Though, as youngsters, back in the days of Kool-Aid stands, they probably never suspected that they would grow up to be the men behind the East area's most respected name in windows and siding. On the other hand, if their Kool-Aid was any indication of what was to come, on a hot summer day, they knew even then what it meant to be in demand.

For years, Classic Window and Siding has been providing Eastside neighborhoods with the best in sales and installation of vinyl windows and siding. They also specialize in hand-crafted, custom-designed bay and bow windows. With each sale they make, they provide the customer with the "complete package." There are never any hidden additional costs on materials and labor which are covered by Classic's famous 30-year guarantee.

But Dave and Stan will tell you "an excellent product alone does not make a great business." What distinguishes Classic Window and Siding from the pack is their unwavering commitment to their customers. Dave, Stan and the staff at Classic make themselves available to their customers on a 24-hour basis to answer any questions or to assist with any service.

Classic's experience in serving homeowners has enabled them to anticipate the concerns of new customers. Often, they can answer questions before they're even asked. For example, to assure their new customers they are getting the finest in windows, siding and service, they maintain a computerized list of all their previous customers to be used as references. Once the work on a house is completed, Dave and Stan inspect it themselves to insure that the job not only meets the customer's expectations, but lives up to Classic Window and Siding's reputation as well.

In the past year alone, Classic has earned the total satisfaction of over 1600 residential customers. In addition to quick, responsible and dependable service, much of their success is due to making their windows and siding affordable to almost every budget. "We believe that the bottom line is providing our customers with exactly what they want, at a price they can comfortably handle," says Dave.

VOL. 1, No. 3

Antiques by Ralph & Terry Kovel

Q. We recently inherited a strange black lacquer table decorated with Chinese figures and landscapes. The top opens and inside are small carved ivory and shell objects. There are ivory "spools" of thread, tiny scissors, a small bag of sand and assorted needles. Obviously, it was used as a sewing box, but we wondered if that was the original use. The table has been in the family for several generations.

A. Your table was probably a sewing table or work table. The Chinese have made furniture, silver, glass, porcelains and other types of decorative arts for export since the 18th century. Your table is probably a form used in England or America that has been redesigned with an Oriental flavor. The decorated lacquer furniture became popular in the 1700s and remained in fashion through the late 1800s. The shape of your table will help you decide the age. It should be similar in style to the American furniture made at the same time.

Q. What can you tell me about the airship Shenandoah? We bought a metal pull-toy shaped like the ship. It is marked "Mar."

A. The Shenandoah was a rigid-frame American airship, similar to a German zeppelin. It was made in Philadelphia in 1919 and assembled in Lakehurst, N.J. The first flight was in 1923. The ship flew over Ohio in 1925 and suddenly broke into three pieces, killing 14 crew members. The toy was made just before the accident. "Mar" is the mark used by Marx Toy Co. The New York City company started in 1921 and had factories in England and the United States.

Q. My aqua fruit jar is shaped like a barrel with glass hoops. It is embossed with the words "Air-Tight Fruit Jar."

A. The barrel-shaped "Air-Tight" fruit jars were made from about 1858 to the 1870s. Early examples were made with the embossed name "Potter & Bodine." Jars made after 1870 were marked "Cohansey." The aqua jar sells for about $500. Green examples are worth over $800 and the rare amber jars sell for over $8,000.

Color's magic spell can liven up any room or exterior instantly — as long as you put the right colors in the right place. Here is the color "wizdom" you need:

- Color can alter space depending on the tint or shade you select.

Tints are light colors which contain white; colors in which black has been added are called shades. Tints can visually expand space and lift a low ceiling. Dark shades do the opposite. They look heavier but can make a large room feel cozier and even add drama.

- Color can hide flaws or draw attention by contrast.

Disguise unsightly architectural features with the sweep of a paint brush, matching the element to the background color. This includes such things as outdoor gutters and downspouts and, inside, radiators, oddly placed windows and unattractive woodwork.

- Color can visually change the temperature of a room.

We seem to associate color temperature with nature: the sun and

Virginia Ficarra
The Color Wizard

its warm rays (yellow, orange and red) and cool colors (green, blue and purple) with the water, the sky and the grass. To warm a northern exposure room, use a warm color and for rooms facing south, use cool colors.

- Color and light can play tricks on you.

Always examine your color samples in the room in which they will be used. Natural light is the best light for selecting colors. But don't forget to consider the artificial light in your room; it is just as important. Incandescent lights give off a warm yellow cast, while fluorescent lights emit a cool or greyish cast. Halogen lights are closest to natural light. It's better to buy a small amount of paint and try it on your walls. Do the same for outdoor shutters or gutters before you make a costly mistake. Paint colors intensify with quantity. Walls reflect off each other.

- Blend wall colors with the existing colors in your room.

Pull a color from your carpeting or furniture. Watch out for whites and beiges, they either give off warm or cool undertones. Also blend them with your carpeting color.

- For exterior goof-proof blends, select paint that blends with your facade (brick, vinyl, aluminum, etc.) for gutters, downspouts and garage doors. For shutters match a color in your roof in a lighter or deeper shade. Paint your front door the same color as your roof. Opposite colors to your facade are okay but be careful and select something that is "greyed down."

Caution: Stay away from bright exterior colors or pastel tints. They tend to give a home a whimsical look rather than a sturdy appearance. If you live in a historical landmark select colors from a historical paint chart.

Household Help by John Amantea

Q. I am interested in doing some repairs around my 36-year-old house before the fall season. One job I have in mind concerns a double-hung window which is near my steel-encased front door. The problem I have is that the old plaster becomes loose all around the perimeter of the window. Some of the wood lath has now become visible, and I'm afraid I'll have a major repair job soon. Can you tell me how to correct this?

A. If I were a betting person, I would say the normal opening and closing of your front door has some effect on your plaster falling off. A heavy steel door can cause a lot of vibration to the window and the wall itself.

You should begin your repair by carefully removing any loose plaster from around the window and the wood lath as well. Be sure to get rid of all dust and foreign material in the areas you are to work with. Your exposed wood lath must be structurally secure before you apply a plastic filler.

Ask your local paint dealer for a chemically-hardened plaster filler which will act as a base or foundation. Mix this product to a very thick consistency, and apply liberally to a thickness that is about a quarter-inch less than the finished wall.

The final stage of your repair is to build up several coats of drywall joint compound that is flush with your existing wall. Sand your finished product with several grades of sandpaper until totally smooth. You will then be ready to prime and paint the wall.

Q. I have a problem with a standard household box fan that sounds as if the blades are going to fly off. Can you tell me if I can fix this, or should I just get rid of it and buy a new one?

A. Without even having to listen to your rumbling fan, I would say that you're right about the blades being in danger of flying off. Although you rarely have to do this, sometimes it is necessary to tighten an Allen-type keyhold (if it applies to your model) in the center of the shaft. Aside from that, a few drops of light oil should also be used to lubricate the fan's motor. Do this only if designated with the word, oil.

Home Tips

'Tis the season — With all the summer weddings and showers coming up, I think this tip is well worth mentioning.

I had a shower for my husband's sister, and as it was a kitchen shower, I asked all the guests to enclose their favorite recipes in the box and to wrap the present in a terry kitchen towel instead of paper.

She got some lovely towels that she has used for many years.

Thelma H., Sweethome, Ore.

Water, water, everywhere — I have found another use for the large plastic liquid laundry detergent bottles. After a thorough cleaning and rinsing, they make fine watering cans for potted plants. I also mix fertilizers in them. It's simpler, especially when using the one or two-gallon size containers.

Gloria P., Ashland City, Tenn.

Old sweater tip — I was going through some old sweaters, putting some away for the summer. I was going to get rid of others. I had several to give to charity. Others that I thought weren't good enough, I was going to throw away. Instead, I unraveled all of them and had enough balls of yarn to make a colorful afghan for my grandchild. It turned out beautifully, and she loves it. The best part is, I was able to recycle something, and that is very important to me.

Carole G., Kalispell, Mont.

Kitchen drawer — I have an apartment with very little counter space. It's a bit difficult when cooking for company. In order to make more space, I open an upper drawer and put a cookie sheet over the top, then I close it so the tray fits tightly. Every inch of counter space matters, and this gives me a little more room that is sorely needed.

Betty M., Shirley, N.Y.

Tough clean-up — Here's a tip for cleaning dried texture (joint compound) from carpeting. Brush the dried compound with a wire-bristle brush which has first been covered with a large square of pantyhose. To clean the carpet fibers from the wire bristles, just pull the square of pantyhose from the brush and out they come. Repeat this procedure until the carpet is free of dried compound, then vacuum. The rug will look as good as new with no mess and little cleanup.

Louise M., Sandusky, Ohio

Lightning strikes again, causing damage and death

The United States experiences some 100,000 thunderstorms annually. Lightning takes about 100 lives every year and causes injury to several hundred others. The electrical fireworks cause hundreds of millions of dollars in property damage and both directly and indirectly affect thousands of lives.

Michigan ranks 11th in the number of lightning-related deaths in the nation and is no stranger to lightning's fiery flashes.

Between 1959 and 1991, lightning killed 88 people in Michigan and caused 293 injuries. Scorching summertime temperatures and volatile air masses result in the often violent thunderstorms common to the Midwest. Summer rains are frequent and the thunderstorms accompanying these rains can occur with little or no warning.

Andrew Larsen, executive director of the Lightning Protection Institute, a not-for-profit organization that promotes public awareness of the dangers of lightning and lightning safety issues, concedes many of the lightning-related deaths and injuries are needless and preventable.

Staying aware of changing weather conditions and knowing how to react to a storm can save lives. It is no coincidence many deaths and injuries occur at the beginning and end of storms when stray lightning bolts emerge from a virtually cloudless sky.

Lightning is released from the edges of storm clouds and is often unexpected.

According to Bob Ebaugh, a weather specialist for the National Weather Service, it is during the height of the storm, when the rain is overhead, that most people seek shelter. At other times people are often lulled into a false sense of security.

The best way to avoid injury is to be alert to oncoming storms. Watch out for billowy, white-topped cumulonimbus clouds with darkened areas. They appear threatening and should be taken seriously. Although it's impossible to prevent lightning from striking, you can avoid dangerous situations. The Lightning Protection Institute suggests following some basic guidelines:

Upon sighting a storm seek shelter immediately in a protected structure — one that is guarded by a lightning protection system which safely harnesses the energy of a strike, guiding and dissipating the electrical current. Many public buildings are designed with certified, state-of-the-art lightning protection systems and many homeowners protect their property with these systems.

If you find yourself in an unprotected building or home, it is important to avoid contact with electrical equipment and appliances and avoid standing near doors and windows — try to remain in a center room until the storm passes. Do not attempt to unplug appliances or televisions and computers during the storm and stay off the phone. Lightning can travel through phone lines and cause electrical shock. Also, avoid contact with bath tubs, sinks and faucets or other piping throughout the home.

If you're caught outside, avoid areas that are higher than the surrounding landscape. For anyone found near or in a body of water during a storm, the rule is to get as far from the water as possible. Lightning seeks the path of least resistance and water and metals are preferred targets. Vacate pool areas and avoid unprotected poolhouses or beach stands. Do not use a tree as shelter and avoid all metal and tall objects such as telephone poles, power lines and fences. Keep away from metal objects including bicycles, motorcycles and golf carts. If you're with a group of people, spread out; the chances of attracting a bolt as a group increase.

If you feel a tingling and your hair begins to stand on end, lightning may be about to strike. Immediately crouch down with your hands on your knees. Do not lie down or place your hands on the ground.

Persons struck by lightning receive a severe electrical shock and may also be burned. Victims carry no residual electrical charge and can be safely treated and handled. Even though a bolt may not be fatal, the millions of volts of electricity in a single strike can dangerously heat nerves and blood vessels, rupture eardrums, break bones, burn skin, damage the brain and cause cataracts.

For a free booklet on lightning and lightning safety tips, or information on lightning protection systems for the home, please write: The Lightning Protection Institute, 3365 N. Arlington Hts. Rd., Suite J, Arlington Hts., IL 60004.

You work hard at looking good ... now RK can help you look your best!

Daily exercise helps us look good. Now, through radial keratotomy (RK), people all around the Grosse Pointes are looking their best ... without glasses. Radial keratotomy is a surgical procedure to correct the curvature of the cornea or outer surface of the eye so glasses may no longer be needed.

Metropolitan Eye Center, on Greater Mack at Shady Lane in St. Clair Shores, is a national trendsetter in this new surgical procedure. It's safe, it's almost painless, and the surgery is performed in our fully licensed and equipped surgical facility on an outpatient basis.
